LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

BATHURST CATTLE SALE-YARDS BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 29 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. CRICK,
MR. PLUMB,

MR. LAKEMAN,
MR. TONKIN.

W. H. PAUL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Goddard Thompson, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

James Simmons called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Thompson.] You are Mayor of Bathurst? Yes.
2. And have been an Alderman of that town for many years? For about six years I think altogether.
3. How long have you been a resident of Bathurst? All my life. I am 51 years of age.
4. Speaking from your experience as an Alderman and a resident of the town of Bathurst, can you say that the erection of cattle sale-yards by the Corporation has been looked upon as a necessity by the public? I can say that.
5. I believe that this subject has been frequently mentioned in the Council? Yes.
6. Can you speak as to the suitability, or otherwise, of this site? I think the site is very suitable; it could not be more so, in my opinion. It is so near the railway line that a siding could be put in at very little cost.
7. The railway passes through the proposed site? Yes.
8. Mr. Tonkin.] Can you point out on this plan [Appendix A] whereabouts the sale-yards are? They are being erected on the reserve marked here.
9. Mr. Thompson.] There is a Government road as well as a railway running through the land? Yes.
10. Is there a sufficient area for the erection of these yards? I think there is ample.
11. And from the nature of the land there would be no difficulty in making a siding on to the ground, so that the stock could be delivered right at the yards? There would be no difficulty. The drainage on this ground is also very good.
12. Is there any other site available within an easy distance of Bathurst—is there any other place along the railway into which a siding could be made? No.
13. I believe that the Council have erected yards at this place? They are nearly completed.
14. I believe that they are of a substantial character? Yes, the fences are very good, both as regards the timber used and the construction.
15. Will you kindly say what will be the entire cost of these yards? I should think that by the time they are completed they will have cost something over £1,000.
16. What is the population of Bathurst? I think a little over 10,000.
17. Are there any public yards within easy distance of Bathurst? There are no public yards at all there.
18. The only yards there are in the hands of private individuals? Yes.

Mr.
J. Simmons.
29 May, 1889.

Mr.
J. Simmons.
29 May, 1889.

19. Do you know that a petition in favour of this Bill—I do not mean the original petition, but one which has been signed subsequently to the introduction of this matter—has been signed by the people of the district? I know of that petition in support of this Bill.
20. Can you say by how many persons it was signed? By about 1,000 people. Those signatures were obtained in about two days, or two days and a half. We could have got about six times as many.
21. Is there anything else you would like to add, as to the necessity for these yards? I think it would be very desirable to have them on the site proposed.
22. It would be to the benefit of the ratepayers of Bathurst, and of the people of the district, in East and West Macquarie, to have these public yards established? Yes.
23. Mr. Crick.] Have any instances come under your own notice in which hardship and delay has occurred through there not being these yards? I have heard of several such instances. Yesterday I heard of two or three cases in which persons requiring the use of the private yards could not get them, because they had been already taken by other people.
24. That has occurred several times? Yes. I have been told of it by several people.
25. I see that there are borrowing powers given in this Bill. Have the Council borrowed any money yet to erect these yards? We have not borrowed any money.
26. Chairman.] How are these proposed yards situated with regard to the slaughter-houses in Bathurst? I think the majority would be near the yards—those in West Macquarie.
27. Mr. Tonkin.] Where are the present cattle sale-yards situated—where are the cattle for the district sold? At Kelso.
28. Do you know what county Kelso is in? The county of Roxborough.
29. That is a different county from that in which Bathurst is? Yes.
30. Do you know what electorate Kelso is in? It is in East Macquarie.
31. You have read the Bill, I suppose? Yes.
32. The 7th clause empowers the Municipal Council of Bathurst to impose a tax upon all sale-yards within 2 miles of the boundary of that Borough? Yes.
33. Would not that allow the municipality of Bathurst to tax another municipality? There is only one municipality.
34. But supposing that another municipality were to be established at Kelso? Yes; I suppose if Kelso was a municipality the Bill would allow that to be done.
35. For the benefit of Bathurst? Well, I do not know.
36. Would it not be taxing people living outside the municipality of Bathurst for the benefit of Bathurst? I suppose it would.
37. In which electorate—Bathurst or East Macquarie—do most of the stock-owners live who supply this market;—Are there any living in Bathurst? There are some in the immediate neighbourhood of Bathurst.
38. In which electorate do most of the stock-owners who supply the Bathurst market live? I suppose that at present the majority would live in East Macquarie.
39. As a matter of fact, is there a single stock-owner who supplies these markets living in Bathurst? I cannot remember just now. I suppose there would not be any living in the town itself; but there are a great number living at West Macquarie.
40. Chairman.] Where are the yards erected? The private yards?
41. No; the public yards? In West Macquarie.
42. Mr. Crick.] I understood you to say that the erection of these yards would be for the good of the people of Bathurst. Had you in view the good of the owners of stock, or of the consumers? It would be to the good of the consumers generally, I believe.
43. Chairman.] Of Bathurst and the district generally—not of the city only? Yes.
44. Mr. Tonkin.] This is a petition against the Bill presented to the House on the 14th May. Do you know any of the names upon it? Yes.
45. Do you know them to be the names of representative men of the district round Bathurst and East Macquarie? Some of them.
46. Will you point out any that are not? Some of the names I do not know.
47. You know a great many of them? Yes, the Lees, the Suttors, and others.
48. Your statement that the erection of these yards will be for the benefit of Bathurst and the district generally will hardly coincide with the opinion of these representative men who are opposed to their erection? I think the population generally are in favour of the erection of cattle sale-yards at this site.
49. But these gentlemen are against it, are they not? Yes; I believe they are; but I think that if you consulted the whole of the people in Bathurst and the district around, you would find that they are in favour of having the yards erected in West Macquarie.
50. Mr. Thompson.] The representative men you refer to are Messrs. George Lee, James Rutherford, William Kite, J. L. Gilmour, H. C. Sutor, and others? Yes.
51. Are not those people the men who are selling their stock at the private yards which now exist? I believe so.
52. Do you not know it? I am sure of it.
53. Mr. Crick.] Would it be possible, with these yards as they are, for a few people to get a monopoly of them? I think it is the general impression that that is so now.

Thomas Durack called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr. T. Durack.
29 May, 1889.

54. Mr. Thompson.] You are a member of the firm of T. Durack & Co., carrying on business at Bathurst? Yes.
55. How long have you been in business as an auctioneer? About three years.
56. How long have you been a resident of the district? All my life.
57. Prior to entering into business as an auctioneer you were engaged in stock dealing, were you not? Yes.
58. For how long? About nineteen years.
59. I believe that your stock was sent to the Kelso yards? Very frequently. I very frequently attended, and bought and sold stock through the Kelso yards.
60. Are you aware that cattle sale-yards have been erected by the Corporation at Bathurst? Yes.

Mr. T. Durack.
29 May, 1889.

61. Do you know the site upon which they are erected? Yes.
62. Can you say whether there is any necessity for the erection of those yards? I think there is very great necessity for their erection.
63. Will you tell the Committee why they are necessary? Well, in my experience, I have frequently had stock offered to me for sale—fat cattle and sheep—by friends in the west, but I could not accept their offers because of the want of yard accommodation.
64. Mr. Crick.] Do you say that frequently occurred? Yes. I have a large circle of friends in Queensland sending down cattle to our Southern markets, but I cannot accept their offers.
65. Mr. Tonkin.] Was there ever any objection to your building private yards yourself? No; but my banker might have made an objection.
66. Chairman.] Why did you not erect yards? I noticed that an agitation was going on, in which I to some extent assisted, to get Corporation yards.
67. Mr. Thompson.] As there was a possibility of Corporation yards being erected, you waited? Yes.
68. Do you know the lessees of the yards in Kelso—where do they carry on their business? Their offices are in Bathurst, and they carry on the bulk of their business there; but they sell the stock in Kelso. All business they have as auctioneers, commission agents, and so on, is done in Bathurst.
69. Where does the stock sold in those yards go to? The fat stock are distributed amongst the butchers in the town and district generally. The store stock are bought by people in the district.
70. The fat stock are sold principally for the consumption of the residents of Bathurst? Yes. The butchers of Bathurst constitute the majority of these buyers. Very frequently there are no country buyers; but the butchers are always in attendance.
71. Is there not a butcher in Kelso? Yes.
72. Can you say where he finds his custom? Partly in Kelso and partly in Bathurst.
73. Do you know that he runs the cart to Bathurst daily to supply the residents of that town? Yes, he does. I see him almost every day that I am in town.
74. Mr. Tonkin.] In which electorate do the butchers of the district—I do not mean the Bathurst butchers—mostly live? I should think they are pretty evenly distributed, though I have not given the matter a thought.
75. Do you think there are as many in West Macquarie as in East Macquarie—Mitchell, Wattle Flat, Sofala, and all those places? There are a good many in those places, and right out as far as Blayney.
76. Mr. Crick.] Do all these people come to Kelso to buy their stock? As a rule they do.
77. Mr. Thompson.] Are they all compelled to do so? Yes; they take up what they can get locally; but when they run out of cattle they have to go to the Kelso sale-yards.
78. Where does the principal part of the stock which is sold in these yards—both store and fat cattle—come from? The principal portion of the fat stock comes from the holders in the district of Kelso.
79. A petition has been presented against the Bill, which contains the names of Messrs. George Lee, James Rutherford, William Kite, J. L. Gilmour, H. C. Suttor, Sullivan, and others;—those, I presume, are the names of some of the owners of stock which sell through these yards? Yes.
80. Some mention has been made of a monopoly with regard to these yards. Can you say anything as to that of your own knowledge? Yes. I can relate one instance in which a friend of mine tried to procure the yards in order to sell some sixty head of cattle; but he was told that he could not have them for five weeks.
81. How was that? Because the yards were taken for each consecutive sale day during that period, by, I think, some of the gentlemen just mentioned. Perhaps not by every one of them, but by two or three of them.
82. Has that been so for years? Yes.
83. Any of those persons whom I have mentioned are in a position to obtain possession of these yards for weeks ahead? Yes.
84. The sales are held on Mondays and Thursdays, and these days are taken weeks ahead by owners of stock? Yes.
85. Mr. Crick.] Do you say that that is a regular thing? I relate that instance because it came under my own notice.
86. Do you know that it is a general thing for these yards to be engaged some time ahead? I do.
87. And has been for years? Yes.
88. Mr. Tonkin.] Do you know whether it is a usual thing or not for stock-owners to engage yards some days ahead? In forwarding your stock it is the usual thing.
89. In any sale-yard? Yes; but not as a rule for many weeks in advance. If I were to despatch stock to Homebush I should have to name my day, because I should have to engage trucks to carry them.
90. Chairman.] Is not this the position—that in corporation or public yards you simply give notice that you want to sell your cattle and are allowed to sell them—but in this case you could not sell them for a number of weeks? Yes.
91. Mr. Tonkin.] Supposing you were a stranger coming to Bathurst with fat stock, could you get them into these yards? With no degree of certainty.
92. What would be, in all probability, the reply you would receive? That the yards had been taken by Mr. Suttor or Mr. Sullivan, or some of these gentlemen.
93. Chairman.] Will this Bill, if it becomes law, remedy that? Yes.
94. Mr. Thompson.] It will allow you to have equal rights with other auctioneers? Yes.
95. Mr. Crick.] Had they to sacrifice these sixty head of cattle, or were there any other yards in the district to which they could take them? There are no other yards available.
96. They would either have to take them elsewhere or they would have to sell them for the best price they could get? Yes.
97. Chairman.] What was done with those cattle? They were taken to Homebush.
98. Mr. Thompson.] Would store cattle, or fat cattle, or sheep coming to Bathurst to be sold come from the west by rail? The cattle coming by rail come from the west, but sometimes the cattle come by road.
99. These proposed yards will be well situated for the reception of stock? Yes; they are on the line.
100. Would there be a saving of expense by removing the cattle direct from the trucks into the yards? Yes.
101. Could you say what the difference between the cost of taking the cattle out of the trucks and driving

- Mr. T. Durack. driving them to the yards and removing them from the trucks directly into the yards would be? It is not so much a matter of cost as a saving of trouble and inconvenience, because where wild bullocks have to be driven 2 miles or more they often break away and give a lot of trouble.
- 29 May, 1889.
102. Would the expense of unloading the cattle and driving them to Kelso be more than the rates which would be imposed upon the auctioneers if Corporation sale-yards are erected are likely to be? I do not know that I could say that the cost would be greater, but I should prefer paying those rates to having to drive the cattle back from the Kelso sale-yards.
103. Mr. Tonkin.] Would it cost more to take the cattle from the railway to the yards at Kelso than to take them to the proposed Corporation yards? The present yards in Kelso are much nearer to the trucking yard than the proposed yards would be.
104. Then it would actually cost less to take cattle from the trucking yards to Kelso than to the proposed yards? Of course it would.
105. Will you look at this plan [Appendix A.] Can you point out the position of the proposed yards upon it? They are to be erected upon this reserve marked pink.
106. Does not a main road intervene between the railway line and the proposed sale-yards? Yes.
107. There is no siding from the railway to the proposed yards? Not at the present time, but I understand that there is available land for one; I believe that the land lying between the road and the railway line is to be used for the purposes of these yards.
108. Mr. Crick.] Then the plan shows that there is available land? Yes; I am given to understand that land has been resumed for that purpose.
109. Is the road marked on the plan within the municipality? No, I think not.
110. Could the municipality then make a siding across that road without obtaining a Bill from the House to give them power to do so? That is a matter upon which I could not pass an opinion.
111. It is said that a siding is to be made there, and that it will cross into the yards? I have understood that a siding is to be run into this land between the road and the railway. Receiving yards could be erected there, and the cattle could then be driven across the road.
112. Mr. Thompson.] Is there available land there to have a siding run into the yards and to allow the cattle to be driven across to the other side of the road? Yes.
113. Mr. Tonkin.] Are any yards being erected on that side of the road near the railway? No; the yards on the other side are not yet completed.
114. Mr. Crick.] The Corporation will not lose by the erection of these yards; they will pay the interest on the outlay? I think so, with the quantity of stock there is sold at Bathurst.
115. Mr. Thompson.] Can you say whether it would be a great public benefit or otherwise to have these yards erected? I think it would be a great public benefit.
116. Affecting consumers and others? Affecting business generally and consumers in particular. We have paid from a half-penny to perhaps a 1d. a pound more for beef in Bathurst than they have been paying in Orange, which is only 36 miles away.
117. Do you know whether some of the consumers send to Orange and Blayney for their meat? Not of my own knowledge, but I have heard so.
118. You know that buyers have gone to Homebush? Yes.
119. And they have got stock there more cheaply than at Bathurst? Yes; and I know that cattle bought at Homebush are sold at Kelso at a profit.
120. Mr. Crick.] Where were they brought from? A large proportion of them were brought from the south. A very large quantity was bought. To show the monopoly that exists, I may say that if the auctioneers do not get the price they want the cattle are turned out unsold.
121. Mr. Plumb.] If a pen of cattle is put up and does not realise the price expected, the cattle are not disposed of there, but the owner takes them back? Yes. As late as Monday week there were six pens of these cattle in the yard. One pen belonged to a local buyer, another was for Lithgow, and, as the bidding for the others did not come up to the auctioneer's expectation, they were simply passed in; and if a butcher wanted to buy any of them he would probably have to go to the paddocks and pay the owner's price.
122. Mr. Thompson.] Kelso is a small place, is it not? It is not particularly large.
123. How long have you known it? Ever since I had any recollection—for thirty years perhaps.
124. Has it increased in size during that time? No.
125. Is there much probability of its being constituted a municipality? I should think not.
126. Mr. Tonkin.] Where are the present cattle sale-yards situated? One is on the bank of the river at Kelso, and the other is in what we call Old Kelso.
127. That is part of Kelso? Yes. The yards are some distance apart.
128. Do you know what county Kelso is in? The county of Roxborough.
129. That is a different county from that in which Bathurst is? Yes.
130. In what Electorate is Kelso—in East Macquarie? Yes.
131. You have read this Bill? I cannot say that I have read it attentively. I have glanced over it.
132. Does not clause 7 impose a tax upon all cattle sold within 2 miles of the boundaries of the Borough of Bathurst, outside of Bathurst? On cattle brought to the sale-yards.
133. It does not matter where they are brought to? That is a matter of interpretation.
134. The clause says "or brought to any other sale-yards or any other place, building, or yard whatsoever within the Borough of Bathurst or within 2 miles from any boundary thereof." Does not that mean that any cattle sold within 2 miles of the boundary of Bathurst will be liable to be taxed at the same rate as the cattle sold in the Bathurst sale-yards? I should certainly not interpret the clause in that way.
135. Chairman.] Does it not mean that cattle that are yarded for sale within 2 miles of the boundaries of Bathurst shall be subject to this tax? But not cattle sold privately in a man's paddock.
136. Mr. Tonkin.] In what portion of the district do the principal stock-owners—the gentlemen who supply the markets at the present time—live? On the Kelso side.
137. That is in East Macquarie? Yes.
138. Chairman.] Those are the persons now enjoying the use of these yards? Those are the persons who have enjoyed the monopoly of these yards for so many years.
139. Do you know the M'Phillamys, the Palmers, and the Boyds? Yes.
140. Where do they live? In West Macquarie.

141. Are they large cattle salesmen? Yes. They sell a considerable quantity of cattle, and Boyd is a large sheep salesman.
142. Mr. Tonkin.] Then we are to understand that the gentlemen who have already been referred to are not the only gentlemen who supply the Bathurst market? No; not entirely. I do not think I ever said they did entirely.
143. It appears that there are a number of salesmen who live on the other side? Yes. Boyd is a stock and sheep salesman.
144. These gentlemen have the use of these yards? Yes.
145. Then there has not been such a monopoly of the yards that nobody else excepting the persons who have signed this petition can use them? No.
146. Chairman.] Is it not possible that some of the gentlemen I have named have also enjoyed that monopoly? Yes, to some extent. The Palmers are large cattle-dealers, and if they happened to have 200 head of cattle they might be able to put fifty of them through, because they have not got the paddocks to hold a large quantity.
147. What would be Palmer's position if he had a number of cattle and the yards were held by any of the gentlemen mentioned? He must go on to some other market.

Mr. T. Durack.
29 May, 1889.

James Cassidy called in, sworn, and examined:—

148. Mr. Thompson.] You are a member of the firm of R. and W. Oakes? I am.
149. How long have you been a member of that firm? Over twenty years.
150. I believe you are the lessees of one of the yards at Kelso? Yes.
151. Yours is the oldest established yard? Yes; that is, in Kelso.
152. Are there any other yards in the district? Not now.
153. Do you know the site of the proposed Corporation yards? I do.
154. Is it a suitable one for sale-yards? No, I do not think it is.
155. Is there any other land available for the erection of sale-yards? That I do not know.
156. You see the site on this plan [Appendix A]? I can tell you why I do not think this is a suitable site. It is too far away from the principal stock-owners. I remember suggesting a site which would have been much better—at the back of the Show Grounds in Bathurst.
157. That could not be obtained? I believe not.
158. The other site not being obtainable, and this land being available, is it not suitable? If there is no other land it must be.
159. Would it be an advantage to have the railway passing through the land? It would be an advantage because you could have a branch line to the stockyards, which would make them easier of access.
160. Would it be a saving to the owners and vendors of stock to have a railway running into the yards? It would save a good deal.
161. What do you think would be the effect of establishing these Corporation yards here? There would be a larger supply of stock, and consequently a larger field of buyers. Then the stock would be all in one set of yards, and classed, and the buyers could inspect them before sales, which cannot be done under the present system.
162. Would the construction of these yards be a benefit to the consumers and the public generally? I think so. I think it would be a great benefit to them.
163. You are speaking now as the proprietor of another sale-yard? Yes.
164. Mr. Crick.] Will you tell us how it would benefit the public? By giving a larger supply of stock. At present the supply of stock at the two yards is very limited, and not up to the requirements of the trade.
165. Then the construction of these yards would reduce the price of meat? The price of beef is very high, and the larger number of stock would probably reduce it.
166. Mr. Plumb.] There would be more competition? Yes.
167. Mr. Lakeman.] Do I understand that the stock-owners and the present proprietors have combined to send in a limited number of stock to keep the price up? I do not say that they have combined together, but they do it, and they do not benefit by it.
168. Mr. Thompson.] It certainly does not benefit the public? No.
169. Chairman.] As a matter of fact, have you had the same number of country buyers during the last three years as you had years ago? Nothing like.
170. Mr. Thompson.] Do you suffer any loss from the present system of yards? We do.
171. In what way? The other yards—Clements' and M'Carthy's yards—being the first, buyers very often stay there half the day, and I am waiting about three parts of the day for them. Then again, many men from the outside districts buy at these yards to enable them to get their stock, and do not come near me at all. This does happen, and I lose by it. Some of the buyers come to me and some do not. Then again, the buyers have not the opportunity of seeing both classes of cattle, which it is necessary they should do. They do not know whether I have good or bad cattle. There may be an inferior article at the lower yards, and they buy it, and I suffer in consequence.
172. Mr. Tonkin.] Do you think if the Corporation had erected the yards at Kelso, instead of in their present position, and had obtained an Act by which they could charge dues there, that position would have been preferable to the one which has been chosen? I do. I said so all along.
173. Mr. Thompson.] There is no land available there; it is all private property? Yes; but the Corporation were offered a rental of the land upon which our yards are built, and they could have bought it.
174. Chairman.] Suppose Kelso became a municipality, as it has been suggested it might, could cattle be driven through it, except within certain hours? Yes; just the same as through Bathurst.
175. Is there not a law which prevents it being done? I am not aware that there is.
176. Do you know that the law was put in force when Dalhunny and Palmer had the cattle sale-yards at the old pound? I have heard that such was the case.
177. If Kelso was made a municipality all the cattle that had to be driven to these yards would have to go through the town? They would through the main road. They would have to go through the main part of Kelso.
178. The cattle would have to pass through the thickly populated parts of Kelso, if there are any? Yes.
179. Mr. Crick.] You are clearly of opinion that these proposed yards would be a distinct benefit to the consumers—to the great majority of the people in this district? Yes.

Mr. J. Cassidy.
29 May, 1889.

- Mr. J. Cassidy. 180. You are the owner of one of the yards in Kelso;—will not this Bill do considerable injury to the owners of those yards? I do not think so. I am one of the owners of these yards, and I would not support the Bill if I thought that it would injure them.
- 20 May, 1889. 181. Are there any owners of private yards who would suffer by the operation of this Bill? I cannot tell you; I am speaking for myself. I think the others will suffer far more than I will.
182. Then it is your opinion that the owners of the other yards will suffer somewhat? Yes.
183. Much? No; I do not suppose it will be very much. The number of stock now sold in the yards is so limited that the owners will not suffer very much by having the large quantity sold in the Corporation yards.
184. Do you think that the owners of other yards are entitled to any consideration? No, I do not.
185. Chairman.] Do you know of your own knowledge that Dalhenty, a member of the firm who owns the other yard, has, on a public occasion, when a candidate for the position of Alderman, declared himself in favour of Corporation yards? Yes.
186. Can you say whether he is in favour of them now? I cannot say that.
187. Mr. Thompson.] A petition has been presented to Parliament from the residents of Kelso, in opposition to the passing of this Bill;—can you say whether the residents of Kelso would suffer any inconvenience through the erection of these yards? I know as much about Kelso as most people, and I think that the only two people who would suffer are the hotelkeepers. There is no business in Kelso apart from that.
188. There is only one butcher's shop and a couple of public-houses? Yes.
189. Mr. Plumb.] Do you think it would be to the interests of the public, and in a lesser degree of the stock-owners, if these yards were erected? Yes.
190. In that case it would be a benefit to the consumer and to the producer? That is my opinion.
191. Mr. Tonkin.] Do you say that you think it would be an advantage to the stock-owners of the district to have these yards erected, and to close the Kelso yards? No one asked me that.
192. Do you think that if the present yards were closed it would be an advantage to stock-owners of the district to go to the other yards? Most certainly I do.
193. Why? Because the stock-owners will have the opportunity of selling their stock in a body. Under the present system we can only take one man's stock at a time, and if any one asks us to take stock upon a day on which we are selling another man's stock, we say, "The yards are engaged for that day, we cannot take your stock."
194. Is not that an advantage to the stock-owners of the district? I am referring to the stock-owners of the district. There may be one or two who would not benefit by this, but to the general body of the stock-owners it would be an advantage to have the Corporation yards.
195. Will you listen to these names—Messrs. George Lee, James Rutherford, William Kite, John L. Gilmour, W. and J. Lee, Rankin, George Suttor, and the Sullivan Brothers;—are those the names of the principal stock-owners in the district? They are some of them.
196. Do you think it would be a benefit to those gentlemen if the present yards were closed and the Corporation yards opened? I do not know. I am only giving you my opinion. In my opinion they would sell twice the quantity of stock in the Corporation yards that they sell now.
197. Would there be twice the consumption of stock? The consumption would be half as much again.
198. Mr. Thompson.] Supposing, say, John Brown takes your yards for next Thursday in order to sell forty head of cattle, if I am a stranger or a stock-owner from another part of the district, will you allow me to sell in those yards on that day? No.
199. John Brown would have a right to the yards, and I as a stranger would have to take my stock elsewhere? Yes; and John Brown, who takes the yards to sell forty head of cattle, very often only puts in twenty.
200. Chairman.] How often has that happened? Very often.
201. Mr. Thompson.] Each of these stock-owners really enjoy a monopoly with regard to the yards? Yes; and they have not the best name in the country for that reason.
202. Where does the stock go to? To Orange.
203. Chairman.] And to Mudgee? Mudgee is out of the line altogether.
204. I presume that by this state of things injury is done to the consumers? There is no doubt about it.
205. And the price of meat is made higher in consequence? Yes; in consequence of the small number of cattle sold.
206. As an owner of one of the yards, have you ever been applied to by auctioneers for permission to sell cattle in your yards on payment? Yes.
207. Did you consent? Yes.
208. Were you willing to continue that? No.
209. Why? It interfered with the buyers.
210. Mr. Plumb.] Is it not a fact that buyers have often to come to Homebush? Yes.
211. Owing to the want of yard accommodation? The yard accommodation is very good but the system we have is a bad one.
212. Mr. Tonkin.] Supposing these Corporation yards were erected, would this limited supply of cattle be done away with? How do you mean?
213. If these Corporation yards are erected and the other yards continue to be used, will there not still be a scarcity of cattle in the district? Of course there will not, because the people will bring their stock to the Corporation yards.
214. If the Corporation sale-yards are erected, will all the difficulties you have spoken of be done away with? Yes.
215. Have you read the Bill? No.
216. Will you read clause 7;—Do you not understand it to mean that all sales of stock that take place within a radius of 2 miles of the municipality of Bathurst will have to pay a tax to that municipality? In yards.
217. The clause says, "or any other place, building, or yard whatsoever,"—does not "place" mean a paddock? No, I should think not.
218. Does it mean a stock-yard in a paddock? Yes. I take it to mean a place suitable for the selling of cattle. I would not call a paddock or a run "a place" under those circumstances. 219.

219. Is not anywhere a place according to the meaning of the word? I would most undoubtedly object to rates being paid by owners selling cattle in their own paddocks.
220. Mr. Plumb.] If the cattle were yarded for the purpose of sale, you would expect them to pay the rates? Yes.
221. Mr. Tonkin.] Do you think it would be an injustice to compel any one within 2 miles of Bathurst to pay a tax to the Corporation for the sale of cattle after passing this Bill? My opinion is this: The Corporation yards were built at great expense, and they require protecting, so as I am a Protectionist I go in for protection.
222. If the words "or within 2 miles of any boundary thereof" were struck out, do you think the erection of these yards would get rid of the difficulties which the Committee had been led to believe to exist with regard to the limited quantity of cattle supply? I do not think so. I know that if those words were struck out the Corporation yards would be no good.
223. Mr. Crick.] If they were struck out any one could erect yards alongside the Corporation yards? Yes; and I would keep on where I am.
224. Chairman.] That would simply increase the difficulty—it would make matters worse? It would make matters worse than they are at the present time.
225. Mr. Tonkin.] Will not the erection of the Corporation sale-yards shut up these yards? That I do not know.
226. Would not that be the tendency? I do not know.
227. Mr. Lakeman.] Would it not be a benefit to the public if they were shut up? My idea is that it would be a benefit to the public generally.
228. Mr. Thompson.] And place all the auctioneers on an equal footing? Yes. It is not because I have a monopoly that I should maintain it; but I shall take my chance with the others.

Eugene Henry Parker called in, sworn, and examined:—

229. Mr. Thompson.] You are a butcher, carrying on business in Bathurst? Yes.
230. How long have you been in business there? Just thirty years.
231. I believe yours is a very extensive business? I have been doing a bigger business years ago.
232. You are aware that it is proposed to erect—in fact, that cattle sale-yards have been erected on the Vale Road? I am.
233. Do you think that is a good site for the erection of these yards? I think it is about as good as could be got, for various reasons, and because you can get water there.
234. Could you say for drainage? The drainage is good; but the question of getting a supply of water is an important one.
235. These yards are well situated for that? Yes.
236. The drainage is good;—the yards drain into the Vale Creek? Yes.
237. Chairman.] What about the proximity of this site to the slaughter-houses? It has all the slaughter-yards near it but three, and to one of those three it is fairly convenient, because they can go behind the town.
238. Nearly all the slaughter-houses are in close proximity to it? Yes.
239. Mr. Tonkin.] How many are there in close proximity to it? Five.
240. And three at some distance away? Yes; but one of those three has a very good road to it.
241. Are these three slaughter-houses as close to the proposed yards as they are to the existing yards? Not quite, particularly in the dry time, when they can go down the river; but now they have to go through the town.
242. As to the desirability of the erection of these yards, will you say whether they will be for the public benefit? A very great public benefit.
243. Will you kindly explain what you mean by that? The want of these yards has been felt for many years by the public generally and the buyers of stock. If there is a glut of cattle at any time we do not get the benefit of it—I mean not only the butchers, but the public generally, because the stock are either kept back in the paddocks or sent to Sydney, so that the market shall not be filled. Therefore butchers do not get the chance of laying in any stock to tide them over a bad time, and we have to face a continuous high market. We never get the benefit of gluts as they do in Sydney, where cattle are put in as they come. It has been so arranged that squatters from up the country consider the Bathurst market shut out from them—that it is in the hands of a few individuals, and of late years they have not tried to get in. This applies to sheep as well as to cattle, and is an important reason why these yards should be erected.
244. Mr. Crick.] Does the price of meat fluctuate much in Bathurst? Not as much as in other places, for the reasons I have just given.
245. Mr. Lakeman.] You have not given the reasons why squatters will not send stock to Bathurst? The market is in the hands of a few large stock and land holders.
246. Would it not be just the same if you had Corporation yards? With public yards any one who wished could send in his cattle for sale.
247. Cannot they do so now? No.
248. Why? The yards are held for the large holders in the neighbourhood, who could put their stock back if they did not get a price to suit them.
249. They arrange with the auctioneers ahead? For many weeks ahead.
250. So that they can send stock in as they like? Yes.
251. And therefore the public lose the benefit of having a large number of stock to buy? Yes; there is no competition.
252. And you are forced, through the limited supply, to pay very high prices? Yes; the market is regulated.
253. Just to suit the sellers? By those men who have large paddocks and splendid pasturage, and who can hold their stock.
254. In speaking of the large land-owners I suppose you referred to men like Messrs. George Lee, Rutherford, Kite, Gilmour, Sullivan Bros., and others. Those are the persons who own large areas in the district, and fatten their stock there, and, as you say, engage these yards for weeks ahead? Not only do they fatten them, but they hold them when they are fat, and regulate the market.

Mr E. H.
Parker.

23 May, 1889.

- Mr. E. H. Parker.
29 May, 1889.
255. Chairman.] Have you seen a larger number of cattle advertised for sale than have been sent for sale? Frequently; but not a very much larger number.
256. Mr. Tonkin.] Have you ever attended any other sale-yard? I have been at Homebush.
257. Have you ever seen a larger number of cattle advertised for sale at those yards than have been put up for sale? I could not say that; I have not been there often. I have not been there on more than two or three occasions.
258. Mr. Thompson.] Does not this occur—does not the owner of eighty head of cattle sometimes advertise forty to be sold at one time and forty at another, so that he can have a monopoly of the two yards? That frequently occurs, so that one man has a monopoly of the yards for weeks.
259. People coming from other districts with stock for sale could not engage these yards? No.
260. And instead of putting eighty head of cattle in for sale do you know that a less number is sometimes put in? Frequently.
261. Have you yourself had to buy cattle elsewhere? I have had to do so occasionally, but not often, because we depend on these people.
262. Do you know whether these yards have been looked upon as a public necessity for a long time? Yes, for years.
263. Could you say whether the whole of the butchers in Bathurst or any of them are in favour of their construction? I say with confidence that there is not one butcher in Bathurst who is not in favour of the construction of these yards.
264. Would it affect, so far as the public are concerned, the price of meat? It should do for the reasons I have first given, because the market would be open to competition by outside persons. As it is now the market is regulated throughout the year.
265. Cattle bought at the Kelso yards now have to be brought through the town? They have, and I might remark that it is much more dangerous for us to bring the cattle as we do. Now that the rivers and creeks are up we have to cross the Vale Bridge, while those who go down the river have to cross two bridges.
266. They have to go through a populous part of the town? Through a fairly populous part, and this is very dangerous. It is more dangerous for us to take small lots of cattle than it would be to take thirty or forty head at a time. The yards as they are now are looked upon as a great nuisance, because buyers go to one yard and see what is in it, but we do not see what is in the other; while if the yards were together we should see all the cattle at once, and know what would suit us. Here we are in the dark.
267. Mr. Crick.] This 7th clause will make the owners or sellers of cattle in Kelso yards pay the same fees as if they sold them in the Corporation yards. Do you think that would be unfair; are the proprietors of these yards entitled to some consideration? I do not think the public would like that. They want the buyers and sellers to meet in one and the same place.
268. Mr. Lakeman.] At the present time these yards are owned by private individuals; but this Bill proposes to give the Bathurst municipality power to levy a fee on all cattle sold within 2 miles of the Borough of Bathurst, so that if cattle, after this Bill has been passed, are yarded in the present yards and sold there, they will have to pay the same fees to the Municipal Council as if they had been sold in the Corporation yards. I suppose if the Corporation yards are erected cattle will not be sold in the private yards? They want the yards to be in one place, and I am sure if a reasonable charge is made the public will be better satisfied.
269. Mr. Crick.] In your opinion, would any loss occur to the owners of those private yards at Kelso by the passing of this Bill? I should not think so because it will not lessen their sale at all.
270. Do you think these yards would be payable, and that they would be a benefit to the people of the district? There is no doubt at all of that.
271. Mr. Tonkin.] You say that it would not injure the owners of the present yards or the people who sell in them if they had to pay a tax to the Corporation of Bathurst? I do not know what answer to give to that.
272. That is what Mr. Crick asked you? I thought what he asked was would there be any injury done to them, and I said to that it would not injure their sale.
273. Mr. Plumb.] Only they would sell in another yard? They would have as big a sale in the Corporation yards as they had in their own yards.
274. Chairman.] The proprietors of these two yards would suffer a loss and the public would be benefited? I do not know that there would be any loss, except that fees would be charged. That would not affect the auctioneer, as the owner of the cattle would have to pay any fees.

A. G. Thompson, Esq.,

Dear Sir,

Western Warehouse, Bathurst, 27 May, 1889.

In compliance with your request, conveyed to me through C. V. Naylor, I have pleasure in handing you here-with information in re cattle sale-yards.

For some years the butchers and inhabitants of Bathurst have been agitating for the erection of Corporation sale-yards, and among the reasons given why Corporation yards should be erected, are the following, viz. :—

(1st.) The yards at Kelso, being in the hands of private parties, are said to be worked in such a way that it is often impossible for the butchers to obtain the cattle they require, and it often happens that they have to pay a great deal more than the actual market value of the cattle, when compared with the prices ruling at the time in Orange and Sydney.

(2nd.) It is said that persons outside a certain ring cannot send their cattle here for sale, because the auctioneers who hold the yards will not let them come in and depress the market.

(3rd.) There being only two yards at Kelso, which are owned or rented by two firms of auctioneers, no other auctioneers (of whom there are some four or five in town) can sell cattle here, as they have no yards, and the auctioneers holding the yards will not allow them to be used by others.

(4th.) From the above reasons it will be easily understood that the inhabitants of Bathurst have to pay a great deal more for their meat than persons living at Orange and other towns where Corporation yards are established.

(5th.) Kelso being on the north-east of Bathurst, and most of the butchering establishments on the west and south and south-west, it is necessary for nearly all the cattle sold at these yards to pass through the city, which is very objectionable, in fact, some years ago, a lad was killed by a wild bullock that was being driven through the town. As Bathurst extends the objection to having cattle driven through the town will be increased.

(6th.) Any cattle purchased at the Kelso yards by the Bathurst butchers have, in case the river is up, to swim the river, and sometimes they have to swim to get to the yards, and then back again when sold, and this is certainly not advantageous.

A Bill was passed some years ago to enable the Council to erect yards on section No. , which is situated at the end of George-street, one of our principal streets of the city. But as each successive Council considered it undesirable to place yards in such a central position, and on a site which is in every way suited for building purposes, as it commands an extensive view of the surrounding district; and further, if this site had been used it would have interfered with the healthful recreation of the inhabitants, being situated in a locality used largely by persons taking their children for a walk.

Another site was given to the Council some few years ago, but as it is subject to floods, the Council did not deem it advisable to make use of it, and applied for the present site, which, I believe, is considered by the officers of the Government to be the best site near Bathurst for the purpose. The site is situated about 50 chains to the south of Bathurst on the Great Western Railway Line, and stock can be driven to it without going through the town, from the Orange, Carcoar, Blayney, Rockley, Newbridge, Lagoon, Oberon, and White Rock Road. It is also in close proximity to several of the slaughter-houses, and I think there are only two butchers who will have to drive their cattle through any portion of the town, and they can get round by a back street, which is not likely to be much built on for some years, as the town is extending in a different direction.

The yards are close to the town common, which can be used with advantage by cattle sent from a distance.

The railway runs through a portion of the ground, and trucking yards can be built so as to deliver the cattle straight into the yards, and purchasers coming from a distance can truck the stock and have them sent away without being unnecessarily knocked about.

The drainage of the site is all that could be desired, being situated on a natural hill, and draining into the Vale Creek.

There are very few houses near the site, and I do not think it at all likely that population will extend round the yards, as the land on three sides is low, and not suited for building purposes, being subject to floods.

I have no doubt there are other points in favour of the site chosen, but as I was only asked this morning to write this out, I have not had as much time to think the matter over as I should have wished.

I remain, &c.,

E. T. WEBB

BATHURST CATTLE SALE-YARDS BILL.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN RESIDENTS OF KELSO AGAINST.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 14 May, 1889.

To the Members of the Legislative Assembly for the Colony of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of the residents of the town of Kelso, in the county of Roxburgh and surrounding District, praying that the provisions of the Cattle Sale-Yards Bill may be amended in manner hereinafter appearing,—

SHOWETH :—

1. That the provisions of the Bill proposing to levy a rate on all stock sold within a radius of 2 miles of the Borough of Bathurst are inequitable with regard to the residents of the town of Kelso and surrounding district, inasmuch as it is an attempt to impose a Municipal rate payable by residents not within the Municipal District or Borough of Bathurst.

2. That the town of Kelso is not within the Borough of Bathurst and in a different county, and will not benefit at all by any rate imposed on residents in that town and surrounding district.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that the provisions of the Bill, levying a rate on all stock sold within the radius aforesaid, will not be allowed for the reasons aforesaid.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c., &c.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

BATHURST CATTLE SALE-YARDS BILL.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN RESIDENTS IN BATHURST AND DISTRICT IN FAVOUR OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 29 May, 1889.

To the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Humble Petition of certain ratepayers, consumers, auctioneers, stockowners, and others, residents in Bathurst and the surrounding district,—

SHOWETH:—

1. That by an Act to authorize the erection and maintenance of cattle sale-yards on a portion of the Bathurst Common by the Borough Council of Bathurst, and cited as the "Bathurst Cattle Sale-yards of 1873," 10 acres of land, portion of 762 acres, dedicated for commonage and public recreation at Bathurst, and known as "The Park," were made available for the erection and maintenance of cattle sale-yards by the Borough Council of Bathurst.

2. That the site of the said 10 acres of land was found to be wholly unsuitable for the erection of the said sale-yards, both by reason of its proximity to the centre of the city and the drainage falling towards the same, and the difficulty in obtaining water for stock purposes, and the said site was abandoned.

3. That your Petitioners are aware that a Bill has been introduced to the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales during the present session entitled, "A Bill intituled 'An Act to authorize the erection and maintenance of cattle sale-yards by the Borough Council of Bathurst.'"

4. That your Petitioners are desirous that the said Bill should become law for the reasons following:—

- 1st. That at present there are no public sale-yards either in the City of Bathurst or within a radius of two miles thereof.
- 2nd. That there are two sale-yards adjoining the village of Kelso, near Bathurst, the properties of private persons and where all stock is now sold for the purposes of the consumption of annual food for Bathurst and the surrounding district.
- 3rd. That for some years past a monopoly in relation to the said private sale-yards has existed to the great detriment and injury of the consumers of Bathurst and surrounding district.
- 4th. That stockowners generally are seriously prejudiced by such monopoly inasmuch as the private yards referred to are frequently engaged for weeks previous to desired sales and such stockowners are thereby greatly prejudiced by not being able to sell their stock when they desire so to do.
- 5th. That a few large landed proprietors near Kelso, and in the vicinity of the private sale-yards referred to, have been able for many years past to control the Bathurst meat market by engaging the said yards for their individual sales to the detriment of owners of stock generally.
- 6th. That those of your Petitioners who are auctioneers, residing in and near Bathurst aforesaid, suffer considerably in their businesses by reason of there being no public stock sale-yards.
- 7th. That owing to the monopoly before referred to, your Petitioners verily believe that the price of butchers' meat for many years past has been kept up from one halfpenny to one penny per pound beyond the legitimate market value, and that the only way the market could be fairly regulated would be by the erection and maintenance of cattle sale-yards, under the control of the Corporation of the Borough of Bathurst.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will favourably consider the provisions of the said Bill referred to in the third paragraph of this petition, with a view to the same becoming law.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

Dated this day of , one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

BROKEN HILL WATER SUPPLY BILL.

TUESDAY, 2 JULY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. J. P. ABBOTT,	MR. DICKENS,
MR. GARRARD,	MR. WYMAN BROWN,
MR. WADDELL.

J. P. ABBOTT, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Cecil West Darley, Esq., called in, sworn and examined:—

1. Chairman.] What is your position? I am Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers.
2. Have you read the Bill before this Committee? Yes.
3. Have you any suggestions to offer to the Committee? I observe in the title of the Bill that power is asked to enable this Company to establish a system of water supply within the police districts of Broken Hill and Silverton; but at the present time there are no such districts legally known by those names. The locality is really within the police district of Mitchell. At the police office they only know of the locality as being within the police district of Mitchell. A draftsman at the Survey Office is now preparing a subdivision of the district of Mitchell; but it has not been submitted yet for approval. C. W. Darley, Esq.
4. Have you any other suggestions to offer with reference to the Bill? I observe in clause 15 that no provision is made for the free use of water by public institutions, as is usual in all water-supply Acts. I see no use for the clause as it stands. Under the clause, public or charitable institutions would have to pay for water. In all Government Bills public hospitals or charitable institutions are supplied free.
5. But this is not a Government Bill? The clause is of no use. The answer that it is not a public Bill would also apply to the 16th clause, which provides that "the Company, at the request of any municipal council in the borough of which it shall construct its works, or any of them, shall fix proper plugs in the main or other pipes." I take it that these plugs are intended for the protection of property for the public benefit. We find by experience, however, that a municipal council will not ask that fire-plugs be placed in the mains; and in this case the result probably will be that no plugs will be fixed—that the public will have no access to the water. They are entitled to free use of the water for putting out fires; but the municipal council will take care not to order any plugs to be fixed, because if they did they would have to pay the cost of fixing and maintaining them; they will say as an excuse that they have no funds for the purpose. I mention the point because it has cropped up in connection with the municipalities around Sydney; and the Water Board is now asking that the section be amended so as to throw the onus upon it. I think it is a very proper power for the Water Board to possess. I think that the water company should put in fire-plugs as part of the mains; it adds little or nothing to the cost of laying the mains. On the other hand, the Bill states that the Company must supply water free for certain purposes. The 18th clause provides that "the Company shall allow all persons at all times to take and use such water for the purpose only of extinguishing fire without making compensation for the same"; but the public will have no access to the water—because probably no fire-plugs will be fixed in the mains.
6. Have you any other suggestion to make? Clause 21 provides that the maximum price of the water shall be two shillings per hundred gallons. It looks to me like a case of levying black-mail. If you turn to the report

C. W. Darley, report of Mr. Derry's evidence given before the last Committee you will see that he gives the following estimate:—

Esq.
2 July, 1889.

"For the first year we can supply it for 1s. per 100 gallons—that is, if only 120,000 gallons are used daily. If double that quantity is required, we could supply it for 9d. per 100 gallons; and later on, if the demand rose to 400,000 gallons, we could supply it for 6d. per 100 gallons.

43. Would those prices leave a fair profit to the Company? We should have a good profit—15 per cent. to 20 per cent."

Now, 120,000 gallons daily is absurdly small for that population; and at a shilling per 100 gallons it would return £60 a day, which would nearly pay back the cost of the works in a year.

7. Would you think a shilling per 100 gallons a fair price? Mr. Derry says that if 240,000 gallons daily are required the Company could supply it for 9d. per 100 gallons; and if later on 400,000 gallons daily should be required, it could be supplied for sixpence per 100 gallons. A consumption of 400,000 gallons daily means a return of £36,500 yearly, or more than the first cost of the works. A consumption of 100,000 gallons daily is small for that population, and even by supplying that small quantity the Company would collect enough to pay back the cost of the works in one year.

8. What is the next clause you have to make any suggestions about? The Bill provides for supplying water by meter. No provision is made for charging by assessed value, although the Bill speaks of supplying water for domestic purposes. The Bill is partly framed on Bills that provided for an assessed rate. Clause 23 has reference to sale of water on assessment. If water is supplied by meter it does not matter where it is taken to.

9. They may object to a person having water supplied to mines or gardens, and they will have power under the Bill of saying that a person shall only use the water for domestic purposes? Domestic purposes means where you are assessed. The clause is copied from Acts under which there is an assessment rate struck. Therefore, on your assessment you are not entitled to take any water for your stable. If you have a stable you must have a meter. If it is to be charged for by meter there is no occasion for an assessment. Clause 21 only provides for the sale of water by the 100 gallons; but clause 24 is copied from Acts under which the two systems are in vogue.

10. Have you any other suggestions to offer? No; the other points I was asked to point out to the Committee have been met by the Bill having been altered.

11. You see no objection to the Bill? No.

12. Mr. Garrard.] With reference to the catchment area, have you plotted on your map the area the Company propose to take, or can you definitely describe the area? I have mentioned that the police districts of Broken Hill and Silverton are not yet fixed. If they can be confined to the area shown in the photolithograph appended to the report of the previous Committee there will be no objection.

13. If they were not so confined they might go to the Darling? The original Bill took in Wilcannia, and no one else could have supplied that town with water except by their permission.

14. Taking Round Hill as a centre, and describing a circle, say 6 miles from that point, embracing the whole of Broken Hill, do you think there would be any objection to giving them that catchment area? They might have the right to the catchment area of Stephen's Creek above its junction with Darling Creek and about the Springs. Then they would want power to take pipes across the intervening country between that and Broken Hill.

15. There is no project a foot in the department to give these people a Government supply of water? No.

MR. WYMAN BROWN,
MR. DICKENS,

MR. WADDELL.

J. P. ABBOTT, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George Gordon called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr.
G. Gordon.
9 July, 1889.

16. Chairman.] You were formerly examined by a Committee of the Legislative Assembly on the Broken Hill Water Supply Bill? Yes.

17. Since then, has your attention been directed to the evidence given by Mr. Derry as to the probable consumption of water? Yes.

18. Will you look at question 42 of his evidence? Yes. He says, "For the first year we can supply it for 1s. per 100 gallons—that is, if only 120,000 gallons are used daily." That is, provided that quantity of water be used and sold.

19. Do you anticipate that there would be such a sale of water as that in the first year? I do not think there would be just at first, but I think that, probably by the end of the year, there would be nearly that quantity sold. At first we hope to be able to begin to supply water before the reticulation of the town can be finished. A few stand-pipes would be put up, and while they were in use I do not think that quantity of water would be sold. I do not think that 1s. per 100 gallons would cover the first year's expense.

20. Would it if you had the water laid on? If we had the water laid on all over the village, and sold 120,000 gallons, we reckon that that would cover the expense.

21. With the present population of Broken Hill that is about 10 gallons per day for each inhabitant? About twelve. We reckon the population at present at 10,000 persons.

22. What is the very lowest rate at which you think you could afford to supply water at per 100 gallons during the first year? During the first year I think it would cost 1s. 6d.

23. Mr. Wyman Brown.] That is the price at which it is supplied now by the carts? We should supply it at different points in the town. I reckon that it will cost 1s. 6d. We shall only get up to the supply of 120,000 gallons at the end of the year.

24. Chairman.] Do you think that 1s. would be ample after the end of the year—that is, if the maximum for the first year was fixed at 1s. 6d.? I think it would cover everything.

25. Will you look at section 8 of the Bill giving power to divert water from any creek or watercourse? Yes.

26. I understand it would be necessary that the Company should have the power temporarily to alter roads? Yes; if we were laying a pipe across a road we should have to divert it temporarily. There are hardly any creeks there; but we might have to lay a pipe across the same creek at two different points where the creek would form a sort of loop. We do not wish to divert the course of the creek in any way, but only to make a local alteration where it bends.

Mr.
G. Gordon.
9 July, 1889.

William Jamieson called in, sworn, and examined:—

27. Chairman.] You reside in Melbourne? Yes.

28. By profession you are a licensed surveyor? Yes.

29. And also a director of the Barrier Ranges and Broken Hill Water Supply Company? Yes.

30. Have you prepared a plan of the area within which it is proposed to catch the water for the supply of Broken Hill? The area has never been actually surveyed; but I know the country very well, and can supply the Committee with a description.

Mr.
W. Jamieson.
9 July, 1889.

31. Have you not a description prepared? No; but I can give a verbal description, and hand in a written description afterwards. The description is as follows:—Starting at the main watershed between the eastern and western watersheds on the top of a hill called One-tree Hill; thence along that watershed to a point where the watershed between the Yancowinna Creek and Stephen's Creek meet; thence along the watershed between those creeks to a point about easterly of a point in Stephen's Creek, about 3 miles below the site of the dam; thence from that point in a south-westerly direction along the watershed between Mount Darling and the waters belonging to Stephen's Creek, above that creek, to a point about 10 miles from Stephen's Creek in a south-westerly direction; thence north-westerly to the Broken Hill; thence along the top of that hill to a point, taking in the town of Willyama; and thence in a north-westerly direction along the watershed of Uंबरumberka and Stephen's Creeks to the starting-point.

32. Supposing you were to take Broken Hill as a centre for the operations of the Company, what radius from that centre would embrace the whole of the area you have just described? A radius of 16 miles would be more than sufficient to take in all the land we shall want. My description would take in the two big tanks belonging to Broken Hill and the two Government dams along the creek, and probably it would include the tramway, block 14, and the British blocks. The actual area that we should require would be only the waters which would fall towards Stephen's Creek. If we were to take in any other water it would be no good to us.

33. Mr. Barbour.] Will you undertake to hand in a sketch as well as a description of the area you have described? Yes.

34. Chairman.] Do you think that the population is likely to increase, or that the mines are developing? I have no doubt that the mines are developing. I was up there the other day, and I am of opinion that the population must increase; but I do not think that it will increase very quickly, because a large number of people who have gone there in hopes of the place going ahead could actually be done without at the present time without causing any disadvantage to the place.

35. Mr. Wymann Brown.] No doubt the erection of smelters at Port Pirie will affect the population of Broken Hill? In a small degree. Of course, had the smelters been erected at Broken Hill they would have afforded employment there for the people who are now working at Port Pirie—for, perhaps, 100 men. There is every appearance of the town being likely to go ahead. There is one feature, however, which is always attached to a scheme of this kind—the life of the mine is the life of the scheme. It is not like a scheme for supplying water to a town in the centre of an agricultural district. When the mines at Broken Hill cease to pay the life of the scheme also ceases. The same remark would apply to the tramway company, which, though it would get some wool and produce to carry, would not earn sufficient to provide axle-grease for working the line.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze the data. This includes both primary and secondary data collection techniques. The primary data was gathered through direct observation and interviews with key personnel. Secondary data was obtained from existing reports and databases.

The third section details the statistical analysis performed on the collected data. Various tests were conducted to determine the significance of the findings. The results indicate a strong correlation between the variables being studied, suggesting that the observed trends are not merely coincidental.

Finally, the document concludes with a series of recommendations based on the research findings. These suggestions are aimed at improving the efficiency of the current processes and addressing the identified areas of concern. It is hoped that these measures will lead to a more streamlined and effective operation.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

BROKEN HILL WATER SUPPLY BILL.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN INHABITANTS PRAYING THE HOUSE NOT TO SANCTION THE PASSING OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 24 April, 1889.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of certain Inhabitants of Broken Hill and District, in the parish of Willyama, town of Willyama, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWER:—

1. That a Bill has been introduced, in pursuance of leave in that behalf duly given to, and is now before this Honorable House, entitled, A Bill to enable the Barrier Ranges and Broken Hill Water Supply Company (Limited) to establish a system of Water Supply within the Police Districts of Broken Hill and Silverton, and to confer upon the said Company certain powers and authorities.

2. That such Bill contains certain provisions that are highly prejudicial to the rights and interests of your Petitioners.

3. That your Petitioners, being residents of the town of Broken Hill, have been granted under the Mining Act authority to convey water for domestic use from a point on Stephen's Creek to Broken Hill.

4. That they are formed into a registered Company of £100,000 capital, with the object of supplying Broken Hill with water.

5. Relying for the security of their undertaking upon the Statute Laws of the Colony, they have entered into certain extensive contracts, and have incurred large liabilities.

6. The site of the reservoir (which is the most essential part of your Petitioners' works), the embankment of which they are now erecting, is on the stream, and immediately below the proposed site of the reservoir proposed to be erected by the Barrier Ranges and Broken Hill Water Supply Company (Limited).

7. Should the Barrier Ranges and Broken Hill Water Supply Company (Limited) obtain permission under a Bill to construct a dam at the site they propose to use, this would prevent any water, or at best permit a totally inadequate quantity, to flow down to the reservoir of your Petitioners, and thus render their works valueless.

8. The Bill of the Barrier Ranges and Broken Hill Water Supply Company (Limited) is also in many parts an infringement on the Common Law rights of your Petitioners.

9. As the passing of the Bill would be an act of extraordinary injustice against your Petitioners, your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will not sanction the passing of the said Bill.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Here follow 17 signatures.]

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

ILLAWARRA HARBOUR & LAND CORPORATION BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 17 APRIL, 1889.

Present:—
MR. J. P. ABBOTT, | MR. CULLEN,
MR. TONKIN. |
M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Edward Herbert Crossman sworn and examined:—

1. Mr. J. P. Abbott.] You are the solicitor, I suppose, for this Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation? I am the solicitor for the Company.
2. Do you produce the certificate of the incorporation of the Company? I do; and hand in a copy. [Appendix A 1.]
3. Do you produce a copy of the memorandum of association of the Company? I hand in a duplicate signed copy. [Appendix A 2.]
4. When was the Company incorporated and registered? The certificate shows that.
5. You say that they are "possessed of about 2,920 acres of freehold land on the shores of Lake Illawarra";—what evidence have you of that? I propose to produce the directors, who will swear to the fact of their being possessed of it. If the Committee think it desirable, I can produce the deeds; but they are under mortgage at the present time, and it would be a considerable expense. I am prepared to prove, on oath, of their having them. In point of fact, the original agreement for the purchase of this Company is filed by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, and the Company do not get the conveyance of the property until the last payment has been made. They have paid a proportion, and meanwhile they hold it under this registered contract.
6. What title have they for their other lands? They are entitled to 265 acres of freehold land which is mentioned in the memorandum of association in fee-simple in the same way as the others, and to the coal property under the usual permit from the Crown, for which they have power of attorney and declaration of trust. It is the only means of securing that form of property. The 265 acres of freehold land forms the access from the present roads to this property to enable it to be worked. The property is on the side of a hill, and you must have a certain amount of freehold land to enable you to get access to the coal. I can myself swear to the fact that the coal seams are on the ground, because I have been there, and have inspected them.

Thomas Andrew De Wolf called in, sworn, and examined:—

7. Mr. Crossman.] You are a director of the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation? I am.
8. Will you kindly give the names of the other directors? They are Messrs. C. A. Goodchap, John Newton, The Hon. Edmund Barton, C. A. M. Billyard, Morris Aaron, and J. R. Carey.
9. You know that this Company is in possession of 2,920 acres of land on the shores of Lake Illawarra? Yes.
10. You know that they are also in possession of 265 acres of freehold land adjoining the coal property? Yes.

Mr. E. H.
Crossman.
17 April, 1889.

Mr.
T. A. De Wolf.
17 April, 1889.

- Mr. T. A. De Wolf, 17 April, 1889.
11. You know that they are in possession of two blocks of 640 acres each of coal land adjoining that freehold land? Yes; held under mining permit.
12. Do you know also that that land is coal-bearing? Yes, I do, from personal observation.
13. Do you know that it is adjacent to Lake Illawarra? It is about two and a half miles from the lake.
14. Do you know that the access from the hills to the lake is easy for the conveyance of heavy materials? Yes; the country is almost level.
15. From the bottom of the hill? From the bottom of the hill, below the coal seam.
16. Have you inspected the entrance to the harbour yourself? Yes.
17. Chairman.] You speak of the level country being under the coal seam. Is the coal seam then an outcrop from the mountain? Yes. There are eight seams cropping out from the side of the mountain, as shown by a diagram of the side of the mountain. The black stripes represent the seams of coal; the top seam is iron.
18. Mr. Crossman.] You know, do you not, that a certain number of these coal seams which you have inspected outcrop upon the freehold land belonging to the Company, the 265 acres, and that the coal could not be worked except from that land? Yes.
19. Are those seams the best seams to work, the best coal? Yes; I think they are.
20. Do you know the width of any of these seams from personal measurement? I could only give it approximately; I think you could get that better from the engineers.

THURSDAY, 25 APRIL, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. CULLEN,		Mr. TONKIN,
Mr. McCOURT,		Mr. WOODWARD.
M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Walter Andrew Harper called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. W. A. Harper, 25 April, 1889.
21. Chairman.] What is your profession? I am a civil engineer.
22. Where do you reside? In Sydney.
23. Mr. Crossman.] What is your qualification? I am an Associate Member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, London.
24. You have had considerable experience in harbour work? Yes.
25. Have you ever conducted previous surveys of this kind? Several.
26. And carried out harbour works? I never carried them out personally, but have been employed professionally in places where I have been in a position to daily inspect the progress of the works from start to finish. I have also prepared the designs and been consulted professionally on harbours in various places.
27. Have you inspected Lake Illawarra? Yes.
28. Have you made any plans or surveys of the lake? Yes; we have made full surveys of the lake and of the coast surrounding.
29. Can you give the Committee the different soundings about the entrance to the lake? Yes.
30. Perhaps you had better first produce the plans? I have them here. This drawing, No. 1, shows the general plan of the whole scheme, with the soundings of the lake, and of the sea in proximity to Windang Island. It is useful as a general reference sheet. It shows the entrance to the work, on a small scale, and the whole length.
31. This was made under your own personal observation? Yes. Along the line of this channel, soundings were taken at intervals of 100 yards on an average.
32. Chairman.] Starting at the entrance? Yes; and borings every 10 chains along the centre of the channel. It was found that there were no difficulties to contend with in the way of rock or hard material. The bottom is principally sand and mud. The length of the channel is about $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles. The first mile and a half is through a shallow entrance that is blocked up at the present time, but which the lake sometimes overflows. The average depth of water varies from 2 inches up to 6 feet for the first mile and a half.
33. Mr. Crossman.] This channel is blocked up with sand? Yes, at the present time. There is no entrance except when there are large floods in the lake, when the water overflows at different points, and cuts a channel for itself, sometimes to the north, and sometimes to the south of Windang Island. The overflows recently have been to the north, and, as a consequence, there is a large accumulation of sand to the south, connecting Windang Island with the shore. When I first went there there was about 5 feet of water, but now you can walk across. Drawing No. 2 shows the works on a large scale, and the soundings in front of the entrance. There is 30 feet of water now, 12 chains from the shore, and then it shoals up to high-water mark.
34. Do I understand that you will have 23 feet of water at the proposed entrance? Yes. We can dredge it 2 or 3 feet deeper than that if there is need for it, because the rock is at a depth of 26 feet; but it is not proposed to do this at present.
35. Mr. Tonkin.] Is there anything but sand to contend with at the mouth of the channel? No, nothing at all; we have taken borings to a depth of 25 feet.
36. Mr. Crossman.] What did you find below the sand. At 20 feet, is it either mud or clay? It is not rock. There is no rock in any part. You can put the boring-rod down by hand 20 feet deep there, and in the lake you can put it down 30 feet. If you notice the soundings they indicate the depth pretty well. At one point the rock is 34 feet, then it runs to 26 feet, and, in my opinion, it keeps at that depth right to the other side. There is about 12 feet of mud on the average and 12 feet of water. We propose first to construct a breakwater from Windang Island on the south, which we call the Southern Mole. Its length will be about 970 feet. This Southern Mole is formed of blocks of stone varying from a ton to 2 tons in weight. These blocks of stones will be partly procured from loose rocks between high and low water mark on the island, and partly from a quarry on the other side of the lake.
37. Mr. Tonkin.] By this breakwater you would reclaim some land? Yes; it would reclaim gradually up to the south shore of Windang Island.

Mr. W. A.
25 April, 1889.

38. Is that Government land? Yes; it is all Crown land. The head of the breakwater is formed of concrete. Concrete blocks 25 tons in weight are used in the same manner as at Colombo, and Oamaru, New Zealand; with the exception that we have put a caisson containing a 2,000-ton block of concrete at the head. It will weigh 2,170 tons altogether.
39. Chairman.] What do you mean by the head? The head of the breakwater. An iron caisson is made, floated out, and filled in position. This is the point that has to resist the most sea-pressure. I have here a section of the mole.
40. Mr. Tonkin.] It is all stone at the bottom? It is stone 900 feet out of 1,200. These stones are tipped from a staging run out at a high level. The bottoms are opened of the trucks, and the stone falls out. The object is to get it to cause the stone to deposit in horizontal layers; it resists considerably greater pressure than when tipped in the ordinary manner.
41. Chairman.] It will leave about what batter? One and a quarter on the inside, and one and a half on the outside.
42. Where will this be situated from Windang Island? The end of the concrete breakwater is 1,200 feet from Windang Island.
43. Mr. Cullen.] That is the distance across? Yes.
44. Mr. Crossman.] It lies to the north of Windang Island? Yes. Then the Northern Mole is formed in the same way, with the concrete head on the same design.
45. Chairman.] About what length is it? 1,200 feet also. The next step is the construction of these two training-banks.
46. They run where? Two training-walls are constructed in order to guide the tidal currents along a permanent channel.
47. Running north or south? North-west. They are spaced 300 feet apart at the entrance, and taper to 150 feet in the channel. The first operation in the construction of the channel will be to drive sheet-piles, until we get through the sandy portion, along the two training-banks for a distance of 2,500 feet on each side. The piles are spaced 10 feet apart, and then sheeting is placed between them. They are tied back to land-ties. As soon as these are constructed the channel will be excavated to a depth of 23 feet.
48. And the silt? The silt is taken out to sea.
49. You do not place it on the inside? All the top portion will be thrown over the sides, and the lower portion taken out to sea, and scoured by the action of the tidal currents.
50. Mr. Crossman.] I understand you are speaking now of that part of the channel which will be confined by training-walls, where the sand is at present? Yes.
51. Chairman.] Then we are to presume that the silt will not be required for filling up the other side? No; it is simply allowed to distribute on the beach. Drawing No. 3 shows the sections of the various moles, and a diagram of the training-bank. After the channel has been excavated to the proper width on each side, the training-bank will be lined with pitching on a slope of one to one and a quarter, which will be carried up to the surface to prevent scouring on the sides. This work is carried through the sandspit 2,500 feet.
52. What do you intend pitching it with? Loose rubble.
53. Taken from the neighbourhood? Yes; any kind of suitable stone we can get. We propose reserving the smaller stones from the quarries.
54. Mr. Crossman.] This carries us to the end of the built portion of the channel, which is necessarily confined by training-walls. After that you get into a different portion of the channel? Yes.
55. The next description will be of that portion of the channel where you have water? Yes; drawing No. 4 shows the sections of the channel through the different materials.
56. Chairman.] This is to be a dredged channel? Yes.
57. This drawing I understand will show sections both of the built part and the dredged part? The drawing shows a longitudinal section of the whole work. This built portion comes from the entrance at the ends of the concrete breakwaters, and the training-walls run in a north-westerly direction for 2,500 feet from that place towards Tallawera Point. The channel is dredged up to the Lakeslands Estate.
58. Mr. Crossman.] Do you know of your own knowledge that this point is on the estate? Yes. The sides of the channel have a slope of one in five, and the bottom width varies from 150 feet towards the entrance to 100 feet. 150 feet is the width of the eastern end, and 100 feet that of the western ends. This channel is comparatively speaking a simple work—so many yards of dredging at so much a yard. It is about 4 miles in length.
59. What width would that leave at the top? The top of the channel would be about 175 feet; but there is 12 feet of water above that, so that if those slopes were carried out there would be 250 feet.
60. It will give in point of fact over 250 feet for the width of vessels? It will give 150 feet for larger vessels and 250 feet for smaller ones.
61. Mr. McCourt.] What will be the depth of the channel? 23 feet at low water.
62. What is the depth of water now? 12 feet from the eastern shore to Tallawera.
63. Mr. Crossman.] What is the bottom of the lake composed of? It is all mud—just the ordinary black mud of lake bottoms.
64. Have you formed any opinion of its consistency or the chance of it silting up? I think it will not give any more trouble with silting than is usual in such channels.
65. Have you seen any works with similar muds that have been dredged? Yes. Since making these plans I have been to New Zealand and have inspected several of the harbour works there, and at Dunedin they have a channel almost similar to this, 9 miles in length.
66. Is there any resemblance between the mud there and that here? The works are similar in every way in regard to the mud and the width of channel. This at Dunedin is twice the length of ours. At Dunedin they have deposited the mud on each side. It stands about 5 feet above low water, and at that time the channel is walled with two mounds of mud; but at high water there is about 3 feet of water over the top.
67. Mr. Cullen.] How long has this work been completed? It was finished during the last two years, and was commenced some nine years ago.
68. Did you inquire into their experience there in keeping the channel dredged? They have no trouble with it. They have a dredge working there because they are always deepening the channel; but there is no trouble with silting up.
69. Mr. Crossman.] What would be the length of this dredged channel? 4 miles,

Mr.
W. A. Harper.
25 April, 1889.

70. Mr. McCourt.] Is not the lake subject to floods? It never rises much; perhaps 3 feet.
71. In the highest floods? Yes.
72. Is there not a current in the lake then? No; not when the channel is open. When it cuts a channel for itself there is a heavy current, but when this channel is opened there never can be any flood.
73. Would not the rise and fall of the tide silt it up? No. I don't anticipate any disturbance in the water at all. Possibly in heavy floods the water will become charged with mud to a certain extent; and there is no doubt that there will be a small deposit at the bottom of the channel, but not more than 2 inches a year perhaps.
74. Mr. Crossman.] At the western end of this channel, what works do you proceed with? We proposed to make a basin there.
75. Chairman.] Where will that basin be situated? At Tallawera Point. It will be 1,460 feet long by 300 bottom width. At the western end of it there will be a channel 380 feet in width for a distance of 1,250 feet dredged, leading to Tallawera Point, and there are to be three jetties erected at this point, which are shown here in the section. There is sufficient elevation to load coal from shoots without cranes. On the middle jetty there will be four lines of rail, and on the others two lines.
76. Mr. Crossman.] Does the land rise at the water's edge? Yes. It will be 33 feet above high-water mark. The railway is laid out at such an elevation that the collieries can have coal-bunkers underneath these jetties, and load direct from shoots. We find in practice 30 feet to be the most serviceable height.
77. In speaking of this dredged channel in the basin, you do not mean that there is any necessity for it to remain permanently at the width you have mentioned;—there will be no difficulty in enlarging it? None at all.
78. I understand that practically it can be indefinitely enlarged as trade increases? To any size you like. It will be simply a matter of dredging, at so much a yard.
79. Will you give your opinion with regard to the silting up of the entrance. At present there is a considerable amount of sand at the entrance of the lake, between Windang Island and the lake; do you know how that has occurred and what would prevent it? All along the coast, at nearly all the harbours and rivers, the sand is deposited on the northern side, in the same way as it is here, and it forms these sandbanks. In this case, as soon as we have a permanent channel with defined walls, so that we can bring the tides as a scouring agent, there will be no danger of any sand remaining in this vicinity. At certain periods the tide will have a force of four and a half knots an hour.
80. That you consider will be sufficient to keep the channel clear? More than sufficient. At Westport, which I have just visited, they have made two moles similar to these, only they have not used concrete. There they have a current of 4 miles an hour, which has cut through half a mile of shingled beach.
81. Do you consider the connecting of this island with the shore by means of these walls will prevent this sitting of sand which has hitherto occurred? Yes; I think that probably there will be for a hundred years no sand travelling round the island. I think the tendency of these works will be to reclaim it on the southern side. As a matter of fact I don't think there is any great quantity of sand. I think there is only a small accumulation.
82. What will be the effect of these works on the water to the north of the island,—what will be the state of the water in southerly weather? The southern mole will shelter the entrance.
83. I mean the water outside? It will only affect the water to the north; under the lee of the breakwaters it is comparatively calm there in southerly weather.
84. In southerly weather that water is still? Yes. It may give some protection from the south-east, but not from the south-west. I do not look upon it as any improvement to the water there more than the island already gives.
85. Have these two entrances been arranged in any way with a view to facilitate the entrance of ships to the harbour in bad weather? Yes; they are arranged for easy entrance any weather.
86. Perhaps you will explain why the southern mole overlaps the northern mole? The southern mole overlaps the northern mole 300 feet, so as to protect the entrance from southerly gales. As a matter of fact this entrance is so placed that it is out of the range of heavy seas altogether, the island and its outlying reefs giving calm water for some distance beyond the entrance.
87. You mean by the protection of the island? By the protection of Windang Island. In any southerly weather, if you could get water enough, you could lie under the lee of the land; as it is now, you cannot get in close enough because there is no water.
88. Mr. Cullen.] How about easterly gales? North-easters affect this harbour, but they are never heavy, the islands at Red Point giving great shelter. I think anyone that knows the southern coast will bear me out in saying that jetties that have any protection from the south do not lose more than four or five days in the year from the north-east seas. I am building a jetty at Port Kembla now, and I have been able to watch the loading during the year. Last year only five days were lost from north-east weather.
89. Mr. Crossman.] What is the object of having this channel enlarged to a breadth of 300 feet inside when it is only 200 feet wide at the entrance? To diminish the sand. If a wave came up 10 feet high it would remain that height and cause as much disturbance inside as out; but by enlarging the channel this force is spread over a larger surface. It is the custom now in all entrances to enlarge the channel in the inside.
90. That would in effect make the water comparatively smooth inside the channel? Yes; that is the difficulty with Wollongong now. There they have it the same width all the way in, which makes the water almost as rough inside for some distance as outside.
91. At the present time, is there any means of getting in with a ship to the lake? None at all. You cannot get out with a boat. Even when the channel is open it is difficult to get out with a boat.
92. Mr. Cullen.] What is the estimated cost of this work? The harbour itself, without the railway, is estimated to cost £250,000.
93. And the annual maintenance for dredging and keeping it in order will be? We have not made an estimate of that.
94. Did I understand you to say that with your hand you could bore down to 30 feet? Yes, in the lake.
95. Then the mud must be very soft? Fairly soft; it is compared of sandy mud with shells.
96. Don't you imagine that the siltage would be very serious? No, I do not. The form of the channel is so flat that it only amounts to a deepening of the lake, and there are holes in the lake that people have known known for twenty years. Beach showed me some of these places which are going on for 20 feet now, and they have remained perfectly constant; they are not known to have altered in any way.

97. Mr. Crossman.] What part of the lake are those in? Different places; there are holes throughout the channels. The creeks that run into the lake have the effect of making little channels.

98. These holes are not in any out-of-the-way corner? No. No doubt when the lake is disturbed a certain amount of mud is held in suspension, but it is very inconsiderable.

99. I do not think you have given us the comparative angles of this channel compared with those of the Suez Canal? Our section in sand is the same as that of the Suez Canal. Drawing No. 4 shows the sections. They are 1 in 1 and 1 in 5.

100. So that yours is very much the less angle? Ours is very flat—the ordinary batter of similar channels. I was surprised to see how much the conditions at Lake Illawarra are similar to those at Dunedin. The kinds of mud are almost identical; I couldn't see any difference between them. They have very heavy south-westerly winds there.

101. You have some personal knowledge of the mines at the jetties along the coast? Yes; I am engineer for the Kembla Coal-mining Co.'s jetty, and Consulting Engineer for the Bellambi Company. We are building jetties 4 miles north of Wollongong and 4 miles south of it.

102. Do you know anything of the interruption to business caused by the fact of ships having to load at these jetties in the open ocean? There are on the coast altogether about seven jetties. Of these I should think five work half the time; the other two are in rather fortunate positions; they are sheltered from the south-west, and it is only in very heavy weather that they are disturbed.

TUESDAY, 30 APRIL, 1889.

Present:—

MR. CULLEN, | MR. McCOURT,
MR. TONKIN.

M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

William Andrew Harper recalled and further examined:—

103. Mr. Crossman.] With regard to the mud and silt which you are going to remove from the bottom of the lake, is it quite settled in the scheme what becomes of that? Yes.

104. Where does it go? It goes to fill up one of the bays on the property of the Company.

105. Is there any suggestion to tip it elsewhere, on other people's property? We have no idea of the kind.

106. Or blocking other channels? No.

107. Mr. Tonkin.] You intend to reclaim some land, then? The idea is to reclaim a portion of the Company's estate that has only 4 or 5 feet of water upon it at the present time. It is a mud flat at low tide.

108. Mr. Crossman.] There are a good number of deep bays on the property, are there not? Yes; I now produce a plan of the Company's proposed railway.

109. Mr. Tonkin.] How far does the Company's property extend beyond the bay you wish to reclaim? About two miles and a half on the south side and one and a half on the north.

110. Mr. Crossman.] It is fairly near the centre of the property? Yes; it is about the central point in the property.

111. The throwing of the mud and silt there could not interfere with anybody else's water-frontage? No.

112. Is there any part of your scheme which interferes with other people's property? No.

113. Mr. McCourt.] Not in the channel? Yes; there is private land at the entrance of the channel. There is a Government reserve on one side, and Reddall's land on the south.

114. Is there not other private land on the southern side? There may be, but I do not know of any. Reddall is the only one I have heard of as holding land there. His land continues for about a mile.

115. Mr. Crossman.] Where will your railway start from at the lake end? From Tallawera Point.

116. Mr. Cullen.] To the south of Tallawera Point? Yes. That point is a specially high point, and we are able to get an elevation of 30 feet above the water there without any difficulty. I have a sectional plan which shows that.

117. Mr. Crossman.] Will you explain the line of railway, taking the cross piece first? It runs from Tallawera Point north-westerly for about two miles. As far as the Main Southern Road, it runs through the Company's property, a distance of two miles and a quarter.

118. From the lake? Yes, with the exception of one crossing. It cuts about a chain from another portion of land.

119. Then you cross the Main Southern Road. We cross the Main Southern Road, and then the railway.

120. At what elevation do you cross the Main Southern Road? We will have a level crossing there.

121. Whereabouts do you propose to cross the railway? About 20 chains south of Dapto station. After crossing the railway, we go along the boundary line between Hampton's property and Stack's. We have arranged it so that we do not sever the land at all. We run along the fence the whole way, until we get to a point about four miles from the lake.

122. That is the line continued in a westerly direction? That forms the end of the main line to the hills. From this junction point there is one line running to the north and another to the south.

123. What is the object of these branch lines? These branch lines are laid out along the foot of the hills, so that in opening out any collieries along the frontages there is nothing required but inclines and sidings. I have here another plan showing the coal areas better. The railway line runs as near the foot of the hill as it is possible to get.

124. At one end that line runs to the coal property belonging to the Company? Yes; that is the southern line.

125. Mr. Crossman.] Will the railway be convenient to connect with the various coal properties along the range? Yes. Each mine could connect without any railway; they only require inclines and sidings.

Mr.
W. A. Harper.
30 April, 1889.

Mr. W. A.
30 April, 1889.

126. The line is so fixed that it is easy of access by a gravitation tram? Yes. It taps the whole of this country, and is laid out with a view to inclines. From the southern end the line can be connected with three different coal properties by inclines alone. You cannot get any further to the south than the line goes, because of the mountain there, which is really the southern end of a large basin, almost in the same form as the lake.
127. That railway, as designed by you, taps as much as possible the particular coal district there? It taps the whole area, and the mountains run round to Mount Kembla, so that there is an area of about 25,000 acres of flat land in this basin. It is about ten miles long by four miles in depth.
128. Have you been on to the coal property belonging to this Company? Yes.
129. Have you seen any seams of coal there? Yes; I have seen five outcrops on the northern property, called the Ocean Colliery.
130. Had you any means of ascertaining the quality of the coal, or inspecting it in any way? I never made any analysis of it, but the seams are the same throughout the Southern District.
131. These seams were sufficiently opened for you to identify the coal as similar in quality to that found in the district? Yes.
132. You saw five seams? Yes; there were more opened, but I only saw five.
133. You went to the further end of these coal-mines;—did you go to any of the properties down south? Yes; I inspected three—Messrs. Weston's, J. B. Watt's, and Kelly's.
134. Were there seams of coal opened out on those properties? Five seams; on one of them Watt's application.
135. Did you identify those in any way as the same seams you saw on the Company's property? Yes.
136. Did you form any opinion as to the coal being continuous? No doubt it is. There is no variation in the seams from Coal Cliff right down.
137. Did you see any seams of iron on the Company's property? I saw it opened up on Watt's property.
138. Was it a large seam? I could not examine it. It was down a shaft. It was pointed out to me as iron ore; but I cannot say anything about it further. I think it is the seam that is opened up at Mount Pleasant, from the position of it.
139. Are you of opinion that these mines could be opened out profitably in any way except by having means for water shipment? There is no other way at all.
140. They could not be made to pay if you had to send the coal by rail to Sydney? No; it is out of the question. You cannot send coal from Wollongong, or from 10 miles north of that place.
141. Would there be any difficulty in these individual mines making a road right down and shipping at a jetty? Yes; the lake interferes, and there is no shelter for jetties.
142. Therefore they could not do what many mines north of them have done? No.
143. They are further from the water? They would have to make lines 10 to 15 miles in length for each colliery.
144. Do you think this railway will economise the working of these coal properties? Yes.
145. Therefore the price of coal will be cheapened by this scheme if you carry it out? Undoubtedly. It places the coal-mine proprietors in a very good position.
146. Therefore it will be not simply a benefit to the Company itself? If we had only wanted to suit the Company we could have taken the line out straight; but we have laid it out to suit the convenience of the whole basin. We could have saved three-quarters of a mile.
147. Is there anything in the scheme, as proposed by you, which in any way interferes with the private interests down there, except that people will have to pay the vessels going in and out of the harbour and on the goods shipped there? Nothing whatever.
148. There is nothing essential to your scheme which interferes with private interests there now? It interferes with them by making the properties ten times as valuable as they are now.
149. There is nothing in your scheme of engineering which will prejudice their foreshores? Nothing whatever.
150. You spoke at the last meeting of having been down at Westport, New Zealand? Yes.
151. That place, I believe, is used for the shipment of coal? Yes.
152. Did you hear of any concessions made by the Government to induce a Company to carry out the work there? The Government have had dedicated the whole of the coal area there for a distance of 20 or 25 miles north of Westport to the Westport Harbour Board, who receive all the royalties on that coal, and are allowed to charge specially high rates for the railway carriage and the shipment of the coal.
153. I understand you to mean that that was given as an inducement to them to carry out this work by private enterprise? It was in order to enable them to do it. This Board receives now from each colliery that is opened a royalty of 6d. a ton on all coal delivered, and they charge the proprietors 3s. a ton for railway carriage and shipment.
154. Mr. Cullen.] Is this a private Board? No; a nominee Board.
155. A Government Board? Yes.
156. This is a Government matter then—the work is not being carried out by private enterprise? No. I only wanted to point out the amount which was conceded to the Harbour Board to enable them to carry the work out.
157. That is to say, that the Government granted this land to its own Board? Yes.
158. You said that the forked line was specially designed to afford facilities to the other coal-owners in that district;—is there any evidence of any arrangement with, or desire of these coal-owners to take advantage of it? I do not know. I have not heard anything. I know that one of the coal companies on the south have approached this Company in reference to the shipment of coal.
159. Chairman.] You have heard so? I know so. The mine on J. B. Watt's property. The line was specially laid out to suit the incline there.
160. Mr. Cullen.] The Bill provides that no parallel lines be allowed. If the other coal-owners are not disposed to use the Company's lines, would they not be prejudiced by the Bill, and prevented from constructing parallel lines? They would. That clause was put in on my recommendation, because I do not know of any Act of this kind in which a similar provision is not contained. I can quote two with which I have been connected—the Redhead and the Kembla Company. In both cases they had that clause.
161. Would not that clause in the Kembla Company's Act prevent the construction of this line if it were strictly acted upon? As a matter of fact it has not prevented the construction of a line alongside it the whole way, because the word "parallel" is rather difficult to define. The South Kembla Company have just the same power as the Kembla Company, so that this restriction does not amount to much.
162. Their line is within a few hundred yards of the Kembla Company's line? Yes; it crosses it and recrosses it.

Hamilton Osborne called in, sworn, and examined :—

163. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At my station at Bangraoo, Cananondria.
164. Mr. Crossman.] You own some property in the neighbourhood of Lake Illawarra? Yes.
165. How many acres? About 3,200 acres.
166. I think your father before you was a large land-owner in that district? Yes.
167. And nearly the whole of the land around the lake belonged to him at one time? Not on both sides, I think; on one side I think it did.
168. You represent one of your brothers in the Colony at the present time? As his power of attorney, but there is another gentleman here who also represents him.
169. Still you act under power of attorney in his absence? In certain matters connected with my father's estate.
170. You have heard of this proposal to make a harbour at Lake Illawarra, and to make a railway? Yes.
171. Have you formed any opinion as to the effect the construction of that harbour and railway would have upon the district. Personally, what is your own view on the matter? I cannot value the scheme too highly. I think it is a thing for the country, not alone for the district. It will open out the country, and give employment to an enormous amount of labour in developing these mines, which of course is what we want in this country.
172. You consider that these mines could be developed and worked? It seems quite feasible with this scheme.
173. You have reason to know that there is coal there? Yes. I and my brother have been talking about this matter for ten years, but we never hit upon any idea which would get the coal away.
174. Have you any personal interest in this Company? None whatever.
175. Therefore your view is simply that of a land-owner in the district? Yes.
176. And of a person who has known the place for many years? Yes.
177. I understand that you have the management of Henry Osborne's affairs, therefore, your remarks apply to your land as well as to his? Mr. M'Cabe manages his estate. He collects the rents and sees after the tenants, while I sign any papers or documents.
178. But you have reason to believe that his view coincides with your own? Yes. We thought that this scheme to get the coal away would be very beneficial if adopted. We could not see that it would injure our properties or do any harm.
179. I believe that this railway does not pass through your property? No.
180. Would you have any objection to it passing through your property if the Company wished to deviate? Not the slightest; I should be very pleased.
181. Is it not a line that is likely to materially interfere with the country that it passes through if gates and proper crossings are erected? Certainly not. The cattle down there are all quiet. The inhabitants are farmers, and I do not see how it will injure them in the slightest degree.
182. You know the conformation of the country pretty well? Yes. I think I have been up some of the mountains.
183. The range there forms a sort of basin, which is used for agricultural purposes? Yes.
184. Mr. Tonkin.] What is the ordinary occupation of the farmers there;—is it agricultural or dairying? Dairying. All the people there are occupied purely in dairying. Of course, they have their lucrae paddocks, and they put down crops occasionally, but still they are now mostly employed in dairying. They send their milk to Sydney or to the factories.

Mr.
H. Osborne.
30 April, 1889.

John Atkinson called in, sworn, and examined :—

185. Chairman.] Where do you reside? I reside at Lake George, Currandooley.
186. Mr. Crossman.] You represent Mr. Osborne, who owns some land near Lake Illawarra? I represent two of that family.
187. Who are they? Mr. P. H. Osborne and Mr. Henry Hill Osborne.
188. Can you tell us roughly how much land they hold in that district? Mr. Henry H. Osborne owns I think about 3,000 acres.
189. Mr. P. H. Osborne is still a land-owner, is he not? To a very small extent.
190. He sold his land to the Company? Yes.
191. Neither of these gentlemen has any personal interest in the Company to your knowledge? Neither of them has, I know.
192. Have you any interest? Not the slightest.
193. You have heard of this scheme? I heard of it about an hour ago. I heard something of the lake being made into a harbour, but that was all.
194. What effect do you consider the making of a harbour like the one proposed, and the construction of a railway where you see the red line on the map before you, would have on the district? It would have the effect of increasing the value of the property in the district very considerably if it was carried out. Provided of course that certain provisions were made in the Act, presuming of course that it was done in a fair way.
195. Do you know anything about there being coal in this range of hills at the back of the property? It is all coal there—coal and iron.
196. There is iron there too? Yes, I think there is iron.
197. Chairman.] What are the provisions you think are necessary? I meant with reference to the canal through the lake, and to the utilization of the whole of the lake. I think that if the whole of the lake was monopolised by private individuals the scheme would not be of the same benefit to the district as if only certain portions of it were taken by them.
198. Mr. Crossman.] If the scheme were carried out, in your opinion, would it enable the different coal properties there to be worked? It would of course enable them to be worked, and would be of great assistance to them also.
199. I believe that they cannot be worked at a profit at the present time. At any rate they are not being worked? They are not being worked.
200. They have been taken up for some time? They have been held for some time.
201. And no work has been done? No work has been done. With regard to the provisions I spoke of,

Mr.
J. Atkinson.
30 April, 1889.

Mr. J. Atkinson.
30 April, 1889.

I do not know whether I ought to have said that I think it would be wise that anybody who wishes to join a railway with the Government railway should have the right of crossing any lines that this Company might make. Supposing that instead of Mr. Osborne wishing to work in conjunction with the Company's line, he desired to run right across to the Government railway, I think he should have a right to cross the Company's line.

John Biggar called in, sworn, and examined:—

30 April, 1889.

202. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Wollongong.
203. Mr. Crossman.] You have known the Illawarra District for many years? About thirty-five years. I have been in business there as auctioneer and estate agent.
204. I understand that you have had special opportunities of judging of the land round Lake Illawarra? Yes.
205. Do you know the estate called the Lakelands Estate? Yes; I made the assessment of it for the Council thirty years ago.
206. Do you know it was recently purchased by a Company? Yes.
207. And that there was a proposal to convert the lake into a harbour? Yes.
208. Do you know that some distance at the back of the harbour, on the high ground, there is a considerable quantity of coal? An enormous quantity of coal. I do not know of any part of the world that has more coal than is contained in those hills.
209. You have an interest in some properties there? I have two pieces of freehold land—about 129 acres 2 roods, and my partner and I hold four sections of coal land there which adjoin my freehold land.
210. Four sections of how much each? 640 acres.
211. This I believe can be practically increased at will by taking up a permit at the back? Yes; we can go as far back as we like. The whole of the land here must contain coal.
212. Mr. McCourt.] Would you not encroach on the City Water Supply land? This is part of it; but in my application I pointed out that I would work from the front of the mountain where the water drained into the sea. And my permit included that provision.
213. Mr. Crossman.] You have the freehold land in front to enable you to work from it? Yes.
214. Is the coal laid open on that property? Yes.
215. Will you kindly tell the Committee what seams of coal you have opened up there. First, however, tell me who your partners are? Mr. Archibald Campbell, of the Illawarra Mercury; Mr. Bertram, a colliery manager; and my youngest son.
216. You are able to speak for them as well as yourself in this matter? Oh, yes.
217. Your interests are identical? Yes. I have a plan here showing a section of the coal-field at Mount Kembla, which was drawn by Mr. Moody and published by the Government for the Philadelphia Exhibition. I have opened up four of the seams shown on the plan.
218. The seam is continued down the same way? Yes.
219. And you have opened up seams corresponding to those shown here? Yes.
220. Are you working that property at the present time? Not at the present moment.
221. Why are you not working it? We cannot get a way to market.
222. Why not? We cannot get to Wollongong Harbour at present, but we expect to get there before the end of the year. I have marked out a railway, which this railway crosses.
223. You are proposing to construct a railway for yourself? Yes; I have got permission from the Commissioners to join the Illawarra line, but this Company will not be in my way at all. I come to Dapto station from the freehold land right across. I have had permission from the people through whose ground the line passes to construct the line. As this Company's line will cross mine, I want to have some little amendment made in the Bill.
224. Mr. McCourt.] Do not you cross some roads? Yes, but I will not want an Act of Parliament.
225. Will you not want an Act of Parliament to enable you to cross the roads? No. The Corporation will give me permission to cross them, and I will be quite satisfied with that.
226. Mr. Cullen.] You do not cross any road in the hands of the Government, only those controlled by the Council? I cross one road, but that is under the control of the Council. I had no difficulty in obtaining their permission to cross. I want to ask you to amend the Bill at clause 31, so that all persons who are betwixt the Illawarra line and the mountains shall have a right to cross the Company's line at their own expense.
227. Mr. McCourt.] Are you a witness for the promoters of the Bill? Yes.
228. Called by them? Yes. There is nothing unfriendly to the Company in this amendment, and I cannot think it will interfere with them. As the Bill is now worded, I shall have to get an Act of Parliament to cross their line.
229. Mr. Tonkin.] Without such a provision as the one you propose, you think that the Bill would grant the Company too much of a monopoly? Yes. Everybody would want to cross their line, and they would require an Act to enable them to do it.
230. Mr. Crossman.] With such a provision as this in the Bill, do you see any objection to the proposal of the Company? None whatever; it would be a benefit.
231. Would it increase the value of land in that district? Unquestionably.
232. Would it enable a greater export of produce to be made? The coal would come here to the lake.
233. Have you studied the scheme yourself? Yes, I have; it is a matter of great interest to me.
234. Do you think that if sufficient money is forthcoming the scheme can be carried out? I see no difficulty in the way.
235. You know the place? Yes.
236. You know the nature of the entrance to the lake? Yes. Sometimes it is open.
237. I believe that at the present time it is entirely closed? Yes; sometimes it is closed for seven or eight years, and then an extra quantity of rain sweeps away the sand.
238. Does it ever open sufficiently to admit a ship? It would only admit a vessel of 4 or 5 feet draught. It would not be useful as it is, because you can take but a very small quantity of coal out when the lake is open, and then for a good part of the time it is closed.
239. Would this Tallawera Point on the Lakelands Estate be a suitable place for the erection of wharves? Any of the Company's frontages would be suitable. I do not think one part is better than another. It is simply a matter of preference.

240. Have you ever gone into the question of the demand for southern coal in the Melbourne and Adelaide markets? Yes. Mr. J. Biggar.
241. Do you know that at the present time there is not a sufficient supply of it at those places? Yes. 80 April, 1889.
242. And that at the present time they cannot get a sufficient supply of it? Yes. The coal has to be taken from Wollongong to Sydney and reloaded there.
243. That increases the price? Yes.
244. And if they could ship it into a large ship at the lake it would reduce the price? It would reduce the price to the consumer, and the coal-miner and owner might get a little more profit.
245. There would be a reduction of price then, and an increase of profits and wages? Yes, that would be the tendency. All round the Pacific there are about 800 coal-ports, and if they can get this coal they prefer it to any other.
246. Have you read this Bill through? Yes.
247. Is the part you referred to the only place where you see any objection? That is the only objection I have. The wording about the quantity of water in the lake, which the Company will have power to take, needs some little amendment. Two constructions can be put upon the words used. One, that you are to have the whole of the waters of the lake under your control, to take possession of it, in fact—and this sense runs through two or three clauses; the second, which occurs in one of the clauses, is that you are only to take what water you require. I think if the Company had the control of the waters of the lake for a quarter of a mile round the shores, and the control of its own foreshores, it would be sufficient.
248. That would allow another Company to come in and make a separate harbour? They would have to use the entrance and they would have to pay you for doing so.
249. Do you know about there being a considerable quantity of iron here? Yes, between the coal.
250. Have you made any investigation into the nature and quality of it? Yes, it is very payable.
251. Is there any chance of its being worked if it is opened up? Yes. I consider that this will be the future iron-producing district of the country.
252. Is there suitable coal there for feeding blast furnaces? Yes, in the top seam.
253. This might be turned into a profitable industry? Yes, unquestionably. If I had thought of it I would have brought you some samples off my own ground.
254. What is the quality of this coal? Excellent.
255. Is it as good as the coal coming from Mount Kembla? Yes.
256. There is slightly less ash in this coal, I believe? A little less ash, but I think there is something like superstition about the quantity of ash in coal.
257. This is practically the same coal? It is the same seam. If you worked right along you would come out at Coal Cliff.
258. Mr. Cullen.] How far will your property be from Wollongong by the line you propose to construct? 11 miles.
259. How much of that will be a private line? 3 miles.
260. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any interest directly or indirectly in this Company? None whatever. I would like to see this scheme carried out because I think it would be better for me. I am 4 miles from them, and I would be the nearest to them. I think it would be better to come to the lake than to go to Wollongong.
261. Will you point out the blocks you and your partners are interested in? Yes, they are numbered on the map produced, M.P. 5, 6, and 75; being a double block of 1,200 acres, while 6 and 7 contain 640 acres each.
262. Mr. McCourt.] In the schedule A it is proposed to charge 10d. per ton for coal on the lake. Do you consider that a fair charge? It would not be excessive. The Wollongong harbour trust propose to charge 6d., but I believe a shilling would not be an excessive charge here, and that the trade would pay it. It would be worth a shilling to any person to send their coal here instead of taking it further away.
263. Mr. Crossman.] You are aware that there is a natural entrance at Wollongong? Yes, and a lot of work has to be done here. I think that this charge would be fair to coal-owners. I know that I would sooner pay 10d. or a shilling here than 6d. at Wollongong.
264. Mr. Cullen.] Is the tonnage in addition to the freightage? Yes.
265. Then there is freight, wharfage, and tonnage? Yes. The freight would apply to the ship and the 10d. is for wharf rate. The haulage on the railway would be a separate matter, I think. The ship would pay according to the size and length of time it stopped.

William Robert Styles called in, sworn, and examined:—

266. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Sydney.
267. Mr. Crossman.] You know this Illawarra district? Yes.
268. Have you any interest in land down there? Yes.
269. What is it—coal land? Yes.
270. Will you pick out on the plan the land you are interested in? I am interested in block No. 4.
271. That is next to Mr. Biggars' property? Yes.
272. Chairman.] Are you in any way connected with this Company? Yes.
273. Mr. Crossman.] You sold some other land to the Company? Yes.
274. For what price? £25,000.
275. Do you know of your own knowledge what coal there is running through that hill? I have opened twelve seams of coal, equal to 85 feet.
276. That was not all first quality coal; how much first quality coal is there? The top seam is good coal. There are several kinds of coal there.
277. Have you personally worked on these seams? Yes, on the one I sold to the Company, and I have opened on No. 4 block.
278. Are any of these properties being worked now? No.
279. There is no output from them? No.
280. What is the reason of that? They have got no place to ship coal from.
281. Is it too expensive to take it down by special lines to Wollongong and Sydney? It is too expensive to send it to Sydney, and the expense of sending it to Wollongong is very great.

Mr.
W. R. Styles.
80 April, 1889.

- Mr. W. B. Styles.
30 April, 1889.
282. Would it be cheaper to ship it at Lake Illawarra and pay the rates there than to take it to Wollongong? A great deal.
283. Would the whole scheme be a benefit to the owners of coal land there? Yes, it will give them a shipping port, and instead of shipping 400 or 500 tons at Wollongong, they will be able to ship 2,000 or 3,000 tons, which will be a great advantage.
284. Will it also be a benefit to the farmers dairying or otherwise? I should think so, the value of their lands must greatly increase.

THURSDAY, 2 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. McCOURT,		Mr. TONKIN,
Mr. FRANK SMITH,		Mr. WOODWARD.

MICHAEL CHAPMAN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Thomas Alexander Reddall called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. T. A. Reddall.
2 May, 1889.
285. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At present at Milson's Point, North Shore.
- 285½. Mr. Crossman.] Do you know anything of Lake Illawarra? Yes; I was born there, and have lived there for many years.
286. Have you any property in that neighbourhood? Yes; around the lake.
287. You have gone into the particulars of this scheme? I have thought it over.
288. You have seen the Bill? Yes.
289. Where is your land situated? Directly at the mouth of the lake.
290. At the south side of the entrance? Yes.
291. Do you recognize on the plan the position of your property? It commences at the eastern point of Windang Island, and runs along the lake for about 2¼ miles.
292. Chairman.] It runs west? It runs west.
293. Mr. Crossman.] I understand your land is on the southern side of the entrance of the lake? Yes; and it runs back to the Stony Range Road on the south.
294. You have considerable water frontage to the lake? Yes; I must have about 3 miles from Windang Island to my corner peg. I have 2,750 acres altogether. When Mr. Fuller's land commences, it recedes from the lake.
295. Have you any objection to the Bill yourself? I have no objection if the following proviso is added to the 4th clause:—"Provided that any land reclaimed as above on the foreshores belonging to any private owner or owners shall be paid for by the said Company to the said owner or owners at such price as may be mutually agreed upon, or failing such agreement, at such price as may be fixed by arbitration in the manner hereinafter set out."
296. Subject to that proviso you approve of the scheme? Yes; very much.
297. You have had some opportunities of judging I suppose of the natural features of the country here? Yes.
298. You are of opinion that this scheme can be carried out? I think it can be carried out if in the first instance you make the spit of land between Windang Island and the mainland secure to prevent any sand being driven in. I fancy that if there were two entrances the sea would considerably interfere with the work, judging from what I have seen of the extraordinary shifting of the sand.
299. What I understand from you is that there should be a complete block between Windang Island and the main shore to provide against southerly weather? To prevent the entrance being filled up with sand. A very heavy flood would scour out a passage. I have known a flood make a passage through which you could bring in a man-of-war; I could not say as to the depth, but wide enough to admit three vessels.
300. Have you heard any expression of opinion from other landowners in the district? I heard a gentleman say that he thought we should take certain steps to protect our interests, inasmuch as he had been told that the Company was going to empty the silt along the shores of the lake. I do not think that is the case, from the evidence that has been given here. I have been given to understand that Mr. Harper stated very distinctly that the Company had no intention of discharging silt on the property of other persons.
301. Will you show us your land on this plan of the Lakelands Estate? There is a portion here called Thomas Davis' 2,000 acres grant, which is a portion of my land.
302. Have you heard of any local opposition to this Bill? I have not. I have heard that the people in the district, especially the trades-people and the working-people, are most anxious that it should pass.
303. Is not one of the gentlemen who represents that part of the country in Parliament supposed to be opposed to the Bill? I have heard that Mr. Fuller intends to oppose the Bill on the ground that the Company wants to get a monopoly of the harbour. I think that the carrying out of this scheme will be the grandest thing that ever happened to the district.
304. Who owns the land on the other side opposite to you? It is Government land.
305. To sum up your evidence—you are, as a landowner on the shores of the lake, in favour of the scheme, subject to the amendment you have suggested? Yes; which merely protects myself, because I imagine that the Company may reclaim a lot of land near their works.
306. I understand that, with the exception of Mr. Fuller, the other landowners you have come into contact with, so far as you know, hold the same opinions on the subject as yourself? Yes; I am confident that they do, and I cannot believe that Mr. Fuller thinks of opposing the Bill.

William Smith Thompson called in, sworn, and examined:—

307. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Dapto.
308. Mr. Crossman.] Have you been long in the Illawarra District? Thirty-four years.
309. You know Lake Illawarra and the Lakelands Estate? Yes; I have been all over it.
310. I believe you have gone into the details of this proposed Bill? As far as I possibly could; I have been considering and thinking over it since the scheme was first mooted.
311. Have you any interest directly or indirectly in this Company? I have no interest whatever in the Company, except for the benefit it will confer on the district. I should like to see the proposal go ahead.
312. You have no shares in the Company and no interest of any sort? I have no interest of that kind.
313. How much land do you own down there? I own three blocks, of 50 acres each, at West Dapto, bounded by Weston's, Bovard's, and Larkin's grants; and then I have a half share in 310 acres owned by my brother, James Thompson, and myself. That is bounded by the properties of Messrs. Orr, Larkin, and Prior.
314. This railway will pass through your land? I think, by the numbers on the pegs, it will pass through it for about 67 chains.
315. Have you any objection to the railway going through your land? Not the slightest.
316. Do you consider that it will be an improvement to the land? It goes through my garden, and if it went through my house I would not stop it.
317. At one time you were a member of the Borough Council down there? Yes; I was an Alderman for about fifteen years.
318. You were also Mayor? I was Mayor three times.
319. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the members of the Council have been considering this scheme? I have been talking to some members of the Council about it, and they are all strongly in favour of it.
320. So they told you? Yes; but they were under the impression that the Company wanted to monopolize the whole of the lake.
321. The whole of the foreshores of the lake—other people's frontages? Yes; and they thought that they would not be warranted in sanctioning a monopoly like that.
322. Supposing that the Company are not to get a monopoly of the foreshores, except their own, as far as you can gather, the Council would not be opposed to the Bill? I believe they would be strongly in favour of it.
323. Do you know that there is a lot of coal land on the hills above your property? Yes.
324. You know of your own knowledge that that coal has been opened out and proved? Yes; I have been on Mr. Biggar's land, where there are two drives of 70 yards, which I have been into; and I have also been into a drive of 25 yards on Mr. Hewlett's property of about 25 yards.
325. Are these mines being worked at the present time;—is there any output from them? There is no coal being taken away.
326. Why not? There is no means of taking it away.
327. You mean to say that it would be very expensive if the owners of the land had to run a tram to Wollongong? I consider that a man of very large capital like the late Henry Osborne might do so, but no one there has sufficient property in my opinion to be able to afford the expense. A Company would need to be formed.
328. If a railway was constructed to the waters of the lake and ships were enabled to go and load there, would there be any probability of these properties being worked? I think they could be all worked.
329. You think these properties could be connected with the railway as it is now marked out? Very easily.
330. You know the general character of the country? Yes.
331. Do you think that the railway has been marked out in a way that is suitable for the requirements of the district? Yes; though I was going to ask them to alter the line a little so as to prevent them cutting off my water supply.
332. Chairman.] That is the only matter you object to? Yes.
333. Mr. Crossman.] I understand you can show a slight deviation there which would be beneficial to both parties? It would not be beneficial to the Company, but it would be to me.
334. Chairman.] It is not of so very much importance, but that it can be arranged by their giving you compensation? Yes; that would be better for them I believe.
335. Mr. Crossman.] Taken generally you consider the line is suitable to enable the coal being taken from these different collieries? Yes. The line goes on to Stack's property; and from there there are two lines, one going north to what we term Style's property, which is now owned by the Company, and the other going south to J. B. Watt's mineral selection. That is the only way in which the line could be taken, because the mountain runs out in spurs. It will be very convenient for a small landowner to connect with this railway by a trainway a mile or two and a half miles in length—that would be the longest distance. It would be a great accommodation for a small settler to be able to work his land by means of this line; he would not otherwise be able to do it.
336. Chairman.] Then it will accommodate the whole district? It will accommodate the whole district.
337. Mr. Crossman.] Have you discussed this scheme with other land owners so as to arrive at their opinion upon it? Yes.
338. Have you formed any opinion as to their views? I have heard no one object, knowing or believing as they do that it would be a great advantage to them if the line went through their properties.

Mr. W. S.
Thompson.
2 May, 1889.

James Edmund Fitzgerald Coyle called in, sworn, and examined:—

339. Mr. Crossman.] You are a civil engineer, I believe? Yes.
340. A Member of the Institute of Civil Engineers? Yes.
341. You have inspected, I believe, some plans drawn by Mr. Harper of the proposed improvements at Lake Illawarra? Yes, I examined the design prepared by him.
342. Did you examine the plans showing the details of the work? Yes.
343. Did you form any opinion of the feasibility of the work? The design is prepared on established lines, and it seems to me from the examination that I made of it to be a faithfully considered scheme.
344. Is the style of work such as you would expect to succeed from the nature of the country there? Yes. I think that the construction of these training walls will have the effect of maintaining any depth of water that may be established; that the scour will be sufficient.

Mr. J. E. F.
Coyle.
2 May, 1889.

Mr. J. E. P.
Coyle.
2 May, 1889.

345. Do you consider that he proposes to construct these walls of sufficient stability? I do not think that is of much importance; this kind of blocks is prepared for sea walls, and they are used in different places in the most exposed situations.

346. Chairman.] You speak of concrete blocks? Yes; I have seen them used in numbers of harbour works, and I have used them myself.

347. Mr. Crossman.] With regard to the nature and the size of the entrance; do you think that that has been properly worked out? I think so. It is of the same dimensions as have been adopted by Sir John Coode in several of his works. It is a question of proportion between the width of the entrance and the scour. This bar, which is something like a mile in length, is really the only difficulty which an engineer has to contend with. It has resulted from a certain combination of forces. The whole object of the engineer is to maintain any depth of water which may be established. I have no doubt that there will be a fall here of 4 feet 6 inches in the mile, and that will be sufficient to maintain the depth of water created by the training walls.

348. Taking it from a scientific point of view this scheme appears to you to have been worked out on recognized engineering lines, and one which theoretically ought to be successful? I think there is no doubt about it. All that has to be contended with is the bar. It may be found afterwards that some protecting works will be required to break the force of the sea in some directions and to facilitate the entrance of ships. I am not sure that this will be so, as I understand that the prevailing winds and storms are broken by the island, and that the trend of the coast to the north will break any storms from the north-east. Then directly from the eastward the break-water is of a sufficient length to provide shelter from storms from that quarter. Against the prevailing winds and sea the place is perfectly protected.

349. You have not visited the district? I am well acquainted with the whole of the district except the location of the bar. I have been dealing quite recently with the entrance to Lake Macquarie, which is almost on parallel lines with this, except that instead of having a bar 1 mile in length the bar is 3 miles, and consequently the fall is only 1 foot 3 inches instead of as in this case 4 feet 6 inches, so that here you have three or four times the velocity that you have there.

350. Lake Illawarra has another advantage, at Lake Macquarie there is no island? A point of land runs out there very much in the same form.

George Brown Murdoch called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr. G. B.
Murdoch.
2 May, 1889.

351. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Manly.

352. Mr. Crossman.] You are a member of the Institute of Civil Engineers? I am an associate member and have been for thirty years.

353. Have you lately visited Lake Illawarra? Yes.

354. Did you before visiting that place carefully examine Mr. Harper's plans for the proposed harbour? Yes.

355. Have you examined these plans marked No. 1 and No. 2? Yes.

356. You have personally inspected this place? Yes.

357. What is your opinion of the general nature of this scheme as drawn out by Mr. Harper? Well, my right to speak upon a thing like this is because I have been watching the works that have been carried out for the last seven or eight years at Lake Macquarie. There they intend to make a harbour in a situation almost identical with this. The plan adopted here is such as is usually adopted. You make your break-waters or training walls out into deep water, so as to let the outflowing tide carry its debris and stuff away with it, and the incoming tide comes in free; by that means the channel is scoured.

358. Are these plans drawn in accordance with the recognized principles of engineering? Yes.

359. And from your personal inspection of the place you are of opinion that the scheme can be carried out? I know nothing in connection with this place to lead me to suppose that what has been done elsewhere cannot be done here.

360. Supposing this scheme of Mr. Harper's was carried out, would it form an entrance which could be used by fair sized merchant vessels? Undoubtedly, subject to the outside winds.

361. Can you form any opinion as to what the outside winds would be; would their effect be very serious? Well, any one can speak as well as I can on the winds on the coast of New South Wales. It appears to me that the entrance here is more protected than is that at Lake Macquarie, where they propose to make a harbour. I have here a parish map showing the entrance to Lake Illawarra and the coast-line to the south, and also a map showing the coast-line to the north of the entrance. On the north the entrance is protected by the Sisters Islands, and Red Point.

362. So that there is a natural protection both north and south? To a very considerable extent. I have also here maps showing the coast-line to the north and south of Lake Macquarie; there is a corresponding piece of land to Windang Island to the south of the channel there, but to give as good a protection to it from the weather as there is at Lake Illawarra, the coast-line would have to run out to sea a good many miles more than it does. Then on the north the entrance of Lake Macquarie is somewhat protected, but not so much, I think, as is that at Lake Illawarra. I think that the Illawarra harbour is better protected if anything than the Macquarie harbour to the north, and much better protected to the south.

363. Do you see any material difficulty in carrying out the dredging? No. I think the dredging will be necessary until the tide enters and recedes freely, and then that will do the greater part of the scouring.

364. Do you see any difficulty with regard to the dredging in the first instance? No; there would be no difficulty.

365. I am not speaking only of the entrance? No; right across the lake; assuming there is no rock or hard material. I have not tested that; but from the nature of the surrounding country I do not think there is the least likelihood of there being rock there.

366. Mr. Frank Smith.] Are the Lake Macquarie works being conducted privately or by the Government? By the Government. They were among the works that Sir John Coode reported on when he was out here. He narrowed the entrance to 200 feet, which is the width proposed here. Mr. Moriarty had intended to make a much wider entrance.

James Ambrose Thompson called in, sworn, and examined:—

367. Chairman.] Where do you reside? In Sydney.
368. Mr. Crossman.] You are a solicitor practising in Sydney? Yes.
369. Do you know the Illawarra district? Very well, I was born there.
370. Do you own any property in the neighbourhood of Dapto? I own some property through which this line runs.
371. You have seen this line then, and it runs through your land? Yes.
372. Do you see any objection to that? No.
373. Have you considered whether it is likely to increase or diminish the value of land there? I feel satisfied that it will very much increase the value of it.
374. Do you not know of your own knowledge that there is coal along the hills there? Yes.
375. You say you have noticed where this line is taken through; have you considered the suitability of that route? Yes.
376. Do you consider it is suitable for the requirements of the various coal properties? I think it is quite what is desired. I think it runs pretty well at the foot of the range, and the whole of the seam from Bulli to Illawarra will be reached by it, or at least that part which is not already served.
377. You know that the hills here sweep out in various places? Yes.
378. Taking that into consideration you think that the railway has been placed in the best position? As well as I can judge, I think it has.
379. Have you considered the rest of the scheme with regard to the harbour works; do you think that that part will be beneficial to the neighbourhood? Undoubtedly.
380. Do you know Lake Illawarra? Yes.
381. As a man of business, have you formed any idea of the feasibility of this thing? I have been taken over the lake to inspect it, and everything has been pointed out to me. It appears to my mind that the scheme is perfectly feasible.
382. You are not a shareholder in this Company? Not in any way. I should like to be.
383. Do you know the Lakelands Estate? Very well.
384. Do you know Talawera Point? Yes.
385. Do you consider that that is a suitable place for erection of wharves for the shipment of coal? Yes; I think it is pretty well in the centre of the district.
386. The ground there is raised so that you could load from high level shoots? Yes, that is about the highest point on the lake.
387. You know as a matter of fact that the coal properties here are not being worked? I do not know about Mr. Biggar's but I know that the others are not.
388. Do you know why they are not being worked? I think they are all holding back pending the construction of this railway.
389. There is a difficulty in getting the coal away at present with profit? Decidedly.
390. Do you consider that the carrying out of this scheme would put these collieries into work? Yes; but I think clause 31 of the Bill should be looked at. It rather places the whole of the collieries in the hands of this particular Company. The Company first of all reserve a royalty for running over their line of 3d. a ton, and then by the restrictions of this clause they practically force the people to use their line, and I am afraid that mines other than those owned by the Company would remain undeveloped if they had to pay 3d. a ton on their coal for sending it away. I think they should have the option of constructing another line for themselves if their coal is worth it.
391. Chairman.] You think that this clause would restrict them from doing that? I think it would. It says here "No line shall run parallel to this railway." I think that that restriction ought to be cut out.
392. Mr. Crossman.] I might point out that a similar clause to this has been allowed to remain in all other acts of this kind? I believe such a clause has been allowed to remain.
393. A suggestion was made here on Tuesday, that if a right was reserved to the public to run lines from these properties it would remove the objection to the Bill? I think that would entirely remove the difficulty.
394. Chairman.] You think that 3d. a ton is too much; that it will be prohibitory? It is too much if you compel people to run on this line. If you allow them to construct lines for themselves then they can have their choice whether they will use this line or make their own.
395. Mr. Crossman.] Then I understand the amendment you require would provide that this Bill should not interfere with any coal owners to run lines of their own? Quite so; but I would put a proviso into the measure that they should only run parallel lines for the purpose of conveying their own coal and not to take the Company's traffic away. I think 3d. a ton is quite a fair thing provided people are not compelled to run on the Company's line.
396. This amendment would meet your objection? Quite. I believe that this restriction is put in all bills of this kind, but I consider that here it is rather out of place, because it has relation to branch railways.
397. You must remember that this railway will be made for the convenience of other people. If the Company had consulted themselves they could have run a line straight down? Yes; but a man might be able to construct a line for himself. For instance, Mr. John Lindsay has a long strip of land, and if he bought a coal property at the back of it he might construct a railway so cheaply that the interest on the cost of construction would not amount to more than this 3d. a ton that he would be charged by the Company.
398. These coal properties have all been opened up for some years, have they not? Yes.
399. And yet no one has constructed a tramway;—do you know what the rates are at Mount Kembla? I believe 6d. a ton, and I believe that that has driven others to make a parallel line.
400. Notwithstanding the restriction in that Company's Bill, these parallel lines have been constructed? Yes.
401. Chairman.] Could their construction be stopped? I do not think Parliament's action could be crippled by anything. I mean to say that Parliament could ride over this restriction.
402. If this Bill were passed in the form in which it is now, it would prohibit any person from constructing a line along the southern route? I am afraid it would.
403. Have you ever known an instance where people desired to lay down a line and the Act kept them from doing so? I cannot say that I have.

Mr. J. A.
Thompson.
May, 1889.

George Robert Hepplewhite called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. G. R. Hepplewhite. 401. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Manly.
 405. Mr. Crossman.] You have had some experience at sea, have you not? Thirty-one years' experience.
 406. In what service did you spend most of your time? I spent sixteen years in the service of the P. & O. Company.
 407. And previously in sailing ships? In sailing ships.
 408. You have been for many years chief officer of various P. & O. steamers? For eight years.
 409. On what steamers have you been chief officer? On the "Shannon," "Roma," "Clyde," "Bengal," "Indus," and others.
 410. The chief officer, I understand, on these boats is the officer who attends to the management of the ship and the coaling of it? Yes.
 411. In your capacity of chief officer have you to consider the question of obtaining southern coal for your ship? Yes.
 412. Have you any difficulty in getting regular supplies of southern coal? Very great difficulty.
 413. Who supplies you with southern coal? Mr. McCabe.
 414. Do you find a difficulty in getting a regular supply of that coal? Yes.
 415. Is there a still greater difficulty in Melbourne and Adelaide? In Melbourne we could not get it; we had generally to fill up with 200 tons of Newcastle coal.
 416. Is the southern coal better adapted to your use than the Newcastle coal? Very much more so.
 417. Do you mean that it is simply better, or that you can get more work for less coal? You can get more work for less coal, and it does not burn the fire-bars.
 418. It does not clinker? Well, the Welsh coal does not clinker, but this coal does not burn the fire-bars.
 419. The Welsh coal is the best you can get, is it not? Yes.
 420. Does this southern coal bear any strong resemblance to the Welsh coal? Yes.
 421. Then I understand that if you could get a good supply of this coal in Melbourne and Adelaide you would take it? Certainly.
 422. Have you had any experience of harbours yourself? Yes, I was harbour-master for the P. & O. Co. for eleven months at Bombay.
 423. Have you visited Lake Illawarra? Yes.
 424. Did you examine the place with a view to ascertain the possibility of converting it into a harbour? On two occasions.
 425. Have you seen Mr. Harper's plans? Yes.
 426. Have you formed any opinions as to the feasibility of the scheme? I think it is very feasible indeed, and that the lake would make a good harbour. That I am confident of if the work is carried out according to the plans.
 427. You are speaking now of the entrance? Yes.
 428. Do you think that the interior of the lake, with the dredging proposed, would be suitable for a harbour? Yes, very suitable.
 429. Did you see this Talawera Point? Yes, I was on it.
 430. Do you think that is a suitable place for the erection of wharves for the shipping of coal? Yes.
 431. If you had to take your ships in there would that be a suitable place for them to load coal at? Yes. This point is opposite the entrance.
 432. How long is it since you were there? Five months, I think.
 433. Did you interview any of the captains of the coasting steamers at Wollongong and elsewhere? Yes, one or two of them.
 434. Did you make any remarks about this scheme to them? I told them that I thought that it would make a very good harbour, and that I had been down there to see the place, and of course they told me their experience that it would.
 435. They agreed with you? Yes.
 436. They were men that knew the coast? Men who were trading up and down.
 437. Did they say anything about the natural features of the place assisting to make a harbour? Yes; from the formation of the coast. A point protects the entrance from the north-east. I think on the Admiralty chart this point protects the entrance more than it is shown to do on your map. It overlaps the point of the island, I think, about N.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. Here I think it is shown as not quite N.E.
 438. Do you know anything of the weather on this coast—do you know where the worst weather comes from? The worst of the sea comes from the south-east, and it would set against this point.
 439. Consequently the entrance would be on the lee of the island? Yes. There are some points running out beyond the island, and therefore there is more protection than there is shown on this map. On the Admiralty chart I think there are five islands which protect the harbour from the north-east. You do not have very heavy gales from the north-east as a rule, but when they do come there is not a very heavy sea; but you have a continual south-east sea. I suppose that is caused by the heavy winds from the southward all the time.
 440. Have you discussed this matter with any other chief officers of the ships trading here? I think I have with one or two captains.
 441. What was their view with regard to the consumption of coal if a market was formed in Melbourne and Adelaide? I think the engineers use about 10 per cent. more of southern coal than they do Welsh coal. They could not carry Newcastle coal, because it requires too much bunker space.
 442. They would not have room in their ships to carry sufficient Newcastle coal? No; they could not do it. Ships coming here load southern coal for China. One ship went away the other day with 3,200 tons of southern coal on the P. & O. Company's account for Singapore.
 443. Could such ships come in here? The "Ravenna," which is the ship I refer to, could if the entrance was dredged to the depth of 23 feet.
 444. From your experience, do you think that a regular coaling trade could be established at Illawarra if the harbour was opened there? Certainly; both for sailing ships and for steamers. I have noticed sailing ships lying here for nearly a month loading coal. When our steamers have wanted the coal we have had to wait a week for it, Mr. McCabe not liking to disappoint other people, and I have coaled several times on the last day of leaving port.

445. Chairman.] That is something unusual? I have done it three or four times when there has been something the matter at the pit—a strike perhaps, or the weather has been too rough to load. Mr. G. R. Hepplewhite.
446. Mr. Tonkin.] Did you say that you are the chief officer of one of the P. & O. Company's ships at the present time? No; I am living at Sydney now. 2 May, 1880.
447. Chairman.] You are not a shareholder in the Company? No.
448. Mr. Crossman.] You have no interest in it? No.

Robert Mattoson Vaughn called in, sworn, and examined:—

449. Mr. Crossman.] You are a shareholder in the Illawarra Harbour and Land Company? Yes. Mr. R. M. Vaughn.
450. You are an engineer by profession? A civil engineer.
451. You know the Illawarra district well, do you not? Very well; I have known it for the last thirty years. 2 May, 1880.
452. Have you inspected the plans of the harbour that Mr. Harper has drawn? Yes, I have.
453. Have you formed any opinion upon them? Yes; from what I can see the design is suitable for the intended work.
454. You had the general nature of the plans before you when you first went into the Company? Yes.
455. It was that that operated upon you to make you go in? Yes, to a great extent.
456. Do you believe that the scheme can be carried out, from your knowledge of the locality? I am positive it can be.
457. Would you be prepared to enter into a contract to carry out these works on the lines laid down by Mr. Harper? Yes, I would; I stated that several times before.
458. Have you formed any estimate roughly of what the cost of the work will be? I have not been into the matter thoroughly.
459. Mr. Harper has named a sum; do you consider that he is in or out in his calculation? I think he was pretty close.
460. He told us the other day that the harbour scheme would cost £250,000, and the railway about £30,000 more;—is that anywhere near what you think it would cost? Yes; I think it would cost about that. At any rate it would be under £300,000.
461. Do you know the nature of the country generally? Yes.
462. And the fact that there is coal in the hills at the back? I have been all over the country at the back.
463. On the Sydney water reserve? Yes; for 5 or 6 miles back.
464. You are satisfied about the existence of coal in these hills? There cannot be a doubt about it.
465. Have you seen it opened up in any places? At a dozen places.
466. Right away up? On the coast range, not at the back.
467. But in the front of the cliff? Yes, in the front, I have.
468. What is the reason that there is no output from these mines now? The expense of taking the coal by rail to Sydney.
469. Do you know as a fact that many of these owners have had to suspend operations until a scheme of this kind could be brought forward? Yes.
470. I believe you were Minister for Mines at one time? I was for a short time.
471. What royalty would the Government take on this coal? Sixpence a ton.
472. Therefore the working of these mines would bring considerable revenue to the Government? Yes; because there is a considerable area of country here that could be worked.
473. Could you give us any estimate, roughly, of the amount which could be taken out of these mines if there was a means of conveying it to market? No; I have not made any estimates.
474. Have you considered the line that Mr. Harper has laid out, having regard to the natural features of the country? Whether it is a proper line?
475. Yes? Well, I could hardly say that without making a survey; but, judging from what I know of the country, I should say it is. From the hills the country is all very flat, and the railway should follow close to the foot of the mountains. I have no doubt that Mr. Harper is right, because he has surveyed the country. There are one or two spurs which run out, and, I presume, that is the reason the line branches so far away from the range.
476. Do you think that the railway would suit the various coal-owners along the route? It would suit the whole of them from one end to the other.
477. I believe that the hills slope down to the river at one end and form a sort of basin? Yes, to the Macquarie River.
478. That accounts for the railway not being taken further? There is a ridge there, but the railway could be continued round it.
479. Do you know anything personally about the coal trade? No, I am not well up in it.
480. Is not the lake at the present time practically useless, except for sight-seers and wild-duck shooting? It is entirely useless as far as shipping is concerned. It never has been used in any way by anybody, except for fishing and pleasure. Thirty years ago I waded across the entrance. At that time the lake was running out to the south of the island; it is now, I believe, running out to the north of it.
481. It is not running at all now? Well, it was when I was there last, but it was very shallow; there was not more than 6 inches of water there.
482. If this scheme was carried out would not the Government, in your estimation, get an increased amount of revenue from the coal there? Yes.
483. They get no revenue from it at the present time, except rent? None whatever, and cannot do so, unless some means of shipping the coal away are provided.

TUESDAY, 7 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. McCOURT,
MR. CULLEN,MR. FRANK SMITH,
MR. TONKIN.

MICHAEL CHAPMAN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

F. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

John James Weston called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. J. J. Weston.
7 May, 1889.
484. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Woollahra.
485. Mr. Crossman.] Do you know the Illawarra district? Yes.
486. Do you know Lake Illawarra? I have seen it at a distance from the hills.
487. Do you represent any coal land in that district? Yes; three portions.
488. Do you recognize from the plan of the estate before you the properties which you represent? Yes; they are numbered 1, 2, and 3, and are marked W. J. Weston, J. B. Watt, and T. H. Kelly. I have been acting as agent in these matters, and I am executor of the estate of the late W. J. Weston, which is now in the name of Walter Watt.
489. Are you aware of the nature of the harbour scheme proposed here? Yes; I read the Bill.
490. You also see on the map the position of the railway? Yes.
491. Are you satisfied with the direction of that railway if it should be carried out? Yes; quite satisfied.
492. Are you satisfied that that railway and harbour will be beneficial to the working of the coal in those hills? I am certain that it would.
493. Can you see your way to work those properties at the present time with profit? Not until we have a railway.
494. I believe you think that if the Bill were slightly amended it would be more beneficial to the owners of the land? Clause 28 says: "Provided also that one of the said railways shall be constructed and brought into use within the term of five years from the passing of this Act." That would only bind this Company to make one railway, and I suppose the railway they would first make would be up to their own property. This Bill does not bind them to make a railway in any other direction, and I think that something ought to be put in the Bill compelling them to make that railway if the people there ask them to do so, or else allowing these people to have the right of making a railway for themselves to the Government line.
495. If the Bill was amended either so as to compel the Company to make a second line or to allow these people to make a railway to the Government line, you would approve of it? Yes.
496. Would you approve of the Bill if it provided that a second line should be made by the Company if a certain output was guaranteed? It would not do for the Company to be compelled to make a railway unless the people owning the property would work it.
497. Subject to that I understand that you approve of the scheme as you have gone into it? I approve of it entirely.
498. Chairman.] You have no interest in this Company? No.
499. Mr. Crossman.] Neither direct or indirect? No.

Thomas Hussey Kelly called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. T. H. Kelly.
7 May, 1889.
500. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Double Bay.
501. Mr. Crossman.] You know the Illawarra district, do you not? I do not know it by personal inspection.
502. You are interested in some property there, are you not? Yes.
503. From looking at the map before you can you identify the property you are interested in? Yes; it is marked M.P., No. 3, 640 acres.
504. That, I believe, Mr. Weston manages with others? Yes.
505. You have heard the particulars of the proposed harbour and railway to be made there? I have had a plan.
506. Do you consider that that scheme, if carried out would be beneficial to the owners of coal lands there? I do, provided that the extensions from the main line are made as shown on the plan. If you run your line north and south the railway cannot be otherwise than beneficial.
507. To the whole of the coal owners? Yes. We have just had it suggested by Mr. Weston that there is nothing in the Bill to compel the southern line to be made; he is of opinion that if permission were given people to run lines to the Government railway, or the Company compelled to make lines upon certain terms, that would meet the case.
508. Do you think it would? I think so. I do not wish to offer any trivial objection to the scheme as it appears on the plan, because I believe the whole district will be benefited if it is carried out. I approve of the plan. If the line is not made to the south because it will not be profitable to make it we cannot help it, but if it can be proved to be a profitable undertaking it will be made.
509. You are one of those who would be likely to work their property if the line were made? Yes; our great difficulty now is that we have no outlet at all for the coal. I may tell you that the properties on the hill belong to J. P. Watt's estate, Weston, Gilchrist, and myself. We caused a series of tunnels to be put into the hills, and we found twelve seams of what the manager reported to be good workable coal. The aggregate coal is 82½ feet, with large bands of rock between the seams; so the country is one mass of richness as regards coal. If you could get an outlet for it I believe you could put it on board the ships free and deliver it at 6s. a ton, making a profit by the sale.
510. You have no interest directly or indirectly in the Company applying for this Bill? Not a cent.
511. Mr. McCourt.] Are these properties worked on a royalty—would the Government get any benefit from the output of coal? 6d. a ton.
512. Then the Government would get a profit if the properties were worked? The Government would be getting a large revenue; everyone of the properties marked on the plan could be worked.
513. Are they leases? They are mineral permits to be converted into leases.

514. Mr. Crossman.] The 6d. a ton royalty would be paid on the leases as well as the permits? Yes; on all.
515. Do you see any scheme for working the property without this railway? No. We had some thoughts about working it, but there is the difficulty of getting the coal to the sea. Wollongong harbour is not a very eligible place, since only very small vessels can go there, and the distance is too far to send the coal to Sydney.
516. Supposing you could get your coal to Wollongong harbour, would you then be able to ship it into large ships? No.
517. Therefore you would have to tranship again if you wanted to send the coal to America, or places like that? Yes.

Mr.
T. H. Kelly.
7 May, 1889.

Erin Robert Evans called in, sworn, and examined:—

518. Mr. Crossman.] You are a resident of Dapto? Yes.
519. How many years have you resided there? About fifty years.
520. Are you a landowner there? Yes.
521. How many acres of land do you own in that district? About 770 acres.
522. Is it anywhere in the neighbourhood of Lake Illawarra? It is within a mile of the lake, or it may be a little more.
523. Is it anywhere near the Lakelands Estate? Yes; there is only a main road dividing that property from mine.
524. Is Lake Illawarra any good for shipping purposes at the present time? No.
525. It is no good for anything except fishing or pleasure boating? That is all it is good for at present.
526. Do you know anything of the hills at the back of the district? The mountain ranges?
527. Yes. Is there any coal there? Yes; it is all good coal.
528. Is any of it taken up for coal-mining purposes? Yes; I believe the surface is all along.
529. Is any coal being worked there? There are one or two mines that have been partly opened; they are not working.
530. Is there any output? No.
531. What is the reason of that? They have no way of getting rid of their coal; they cannot ship it by water.
532. Do you know the entrance at Windang Island? Yes.
533. Is that blocked up now? I have not been there lately, but I believe it is closed.
534. From what you have seen of this scheme, not as an engineer, but as an ordinary practical man, do you think it can be carried out, and a harbour constructed there? I think it could.
535. Do you know anything of the coast? Yes, I know that there are two points jutting out on either side of the entrance,—on the Shellbarbour side, and on the Wollongong side.
536. These would protect the coast there? They would.
537. Therefore this entrance to Lake Macquarie is more protected than is most of the coast? Yes, it is, because of these points.
538. Will you name them? Bass Point to the South and Red Point to the North.
- 538½. Do you know anything of these islands to the north?
539. Are they rightly shown on the map? I think they are further out.
540. Do you consider that the railway follows a suitable course for the conveyance of coal from these collieries? Yes, I think the lake is a very suitable place for bringing the coal to.
541. Have you seen the line? No, I know the locality it passes through.
542. Do you consider that the proposed routes will tap these various properties? Yes, I think the line is suitable. I do not think there are any engineering difficulties in the road.
543. Have you any idea yourself with regard to the carrying out of this scheme; do you consider that it is a good one? Yes, I think it will be a benefit to the district.
544. Have you heard any objections to this Bill? Yes.
545. What were they? They were because people understood that the Bill would allow the Company to take up the whole of the foreshores of the lake.
546. Have you heard of any other objections? No.
547. That was the only objection practically that you have to this scheme? Yes.
548. If it does not monopolise other people's foreshores you do not see any objection to it? No.
549. And you consider that it would be a general benefit to the whole district? Yes.
550. Chairman.] Does any part of this line go through your property? Not any.
551. Is your coal property? No, I have no coal property.
552. Your land is merely grazing land? I use it for farming and grazing.
553. Have you any interest in this Bill? Not any. I believe that the railway would benefit all properties near Dapto.
554. Mr. McCourt.] Have you read the Bill? No, I have not.
555. Do you think that if this bill is passed the right of the public to the lake for pleasure and other purposes will be interfered with? As far as I have heard it will not interfere with it very greatly.

Mr.
E. R. Evans.
7 May, 1889.

John Bovard called in, sworn, and examined:—

556. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Dapto.
557. Mr. Crossman.] You are a resident of the Illawarra district, I believe? I am.
558. How many years have you been a resident there? Since I was born,—for about forty years.
559. You are a landowner in Central Illawarra, I think? Yes.
560. How many acres do you own there? I have 300 acres, and I have an interest in 200 acres.
561. Can you identify that land on this plan? It is marked, "E. R. Stack, 300 acres," and "James Bland, 200 acres."
562. Does this railway run through any portion of this land;—have you seen it pegged out? I believe it does.
563. You have seen the pegs where it is proposed that this railway shall run? Yes.

Mr.
J. Bovard.
7 May, 1889.

Mr.
J. Howard.
7 May, 1899.

564. Do the lines on the map show pretty accurately where the railway goes? I think so; I have not traced the pegs.
565. Chairman.] On the map the line is not shown as passing through your land? On another plan that I have seen it crosses my property.
566. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any objection to that railway being run through your land? None.
567. Do you consider that this harbour scheme will be any benefit to the country? I think it will be a very great benefit if carried out.
568. You are a member of the Central Illawarra Municipal Council? I am.
569. What was the reason for the Council not assenting to this Bill? The principal reason was because of the crossings on the bye-roads which would have to be made. We have had great difficulty in connection with these crossings made by other mines for their tramways, through their not erecting gates or making proper protection for the public. The Council require that proper precaution should be taken before they give their consent to these crossings.
570. Chairman.] Have you had this Bill before the Council? Yes.
571. Mr. Crossman.] In other Acts which you have in that district, is there a section similar to clause 29 of this Bill? I do not know if it reads exactly the same, but there is a similar provision. We have got the Government Act there.
572. Chairman.] Have you read this clause? Yes; I think I have. Although the Government Act has a similar provision the Council find great difficulty in carrying it out. If a man has a beast hurt or any damage done on the crossings, although we may call the attention of the Company or the Department to the matter, they take no interest in it. Public thoroughfares are thrown open and left open.
573. I think there is provision made here for gates? If that is properly carried out I have no objection to the clause.
574. Mr. Crossman.] You see no objection now to the provisions of this clause? There is one slight objection. The clause provides for an order being obtained from two Justices of the Peace. I presume that means on the Bench. That is a difficulty that could be overcome.
575. Is not the real objection this, that individuals do not like to apply for these orders? Yes.
- 575½. If the damage is serious, will not they apply? They generally go to Court and sue for the amount of damage; they merely lodge a complaint with the Council.
576. This Act gives them their remedy, but they are too stupid or negligent to take it? It does something to that effect.
577. Will you tell us whether there was any other objection raised in the Council in your hearing to this Bill? There were not many other objections.
578. Was there anything in connection with the foreshores of the harbours? They think that the parties interested in the land round the lake should take that up themselves, and if they used a certain amount of caution it would have an effect upon the landowners.
579. Was that because the idea has gained ground that this Company are asking for other people's foreshores on the lake? I think there is a misapprehension about the foreshores of the lake. The people in general believe that the Company are to have the north, east, west, and south shores; that is the opinion that seems to be general, and they say, of course, we shall not give up our right to the lake, but we shall protest against it.
580. I think you proposed suggesting some amendment? Yes; as follows:—"Provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with any right which any owner of any part of the foreshores of the said lake may have to erect a wharf or wharves from his land into the waters of the lake, and to collect and recover rates for the use thereof, and to excavate channels from the said wharf or wharves. Provided that such works shall be carried out in such a manner as not to be prejudicial to any work executed or in course of execution by the Company."
581. Subject to that amendment, and due provision being made for the safety of cattle on the roads, have you any objection to the scheme? None whatever.
582. Do you consider that it would be the means of enabling an output to be obtained from the coal properties? I believe that if this scheme is properly carried out the lake will be the best shipping-place for all the coal between Mount Kembla and the south of this range.
583. Would there be any increase of revenue from the working of these mines? I think so.
584. They are on a reserve, are they not? Yes. All these blocks are taken up, and the proprietors are waiting for some means to convey the coal to market. Some of the mines are open.
585. Mr. Cullen.] In mentioning the two objections of the Council which you have stated, had you exhausted all their objections;—do you know whether the Council had any further objections to the Bill? Not that I have heard of, and I have heard the discussions all through.
586. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any interest directly or indirectly in this Company? None whatever.

Edwin Barber called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr.
E. Barber.
7 May, 1899.

587. Chairman.] Where do you reside? On the Berkeley Estate, Lake Illawarra.
588. Mr. Crossman.] You are a resident, living almost on the waters of the lake? Yes. I have lived there for something near thirty years.
589. You are by profession? A fisherman.
590. You are, in point of fact, the head of one section of the fishermen there? Yes.
591. There are two clans of fishermen? Yes; but I am up here to represent the lot.
592. You are boss of one of the teams? Yes.
593. Have you known Lake Illawarra all this time? I have known it over twenty-eight years.
594. You are on that lake almost every day? Every day.
595. Do you know Windang Bay? Yes.
596. Is the entrance to the lake stopped up now? Yes.
597. Did you go with Mr. Harper to make some soundings in the bay? Yes.
598. You were with him when these various soundings marked on plan No. 2 were made? Yes; I was taking all these soundings.
599. You know the depth of this water very well, do you not, from actual experience in fishing? Yes, when I have been fishing for schnapper and other fish.

600. The depth at the entrance of the channel is marked 23 feet? Yes; 23 feet was the inside sounding.
601. Chairman.] Inside the bar? No, outside, in the ocean. The entrance was silted up at that time.
602. Mr. Crossman.] Where they propose to make the entrance to the harbour the depth is 23 feet? Yes.
603. Then the map shows 25 feet, and a little further out 30 feet;—are those about the depths? Yes; we went out to 59 feet.
604. Is there any place off this island where a shoal runs out? Yes; it runs north-east from the island.
605. Where does the worst weather come from? The heaviest sea comes from the south-south-east.
606. That would really be across the island? More towards the back of the island.
607. If the wall, marked on the map, was carried out as at present proposed, would it protect the entrance from bad weather? Yes.
608. Would there be any weather from the north to stop any ship from coming in? No; I have never seen any weather that would hinder any ship coming in. I have known the place thirty years, and the silt all comes from the southward. The entrance is not open for three months before the sand works to the island and closes it again.
609. I understand that the sand comes from the southward and closes the entrance? Yes; there is a southerly current.
610. There is a current on the coast? Yes; mainly from the southward.
611. Do you know this plan? Yes. Five Islands stand further out from the land than they are shown to do here.
612. There would be greater protection then from north-easterly weather? Yes; the bay is quite calm in north-east weather; the sea runs past it.
613. We have then protection from the north-east and from the south-south-east;—is there any other weather on that coast which would prevent a ship from going into the entrance? I never saw any weather that would hinder vessels going in there, except an easterly gale.
614. Chairman.] How about strong westerlies? That would be dead out. A sailing vessel would have to heave up into this bay and lay there.
615. Mr. Crossman.] But there would be nothing to prevent a sailing vessel going in with a tug-boat? No.
616. You have been through the plans; you know the whole scheme? Yes.
617. Would there be any chance of the water breaking through to the southward if the channel was made? No; there would not be back water enough in any flood to make a fresh channel.
618. You think a channel 150 feet wide would take away any surplus water? Yes.
619. Do you think there would be an increase of the sand on the southern side of the entrance? Yes; it would bank up there.
620. What about the sand in the north? It comes down from Five Islands, but it is blown up into a hill by the southerly wind. It does not come down here.
621. It could not come to the deep-water entrance? I never knew of any sand there. This bank I have known for thirty years, and there has always been one depth of water there.
622. Except when the water breaks through after a flood? As soon as it breaks through the sand silts up from the southward.
623. If you had protection from the sand from the southward it would not interfere from the north? Yes.
624. And it could be protected against on the north? It would take very little to stop it there.
625. Do you think there would be smooth water outside the entrance? Yes. There is plenty of protection afforded by the reef that runs out from the island and by Bass Point against the whole of the southerly swell. Anyone could land on the beach in a southerly gale now. I have done it coming from Shellharbour.
626. Plan No. 1 shows the channel cut through the lake to a place called Talawera Point;—do you know what is the nature of the bottom of the lake? There is about 4 or 5 feet of very soft settlings, and below that you come into a blue clay bottom. I do not know of any rock at all in the lake.
627. If that clay and settlings, as you describe it, was dredged out to a depth of 23 feet at low water, would there be any difficulty through its silting back again? No, I do not think so.
628. Do you think the clay is sufficiently firm? It is firm.
629. I suppose you have a good opportunity of judging? Yes; we often put sprints down.
630. Do you consider that there would be any difficulty in making a channel 23 feet deep across the lake? No, I do not.
631. You know the Lake Lands Estate? Yes.
632. Do you know Talawera Point? Yes.
633. What sort of land is there there? Very high land. The highest round the lake.
634. Is there any other high land round the lake? No.
635. Is there any other place suitable for the erection of wharves? No; this is the deepest part, and the land is high.
636. If you wanted to run wharves out at a high elevation would this be the most suitable place round the lake at which to erect them? Yes.
637. Is this the nearest point to Dapto Station? Yes.
638. You do not know of any suitable place for this purpose to the south? There is none. It is all shallow flats.
639. You live to the north of the lake? Yes; the other side of Oakey Creek.
640. Is there any suitable place up there? No; the water is not deep enough. The bays are very shallow.
641. Have you any interest in this Company? No.
642. Will their operation interfere with the fishing in the lake in any way? No; provided that we are not debarred from working the shores. That would be the only objection the fishermen would have to the scheme. I am here as their representative. We want to know if we are to be debarred from working the foreshores. If not, we have no objection to the working of the scheme. It will be a benefit to us.
643. Do you think the opening of this entrance to the lake will lead to an increase of fish in the lake? Yes.

Mr.
E. Barber.
7 May, 1889.

Mr.
E. Barber.
7 May, 1889.

644. In what way? There are some hundreds of thousands of fish pass the lake now which, if there was an entrance, would come in. Ground fish, such as whiting, would work in and out, and all we are taking out now is against us. Twenty-five years ago, when there was about 15 or 16 feet of water at the entrance, there were almost millions of fish—thousands of tons—in the lake.

645. Is there anything in the lake that would interfere with the channel that it is proposed to dredge? No.

646. Is there much movement in the lake—material movement? No; you will find the one depth in the lake from one end to the other.

647. With regard to the fishing industry there, is it a very large one? Yes; there are thirteen boats, employing twenty-seven men. Some of the men have large families.

648. Have you much difficulty in getting your fish to market? Not at present. We had some time ago, before the railway started; but now we have a better chance. If the steamers came into the lake we could send our fish to other places.

649. I think you mentioned before coming here that you proposed to suggest a slight amendment to the Bill as it is now? Yes; to follow clause 9:—"Provided always that no tonnage rate shall be levied on boats solely employed in the fishing trade or for pleasure, or on watermen's boats plying on the harbour, which said boats shall have the free use of the harbour, provided that they in no way interfere with the navigation thereof, and subject always to the control of the harbour-master and of such regulation as may from time to time be made for the due management of the said harbour in manner hereinafter provided."

650. Subject to a provision such as that, you, as the representative of the fishermen of the lake, approve of the scheme being carried out? Yes.

651. What is your own personal opinion as to the feasibility of this scheme? I believe it can be carried out.

652. Knowing the currents and the waters as long as you have done, you believe it can be carried out? Yes.

653. You know that there is a large quantity of coal at the back? Yes.

654. It is not worked at present? Not at present. There are some places where it is 9 or 10 feet thick—a solid wall.

655. That is where the hill becomes abrupt? Yes. There is no tunnelling or back work whatever.

656. Do you think this coal could be worked? Yes; from Kembla to the south, to Jamberoo, it could be worked.

657. Has this scheme been discussed in the neighbourhood? Yes.

658. It has been generally talked of? Yes.

659. It is well known throughout the district? Yes.

660. Chairman.] The great anxiety of the people down there is that their right to the foreshores shall be reserved to them? That is the only drawback that the people of the district see to the scheme, and the objection only cropped up a fortnight or so ago. Some parties have been saying that these gentlemen wish to claim all the foreshores of the lake, which is misleading, but the people have got that idea into their heads.

661. Mr. Tonkin.] Do you know what is the distance of the channel from the mouth to the wharf? About $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

George Warburton Fuller, Esq., M.P., called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr.
G. W. Fuller,
M.P.,
7 May, 1889.

662. Chairman.] You are a Member of Parliament? Yes.

663. Where do you reside? No. 9, Bligh-street.

664. The Committee were informed that you had some slight objection to raise against this Bill passing into law;—if you will kindly state to us what your objections are we will be very thankful to you? I have every desire to see this Bill pass into law, but I have one objection to it. Clause 4 says:—"It shall be lawful for the Company to reclaim land on the foreshores of the said freehold land or of Windang Island, or of any land which may become the property of the Company under or by virtue of any of the powers and provisions in this Act contained, and also on either side or both sides of the said channel between the points in Schedule A hereto mentioned." The points mentioned in Schedule A are between the entrances to the lake and Talawera Point. The channel runs right across the lake, so that the Bill gives the Company control over the whole lake. The Company have also asked to have incorporated into this Bill the resumption and compensation clauses of the Public Works Act of 1888. I represent my people there, who have a frontage of 6 or 7 miles to the lake, and I do not think it is a proper thing to give the Company power to resume the whole of the foreshore. Apart from that, I have every desire to see the Bill passed. I think it will be a benefit to that part of the Colony. I think the Company ought to have full power to take any Government land, but I do not think they should have the power to resume the land of private individuals. I have heard that they do not wish to have that power, and I think that ought to be mentioned in the Bill.

665. We are endeavouring to do everything to preserve the rights of private individuals? It was said that I was taking objection to the charges and so forth that the Company were to levy, but nothing of the sort ever entered my mind, because I think the Company deserve every encouragement. All I wish is to have the rights to the foreshore reserved to the people who own them.

666. Mr. Crossman.] If a clause was put in the Bill something to this effect:—Provided also that nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with the rights of individuals to their foreshores and other rights in connection therewith. Would that meet your objection? That would quite meet my objection. If a clause of that kind was put in I should have no objection to the Bill.

667. Have you been enabled to see in this Act anything which enables this Company to obtain possession of these lands. Clause 2 empowers the Company to erect wharves "on the said freehold lands or on any land." Then follows clause 4. Is your objection founded on the reading of the words "both sides of the said channel"? Do you take that to extend to the shores of the lake to the north and south of the channel?

668. Chairman.] You thought that provision would give the Company a right to the land all round the lake? Yes.

669. Mr. Crossman.] Could not that difficulty be met by an alteration—"contiguous to both sides of the channel"? Contiguous is a very ambiguous word.

670. You are in favour of this scheme if the rights of the owners of the water-frontages are respected? Quite so. If we are entirely protected with regard to the foreshore, I shall have no objection to the Bill.
671. Do you know whether the general public down there know of this scheme? I do not think the general public ought to be consulted in the matter.
672. Do the landowners and people in the district know of it? I think everybody owning property on the lake knows of it.
673. You think people would have an opportunity of objecting to it? Yes.
674. Has the scheme been generally favourably spoken of in your hearing? Very favourably.
675. Mr. McCourt.] Do you think it would be better to have the harbour-master a Government officer, or an officer appointed by the Company? I have not considered that.
676. Mr. Cullen.] Have you considered clause 6, which gives the Company power to control the lake. Would that clause affect the rights of the owners of the foreshores? The control is over matters comprised in the schedule—things connected with the navigation. I think it is a matter of consideration whether the harbour-master should be appointed by the Company or by the Government.
677. The clause proposes to give the Company power to appoint a harbour-master to control the navigation of the lake? I understand that that clause only refers to the matters specified in Schedule A, and the other matters included in this Bill are outside that altogether.
678. Mr. McCourt.] The harbour-master will have full power to regulate the traffic on the lake? Yes.

Mr.
G. W. Fuller,
M.P.
7 May, 1889.

Charles Hoar called in, sworn, and examined:—

679. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Dapto.
680. What are you? I am a farmer.
681. Mr. Crossman.] Are you a landowner in that district? No; my brother is.
682. For how long have you been resident there? I have been there all my life; I was born there.
683. Do you know Lake Illawarra? Yes.
684. Do you know anything about this proposed scheme of harbour formation? I have heard something about it.
685. Here is a plan of the lake, do you see a property on it shaded with black lines;—is that the Lakelands Estate? Yes.
686. Do you know that at the back of the lake there are a lot of coal properties? Yes.
687. Do you know of the existence of coal there? Yes; I am aware that the mountain is nearly all coal.
688. Is there any output from that hill at present? No; not yet.
689. Why is there not? I do not know. There has not been any taken away yet from that side.
690. Chairman.] Why? There are no mines open.
691. Can you assign any reason why the mines have not been opened? The people have not had the money to open them.
692. Mr. Crossman.] Have they any means of getting coal to market? They would never get their coal to market without means. The coal is there right enough, but there must be means to take it away.
693. Chairman.] Do you think the reason that the mines are not worked is because there are no means of getting the coal to market? The mines have not been opened yet.
694. Mr. Crossman.] If the mines were opened, where would the proprietors take the coal? To Dapto station.
695. Mr. McCourt.] Where would be the best place to ship it from? On the Lakelands Estate, at Lake Illawarra.
696. Mr. Crossman.] Do you know Talawera Point on the lake? Yes. I do not know whether Kanahooka Point or Talawera Point would be the best place to ship the coal from.
697. Which is the highest ground? Point Talawera.
698. Do you know anything about the lake yourself? I have been on it, but I do not know much about it.
699. Have you seen the pegs where the railway is pegged out? No.
700. Have you seen where it is pegged out across the Government Railway? I have seen it pegged out across the road. I have not been out there for five years.
701. Are the people down there aware of this scheme? Yes.
702. Are they favourable to it or otherwise? They are favourable. I ought to know that there is a scheme like this, because there is a line made through the farm where I am living.
703. What is the name of your farm? Brisbane Grove.
704. You say that this railway goes through your farm? Yes.
705. Have you any objection to the line being carried through your farm? I am not the owner of the property.
706. Would the line be any benefit to you as a farmer? Yes; so long as I got compensation.
707. Have you any objection to it passing through the farm? Not the least, but it is my brother who owns the land. The railway will be a great thing for the district. I do not suppose it will be much good in my time. When it is going ahead I shall be going down hill.
708. Are all the people you have heard speak of the scheme in favour of it? Every one I have heard speak of it is in favour of it.
709. Have you ever heard anyone speak of it who was opposed to it? No, I have not. Everybody seems to be very glad that the scheme is going to be carried out.

Mr.
C. Hoar.
7 May, 1889.

Frank Russell McCabe called in, sworn, and examined:—

710. Chairman.] Where do you reside? In Sydney.
711. Mr. Crossman.] You are the secretary of a coal company in the Illawarra District? Yes.
712. What is the name of it? The Mount Keira Coal Company.
713. It is rather to the north of Lake Illawarra? About 8 miles.
714. Do you know that district well? Yes.
715. Were you born down there? Yes.
716. You have lived there on and off ever since? Yes.
717. Are you mixed up with the coal business in Sydney? Yes.
718. What connection have you with it here? I am secretary to the Mount Keira Company.

Mr.
F. R. McCabe.
7 May, 1889.

- Mr. F. R. McCabe.
7 May, 1889.
719. But has not your family some coal business in Sydney? We have collieries let.
720. Have you anything to do with shipping coal from Wollongong? Yes.
721. Will you tell the Committee what you have to do with it? We ship in Wollongong, but sometimes we cannot get our coal out because of the bad weather. Last week we were loaded and had to wait three and a half hours for high water.
722. Therefore it is not a convenient place to ship from? No; very inconvenient.
723. Are you not the manager here for the Osborne Wallsend Company? No; I am secretary to that company. My father is the manager of it.
724. Have you not to load large ships and steamers with coal? Yes.
725. Did you load one of the P. & O. steamers within the last week or two? Yes, the "Ravenna."
726. Where was that to go to? To Singapore.
727. Where did you get the coal from? We brought it up in our own steamers from Wollongong.
728. What was the expense of doing that? 3s. 6d. a ton.
729. You have to get the coal to Wollongong and then pay 3s. 6d. a ton freight to bring it to Sydney? Yes.
730. You have heard of this Illawarra harbour scheme? Yes.
731. Do you think that if the harbour was improved in the way proposed, that it would be a suitable place for the shipment of southern coal? Yes.
732. Is it a place your people would be likely to load from? I could not say that, it would all rest with the proprietor of the mine.
733. Would there be any advantage in being able to load large vessels direct with southern coal? Yes, there would.
734. If this harbour were constructed as proposed would vessels be enabled to load with a depth of 23 feet of water at low tide? The "Ravenna" drew 23 feet 6 inches. She was a 3,000-ton boat.
735. She was extra large for a coal ship? Ships only run up to about 2,500 tons. A big steamer would draw 23 feet.
736. Steamers going to Melbourne and Adelaide would be able to load coal in 23 feet of water? I should think so.
737. Is there any market in Melbourne and Adelaide for southern coal? Yes; we do a good trade with both places.
738. You would be able to send the coal there much cheaper if you shipped it direct than if you sent it from Sydney? There would be a saving of 3s. 6d. a ton freight.
739. Therefore you could pay 1s. a ton for a harbour rate, and be 2s. 6d. to the good? Yes, I should think so.
740. Do you think people could afford to pay 1s. a ton on their coal in the proposed harbour, having regard to the extra expense they would have to incur if they shipped the coal at Sydney? I could not say. We might be able to ship it cheaper from Wollongong.
741. I do not mean your people, I mean the mine owners at this place? The mines at the back of Dapto would be able to pay 1s.
742. That would still leave them a big margin of profit? Yes.
743. Then you think that the construction of this harbour would be distinctly beneficial? Yes.
744. Do you think that the demand for southern coal is sufficient to justify an increased output? I have been secretary to a coal company for eight years, and the demand has increased every year.
745. You have no difficulty in getting rid of your output? We could get rid of 150,000 tons a year.

THURSDAY, 9 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. CULLEN,		MR. McCOURT,
MR. FERGUSON,		MR. FRANK SMITH.
MICHAEL CHAPMAN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Francis Hixson, Captain R.N., called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Captain F. Hixson.
9 May, 1889.
746. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Dawes' Point.
747. Mr. Crossman.] You are a member of the Marine Board? I am President of the Marine Board.
748. Do you know Lake Illawarra personally at all? I have never been in the lake.
749. You have passed the entrance? I have passed the entrance occasionally.
750. Do you recognize the coast line from this plan of the Lakelands Estate? Yes; I recognize Bass Point and Five Islands Point.
751. In point of fact, do you know that these islands really extend further to the east than they are shown to do on this map? I should be inclined to think they do.
752. Would you consider that the entrance to Lake Illawarra and the coast in the neighbourhood of Windang Island is protected as compared with the rest of the coast? It is protected compared with many parts of the coast. It is protected from the south-east winds by Bass Point, and from the north-east winds by Five Islands Point.
753. Have you examined the Engineer's plans of this proposed harbour? I cannot say that I have examined them; I have seen them.
754. Do you see any apparent obstacle as a maritime man to the carrying out of this scheme? I do not think there would be any difficulty in carrying out the proposed scheme. Probably after the work is carried out it may require attention in the shape of occasional dredging near the entrance.
755. When there is a connection from Windang Island to the shore blocking out any silt from the south will there be comparatively calm water from south-westerly and south-easterly gales near the entrance? There will certainly be calm water in south-westerly and southerly gales. I could not be certain about the weather coming from the south-east.
756. There is a shoal running out from the north of Windang Island? Yes; there would be good protection from south and south-westerly weather, and partial protection from south-easterly weather.

757. Is there any seriously heavy weather coming from the north or north-east of this coast except in a very few days in the year? Except in a very few days of the year the prevailing north-east wind is not dangerous.

Captain
T. Hixson.

9 May, 1889.

758. Do you consider that the proposed width of entrance—200 feet—will be sufficient to enable vessels to come in? Quite sufficient if the channel can be maintained; 200 feet in such sheltered water as that would be ample.

759. Would the widening of that to 250 feet have an influence in reducing the height of the wave? I do not think that 100 feet more or less would make very much difference in the waves in the channel.

760. You think 200 feet would be a sufficient width for the channel? Two hundred feet for steamers would be quite sufficient. I take it that sailing vessels coming to the place would be towed in by steamers.

761. You know of nothing in the natural features of the place which would hinder the carrying out of this scheme? Nothing more than probable easterly gales coming in.

762. That is provided for by the overlapping of one breakwater over the other? Yes. The place is sheltered from the north-east and south-east, and I take it that if anything in the nature of silting up occurred it would take place from the eastward.

763. The soundings on this plan (No. 1) are marked S and R, "S" signifying sandy bottom and "R" a rocky one. To the due east of the channel, and distant within about 200 feet of it, the bottom is marked as rocky? The more rocky the bottom in the vicinity of the entrance the less likely is the place to be affected by easterly gales.

764. Is there any necessity for a harbour on this coast south of Sydney, or is there general provision for the safety of ships in bad weather along it? There is really no good harbour to the south of Sydney until you get to Jervis Bay, that is for large vessels, because there are several places for small vessels. If a safe harbour could be formed here it would be a very desirable thing for maritime purposes.

765. Chairman.] Do you know of any reason why this Bill ought not to be passed by Parliament? No; I know of no reason. I am rather inclined to help it all I can. I believe in helping people who appear to me to be inclined to help themselves.

766. You are not a shareholder in the Company? I have no interest whatever in it.

767. Mr. McCourt.] Do you think the harbour-master ought to be a Government officer or one appointed by the Company? I think if the works are constructed entirely by the Company the harbour-master should be in the service of the Company. I did not see any necessity for Government supervision there because I do not see how any possible harm could arise from the works this Company propose to construct.

768. Do you not think the public have rights on the lake. In the interpretation clause the word "Harbour" means the whole of the lake? I have not considered the matter, but the lake undoubtedly belongs to the public.

769. What I mean is this, would it not be better to have the harbour-master a Government officer so that the rights of the public to the free use of the lake could be protected—as regards the use of fishing boats and pleasure boats? I think it would be very desirable if the place should attain a considerable size and importance to have Government supervision over it. There is a harbour-master at Wollongong a little to the north of this place, and also one at Kiama a little to the south of it, and both of these men would be available if any public rights were being interfered with.

Joseph Mitchell, Esq., M.P., called in, sworn, and examined:—

770. Chairman.] You are a Member of Parliament? Yes.

771. Have you read through this Bill? Yes.

772. Are there any portions of it that appear to you to be objectionable? I may say that I have not read through the Bill carefully enough to answer that question yes or no. I am not in a position to give an answer one way or the other so far as the Bill itself is concerned.

Mr.
J. Mitchell,
M.P.

9 May, 1889.

773. Do you see any just reason why you should object to the passing of this Bill? So far as the Bill is concerned, no. In Schedule "C" the charges the Company will make are set out as follows:—"Ballast per ton, 1s." That, I think, is high. "Coals, per ton, 10d." That, I think, is high. "Coke, 1s. 8d." These rates are all rather higher than the colliery proprietors can pay. I am not in position to speak of the dues upon timber.

774. What would it cost them to take ballast to the nearest point, which would be Wollongong, I presume? They do not take ballast from there. They can get ballast in Wollongong, I should think, at less than 1s. per ton. I take it that this charge of 1s. per ton includes the cost of the ballast in the first instance. There is very little ballast used in Wollongong, because ships going in there come out loaded with coal.

775. What would be the cost per ton for coal going to Wollongong by rail? I do not exactly know the distance. There is very little coal being shipped into Wollongong from this district.

776. Not just now, but there will be in future, because we have taken evidence showing that it would be considerably cheaper to bring the coal to this harbour than it would be to pay the amount required to take it by rail to Wollongong? The only colliery I know of there at the present time is the Mount Kembla Co. They have appliances for shipping their coal, and it would not pay them to send to this place at all. I take it that this charge of 10d. per ton is a shipping charge independent of the cost of carriage.

777. Mr. McCourt.] That is the maximum charge? They cannot charge more; but if a man has power to charge 10d. per ton he will not charge less.

778. If he cannot get trade at 10d. he will charge less? I do not see that. If a man has power to charge a certain amount he will invariably impose that charge.

779. Chairman.] I find that it is about 8 miles to Wollongong Harbour from this place? Well, the minimum charge of carriage is 1s. 6d. per ton.

780. Mr. McCourt.] 2s.? 1s. 6d. or 2s. I admit very freely that to the companies to the south of Mount Kembla this place would be an immense advantage.

781. Mr. Crossman.] You see the coal properties on this map of the Lakelands Estate,—do you think that they could afford to pay such a charge as 10d. in preference to having to make a line of their own to join the Government railway to convey their coal to market, having regard to the charges on the Government railway? These collieries are useless at the present time because they have no facilities for getting their coal away. The charges on the Railways to bring the coal to Wollongong would bar these collieries from competing with those already established.

Mr.
J. Mitchell,
M.P.
9 May, 1889.

782. It would cost them more to go to Wollongong than this proposed charge of 10d.? Assuming that the charge of 10d. a ton means railway carriage to the harbour.
783. It does not mean that? Then I would like to know the distance from the Ocean Steam Colliery Mining Company's land to the shipping place. What would be the cost of traction from that place, independent of the 10d. per ton.
784. Can you load a big ship at Wollongong? You cannot load a big ship at Wollongong.
785. Then if you wish to load a big ship with coal you would have to send the coal from Wollongong and tranship it at Sydney? Do not run away with the idea that Wollongong is the only coaling place south of Sydney.
786. It is the only place that they call a harbour? They call Port Kembla and Bellambi harbours. During my experience of the Southern districts for the last three or four years, more especially for the last three years, we have loaded coal and only lost one day during eighteen months, so that you will see that the weather does not seriously interfere with coaling operations.
787. Have you loaded sailing vessels? No; we do not load sailing vessels.
788. In point of fact there is no place between here and Sydney where you can load large sailing ships? None whatever.
789. Can you tell us what the freight would be from this place to Sydney? The actual cost would be from 2s. 7d. to 2s. 8d. per ton.
790. Would that include the handling in Sydney? That includes handling and delivery on the ship's rail at Sydney.
791. Mr. McCabe told us 8s. 6d.? That is what he would do it for. I, in speaking of the actual cost—a man always leaves a certain margin for profit.
792. Taking the view that this harbour would enable large ships to be loaded? I do not take that view of it because I know nothing about the place.
793. That is the whole contention of the promoters of the Bill? I may say this, that I was asked to put this matter through. I declined because I knew nothing at all about the place until I was thoroughly conversant with it; I declined to have anything to do with the matter. I say now that I am entirely ignorant about the position of the place. If you ask me whether a big ship can go in there I cannot tell you.
794. I ask you to assume for the time being that a harbour for big ships could be made there. What could be saved in loading big ships with coal there instead of at Sydney? It would depend on the cost of traction and the charge on the coal in the first place.
795. What would it cost to take the coal from here to Sydney? How can I tell you if you do not give me the cost of traction?
796. Assuming the railway part of the scheme to be put in the background, what would it cost to take the coal to Sydney and load there? What is the distance?
797. In round figures 60 miles? Then the absolute cost of traction from there to Sydney would be 5s. per ton.
798. But if the coal were taken to Wollongong or Kembla and then conveyed by water? To take it to Wollongong the minimum charge would be 2s. per ton, and added to the charge from Wollongong it would cost 6s. a ton. If you brought the coal by rail you could do it for 5s. a ton, that is 1d. a mile. To bring the coal to Wollongong and ship it by water would cost 5s. 6d.—2s. to Wollongong and 3s. 6d. freight from there.
799. Do you know why they ship the coal at Wollongong free of charge? That I cannot tell you. It is a mystery to me.
800. Might there not be some difficulty in the mines working at all if there was a charge? The mines working there—Mount Kembla and Mount Keira have got special facilities. They are in close proximity to the water; they have a large seam to work; and the property is a private one. They would be quite able to pay the 10d. per ton, and I maintain that they ought to pay it.
801. By any other method there would be something to pay to get the coal intended for big ships to market—therefore anything under 5s. would be cheaper to ship from here? Yes.
802. Is not the coal materially damaged by this transhipping. Does not the breaking up of the coal which is caused by transshipment, and the handling it receives when being taken from the trucks depreciate its value and quality? Yes.
803. Therefore if you could run it straight from the mines to the ship it would be in a better condition than if it had been transhipped several times? If the coal was equally good.
804. We say that it is a little better? Then I say at once that this would be the better mode of shipping the coal.
805. What is the quality of the Southern coal. Is it good for steam purposes? It is very good coal indeed, and a large demand is likely to arise for it. But if you calculate that you can ship coal cheaper from here than you can from Sydney, I say that it all depends upon the price you pay for the coal at the pit's mouth. If you pay considerably more for the coal at the pit's mouth, because of these facilities for shipping, then I maintain that you cannot ship the coal cheaper than you can from Sydney. If on the other hand you pay a reasonable price at the pit's mouth for the coal, I maintain that you can ship it cheaper here than in Sydney.
806. Chairman.] You are a coal owner? Yes.
807. How far are your mines from the mines of this Company? In round figures I should say 18 or 20 miles.
808. Nearer to Sydney? Yes.
809. You have no interest in this Company? Not a fraction of interest.
810. Have you ever been solicited to join this Company? No. I may say that I am not at all in any sense of the word antagonistic to this scheme. I admit very freely that the construction of this harbour would be an immense advantage to the Southern Coast district, but I cannot speak as to the feasibility of the scheme because it is a matter of which I know nothing.
811. Mr. Ferguson.] I suppose this scheme will not interfere with your coal mine? Well, I am not narrow minded enough to base my objections on its interference with myself.
812. Would it be a benefit? It would be an immense benefit to the district; I admit that very freely.
813. Mr. Crossman.] Do you see any immediate prospect of these properties being worked unless some such scheme as this is carried out? I do not think there is a prospect of these collieries being worked without such a scheme.

814. The working of them would produce considerable revenue to the Government? In what way?
 815. 6d. per ton Royalty? On what terms are the properties held?
 816. They are all held on permits? I should like to know where your money is coming from.
 817. We have had evidence given before the Committee that there is a considerably increasing demand for coal in Melbourne and Adelaide? Well, it all depends upon the demand for coal here.
 818. If there is an output of coal from these mines will it benefit the Government? Of course, if it is taken from Government land.
 819. Mr. Cullen.] In your figures of the cost of carriage by rail and by water, you are assuming that 1d. a mile is a fixed charge. Do you see any reason why we may not expect a lowering of that charge as business develops? I see no reason, especially on the South Coast Railway. The initial cost of the railways is very heavy; interest has to be paid on the original outlay, and as far as I can see, that cannot be done by charging less than 1d. a mile. The longer the distance you take the coal, the cheaper you can carry it. It has never been carried for less than 1d. per ton per mile in this Colony.

Mr.
J. Mitchell,
M.P.
9 May, 1889.

George Robert Hepplewhite recalled and further examined:—

820. Mr. Crossman.] Since you gave your evidence here on the last occasion, have you examined the Admiralty chart of the coast? Yes.
 821. That chart is a recognized authority? Yes.
 822. Will you show us where the Admiralty chart makes these Five Islands to come to? The Admiralty chart puts Red Point where the outer island is.
 823. Where does it bring Red Point to? The longitude of that point on the Admiralty chart is 150° 57 east, and that of Bass Point is 150° 55½ east, so that on the Admiralty chart Red Point lies to the eastward of Bass Point.
 824. Then, in point of fact, you found from the recognized authority that there is more protection from the north-east for this entrance than appears on the plan? Yes; a mile and a quarter more.
 825. Is there as much protection on the south? Not quite; Bass Point would protect the islands from the south-east gales.

Mr. G. R.
Hepplewhite.
9 May, 1889.

Thomas Andrew De Wolf recalled and further examined:—

826. Mr. Crossman.] You are a Director of this Company? I am.
 827. Have you attended all the Board Meetings of the Company with the exception of one? Yes.
 828. Has the Company ever had or has it any other properties under offer to it than the two which have been mentioned before the Committee? No.
 829. Those are the Lake Lands Estate and the Ocean Steam Colliery properties? Yes. Those are the only properties that they own or that they have had under offer to them. It has been suggested that we should get some of these coal properties under offer to us, but the disposition of the Directors is to lead other people to open up their coal properties themselves. They are quite content with the one coal property which we have.
 830. What is the subscribed capital of this Company at present? What relation does it bear to the whole capital? One-third of the shares allotted are subscribed.
 831. What amount of uncalled capital is there available on these unallotted shares? £266,000.
 832. How many shareholders have you in the Company? Our registered number of shareholders is thirty. But a number of shares were taken up by a Melbourne man for the people down there, and we have no knowledge of the number among whom he will distribute shares. I believe there are a number of people in Melbourne which would increase our share register very considerably.
 833. Mr. McCourt.] How much is paid up? £50 a share.
 834. How much altogether? £266,000.
 835. That amount has been paid up in cash? It has been paid to the vendors of the land.
 836. There is no available cash in hand now? We have the properties and the power of calling on the shareholders.
 837. To what amount? £266,000.
 837½. And how much a share? £50.
 838. Chairman.] If this Bill is passed by Parliament you will be in a position to commence operations immediately? We could commence operations immediately.
 839. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any knowledge of finance yourself? Yes.
 840. Have you within the last few days raised a large sum on debentures in Sydney through your firm in London? Yes.
 841. How much? £300,000.
 842. Have you actually got most of the money paid over? We got £200,000 paid yesterday.
 843. Was that on the debentures of a Land Company in Sydney? Yes, of which I am a Director.
 844. Have you ever previously raised money on debentures? Only on Municipal Debentures.
 845. But you have done so? Yes, in London.
 846. Then you have some knowledge of what money can be raised in London for carrying out an undertaking of this kind? I have advices from the firm which gave this £300,000 that they can get me the necessary money.
 847. They know on what security? I have given them full particulars.
 848. In point of fact at present two-thirds of the capital of the Company is not taken up, that would be open for application by the public? Yes.
 849. Is there provision made for the giving of any paid up shares in the Company to anybody,—to the vendors or any people of that sort. Are there any paid up shares provided for by the prospectus of the Company? No.
 850. Every person taking up shares would take them up with their full liability? Yes, of £50 a share.
 851. What is the object of that? That we may have a security for raising debentures for the construction of the harbour. We are prepared to give the security of our properties and the uncalled capital in order to provide funds if necessary to raise money on debentures for the construction of harbour works.
 852. Will the promoters of the Bill, or rather the owners of the property, be liable to contribute to the liquidation of this debt equally with others coming in? They will all be liable for £50 a share.

Mr. T. A.
De Wolf.
9 May, 1889.

- Mr. T. A. De Wolf.
9 May, 1889.
853. Is it not the intention of the Company to borrow money in England on the security of their property and uncalled capital, and to expend it on the construction of this harbour? Yes.
854. The money would go first of all towards making a useful harbour and providing labour for a large number of men? Yes. It must provide employment for a large number of men for a considerable time.
855. As to the bond fides of the Company—have you the slightest reason to doubt that the Directors have the intention of carrying on these works themselves? Not the slightest.
856. They are not trying to get a Bill to sell? No.
857. Has the Company already shown its bond fides by expending a large amount of money? Yes. We have spent on surveys and plans something like £4,000.
858. And you have bought this Ocean Property and the Lake Lands Estate? Yes.
859. Is it the intention of the Company to make profit out of this harbour—is that their main object? No; that is not the intention of the Company. I can speak, I think, for the other directors as well as for myself and for most of the shareholders.
860. Have you been expressly appointed to take the management of this Bill? I have, in conjunction with Mr. Newton, who is a co-director. The intention of the Company is to bring as large a trade as possible to the harbour in order to improve the value of our own property. In order to do that we shall endeavour to work the harbour in such a way as to attract as much trade as possible to it. At first we shall have to build up a trade, and it may be necessary to exert our full power of charging, but our policy will certainly be as the trade increases to endeavour to reduce those charges—so long as we can pay interest on the cost of the works.
861. Then I understand that all the Company is aiming at is to get sufficient to pay the interest on the cost of the construction of the harbour? Yes.
862. Their next object will be to popularise the harbour? Yes; to attract as much trade as we can to it.
863. The Company intends to make its profit on the coal property and the freehold land on which they will erect these wharves? Yes.
864. In point of fact it will be to the interest of the Company to lower the charges on the harbour as much as possible consistently with their paying the interest on the cost of construction? Paying the interest on the construction and also for the sinking fund and extensions.
865. As far as you know it will be the object of the Company to attract trade to this harbour by lowering the charges? Certainly.

Edward Herbert Crossman recalled and further examined:—

- Mr. E. H. Crossman.
9 May, 1889.
866. Chairman. You have been at every meeting of the Directors of this Company? I was at the only meeting at which Mr. De Wolf was not present, and I believe at every other meeting, but I cannot answer for that. There was no mention made on the occasion to which I refer of a suggestion to get any property under offer to the Company, nor have I as the solicitor of the Company heard any such suggestion made. I am quite sure that there has been no such suggestion, because I know the owners of the different properties at this place.

FRIDAY, 10 MAY, 1889.

(At Dapto.)

Present:—

MR. CULLEN,
MR. FERGUSON,

MR. FRANK SMITH,
MR. TONKIN.

M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

John Brown called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. J. Brown.
10 May, 1889.
867. Mr. Crossman. You reside at Dapto? Yes.
868. And have done so for many years? Yes; sixty years.
869. Are you a landowner in this district? Yes.
870. Can you give an approximate idea of the area of land you own here? About 600 acres in the electorate—300 at this place.
871. You own some coal property too? Yes; it is included in the area I have mentioned.
872. Will you point out your property on this plan of the Lake Lands Estate? I own 300 acres here.
873. That is adjoining the Lakelands Estate? Yes; that is the property we are on now. I have also 50 acres.
874. That is adjoining the Ocean Steam Collieries freehold property? Yes. I have another property of 50 acres.
875. Adjoining the 143 acres which attaches to Watts' property? Yes; it is at the front of Kelly's block.
876. Known as T. W. Garnsey's 50 acres? Yes.
877. Have you any other property? Yes; 40 acres at the bottom of J. Brown's coal property, and some others not shown. I have 200 acres which are not shown on the map.
878. Do you own any of the coal permits marked on the map? No; No. 9 was taken up by mistake.
879. Who does that belong to? I do not know who it belongs to now.
880. Which land have you actually got the permit for? I thought I had got M.P.'s 9 and 10; but I gave up No. 9, and I understood that the other was given up also.
881. Do you know about this scheme for the construction of a harbour at Lake Illawarra? I saw the plan of it.
882. Have you examined the plan? Yes, it was laid before the Central Illawarra Council.
883. Did you also see the railway marked as going north and south from Tallawera Point? Yes.

Mr. J. Brown.

10 May, 1886.

884. Have you considered the possibility of the construction of the harbour? Yes.
885. What do you think of it? I think that the lake can be converted into a harbour.
886. Do you think if it is converted into a harbour it will be of any benefit to the district? It will be a very large benefit to the district.
887. Will it enable an output of coal to be made from these various coal properties marked on the map? Yes, it will enable all those properties to be worked.
888. I believe they are not worked at the present time? That is so.
889. What is the reason of that? Because there is no outlet for the coal—no means of shipping it away.
890. Could not the proprietors connect with the Government railway and run the coal to Sydney by rail? I think it would be too expensive.
891. You think if the harbour was constructed it would enable these properties to be worked? Yes.
892. Have you considered the direction of the railway? No, I have not considered it.
893. Do you know whereabouts it will run? Yes.
894. Do you consider the course a suitable one? Yes, I think it is.
895. This matter was considered before the Council, I think? Yes.
896. Have the Council any objection to the scheme? There was no objection raised to it. They appeared to want further information, so they referred the matter to their solicitor.
897. I believe they did not give a formal consent to it? No.
898. Is it not a fact that the objection the Council had to the scheme was lest they should be sanctioning interference with other people's foreshore rights to the lake? Yes, that I think was their objection; but there really was no objection.
899. That was the objection, if any? Yes. When I was at the last Council meeting I moved that the application be complied with, and it was referred to the solicitor for his report. I have not been at a Council meeting since, so I do not know what the report was.
900. At the present time there is no harbour which would be useful for shipping coal from here? No.
901. Chairman.] Do you know of any reason why permission should not be granted to the Company to open up the lake and make a harbour of it? I do not know of any reason.
902. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any interest in this Company? I have no interest in it whatever.
903. Have you any property under offer to the Company, or anything of that sort? No.
904. Mr. Frank Smith.] Did any alderman present raise any objection to the motion which you submitted to the Council that the application should be complied with. Was the motion discussed? No. The Council objected to the 56th section of the Bill—the interpretation clause.
905. Who made the objection? In the interpretation clause I think the word "harbour" is interpreted to mean the whole of Lake Illawarra.
906. Do you know who made the objection? The Mayor was one of those who objected. I forget who the other aldermen were.
907. Was it upon that objection that the matter was referred to the solicitor? Yes, the Council wanted information about it.
908. On that point? Yes. I do not know whether there were any other points.
909. Mr. Crossman.] Did you hear any other points raised? No, I did not hear any other. There was only that point raised.
910. Has there been any objection to the railway route? Not that I have heard of. I have had some conversation with the owners of the land through which it runs, and they do not appear to have any objection to it. I am the person who moved the first resolution in reference to this matter.
911. Mr. Ferguson.] Was any estimate of the cost of the railway put before the Council? No.
912. The only objection to the scheme was because the Council thought that the Company would make this channel near the island only for their own benefit, and not for the use of the public—that was the Mayor's objection? Yes.
913. Chairman.] Provision will be made to secure to the public their existing rights? Provision has been made since then. What I speak of happened three months' since. I have not been to the Council for the last two meetings. I have not been able to attend.
914. You are an old resident here; perhaps a native of this district. Do you think that by ceding to this Company the right to make a harbour at Lake Illawarra, the residents here will be interfered with in their pleasure boating, fishing, or anything of that sort? I do not think so, because their rights would be reserved to them by the Government in those matters I should think.
915. But has not the belief that they would be a source of complaint? That has been one reason of complaint.
916. If such provision is made do you think there will be no other cause of complaint? I do not think there will. Some of the aldermen thought that we should not be allowed to visit the islands without applying to the Company for permission to do so, and that the islands would be taken up by the Company. All that was mentioned during the discussion, which was a pretty warm one.
917. Do you know of any gentlemen belonging to the district who objects to this scheme? No, I do not. The only one I think is alderman O'Donnell. I do not think that he has any particular objection, but he is one of those who moved in the matter in the Council.
918. If provision is made to reserve the rights of the inhabitants for them, you think he will be perfectly satisfied? I think so. I have not had any conversation with him. I only know his opinions by his movements in the Council.
919. Mr. Crossman.] Do you think this scheme is well known about here? Yes; it is well known.
920. Therefore, if anyone has any objection to the scheme, they have an opportunity to object to the passing of the Bill? Yes; the Council applied to the Government in order to ascertain whether the lake could be made into a harbour, and I moved the following resolution on the 11th March, 1885:—"That application be made to the Government to cause a survey of the Illawarra Lake to be made with a view to ascertaining the practicability of converting the same into a harbour," which was carried by the Council. The motion was seconded by Mr. McPhail, and the application of the Council was granted by a letter from the Works Department, dated 5th August, 1885, and numbered 85-6,512. An officer was sent from the Harbours and Rivers Department—Captain Howard—to commence a survey, about the latter end of September, 1885. Some time after the survey was made repeated applications were made by the Council to get a report, but the report was never obtained. A petition was sent in signed by the inhabitants of the

- Mr. J. Brown. the district praying that the Government would proceed with the harbour, and in the meantime the matter was taken up by the Company. This resolution of mine appears to me to be the origin of the whole affair.
- 10 May, 1889.
921. Mr. Frank Smith.] Was there any deputation to the Government about the matter at any time? Not that I am aware of.
922. The officer of the Department never disapproved of the scheme in any way? Not that I know of.

George Lawrence Fuller called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. G. L. Fuller.
- 10 May, 1889.
923. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Shellharbour.
924. Mr. Crossman.] You are a land-owner in this district? Yes; I am one of the owners of the lake frontages.
925. Will you point out to us on the map where your land is? My frontage to the lake extends from Mr. Redall's land to the Macquarie River, a distance of about 4 miles. It runs round the southern end of the lake.
926. Have you heard of this proposed harbour? Yes.
927. It has been suggested that you have some objection to the scheme. Have you any? None whatever now. I think it is a very good idea. I had an objection to it at first, because I thought the Company were claiming the right to resume my frontages, but I believe that is going to be provided for.
928. That objection having been removed, you no longer have any opposition to the Bill? None at all. I think it will be a very fine thing for the district if the scheme is carried out.

Thomas Andrew De Wolf recalled and further examined:—

- Mr. T. A. De Wolf.
- 10 May, 1889.
929. Mr. Crossman.] It has been suggested that this property was purchased by foreign capital. Did a single sixpence of the money required for the purchase come from anywhere but the Colonies? No.
930. It is all Colonial money? Every penny of it.
931. It is simply the intention of the Company to borrow English money for the purpose of improving the property purchased and owned by Colonials? Yes; it is our intention to raise money for the Company on debentures.

WEDNESDAY, 15 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. FERGUSON, | MR. TONKIN,
Mr. WOODWARD.

M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Francis Woodward, Esq., M.P. (a member of the Committee), sworn and examined in his place:—

- F. Woodward, Esq., M.P.
- 15 May, 1889.
932. Chairman.] You are a Member of Parliament? I am.
933. And reside in Wollongong? Yes.
934. You have heard of something like opposition to this Bill? Yes. I have been communicated with by the Borough Council of Central Illawarra. Some of the Aldermen of that Council desire to be heard before the Committee.
935. Will you give us their names? Christopher James Cullen, Mayor, Aldermen John Richards, and Francis O'Donnell, and Mr. David James.
936. Have you yourself anything to say in opposition to this Bill. Do you know of any reason why it should not be passed into law? I think it would be desirable in the public interest, that the operations of this Company upon what is called the harbour should be narrowed down to the meaning in the interpretation clause, less the words, "and the whole of Lake Illawarra." I have not gone through the Bill with sufficient care to be able to point out anything else in the Bill, to which I object, if there is anything.
937. Mr. Crossman.] What is your reason for that suggested amendment? I think that the interpretation clause gives the Corporation larger power on the lake than is necessary for their purposes, or should be necessary in the interests of the public.
938. Should you have any objection to those words remaining in, if there was sufficient provision made in the Bill for the protection of the ordinary rights of people to their lands and foreshores, and to the general use of the lake? I think the words are objectionable, and I think that it is unnecessary for the Company to have this power, considering the size of the lake and the large area of frontage which they have to it, which I am told is about 4½ miles.
939. But the wording of the Act does not give the Company a right to use any portion of the foreshores of the lake, excepting for the construction of the works mentioned in Schedule A? The word "harbour" is used throughout the Bill, and is defined to mean the whole lake.
940. That only applies, you will find, to the navigation of the lake. It gives the Company the right of regulating the navigation on the lake. Section 1 says:—"1. It shall be lawful for the Company to make, open, construct, and maintain a port and harbour in Lake Illawarra." Then, going down to section 3:—"3. It shall be lawful for the Company, for any of the purposes aforesaid, to construct, make, and do all or any of the works and things in Schedule A hereto mentioned." Then section 4:—"4. It shall be lawful for the Company to reclaim land on the foreshores of the said freehold land." (That is the Lakeland's Estate.) The section continues:—"Or of Windang Island, or of any land which may become the property of the Company under or by virtue of any of the powers and provisions in this Act contained, and also on either side or both sides of the said channel between the points in Schedule A hereto mentioned." We can touch no one's land by reclamation, except Mr. Reddall's, and he has already appeared here to give evidence of his consent to our doing so. Then section 6 says:—"6. The Company shall have complete control within the boundaries of the said harbour over the several matters and things in Schedule A hereto specified." Those are: The construction of a breakwater, the construction of a mole, the construction construction of training walls, the construction of sand traps, the excavation of a canal or channel, the excavation of docks, and the power to reclaim the foreshores of the Company's estate. You see there is not a single word giving us power over the lake, except to dredge the waters? Yes; but supposing this Schedule A was altered, and you deposited the dredgings on other people's property?

941. The Company does not desire to deposit the dredgings on other people's property. We can expressly provide for that in the Bill. This Bill will be of no use to the Company unless we can issue debentures in England to enable us to carry out these works. The money to carry them out must be advanced by English capitalists lent on the security of our land and uncalled capital, and unless we have a Bill which gives us a harbour which no one else can interfere with afterwards, it will be impossible to get this money at all? Without advocating either the interests of the Company or those of the public, it seems to me that some regard should be had to the interest of the public.

942. Certainly? but if a certain course is taken the Bill will be of no use to the Company, and they will not carry out these works. No one else can carry them out, because the Company owns the land which is necessary to enable the coal to be shipped from the mines at the back of the lake. The land will then be cut up into 10 or 20 acre allotments, as was originally intended, and it is for the district to say whether they will let the Company get this Bill and form a harbour or not. It is no use for the Company to get a Bill with the assistance of which they cannot raise money on debentures? That is where opinions differ. First of all, it is said outside that you have $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles frontage to the lake.

943. We have that in evidence? Then it becomes the question whether that area is not sufficient. I do not for one moment pretend to say it is.

944. It is amply sufficient; but if we attempted to borrow money on the security of our uncalled capital and land for the purpose of developing our harbour to a certain line of water unmarked, we should never get our money. There are any number of lakes in America where they have got these concessions, but they go with the whole of the water. We do not want to use the whole of the lake, and you may put any restrictions you like on our dealing with it, but we want the harbour to consist of the whole of the lake. We shall never within the next 500 years use more than the $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles of frontage we have now? But I see you have full power to charge all dues and water powers. Then what do you say to clause 13 providing for the use of tug-boats all over the harbour?

945. This provision is against the Company. It compels us to maintain a tug service: "Provided that if the Company shall fail to supply such-tug boats or other appliances or towage power as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the Colonial Treasurer to provide or to issue a license authorizing other persons, on such terms as to the Colonial Treasurer shall seem fit, to provide tug-boats and other appliances for towing vessels and towage power for the same";—You see it acts against us? Yes, it makes it incumbent upon you to provide towage.

946. And there is a special rate provided in the schedule? I notice in the preamble that the Company "desires to obtain Legislative authority to convert the said lake into a good and commodious harbour, and to construct wharves, jetties, and other conveniences upon its freehold land on the shores of the lake, and to levy and recover tonnage, wharfage and tonnage rates, for the use of the said harbour—that is the whole of the lake?"

947. Yes? "Wharves, jetties, and conveniences." I understand that some amendment is to be introduced with reference to those matters.

948. Mr. Reddall, in his evidence, here suggested this amendment [produced] to follow clause 27, and with regard to watermen's boats and pleasure boats, Mr. Barber suggested this amendment [produced], both of which the Company are prepared to accept. There is already in the Bill a provision allowing ships of war to enter the harbour. I think the best guarantee you can have on the part of the Company is that we cannot collect trade from this district to our property. There is a lot of trade, to the north and to the south of our property that could not come here. We have to pay a large sum to make this harbour, and therefore it is distinctly to our interest, apart from increasing the value of our own property, to get as much trade as possible on the harbour, and we should be cutting our own throats if we endeavoured to block out boats which did not come to our property. We have to collect and encourage and make a trade where there is no trade now, and it is entirely to our interest, as it is to the interest of other people to make this trade as large as possible. The more people we can get to run private lines to the lake and ship goods there, the better it is for us? But although this Corporation might be disposed to exercise its rights in a reasonable, just, fair, and equitable manner, another Corporation might come in which would have a different view.

949. Their interest would be the same? But their manner of conducting the matter might be very stupid and detrimental to their interests, and however large the qualifications may be, you propose to have very large powers, as recited in the preamble.

950. Mr. Tonkin.] Supposing provision was made in the Bill for allowing people who erected wharves on the fore shores of the lake to make a channel through the lake connecting with the main channel; but stringently protecting the Company from any possible damage, that would do away with any monopoly? Yes.

WEDNESDAY, 22 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. CULLEN, | MR. McCOURT,
| MR. WOODWARD.

M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.
Edward Bennett, Esq., counsel, appeared on behalf of the Borough Council of Central Illawarra,
Mr. O'Donnell, and others.

Francis O'Donnell called in, sworn, and examined:—

951. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At the Five Island Estate.

952. Mr. Bennett.] Have you read the Bill now before this Committee—the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation Bill? I have.

953. Do you know Lake Illawarra? Yes.

F.
Woodward,
Esq., M.P.
15 May, 1889.

Mr.
F. O'Donnell.
954. 22 May, 1889.

- Mr. 954. You are a member of the Borough Council of Central Illawarra? Yes.
- F. O'Donnell. 955. Do you know the Lakelands Estate? Yes.
- 22 May, 1889. 956. Is that estate within the boundaries of the Central Illawarra Municipality? Yes.
957. Do you think the provisions of this Bill would affect the interests of the Borough of Central Illawarra? Yes. The provisions made for crossing the roads—the main road and the principal roads in the municipality are not sufficient.
958. You refer to clause 30 of the Bill? Yes.
959. If you refer to Schedule E you will see that the railway which is to be constructed by this Company will cross the South Coast Road? Yes.
960. That is the road between Wollongong and Kiama—the central road? Yes; the main road.
961. The railway will also cross the Bong Bong Road? Yes.
962. And it will also cross two other roads—the road coming from Cooper's land and the road passing into Harris' land;—do you know all those roads? I know all those roads.
963. The central road is the public road? It is the main road from Kiama.
964. What about the Bong Bong Road? It is a very important road too, though not a main road. It runs through a very thickly populated part of the district, and in addition to that it is one of the roads leading to the Dapto railway station.
965. And are the two other roads in populated neighbourhoods? They are.
966. What is your objection to clause 39? I think that the railways of this Company should be placed on the same level as the Government railways—the proper gates placed at the crossings and gate-keepers stationed there.
967. You are of the opinion that the Company should maintain gates in the same way as the Government do? Certainly.
968. You think it should not be necessary to make an application to two Justices to compel them to do this? Certainly not.
969. Do you know that many accidents have happened through the way gates are constructed? I do; on some railway lines.
970. Many accidents have happened from not having gates put up? I know they have happened to cattle—cattle have been killed on the line through proper gates not being kept across the road. I know that our cattle have got on to the Mount Kembla line, and have been killed.
971. Chairman.] Stray cattle? They got off the runs; they were not straying—the gates were left open and they got on to the lines.
972. The gates of the run? The gates of the public road—the lines crossed the road, and the cattle got on to the line.
973. Mr. Bennett.] Were they your own gates? The gates of the public road through our property.
974. Is it not the fact that the Kembla lines have no gates across the road? Yes.
975. Mr. McCourt.] Has the line itself got gates? No.
976. Mr. Bennett.] There are no gates whatever? None.
977. Is it not a fact that even in driving cattle along the road they may get on to the line through there not being gates? It is just possible unless you stop them.
978. Is it not a fact that there is danger in driving along the road where the line crosses, because there is no flagman there—nothing to show that the train is coming? You have got to look out for that, and to see that the engine is not coming before you cross. The engine certainly does whistle at the main road, but there is no flagman.
979. You would have no objection to clause 39 if the reference to the two Justices were left out? Not the slightest. There is something I failed to mention about the gates of the Mount Kembla Companies line crossing the main road. On each side of the main road there is a sort of a bridge over the water-tables where the line crosses, and that bridge acts as a sort of stoppage to cattle straying on the line. These bridges are the only obstacles which prevent cattle on the main road from straying on to the line; but they certainly are a baulk to the cattle.
980. There are some islands in Lake Illawarra I believe;—are those islands at the present time under the control of the Council? I believe they are.
981. Chairman.] Which islands are they. Have you names for them? One is Gooseberry Island, and there is a small island near it of which I do not know the name. The Council made application to the Government to have those islands placed under their control, but whether they have been dedicated or not I do not know. The Government, however, granted money to the Council to enable them to make landing-places on the islands, such as wharves and jetties, and I think that the Council has already expended that money.
982. Mr. Bennett.] For recreation purposes? Yes.
983. Chairman.] Is Windang Island one of the islands? No.
984. Mr. Bennett.] How many islands are there in the lake? I think five.
985. Mr. Crossman.] They are all to the north of Mullet Creek, are they not? No.
986. Are any of them to the south of it? Certainly.
987. Will you point out on the map where they are? They are not marked, but there are two islands to the north of Mullet Creek—Gooseberry Island and another island—and the other three islands to the south of it.
988. Mr. Bennett.] You say that the Council spent the money given to them by the Government for the purpose in the erection of jetties for recreation purposes? Yes, or at all events part of it. I am not sure whether it is all spent, but they have spent most of it.
989. Do you object to those islands being placed under the control of the Illawarra Harbour Corporation? Yes.
990. Will you say why? Because they were granted as recreation grounds, and if they are placed under the control of this Company the right of the public to them will be taken away.
991. The access to them? Yes.
992. With the exception of clause 39 and clause 5, have the Borough Council of Central Illawarra any objection to the Bill? I do not recollect any other objection just at present.
993. You are a landholder in the district of Illawarra? Yes.
994. On the lake? Yes.

995. Chairman.] Can you point out your land on the map? It is not numbered, but is marked "John Stuart, 80 acres."
996. Mr. Bennett.] As a landholder, do you object to the Bill? I do.
997. What clause of it do you object to? Clause 4.
998. What is your objection? This clause would give the Company power to reclaim land on either side of their channel, from Windang Island to Talawera Point, and also to place their silt on any part of the lake they thought proper. That, I have a decided objection to.
999. You want to know whether this power to reclaim land applies to the land held by the Company, or to the land they would acquire? That is what I would like to be clear upon. According to my reading of this clause, the Company appear to have power to reclaim land in any part of the lake by depositing silt there.
1000. You have read this Bill through very carefully? Yes.
1001. Do you see any provision in the Bill to enable the Company to acquire land other than the land they have already purchased? Yes, the Bill gives them power.
- 1001½. Do you see any clause in the Bill which will enable the Company to obtain land other than that they hold now? Yes; in Schedule A.
1002. You refer to the 7th paragraph of Schedule A, in which it says that the Company shall have "the power to reclaim the foreshores of the Company's estate, and to deposit dredgings and materials in such positions as may be suitable without interfering with the navigation of the lake"? Yes.
1003. Do you object to the interpretation clause? I object to the definition of "harbour," which says, "Harbour means and includes the port and harbour authorized to be constructed by this Act, and the entrance thereto, and the whole of Lake Illawarra";—that means that the Company shall have control not only of the foreshores and entrance to the lake but of the whole of the lake itself.
1004. Do you object in clause 1 to the words "or any land which may become the property of the Company by reclamation or otherwise"? I do.
1005. By clause 6 the Company will have complete control of the harbour and may appoint a harbour-master;—would you object to their having the power to appoint such an officer? That is a matter that I have not considered. I think that the harbour-master should be appointed by the Government.
1006. Your objection is founded on the fact that such an officer has control of the harbour? Certainly.
1007. Do you object to the Bill because there is no provision in it by virtue of which the Government would be able to resume this harbour? I think the Government should have the power to resume it.
1008. By compensating the Company? Yes.
1009. You object to the whole of the lake being handed over to a private Company without any provision being made for its resumption? Yes.
1010. Mr. Crossman.] Have you ever given evidence before a Select Committee before? I have.
1011. Before what Committee? The Committee on the Victoria Coal Company's Railway Bill.
1012. Was there such provision in that Bill as there is in this one relating to the crossing of roads? I think so.
1013. Did you object on that occasion? I did not.
1014. But you object this time? I have gained experience since then.
1015. You said just now that accidents had happened through the gates being left open on the Mount Kembla Company's line;—did these accidents happen because of the absence of gates? The gates were there, but there was one of them off its hinges through the neglect of the Company. The gates were merely temporary, made of battens.
1016. Then I understand that the accidents happened not through the absence of proper provisions in the Act but because the people did not take the trouble to have them enforced? I suppose that was it.
1017. Are you generally opposed to the whole of this scheme, or are you in favour of it, subject to certain provisions? I am in favour of it; I am not at all opposed to it.
1018. You rent a considerable portion of the lake frontage? I rent land at the mouth of the lake.
1019. Have you had any communication from the lessor of Mr. Wentworth's property or his agents in connection with this Bill? I really forget;—there was a letter from him.
1020. Do you mean to say that if a letter was recently written to you you forget what the contents of it were? I do. The letter was sent to my brother and he got it.
1021. Are you prepared to say that that letter did not contain a recommendation in favour of this scheme, sent to you, as their tenant, by the owners of the land? No; I am not prepared to swear that it did not, because I never saw the letter.
1022. You never saw the letter? No.
1023. You had no information of the contents of the letter. Did not your brother tell you what it was about? He did tell me but I forget.
1024. You came here in connection with this inquiry, and yet you forget an important matter like that? You forget that I am here as a representative of the Central Illawarra Borough Council.
1025. I am asking you as the lessee of this land? That has nothing to do with me.
1026. Will you swear that you did not directly or indirectly receive a letter from the gentleman who holds Mr. Wentworth's power of attorney to act for him here, and that it was in favour of this Bill and requested you not to do anything to oppose it? I swear I never heard that, if it was in the letter.
1027. Then you really do not know what the contents of that letter were? No. As far as I can recollect the letter was to this effect—that the Company did not intend to enforce some of the clauses in their Bill—I think that that was in the letter.
1028. Can you assign any reason for that letter being written to you and that statement being made unless there was an intention on the part of the writer to say something in favour of or against the Bill? I have really forgotten all about it.
1029. Who was the letter from? From Mr. Hearn.
1030. Was it written more than a fortnight ago? Fully a fortnight ago. However, I considered that the letter did not affect me. I forget whether it was answered or not.
1031. If you never saw it you could hardly have answered it? I forget whether I told my brother to answer it.
1032. With regard to these roads, I understand that your objection is not to the provision in the Bill, but because there may be non-compliance with that provision. Supposing the provisions in the clause were carried out, would there be any objection to it? I think those roads and crossings should be placed on the same level as the Government railways.

Mr.
F. O'Donnell,
22 May, 1889.

- Mr. F. O'Donnell.
22 May, 1889.
1033. Are the provisions in the Bill, if they are carried out, sufficient to protect people and property? Yes, if they are carried out.
1034. Then your objection is not to the provisions but to the chance of their being carried out? There is no chance about it. How is it that they are not carried out on the other railway lines? I know that the Municipal Council of Central Illawarra has written to the Mount Kembla Company asking them to put their crossings in repair, and no notice has been taken.
1035. Has the Council ever made a complaint to two Justices? I am not aware of it.
1036. Then apparently they have neglected their duties very sadly? Perhaps they have.
1037. With regard to the Council having control of these islands in the lakes, I would ask you, have you ever read the proclamation in the Government Gazette, constituting the Central Illawarra Municipality? I have seen it.
1038. Do you know that their boundaries are taken to the shores of Lake Illawarra, and include nothing to the east of that? I know that.
1039. If a provision such as this were put in would it remove many of your objections, "provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall be held to interfere with the existing rights of the owners of the foreshores of the lake"? Would you leave in the interpretation clause? Yes? Then I would object.
1040. Can you identify any of these five islands by name, so that they can be identified in the Bill? Two of them are on the Shellharbour side of the lake, and I think the Municipal Council of Shellharbour has control of them—the other three are on the Central Illawarra side of the lake.
1041. Would your objection to the interpretation clause be in any way lessened if an express provision were put into the Bill with regard to those islands, so that the control of the harbour did not cover any right to the control of the islands—would that assist you in any way? I have a decided objection to the interpretation clause as it now stands, and that objection I will not give up unless you strike out the latter part of the definition of the word "harbour." If I wished to build a jotty or wharf on my property and to cut a channel from it to connect with the Company's channel, would I have power to do it?
1042. The amendment I have just read provides that nothing in this Bill can interfere with any rights you have over the lake at the present time? I shall not be satisfied as long as this interpretation clause remains as it is.
1043. You referred to clause 4, which provides for the reclamation of land on either side of the channel, and I understand that you take it that that would mean right to the north and south of the channel? Certainly.
1044. If the word "contiguous" were substituted for the word "adjacent," would that do? That would prevent us from getting into the channel. I think the Company should be limited to some part of the lake in which to deposit their silt.
- 1044½. We are quite willing to make such a limitation—we want to deposit this silt on Mr. Reddall's land, and that Mr. Reddall has consented to it, and we are going to use it to fill up part of the two bays on our property? This is a matter on which I should want a little time to consider.
1045. Mr. Bennett.] The Company wants power to make a channel from Windang Island to their own property, which has 5 miles water frontage to the lake? Something like that.
1046. And you want their rights defined so that you may know how far each side of the channel they extend? Certainly. I do not want them to have unlimited power.
1047. Mr. Crossman.] If we could make it quite clear that the Company will have no right to deposit the silt on any except their own land, would you be satisfied? Why do you object to the omission of these words—"and the whole of the Lake Illawarra"—from the interpretation clause. You asked me just now about a letter I received from my landlord;—I have nothing to do with my landlord.
1048. I am bringing you forward as a lessee? Well, my position as tenant has nothing to do with my appearance here.
1049. Mr. Crossman.] Have you a long lease of this block of land on the north shore of the lake? Not a very long lease.
1050. Have you got a lease at all? Yes.
1051. What is the length of it? I cannot say.
1052. Have you ten years to run? No.
1053. Then your landlord has more interest in this matter than you have? I have no interest of my own whatever.
1054. Mr. Bennett.] You have been asked did you give evidence before the Committee on the Victoria Railway Company's Bill? Yes.
1055. And you were asked a question with regard to its providing for an appeal to two Justices;—do you know that there is no such provision as that in the Bill, and that that railway is on the same terms as a Government railway? I do not know it of my own knowledge.
1056. Mr. McCourt.] Is their private property to the north of the entrance to the lake? Yes.
1057. Is this reserve at the mouth of the lake under the control of the Council? The Government land.
1058. The land at the mouth of the lake? No; I do not think it is.
1059. It is within the boundaries of the municipality? Yes.
1060. Do you think that in the public interest this Company should have power to lease and control that land? I do not think so—it is a recreation ground at present.
1061. With regard to the entrance of the channel—is it all Government land on the Wollongong side, or is there private property there? There is private property there.
1062. Who is the owner of it? Wilson & Co. and Mr. Berry.
1063. You have read clause 4? Yes.
1064. Do you think that clause will give the Company power to reclaim all the land inside the entrance? I think so.

Christopher James Cullen called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. C. J. Cullen,
22 May, 1889.
1065. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Uanderra.
1066. Mr. Bennett.] You are Mayor of Central Illawarra? Yes.
1067. Have you read the Bill before the Committee? I have.
1068. Will you confine your answers to the question of how the Bill affects the interests of the Council of which you are Mayor? I may say that I am in favour of the scheme, but opposed to some clauses of the Bill.
- 1069.

1069. Will you look at clause 39? I wish to be assured that the Company will, when the locomotives are running along their line, provide sufficient gates and gatekeepers without our being put to the trouble of appealing to two Justices of the Peace.

1070. You wish that they should be compelled to erect gates and do all things necessary for the protection of the public, as on the Government Railways? Yes, at once.

1071. Will you look at Schedule E—you will see there that the Company's Railway would cross the South Coast Road, the Bong Bong Road, and two other roads? Well; I should be perfectly satisfied if this provision were made on the South Coast Road and the Bong Bong Road for the present.

1072. Do you know that there are islands on the lake which are used for recreation purposes? Yes.

1073. Are they under the control of your Council? Yes.

1074. Have you received money from the Government to enable you to erect jetties on the Islands? Yes; we have received money from the Government and expended it.

1075. Do you object to those islands being handed over to the Company? Certainly.

1076. Why? Because they are the only Recreation Reserves we have in the Municipality. We have expended the money voted by the Government upon them, and they are a great attraction to the inhabitants of the Borough.

1077. And you object to these islands being taken from the control of the Council? Certainly I do.

1078. Outside your position as Mayor of the Borough and as a resident of the district you have an objection to this Bill? Yes, to the interpretation clause.

1079. Your objection is that the Company would have full control of this harbour, and that the harbour, as defined in the interpretation clause, means the whole of Lake Illawarra? That is my objection. I object to the whole of Lake Illawarra being given to any Company.

1080. Have you read the Bill carefully through? I have.

1081. Clause 6 of the Bill provides for the appointment of a harbour-master by the Company? That matter I have not given any consideration to.

1082. Your objection is that the control of Lake Illawarra should not be given up to a Company? To any Company. Another objection I wish to bring under the notice of the Committee is this, I think the freightage rates set forth in Schedule C excessive.

1083. Mr. Crossman.] I understand you to say that the two roads which ought to be protected at the present time are the South Coast Road and the Bong Bong Road. You think if gates were put upon those roads the other roads might be left? The traffic would not warrant the erection of gates on the other roads.

1084. With regard to the islands which I understand are not within the boundaries of the Municipality, upon which the Municipal Council have been spending Government moneys, would your objection be met if it was expressly provided in the Bill that the Company should have no control over them? I have no doubt that that would do, but I should not like our right to be interfered with in any way.

1085. The mud island at the mouth of the lake is not one of those to which you refer? No.

1086. There are two islands to the south and two to the north of the channel? Yes.

1087. If it was provided that the control of the Council over these islands should not be taken away would your objection be met? That would meet the present requirements.

1088. It would preserve the present interests of the public? Yes.

1089. I understand that your reason for your objecting to the interpretation clause is that you think it interferes with private rights? With private and public rights.

1090. If the interpretation clause were left as it is and these provisoes were inserted in the Bill, "provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall be held to interfere with the existing rights of the owners to the foreshores of the lake," and "nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with any right which any owner of any part of the foreshores of the said lake may have to erect a wharf or wharves from his land into the water of the lake, and to collect and recover rates for the use thereof, and to excavate channels from the said wharf or wharves, provided that such work shall be carried out in such a manner as not to be prejudicial to any work executed, or in the course of execution by the Company," and a further provision were added that fishing and pleasure boats should have free access to the lake, do you think that would remove most of your objections? I think so.

1091. Have you formed any opinion as to what effect the opening of this harbour will have upon the district? It certainly must develop the district.

1092. Have you considered the course of the railway as laid out. Do you see any objection to it? None whatever.

John Richards called in, sworn, and examined:—

1093. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Unanderra.

1094. Mr. Bennett.] You are a member of the Central Illawarra Borough Council? Yes.

1095. Have you read the Bill before the Committee? Yes.

1096. Have you any objection to it as a member of the Council? Yes, I have.

1097. Is it with regard to clause 39. Do you object to its being necessary for the Company to be ordered by two Justices to erect gates? I do. I think the gates should be erected in the same way as they are at the Government Railway crossings.

1098. Do you know that this line of railway will cross the South Coast Road, the Bong Bong Road, and two others? I believe it will cross two others. I believe there is another at West Dapto, but I cannot be sure of the name.

1099. Do you know that because crossings have been left unprotected accidents have happened? Very serious accidents have occurred, and in more than one instance in our neighbourhood, on the South Kembla Line.

1100. Do you know that the islands in the lake have been under the control of your Council? They have been placed under its control lately.

1101. Do you object to the control of those islands being given over to this Company? Decidedly.

1102. Have you land in the district? Yes.

1103. Chairman.] Where is your land? It is about a mile and a half from the lake.

1104. It does not front the lake? No. I think Laing was the original owner.

Mr.
C. J. Cullen.
22 May, 1889.

Mr.
J. Richards.
22 May, 1889.

- Mr. J. Richards.
22 May, 1889.
1105. Mr. Bennett.] Do you know that the Council have spent money in erecting wharves for recreation purposes on these islands? Yes.
1106. Apart from your position on the Council, have you, as a resident of the Borough, any objection to this Bill? Yes, I have a very strong objection to any Company obtaining power over the whole water of the lake.
1107. You object to a Company having the sole control of the lake? Yes.
1108. Would you object to the Bill if the powers of the Company were defined, although the interpretation of the word "Harbour" was allowed to remain as it is? If the definition met with my approval. The Company have power to reclaim a certain quantity of land, and if only a reasonable quantity was reclaimed I should not mind.
1109. Do you know that the Company have power to construct a channel from Windang Island to Talawera Point? Yes.
1110. And that their frontage to the lake is about 5 miles? Somewhere about that.
1111. Would you object to the harbour being called Lake Illawarra if the area over which the Company was to have control was defined? That would all depend. The width of the channel might be taken at 4 miles or at 100 yards.
1112. The width of the channel is already limited? The land might be reclaimed across the whole of the lake.
1113. You object to the provision in clause 4 giving the Company power to reclaim land? My objection is that the area that they can reclaim is not defined—you do not know what width may be reclaimed on either side of the channel.
1114. And you object to the Company having control of the whole of the lake? Yes.
1115. Do you object to the Company having power to appoint a harbour-master according to the provisions of clause 6? I think that should be in the hands of the Government, but I do not feel very strongly upon the matter.
1116. Chairman.] You are aware that the appointment has to be approved of by the Government? No, I did not know that the Government is to be consulted, but in that case I should have no objection.
1117. Mr. Bennett.] Have you any other objection to the Bill? There is one matter I might mention. The land on the northern side of the entrance to the lake is private land. I am not certain whether the land on the southern side belongs to the Government or private individuals; but the Bill seems to give the Company power to reclaim the land right up to the water frontage on both sides, and I think that is very hard.
1118. Is any part of the reserve private land? I believe a portion of it is private land—the private property runs right round to where the farms are, inside the lake to the north of the channel.
1119. Mr. McCourt.] Was a portion of the reserve ever revoked and selected? Yes, I believe so. If the land is reclaimed it will take away the whole of these people's frontages.
1120. Your objection to the interpretation clause is that in it the word harbour means the whole of Lake Illawarra? That is what I understand it to mean.
1121. Have you any objection to the Bill because there is no guarantee given that, in the event of its passing, the scheme will be carried out? No, I have no objection to it on that ground.
1122. Mr. Crossman.] I understand from your answer that this place is of no use as a harbour now, and that, therefore, it would not make much difference if the scheme were not carried out? I do not think so.
1123. With regard to these crossings; do you think it is necessary to put gates on any of these crossings except on the Bong Bong and South Coast Roads? There is a third road I do not know much about.
1124. Mr. Cullen told us that there were at present only two roads at which the crossings would require gates. If it was provided that the Company should put up gates when requested to do so would that meet with your approval? Mr. Cullen knows more about the neighbourhood than I do.
1125. You would be satisfied with his opinion? Yes.
1126. With regard to these islands, would you be satisfied if there was an express provision in the Bill leaving the entire control of them in the hands of the Council? Yes.
1127. Supposing that these provisions were put in the Bill? For what purpose?
1128. With the view to leaving this interpretation clause as it is and to define the Company's rights? Why retain that clause as it is? I object to the expression "and the whole of Lake Illawarra altogether."
1129. You think no amendments would remove your objections to the clause? I cannot see what amendments would. If the words remain in the clause the Company would have control of the whole of the lake.
1130. Would you prefer to have the place left as it is or to have a harbour made there over which the Company would have this control? If the Company is to have sole control of the lake I would rather have it left as it is, because I think public rights would be unduly interfered with.
1131. You do not think that the increase of the value of property there would compensate for a certain loss of freedom? I do not think so. I think that under this clause the public would be trespassers on the lake.
1132. Is the lake any use now except for fishing and pleasuring? It is good for very little else.
1133. The proviso that I was going to read reserves all right to the foreshores, and I was going to add that fishing and pleasure boats could have free use of the lake, and that people could have power to erect wharves and to cut channels? Yes.
1134. Could not the interpretation clause then remain as it is? It makes the thing better, but I cannot get rid of my objection to the clause.
1135. Mr. Bennett.] With reference to clause 4, do you object to this clause because it does not show how the Company are going to acquire the land? I cannot say that I understand the matter sufficiently.
1136. Mr. Crossman.] Would you have any objection in the event of the Company purchasing this property at the north of the lake to their reclaiming their own foreshores? I do not believe they should have the right to destroy the best waters of the lake even on their own foreshores. The property they own now is the best water in the whole of the lake, and I think the Bill gives them power, if they choose, to reclaim the whole of it.
1137. Your objection is anybody reclaiming land on the lake? In any great quantity. I think the water should be left there.

1138. Chairman.] Do you think that the carrying out of this project would enhance the value of property in this district? I have no doubt that it would very largely.

1139. In the face of that do you think the public would object to losing a little of the harbour? They do not object to losing a little, it is to losing the whole. We are quite agreeable to the Company having a right to erect wharves on their land and to cut a channel through the lake.

1140. Mr. McCourt.] Clause 1 gives the Company a term of seven years in which to complete this work. Do you think there should be any guarantee that they will carry out the works? I would not have any great objection to that. I do not think they are likely to block any other Company, and if they do not carry the scheme out I do not think anyone else will.

J. Richards,

WEDNESDAY, 20 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. J. P. ABBOTT, | MR. CULLEN.
M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.
E. Bennett, Esq., Counsel, appeared on behalf of the Borough Council of Central Illawarra, Mr. O'Donnell, and others.

James Richard Hill called in, sworn, and examined:—

1141. Mr. Crossman.] Do you represent the Wentworth Estate? Yes.

1142. With full authority to act for Mr. Wentworth? Yes.

1143. Does Mr. Wentworth own any land near Lake Illawarra? The Wentworth Trust does, and I act for the Trust.

1144. Where is the land situated? It is immediately north of the lake. I believe the area is about 2,200 acres.

1145. Is Mr. O'Donnell one of your tenants? Yes.

1146. Do you represent any property south of the lake? No. I see some land marked "W. C. Wentworth" on the map, but I do not know whether or not that has been alienated in years gone by.

1147. Have you considered the proposal of this Company to establish a harbour at Lake Illawarra? Yes, to a certain extent.

1148. Have you formed any opinion as to its desirability? I think it would be a very good thing for all the people surrounding the lake if their water rights were not interfered with.

1149. Do you mean the present foreshore rights of individual owners? Yes. I think that the proposed Trust should not claim the right to deposit silt or anything of that kind on the water rights of the present owners, and thereby injure or destroy them.

1150. Then, subject to the rights of present owners of foreshore rights, you consider the proposal would be a desirable one? Yes; if it is not proposed in any way to take away the water frontages, I think it would be a great benefit.

1151. Do you consider that the Company would have a fair right to charge for the use of this harbour? Undoubtedly, if the Company does anything to the harbour.

1152. If the Company makes the lake into a harbour fit for big ships? Yes; if the people there use the harbour they ought to be willing to pay for the privilege. I conclude the Company is only asking for the right to use the harbour for a certain space of time.

1153. It is proposed that they should have the harbour in perpetuity, the Government having the right of resumption? That is a matter concerning which the Government should be the best judges. So far as the landowners are concerned if the Company carry out their scheme of opening out a channel and dredging, so as to make the lake available for shipping, it would be a very important benefit to everyone having land in the neighbourhood, and in common reason they ought to bear a certain amount of responsibility for the use of the harbour by way of tonnage dues.

1154. Mr. Bennett.] You say that you have no objection whatever to this proposal so long as the foreshore rights are preserved. If you look at the interpretation clause you will see that "Harbour" means and includes the port and harbour aforesaid to be constructed under this Act, and the entrance thereto, and the whole of Lake Illawarra? I understood from those concerned that a clause would be inserted preserving the rights of all the owners. When I first spoke to them on the subject they told me that such a clause had been put in since the Bill was first drawn.

1155. Mr. Crossman.] With regard to this provision which you speak of for the protection of the owners of land, are you satisfied if such a provision will be put in, in such form as this Committee may approve of? Certainly. I conclude that the Committee will protect the rights of the owners so far as they ought to be protected.

1156. This is one of the provisions to be added to the Bill: "Provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall be held to interfere with the existing rights of owners of the foreshores of the lake?" I was told that there was a right to deposit silt and dredgings on various portions of the lake. Of course that would be a lasting damage to the owners of the land if it were put opposite their property.

1157. Do you think the provision I have just read will meet the case? It would require a solicitor to offer an opinion as to whether that would provide all that was necessary. It is the principle only that I ask for that the rights of those who have water frontages shall not be destroyed.

1158. The following provisions are also intended to be inserted: "Nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with any right which any owner of any part of the foreshores of the said lake may have to erect a wharf or wharves from his land unto the waters of the lake, and to recover rates for the use thereof, and to excavate channels from the said wharf or wharves: Provided that such works shall be carried out in such a manner as not to be prejudicial to any work executed or in the course of execution by the Company." There is also another proposed provision that fishing-boats and pleasure-boats should have the free use of the lake without charge. Do you think those provisions will be satisfactory? I think the Committee will be the best judges of what is fair to the owners of land.

Mr.
J. R. Hill,
29 May, 1889.

FRIDAY,

FRIDAY, 31 MAY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. CULLEN, | MR. FRANK SMITH,
MR. McCOURT.

M. CHAPMAN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

E. H. Crossman, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill. Edward Bennett, Esq., Counsel, appeared on behalf of the Borough Council of Central Illawarra, Mr. F. O'Donnell, and others.

James Stewart called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. J. Stewart.
31 May, 1889.
1159. Chairman.] You reside at Berry? Yes.
1160. You have read the Bill? Yes.
1161. And you thoroughly understand it? I think so.
1162. Are there any portions of it to which you as a landowner on the shores of the lake object? Clause 4 says:—"It shall be lawful for the Company to reclaim land on the foreshores of the said freehold land or of Windang Island, or of any land which may become the property of the Company under or by virtue of any of the powers and provisions in this Act contained, and also on either side or both sides of the said channel, between the points in Schedule A hereto mentioned, and also at and adjacent, &c." I was under the impression that the training-walls mentioned in Schedule A would go as far back as our property, and destroy our frontage, where I understand there is 12 or 14 feet of water, but I think I have heard from you, Sir, that that has been provided for; I should like to know in what position I would be in the event of its being necessary to construct training-walls after the works had been begun.
1163. An amendment to conserve to the owners of the foreshores any rights which they may now possess has been placed before the Committee for their consideration, and, by another amendment which has been placed before us, property owners on the lake will be able to construct channels to connect with the Company's channel, providing of course that they pay a fair charge to the Company for the expense to which they have been put? Harbour dues and so on, I suppose, but nothing else.
1164. Through Chairman.] At the present time you have deep water-right up to where the channel will come? I think so.
1165. And the construction of a channel might possibly interfere with your deep water? I believe it would, more especially if the Company went in for filling up the back part with silt, as is mentioned here.
1166. Do you wish your deep water rights to be interfered with by the construction of that channel? No; I would object to it strongly. I object to any right that I have there being taken away.
1167. Clause 4 also says that "such land when reclaimed shall vest in the Company in fee-simple by virtue of this Act, and without the necessity of any Crown grant or conveyance." Do you object to land being reclaimed by the Company in front of your land? Undoubtedly.
1168. Mr. Crossman.] I understand that what you really object to is an interference with your present rights. You heard the amendment read by the Chairman, which provides that nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with any existing rights, and if that amendment were put in the Bill would it remove your objections? If you do away with this right to construct wharves; if you construct wharves opposite my property my objection will still continue.
1169. Have you really got any deep water frontage to your land? Yes.
1170. What is the depth? I can only speak from what I have heard.
1171. In point of fact you have no personal knowledge that there is deep water there? I have been told that there is.
1172. Then your evidence as to the depth of the water is merely hearsay? Well I never was in the water to know the depth, but I am perfectly certain that there is deep water there.
1173. Chairman.] Could you form any position on your land to see whether the water is deep or shallow? I should consider it deep water.
1174. If there were any shallows in front of your land could you see them? Higher up there are shallows which you can see.
1175. There are no shallows in front of your land? Not at this point.
1176. Mr. Crossman.] If the channel was simply cut through the mud and no walls were built opposite to your land, and the silt and mud dredged from the channel were carried out of the harbour altogether or deposited in the Company's property, would there be any interference with your right? I do not think there would.
1177. Chairman.] Have you any other objection? I should like to know whether the Company has abandoned this right to deposit silt anywhere in the lake.
1178. Except on their own land or behind the training walls? I understand that this harbour is to include the whole of Lake Illawarra.
1179. Mr. Crossman.] That only means that the Company will only have control over the lake as far as the navigation is concerned, and if that were expressly provided in the Bill would it meet with your objection? I think the Company should be entitled to the free navigation of the channel, but I do not think any right which property-owners have now should be taken away from them.
1180. Chairman.] What is the next clause you object to? I think if this land is likely to be interfered with by the construction of training walls, that it should be necessary for the Company to purchase it.
1181. Mr. Crossman.] Mr. Reddall, who owns the land opposite to yours, has suggested an amendment, providing that in the event of these foreshores being interfered with the Company will have to purchase his land at a price to be fixed by arbitration? I think that will meet with my objection.
1182. Chairman.] Do you not object to the term for which the Bill will be granted? Yes; the Company ask to have the control of the lake for all time apparently.
1183. Chairman.] The Government have the power to resume the works at any time? In that case my objection vanishes.
1184. Chairman.] Do you not object to the Company having control of the entire lake? I understand that limitations will be set to their power which will conserve the rights of the public generally.
1185. Mr. Bennett.] Will the construction of the railway affect your property? No.
1186. Mr. Crossman.] Have you any idea of how many miles frontage you have to the lake? No.
1187. Do you own a mile? More than that I think; I believe about 3 miles. 1188.

1188. What is the area of your land? 268 acres, I think.

1189. Fronting the lake? Yes.

1190. Mr. McCourt.] Have you read clause six. Do you think that it would be to the interests of the public if the harbour-master at this lake were a Government officer instead of one appointed by the Company? I think it would be better if he were a Government officer.

1191. And paid by the Government? Yes; I think it would be better in the interests of the public. The powers of the Company are very great, and I think it would be better if the Government were represented there.

1192. You do not think the Company should have a right to control traffic at any wharf except on their own land? No; I think they should have the right to collect dues.

Mr.
J. Stewart.

APPENDIX.

A 1.

[To Evidence of B. H. Crossman, Esq.]

New South Wales, }
to wit.

In the matter of the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited), and in the matter of the Companies' Act.

I CERTIFY that the Company styled "The Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited)" is incorporated, and that the said Company is a Limited Company.

Dated at Sydney, this twenty-ninth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

E. G. WARD,
Registrar-General,
Acting as Registrar of Joint Stock Companies.

A 2.

[To Evidence of B. H. Crossman, Esq.]

MEMORANDUM and Articles of Association of the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited).

1. The name of the Company is the "Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited)."
2. The registered office of the Company will be situate in Sydney.
3. The objects for which the Company is established are:—
 - (a) To purchase, lease, or otherwise acquire, an estate known as Lakelands, situated at Dapto, Illawarra, in the county of Camden and parish of Calderwood, in the Colony of New South Wales, and containing an area of 2,920 acres or thereabouts; also a coal property known as the Ocean Steam Coal Colliery, comprising 265 acres or thereabouts of freehold land, and also two several blocks of coal land, containing 640 acres each, held under mining permits numbered 398 and 443 respectively, and issued in the names of W. R. Styles and Robert Matteson Vaughn respectively.
 - (b) To construct, or cause to be constructed, or obtain the construction of, a harbour for shipping or other purposes at Lake Illawarra.
 - (c) To construct, execute, carry out, equip, improve, work, develop, administer, manage, or control in the District of Illawarra or elsewhere, in the Colony of New South Wales, public works and conveniences of all kinds, which expression in this Memorandum includes, but not by way of limitation, railways, tramways, docks, harbours, piers, wharves, canals, reservoirs, embankments, irrigations, forries, reclamation, improvement, sewerage, drainage, sanitary, water, gas, electric light, telephonic, telegraphic, and power supply works, and hotels, warehouses, markets, and public buildings, and all other works or conveniences of public utility, and to apply for and obtain any concession or concessions by Act of Parliament or otherwise in connection with the above, or in connection with any other part of the Company's business or undertakings.
 - (d) To apply for, purchase or otherwise acquire, any contracts, decrees, concessions, and Acts of Parliament for, or in relation to, the construction, execution, carrying out, equipment, improvement, management, administration, or control of public works and conveniences, and to undertake, execute, carry out, dispose of, or otherwise turn to account the same.
 - (e) To carry on the business of miners, metallurgists, colliery proprietors, coke manufacturers, smelters, ironfounders, builders, and contractors, engineers, farmers, graziers, shipowners, shipbuilders, merchants, importers, exporters, ferryboat proprietors, insurers, bankers, quarry proprietors, and to buy, sell, and deal in property of all kinds, and to carry on any other business, manufacturing or otherwise, which the Company may think calculated directly or indirectly to advance its interests.
 - (f) To negotiate loans, to lend money, securities, and other property, to discount bills and securities, to become sureties and guarantors for any purposes, and generally to carry on business as capitalists, financiers, bankers, and merchants, and any other businesses.
 - (g) To construct and establish at Lake Illawarra or elsewhere a dock or docks with patent and other slips, workshops, buildings, machinery, warehouses, wharves, and other conveniences.
 - (h) To purchase, take on lease, exchange, hire, or otherwise acquire any real or personal property, and any patent or other rights and privileges necessary or convenient for the purposes of the Company.
 - (i) To search for, get, raise, refine, repair, manipulate, and make merchantable, sell, and deal in iron, coal, ironstone, brick, earth bricks, and other metals, minerals, and substances, and to manufacture and sell patent fuel, and carry on any metallurgical works which may seem conducive to the Company's objects.
 - (j) To carry on any other businesses which may seem to the Company capable of being conveniently carried on in connection with the above, or calculated directly or indirectly to enhance the value of, or render profitable any of the Company's property or rights.
 - (k) To acquire and undertake the whole or any part of the business, property, and liabilities of any person or company carrying on any business which this Company is authorized to carry on, or possessed of property suitable for the purpose of this Company.
 - (l) To enter into partnership or into any arrangement for sharing profits, union of interests, co-operation, joint adventure, reciprocal concession, or otherwise, with any person or Company carrying on, or engaged in, or about to carry on or engage in any business or transaction capable of being conducted so as to directly or indirectly benefit this Company, and to lend money, guarantee the contracts of, or otherwise assist any such person or Company, and to take or otherwise acquire shares and securities of any such Company, and to sell, hold, reissue, with or without guarantee, or otherwise deal with the same.
 - (m) To sell the undertaking of the Company or any part thereof for such consideration as the Company may think fit, and in particular for shares, debentures, or securities of any other Company having objects altogether or in part similar to those of this Company.

- (n) To invest and deal with the moneys of the Company not immediately required upon such securities and in such manner as may from time to time be determined.
- (o) To raise money in such other manner as the Company shall think fit, and in particular by the issue of debentures or debenture stock perpetual or otherwise charged upon all or any of the Company's property both present and future, including capital.
- (p) To remunerate any person or Company for services rendered in placing or assisting to place any of the shares in the Company's capital or any debentures or other securities of the Company.
- (q) To sell, improve, manage, develop, lease, mortgage, dispose of, turn to account, or otherwise deal with all or any of the property of the Company.
- (r) To purchase or otherwise acquire any patents, brevets, d'invention licences, concessions, and the like, conferring any exclusive or non-exclusive or limited right to use any invention which may seem capable of being used for any of the purposes of the Company, or the acquisition of which may seem calculated directly or indirectly to benefit this Company, and to use, exercise, develop, or grant licenses in respect of, or otherwise turn to account the property and rights so acquired.
- (s) To procure the Company to be registered or recognized in the United Kingdom or in any other foreign country or place.
- (t) To make, accept, endorse, and execute notes, bills of exchange, and other negotiable instruments.
- (u) To amalgamate with any other Company having objects altogether or in part similar to those of this Company.
- (v) To distribute any of the property of the Company among the members in specie.
- (w) If thought fit, to obtain any Act of Parliament dissolving the Company and reincorporating its members as a new Company for any of the objects specified in this Memorandum, or for effecting any other modification or extension in the Company's constitution.
- (x) To do all or any of the above things in any part of the world, and as principals, agents, contractors, trustees, or otherwise, and by or through trustees, agents, or otherwise, and either alone or in conjunction with others.
- (y) To do all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects.
- And it is hereby declared that the word Company in this clause, except where used in reference to this Company, shall be deemed to include any partnership or other body of persons, whether corporated or incorporated, and whether domiciled in New South Wales or elsewhere; and so that the objects specified in each paragraph of this clause shall, except where otherwise expressed in such paragraph, be in nowise limited by reference to any other paragraph.

4. The liability of the members is limited.

5. The capital of the Company is £1,600,000, divided into 16,000 shares of one hundred pounds each.

We, the several persons whose names and addresses are subscribed, are desirous of being formed into a Company in pursuance of this Memorandum of Association, and we respectively agree to take the number of shares in the capital of the Company set opposite to our respective names.

16 November, 1888.

The Secretary, Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited), Sydney,—
Sir,

I have the honor, by direction of this Council, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd instant, and, in reply, to inform you that this Council has much pleasure in complying with your request.

The following resolution was passed:—Moved by Alderman Armstrong, seconded by Alderman Raison—"That the request of the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited) be granted." Carried 14th November, 1888.

I have, &c.,
T. D. STOY,
Council Clerk.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY,
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ILLAWARRA HARBOUR AND LAND CORPORATION BILL.

(PETITION FROM MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE COUNCIL OF CENTRAL ILLAWARRA, PRAYING TO BE HEARD BY COUNSEL BEFORE SELECT COMMITTEE SITTING ON.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 21 May, 1889.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Mayor and Aldermen of the Borough Council of Central Illawarra, in the said Colony,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

1. That a Bill to enable the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited) to form and maintain a free passage for vessels between the South Pacific Ocean and the waters of Lake Illawarra, in the County of Camden, and to construct and maintain a harbour within the waters of the said Lake, and of Windang Bay, in the said County of Camden, and wharfage and shipping accommodation in connection therewith, and to construct and maintain a line or lines of railway to connect with the said harbour, all or any coal-bearing lands situate between the South Coast Colliery on the north, and the Macquarie River on the south, and to levy and recover rates, tolls, and dues for the use of the said entrance, harbour, and accommodation, and of the said railways, and for other purposes, has been introduced into your honorable House during the present session, and has been referred to a Select Committee for consideration and report.

2. That the said Bill proposes to give the said Company power to reclaim land on the foreshores of the whole of Lake Illawarra, and also on either or both sides of the channel mentioned in section 2 of the said Bill, and also to deposit dredgings and materials in such positions as may be suitable, without interfering with the navigation of the Lake, and also to make and construct the railways specified in Schedule E to the said Bill.

3. That the acquisition of such powers will seriously and injuriously affect the interests of the ratepayers of the Borough of Central Illawarra and of the owners of property on the shores of the said Lake, and the rights of the public to use the said Lake for pleasure and other purposes, and to use the roads within the said Borough crossed by the said railways will be interfered with unless various modifications, alterations, and additions are made in the said Bill.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that leave be given to your Petitioners to appear, by counsel or attorney before the said Select Committee now sitting on the said Bill, for the purpose of protecting the interests of the ratepayers of the Borough of Central Illawarra, and with permission to call such witnesses as may be desirable, and adduce such evidence as they may be advised concerning the said Bill in the interests of the ratepayers of the said Borough, and to examine and cross-examine such witnesses as may give evidence before the said Committee, in accordance with the rules of your honorable House.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Dated this twentieth day of May, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

C. J. CULLEN,
Mayor of Central Illawarra.
WILLIAM OSBORNE,
Council Clerk.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ILLAWARRA HARBOUR AND LAND CORPORATION BILL.

(PETITION FROM FRANCIS O'DONNELL AND OTHERS PRAYING TO BE HEARD BY COUNSEL BEFORE SELECT COMMITTEE SITTING ON.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 21 May, 1889.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Francis O'Donnell, of Five Islands near Wollongong, in the said Colony, farmer; David James, of the same place, farmer, and John Richards, of Unanderra near Wollongong, aforesaid, farmer,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

1. That a Bill to enable the Illawarra Harbour and Land Corporation (Limited), to form and maintain a free passage for vessels between the South Pacific Ocean and the waters of Lake Illawarra, in the County of Camden; and to construct and maintain a harbour within the waters of the said Lake, and of Windaug Bay in the said County of Camden, and wharfage and shipping accommodation in connection therewith, and to construct and maintain a line or lines of railway to connect with the said harbour, all or any coal-bearing lands, situate between the South Coast Colliery on the north, and the Macquarie River on the south, and to levy and recover rates, tolls, and dues, for the use of the said entrance, harbour, and accommodation, and of the said railways and for other purposes, has been introduced into your honorable House during the present session, and has been referred to a Select Committee for consideration and report.

2. That your Petitioners, Francis O'Donnell and David James, are respectively interested in certain freehold land on the shores of Lake Illawarra, in the County of Camden and Colony aforesaid, and that your Petitioner, John Richards, is also interested in certain freehold lands within the Borough of Central Illawarra. That the said Bill proposes to give the said Company power to reclaim land on the foreshores of the whole of Lake Illawarra, and also on either or both sides of the channel mentioned in section 2 of the said Bill, and also to deposit dredgings and materials in such positions as may be suitable without interfering with the navigation of the Lake.

3. That the acquisition of such powers will seriously and injuriously affect the interests of the owners of property on the shores of the said Lake; and the rights of the public to use the said Lake and the islands therein for pleasure and other purposes will be interfered with unless various modifications, alterations, and additions are made in the said Bill.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that leave be given to your Petitioners to appear, by counsel or attorney, before the Select Committee now sitting on the said Bill, for the purpose of protecting their interests, and, with permission, to call such witnesses as may be desirable, and adduce such evidence as they may be advised concerning the said Bill in the interests of your Petitioners, and to examine and cross-examine such witnesses as may give evidence before the said Committee, in accordance with the rules of your honorable House.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Dated this twentieth day of May, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

ILLAWARRA HARBOUR AND LAND CORPORATION BILL.
(PETITION FROM CERTAIN RESIDENTS OF ILLAWARRA IN FAVOR OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 6 August, 1889.

To the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.
The Petition of the undersigned relative to the district of Illawarra,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That your Petitioners, being aware that a Company has been formed, having as its object the opening of Lake Illawarra, and making a safe and commodious harbour thereof, and that the carrying out of the proposed works will not only benefit the landowners round the lake, but the entire district of Illawarra, and afford employment to a large number of men, and will also enable the extensive coal-mines now lying idle to be worked.

Your Petitioners, therefore, respectfully pray that your Honorable House will take into favourable consideration our Petition, and grant the concession asked for in the Bill to which as reported on by the Select Committee of your Honorable House, the consent and approval of the Municipal Councils of Central Illawarra and Shell Harbour have been formally granted, and which Bill is now before your Honorable House.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

KATOOMBA LIGHTING BILL.

FRIDAY, 2 AUGUST, 1889.

Present:—

MR. BARBOUR, | MR. HURLEY,
MR. O'SULLIVAN.

JOHN HURLEY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

W. Russell, Esq., solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

John Britty North called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] You are a large property-holder in Katoomba, are you not? Yes.
2. You are aware that a Bill has been introduced into Parliament to give Messrs. Neave and Company permission to supply gas to the town of Katoomba? I am.
3. Have you read the Bill which has been submitted to Parliament? I have read the details of it, but not the whole wording.
4. Have you seen and read the petition setting forth the necessity for the Bill? Yes.
5. Do you admit that it would be an advantage and benefit to the town of Katoomba if Messrs. Neave and Company constructed such works as are set forth in the Bill? It would be an enormous benefit.
6. Have you any objection against the Bill? None whatever. I think the gas will be a great convenience to us if the Bill is passed.
7. You are a member of the Progress Committee at Katoomba? I am.
8. Have you heard the question raised there as to the supply of gas to the town by Messrs. Neave and Company? I have.
9. Will you kindly state their objections? There are no objections now; but at one time a dispute occurred as to the question of cost, as to whether it should be 8s. or 10s. a thousand.
10. Some correspondence passed between the secretary of the Progress Committee and Messrs. Neave and Company in regard to the charges that were to be made? That is so.
11. Was a price determined upon between the members of the Committee, as representatives of the district, and Messrs. Neave and Company? Originally the principal people of the town were willing to pay 10s.; but Messrs. Neave and Company, in competition with some other parties, reduced the offer to 8s.
12. At all events you understand that matters have been amicably arranged? I have been told so. I was not at the last Committee meeting.
13. As between the public and Neave and Company? Yes.
14. As a large property-holder there, and one interested in the place as much as anybody, would you like to say anything against the passing of the measure? No; I am quite in favour of it.
15. Would you like to supplement anything you have said? Nothing, except this, that I have gone carefully into the matter to see whether it would pay both the public and Neave and Company, and I find that it would, because the convenience to the public would be very great, and the enterprise is likely to be successful.
16. It will be a mutual advantage? A mutual advantage.

Mr.
J. B. North.
2 Aug., 1889.

17. Mr. O'Sullivan.] Do you know of any objections to the Bill? None whatever. The principal landholders, who at present own roads which they are waiting for a municipality to be formed before they throw upon, have agreed to give the right to Neave and Company to open up portions of the roads. We shall not charge them anything, because we are quite willing to grant the concession in the public interest.

18. Mr. Barbour.] You say that you have made calculations, and that you find that this scheme will pay both the public and the promoters? Yes.

19. At what rate? We made our calculations at 10s., but we mean to have it at 8s. now. We signed documents to agree to take the gas at 10s.

20. Is it your opinion that the rate should be 8s.? 8s. on the present price of coal, but if the price rises, or strikes occur, or a less quantity of gas is required, I think 10s. would be a fair price.

21. Do you know any one in Katoomba who objects to the passing of this Bill? I do not think anyone does.

22. Everyone is favourable to the scheme? They are all favourable to it, and nearly all signed a document promising to take it. I think forty people signed such a document.

23. Mr. O'Sullivan.] You have no Municipal Council at Katoomba? We have applied to the Government to establish a Municipal Council, and we are expecting every day to have it gazetted.

24. In the meantime there is a Progress Committee there? Yes.

25. Have they been duly elected? Yes; and I am elected chairman.

26. They may be looked upon as a representative body? Yes; publicly elected by ballot.

27. Chairman.] Have you entered into any stipulations with the promoters of the Bill in regard to the supply of shale and coal? I have not. I have given them our usual prices, the quotations; but I have entered into no stipulations of any kind whatever. They simply asked us our prices, and we told them the common rate.

28. Mr. Russell.] The town at present is not lighted with gas or electricity? No. During the summer season for about eight or nine months of the year the place is thronged with visitors from Sydney and Melbourne, and it is very inconvenient to walk about in the dark. In fact it is dangerous, because the falls of the ground are sudden. It is necessary to have the place lighted for the comfort and convenience of the public, and especially of visitors who do not know the place.

29. Chairman.] Katoomba is a growing township; in fact the most progressive township upon the mountains? During the last nine years it has grown from nothing at all to a population of 2,000.

Edward Neave called in, sworn, and examined:—

Mr.
E. Neave.
2 Aug., 1889.

30. Chairman.] You represent the firm of Edward Neave and John Ewan Palmer? Yes.

31. You have petitioned Parliament for the right to construct certain works at Katoomba? Yes.

32. And you have submitted a Bill to Parliament setting forth certain reasons for the construction of those works? Yes.

33. You have entered into arrangements with the residents of Katoomba with regard to the supply of gas, and the rates to be charged? Yes; the arrangements have been completed.

34. Are they satisfactory to the general public there as well as to yourselves? I went up to Katoomba and met the Progress Committee, and arranged the question of price according to the consumption.

35. Mr. Russell.] The maximum price to which you have agreed with the Progress Committee is 10s.? Yes; there will be no necessity to alter the maximum price. If the consumption does not come up to 10,000 feet we are to receive 10s. a thousand.

36. After the passing of this measure how long will it be before you will be prepared to commence the work? We have all the necessary plant ready now.

37. There will be no delay? No delay at all.

38. Mr. Barbour.] About how long will it be? Three weeks or a month; in fact I do not see any difficulty in commencing within fourteen days.

39. How long after you commenced would you be in a position to supply gas to the town? I should not like to say less than six months.

40. Are you aware that the Government have conceded to the Company the right to construct mains and carry out certain works in connection with the gas supply? I am aware of that.

41. I think you said that the maximum rate upon which you agreed with the Progress Committee was 10s. a thousand? Yes.

42. That is in the event of the consumption not going up to 10,000 feet;—do you mean 10,000 feet a day? Yes.

43. And if it goes beyond 10,000 cubic feet a day what is to be the rate you will charge? 8s. If it goes beyond that, to 15,000 feet, we shall lower the price to 7s. 6d.; and if 20,000 feet a day are consumed we shall supply the gas at 7s.

44. Chairman.] Are you prepared to enter into the agreement set forth in this letter [Appendix A]? We have already acknowledged that letter, agreeing to the proposal, and stating that our solicitor was drawing up the form of agreement.

45. Mr. Barbour.] That will be done? Yes.

46. Within what time;—within a week? Yes.

47. Chairman.] Have you come to an agreement with the Committee that in the event of a Municipality being formed they shall have power to purchase your plant? Yes; that provision is contained in the Bill.

KATOOMBA LIGHTING BILL.

APPENDIX.

[To Evidence of Edward Neave.]

Sir,

A.

Progress Committee, Katoomba, 29 July, 1889.

In further considering the maximum price of gas as quoted in your Bill, I am requested to state this Committee are willing the 10s. maximum be allowed to remain in the Bill, provided that an agreement between this Committee and your firm be drawn up embodying the mode on which the price of the gas shall be regulated, namely: If the consumption be not less than 10,000 feet per day the price shall not exceed 8s. per 1,000 feet. Should the consumption, however, be less than that quantity, the proprietors shall have the option, by giving three months' notice, of raising the price to 10s. per 1,000 feet after the first year. In the event of the consumption exceeding 15,000 feet per day, then the price shall be lowered to 7s. 6d. per 1,000 feet; and if the same exceeds 20,000 feet per day, the price shall not exceed 7s. per 1,000 feet. We shall be glad if you will forward a properly drawn-up agreement containing the above, also stating the quality of the gas to be supplied, and the terms on which the works may be purchased by the Municipal Council, as previously referred to. As soon as the agreement is satisfactorily completed we will advise Mr. Hurley, M.P., to proceed with the passing of the Bill.

Yours truly,

CHAS. JAMES,

Secretary.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

MUNICIPALITIES OF RYDE AND HUNTER'S HILL BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 3 JULY, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. FRANK FARNELL, | Mr. DALE,
Mr. RITCHIE.

FRANK FARNELL, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Moss, for Mr. Charles Bull, Solicitor, appeared for the promoters of the Bill.

Mr. George Lovell called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] You hold the position of Mayor of Ryde? Yes.
2. Are you seeking to pass a Bill through Parliament whereby you will be enabled to make an exchange of certain portions of land in the Municipal Districts of Ryde and Hunter's Hill? Yes.
3. Will it be a very great convenience to each Council in the collection of rates in the assessment of the two boroughs if this exchange and extension are granted? Yes.
4. There has been no objection raised by anyone to this proposed Bill? Not that I am aware of;—none has come before the Ryde Council.
5. As far as you know, are the ratepayers agreeable to the exchange? Yes.
6. Do you produce a plan of the proposed exchange? Yes.
7. Is the portion that the Ryde Municipality is giving to Hunter's Hill about 274 acres in area? I cannot say if that is the exact measurement, but I think that is about it.
8. Will this exchange make your municipality more compact, and will it simplify the boundaries? Yes.
9. Mr. Ritchie.] Have you had any conference with the Municipal Council of Hunter's Hill? Yes. A resolution was passed by the Council, and I was appointed, with Mr. Pidding, Mr. Best, and another alderman, to meet four members of the Hunter's Hill Council. We met at Ryde, and came to an agreement that we would make an exchange, and the result is the Bill now before the Committee.
10. Is this being done entirely with the concurrence of the Hunter's Hill Municipality? Yes.
11. Do you think that this will be an equal exchange? I told the Mayor of Hunter's Hill the other day that I considered, after looking over the ground, that they were getting the best of us. At the same time the Ryde Council is perfectly satisfied to make the exchange.
12. Have you come to any arrangement with regard to the expenditure which you have made in the land you are about to give and the expenditure which the Hunter's Hill Municipality has made on its portion? No more than we have come to an agreement with regard to the back rates which may be owing to each Council.
13. Have you spent a considerable sum on the land you are giving? No.
14. Has the Hunter's Hill Municipality expended much on their land? No.

Mr. Alfred Weeks called in, sworn, and examined:—

15. Chairman.] Are you the Mayor of Hunter's Hill Municipality? Yes.
16. Are you seeking to pass through Parliament a Bill to enable the municipal district of Hunter's Hill to exchange and extend certain portions of that municipal district? Yes.
17. Have any objections been raised to your proposal? No.
18. Are the aldermen unanimously of opinion that it would be desirable, and that it would be a benefit to the borough to have the exchange made? Yes.
19. Has any objection been raised by any one of the ratepayers? No.
20. Has there been an amicable arrangement made between the aldermen and mayors of Hunter's Hill and Ryde that this exchange should be brought about? Yes.
21. With regard to the rates which may be in arrear in the portions proposed to be exchanged, I suppose you have made arrangements with the Ryde Council so that those back rates may be paid to each Council? Yes; I think the Bill provides for that. At any rate we shall make that arrangement.
22. Will this proposed exchange and extension be the means of simplifying the boundaries of the two municipalities? Certainly.

G. Lovell.

NEW SOUTH WALES TRAMWAY COMPANY'S BILL.
(PETITION FROM THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF SYDNEY, PRAYING THE HOUSE NOT TO SANCTION THE PASSING OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 25 April, 1889.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Municipal Council of Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHOWNETH:—

1. That your Petitioners notice by advertisements in the New South Wales Government Gazette of the 29th day of March, 1889, and other dates, that application is intended to be made to the Parliament of New South Wales by the New South Wales Tramway Company (Limited) to construct Tramways in the City of Sydney and along certain streets thereof.

2. That all public ways and streets in the City of Sydney are vested in your Petitioners, who are charged with the care, construction, and management thereof, and your Petitioners have borrowed large sums of money for the purpose of making and wood-blocking some of the said streets, for the repayment of which money and interest the said Municipal Council of Sydney, on behalf of the ratepayers, are responsible, and have expended large sums of money on the said streets, and that the Councils of the Suburban Boroughs and Municipalities have the care, construction, and management of the roads and streets within their respective boundaries, and have spent large sums of money thereon.

3. That your Petitioners view with alarm any attempt on the part of private persons or a Company to obtain Legislative sanction for the right to construct and maintain tramways or lines through the streets of the City of Sydney and to run tramcars thereon.

4. That your Petitioners respectfully submit that the Municipal Council of Sydney (as regards the City of Sydney) and the Suburban Councils (as regards their respective Boroughs) are the proper authorities to have the construction, running, and management of any tramway system passing through the roads and streets of the City of Sydney and the suburbs.

Your Petitioners therefore respectfully pray that your Honorable House will not sanction the passing of any Act granting to any Company or persons the right to lay down any tramways and run trams in and through the said City of Sydney and adjoining Boroughs, and that any Act giving such powers may be an Act empowering the Municipal Council of Sydney (in conjunction with the Councils of the Suburban Boroughs) to lay down or permit to be laid down such system of tramways for the said City and Suburbs as they may think most suitable and advantageous.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

The Corporate Seal of the Municipal Council of Sydney was affixed hereto this 24th day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Oakey Park Coal-Mining Company's Railway Bill.

(PETITION FROM JAMES COLLINS, AGAINST THE PASSING OF THE.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 26 June, 1889.

To the Honorable Speaker and Honorable Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of James Collins, of 110, Brougham-street, Glebe,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

That a Bill, called the Oakey Park Coal-mining Company's Railway Bill, is being considered by your Honorable House.

The objects of the said Bill are to enable the Oakey Park Coal-mining Company to resume and construct their railway on certain lands of which I am an owner.

My interest will be seriously affected by the passing of the Bill, inasmuch as the coal under my land can never be worked, and my mine, which should provide remunerative employment for a large number of miners, must of necessity remain undeveloped.

The land proposed to be taken from me is required by me for the construction of my own railway connecting my coal lands with the Government Railway.

Although the Bill in question has been reported on by a Select Committee of the Legislative Council, I had no knowledge of its proceedings, nor was I afforded any opportunity of giving evidence against the Bill.

The land is so situated that its resumption will render the remaining portion useless for mining purposes, and I can have no railway communication. I am advised that no plans or particulars of my land were produced before the Select Committee referred to, and if I am afforded an opportunity I will produce plans and expert evidence to show most conclusively that only one railway can be constructed on the land.

Therefore I pray that the Bill may be referred to a Select Committee of your Honorable House, and that I may be cited to attend in person, or by Counsel, to give evidence and to appear as the opponent of the said Bill.

Then, as in duty bound, your humble Petitioner will ever pray.

JAMES COLLINS.

 REDHEAD COAL-MINE RAILWAY ACT AMENDING BILL.

 REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, for whose consideration and report was referred, on 3rd July, 1889, the "Redhead Coal-mine Railway Act Amending Bill,"—beg to report to your Honorable House:—

That they have examined the witness named in the margin * (whose *H. W. Kerle.
C.E. evidence will be found appended hereto); and the Preamble having been satisfactorily proved to your Committee, they proceeded to consider the several clauses and schedules of the Bill in which it was deemed necessary to make certain amendments.

Your Committee now beg to lay before your Honorable House the Bill as amended by them.

JOHN HURLEY,
Chairman.

No. 2 Committee Room,
Sydney, 17th July, 1889.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE.

TUESDAY, 9 JULY, 1889.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Hurley,		Mr. Kidd,
Mr. O'Sullivan,		Mr. J. P. Abbott,
	Mr. Barbour.

Mr. Hurley called to the Chair.

Entries from Votes and Proceedings appointing the Committee, and substituting the name of Mr. Hurley for that of Mr. Burns, read by the Clerk.

Printed copies of the Bill referred, together with original Petition to introduce the same, before the Committee.

Present—Ayrault Burns, Esq. (Solicitor for the Bill.)

The Chairman read a letter from Messrs. Norton & Co., Solicitors, requesting, on behalf of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company (Limited), that the Committee would not proceed with the consideration of the Bill until they had presented a Petition to the House praying for leave to be represented by Counsel or Attorney before the Committee.

Committee deliberated, and decided to comply with the request.

[Adjourned till to-morrow at Two o'clock.]

WEDNESDAY, 10 JULY, 1889.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Barbour,		Mr. W. E. Abbott,
Mr. Waddell,		Mr. Hayes,
	Mr. Kidd.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mr. Barbour called to the Chair pro tem.

Entry from Votes and Proceedings, granting leave to the Scottish-Australian Mining Company (Limited) to be represented by Counsel before the Committee, read by the Clerk.

Present:—Ayrault Burns, Esquire (Solicitor for the Bill), G. C. Westgarth, Esquire (Solicitor for the Scottish-Australian Mining Company, Limited).

Harry Wood Kerle (Civil Engineer) called in, sworn, and examined by Mr. Burns.

Cross-examined by Mr. Westgarth.

Witness produced plans of the proposed railway.

Witness withdrew.

[Adjourned till Wednesday next, at half-past One o'clock.]

WEDNESDAY, 17 JULY, 1889.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Barbour,		Mr. W. E. Abbott,
	Mr. Hayes.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mr. Barbour called to the Chair pro tem.

Committee deliberated.

[Adjourned till Three o'clock this day.]

The Committee reassembled at the hour named,—

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Barbour in the Chair, pro tem .
Mr. W. E. Abbott,	Mr. Hayes.

Present:—Ayrault Burns, Esq. (Solicitor for the Bill); G. C. Westgarth, Esq. (Solicitor for the Scottish-Australian Mining Company, Limited).

Mr. Westgarth informed the Committee that the promoters had agreed to insert an amendment in the Bill by which the rights of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company would be protected, and he, therefore, on behalf of that Company, withdrew further opposition.

Room cleared.

Preamble considered.

Question,—“That this preamble stand part of the Bill,”—put and passed.

Parties called in and informed.

Clause 1 read, amended,* and agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 7 read and agreed to.

Schedule A read, amended,* and agreed to.

Schedule B read and agreed to.

Title read and agreed to.

Chairman to report the Bill, with amendments, to the House.

SCHEDULE OF AMENDMENTS.

Page 2, clause 1, line 34. Omit “Investment” insert “Mining”

“ 2, “ 1. Add, at end of clause, “ Provided that the line of railway shall be at a distance of not less than twelve chains from the Scottish-Australian Mining Company’s Durham Colliery screens, situated on portion number one hundred and thirteen, with at least three openings of twenty-six feet span each.”

“ 4, Schedule A, line 11. Omit “Investment” insert “Mining”

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

REDHEAD COAL-MINE RAILWAY ACT AMENDING BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 10 JULY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. W. E. ABBOTT,	MR. HAYES,
MR. BARBOUR,	MR. KIDD,
MR. WADDELL.

ROBERT BARBOUR, Esq., IN THE CHAIR pro tem.

Mr. Ayrault Burns appeared as Solicitor for the Bill; Mr. G. C. Westgarth appeared as Solicitor for the Scottish-Australian Mining Company.

Harry Wood Kerle, Esq., called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Burns.] What is your position? I am a civil engineer, of the firm of Kenwood and Kerle, H. W. Kerle, architects and consulting engineers.
2. This line was surveyed by your firm? Yes.
3. Do you produce the plans and sections? I produce a plan showing the whole route of the line and also the sections. 10 July, 1889.
4. What is the length of line applied for under this Bill? About 9 miles.
5. Whose property does it run through? Principally through Crown lands, the Redhead Coal-mine Company, a small block of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company, and some small allotments in the township of Kahibah.
6. I understand that there is an error in the Bill as regards the name of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company? Yes; it should be the Scottish-Australian Mining Company (Limited) instead of the Scottish-Australian Investment Company.
7. For what purpose is the extension required? For the purpose of connecting the mining properties south of Lake Macquarie Heads; of working the properties of the Redhead Coal-mine Company (Limited); of carrying traffic from the Burwood Extended Coal Company; and of a deviation from the line as originally granted by the Bill of 1883.
8. Do you think that the traffic on the line will be larger when it is opened? I think that there should be a turn-out by each colliery of about 200,000 tons a year. I see no reason why the traffic on the line should not, in the course of eighteen months or two years, be from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 tons a year.
9. I suppose there will be some goods traffic and passenger traffic as well? There will be a certain amount of goods and passenger traffic in connection with the line, because each colliery will probably have its own mining township, and it will be necessary to carry light goods and passengers in connection with those townships.
10. That is provided for in the Bill? I understand so.
11. What class of work is proposed to be carried out in the construction of this line? The work will be of the very best description and fully up to the Government standard of railway work.

- H. W. Kerle,
Esq.
10 July, 1889.
12. Have the drawings been submitted to the Government engineers? Yes; the plans have been before Mr. Whitton and Mr. Cowdery.
13. Were they approved of? Mr. Cowdery, the Engineer for Existing Lines, approved of the plans with certain exceptions.
14. What were the nature of the objections? The principal objection that he made was to the use of a 1 in 33 grade fall into Adamstown, which was not up to the Government standard of 1 in 40, and to certain 8-chain curves shown on the plan. He said that only in exceptional circumstances were those curves put in.
15. What is the Government standard for grades and curves? The Government never put in less than 1 in 40 grades or less than 8 chain curves.
16. What is the least rise in grade you have on this line? The least rise in grade is that of 1 in 50, from the Burwood Extended Coal-mining Company.
17. What is the radius in curves? The quickest radius in curves is 10 chains.
18. And the lowest Government standard is 8 chains? They have 8-chain curves, but only put them in in exceptional circumstances, as, for instance, on the Hawkesbury line, where they have 10-chain curves.
19. Why do they adhere to those particular grades and curves? Principally on account of the traction on the line and the friction on the curves. If the grades are heavy the traction is very much heavier in proportion to the grade, and the friction on 8-chain radius curves is very much more than the friction on 15-chain radius curves.
20. What is the difference between the haulage on a 1 in 33 grade and a 1 in 50 grade? On a 1 in 50 grade an engine of 70 tons weight will haul 346 tons of dead load; but on a 1 in 33 grade an engine of 70 tons will haul 196 tons of dead load, or a difference of about 46 per cent.
21. For what reason is the line deviated from the original survey? It was found impossible to obtain an advantageous grade suitable for the traffic, and it is deviated from also to cut out a tunnel of 25 chains long, which was absolutely necessary under the old survey.
22. What are the grades on this section of the line in the old survey? I have not been able to obtain the old survey; but on surveying this line I found that I could not get easier than a 1 in 29 grade with the 40 ft. cutting at top of hill.
23. Is that a high cutting? It is quite sufficiently high for practical purposes.
24. What are the grades shown on the amended survey? The grades are 1 in 50 for about a mile, 1 in 53 for about half a mile, 61 for about half a mile, and 1 in 75 to connect with the line under construction.
25. Do you consider it practicable to carry heavy traffic on a 1 in 29 grade? Theoretically it is practical.
26. Could you work it with remunerative results? No; it is not practicable.
27. Leaving out the question of grades, what do you consider the most objectionable features in the old line as surveyed? The principal objectionable feature is the construction of the tunnel of 25 chains in length. A distinct understanding has been entered into between two Companies, who have arranged to run over the Redhead Companies' line; but they will not under any circumstances use the line if it includes a tunnel.
28. For what reason? They consider that it would be objectionable for this reason: that the tunnel might possibly be blocked or blown up in case of strikes, and the collieries made idle thereby.
29. Mr. Westgarth.] The Scottish-Australian Mining Company is not one of those two Companies? No.
30. Mr. Burns.] In the event of the tunnel not being constructed would it be possible to construct a line by the original route? Not a satisfactory line.
31. Have any other routes been surveyed besides the original route and the amending route? I have made four or five other trial surveys; in fact I have tried the whole of the district. I spent four months surveying a line to get the best results.
32. Is it possible to so alter the line as to allow the same grades, and to keep clear of the 40-acre block of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company? It is impossible to do it except at an immense expense. Of course you could run a level and straight line from Newcastle to the Burwood extended, if you were to spend sufficient money.
33. You have seen the Manager of the Scottish-Australian Mining Company—Mr. Croudace? Yes.
34. Mr. Westgarth.] Who is the manager? I was deputed by Mr. Stokes, one of the board of directors, to see Mr. Croudace, who I believe is interested in or holds some position under the Scottish-Australian Mining Company.
35. Mr. Burns.] You made this survey;—what was the grade you found? The survey shown on the plan submitted to the Board was 1 in 33, but if the curves were pegged out I am satisfied that they would not be more than 1 in 31.
36. Is that a satisfactory grade? No.
37. That is below the Government standard? Very much below it.
38. It is asked in this Bill for a width of not less than 66 nor more than 132 feet, whereas the old Bill only specified 66 feet. Why is this asked for? No doubt on comparatively level country a width of 66 feet would be sufficient, owing to the formation being only 15 feet, with 12 feet additional on either side for side ditches and fencing. But presuming the work to be of a heavy nature in broken up country and there being a cutting of 40 feet in depth, this would necessarily be taken out at least to a batter of 1 to 1, which would make the width of the cutting at the top 95 feet; and 12 feet on either side for side ditches and fencing would make the total width 119 feet.
39. Are there any cuttings of that depth on the line? Yes; three cuttings of about that depth. The same thing will apply to the banks, which will slope at the rate of 1½ horizontal to 1 vertical.
40. There are banks of that depth? The deepest bank on the section is 55 feet, and the next is 42 feet.
41. They would require a space of nearly 132 feet at the least? It would take us all our time to get it in at that width.
42. Have the Company commenced operations yet on the line? Yes, they have let a contract for constructing the main line up to 3 miles 10 chains, and a branch line to connect the South Burwood Coal Company's pit.
43. What will be the cost of this first portion of the line? About £36,000.
44. What do you estimate the cost of the work applied for in the Bill will be? It will be not less than £57,000.
45. What will be the cost of the whole work? Between £90,000 and £95,000.

H. W. Korle,
Esq.
10 July, 1889.

46. How many collieries propose to use this line? Six collieries will probably use it at the present time.
47. Mr. Westgarth.] Will you name the collieries? The Waratah, the Burwood, the South Burwood, the Burwood Extended, the Redhead, the Farbury and Lamb, at Lake Macquarie.
48. Do you think that the construction of this line will benefit the district? Yes, it will open out an entirely new district. At the present time there is no line in that direction. It is a new coal-field.
49. And a good class of coal? It has been tested and it is of the same class as Newcastle coal.
50. It is the same seam, the Borehole I understand? Yes.
51. How many men will probably be employed in these collieries? I should think that there will be from 150 to 200 miners employed in each colliery.
52. Does the line open up any new coal country where there are no mines at present? Yes, the Waratah Coal Company have an air-shaft in which they intend working, and beyond that the whole of the country is new. The Burwood Company has an old working, but a new shaft is being put down expressly for the purpose of using this line.
53. Do you know how many acres the Redhead Coal Company hold? About 3,000 acres; they also hold 1,000 acres of surface area in addition.
54. This line connects with another line I understand at Lake Macquarie? It connects with Amos' line at Lake Macquarie.
55. Are the bearings given in the plan exactly the route of the line? All the particulars necessary are shown on the plan and the line is pegged out every chain. The whole of the necessary plans for the construction of the line are prepared; the whole of the survey and field work necessary for the letting of the contract is completed.
56. The Bill asks for power to construct a branch line to the pit of the South Burwood Coal Company, why is it required? Because the Burwood Company desire to be connected with the Redhead Coal Company's railway for the purpose of carrying their coal to market. There are no powers in the original Bill to construct such branch lines, and the persons wishing to connect have only the power to construct over their own lands; but there is land intervening between South Burwood and the Redhead Line, and therefore it is necessary to obtain permission to go over the intervening land.
57. Are the South Burwood Company agreeable to this connection? I understand that they have arranged with the Redhead Company to run over their line.
58. Do you know that there is some opposition to the Bill? I understand that there is.
59. Have you had any communication with persons with regard to the Bill? Nothing further than the communication I had with Mr. Stokes; I have certainly met Mr. Croudace.
60. The line can be removed from the Scottish-Australian Company's pit so as not to interfere with their works? Yes.
61. But you cannot remove the line from the 40-acre block and get a suitable grade? A short time since Mr. Stokes and myself were instructed to see Mr. Croudace in reference to this matter, and we understood that he then objected—in fact I think he wrote to the Board stating his objections—to our going through the 40-acre block, and also to the line going so near the pit. We attempted to meet his views as far as possible. We offered to remove the line near his pit so as to suit him—he said 3 or 4 chains. Mr. Stokes asked me as engineer for the Company if that could be done, and I said “Yes, at a small additional cost to the Company, but it might be done without causing any inconvenience or spoiling the character of the work.” With reference to passing through the 40-acre block we went over the ground together, and Mr. Croudace at that time pointed out the route by which he considered it was possible to get the grades which are shown on our plan in order to avoid his property, and in accordance with Mr. Stokes' instructions, acting for the Board, I made the survey of which I have spoken, and which showed the grade to be 1 in 33. It is impossible to get a grade of 1 in 50 or to avoid the block and obtain the line we have here at anything like the same expense.
62. Do you know that the Scottish-Australian Company are now surveying a line for themselves? I understand so.
63. Would your line interfere with theirs in any way? No; it could be so arranged as not to interfere with them. I may say that our firm are consulting engineers for the Scottish Australian Mining Company. In this particular case we are acting on behalf of the Redhead Company, and any evidence I give is material to the point.
64. Mr. Westgarth.] You say you know that the Scottish-Australian Company contemplate constructing a line from their pit to join the Homebush-Waratah Railway? Yes, I have received instructions.
65. Have you not been over the line? Yes.
66. It is pegged out already, is it not? It is not completed, but it will be completed in the course of a fortnight.
67. It goes in almost a westerly direction from the pit? Almost westerly.
68. That avoids the 40-acre freehold block entirely? Entirely.
69. Is there any reason why your line could not be taken in that direction? It is impossible for it to go in that direction.
70. Why not? Because it is entirely opposed to the original Bill.
71. You are asking for a deviation from the original Bill? For a deviation from the original Bill; but there are certain contracts and arrangements entered into between other parties which are binding on the Redhead Coal Company, and must be maintained.
72. It is in order to comply with contracts which have been entered into by the Redhead Coal Company that you wish to carry your line in that direction? That is one object; but the other object is to obtain a line that will suit the convenience of the Commissioners, should they consider it necessary to take over the line.
73. Do the Commissioners object to a line going in the direction in which the Scottish-Australian Company have marked out theirs? We could not take a line in that direction and at the same time carry out the provisions of the original Bill.
74. You are asking for an amendment of the original Bill; is it impracticable for a line to be carried out in that way? There is nothing impracticable.
75. Could it not be done at somewhat the same expense? It could not be done at all.
76. Why? For the simple reason that the Redhead Coal Company are empowered by their Bill to connect at Adamstown with their line.
77. Is there anything impracticable? There is nothing actually impracticable.

- H. W. Kerle, Esq. 78. There is no physical obstruction by reason of the nature of the country? There is always a certain amount of physical obstruction.
- 10 July, 1889. 79. Not more than in respect to the line you propose now? No.
80. Could it be done at something like the same expense? You see it is not the same line. We are connecting to a line which is already constructed or in course of construction, which is beyond Charles-town—not actually at Adamstown, not actually at Winding Creek—but at a point on the Waratah Company's property.
81. Is this point of junction on the north? We are connecting with our line, which is at present in construction. The black line on the plan shows the railway which is at present in course of construction, which is up to the southern boundary of the Waratah Coal Company's 320-acre block, numbered 110, distant 3 miles 72 chains from Adamstown Railway Station. The contract for that work has been let about two months.
82. Mr. Westgarth.] Is the work commenced yet? Yes, over a month ago.
83. Is that the only work done on the Redhead Company's land in the way of railway construction? That is the first section let.
84. No other work has been done? The Redhead Company are sinking a shaft.
85. Since the Company got the original Act, has anything been done beyond letting that contract within the last two months? Nothing but letting the contract for the first section up to 3 miles 70 chains, and the branch line up to 3 miles 74 chains.
86. Mr. Burns.] Between 1887 and 1888 the Company got an amending Bill passed? Yes.
87. Mr. Westgarth.] Have you any plan or drawing showing the proposed direction of the railway as provided by the Act of 1883? I have marked in pencil on the plan which I have produced the line of railway as proposed to be constructed under that Act. The Scottish-Australian Company's freehold block is the block marked 90a on the plan. The course of the line as pegged out under the original Act would have avoided the Scottish-Australian Company's 40-acre block, and gone through the adjoining block of W. Gillics—40 acres, numbered 91.
88. The Redhead Company asked Parliament to grant permission to construct a railway by that route in 1883? Yes.
89. Mr. Hayes.] How far is the extension as provided for by the Bill? To Burwood Extended.
90. Mr. Westgarth.] I suppose you cannot tell me any other reason why the Company have thought it necessary to change the course of the line than that they have entered into contracts with other Companies? The necessity of altering the course of the line was to get satisfactory grades.
91. You know it was surveyed by Mr. Parrot, engineer, before 1883? He was the surveyor. I know that a grade of 1 in 29 is utterly impracticable. It is utterly impossible to attempt to carry the coal traffic that is likely to be carried on that line on a grade of 1 in 29.
92. Mr. Kidd.] The deviation you ask for would give you a grade of not less than 1 in 50? Yes; it will make a difference of nearly 55 per cent.
93. Mr. Westgarth.] Do you know Mr. W. A. Hutchison? Yes; he was chairman of the Board when the Act was passed in 1883.
94. Are you aware he said that if Parliament sanctioned the construction of this railway the Company would be prepared to carry out immediately the works set forth in the petition? They might have been prepared to do that at that time, but I had nothing to do with it.
95. Mr. Burns.] They have had two or three trial surveys made since then? Yes.
96. Mr. Westgarth.] You say that each Company requires a block for a mining township? I say that each Company will probably have its own mining township; I do not think I said that each Company will require one.
97. Do you know whether the Scottish-Australian Company have any other freehold land besides the 40-acre block numbered 90a? I understand that they have only that block.
98. Do you know when they acquired that? No; I understand that an offer has been made to them by the Redhead Company to transfer the surface rights of that 40-acre block.
99. What distance is the line, as shown on your plan, from the Scottish-Australian Company's pit? It is about 6½ chains.
100. And you are willing, I understand, that it should be extended another 15 chains? I did not say 15 chains; we can alter it 5 chains.
101. But the line, as shown on the plan, is only 6 chains from the pit? Yes; the Company, I may say, are prepared to alter the line. I was instructed to inform Mr. Croudace that if 6 chains would be objectionable to him we would alter it.
102. So if the Select Committee should recommend 6 chains you would be prepared to accept that alteration? Yes.
103. Is it necessary to have 132 feet for the whole length of the line? We will only take the amount of land required if you leave it to us. We will take the amount of work at the base of the formation, with 10 feet on either side. We will take as little as possible. The land is of no importance to us; we want width where there is a wide bank or deep cutting.
104. Mr. Burns.] Do you know that Mr. Hutchison, in his evidence before the Select Committee on the original Bill, mentioned Belford's 40-acre block 90a as being part of the route? I know it is in the evidence.
105. Mr. Westgarth.] Still the line authorised by the original Bill avoids the 40-acre block of the Scottish-Australian Company? Yes.
106. At that time it was not owned by the Scottish-Australian Company? I understand so.
107. Chairman.] What was the cause of making the deviation? One reason was because the gradient was so steep that heavy traffic could not be carried over the line; another was that it would be necessary to put in a tunnel of 25 chains, which would be a heavy expense, amounting to between £30,000 and £40,000, and a third was that two Companies who had undertaken to use the line would not do so if that tunnel were put in.
108. Mr. Westgarth.] On account of certain contracts entered into? No; agreements had been entered into.
109. You mentioned that it would cost from £90,000 to £100,000 to carry out the works; would that include compensation for the land? No, exclusive of compensation. It would include the whole of the permanent-way rails, and placing the line in working order.

110. Do you know that under the Bill the land is vested in the Company from the passing of the Act? H. W. Kerle, Esq., I understand so.

111. Compensation is not to be paid till afterwards? It is to be paid within twenty-eight days, by mutual consent or on arbitration. 10 July, 1889.

112. Do you know that under the Bill they ask for leave to carry passengers? I understand that there is a clause to that effect.

113. Mr. Kidd.] It appears from your evidence that the Act of 1883 was obtained on the evidence of parties who were incompetent with regard to the survey of the line? I did not say incompetent.

114. But you said that it is necessary to extend the width to 132 feet for certain reasons? That is hardly a question of surveying.

115. You seemed to be satisfied that for all the purposes of the original Act it was sufficient to resume a chain of land? Oh, no.

116. You said that only an ordinary surveyor, and not an engineer, made the survey? I wish to make no invidious remarks with regard to Mr. Parrott; I am satisfied that he carried out his work according to his instructions; but at the present time there are probabilities of far heavier traffic being carried over the line. I was instructed to obtain the best possible line for the traffic, and in searching the country I found that a better line could be obtained. I consider that for heavy traffic a 1 in 29 grade is impracticable. The line at Mittagong is 1 in 29 for 2½ miles running up from Picton. They have always to put on an extra engine, which causes loss of time. It would be suicidal on the part of an engineer to place before a Board of Directors a line showing a 1 in 29 grade when by going 40 chains further we could get 1 in 50. I wish to impress upon the Committee that the work is in course of construction for a certain distance, and it is utterly impracticable to alter the line so as to take a westerly direction, and join the main line at any other point, because we must join the first section of our line which is now under construction.

REDHEAD COAL-MINE RAILWAY ACT AMENDING BILL.

(PETITION FROM THE SCOTTISH AUSTRALIAN MINING COMPANY (LIMITED), TO BE REPRESENTED BY COUNSEL AGAINST)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 9 July, 1889.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Scottish Australian Mining Company (Limited),—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

1. That a Bill to enable the "Redhead Coal-mining Company (Limited)" to make certain deviations in the route of the railway authorized by the "Redhead Coal-mine Railway Act of 1883," and to make certain alterations in the site of such railway, and for other purposes therein mentioned, has been introduced into your Honorable House during the present Session, and has been referred to a Select Committee for consideration and report.

2. That in a Schedule to the said Bill the lands through which it is proposed to construct the said railway and the direction thereof are set out.

3. That your Petitioners are the owners of large portions of such lands, and if the said railway is constructed in the direction indicated your Petitioners' interests will be seriously and injuriously affected.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that leave may be given to your Petitioners to appear by counsel before the Select Committee now sitting on the said Bill for the purpose of protecting their interests, and with permission to call such witnesses as may be desirable, and adduce such evidence as they may be advised concerning the said Bill, in the interests of your Petitioners, and to examine and cross-examine such witnesses as may give evidence before the said Committee in accordance with the rules of your Honorable House.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

Dated this eighth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

A. SHANNON,
Manager.

 SILKSTONE COAL-MINE RAILWAY BILL.

 REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, for whose consideration and report was referred, on the 17th April, 1889,—the "Silkstone Coal-mine Railway Bill,"—beg to report to your Honorable House:—

That they have examined the witnesses named in the list* (whose evidence will be found appended hereto); and that the Preamble having been satisfactorily proved to your Committee, they proceeded to consider the several clauses and the Schedule to the Bill, in which it was deemed necessary to make an amendment.

Your Committee now beg to lay before your Honorable House the Bill as amended by them.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

SILKSTONE COAL-MINE RAILWAY BILL.

THURSDAY, 25 APRIL, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. STEVENSON, | Mr. WADDELL,
| Mr. PERRY.

RICHARD STEVENSON, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. F. A. S. Bowden appeared as solicitor for the Bill.

Mr. Richard Tilden Smith, called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Bowden.] You are a colliery proprietor and reside at Sydney? Yes.
2. You hold certain lands in the county of Cumberland, parish of Stanford, containing 2,000 acres, known as Silkstone? Yes.
3. You hold these lands under mineral lease from the Government? Yes.
4. Jointly with John Thomas Mance of Parramatta? Yes.
5. Have you with Mr. Mance opened a colliery on those lands? Yes.
6. How far is the land situated from the Great Northern Railway? 8 miles 71 chains.
7. Is it desirable to facilitate communication between the mine and the Great Northern Railway? Yes.
8. How do you propose to do that? By constructing a branch line.
9. Will that line pass over any Government roads? Yes; two.
10. Will it pass over private properties? Yes; a large number.
11. And also Government land? Yes.
12. Is the line likely to be beneficial to the Colony if worked? Yes.
13. Will it be an advantage to the public if facilities are given to supply coal for local consumption? Yes.
14. Are there any other collieries at present working in the district near this proposed colliery? No.
15. Are you advised that this line cannot be made without the sanction of Parliament? Yes.
16. Do you propose to make provision in the Bill for the payment of proper compensation for all lands affected by the Bill? Yes.
17. Is the Bill, as far as you are aware, in accordance with a great many other Bills which have been passed? Yes.
18. In accordance with nearly all the other private Bills? With most of them.
19. Do you propose that the line should be open to the public? Yes.
20. On the payment of certain charges? Yes; specified in the Bill.
21. Will it be to the advantage of the public to have this means of communication? Yes; it will shorten the distance. There is a large district outside the colliery.
22. Are there many people residing about the colliery now? Yes; there are a few and there are a great many beyond the mine.
23. Is there no other railway near these people beyond the mine? No.
24. Do you know how the people living beyond the mine get their goods? By means of teams which cart goods from Maitland and other places.

Mr. R. T.
Smith.
25 April, 1889.

- Mr. R. T. Smith. 25. So that if this line is constructed the people will be able to get from there to Maitland without difficulty Yes.
26. Do you propose to form a township on the property? Yes.
27. Do you expect a large number of persons, miners, and others, to reside there? Yes.
28. Will the railway enhance the value of the land through which it passes? Considerably.
29. Of both Government and private lands? Yes.
30. Have any of the owners of the land through which the railway passes objected to the proposal? Not one.
31. Have some people signed a petition asking you to endeavour to get the line constructed? Yes. I produce the petition.
32. Who is it signed by? A. J. Hebblewhite, C. J. Hebblewhite, J. H. Swan, J. Callaghan, J. W. Birkenhead, J. Gillies, H. Trenchard, James Leonard, William Turnbull, L. A. Wilkinson, J. H. V. Beckman. I have also received this letter, which I produce, from Mr. Joseph Clift.
33. Are these the principal owners of the land along the route of the railway? Yes.
34. Are there many others who have not signed? There are a few whom I have not been able to see.
35. Have you made any inquiry as to their whereabouts? Yes. I have written to them about it; but there has been no objection whatever. These people are somewhat dilatory in answering letters, and they are very difficult to see; but there are only one or two whom I have not seen. I have endeavoured to see all the people and they have all been written to.
36. Does the proposed line join the Great Northern Railway near the Maitland Station? Yes; within about 15 chains.
37. Is the length of this line to be 8 miles 71 chains? Yes; about that.
38. Will all the coal from the Silkstone Colliery be carried over the Government line to Newcastle? Yes; the greater portion of it.
39. Is there any other means of communication which could be adopted to enable you to open up your colliery? None whatever, profitably.
40. Do you anticipate that a large amount of coal will be carried over the line? Yes; I am of opinion that it will open up several large collieries along the route of the railway line.
41. Are there any other means of communication for opening up those collieries? None.
42. As regards the revenue derived from the Government railways, will this line increase it? Yes; it would produce large returns.
43. Are there several other collieries only awaiting the construction of this line to start operations? Yes.
44. If this line is not constructed, do you think that the Silkstone Mine and the other collieries will be opened? No; unless they are able to procure a Bill similar to this.
45. Are the names of the owners, as far as you can ascertain, mentioned in the schedule of the Bill? Yes.
46. Have you endeavoured, as far as possible, to ascertain whether they have any objections? Yes.
47. Have some of them promised to assist you in the construction of the line? Yes; some of them have offered to give their land free of cost.
48. Have you shown them a copy of the Bill and a plan of the line? Yes.
49. Do you remember the names of the people whom you have seen? I have seen most of the people mentioned in the schedule; I have seen all, excepting Miss Nine and E. Hungerford. In the schedule it is stated that the line passes through the property of Mr. S. Simpson and others.
50. Are the others Crown lessees? Yes; and there may be one or two properties the names of the owners of which I have not been able to ascertain.
51. Is Maitland the nearest point at which you can tap the Government line? It is the most convenient for ourselves and the other colliery proprietors.
52. Up to the present time the Government have made no objection to the junction at Maitland? No; I produce a letter from Mr. Vernon.
53. In view of the large demand for coal, are you of opinion that you would supply a national want by putting more coal into the market? Yes.
54. Would you also provide employment for a large number of miners? Yes; a great many.
55. Some of the land through which the line passes is owned by the Government? Yes.
56. Is it all leased to different people under mineral lease? We believe it is.
57. Are there any unoccupied Government lands along the route? Not that we know of.
58. Would the line interfere with the present workings of any of the other lands? No.
59. Has it been arranged so that it will interfere with no other works at all? Yes.
60. Is the line to be of the standard gauge? Yes, 4 feet 8½ inches.
61. Have the provisions of the Bill been taken from the Acts authorizing the construction of private lines Yes.
62. Mr. Perry.] Would this line enter into competition with any Government line? No; it will assist the Government lines. The coal carried over this line will be necessarily carried over the Government line.
63. Chairman.] Have you seen the persons named in the evidence which you gave before on this Bill? I have seen Messrs. Hebblewhites, Weston, Adams, Callaghan, Clift, Turnbull, Swan, Mrs. Harington, Mr. Hickey, the East Greta Coal Co., Mr. Leonard, the Messrs. Capper. I have seen Mr. Hungerford's representative for Mr. C. Simpson. I have seen Mr. Pilcher; he said he would see his mother about the property. He said he did not think there would be any objection to the project.
64. Mr. Bowden.] You have omitted to refer to Miss Nine? I have not been able to see her. I have written to those whom I believe to be her agents, but I have received no answer.
65. If you do take her land is there not provision to pay compensation for it? Yes.

Mr. William Vero Read, called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. W. V. Read. 66. Mr. Bowden.] Are you acting secretary to the Railway Commissioners? Yes.
67. Do you attend here on their behalf? Yes.
68. Have you seen the proposed Bill? Yes.
- 25 April, 1889. 69. Do you know whether the Commissioners have any objection to the passing of the Bill in its present form? The Commissioners consider that as it is proposed to carry passengers, a clause should be inserted in the Bill, such as is placed in other Bills of the kind, by which they would be able to take over the railway at any future time if they wished to do so.

70. Then I understand that the Commissioners wish that a clause similar to clause 32 in Bennett's Railway Act, 1886, should be introduced into this Bill? Yes.
71. If that is done do you know of any other objection on behalf of the Commissioners? No.
72. So that you have really no objection to the Bill? They have really no objection, but they want the power to purchase.

Mr.
W. V. Read.
25 April, 1889.

Arthur Gibson Hebblewhite called in, sworn, and examined:—

73. Mr. Bowden.] What is your business? I am an importer, residing in George-street, Sydney.
74. Has Mr. R. T. Smith shown you a proposed Bill enabling him to construct a railway from the Silkstone Colliery to the Great Northern Railway? Yes.
75. And also a plan of the proposed line? Yes.
76. Do you own certain lands through which this line will pass? Yes; I am interested with three brothers, as legatees of our father.
77. Have you any objection to the construction of the proposed line? No.
78. Do you think it would make the land along the line of more value? Certainly.
79. Will the line afford a great many facilities for getting stores? Yes.
80. Do you know of any objections on the part of the owners of land through which the line will go? No.
81. Do you think that the junction of the proposed line at Maitland is the most convenient for joining with the Great Northern line? I think so, because we have had a survey made ourselves of the line, and I do not think Mr. Smith's line could be better.
82. Is the junction the most convenient for yourselves and the general public? Yes.

Mr. A. G.
Hebblewhite.
25 April, 1889.

Harry Wood Kerle, called in, sworn and examined:—

83. Mr. Bowden.] Are you a member of the firm of Kenwood and Kerle, consulting engineers? Yes.
84. Were you instructed by Mr. R. T. Smith to make the necessary survey for the line contemplated by this Bill? Yes.
85. Do you produce a plan of the line? Yes; I produce the permanent survey showing how the line is proposed to be constructed.
86. Have you taken care in making this survey to take no more land than was absolutely necessary for the construction of the line? Yes.
87. Have you made the survey so as to interfere with and damage private property as little as possible by severance or otherwise? Yes. There are no buildings in the course of the line, and no improvements except land under cultivation.
88. Does the line cross Government roads? Yes, two; one close to the junction, and the other further up. There is to be a level-crossing at one road and an over-bridge at the other. That is the only way to cross them.
89. Along the line have you made proper provision for gates? Yes; everything is made to suit the requirements of the land-owners.
90. Does the line pass through any Government land? There is some land held under mineral lease. There is no unoccupied Government land that I am aware of.
91. Do any of the owners along the line object to its construction? No; those that I have spoken to have always shown themselves favourable to it.
92. Have you seen the majority of them personally? I have seen a number of them.
93. Was the plan which you have produced prepared by your firm and signed on behalf of the firm? Yes; it is signed by myself.
94. Does that signature denote that the plan is correct, and that you certify that it is correct? Yes; the line will be carried out in every detail, as shown on the working plan.
95. Has all proper communication necessary for the various properties as required by the owners been provided for by the plan? Yes.
96. Has provision been made for all necessary bridges, culverts, and water-courses, and for the proper carrying on of traffic? Yes.
97. Will the line as constructed interfere with the general flow of the natural waters? No.
98. Has the Commissioner of Roads had an intimation that the line crosses two roads? I believe Mr. Smith has shown him the general route of the railway, but personally I have not.
99. Have the crossings been arranged so as to facilitate the use of the land as much as possible, so as to give the owners convenience for using both parts of their land where severed? Yes.
100. Are the properties near the line agricultural or pastoral? They are principally pastoral close to the mine; closer to the railway they are agricultural.
101. Is this likely to be a flourishing district if the line is made? Yes.
102. Where will this line join the Great Northern Railway? At 20 miles 65 chains 5½ links; I do not think it is half-a-mile from the West Maitland Station.
103. Will it interfere in any way with the working of the Government line? No.
104. Will it be any inconvenience to the working of the station? No; the block signals required for the branch line will be worked from the West Maitland Station, so that there will be no necessity for erecting a signal station. That will save the Government the employment of one man.
105. The present staff can do the work and look after it at the same time? Yes.
106. If the junction were farther away would it necessitate a fresh block signal system for the line? The Government compel proprietors of branch lines to erect a station, and they require block signals there, and it is necessary to employ a man to keep those signals.
107. Will the taking of the junction so close to the West Maitland Station do away with that? Yes.
108. Do you think there will be a large accession of traffic to the Great Northern Railway by the construction of this line? Yes; both passengers and goods.
109. Will that yield a large additional revenue to the Great Northern Railway? Yes.
110. Has the line been surveyed in accordance with the Government regulations? The line will be constructed up to the Government standard of railway work.
111. Is it of the same gauge as Government lines? Yes; so that the Government engines and rolling stock will be able to use this line.
112. Have you submitted the plans to the Government officers? The sidings at the junction have been submitted, but I do not think the whole of the plans have been. That is not necessary; the plans have been prepared in accordance with the Government conditions and requirements.

Mr.
H. W. Kerle.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

STOCKTON GAS AND ELECTRICITY BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 17 JULY, 1889.

Present:—

MR. FLETCHER, | MR. BARBOUR,
MR. BARNES.

JAMES FLETCHER, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

C. W. Schrader (for Messrs. Sly and Hamilton) appeared in support of the Bill.

Mr. Mahlon Clarke Cowlishaw called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Schrader.] Do you know the suburbs of Stockton? Yes.
2. You are desirous of erecting works to light the town with gas or electricity? Yes.
3. Is the town at present lighted? No.
4. Do you think it would be for the benefit of the inhabitants of Stockton and suburbs to have it lighted? Yes; they are very desirous of having the place lighted.
5. As far as you know are there any objections? None that I know of.
6. Chairman.] Seeing what you know of Stockton and the surrounding district, have you reason to believe that it will become a large and populous place? Yes; very large. The Government sold some land there, and it was bought by people who intended building houses, and residing in the locality. I think there must have been from 300 to 400 purchasers.
7. You are aware that the Government intend to let about 500 acres, inclusive of what they have already let, for a township? Yes.
8. Is it a place that the people of Newcastle prefer to reside at? Yes; they go there to reside. I may mention that the Government have expended a large sum of money in building a wharf; as it is used by shipping as much by night as by day we find it very awkward without having the place sufficiently lighted. By getting the gas the whole course of business will be facilitated.
9. Is that on account of some of the waggons running across some of the streets? Yes, across some of the principal streets.
10. Then you are of opinion that if the place were better lighted it would be safer? Yes, very much safer.
11. Mr. Barbour.] Is there any municipality at this place? No.
12. You are the promoter—you propose to establish these works yourself? Yes.
13. Have you had any public meetings to know the feeling of the people on the subject? The people have not held a public meeting, but the principal people are in favour of it.
14. So far as you know the people are all favourable? Yes, there is no doubt about that. In reference to clause 6 I want you to alter the price from 6s. to 7s. 6d. 6s. is a very small price for a small place like Stockton.

Mr. M. C.
Cowlishaw.

17 July, 1889.

Mr. M. C. Cowlshaw. 15. Mr. Barbour.] Of course you understand that this will not give you a monopoly, but of course it will be to your interest to please the users of gas by making the price as small as possible. At the same time this is the maximum rate that you may charge. You may charge as much less as you like. You will possibly see that your interest attaches to the smaller price? Most of the residents of the district will be interested in it, and would assist to regulate the price.

17 July, 1889.

Richard Thomas called in, sworn, and examined:—

R. Thomas. 16. Mr. Schrader.] You are manager of the Stockton Colliery? I am.
 17. You know Stockton and suburbs? I do.
 18. Is it a populous place? There are about 4,000 people there.
 19. Do you know whether the inhabitants of Stockton have held meetings in reference to lighting the place with gas? Not public meetings.
 20. Do you know the feeling of the people of Stockton about it? They are highly desirous to see the place lighted.
 21. Is there any objection that you know of to this Bill for lighting Stockton? I don't think this Bill has been under their consideration.
 22. As to the lighting of the town with gas, then? There is a strong desire for that.
 23. Chairman.] You have a knowledge of the works over there;—have you reason to believe that it is likely to become a populous suburb? I think so. If it is incorporated I may say it will be a very populous suburb. The lands sold by the Government have all been taken up, and I know that it is the opinion of a great number of Newcastle tradesmen to build residences there for themselves as soon as we have anything like streets there.
 24. Mr. Barbour.] Do you think that if these works are established Stockton will be sufficiently taken advantage of to pay the promoter? Yes, I think so. I was connected with a few of the residents, who intended to start a gas-works themselves if these steps had not been taken. We felt the necessity so strong for it.
 25. Are you satisfied that this Bill takes the place of their intentions? Entirely.
 26. It will be a great convenience to the people in the neighbourhood no doubt? It will be a great boon. In fact going about the streets now at night is highly dangerous.
 27. Chairman.] You mean in consequence of the work going on at night and by day? Yes.
 28. These dangers are caused by want of proper light at night? We have so many wharves and water-frontages that it is very dangerous at night.

Present:--

MR. BARBOUR, | MR. WILLIAM STEPHEN,
Mr. STEVENSON.

R. STEVENSON, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Rofe, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Alfred Rofe, Solicitor for the Bill, sworn and examined:--

1. Chairman.] You are the solicitor for the Bill? Yes.
2. The Bill is the Bill of the Excelsior Land and Building Company? Yes; a company incorporated under the provisions of the Limited Liabilities Act.
3. You prepared this Bill? Yes.
4. You have published the necessary advertisements in the local and metropolitan papers, as well as in the Government Gazette? Yes; in the terms of the Parliamentary Standing Order.
5. And you have paid the necessary amount into the Treasury? We have the receipt for £25.
6. Will you prove the preamble? The Excelsior Land Investment and Building Company is possessed of an estate called Toronto, containing 1,000 acres of land, at Lake Macquarie, parish of Awaba, and situated near a platform on the Government line of railway between Sydney and Newcastle known as Fassifern. At present the mode of getting to the estate is very insufficient. Lake Macquarie is a pleasure resort for the inhabitants of Newcastle. We propose to construct a tramway which will be less than 3 miles in length, connecting the estate and the upper part of the lake with the railway, thus affording greater facilities to the people of Newcastle for getting there.
7. Mr. Barbour.] Will the proposed tramway run through the lands of the Company? We have a plan showing exactly the land we own, as well as the other lands and streets through which the tramway will pass. Our surveyor will be able to point out to the Committee the route to be taken, and the lands it will intersect.
8. Chairman.] The contents of the Bill, so far as you are aware, are perfectly true? They are true.
9. And the lands the tramway will pass through are set out in the schedule to this Bill? Yes; that schedule has been prepared by our surveyor, Mr. Laycock, and he is prepared to testify to its correctness.
10. Any interference with the rights of other people is provided for in the Bill, by arbitration or otherwise? We have provided for modes of arbitration in the Bill. I have copied the arbitration clauses from the Joadja Creek Tramway Bill, which seemed to comply with exactly what we wanted in that respect. Joadja Creek is at Mittagong, and a tramway connects the kerosene mine there with the Government railway.
11. Have you received any communications from anyone expressing a desire to oppose the Bill? Not any—in fact, we have almost arranged that there shall be no opposition whatever. Mr. Chapman, through whose land we intend to pass, has agreed to sell us as much ground as we require—being a narrow strip through his land—for £50. The matter is now in progress between his surveyor and myself.
12. Would the construction of this tramway, in your opinion, increase the revenue of the Government railway? It would be a feeder, certainly.

Mr. A. Rofe,
9 April, 1889.

- Mr. A. Rofe. 13. Have a survey, a map, and a book of reference been made, and will they be open for public inspection? Yes.
- 9 April, 1889. 14. Then, of course, in your opinion, the tramway will be a public convenience? Certainly; an acquisition to the public for their benefit.
15. Is there any other information you would like to give in reference to the Bill, and which you think the Committee ought to know? I think not; I think the Bill is in itself pretty exhaustive.
16. Mr. Barbour.] So far as you know, there is no one opposed to the passing of the Bill? I have heard of no opposition.
17. Have the plans been submitted to the Railway Commissioners? No, they have not.
18. You have not yet received any approval of the proposed connection in any way? It is not our intention to connect at present, but simply to have our terminus just within the railway reserve—that is, if the Bill is passed giving us that permission.
19. It is to be a separate tramway? Yes.
20. Separate altogether from the Government railway? Yes. At present we have no intention of carrying coal, or anything necessarily carried on the railway, on our tramway, but merely to have a light tramway for the conveyance of passengers and passengers' luggage.
21. Chairman.] Have you heard that the Commissioners have made any objection? I have not.
22. Mr. W. Stephen.] What is to be the character of the motive-power for the proposed tramway? The intention at present is to have a light steam tramway.
23. Mr. Barbour.] Have you been in communication at all with the Railway Commissioners? No.
24. Is your terminus to be outside the railway fence or inside of it? I hardly know. The surveyor will be able to tell you. I do know that it is not intended to connect with the railway.
25. And on that account you have not thought it necessary to hold any communication with the Railway Commissioners? Yes.
26. Will your tramway pass through any Crown lands on its route? I think it will; but our surveyor will be able to explain that fully.
27. Is there any Crown land between the termini of the tramway? Our surveyor can answer that also; I think there is.

John Henry Laycock called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. J. H. Laycock. 28. Mr. Rofe.] What are you? A licensed surveyor and civil engineer.
- 9 April, 1889. 29. Did you design the roadway for this proposed tramway? Yes; it was done in my office, under my supervision.
30. Do you produce a plan prepared by you showing the route to be taken by the proposed tramway? Yes. [Plan produced.]
31. Will you explain to the Committee where the proposed tramway will start from, and where it will end, the different lands it will intersect, and whether they are Government lands or belong to private persons? Starting from Passifern Railway Station.
32. Mr. Barbour.] It starts from 87m. 52ch. from Sydney? Yes; that is the crossing of the Government road, so we do not interfere with property there at all. Then we continue through Government reserve number 105, until we come to Avaba-street. Then we go along a road—
33. Mr. W. Stephen.] Have you got permission to pass through the Government reserve? No; that is the reason of our asking for this Bill. We follow the roads until we strike the Government reserve again round Lake Macquarie. We go through them on the low ground, until we come to Chapman's block, and, passing through that piece of land, we get to a lot of Government portions, information about which, as far as I have got it, is given in the schedule. Thence, crossing Stony Creek, we pass into the land belonging to the Excelsior Investment Company. We propose to carry the tramway down to the Toronto pier, which is not built yet, just past the Toronto Hotel.
34. Mr. W. Stephen.] Is this road that you run along a Government road? Yes; by the mere fact of that township having been sold.
35. The township was sold by the Government? No; but the mere fact of it having been sold as a subdivision makes this a public road.
36. Mr. Rofe.] The Excelsior Land Company have purchased several blocks of land in the township, and therefore they have a right to use the roadways; but they have no right to run a tramway along the road unless the Bill gives permission? Yes.
37. This is a public road? Yes; but not a Government road.
38. You have inspected the route? Yes.
39. You are able to say that the plan that you have produced is exactly in accordance with the schedule which you have prepared to the Bill? Exactly.
40. Can you tell us what will be the character of the line—will it be a difficult route, or can it be easily made? Certainly not a difficult one. I have here a longitudinal section.
41. It is your opinion that the route does not suggest any engineering difficulties? Yes.
42. Mr. W. Stephen.] This gives the exact formation of the land? Yes; you can see that it is almost perfectly level. The worst grade of all is 1 in 44, and that is a very good grade for a tramway. It is practically level all the way along.
43. Mr. Rofe.] What do you reckon is the distance? The exact distance is, I think, a little over 3 miles.
44. If you follow exactly the route laid down on the map, what will be the length? We only propose to construct at present 2 miles 48½ chains.
45. If the route is extended, it will be extended on the Toronto Estate? Yes.
46. For which we do not require any further power? No.
47. Mr. W. Stephen.] That is, to the pier? Yes.
48. Mr. Rofe.] You have already told us that the schedule in the Bill is exactly in accordance with the route as laid down on the plan before you? Yes; and that there are no engineering difficulties whatever in the way. I think it will be an immense advantage to the Government to have this line as a feeder to the main line.
49. You are not aware of the character of the tramway proposed—whether it will be worked by horse or by steam power? No, I am not.

50. Nor are you aware what the proposed gauge will be? No, I am not. I have merely done the civil engineering part of the work.
51. Do you know what width of land will have to be taken in the Government reserves? That is a matter for after consideration. You can have it as narrow as you like—I should not think you would want a strip?
52. Mr. Barbour.] To whom does the land belong between Chapman's block and the Toronto Estate? It is all Crown land.
53. Then the greater part of the land through which the tramway goes is Crown land? Yes.
54. Do you know whether it is private land between Chapman's and Toronto, or whether it is Crown land? I do not know.

Mr. J. H.
Laycock.

9 April, 1899.

Phillip Robert Cook called in, sworn, and examined —

55. Mr. Refe.] What is your occupation? I am acting manager for the Excelsior Building Company.
56. And necessarily one of the promoters of this Bill? Yes.
57. Are you acquainted with the property mentioned in the Bill which it is intended to use for the construction of the tramway? Yes.
58. Have you had an opportunity of forming an opinion as to whether the proposal is acceptable to the residents around Lake Macquarie? Yes, I have had very good opportunities. I am frequently down in the district—generally once every month—and I have conversed with most of the residents there, and also with visitors to the district, and everyone I have seen and spoken to has expressed unqualified approval of the scheme.
59. Can you tell us whether anyone has expressed disapproval of the Bill? Not one that I am aware of.
60. Have you heard of anyone likely to oppose the passing of the Bill? No.
61. Can you point out any beneficial results likely to accrue to the public from the construction of this line? Yes. In the first place, it will be a great benefit to the tourist portion of the public, in taking them by a shorter route to Lake Macquarie, which is a very popular resort, instead of their having to go 8 miles from Cockle Creek by water. Sometimes the steamers break down, and cause great inconvenience, and passengers will be able to go to Toronto in a quarter of the time by this tramway that they have to take now. Then, again, it will be a great convenience to the fishermen of the lake; I know that certain of them have expressed a wish to send their fish to market by this route. It will save them a fourteen-mile journey by road from Belnont to Newcastle, and they will be able to get their fish to Sydney in four or five hours, instead of it taking fifteen or sixteen, as at present. This tramway will be a benefit, not only to the fishermen, but also to the consumers, and it will also benefit the Government railway.
62. It will be a feeder to the railway? Yes, a feeder to the railway.
63. Will it be any advantage to the land intersected between the Toronto Estate and Passifern? I think it must be necessarily. Every railway benefits the land it passes through, by giving an easy mode of transit.
64. Are there persons settled upon the lands the tramway will intersect? There is only one I know of; that is Chapman; it intersects his land.
65. But there are others living away from the proposed tramway route? There are no houses until you get to the Lorne township, and then there is the Passifern coal-mine; they have got brickworks there. There are several houses on the Toronto Estate itself which are occupied.
66. Are there not several houses just beyond the estate which this tramway must afford some convenience to in getting to the railway? Yes; further along the shores of the lake there is property on each side, belonging to Fennel and several other people, who will be greatly benefited by the tramway in having easy access to the railway.
67. Have you given your attention to the scale of charges fixed in the proposed Bill, and are you of opinion that they are fair and reasonable? Yes; I think the charges are reasonable. The charge we propose to make for passengers is the same as the steam-boat proprietors are making at the present time.
68. The charge is a maximum charge? Yes.
69. Mr. W. Stephen.] A shilling each way? Yes.
70. Mr. Refe.] Do you think this line will be a great convenience to people from Newcastle visiting the lake? I think it must be, especially at holiday times, when there are great crowds going there. Sometimes the steamers cannot accommodate everybody. Not only Newcastle, but Wallsend will be greatly benefited by the line.
71. Do you know whether the Railway Commissioners have approved or disapproved of the proposed line of tramway? I do not know whether they have or not.
72. Have you submitted the proposed Bill to them? No.
73. Have you caused to be published in the Government Gazette and the local newspapers notices of the intended application for the Bill? Yes.
74. Are you aware that the Railway Commissioners have lately proclaimed in the Government Gazette that tourists' tickets will be issued for Lake Macquarie on the Homebush-Waratah line from Sydney as well as from the Northern Districts? Yes; I saw it in the Gazette myself.
75. Can you describe shortly the lands that this tramway will traverse? Yes. Starting from the Passifern railway-station, it comes down a public road —
76. Mr. Barbour.] Is there a railway-station here? A railway-platform. It comes down a public road to Government reserve 105. Passing through that, it crosses another public road, and comes on to the land belonging to the Excelsior Building Company—three allotments. Leaving them, it crosses another public road, and comes through two more allotments belonging to the Excelsior Building Company. It then passes along another public road until it reaches a Government reserve. It traverses this reserve, and also Government reserve 48, touching a Government road again, passes through some private land belonging to Mr. E. G. C. Chapman, and crosses another public road. It then traverses land belonging to the Excelsior Building Company all the way to Toronto, crossing two small creeks on the route. The whole of the land from Chapman's is the property of the Excelsior Building Company, until the line finishes at the Toronto wharf.
77. Mr. Refe.] Do you know the length of the route from beginning to end? About 2 miles 48 chains.
78. Could you tell approximately how much of that 2 miles 48 chains belongs to the Company? About half.

Mr.
P. R. Cook.

9 April, 1899.

- Mr. P. R. Cook.
9 April, 1889.
79. Mr. W. Stephen.] Then this land that we were led by the surveyor's statement to believe was Government land is really the property of the Excelsior Company? Yes. It was bought nearly twelve months ago, and the conveyance was actually settled recently.
80. Then the only Government land you would pass through would be the reserve? Yes, and reserve 105.
81. Mr. Rofe.] Is that the railway reserve? I do not know what reserve it is; I think it must be.
82. Mr. W. Stephen.] Do you propose to come right up to the railway-station, or to keep outside the railway premises? I think it is proposed to go just inside the railway fence at first. The road goes right up to the fence. I think it is proposed just to turn round a little, so as to get a siding.
83. Is there no siding or reserve there? There is a good siding. I do not think we would interfere with the railway-line in any way by going up just as far as we intend to go.
84. Mr. Rofe.] Do you interfere much with the railway reserve? It is not intended to touch any reserve except reserve 105. It is all a public road with the exception of a few yards we want to go inside the reserve. It would be immaterial if we stopped at the end of the road.
85. Is it intended to connect this tramway with the Government railway line? Not at present. We want power by the Bill to connect afterwards, if it is thought necessary. Of course, in that case we would have to increase the gauge.
86. Have you heard of any opposition to the Bill on the part of the owners of the land the line may pass through? I think they will not oppose it--on the contrary.
87. So far, you have met with encouragement? Yes.
88. Will you tell us the intention of the company respecting the width of the gauge? They propose, in the first place, to use a 2-foot 6-inch gauge, and they want power to increase it to 4 feet 8½ inches, with the idea of connecting at some time, as the district develops, with the railway. This 2-foot 6-inch gauge they consider is ample for present requirements.
89. Are you aware that any tramways have been built in England or elsewhere with a gauge of 2 feet 6 inches? Yes. I could not say quite for certain the exact gauge, but I rode on a tramway with a gauge of either 2 feet or 2 feet 6 inches, about eighteen years ago, in North Wales, and I know that that tramway was considered a success. It ran from the village of Festinog to Carnarvon.
90. And was it for passengers as well as for light goods? Yes.
91. I find that in one of the clauses of the Bill the name of the office at which you intend to exhibit copies of the plan and of the Bill has been left out;—will you state a place? Toronto. That would be the most convenient place for residents there.
92. And two copies signed by the manager shall be deposited with—? The Clerk of Petty Sessions at Waratah; that is the nearest Court of Petty Sessions.
93. Chairman.] I notice that this tramway is to pass through Chapman's land;—has he had notice of this, and has he offered any objection? He has had lots of notices. We have made arrangements with him to buy the land through which the tramway will pass, and he has agreed to take a certain sum for it. The matter is in the hands of the solicitors to complete.
94. Does the Bill make any provision for the Railway Commissioners to purchase this tramway line? No, I think not.
95. You stated that you thought this tramway would be a great convenience, as very often the steamers could not give the accommodation required of them;—are you aware, of your own knowledge, that the steamers only meet the morning train from Newcastle? Yes. You can, by paying an extra charge, get them to come and meet the Sydney train.
96. By making special arrangements? By making special arrangements.
97. Those wishing to go from Sydney to Lake Macquarie are almost compelled to go on to Newcastle and come back by the morning train, as there is not the necessary accommodation at the railway station? Yes.
98. There is a large hotel at Toronto? Yes; containing fifty rooms.
99. And I presume that the tramway is intended to meet the train from both ends—from Sydney and from Newcastle? Certainly.
100. Mr. Barbour.] It is proposed by the company to start the tramway from the railway? Yes.
101. And go right on to the township of Toronto? To the Toronto wharf.
102. I think you said that you had not communicated with the Railway Commissioners at all about the matter? No, we have not.
103. Mr. W. Stephen.] How far is Fassifern Station from Newcastle? About 18 miles.

THURSDAY, 11 APRIL, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. F. FARNELL, | Mr. W. STEPHEN.
R. STEVENSON, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Rofe, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

William Vero Read called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. W. V. Read.
11 April, 1889.
104. Mr. Rofe.] What position do you hold? I am Acting Secretary for Railways.
105. Have you examined the plan of the proposed tramway from Fassifern Railway Station to the Toronto Estate, Lake Macquarie? Yes. I may state that I have been requested by the Commissioners for Railways, in answer to a notice which has been sent to them, to represent them at this meeting, and I shall be glad to answer any inquiries and to express for them their opinion of the proposed tramway. I am desired by the Commissioners to say that they have no objection to the proposed tramway, and the only suggestion they would offer is that the gauge of the line should be 4 feet 8½ inches, in preference to the proposed gauge of 2 feet 6 inches, for this reason, that on holidays and on busy days, when there is likely to be a large excursion traffic, the tramway people might be enabled to make arrangements with the department for the use of some of their rolling-stock for carrying any excess traffic which they might be unable to provide for with their own rolling-stock.

106. Did you notice that there is no intention of connecting with the railway line. We only intend to take our line just inside the reserve? There is a proviso in the Bill for connecting.

107. If the trade or requirement of the district should warrant such an expenditure? Therefore, if the gauge were 2 feet 6 inches, it would be no use for connecting with the railway line.

108. Mr. P. Farnell.] As far as you know, all branch lines—either tramlines or railways—that connect with the Government railways have a gauge of 4 feet 8½ inches? Nearly all. There are some mineral lines that have not that gauge.

109. Mr. Rofs.] Do you know what is the width of the Joadja Creek line? That is a narrow gauge.

110. Mr. W. Stephen.] Is there not a railway reserve at Fassifern platform? I believe that there is no greater amount of land reserved at Fassifern than is usual at a roadside station.

111. That is for a siding? Yes.

112. Mr. Rofs.] The custom now is, I think, to reserve a little more land than was done in the olden times at platforms. This is a recently-constructed line? At stations it is the practice now to reserve more land than used to be reserved; but Fassifern is only a platform.

113. Chairman.] Is it not the fact that they reserve now on both sides of newly-constructed lines a mile of country;—are you aware that that is the case? I am not aware of it.

114. I think that the Lands Department, before a line is constructed, reserve so much? I am not aware what the Lands Department does.

115. Are you aware that passengers travelling from Sydney to Lake Macquarie have now to go on to Newcastle and come back in the morning, because the steamers on the lake only meet the morning train, and there is no accommodation at Fassifern? I believe that, except by making special arrangements, people have to go to Newcastle to get to the lake.

116. Mr. W. Stephen.] And then return as far as Cockle Creek? Yes.

117. Chairman.] That, of course, means increased expense? It does; but I have no doubt that when a greater amount of traffic springs up that difficulty will be overcome by having a house of accommodation provided at the nearest point.

118. Do you think that this tramway would increase the revenue of the Government railways? I think it would, because, when additional facilities are given to get to such a place as Lake Macquarie, greater numbers of people will travel thither.

119. Are you aware that at the terminus of the proposed tramway there is a large hotel, built for the convenience of excursionists and others? I understand that a large hotel has been built.

120. And that this tramway will run from the Government railway station to the wharf in front of this hotel? I understand that that is the case.

121. On the whole, you consider that the tramway would be a great public convenience? I consider that it would.

122. In your opinion, if the company get this Bill through, a tramway 2 feet 6 inches wide can be built that will be as safe as one with a width of 4 feet 8½ inches? I think that by limiting the speed such a tramway would be perfectly safe.

123. Are you aware whether any lines of this kind have been constructed in England, or elsewhere? To a limited extent, there have been lines of this kind.

124. What about the safety of them? As I have just observed, at a limited speed I consider they can be worked safely.

Mr.
W. F. Read.

 WINDSOR GAS-LIGHT COMPANY (LIMITED) ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

 REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, for whose consideration and report was referred, on the 4th June, 1889, the "Windsor Gas-light Company (Limited) Act Amendment Bill,"—beg to report to your Honorable House:—

That they have examined the witnesses named in the list* (whose evidence will be found appended hereto); and the Preamble having been satisfactorily proved to your Committee, they proceeded to consider the several clauses of the Bill in which it was not deemed necessary to make any amendment. *See List, page 4.

Your Committee now beg to lay before your Honorable House the Bill without amendment.

ALEXANDER BOWMAN,
Chairman.

No. 3 Committee Room,
Sydney, 14th June, 1889.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE.

TUESDAY, 14 JUNE, 1889.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Bowman, | Mr. Frank Farnell,
 | Mr. Gormly.

Mr. Bowman called to the Chair.

Entry from Votes and Proceedings appointing the Committee read by the Clerk.

Printed copies of the Bill referred, together with the original Petition to introduce the same, before the Committee.

Present—J. Arthur Dowling, Esq. (Solicitor for the Bill.)

Charles Hole (Secretary to the Company), called in, sworn, and examined.

Witness produced certificate of the Incorporation of the Company, and handed in the consent of the Richmond Corporation to the extension of the gas main through their Borough, also consent of the Commissioner for Roads, together with a letter from J. E. Onus (Mayor of Richmond), stating that he had no reason to alter his evidence of 7th December, 1888,—which were ordered to be appended. (See Appendices 1 to 5.)

Witness withdrew.

James Arthur Dowling sworn and examined.

Witness handed in consent of William Coward, the largest shareholder in the Company, to the passing of the Bill. (See Appendix 6.)

Room cleared.

Preamble considered.

Question,—“That this preamble stand part of the Bill,”—put and passed.

Solicitor called in and informed.

Clauses 1 to 7 read and agreed to.

Title read and agreed to.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

WINDSOR GAS-LIGHT COMPANY (LIMITED) ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

FRIDAY, 14 JUNE, 1889.

Present:—
 Mr. BOWMAN, | Mr. FRANK FARNELL,
 | Mr. GORMLY.

ALEXANDER BOWMAN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

J. A. Dowling, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Charles Hole called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Dowling.] You are the Secretary of the Windsor Gas-light Company (Limited)? Yes. Mr. C. Hole.
2. You produce the certificate of the incorporation of that Company? I do. 14 June, 1889.
3. You are aware that in 1884 an Act was passed to enable the Windsor Gas-light Company to light the town of Windsor and the suburbs? Yes.
4. Is the Company now in working order? Yes.
5. Do you produce copies of some papers under the hand of the Council Clerk of the town or borough of Richmond authorizing the extension of the works to that town? Yes. [Appendices 1 to 3.]
6. Do you know the signatures of the gentlemen signing those papers? Yes.
7. They are the signatures of Mr. Guest and Mr. Onus? Yes; Mr. Guest is the Council Clerk, and Mr. Onus the Mayor.
8. You produce a Bill endorsed with the consent of the Commissioner for Roads? Yes. [Appendix A.]
9. What are your instructions on the question of the issue of 4,000 preferential shares? To issue 4,000 preferential shares, and to borrow money upon them.
10. To borrow money on the security of the plant and uncalled capital of the Company? Yes.
11. And mortgage the plant? Yes.
12. Who gave you the authority? The shareholders.
13. At a general meeting? Yes.
14. Mr. F. Farnell.] Have you a board of directors? Yes.
15. Mr. Dowling.] What was the resolution of that meeting? That the directors be empowered to issue 4,000 preferential shares, and to borrow £4,000 on the shares and the plant of the Company.
16. For the purpose of extending the means of the Company? For the purpose of extending its operations to Richmond.
17. You know Mr. Onus? Yes.
18. He gave evidence before a previous committee on this Bill. Do you produce a letter from him to the effect he would not attend this meeting, because he could add nothing to his previous evidence? Yes. [Appendix 5.]

James Arthur Dowling sworn and examined:—

19. Chairman.] You are the Solicitor for the Bill? Yes.
20. You produce some document from Mr. Coward? I produce a consent by Mr. William Coward, the largest proprietor in the Company, who was not present at the meeting resolving upon the amending Bill, to the passing of the same. [Appendix 6.] Mr. J. A. Dowling.
14 June, 1889.
21. He is not in town now? As a matter of fact, he is in England at the present moment. He has consented to the passing of the Bill.

APPENDIX.

[To Evidence of Charles Hole.]

Dear Sir,

In further reply to your letter of the 27th August last, I have the honor, by direction of the Borough Council of Richmond, to inform you that the Council will be pleased to allow your Company to extend your main into and through this Borough, and will be also very glad to assist you as far as possible by lighting portions of the streets of the Borough, but will not guarantee any number of lights.

Chas. Hole, Secretary, Windsor Gas Company.

Council Chambers, Richmond, 15/9/87.

I am, &c.,

C. S. GUEST,

Council Clerk.

(2.)

Dear Sir,

On 27th August, 1887, I addressed you, asking whether the extension of the mains of this Company to your town would meet with your approval, and whether your support and encouragement would be given.

I had the pleasure of receiving your reply in the affirmative, but, as a comparatively long time has elapsed since then, I now beg to address you again, and say that our Amending Act, to give us the requisite power to enter your town, is coming before Parliament, and I should be glad of a few lines at the present time, expressing your consent and approval of the proposed extension.

His Worship the Mayor of Richmond.

I have, &c.,

C. HOLE,

Secretary.

(3.)

Dear Sir,

In reply to yours of yesterday, permit me to state that the Borough Council of Richmond has not seen fit to alter its decision in re gas from your Company, as conveyed to you by my letter of 15/9/87.

You must, however, distinctly understand that my Council will not guarantee to use any particular number of lights. They will, however, support you as far as it may be deemed advisable, so long as your charges are fair.

Chas. Hole, Secretary, Windsor Gas Company.

I am, &c.,

J. E. ONUS,

Mayor.

(4.)

Consent of the Commissioner for Roads attached to a copy of the Bill.

As the officer-in-charge of the main road, Richmond to Windsor, and of the Fitzroy and Windsor Bridges, I see no objection to the enactment herein proposed.

7 November, 1888.

WILLIAM C. BENNETT,

Commissioner for Main Roads.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your inquiry as to my giving evidence before the Select Committee concerning your Amending Bill, I can only state that I can give no different evidence to what I gave before the Select Committee on the 7th December last. The circumstances at present are exactly similar as they were when I gave my evidence, and I now reiterate what I stated on that occasion.

Charles Hole, Esq., Secretary Windsor Gas-light Company (Limited).

I am, &c.,

J. E. ONUS,

Mayor of Richmond.

[Evidence referred to.]

(5.)

Joseph Edward Onus called in, sworn, and examined:—

17. Mr. Dowling.] You are the Mayor of Richmond? I am.
18. You are aware of the purport of this Bill? Yes.
19. It is for the purpose of supplying the town of Richmond with gas from the Windsor Gas-works, and also, if necessary, from works in Richmond? Yes.
20. Your Borough Council consent to such a Bill? They do.
21. Mr. Day.] I suppose you have had a great deal of experience about Richmond? I have lived there all my life; I am a native of Richmond.
22. Ever since this question of supplying the town of Richmond with gas cropped up, have you heard any ratepayers or any of those about Richmond object to it? I never heard a single person dissent.
23. As far as your knowledge goes, being one of the leading men of Richmond, you find the people of Richmond in favour of this Bill passing? Yes.
24. In order to give them the privilege of lighting the town of Richmond with gas? Yes.
25. The Council are firmly in favour of it? Every member of them.
26. You believe it will be for the benefit of the town of Richmond and the inhabitants to have these gas-works extended to them? I am certain of it; in fact, if they did not come, we should have to try some other means of lighting the town.
27. Mr. Barbour.] You believe that this is a better way of doing it than doing it on your own account? I do.
28. Mr. Gormly.] It would suit the convenience of the residents of Richmond? Yes; the whole population.
29. Mr. Day.] This Bill does not compel the inhabitants of Richmond to take gas from the Gas Company of Windsor unless they are thoroughly satisfied with the prices and all that? Of course it does not.
30. Anyone in Richmond can use the same lights as they have there now; the gas can be laid on, and they need not take it, unless they like? No.
31. Unless the price suits them and everything is satisfactory? No; I think most of the residents of the town have consented. I think some people went round to canvass the district, and almost every person was in favour of taking the gas.
32. Chairman.] The Corporation has promised to take it? Yes.
33. Mr. Barbour.] So far as you know there is no one objecting to it? Not as far as I know.
34. Mr. Day.] Was this amending Bill brought before your Council? Yes.
35. Was it carefully considered? It was.
36. After careful consideration the conclusion was that you would agree to it? Yes; I have written a letter to the effect that the Council would not guarantee any certain thing, but as long as they were fair they would be supported.
37. Mr. Barbour.] You know that by introducing this your streets will be broken up by the laying of the pipes? Yes.
38. To all that you are perfectly willing and agreeable? Yes.

[To evidence of James Arthur Dowling.]

(6.)

Windsor and Richmond Gas-light Bill, extension to Richmond.

As the largest shareholder in the above Gas-light Company, I hereby consent to the passing of a Bill, notice of which is set out in the notice of 25th April, 1888.

Dated this 27th day of November, 1888.

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

WARWICK FARM RAILWAY BILL.

TUESDAY, 25 JUNE, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. F. FARNELL, | Mr. O'SULLIVAN,
| Mr. HUGH TAYLOR.

FRANK FARNELL, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Charles Cecil Read, Esq., Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Edwin Ernest Allan Oatley called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] You are one of the proprietors of the Warwick Farm Racecourse? I am.
2. You are seeking now to pass a Bill through the Legislature to authorize the construction of a railway, from the southern line to the Warwick Farm Racecourse? Yes.
3. Have you had any objection raised to your proposal on the part of the Railway Commissioners? None whatever.
4. In fact, they have shown their eagerness on every occasion to assist you? Quite so.
5. It will be a great convenience, not only to you as the proprietors of the racecourse, but also to the general public, to have this extension carried out? Yes, and also to the Railway Department.
6. As a matter of fact, this extension has been constructed and used? Yes.
7. And you think it will prove a source of great revenue to the Railway Department? Quite so.
8. About how much has it cost to make this extension? Roughly speaking, between £4,000 and £5,000.
9. You have spent that out of your own pockets? Yes. I have not gone into figures, but I think it will cost us about £7,000 altogether.
10. You have made every provision, where the line crosses public roads or highways, for the protection of the public? Every provision that could be made has been made.
11. Mr. O'Sullivan.] Did you say the line was really constructed? Yes.
12. I suppose you got the permission of all the land-owners, through which the line passes, to make the extension? The land belongs to ourselves.
13. Chairman.] What is the length of the line? About half-a-mile.
14. It passes through no land except that owned by yourselves? That is so.

William Forrester called in, sworn, and examined:—

15. Chairman.] You are one of the proprietors of the Warwick Farm Racecourse? Yes.
16. How many other gentlemen are there associated with you? There are several others besides myself.
17. Mr. Oatley and Mr. John Thompson are two of them? Yes.
18. You are desirous of constructing a railway line from the main southern line to the Warwick Farm Racecourse? Yes.
19. You believe that the construction of that line will prove a very great benefit and convenience to the public? Very much so.

- Mr. W. Forrester.
25 June, 1889.
20. It will also be a source of revenue to the Railway Department? Yes.
21. You have heard of no objection on the part of the Railway Commissioners or anyone else to the construction of this line? I have not heard of any.
22. You have made proper provision for the safety of the public at those places where the line crosses public roads? Yes.
23. Mr. O'Sullivan.] I suppose you gave due notice that you were going to construct this line? Yes.
24. As you are the only owners of the land between the Government railway and the racecourse no one could object to your making the line? The line runs through our leasehold and freehold property. We have twenty-one years' tenure of our leasehold.

Charles Cowdery called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. C. Cowdery.
25 June, 1889.
25. Chairman.] You have been acting as engineer for the construction of a line from the main southern line to the Warwick Farm Racecourse, for which it is proposed to get the sanction of the Legislature? Yes.
26. Has that been constructed on the same lines as those upon which the Government railways are constructed? Yes.
27. The gauge is 4 ft. 8½ in., sidings have been made, and every precaution has been taken to secure the safety of people travelling upon the line? Yes.
28. The permanent-way is the same as that of the Government railways? Precisely the same. It was obtained from the Government, and inspected by their officers.
29. Do you produce any plans? I produce a plan and section of the line. [Produced.]
30. Mr. O'Sullivan.] From what point does the line start? From 21 miles 21 chains on the southern line.
31. Chairman.] What is the total length of the extension? 62 chains.
32. There has been no objection raised to the construction of the line? None whatever.
33. As a matter of fact the Commissioners have given their permission, and have run their trains over the line? Yes.
34. Mr. Taylor.] Are you aware whether Government inspectors visited this line? Yes. I was present when they did so. They did so before a train was allowed to run on it.

Charles Cecil Read sworn and examined:—

- Mr. C. C. Read.
25 June, 1889.
35. Chairman.] You are acting as solicitor for the proprietors of the Warwick Farm Racecourse? I am.
36. The Bill which you seek to have passed into law is the Bill which has been drafted by you? Yes, and settled by counsel.
37. As a matter of fact the line—the construction of which this Bill proposes to legalize—has been already constructed? It has.
38. You, I believe, took so much interest in the construction of this branch line that you made it your business to interview the Secretary for Railways so as to obtain the necessary permission to run trains over it? I not only interviewed the Secretary, but I also interviewed the Commissioners.
39. And they offered no objection at all? Not only that, but they also granted permission for trains to be run on it.
40. Until this Bill has been passed through Parliament? On one occasion, on Saturday week.
41. As a matter of fact the line can only interfere with the public at the crossing of the main southern road? Yes.
42. And precautions have been taken for their safety? Yes. Men were stationed at the gate to ensure the safety of the public.
43. Are you aware whether the Commissioners visited the line before trains were run on it? Only from hearsay.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

WEST WALLSEND COAL COMPANY'S BILL.

TUESDAY, 24 SEPTEMBER, 1889.

Present:—

Mr. BURNS,		Mr. COLLS,
Mr. CREER,		Mr. SCOTIE,

MR. BURNS IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Maitland Paxton called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] What position do you occupy in connection with the West Wallsend Coal Company? I am manager. Mr.
J. M. Paxton.
24 Sept., 1889.
2. The Company have petitioned Parliament for a Bill, to confirm the removal of their registered office, from Newcastle to Sydney, and providing that the articles of association held by the Company shall be to the same effect as if they had been the original registered articles? Yes.
3. I presume that the reason for applying for this Bill is that you find it inconvenient to have a registered office at Newcastle instead of at Sydney? Yes, the office has already been removed to Sydney, and the Bill is intended to confirm the removal. It has been impossible to get quorums at the annual and half-yearly meeting at Newcastle as the great bulk of the shareholders reside at Sydney.
4. You find that you could not carry on your business so well at Newcastle as you can at Sydney? Yes.
5. And you have been forced to hold meetings in Sydney? Yes.
6. Then as to the articles of association what you propose is to give effect to some technical omission in adopting the articles at the right time? Quite so, that is the object.

George Edward Browne called in, sworn, and examined:—

7. Chairman.] I believe that you hold some position in the firm of Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen? Yes. G. E. Browne.
24 Sept., 1889.
8. Are you a solicitor? Yes; I am a partner in the firm.
9. And your firm are acting on behalf of the Company as solicitors? Yes.
10. Have you read this Bill? Yes; I drew the Bill.
11. The second clause of the Bill has relation to the articles of association;—will you explain why it is necessary to have this provision? Because the articles adopted by the Company were not those that were adopted at the time when the memorandum was signed; in other words, no articles were adopted with the memorandum. The memorandum was filed by itself; therefore table A of the Company's Act applied. There is no provision in table A giving the Company power to issue preference shares, and although in the articles which were adopted immediately after the registration of the Company such a power was given, yet it would be illegal because the articles must contain such a power as they were originally filed.
12. The object of the Bill is to make good that technical omission? Yes; it is to make the articles of association of the same effect as if they had been filed in the first instance, giving the power to which I have referred.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MILITARY FORCES OF THE COLONY.
(REPORT FOR 1888.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 2 May, 1889.

REPORT of the Major-General Commanding on the Military Forces of New South Wales for the year 1888.

The strength of the Permanent Artillery on the 1st of the current year was 422, of an establishment of 500 all ranks, being a material increase over previous year. The number of recruits enlisted was 114, and no special difficulty will exist in completing the establishment, which I understand has been somewhat delayed in consequence of the increased discrimination practised in selection.

The non-effective list is made up of 28 desertions, 3 deaths, and 28 discharges—total 59, as compared with 92 in 1887.

The synopsis of discharges indicates that men have left the corps for the following causes:—

Termination of limited engagement	11
Medically unfit	3
Incorrigible and worthless	5
By purchase	5
Spec discharge	2
Services no longer required	2
Misconduct	2
Transferred	7
	37

The number of courts-martial amounted to 27, and summary awards by Commanding Officer to 31, as compared respectively with 30 and 27 of previous year. Considering the large increase to the corps, this comparison may be regarded as indicating a general improvement in conduct.

All the officers, except one, have now completed a course of instruction under Colonel Bingham, R.A., the Chief Instructor, and succeeded in securing first-class certificates. 2 sergeant-majors, 1 quartermaster-sergeant, 11 sergeants, 18 corporals, 13 bombardiers, 17 acting bombardiers, and 212 gunners have also been under instruction—making a total of 281 of all ranks. Out of that number, 43 have received first-class certificates, 14 second-class, and 6 third-class. It is gratifying to note that Colonel Bingham speaks highly of the attention and obedience accorded him by all ranks whilst in the performance of his instructional duties. This officer has also attended all inspections and parades of the Volunteer Artillery, and generally instructed that corps.

The knowledge and practice of a proper system of interior economy has been demonstrated to be defective, and steps have been taken to secure an improvement in this respect.

Towards the close of last year thirty horses were purchased by a Board, consisting of Colonel Bingham, Major MacDonald, and Veterinary-Surgeon Scott, for the use of the field-battery which is now in course of organization, thus supplying a long-felt want, besides adding materially to the effectiveness of the field-force.

My annual inspection of the corps was fixed, as usual, for the last quarter of the year, but the despatch and long retention of the troops in Newcastle necessitated it being deferred until the present year.

Surgeon-Major Williams delivered a course of lectures and instruction to non-commissioned officers and men on stretcher and bearer drill, lasting over a period of two months.

In the latter portion of last year a small corps of Permanent Submarine Miners was formed, the establishment being fixed at 1 field officer, 1 captain, 1 sergeant-major, 1 sergeant-instructor, 4 corporals, 1 bugler, and 11 sappers; total, 24. Pending the construction of the submarine mining depôt, it has been found convenient to quarter the men in barracks at Dawes Battery, as being handy to Berry's Bay, where the daily duties are being carried on.

A corps of Permanent Mounted Infantry was similarly raised, the complement being—1 field officer, 1 captain, 1 sergeant, 2 corporals, 1 bugler, and 26 privates; total, 32. The Board previously noted also purchased horses for this corps, which are now being trained as speedily as possible at Victoria Barracks.

Hospital.

The condition of the Medical Department, as reported by Surgeon-Major Williams, is as follows:— During the year 207 men presented themselves for inspection, of which 23 were rejected as unfit, 153 were attested for the Permanent Artillery, 39 for the Permanent Mounted Infantry, and 12 for the Permanent Submarine Miners.

The general physique of these recruits shows an improvement over that of preceding year, and the average measurement, &c., points to a fine body of men:—

	Height.	Chest measurement.	Weight.
Artillery	5 ft. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.	37 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.	10 st. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb.
Miners	5 ft. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.	36 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.	10 st. 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ lb.
Infantry	5 ft. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.	37 in.	10 st. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb.

Classes for gymnastic exercises have been organized for the instruction and training of recruits, with beneficial effect in developing the physique.

There were 227 admissions into the hospital, of which 219 were Artillery, 7 Mounted Infantry, and 1 Volunteer injured whilst in camp.

The following is the summary of diseases, many of which were, however, of a trifling nature:—

Respiratory organs—

Phthisis	4
Pleurisy	2
Cold	10
Sore throat	3
Pharyngitis	1
Total	20

Nervous diseases—

Lumbago	2
Mania	2

Measles	2
Hæmatemesis	1
Hæmorrhage	1
Cardiac syncope	1
Polyp. of ear	1
Congestion of liver	1
Rheumatism	6
Observation	1
Total	74

There were three deaths from hydatid tumour on the lung, pulmonary phthisis, and cerebral convulsions, respectively.

A marked decline is to be noted in the number of admissions from intemperance, viz., 22, as against 56 in 1887.

I inspected the hospital, and found it in a very creditable condition.

Water is now laid on through the Victoria Barracks, and the system of drainage has been completed and connected with the main sewers. It is a noteworthy fact that since this has been effected not a single case of enteric fever has to be recorded.

I inspected the Provost, and was satisfied with its condition and the manner in which the various duties were carried out.

The establishment of 3,907 shows an increase of 1,072 over that of previous year, and has been effected by the formation of six companies of Mounted Infantry, the transfer of eight companies of Reserves to the Infantry Regiments, and the enrolment of a small Medical Staff Corps.

Volunteers—partially-paid

At my inspection I found the clothing, arms, and accoutrements generally in good order, excepting the accoutrements of Orange, Blayney, Molong, Ulladulla, Richmond, and Penrith Companies. Those of the 4th Regiment were, in many cases, below the standard. The Volunteer Artillery Band paraded in a slovenly manner. The continued laxity of the Molong Company in the above respect indicates that a change in the command is necessary.

The drill of the Volunteer Artillery was, as a rule, very fair, and in some cases good. I have again to point out the necessity of a Central School of Instruction, for without it this corps cannot attain that knowledge of its duties which is desirable.

The instruction of the Submarine Miners, both on whole and half-day parades, has, in the absence of a mining steamer, been limited to work on shore, but this disability will be shortly removed.

The Engineers have, as usual, done good work in exercises special to that branch of the service, including the construction and laying out of simple field-works, in knotting and lashing spars, signalling, &c.

The drill of the Infantry may be taken all round as extremely fair; but at my inspection of the 2nd Regiment I found that in extended order the officers' knowledge of the bugle sounds was defective.

The establishment of whole-day parades has proved of great value in affording time for manœuvring over extended areas and familiarizing officers and others with the topography of the country.

The clothing arrangements, which have lately been vested entirely and independently in commanding officers, have worked well, and are infinitely more satisfactory than those which previously obtained.

This force continues to maintain its character for good conduct and a wholesome spirit of subordination, and, in my opinion, furnishes a good return for the money and care spent upon it.

The strength of the Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry Reserves, on the 1st January last, was 1,082, as against 2,352 of preceding year. This decadence is to be chiefly attributed to the transfer of one battery of Artillery and thirteen companies of Infantry to the partially-paid branch. Several corps also elected to become Rifle Companies, of which no less than fifty were formed last year, with active members numbering 1,431.

Reserves.

The Cavalry, one battery of Artillery, Scottish Rifles, and two or three Reserve companies of Infantry (exclusive of those transferred) have alone kept up an interest in their work. The drill of these corps may be generally termed fair. More care is required in fitting and keeping in order the buff belts, those of the Scottish Rifles having especially been found to be wanting in care and attention.

The carbines of the Cavalry in many cases show great neglect. The clothing of the Cavalry has been changed to the "bush" pattern, and, I think, with good effect. This branch of the Reserves promises to be a success, and should prove a material addition to the armed strength of the Colony.

The annual continuous training occupied nine days, commencing on Good Friday. The field force was encamped on the Rifle Range at Paddington, and was composed of—Staff, 33; two batteries of Field Artillery, 108; Engineers, 94; four regiments of Infantry, 1,585; Reserves, 164; total, 1,984. The usual camp was formed at Middle Head, and consisted of 217 Permanent Artillery, 393 Volunteer Artillery, 113 Submarine Miners, and 171 Infantry. At the former camp much useful work was done, and the ground lying between Botany and Sydney was systematically worked over. This afforded the troops the opportunity of familiarising themselves with the ground likely to be selected by an enemy in an advance on the city. The exercises and manœuvres were thus of more practical use than those usually carried out at camps removed from the possible theatre of operations. At Middle Head good work was also done in artillery and submarine mining; in the latter case real mines, connected with one of the permanent test-rooms of the harbour defence, were laid. A class of officers and men were employed in fitting up this room.

Continuous

room and learning their duties. The officers were also instructed in laying out and buoying mine-fields in laying out mines, firing charges, making up charges, loading mines, fitting up electrical works of mines laying main cables, &c.; also in manipulating arc lamps and search-lights. The non-commissioned officers and men also worked well.

Good conduct, ready obedience, and intelligent interest in the work were common to both camps. The length of time under arms—the long marches performed under a hot sun without weakening the fighting strength of the field-force—was most encouraging.

Musketry.

The musketry returns for the past year show an improvement in shooting. The numbers who went through the course were—Engineers, 29; Submarine Miners, 8; 1st Regiment, 376; 2nd Regiment, 354; 3rd Regiment, 283; 4th Regiment, 334; total, 1,434. Of these there were 369 marksmen; 690 first-class shots; 516 second-class; and 228 third-class; with the following percentage—marksmen, 25·73; first-class, 48·12; second-class, 35·98; third-class, 15·89. The figures of merit show that the improvement has been progressive, and may in part be accounted for by the energy and interest displayed by Captain Cuthell, the officer instructor of musketry, and his staff of assistants, as also by the better attendance of officers and attention of others. In 1885 it was 26·79; 1886, 39·56; 1887, 63·93; and last year, 73·51. The best shot in the force is Corporal J. Jennings, of the Lambton Company, 4th Regiment, with a total of 138 points. The best shots of corps were as follow:—

Engineers, Sapper J. Menziowith	132 points.
Submarine Miners, Private J. Miles	117 "
1st Regiment, Private H. Jarvis, A Co.	135 "
2nd Regiment, Private R. East, C Co.	129 "
3rd Regiment, Private F. Cubitt, B Co.	135 "
4th Regiment, Corporal W. Seaward, B Co.	136 "

Ammunition and Stores.

The reserve of ammunition for B.L. and M.L. ordnance, machine guns, and small arms is maintained according to scale.

The officer commanding Submarine Mining Forces reports that he will be fairly well off for stores when those requisitioned for from Woolwich some months ago are received.

Major Blanchard, D.A.C.G. of Ordnance, points out that owing to the larger development of the Military Department it is pressingly requisite to fix upon a site and form a magazine station for the better security, care, and distribution of the large and costly store of ammunition on which the Colony has to depend in time of war. Meantime the service is carried on under great and increasing difficulties in respect to facilities for handling in receipt and issue. None at all exists for inspection, separation, airing, selection, and rejection of stock. Dry and secure magazines are required for gunpowder in bulk, filled gun-cartridges, small-arm cartridges, and filled shells. Detached buildings should be available for filling shells and gun-cartridges, examining ammunition, storage and examination of tubes, fuzes, lights, &c. Sheds are necessary for cleaning and painting projectiles. Shops for filling and reforming gun and rifle cartridges are required to complete means and appliances of the Ordnance Store Department. By the above it will be gathered that if the stores are all found fit for service in time of emergency it will be the result of accident rather than precaution.

General remarks.

In conclusion, I feel it my duty to again urge upon the Government the desirability of bringing in a Militia Bill, and providing a suitable rifle range for the Head-quarter force. The opening of the Centennial Park has crippled rifle-shooting, and it is now quite impossible to train troops to use their weapons in accordance with the enhanced principles of military science.

Many important changes and improvements have been effected in the organization of the forces during the past year, notably the provision of horses for the field-battery of the Permanent Artillery; the enrolment of a Permanent Corps of Submarine Miners under Lieutenant-Colonel Penrose, R.E., with command of the Submarine Mining Forces of the Colony; the enrolment of a corps of Permanent Mounted Infantry under Major Lassetter, of the South Staffordshire Regiment; the formation of six companies of partially-paid Mounted Infantry; the increase of the four Infantry Regiments from eight to ten companies each; the organization of a partially-paid Medical Staff Corps; the transfer of the Ordnance Store to the Colonial Secretary's Department, and its due subordination to the military authorities; the establishment of Reserve rifle companies throughout the Colony; the appointment of Colonel Bingham, R.A., as Firemaster for the periodical inspection of ordnance, ammunition, and stores, and who, in that capacity, has performed services of considerable value to the Colony; the appointment of a committee whose duty it has been to formulate a scheme of defence calculated for immediate adoption on outbreak of war; the establishment of a United Service Institute, intended for the higher education of officers in military and naval science and knowledge.

Although it is a matter for congratulation that so much has been done, at the same time there are further and pressing needs which must be complied with before the military service can be said to possess that complete and elastic organization necessary to efficiency, economy, and absolute preparedness for war.

PROCEEDINGS

OF A

COURT OF INQUIRY

AND

GENERAL COURTS-MARTIAL

TOGETHER WITH ACTION TAKEN IN THE SUPREME COURT

IN THE CASE OF

No. 95, BRIGADE QUARTERMASTER-SERGEANT (NOW GUNNER) WILLIAM WEBSTER, N.S.W. ARTILLERY.

 Presented to Parliament by Command.

DISCIPLINE.

Court of Inquiry—Supply and Issue of Clothing, Permanent Artillery.

(89-58.)

The Major-General Commanding to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

My Lord,

Head Quarters, 30 January, 1889.

I have the honor to submit for consideration the proceedings of a Board of Inquiry which I conceived it my duty to convene, for the purpose of investigation and report upon the supply and issue of clothing to the Permanent Artillery, as also the issue of compensation in lieu thereof.

2. In the matter of the latter your Excellency will note that the procedure appears to have been for Officers Commanding Batteries to send in to the Regimental authorities lists containing the names of men and articles for which compensation was desired. The enumeration of articles was then transferred, minus the names of claimants, to a requisition made out by the brigade quartermaster-sergeant (Mr. Webster), and by him submitted to the Officer Commanding Permanent Artillery for signature. This document was then sent to the contractor, who prepared the ordinary vouchers, specifying articles and contract price of the same, and after procuring the endorsement of the Officer Commanding Permanent Artillery, he presented them direct to the Treasury and received payment as for clothing actually supplied, which, I may remark, was not a true exposition of the transaction. The contractor finally handed over to Warrant-officer Webster two-thirds of the money thus received for payment to the men, and retained one-third, I suppose for his trouble in making out the voucher. Comment on this is unnecessary, and it is curious to note that during the preliminary investigation not one of those who should have been able to explain matters did so, and, in point of fact, it was only after repeated pressure that Mr. Webster could be prevailed upon to give the clue.

3. Mr. Webster has testified that when presenting compensation lists for signature he drew the attention of the Commanding Officer and the Adjutant to the improper way in which he deemed the contractor was obtaining money under this head; but both Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage repudiate the assertion.

4. As connected with the matter of compensation, your Excellency will observe that Mr. Webster has improperly appropriated the sum of £9 12s. 2d., the property of the Government. This sum he indicated, in the first instance, as having been paid him by the contractor as personal compensation for the year 1887. His attention was, however, drawn to the fact that he shortly afterwards received compensation in full, and he has been unable to satisfactorily explain a transaction which has now assumed the complexion of embezzlement.

5. I have to invite attention to the manner in which the work connected with the tailor's shop has been carried on. All clothing before issue must be fitted, and in many cases altered; this has been practically effected by Mr. Webster and the master tailor conjointly. It is true that Officers Commanding Batteries have, in some instances, superintended the fitting and altering, yet they have exercised no check over cost of the latter, which is really the main point that should have been attended to. The evidence goes to show that Mr. Webster was in the habit of assessing charges without reference to any one, and there is too much reason to fear that the large sums paid under this head are to be traced to dishonest manipulation.

6. The custom of allowing "remakes," by which is meant the taking to pieces of a garment, recutting, and putting it together again, was apparently introduced by Mr. Webster, who also assessed the charge for the same, as if made up from the piece. No such thing is permitted in the Imperial Service, nor is it borne out by local instructions, to which I shall presently refer.

7. Of the material supplied to the Permanent Artillery for the purpose of making up, &c., its use can only be associated with the presumably mythical garments thus alluded to by the Board:—"The master-tailor cannot possibly have done all the work he has charged for, even supposing that all the garments said to be made were made. The Board is of opinion the garments, to a very large number said to be made, have not been made, as they cannot be accounted for, nor are they in store, and they have not been issued." Reference to table IV. shows no less than 108 tunics, 76 pairs of cloth trousers, 85 pairs of serge trousers, 167 Norfolk jackets, 115 serge jumpers, and 6 patrol jackets have been apparently overcharged by the master-tailor, and representing a sum of £290 1s. 6d., which he now offers to refund.

8. The Board reports that the regimental store-books are kept in a discreditable manner, and are unreliable; and, further, that alterations have been made therein since the books, in the first instance, passed out of its charge. I, however, see no reason to question the record of the various quantities of clothing received from the contractors, &c., and from which stand-point this inquiry was conducted, inasmuch as a complete check on this is found in the pay accounts. Reference to tables I and III indicate that the balance of clothing which Mr. Webster has failed to account for stands at 15 tunics, 347 pairs of cloth trousers, 335 pairs serge trousers, 69 Norfolk jackets, 113 jumpers, the whole of which represent, with deficient material, no less a sum than £576 3s. 3d., or thereabouts.

9. The evidence given by Warrant-officer Webster and Sergeant Lyttleton is marked by evasion and untruthfulness, and the explanations they have offered are of the weakest character. The actuaries' figures are not to be seriously entertained, for they purport to show that, in certain cases, Mr. Webster issued clothing in excess of that received by him, and in those where he had issued less than the quantities received there is no attempt to account for the balance.

10. Mr. Webster attempts to lessen his responsibility (which, in the early stage of the inquiry, he fully accepted) for the conduct and control of the regimental store and tailor's shop, by fixing on the Commanding Officer and Adjutant, the act of giving to the clerk a duplicate key of the store and causing that person to sleep therein, whereas the evidence goes to prove that these arrangements were simply acceded to by the Regimental Authorities on the initiation and recommendation of Mr. Webster himself. He moreover made no complaint or representation as to the risks he was thereby incurring. In the same way, his complaint as to the inefficiency of his clerk, was only preferred about the time this inquiry commenced, and when he had reason to cast about for some one on whom it might be possible to shift the blame; and this in face of irregularities of which he now professes to have been previously acquainted, but were not reported by him.

11. It will be gathered from the annexed copies of Garrison orders of the 16th of February, 1882, the 9th of February, 7th of March, 5th of June, and 29th of June, 1883, that I issued full and complete instructions in the matter of the supply and issue of clothing, which, had they been obeyed, would have rendered the present situation impossible. For instance, the practice of "re-making" was introduced without proper authority sometime in 1885, and an exorbitant charge for the same permitted. Again, the procedure required by order of the 9th of February, 1883, has not been followed, and consequently the intended check on the master-tailor's work has been rendered futile.

12. The Pay Department has also been much to blame for passing and paying accounts which were not covered by the orders in question. That it did so on the endorsement of the Officer Commanding Permanent Artillery is no sufficient warrant for disobeying the orders of superior authority. Even this excuse is wanting in some instances, inasmuch that the Chief Paymaster has certified and paid clothing accounts which were not endorsed by any responsible person whatever.

13. That such a state of affairs as has been disclosed by this inquiry should have existed in the administration of the Permanent Artillery is, I think, a matter for grave concern. Moreover, to have allowed this Warrant Officer to occupy a position notoriously known to be peculiarly susceptible to temptation and malfeasance, and without the check and supervision of at least one officer of the corps was, I take it, neither just to the service nor to the individual.

14. It now becomes a question as to what course is to be taken in regard to Warrant-officer Webster and Sergeant Lytleton. They may either be tried by Court-martial or they may be dealt with by your Excellency under clauses 182 and 183, part V, of the Army Act of 1881.

15. Seeing that the evidence given before the Board of Inquiry was not on oath it may be more in accord with the principles of justice that Warrant-officer Webster's case should be adjudicated on by a Court-martial. Sergeant Lytleton having, in the absence of a quartermaster, performed his duties under the direction of Mr. Webster, and having offered all the restitution in his power might perhaps be dealt with summarily.

Awaiting instructions,

I have, &c.,

JOHN S. RICHARDSON,

Major-General Commanding.

Approved.—CARRINGTON, 6/2/89.

PROCEEDINGS of a Board of Inquiry assembled at Victoria Barracks on the 26th June, 1888, by order of Major-General Commanding, bearing date 19th June, 1888, to investigate and report upon the system of the supply and issue of clothing now in vogue to the New South Wales Artillery, together with the claims for compensation, and to suggest such alteration as may be necessary to place it upon a more simple and equitable basis.

President—Lieutenant-Colonel EDEN, P.S.

Members—Captain and Adjutant A. H. P. SAVAGE, N.S.W. A., Lieutenant LITTLE, P.S.

The Board having assembled pursuant to the above order, proceed to take evidence.

No. 95 Warrant-officer Quartermaster-sergeant Wm. Webster, N.S.W. A., states:—I am the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant of the N.S.W. Artillery; clothing for the Permanent Artillery is usually obtained in the following manner:—Previous to the establishment of the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General's Department battery size rolls have been called for through the Pay and Quartermaster's Department, but since the establishment of the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General's Department these size rolls have been called for through that department; the clothing has been always issued in bulk to the regiment after being passed by a Garrison Board; a Regimental Board has then been held before the articles have been issued to batteries or individuals; the clothing year begins on the 1st April in each year; under the heading of clothing the rank and file are entitled to 1 cloth tunic, 1 serge Norfolk jacket, 1 pair of cloth trousers, 1 pair of serge trousers, 1 serge jumper, and 2 pairs of boots annually; sergeants are entitled to 1 cloth tunic, 1 pair of cloth trousers (these are of better quality than rank and file cloth), 1 pair of serge trousers, 1 serge Norfolk jacket, and 2 pairs of boots annually, and 1 cloth patrol jacket every second year; staff sergeants (1st class) are entitled to a better quality of cloth than sergeants, viz., "A" quality, and receive 1 cloth tunic, 1 cloth patrol jacket, 1 pair of cloth trousers, 1 pair of serge trousers, and 2 pairs of boots annually; after the clothing has been passed by the Regimental Board it has been fitted individually by the master-tailor and marked for alterations where necessary, and taken possession of by the battery quartermaster-sergeants, who sign my clothing-book when they take the clothing; in 1885, the troops having gone to the Soudan, the regiment for the time being was formed into a dépôt, and I took each man's signature in my clothing-book when his clothing was issued to him finally; the officers commanding batteries finally pass the clothing after alteration; Colonel Murphy finally passed the clothing in 1885-86; the following is the scale of charges allowed to the master-tailor for first fitting and subsequent alteration:—Cloth tunic, 1s. each; cloth trousers, 6d. each; serge trousers, 6d. each; serge jumper, 6d. each; Norfolk jacket, 9d. each; these amounts are paid to the master-tailor whether alterations are required or not; for any extensive alterations the following scale is allowed:—Rank and file tunic, 18s. each; sergeant's tunic, 19s. 6d. each; staff sergeant's tunic, £1 2s. each; band sergeant's tunic, £1 19s. 6d. each; band rank and file tunic, £1 9s. 6d. each; sergeant's patrol jacket, £1 2s. each; Norfolk jacket (serge), 11s. each; jumpers (serge), 6s. 6d. each; cloth trousers (all ranks), 7s. 6d. each; serge trousers (all ranks), 7s. each; for making and sewing on chevrons, chevrons, 6d. per bar; for making and sewing on good conduct badges, 3d. per bar; for sewing on numerals, 2d. per pair; for sewing on sets buttons, repairs tunics, 8d. each; Norfolk jackets, 4d. each; jumpers, 4d. each; under the heading Extensive Alteration I should allow the full amount sanctioned if collar, cuffs, and sleeves of two tunics were taken off and remade; it is almost impossible to fix a price to meet every sort of alteration required, but from my knowledge of tailoring I assess an amount for the different alterations from the scale laid down above; the high rate as compared to that of the Imperial Service is rendered necessary from the enforced employment of civilian labour in the tailors' shop; the master tailor gets no allowance for altering or fitting any garment that is not issued from store.

The Board, at this stage, adjourned until Friday, the 29th instant.

SECOND DAY.

On Friday the 29th instant, the Board reassemble at 11 a.m., pursuant to adjournment. Present—the same members as on the 26th instant.

Brigade Quarter-master Sergeant Webster N.S.W. Artillery, is further examined:—I produce the Garrison Order of 5th June, 1883, which reads as follows:—Paragraph 1—The Commandant approves of charges against the public, at undermentioned rates, being made by the master tailor of Permanent Artillery for work done or to be done in connection with the mode of supplying and fitting clothing, viz., New South Wales Artillery—making staff-sergeant's cloth tunic complete, £1 2s.; making sergeant's tunic complete, 19s. 6d.; making trumpeter's, rank and file, tunics complete, 18s.; making band sergeant's tunic, £1 19s. 6d.; making rank and file (band), £1 9s. 6d.; jackets—making sergeant's patrol jackets, £1 2s.; to all ranks—Norfolk jackets (serge), making, 11s.; making serge jumpers to all ranks, 6s. 6d.; trousers—making, to all ranks, cloth trousers, 7s. 6d.; trousers (serge)—making, all ranks, 7s.; chevrons—making and sewing on chevrons, per bar, 6d.; making and sewing on G.C. badges, per badge, 3d.; embroidered shoulder numerals, per pair, 2d.; repairs—sewing on set of buttons, tunics, 8d. a set, Norfolk jackets 4d., jumpers 4d.; to fitting and alteration of garments at the rate under—cloth tunics 1s. each, cloth trousers 6d. each, serge trousers 6d. each, Norfolk jackets 9d. each, jumpers 6d. each; the material for making up or alterations is paid for by Government, and is ordered on the annual contracts, on requisitions as required; this, of course, is extra to amounts laid down as above; gas and fuel being also paid for by Government; the master tailor's accounts are first rendered to me, and I examine them and certify to their correctness or otherwise, and take them to the Brigade Adjutant for signature of the Colonel Commanding; the accounts are then forwarded to the paymaster for payment; copies of the accounts are filed in my office; at the present time there are employed in the master tailor's shop four civilian men and two females, and three soldiers, including master tailor; directly a recruit joins he is fitted with clothing from my store; the clothing is invariably new, because I have no casualty clothing to issue, the casualty clothing returned to my store being not fit for reissue in the majority of cases, and in other cases so much would require to be done to it in the way of repairs, &c., that it would not be worth while to incur the expense, but I have issued casualty clothing whenever possible; in 1884 a Board was held on the casualty clothing in store, and it was directed to be burnt, the buttons, &c., which could be made use of, being previously taken off; the number of casualty suits I have now on hand are as follows:—tunics 57, Norfolk jackets 51, jumpers 25, cloth trousers 14, serge trousers 17, band tunics 2, sergeant's tunic 1, patrol jacket 1; the annual Board of Survey on remain of clothing, &c., is due to be held next month, and it was my intention to apply for a Board to condemn the casualty clothing above mentioned; if a recruit joins on any day before the 31st December, he is issued with clothing, new or casualty as may be, and he is entitled to a fresh issue of clothing on the 1st April following; but by a recent order of the Major-General Commanding, any recruit joining between 1st January and 1st April is fitted with clothing, which must last him until the April twelve month, a period of fifteen months; the order is as follows:—"Garrison Order, paragraph 4, of 30 October, 1886. In future men joining the New South Wales Artillery, between the 1st January and 31st March inclusive, will receive complete suits of clothing, to last fifteen months, and compensation will be granted to them in addition for those three months, or such portion thereof from date of joining, at rate of annual contract." Previous to the above order recruits who joined between 1st January and 31st March had to make their clothing last fifteen months without any compensation whatever; claims for compensation are forwarded annually by officers commanding batteries in response to a regimental order issued for the purpose; the lists are accompanied by a certificate from each battery officer that he has examined the clothing, and that it is fit to last a further period of twelve months; about 1873 the first claims for compensation were forwarded to the then Commandant, and the amounts allowed and paid for at the end of clothing year by the Brigade paymaster; after this the Commandant directed the officer commanding Artillery to make his own arrangements with the contractor, and up to last year, 1887-88, since I have been brigade quarter-master-sergeant, the compensation lists have been taken by me to the contractor, who has paid me the money, which I have in turn paid over to the officers commanding batteries, and taken their receipts for.

W. WEBSTER, W.-O.

At this stage the Board adjourned until 11 a.m., on Monday, 2nd July.

THIRD DAY.

On Monday, 2nd July, the Board reassemble, pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same members as on the 30th June, 1888.

No. 95 Warrant-officer Webster, Quartermaster-sergeant, N.S.W. Artillery, is further examined:—The compensation claimed and allowed is generally paid within a month or so of the claim; the claimants do not wait the further period for which their clothing has been passed before receiving compensation; no mention is made when forwarding claims for compensation of claimants having been for any part of the previous clothing year in hospital by vice, or in cells, or provost; this has been the custom adopted as far far as I can remember; there is no separate appointment of master-tailor in the regiment; a sergeant is detailed to act as master-tailor, and is available for ordinary sergeant's duties when required, and may be returned to his duty at any time; he is included in the ordinary roll of sergeants; he is struck off duty for special work of master-tailor; on account of the large number of men employed as officers' servants, telegraph operators, orderly-room clerks, orderlies, gun-cleaners at each detachment, and hospital orderlies, and warrant-officers, and those allowed to wear plain clothes, a large compensation list for clothing is annually submitted, whereas the duty men wear out their clothes very rapidly with very heavy guard and fatigue duties they have to perform; in my opinion the clothing issued to a recruit is not sufficient to last twelve months, with ordinary duty wear; I should like to call the attention of the Board to the following, and that is that under clothing regulations a man who is going to take his discharge between 1st April and 30th September is not entitled to compensation or to any issue of clothing for that period; but it often happens that a man does not give notice of his intention to take his discharge or of his desire to re-engage until about a month before his time is up, but I am under the impression that there is an order to the effect that when a man desires to re-engage he has to give a month's notice and pass the doctor; the canteen sergeant and other canteen non-commissioned officers are only entitled to rank and file clothing, and compensation for that clothing; I have not marked any articles of clothing in my store for the past three years; the clothing is marked by the Battery Quartermaster-sergeant (before issue to individuals), who charge 1s. 9d. for marking a complete kit, necessaries included for a recruit, and 1d. per article marked whenever issued after the recruit issue; the recruit issue and the annual issue of clothing is paid for by Government, but whenever any article requires remarking, or any new article is issued on payment, it is marked at the cost of the individual and charged to his account; I can produce no authority for this, but it has been the custom of the service here for the last fourteen years; the numerals for branding accoutrements, and iron stamps for boots, and stencil plates for great coats used in my store are purchased by Government through the incidental account; I receive nothing for marking any clothing or necessaries; the present system of clothing the regiment is in my opinion unsatisfactory; if a capitation allowance were made, and the regiment allowed to make their own contracts, I think there would be a great saving to the Government, and a better system could be instituted, which would give greater satisfaction to all concerned; the item for altering clothing would be infinitesimal as compared to the present arrangement.

W. WEBSTER, W.-O.

The Board at this stage adjourned until Wednesday morning next, the 4th instant, Lieutenant Little having to hand over quarters to-morrow, the 3rd instant.

FOURTH DAY.

On Wednesday, the 4th July, the Board re-assemble pursuant to adjournment. Present—the same members as on the 2nd instant.

No. 1429. Sergeant John Lyttleton, N.S.W. Artillery, states:—

I AM acting Master-tailor of the Permanent Artillery; I joined the regiment on the 29th May, 1855; when the annual clothing is received I have attended as a witness on the Regimental Board, held to examine the clothing before issue; after the issue of the clothing has been sanctioned, I attend at the brigade-quartermaster's store and fit the clothing to individuals by batteries, when I have fitted the clothing before the officers commanding batteries and made the necessary alterations my accounts are rendered by the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant; if the clothing requires no alteration I do not get any allowance for fitting it; the list produced is what I am entitled to claim for making and altering clothing; the amounts I receive for remaking are as follows:—Sergeants' tunics, 18s. each; gunners' tunics, 16s. each; Norfolk jackets, 8s. each; I cannot remember what is allowed me for remaking each article; the officers commanding batteries determine the work to be done to each article, and the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant assesses the amount to be charged; I keep no books myself, but the amounts assessed at the time when the alterations are determined are entered in the Quartermaster-sergeant's books, and when the work is completed vouchers are rendered, and I get the money from the Pay Office; I get no increase on the original estimate for altering any article no matter how many times it may be altered; I keep no check on the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's book, but take it for granted that the amounts I receive are correct, as they are made up from the amounts as put down when the alterations are determined and the amounts assessed; the vouchers are made out in the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's store, and I sign them as being correct; under the head of a remake I should consider the following as an ordinary case:—Tunic: collar off, cuffs off, taking in waist, taking off skirts, for during the time that such an alteration takes up I could make up a new tunic; trousers: taking flaps out, ripping up seams, and recutting; Norfolk jacket: same as tunics, with the exception of taking off skirts; jumpers: altering collars, taking out sleeves, putting new bands on; I employ about six civilian tailors in my shop, at a weekly cost of £2 5s. each and 1s. an hour overtime, one machinist (woman) at £1 5s. a week, and two soldiers at 10s. each a week, besides myself; the present system of clothing the regiment is, in my opinion, not satisfactory, as so much of the clothing has to be altered, and civilian labour is very expensive, and if each man were measured and fitted from these measurements the large expense of altering the clothing would be saved to a very great extent; I only determine the alterations required for a recruit's clothing; the men are paraded with their new clothing on, and I go round with the officer commanding each battery and mark the clothing for alteration then and there in his presence; the clothing is then returned for alteration, and when finished is again fitted, and passed or otherwise by the officer commanding the battery; I get no money for altering clothing until it is finally passed by the officers commanding batteries.

JOHN LYTTLETON,
Sergeant.

The Board at this stage adjourned until 11 o'clock the 5th instant.

FIFTH DAY.

On Thursday, the 5th instant, the Board reassemble pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same Members as on the 4th instant.

*Colonel W. W. Spalding, N.S.W. Artillery, states:—*I command No. 2 Battery, N.S.W. Artillery; whenever I have been in command of my battery at the annual issue of clothing it has been my custom to witness the fitting of all the clothing to the non-commissioned officers and men of the battery; as a rule the bulk of the clothing requires alteration, and sometimes considerable alteration, more especially as regards tunics—outside tunics; I am of opinion that 80 per cent. of the clothing does not require any alteration; this per centage is brought up by the fact that the serge jumpers do not, as a rule, require much alteration; when the repairs have been effected the men are again paraded before me, and I finally pass the clothing, which is then marked and issued to the individual; the sergeant-master tailor, as a rule, gives satisfaction in the manner in which he effects alterations, but there is great delay, as a rule, in getting the work done, due, as he informs me, to press of work; no accounts other than the master tailor's bill against individuals, which he furnishes to me monthly, are checked or paid by me; these bills are simply for repairs, &c., and have nothing to do with the annual issue alterations; a list of names of non-commissioned officers and men in the battery desiring to claim compensation in lieu of clothing is called for and obtained, together with the name of the article or articles for which they desire to be compensated; the men then parade with these articles of clothing, and if they are in first-class order and they have a second article that they can fall back on, their request is provisionally admitted, and the report containing the list of the names, &c., is sent on to the Artillery Brigade Office for final approval, and if approved, the men are subsequently paid, the money being handed over to me by the Brigade quartermaster-sergeant for that purpose; the men do not, as a rule, receive this money for several months, but the compensation allowance is, as a rule, paid before the time at which the clothing is intended to last; the men do not get full compensation—generally about two-thirds the value per article; in considering the claims for compensation, I make it a rule to restrict all such to good character men, and men whom I know take good care of their clothing; for instance, if a man claimed compensation for clothing who had served a long period of imprisonment, or who had been in the hospital by vice for any length of time, I should not recommend his claim, no matter in what state his clothing might be. The clothing is marked when issued by the battery quartermaster-sergeant at the rate of a 1d. per article, which is charged against the Government; the stamps for marking are purchased by Government, but the ink and paint is purchased by the battery quartermaster-sergeant; the present system of clothing the regiment is, in my opinion, most unsatisfactory, for the delay in supply of the clothing, especially in 1887, causes great inconvenience to the service and hardship on the men; I have had to strike men off guard, as they were practically in rags, due to the delay in the issue of clothing, and to keep them in barracks, as, in many cases, I did not feel justified in ordering them to purchase clothing, their clothing being so long overdue; great expense is also inflicted on the Government, due to the many necessary alterations required when the clothing is received, as it is supplied from size-rolls and not actual measurements; I am of opinion that it would be better in every way that a local contractor should be employed to supply and fit the clothing, subject to the approval of a board of officers composed of the officers commanding batteries and the Adjutant, whose decision should be final, and that a certain sum should be granted to this board of officers to clothe the regiment, calculated as a capitation allowance, and the board should have power to deal with all claims for compensation; the board should also have power to refuse any or all of the clothing supplied by the contractor, and that the contract should be for not less than three years, and that there should be penalty clauses for non-supply of clothing to dates contracted; unusually heavy work is brought on the clothing of the N. S. Wales Artillery, as there is a great deal of guard duty—heavy work in moving ordnance and stores of all descriptions, and working suits are not supplied to individuals; in my opinion the issue of part-worn clothing is hardly feasible in this country; the clothing deteriorates so rapidly in store, and gets moth-eaten; and with regard to the issue of part-worn trousers in a climate like this, I am of opinion that, for sanitary reasons alone, it should not be sanctioned, and that part-worn clothing should be destroyed periodically, after inspection by a regimental board, as it only tends to breed a nuisance, and causes useless labour in attempting to keep it in order.

The witness withdraws.

*Colonel G. J. Airey, N. S. W. Artillery, states:—*I command No. 1 Battery, N. S. W. Artillery; when the annual clothing is passed for issue, the non-commissioned officers and men of my battery are paraded before me, and the clothing is marked for alteration when necessary by the master tailor in my presence; I find, as a rule, that the clothing requires a great deal of alteration—in fact, almost every suit; I account for this from the fact that the clothing is obtained from size rolls, and not from individual measurements, and also from the large amount of changes that are constantly taking place in the regiment due to men taking their discharge, deserting, and others claiming compensation; when the clothing is altered, I, as the officer commanding the battery, generally pass the clothing finally, but it sometimes happens that these are issued with their clothing direct from the master tailor's shop without my knowledge; this is irregular, and I have taken measures to prevent its recurrence; as a rule, the master tailor gives satisfaction; a great delay however takes place before all the clothing is finally altered, due, I presume, to press of work; as some of the clothing which was due in April last is still not issued, owing to the alterations not having been finished; I have nothing to do with the accounts for the alteration of the annual issue of clothing; when forwarding claims for compensation for annual issue of clothing, I satisfy myself that the claimants are in possession of two sets of articles for which they claim compensation; which will do for guards and review order, and that they are in such good condition as to warrant the belief that they will last in good order until the next annual issue; I cannot say that I ever remember a case of a man claiming compensation who has served a term of imprisonment, or been for a long while in hospital by vice; the usual claimants are non-commissioned officers and men who are struck off for some particular duty; this of course does not refer to the large compensation list of 1886-87; when the list is finally approved, I receive the compensation allowance; about two-thirds value of each article is paid by the contractor to the brigade quartermaster-sergeant, who hands me the money, and I pay it to the men holding their receipt for it; with regard to alterations, I may say that the tunics and Norfolk jackets jackets are the articles which require most alteration; trousers and jumpers are the best fits; in my opinion the present system of clothing the regiment is not satisfactory, seeing the tremendous delay in getting the clothing finally altered and fitted and issued; I would suggest that a local contract should be entered into by a Board of Clothing, to be composed of the officers commanding batteries, who are the principal people who are responsible for the clothing; the clothing would be made and fitted to individual measurement, and all claims for compensation and questions arising out of the clothing issued should be dealt with by the Board; the Board, in my opinion, should be furnished annually with a certain sum of money to enter into this contract, and that the opinion of the Board on questions of compensation, &c., should be considered final.

The witness withdraws.

At this stage the Board adjourn until Monday, the 9th instant.

SIXTH DAY.

On Monday, the 9th instant, the Board reassemble pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same Members as on the 5th July, 1888.

Sergeant Lyttleton is recalled and states:—

I HAND in an estimate showing in detail what the cost of each article of clothing would be if made up in the Colony from material purchased in the Colony. [This estimate is marked A, signed by the President, and attached to the Proceedings.] My Imperial service is 25 years 339 days; I served 11 years and 7 months as master-tailor before discharge in the 2nd Battalion 7th Royal Fusiliers; frequently and particularly with the last supply of clothing I have found that the tunics and Norfolk jackets, meant to fit men of a certain height, have been either too short or too long in the sleeves.

The witness withdraws.

Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant Webster is recalled:—

I PRODUCE the rough notes from which I make up the master-tailor's bills, also my clothing-book, which shows the issue of all articles and the receipts for the same, initialed by individuals; whenever compensation has been allowed A.C. is placed in the column; the amounts paid for compensation and the signatures of individuals receiving compensation are not shown in the clothing-book but in separate battery-lists; I produce the battery compensation lists for 1887-88, which show that the following amounts have been paid for compensation:—No. 1 battery, £46 5s. 4d.; No. 2 battery, £19 4s. 7d.; No. 3 battery, £154 10s. 6d.; these amounts are paid by the contractor, and are at the rate of two-thirds value of the article as paid for by Government; the articles for which compensation is claimed and allowed are stored in my store and are used for recruits as they join, or deducted in the schedule for the following year; the contractor is in no way bound to pay any compensation claims, it is purely a personal matter between the contractor and the individuals to whom it is paid, though it is paid through a recognized channel.

Question by the Court:—Can you explain to the Court how it suits the contractor to give a cash two-thirds compensation for articles not required by any individual, which would have been issued to him had he needed them from those delivered and paid for?

A. No, I cannot. The contractors for clothing have never made any application for the return of the clothing for which they have paid compensation claims.

The witness withdraws.

The Board at this stage adjourns until Tuesday, the 10th instant.

On Tuesday, the 10th instant, the Board reassemble pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same Members as on Monday, the 9th instant; but owing to the absence of evidence from the contractor, they again adjourn until 11 a.m., Friday, the 13th instant.

On Friday, the 13th July, the Board reassemble pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same Members as on Tuesday, the 10th instant.

Colonel W. Spalding, N.S.W. Artillery, is recalled:—

Q. As the man claiming compensation receives two-thirds value of the clothing, in what way is the contractor recompensed?

A. To the best of my knowledge the contractor receives full payment, as if the clothing had been supplied as per contract prices.

Q. What becomes of the clothing for which compensation has been granted?

A. My impression is that it remains with the contractor; but not having anything to do with the care or custody of clothing outside my own battery stores, this impression may not be correct.

The witness withdraws.

The President produces a letter from Mr. Whitehouse, the representative of Henderson & Co., the clothing contractor for this year. This letter is read, marked B, signed by the President, and attached to the Proceedings.

Colonel W. Spalding, N.S.W. Artillery, is recalled and states:—With regard to my answer on the last question put to me, I would wish to modify that answer, as, since I left the room, I have seen papers and inquired into the matter, and now find that the whole of the clothing as indented for (annual issue) is supplied by the contractor to the brigade quartermaster's store and retained in his store; in the case of men receiving compensation it is paid by the contractor; the clothing for these men still remains in the quartermaster's store, and is available for issue to recruits, &c.; it appears to me that the contractor receives one-third more in cash than is paid to the soldier, simply for his trouble in making out vouchers; for example—a demand is made (say) for 400 suits, annual issue 1st April; the contractor supplies these 400 suits to the N.S.W. Artillery; sometime subsequent to the demand for the 400 suits being made, 100 men are allowed compensation in lieu of their clothing; they receive two-thirds money value, the contractor receiving from the Government full rates for the 100 men claiming compensation, the 100 suits still remaining in the brigade quartermaster's stores, available for issue to other men as required; consequently the Government pay for 500 suits, being recouped gradually for 100 suits, which are issued to recruits, &c.

The witness withdraws.

The Board at this stage adjourns until Wednesday, the 18th instant.

On Wednesday, the 18th instant, the Board re-assembled pursuant to adjournment. Present—The same Members as on the 10th instant.

Colonel Spalding, C.M.G., is again recalled, and states:—I am of opinion that, owing to the large amount of work which the battery quartermaster-sergeant and sergeants are called upon to perform in their patrol jackets that it would be more satisfactory to all parties were the patrol jackets issued every year to sergeants, and the tunic every other year, instead of the present arrangement.

The witness withdraws.

Mr. George Whitehouse, representing Messrs. Wm. Henderson & Co., the present contractors for clothing for the N.S.W. Artillery, states:—We receive from the Government stores a schedule for clothing required for the annual contract for the N.S.W. Artillery, which we tender for, and import direct to Government stores; when the clothing is received the clothing is passed by a Government Board, partly military, partly civil; after the clothing is passed by this Board it is forwarded by the Government Stores Department to Victoria Barracks, to the regimental authorities; when the clothing has been passed by the Government Board, our vouchers are forwarded by the Superintendent of Stores (Mr. Hopkins) to Victoria Barracks for signature of regimental authorities, and from there are forwarded to the Government stores, who pass them on to the Military Pay Office; and we receive payment in full (less discount) for the clothing supplied; we subsequently receive lists of names of men who are recommended for compensation in lieu of clothing; vouchers for the total amounts so claimed are then forwarded by us to the regimental authorities, Victoria Barracks, for signature and returned to us, which we present at the Treasury, and upon receipt of payment we hand over two-thirds cash to Mr. W. O. Webster, the Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant of the N.S.W. Artillery, and take his receipt for the same; in the case of compensation claims for warrant officers the same routine is observed, except that we give full value for each article and retain the clothing, as the clothing for warrant officers is made up in our factory in the Colony; to my thinking, the present system of clothing the regiment is not a satisfactory one; the clothing should be supplied from individual measurements and made up in the Colony: the present system of making the clothing according to size rolls, causing a large expense for alterations when received, due to the fact that so many men take their discharge, &c., between the dates when the size rolls are made up and the receipt of the clothing; if such a system were to obtain, the large claims for compensation presented yearly would be to a very great extent simplified, and it would give greater satisfaction to all concerned; if this system were to be initiated, the contracts should be made to last from three to five years, as a yearly contract would not be worth any contractor's while to supply clothing to individual measurement and fit, having to obtain the materials in large quantities from England.

This would not be a precedent as the Police Force made-up clothing contract is for five years; the Post Office for three years, and the Telegraph for the same period, to the best of my belief.

GEO. WHITEHOUSE

(For Wm. HENDERSON & Co.),

18/7/88.

Colonel Spalding, C.M.G., is again recalled, and states: I am aware that the non-commissioned officers and men complain that they do not receive forage caps annually, as laid down in the regulations for supply of clothing and necessaries, 1881, under the head of periodical issues; at present a soldier only receives a forage cap on his joining the regiment; if promoted to the rank of sergeant he receives a band and button, but no cap; if re-engaged as a sergeant he again receives a band and button, but no cap; and in my opinion the same regulation that obtains in the Imperial Service should be adopted here, viz., an annual free issue of a cap to all ranks.

The witness withdraws.

Mr. C. Solomon, accountant, Military Pay Office, states: All vouchers for clothing supplied by the contractor for the New South Wales Artillery are paid by the Military Pay Office upon the certificate of the Officer Commanding Artillery Forces; I do not know if any of these vouchers are to cover claims for compensation.

compensation in lieu of clothing; all the vouchers are for full value of clothing, &c., supplied as per schedule rates; after the first payment for annual issue of clothing all vouchers received subsequently are for articles supplied by contractor on requisitions, at contract rates, and so certified by the Officer Commanding Artillery Forces.

C. SOLOMON,
Accountant.

The Board at this stage adjourned until a date to be hereafter named by the President.

On the 20th July, 1888, the Board reassembled (by order of the President) pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The same members as on the 18th instant.

Colonel Chas. F. Roberts, C.M.G., Commanding Artillery Forces, states: I am of opinion that the clothing should be obtained by the Treasury from the Pinlico Clothing Dépôt from size rolls submitted by the regiment, and that there should be no local contractor at all; in the majority of cases men joining the regiment fill out after a few months, and if clothing were supplied from individual measurements it would require as much, if not more alteration, when received as if supplied from size rolls; the supply of clothing and everything connected with it should be matters to be considered solely by Military Boards; owing to the heavy fatigue work that has to be done by the men of the regiment in clearing and painting and moving guns and stores when grease and paint are constantly handled, I am of opinion that each man on joining the regiment should be issued with two canvas working suits, and one annually after first issue; the issue of a patrol-jacket every two years and a tunic every year to sergeants is a matter which might be altered with satisfaction to the sergeants by issuing a patrol-jacket every year, and a tunic every second year; the clothing should reach the regiment not later than the 1st January in each year, in order that the necessary alterations may be made by the 1st April, the date on which it is due for issue to the men.

The witness withdraws.

Report.

THE Board having carefully considered the evidence adduced, prefer the following report, viz. :—

1. That the clothing appears to be considered of good quality.
2. That an annual issue of forage caps is needed.
3. That an annual issue of patrol-jackets and a biennial issue of tunics to sergeants would be more acceptable than the present arrangement of an annual issue of tunics and a biennial issue of patrol-jackets.
4. That canvas working suits should be issued, owing to the heavy wear on clothing in guard and fatigue duties; the amount of clothing to be issued to each rank might be assessed at a later period, when it is seen what saving can be effected by the issue of the canvas clothing.

The evidence points out that no books have been kept by the master-tailor (his accounts having been merely assessed by a warrant-officer), that he appears to have drawn a money allowance for fitting clothes, whether they needed alteration or not, and that his charges have been high, especially when coupled with the fact that the material is supplied at the public expense.

That the contractor, except in the cases of warrant-officers, who get full amount, as their uniforms are local manufacture, gives through one person cash compensation of two-thirds for non-supplied clothing, for which he receives full cost from the Government.

That the casualty clothing is not of much avail for reissue.

These items the Board venture to consider material evidence that the present system is costly, cumbersome, not equitable to the public or conducive to a good tone of economy or efficiency, besides offering opportunity for collusion, of which up to the present no advantage seems to have been taken.

The Board are not very assured whether a simple capitulation arrangement, or a contract managed by the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general's Department or by the regimental authorities offers the best results; but it is quite convinced that a distinct advantage would be secured by the conclusion of a contract which shall provide that all clothing be made to measure and to fit by a contractor, taking his own measurements, who shall be responsible as to time of delivery and fit. A contract of this nature would give little satisfaction to the public, the regiment, or he by whom it was undertaken unless it could extend over at least three years.

This manner of supply would involve a higher cost per article, but it would dismiss the existing high cost of alterations now manipulated in the regimental tailors' shop (which would then be but required for the ordinary repairs, met by regimental stoppages).

T. M. EDEN, Lieut.-Colonel, President;
A. H. P. SAVAGE, Captain, } Members.
J. LITTLE, Lieutenant, }

Signed at Victoria Barracks, this 27th July, 1888.

The Board have but partially done their duty in regard to the investigation of those matters upon which they were required to report—for instance, it would appear in regard to the annual supply of clothing that the contractor supplies (say) a tunic on account of a certain gunner, for which the former receives the contract price from the Government; but subsequently the gunner elects to take from the contractor two-thirds of the cost of the tunic in place of the tunic itself. It is thus evident that the contractor has supplied this tunic to the Government for one-third of its value; and so it is with all articles of clothing for which compensation is given by the contractor. It is folly to suppose that any firm firm would conduct business on such lines, and it will be the duty of the Board to ascertain how, and to what extent, the contractor is enabled to recoup himself for the loss. The regimental authorities and the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant should be able to furnish the required information, as the system seems to have been in vogue some considerable time. In the matter of the master-tailor's charges for making, re-making, and fitting and altering, further information would seem desirable. Garrison Orders of the 5th and 26th of June, 1883 (attached), specify that certain charges are allowed for making and for fitting and altering. By whose authority has the item of "re-making" been introduced and prices charged for that description of work similar to those authorized for making wholly from the piece; also, why does the master-tailor receive an all-round price for every suit of clothing issued, whether the same requires alteration or not, and this apparently in addition to charges for altering, &c. What supervision do officers commanding batteries exercise in regard to the fitting and alterations of clothing for their men (including recruits), and are the master-tailor's charges on this account checked by them? It should also be ascertained how the material supplied to the tailor's shop is expended, what accounts are kept as a check upon same, and how articles supplied on purchase to officers and others are recouped to the Government; also, how, and by whom, the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's and the master-tailor's accounts are checked? It would be well to record the quantity of clothing paid for by the Government and received by the Permanent Artillery for the years 1885-86, 1886-87, and 1887-88; and, in point of fact, that the investigation generally should embrace those periods. For the assistance of the Board, books, accounts, &c., as per list attached, are forwarded to the President. I have considered it desirable to substitute Captain Sparrow in lieu of Captain Savage as a member of the Board (copy of order attached), as the latter officer will be required as a witness. It will be incumbent on Captain Sparrow to make himself thoroughly conversant with the previous proceedings of the Board.

JOHN S. RICHARDSON,
Major-General.

4 September, 1888.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 11:20 a.m., 8 September, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled, in pursuance of General Order, No. 164, of the 7th instant, and Captain Sparrow, of the Permanent Mounted Infantry being present as a member in place of Captain Savage, of the Permanent Artillery, in accordance with General Order, No. 160, of the 1st instant, and all other members being present, proceed to peruse and consider the former proceedings, together with the remarks thereon attached by the Major-General Commanding. Having completed a careful examination of the matter contained on the text of the former proceedings, and this re-assembling having been delayed until 11:20 a.m. this day, owing to the absence, until that hour, of the books under seal needed for the first sitting, the Board (it being now the dinner-hour, and Saturday) now adjourns until 11 a.m. on Monday the 10th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 10 September, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to adjournment, same members being present as on the 8th inst., its last sitting, proceed to check certain books brought to its attention, and generally (if possible) to arrive at some understanding of the manner in which they appear to have been kept, &c. The Board now adjourns (at the dinner-hour) until to-morrow at 11 a.m., an adjournment being also imperative owing to the necessary "books" connected with the inquiry being required by the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General before 2 p.m., as per memo. to that effect now sent off with them (for receipt) by Orderly, Staff-sergeant Warren.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 11 September, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled-pursuant to adjournment, the same members being present as on yesterday, the 10th instant, proceed to call witnesses.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, of the Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Can similar accounts of receipts and issues for preceding years (or an abstract of same) be produced showing similar account to those in the new book (Stock Book) before the Board, showing a stock balance, dated 6th July, 1887?

A. I cannot produce other than what is now before the Board. The "Stock Book" before the Board is a commencement of a new system in the regiment, and was instituted because previously, to arrive at a true statement of stock on hand, one had to wade through an amount of clothing-boards and battery clothing-books, &c.; there was no "abstract" kept before this book, so far as I know; Mr. Warrant-officer Webster may better explain to the Board, for he, the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, is directly responsible to the Officer Commanding the Regiment so far as the clothing department goes.

Q. Can you produce a detailed account of the charges furnished on account of the master-tailor according with the statement furnished by Mr. Warrant-officer Webster for £765 15s. 2d., dated 15th August, 1888?

A. I cannot.

Q. Did you present any vouchers supporting the master-tailor's charges of £765 15s. 2d. to Colonel Spalding (who was commanding officer at the time) for signature?

A. No, otherwise than that which passed through me in order to reach Colonel Spalding; but in point of fact they arrived for signature from Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant Webster, I not being responsible for their correctness; Colonel Spalding was commanding officer at time of signature of vouchers alluded to, these vouchers being only presented to the commanding officer.

Captain Savage withdraws.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster, Permanent Artillery, Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, appears to give evidence:—

Question by the Board:—Can you produce any previous abstracts of receipts and issues to those now before the Board for 1887-88?

A. Yes, in the old clothing book now before the Board; the balance of clothing (1887) is shown in this book by proceedings of the usual Board, 6th July, 1887.

Q. How many tunics had you in store at end of each clothing taking, 1885, 1886, 1887?

A. I cannot state, because my books are not balanced until the Survey Board has been held, which has hitherto been held at uncertain and various dates, for instance, viz., 6th July, 1887, and 13th August, 1888; there was no survey previous to those dates; I may state that I balanced my books on 31st March, 1886; there was no survey in that year.

Q. Can you produce the result of balance arrived at by you, 31st March, 1886?

A. It is shown in the detailed account indicated by battery quartermaster-sergeants or individuals.

Q. Can you furnish the Board with the detailed account from which the tailor's bills vouched for by you have been compiled, that is to the amount of £765 15s. 2d., dated 15th August, 1888?

A. I cannot produce them—particulars are shown in vouchers now before the Board; the master tailor receipts no books except the measurement book.

Q. Can you give balance of tunics on charge in stock for commencement of the clothing years 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888?

A. I cannot for 1885, because that was the "Contingent" year, and issues, &c., got so mixed that I could only for 1886 take what appeared on hand, namely, 10 tunics. In 1887 there were 397 tunics on stock, and this year 136.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster withdraws.

As it has taken this last witness considerable effort and time to extract, from frequent reference to his books (on the Board's table), the last items of his evidence, hence occupying the Board's attention until 1 p.m., the Board now adjourned until 10.45 a.m. to-morrow. This adjournment being also rendered necessary by the other military duties demanding attention of two officers of this Board.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 12 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, pursuant to adjournment, and the same members being present as on yesterday, the 11th instant, proceed to check certain vouchers and books, and stock and issues, &c.

The Board adjourns for the dinner hour, and resumes checking, &c., at 2 p.m.

At 3.30 p.m., the Board adjourns until 10.45 a.m. to-morrow; all papers and books connected therewith are left under charge of Lieutenant and Brigade Quartermaster Little.

T. M. EDEN, Lieut.-Colonel,
President, 12/9/88.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 13 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, pursuant to its adjournment yesterday, and the same members being present as at its last sitting—(the hour of reassembling having been delayed by Lieutenant Brigade Quartermaster Little being in attendance on the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, at the Agricultural Society's Grounds)—proceed to check certain extracts made during yesterday's proceedings, from the books of the brigade quartermaster sergeant, Permanent Artillery, and some explanation thereon being necessary.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster is recalled to give evidence, and reappearing, is questioned:—

Q. Can you explain the blue pencil marks, apparently an (R) in blue pencil on an ink (M), in the clothing book, 1st November, 1887, for recruits, on first page of same?

A. The pencil mark in blue is an (M), and the ink letter is same inked in afterwards, by order of Commanding Officer, Permanent Artillery; but my clerk, Acting Bombardier C. Loveless, Permanent Artillery, can explain.

Acting Bombardier C. Loveless appears, in response to Mr. Webster's wishes, and states that "the ink is an (M), and was put in first, and afterwards an (R) in blue pencil I put on top, because to agree with rest of books; the price of (R) remake and (M) make are the same, which explains the appearance."

Bombardier C. Loveless, Permanent Artillery, withdraws.

Question to Mr. Warrant-officer Webster:—By whose authority has the item "re-marking" been introduced?

A. The authority is quoted by garrison order of 5th June, 1883, signed J. A. Compton, Acting Brigade Major.

Q. Why does the master tailor receive an all-round price for every suit of clothing issued, whether same requires alteration or not, and is this given in addition to extra charges for altering?

A. When, as sometimes happens, a one "re-make" charge, 18s., is made up of alterations to two or three garments, the master tailor does not get the stipulated 1s. besides this 18s.; there is no charge between the 1s. and 18s.; whether the term "remake" is mentioned in garrison order, 5th June, 1883, or not, has, nevertheless, been used in preferring vouchers and acknowledged by the pay office; about 75 per cent. of tunics of those sent are of such a bad size that alterations are necessary to this extent.

Q. What supervision do battery officers exercise over "fitting" and "alterations," and do they check the master-tailor's charges?

A. They do not check the master-tailor's accounts, and I prefer the master-tailor's charges straight to the Commanding Officer, who naturally, on my initial as correct, signs and forwards to Pay Office. A battery officer witnesses the marking by master-tailors for alteration, and, when altered, inspects to see if satisfactory. Any further alteration needed, the master-tailor has to complete at his own expense.

Q. How is the material, supplied to the master-tailors' shop, expended?

A. It is supplied by Government, and is expended as directed by me. The whole of the master-tailor's shop is under my sole charge and direction.

Q.

- q. How are articles, supplied on purchase to officers and others, recouped to Government?
- a. The accounts are forwarded initialed by Colonel Roberts or the Commanding Officer present, or the Adjutant, to the Pay Office. There is no money transactions on this item passes through me.
- q. How are the brigade quarter-master sergeant's accounts checked?
- a. The only inspection or check on my accounts and books is the annual general inspection, except from time to time occasionally Colonel Roberts has conducted a similar formal inspection; but this cannot be regarded as an inspection amounting to a check.

This witness (Mr. Warrant-Officer Webster) withdraws until re-assembling to-morrow.

The Board, at 1-25 p.m., as members urge necessity of attention to other duties, does now adjourn until 10-45 a.m. to-morrow, 14th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 14 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to adjournment, and the same members being present, proceed to read over its proceedings to date and make certain references to books and accounts as bearing on the evidence.

The Board sends for Master-tailor Lyttleton, of the Permanent Artillery, to be questioned on certain points.

Sergeant Master-tailor J. Lyttleton, of the Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence:—

- q. Can you read, write, and keep accounts?
- a. Yes, if necessary.
- q. Then why is it that you have kept no accounts of your tailor's shop transactions?
- a. There was no occasion; Mr. Webster said he would only pay me according to his books; he dealt out to me say enough for so many garments, and issued me no more until I had made the garments equal to amount of cloth he gave me; I handed in to Colonel Roberts a statement, as nearly correct as I could make it, showing amount of material and garments made since 1885 to date; I am not certain, but I believe I received the per man 1s. for alteration; indeed this could not in any case cover the cost of alteration of any tunic they being invariably of a bad cut; I am allowed 18s. for a remake, that is, an extensive alteration; same price for making from the piece, as 1s. won't cover, hence all tunics requiring alteration either are charged 1s. 6d. or 18s.; I have been thinking of proposing a scale of charges by which it would be clear that at least £100 could be saved every year to the public; this reduction on the expenses of my shop would make no difference to my pocket.

This, the above, at witness' request, is read over to him. He affirms the statement.

q. From the Board:—You employ labour on your own account; how then do you know at what cost you are unless you keep accounts or some book?

a. I can tell without keeping a book; I receive no cash payments from Mr. Webster on account of Government work.

q. From the Board:—How are articles supplied on purchase to officers and others recouped to the Government?

a. I merely bill an officer, as for instance Major Taunton and Major Mackenzie the other day for field jackets, for cost of workmanship only, and any trimming, braid, &c., which I supply myself; I never have bought any trimming, braid, &c., from Mr. Webster for this or similar purpose; he only has supplied the cloth; in fact the officers for this kind of work pays my bill to me for the workmanship, and their debts for cloth for same is charged them through their accounts at the pay office.

At his request the above is read over to Sergeant Lyttleton, who intimates its correctness, and then withdraws.

Other duties, and the dinner-hour being passed, the Board now adjourns until 10-30 a.m., to-morrow, the 15th instant. Mr. Little undertakes the safe care, under lock and key, of the books, vouchers, &c., before the Board, and the President that of the proceedings and their attachments until re-assembling to-morrow.

14 September, 1888.

T.M.E., Lt.-Colonel,
President.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 15 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to its adjournment yesterday, and the same members being present, called on Mr. George Whitehouse, of Messrs. Henderson & Co., contractors, who appears in response to the Board's letter of yesterday requesting his attendance, and is questioned by the Board:—

q. What amount of money did you pay Mr. Webster, Quartermaster-sergeant of the Permanent Artillery, as compensation in lieu of clothing, for the years 1886-7 and 1887-8?

a. My firm had nothing to do with it for 1886-7, but for following year I produce Mr. Webster's receipt for £229 12s. 7d., dated 2 June, 1887; and Captain Savage's order to pay him, dated 3 June, 1887.

Mr. Whitehouse hands this document to the Board, by whom they are compared with the evidence and returned to this witness. Mr. Whitehouse resumes his evidence:—"The Treasury paid us this £229 12s. 7d., and it amounts to two-thirds of the contract-price for the number of garments it represents compensation for."

q. You do not pay this two-thirds compensation until your vouchers for the clothing it represents are paid to you?

a. Certainly not.

q. Then you give cheque in full to Mr. Webster for two-thirds of contract price; but of course, do not also, besides this compensation, deliver the clothing to the Artillery, that is, charged for in these vouchers that cover the compensation money?

a. No.

q. It is stated very clearly among the several papers on this table that you have delivered, or at any rate the public has had, or have had to pay for 500 suits or tunics, in 1887. Pray explain this item?

a. We send to Government Store all clothing we supply, and are paid for it by the Treasury; the compensation is charged for as for clothing delivered, but of course it is not delivered; this £229 15s. 2d. represents so many garments as full charged for; that is, we give two-thirds cash, and retain for ourselves one-third.

q.

- q. Your firm's papers appear to admit that 500 tunics or suits were charged for in 1887.
- a. This number covers the compensation charged for; after the contracts 23 per cent. is deducted, then this division, two-thirds and one-third, follows; the Treasury insist on first receipt of this discount.
- q. Do you supply Mr. Webster with material for the master-tailor's shop?
- a. I do, including anything required for the manufacture of garments, and to some considerable amount, and am paid for it in the usual manner.
- q. Of course, you consider something considerable in cost would be saved to the Government were there no need for so many "re-makes"; in fact, if this portion of the master-tailor's shop were done away with.
- a. I think were the master-tailor not to make suits as at present doing, and that a contract existed to make to fit, a very large saving to Government would be effected by doing away with the master-tailor's shop. The measurement roll is scarcely rendered in time to secure an absolute attention for imported stuff. A firm taking the contract of this nature, to secure equal colour and shade, and give satisfaction, should have it granted for four or five years, as is prevailing with the Police and Post Office contracts, and, I think, the Tram and Railway Departments.

His answers to the above questions being read over to Mr. Whitehouse, who intimates their correctness, now withdraws.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster being recalled, is questioned by the Board:—

- q. Can you show to the Board where in your books is any account of issue of clothing to the band?
- a. I cannot just put my hand on it now in the books (the witness during reply to this question occupies himself in referring to his books—the books, &c., in the Board's custody), but the Board of Survey will show. I believe they are included in the rank and file issue. They have only been supplied in present manner for two years, and were formerly made in the Colony.
- q. The 500 tunics received by you for the Artillery in 1887, of course, included those under the head of compensation?
- a. These 500, and those charged for by Messrs. Henderson are for those actually delivered to the Artillery—in fact, the compensation and the clothing delivered are two separate accounts.
- q. Then, it may be taken for granted, you consider the contractor to be obtaining money, say, improperly, at any rate in a manner opposed to the interests of Government, and you, no doubt, have pointed this out as your duty demanded?
- a. Yes, he does, no doubt, and I spoke about it. I pointed it out to the Adjutant and to the Colonel when furnishing compensation lists—that for simply putting in his voucher and getting his cheque, he cleared one-third cost on every garment about which he gave compensation.
- q. Then as to material supplied to the master-tailor's shop, and the astounding number of "re-makes," a doing away with the master-tailor's department to this extent would bring about a very large saving to the country in the cost it has to meet in supplying your regiment with clothing?
- a. Certainly, it would—for if the clothing were made in the Colony by a contract framed to arrange a delivery to fit, the service would be benefited, and a saving to Government would follow.
- q. Then the master-tailor must be making a good thing of his business?
- a. I do not think he is making a very good thing of it, as for the last two or three years very extensive alterations have been necessary; but I am conscious the system as at present could be revised.
- q. Why have you not balanced your books at a fixed and regular period, instead of waiting for assembly of a "Board of Survey"?
- a. There are no regulations about this, and I saw no necessity for a fixed period for balancing my books—in fact I have been left to myself, to my own discretion, to conduct the Quartermaster's department as best I might; have tried many a time from the Quartermaster-General's department for books, but could get no help. I have stood alone, without check, left to do the best my discretion prompted me. I have also had to perform barrack-master's duty for the brigade. There may have been items that have not been entered in my books through absence from office on other duties; and further, I may state, that I have to inspect rations daily at Mr. Kidman's at 4 p.m.; also that I have to leave my store and books open to any one. My clerk, he has a duplicate key to my drawer, and has permission to sleep in the store.

These answers to questions were read over on completion of each.

It being time for this warrant-officer to attend some regimental duty, and it being about the dinner-hour and Saturday, Mr. Webster withdraws, and the Board proceeds to compare certain evidence, and at 1 o'clock adjourns until Monday, the 17th September, 1888, at 10:30 a.m.

T. M. EDEN, Lieut.-Colonel,
15/9/88.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 17 September, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to its adjournment, and the same members being present as previous to its last adjournment, proceed to call evidence.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. G. Airey, Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

- q. Can you furnish any list, or copy of one, showing alterations of clothing?
- a. I cannot, nor can my Battery Quartermaster-sergeant.
- q. State how your battery receives its compensation?
- a. I get the amount due to my battery from Mr. Webster—that is, two-thirds of the contract price. I may add that no note is taken of particular alterations, but when they are completed we satisfy ourselves that the coat or garment fits.
- q. By whose authority has the item 18s. for "re-making" been made?
- a. I do not know. All these things are under the Commanding Officer's and Quartermaster-sergeant's department. The Quartermaster-sergeant's department is entirely under the Colonel and the Adjutant.

This witness withdraws, his evidence having been read over to him as each answer was taken down.

Battery Pay and Quartermaster-sergeant John Taylor, Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence:—

Q. Can you inform the Board of the particulars, or give them any information, regarding alterations to clothing?

A. No; I keep no notes of alterations; it is not a battery matter; alterations are made, and when completed are brought before the Officer Commanding the battery for approval; we know nothing of charges incurred; nothing connected with it goes through the battery; say I take a man to Mr. Webster, a recruit perhaps, for a coat, then he goes to the master tailor if Mr. Webster settles it is required that alterations are necessary; he, Mr. Webster, has the settling of the whole thing; I am aware that perhaps two-thirds of the annual clothing requires alteration; this I know from my own observation of the necessity; I think the general run of clothing comes out too large.

By the Board:—Just examine under head of Gunner B. Hough, a Norfolk jacket, 1888, in the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's Issue Book, with similar article and date in the Battery Book, and explain, if possible, the apparent discrepancy?

A. E. Hough is charged in Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's Books, issue 1888, with a Norfolk jacket, which is purported to be signed for under the item with my initials, whereas the initials are not mine; comparison with other initials of mine in same book shows the difference; this entry of a Norfolk jacket compared with Battery Book shows a difference, for in the Battery Book, under this garment, is marked a C, which stands for compensation; I produce compensation lists for 1888-89, and hand them to the Board, taking receipt for same; these lists show that Gunner Hough claimed compensation for four articles; hence, and as he received, and I have signed for in the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's Clothing Book, a pair of serge trousers, he could not have had the Norfolk jacket entered against him, and purported to be initialled for by me, which initials I declare not to be mine.

Question by the Board:—Just look at this Clothing Book here marked with pencil cross and line to indicate its whereabouts, you see entry "1" and a red pencilled "a," as though for a Norfolk jacket issued, do you notice anything attractive?

A. I can see there has been an erasure, probably a scratching out with a knife.

Q. Is there any custom in the Permanent Artillery regarding alterations or erasures in books or on returns?

A. Yes; it is customary when an alteration to an entry is to be made to scratch out in ink, insert the alteration in ink, then the same is initialled by some one responsible for the alteration made.

This witness withdraws, his evidence having been read over to him as it was taken down.

The Master Tailor, Sergeant J. Lyttleton, re-appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. When it was found that the regimental scale for alterations was not sufficient was any representation made to the authorities for a higher remuneration?

A. No.

Q. How was it determined that 18s. for a remake should always be charged when found the 1s. would not cover?

A. I took over the custom of 1s. or 18s. which was prevailing when I joined.

Q. Who determines the amount of alteration required by a garment?

A. The master tailor.

Q. Is there any check on your determination. Suppose you settled a remake which was not perhaps quite necessary, who could stop you?

A. My decision has to be acquiesced in by the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, Mr. Webster.

Q. You stated that if a system you could suggest was adopted £100 per annum at least would be saved to the Government, and yet would not make any difference to your pocket—how do you explain so strange a fact?

A. According to the list I now produce it will be seen I had say for tunics to charge either 1s. or 18s., whereas I now propose four different charges, viz., 1s., 2s. 6d., 7s. 6d., and 13s. 6d. I have no doubt I can get work done to meet this reduced charge of 13s. 6d. for a remake. The Government would be a gainer.

Q. But how about the 4s. 6d. difference between 18s. and 13s. 6d.?

A. I see now I should not have the 4s. 6d. difference; I have hitherto been obliged to charge 18s. because: of course the 1s. was absurd.

Q. You have done work for warrant officers—did you ever make a patrol jacket for Mr. Webster?

A. I have made certain articles for warrant officers.

Q. How are these charged for?

A. I did not get any money for them, but Mr. Green paid £1; I got the materials from Mr. Webster.

Q. When you make a charge, what is it for?

A. For only the workmanship; in these cases Mr. Webster supplied me with only the serge or cloth; I have made none this year; though, now I recollect, it was during the last camp. I think were the Government to import cloth and contract with a tailor to make a fit, giving him only sufficient amount to make quantity required.

This witness withdraws, his evidence having been read over to him as taken down.

Captain Sparrow being required at the military staff office at 2 p.m., and it being now 1 p.m., the Board now adjourn until 10.30 a.m. to-morrow, the 18th September, 1888.

T.M.E., Lt.-Col.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 18 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, pursuant to its adjournment, proceed (the same officers being present as on previous adjournment) to call on Mr. Webster for some explanation as to certain items for consideration.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster, Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, reappears, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Can you explain an apparent discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. which appears between the cheque for £229 12s. 7d. and the amount you handed over to the Battery Commanders, of £220 0s. 5d. for compensation?

A. Yes; that sum represents my own "compensation," which Henderson, when paying me for the usual compensation, added on to the cheque as a convenient way of paying me.

Q. How is the money recovered to Government for garments made from material supplied at Government expense. Explain the whole arrangement?

A. Any article of clothing that has been made up by the master tailor for material supplied by the Government is charged against that man in his battery pay ledger in lump; it is stopped and charged against his battery; I presume the pay office recoup the Government; but I have nothing to do but render the proper charges, which I have always done; myself, Mr. Green, Mr. Bennett, and Mr. Griffith, for instance, they had serge fatigue jackets made, that is 2½ yards; the cost of this serge has been debited them through their battery accounts; the master tailor's charges for these garments were paid by themselves; this is during this year 1888; the cost of cloth supplied at Government expense is recovered by stoppage of pay against the interested individuals through their battery and pay-office accounts, I, myself, furnishing the items to be so charged for.

Mr. Webster withdraws, having, as taken down, had the evidence read to him.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, of the Permanent Artillery, arriving with some papers, "Boards of Survey, &c.," he deems may be useful to the Board, is questioned:—

Q. State how charges for articles made in the master tailor's shop are dealt with for payment?

A. They are of two kinds—that is, for work and for material, two separate charges; and the money is stopped through the battery pay-sheets. Mr. Webster furnishes the items to be charged for. A requisition for items of this nature is furnished from the battery commanding officer.

His evidence being read over, this witness withdraws.

Mr. Solomon, Military Accountant, having arrived in response to telephonic message, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Has any charge for material used in making warrant-officers' clothing been credited to the public this year?

A. It has not. The only amounts that have been recovered through the battery pay lists are shown on the statements I handed to the General, and which I believe you will find amongst the papers rendered to your Board. There is a list for material regarding officers' clothing outstanding only, and so far as the individual officers have not yet had the amounts stopped from their pay.

This evidence being read over, Mr. Solomon withdraws.

Mr. Warrant-officer Webster, being recalled, is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Can you show the Board how the materials used in making up certain garments for warrant-officers has been accounted for?

A. I cannot now; but with the permission of Colonel can refer to ledgers, &c., and supply the information at next meeting of the Board.

Q. Can you explain why a Norfolk jacket has been debited against Gunner Hough, No. 1 Battery for the present year, and compensation is about being claimed by him?

A. This man was originally in for compensation and then got permission from officer commanding No. 1 Battery to receive a Norfolk jacket. This Norfolk jacket was fitted to the man in the brigade store and noted for alteration. I may state that with reference to this clothing book the compensation is not yet dealt with.

Q. Whose are the initials under this receipt for a Norfolk jacket to Gunner Hough?

A. They are those of Battery Quartermaster-sergeant J. Taylor. The erasure by knife was done by me, and was necessitated by having to remove the C, which was for compensation, in order to insert Ia. for the issue of a Norfolk jacket for alteration.

Q. Did Quartermaster-sergeant Jno. Taylor initial, as now appears in the Norfolk jacket column in your presence?

A. He, the Battery Quartermaster-sergeant J. Taylor put those initials in my presence.

Q. Is it general to get a requisition from battery officers?

A. I get a requisition, and give the orders to the master tailor—say cloth for instance at end of month is balanced, no one can go to the master tailor for anything required to be done by him with Government staff without my permission.

Captain Sparrow being required for mounted infantry duties this afternoon, and it being 1 o'clock, and this officer being for court-martial duty to-morrow the 19th instant, the Board now adjourned until 11 a.m. the 20th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 20th September.

THE Board having met pursuant to its adjournment, and the same officers being present as on last assembly proceed to compare certain evidence and documents, and then the paper promised by Mr. Whitehouse not being to hand, and the Permanent Artillery being absent at Newcastle with Mr. Webster, and other evidence, adjourns pending instructions from the general officer commanding. The President to report this stage to the convening officer.

The President having received the Major-General's instructions to proceed as far as possible the absence of the Artillery nevertheless, re-assembles the Board at 11 a.m. this day, the 25th September, 1888.

Victoria Barracks, 25 September, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled, and the same members being present as at the last meeting, proceed to take evidence—and call the master-tailor, Sergeant Jno. Lyttleton, of the Permanent Artillery, to re-appear. This non-commissioned officer having kept the Board waiting over a quarter of an hour, re-appears and is questioned by the Board.

Q. Were you aware at the time you sent in your bills that you could have done the work at a less price.

A. I was not.

Q. But you have proposed a scale representing a less price for work: how then is this answer to be explained; and did you demand the 18s. for re-make?

A. I demanded the 18s. for re-make, and am the person who assessed the charge—indeed I do all charges. It only came into my head to reduce charges the other day. I do not say I can make the scale I gave the Board pay me, but it might be tried. I reckon I make about 25s. to 30s. a week by my shop. I have run some times as much as seven months without payment due to me being paid, the accounts not being made out—not that it made me hard up at the time.

Q. Had you to estimate, say for twelve months, what your weekly wage account would amount to—what do you think would be a fair average for a week that you should reckon as likely you would have to meet?

A. Never less than £9 as an average. I keep no wage-book, but I know what I spend for workmen.

Q. State an amount representing the average sum you take per month for private work, such as, for instance, work done for officers and warrant-officers?

A. Some months I take £2 5s., seldom £3. It has never amounted to £1 a month at outside, including everything; sometimes only 15s. a battery—well, say £4 a month as an outside figure.

Q. Had this scale of charges for alterations you have proposed existed, a great loss to the public would not have taken place. Explain yourself?

A. The alterations at these charges could have been done of course; a larger alteration could have been made for 2s. 6d. than for 1s. charged for, and a larger alteration still for 7s. 6d., and the extreme price would have been 13s. 6d.—that is, it may possibly be done for that.

Q. Did it never strike you when occupied over re-makes that you could do them for less than the charges you have demanded?

A. I only say it could be done. Perhaps it might suit other people; but I would only give it a trial at these reduced rates, as proposed on my scale, which I handed to the Board the other day. If all were re-makes, say £350 suits, £271 5s. would be saved the Government. This list will show what I mean. [The Board receives this list, which is signed by the President and attached.]

Handed in by master-tailor to Board:—T. M. Ebert, Lieutenant-Colonel, 25 Sept., 1888.

Q. Well, you appear by your signatures and evidence to have only had some £345 profit on your business for twelve months?

A. I do not get £300 clear for my pocket. I only cleared about £140 to £150.

Q. Then who got the balance. You could not be mistaken as to the profit you make, which you say was about £150 or £140?

A. I acknowledge that were my work done direct with the batteries, and no other department between, the work would be cheaper to Government.

Q. What department?

A. Well, the Brigade Quartermaster's. As to the amount you show as my profit, I cannot account for it, unless it is that I must have paid for more work than I have said.

Q. But that will not, even if you have spent another £2 a week for wages, as you now are endeavouring to allege, account for all the money you appear to have received?

A. I think on consideration it would take £11, not £9 for weekly wages. I had in my first and second years, that is 1885-86, and 1886 to 1887, for I took over about time of the Contingent, £150 profit, and I think I may a few times have made £2 a week. I do not spend—I should think not!—£300 a year on private expenses when I wait for my money for my bills. 'Tis all right, for my wife has a tidy bit of money—I married a woman with a little money. I cannot account for this profit being figured out to so much.

Q. Explain how it is that during the time of the previous master-tailor there was a less percentage of re-makes?

A. Oh, in his time they were all big men, so no need for many alterations; now the men are smaller, so there is plenty of alterations—nearly every tunic is too large.

Q. Your bill of £765 14s. 2d. for the last twelve months, added to what you admit as gained for private work in the same period, viz., £48, makes a total of £813 odd s. d. Take the average wage account you have in evidence alleged to be £468, totalled, from this £813, and £345 remains, which you should be able to show where it has gone. To this £345 add your totalled pay and allowances, viz., £122, and £467 is the result. You assert you only clear £150 profit, which, added to your £122 pay, makes £272. This £272, taken from the £467, leaves a balance of £195 not accounted for. Will you explain this strange result?

A. I cannot.

The Board is now constrained to adjourn by its members being required for other duties.

Sergeant John Lyttleton is advised to take a few hours reconsideration in order that he may offer to-morrow some explanation of an item ignorance of which is not to his credit; and he then withdraws, and the Board adjourns until 11 a.m. to-morrow, the 26th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 26 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to its adjournment, and the same members being present as on its last meeting, proceed to take evidence, and send for Sergeant John Lyttleton, of the Permanent Artillery, who after some delay responds to the demand, and is questioned by the Court.

Q. With reference to the sum of £195 evidently received by your department, but which you said yesterday you were unable to account for, have you given this matter any further consideration so that the whereabouts of this profit clearly gotten by your department can be shown?

A. I could not if I was to try; I cannot explain; but them vouchers for £765 can't be right, I only had two payments this year.

By the Board:—Now, look at them one by one as they are marked (A to K) by Captain Sparrow, and see if the signatures to the receipts and correctness are yours.

This inspection completed, Sergeant John Lyttleton is questioned:—

Q. Do you admit the signatures on those vouchers marked A to K, which go to make up the sum £765 14s. 2d., which is the amount of the master-tailor's account for last twelve months, as furnished by Mr. Webster—you have admitted receiving this money—then, are the signatures you have inspected yours or not?

A. They are mine. I have inspected each on the vouchers marked A to K.

Q. Look at this book, called by its heading, "Clothing made by master-tailor"—did you keep this book?

A. No; a clerk of Mr. Webster's does. I have kept no books.

Q. When you first began to charge 18s. for "Remake," whether from the piece cloth provided for same or by altering tunics from store, who told you to make this exorbitant charge; remember you have admitted the price to be high?

A. Mr. Webster.

This witness withdraws.

Inspection of this book, just shown to the master-tailor, proves to the Board that the careless manner and its incompleteness is quite on a par with some of the other books laid before the Board.

There being to-day no other evidence available, the Board adjourned until Friday, 28th instant, at 11 a.m., when some more may have been arranged for record.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 28 September, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, pursuant to its adjournment, proceeded to take evidence.

Mr. Daniel Beahan appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Did you occupy the position of master-tailor of the New South Wales Artillery previous to the present, Sergeant John Lyttleton?

A. I was master-tailor to the Artillery seven years and about nine months; during that time I did not have for the first five years the clothing entirely under me.

Q. Can you give number of tunics in a twelvemonth required to be remade for the purpose of fitting?

A. If accurate clothing roll were sent Home there would be little clothing need alteration—according to clothing come out in 1883, I did not have many remakes, but in 1884, I had more, as very large tunics came up from Henderson, which had to be used up some way.

Q. How many hands had you employed during the busy altering time in the year 1883-4 and 1884-5, that is, perhaps, say, three months of each year at an outside?

A. About four inside and two outside, costing during the busy time, that is the fitting and altering time, I should say, about £15, so far as I can recollect, per week; for remainder of the year perhaps only a man and a woman were employed, that is, about £6 a week would be about the average costs for wages.

Q. What portion of your receipts would be absorbed by wages?

A. I consider I pay about three-quarters of my receipts in wages, and with my regimental pay and allowances it paid me.

Q. Sometimes it seems you paid 6s. for alteration, and yet could only charge 1s. How could that pay you?

A. It did not, but I had to do it, and contrived to make it pay by putting one with the other—for instance—sleeves out-side-out, &c., would not pay at 1s., but working all round it paid in the lump.

Q. What authority had you for charging 18s. for remake of tunic?

A. None; I showed job to Mr. Webster, then he would give the order.

Q. Say, out of 100 tunics in your time, how many would need alteration?

A. Not more than ten per cent. required alteration; I generally contrived to make them fit without much alteration. Norfolk jackets needed 15 per cent. as generally had cut at the necks. But in my time everything had to be "A 1" fit. As to jumpers, only once in a way, seldom had anything to be done but to shorten sleeves. As to cloth and serge trousers, little or none, say 10 per cent., except at that time there was a lot of bad clothing, awkward sizes, say, 44 waist and 33 chest men; tunic, 34 chest to 6 feet and 5 feet 10 inches height. A tailor to make to measure and fit, would, I think, be cheapest, as less tailor's shop. I could easily make tunics for 18s., all material found, and make good profit.

This witness withdraws.

There being no further evidence available to day, the Board adjourns until a date, notice of which to be issued to members by the President.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 3rd October, 1888.

The Board having re-assembled, pursuant to notice, and all members being present proceed to take evidence.

Captain and Adjutant P. Savage, Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. On what basis is the calculation made which amounts to £16 7s. 6d. as compensations to warrant officers in lieu of clothing for the current and preceding year. For the battery sergeants for same articles cost only £7 10s. 1d.?

A. It is made on the average of the prices charged for clothing for warrant officers, whose clothing is made in the Colony. The battery sergeants are computed in the same way, but in accordance with last schedule rates.

Q. Can you furnish the Board with a return of decreased casualties for the years 1886-87-88. to date, say 30 September last, showing name and date of casualty causing a decrease in the force? (This information is necessary to enable the Board to form an estimate of the part worn clothing to be accounted for.)

A. I can do so, but it will take a little time, and I will furnish it as soon as possible—to morrow if possible.

Q. Can you inform the Board why the clothing indented for on contractor, for the year 1886-87 was not issued to Mr. Green and other warrant officers, instead of compensation—thus leaving the clothing to go to loss, and charging an exorbitant price for it?

A. I cannot, other than they applied for compensation. The clothing rolls are made up some six or eight months before the clothing is actually in the Colony and compensation claims are only received from batteries within a short time, or sometimes after the clothing has been received in bulk, from the contractor. The warrant officers clothing being made in Colony, I presume they get their compensation at once, as it has nothing to do with clothing from "Home". Mr. Green's clothing could not have been received, from the fact that he got compensation for it.

Q. It has been stated in evidence, I think, that the canteen sergeant is not clothed as a sergeant; how then is it he has been returned for sergeants clothing in 1886?

A. Because the canteen sergeant of that date was one of the rank and file sergeants. On his time of limited engagement being up he was re-engaged as a gunner, and allowed the privilege of lance sergeant's rank, and to wear sergeant's clothing. The difference between value of gunner's and sergeant's clothing borne by the man himself or the canteen committee.

Q. Do you consider him entitled to sergeant's clothing?

A. No.

Q. What amount of compensation did he receive, in lieu of clothing, for year 1886-7?

A. I do not know, but I can find out. He, as to his present rank, is only entitled to compensation as a gunner.

Q. Is the warrant officers' clothing yet in store for which compensation appears to have been drawn during year 1886-7?

A. I do not think so, but will ascertain.

Q. If the warrant officers' clothing is made in the Colony, how is it that the amount indented for is at a price much less than the amount claimed for compensation?

A. Because clothing made in the Colony is more expensive than that made in England, and is of the the quality called A for warrant officers and sergeants.

Q. When you signed the warrant officers' compensation claims you did so as certifying to their correctness for Colonel Commanding's convenience, as a surety for his attaching his initials?

A. Yes; I sign as to their correctness on the quartermaster-sergeant's certificate, holding him responsible for correctness of the compensations, computation of them, &c. I have really nothing whatever to do with the clothing. I simply sign because Mr. Webster has to pass all his papers through me.

This witness's answers were read to him at his request.

This evidence Captain Savage withdraws.

Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant Webster Warrant Officer, reappears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. How do you calculate the amount of compensation due to warrant officers. Are they allowed a higher rate than staff-sergeants; and are they entitled to a patrol jacket annually.

A. According to schedule for contract price 1886-7, tunics, £5; warrant officer and staff-sergeant patrol jacket, £4; cloth trousers, 23s. 6d.; serge trousers, 14s. They are entitled to a patrol jacket annually.

Q. Did Sergeant Woodbridge, No. 3 Battery, receive a patrol jacket in 1887, and who signed for it?

A. Yes; The battery quartermaster-sergeant signed for it in the clothing book for the year 1887-8. It is usual, on any occasion, for the battery quartermaster-sergeant to receive any clothing for his battery by signing the clothing book, when the recipient of the clothing is not there to sign for it himself.

Q. Is he entitled to one annually?

A. He is not (he, Woodbridge) to one patrol jacket annually.

Q. Did you receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. as compensation in lieu of clothing for the year 1887-88; if so, how do you account for the discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. between the amount shown as received from contractor and handed over to officers commanding batteries for the same year?

A. No, I did not; I received my clothing. On reconsideration, I find I did receive the sum £16 7s. 6d. for year 1887-88. The amounts I received from the contractor to pay the officers commanding batteries was deducted from my account for compensation for £16 7s. 6d.

Q. What number of part-worn tunics were issued during the years 1886-87-88?

A. I can give that; but absence at Newcastle has prevented my attention to this matter. I may tell the Board that the part-worn clothing is not worth re-issue.

Q. You prefer a demand—say, like this one marked H, signed by yourself, to effect that items were paid (or due, &c.), to meet claims to compensation for 1887-88; why does this document need Captain Savage's signature?

a. Captain Savage's signature was attached prior to mine, which was subscribed at a later date, when it was referred to me for explanation. My signature is simply in confirmation of my minute above it, which is result of reference to me. Captain Savage's signature I consider to mean that he has approved as to correctness. I should suppose that the Colonel Commanding the Artillery Force seeing his Adjutant's signature is satisfied therewith, as an assurance that the document needing his initials is correct, and the matter is forwarded in the usual way.

Mr. Webster being required on brigade quartermaster-sergeant's duties, the Board adjourned until 11 a.m. to-morrow, the 4th instant.

Victoria Barracks, October 4, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to its adjournment, and the same members being present, recalls Mr. Webster to give evidence, who is questioned as follows:—

q. When was the last issue of part-worn clothing?

a. There has been none since 1886.

q. State numbers received new from the contractors during 1886, 1887, and 1888?

a. Tunics, 1886-87, from Riley Brothers, 548; 517 cloth trousers; serge trousers, 540; jumpers, 541; Norfolk jackets, 540; patrol jackets, 9. That is all received from Riley Brothers. This does not include staff, merely gunners and band, except the 9 patrol jackets. The staff garments are not shown. In 1887-88, from Messrs. Henderson, 396 tunics were received, 425 cloth trousers, 438 serge trousers, 417 serge jumpers, and 8 patrol jackets for sergeants, 433 Norfolk jackets for all ranks. 1888-89; 8 patrol jackets for sergeants, 50 cloth trousers, and 50 serge trousers.

q. By whose authority do Staff-sergeants Goodall and Breakspear draw compensation annually for patrol jackets, not being warrant-officers?

a. They do not receive compensation except by the Colonel's authority. Lists for compensation are forwarded to the Colonel, and he gives the authority. In this year, 1888-89, is the first time the compensation list has gone through the General. Previously Colonel Roberts' signature was sufficient. The reason it went to the General this time was because, the contract only being for a small number of trousers, cloth and serge, the Colonel said the matter had better go to the General.

q. Has the contractor or the master tailor, since 1886, furnished to warrant-officers any articles of uniform?

a. I can only answer by reference to the master tailor's books and my slips attached to the master tailor's vouchers.

q. How are the prices mentioned in the compensation list for those officers higher than the last contract referred to by you yesterday.

a. The amount of compensation was referred to the contractor to determine. He fixed the price for each garment, as shown in the compensation list. He sent his vouchers to Colonel Roberts, by whom they were forwarded to the paymaster and submitted to the General, and being returned to my Department for reply to certain questions, I therefore knew they had been through these channels. Before the amount was duly paid by the contractor, the amount (some £65 odd shillings and pence) was authorized by the Colonial Secretary to be paid. Hence same amount for individuals has been submitted for the current year. There was a great deal of correspondence before these amounts were put through and got sanctioned.

q. Warrant-officer Griffith is marked in the clothing roll of No. 3 Battery for the year 1887-88 for both clothing and compensation in lieu of clothing. Which is correct?

a. Compensation.

q. Can you explain why some issues of clothing have not the usual initials, and others appear to have a spurious initial attached as though in receipt (vide Sergeants Woodbridge and Taylor)?

a. In case that any man belonging to a battery the non-commissioned officer or other that is entitled to clothing the battery quartermaster-sergeant is authorized to sign or initial for said clothing. If the man is present, of course he signs for the stuff himself.

q. Can you show the Board where the clothing for staff-sergeants and sergeants and the band clothing are entered in your books as received from the contractor for the current year and for 1886?

a. I cannot show this information in the books before the Board.

q. Had you any of the above mentioned on hand on 1st April, 1886; if so, how many of each, and where are they accounted for?

a. None whatever. The clothing for staff and sergeants—there were none in stock on 1st April, 1886. They were supplied in the following November by the contractor. Previous to April, 1886, the staff and other sergeants' clothing was made in the Colony, and the band's too.

q. Can you inform the Board as to the number of garments made from materials supplied by Government during the three years 1886-88, and to date in detail showing the number of each?

a. I cannot without reference to the documents that left my office, and which, I presume, are before the Board, and it would take a long time. But, as you say, of course the Board could add this up from these documents.

q. Will you furnish the Board with any items of information likely to be of use in aiding the investigation in hand. All papers now before the Board are at your disposal for this purpose while referred to in the presence of the Board. At present, you may as well be informed that the investigation so far does not point a fact that you or the master tailor have conducted your business with any credit to yourselves, or that the interests of the public purse have had proper consideration?

a. I shall be happy to supply all I can, and I have, I think, done so. All papers of use have been sent in from my office, and there is no information I have kept back.

[The answers made by this witness having been, during the course of his evidence, read to him on taking down of each, he withdraws.]

Captain Sparrow being required at the Military Staff Office with recruits at 2 p.m., the Board adjourns until 10.30 a.m. to-morrow, when Captain Savage's returns, promised in his evidence yesterday, will probably be forthcoming.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 5 October, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to its adjournment, proceed to receive evidence, and to receive certain returns from Captain Savage. The same members are present as yesterday.

Captain Savage re-appears, and hands in to the Board the "return" of "decreased casualties" 1886 to 1888, which is attached to these proceedings, and endorses his evidence regarding other items marked in proceedings (x), which were to stand over until to-day.

Captain Savage withdraws, and Mr. Whitehouse, of the firm of Henderson & Co., contractors for clothing, re-appears, and is questioned by the Board.

Q. You stated in your evidence before this Board, and produced receipts and an order to pay, that you gave Mr. Webster, of the Permanent Artillery, a cheque for some £229 odd shillings and pence to cover an account for compensation—did any portion of this cover compensation for clothing to warrant-officers? The Board considers it will be best if you distinctly tell it the full particulars, as the outcome of this investigation may result in an inquiry which will constrain you to give evidence on oath.

A. None of that amount of £229 odd shillings and pence was for compensation to warrant-officers, merely what I understand as rank and file. Some six weeks after this transaction I gave Webster another cheque for some £62 odd for compensation for warrant-officers in lieu of clothing.

Q. Would you substantiate and repeat this on oath, were you required to give evidence on oath?

A. I would, and I can produce the documents in support.

Q. Can you furnish any further elucidation of this matter?

A. I shall be willing to assist at any further inquiry that may crop up out of this.

Mr. Whitehouse withdraws.

NOTE.—A reference to some papers points to some items of material supplied by Government to the master-tailor, as, for instance, for a period when it is not likely all could have been needed: 25lb. linen thread, 11 reels of silk twist at 5s. a reel, 852 reels cotton, besides 7lb. machine silk at 38s. the lb.

Mr. Webster, warrant-officer, Permanent Artillery, appears to produce the statement promised in his previous evidence, which is taken down amongst the Board's figure calculations with a view to its report in these proceedings.

NOTE.—It seems the master-tailor has in an instance charged 11s. for altering a Norfolk jacket, the cost of which is about 14s.

No other evidence being available, and Captain Sparrow being required on a Board at the Ordnance Stores at noon, the Board now adjourns until 11 a.m. to-morrow, when its report will be considered, in order that the proceedings may, if possible, be sent to the convening officer on Monday, the 8th instant, previous to his departure on inspection duty.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 6 October, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to its adjournment, and the same members being present, proceed to weigh over the evidence, and decide to meet on Monday, the 8th instant, with each member's opinion for amalgamation into one.

The Board now adjourns until 10:30 a.m., 8th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 8 October, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to its adjournment, proceed to revise the several individual opinions preferred by each member.

The Board at present being unable to obtain any further evidence, and having carefully weighed such as it has recorded, prefers its report, in paragraphs 1-12, as herewith below, in anticipation of its proceedings, illustrating to the convening officer that this investigation has discovered sufficient grounds for any further inquiry he may deem necessary to institute.

Report.

1. That there has been during the period brought under the Board's investigation a great want of supervision over the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant's department, the books of which have been kept in a disgraceful fashion, and are utterly unreliable. The management of issue and fitting appears to have been at the discretion of the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant and master-tailor, and at the option of the latter whether he would charge 3s. 7d. or £2 10s. per suit for fitting. The Board considers one of the worst phases under its investigation to exist in the very large number of men annually allowed to receive compensation, involving a continuous increase of unfitting garments, ultimately to be "remade" in order to fit men of different stature. This appears to have been carried on without any regard to conserving the public interest. This is shown by the fact that fully two-thirds of the clothing issued is charged for as having been "remade" at the full price of making garments from the web; so that each tunic of this class costs the Government from 17s. to 21s., in addition to the original price of the garment, and plus the 1s. allowed for alteration, and of course other garments in like proportion. The following example will illustrate the reckless expenditure. In the indent on contractor for 1886, warrant-officers and 1st-class staff-sergeants are included. The clothing was made to measure and forwarded to the barracks, but was not issued to them; they received compensation instead. The clothing remained in store until utilized for men of smaller size at an enormous expense to the public, caused in the following manner, viz.:—A sergeant's tunic and patrol jacket would be supplied by the contractor for £3 6s. 2d. and £2 16s. 6d., respectively; but the public pays the staff-sergeant £8 5s. for his tunic, and £6 1s. for his patrol jacket, and subsequently pays 22s. for altering the tunic, and 30s. for altering the patrol jacket, thus bringing up the price of these articles to £9 7s. and £7 11s. when finally issued. Nor does the expense end here, as all material used in the alterations are charged against the Government. Indeed it is astonishing the quantity of silk thread, linings, and other articles requisitioned for the use of the master-tailor's shop, of which the Board has not yet had an opportunity of inquiring into more fully.

Marginal note by Convening Officer:—Requires explanation. I cannot understand it.
Referred to on
p. 21.

The

The Board has not yet had time to ascertain the number of garments which should have been recovered over discharges, desertions, and other casualties. The number of such articles accounted for in the books as fit for re-issue is nil.

2. A comparison of the master-tailor's receipts with those of his predecessor (Beahan) show that the former drew in one year as much as the latter did in two years.

3. The Board desires to record its dissatisfaction with the manner in which Sergeant Lyttleton gave his evidence, especially with regard to the number of hands he employed and his weekly wage account.

4. The Board having carefully gone over the books and other documents have compiled an abstract of receipts, issues, and compensations, up to 31st July last, but have been unable to compare the result with the quantity of articles now in stock.

5. The recommendation already preferred that clothing should be made by "contract to fit" the Board is now convinced would bring about a saving of 75 per cent. on fitting as now carried out.

6. It seems to the Board that no compensation should be allowed to men for whom clothing has already been requisitioned.

7. The compensation list for 1887, when compared with the amount of money paid by the contractor (£229 12s. 7d.), shows a discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. which Mr. Webster states was part of his compensation for the year 1887-88. But the contractor's manager denies this and affirms that he is ready to swear he paid Mr. Webster's compensation (£16 14s. 2d.) in full, together with similar amounts for other warrant-officers in one sum (about £65) some six weeks after giving the cheque for £229 12s. 7d., which was for rank and file compensation, hence this £9 12s. 2d. is not clearly accounted for.

8. A comparison of the master tailors' statement (See page 15) of the wages he paid and the only profit he insists he made, with the amount he reluctantly admitted having received during a twelve month from the Pay Office, displays an unaccounted for balance of some £195, after allowing for his qualified second statement as to weekly wages, thus provoking a suspicion that collusion antagonistic to the public interest has existed. The Board probably in this and other items of evidence had to contend with the fact that witnesses were conscious of not being on their oath.

9. Though in his after evidence he attempted to qualify his statement, the master tailor shows that "alterations" might be effected at a cheaper rate. Yet he kept this to himself, and continued, by Mr. Webster's authority he says, to extort the exorbitant charges that did not obtain in Mr. Beahan's time.

10. If the statements of Mr. Whitehouse, Q. M. S. Taylor, and Bombardier Lovelace are worthy of belief, no complete confidence in the veracity of Mr. Webster can be entertained.

11. The Board views with astonishment the repeated evidence of all absence of supervision by the adjutant of the brigade quartermaster-sergeant's costly department.

12. Mr. Webster asserts he brought to the notice of his superior officers the improper manner of obtaining money the contractor enjoyed through the compensation system.

Memorandum from The President of the Board on the Clothing and Compensation Systems of the New South Wales Artillery to The Major-General Commanding New South Wales Forces.

9 October, 1888.

As a supplement to the report of the Board, dated 8th instant, I have the honor to point out that it was the intention of the Board to suggest that, "in consideration of the apparently exorbitant charges of the master-tailor, no further bills be paid him until an adjustment be made recouping the public as far as possible at the following rates, viz. :—For each tunic 'remade,' 8s.; each Norfolk jacket, 5s.; each patrol jacket, 10s.; and all trousers, 3s. 6d.; these amounts being considered by the Board to be of the nature of surcharges by this non-commissioned officer."

T. M. EDEN, Lieutenant-Colonel,
President.

NOTE.—This was detained for the General's return, as letters posted would not overtake him.—
T.M.E., Lieutenant-Colonel.

THE COURT will reassemble for the purpose of eliciting full information and reporting on the following points. This would seem not only due to individuals, but necessary for the clear exposition of the matter in the interests of the public.

1. The authority for "remaking" and charging as for making from the piece.

2. The chief paymaster's authority for passing such charge, and debiting same against the public, noting commencement of the practice.

3. The channel through which the tailor's charges were preferred to the paymaster, and the authority vouching for correctness of same.

4. Sergt. Lyttleton, p. 4, says he only receives payment according to a certain scale, which differs from that given by Mr. Webster p. 2. What becomes of the difference, viz., 1s. 6d. sergeants tunics, 2s. gunners tunics, and 3s. Norfolk jackets each? There should be no difficulty in clearing up this point, as the master tailor states, page 4, that all his vouchers go through the pay office, and Mr. Webster, p. 3, states that copies of these accounts are filed in his office.

5. The expenditure of material supplied by the Government to the master tailor, and refund of cost of same to the Government. To this and the stock in hand must be verified and deducted from total supply, and the balance accounted for by quotation of the several recoups to the Government.

6. Sergeant Lyttleton, pp. 11-13, states he charges for workmanship only, and that he personally purchases all trimmings, &c., but not through Mr. Webster. Mr. Webster, p. 10, states that the whole of the tailor's shop is under his sole charge and direction, and that the materials are supplied by Government, and expended as directed by him. Note on p. 19 indicates that the master-tailor has been supplied with expensive material by the Government. How can these contradictory statements be reconciled?

7. The number of tunics paid for by the Government, both in the shape of contractors' deliveries and those made from the piece by master-tailor, and the whole compared with stock in hand.

8. Sergeant Lyttleton, p. 4, states that he fits the men before officers commanding batteries, who determine the work to be done, and that Mr. Webster assesses the charges; on p. 13, that Mr. Webster and himself alone determine amount of alteration; and on p. 15 that he himself assesses all charges. On p. 2, Mr. Webster says he personally does so.

9. An example quoted on p. 19 indicates that the contract price for sergeants' tunics is £3 6s. 2d., and patrol jackets, £2 16s. 6d. In return 25/4/88 attached, warrant-officers' tunics and patrol jackets are assessed for compensation at £8 5s. and £6 1s. respectively. Who fixed this assessment, and on what basis?

10. The discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d., as noted on p. 20. As probably bearing on this point, it would be well to call upon Mr. Whitehouse to furnish details as to the sum of £65 which he asserts was paid to warrant-officers for compensation. Mr. Webster asserts, on p. 14, that he deducted £9 12s. 2d. on account of his own compensation, yet in return 25/4/88 he quotes his and other warrant-officers' compensation at £16 7s. 6d. each.

11. The discrepancy of £195, or thereabouts, quoted by Sergeant Lyttleton as existing between his actual receipts, and since purporting to have been paid to him for work done. A thorough sifting of this matter would seem to be especially necessary, seeing that on pp. 15 and 16 he implies that the quartermaster-sergeant's department has appropriated this sum.

12. Mr. Webster states, p. 12, that when submitting compensation lists he has drawn the attention of Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage to the improper way in which the contractor obtained money, viz., that by simply putting in vouchers and getting his cheque he cleared one-third of the cost of every garment for which he gave compensation in lieu of supply in kind. This statement given behind the backs of these officers should not remain as a record without giving them the opportunity of reply.

13. Mr. Webster, p. 12, states that he has many times applied to Quartermaster-general's department for books, but could get no help.

JOHN S. RICHARDSON,
Major-General.

Casino, 15/10/88.

Received, 22/10/88.—T. M. Bux, Lieut.-Colonel, President.

Second Re-assemble by order of Convening Officer, i.e., Third Meeting.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 23 October, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled in pursuance of the convening officer's direction, as conveyed in his remarks on its second report, dated Casino, 15th instant (received 22nd instant), and the same members being present as at last meeting, proceed to consider the said notes of the Major-General on this report of the 8th instant, and to carefully re-read all evidence recorded on its former proceedings.

The Board decide, on the necessary notices for the attendance of the evidences it requires at 10:30 a.m., to-morrow, the 24th instant, until when it now adjourns.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 24 October, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to its adjournment, proceed to take evidence.

Colonel C. F. Roberts, C.M.G., Commanding the Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence, and the nature of the convening officer's minute, No. 12, of his remarks on the Board's second report being made known to him, states:—Mr. Webster did not draw my attention to the contractor getting one-third of the cost of the compensation until I personally asked him the question what became of the balance the men did not receive. This occurred when payment of compensation was refused—some three or four months back.

This witness withdraws.

Mr. C. Solomon, Accountant at the Military Pay Office, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Can you produce any authority for paying the charges made by the master-tailor for re-making garments?

A. The authority that we have in the office is for making, under a general order, not re-making. The Chief Paymaster cannot produce any authority for paying for re-makes, but could adduce the fact of the vouchers containing these charges having been endorsed by the officer commanding the corps previous to his paying them. The practice has been in vogue since January, 1885. Mr. T. Beahan, the previous master-tailor, charged for remaking at first in solitary instances, but towards the end of his career pretty often. The practice has been continued by his successor to a very much greater extent.

This witness withdraws.

Captain and Adjutant P. Savage, of the Permanent Artillery, appears to give evidence, and the nature of the Major-General's minute, No. 12, of his remarks on the Board's second report being made known to him, states:—I have no recollection of Mr. Webster ever having drawn my attention to the improper improper manner in which the contractor cleared a third of the cost of every garment for which compensation was given in lieu of clothing until after the present Board assembled, of which I was an original member, and it was only then on Mr. Whitehouse's evidence that I was made aware of the manner in which the compensation claims were paid. I had thought these claims were paid by the Paymaster—on this I informed Colonel Roberts. It was at my suggestion that Mr. Webster has the present general ledger.

Q. Did he ever apply for the necessary books from the quartermaster-general, for his department, in order that his accounts should present a less doubtful appearance than you seem to admit they hitherto have had?

A. Had he applied through me—the only way he would have been likely to get any—I should not be likely to have forgotten his request for a set of books calculated to render his accounts more satisfactory.

Q. Who fixed the assessment for warrant-officers' compensation?

A. The amount of compensation for warrant-officers was forwarded for sanction, based upon the amount which Mr. Webster informed me the contractor stated he would charge for the articles if made in the country. This amount was eventually sanctioned by the Colonial Secretary, as there was no fixed amount for warrant-officers compensation, the claim was again made out this year in the same manner and forwarded to the Major-General for sanction. I desire to hand into the Board three papers indicating the system laid down for the issue of clothing, and checking of the quartermaster-sergeants' accounts, and the means adopted for accounting for annual expenditure of clothing. I have never considered it any part of my duty to interfere with the system I found obtaining in the quartermaster-sergeants' department when I took over the adjutantcy. I have at all times consistently brought to the knowledge of the officer commanding any matters which I thought should be amended in the interest of the public service in that department, and have got him to approve of orders, from time to time, to meet my suggestions, as in some measure indicated by the three papers I have handed in to the Board.

These three documents are now marked X, and numbered 1, 2, 3, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings of this second reassembling of the Board being so indicated on top of each.

This witness withdraws.

Warrant-officer William Webster, brigade quartermaster-sergeant, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. What number of the undermentioned garments were made from the material furnished by the Government during the period Sergeant Lyttleton has been master tailor, viz., tunics, patrol jackets, Norfolk jackets, jumpers, cloth trousers, and serge trousers?

A. I can tell by making it up from my books and the master-tailor's measurement book, and will produce it when the Board meets to take stock.

Q. You stated in evidence that you had informed Colonel Roberts and the Adjutant of the improper manner in which the contractor was obtaining money; when did you do so?

A. On two or three occasions I have mentioned this to the Colonel when presenting the compensation lists for his signature.

Q. Well, they are annual; hence it must have been at least a year since you first drew his attention to this matter; is it not so?

A. On the separate occasions when presenting these lists I mentioned this; yes, so it must be over a twelve month, I suppose.

This witness withdraws after his answers are read over to him.

The Board now decides to adjourn until its members receive notice from Mr. Little that he has worked out the calculations it intends to prefer as part of its report, when it will reassemble for the purpose of taking stock of garments and material.

The Board adjourns.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 27 October, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled in accordance with an intimation from Mr. Little that the working out of his calculations as to stock that ought to be on hand, as shown by the documents before the Board, is ready for comparing with actual amount in Mr. Webster's charge, and the same members being present as at its last meeting, proceeds to the quartermaster-sergeant's store and check over articles in store in Mr. Webster's charge with the following result, viz.:—

yds. sergts. tunic cloth, none; yds. scarlet cloth, none; trousers cloth d. width, 70 yds; trousers cloth single width, nil; serge d. width, nil; serge single, nil; Italian cloth, nil; linen cloth, nil; silicia cloth, nil; calico cloth, nil; osnaburgh cloth, nil; canvas cloth, nil; buckram, nil; 12 doz. sheets wadding; 12 oz. thread; 2½ oz. silk, machine; 7 doz. reels cotton; 1 (4 oz.) reel twist silk; ¾ oz. 1 doz. drab thread; 14 sergts. tunics; 92 gunners tunics; 19 Norfolk jackets; 28 jumpers; 4 band tunics; 1 patrol jacket. Part worn clothing fit for issue; 6 gunners tunics; 1 band tunic; 6 serge Norfolk; 7 serge jumpers. Unserviceable; 32 gunners tunics; 22 Norfolk jackets; 2 jumpers; 1 cloth trousers; 2 serge trousers; 1 patrol jacket; 1 serge tunic; some part worn clothing not yet returned from batteries.

This being completed, the Board adjourned until 30th instant, at 11 a.m., for further information to be offered by Mr. Webster.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 30 October, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, pursuant to its adjournment, proceed to compare certain papers and accounts in reference to the Major-General's minutes on the Board's last report, and find that some further information is required which Mr. Webster has promised to supply by the 1st proximo. The Board now adjourns until 11 a.m., the 1st November, 1888.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 1 November, 1888.

The Board having reassembled, pursuant to adjournment, and all members being present, proceed to take evidence.

Sergt. Lyttleton, Master-tailor, being recalled, is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Have you any further charges to make from July last to date, and when can you furnish the Board with this account?

A. Yes, I have; but I cannot give them till I get numbers from the battery pay-sergeants.

Q. Why not before?

A. Because I do not know how many badges I have sewn on.

Mr. Webster is recalled—the above witness being apparently reluctant to aid the Board—and is questioned by the Board.

Q. Have you any charges to prefer from the master-tailor for work on hand from July to date, and when can you produce a state of them?

A. I can get them from my books, but it will take some time—some day or two or more.

From the Board to witnesses:—The Board desires you will exercise the utmost despatch, for it will submit to no further delay, and recommends you to consider its business has a prior demand to any ordinary duty, and warns you that should it consider its time to be in any way lost by your inattention the matter will be forthwith reported to the Major-General. Also Mr. Webster is to understand that he must produce this information by 2 p.m. this day.

Q. Can you let the Board have these items in an hour?

A. I will go and do it at once.

This witness retires, and the following question is put to the master-tailor:—

Q. You state in evidence that your authority for “re-making charges” was Mr. Webster—do you adhere to this?

A. I do; he was my only authority.

Q. The officers commanding batteries are supposed, it is understood, to inspect and approve of alterations previous to and after completion;—is this strictly attended to?

A. Some of my work has been done before any battery officer has seen the garments. Sometimes they don't come, as they say they don't know anything about fitting; but when completed they inspect and send it back for the least fault they can find.

Q. Look at these vouchers—can you explain what appears in them as an extraordinary coincidence—viz., 662 garments for one battery agreeing exactly with another battery—that these charges for alteration, re-making, &c., &c., in 1887 should be exactly the same in Nos. 1 and 3 Batteries needs explanation;—what have you to say about it—are they separate accounts?

A. They are separate accounts. I cannot explain it, unless it be that the batteries were equal in numbers, and all garments wanted re-making or alterations.

Q. You had in 1887 for two batteries (Nos. 1 and 3) fifteen tunics in each, and the other garments equally corresponding in quantity one battery with the other, how did this occur? Included in the 662 garments

A. I can only say I cannot explain.

Q. Do you get receipts for labour wages you say you employ outside?

A. No; it is not usual.

Q. Have you made out about that extra profit, some £195, yours and other evidence go to show that has accrued to you over what you asserted was the maximum you enjoyed?

A. I have not, and I don't agree with the calculation, its footed out wrong some how, or I must have spent more on outside labour.

Q. Suppose you did, how then?

A. Well, I expect my shop labour is quite £14 or £15 a week, and the rest of the money went outside.

Q. Well, suppose that to be correct, though it conflicts with what you have stated before, tell the Board what is your busy time, and how much labour wage spent then over and above slack times?

A. I say my average labour is over £15.

Q. Has it exceeded that?

A. It has. I cannot exactly say how much.

This witness withdraws.

Mr. William Webster, Warrant-officer, and Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant, New South Wales Artillery, being recalled, is questioned by the Board:—

Q. You stated in evidence that the £9 12s. 2d., money not accounted for by the battery officer's receipts, was your own compensation due to you; do you adhere to this statement?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. The sum of £65 10s. paid you some little while after the £229 compensation for battery had been received was for compensation for four warrant-officers, was it not, and including yourself as one of these favoured recipients?

A. The £9 12s. 2d. was deducted from the £65 10s.

Q. Stay a moment. Here are certified copies of this transaction by which it is clear you received both—explain?

A. Well, at any rate the £9 12s. 2d. should have been deducted from the £65 10s., for this £9 12s. 2d. was given me as a kind of advance on my personal compensation, when I asked Henderson could he advance my compensation, which he said he could not pay all until the amount was authorized. It must have been an oversight of mine not to mention when getting the £65 that I had had this advance.

Mr. Webster withdraws.

The papers* alluded to in third question (this page) put to Mr. Webster, together with one memorandum from Messrs. Henderson (indicating Captain Savage's responsibility as by this firm regarded), are now marked (O¹, 1—7). Signed by the President and attached hereto.

It being impossible to frame a “Report” until to-morrow, so many items requiring classification and checking for a clear opinion (it being now 5 p.m.), the Board now adjourns until 11 a.m. to-morrow, the 2nd November, 1888.

£16 7s. 6d. for four W. O. compensation—£65 10s. Copies Henderson's papers attached.

* These papers are not apparently with this printed matter.—A.H.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 2 November, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to adjournment, and same members being present, proceed to recall Warrant Officer Webster.

Mr. Webster appears and is questioned:—

Q. You stated you had applied to the Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General for books for your department; did you do so verbally or by usual channel?

A. When three or four times at Quartermaster General's department I asked Major Taunton for books for my department, he replied that on arrival from England he would let me have them.

Report, 2 Nov. 1888.

THE Board having carefully again perused its former proceedings, and those of its third assembling together with the remarks of the convening officer, prefer the following report—that first, in reply to the Major-General's remarks dated 15 October, 1888, they submit the hereunder answers—

- To Minute No. 1. There is no authority for "remaking" garments; but the custom has never hitherto been challenged, and all charges of this nature have previously been paid on the signature of the officer commanding the corps.
- No. 2. The Paymaster cannot produce any authority for passing these "remake" charges; but appears to have taken the signature of the officer commanding the Artillery Forces as sufficient. The practice commenced in January, 1885.
- No. 3. The vouchers are made out by Mr. Webster's clerk for Sergeant Lyttleton from a book kept in the Brigade Stores by the clerk under Mr. Webster's supervision. Sergeant Lyttleton puts his name on them as the claimant, Mr. Webster initials them as correct. They are then presented by Captain Savage (the Adjutant), to the officer commanding for signature, and are then forwarded to the Paymaster, who signs as to "castings," &c. Hence it would appear that "the authority vouching for correctness" devolves on the officer commanding, in the first instance, and in the second the Chief Paymaster.
- No. 4. Mr. Webster's statement is correct, the master-tailor's is only from memory. The master-tailor denies that he meant to insinuate that any one but himself got any of the amounts paid.
- No. 5. Sergeant Lyttleton states that for certain work done for officers and warrant-officers he purchased his materials privately, and did not get them from Mr. Webster; but for all other work such as making, remaking, altering, &c., he was supplied by Mr. Webster with Government material.
- No. 6. The quantity of the several materials supplied by Government to the Permanent Artillery during the time Sergeant Lyttleton has been master-tailor is shown on one of the attached "tabular forms," and has been all along in Mr. Webster's custody for issue to the master-tailor as required.
- No. 7. is answered in the account of "stock taking," of which mention is made on page 22.
- No. 8. The statements of Mr. Webster and Sergeant Lyttleton vary so much and so often that little reliance can be placed on either. Their evidence only proves that they had a free hand as to expenditure and manipulation of Government property, and that there was no check to their charges for labour.
- No. 9. The question of who fixed the prices for warrant-officers' clothing, and on what basis, was put to Captain Savage, as that officer had signed the demand for compensation. His answer is in the Proceedings, but not quite satisfactory.
- No. 10. Mr. Whitehouse states that he paid the sum of £65 10s. over to Mr. Webster, independently of the larger sum in which the discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. is included, so that Mr. Webster's statement that it, the £9 12s. 2d., was part of his own compensation for the year needs proof, as his several assertions are in conflict with the evidence of attested documents. See page 23.
- No. 11. Sergeant Lyttleton acknowledges to having received the whole of the money, viz., £765 14s. 2d., from the Pay Office, but is at a loss to account for its disposition. He would make believe that he paid upwards of £600 in wages, but cannot produce receipts from his employes. He also avers that he alone had the handling of the money. He appeared "staggered" by the question as to whether he had received the several sums amounting to this £765 14s. 2d., and denied the receipt of one item of £108, but on the vouchers purporting to bear his signature being shown to him seriatim and marked "A.B.C.," &c., he acknowledged the signatures as genuine, and that he had received the whole sum. There can, therefore, be no doubt as to who drew the money from the Paymaster; but what became of the money, or how it was distributed, is yet a secret.
- No. 12. Mr. Webster's statement appears to be untrue, as both Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage deny the assertion.
- No. 13. Mr. Webster's application was evidently not formal, nor through his Adjutant.

With reference to the convening officer's marginal remark on page 19 of the Board's report, dated 8th October, 1888, the following is submitted as an explanatory illustration:—For instance, a warrant-officer virtually sells his tunic (which cost £3 6s. 2d.) to the Government for £8 5s. This tunic now lies in store until required for another man, when the tailor charges 22s. for cutting it down to fit; so that this tunic actually costs the public £9 7s. by the time it is taken into wear, instead of £3 6s. 2d. Of course the other articles of clothing have been similarly dealt with.

A study of the tables attached to these proceedings will show that the master-tailor cannot possibly have done all the work he has charged for, even supposing that all the garments said to be made were made. The Board is of opinion that garments to a very large number said to be made have not been been made, as they cannot be accounted for, nor are they in store, and they have not been issued; but the tables of figures will show the discrepancies, together with the probable amount overcharged by the master-tailor, and the number of garments and other material to be accounted for by the Artillery Quartermaster's Department.

The Board attaches „Tables" I—IV inclusive, signed by the President, which are a synopsis of all the documents and matter produced for its information and report, to be considered a portion of this report, dated at Sydney, this 6th day of November, 1888.

T. M. EDEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel, President.
HENRY G. B. SPARROW,
Captain.
JAMES LITTLE,
Lieutenant.

Signed at Sydney, this 12th day of November, 1888.

THE Board will re-assemble, as I must have a definite reply to query contained in paragraph 9 of my remarks of 15th October, 1888. It should also be ascertained when this excessive rate of compensation was first paid. The D.A.Q.-M.G. should also be questioned as to the matter referred to in paragraph 13 of remarks above quoted. Certified copies of Brigade Orders issued by me on 9th February, 1883, and 7th March, 1883, directing certain procedure to be adopted in regard to annual issue of clothing, are attached for information. The Board will ascertain if the instructions contained therein have been carried out to date, and will also require the production of documents in confirmation thereof.

JOHN S. RICHARDSON, M.-G.

12 November, 1888.

Dawes Battery, Sydney, 12 November, 1888.

THE Board having re-assembled pursuant to remarks of the convening officer, dated 12th November, 1888, same members being present, proceed to take evidence suggested by said remarks.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, New South Wales Artillery, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Having heard from the Board the nature of the paragraph 9, 15th October, 1888, of the Major-General's remarks, please give the information required?

A. I cannot say from memory; but on reference to previous correspondence laid before the Board, I see that certain warrant-officers received compensation on the 16th April, 1886. Who assessed the amount I cannot say, but was led by Mr. Webster to understand that the amount assessed was based on the offer of the contractor as to what he would charge for making warrant-officers' clothing in the Colony. On reference to paper marked H, now shown me by the Board, with letter attached, signed by Major Mackenzie, I note that the item £16 7s. 6d. is stated to have been paid to Messrs. Henderson & Co. as compensation for clothing for each of the following warrant-officers—Griffith, Green, Bennett, and Webster—for 1887. This would be the first instance of the larger amount having been paid. Warrant-officers Tristram, Griffith, Green, Bennett, and Webster received compensation in 1886, but at what rate I am unable to tell you. With regard to my statement as to who assessed the amount, I wish to explain that this refers solely to the compensation claims 1887–1888 and 1888–1889. To the best of my knowledge the first apparently excessive amount of compensation paid to warrant-officers was in 1887.

Captain Savage withdraws.

Mr. Solomon, Military Accountant, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Having read the remarks of the Major-General, date 12/11/88, please give the information invited thereby?

A. I can give no information whatever about compensation, no question of compensation ever having been referred to Pay Office. All vouchers for clothing have been paid upon the signature of Officer Commanding Artillery Forces, whose signature has been taken as a guarantee of the correctness of same. Copy of Brigade Order of 9/2/83 is in the Pay Office, but I have never seen during my time, "that is to say, to the best of my knowledge," any requisitions for clothing, or any rolls showing the several articles of uniform each man has received, or any certificate from the officers commanding batteries of the number of suits fitted and altered, as well as the number of garments made up from material. With regard to Brigade Order 7/3/83, to the best of my knowledge, I have never known clothing rules furnished.

Q. You stated in evidence that the Paymaster considered it sufficient warrant for him to pay certain accounts because they were endorsed by Colonel Roberts;—will you state to the Board any instances of corroborated examples?

A. Yes. A similar matter has cropped up in the last few days, in a memo. asking for information with regard to checking ration returns. The Officer Commanding Artillery Forces, in reply to the D.A.Q.-M. General states, that hitherto his signature has been taken as sufficient guarantee as to correctness. It has hitherto been the custom, as far as I know, in the Pay Office to take the signature of the Officer Commanding the Artillery Forces as guaranteed as to the correctness.

Mr. Solomon here withdraws.

Major Taunton, D.A.Q.-M. General appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. The remarks of the convening officer, dated to-day (12/11/88), having been read over to you by the Board, please state all you know regarding the matter in question?

A. Once or twice when Mr. Webster has been sent for to my office with reference to certain matters he has stated he has not been able to obtain certain books in connection with clothing, and has asked me to supply them. I have stated that I should be glad to let him have any books that I might be in possession of, provided he sent in the usual requisition through his commanding officer.

Q. Did you receive any requisition from the Officer Commanding Artillery for clothing account books?

A. I have no recollection of having received any. I will refer to my books.

Major Taunton withdraws to refer to books.

Major Taunton reappears and states: I find a requisition was forwarded through my office on 15 August, 1887, to the Government Printer, for 6 clothing ledgers and 6 issue and receipt books. I cannot say whether they have been received, as they would be delivered direct.

Major Taunton withdraws.

The Board having carefully weighed and considered the evidence adduced at this its last meeting, together with the remarks of the convening officer, dated 12/11/88, would submit the following as its addendum report, viz.:—The first payment of the larger amount of compensation to warrant-officers was made in 1887. Major Taunton, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, received requisition from officer commanding New South Wales Artillery for clothing account books; but this was subsequently to the first sitting of this Board.

The Board also find that the instructions alluded to in the convening officer's minute with reference to B.O. 9/2/83 and 7/3/83 have not been carried out since 1885.

Signed this 12th November, 1888,

THE Court will reassemble to afford the brigade quartermaster-sergeant and the master-tailor an opportunity of explaining deficits.
19/11/88.

JOHN S. RICHARDSON, Major-General.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 15 November, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled in accordance with the order of the convening officer, dated 14 November, 1888, proceed to take the evidence suggested.

Mr. Wm. Webster, Warrant-officer, appears to give evidence and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. The Board is reassembled for the purpose of giving you and the master-tailor an opportunity of explaining the deficiencies as shown on these tables I-IV, attached to these proceedings. Can you give to the Board any account of these items?

A. I would like a copy of these documents to enable me to furnish an explanation. I shall require the receipts of all materials supplied to my department. The clerk, my assistant, Acting Bombardier Loveless has been supplied with a duplicate key of the clothing store by a verbal order from the adjutant, and is allowed to sleep in my store. Having to go every day, Sunday excepted, to Mr. Kidman's to inspect the next day's rations. This is by a brigade order. I made no proposition that any one should have a duplicate key of my store. Having to leave my store open I cannot be held responsible for what was issued during my absence. I know for a fact that things have been issued and received without my knowledge. I have noticed that in looking round my store I have found articles of necessaries especially, and clothing received from the master-tailor made up from material irregularly delivered to my store through the Clerk Loveless, and no entry to have been made of them until I had made inquiries. Hence the new books I compiled to get a more proper receipt and issue account.

Mr. Webster withdraws, the Board having promised him a copy of Tables I, II, III, on the understanding he furnishes a written explanation by the 19th instant.

Sergeant Lyttleton, Master-tailor, appears and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. The object of this assembly of the Board is to give you and Mr. Webster an opportunity of explaining the deficiencies shown on these Tables I-IV, attached to the Proceedings. As to No. IV, can you offer any explanation?

A. I decline to answer this question, as I kept no books; I will furnish on Monday next, 19th inst., a written statement in company with the one, I understand, Mr. Webster will send in on that day.

Q. Is it not a fact that you had an actuary in to examine your books?

A. No; I kept no books, except the measurement book.

Q. Will you swear that you kept no other books but the measurement book?

A. No; I won't swear, for I did keep another book, in which I kept charges against the men; I did have a man in to examine my books.

Sergeant Lyttleton withdraws.

The Board now adjourns until Monday the 19th inst., in order that Mr. Webster and the Master-tailor may on that date produce their written statements as to the deficiencies shown on Tables I to IV, attached to the proceedings ending 6th instant.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 19 November, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled pursuant to its adjournment, and the same members being present, proceeds to call on Mr. Webster for the statements as to deficiencies, he promised on the 15th inst., to furnish this day.

Mr. Webster appears to give evidence and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Have you the statements ready regarding the deficiencies shown on the Tables, of which you have copies, and which you promised to hand to the Board?

A. I have not; my reason for not furnishing it is that I had employed an actuary and a solicitor to thoroughly examine my books; their examination is not completely concluded; the solicitor has communicated with the General asking for extension of time for the actuary to give a correct report; this is all the explanation I can give.

Q. Where are your books?

A. They have not left my office; Colonel Roberts recommended me to employ an actuary and a solicitor, the cost of whom I shall have to pay.

Q.

Q. You complained in your former evidence that your responsibility was not complete; in fact that it was not the same since your clerk had been furnished with a duplicate key of and allowed to sleep in your store;—to whom then did you first complain, and when and to whom did you raise an objection to this arrangement, which, you allege, reduced your responsibility for the store, previously admitted to be under your sole charge?

A. I never objected to this arrangement.

Q. Did you propose it?

A. Yes, I did propose it, that he should have a duplicate key, that he could answer any question, or give references to any of the store books, and give any issue of clothing or necessaries during my absence. During my absence I have frequently found that things have been issued and not entered in the books. I have had to take steps afterwards to enter these issues.

Q. On the 15th instant you stated you had made no proposition that anyone should have a duplicate key of the store, but now you have just admitted having made this proposition;—to which statement are you going to adhere?

A. I made no proposition; the proposition was in the first place made by the Adjutant in order that during my absence he could refer to books, &c., in the Brigade Store. My statement made on last assembly of this Board is the correct one.

Q. Considering your responsibility interfered with, why did you fail to make objection to this sleeping in your store and the duplicate key arrangement?

A. I failed to do that because I thought my clerk was an honorable and a trustworthy man. According to the Imperial Service the stores are locked at night, and the key given to the quartermaster.

Q. You think your clerk careless, you say;—then why did you retain him?

A. Simply because I should have to teach a new clerk, and thought it better to keep on an old one not good enough rather than go teaching a new one through all the routine of my office. On several occasions I have spoken to Captain Savage about the carelessness of my clerk—this Acting Bombardier Loveless.

Mr. Webster withdraws.

Captain and Adjutant H. P. Savage, New South Wales Artillery, appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Did you direct that Mr. Webster's clerk should be supplied with a duplicate key to the Brigade store and sleep in the store?

A. Certainly not. All I know of the case is this: That Mr. Webster obtained permission of the Colonel Commanding some time ago to reside at Ashfield in a house that he had built himself. He stated that he had made arrangements with the battery quartermaster-sergeants that they would do his duty with regard to the issue of the morning rations, and he mentioned that it would be an additional security to his store if his clerk, whom he had himself selected, were allowed to sleep in the store. This indulgence was granted. Some time after this Mr. Webster applied for a storeman to be struck off duty. This was also granted. This man's duties were to overhaul the articles in store day by day, and brush the clothes, &c. On going into the store one morning I saw another bed in Mr. Webster's inner office. I asked him whose it was, and by whose authority it was there. Mr. Webster informed me it was the storeman's, and that he had obtained Colonel Spalding's authority for his sleeping in the store as the barrack-rooms were so crowded. I told him it was not desirable for more than one man to be in the store, and that Gunner Haggerty had better go back to his barrack-room. This man shortly after went on "leave," and Mr. Webster applied for another man in his place. Gunner Fleming was detailed, and on Mr. Webster's representation that Fleming did work so much better than Haggerty, Fleming was retained in place of Haggerty. I know nothing at all about a duplicate key, but I have on more than one occasion spoken to Mr. Webster about seeing non-commissioned officers and others in his store in conversation with his clerk, after he, Webster, had left the Barracks, which he does daily at 3.30 p.m. in order to inspect rations at Kidman's store at 4 p.m. Mr. Webster lives out of Barracks at Ashfield, entirely to suit his own convenience.

Q. Has Mr. Webster ever drawn your attention to any carelessness on the part of his clerk, Acting Bombardier Loveless?

A. Yes; but only since the proceedings of this Board commenced, and I advised him if he did not suit to get another and send him about his business. He replied, I will give him a good talking to as it is a bother to teach a new one.

Q. Has Mr. Webster ever pointed out to you, that he considered his responsibility reduced by the fact of there being permission for his clerk to have a duplicate key and to sleep in the store?

A. No, never. It was to suit his own convenience that the man slept there.

Captain Savage withdraws.

Sergeant Jno. Lyttleton, master-tailor, New South Wales Artillery appears to give evidence, and is questioned by the Board:—

Q. Have you the explanation ready which you on the 15th instant promised to furnish to the Board to-day?

A. I have, and I hand in this statement: This "statement," written on one whole sheet of foolscap paper is received, marked M.T., signed by the President and attached to these proceedings. It is then read aloud by Captain Sparrow.

Q. Did you ever hand in to the brigade quartermaster's store any clothing made from Government material, or "remakes," as you call them, during the absence of Mr. Webster?

A. Yes; I did, often, as he used to get away after dinner and there was no finding him, for he would not return till the next day. It is only lately, since the Board first sat, that I thought it better to be more cautious, and so when making these "deliveries" during Mr. Webster's absence that I took up the plan of handing in with them a "slip" showing numbers.

Q. Is there anything more you would like to say in explanation of your conduct, that you may think relieafter you would wish you had taken this opportunity for making more clear?

A. No, there is not.

5th Report.

THE Board, having given the opportunity suggested by the convening officer's remarks, dated 13th instant, desire to add the following to their previous reports.

1. That Mr. Webster's statement respecting the key of his store and the man sleeping in his store are untrue, and that he has declined the opportunity given him of explaining the deficiencies the Board considers him responsible for.

2. The master-tailor's alleged explanation is herewith attached, and appears to be of a most unsatisfactory and equivocal nature.

Signed at Sydney this 19th November, 1888.

THE Court will reassemble to receive Mr. Webster's written explanation as to clothing deficit, and will, if necessary, amend tables 1 to 4 inclusive.
29 March, 1888.

JOHN S. RICHARDSON, M.-G.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 3 December, 1888.

THE Board, having reassembled in accordance with the convening officer's minute, dated 29th November, 1888, proceed to call Mr. Webster, of the Permanent Artillery, to produce any explanation he may have to offer regarding the deficit shown on tables 1 to 4, furnished in a previous report, dated 12th November, 1888.

Mr. Webster appears, and the remarks of the convening officer, dated 29th November, 1888, being read to him, states:—I produce the following documents and will read them over to the Board, commencing with the memorandum dated 27th November, 1888, and the one dated 30th November last, addressed to Colonel Roberts and the Officer Commanding the Permanent Artillery, and also a letter from my solicitor and one from my actuary, Messrs. Roberts and Blomfield, and the latter's statement and report on my accounts, which in one case actually shows a balance credit in my favour of thirty garments.

These documents being read to the Board the Board suggests to Mr. Webster that he hand them into the Board, or copies of them signed by himself, in explanation of what he has to advance, as the Board's time would be unduly occupied were it to devote so much of it to making copies of documents proposed to be set up as an alleged refutation of deficits, for which ample time has been given on previous occasions.

Mr. Webster, resuming, states:—I will hand in the original documents, taking a receipt for same, viz., five documents as my final explanation; in all comprising seven half sheets of foolscap, and being a letter from my actuary covering his report and examination of my books, also the solicitor's letter thereon. A receipt is given to Mr. Webster for these documents, which are marked R.B., initialled by the President, and attached hereto.

Q. Mr. Webster, have you anything further to state in explanation of the deficit you appear accountable for?

A. No, I have nothing further to advance, and these documents I have handed in represent my final statement and explanation. I should like to say that I am satisfied with the attention paid by the Board towards me when giving my evidence. [Mr. Webster withdraws.]

Captain Savage, Adjutant Permanent Artillery, appears in response to a message for his quick attention and is questioned by the Board.

Q. You have heard the convening officer's minute of 29th ultimo read over, and noticed that the instructions dated 27th and 30th ultimo, addressed to Colonel Roberts, do not mention that Mr. Webster is instructed that the Board will receive his (Mr. Webster's) written explanation as to clothing deficit. Did any directions come through you intimating the Board could confine itself to an explanation in writing?

A. The documents you mention are correct, and the instructions that reached Mr. Webster through me.

Q. Have you any item that will promote an explanation of the alleged deficit, which, as you are aware, the Board has intimated Mr. Webster to be responsible for?

No; I can say, though, that no time has been lost in producing the explanations Mr. Webster has produced.

6th Report.

There being no further evidence forthcoming the Board proceeds to check the tables 1 to 4 it furnished in its report of 12th ultimo with the figures in Messrs. Roberts and Blomfield's report, which Mr. Webster has preferred as part of his final explanation of the deficit apparently attributed to his conduct of the Government stores, he admitted at a former meeting of this Board, to be under his charge. The result of this examination, compared with the entries in books, show that the tables 1 to 4 already submitted on 12th ultimo are correct. It appears that the data given the actuary to work upon must have been such as to have mislead him, for he could not have seen a copy of the attached document marked E., nor those marked (also attached) W.W., viz., a list of clothing made by the master-tailor from material, but probably took all marked in red (i.e., which stands for compensation) as issue of clothing. On comparing the battery clothing books for the year 1886 with Mr. Webster's for the same period, taking the item "tunics" only, the Board finds that No. 2 Battery shows an issue of eight tunics, and No. 3 Battery an issue of four less than Mr. Webster's book accounts for. On going over the whole of the issues in Mr. Webster's book for 1886, it is clear that the items shown in table No. 1 are substantially correct; and, taking that year as a test, the Board sees no reason to alter the tables already submitted. Taking into consideration the slight discrepancies between the regimental and battery books, the Board is of opinion that certain alterations have been made in the former since the books were last before the Board.

THE Court will reassemble for the purpose of checking and reporting upon Mr. Webster's explanations in regard to the alleged deficits noted in tables 2, 3, and 4, as prepared by the Court. Taking No. 1 table as a test case for the others is hardly just to Mr. Webster, seeing his liability to be called upon to make good the deficiencies referred to.

Victoria Barracks, Sydney, 7th December, 1888.

THE Board having reassembled, in accordance with the convening officer's minute dated 5th instant, and the same members being present, proceed to draw up the extra statements required.

Report.

After further comparison of books, &c., &c., the Board prefers the following as an addendum Report:— On going over the whole of the battery clothing books the Board finds a slight discrepancy between the numbers shown as issues and the numbers shown in table 1. The statements now tabled as 5, and herewith attached, explains where the differences occur. That is, the figures at bottom of said table 5, viz., 6.3.9.3.9, are items which may be set against Mr. Webster's deficiencies quoted in table 1.

Memorandum by The President.

Military Staff Office, Sydney, 11 January, 1889.

By direction of the General Officer Commanding the Forces, the Battery officers, and their quartermaster-sergeants, the Adjutant, and Mr. Webster, of the N.S.W. Artillery, attend with reference to certain compensation claims under investigation of the Board ordered in June, 1888.

Lieut.-Col. Airey produces compensation lists for his battery.

Copies of other lists for compensation are produced with battery officer's receipts attached, similar to those as already exhibited to the Board.

A comparison of these with amount £229 12s. 7d. received by Mr. Webster from Messrs. Henderson, demonstrate that this warrant-officer is unlawfully in possession of £9 12s. 2d., the property of the Government, and that Messrs. Henderson have acquired £3 4s. beyond what should have been issued by the Treasury.

Mr. Webster states: "The list sent on to the Treasury is really a mere voucher. The "compensation lists" are received from batteries with each man's name thereon. The items are recapitulated on to another list, showing merely number of the garments, so many trousers, &c., &c.; this list is then signed by the Commanding officer and forwarded to the contractor, who therefrom makes out the vouchers, which are in like manner signed by the Colonel-Commanding, who returns them to the contractor, who then gets the full amount from the Treasury and then pays the two-thirds to Mr. Webster (myself), and keeps one-third for themselves. I issue the amount due to each battery and get the receipts now again—shown to Board. The discrepancy the Board discovered of £9 12s. 2d. would not have escaped my notice had I had my books checked and properly kept. It may have arose during recapitulation for the contractor's list. This amount is of course due to the Government. I cannot recollect how it came about; neither can I produce the list or a copy of this for 1887-8. The contractor may have the original."

Mr. Whitehouse, in response to a question from myself, says he has no copy of this list at his firm's office, that is Messrs. Henderson.

I desire to suggest the items in x{ on amended table 3, marked x, under my signature, should not form any part of a charge, as, though unaccounted for, there is no authorized scale for amounts of material required to make up garments, thus the figures could be disputed.

PROCEEDINGS of a General Court-martial, held at Sydney, New South Wales, on the 26th day of February, 1889, by order of His Excellency the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, bearing date the 2nd day of March, 1889, pursuant to order signed by His Excellency Charles Robert, Baron Carrington, P.C., G.C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief, dated the 23rd day of February, 1889.

President :—

Colonel EDMUND GEORGE HENRY BINGHAM, General Staff (Lieut.-Colonel Royal Artillery).

Members :—

Lieut.-Colonel COOPER PENROSE, General Staff, Commanding Submarine Mining Forces (Major, Royal Engineers).

Major HENRY PARK AILEY, New South Wales Artillery.

Captain FREDERICK THOMAS BENDOE BAYNES, New South Wales Artillery.

Captain WILLIAM ANDREW CUTHELL, General Staff, Instructor of Musketry.

Judge-Advocate :—

Major HARRY BEAUCHAMP LASSETTER, Permanent Mounted Infantry (Major, 2nd Battalion South Staffordshire Regiment of Foot).

At 10 o'clock a.m. the Court opens.—Trial of No. 95 Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant William Webster, Warrant-officer of the New South Wales Artillery.

The orders convening the Court are read, and copies thereof are marked A, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.

The Court satisfy themselves as provided by the Rules of Procedures 22 and 23.

Lieut.-Colonel Henry Douglas Mackenzie, Assistant Adjutant-General, appears as prosecutor, and takes his place.

The abovenamed prisoner is brought before the Court.

Mr. Heydon appears as counsel for the prosecution.

Mr. G. B. Simpson, Q.C., appears as counsel for the defence.

The names of the President and Members of the Court are read over in the hearing of the prisoner, and they severally answer to their names.

1. Do you object to be tried by me as President, or by any of the Officers whose names you have heard read over? No, sir.

The President, Members, and Judge-Advocate are duly sworn. The following officer, attending for instruction, Lieutenant Leslie Herbert Kyngdon, New South Wales Artillery, is duly sworn.

2. Do you object to Mr. Earnest Blackwell as a shorthand-writer? No, sir.

The shorthand-writer is duly sworn.

*Mr. Simpson :—*Before a note is made of the prisoner's reply I desire to object entirely to the jurisdiction of this Court.

*The President :—*I think that comes a little later on, sir.

*Mr. Simpson :—*Then I would ask you not to note the reply of the prisoner, as it was made under a misapprehension.

*The President :—*I think, sir, that the prisoner is assenting to the names of the officers individually; the question of the jurisdiction of the Court comes later on.

The Judge-Advocate read the first charge as follows:—"The prisoner, Warrant-officer William Webster, New South Wales Artillery, a soldier of the Permanent Forces of the Colony, is charged with embezzling public money, in that he, at Sydney, New South Wales, on the 2nd June, 1887, when entrusted by the Government contractors, Messrs. Henderson & Co., with the sum of £229 12s. 7d., public money, for the purpose of paying for compensation for clothing for 1887-88, applied a portion thereof, viz., the sum of £9 12s. 2d., for his own use."

*Mr. Simpson :—*The proper time has now arrived for me to object to the jurisdiction of the Court?

*The President :—*Yes, that is so.

*Mr. Simpson :—*Well, Mr. President, the first point that I take is that the Court has no jurisdiction, inasmuch as it has not been properly convened. And I call the attention of the Court to our local Act, 34 Vic. No. 19, sec. 8—"An Act to provide for the Discipline of Military and Naval Forces in the Service of Her Majesty's Government in New South Wales." This Court is constituted, as I hear stated, for the trial of Warrant-officer Webster, of the New South Wales Artillery. The New South Wales Artillery is a corps called into existence by virtue of this Act. And he is charged before this general Court-martial with having committed certain offences under the Army Act of 1881. Outside the Army Act of 1881 no offences have been committed by him at all. The first point, as to whether this Court has been properly, legally, or illegally convened, will depend upon the consideration of clause 8 of this Act. "It shall be lawful"—these are the words of the Act—"for the Governor from time to time to convene courts of inquiry, and to so that the Governor must convene a Court-martial himself, or delegate to somebody else the power to convene a Court-martial. As far as I understand the order of the Governor in this instance does not give distinct authority to convene, nor does it delegate the power of convening this Court-martial to General Richardson. That is my impression of the instrument by which this Court was convened. If I am wrong I shall be glad to save the time of the Court by being corrected.

*The President :—*We can produce the order to Major-General Richardson convening the Court.

*Mr. Simpson :—*There is such an order?

*The President :—*Yes, there is.

*Mr. Simpson :—*Well, then, I am perfectly satisfied. Have you any objection to my seeing it?

[Document produced.]

*Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie :—*This document is the approval of the Governor that the Court should be convened.

*Mr. Simpson :—*Well, that is not in accordance with the Act. I submit that the Governor must either convene the Court himself or delegate the power to some other officer,—“It shall be lawful for the Governor to convene at any time, and to delegate power to convene, a Court-martial.” So that unless the the Governor has either convened this Court-martial himself, or delegated the power of convening it to some gentleman, I submit that this Court has not been properly convened, indeed, there is no Court at all.

The President :—We will have the point settled before we proceed any further.

Mr. Simpson :—Mr. President, I make this suggestion to the Court. I am perfectly willing that, as a matter of form, the Court should decide this point against me. Personally, I should prefer such a course being adopted if the Court thought fit, so that there might be a formal decision against me in order that I might subsequently have the benefit of the point. I do not wish to delay the proceedings, only I wish to have reserved to me the right of appeal on this point. Sometimes a Judge will give a formal decision against a counsel, "taking" the point so that that counsel might, if it became necessary, have the opinion of the Full Court.

Mr. Heydon :—I have never known that to be done precisely as my learned friend suggests. I have never known such a course adopted without the Court being fully informed of the counsel's objections. No Court of law would place itself in the position that my learned friend is asking this Court to place itself in, with regard to the particular point. Personally I am not aware even of the facts to which he would appeal in support of his objection; and if the case was allowed to proceed, and in the end the objections was sustained, a great deal of time would be wasted. It seems a great pity that the Court should waste its time in that way. If the Court has not been properly convened then I think that it should say so in order that without further delay the proceedings may begin again from the beginning, and the Court be properly convened. I have here a document which seems to me to be a delegation of the power to convene a Court. I refer to a letter from the Governor, dated the 21st February, 1889, and reading as follows :—

There is no form given in fact for the delegation of power by the Governor to convene a Court-martial. Any form may be adopted. As long as a document showing the consent of the Governor to the convention of such a Court has been received that is quite sufficient.

The President :—Mr. Simpson, you have heard this letter read by the counsel of the prosecution. Do you consider that is sufficient authority from the Governor and Commander-in-Chief?

Mr. Simpson :—Well, sir, if the Court will forgive me. I cannot answer a question of that kind. You will at once see that it is not the right thing for a counsel to express his opinion at all.

The President :—Certainly. The Court is closed to consider its decision.

The Court is cleared.

Upon the re-opening of the Court Mr. Heydon said: Perhaps I may be allowed to make a suggestion with reference to this matter. Of course I do not know which way the Court is about to decide the point. But I would make two suggestions; that if the Court feel any doubt at all about it a message might be sent to His Excellency the Governor in order that he might now give power in the words of the Act or might himself convene the Court, and the process of swearing the members in might be gone through again. I would suggest also that it would be an advisable thing if my learned friend were to state at once what his objections to the Court are, because if this first point were decided in his favour either now or ultimately after hearing the whole case, it would be unfortunate if any point were kept in reserve which might render necessary the convening of a second Court-martial.

Mr. Simpson :—The Court will remember that I myself suggested that I should take all my points one after the other. It was at your suggestion, sir, that I refrained, and only mentioned one. But, with the permission of the Court, I will be perfectly willing to mention all my points, and have them decided by the Court, because, even if this point were suggested in my favour, a Court would be properly convened by-and-by, and more time spent and expense incurred. I can only say that I am perfectly willing that the Court should decide it against me formally, so that we might go on and consider more important matters. With reference to the suggestion of my friend that the Governor should be asked to convene the Court formally again, I submit that that cannot be done.

The President :—The Court would like to hear your other points Mr. Simpson.

Mr. Simpson :—My next point, then, is this. The Governor has here to appoint either three or five commissioned officers under this Act to form a Court-martial, and, as far as I have been able to ascertain, you, sir, the President, and Colonel Penrose, one of the members of the Court, at all events, are not commissioned officers under this Act. I do not know positively how that is. I have been unable to ascertain it. Perhaps you would be good enough to tell me whether you are commissioned officers under this Act or not?

The President :—I have received a commission from the Government of this country, signed by the Governor and by the Colonial Secretary for the time being. So also has Major Penrose.

Mr. Simpson :—As officers under this Act?

The President :—Yes; and we have also subscribed by oath under this Act.

Mr. Simpson :—I am informed, sir, that your commission was for three years only, and that that commission has expired. If your commission is only for three years, and the oath you took was only for that time, then I submit you are not commissioned officers under this Act.

Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie (to the President) :—There was no time mentioned when you took service. At least I should be very surprised if there was, for it would be a most unusual course.

Mr. Simpson :—All I want to know is whether you are at present holding commissions in the Military Forces of New South Wales. If your commissions have expired I think you are not now officers under this Act.

Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie (to the President) :—Your commission does not state that you are appointed for any length of time. That commission holds good until you are relieved.

Mr. Simpson :—If you could state formally that you hold a commission under this Act, then that point falls to the ground.

The President :—As far as I am concerned I do hold a commission under the Act.

Mr. Simpson :—And Colonel Penrose also?

The President :—Yes; and Colonel Penrose also.

Mr. Simpson :—Although I took this point, I beg to say that we have not the least objection to your sitting. Now I submit that the Court has only jurisdiction over offences coming within the Army Act of 1881. The Act of our local Legislature says, "It may be lawful for the Governor to convene at any time a Court-martial. But these charges against the prisoner allude to offences against the Army Regulation

Regulation Act of 1881; and the prisoner is not charged before this Court with having committed any offence against the Act of the New South Wales Legislature, 34 Vic. No. 19. Then I have some more points, sir. There is another which I formally take and it is this, the President of the Court must be appointed by the Governor.

The President :—I have the answer to that objection. I was appointed by the Governor. [Document handed to Mr. Simpson.]

Mr. Simpson :—I submit that that is not a sufficient appointment by the Governor. Another point I take is this, that the prisoner is not a soldier amenable to military law at all; and that of course is an important point. The Army Act of 1881, specifies who are subject to military law as soldiers—(1) "All soldiers of the regular forces." It is evident that the prisoner is not included there. (2) "All non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent staff of any auxiliary forces, who are not otherwise subject to military law." Neither is the prisoner included in that category. (3) "All non-commissioned officers and men serving in a force raised by order of Her Majesty beyond the limits of the United Kingdom and of India, and serving under the command of an officer of the regular forces." Now although we may be honoured by the presence of Imperial officers in this Colony, no one can say that the Permanent Artillery of New South Wales is under the command of an officer of the regular forces. Now it is perfectly clear that the prisoner does not come within any of these definitions. Therefore he was not subject to military law, within the meaning of the Act of 1881. He was a warrant-officer in the New South Wales Artillery, and being a warrant-officer in the New South Wales Artillery, he submitted that he was beyond the power of the Army Act of 1881. On page 530 there was a note to subsection 3, which I have already read. The note says "this is not intended to include strictly Colonial forces, but only forces raised at the Imperial expense." For example—it will include the West Indian regiments, the Malta Fencibles, and the Lascars of Hong Kong and Ceylon, whose maintenance is voted annually by Parliament. It might, however, extend to a force raised under a Colonial Act, but under the Imperial control. Really it is hardly necessary to state that, because it is clearly beyond all doubt that a person in the New South Wales Artillery is not within the limits of the United Kingdom, or India, or yet serving under an officer of the regular forces. Therefore the prisoner is not a soldier within the meaning of the Act of 1881, but merely a soldier within the meaning of the Colonial Act of 34 Vic. No. 19.

The President :—You admit that he is a soldier under that Act?

Mr. Simpson :—I admit that he is a man, whether he is a soldier, or a sailor, or a lawyer, but a man (subject to their proving it—I want to be clear and distinct about that). A man who has subscribed the oath of engagement for a period of service under 34 Vic. No. 19. But I submit that he is not a soldier within the meaning of the Army Act of 1881. Now the first offence with which he is charged—are the offences indeed, are offences under the Army Act of 1881. Section 18 does not use the words "if a person subject to military law" does so and so, but if "any soldier" commits certain offences he shall be tried by Court-martial. And I submit that that means a soldier under the Army Act of 1881, and not under our own Colonial Army Act. Further, I submit that the Army Act of 1881 as far as this Colony is concerned, has no application whatever. The Act under which this man has entered into an engagement to serve in the military or naval forces of New South Wales provides in section 56 "Every person who shall have taken and subscribed the oath of engagement aforesaid."

In May, 1871, there was an Imperial Mutiny Act in force, and I think that that Act was an Annual Act passed from year to year up to 1879, and that after 1879, there was no such thing as an Imperial Mutiny Act at all. It was abolished. At all events we are dealing with the year 1881, when there was no Imperial Mutiny Act at all, and there is none in existence now. That is a fault of somebody; I do not say who. It might be that when the Imperial Mutiny Act was done away with in England this Act of our local Legislature was not amended, and persons serving in the forces of New South Wales not made subject to the provisions of the Army Act. There are I believe very grave differences between this Army Act and the Mutiny Act. Whether that Army Act of 1881 was the first or not it certainly did away with the Mutiny Act. Neither in 1886, 1887, or 1888, the years during which the prisoner was charged with having committed certain offences, was there a Mutiny Act in force. Undoubtedly he is not subject to the Army Act of 1881, under which these charges are framed. Now let me read section 5 of our local Act again.

I will not trouble the Court any further. In England the Army Act provides that it shall take the place of the Mutiny Act. I believe there is a provision to that effect.

The President :—There is in England an Annual Army Act. It provides from year to year for the discipline of the army.

Mr. Simpson :—But there is no Mutiny Act at all?

The President :—No; there is not.

Mr. Simpson :—Then, even supposing that there is a provision in this Act that the Army Act shall take the place of the Mutiny Act, that does not say that members of the New South Wales Permanent Artillery should be subject to the provisions of the Act at all. It would be perfectly monstrous that a member of the New South Wales Permanent Artillery, who has never assented by his representatives in Parliament, should be subject to the Army Act of 1881. You cannot make a man amenable to an Act by which he is not bound. Some gentlemen will remember that when our corps was despatched to the Soudan it was doubtful even then whether the provisions of this Army Act applied to them. I should not have thought that there was much doubt about it myself, because I should have thought that there is sufficient provision made in the Act that members of Colonial Forces serving with Her Majesty's Imperial Forces were subject to the Army Act of 1881. But never mind how that may be, there was a doubt in the minds of people here whether the Army Act of 1881 had any reference to Colonial Forces serving with Her Majesty's troops abroad, and the very fact that Parliament thought it necessary to make special provision for that strengthens the position I am taking before this Court. This Court seems to be constituted under the provisions of 34 Vic. No. 19, and yet we find the oath administered to yourself and the other members of the Court is the oath administered by the Judge-Advocate under the provisions of the Army Act of 1881. Of course it is unnecessary for me to take up the time of the Court by citing authorities to show that, if the Court has no jurisdiction, and if this person is not amenable to the Court, the whole thing collapses. At least if my argument is correct, that if he, a member of the New South Wales Artillery, is not subject to the provisions of the Army Act, under which the charges against him are made, then this Court is improperly constituted. If you, sir, and Major Penrose, are subject to the

Army

Army Act of 1881, I submit that the other gentlemen are not, and that indeed they have no authority to sit on a Court-martial at all. It is necessary for me to point out that if even he were subject to the Imperial Mutiny Act, if such an Act were in force, he would still only be subject to it in so far as it was consistent with the Act of our Colonial Legislature. As the matter stands, I submit that not only can the prisoner not be tried now but he cannot be tried at any time by a Court-martial, and detaining him in custody any longer, either now or afterwards, would be illegal. Will you allow me to add one further remark? It is this, that, although this Court is called a General Court-martial, a very high Court, the highest Court-martial, perhaps exceptional, still it is an inferior Court, one subject to the High Court of Judicature, in England, if it were being held in England. There is no doubt about that—there is authority for it in this book. And so, supposing this Court were properly constituted it is subject to the authority of the Supreme Court here which takes the place of the Court of Queen's Bench in England. Thus, although it is a high Court, and a very high Court indeed, still, and I am sure my friend will agree with me, nothing is to be presumed in favor of an inferior Court.

Mr. Heydon :—I understand that the first and second points have fallen to the ground; and also the point raised by my learned friend to the effect that it is necessary that the President of the Court should be appointed by the Governor, that having been actually done. Then my friend goes on to say that, not only cannot his client be tried by Court-martial at all, but that no other member of the Permanent Artillery of New South Wales can be tried by Court-martial either.

Mr. Simpson :—I did not say that. I said that you could not try by Court-martial in this Colony for offences committed under the Army Act.

Mr. Heydon :—Just so; but as the offences mentioned in our own Act are really insufficient for the maintenance of discipline, then there is no provision for punishing offences coming within the scope of the Army Act of 1881. My friend says that, a Court-martial may be convened for the purpose of hearing and determining all offences committed under the local Act, but that these offences are not committed under that Act, and that therefore the Court has no right to try them. In other words he says that, soldiers committing offences in this Colony under the Army Act of 1881 cannot be tried by Court-martial. Now the 5th section 34 Vic., No. 19 says that, any man who shall subscribe to the oath shall be subject to the provisions of the Imperial Mutiny Act in force for the time being. Passing over, for the time, my friend's objection, that the Army Act has superseded the Imperial Mutiny Act, the question arises, whether, if a man in these forces commits an offence against the Mutiny Act he has not committed an offence against the Army Act also. I submit that he has. What the Court has to look to is the intention of those who framed the local Act; and I maintain that the intention of that Act was to bring the members of the force under the provisions of the English Mutiny Act. Then an offence against the Army Act of 1881 applied through the Mutiny Act to the members of our forces becomes an offence against the local Act. To hold otherwise would be to hold that Parliament intended that there should be no disciplinary code applied to the members of our forces for offences under the Mutiny Act, and that is simply absurd. To put it shortly, the Imperial Mutiny Act for the time being is a portion of our own Act. The same argument I will submit to the Court answers the objection of my friend that the prisoner is not a soldier within the meaning of the Army Act of 1881. There can be no doubt whatever that he is a soldier in our forces, and in section 5 it says that every man who has subscribed the oath of engagement shall remain subject to the provisions of the Imperial Mutiny Act. Yes, says my friend but that only applies to persons in the English forces.

Mr. Simpson :—I never said anything of the kind. I said that the Army Act does not apply to members of our forces.

Mr. Heydon :—Yes; but at present I am treating the Army Act of 1881, and the Mutiny Act as practically the same. My learned friend says that the prisoner is not a soldier under the meaning of the Army Act of 1881. But he is a soldier in our forces, and I submit that that is to be read as a soldier under the Imperial Act of 1881. Otherwise the whole thing is absolutely meaningless; for, whilst the Imperial Act says that a soldier serving in the regular forces is to be subject to certain penalties for certain offences, and our Act says that a soldier in our forces is to be subject to the English Act, the last argument of my friend has more force than any of the others—viz., that there is no Mutiny Act in existence at all, because I find that the Army Act of 1881 is not a re-enactment under another name of the old Mutiny Act, but that it is the old Mutiny Act with other provisions imported into it. It seems to me, however, that those provisions apply to the soldiers here. I take it that the Army Act includes the Mutiny Act, which section 5 of our own Act says the forces here should be subject to. Therefore I submit that the change in the name of the Act will really not make any difference. The Court has to look at the intention of the Legislature; and so far as these charges are concerned I don't know that any change has been made at all. I may point out that the consent of the prisoner was obtained to serve under the new Act when it came into force. Each member of the force was asked if he would serve under the Act of 1879 when it came into force, and amongst others the prisoner Webster gave his consent to do so. That can be proved.

Mr. Simpson :—The argument of my learned friend, if I may call it an argument at all—the assertion of my learned friend that if I am right in this matter the members of the New South Wales Artillery may commit a great many offences without being subject to punishment by Court-martial for them, goes for nothing. My learned friend knows that Judges of the Supreme Court are constantly delivering judgments which they regret—compelled by the peculiarities of the law to do so. The remedy in this instance is very simple. Those who are in command of the Military Forces here ought to have seen that provision was made to amend our Act from the time the Mutiny Act ceased to exist. It has not been done, but Mr. Heydon tells us that Webster agreed to become subject to the provisions of the Act of 1879. That has nothing to do with it at all. Will the consent of an ignorant man to bind himself to certain rules give a Court-martial power to hang him? The proper course would have been to have our own Act amended. As it is, the persons who comprise our forces are only subject to the local Act. The fact that it had occurred to the Military authorities to swear the men to subjection to the Act of 1879 was a strong point in his favour. It showed clearly that they had their doubts whether the Army Act was binding upon men in this Colony.

The Judge Advocate :—I am of opinion that the Court have jurisdiction. It is true, as stated by the prisoner's counsel, that the Mutiny Act was repealed in 1879, but under 43 Vic. chap. 32 it is specially enacted that any reference in any Act of Parliament or other document to the Army Mutiny Act shall be deemed to refer to the corresponding provisions of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act of 1879. The prisoner is now arraigned under the Army Act of 1881, and therefore I deem that the Court has jurisdiction.

Mr. Simpson :—That is not in force in the Colony and it cannot bind or control in any way persons who hold positions in this Colony.

[The Court cleared.]

Upon the reopening of the Court Mr. Heydon said :—Since the closing of the Court I have been put in possession of certain facts which appear to me to be material to the points under consideration.

The President :—If they bear upon the objections raised by the counsel for the prisoner, I have no objection.

Mr. Heydon :—It seems that upon the passing of the English Army Act of 1879 it was pointed out by the General Commanding the Forces that there —

Mr. Simpson :—I think that my learned friend has no right to point out what was the opinion of the General Commanding the Forces.

Mr. Heydon :—This question was brought before the Attorney-General of the day.

Mr. Simpson :—Really, it is a monstrous thing. If even my learned friend were addressing a bench of magistrates he would not dare to say what was the opinion of an Attorney-General. When our present Chief Justice was at the bar he gave opinions, and do we ever venture to mention the fact to the Court that Sir Frederick Darley, when counsel, said such and such a thing?

Mr. Heydon :—My friend says that the Imperial Mutiny Act cannot apply to the Army Act of 1881, and he says that it has been an oversight not to have a new Act passed. Now I wish to point out to the Court that at the time it was considered whether it was necessary to pass a new Act.

Mr. Simpson :—I desire to say that this Court cannot be in any way overawed by the opinion of an Attorney-General. My learned friend does not even say who the Attorney-General was.

Mr. Heydon :—It was Mr. Wisdom.

The President (to Mr. Heydon) :—I don't think we can take those papers; and the Court has now decided to adjourn until further orders.

Mr. Simpson :—Before the Court adjourns I should like to point out that the prisoner is at present under arrest. Is there any reason why he should remain under arrest?

The President :—Oh, certainly.

[At 12:40 p.m. the Court adjourned until further orders.]

Proceedings before the Full Court on Friday, 1st March, 1889.

Sitting Judges :—

Their Honors Sir P. M. Darley, Chief Justice; Mr. Justice Windeyer, and Mr. Justice Foster.

Mr. Simpson :—I beg to move that the rule nisi for which I applied yesterday, restraining the General Court-martial from proceeding further against Warrant-officer William Webster, may be made absolute. I submit that beyond all doubt the Court must not only be properly and legally convened, but that it must have jurisdiction to try this particular prisoner for the offences charged against him, so that although the Court-martial might have authority to try the prisoner for certain offences they ought to be restrained, unless they are entitled to try this particular prisoner for these particular offences. I think his Honor, Mr. Justice Windeyer, has put the matter most forcibly. If the Court will hold that the Mutiny Act for the time being means the Army Act of 1881, then the case is practically at an end, as far as the main issue is concerned, at all events. In answer to the question which his Honor, the Chief Justice, asked me as to the authority upon which I appeared before the Court-martial, I must say that I appeared there as counsel, and the President allowed me to appear there.

The Chief Justice :—Yes, but you must have appeared there under some Act of Parliament?

Mr. Simpson :—I simply appeared as counsel. It is a matter for the President of the Court as to the authority upon which I appeared. He allowed me to appear under the Army Act of 1881, I imagine. Supposing it had been any other species of Court-martial, I could have appeared.

The Chief Justice :—Yes, but you could not have been heard.

Mr. Simpson :—I could have been heard if the Court had been willing to hear me. If the Court had not been willing to hear me all that I could do would have been to suggest questions to the prisoner.

The Chief Justice :—I have been concerned myself as counsel for a prisoner at a Court-martial, and then I had to write down suggestions for the prisoner which were passed from one to another, and the process was a very lengthy one.

Mr. Simpson :—We found the Judge Advocate very useful in this instance. He is a gentleman who appears to be very familiar indeed with military law, and rendered us great assistance in conducting the case through in this matter, which the Court did not think it well to adopt. Your Honor has perhaps looked at the Army Act of 1881. That Act appears to have reference to soldiers of the Imperial forces, to certain Reserve forces, to auxiliary forces, and in certain cases to forces serving in any of the Colonial possessions raised under the authority of Her Majesty, and under the control of an officer of the Imperial forces. It has no reference, except as far as section 177 is concerned, to any Colonial forces.

The Chief Justice :—Are not the troops in this Colony Her Majesty's troops?

Mr. Simpson :—They are under a separate Act of Parliament, and subject to the provisions of that Act, but apart from that they are not. No doubt they are Her Majesty's troops in the same way that we are Her Majesty's subjects; but the Army Act of 1881 has reference not simply to soldiers who are raised under the provisions of a local Act, and who for certain purposes are soldiers of Her Majesty, but it has reference in direct terms to forces raised in England, governed by Her Majesty, and under officers appointed by Her Majesty.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—So it was under the old Imperial Mutiny Act.

The Chief Justice :—The question is whether the Army Act of 1881 is, in the meaning of the local Act, the same as the Mutiny Act. The question is,—Is not this Army Discipline Act the Imperial Mutiny Act now in force?

Mr.

Mr. Simpson :—Yes, your Honor, that is it. And what I wish to point out is that the Army Act of 1881 contains a great many provisions which are not to be found in the old Mutiny Act.

The Chief Justice :—The Army Act seems to combine the regulations of the Mutiny Act with several other regulations; but does that make it less a Mutiny Act?

Mr. Simpson :—It is not the Mutiny Act, your Honor. It may be a Mutiny Act, but the question is whether it is the Mutiny Act which the Legislature of New South Wales had in view when they passed our local Act.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—Well, but in the light of the Constitution you know what the local Act means.

Mr. Simpson :—The Legislature in England have taken a different view from that which your Honors appear to be inclined to take at present. They passed an Act of Parliament—the Army Discipline Act of 1879—saying that for certain reasons and up to a certain time the provisions of the Mutiny Act of 1878 are applied to the Army Discipline Act of 1879. Now, if the Legislature of England had regarded the old Mutiny Act and the Army Discipline Act as practically the same Act it would have been unnecessary to do this, and if it had not appeared to them necessary to do it they surely would not have done it. And not only that, they passed an Act called the Army Discipline Act Commencement Act, 42 or 43 Vic., chap. 33, section 5, says that any reference in any Act of Parliament or other document to the Army Mutiny Act or the Marine Mutiny Act shall, after the commencement of the Army Discipline Act of 1879 be deemed to refer to the provisions of that Act. So that it is evident that in England it was not thought that the Army Discipline Act of 1879 was the Mutiny Act. If it had been so, if the argument that in our Act the words Mutiny Act mean the Army Discipline Act of 1879 there would have been absolutely no need to say that the provisions of the Mutiny Act were extended to this Act. Not only did they do that, but when they passed the Army Act of 1881 they said the same thing again in fact.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—The Army Act is passed from year to year, I believe.

Mr. Simpson :—Not passed from year to year, your Honor, but continued from year to year.

Mr. Justice Foster :—If in any document in England the Mutiny Act is referred to, do you admit that that reference applies to the Army Act of 1881?

Mr. Simpson :—I say that section 5 of the Army Discipline Amendment Act of 1879 has no reference to any Act of the colonial Legislature.

Mr. Justice Foster :—Have they not used the strongest words to say that one Act takes the provisions of the other?

Mr. Simpson :—Yes, your Honor, in England that is so, but not here. Supposing the Imperial Mutiny Act in force at the time we passed our Act said that for certain offences soldiers should be liable to imprisonment for two years, and the Army Act of one year afterwards said that for that offence they should be hanged, would they have to be hanged here?

Mr. Pilcher :—Certainly.

The Chief Justice :—If the Army Act is not the Imperial Mutiny Act then there is no Imperial Mutiny Act in existence.

Mr. Simpson :—That is what I say, your Honor. There is no Mutiny Act in existence.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—The preamble of the Act for the current year is exactly the same as that of the Mutiny Act to all intents and purposes.

Mr. Simpson :—But, your Honor, the two Acts have quite different names.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—The title is no part of an Act of Parliament in point of law.

The Chief Justice :—At present it would require a very strong argument to convince me that the Army Act is not the same as the old Mutiny Act.

Mr. Justice Foster :—Are not the sections the same in the two Acts.

Mr. Simpson :—No, your Honor, they are entirely different.

The Chief Justice :—The old Mutiny Act provided for the passing of articles of war, and I think that was done under the sign manual of the Queen, whilst in the Army Discipline Act they were introduced into the Act itself, so that instead of each year fresh regulations being signed by Her Majesty they become part of the statute law. So that practically the difference is only an apparent and not a real difference. When our Act was passed the troops here became subject to the Imperial Mutiny Act.

Mr. Simpson :—Not only by virtue of the Mutiny Act, but under section 5 of our local Act itself.

The Chief Justice :—If you look at section 5 of the local Act you will find that the soldiers here became subject to the same discipline as Her Majesty's army, and the troops in the navy here are subject to any Act regulating the troops in Her Majesty's navy.

Mr. Simpson :—There is no doubt that that is so as far as the navy is concerned, but as far as the army is concerned the troops of New South Wales are subject to one Act—the Imperial Mutiny Act for the time being. If the Imperial Act for the time being, under our Act, meant the Army Act of 1881, or the Army Discipline Act of 1879, it would have meant the same in England. But if that was so, why did the English Parliament pass section 5 of the Army Discipline Commencement Act of 1879, or section 191 of the Army Act of 1881? We must presume that an Act of Parliament is not passed without occasion. Really, what they did in England was to re-enact the Army Act. The members of our local forces only take the oath to serve for a number of years; they take the oath to serve under the provisions of the Imperial Mutiny Act, and they know what the provisions of the Imperial Mutiny Act are; they know that if they commit certain offences under that Act they may be tried and punished in a certain way. They have agreed to that, but have never agreed to be subject to the Army Discipline Act of 1881, which creates several offences that were not included in the Mutiny Act at all. This charge of what they call "embezzlement" was included I admit, but there were several other charges, such as the careless signing of vouchers, and so forth, that were not.

Mr. Pilcher :—They are in the articles of war, which are a part of the Mutiny Act.

Mr. Simpson :—We are not here to answer a charge of having committed offences against the articles of war. If we were, and if they were in force, we should be bound by them. Now, I wish to call your Honor's attention to this, that under section 5 of the Army Discipline Commencement Act of 1879 the Mutiny Act is referred to. Any reference in any Act of Parliament to the Army Mutiny Act is to apply to the Army Act of 1881. The Army Mutiny Act means one particular Act, 41 and 42 Vic., chap. 10, and that Act expired long ago.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—Then, according to your argument, this Act had no meaning in 1874; there was no Act known as the Mutiny Act then.

The

The Chief Justice :—There was no such legal term ; there was no short title to the Mutiny Act.

Mr. Simpson :—Excuse me, your Honor, it is called an Army Mutiny Act in the section to which I am referring.

The Chief Justice :—There never was an Act passed called the Mutiny Act. There have been Acts passed to deal with mutiny in the army. An army Act dealing with mutiny in the army is called, when spoken of generally, a Mutiny Act.

Mr. Simpson :—To prevent any conflict the Army Discipline Commencement Act was passed, and maintain that it was the duty of the Legislature here to have altered our local Act when the Army Act came into existence. The Army Act contains a great many provisions which the Mutiny Act did not contain ; it alters the punishment in a great many cases, and I think it alters the constitution of a Court-martial.

The Chief Justice :—As there was no Act of Parliament called the Mutiny Act are not the words " Mutiny Act " in our Local Act indicative merely of a code of law rather than of any particular Act ?

Mr. Simpson :—Then if your Honors decide that the Army Act is the same as the Mutiny Act, and that our local Act is applicable to either of them, then my main objection falls to the ground. Now, supposing this Court is properly convened and assembled, then I maintain that it has only jurisdiction to determine offences under this Act, 34 Vic. No. 19. We find that that is so by section 18.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—But if the Imperial Army Act is part of this Act, then an offence against it is an offence against this Act.

Mr. Simpson :—But I say that our Legislature have not provided for that. At all events, if he is subject to the Army Act of 1881, then I submit that the Governor only can convene a Court for the purpose of trying him. That much is clear under 34 Vic. No. 19, and no offence for which he is tried must be offences committed against this Act or against the regulations thereunder. But as I have already said, the Governor only has power to convene this Court, and we maintain that in this instance the Governor did not convene it. On the 21st February, Major-General Richardson wrote a letter to the Governor in which he asked for His Excellency's approval for the convening of a Court-martial for the " investigation " of certain offences. He does not even ask for a Court-martial for the trial of those offences.

The Chief Justice :—You say that the Governor has only sanctioned a Court-martial, and that he ought to have convened one ?

Mr. Simpson :—Yes, your Honor ; that is it exactly. His Excellency must convene a Court-martial to try the prisoner for these offences ; but Major-General Richardson has not even asked for one.

The Chief Justice :—He has power to convene and he has also power to delegate power to convene.

Mr. Simpson :—Has he done that ? If it is contended that he has delegated his power to convene, how has he done it ? He has only written the word " approved " over a request to hold an investigation.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—After this approval of His Excellency what did the General do ?

Mr. Simpson :—He recommended the appointment of a President.

The Chief Justice :—But did the Governor appoint the President ?

Mr. Simpson :—We say not.

The Chief Justice :—It is a very important matter that this Court should be properly convened.

Mr. Simpson :—It is like the appointment of Judges. Indeed these gentlemen hold the position of Judges.

The Chief Justice :—Yes ; and Judges of a very high Court too. In England under section 122, Her Majesty may by warrant under her sign-manual, convene or authorize any qualified officer to convene. If the Court decides that these men are under the provisions of the Army Act, they certainly are entitled to be surrounded by all the protections that the Army Act provides.

Mr. Simpson :—Exactly so, your Honor ; that is what we hold. And in this instance the requirements of the Army Act have not been complied with. Nothing but His Excellency's sanction for a preliminary investigation has been obtained.

The Chief Justice :—Undoubtedly His Excellency ought to have signed an order.

Mr. Simpson :—Then comes the appointment of the President. Now, although there seems to have been a general conversation between the Governor and General Richardson, I maintain that the Governor did not legally appoint the President.

The Chief Justice :—The Governor can delegate his power to convene ; he cannot delegate his power to appoint ; he must do that personally.

Mr. Justice Foster :—Does not the power to convene in England include the power to appoint ?

Mr. Heydon :—I maintain that that is so, your Honor.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—Surely the power to convene must include the power to appoint. Supposing that an army was in the field in Africa ; the first man who had been appointed might be killed in action.

Mr. Simpson :—I submit, your Honor, that the President must be appointed by the Governor, and he has not been so appointed. It is perfectly clear that the Governor is the person to appoint the President, and in this instance it is evident that nothing of the kind was done.

Mr. O'Connor then addressed the Court. He argued that the Mutiny Act, which was contemplated on the passing of the local Act, was not any general code of laws dealing with the conduct of soldiers, but was a particular Act to which reference had been made. They found that in 1879, after the passing of the New South Wales Act the whole constitution of the law dealing with soldiers was altered. Whilst it would be very justifiable to make the troops of New South Wales subject to any re-enactment of the Mutiny Act, still, when an Act is passed embodying provisions which were not contained in the Mutiny Act, the question arose whether it was fair to subject them to those provisions.

Mr. Justice Windeyer :—Does not our Act contemplate the alteration of the law from time to time by the Imperial Parliament ?

The Chief Justice :—You see Mr. O'Connor the Mutiny Act did deal with these offences. The only difference is that at first they were embodied by reference, whilst now they are embodied as part of the Act itself.

Mr. Pilcher, who was informed by the Chief Justice that it was unnecessary to address the Court upon the question of whether the Court-martial had jurisdiction over offenders under the Army Act, said : I think it is conceded that the convening of the Court is a very unimportant matter, because we can convene another to-morrow, but it is important thus far that General Richardson has been convening Courts-martial in this way for years, and it follows that the Legislature must at once pass an Act of Parliament making all the previous convictions by Courts-martial that have been convened in this way legal. I admit that that is only a matter for the Court to take into consideration this way; that where, for instance, a particular view of a Statute has for years been taken and acted upon, the Court will not, unless they are constrained to do it, take a view of the law different from what has been taken in the past.

The Chief Justice :—I do not know, Mr. Pilcher, that it would be necessary to bring in an Act of Parliament such as you mention.

Mr. Pilcher :—Oh, I think so, your Honor; supposing that I was a soldier and was tried last year by Court-martial and put in prison, would I have no remedy then?

The Chief Justice :—None.

Mr. Pilcher :—But then supposing that the Court had no right to sit as a Court. Supposing that I am sent to gaol by a person who is not a magistrate, should I not have a claim for false imprisonment?

The Chief Justice :—You would in that instance.

Mr. Pilcher :—And I think that this is a similar case. But what I want to point out is this, that section 8 nowhere requires any appointment or any convening of the Governor to be in writing.

Mr. Justice Foster :—Whatever the Governor has to do in this way that something must be in writing.

Mr. Pilcher :—The Imperial Act may say in the case of the Queen that Her Majesty has to do it under her sign manual, but our Act makes no such regulations for the Governor.

The Chief Justice :—The Act of the King must be under the Great Seal of the King, and it appears to me that where a Governor makes an appointment of this nature that appointment must be made under his signature.

Mr. Pilcher :—These appointments no doubt should not be made haphazard and in a loose way, but the question is does the Act of Parliament require that they should be in writing. I am here upon the rigid construction of an Act of Parliament, and nothing else, and I say that if the appointment was made by word of mouth that is quite sufficient. Then they say that the power to convene the Court was not delegated. My learned friend draws no distinction between convening and assembling. If that is so, then the paragraph in General Richardson's statement saying that the Governor requested him to appoint a Court-martial, is not that sufficient as long as the delegation need not be in writing? With regard to the appointment of Colonel Bingham, you see here is a document asking the Governor to appoint that officer as President, and there is the word "approved" upon it.

Mr. Justice Foster :—But the question is, supposing after writing on that document the word "Approved," the Governor had chosen to remove Colonel Bingham and to appoint somebody else he could have done so, because no appointment was made.

Mr. Pilcher :—Do your Honors hold it necessary to say "I sanction Colonel Bingham's appointment"?

Mr. Justice Foster :—He might say "I appoint Colonel Bingham to be President."

The Chief Justice :—I clearly think that approving of a suggestion is not making an appointment.

Mr. Pilcher :—Then supposing that Court had awarded a decision, I conclude that your Honors would have thought it necessary to upset that decision. But I should like to point this out to your Honors that it was the main point that they came here upon, and even if they succeeded on these technical points they certainly ought not to get the costs of this application.

Mr. Heydon then addressed the Court, submitting that under section 47 of the Army Act of 1881 it was really unnecessary for the Governor to appoint the President of the Court. Her Majesty delegates the powers of convening, and that included the appointment of President and the appointment of members of the Court.

The Chief Justice, in delivering judgment, said :—Were it not that this matter is one of urgency I should have preferred to have taken some time to consider the judgment which I shall deliver in the case, not because I have any doubt what that judgment ought to be, but that I should like to have had time to put my observations in the proper form in a case of so great importance. It appears to me that the first point that has been argued by Mr. Simpson in support of this application must be decided against his client. Mr. Simpson contends that in the 5th section of the Act, 34 Vic. No. 19—the Colonial Act—the words "the Imperial Mutiny Act" have reference only to the Imperial Mutiny Act—the so-called Mutiny Act which was in force at the date of the passing of that Act—and to such Acts as followed that Act and were known under the designation of "Mutiny Act." If Mr. Simpson be right in his contention, it follows that, certainly, since the year 1870 the Permanent Forces enrolled in this Colony have been under no code of discipline whatever, and that we have been in this Colony in a very dangerous position, because, as pointed out in the judgment to which I shall presently refer, the Mutiny Act was passed not merely in reference to the soldier, but also for the protection of the citizen. It was felt and pointed out that the citizens of a country where there was a standing army were in extreme danger unless there were prompt means of exercising severe discipline, it may be, over the body of troops that were enrolled. In the case of Grant against Sir Charles Gould, reported in the second of Henry Blackstone's reports, at page 69, Lord Loughborough, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in delivering the judgment of the Court, at page 100, deals with this question, and I think his remarks are worthy of consideration in dealing with the case now in hand. In that case a man had been brought up before a Court-martial under these circumstances: He had been in the pay of the army, not as attached to any particular regiment, but as enlisting officer, and he had induced two men of Her Majesty's Guards to desert their regiment in order to enlist in the East India Company's service. He was tried and found guilty and sentenced to a penalty that possibly may be scarcely conceived in these days—to receive a thousand lashes. He moved the Court of Common Pleas for a prohibition, just as is done here, on the ground that he was not a soldier. It was held that, inasmuch as he received military pay-money out of the military chest, he was a soldier, or at least came within the Mutiny Acts. This is what Lord Loughborough says with respect to this case at page 100 :—

But there is by the providence and wisdom of the Legislature an army established in this country of which it is necessary to keep up the establishment. The army being established by the authority of the Legislature, it is an indispensable requisite of that establishment that there should be order and discipline kept up in it, and that the persons who compose the army, for all offences in their military capacity, should be subject to a trial by their officers. That has induced induced the absolute necessity of a Mutiny Act accompanying the army. It has happened, indeed, at different periods of the Government that there has been a strong opposition to the establishment of the army. But the army being established and voted, that led to the establishment of a Mutiny Act. A remarkable circumstance happened in the reign of George the First, when there was a division of parties on the vote of the army. The vote passed and the army was established, but from some political incidents which had happened the party who opposed the establishment of the army would have thrown out the Mutiny Bill. Sir Robert Walpole was at the head of that opposition, and then some of their most sanguine friends proposed it to them. They said as there was an army established, and even if the army was to be disbanded, there must be a Mutiny Act for the safety of the country. It is one object of that Act to provide for the army, but there is a much greater cause for the existence of a Mutiny Act, and that is the preservation of the peace and safety of the kingdom, for there is nothing so dangerous to the civil establishment of a State as a licentious and undisciplined army; and every country which has a standing army in it is guarded and protected by a Mutiny Act. An undisciplined soldiery are apt to be too many for the civil power; but under the command of officers those officers are answerable to the civil power that they are kept in good order and discipline.

According to the argument, there is no Mutiny Act existing in England. It is said that since the year 1879, when the Mutiny Act first acquired a legal name—first acquired the name of "The Army Discipline Act"—the Act so-called "The Army Discipline Act" ceased to be a Mutiny Act. That argument, I think, cannot be supported. It is only necessary, in order to give an answer to that argument, to read the Acts themselves—to read the Mutiny Acts which passed previous to 1879, to read the preambles to those Acts, the necessity for their being passed, the necessity for strict discipline which is all recited on the face of the Act, and then the provisions in the Act establishing that discipline and embodying in the Act, by reference, the articles of war which provided for the crimes which might be committed by military men and for the punishment incidental or attached to those crimes. There is no difference in the Acts which passed previous to 1879 and the Acts which passed since, except this, that in the Acts which passed since 1879 the articles of war are not embodied by reference, but do actually now become part of the statute law of the kingdom. Curiously enough, in looking back so far as the time in which Mr. Blackstone published his "Commentaries on the Laws of England," we find that he actually in his day recommended that that course should be pursued—the course pursued in 1879 was recommended by the writer of the "Commentaries on the Laws of England." In speaking of these Acts and the power of the Sovereign he says this at page 415 of the first volume:—

This discretionary power of the Court-martial is indeed to be guided by the directions of the Crown, which, with regard to military offences, has almost an absolute legislative power. "His Majesty," says the Act, "may form articles of war and constitute Courts-martial, with power to try any crime by such articles, and inflict penalties by sentence or judgment of the same." A vast and most important trust! an unlimited power to create crimes, and annex to them any punishments, not extending to life or limb! These are indeed forbidden to be inflicted, except for crimes declared to be so punishable by this Act, which crimes we have just enumerated, and among which we may observe that any disobedience to lawful commands is one. Perhaps in some future revision of this Act, which is in many respects hastily penned, it may be thought worthy the wisdom of Parliament to ascertain the limits of military subjection, and to enact express articles of war for the government of the army, as is done for the government of the navy, especially as, by our present Constitution, the nobility and gentry of the kingdom, who serve their country as militia officers, are annually subjected to the same arbitrary rule during their time of exercise.

That was written so far back as 1765, and that suggestion was carried into effect by the embodying of the articles of war in the Mutiny Act of 1879. Then it is said that is not a Mutiny Act. What is it if it be not? If it be not a Mutiny Act, then there is no Mutiny Act existing in England. Another Act which regulates in this important way the control of Her Majesty's forces in England is called the "Army Discipline Act." It is only another name for a Mutiny Act. As has been pointed out during the argument, there never was a time when there was any such an Act known legally as "The Mutiny Act." It is a popular and convenient name to give to the Act of Parliament; but the Act of Parliament was legally known by its number and, in reciting it in documents, by its title. That is the only way in which it was legally known. Calling it an "Army Discipline Act" does not render it less a Mutiny Act. I am therefore of opinion, looking at the nature of the case, at the necessity of the case, and at the 5th section of 34 Vic. No. 19, where it speaks of persons serving in the military forces, making them subject "to the provisions of the Imperial Mutiny Act in force for the time being for Her Majesty's Army," that these several Acts of Parliament—call them Army Discipline Acts, or Army Regulation Acts, call them what you will—if they are in point of fact the Acts which provide for the discipline of Her Majesty's forces, they are Mutiny Acts within the meaning of this section. Therefore, so far as that point is concerned, I think that the application must fail, and that the person who has committed a crime—an offence against the Act of 1881, which is continued by annual Acts—may be tried for an offence as against that Act. Now we come to points which are of strictly a technical nature, but which yet, I regret to say, are fatal to the contention put forward here by those who desire to support the jurisdiction of this Court-martial. I say I regret to say it because it merely involves a little further time. They are points which, now being decided by this Court, of course can be rectified in a day, or in a reasonable time. In my opinion this Court has not been properly convened, and therefore the Court does not possess the jurisdiction to try every offence under the Act of 1881. The section of the Act which is applicable to the convening of these Courts is the 8th section, 34 Vic. No. 19. That section provides—

It shall be lawful for the Governor from time to time to convene courts of inquiry, and to appoint any three or five commissioned officers under this Act to be a court of inquiry for the purpose of investigating and reporting to him on any matter connected with the government or discipline of the force embodied under this Act, or with the conduct of an officer, non-commissioned, warrant, or petty officer, or other member of the said force, and also to convene at any time and to delegate power to convene a Court-martial, and to appoint any like number of officers as aforesaid to constitute such Court for the purpose of hearing and determining all offences committed against this Act, or the regulations made in pursuance thereof; provided that it shall be lawful for the Government to appoint any officer of Her Majesty's navy in command of any of her ships of war then being in Port Jackson to act as President of any naval Court-martial, and to appoint in every case one of the said officers to be the President of such court of inquiry or Court-martial.

It is clear that that section casts on the Governor the duty of either convening a Court-martial or of delegating the power to some individual to convene a Court-martial. The question here is whether, on the evidence before us, we can say the Governor has either convened or delegated the power of convening; and that entirely depends upon a letter, with the Governor's endorsement thereon, of 21st February, 1889. It is a letter written by Major-General Richardson to the Governor, in which he states this:—

I have the honor to forward herewith charges preferred against the warrant-officer named in the margin, which I have found it necessary should be submitted to your Excellency, and to request you will be pleased to sanction the assembly of a general Court-martial for their investigation.

Now, the Governor has written on the margin of that "approved." Therefore, he has sanctioned the assembly of a general Court-martial. But he has not convened it; nor has he by sanctioning the assembly of a general Court-martial, delegated the power to any other person to convene it. His sanctioning the assembly of a general Court-martial does not delegate to General Richardson the power to convene a court-martial, and it is perfectly clear he has not convened it himself. Therefore, this Court-martial has not been properly convened—it has not been convened by the Governor nor by any person delegated by him. What ought to have taken place was this: This was a very proper letter in the first instance, and the approval of the Governor was right; but upon that, if it was inconvenient for the Governor himself to convene—possibly it is—or to appoint or name the members of the Court-martial—and probably that was a duty which could be more properly cast on General Richardson—there ought to have been a document laid before the Governor by which he could distinctly authorize General Richardson to convene this Court-martial, and that followed up by some such document as has been placed before us; but, even then, it ought to bear the signature of General Richardson himself. He, as the officer delegated to convene, ought to convene by writing under his own hand, and not simply give an order to some subordinate officer. It ought to be done by General Richardson himself if the Governor places the duty upon him. I will not go further. That would be sufficient to show that this Court has not been convened properly under the statute; but, independently of that, the statute casts on the Governor alone the power of appointing the President of this Court. Here, General Richardson suggests that Colonel Bingham should be the officer appointed. The Governor approves of that suggestion, but there is no appointment following that. This duty being there, and the duty being cast on the Governor by this Act of Parliament to make the appointment, there ought then to have been placed before the Governor, a document distinctly appointing, in the name of the Governor, Colonel Bingham to be the President of the Court-martial, and that ought to have been signed by the Governor. These matters ought to be carried out strictly and in order, because the Court here appointed is a very high court—perhaps as high a court as could exist in this Colony subordinate to this Court, because they possess enormous powers—powers of life and death—they possessed powers of imprisonment, and of inflicting penal servitude to a very great extent. I am not certain they do not possess the power of penal servitude for life under certain circumstances; at any rate, they have very large powers over the liberty of the subject, and we must suppose and assume that those appointed to exercise such powers would be only men who could be well trusted, and in whom such powers could be confided; and it seems to me, therefore, that—in the interests of the public and of the prisoner who is to be tried before them—every precaution should be taken that everything is done strictly in order, and these gentlemen should hold as clear a commission to carry out their duties as I hold to carry out mine. It is argued further, that the Court is only appointed with the power to determine offences committed under the Act, 39 Vic., No. 19. I do not know that that argument was very much pressed; but, if it be, it appears to me that the Act, 39 Vic. No. 19, embodies within itself the Army Discipline Act—in other words, the English Mutiny Act—and, embodying it within itself, all offences committed against the Mutiny Act in England are offences committed against the Act, 34 Vic. No. 19. Therefore, everything which is an offence under the Army Discipline Act in England is equally an offence under the Act, 34 Vic. No. 19. I think, therefore, that in this case, prohibition must go on these last points; but, seeing that the respondents here are officers called upon to discharge a public duty, I do not understand Mr. Simpson asks for costs, and, of course, the prohibition goes without costs.

Mr. Justice Windayer, in delivering judgment, said:—The question we have to argue in this case is, what is the meaning of the expression in the 5th section of 34 Vic., chap. 19, of these words, “Every man who subscribes the oath

The contention on behalf of the applicant is, that inasmuch as there is no Mutiny Act in existence at the present time in the Mother country, that we cannot be made amenable to the jurisdiction of this Court-martial. This, of course, raises the question: “What is the exact meaning of the expression, ‘Imperial Mutiny Act in force for the time being’?” The contention can be narrowed down to this, that as there is no Act bearing the name of the Imperial Mutiny Act in force in the Mother country, this Act has no validity. It is quite clear that there was not, at the time of the passing of this 34 Vic., chap. 19, an Act known as the Imperial Mutiny Act; and if full effect were given to the argument of the learned counsel, it would follow that at the time of the passing of this local Act the reference was utterly meaningless. The question, of course, is, what was the intention of the Legislature in using those words? We can only judge of the intentions of the Legislature in cases of this kind by looking at the objects of the Act, and examining it by the light of Constitutional law applicable to this subject, and by reference to the Acts which have been passed in the Mother country from time to time for maintaining and regulating the discipline of the army. This Act was drawn by one of the best Constitutional lawyers that this country has ever known. It was drawn under the immediate supervision of Sir James Martin, and it is not to be supposed that a lawyer such as he was would have left the force in this Colony in a state of utter want of discipline, such as would be the case if this Act did not apply to the Army Act. There is no short title to the Acts which have been referred to as the Mutiny Acts of the Mother country. There the law knows no such thing as martial law in the ordinary sense; but it is of course necessary that law should be constantly maintained in the army, and we know that Parliament has from time to time passed certain Acts to provide discipline for the army; and although these Acts have not been known by any short title, we generally understand what are alluded to when they are called Mutiny Acts. This expression was first given by Blaxton. In point of fact, however, there is no such name given to any Act of Parliament and known to the law, and we are thrown back again to find what is the intention of our Legislature in using that expression. To my mind it was the intention of the Legislature to provide that discipline should be maintained in our forces by the same Acts that it was maintained in Her Majesty’s forces in the Mother country. The Legislature at the time this Act was passed, was about to establish for the first time a regular military force in this Colony, and what could have been more natural than that the law for the regulation of those forces should be placed in the same position here as in England. Accordingly the Act refers, in my opinion, in these words to the Act which was in force in the Mother country from year to year. The old annual Mutiny Acts, as they were called, seem to be described in the same way always up to the year 1878. In 1879, an Act was passed called the Army Discipline Regulation Commencement Act, there being passed about the same time the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, which embodied in a collective form all the laws with reference to military offences, and instead of the old Acts, which were passed before from year to year, an Act was passed called the Army Regulation Act, which provides that this code of law should only continue in force for one year, the annual Act keeping it alive from time to time. This went on until 1881, when the law was again consolidated, and then we had another another Act passed embodying the whole code with various amendments. Therefore I think that when the Parliament of this country decided that the forces of this country should be under the same code of discipline as was in force in the Mother country, it meant that they should be subject to any particular Act that might be in force at any particular time. If that were not so, well, then there is really no military control over our military force. The Imperial Parliament contemplated the passing of some Act for the control of the forces of the Colonies, and that when they came into contact with any of Her Majesty's forces they should be under the same discipline as the Imperial forces. What, therefore, can be more natural than for our Parliament to make its Act reciprocal. With reference to the other question that has been raised, I quite agree with His Honor the Chief Justice in thinking that the 8th section of our Act, with reference to the convening of this Court-martial, and the appointment of its President has not been followed. In the first place I would say that it is not necessary for his Excellency, when acting under this section, to act in consort with the Executive Council. He is to act as Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the Colony. It appears to me, however, that the evidence before us shows that although His Excellency authorized the drawing up of an order convening the Court-martial and probably intended to delegate to General Richardson the appointment of the President, he has not, as the Act requires, either convened the Court-martial or appointed its President. It has been said that the law does not require any written order from the Governor for the convening of this Court, and that no order is required designating the persons whom he appoints. It appears to me, however, that it would be a most dangerous thing to allow a Court of this high character to be appointed without the express written authority of His Excellency. A Court of this kind, which has the power of inflicting punishments as severe as those of any of the Civil Courts in this country, to be appointed in this manner. To allow a Court of this kind to be appointed as a result of a conversation between the Governor and Commander of the Forces, it appears to me would be a most dangerous thing. Supposing the Governor to die, or the Commander to die, it might be a matter of the utmost difficulty to prove that this Court was properly appointed. It seems to me, therefore, that the amount of care which is exercised in the appointing of other Courts should be extended to this one. For these reasons it appears to me that there must be written authority under the hand of His Excellency convening the Court-martial, and I think appointing its members, or authorizing somebody else to act for him. The appointment of the President appears to me to stand in the same position. There should be an express authority under the hand of the Governor.

Mr. Justice Foster, in delivering judgment, said:—I have no doubt that the Act relating to the discipline of the English Forces is the Imperial Mutiny Act for the time being, and as that is the Army Act of 1881 I agree with their Honors that that Act is the Act mentioned in 34 Vic., chap. 19, under which these proceedings appear to have been taken. Therefore, upon the first point I agree with their Honors that the applicant fails. I agree also with their Honors that upon the other points he must be successful. I do not think that we are called upon to determine whether the acts of the Governor should be in writing. It appears to me that I should be prepared to hold that solemn acts of the Governor must be evidenced by writing of some sort, either by a Gazette, or by writing under his own hand, or by some other record. At all events, it would never do to allow Courts of this nature to be convened by word of mouth. There might be two persons present and each might give a different version of what was said. Supposing, however, that we did allow acts such as this to be performed by word of mouth, in this instance there is not even sufficient evidence from General Richardson that the Governor did authorize him to convene this Court-martial. He says that in the course of conversation with him the Governor intimated that he would like him to

With regard to the other matters, the appointment of the President and the appointment of the members, and the actual convening of the Court-martial itself, I think the evidence is entirely insufficient. By the signature of the Governor that he approved when it was submitted to him, that he approved of a Court-martial being nominated for the trial of Quartermaster-sergeant Webster of the Permanent Artillery, and he was asked to sanction the assembling of a general Court martial for the investigation of the charges. It appears to me that that is simply a preliminary step; that the propriety of holding a Court-martial was submitted to him, and that he approved of it; but there is nothing to show that he authorized the convening of a general Court-martial. And it also seems to me that he has not authorized any person to appoint Colonel Bingham as President of the Court-martial. It would be necessary that he should state distinctly that he had appointed the President as well as the other officers, and the words ought to convey unmistakably that the Governor had appointed or delegated some other person to convene a Court-martial to try the offences for which the prisoner was brought up. It is a Court of high powers, almost irresponsible powers, and therefore it is all the more necessary that the preliminaries attending its formation should be carefully carried out. It is the duty of this Court to see that this is properly done, and it is the duty of this Court also to grant prohibition, as we have done, to the carrying on of the Court-martial.

The Chief Justice:—Rule absolute, without costs.

A.

WHEREAS I, The Right Honorable Charles Robert Baron Carrington, a member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies, am empowered by an Act passed in the thirty-fourth year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the Regulation and Discipline of the Military and Naval Forces in the service of Her Majesty's Government in New South Wales," do hereby convene a General Court-martial to assemble at Dawes' Battery, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, on Tuesday, the fifth day of March instant, for the trial of No. 95, Brigade Quartermaster-Sergeant William Webster, Warrant-officer of the New South Wales Artillery, a soldier of the Permanent Forces of New South Wales. And I do hereby appoint Colonel Edmund Henry George Bingham, General Staff (Lieutenant-Colonel Royal Artillery), Lieutenant-Colonel Cooper Penrose, General Staff, commanding Submarine Mining Forces (Major Royal Engineers), Major Henry Park Airey, D.S.O. New South Wales Artillery, Captain Frederick Thomas Bendge Baynes, New South Wales Artillery, and Captain William Andrew Cuthell, General Staff, Instructor of Musketry, to be members of the said General Court-martial; and Surgeon Major William Daniel Campbell Williams, General Staff, to be waiting member of the said General Court-martial. And I hereby appoint Colonel Edmund Henry George Bingham, General Staff (Lieutenant Colonel Royal Artillery), to be President of the same. And that there may not in any case be a failure of justice from the want of a proper person authorized to act as Judge-Advocate, I do hereby appoint Major Harry Beauchamp Lassetter, New South Wales Permanent Mounted Infantry (Major, 2nd Battalion South Staffordshire Regiment of Foot), to execute the office of Judge-Advocate of the said General Court-martial, for the more orderly proceedings of the same.

The prisoner will be warned, and all witnesses duly required to attend.

The proceedings will be forwarded to me.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand at Hill View, Sutton Forest, in the Colony of New South Wales, this 2nd day of March, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

FIRST DAY.

TUESDAY, 5th MARCH.

Mr. Simpson :—Before my learned friend addresses the Court I have an application for postponement to make; of course the matter is entirely in the hands of the Court; the Court is assumed to be properly convened; for the purpose of my argument I will assume that it is. Before the Court was convened an application was made through Stephen, Lawrence, & Jaques, the Attorneys for the prisoner, to Major-General Richardson, who seems to me to occupy a peculiar position in this matter, about which by-and-bye I may have something to say; General Richardson was applied to on the 1st March and asked not to convene this Court until a later day than this week; substantially the application was that steps should not be taken to convene the Court until the latter end of the week or on Monday next, and the reason given was that I might be able to attend and defend the prisoner; Mr. Nathan saw General Richardson and had a conversation with him, explaining the position the prisoner would be in if he were left undefended, and General Richardson refused on Saturday last, the very day after the decision of the Full Court, to postpone the convening of this Court until a later date than this week; Mr. Nathan then sent a telegram to the Governor explaining how matters stood, and asking his intervention; a reply was received from Mr. Wallington, the Private Secretary to Lord Carrington, to the effect that His Excellency regretted that he could not interfere with the General's decision; I never thought that the Governor would interfere; I told Mr. Nathan so, but the Court will see from the tenor of this telegram that if the Governor could have done, he would have done so, because he expressed much regret that he could not interfere with the decision; now I need not mention to the Court, because they know very well that there are eleven charges against this man, that it requires a great deal of time and attention to make oneself acquainted with these charges; indeed I asked Mr. Nathan to retain some other Counsel, but he found that he could not do that very easily; although I am here and ready to remain if necessary, it is with considerable inconvenience to some of my clients, as I have two cases on to-day in the Criminal Court in Darlinghurst, for which I had retainers two months ago, and Mr. J. P. Abbott received from me a promise that I would personally attend to them; that promise I felt compelled to keep, but Mr. Abbott in the most generous way said that sooner than Webster should remain undefended, he would release me from my promise.

The President :—Let me direct your attention to paragraph 33, page 49, of the Manual of Military Law; it says that whilst the prisoner is to have proper opportunity to prepare his defence, he is not to be enabled to postpone his case.

Mr. Simpson :—That means that the prisoner is not to avail himself of excuses for deferring his case.

Mr. Heydon :—I am instructed not to consent to this application; an application of this kind is to be considered on the grounds put before the Court in asking for it, and nothing else; and I was very much surprised that my learned friend should have alluded to that telegram which he received from the Governor; it was improper to have brought that telegram before the Court at all; although it might inconvenience my friend if this trial were not postponed, it would inconvenience a great many people if it were postponed.

Mr. Simpson :—It is a matter of indifference to me what my friend thinks about the reference to the Governor's telegram; we are obliged to show that we have used every possible means to obtain the postponement.

[The Court is cleared.]

On the re-opening of the Court, the President said:—We regret that we cannot see our way to the postponement of the case.

Mr. Simpson :—Then, sir, I must take another objection, which I had not intended to have taken. I object to the appearance of my friend here altogether; by rule 59, on page 640, of the Army Manual, seven clear days' notice must be given of the intention of the prosecutor to employ Counsel; the Court-martial was convened on Saturday, and here we are sitting on the following Tuesday; the Counsel for the prosecution must also obtain the authority of the Governor for his appearance in Court.

Mr. Heydon :—I shall have to inform the Court that I do not appear here under the direct authority of the Governor, who, in this case was the convening officer; therefore, it appears to me that the authority for my presence is wanting.

The prosecutor sworn said that he obtained inferential notice of the intention of the prisoner to employ Counsel; the prosecutor had engaged Counsel previously, and merely retained his services.

The President :—It appears to me that if the prisoner gives notice to employ Counsel then the prosecutor employs Counsel if he likes.

Mr. Simpson :—Well, sir, as against that view of the case, I desire to point out that section 87 only refers to the right of Counsel for the prisoner to attend; if the Counsel for the prisoner is allowed to appear, I think notice must be given of the intention of the prosecutor to employ Counsel.

Mr.

Mr. Heydon:—It appears to me, if I may say so, that the right of Counsel for the prisoner, as well as for the prosecutor to attend, depends upon the authority of the Convening Officer. If the Commander-in-Chief or the Convening Officer does not sanction my appearance he does not sanction the appearance of my learned friend.

The Court is cleared.

Upon the re-opening of the Court, the President said that the proceedings would be adjourned until the following day at ten o'clock, a.m.

The Court adjourned at 11:30 a.m., until 10 a.m. next day.

The Court reassembled at 10 a.m., 6th March. Present—the same members as on 5th March.

In opening the case for the prosecution, Mr. Heydon said: That, although the charges against the prisoner were eleven in number, and although the case was certainly one of a great deal of difficulty and complication, he thought he would be able to put it before the Court in a way that would at least elucidate the points at issue, and make it clear what was the bearing of the evidence subsequently given; a number of the charges had been put to deal with the same set of facts in different legal aspects; perhaps the best course he could take would be to narrate the facts of the case generally; it appeared that in the year 1887 it was the custom of the force to enter into annual contracts for the supply of clothing for the troops; contracts were entered into one year for the twelve months ending April 1 of the next year; thus, on April 1 each man was entitled to a certain supply of clothing, and assuming from the number of men and non-commissioned officers the quantity of clothing that would be required, the contract was entered into with some contractor for a specified quantity of clothing; in the year 1887 a contract was entered into with Henderson & Co, for that purpose; the contract was entered into before April 1, of course, because the clothing had to be delivered on that day; the clothing was delivered and paid for, and after that Messrs. Henderson & Co. had no more to do with the supply of clothing for the year 1887 than anybody in that room or in the Colony of Victoria; but the prisoner subsequently waited upon Henderson with a pay voucher, which stated that a quantity of clothing had been supplied by that firm, and that the total value of that clothing was £314 8s. 10d; now, he was prepared to prove that that clothing had never been supplied—was not entered in the contract; Henderson had no right to supply the articles, nor had any member of the force any right to receive them; however, the prisoner, in supplying the voucher, certified that the clothing had been supplied and procured (he thought that the signature of some superior officer was appended to it), and handed it over to Henderson, who took it to the Treasury and obtained the money; of that money Henderson handed two-thirds to the prisoner, and kept one-third himself; for that one-third he had done actually nothing; he had not supplied a thread or a rag, and yet he had put in his pocket £114 16s. 3d.; that was the subject of the tenth charge; in the course of an inquiry that was made into the system of clothing the force, it appeared that a large loss had been entailed; the prisoner stated that he had informed his superior officers of the transaction between Henderson and himself, and had told them that the contractor was getting the money for nothing; he would be able to call his superior officers, however, and they would prove that the prisoner had done nothing of the kind; now they came to the two-thirds of the voucher, which was handed over to the prisoner by Mr. Henderson; that sum of money formed the subject of the first four charges; in the first, the prisoner was charged with embezzling the sum of £9 12s. 2d., a part of the sum of £229 12s. 7d.; it appeared that at the end of the clothing year the men would not require a complete clothing outfit for the next year; some of their clothing would be in a sufficiently good condition for the next year, and it would thus be unnecessary to obtain more clothing from the contractor for them; however, a system of compensating the men for any clothing which for that reason they did not require had, no doubt for very good reasons, come into vogue; the allowance to the men was at the rate of two-thirds of the cost of the new garments, and when the time for inspecting the clothing arrived it was customary to hold a parade, the clothing of the men would be examined, such clothing as was good enough for the next year would be taken down and a list made of it; the total value of the clothing in that list, supposing it represented new clothing, being specified in the returns; thus returns would be sent in from the three batteries to the prisoner showing that the first battery required, say, £50 for compensation for clothing, the second £50, the third £50, and so on; as a matter of fact, the £229 12s. 7d. was £9 12s. 2d. in excess of the amount required for the batteries; the prisoner went round to the commanding officers of the batteries and paid each of them the amount required by him in compensation for his men; and after doing that there remained in his hands £9 12s. 2d., which he had never accounted for, and which he admitted his inability to account for; of course it was his duty to give notice of that fact to his superior officers, but he did nothing of the kind; he simply kept it and afterwards made several explanations about it which he (Mr. Heydon) would put before the Court and show were wrong explanations; finally he said that he could not account for it, and, he thought, tendered its return; now as to how this excess of £9 12s. 2d. arose; upon the returns being sent in from the officers commanding batteries it would appear what amount was required, and it would be very easy for the prisoner to have got that amount and no more; he would show the Court that in preparing the voucher upon which Henderson obtained the money from the Treasury the prisoner made it out for an amount in excess of what he should have made it out; for instance, to put the matter roughly, supposing the returns from the batteries showed that compensation was required for 100 tunics, he drew up a pay voucher stating that compensation was required, say, for 105 tunics; then it would appear from returns sent in that 100 cloth trousers would be required, and he wrote on his vouchers that 103 trousers were required; then in the numbers of articles of clothes and in the value of the articles of clothing and in the total amount of the vouchers the prisoner had put down an excessive quantity, making it over £16 or £17 more than it should have been; those excessive numbers were uniformly in every line and every detail of the voucher, so that it would be almost impossible to believe that it was the result of an accident; those facts related to the first, second, third and fourth charges; the first charge was that the prisoner had embezzled £9 12s. 2d.; the second was more to meet the case if he made out that he had really paid the money away to other people; in that case he would submit to the Court that the prisoner had no authority to pay it away to anybody; the moneys payable to the different batteries as compensation had to be paid to the commanding officers in order that they might see that it was properly distributed; if there had been any paying behind their backs, without their knowledge, that was an offence that bore out the second charge; the third charge was that in a certain pay voucher the prisoner made a false statement as to the amounts due for compensation for clothing; that was done by the prisoner systematically increasing the amounts; the fourth charge was for culpable negligence on the part of the prisoner in keeping his accounts, by which there was a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d.; now, coming to the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth charges, they really deal with the same offences; it was the duty of the prisoner to take charge of the clothing-store and all the clothing in hand; any clothing coming into the store it would be his business to enter into his books as having received it; any clothing that went out of the store it would be his duty to enter as having gone out; so that an exact balance would be the result; as a matter of fact, there was no such balance; when the prisoner's accounts were examined, there was found to be a large deficiency in the store, for which the prisoner was unable to account; it was only fair, however, for him to state, so as to preclude the possibility of any prejudice in the matter, that in that point the prisoner would have the evidence of an actuary who had examined the books and the clothing in the store, and who he was given to understand would be prepared to state that there was no deficiency at all, but that the books and the quantity of clothing in the store showed a small surplus in favour of the prisoner; however it would be for the Court to state whether or not there really was a surplus of clothing in the store; the fifth charge charged the prisoner with embezzling the goods, the sixth with conniving at the embezzlement, the seventh with culpable neglect in keeping the clothing, and the eighth with culpable neglect in keeping the clothing books; this brought them to the ninth charge, which was that he directly connived at £300 or thereabouts being unlawfully paid to Lytleton, the master tailor; when the annual supply of clothing was brought by the contractor, it had to be fitted on to the men, and for performing that duty the master tailor was allowed a small charge—1s. for a tunic, he believed; it appears, however, that a question had lately sprung up of allowing him, in the case of what were called "extensive alterations"—not 1s., but 18s. for a sergeant's tunic 19s. 6d., and for a staff-sergeant's 22s.—which was exactly the same as would be allowed to him if he had made the garments; there was no authority whatever for this custom, but the prisoner had taken it upon himself to permit it; "extensive alterations" was obviously a very vague expression; then, it was decided, apparently by the sergeant master tailor and the prisoner, that in nearly every case "extensive alterations" were required; that meant, that in nearly every case the sergeant master tailor was allowed by the prisoner to charge as much for altering the garment as had been already made for making it; in that way, the sum paid to the master tailor amounted in that year to something like £700 or £800, and they maintained that the prisoner was the person responsible for this; the final charge was a charge that the prisoner procured the payment of an excessive sum of money to himself and other warrant officers in the Permanent Artillery; it appeared that in the year 1887, the prisoner applied to his superior officer for compensation for himself and his fellow warrant officers, making the items in all cases very much larger than were really due; he explained the excessive charges by saying that it was more expensive to have the clothing made in the Colony than to get it imported from England, and by that means he induced his superior officer to sanction that amount; it was put into a pay voucher, taken to Henderson and paid by the Treasury, and the full amount was received by the prisoner himself and the other warrant officers; it was not a large sum certainly—only about £16 or £17 each,—but if such transactions could be repeated sufficiently often, it was evident that they would amount to a very large sum in the end.

Lieutenant-Col. George John Airey, being duly sworn, is examined by the prosecution, and states:—

I am a Lieut. Col. in the New South Wales Artillery, and in 1887, I was in command of battery No. 1 [Exhibit No. 1, handed to the witness]; that is a certificate by me that certain clothing belonging to the men of my battery is good for another year, and the other document underneath it is a return of the clothing sent in originally; but it is not the one upon which the men were paid [Exhibit 3 handed in]; this is the one upon which the men were paid by me; the amount appearing as total compensation appearing on either of these documents is £46 5s. 4d.; that is the amount paid; £46 5s. 4d. was the amount asked for, that was the amount which I requisitioned to get; I received £46 5s. 4d. [Exhibit 4 handed in]; that is my receipt for the sum; I received it from prisoner; the proper person to pay this amount is myself; Mr. Simpson objected to the question; the Court disallowed the objection; one of the papers I saw is a certificate to the effect that certain clothing is good for another 12 months' wear; before signing that, I inspected the clothing in each case; I saw the man personally; I did not authorise the payment of any other money to my men except the £46 5s. 4d.

14. By the President.] Do you wish to cross-examine the witness? Yes, I do.

Cross-examined by the Prisoner's Counsel:—

15. How long have you been in the service? Eighteen years.

16. How long the commander of a battery? The same length of time.

17. And was that system of compensation to the men in force during the whole of that time; if not, when did it commence? I think during the second year.

18. So it has been in force for fifteen or sixteen years? I think so.

19. Have you ever during the fifteen or sixteen years known any of your men receiving compensation whose names were not on the list? I have not known it.

20. Have you ever heard of it? I have heard rumours, but not in my battery.

21. How many batteries are there? Three.

22. Have you heard that it has been the practice during the last fourteen or fifteen years for men to receive compensation whose names were not submitted under a list from the commanding officer?

Mr. Heydon objected to this question.

Mr. Simpson:—I must show the Court why I put this question. This is a criminal proceeding, and there can be no embezzlement unless there was a guilty mind on the part of the prisoner. If I could show that for several years there has been a custom for men to receive compensation who are not included in the list, then there has been no fraudulent intention on the part of this man.

Mr. Heydon:—Of course the question is not one of merely paying men behind the Colonel's back, but it is a question of paying men who were not entitled to receive payment; and I am going to call the commanders of the other batteries as well.

[The Court disallowed the objection.]

23. Mr. Simpson (to witness) :—Do you know that during the last fifteen or sixteen years it has been the practice for men to receive compensation for clothing whose names are not in the list? I have heard of it lately, though I never heard of it before.

24. Although you have only heard of it lately have you not heard that the practice has been in vogue for years? Certainly not.

25. Have you yourself ever received compensation for clothing, and if so, has your name appeared on the list? Mine was not on the same footing.

26. Has your name appeared in the list?—Is it according to the custom of the Service that the officer's name should appear on the list? No.

27. Then who certifies for the officers' clothing? The Paymaster.

28. Does he examine the officers' clothing? I want to explain that the officers' is an allowance given in lieu of clothing. It is not an amount given on the same footing as that to the men.

29. Is not compensation an allowance in lieu of clothing? Yes.

30. Who certifies for the officers' clothing? The Paymaster.

31. Did you give him a certificate for your own clothing? I had no certificate to give.

32. Somebody certified that your clothing was good for another year, I suppose? Nobody certified at all. Mine is an allowance in lieu of clothing. The men's compensation money comes from the contractor.

33. You get the allowance if your clothing is good enough for another year? It does not matter whether it is good enough or not.

34. It is about fifteen years since the custom first came in force of compensation in lieu of clothing? It means really this, that if a man's clothing is good enough for another year he does not require a new suit but instead of that he gets compensation? Yes.

35. What compensation? Two thirds.

36. And the contractor in some strange way for the last fifteen or sixteen years has been paid the one-third as if he had supplied the clothing for it? The contractor is paid for the whole of the clothing.

Mr. Heydon :—Unless the witness can give this evidence of his own knowledge, I object to it. The proper person to say how the contractors are paid is the person who pays them; I do not suppose Colonel Airey has any knowledge of it.

Mr. Simpson :—I am not asking him as to who pays the contractor. I am asking him what is the custom of the service. What I want to show is that as far as the charge of paying £344 8s. 10d. to the contractor is concerned it has been the custom for the last fifteen or sixteen years for the contractor to send in a voucher, as if he had supplied so many tunics when he has really supplied nothing at all, and the service allows that practice.

The President :—I think Mr. Simpson there will be other witnesses from whom you can get better evidence upon this point. I do not think that Colonel Airey can give evidence as to that.

Mr. Simpson :—I am not asking him who paid the contractor, but whether the custom of the service is for the contractor to send in a voucher as if he had supplied clothing, when as a matter of fact he had not supplied a single thread.

[The Court allows the objection.]

37. Mr. Simpson (to witness) :—You applied for a certain amount of compensation for your men;—do you know where that compensation comes from? From the contractor.

38. Mr. Heydon.] Do you know that from your own knowledge, Colonel Airey? Yes, I do.

39. Mr. Simpson.] The contractor keeps it as if he has supplied all the clothing? He gets one-third of the amount, I think.

Mr. Heydon :—My learned friend is asking the witness questions which would appear from the documents, and can be evidenced by the persons who draw the money from the Treasury and distribute the money.

[The Court allowed the objection.]

40. Mr. Simpson (to witness) :—You know there was a Board of Inquiry held as to the practice connected with the supply of clothing to men in the Artillery? Yes, I know that.

41. And that Board consisted of certain officers? Yes.

42. You were examined at that Board? I was.

43. Several times? Twice.

44. Do you know anything of your own knowledge about the custom under which the master tailor is paid for certain alterations as if they were makes? I do.

45. But do you know that for several years the master tailor has, with the assent of the authorities, received payment for the alterations as if they were original makes. Do you know that has been the custom? Officially, I do not.

46. What do you mean by officially? No document ever came before me to this effect.

47. Do you know that the custom has been to do that? Only from hearsay.

48. Can you give me any direct information? I can only give you what actually takes place in making these things.

49. Can you tell me who can give me exact information? The Colonel commanding the Artillery.

50. Colonel Roberts? Yes.

51. And the Adjutant? Captain Savage.

52. Mistakes very often occur with the books in connection with the New South Wales Artillery? They should not.

53. But do you not know from your own knowledge that they have occurred from time to time? I have seen one mistake. It was brought before the Board that you mentioned just now.

54. What was that—whose mistake was it? It was an alteration.

55. We were talking about mistakes in the keeping of books? In this instance the book did not compare with the other book.

56. Have not you yourself made mistakes in the keeping of your accounts in connection with the artillery? Not that I am aware of.

57. I put it simply as a matter of mistake—you quite understand that;—in connection with your accounts have not there been mistakes, very serious mistakes? I am not aware of it.

58. At all events, whether they were mistakes or not it was said that they were mistakes?

Mr. Heydon :—What have we got to do with that?

The President (to Mr. Simpson) :—I do not see the relevancy of your question.

Mr.

Mr. Simpson :—Oh! I want to show that in a matter where large sums of money have been involved there have been mistakes on the part of Colonel Airey to a very large extent. They have been mistakes involving large deficiencies, but they have been found to be mistakes, and what I want to show is that, if Colonel Airey has made mistakes, a man of less intelligence would be likely to make mistakes.

Mr. Heydon :—The question that I object to is that after Colonel Airey had said that he was not aware of any mistakes in his books, my learned friend asks whether it was not said that there were mistakes. If my learned friend wants an admission that mistakes may be made by persons keeping books, I make that admission at once. Any person can make mistakes, I admit that; but sometimes you come to things that you cannot suppose to be mistakes.

Mr. Simpson :—I do not want to press the point.

The President :—Very well. Have you any more questions to ask the witness, Mr. Simpson.

59. Mr. Simpson.] I see there are two money columns here. Let us take the first amount. You have put him down for compensation £4 2s. 6d.? Yes.

60. Then you have got a receipt from Walsh for £2 15s. 7d.? Yes.

61. Now, there is a difference between those two amounts. Do you know who would get that difference? I do not of my own knowledge.

62. Have you any belief about it?

Mr. Heydon :—I object to that question.

Mr. Simpson :—If you will admit that all the money in the first column was received by Henderson, that is all I want.

Mr. Heydon :—I will admit that a pay voucher was drawn up for £344, and that money was drawn by Henderson from the Treasury.

63. Mr. Simpson.] What does that £4 2s. 6d. represent in that first column? It represents the value of the clothing due less 26½ per cent., that is the contract price.

64. So that if Walsh had got no compensation at all, and if his clothing was not good for another year, he would have been entitled to a new tunic and a pair of trousers in April? Yes.

65. And the contractor would get £4 2s. 6d. for the supply of these things? Yes.

66. And so on through this column? Yes.

Re-examined by the prosecution:—

67. Mr. Heydon.] I should like to have this matter about the officers allowance cleared up, Colonel Airey. I believe the officers receive a fixed allowance in lieu of clothing? Yes.

68. And they clothe themselves; so that, what the condition of their clothing may be at any time of the year is a matter of perfect indifference to anybody but the officers themselves so far as allowance is concerned? Yes.

69. Did you ever in any way recognize any practice of paying the men in your battery whose names are not in the list or paying them behind your back? Certainly not; it is distinctly against orders.

70. You were asked whether you had ever heard of such a thing, and I think your answer was you had heard of it in one case—that is in the prisoner's case I suppose? Yes.

71. By the Court.] Have you any books showing clothing that you have received from your men? I have.

72. Are they kept by you? They are kept by my quartermaster-sergeant.

Examined by the Judge-Advocate:—

73. I want to ask you one question, sir; have you books showing the clothing received by your battery? Yes.

74. Have you got them in your possession? I have them in my possession.

75. By the Court.] Do you examine the clothing of your men? Yes.

76. Were your books examined by yourself as to clothing received? Yes; I examine them every month.

77. Did you check the book with the quantity of clothing actually received? Certainly, I did.

78. I know you should, but as a matter of fact did you? Yes, I did.

The evidence is read to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 81b.

The witness withdraws.

Colonel Warner Wright Spalding, C.M.G., New South Wales Artillery, being duly sworn, is examined by the prosecution:—

I am the officer commanding No. 2 Battery of the New South Wales Artillery. Document 5 is the certificate by me (document 6 a return to accompany that document) showing the compensation for clothing received by men in my battery for the year 1887. I requisitioned for £19 4s. 7d., No. 7 is a receipt for that sum of money. I received it from the prisoner. I am the proper person to receive compensation money for the men of my battery; and, I am also the proper person to pay it to the men in my battery after it has been received. In receiving that £19 4s. 7d., I distributed it amongst the men in my battery according to my list. I authorized the payment of some other sums for that year, than appears in that list. To the best of my recollection, I authorized the payment of other sums, in one or two cases. Loveless (an acting Bombardier) is one of the men. He signed my clothing book as having received compensation for his year's clothing. I did not receive the money, and I did not pay it to him. I did not see Bombardier Loveless sign my book. I did not authorize the payment of any money as compensation for clothing to any other persons that appear in the list. The payments to Bombardier Loveless were authorized by me. With regard to the names of these men to whom the moneys were paid and the amounts paid to them, I can only speak by hearsay. I could say by the signatures in my book that the moneys were paid to other persons than those mentioned in the list. I do not know whether the signatures were written in my presence, but I certainly believe them to be genuine. A man named Bailey (a gunner employed in the officers' mess) was another to whom moneys were paid beyond those whose names were mentioned in the list. I may or may not have been present when the moneys were paid over. The sum of £19 4s. 7d. was paid to the men in my battery by my pay sergeant and I was held responsible for it. That money was received by me from the prisoner and then handed by me to my pay sergeant to pay the men. I never received any other money that year as compensation for the men, at least to the best of my recollection I did not. I was the proper person to receive the moneys and the proper person to see to the distribution of those moneys. I have never in the first instance recognized or assented to a practice by which the money for compensation was paid to any other person except myself. I have never assented in any any way; by that I mean that I did not consent to this money being paid (if it was paid) to Bombardier Loveless, but when he had received it I allowed him to sign for it in my book. With regard to this case, in the first instance I did not consent to any man being paid behind my back, but I heard something about it and condoned it.

Mr. Simpson :—I object to that question. The witness never said any such thing.

Mr. Heydon :—Well, I am asking him the question now.

The President :—The Court disallow that question.

Witness :—Payments were made to two of my men or perhaps to three whose names do not appear in the list. The payments made to those men were not made by me in the first instance. I did not authorise that payment to those men in that manner. I did not authorise it because it was not in my power to authorise it. These two or three other men's claims were not sanctioned by me. I could not sanction and did not sanction them. I could recommend them and I have reason to think that I did recommend two of them though I have no positive proof. Recommendations in matters of this kind are made in writing. By that I mean that recommendations of men in the list are usually made in writing. I cannot say whether the other two men were recommended in writing, if recommended at all, it is possible that recommendations were made by me verbally, but it is not probable. That recommendation would be made to the officer commanding the Permanent Artillery. It would not be a regular thing for recommendations to be made by me or received by them verbally. At the time that I recommend men for compensation I sign a certificate that the clothing is good for another year. Before signing that certificate I am invariably satisfied myself that the clothing is good for another year and that certificate for clothing is sent in by me with the return. I cannot say when I first found out about these unauthorised payments. It was revived in my memory lately when looking at my book but I should not like to say that I have not found it out before. My attention was drawn to it lately, when I ascertained that the money had been paid without my authority. In this case I did not report the matter to the officer commanding the Permanent Artillery, as I presumed that his authority had been obtained for the payment of these men. I have said that before sending in that certificate I inspected the clothing to see if it was good for another year. The inspections were made on many days. I have a recollection of having seen Bombardier Loveless in my office with some clothing. Undoubtedly to apply for compensation, though I cannot say absolutely when, but I believe subsequently to that list going on. I cannot remember whether I made up any supplementary list, if I did so it would be sent to Colonel Roberts as a permanent record. I shall endeavour to find out whether there are such records, but I have not been able to trace any. To the best of my knowledge the total compensation paid out by me came to £7 1s. 9d.; I can get the names and amounts by referring to my ledger. Loveless is stated to have received the price of compensation for a cloth tunic, I suppose £2 10s. 6d.; Gunner Bailey, 9s. 4d.; and Sergeant Lynch, £4 1s. 11d. I said that there might be a third man advisably, and for this reason that I have no recollection of seeing Lynch at the office for clothing. At the time he was staying at Middle Head, and probably received authority for compensation from some other officer. I have no recollection of authorising him in any way to receive compensation for clothing, but his initials are put to the item, and there are initials or signature of Bailey and Loveless. The amount of £4 1s. 11d. was made for a cloth tunic and a patrol jacket, and was not paid by me. There are no receipts on the list at which I am looking. Gunner Bailey was under my own command; he was an employed man. He received compensation in lieu of one Norfolk jacket 9s. 4d. His Christian name is T. Bailey, I think; but I cannot be certain—it is either T. or J. I could find out what his name is by referring to Victoria Barracks; but I have nothing here to show it.

The President :—The Court have judicial knowledge that his name is Thomas.

Witness continuing :—My attention was called to this matter by Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie, but as I have already stated I was in all probability aware of it before. And when I say I have not reported it to the officer commanding the Permanent Artillery, I mean that I did not report after my attention was called to it by Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie. Without the authority of the officer commanding the Permanent Artillery it would have been an improper thing to have paid the money. Where compensation is given in lieu of clothing it is usually marked in red ink, so that the garment that they receive as a garment would be put down in black ink, and the garment for which they receive compensation would be put down in red ink with a small "c" over it.

Mr. Simpson :—I submit that Colonel Spalding's books cannot be any evidence against me.

Mr. Heydon :—Without his books Colonel Spalding knows nothing of the matter.

[Document marked "S" handed in.]

Witness :—This is my battery clothing book. It is kept by my Pay and Quartermaster-Sergeant. I am responsible for the correctness of it.

Mr. Simpson objected to the admission of the battery clothing book.

[At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock the same afternoon.]

The Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment at 2 o'clock the same day. Present: The same members as before.

79. The President.] I wish to ask Colonel Spalding whether the book is signed by him, or initialled in any way as to its veracity or otherwise? It is not initialled by me.

80. The person in charge of that book is your Quartermaster-Sergeant, and he can bear witness to the veracity of the book? Yes.

The President :—Then I think until the evidence of the battery quartermaster-sergeant is produced we cannot admit the book.

Examination continued :—

I arrived at the £4 1s. 11d. for Lynch by working it out in the same manner as is worked out for other men, on the list produced to the Court. I took two garments, and calculated the value of those, and made certain reductions, and I did the same with regard to Loveless and Bailey, and I took two-thirds of that £4 1s. 11d. and knocked one-third off. The price of a blue cloth tunic for sergeants, complete, is 90s.; the price of a blue cloth patrol jacket for sergeants, complete, is 77s.; then deduct 20½ per cent. discount. I deducted one-third from the remainder, and that left £4 1s. 11d. I have no receipt by Lynch for £4 1s. 11d., or for any sum of money with reference to clothing; I have his receipt for the clothing for that year; he signed for it; it is in that book, under his signature. The date on which the clothing was supplied and compensation given is also mentioned; there may be two dates, one for the supply of clothing, and the other for compensation, and the date when the transaction was completed was given here.

There is no record to show when he received each garment, and as they are not on the list there is nothing to show when the three men got their compensation except that they received it during that year.

81. The President.—Is there anything to show when or how they received it? I know that they received it that year, because if they had not, upon my examining my books I would have seen that certain men had received neither compensation nor clothing.

Examination continued:—

As a matter of fact, there is nothing except the black ink "C" over the entry in the book to show that what has been received is compensation, and not the garment itself; if a black ink "C" was put over each of those entries from the book that they had received compensation and no garments, but it would be discovered upon comparing this book with other books; the cheque would appear in the books and other receipts which I have in my possession from prisoner; I am not able to produce any documents showing that this man had received any compensation instead of these two articles of clothing; that book is kept in the battery office; it lies on the table, accessible to the clerk in charge of the office, Bombadier Darby, but not to any person whose presence would bring him into the office; Darby is absent sometimes, but then the office is closed unless the quartermaster-sergeant is at work there; the name of the quartermaster-sergeant is MacMillan; the amounts which I give you for Bailey and Loveless I worked out in the same way as the others. [Documents marked "7" and "8" are put in evidence.]

Cross-examined by the prisoner's Counsel:—

82. Mr. Simpson.—Whenever the entries of compensation or the garments are put in red ink a compensation has been sent to the officer; but when it is out of the ordinary course it may be put in black ink, and that is why these entries appear in black ink; is that so? That is so.
83. Have you any doubt that these men received this compensation to the extent of £7 1s. 9d., which does not appear in the list? I have no doubt.
84. Have you a distinct recollection of having examined the clothing of Loveless, for which he got compensation? Yes; I have a recollection of it.
85. Have you a recollection of having examined the clothes of Bailey, which were good enough to last him for another year, and by reason of which he got this compensation of 9s. 4d.? Yes, I have.
86. Do you remember having examined the clothing of Bailey—the clothing which was good enough to last him another year, and in respect of which he was entitled to 9s. 4d.? Yes, I have; and I refused him compensation for some others.
87. So that, as far as Loveless' £2 12s. 6d. and Bailey's 9s. 4d. are concerned, you allowed them the sums that I have mentioned to you? No; I passed that clothing as fit for another twelve months, but I have no power to grant them compensation.
88. Do you know that no money was paid through the Treasury for compensation money unless Colonel Roberts approves of it? Yes.
89. And so we may take it that he had approved of these amounts? Yes.
90. And that was the reason why you did not bring these amounts to his knowledge? Yes, that is so.
91. Do you know that Webster, the prisoner, had been in the habit of disbursing money with the approval of Colonel Roberts? Yes; at least I presumed that he did it in this instance with the knowledge of Colonel Roberts.
92. How long have you known that he has been in the habit of disbursing money? For many years.
93. Do you know whether any fault has ever been found for doing that until quite recently? No; I don't.
94. You say you cannot remember having passed the clothing of this third man Lynch? I do not.
95. But you say that probably some other officer did instead of you as he was at Middle Head? Yes.
96. Would some officer be in command there? Yes; No. 3 battery was stationed there.
97. Do you know that Webster has been allowed for many years to pay moneys in compensation for rations to officers and men? I do; at least, that is to the officers.
98. Has that been found fault with, do you know? I never heard it found fault with.
99. How long have you known Webster? Ever since he has been in the Artillery.
100. How long is that? About seventeen years.
101. And what has been his character during that time;—has he been an honorable, straightforward man, as far as you have known him? His character has been very good.
102. He had a great many duties to attend to, hadn't he? Yes, he had.
103. What were they;—give me a general idea? In the first place, the ration returns had to be arranged and checked by him. He had charge of the quantity of stores and the clothing.
104. Is he what they call barrack-sergeant as well? I do not think that he is barrack-sergeant now.
105. But in 1887 was he? Yes, I think so.
106. At all events, he had a great many duties to attend to? Yes, a great many duties.
107. More duties than ordinarily devolved upon one man? Well, I cannot say that; but in a corps of this kind they should properly devolve upon an officer who would be called a quartermaster.
108. And that would have left him more time to attend to his regular duties as storeroom-keeper, and so on? Yes.

Re-examined by the prosecution:—

109. The Prosecutor.—You say, Colonel Spalding, that these letters, "C," and the figures under them are put in black ink because they were put there out of the usual course; did you put them there yourself? I did not.
110. Did you put the the red ink figures there? No, I did not.
111. Then how is it you say that the reason they were put in black ink was because they were put there out of the ordinary course? From information given to me.
112. Then that answer was merely from hearsay? Yes.
113. Is red ink kept in your quartermaster-sergeant's office? Yes.
114. You say that the prisoner, to your knowledge, has been in the habit of disbursing moneys; has he been in the habit of disbursing moneys without your authority? No.
115. The disbursements of moneys which you have known him to make have been disbursements made in the proper way? I presume so.
116. Well, the prisoner has been the person who has paid to you and the other officers commanding batteries the compensation money? Yes.
117. That would be one of the disbursements that he has been in the habit of making? Yes.
118. That would be quite proper and in order, would it not? Yes.

119. And the other disbursements that you have been acquainted with his making were perfectly regular and in order and with proper authority? I have no reason to doubt it.

120. Assuming, Colonel Spalding, that payments were made to Loveless, Lynch, and Bailey without Colonel Roberts's authority, would they be regular and in order? No.

Examined by the Court:—

121. Colonel Spalding, does not every man in your battery possess a small book? Yes.

122. Will you explain what a small book is? It is a book in which entries are made showing the state of the accounts at the end of every month, signed in case of debt, or when the account is balanced, by the men, and of credit by the officer, and also showing whether the men are entitled to receive their clothing for the year.

123. And in that book, are not the men's initials or signatures obtained to that clothing? Yes.

124. Are the commanding officer's initials put to the book? No—the quartermaster-sergeant's.

125. You said that you had reason to believe that the two men not on the list were recommended to receive compensation;—can you give us any reason for that belief? Yes. My memory is not clear about the matter about Loveless, and more indistinctly of Bailey, parading before me the clothing for the purpose of obtaining my consent for compensation being granted on certain garments. Beyond that I have no recollection; but probably some action was taken on that, otherwise my consent has gone for nothing.

126. Did you keep a letter and memorandum book in your office? Yes, and I cannot find any memorandum in the book, although a memorandum may have been made and gone out without any record appearing in my book.

127. Why do you think it probable that authority had been given by the commanding officer for these disbursements? Because I did not think it would be possible for the prisoner to obtain the moneys from the contractor without the commanding officer's signature.

128. You yourself have been from time to time, in the absence of other officers, in command of the Permanent Artillery? Yes.

129. And has that been for any length of time? Yes; once it was for eighteen or nineteen months.

130. Was the prisoner then in the same position as regards his work as he is in now—was he Brigade Quartermaster Sergeant? Yes, but he was not a warrant officer then.

131. Did he ever complain that his duties were too severe or too responsible? No—not to me as commanding officer.

132. Does the prisoner have assistance in his office? Yes.

133. Do you know what assistance he has? He has a clerk, one storeman, or perhaps two.

134. And if he had asked for more assistance during the time you were in command, would it have been granted him? Certainly.

Examined by the Judge-Advocate:—

135. I want to ask you, sir, why is it that in this list of men applying for clothing that the names of Loveless and Bailey were omitted? Because they could not have paraded before me with the rest of the men when the list of men was being made out. They were employed men.

136. Were their names in any subsequent list? That I am not able to say.

Examined by the Court.

137. Colonel Spalding, can you inform the Court whether Loveless received payment or compensation before or after his signature appeared in this book? I cannot say of my own knowledge, but he would not sign the book until he had received the money. It was reported officially to me.

138. Reported officially to you that he signed after the fact? Yes.

139. I should like, Colonel Spalding, to know whether you were told at the time that the money was paid to Loveless, or whether you found it out afterwards? I believe that I found it out afterwards.

140. I should like to know whether that was after the gunner had signed the book that you came to know of the payment? Yes, it was after.

141. Now there is another question, Colonel Spalding says that he may have sent on a memorandum of supplementary returns, but cannot find it. Can you say, Colonel Spalding, whether you have tried to find, not whether such memorandum is entered in your book, but whether it was sent on to Colonel Roberts? I am not in charge of those records.

142. You are in charge of your own battery records? Yes, and I have searched through them.

The President:—Colonel Spalding cannot go to another man's office and search for any documents that may be there. He must ask Colonel Roberts or the Adjutant to do that.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81B. The witness withdraws.

Lieut-Col. Michael Murphy, N.S.W. Artillery, being duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and states:—

I was the officer commanding Battery No. 3 in 1887, the proper person in 1887 to receive the compensation money that was to be paid to the men was myself; I was also the proper person to pay the money over to the men, or to depute somebody else to do it; I believe the applications for compensation to the men have to be brought before the commanding officer; he examines the clothing and judges its fitness for another year's wear, and such as is fit he passes and gives a certificate for.

[Exhibit 9 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

It is my certificate for clothing and the return which accompanied it for 1887. The amount of compensation money that I requisitioned for was £154 10s. 7d., and here is my receipt, showing that I received that amount of money from the prisoner; at the time I made out those sheets I was not stationed at Middle Head, but I had several men of other batteries attached to a portion of mine at Middle Head; I cannot remember the names of the men who were attached to a portion of my battery at Middle Head; Sergeant Lynch did not belong to my battery; he belongs to No. 2; Gunner Thomas Bailey did not belong to my battery; in that return for compensation there are receipts by Lynch and Bailey; Lynch, one tunic and one Norfolk jacket, amounting to £2 13s. 5d., for which he has actually given a receipt;

Bailey, one Norfolk jacket, 9s. 4d. The compensation for those men was paid through my battery; instead of Lynch's being a tunic and a patrol jacket it was a tunic and a Norfolk jacket; in the total amount of compensation requisitioned for by me and the total amount of compensation for which receipts are given there is a slight discrepancy which arose through some men leaving and having taken their discharge after the compensation had been requisitioned for; I reported the matter to the proper authorities and told them the proper amount remained in my hands.

Mr. Simpson :—I object to papers bearing the signatures of other people than Colonel Murphy's being put in as receipts; they may be correct or they may be incorrect; I submit that if they want to prove that Lynch received this sum they must call Lynch himself.

Mr. Heydon :—I submit that returns are admissible the same that the other returns are admissible with regard to the other batteries; this is a document initialled by Colonel Murphy—a document which he produced containing the evidence of the money paid to the men; you can compare the signatures with those in the ledger showing that they are those of the same men.

Mr. Simpson :—The other returns were immaterial and I did not object to them, but these are material, and I object to them. There are two objections:—First of all that Lynch has not been called to prove the signature; you must prove the signature, and you must prove the signature of Bailey; my learned friend says that you can prove them by comparing them, but I maintain that that is not the best evidence you can get. It is only secondary evidence; supposing Lynch had wrongfully signed the paper?

The President :—I think the matter can be easily settled by the prosecutor calling this witness.

The Court adjourned until 10 o'clock on Thursday, 7th March, 1889.

On Thursday, the 7th day of March, 1889, at 10 o'clock, the Court reassembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present—the same members as before.

The President :—The point before the Court, when we left off yesterday, was the admission of documents as evidence. It appears to the Court that the rule with regard to the admission of documents must come into force. That rule I believe is that the first and best evidence of the authenticity of documents must be obtained. If the prosecution wish to put this document in they must produce the person who signed it, and if he cannot be found then the person who saw him sign it, and if they cannot produce the person who saw him sign it then I maintain that the document is not authentic evidence of payment because a custom obtains out here among the Military forces of signing documents for the receipt of money before the money is paid. The accountant (Mr. Solomon) brought a pay voucher to the Judge Advocate the other day for him to sign for a large sum of money. Major Lassetter objected to sign it because he had not received the money. "Oh!" said Mr. Solomon, "It is always the custom to sign the voucher before receiving payment." Now I saw that document signed, but it was certainly no proof of the payment.

Mr. Heydon asked that the document might be received as evidence of the amount received by the officer commanding and disbursed by him.

Mr. Simpson still objected.

The President :—The Court are of opinion that the documents can be received not as evidence of the signature, nor as evidence of payment, but merely as evidence of the money that was received by Colonel Murphy, and the manner in which he authorized its distribution. [Exhibits 9, 10, 11 and 12 admitted.]

Witness continuing, states: In requisitioning for compensation money I requisitioned for as much as was required by each person; the list bearing the signatures represents the amounts authorized by me to be paid. In the requisition list I requisitioned for £2 13s. 5d. for Lynch; I did not authorize any other amounts to be paid to him as compensation; I did not authorize the payment to Gunner Bailey of any other sum but 9s. 4d.; I paid a portion of the compensation money myself, but I cannot tell which; in the case of those whom I paid myself they signed in my presence for it; in the case of those whom I did not pay myself, I authorized Lieut. Bridges to pay; he is and was the officer-in-charge at Middle Head; in authorizing him to pay the money I drew the cheque for him, but cannot say that I paid him myself; the custom is for an officer to go with the Pay Sergeant to the bank to get the money, and then to come down to Dawes Battery to pay the men here, and he would hand the money for the Middle Head detachment I think to Lieutenant Bridges or to the non-commissioned officer deputed by him to receive it at Dawes Battery; I have authorized the money on this voucher to be disbursed as stated hereon; I know the prisoner's signature; I think the signature on these documents are the prisoner's; though they are rather larger than usual, they are not the usual signature that I have seen; they appear to me to be larger than usual. [Exhibits marked from 13 to 19 inclusive handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.] There is a discrepancy in the amount for which I requisitioned and the amount I authorized to be paid in consequence of the discharge of two men and clerical errors in the amount due to four other men; the men were—Gunner R. Dalton, Gunner William Low, Gunner M'Alister Peterson, D. Stephenson, and Thomas Foster; Sergeant Lynch and Gunner Bailey were not amongst these; some of the items were omitted in the rolls sent in, and the supplementary return was submitted to the officer commanding; the supplementary return was for additional men; no change whatever was made after Lynch and Bailey.

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the defence:—

143. Mr. Simpson :—What has become of that money that was left unpaid? I handed it over to the officer taking over the battery.

144. Who was that? Major Murray.

145. How much was it? £5 4s. 2d.

146. Had these men who did not receive money left the forces when the prisoner handed over the money to you? No, they had not.

147. Who handed the money over to you that you had received? The prisoner.

148. Had the men applied for their discharge? I think one man had applied for his discharge, and application was being made for the discharge of another man.

149. How was it that the other three men were not paid? I think it was owing to a mistake in the inspection of the clothes.

150. Whose mistake. Your mistake? It appears to have been a mistake of the clerk, or it might have been my mistake.

151. Therefore, if a mistake arose as far as three men were concerned that was your mistake? Yes, that was my mistake.

152. Will you tell us what sort of a mistake that was? William Low, so far as I can see, put down a requisition for compensation for the whole of his clothes, and then withdrew it, putting in a requisition for only two articles.

153. But that was no mistake of yours? Yes it was, because I had evidently passed his clothes in the first instance. All his clothes down here were sufficiently good to pass, but he did not think the amount of compensation sufficiently large, and he withdrew afterwards.

154. Then you have a man passed in the list originally for a larger amount than he ought to have received?

The President :—The officer on inspecting the clothing finds that the man's whole kit is good and compensation is put down for five articles. That goes in, and when the compensation money is drawn the man says, "No, I will take the clothes"; he receives his clothes, and the money remains in the hands of the officer in command of the battery.

155. Mr. Simpson (to witness) :—Well, I don't see that that is a mistake? It is an error rather than a mistake.

156. This man was put down for £2 12s. 6d. in the first instance, and actually he got £1 9s. 6d.? From the prisoner I received £2 10s. 6d.

157. I see there is an alteration in reference to McAicer; how much was he originally down for? I think £1 4s. 2d.

158. How much did you pay him? £1 9s.

159. So that he was actually paid more than was sent in by you? Yes.

160. You sent in a list asking for £1 4s. 2d. for McAicer, and McAicer has been paid £1 9s.? Yes, but it has been corrected in this list.

161. Never mind that; can you tell the Court how it was he came to get £1 9s.? Well, there was evidently a mistake in taking down the list for compensation.

162. It is a mistake in the original list sent in? Yes.

163. And I may presume it is a mistake of yours, or somebody for whom you are responsible? Yes.

164. It is a mistake of omission, is it not; more ought to have been put down in that list than was put down? Yes.

165. So that McAicer is in entirely the same position as Lynch was in, although the amount was larger in the case of Lynch? No, I think not; this amount is vouched for.

166. There is a man called Stephenson here; will you please look at that and say how much he was originally requisitioned for? £1 14s. 4d.

167. How much was he paid? £2 3s. 8d.

168. There is another mistake of omission there, is there not; the difference between £1 14s. 4d. and £2 3s. 8d.; so it is not perfectly clear that in those two instances at all events you have omitted to requisition for the full amounts that the men ought to get? Yes, it is on the face of the document.

169. Are there two Low's in the Force? Yes.

170. Look at James Lowe, you will find you requisitioned for £1 13s. 6d. in his case, did not you? No.

171. How much did you requisition for? £2 3s. 2d.

172. I see a man of the name of Foster down here for £3, just look at that? Yes, for £3 0s. 2d.

173. And how much did he get? Nothing.

174. And how was that? He was discharged medically unfit.

175. And would he not be entitled to compensation? No, certainly not. Compensation is an allowance paid in advance.

176. Did you get £3 for him? Yes.

177. Have you any book similar to that produced by Col. Spalding yesterday—a clothing ledger? It is not in my possession. It is in the possession of the officer commanding the battery.

178. Would Lynch's name appear in that book? No.

179. How long have you known the prisoner? I have known him since August, 1876.

180. And what character has he borne during those years? Very good.

181. Has he had a great deal of work to do? During certain times an immense deal of work has fallen upon his shoulders, and he performed it very well.

182. Do you know anything about this system, by which clothing is supplied to the men, and an allowance to the master tailor for fits and refits? It was published in orders.

183. Never mind published in orders? I cannot carry all the details in my mind.

184. But cannot you tell me about the system? I cannot tell you all about the items.

185. Do you know whether the contractor, in cases of compensation, is paid for the full amount of clothing with a certain percentage deducted, just as though he had supplied the clothing, although no clothing was supplied? I know it from hearsay.

The President :—I think that the officers commanding batteries cannot prove that, because they have no dealing with the contractors.

Mr. Simpson :—I will ask you this, and do not answer it without you get the sanction of the President;—do you know whether it has been the custom to do what I have just asked you about?

The President :—I do not think he can answer that question, as he does not know it of his own knowledge.

186. Mr. Simpson.] You said something just now about general orders;—where shall I be able to find them? There is an order book published.

187. Do you know that an inquiry extending over a considerable period was held by order of the General Commanding, for the purpose of inquiring into the system of clothing the Forces then in vogue? I do not know it of my own knowledge.

Re-examined by the prosecution :—

188. If a man states that he wants compensation for a garment, he does so in anticipation that the garment will last twelve months? Yes.

189. If anything should happen to the garment in the meantime he would have to buy another garment at his own expense if he took the compensation money, so that he would be out of pocket to the extent of the cost of the garment;—would that not be so? Yes.
190. Then when a man accepts compensation money he does so at his own risk? Yes.
191. This corrected total I see has been initialled by yourself? Yes, it is actually in my handwriting.
192. You have spoken of an additional compensation list. Did you ever get the money of this additional compensation list? No.
193. All that you have received is £154 10s. 6d.—all that you have received for compensation? Yes.
194. Is that all? Yes; all on that one application, although other men receive compensation on their discharge.
195. Yes, but that is not before the Court at all. That is all that was received as clothing compensation during that one year? Yes.

Examined by the Court:—

196. There are a good many alterations by Colonel Roberts? They must have been there before Colonel Roberts signed the document.
197. Were they made before or after the amounts were authorized by Colonel Roberts? They must have been made prior to Colonel Roberts' signature.
198. Were they on the document before it left your office? No, certainly not.
199. Were those corrections made prior to Colonel Roberts' signature or afterwards? I should think they were made prior, but cannot say of my own knowledge.
200. Can you explain how those corrections came there? I should think that some mistake had been made in assessing the value of the articles.
201. That is apparent on the face of it; but did you make the corrections? No; they are not in my handwriting.
202. Were they made at your request? No; although I must have been aware of the corrections, as they must have been made in the fair copy.
203. Were those alterations made by Colonel Roberts before returning the copy to you? I should say they were made in the Brigade Office before they were returned to me.
204. Then, to the best of your belief, those corrections must have been made in Colonel Roberts' office? Yes.
205. You say that a fair copy was submitted to the officer commanding. Where is that fair copy? I cannot say.
206. And the men were paid on that fair copy, in which the corrections were not initialled, and might have been altered by anyone? Yes.
207. That copy, evidently, was submitted to Colonel Roberts; but what I want to know is, who made the corrections? I do not know who made them, although I think they were made by Mr. Webster, and sent back to us to make a fair copy of it.
208. But you do not know for certain. What you do know is that the men were paid on the altered copy? Yes.
209. Would you be authorized to make any alterations on a compensation return after it had been initialled by the commanding officer? I have done it because I went into the matter and found it was a mistake after I had received the compensation-money.
210. And those red ink marks might have been yours? No; certainly not.
211. Now, turning to another subject, you were in the Imperial service prior to being in the New South Wales Artillery, were you not? Yes.
212. In the regiment in which you served how were the prisoners' duties performed, and by whom? By a quartermaster, who would have under him a quartermaster-sergeant, and staff.
213. Do you consider that the duties performed by the prisoner are greater than the duties performed by a quartermaster in a line regiment? Oh no! The quartermaster would have double the amount of work, because there would be double the number of men. He would also have charge of the barracks, to see that they were kept clean; also charge of the workshops.
214. Do you consider that the prisoner had more work to do than a man in his position should be asked to do? No.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Eden, General Staff, being duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and states:—

I was presiding when an inquiry was held some time ago and the prisoner appeared before me in the course of that inquiry and made certain statements. I reduced those statements to writing as he made them. I wrote down the questions that were put and the answers that he gave verbatim. I cannot remember the exact words of those questions or answers. This document is in my handwriting.

Mr. Simpson:—If the prosecution is going to bring as evidence against us statements of the prisoner, they ought to put in the whole of the statements.

Mr. Heydon:—I wish to put in certain statements made by the prisoner in reference to those charges.

Mr. Simpson:—If statements were made by the prisoner upon a certain day, and reduced to writing, that is a deposition, and can best speak for itself.

Mr. Heydon:—My learned friend asks that I should put in all the statements of the prisoner with reference to this particular point; but I wish to explain to the Court that the statements made before that inquiry covered a very large range, and many of them had no bearing whatever upon this particular question at all.

Mr. Simpson:—I want the Court to see that there has been such an amount of looseness in the keeping of these Artillery stores that no man can be held criminally responsible upon any mistakes that may have occurred.

The President:—I think that the Court cannot admit any evidence which proceeds directly from the Court of Inquiry. Mr.

Mr. Heydon :—I quite admit that I cannot put in those proceedings and make them evidence against the prisoner. To do that I should be putting in the statements of a great many persons who were not on oath, and who might now be called to give evidence for themselves. All I do want to do is to put in an admission made by the prisoner himself; and it is quite a proper thing to make use of evidence given by a man at any time against himself.

The President :—If you will turn to page 90 of the Manual of Military Law, you will find, under paragraph 74, that before an admission can be allowed as evidence, it must be proved that it was voluntary.

Mr. Heydon :—I think the Court will see that it was voluntary.

The President :—I think the prosecution must prove that the admissions made by the prisoner were voluntary.

Mr. Heydon :—Very well, I will prove that, Mr. President.

Examination continued :—Before the prisoner made this statement I did not hold out to him any inducement, threat, or promise giving him ground for supposing that if he made a confession to me he would gain some advantage or avoid some evil in reference to the question. The statements he made were perfectly voluntary.

By the Court :—The prisoner was obliged to appear before the Court. Some of the statements made by him were voluntary, and others were elicited by questions put by me. He was at perfect liberty to answer any questions put by me or not.

The President :—I think that it is now proved that the statements made by the prisoner were voluntary, and so they are admissible as evidence.

Cross-examined by the prisoner's counsel :—

215. Mr. Simpson.] Do you recollect, without looking at those papers, any statements which he made? I remember some of them.

Examination continued :—

216. Mr. Heydon.] Do you remember the particular words? I remember the substance.

The President : I think you should ask him first.

217. Mr. Heydon.] Do you remember the words of the question which you asked the prisoner and the answer he gave you on the 18th of September last year with reference to a discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d.? No, I don't remember the exact words, I remember the substance.

Mr. Heydon : Well, I think we ought to have the exact words of the evidence.

The President : Suppose you have the substance first.

Mr. Heydon : Is it not evidently the fairest thing that the actual language should be put before the Court, sir.

Mr. Simpson then withdrew his objection.

218. Mr. Heydon : "Can you explain an apparent discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. which appeared between the cheque for £229 12s. 7d. and the amount you handed over to the Battery commanders of £220 0s. 5d. for compensation?" That is the question, and the answer is, "Yes; that sum represents my own compensation, which Henderson, when paying me for the usual compensation, added on to the cheque as a convenient way of paying me." That is the answer given by the prisoner to the question on page 79. There is a question, "Did you receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. as compensation in lieu of clothing for the year 1887 to 1888; if so, how do you account for the discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. between the amount shown as received from contractor, and handed over to officers commanding batteries for the same year?" The answer to that question is, "No, I did not. I received my clothing. On reconsideration I find I did receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. for the year 1887 to 1888. The amounts I received from the contractor for the officer commanding batteries was deducted from my accounts for compensation for £16 7s. 6d." On page 105 appears this question, "You stated in evidence that the £9 12s. 2d. money not accounted for by the officers' receipts was your own compensation due to you; do you adhere to this question?" The answer was, "Yes, I do." The next question was, "The sum of £65 10s. paid you some little while after the £229 compensation for batteries had been received was for compensation for four warrant officers, was it not, and including yourself as one of those paid-up recipients?" Answer, "The £9 12s. 2d. was deducted from the £65 10s." The next question appears to have been this, "Stay a moment; here are certified copies of this transaction by which it is clear you received both. Explain." The answer was, "Well, at any rate the £9 12s. 2d. should have been deducted from the £65 10s., for this £9 12s. 2d. was given to me as a kind of advance on my personal compensation when I asked Henderson wouldn't he advance my compensation, which he could not pay all until the amount was authorised. It must have been an oversight of mine not to mention, when I was getting the £65, that I had had this advance." The evidence I read from page 61 was given on the 18th September, 1888, and the second question and answer, on page 79, was given on the 3rd October, 1888, the rest of the statement having been made on the 1st November the same year? Yes.

Those are the questions and answers put to and answered by the prisoner on those dates. On the 11th January, 1889, the prisoner made a further statement to me. This is my handwriting and it embodies a statement made to me by the prisoner, who was called before me to make further statements with regard to the £9 12s. 2d. He made a further statement and I put it in writing.

By the President :—That Statement is part and parcel of the proceedings which took place during that Court of Inquiry.

By the Prosecutor :—This is the statement, Webster states :—"The list sent on to the Treasury is really a mere voucher. The compensation lists are received from batteries with each man's name. From that the items are recapitulated on to another list, showing merely the number of garments, so many trousers, &c., &c.; this list is then signed by the commanding officer and forwarded to the contractor, who therefrom makes out the vouchers, which are in like manner signed by the Colonel Commanding, who returns them to the contractor, who then gets the full amount from the Treasury and passes the two-thirds to Mr. Webster (myself) and gets the one-third for themselves. I issue the amount due to each battery and get a receipt, now again shown to the Board. The discrepancy the Board discover of £9 12s. 2d., would not have escaped my notice had I had my books checked and properly kept. It may have arose during the recapitulation of the contractor's list. This amount is of course due to the Government and I cannot recollect how it came about, neither can I produce the lists or the copy of these for the year 1887 to 1888. The contractor may have the original."

[Exhibit marked 20 signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

By

By the Court:—I cannot say whether the prisoner saw both these documents before the Court.

At 1 o'clock p.m., the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock on same day.

At 2 o'clock the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before.

The paper to which the prisoner's initials are attached is marked 21, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.

Exhibit 22 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.

Witness:—That is in the prisoner's handwriting. [Exhibits marked 23 and 24 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] The signatures to those two documents are the signatures of the prisoner. [Exhibits 25 and 26 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] The signatures attached to those documents are in the prisoner's handwriting. [Exhibit 27 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

On page 53, under the date of the 15th September, the following questions were asked by me as President of the Board of Inquiry, and the following answers given by the prisoner. Question: "The two tunics received by you for the artillery in 1887, of course included those under the head of compensation?" Answer: "Those five hundred and those charged for by Messrs. Henderson are for those actually delivered to the artillery. In fact the compensation and the clothing delivered are two separate accounts." Question: "Then it may be taken for granted you consider the contractors to be obtaining money, say, improperly; at any rate, in a manner opposed to the interest of government, and you have no doubt pointed this out to your Commanding Officer?" Answer: "Yes, and I spoke about it. I pointed it out to the Adjutant and to the Colonel when furnishing compensation lists—that for simply putting in his voucher and getting his cheque he cleared one-third cost on every garment about which he gave compensation." On page 98 of the proceedings the following question appears: "You stated in your evidence that you had informed Colonel Roberts and the Adjutant of the improper manner in which the contractor was obtaining money. When did you do so?" Answer: "On two or three occasions I have mentioned this to the Colonel when presenting the compensation lists for his signature." Question: "Well, they are annual, hence it must have been at least a year since you first drew his attention to the matter; is it not so?" Answer: "On the separate occasions when presenting these lists I mentioned this—Yes, so it must be over a twelve-months I suppose."

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the Defence:—

219. Mr. Simpson:—Colonel Eden, you know perfectly well, don't you, that the system has been for the contractor to be paid as Webster pointed out in that evidence? I did not know it previous to those proceedings.

220. But you know it now, don't you; don't you know from your investigation at this Board of Inquiry that the system that Webster described had been in practice for years?

Mr. Heydon objected to this question on the ground that it was only from hearsay that Colonel Eden could possibly know it.

Mr. Simpson:—I want to find out from Colonel Eden whether the result of the Inquiry was not that he has ascertained that this particular system, said to be committing a fraud, has not been a system in force here for a number of years with the full sanction of the authorities.

The President:—It seems to me to be evidence that we cannot receive; to all intents and purposes it is hearsay evidence to us because it is not on oath. The objection is allowed.

221. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—Did you make any report yourself as to the result of the Inquiry? The Board made a report.

222. Do you know where that is? No, I don't.

223. To whom did you send your report? To the convening officer.

224. Who would that be? The General, I suppose.

225. Can you tell me of your own knowledge whether the system that was then in force still continues? I don't know at all.

226. What is your position in the force? I am an officer of the Permanent Staff.

227. What are your duties? My duties are varied. They were chiefly originally connected with the reserves.

228. Can you tell me when you sent in that report? I cannot. I think there were three or four reports.

229. And all sent in to the General? Yes.

230. Now, do you mean to say that any statements made by Webster were voluntary? Yes.

231. Did not you say that he was called again to make certain statements or to give certain explanations; do you remember saying that? No, I don't.

232. Was he not called before you to make certain statements previously? I don't know whether he was called or not; I did not see the order.

233. How many times did the Court sit? I do not know.

Mr. Heydon:—The prisoner gave evidence on fourteen occasions.

234. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—Was he examined before you on fourteen occasions. I do not know.

235. Well, how many times was he before you? I do not know; I should have to look and find out, and that would take some time.

236. Well, never mind how long, I want to know. Just look at page 4. Do you see this "Brigade Quarter-Master Sergeant Webster is further examined"; do you see that? Yes.

237. That is the second time. Now, he made statements before you upon one occasion, and then on this second occasion? Yes.

238. Mr. Heydon:—Is that your handwriting, Colonel? No.

239. Mr. Simpson:—Whose handwriting is it? Captain Savage's.

240. Were you present at the time? Yes.

241. Well, that is the second time. Now look at pages from 1 to 12 and tell me whether those pages do not all refer to evidence given by Webster before you? I do not understand what you mean.

242. Look at every page from 1 to 12 and see if it is not all Webster's evidence. Do not those pages all refer to evidence given by Webster on three different occasions?

The President:—Are you trying to find out the number of occasions upon which the Court sat?

Mr. Simpson:—I intend to put in all the statements made by Webster.

Mr. Heydon:—Then I object to that. No statements made by the prisoner can be put in in his favour. They can only be put in against him. Mr.

Mr. Simpson:—I admit that, as a matter of strict law, I cannot put in these statements; but as a matter of discretion the Court can receive them. The object of this Court is to administer the strictest justice.

Mr. Heydon:—I am not shutting the prisoner's mouth by making this objection, but I am objecting to a whole lot of irrelevant matter being thrown upon the Court for the purpose of confusing it.

The President:—The Court rule that the matter cannot be brought before the Court now, but that any statement which the prisoner has to make can be embodied in his statement at the conclusion of the case.

Mr. Simpson:—Of course, I will submit to the discretion of the Court, but I insist that I am entitled to put in the whole statements before the Board of Inquiry on the 18th September, 1888. I say that I am entitled to have the whole of that evidence given before the Board on that particular day. You cannot pick out a bit of a statement given by the prisoner and give that against him. It is opposed to the whole law of evidence.

Mr. Heydon:—As a matter of fact, Mr. President, the prisoner appears to be called before the Board twice at any rate on that day. So that the conversations took place on several occasions of that one day. So that my learned friend (because I got out an admission made by the prisoner), therefore is he entitled to put in another conversation by the prisoner during the evidence?

Mr. Simpson:—I did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. Heydon:—You will see that many of these questions are not at all pertinent to the inquiry before the Court. I only got out of one person before the inquiry. I quite admit this, that it would have been very unfair if a conversation had been held with him, and he had made statements about this £9 12s. 2d., and he had said "I admit that I cannot explain." It would have been very unfair to admit that "I cannot explain" in, when he might have said "I have no doubt I could find out if I had a little time given to me."

Mr. Simpson:—I only want to put as evidence the statement that was made before Colonel Eden upon the occasion to which we are alluding.

Mr. Heydon:—If my learned friend will state that these statements are relevant to the case, I will withdraw the question; if not, I think they have no right to be put in before the Court.

Mr. Simpson:—I insist upon my right to put in those statements. I submit that I have the right and I intend to put them in if the Court will allow me.

The President:—Does not the statement which you wish to bring out refer to these charges?

Mr. Simpson:—I think that it has a material bearing upon the case, and that in justice to the prisoner it should be put in.

Mr. Heydon withdrew his objection.

243. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—You said these statement were voluntary, but do you see this in your own handwriting "that the Board having been reassembled pursuant to its adjournment proceeded to call on Mr. Webster for explanation as to certain items for consideration." Do you say that? Yes.

244. Did you say "How is the money recovered to Government for garments made from material supplied at Government expense?" Explain this whole arrangement. Did you say that? Yes.

245. And did he in his answer say this, "Any after clothing that has been made up by the master tailor from materials supplied by the Government is issued to the battery in lump. It is stopped and charged against the battery. I presume the pay office recouped the Government, but I have nothing to do but render the proper charges, which I have always done. Myself, Mr. Green, Mr. Bennett, and Mr. Griffith for instance, they had serge, for fatigue jackets made, that is 2½ yards; the cost of this serge has been debited them through their battery accounts. The master tailor's charges for these garments were made by themselves. This is during this year 1888. The cost of cloth supplied at Government is recorded by stoppage of Government pay against the interested individuals through their battery and pay officers' accounts, I myself furnishing the items to be so charged for." Did you make any personal investigation to see whether statements are correct or had you any reason to doubt it? I do not understand the question.

247. Have you made any personal investigation to find out whether the statements made by Webster were correct or not? I shall not answer it. I have nothing to do with it, but what is written in these proceedings.

248. That is all right now, turn to the next examination in 15th December, 1888, page 76. Did you ask this question—"Did you receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. as compensation in lieu of clothing for the year 1887 to 1888; if so, how do you account for the discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. between the accounts shown as received from the contractor and handed over to batteries for the same year?" And he gave this answer, "No, I did not; I receive my clothing." "On reconsideration I find I did receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. for the year 1887 to 1888. The amounts I received from the contractor to pay the officers commanding batteries were deducted from account for compensation for £16 7s. 8d." The answer he gave to that question is a purely voluntary answer is it? Yes.

249. Can you say whether that statement is true or not? That is not my statement.

250. No, it is Webster's statement, but can you say whether it is true or not? I know nothing more than what is on here.

251. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the statement is true or not—these answers—say yes, or no? No; I do not at this present time.

252. Did you ask him what number of part worn tunics were issued during the years 1886, 1887, and 1888? Yes.

253. And did he give this answer, "I can give that, but absence at Newcastle takes my attention from this matter. I may tell the Board that the part worn clothing is not worth reissuing"—was that the answer? Yes.

254. Then did you ask him this, "You prefer a demand, say like this one marked H, signed by yourself, to the effect that items were paid or due, &c., to meet compensation and claims for 1887 and 1888. Why does this document need Captain Savage's signature?"—Did you ask him that? Yes.

255. And did he say "Captain Savage's signature was attached prior to mine which was subscribed at a later date when it was referred to me for explanation. My signature is simply in confirmation of my minute about it, which is result of reference to me. Captain Savage's signature I consider to mean that he has approved as to the correctness. I should suppose that the Colonel commanding the artillery forces forces seeing his adjutant's signature is satisfied with it as an assurance that the document needing his initials are correct, and the matter is forwarded in the usual way." Was that his answer? Yes, he said that.

256. Now that document H bears both the signature of Captain Savage and the initials of Colonel Roberts, does it not? I believe so.

257. Now turn to page 102. Did you say to the prisoner as follows: "The Board desires you will exercise the utmost despatch, for it will submit to no further delay, and recommends you to consider its business as a prior demand to any ordinary duty, and warns you that should they consider its time in any way lost by your inattention the matter will be forthwith reported to the Major-General; also, Mr. Webster is to understand that he must produce the paper mentioned by 2 p.m. this day." Did you say that to him? I did say that in response to his promise.

258. Do you mean to say that these statements are voluntary statements? I mean to say that is only on one particular point.

259. Do you mean to say that any statement made by Webster, after he had been addressed in this peremptory fashion, could be a purely voluntary statement? Yes; he could have declined to answer it if he had liked.

260. If he had declined, what would have happened to him? I don't know.

261. You don't know; it is hard to tell, I suppose? Nothing, I think.

262. Do you of your own knowledge know what system has been in force here for years with regard to officers' compensation? No; I do not know anything about it.

Re-examined by the prosecution:—

263. Mr. Heydon:—With reference to what has been read out, you said to the prisoner, "The Board desire you to exercise the utmost despatch, for the Board would submit to no further delay." Had there been a great deal of delay, Colonel Edon? He was evincing signs of delay in carrying out his promises to the Board.

264. Had there been delay at the time you made this observation to the prisoner? There were signs of it.

265. Had the inquiry been going on for several months? It had been going on from the commencement of July.

266. Had the prisoner immediately before told you it would take a day or two more before he could answer that question? Yes.

267. Had he told you that he could get the answer from the books, and that it would take him a day or two to do so, and then you spoke to him about the further delay? Yes.

By the Court:—The very effect of that document which you had in your hand. What was the order from the General convening the Court. I should like to hear it read out.

The prosecutor read the order as appeared on the Board of Inquiry, as follows:—"Proceedings of the Board of Inquiry assembled at Victoria Barracks on the 26th day of June, 1888, by order of General-commanding, dated 19th June, 1888, to investigate and report upon the system of supply and issuing of clothing now in vogue in the New South Wales Artillery, together with the claims for compensation, and to suggest such alterations as may be necessary to place it upon a more simple and equitable basis. President, Lieutenant-Colonel Edon; members, Captain and Adjutant A. H. P. Savage, N.S.W.A., Lieutenant Little, P.S."

268. The President:—I should like to ask one more question. Did you ever before this Board of Inquiry warn the prisoner that he need not answer any question or criminate himself in any way? I have no recollection.

269. Mr. Simpson to the President:—Would you kindly have this report read to Colonel Edon, and ask him whether it is a true copy of his report? It is not the first report.

Mr. Simpson:—It is a supplementary report.

Mr. Heydon:—I object to this being done. Of course I cannot do it, but the Court can if it thinks proper.

The President:—I think that judging from similar cases that it must be considered a true copy.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

At 4 o'clock the Court adjourned until 10 a.m., on Friday, the 8th day of March.

On the 8th day of March, 1889, at 10 o'clock, the Court re-assembled, pursuant to adjournment.

Present—the same members as before.

George Whitehouse, being duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor:—

I am the manager for William Henderson & Company, the contractors for the supply of clothing to the Permanent Force for the years 1887 to 1888 was entered into by Mr. Henderson. [Exhibit 28 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] This is the contract. [Contract produced.] This is Mr. Henderson's signature, and the signature on the order is signed by Mr. Henderson. Goods contracted under that contract ought to be delivered at the Government Store, Young-street. Mr. Hopkins is in that store, and was in charge of it in the year 1887 to 1888. These six documents bear Hopkins's signature. This document bears Mr. Webster's handwriting and initials. It has also Mr. Henderson's signature to it. Mr. Henderson used to import the clothing, but it was never received by us at all of my own knowledge; it never came to our own stores. The clothing was received by a Board, part military and part civil, at the Government Store, Young-street. After passing the Board the clothing was taken from the Government Store to the Victoria Barracks, where I was present to receive it. It was received by Mr. Webster (the prisoner). After the inspection of the clothing I procured vouchers at the Government Store. These are the vouchers [vouchers produced]. The top one bears Webster's initials, W.W., and also Webster's signature. That is the pay-voucher; the others are invoices; one bears the name of Colonel Spalding, and is signed by Hopkins. Subsequently I received those vouchers through Hopkins and took them to Colonel Baynes. I got from Mr. Hopkins the pay-vouchers which have Webster's initials and Mr. Henderson's name upon them, and took them to Colonel Baynes and left them with him. I did not see it again after that. At the time Colonel Baynes was Paymaster. I think I took the whole whole lot of these vouchers to Colonel Baynes, but I cannot be certain. The matter referred to on this voucher [another document shown to the witness] was dealt with by me as far as the passing of it was concerned. By that I mean I sent it up to Victoria Barracks. It was made up by a clerk called Smith. I ordered the vouchers to be made up, but I did not supply the clerk with any materials to make it up with; there were no materials at all. I supplied the facts that appear on that document; I dictated them to my clerk. [The statements contained in the last two sentences were objected to by Mr. Simpson, but the Court disallowed the objection.] I got that information from documents I got from the Victoria Barracks from Mr. Webster. [This statement was also objected to, and the objection disallowed.] After getting the information I returned the documents to the Victoria Barracks. I cannot say to whom the documents were returned. They were returned for the signatures. I took them myself the last time. I took this document with them, and this one [documents produced]. I did not get these two documents signed. I left them with the other documents. The prisoner's name is on one of those documents. I saw the documents returned again to my office with the names written, which names were not on when I took them up to the Victoria Barracks. When those documents came down from the Victoria Barracks with those names on, the other documents from which I had compiled them were attached to them. The documents from which I had compiled them I took myself to the Pay-office. I took those and other four or five from which they were compiled to the Pay-office. I left them at the Pay-office—the whole lot of them. I did not see any of them after that. I cannot say with whom I left them at the Pay-office. At the time I got the four or five documents from the prisoner he did not say anything to me about them that I remember. I think he told me what they were for. I think he told me that they were compensation clothing for the rank and file of the Permanent Forces. I did not make any payment to the prisoner after that. I was present when the payment was made to him afterwards. Mr. Kennedy, our accountant, gave the prisoner a cheque. I cannot say what bank the cheque was upon. Mr. Kennedy obtained a receipt for the cheque. [Exhibit 23 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings]. I also prepared this document [Exhibit No. 21] from the material I obtained from the prisoner. [Statement was objected to by Mr. Simpson]. I did not supply the clothing referred to in that document, nor did I see anyone else supply it. I instructed the clerk to draw out the cheque for £229 12s. 6d., and he followed my instructions. That amount is two-thirds of the £344 8s. 10d. Henderson and Company kept the other one-third. I did not supply the clothing represented by that amount—£344 8s. 10d. I instructed the clerk to fill up the cheque as manager for Henderson and Company. It was not a private transaction of my own. As far as I know, no clothing was supplied and no money given for the remainder of the one-third of the amount. As manager for Henderson and Co. it is my business to make myself acquainted with the business of the firm in the warehouse, but not in the counting-house. The warehouse is where the goods are kept, and if the goods are sent out of the warehouse it is my duty to know where they are going to; but, so far as I know, no goods were sent out for that amount. It is supposed to be my business to see that no goods are supplied without my knowledge; but I am supposed to be there in the warehouse at the present time, and it is impossible for me to know what is going on in my absence. My clerk, Mr. Cliffe, is responsible in my absence. You can get him down here and question him about the goods supplied in my absence.

The evidence of this witness is postponed. (The witness withdraws).

William Oliver Hopkins, being duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor, and states:—

I am the keeper of the Government Stores. The supply of the clothing is sent to the permanent store almost invariably, and when it is sent there I sign documents for it. I signed those documents [documents produced], and before signing them I inspected the goods for myself.

Mr. Simpson:—I would not object to these documents if they are only what the witness says they are; but I do object to them because they contain statements which he cannot possibly prove. He could prove that they are statements which were in the Government store; but there is a note here that they were supplied by Henderson, of which there is no proof whatever.

Mr. Heydon:—That document cannot be shut out because a statement which is not evidence. The statement which is not evidence cannot be taken as evidence of course; but the document must nevertheless be admitted for what evidence it really contains. However, I will ask a few questions about it first.

Witness continuing:—The clothing referred to on this voucher was military clothing for the troops.

Mr. Simpson objected to the witness saying who the clothes were from, observing that the prosecution were trying to prove that the clothes which were received in the store came from Henderson. He cannot possibly know that.

The President:—Can you ask the witness if he gave any receipts for that clothing.

Witness continuing:—I delivered this receipt to our accountant. His name is Harper. He can be called before the Court.

Mr. Simpson again objected to witness saying from whom the goods came.

Mr. Heydon:—If the witness knows where the goods came from he can say so.

The President:—Perhaps the witness will tell us whether he knows of his own knowledge.

Witness continuing:—I do not know where the goods came from of my own knowledge. They were received on 7th May, 1887. After inspection they were forwarded from our Department to the Military Department in Victoria Barracks, I believe; I cannot say from my own knowledge. I know they went out of my store, and I know the custom is to send them from the store to the Military Barracks. I received no complaint that the clothing was not received from the Military Barracks, although there was some delay I believe. We receive the clothing for the troops each year. The clothing is received perhaps in two or three shipments under one contract. I always check the clothing with the contract before we sign the invoice as far as quality is concerned, but I do not check them for quantity. I checked them to see that something of each garment contracted to be supplied is accurately supplied. The foreman and carter are supposed to check the goods as to quantity. The foreman's name is Viles. Mr. Hopper can tell you what became of the vouchers after I signed them. I found that the quality of the goods accorded with Henderson's contract. I am sure Colonel Spakling was present, but no representative of Henderson's firm. It is stipulated in the contract that the clothing should be received on a certain date, but it generally comes in two or three shipments. I think we did not receive any other clothing for the military except what is mentioned in those receipts.

Mr.

Mr. Heydon :—Well then I tender those documents.

The President :—One of them is in.

Mr. Heydon :—And I tender the others to show what the quantity of clothing was in the military store, and, so far, my learned friend admits that they are evidence.

Mr. Simpson :—I do not admit anything of the kind.

Mr. Heydon :—I think that my learned friend admitted it only a few minutes ago. I think that because they were in the store they could be received as evidence, but because they were in the store of Henderson & Co. they could not be received, but I submit that they can be received as clothing in the store.

Mr. Simpson :—I object to them altogether. If Mr. Hopkins had been able to say, looking at these documents with his own signature attached to it, he could say that on 13th April, such and such a quantity of clothing was received; and on 4th of May such and such a quantity of clothing was received, then he could have refreshed his memory with it and he might have given it as his evidence; but a mere fact of the document purporting to be a receipt is no evidence at all. Here is the gentleman himself present and even if part of the document were evidence then they would be still inadmissible because another part of them is not evidence. Here I have a jumper; there is a paper which purports to be a receipt for a jumper, but here is the gentleman himself who says although I gave a receipt I cannot say that that jumper was ever delivered at all. Then I see here eight patrol jackets; I cannot say that eight patrol jackets were received; perhaps one, perhaps two, or perhaps four, and those jackets correspond in quality to the contract sample. I think the Court will see that it is attempted to get in evidence which is not evidence at all.

Mr. Heydon :—I quite admit that sometimes when a case is being tried before a jury, whom the parties deem they cannot possibly trust, one side does insist upon a statement in a document, evidence being pasted over, so that the jury should not see it; that is done, and if my learned friend wants it done here I will see that it is done. A document is not shut out because it is not evidence, because that would be to shut out evidence which is not already proved. If my learned friend wants to do that, and if the Court think that it has not been proved that the goods were supplied by Henderson, we will have it taken down; but I submit that it is proved that the clothing comes from Henderson, because the clothing comes from nobody else. I have proved the receipt of the annual supply from the Government stores—the only place where it goes to, so that is ample evidence that the goods sent by Hopkins are the goods sent by Henderson & Company. Is the Court going to believe having a contract to supply goods to the Government store, that somebody else came forward and supplied what he had no right to supply, and what he had never been paid for and would never be paid for?

Mr. Simpson :—All that I contend as a matter of legal evidence, these documents are inadmissible. I do not want the Court to infer that anybody else who was not paid for the goods deposited them in the store; but, because I do not want the Court to believe that Henderson delivered them when there is nothing to prove, as far as quantity, that they were ever delivered. My learned friend said something about it being the practice to paste over things that you don't want a jury to see. I do not know why he should say anything of that kind unless he thinks that I wish the inference to be drawn that it would prejudice the Court, which I don't.

The President :—The document will not be accepted until the initials are sworn to by Mr. Harper as to the number of goods received. Apparently Mr. Hopkins cannot say from whom the goods were received; as far as I understand him they were received from the ship, but he cannot say they were received from Henderson.

[The objection is allowed.]

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the Defence:—

270. Mr. Simpson :—Do you know anything about the system which has been enforced for many years on Henderson being paid for goods which he has never delivered?

Mr. Heydon :—Of your own knowledge, or is it only hearsay? Witness : It is only hearsay.

Examined by the Court:—

271. The President :—When goods are sent from your store to anywhere, you send receipt and delivery vouchers with those goods? The carter brings receipted voucher back.

272. Which is filed in your office? Yes.

273. Do those vouchers contain particulars of the goods or only the number of bales? If the packages had been broken the carter should have got receipts for each article.

274. Then perhaps you will tell me with regard to these particular articles, were they broke? Yes; I think every case was open.

275. Therefore the carter would get a delivery voucher signed for the delivery of each bale? Yes, I think so.

276. Who would they be signed by? They would be signed by the officer who received them in the Victoria Barracks.

277. Would they be signed by the carter at all? I think not.

278. Have you ever conferred with this contractor about the military clothing? While the goods have been in the course of delivery the contractor has invariably called upon me to know if the goods were up to sample, and when they would be passed.

279. In this particular year, 1887, can you tell me who the contractor was? Henderson; he contracted in 1886 for 1887.

His evidence is read to witness as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B. The witness withdraws.

George Whitehouse came again before the Court, is reminded of his former oath, and is examined by the Prosecuting Counsel:—

He said: I cannot tell you of my own knowledge whether any part of the sum of £229 12s. 2d. was for warrant-officers. I have already said that it was given for compensation for clothing. I do not think that any was for warrant-officers, but I cannot say positively. I did not pay this sum of £65 10s. to the prisoner. I was not present when it was paid. It was paid by Kennedy, I believe. I directed Kennedy to to pay that money. Whether he paid it by cheque or not I do not know. I told the accountant that it was for compensation for clothing for warrant-officers. Now I know that none of the £229 odd was for warrant-officers, and this money, this £65 10s., was for compensation for warrant-officers. I directed him to pay in full. I did not direct him to make any deductions from it.

Cross-examined by the counsel for the defence:—

280. Mr. Simpson:—Do you know what the practice was with regard to clothes—what was practice as far as Henderson & Co. were concerned?

Mr. Heydon:—I object to that question.

Mr. Simpson:—Do you know what happened, assuming that a man is entitled upon the certificate of an officer or otherwise to compensation money (say, to the amount of £3) and Henderson draws the £3, could you tell me what Henderson & Co. do with it?

Mr. Heydon:—I object to that question. I object to my learned friend what is the practice, because if he only knows from hearsay what the practice is the evidence is not admissible.

Mr. Simpson:—I want my learned friend to prove the receipt of the clothing by the prisoner in a legal way, but it is another charge we are dealing with now. My learned friend said that he had vouched for a certain sum of money to Henderson & Co., as if Henderson had supplied clothing to the amount of that voucher, and that he had done it fraudulently. I have been trying to get before the Court this fact that, although Henderson & Co. appears to have received a certain sum of money for clothing, they want to prove that that sum of money was never received. They have not done it yet, but they wanted to prove it; I want to prove that for several years the custom has been to do that very thing lawfully which they charge us with doing in an unlawful way; now, I ask him whether of his own knowledge he knows whether for some years the custom has been for the contractor to receive from the Treasury, less a certain discount, as though it was for clothing which has never, as a matter of fact, been received.

Mr. Heydon:—My learned friend objected to many important points in my evidence, and yet now he wants to ask this witness whether simply, because he is the Manager for Henderson & Co., he knows about a great many things which he did not actually see himself. If my learned friend wishes he can ask this witness of what he actually saw himself, but until he actually does that I submit that the evidence is inadmissible.

The President:—The Court rules that the question can be put, with the limitation that the witness knows what the terms quoted, "of your own knowledge," means. (To witness): You understand from your own knowledge means that you were actually the person concerned in the transaction, or were present when certain moneys were paid.

280. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—Understanding all the President has said to you, can you answer of your own knowledge. Supposing a soldier was entitled to compensation in the sum of £3 what would be done then. Just describe the process about the vouchers? A list was sent to me of what each man would be entitled to.

Mr. Heydon:—Where are those lists?

Mr. Simpson:—The list is in the hands of the Court. I object to that question.

Mr. Heydon:—But you are speaking of several lists.

281. Mr. Simpson:—Supposing a soldier was entitled to £3 for compensation, would the £3 appear together with other money in a list sent to you? Yes.

Mr. Heydon:—I object to that question. My learned friend is trying to prove it by an hypothesis.

Mr. Simpson:—That is the only way he can prove it.

Mr. Heydon:—I submit that it is not the only way you can prove it. The officers can be called. I had to call officers of batteries to prove certain lists. [The objection was disallowed.]

282. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—What would be done in this particular case now? We received the order for which we draw out a voucher.

283. And is that voucher sent to the Treasury? Yes.

284. And Henderson & Co. draw the whole £3, say for a tunic just the same as if the tunic had been supplied? Yes.

285. How long has that been the practice? To my knowledge since 1880.

286. You said, didn't you, in answer to Mr. Heydon, that the amount being for £344 8s. 10d., one-third would be £114 16s. 3d.?—Yes.

Mr. Heydon:—I do not think it is.

287. Mr. Simpson:—Well, he has said so. Now, deduct £114 16s. 3d. from £344 8s. 10d., and that leaves £229 12s. 7d., less the discount? Yes.

288. This particular voucher is signed by Colonel Roberts, I see. Now, I want, as a matter of curiosity, to know what Henderson & Co. get the £1 for in the case of them drawing £3 for the tunic? To enable them to keep up the establishment.

289. To enable them to keep up the establishment? It is only giving a £1 for the £1. We have to collect the money.

290. You did not mean that, I know. Didn't you mean that for the trouble of collecting £344 8s. 10d. you get £114 16s. 2d. Yes; that's what it is.

291. And that has been the practice authorized for years?

Mr. Heydon:—He didn't say so.

292. Mr. Simpson (to witness):—Well, it has been in vogue ever since 1880, and you have never heard it questioned until recently? No.

293. When did Henderson become the contractor? I do not know.

294. Did you say this at the Court of Inquiry before Colonel Eden? On page 29 of the proceedings you are reported to have said: "We subsequently receive lists of names of men who are recommended for compensation in lieu of clothing. Vouchers for the total amount so claimed are forwarded by us to the regimental authorities, Victoria Barracks, for signature, and returned to us, which we present at the Treasury, and, upon receipt of payments, we hand over two-thirds cash to Mr. Warrant-Officer Webster, the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant of the New South Wales Artillery, and take his receipt for the same. In the case of compensation claims for warrant-officers the same rule is observed, except that we give full value for each officer, and retain the clothing, as the clothing is made up for them in the Colony. To my thinking the system of clothing the regiment is not a satisfactory one. The clothing should be supplied according according to individual measurements, and made up in the Colony, and the present systems of making them up in size rolls causes a large expense for alterations, when received, is due to the fact that so many men take their discharge, &c., during the time the size rolls are taken and the receipt of the clothing. If such a system were to obtain, the compensation yearly would be greatly simplified, and would give greater satisfaction to all concerned?" Yes.

294. Mr. Heydon :—I object to these questions. I want to know whether you know them from your own personal knowledge, or from hearsay?

The President :—The Court are of opinion that Mr. Heydon may interpose this question.

295. Mr. Heydon (to witness) :—Have you personal knowledge of the men having taken their discharge from the military forces, or from hearsay? It is through our business that I know it.

296. Mr. Simpson.] You are not a member of the forces, are you? No.

297. You are not present when the men take their discharge, are you? No.

298. Will you explain to me how you come to know of men taking their discharge? Through a discharged man taking an order for a civilian's suit.

Mr. Heydon :—That is hearsay. It is something set down upon an order.

The President :—But I think the man would tell himself that he was a discharged man.

Mr. Heydon :—That is not of his own knowledge.

The President :—But Mr. Simpson, would you mind repeating your question to the Court.

Mr. Simpson :—I am not putting the question as to whether he knows this to-day; I am asking him whether before the Court of Inquiry he said so and so.

Mr. Heydon :—If you can prove that a man has contradicted himself by bringing any thing of this kind out I will admit that it is admissable, if not, then it is inadmissable.

299. Mr. Simpson :—Did you say as follows: "To my thinking the present system for clothing is not a satisfactory one. The clothing should be supplied from individual measurements, and made up in the Colony. The present system, according to size rolls causes a large expense for alterations, when the clothing received is due to the fact that so many men take their discharges, &c., between the dates when the size rolls are made up and the receipt of the clothing. Were this system to obtain the large claims sent yearly would be to a very great extent simplified, and it would give greater satisfaction to all concerned."

The President :—Will you allow that question, Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon :—If it was taken as hearsay I will object.

300. Mr. Simpson to witness :—Did you say that, as I have read it out to you, when you were before the Military Board of Inquiry? Yes.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock on the same afternoon. The Court reassembled at 2 o'clock p.m., pursuant to adjournment. Present—the same members as before.

The witness (George Whitehouse) was reminded of his former oath.

301. Mr. Simpson :—I think that in your evidence before the inquiry you said this "I produce Mr. Webster's receipt for £229 12s. 9d., and Captain Savage's order to pay him?" Yes.

The President :—That receipt is in evidence, is it not?

Mr. Heydon :—Yes, it is.

302. Mr. Simpson to witness :—How long have you known the prisoner? Since February, 1881.

303. Have you always during that time found him to be an honorable straightforward man? Yes.

304. Have you had many military transactions with him during that time? Yes.

Re-examined by the prosecution :—

305. Mr. Heydon :—Have you had many transactions with him in connection with the supplying of clothing to the Permanent Artillery? Yes.

306. And what you had to do with him was to have received certain accounts from him, and to pay certain moneys to him? No, not without I had orders from the Commanding Officer to do so.

307. Yes, you mentioned that; but you have received certain orders and certain amounts from him, and you have paid certain moneys to him; and those are the only transactions you have had with him at all? Yes.

308. And these are the transactions in which Henderson and Company have retained one-third for, as you say, collecting a certain amount of Government money? Yes.

309. And in these transactions you have always found him to be an honest straightforward man? Yes.

310. Would you explain to us what room you had for judging of honesty and straightforwardness—you had certain money to pay him and he took the money, is that all? Yes.

311. And in that you have always found him honest and honorable? Yes; I never found him otherwise.

312. You say, according to the custom which has prevailed for a number of years, you have received an order to draw out the money. From whom do you receive that order according to the custom you speak of? It comes through Webster, signed by Colonel Roberts.

313. You got it through Webster, that would be the custom? Yes, sir.

314. Can you produce any of these orders? No, I cannot.

315. Do you know what has become of them? All our orders have to be attached to the voucher before we get the money so we have nothing at all to show.

316. This document that I ask you about was one of the orders you speak of, coming through Webster and signed by Colonel Roberts? The vouchers would be signed.

317. Was there anything in the order about retaining one third for yourselves? Nothing.

318. You did that without any order to that effect? Decidedly.

319. By whose authority then did you retain one third? I cannot really say.

320. Did you do it without authority then? I cannot say with whose authority it was done upon.

321. Did you do it without authority? The last two or three times I might have done it without authority.

The President :—I think we are speaking of custom, are we not.

322. Mr. Heydon :—Yes we are. (To witness) By whose order did you retain one third? That I cannot say. It was a custom to do so.

323. Can you produce any authority for your retaining one third every year?

Mr. Simpson :—Do you mean written authority?

324. Mr. Heydon :—By whose authority was it the custom to do it? That I cannot say.

325.

325. Can you tell me in round numbers how much Henderson & Co. have received since 1880 in this way? We know that it was £114, 1887 to 1888. I think that is about all we have received.
326. Do you mean that during the six years previously you received as much as each year? No. We received about that altogether during the six years.
327. Can you give me any reason for the sudden increase in the year 1887 to 1888? Yes.
328. At any rate Henderson & Co. have received some £228 of Government money in that way? I dare say they have.
329. You received orders to draw certain compensation money from the Treasury? I received orders about compensation money, which orders I think you have there.
330. I see you always got an order like this, did you; it was your custom to get an order like this from Captain Savage? Yes.
331. Then you consider an order in these terms justified you in keeping this £114?
Mr. Simpson :—I object to this, it was not a question of justification.
332. Mr. Heydon :—Well, I will put it in another way. Was it upon that order that you kept the £114? Yes.
The President :—I do not think the witness understood the question.
333. Was it upon that order that you kept the £114? No.
334. Then upon what authority did you keep it? I kept it upon my own responsibility; I kept it upon the authority of a custom which had been hitherto followed.
335. I am asking you about the custom, Mr. Whitehouse;—what authority had you for retaining this one-third, or did you do it upon your own responsibility, without any authority at all? Without any authority at all.
Mr. Simpson :—Surely that is not fair. He did it upon the authority of custom.
336. Mr. Heydon :—If I make a custom of picking other people's pockets that does not give me any authority for doing it. Had you any authority for doing this? The only authority I had was what had been done hitherto, before I went there.
337. And I understand you cannot tell us anything about of your own knowledge? No.

Examined by the Court:—

338. The President :—In fact, you followed the custom that you found in vogue when you went into your present position? Yes.

Re-examined by the Prosecution:—

339. How did you find out that the custom was in vogue before you went there;—did Mr. Henderson tell you? I think it was from the books that I found it out.
340. Did it never occur to you to ask anybody about it? No.
341. And you never did speak to anybody about it? I don't think I ever did.
342. You knew, of course, that the goods (when the money was drawn from the Treasury) were never supplied by Henderson & Co.? I knew that.
343. That, for instance, the £314 8s. 10d. worth of goods were never supplied by Henderson & Co. at all? Yes, sir.
344. I see that this pay-voucher is for the supply of the undermentioned articles and services;—you drew that up, and you know that the garments had never been supplied? Yes.
345. And you drew this voucher up, seeing that the claimants were Henderson & Co., Sydney, and the voucher was for the supply of the undermentioned articles? Yes.
346. Did you ever report to your employer that he was obtaining money for which he had given no value? No, I didn't.
347. You say that in 1880, when you first went there, that it was a custom in previous years, and that was why you did it yourself? Yes.
348. As you went by custom, can you tell me how many times Mr. Henderson had the contract? No; I do not know anything about it.
349. But I thought you had followed the custom? Yes; but I cannot say how many times he had the contract.
350. Well, it was a sufficient number of times to justify your regarding it as a custom? Yes.
351. Cannot you tell me of the number of times? No.
352. When did Henderson begin to carry on business as William Henderson & Co.? He has been carrying on business under that name since 1882 or 1883.
353. What position was he in before that? The firm was Moore, Henderson, and Bowcher.
354. It was the same business, was it? Yes.
355. Do you know how many contracts the firm had before 1881? No; I cannot tell.
356. Don't you know as a matter of fact that it was only one? No; I can't say whether it was a dozen or half-a-dozen or only one.
357. Did you ever have any conversation with the officers commanding the batteries about this custom, or with any of the officers commanding the military forces about it? No.
358. You never mentioned it to them nor yet to your employer nor to anybody else? No; I think not.
359. Did you ever say anything to Webster about it when he came down with those vouchers? I do not think so.
360. And he never said anything about it to you? I do not think so.
361. He used to bring you down the documents from which you made up the vouchers? Yes.
362. And he used to bring you down his orders to pay compensation money? Yes.
363. Have these contracts all been of the same nature as this one of 1887 and 1888?
Mr. Simpson objected to the question, as not having arisen out of the cross-examination.
Mr. Heydon :—I submit it arises out of the questions my learned friend has been asking. It is necessary for me, after what my learned friend has said, to find out what the witness has said about custom really means. You see my learned friend has asked the witness a question with the purpose of showing that since 1881 the same custom which has been followed from 1887 to 1888 then existed. If that custom had existed in a different way it might not form a precedent at all for what is reported here.
The Court disallowed the objection.
364. Mr. Heydon :—Can you tell me whether the contracts of previous years were of the same character as those of 1887 and 1888? I think so, as far as I know.

365. Were the contracts always supplied by importations during this period? No.
366. When did the supply of contracts by importations really begin? A portion have always been imported.
367. When did the custom of importing them begin?
Mr. Simpson objected to this question.
 The Court disallowed the objection.
368. Mr. Heydon :—When did the practice of importing begin? I cannot tell you, sir; we have always imported the scheduled garments?
369. Why did you say just now that you had not always imported them? We always imported them, but sometimes we received more than we wanted, because the contract was for more or less.
370. Are the words "more or less" in this contract? No; I don't think they are in any of the contracts.
371. This contract says that the Government shall receive the goods specified in the next schedule; there is nothing about "more or less" there. When did the custom of having the words "more or less" cease? I cannot say as a positive fact; it was in most of our contracts.
372. I thought you said that they were in your former contracts? I could not say for certain.
373. Then it may have been that your former contracts were for an uncertain quantity of goods? No; it has always been for scheduled quantities, but we are supposed to supply more if they want it during twelve months at scheduled prices.
374. And you were entitled to do that under your contract? Yes.
375. But you see that under your contract you are not entitled to do anything of the kind. Don't you see that? It may be so.
376. So that it comes to this, that the former contract was a contract to supply whatever clothing was required for the forces, but this contract was a contract to supply a definite quantity of clothing? I think it was always for a definite number of garments.
377. Here you are to supply the goods mentioned in the schedule, but under the old contract you were to supply not only what was mentioned in the schedule, but whatever was wanted for the troops? No; I don't know that it was so. The scheduled quantity we have to supply at a certain time; whatever garments they wanted they had to order from us.
378. That was under the old contract, was it? Yes; and under the new one, too.
379. That was under the old contract, was it? I expect so.
Mr. Simpson :—He has just said so; and under the new one, too.
380. Mr. Heydon :—Can you show me where in this contract you are entitled to supply any garments other than those mentioned in the schedule? I cannot see anything on that document to that effect.
381. Then so far as this contract goes, when you supplied the goods mentioned in the schedule, when you were paid for them the contract ended? No, sir.
383. But there is nothing here to the contrary is there? No, not there.
384. But is there anywhere else? I don't think there is.
385. Then according to this contract when you have supplied the goods mentioned in this schedule there is an end of the contract? Yes; if we had not liked to supply them with more we need not have supplied them.
386. I want to be quite sure, Mr. Whitehouse, when you had supplied that schedule of goods and had been paid for them that contract was at an end was it not? Yes, that contract was.
387. Then if this contract was discharged and at an end what right had you to send in a voucher for extra goods which were never ordered and never supplied?
Mr. Simpson :—I really must object to this question. This witness is my learned friend's witness and I must object to his going any further.
Mr. Heydon :—Perhaps I adopted a wrong tone to the witness, but the question I am asking him is, I think, a perfectly fair one. I want to know by what authority Messrs. Henderson & Co. drew up a voucher for the supply of goods for which there was no contract. It must have been some order for goods for which he was not the contractor.
Mr. Simpson :—He said it was the custom to do so.
The President :—Can you answer that question of your own personal knowledge?
Witness :—What was the question?
388. Mr. Heydon :—Why did you draw up a pay voucher for goods for which Messrs. Henderson & Co. were not the contractors? Under such a contract as that we are supposed to supply anything for twelve months that may be required. They are not supposed to apply to anybody else.
389. The President :—Yes; but what authority had you for the supply of those goods that Mr. Heydon has mentioned to you? I made out those by authority received from the artillery forces.
390. Mr. Heydon :—As far as you know, was anybody aware that you retained this £114 except yourself and the officers of Messrs. Henderson & Co. and Webster? I cannot say.
391. You don't know then that anybody else was aware of it but yourself and Mr. Webster? I supposed it was the usual thing; I supposed it to have been known all along.
392. Are you aware that anybody knew of Henderson & Co. retaining this money except Henderson & Co. and Webster? I cannot say.
393. Cannot you say whether you are aware or not? I thought that everybody was aware of it.
394. Yes; but can you tell me of anybody who was aware of it? No, I don't think I can. I never thought about it.
395. I think you said that your firm had no other transaction with Webster except receiving these orders from him and paying these compensation moneys to him? I think there were other transactions.
396. Oh, there have been other transactions, have there;—what would be the nature of them? Civilians' clothing, and so on.
397. Messrs. Henderson & Co. are tailors as well as importers I see;—anything else besides that? No, not that I know of.
398. No other transaction at all that you remember? There have always been other small transactions.
399. What would they have been, Mr. Whitehouse? Hosiery and necessaries for the Permanent Forces, and other things that they required.
400. Anything else? Trimmings for the tailoring—I think for the master tailor.
401. And Webster used to get those things from you, did he? Yes.
402. And anything else? No, I don't think so; I don't remember anything else at present.

Examined by the Court:—

The President:—The contract is for 1887, and it is signed on the 20th December, 1886, for so many garments, specifying the number.

403. Can you tell us whether, on receipt of this contract, Messrs. Henderson sent for those clothes to England? Yes.

404. And whether they ordered the number specified in the schedule, or a different number? They ordered the number specified in the schedule.

405. And, as the goods did not go through your hands, then the number of goods in this schedule for 1887 would not pass through your hands at all—they would go straight up from the Government Stores to the place where they were received by the Artillery Forces? Yes, sir. I think I may say, however, that we do make the caps here.

406. Can you tell me about what time of year you got the list for compensation? I think about the middle of May.

407. Was that after the clothing had been received by the military forces, or before? To the best of my recollection, I think it was before.

408. Before the clothing was received? Yes, I think so.

409. And reverting to compensation, the compensation that was granted was in respect of some of these articles of clothing which you ordered from England, and which you say were ordered according to this schedule, and which you say were received by the military authorities? I cannot say this.

410. Perhaps you don't understand the drift of my question. You supplied so many articles on a certain date, and then before that date you are asked for compensation for a certain number of articles;—do you get that clothing that is not supplied to the men? No; that is in addition to that.

411. I should say it is subtraction? No, sir, it is additional. I cannot say whether it was before or after the schedule was sent in.

412. Do you yourself go and count the actual garments supposed to be from your firm to the military authorities? Did you ever go and check it yourself? I am speaking of 1887? I think that year I did count them.

413. Where? At Victoria Barracks.

414. Was anybody else present when you counted? All the officers were present—five of the Board, and Colonel Spalding amongst them? When I say that all the clothes were counted, I mean that I saw some of them counted.

415. Are you aware of your own knowledge that the clothes ordered were supplied by Messrs. Henderson & Co., at the Victoria Barracks, in respect of this contract of 1887? Yes.

416. Can you remember any of the names of that Board in 1887? Was Colonel Airey one of them? I think he was. I think both Colonel Spalding and Colonel Airey were.

417. Was the prisoner present when you counted the clothing at the Victoria Barracks? He was in the Barracks, and he was in and out of the room in which the counting was going on every now and then.

418. On that occasion, was any complaint made to him that the clothing was short, or that there was not as much as contracted for? I cannot answer that question of my own knowledge. If it had been short we would not have had our vouchers signed.

419. Were the goods mentioned in the voucher for £65 10s. for warrant officers supplied? None of them were supplied.

420. After Henderson & Co. had got this £65 10s., did not they hand the whole of it over to Webster? Yes. They did.

Examined by the Judge Advocate:—

421. Why is it the warrant officers got the full amount for compensation? That has always been their privilege.

422. Were these clothes ever made up at all for the warrant officers? No; it is compensation.

423. I see it is clothing in the book and compensation on the voucher? Yes.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws. At 4 o'clock the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

The Court re-assembled, pursuant to adjournment, at 10 o'clock on Monday, the 11th March. Present: The same members as before.

William Henderson being called and duly sworn, was examined by the prosecutor and said:—

I am a merchant and importer; and in the year 1887 to 1888 I was the contractor to supply the clothing to the Permanent Force. This voucher has been made out in the Government Store Department. This is my signature ordering this money to be paid to Gibbs, Bright, & Co. Documents underneath are invoices for that. That pay-voucher, I believe, summarises the invoices and adds them up. That money had been paid on my account. Those vouchers for which I have been paid the same quantity of garments appear as in the contract in all cases. [Exhibit 28 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] So when I was paid that £2,004 I was paid that contract in full. Most of my contracts are for more or less. There was something else for warrant officers' clothing. That particular contract was paid in full, but in all Government contracts, if you are the contractor, the contract is given twelve months before, and the force may be increased or diminished in the meantime, so that additional quantities may be ordered afterwards. The contract says: "The contractor shall deliver and the Government shall receive the goods specified in the annexed schedule not later than the 1st April." I was paid for 438 tunics. On the voucher there were no particulars, and when you go to the Treasury you do not get a list of every item. I was not paid myself. I did not personally receive any money from the Treasury on that contract.

The Attorney-General, Mr. G. B. Simpson, Q.C., objected.

Mr. Heydon said that he had a perfect right to put into the witness's hand any document he liked and to question him upon it without regard to the subject generally.

The Attorney-General submitted that if the document was admissible as evidence at all, then it was the best possible evidence in itself. If it was not admissible, then it was most unfair to question a witness upon its contents.

The President:—The contract will give you all the information, I think, Mr. Heydon, without touching that until it is in evidence. [The objection was allowed].

Witness

Witness continuing:—I cannot give you the amount of the contract until I have worked it out. I have looked at the quantities of tunics, Norfolk jackets, patrol jackets, cloth trousers, serge trousers, and jumpers mentioned in that contract. I cannot say whether that document is an order due for all the goods in the contract.

The Attorney-General objected. [The objection was allowed.]

The President:—Why do you tender this document, Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon:—I wish the Court to admit the first of these vouchers as an order for Mr. Henderson for the payment of the whole of the contract; I want to show that it is the whole of the money coming through Mr. Henderson under the contract; I quite admit that in order to prove the actual passing of the money from the Treasury, if that is necessary, I shall have to get somebody from Gibbs, Bright, & Co. or from the Treasury; as far as Mr. Henderson goes, after signing that order he gets rid of it; his interest in it is at an end; he is satisfied; what I want to show is that Mr. Henderson has signed the voucher for payment coming to him from the Treasury, and for that contract.

The Attorney-General:—If that document is tendered for the purpose of proving some charge it can only be admitted according to the rules of evidence; what is it? It is only a paper with Mr. Henderson's authority to pay certain sums of money, but it is not an order for payment for a certain class of goods for a certain description, and I submit that it cannot be admissible as evidence against my client.

Mr. Heydon:—I am not tendering this to prove that those goods were delivered to the prisoner; I am tendering it to show that Mr. Henderson was paid for the whole of his contract for the year 1887 to 1888.

The President:—But this document will only show that he claimed the payment.

Mr. Heydon:—Well, that is quite enough for my purpose; it is for him to explain why he claimed the payment, and why he claimed it for the whole of this contract; a man will not ask for payment under a Government contract until he is entitled to it; supposing I called somebody from Gibbs, Bright, & Co., that will not enable the witness to swear that he had received the money any better than he could swear it now; all I want him to say is that he has claimed the money for all the goods; if the Court will allow me, however, I will interpose another witness here.

The witness retires.

Robert Charles Reed, having been called and duly sworn, said:—

I am in the firm of Gibbs, Bright, & Company; I received the money referred to in that receipt on the day that I signed the document.

The Attorney-General:—My learned friend may ask the witness how much money he received on a certain day.

The President:—The Court have decided to receive this document.

[Exhibit 29 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

The President:—Do you desire to cross-examine this witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

Mr. Attorney-General:—No, sir.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

William Henderson, having been recalled, is reminded of his former oath, and examined further by the prosecutor:—

I cannot tell you whether that £2,004 odd was in payment of the whole of my contract; some of the items I never saw; that voucher which I signed was made out at the Government store; I have already compared the number of goods mentioned in those vouchers in regard to six lines, and I find that they are exactly the same in the vouchers as in the contract, and that £2,004 includes those vouchers; that amount is made up of the sum total as those vouchers; they are for the whole of the six lines of garments mentioned in my contract, so that when that £2,004 is paid I was paid for the whole of those items in the contract; at the same time there has hardly ever been a contract I have had from the Government that has not been exceeded; I wish to state that (if the Court will allow me) my credit is likely to have been injured by the way some of this evidence has come out; next to the prisoner I am the man most seriously concerned in this case; it looks as if I had been guilty of malpractice.

The President:—Answer the question that Mr. Heydon is putting to you.

Witness continuing:—This is my signature; I received that sum of £344 on the day that I signed that receipt.

The Attorney-General objected.

Mr. Heydon:—The two documents are practically the same. One contains Webster's signature for the authority of the payment of the £344; and the other shows that Mr. Henderson received that money.

The Attorney-General:—My learned friend wants to show that Mr. Henderson's signature is for the goods in that voucher, and I complain that that is evidence not upon oath.

The President:—Will you ask the question, Mr. Heydon, whether the witness received the certain sum of money?

Mr. Heydon:—He has said that.

Witness continuing:—I have received that money; I do not know what I received the money for; sometimes I get as many as twenty documents from the Treasury; I took these numbers and I took these amounts, and my clerk went through them; all that I know is that I received £344 odd.

The President:—The Court will accept the document as a receipt for £344 odd. [Exhibit 30 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

Witness continuing:—There are two documents—one is signed by me, the other is not; I received £344 in the document which is not signed by me.

Mr. Heydon:—Did you receive that £344?

The Attorney-General objected to the question.

The President:—The Court rules that as far as the items on this paper are concerned, the witness cannot be examined upon it. The Court only takes it as evidence as the payment of money, and as it is not in his handwriting he cannot refresh his memory.

Witness

Witness continuing:—When I received the £344 8s. 10d., I handed it into the counting-house; I cannot say it was all in one cheque or not, or whether this particular item was in a cheque for a larger sum, so that it would be impossible to trace; I paid it, whatever it was, into my counting-house; I bank with the Bank of New Zealand and sometimes with the Commercial, and I have my private account at the Federal; I bank with the Bank of New Zealand principally; I paid no money away to the prisoner; I did not direct my servants to pay any of it away; I do not know anything about this £344 odd being paid away to the prisoner; I signed the cheques very often, being told that this is for so-and-so, and this for so-and-so, and that is all I knew about it; I frequently sign cheques without making inquiry; I have a man in the position of a confidential clerk; I always know at the time what cheques are for when I sign them, but it escapes my memory afterwards; I never sign blank cheques; those are the only banks with which I banked about the 27th May, 1887, as far as I remember, but I frequently get remittances by telegraph, or by post, on certain other banks, and then I have to draw the money out of them by cheque; assuming that I drew a cheque for £229 12s. 7d. for the prisoner, that cheque would be on the Bank of New Zealand, I think; there is a custom under which I receive payment in full for garments for the force which I never supply, and of that sum I pay away two-thirds and retain one-third for myself; when the force was first formed here, there were certain officers' servants and other men in connection with the force who only wore their clothing on muster parade and such occasions; we charged the Government in full for garments which we have not supplied, and pay away two-thirds of it.

The Attorney-General objected to the witness being asked whether two-thirds of the amount was paid to the prisoner. [The objection was allowed.]

Witness continuing: When the men got compensation we got an order from the Commanding Officer saying that the undermentioned men are entitled to such and such garments, and if we have made those garments we are entitled to our profit upon them, because we have to keep material on hand for any orders that may be required; there is no businessman that would give them the full amount of compensation when the garments were not ordered; the gentleman in charge of this department before Mr. Whitehouse is now in England; there are other contractors who can give you all the information; I am appearing in all the newspapers in the Colony, as I was the only one who did it; there is a custom by which we charge the Government for articles not supplied, but I cannot remember the proportions; there has been a custom by which we have charged for goods not supplied, obtained the money, paid away a portion of it, and retained a portion ourselves; I am merely speaking of the custom; I am not saying what I have done myself; I cannot tell you to whom the money has been paid away; that custom was followed out under the contract; I believe in the year 1887 to 1888, and I think there was more compensation that year than any other; I cannot tell you how much compensation money we got from the Treasury that year; I cannot tell you whether it was £344 8s. 10d.; I cannot say whether the money that I got from the Treasury was for compensation money; I cannot tell you what that £344 8s. 10d. was for; I have already sworn that I received the money, but cannot give any of the particulars; I have no belief upon the question as to whether this money was for compensation money that year.

The Attorney-General objected to the question.

The objection was disallowed.

If I had any belief about it, I might as well say that I knew contents of the voucher. There is nothing on the face of the document to say whether the money is for compensation or not. I cannot tell whether this £344 8s. 10d. was the compensation money for that year. There is nothing on the documents to show it. It is possible it may have been. I believe it was. I received this £344 odd on the 12th May. That £2,004 was for the payment of the whole of my contract. I came to receive £344 from the Government after I had been paid in full for my contract by an order, I presume, from head-quarters. That order I cannot produce, because it was sent in with the vouchers. We always send those orders with the vouchers to the Brigade Office. I sent in a pay voucher for garments which I had not supplied, because we received an order, which I cannot produce, and it was sent back to the proper authorities. I have not had any conversation or any verbal authorization from any of the Military authorities about it. I have not had a conversation with any of the members of the force about it, with the exception of this, that perhaps Webster has said to me, "Well, I will get a list of the compensation from Colonel Roberts;" but I cannot swear that he said anything of that kind. I have never had anything to do with the man. I cannot tell you how much I have received from the Government in the shape of this proportion of compensation money. I have not the slightest idea. I can find out by reference to my books. There is a gentleman in our office who would be able to give you that information. That is Mr. Kennedy. He is my accountant, but is not authorized to attend to these matters unless Mr. Whitehouse tells him to do so. Mr. Whitehouse is authorized to give the accountant instructions as to how much to pay. I suppose that Mr. Whitehouse and Mr. Kennedy have received money in this way, but I am not sure. This voucher is for £344 odd. I cannot tell you from what materials those two documents were made up. Assuming that they represented compensation and that they were made up from compensation money, they would be made up from the order that we had received from the officer commanding the artillery. We send the order to the Brigade Office at the Victoria Barracks to whoever is in charge of the Barracks sending the voucher with the order. I cannot tell you who I sent the order up with. Sometimes the man who delivers the goods takes the order up and at other times they are sent up by a messenger. I think I have only two men in the place now who were with me then. I cannot possibly find out now who took the letter up. I will try and find out to whom they are usually given when they are taken up to the Barracks, but that is all I can do. Documents are all sent up under cover, and addressed to the Permanent Artillery, but I cannot tell you to what particular officer. The young man who makes out all the invoices can tell you. His name is Cliffe. He does not take them up himself. This is my contract with the Government for the year beginning the 1st April, 1888. [Exhibit 31 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] This is my signature, and I presume these are my vouchers for that amount. I compared these vouchers with my contract, and a portion of the money mentioned in the receipt was for 50 cloth trousers, 50 serge trousers, and 8 patrol jackets. [Exhibit 32 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

The Attorney-General:—I object to these documents. We are not bound to them in any way. For instance, here is an entry for knives and forks.

The President: I do not think that they are being put in for those articles.

The Attorney-General:—I object to any document which simply says that Mr. Henderson received certain sums for certain goods. He himself says that he cannot tell what he received the money for.

The President :—The Court are of opinion that these documents can be received as evidence of the receipt by Mr. Henderson as payment for the articles which he mentioned, viz., 50 cloth trousers, 50 serge trousers, and 8 patrol jackets.

Witness continuing :—This is my signature; I received this sum of £65 10s. on the 14th July, 1887; I received it at the Treasury; I paid it to my account; I did not give any directions as to the disposal of it or the payment of any money out of it; the business of Henderson & Co. is my business; I am Henderson & Co., in fact; I cannot tell you whether that money was paid by my authority to any person; I cannot tell you what that £65 10s. is for any more than appears on the face of it; I went up to the Treasury myself for it, but I do not know that the money mentioned on that voucher was there; I go sometimes there three times a week to see if there is any money there for me; I see Cliffe's signature on this document, and the body of the document is apparently in his handwriting too; if he was authorized to draw it up he would do so, I presume; Whitehouse would have authority to authorize him to draw it up; it was authorized by somebody in our office, and I took the money from the Government.

The Attorney-General objected to the witness being asked whether he had ratified the document or not.

Mr. Heydon :—If he went up to the Treasury and drew the money out himself, that is certainly a ratification.

The Attorney-General :—He cannot ratify that paper, unless when he signed it he had a full knowledge of its contents. You cannot ratify an act done nominally in your name unless you are acquainted at the time with what your clerk is doing.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned, until 2 o'clock the same day.

At 2 o'clock on the same afternoon the Court re-assembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before.

The President :—The Court are of opinion that this paper, which was handed in as a ratification of the items contained in the voucher, stands good; the witness before the Court having signed it, and received the money from the Treasury for the amount drawn by this voucher.

The objection is therefore disallowed.

The witness is again called before the Court, reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the prosecution :—I told you that I paid that £65 10s. to my account, and I never instructed anybody to pay a portion of it away to any other person. Assuming that that £65 10s. was compensation for warrant officers, I do not know whether I should keep it all for myself. I do not know what the arrangements was for compensation for warrant officers. I was not aware when I got that £65 10s. out of the Treasury that it was all going to be paid away. If it was paid away, I never authorized it to be paid; but if Mr. Whitehouse authorized it to be paid away I should have to put up with it. I recognize the handwriting on these documents (Exhibits 25 and 26); it is that of Mr. Kennedy, my accountant. I did not authorize him to make those payments. I did not instruct anybody else to authorize him. He had general authority from me to make any payments that were justly due by the firm; in fact, I gave him authority to act for me generally in such matters. I know nothing about the payment away of that particular £65 10s. to anybody. I see receipts for that £65 10s., and I presume that I signed the cheques for them. I presume that I signed the cheque for £65 10s. for warrant officers. I cannot tell you by what authority I did that. I did not know anything more about it than I do now. I did not know who this money was paid to until I saw these receipts, nor do I know how it was paid, or anything about it. I sign receipts in some instances for vouchers about which I know nothing at all. This document which I signed (Exhibit 23) has on it (after stating that it was for so many cloth tunics and so on) not in contract, for warrant-officers F. Bennett, W. Webster, Griffiths, and Sergt.-major Green. I don't know of my own knowledge that that money was to be paid away to warrant officers. I did not read the voucher when I signed it. I very seldom do. I did not know what I was going to get when I went up to the Treasury. When I go to the Treasury I ask them to give me the number of vouchers outstanding, but I never see the particulars until I sign the vouchers, and then I take the number of the vouchers on the top and the amount; and, if these don't agree with what is in my book, I go into the details and find out where the difference is. Unless there is a dispute I do not go over the vouchers. I cannot recollect what is on it. I may have read it two years ago, but if I did I have forgotten it now. I am trying to make a truthful statement but you confuse me. I will not say that I have forgotten all about it. At the time I got this £65 10s., I do not believe that I knew that I was getting it for warrant officers compensation, although I may have known. I think that last year, or the year before, was the first year there were any warrant officers in the force. The supply of the following articles are not in my contract at all; 4 cloth tunics trimmed with gold lace, £8 5s. for the tunic; 4 cloth patrol jackets at £6 1s. per jacket; 4 cloth trousers at £1 7s. 6d. per pair; 4 serge trousers at 14s. per pair. I am not aware of the contract in which they come. I supplied cloth tunics at £8 5s., and cloth patrol jackets at £6 1s., under an order from Colonel Roberts. The man who wrote out these vouchers could give you this information. I really cannot tell you where a voucher was sent, that was sent two years ago, and who it was sent to. I have no contract under which I supplied them. I supplied them under an order from Colonel Roberts. This document is initialed by Colonel Roberts, but that is not what I refer to. He sent down a subsequent order, saying that the following men or the following warrant officers are entitled to clothing or compensation. He did not tell me how much compensation, but we know the amounts.

The President :—It appears that the prices for this clothing are objected to by the Treasury, and it is referred to Colonel Roberts again, and from him it is referred to the General Officer Commanding, and by him submitted to the Minister, and it is marked "Approved.—Henry Parkes."

Mr. Heydon :—According to this note which the Court have taken notice of, it is not compensation at all.

The President :—From what I gather from that is that it is money authorized by the Colonial Secretary to be paid out of the clothing vote for warrant officers mentioned on the face of the document that they might buy clothing for themselves.

Mr. Heydon :—That is not compensation money at all.

The President :—According to that, it is not compensation at all.

Witness

Witness continuing:—I do not know whether in former years I supplied garments of this description to the military; but I think that warrant officers' garments were only in contract for that year. I cannot tell you whether I supplied staff-sergeants' tunics in former years. If I did, the ordnance and everything of that kind were separate. I think that we must have supplied staff-sergeants' tunics in previous years; but if we did the ornaments and gold braid would be entered separately in the schedule, and would be put on at the barracks. Of late years they have been complete—in this year, 1889, for instance; and warrant officers' clothing also has never been in the schedule before.

424. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—Yes, sir, I do.

425. The Attorney-General:—As a matter of fact, ever since you have had the contract, and the clothing of men was passed by the officers for another year, the custom has been for the men to receive an allowance of two-thirds, and for you to receive the other third;—is that not so? I cannot say, from personal knowledge, how the arrangement was worked. I do not know the proportion.

426. Explain to the Court, and do it for your own sake, how it was that this arrangement, by which you retained one-third, came into force? The reason we do that is this: When the custom first obtained we made the garments here, and we imported material for the whole Force. If a certain number of men did not take their uniform I lost profit on these uniforms, and the materials left on my hands. No sensible business man would do that.

427. So that is how it was that the arrangement was made? Yes.

428. Supposing you had made arrangement to supply one soldier's tunic, and had imported materials and so on for the supply of these materials, you would have obtained a certain profit? Yes.

429. And then, in consequence of the officer passing the man's tunic for another year, you would not supply all the tunics and so that you would have the material left on your hand. So that this one-third as an equivalent of the profit would have been due to you if the tunics had been supplied, and that was the whole thing? Yes, that was the whole thing.

430. Do you know whether that was the custom before you were the contractor? That I cannot say.

431. Are the tunics and other garments for warrant officers all made here? Sometimes; when they are not in the contract they are made in the Colony. This year there was a stipulation that the warrant officer's things were to be made in the Colony, and that the other things are to be imported.

432. Do you know that as far as the compensation for the warrant officers was concerned you did not receive one-third, or anything else—you received nothing? I believe that that is so.

433. Do you know from your own knowledge that this custom of which you have spoken has existed with the approval of the military authorities?

Mr. Heydon objected to this question: If the witness says "Yes" to that leading question, then it will go down that there is some sort of approval on the part of the military authorities. The only fair way to do is to ask if he has had any conversation with the military authorities about it. What military man has ever told him it was authorized, and what steps he has taken to get it authorized. To contradict the question that my friend has asked, I should have to get every military man in Sydney in authority to prove a negative.

The Attorney-General:—I ask him whether he knows it of his own knowledge. If the witness says "Yes," there is an end of it, subject to the re-examination of my learned friend, who may succeed in proving that he knows nothing about it. Here we have something that is perhaps regarded by the public as a gross waste of public money; but because such a thing exists (if it does exist) is my client necessarily to suffer? It is not the first time that we have found out that when customs that have existed for a number of years are brought to light, and shown to be monstrous practices, that an attempt is made to try to deny that they are customs. I want to force my learned friend to call the military authorities to deny it.

Mr. Heydon:—Suppose Mr. Henderson were to say that he knew it of his own knowledge, and to say that he knew it by documents that he has seen, but that he could not produce those documents, then there would be a general statement that he knew of his own knowledge, when really he did not know it of his own knowledge. I would ask the Court if they intend to allow the question to be put at all, to ask the witness how he knows it of his own knowledge.

The Attorney-General:—If my learned friend will say that he will call General Richardson and Colonel Roberts then I will not put the question.

Mr. Heydon:—It is my intention at present to call Colonel Roberts.

The Attorney-General:—Will you call General Richardson?

Mr. Heydon:—My learned friend may call General Richardson if he likes. He is quite at liberty to do so.

The President:—The Court will allow the question to be asked; only before the question is put the Court will interpose a question as to how he knew it.

424. The Attorney-General (to witness):—Do you know of your own knowledge that this custom about which I have asked you and which you say has existed, do you know that it has existed with the knowledge and approval of the Military authorities?

The President:—Before you answer that question remember that that knowledge must be either from evidence in writing from the Military authorities or from information verbally given to you by one of the superior officers.

As far as my memory serves me, compensation has never been given without a memorandum or without the authority of the officer commanding the force. It would be impossible for me to produce any of these memorandums as they are all sent in with the vouchers.

425. The President:—I think you misunderstand the question. It is as to whether you know of your own personal knowledge whether the custom of retaining a portion of this compensation money was authorized by the Military authorities? Of my own knowledge I do not know the proportion; but of my own knowledge that in each instance we have received authority from the commanding officers..

426. The President:—That is how it is to be drawn; but about how it is to be paid we are asking? That I really cannot say. All that I can say is from hearsay that the custom is that portion of that money is to be retained by me.

427. The President:—Then you cannot answer of your own personal knowledge the question that the Attorney-General has asked you? No.

428. The Attorney-General:—How long has that custom existed? Ever since the Force was formed.

429. Mr. Heydon :—How long have you been supplying the force? Ever since the first contract was entered into. When the Force was first formed in 1871.
430. The Attorney-General :—Have you ever heard of your own personal knowledge that the custom has met with the approval of the Military authorities;—have you heard of any disapproval being expressed? Certainly not.
431. Supposing the contract was for 500 tunics;—do you import more than those? We do not import more suits, but we import more material.
432. This is what you meant just now when you said that you imported clothes? Yes. As a matter of fact, we are making now for recruits outside the contract, and we always keep a large amount of trimmings, &c., on hand, which are no good for any other purpose.
433. Do you know whether there have been any other contractors since the force came into existence? Yes; there was Mr. Riley in 1886.
434. Did you see Mr. Riley come up those steps just now, as if he had been in communication with somebody? Yes.
435. Was a person of the name of Nicholson a contractor? Yes, he was.
436. You seemed rather hurt that it was going to the public, as if you were doing something wrong;—do you know whether this custom existed among other contractors? I have heard so.
437. Do you believe it? I do believe it.
438. You have been shown a number of documents here to-day bearing your signature;—I think you said that the contents of those documents you know nothing whatever about? Yes.
439. The President :—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon : Yes sir.
440. Mr. Heydon :—I think you said when my learned friend said you got this one-third profit to compensate you for the garments which were left on your hands, I think you said yes? I did not say “that were left on my hands.”
441. No; you only said “Yes,” but the Attorney-General said you only got one-third profit for the material that was left on your hands? Yes.
442. Did you contract for that material? No.
443. It was a private speculation of your own, was it not? It had nothing to do with the contract.
444. Then you had no right to demand to be allowed to supply these garments without the requisition was signed? No.
445. No clothing at all was left on your hands? The material was.
446. I will not do you an injustice, Mr. Henderson. No garments were left on your hands at all. What you contracted to supply, you did supply, and were paid for? Yes.
447. And each year's contracts stood by itself did it not? As a matter of fact I have two contracts for this year.
448. Yes; but the contract in 1887 was a contract for that one year was it not? Yes.
449. And each fresh tenders were called for, and a fresh contract made and the garments that you contracted to supply under each contract you supplied and were paid for? Yes.
450. And whatever other articles besides garments you contracted to supply you imported and supplied and were paid for them? Yes.
451. But over and above this you imported some cloth thinking that you would be required to make it up for the force? We always have to keep a stock on hand.
452. Is not that what I say? You imported cloth with the prospect of having to make it up into garments for the force? Yes, and other articles mentioned in the schedule as well.
453. Over and above whatever was named in the contract? Yes.
454. Were the garments that the men got compensation for sent back to you? No.
455. And you considered that you were entitled to one-third of their value to compensate you for not working up cloth that you had brought out on your own account? Yes.
456. And this cloth was brought out as a private speculation? No, not as a private speculation; as a matter of business.
457. As a matter of business outside the contract? Yes.
458. Were you speaking of the time in the explanation you gave to the Attorney-General when clothing used to be made up in the Colony, or when you imported it? I do not quite understand what you mean.
459. The President :—Mr. Heydon wants to know whether this custom grew up when you made the garments, and was subsequently allowed to continue after you imported the articles themselves? I cannot say.
460. When you order the cloths to make the garments under one particular contract was it then that the custom grew that you were to receive a portion of the compensation? That I cannot say.
461. Mr. Heydon :—Then your explanation to the Attorney-General applies to every year. As far as my memory serves me.
462. That is your explanation of why you got £114 in the year 1887? Yes.
463. So that in 1887, when you had a contract to supply a specific quantity of goods, why did you get this £114? We should have to supply them with clothing if they did not have compensation.
464. Were you obliged to do so? Had you made a contract to do it? No; but if we had a demand we should have had to do it.
465. Well, but were they obliged to go to you for it? I do not know whether they were legally obliged to come to us, but it was a custom not to go to anybody else other than the contractor. I should like to say that at the time the Contingent went away from here I was the contractor for the force, and they called upon me to supply the Contingent, and I had to do it all at contract price, so that you see we never know what we may be called upon to supply during the course of the year.
466. Has it ever been your custom at any time since you have been the contractor to make the clothing up in the Colony, instead of importing it? It had at different times.
467. Can you tell me when? No, I really cannot.
468. Can you tell me what years? Several years.
469. Can you tell me what years now? I cannot tell you from memory.
470. Can you tell me how long it is since you have relinquished that practice? We have not relinquished it yet. We are making some clothes for the Permanent Artillery now.
471. When you made your clothing up in the Colony instead of importing it, was the contract the same as this? No, it was a written contract.

472. This is a written contract—what is the difference? You were to supply a fixed quantity of clothing? No; as required.
473. What year was that the form of contract? It is the form of contract now. We are making up for recruits of the Permanent Artillery now.
474. The President:—Are you making them up under any contract? Yes; we are making them up under an order from the General.
475. Mr. Heydon:—Now look at the last contract, and see whether there is anything to show that you have to supply clothing as required? There is nothing in this contract.
- The President*:—He is talking about a different contract, Mr. Heydon.
476. Mr. Heydon:—Can you produce a contract? No; we submit our prices, and get an order.
477. Then it is an order, not a contract. I want you to tell me whether under that contract, or under any other, you are authorized to supply money as required? I maintain that it is so now.
478. Can you show me anything in the 1888 contract, or in any before, by which you were entitled to supply anything but a fixed quantity or a fixed number of garments according to schedule? Every year.
479. Yes; but I want you to show me the contract by which you are entitled to do it? The D.A.Q.M.G. writes to us to know if we are in a position to give them a certain amount of clothing, and we say we are, and send in a price, and they order them. That is what I call a contract; but it is sending outside of the ordinary contract.
480. And do you charge the same price for them? No, we charge a different price.
481. Then how is it that you did not calculate your profit upon them. Why didn't you take one-third of those prices instead of one-third of these? If we did that it would come to more money.
482. Yes, I know it would, and I should have thought that would have been a reason why you would have done it? Well, you see we did not do it under this contract.
483. What year was Mr. Nicholson the contractor for? I cannot tell you.

Examined by the Court:—

484. Referring to the 1887 to 1888 contract, was the supply sent out from England under your orders—did that ever go into your premises? No, never. It may in single instance in this way: If there are some small articles included in other cases they might go to my premises in the cases, but the bulk of the goods go to the Government store.
485. Do you know of your personal knowledge what happens then? There is a military board which inspects them there, but the next thing I know is that they go to the barracks.
486. Were you there yourself? Yes, and I went over them with the officers.
487. And you were satisfied that the articles imported were delivered? Yes.
488. Why were you at the barracks? I went up there with the duplicate sealed patterns to produce before the board as the Government storekeeper would not part with his sealed patterns.
489. Were you satisfied when you were up there that the clothing you saw when you were up there was the clothing you ordered to come out from England? Well, I opened the packages, they are all opened on the verandah before being taken in the store. Unless they are changed in the Government store they must have been the same. They compared with the invoices. When these packages were opened the number of garments are opened by the Board, and compared with the invoices.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 81B. The witness withdraws.

The Court adjourned until 10 o'clock on the following day.

On Tuesday, March 12, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The same members as before.

Mr. Heydon:—I want to tender the whole of the voucher for the £344 8s. 10d., which contains Henderson's receipt at the bottom, and I do so upon the same ground that I tendered the whole of the other documents,—that is to say, on the ground that the drawing of the money from the Treasury by Mr. Henderson, thus completing and authorizing the payment for the earlier parts of the voucher, is a ratification by him of that payment. I confess, when this was first tendered, it did not occur to me to point this out to the Court, but the ground having now been pointed out, and another document having been previously admitted to the Court on similar grounds, I tender the whole of this voucher, which has Mr. Henderson's signature at the bottom of it.

The Attorney-General:—The Court having yesterday admitted a similar document, of course I will only formally object, and perhaps a note will be taken of that formal objection.

Lieutenant-Colonel George John Airey, N.S.W. Artillery, being recalled by the Court, is reminded of his former oath, and asked the following questions through the Court:—

490. Were you in command of the Permanent Artillery? Yes, for about five years.
491. What years were they? From 1871 to 1876.
492. Was there any custom in vogue then as to men receiving compensation when their clothing was passed by the officer? Speaking from memory, I am sure there was.
493. How was the compensation received in those years? I am speaking from memory, and I think arrangements were made by the men themselves for the best part of that time. There were very few cases then.
494. I don't want to know whether there were very few or many, but I want to know about this system? Speaking from memory, I think the men made their own arrangements with the contractor.
495. Do you know how,—in what way? They got an order for a suit of clothes, or whatever the article may be, and they got the price of the article from the contractor, less the contractor's profit.
496. The compensation would be in lieu of clothes? Yes.
497. And yet you say he would get an order for a suit of clothes? For the part of the clothing that he was allowed compensation for, and receive the price of the article, less so much, whatever the contractor chose to deduct.
498. Whatever he chose to deduct? Well, not hardly whatever he chose to deduct, but whatever his profit would have been if he had supplied the clothes.

499. So that, supposing it was a tunic, and the price of a tunic was £3, the man would get an order, take it to the contractor, and the contractor would give him money instead of clothes (the price of the tunic), deducting and keeping for himself that which would have been his profit had the tunic been supplied? Yes.

500. But you cannot say what the deduction would have been? No.

501. Did that custom exist the whole of the time? That I am unable to say.

502. Have you an opinion about it? During the latter years it might have been paid through the quarter-master sergeant of the Battery, but I have no official record.

503. Who was the quarter-master sergeant? Sergeant Lannigan.

504. Instead of the contractor paying the man that, I believe a certain sum would be handed over by the contractor to the quarter-master sergeant of the battery and he would hand over the money. So that during one portion of the time the contractor would pay the man and deduct his profit, and during the latter part of the time he would hand it over to the quarter-master sergeant of the battery, also keeping back his profit—is that what you mean? Yes.

By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—

505. Do you know Captain Fitzsimons of the Local Force? Yes.

506. Where is he? He is dead.

507. Do you remember going at any time with him to General Richardson, when he was Colonel Richardson, and asking him what arrangements he should make in future about the compensation money with the men? I have no recollection about it, although I might have done.

508. During the last two or three years, how have men received their compensation money. What method has been adopted? The list of those men (who are granted compensation by the officers of the battery) are sent in to the Commanding Officer of the Artillery. He approves of it, and the list is then sent on to the brigade quarter-master sergeant, when the amounts due to the men are sent back to me and the money paid to me by Mr. Webster.

509. Yes, but you are leaving the contractor out. Now I want you to explain how the money reaches your hand. First of all you would send a list in of men who were entitled to compensation, is not that so? Yes.

510. And you would deduct from the price of the clothes 26½ per cent. would you not? I have nothing at all to do with it until the list is sent back from the office.

511. But is not the paper signed by you? It is.

512. You see this paper, it is in evidence No. 1—that is signed by you, is it not? Yes.

513. You see there the name of Walsh? Yes.

514. He was entitled to compensation for tunic and trousers, the cost of which, less the 26½ per cent., is £4 2s. 6d.? I see.

515. Now you see your name at the bottom? Yes.

516. Can you say what is the meaning of that column less 26½ per cent.? That is the rate of contract.

517. Would the total cost of tunic and the trousers be £4 2s. 6d.? That is the contract price.

518. That is deducting 26½ per cent.? Yes. At least that is how I understand it.

519. Two-thirds of that you showed to be £2 15s. 7d.? Yes.

520. After you have sent in your list the Colonel approves of it, and what is the next thing done? It is returned to me with those figures on.

521. But were not the figures on when you sent the list in? Yes; but they have all been altered.

522. All been altered? Well, a great many of them.

523. Is there any alteration at all on the first page? Not on the first page.

524. In the second page I see there are alterations? You said so yourself.

525. Were those alterations made after that list went from you? Yes.

526. And the list was returned to you with the alterations in it? I think so.

527. Very well now, what was the next step? A fair copy was made of all that with the alterations.

528. Who got the money? I cannot say.

529. Can you swear that you cannot say? I have nothing to do with that.

530. The President:—Do you understand the question you were asked—It was this—Who got the money? I got the money from Mr. Webster.

531. The Attorney-General:—When you are saying that you don't know how the money was got from the Treasury, you are falling back upon your own knowledge? Yes; I was.

532. Didn't you know all along that the contractor used for years to draw from the Treasury, deducting one-third, and handing the balance to Webster? He drew the money for the clothing.

533. Don't you know that as far as this compensation list is concerned the contractor would send in a voucher as if he had delivered all the goods, draw the money, keep one-third himself, and send two-thirds on to Webster? I don't know anything about it of my own knowledge.

Mr. Heydon objected to witness being further pressed upon that point; observing that the contractor had gone up to the Treasury and signed the vouchers, so that his learned friend could produce those documents if he liked. He would not wish to restrict his learned friend in the matter if it did not appear that it was proved in a much more satisfactory way.

The President:—I think I understand that the Attorney-General's examination is not in regard to any documents but simply whether he was aware of the contractor doing a certain thing.

Mr. Heydon:—I submit that it is only hearsay evidence and that my learned friend has no right to obtain it.

The President:—The Court are of opinion that the evidence is admissible as far as custom is concerned.

534. The Attorney-General:—Now, Colonel Airey, have you not known for years that the custom has been when these compensation lists are sent for, the contractor sends in a voucher, as if he had supplied the goods, for him to be paid in full, to deduct and keep for himself one-third, and then to hand over two-thirds to Webster for distribution to the men by you? I do not know at all of my own knowledge.

535. Never mind. Didn't you know as a matter of fact? I have said that I did not know it of my own knowledge, and I really must appeal to the protection of the Court.

536. The President:—You have seen this compensation list. It is signed by you. When you made it out, did you know what the two-thirds at the bottom of that column referred to? Yes.

537. Did you know what became of the other one-third? Of my own knowledge I did not.
538. Have you ever asked—have you ever made any inquiry? I have been told that it goes to the contractor.
539. So that you were aware that it was not thrown into the sea? My belief was that it went to the contractor.
540. The Attorney-General:—To make the matter a little more definite, I propose now to ask you this—Did you say, when giving your evidence before the Court of Inquiry at the Victoria Barracks, “When forwarding claims for compensation for annual issue of clothing, I satisfy myself that the claimants are in possession of two sets of articles for which they claim compensation, which will do for guards and review order, and that they are in such good condition as to warrant the belief that they will last in good order till the next annual issue. I cannot say that I ever remember the case of a man claiming compensation who has served a term of imprisonment or been a long while in hospital by vice. The usual claimants are the non-commissioned officers and men who are struck off for some particular duty. This, of course, does not refer to the large compensation list of 1886 to 1887.” What does that mean? It is a certain list of compensation sent in in lieu of clothing not having been supplied. It is paid by the Government.
541. Then is that a different compensation list from this? Yes. It is a different thing altogether.
542. Do you remember how it was that that exceptional list arose? It arose through the contractor failing to supply his clothing for seven months.
543. That compensation list, as far as we know, has not reached the Court in any form? No.
544. So that there is another compensation list—a large one about which we have heard nothing? Yes.
545. Now, then, you go on to say this: “When the list is finally approved I receive the compensation allowance. About two-thirds value of each article is paid by the contractor to the brigade quartermaster-sergeant, who hands me the money, and I take the men’s receipts for it.” You said that? Yes.
546. Remembering what I have read to you from there, and remembering what you have said to-day, were you not perfectly well aware that one-third was always kept back by the contractor? I did not know it of my own knowledge.
547. Never mind of your own knowledge—were you not aware that it was the custom of the contractor to keep back one-third? I believe it is.
548. By-the-by, was not Mr. Webster paymaster to you? He was battery pay and quarter-master sergeant.
549. For how long? About four years.
550. Had he money to deal with then? Yes.
551. And stores and clothing? Yes.
552. And during that time what character did he bear as an honorable man? A thoroughly good character, and I have never found the slightest fault.
553. Can you tell me what those four years were? I believe they were from 1876 to 1880.
554. Was he your quarter-master whilst you were in command of the regiment? No.
555. But after you had command of the regiment? Yes.
556. Mr. Heydon:—Do you know of your own knowledge whether the one-third (the extra one-third) was got from the Treasury at all, or whether only the two-thirds that was required for the men was got from the Treasury? I do not know of my own knowledge.
557. All you knew of your own knowledge, as I understand, was that your men were entitled to get two-thirds of the contract price for clothes that you considered good enough to last for another year, and that you got two-thirds from the brigade quarter-master sergeant?
- The Attorney-General*:—I object to this. I submit we had nothing whatever to do about Colonel Airey’s opinion whether the contractor got this money or not. But what I want to prove is that the contractor was in the habit of getting this money with the tacit approval of the military authorities.
- Mr. Heydon*:—It is not on that ground at all that I ask the question. My learned friend has got from the witness that he understood that the contractor got one-third of the cost of the garments and paid to the men two-thirds, and he is going to rely upon that as proving that the custom existed.
- The President*:—It is only the witness’s belief that the Attorney-General was trying to get from Colonel Airey.
- Mr. Heydon*:—My learned friend will rely upon the fact that the officers knew that the contractor retained one-third, and I want to prove that whilst they knew that he retained one-third they thought that he was entitled to do so.
- The President*:—The Court are of opinion that the matter you have just mentioned, as trying to get from the witness, has been already got from three previous witnesses. Both Mr. Whitehouse and Mr. Henderson have admitted that this was a money transaction under the name of clothing, that no clothing was actually supplied for this money. The Court knows very well that Mr. Henderson was not entitled to this money. I will put the question in this manner: We will ask the witness whether he was aware of this portion being improperly retained by the contractor, and if so, whether he made any official report to his superior officers?
558. The President.] Reverting to your belief that one-third was retained by the contractor, was it your belief that this portion was being improperly retained? I really cannot answer that question; I know that it has been the custom to pay the men the two-thirds.
559. Did you think it right that the contractor should retain one-third? Yes; but as I think I said in my evidence before, when this was first done, the contractor insisted upon the profits that he would have made if he had supplied the garments.
560. Were you present at a Board held at the Victoria Barracks to inspect the clothing for 1887? I have been on several Clothing Boards, but cannot remember whether I was on that one or not.
561. Have you any knowledge whatever of the performance of the contracts made for the supply of clothing? No.
562. You don’t know what the contractor’s rights were then under the contract? No.
563. You don’t know whether under the terms of the contract he would be entitled to this one-third? No.
564. Do you know what became of the clothing upon which this compensation was paid? I presume it was never made.
565. Or imported as the case may be? I know nothing about it being imported.

566-7. For all that you know, it was made here? That I cannot say; it was supplied by the contractor, and where he got it from I don't know.

568. And your understanding was that it was never made? My understanding was that if there was compensation for one suit, there would be one suit less.

569. According to the custom that prevailed in your time, you say that the men got an order on the contractor for a suit of clothes?

The Attorney-General:—During a portion of the time?

Yes, during that time. Taking what they were entitled to to be five garments, they got an order upon the contractor to supply them with those five garments, or any portion of them, and upon that order they could make any arrangement they liked—virtually selling the order to him.

570. And during the latter portion of your time the same thing was done, but it was done through the battery quarter-master sergeant? Yes.

Examined by the Judge-Advocate:—

571. Do you know anything about the contract of Henderson? No.

572. You don't know the number of garments that he was entitled to supply? No.

573. Do you know whether, if the men had not asked for compensation, he was entitled to supply the clothes for which compensation was given or not? No, I do not.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

No. 624 Master-gunner Lynch, N.S.W. Artillery, being duly sworn, was examined by the prosecutor, and said:—

I am in the Artillery and attached to the staff at present; the name there, fourth from the bottom, is my signature; I believe I must have received that sum (£2 13s. 9d.) opposite my name, as my signature is there; I do not remember the occasion exactly; it is in the compensation list; assuming that I received it, as far as I remember, it was for one tunic and one Norfolk jacket; that agrees with the list; I do not remember where I received the money; I did not say that I received this what is mentioned here for the tunic and Norfolk jacket, but I do know that I received compensation for these two articles; I do not remember the amount, and I do not remember where I received it; I remember being up at Middle Head at one time; I was then away from my battery attached to the School of Gunnery, having been previously attached to Battery No. 3; I cannot say at this distance of time whether it was there that I received this money for compensation, although I remember preparing the things for examination out there, but I cannot say whether I got the money out there.

The Attorney-General:—I do not know whether the Court has noticed an erasure in the amount. It now appears to be £2 13s. 5d.

574. The President:—Yes, the Court has noticed that. Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—I do, sir.

575. The Attorney-General:—I suppose you would not know the contractor's price for the tunic? No, sir.

The President:—£4 10s. complete.

The Attorney-General:—And a Norfolk jacket is how much?

The President:—19s.

576. The Attorney-General:—Can you say whether it was a Norfolk jacket or a patrol jacket?

Witness:—To the best of my belief it was a Norfolk jacket.

577. Will you take upon yourself to say that it was not a patrol jacket? No; I would not.

578. Although, to the best of your belief, you think it was a Norfolk jacket? Yes.

579. Is that your signature? Yes, sir.

580. Now just read that paper and tell me positively whether it was a patrol jacket or a Norfolk jacket for which you got compensation? I still believe that it was a Norfolk jacket, sir.

581. Did you read this paper before you signed it? I cannot say.

582. Try and remember whether you did read it or not? My signature is there right enough, sir, but I have no distinct recollection of the occasion of signing it.

583. And therefore you cannot recollect whether you read it or not? No, sir; most likely I signed it without reading it.

584. The Attorney-General (to the Court):—Is that £4 10s. after deducting the 26½ per cent?

The President:—£4 10s. is the original price.

585. The Attorney-General:—And so you seem to have received from the commanding officer £2 13s. 5d. and from the brigade quarter-master sergeant, £4 1s. 10d? It appears so from this signature. I do not say that I did so.

586. Here is your signature—that is all? Yes, sir.

587. Do you know this gentleman here, Mr. Nathan? Yes, sir.

588. Did you tell him that you were quite sure you would not have given this receipt to Webster if you had not received the money from him? I don't remember telling him that in those words.

589. Will you swear that you did not? I will swear that I did not say those exact words.

590. Well, but in substance, didn't you say to Mr. Nathan that you were quite sure you would not have given to Webster the receipt unless you had received the money from him? I did not say those exact words; I will tell you what words I did use.

591. Did you say this to Mr. Nathan:—"I am quite sure I would not have given Webster this receipt unless I had received the money from him"? No, sir; not in those words.

592. What did you say? He said to me, "You are quite sure that you would not have signed that receipt unless Webster had given you the money," and I said, "I was not in the habit of signing receipts unless I received the money."

593. Did Mr. Nathan say, "You are quite sure," or did he say, "Are you quite sure"? I think he said, "You are quite sure."

594. Didn't you tell Colonel Roberts substantially the same thing when he asked you about it? I don't know.

595. Have you not had a conversation with Colonel Roberts about it? Yes, sir.

596.

596. Colonel Roberts asked you whether you had not received £4 1s. 10d. from Webster? No, he did not.
597. Did not he ask you whether you had received money from Webster? No sir, he did not.
598. Was not this very receipt produced and shown to you either by, or in the presence of, Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage? I believe it is the same receipt, but I did not read it; therefore I cannot say whether it was the same paper or not, although I believe it is.
599. Was not this receipt produced to you either in the presence of or by Colonel Roberts? I cannot say, because I do not know; my signature was shown to me; I do not know whether it was that paper or not; I think it was that paper.
600. What were you asked? I was asked if that was my signature.
601. And what did you say? I replied "Yes."
602. Did you make any suggestion that you had not received the money? No sir.
603. Well, I suppose also I may take it that your observation just now to the effect that you are not in the habit of signing receipts unless you get the money applied to that particular receipt for £2 13s. 5d.? No, certainly not.
604. Do you mean to say that you may have given this receipt for £2 13s. 5d. to the officer, and the officer may still not have paid you the money? No.
- The President*:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon:—Yes, sir.
605. Mr. Heydon: Have you any recollection whatever of signing this document? No sir.
606. Can you tell me whose handwriting the body of it is in? I do not recognize the writing.
607. Is your mind a perfect blank as far as the body of the document is concerned? I do not remember anything about it.
608. You have said in your evidence, I think, that you often sign sheets with nothing on; how does that come about;—will you sign the abstract sheets at the end of the month when there are no returns upon them? I signed the clothing-book.
609. Do you know whose clothing-book it is? I think it is the clothing-book of the battery office.
610. Is this your signature, and are those your initials in this book? Yes sir.
611. So you initialled for all garments, whether you received compensation for them or obtained the garments themselves? I believe I did.
612. Now, will you be kind enough to tell me whether these are your initials in this book? I would not swear that they were.
613. What is your belief from the appearance of them? The Attorney-General: Do not answer that, please.
614. The President:—What is the book that you are reading from now, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon:—It is the clothing-book.
615. The President:—But not the one before the Court? Mr. Heydon:—No, it is another one. It is a clothing-book which I shall prove was kept by the prisoner.
616. To the witness: Looking at those initials Lynch, have you any belief about them? No sir, and I will tell you the reason why. Some time ago I varied the pen that I wrote with. Now I write with a "J" pen, and it has made a difference in my handwriting.
617. Comparing them with this, do you believe that they are your initials? As far as I can answer I have already answered.
618. You have no belief either one way or the other? No; they may be my initials or they may not, and I can say no more about it.
619. You say you do not remember anything at all about this receipt; can you tell me whether, in the year 1887, you received your compensation twice over or not? I do not believe I did sir. I can only remember having compensation once.
620. And you have said that you believe that it was for a tunic and Norfolk jacket? I believe so sir.
621. I suppose that you have a pretty good idea of what your compensation ought to be? No sir, I never bother.
622. Then if your proper compensation was (say) £4 1s. 10d., you would not know that you were being short paid if you got £2 13s. 5d.? No; if I got the money I would be quite satisfied. I would not trouble to find out.
623. But I suppose you know that you get more compensation if your Norfolk jacket is good for another year than if your serge trousers are good for another year? Yes sir. But what I mean to say is, I never bother about the scale. Whatever other people were getting I should be satisfied with.
624. And you know that you got more for a patrol than for a Norfolk jacket? Yes.
625. How long had you been a sergeant in 1887? Between four and five years.
626. And how long have you been in the force? Ten years and two months.
627. And when your clothing was passed for compensation you had no idea what your compensation would be? No sir, not then, although I have now.
628. Suppose your proper compensation would be £5 or £6, it would not have occurred to you that you were being improperly dealt with if you got £2 paid to you? Yes.
629. Supposing your proper compensation was £5, would you have noticed that something was wrong if you only got £2 10s.? I should think so.
630. You have some idea as to what was your proper compensation then? No, I cannot say I had.
631. If your whole suit was good for another year you would have been satisfied with £2? No; that would strike me as being small.
632. I should have thought that a man would have taken some little interest in the amount he receives for his clothes, but you say you never did? No sir.
633. And you took what was given to you as being all right? Yes sir.
634. And signed what was put before you as being all right? Well, my signature is there.
635. But I suppose if you took no interest in the matter you would sign for whatever was put before you? Yes. It was the only time I ever had compensation money.
636. The President:—What do you mean by "Yes"? Well, if that amount was placed before me I should take it as correct and sign it, as I did not take any trouble in the matter. I would trust in those who placed the amount before me.
637. Mr. Heydon:—Then if the quartermaster-sergeant placed a document before you and said the amounts were all right you would sign them? I would sir.

638. You don't know whose handwriting is this, but I would ask you whether the body of it is in your own handwriting. [Document referred to was one previously shown to the witness by the Attorney-General.] No, sir.

639. Then I understand you were asked by my learned friend that you said to Mr. Nathan that you would not have signed that document if you had not got the money, and it now turns out that Mr. Nathan said to you, "You would not have signed the document unless you had received the money." It was not you who said it; it was he who said it?—Yes.

640. And so, when Mr. Nathan suggested to you that you were not in the habit of signing documents without receiving the money, you said, "No, you were not"?—Yes.

641. You were not subpoenaed by Mr. Nathan, were you?—No, sir.

642. And yet Mr. Nathan questioned you about this matter, although you were not subpoenaed by him?

The Attorney General:—I am told that it is in orders somewhere that we intended calling him as a witness.

The Prosecutor:—There is no doubt that you did give notice of your intention to call Lynch.

The President:—They are not subpoenaed; they are ordered to attend for the defence. I may just say that it is the custom in regiments or in batteries, that are well conducted, that the soldier has implicit confidence in his officer, and whatever he was asked to sign he would not question it. He would sign any document that was put before him, trusting that his officer was acting fairly by him; and, certainly, unless he saw any great cause, he would not cavil at the amount. If he was told that he was to receive 18s. he would say, "Very well, sir," and he would sign for it. I do not suppose that in any well conducted regiment or battery it would enter into the head of a soldier to make the calculations for himself.

Examined by the Court:—

643. In your previous examination you have admitted that that was your signature to the amount of £4 1s. 10d. I want to know whether you ever received that money from Webster?—I do not know.

644. You do not remember ever having received such a sum of money from Webster?—No, sir; that is to say, I do not know whether I received it or not.

645. Do you keep any private accounts?—No, sir; none.

646. You are a married man now, are you not?—Yes, sir.

647. And do you mean to say that a large sum like that, £4 1s. 10d., would escape your memory?—I was not a married man then, sir.

648. Well, I should have thought it would have made some difference?—It did make some difference; but I frequently receive money from the Brigade Quarter-master Sergeant.

649. Do you remember receiving any money for compensation for clothing from Middle Head from the officer there?—No, sir.

650. When your clothes were examined by the officer, what garments did you submit for inspection?—I believe it was a tunic and Norfolk jacket.

651. Those are the only two garments that you exhibited as wishing to claim compensation for?—As far as I remember, sir.

The witness, at the conclusion of his examination, states that he does not know that the compensation for a Norfolk would be greater than for a pair of serge trousers—this in correction of what he had stated previously.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81b. The witness withdraws.

Lieutenant-Colonel George John Airey, New South Wales Artillery, is recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Court:—

652. Does that refresh your memory at all about the Clothing Board of 1887? Yes sir.

653. Were the garments counted? Yes.

654. And you certified them as correct as regards both number and quality? Yes.

655. What had you to go by us to quality? A sealed pattern.

656. And you counted the numbers? Yes.

657. Are you prepared to swear that the numbers were correctly counted? Yes.

658. Now I want to know when a man asks in that year for compensation for clothing,—was it compensation in lieu of that clothing that you counted over? That I cannot say.

659. Do you know whether if a man was granted compensation his clothes would remain in store? I cannot say.

660. Do you understand my question? I understand your question, but I cannot say. All I know is that a certain number of articles are brought before the Board and we certify to their quantity and quality.

661. Then you cannot answer my question as to whether the clothing that a man receives compensation for remains in the store? I do not know.

At 12:50 p.m. the Court adjourned until 2 p.m. the same day. At 2 o'clock the same day the Court re-assembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The same members as before.

Lieutenant-Colonel George John Airey, New South Wales Artillery, appearing again before the Court, is reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Court:—

Witness:—There is one thing I should like to correct;—my signature to that sheet of compensation is only a signature to certify that I have paid those amounts.

662. After the counting of the 1887 clothing, and ascertaining that it was correct in number and quality according to the vouchers, with whom was that clothing left? With the brigade quarter-master-sergeant.

663. Do you know that of your own knowledge? Yes.

664. Left in his charge? Yes.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81b.

The witness withdraws.

No. 1,425. Gunner Thomas Bailey, No. 2 Battery, New South Wales Artillery, having been called, and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and says :—

This signature on the list that I have in my hand is like my writing, but the "T" is not like the way I put it. The "Bailey" is right enough. Now I see that the "e" is out in "Bailey." It is spelt "Baily" here; it should be "B-a-i-l-e-y." Still I write like that when I am in a hurry sometimes. I believe it is my signature written in a hurry. I see 9s. 4d opposite my name. I received some money, but cannot how much it was. I received it when I was down at Middle Head. I cannot from memory say how much it was. It was a small sum of money; it was not a pound. I received that money for compensation money for a Norfolk jacket. I cannot say whether those are my initials or not. In 1887 we initialled for our clothes. The signature on the book that is in the evidence is something like my writing, and the initials are something like my initials. The signature is something like my writing. I signed for my clothing in the year 1887. I signed in a book in the battery quartermaster's store. I cannot say whether it was Quartermaster M'Millan's book or Mr. Webster's book. I initialled for my clothes in the same book. I do not remember initialling for my clothes in any other book than Quartermaster M'Millan's. Looking at those initials there I cannot tell you whether I ever initialled for my clothes in Mr. Webster's book. I cannot recollect initialling for my clothes in any other book than Quartermaster M'Millan's, excepting my small book. I cannot remember whether I ever initialled for signature in more than one book. I know that I used to sign when I received my clothes. Seeing my my clothes in one of those books and my initials in another book, I cannot remember whether I initialled for my garments in more than one book. I remember signing for them, and that is all.

The Attorney-General:—Do I understand you to say that all books are admissible as evidence, and everything in them without any further proof?

The President:—This book of Mr. Webster's we cannot receive unless it is properly certified to. If they are produced by the officers-in-charge of them, and certified by them as being correct, then we receive them.

665. Do you wish to cross-examine the witness Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—Yes sir.

666. The Attorney-General:—What is your christian-name to begin with? "Thomas."

667. Did you say what you got compensation for? A Norfolk jacket.

668. Do you know who paid you that 9s. 4d.? I believe it was Mr. Bridges.

669. But have you any recollection about it? I believe it was Mr. Bridges.

670. Do you think you can write your name for me now 'Bailey' without much bother? Yes, sir.

671. Well, would you mind doing it? No, sir.

[Witness writes his name. In the first instance at leisure, and afterwards as he would sign in a hurry, and the names are handed in numbered exhibit 3t, signed by the President and attached to proceedings.]

672. You received compensation for one Norfolk jacket? Yes, sir.

673. Do you know the price of a Norfolk jacket? No, sir.

674. They gave you 9s. 4d. and you took it? Yes; you take what is coming to you.

The President:—Would you like to re-examine the witness Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon:—Yes, sir.

Re-examined by the prosecution:—

675. Mr. Heydon:—You say it was Mr. Bridges who paid you the money? Yes, sir.

676. Do you remember at the time the money was paid to you whether you signed for it? Oh, yes, sir; you always sign for the money.

677. By the Court:—Did you sign in the presence of Lieutenant Bridges? Yes, sir.

678. Mr. Heydon:—And he paid you the money? Yes, sir.

His evidence is read over to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

Mr. Heydon:—I tender a number of vouchers for the year 1886; all are marked as correct by the prisoner. (Exhibit 85 handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.)

Lieutenant and Quartermaster James Little, Permanent Staff, having been called and duly sworn, said :—

I am a Quartermaster on the General Staff. I have had occasion to compare certain quantities that appeared in the compensation list for 1887 with the compensation vouchers for the same year. Eighty-three tunics are shown in the pay voucher (exhibit 21). This document makes five tunics in excess of those mentioned in the compensation list. In making up that pay voucher the tunics have been put down five in excess, and I make it six cloth trousers in excess in the voucher, four Norfolk jackets, five jumpers, five serge trousers, one patrol jacket. £385 15s 6d. is the total value on the compensation list, less 26½ per cent., and the amount appearing in the pay voucher is £344 8s. 10d. The difference is £15 13s. 4d. So that it comes to this—on the pay voucher both the clothing and the value of the clothing are in excess. That voucher has been marked as correct and initialled by Mr. Webster. I should say that it is the duty of the Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, before initialling that voucher as correct, to see that it was correct.

679. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—No, sir; I have nothing to ask him.

Examined by the Court:—

680. Were you in the Imperial Service before you joined the Service here? I was, sir.

681. Then you can speak from your own knowledge of the way in which the duties of quartermaster-sergeants were conducted in the Imperial Service? Yes; I was in the quartermasters department for some time.

682. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—In taking the value of No. 3 Battery's compensation list you have assumed the additions to be correct? Yes.

His evidence is read over to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws. The Court adjourns at 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock on the following morning.

The Court re-assembled pursuant to adjournment at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, the 13th March.

Present: The same members as before.

Lieutenant William Throsby Bridges of the New South Wales Artillery being called and duly sworn said: I paid some of the men appearing in that list (Compensation List of No. 3 Battery), but not all of them. I believe I paid Sergeant Lynch and Gunner Bailey. They were in the District at the time, but I cannot swear that I recollect handing them any money. I should say that the signatures to that document are genuine signatures. When I paid the men they used to sign for the money in my presence. The money was sent out to me for the purpose of paying the men who were in the District. This document is in my handwriting. Still I cannot tell who the men were that I did not pay, excepting Dalton who did not get any pay at all. It was my duty to see that the men there did get paid; as far as I remember I paid all the men who were in the District personally. I refer to the men who were out at Middle Head as the men in the District, and the men whom I paid affixed their own signatures as receipts for the money.

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the Defence:—

683. The Attorney General:—Why didn't you pay Dalton? Witness: He refused to take the money. He said it was not enough.

684. Do you know whether he got more or not? No; he didn't get anything at all. He was discharged immediately afterwards.

685. Do you know where the compensation money comes from? As far as I know it comes from the officer commanding the battery.

686. You mean you don't know anything more of your own knowledge? Yes, that is what I mean.

687. Do you know as a matter of custom from whom the money comes? I expect that the officer commanding the battery gets it from the Paymaster.

688. Well you know it comes from the Treasury in the first instance, but do you know who gets it from the Treasury; I don't mean from your own knowledge now. It is the common talk in the force, is it not, that the men get two-thirds and the contractor one-third? It is generally known that the men get two-thirds and the contractor one-third.

689. How long have you been in the force? Nearly four years.

690. And that is a common talk in the force? Yes.

691. It has been common talk in the force for the contractor to get one-third and the men two-thirds? Yes.

Re-examined by the Prosecution:—

692. Do you mean that it has been the common talk in the force that the contractor gets the money wrongfully?

The Attorney-General objected to the question, saying that he did not wish to show by his case that it had been the custom of the contractor to receive the money improperly.

Mr. Heydon:—I submit that the whole point here is, as to whether this has been done properly or improperly—the whole gist of the thing is whether this custom was known to be an improper or proper question. What the prisoner here is charged with was obtaining money improperly from the Government in a manner which amounted to fraud on the Government. He assisted in it, and never informed his superior officers as to what was going on. Now my learned friend is trying to argue, that because everybody knew that the contractor got third, that Webster was justified in allowing the contractor to get this one-third when he knew that he was getting it improperly; surely the mere knowledge of some other person than the contractor was getting one-third cannot be justification of Webster's action, is he to know that the contractor was getting it improperly. It seems to me that my learned friend is trying to show that the officers of the force knew that this custom had existed for years.

The Attorney-General:—I am not trying to show anything of the kind; I admit frankly that none of the officers of the Force had any knowledge that any money was being paid improperly to the contractor, and when I use that word improperly I mean illegally. My case all through is that as far as the system is concerned, although it is one that would not bear investigation, still, it has been a system which has not in any sense partaken of fraud and which has, at the same time, existed for a number of years; and yet my learned friend asks this witness (an officer in the artillery) whether he, or any officer in the artillery, knew that an improper system was going on.

The President:—The Court are of opinion that the question cannot be asked in the terms you put it, including the word wrongfully; if you can ask it in any other way, Mr. Heydon, not implying a knowledge of fraud to the witness then it would be admissible.

693. Mr. Heydon:—Was this matter that you speak of, that the men got two-thirds and the contractor one-third, a topic of conversation? Witness: I don't know that it was ever a matter of conversation; I got it from my Sergeant-major in the first instance.

694. And did he go into the whole thing? Explain how the whole thing was managed? Well, when I spoke to him about it he told me that the men only got two-thirds and that the contractor got one-third.

695. But I don't suppose he told you what the contractor did for the one-third? No.

696. And I don't suppose those were matters formed a topic of general conversation? Well they didn't interest me much.

697. Was this the understanding in the force that the contractor drew money from the Treasury as for goods supplied, which goods he never supplied at all? I never heard anything about it.

698. Then were you aware at all (in this way of conversation that you speak of) what value the contractor gave for the one-third? No.

The Attorney-General objected to the question on the ground that it was a form of question that was calculated to leave a false impression in the mind of the Court when it had been admitted again and again that the contractors gave no value at all for the one-third.

Mr. Heydon:—Of course my learned friend is willing to admit that the contractor got one-third and gave no value for it because he cannot help admitting it; but what I want to get out of the witness is whether the officers were aware of the fact that the contractor was getting this one-third for nothing.

The President:—The Court are of opinion that the question can be asked.

[Objection disallowed.]

699. Mr. Heydon to witness:—I think you said that you did not know what value the contractor gave for this one-third? No.

700. Were you not aware that compensation was given in lieu of clothing, and that when compensation was allowed in lieu of clothing that no clothing at all was supplied? If a man got compensation for a tunic I knew that he didn't get the tunic as well; but whether the contractor supplied the Government with the tunic or not I did not know.

701. If the contractor supplied the tunic, would not the contractor have got the whole three-thirds and not the one-third?

The President:—The contract shows that. Several questions are being asked the present witness which the Court has judicial knowledge of, and which he would not be likely to know anything about.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Eden, General Staff, is recalled, is reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Court:—

702. Will you look through the proceedings of the Board of Inquiry of which you were the President, and tell me when it began sitting? On the 26th of June last year.

703. And on what day was it finally concluded? On the 7th December.

704. We have had it from you that the prisoner was frequently before that Court to give evidence? Yes.

705. Was he requested to explain an apparent deficiency of £9 12s. 2d.? No explanation reached me about it, except what is in these proceedings.

706. Did he say anything about having paid Lynch, Loveless, or Bailey, any portion of the £9 12s. 2d.? I recollect nothing of the sort.

707. Since the Board of Inquiry concluded its sittings have you received from him any statement that he found out that he had paid a portion of this money to Lynch and Loveless? No, sir.

708. Do you know whose handwriting the body of this document is in? I should say Mr. Webster's; but I cannot swear to it.

The Attorney-General:—We have had Colonel Eden examined at considerable length, and does the Court think it right that he should be called by my learned friend for the sake of propping up his case? It will extend the proceedings to an indefinite time if witnesses are to be recalled in this way.

Mr. Heydon:—I restricted my examination of Colonel Eden before to certain charges, in order that the case might not be more complicated than possible. I am not calling Colonel Eden now in reply to my learned friend's cross-examination, and he is mistaken if he thinks that I require to do it in order to prop up my case. This resolve of mine has not been influenced in any way by facts that my learned friend has brought out.

The Attorney-General:—I maintain that it is a most dangerous thing to do. If my learned friend is going to pursue this course it may be necessary for me to recall all the witnesses that have been examined before the Court, in order to get rid of some of the evidence that Colonel Eden is giving now.

Mr. Heydon:—I am adopting this course in order if possible to shorten the proceedings.

[The Court is cleared.]

Upon the re-opening of the Court the President said:—I should like to state, for the information of the Court, that previously to the assembly of the first Court, as I may call it—the one that was first assembled—on being appointed President and having read over the charges and the summary of evidence, I, seeing that it would be likely to be a very long and serious case, directed the Assistant-Judge Advocate, Major Lassetter, to inform the prisoner's Counsel and his Attorney of the prisoner's right to claim to be tried on each separate charge separately, by which the Court would come to a finding on the separate charges. I did that, and mentioned my authority for it. It appeared to me that if the prisoner had taken advantage of what I had pointed out that the Court would have tried him upon one distinct charge and come to a finding on that charge. The proceedings then might have been very much shortened, and it would not have been necessary perhaps to have gone on with any of the other charges mentioned on this long charge sheet. But as we have gone on so long with the general charge sheet, without intimation from the prisoner that he wished to be tried upon each charge separately, which should have been done before pleading, the only way upon which we can go on is for the charges to be put before the Court in the manner that has been done now. By rule 84, on page 638, a witness can be recalled at any time by the Court, or by the request of either Counsel, by leave of the Court, before the second address for the prisoner; therefore the Court have come to the conclusion that witnesses can be recalled by either Counsel, provided that no question is asked upon charges that have been already dealt with. The Court wish the proceedings to go on as quickly as possible; but it will be much easier for them to form a judgment of the case if they have as much knowledge of it as can be placed at their disposal; therefore the Court will allow Mr. Heydon to call Colonel Eden.

The Attorney-General:—We were perfectly well aware that the Court did make that suggestion to the prisoner. We knew that we might have been tried upon each charge separately; but you see that it does not follow that if one charge had been decided in our favor the other charges would not have been proceeded with. Supposing the prisoner was tried separately on charge No. 1, and was acquitted upon that charge, it would have depended upon the prosecution whether we would have subsequently proceeded upon charge No. 2; and if he had been acquitted upon that charge, whether he should not have had to answer charge No. 3, and so on.

The President:—I think you have a wrong impression in that matter, Mr. Attorney-General. All the charges and their alternative charges could have been bracketted together in one charge, so that, instead of this long list of eleven charges, there really would have only been three or four.

The Attorney-General:—Yes; but supposing there were three charges, the prisoner would have had to answer each of them.

Examination by Mr. Heydon (through the Court) continued:—

709. Mr. Heydon:—Will you turn to page 120 of the proceedings before the Military Board of Inquiry of which you were President, and tell me whether the following questions were asked and answers given:—

Q. "Have you the statement ready regarding the deficiencies shown on the tables, of which you have copies, and which you promised to hand to the Board?" That question was asked of Mr. Webster, and the following answer given: "I have not. My reason for not furnishing it is that I have employed an actuary and a solicitor to thoroughly examine my books. Their examination is not completely concluded.

The

The solicitor has applied to the General, asking for extension of time for the actuary to give a correct report. This is all the explanation I can give." Q. "Where are your books?" A. "They have not left my office. Colonel Roberts recommended me to employ an actuary and a solicitor, the cost of whom I shall have to pay." Q. "You explained in your former evidence that your responsibility was not complete—in fact, it was not the same since your clerk had been furnished with a duplicate key of, and allowed to sleep in your store. To whom, then, did you first complain, and when and to whom did you first raise an objection to this arrangement, which you alleged reduced your responsibility for the store, previously admitted to be under your sole control?" A. "I never objected to this arrangement. Q. "Did you propose it?" A. "Yes, I did propose it—that he should have a duplicate key; that he could answer any question or give reference to any of the store books, and give any issue of clothing or necessaries during my absence. During my absence I have frequently found that things have been issued and not entered in the books. I have had to take steps afterwards to enter these issues." Q. "On the 15th instant, you said you had not made any proposition that anybody should have a duplicate key of the stores; but, now you have just admitted having made this proposition. To which statement are you going to adhere?" A. "I made no proposition. The proposition in the first place was made by the Adjutant, in order that during my absence he could refer to books, &c., in the brigade store. My statement made on the last assembly of the Board is the correct one." Q. "Considering your responsibility interfered with, why did you fail to make objection to this clerk sleeping in your store and the duplicate key arrangement?" A. "I failed to do that because I thought my clerk was an honorable and a trustworthy man. According to the Imperial Service, the stores are locked at night, the key given to the quartermaster." Q. "You think your clerk careless, you say; then why did you detain him?" A. "Simply because I should have to teach a new clerk, and thought it better to keep an old one not good enough, rather than go teaching a new one all the routine of my office. On several occasions I have spoken to Captain Savage about the carelessness of my clerk, this acting-Bombadier Loveless." On page 98 of the proceedings you will find the following questions put, and answers given by, the prisoner. Will you tell me whether this is what took place when he was called before you on that occasion? Q.—"What number of undermentioned garments were made from the list furnished by the Government during the period Sergeant Littleton has been master-tailor, viz, tunics, patrol-jackets, Norfolk jackets, jumpers, cloth trousers, and serge trousers?" A.—"I can tell by making it up from my books and the master-tailor's measurement book, and will produce it when the Board meets to take stock." That evidence was given on the 24th October, 1888, by the prisoner, and the previous evidence was given by him on the 19th November. Then on the 4th October the following evidence was given. Q.—"When was the last issue of part-worn clothing?" A.—"There has been none since 1886." Q.—"Take numbers received from the contractors 1886, 1887, and 1888?" A.—"Tunics, 1886 to 1887, from Riley Brothers, 543; cloth trousers, 517; serge ditto, 540; jumpers, 541; Norfolk jackets, 540; patrol jackets, 9. That is all received from Riley Brothers. This does not include staff, merely gunners and band, except the nine patrol jackets. The staff garments are not shown. In 1887 to 1888, from Henderson and Co., 396 tunics were received, 425 cloth trousers, 438 serge trousers, 417 serge jumpers, 8 patrol jackets for sergeants, 433 Norfolk jackets for all ranks. From 1888 to 1889, 8 patrol jackets for sergeants, 50 cloth trousers and 50 serge trousers." Q.—"By whose authority do Staff-Sergeants Woodward and Brakespere draw compensation annually for patrol jackets, not being warrant-officers?" A.—"They do not receive compensation except by the Colonel's authority. Lists for compensation are forwarded to the Colonel, and he gives the authority. In this year, 1889 to 1889, is the first time the compensation-list has gone to the General; previously Colonel Roberts' signature was sufficient. The reason the contract was sent to the General this time was because the contract, being only for a small number of trousers, cloth, and serge, the Colonel said the matter had better go to the General." Q.—"Has the contractor or the master-tailor, since 1886, forwarded the warrant-officers any articles of uniform?" A.—"I can only answer by reference to the master-tailor's books and to my slips attached to the master-tailor's vouchers." Q.—"How are the prices, mentioned in the compensation-list for these officers, higher than in the last contract referred to by you yesterday?" A.—"The amount of compensation was referred to the contractor to determine. He fixed the price for each garment as shown in the compensation-list. He sent his vouchers to Colonel Roberts, by whom they were forwarded to the Paymaster and submitted to the General, and, being sent to my Department for reply to certain questions, I therefore knew that they had been through these channels before the account was duly paid by the contractor. The amount, some £65 odd, was authorized by the Colonial Secretary to be paid, hence same amount for individuals has been submitted for the current year. There was a great deal of correspondence before these amounts were put through and got sanctioned." Q.—"Warrant-officer Griffiths is marked in the clothing roll of No. 3 battery for the year 1887 and 1888 for both compensation in lieu of and clothing, which is correct?" A.—"Compensation." Q.—"Can you explain why some issues of clothing have not usual initials and others appear to have a spurious initial attached as though in receipt, namely, to Sergeants Woodbridge and Taylor?" A.—"In case of any man belonging to a battery, the non-commissioned officer or other that is entitled to clothing the battery quarter-master sergeant is authorized to sign or initial for the clothing. If the man is present he signs for the stuff himself." Q.—"Can you show the Board where the clothing for staff sergeants and sergeants and the band clothing is entered in your books as received from the contractor for the current year and for 1886?" A.—"I cannot show this information in the books before the Board." Then on page 42, September 11th, 1888, there are these questions:—"Can you produce any previous extracts of receipts and issues to those now before the Board for 1887 and 1888?" A.—"Yes, in the old clothing book now before the Board. The balance of clothing for 1887 is shown in this book by proceedings of the usual Board 6th July, 1887." Q.—"How many tunics have you in store at the end of each clothing year, taking 1885, 1886, and 1887?" A.—"I cannot state because my books are not balanced until the Survey Board has been held, which has hitherto been held at uncertain and various dates, namely, 6th July, 1887, and 13th August, 1888. There was no survey previous to those dates. I may state that I have balanced my books on 31st March, 1886. There was no survey in that year." Q.—"Can you produce the result of balance arrived at by you on the 31st March?" A.—"It is shown in the detailed account—the battery quarter-master sergeant, or individual." Q.—"Can you furnish the Board with the detailed account from which the tailors' account vouched for by you have been compiled—that is, to the amount of £765 15s. 2d., dated 15th August, 1888?" A.—"I cannot produce them; particulars are shown in vouchers before the Board. The master tailor keeps no books except the measurement book." Q.—"Can you give balance of tunics on charge in store for commencement of the clothing years 1885, 1886, and 1883?" A.:—"I cannot for 1885, because that was the contingent year, and issues, &c., were so mixed that I could only for 1886 take what appeared on hand, namely, ten tunics. In 1887 there were 207 tunics in stock, and this year 136." Then on page 45, dated the 13th September, 1888. Q.:—"Can you explain the blue pencil marks apparently 'R' on an ink 'M' in the clothing books 1st November, 1887, for recruits, on 1st page of same?" A.:—"The pencil mark in blue is an 'M,' and the ink letter is the same inked in afterwards by order of the commanding officer of the Permanent Artillery by my clerk. Acting-Bombadier C. Loveless, Permanent Artillery, can explain." Q.:—"By whose authority has the item 'remaking' been introduced?" A.:—"The authority is quoted by garrison order of the 5th June, 1888, signed by J. A. Compton, Acting-Brigade Major." Q.:—"Why does the master tailor receive an all-round price for every suit of clothes issued, whether same requires alteration or not, and is this given in addition to extra charges for altering?" A.:—"When, as sometimes happens, a remake (charge 18s.) is made up of alterations to two or three garments, the master tailor does not get the stipulated 1s. besides the 18s. There is no charge between the 1s. and the 18s., and whether the term 'remake' is mentioned in garrison order, 5th June, 1883, or not; it has nevertheless been used in preferring vouchers, and acknowledged by the pay officers. About 75 per cent. of tunics of those sent are of such a bad kind that alterations are necessary to this extent." Q.:—"What supervision do battery officers exercise over fitting and alterations, and do they check the master tailor's charges?" A.:—"They do not check the master tailor's accounts. I prefer the master tailor's charges straight to the commanding officer, who naturally on my initial as correct, signs and forwards them to the pay office. A battery officer witnesses the marking by the master tailor for alteration, inspects to see if satisfactory. Any further alteration needed, the master tailor has to complete at his own expense." Q.:—"How is the material supplied to the master tailor's shop expended?" A.:—"It is supplied by Government, and is expended as directed by me. The whole of the master tailor's shop is under my sole charge and direction." Q.:—"How are articles supplied on purchase to officers and others recouped to Government?" A.:—"The accounts are forwarded, initialled by Colonel Roberts, or the commanding officer present, or the adjutant to the pay office. There is no money transactions on this item passes through me." Q.:—"How are the brigade quartermasters-sergeants' accounts checked?" A.:—"The only inspection and checks on my books is the annual general inspection, except from time to time. Occasionally Colonel Roberts has conducted a similar formal inspection, but this cannot be regarded as an inspection amounting to a check." On page 63 the following questions and answers given on the 18th September appear. Q.:—"Can you show the Board how the material used in making up certain garments for warrant officers has been accounted for?" A.:—"I cannot now, but with the permission of Colonel, can refer to the ledgers, &c., and supply information at the next meeting of the Board." Q.:—"Can you explain why a Norfolk jacket has been debited against Gunner Hoogh, No. 1 battery, for the present year, and compensation is about being claimed by him?" A.:—"This man was originally in for compensation, and then got permission from officer Commanding No. 1 battery to receive a Norfolk jacket. This Norfolk jacket was fitted to the man in the brigade store, and noted for alteration. I may state that with reference to this clothing, the compensation is not yet dealt with." Q.:—"Whose are the initials under this receipt of for a Norfolk jacket to Gunner Hoogh?" A.:—"They are those of Battery Quartermaster-sergeant J. Taylor—the erasure by knife was by me, and was necessitated by me for having to remove the 'C,' which was for compensation, in order to insert 1a for the issue of a Norfolk jacket for alteration." Q.:—"Did Quartermaster-sergeant John Taylor initial as now appears in the Norfolk jacket column in your presence?" A.:—"He, the Battery Quartermaster-sergeant J. Taylor put these initials in my presence." Q.:—"Is it general to get a requisition from battery officers?" A.:—"I get a requisition and give the orders to the master tailor, say cloth for instance, at end of month the account is balanced. No one can go to the master tailor for anything required to be done by him with Government stuff without my permission. Then on page 78 the following appears as taken on the 3rd October." Q.:—"How do you calculate the amount of compensation due to warrant officers. Are they allowed a higher rate than staff-sergeants, and are they entitled to a patrol jacket annually?" A.:—"According to schedule for contract for 1886 to 1887, tunics, £5; warrant-officer and staff-sergeants patrol jackets, £4; cloth trousers, 23s. 6d.; serge trousers, 14s.; they are entitled to a patrol jacket annually." Q.:—"Did Sergeant Woodbridge, No. 3 battery receive a patrol jacket 1887, and who signed for it?" A.:—"Yes the battery quartermaster-sergeant signed for it in the clothing-book for the year 1887 to 1888. It is usual on any occasion for the battery quartermaster-sergeant to receive any clothing for his battery, to sign the clothing-book when the recipient is not there to sign for himself." Q.:—"Is he entitled to one annually?" A.:—"He is not (he Woodbridge) to one patrol jacket annually." I notice Colonel Eden that when Webster was asked to produce any abstracts for previous issue for 1887 to 1888, he said "Yes in the old clothing-book now before the Board." The balance of clothing for 1887 is shown in this book by proceedings of the usual Board, 6th July, 1887? I think this is the book.

710. He had a book which he produced to the Board? It was a book produced to the Board by the conveying officer. I cannot remember whether he produced it or whether it was sent to the Board.

711. Can you tell me in whose handwriting the book is kept? No; I cannot.

712. Whose is the writing on the top of that page? It is apparently Webster's, but I do not know.

713. Can you form any opinion about it? I should presume that to be Webster's handwriting, but it is only presumption.

714. You believe that from the appearance of the writing? Yes.

715. And this? I should say that that is Webster's also. [Exhibit 36 handed into the Court, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

716. Whose writing are the pages handed in and marked Exhibit 36, in? On the first page everything down to the word clothing, is in the prisoner's handwriting, and everything on the next two pages is in the prisoner's handwriting.

717. Was that book before the Board of Inquiry? Yes.

718. Then on the same occasion you asked Mr. Webster whether he could furnish the Board with the detailed account of the tailor's bills vouched for by him, or rather of a detailed account of the material from which those bills were compiled, and he said "I cannot produce them." Particulars are shown in vouchers now before the Board. The master tailor keeps no books except the measurement book. Were those vouchers attached by you to the proceedings. I want to see them if they can be got. Do you know what has become of them? Colonel Eden? No sir.

719. They were appended to the proceedings, were they? They were appended to the proceedings, and sent back with them to the General. [Exhibit 37 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] I believe these are they.

720. And whose hand-writing is that? I believe it is Webster's. These are vouchers, as stated in evidence, containing particulars of the master-tailor charges for the amount of £765 15s. 2d.

721. Can you tell me what book was referred to in the evidence as to the letter "R" over the letter "M"? I think this was the book. [Book shown to witness.]

722. Can you find the letters "R" and "M" referred to? No, I cannot.

723. The place that you showed me just now is the initials referred to on page 65 as being the initials of the battery quartermaster-sergeant? Yes.

724. And that is the item? Yes; the item indicated by a blue-pencil mark and a cross on exhibit 38. [Exhibit 38 handed in to the Court, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

[At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock the same day.]

At 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the same day the Court re-assembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The same members as before.

Colonel Eden re-appears, and having been reminded of his former oath, is cross-examined through the Court by the Attorney-General.

725. The Attorney-General:—Colonel Eden, have you got your report here. Did you report as follows:—“The evidence—

Mr. Heydon:—I must object to this, Mr. President. My learned friend cannot put in the report sent or issued by that Board of Inquiry to the officer who convened it, because that report itself is merely the result of what the Board was told by other persons.

The Attorney-General:—If my learned friend will let me ask the question he will see what I was going to ask Colonel Eden. What I want to know, Colonel Eden, is this: After making this full investigation and examination of a great number of people, didn't you make a report which contained the following words, “That the evidence points out that no books have been kept by the master-tailor,” and so on. And then “that the contractor, except in cases of warrant officers, who get full amount as their uniforms are local manufacture, gives through one person cash compensation of two-thirds for non-supplied clothing, for which he receives full cost from the Government?” Yes.

726. Did not you also say that the casualty clothing is not of much avail for re-issue—“These items the Board ventures to consider material evidence that the present system is grossly cumbersome, not equitable to the public, or conducive to a good tone of economy or efficiency, besides offering opportunity for collusion, of which up to the present no advantage seems to have been taken.” You reported that, did not you? I did.

727. Now, on page 88 of the proceedings, I find in another report the following:—“That there has been during the period brought under the Board's investigation a great want of supervision over the battery quartermaster sergeant's department, the books of which have been kept in a disgraceful fashion, and are unreliable. The management of issue and fitting appears to have been under the discretion of the brigade quartermaster-sergeant and master-tailor, and at the option of the latter whether he would charge 3s. 7d. or £2 10s. per suit for fitting. The Board considers the worst phases under its investigation to exist in the very large number of men annually allowed to receive compensation, involving a continuous increase of unfitting garments, ultimately to be re-made, in order to fit men of different stature. This appears to have been carried on without any regard to serving the public interest. This is shown by the fact that fully two-thirds of the clothing issued is charged for as having been re-made at the full price of making garments from the piece; so that each tunic of each class cost from 17s. to 22s. in addition to the original price of the garment, and plus the 1s. allowed for alteration, and of course other garments in like proportion. The following example will illustrate the surplus expenditure: In the indent on contractor for 1886 warrant officers and first-class staff-sergeants are included. The clothing was made to measure, and forwarded to the barracks, but was not issued to them. They received compensation instead. The clothing remained in store until utilised for men of shorter size, at an enormous expense to the public, caused in the following manner: A sergeant's tunic and patrol jacket would be supplied by the contractor for £3 6s. 2d. and £2 16s. 6d., respectively, but the public pays the staff-sergeant 8s. 6d. for his tunic, and £6 1s. 6d. for his patrol jacket, and subsequently pays 22s. for altering the tunic and 30s. for altering the patrol jacket; thus bringing up the price of these articles to £9 7s. and £7 11s. when finally issued.” Did you report that? I did so.

728. On page 90 of the proceedings you go on further to report:—“The Board desires to record its dissatisfaction at the manner in which Sergeant Littleton gave his evidence, especially with regard to the number of hands he employed, and his weekly wage account.” Did you report that? I did.

729. Then, on page 92, I find these words:—“The Board views with astonishment the repeated evidence of all absence of supervision by the Adjutant of the battery quartermaster-sergeant's costly department.” Was that a part of your report? Yes.

730. “There is not authority for re-making garments, but the custom has never hitherto been challenged, and all charges of this nature have previously been paid on the signature of the officer commanding the corps.” Did you also report that? Yes.

731. Can you tell me with regard to these compensation lists—the lists sent in by the officers of the batteries, in which it appears that there is a column showing the two-thirds of the amounts of compensation—can you tell me from your investigations, or from what you have known as to the custom of the force, where the contractor gets the two-thirds from, or how he gets it. How is he to get it if he does not send a voucher for goods which have really not been supplied? The impression is that he gets the whole amount from Government, and stops the one-third as it is passing through his hands. That is the conclusion I arrived at.

732. And for how long do you believe that has been going on? For three years to my knowledge.

733. Have you ever heard of that custom being disapproved of until quite recently? I considered that the meeting of this Board of Inquiry was the evidence of the first disapproval of that custom.

734. But apart from the investigation of that Board whatever it may be worth, you have never heard of any disapproval of the custom at all? No.
735. How long have you been connected with the Force? Just over three years.
736. You reported this matter as one of the things which the Board of Inquiry have discovered by this investigation, didn't you? Yes.
737. Have you ever heard of it until you discovered it in the course of this investigation? Naturally I had some foreshadowing of the substance of the investigation over which I had to preside; but nothing previous to that.
738. Nothing, until some idea was given to you of what the practices were, that you were going to inquire into? No.
739. Well I suppose you knew that those practices were considered satisfactory? It was to inquire into a matter which was considered unsatisfactory, or the Board would not have been called upon.
740. Your report consisted of matters that you had ascertained as a result of the evidence that had come before the Board? Yes.
741. These matters you embodied in your report, and laid before the authorities, didn't you? I don't quite comprehend your question.
742. Certain evidence came before you as Chairman of the Board of Inquiry; from that evidence you ascertained certain facts didn't you? We arrived at an opinion.
743. The opinion was based upon the evidence I suppose? Yes.
744. You embodied these conclusions of yours in a report didn't you? Yes.
745. And laid it before the authorities? Yes.

By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—

746. I notice from what my learned friend read out to you in the first report, that you stated that the present system was very cumbersome, and that it afforded opportunity for collusion, of which up to the present no advantage seems to have been taken, didn't you? Yes.
747. Did you also state this "The evidence points out that no books had been kept by the master tailor. His accounts having been merely attested by a warrant-officer that he appears to have drawn a money allowance for fitting garments whether they needed alteration or not, and that his charges appear to have been high, specially when coupled with the fact that the garments are supplied at the Government expense"? Yes.
748. Did you mention that a comparison of the master tailor's receipts with those of his predecessor show that the former drew in one year as much as the latter drew in two years? I said the substance of it.
749. Did you say this: "It seems to the Board that no compensation should be allowed to them for clothing that has been already requisitioned"? Yes.
750. In paragraph 7 of your second report on page 90 of the proceedings I find these words: "The compensation list for 1887, when compared with the amount of money paid by the contractor, £229 12s. 7d., shows a discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d., which Mr. Webster states was part of his compensation for the year 1887 to 1888? Yes. I reported that.
751. And in paragraph 8 of your second report on page 91 of the proceedings did you say: "A comparison of the master tailor's statement of the wages he paid, and the only profit he insists he made, with the amount he reluctantly admitted having received during the twelve months from the pay office, displays an unaccounted for balance of some £194 after allowing for his qualified second statement as to weekly wages; thus provoking a suspicion that collusion antagonistic to the public interest has existed. The Board probably in this and other items of evidence had to contend with the fact that witnesses were conscious of the fact of not being on their oath"—did you say that? Yes.
752. Then paragraph 9 of your second report on page 91 of the proceedings states, "Though in his after evidence he attempted to qualify his statement. The master tailor shows that alterations might be effected at a cheaper rate—yet he kept this to himself and continued by Mr. Webster's authority, he says, to extort the exorbitant charges that did not obtain in Mr. Behau's time" Did you report that? Yes.
753. Paragraph 10 of the same report is as follows: "If the statements of Mr. Whitehouse, Quartermaster Sergeant Taylor, and Bombardier Loveless are worthy of belief, no complete confidence in the veracity of Mr. Webster can be entertained." Is this correct? Yes.
754. The last paragraph of that report states, "That Mr. Webster states that he brought to the notice of his superior officers the improper manner in obtaining money the contractor enjoyed through the compensation system." Is that in your report? Yes.
755. This is paragraph 2 of your third report on page 107 of the proceedings: "The paymaster cannot produce any authority for passing these remake charges but appears to have taken the signature of the officer commanding the Artillery forces as sufficient." The practice commenced in January, 1885, so that I think you said there that the practice goes back for three years? Yes.
756. Paragraph 3 of the same report contains the following: "The vouchers are made out by Mr. Webster's clerk for Sergeant Lyttelton from a book kept in the Brigade Store by the clerk under Mr. Webster's supervision. Sergeant Lyttelton puts his name on them as the claimant, Mr. Webster initials them as correct, they are then presented by Captain Savage, the Adjutant, to the Officer Commanding, for signature, and are then forwarded to the paymaster, who signs as to 'castings,' &c.: hence it should appear that the authority vouching for correctness devolves on the officer commanding in the first instance, and in the second on the Chief Paymaster." Did you report that? Yes.
757. Did you say in paragraph 8: "The statements of Mr. Webster and Sergeant Lyttelton vary so much and so often that little reliance can be placed on either. Their evidence only proves they had a free hand as to expenditure and manipulation of Government property, and that there was no check to their charges for labour"? Yes.
758. Then in paragraph 11 did you report: "Sergeant Lyttelton acknowledges to have received the whole of the money, viz., £765 14s. 2d. from the Pay Office, but is at a loss to account for its disposition. He would make believe that he paid upwards of £600 in wages, but cannot produce receipts from his employees. He also avers that he alone had the handling of the money. He appeared staggered as to whether he had received the several sums amounting to this £765 14s. 2d., and denied the receipt of one item of £108; but on the vouchers bearing his signature being shown to him seriatim, marked 'A,' 'B,' 'C.' &c., he acknowledges the signatures as genuine, and that he had received the whole sum. There can therefore be no doubt as to who drew the money from the Paymaster, but what became of the money, or how it was distributed, is yet a secret." Was that in your report? Yes.

759. And also this: "Mr. Webster's statement appears to be untrue, as both Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage deny the assertion"? Yes.

760. Do you remember anything about that statement? I think it was a statement to the effect that Webster had appealed to Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage in some matter connected with his duties.

761. Do you remember anything more about it? No.

762. Well, I will suggest; was it by Mr. Webster's statement that he had brought under their notice the improper manner in which the contractor obtained money for compensation? Yes; I think so.

763. He said that he had brought it under their notice, did he, and they both denied it? I believe that was it.

764. Then, with regard to paragraph 13 of your third report, you say: "Mr. Webster's application was evidently not formal or through his adjutant." What does that mean? It was an application for some books.

766. Then in paragraph 18 you go on to say, "A study of the tables attached to these proceedings will show that the master tailor cannot possibly have done all the work he has charged for, even supposing all the garments said to be made were made. The Board is of opinion that garments to a very large number said to have been made cannot have been made as they cannot be accounted for nor are they in store and they have not been issued; but the tables of figures will show the discrepancies, together with the probable amount overcharged by the master tailor and the number of garments and other material to be accounted for by the Artillery Q.-M. Department." Was that your report? Yes.

767. Are those the vouchers from 1 to 4 which you append to the report as a portion of the report? Yes.

[Exhibit 39 A, B, C, D, and E tendered, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

768. Did you furnish a supplementary report in these words: "After further comparison of books, &c., &c., the Board prefers the following as an addendum. On going over the whole of the battery clothing books the Board finds that a slight discrepancy between the numbers shown as issues and the numbers shown in table 1. The statement now tabled as 5 and herewith attached explains where the differences occur—that is, the figures at bottom of table 3, viz., 6, 3, 9, are items which may be set against Mr. Webster's deficiencies quoted in table 1."—Was that the supplementary report you sent in? Yes.

[Exhibit 40 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

769. Can you inform the Court how this table No. 1 was amended. We have got a number of tables here, and one of them, No. 5, is said to be an amended report afforded about the ledger? That is the final report.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

William Jesse, having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and says:—

I am accountant in the firm of Riley Brothers. This is Mr. T. P. Riley's contract with the Government the supply of military clothing for the year 1886. (Exhibit 41 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.) Mr. A. J. Riley took the contract in the first place, but it was transferred to Mr. P. T. Riley. The amount of that contract was afterwards paid to Mr. P. T. Riley; in addition to moneys paid for goods in the contract, money was paid to Mr. P. T. Riley for other goods. These are the amounts that were received outside the contract price. All these documents are made out by me except the third, which is made out by Mr. Webster. The first three are copies of each other. I made up these goods from memory. There is a voucher for £284 13s. 4d., and there are others which are stated to be for different persons. I must have got the information for making these accounts up from Mr. Webster. He is the only man that I dealt with in this matter at all. I received the sum mentioned in the first voucher, £284 13s. 4d., from the Treasury, and I gave £201 12s. 10d. to Webster. With regard to other vouchers which, according to my addition, comes to £51 15s. 6d., when I got that money from the Treasury I paid it in full to Mr. Webster. (Exhibit 42 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.) Sergeant Griffiths was sent direct to him at Dawes' Point. I find all the other money I paid direct to Mr. Webster, £83 0s. 6d., was the amount paid to me. We were under the impression that that was our profit on the transaction. I never saw anybody but Webster in the matter. I don't remember whether I had any conversation about this £83 0s. 6d. I should not have placed the matter before Mr. Riley to give a cheque for £201 12s. 10d. unless I had known that the thing was correct, and that it was the custom of the Force to grant this compensation money, and to obtain our own profit. In connection with the military matters I saw nobody but Mr. Webster. The third or fourth payment on that list will show that it was the custom for the contractor to retain his profit. I should not have done this unless I was assured it was perfectly regular and proper. Mr. Riley was only the contractor for one year.

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the defence:—

770. The Attorney-General:—Tell me what you did for the £83 odd?

Witness:—We made up the invoices and had clerical work to do for it.

771. So to make out an invoice for £284 13s. 4d. you got £83 0s. 6d.? Yes.

772. You got it from the Government? Yes; but we were a fortnight before we got it from the Government.

773. Oh! because you were a fortnight getting it from the Government you charged £83 0s. 6d.? Well, if we had supplied the goods we should have had that much profit, but inasmuch as the men did not require the goods, we thought we were entitled to the same amount of profit as though we had supplied the goods.

774. Then you didn't get it for making out the invoice? No; we got it as our profit.

775. Do you know that in 1886 the custom was to allow you to retain so much by way of your profit? Yes.

776. Did you ever hear until quite recently that no such custom existed? I always understood that it did exist. I never heard it questioned. We only had the contract for one year.

777. Do you know that it has been a custom to allow other contractors their profit? Yes, or we should not have done it in this case.

778. Mr. A. J. Riley never had the contract, had he; he simply tendered? He tendered and had the contract also.

Re-examined by the Prosecution:—

779. Mr. Heydon:—You say that since 1886 you have understood that the contractors were entitled to this—was that from what you were told in that year? Yes.

780. And it was from what you were told then that you made out this contract? Yes.

781. Did you understand that it was the custom that other contractors paid the men two-thirds and deducted one-third for themselves? Yes; that was the assumption.

782. Were you told anything about the profit? There must have been a list of the men entitled to compensation sent in to me.

783. Unless somebody had come to you about this matter you would not have known anything about it? No; I should not. Our indent was sent home for the whole amount.

784. You say you told my learned friend that the same arrangement was made with other contractors? Yes; I was told that it was a general custom for contractors to do this.

785. And you never heard it contradicted? No.

786. And you believed it? Yes.

787. You wanted some assurance that that pay voucher was a valuable document? Yes.

788. And you got that assurance? Yes.

789. Now, I notice the £54 13s. 6d. is a sum from which you did not retain anything. What were you told about that? I paid the whole of that to Mr. Webster, with the exception of Mr. Griffiths' portion of it.

790. And what was said about it? I cannot tell you what was said about it I am sure.

791. Do you remember whether you were told at the time that they were all warrant officers for whom that compensation was claimed? No, sir, I do not.

This evidence is read over to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 813. The witness withdraws.

William Arthur Goding, having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and says:—

792. I am a clerk in the Bank of New Zealand. I produce four cheques amounting to £229 12s. 7d., and two others that amount to £65 10s. These cheques came through our bank, and were paid through our bank.

[Exhibit 43 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

The prisoner declines to cross-examine this witness.

His evidence is read over to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 813. The witness withdraws.

At 4 o'clock the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning.

On Thursday, March 4th, at 10 a.m., the Court re-assembled pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before:—

Captain and Adjutant Savage, New South Wales Artillery, being called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and says:—

This is a true copy of the attestation papers made by the prisoner on enlistment, and it is signed by me as such.

[Exhibit 44 handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

The Attorney General objected to the admission of the document.

The President disallowed the objection.

Witness continuing:—This is a true copy of the original document, of which it purports to be a copy. Both my name and the prisoner's name are at the foot. When a document of that kind is signed by a recruit and by me as a commissioned officer of the corps in which the man engages he takes an oath. This is a regimental clothing book, in the possession of the brigade quarter-master sergeant, (the prisoner now before the Court.) It is a book in his department. This is a stock book belonging to the same, and this is an old clothing book belonging to the same. These are all in the brigade quarter-master sergeant's department. The prisoner is the head of that department, and as the head of that department is responsible for the books and all the entries made in them.

[Exhibits 44, 45, and 46 handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

Mr. Simpson formally objects to the receipt of any of these exhibits by the Court, but the objection was disallowed.

By the Court:—The stock book is a book in which all the articles of the brigade store are entered, including necessaries such as socks, shirts, &c. It is, in fact, the quarter-master sergeant's ledger.

Mr. Heydon:—The prisoner did not tell me that the contractor for the supply of clothing was obtaining money improperly before the inquiry before Colonel Eden was held. Since that Board began its investigations he has told me of the manner in which the money has been retained by the contractor. He has not told me that the money has been retained improperly. I was not aware that the contractor obtained one-third of the value for compensation for clothing for nothing except making out the voucher for the Treasury. At least not until the beginning of these proceedings. I was a member of the original Board, of which Col. Eden was the President, and through Mr. Whitehouse's evidence. I first became aware of this matter. I have been adjutant since 1885, and have been in the force since November, 1878. The prisoner did not say before the Board of Inquiry that he had told the adjutant, when furnishing compensation lists, that for simply putting in his voucher, and getting his cheque, the contractor got one-third cost cost of every article for which compensation was obtained. I do not remember whether there has been any compensation list furnished since the Board began its sittings in June last year. There may have been—possibly a list for warrant officers' clothing. It was immediately after the Board commenced its proceedings that the prisoner told me of these things. I informed the Colonel and he sent for the prisoner. The practice of giving full compensation to warrant officers arose in 1887 to 1888, and the authority was granted, so I was informed by the prisoner, by Sir Henry Parkes, I believe, and it amounted I think to £65 10s. I speak from memory as far as the date is concerned. I cannot say whether full compensation was granted to warrant officers before that; that was the first I knew of it. I have nothing directly to do with these clothing matters. They lie with the officers commanding batteries, who send them in their turn to the officer commanding the force. They are sent on to the contractor, who gets the money and who returns it through Mr. Webster to the officers commanding batteries, who pay it away to individuals. I have nothing to do with the clothing myself. The clothing has been kept in the brigade quartermaster's store; it is in his charge. I cannot tell how long the prisoner has been brigade quartermaster sergeant; but he has held that position ever since I held the Adjutancy, and I believe long before that. There are records from which you can get the information. He succeeded Lanaghan who is not now in the force. He went mad, and he is dead now. In the year 1886, to the best of my recollection, the prisoner, Brigade Sergeant-major Green and the superintendent clerk, Mr. Bennett, and the master gunner, Mr. Tristram, were warrant officers. I cannot say whether Griffith was a warrant officer in 1886. Sergeant Peterson has never been a warrant officer, nor Sergeant Lyttleton, nor yet Staff-corporal Almond. The last two entries in that compensation list are in the prisoner's handwriting I should think. [Exhibit 47 handed in is signed by the President and attached to the Proceedings.] The prisoner was responsible to the officer commanding the Brigade for his clothing. I have said that I was a member of the Board of Inquiry over which Colonel Eden presided. At first the evidence was chiefly taken down by me. I took it down correctly as the witnesses gave it. I took it down in narrative form and the witnesses had it all read over to them. The following evidence was taken down by me on 26th June, 1888, and is the evidence of Warrant Officer Webster:—"I am the brigade quartermaster sergeant of the N.S.W. Artillery. Clothing for the Artillery is usually obtained in the following manner. Previous to the establishment of the D. A. Q. M. G.'s Department, Battery size rolls have been called for through the Pay and Quarter Masters' Department; but since the establishment of the D. A. Q. M. G.'s Department the size rolls have been called for through that department. The clothing has been issued in bulk to the regiment after being passed by the Garrison Board. A regimental board has then been held before the articles have been issued to batteries or individuals. The clothing year begins on the 1st April in each year. Under the heading of clothing the rank and file are entitled to one cloth tunic, one serge Norfolk jacket, one pair cloth trousers, one pair serge trousers, one serge jumper, and two pairs of boots annually. Sergeants are entitled to one cloth tunic, one pair cloth trousers (these are of better quality than the rank and file cloth) one pair serge trousers, one Norfolk jacket, and two pairs of boots annually, and one cloth patrol jacket every second year. Staff sergeants, first class, are entitled to a better quality than sergeants, namely A quality, and receive one cloth tunic, one cloth patrol jacket, one pair cloth trousers, one pair of serge trousers, and two pairs of boots annually. After the clothing has been passed by the Regimental Board it has been fitted individually by the master tailor and marked for alteration where necessary and taken possession of by the Battery Quartermaster sergeants who sign my clothing book when they take the clothing. In 1885 to 1886 this custom was not followed owing to the troops having gone to the Soudan. The regiment for the time being was formed into a dépôt, and I took each man's signature in my clothing-book when his clothing was issued to him finally. The officers commanding batteries finally passed the clothing after alterations. Colonel Murphy finally passed the clothing in 1885 to 1886. The following scale of charges is allowed to the master tailor for subsequent alteration. Cloth tunics 1s. each, cloth trousers 6d., serge trousers 6d., serge jumper 6d., Norfolk jacket 9d. These amounts are paid to the master tailor whether the alterations are required or not. For any "extensive alterations" the following scale is allowed:—Rank-and-file tunics 18s. each, sergeants ditto 19s. 6d. each, staff-sergeants ditto £1 2s. each, band sergeants ditto £1 19s. 6d. each, band, rank-and-file £1 9s. 6d., sergeants' patrol jacket £1 2s., Norfolk jacket, serge 11s., jumpers 6s. 6d., cloth trousers all ranks 7s. 6d., serge trousers all ranks 7s. For making and sewing on chevrons 6d. per bar. For making and sewing on good conduct badges 3d. per bar; for sewing on numerals, per pair 2d.; for sewing on buttons, per pair, tunics 8d. each; Norfolk jackets 4d. each, jumpers 4d. each. Under the heading "extensive alterations" I should allow the full amount if the collar, cuffs, and sleeves were taken off and remade. It is almost impossible to fix every sort of alteration required; but from my knowledge of tailoring I assess an amount for the different alterations from the scale laid down above—the high rate as compared to that of the Imperial Service is rendered necessary from the enforced employment of civilian labour in the tailor's shop. The master tailor gets no allowance for altering or fitting any garment that is not issued from store. Then on the 29th, the evidence goes on "I produce the garrison order of the 5th June, 1883, which reads as follows:—" Paragraph 1, the Commandant approves of charges being made against the public at the undermentioned rates by the master tailor of permanent artillery for work done or to be done in connection with the mode of supplying and fitting clothing, namely, N. S. W. Artillery, making staff-sergeants' cloth tunic complete £1 2s., making sergeants' tunic complete 19s. 6d., making trumpeters and rank-and-file tunics complete 18s., making band sergeants' tunic £1 19s. 6d., making band and rank-and-file £1 9s. 6d. Jackets, making sergeants' cloth patrol jackets £1 2s. To all ranks, Norfolk jackets, serge (making) 11s., making to all ranks, jumper ditto, serge, 6s. 6d. Trousers, making for all ranks, cloth trousers 7s. 6d., trousers serge, making to all ranks, 7s. Chevrons, making and sewing on chevrons per bar 6d., making and sewing on good conduct badges per badge 3d. Embroidered shoulder numerals per pair 2d.; repairs, sewing on sets of buttons, tunics, 8d. per set, Norfolk jacket 4d. per set, jumpers 4d. per set. To fitting and alterations of garments at the rate under. Cloth tunics 1s. each, cloth trousers 6d., serge trousers 6d., Norfolk jackets 9d., jumper 6d. The material for making up or alteration is paid for by Government, and is ordered on the annual contractors by requisitions as required. This of course is extra to amounts laid down as above. Gas and fuel being also paid for by Government. The master tailor's accounts are afterwards handed to me and I examine them and certify to their correctness or otherwise and take them to the Brigade Adjutant for signature of the Colonel commanding. The accounts are then forwarded to the paymaster for payment. Copies of the accounts are filed in my office. At the present time there are employed in the master tailor's shop four civilians (men) and two females and three soldiers, including master tailor. Then on the 9th of July I produce the rough notes from which I make up the master tailor's bills, also my clothing book, which shows the issue of all articles and the receipts of the same, initialled by individuals, wherein compensation has been allowed. A "C" is placed in the column of the amount paid for compensation, and the signature of individuals not receiving compensation are not shown in the clothing book but in separate battery compensation lists. I produce the battery compensation lists for 1887 to 1888, which show that the following accounts have been paid for compensation:—No. 1 battery, £46 5s. 4d.; No. 2 battery, £19 4s. 7d.; No. 3 battery, £154 10s. 6d. These accounts are paid by the contractor, and are at the rate of two-thirds of the value of the article as paid for by the Government. The articles for which compensation is claimed and allowed are stored in my store and used for recruits as they join or deducted in the schedule for the following year. The contractor is in no way bound to pay any compensation claims. It is purely a personal matter to the individuals to whom it is paid though it is paid through a recognized channel.

Question by the Court:

791. Can you explain to the Court how it suits the contractor to give a cash two-thirds compensation for articles not required by any individuals which would have been issued to him had he needed them from those delivered and paid for? No, I cannot. The contractors have never made any application for the return of clothing for which they have made compensation claims.

792. Those rough notes that were spoken of in the evidence that I have last read out were produced, I believe? I cannot tell that these were, though portions of them are in his handwriting. Articles made in the master tailor's shop should be requisitioned for through the officer commanding the mens' battery for whom the articles are made. The master-tailor, in furnishing his account for such articles, should get the amount initialled by the officers commanding batteries. His vouchers would then be made out in the quarter-master's store, vouched for as correct by the quarter-master sergeant, and then brought to Colonel Roberts by me for his signature before being paid. In the first place, there should be a requisition by the officers commanding batteries, because no articles are made by the master tailor unless they are for men of abnormal size or unless the clothing has run out. A man of abnormal size is a man beyond the size of an ordinary gunner. I should hardly call Mr. Green a man of abnormal size. Though very tall, I should call him a fine, well proportioned man. Any alteration, or any making of clothing should be requisitioned for by the officers commanding batteries. The initials should be recorded by the battery quarter-master sergeant, so that he ought to have the records for the man's own protection. The battery quarter-master sergeant should examine the master tailor's vouchers and certify as to their correctness or otherwise before passing them on to the officer commanding the battery. With regard to the compensation of £16 7s. 6d. allowed to each warrant officer in the year 1887, the prisoner made a communication to me. He said that certain warrant officers had not been issued their clothing. The prisoner informed me that the clothing for these warrant officers had not been included in the schedule. The man interested either wanted compensation or clothing, and in the end they decided to claim compensation; and as there was nothing about these warrant officer's clothing, what was to be done? The prisoner was told to get a quotation from Henderson & Co. for these men's clothing. They said they would be willing to make the clothing for £16 7s. 6d. The matter was referred to the Colonial Secretary, and I was informed later on by Mr. Webster that the approval of the Colonial Secretary had been obtained; that the contractors had the money; and a request was made by the prisoner for authority to draw this money, which I accordingly gave him. The contract schedules for each year were prepared by the prisoner and submitted to the officer commanding. It was a matter that required a little going into, and I have been present during the time I have been adjutant, when the matter has been under consideration. The prisoner is mainly responsible for presenting the schedule for the approval of the officer commanding before it went on. It is a departmental business. I cannot say of my own knowledge that in the year 1887 any warrant officer's clothing was imported. I cannot say of my own knowledge how the warrant officers clothing was omitted from the contract. There was no reason whatever for it, as far as I know. The result of their omission was that the warrant officers, instead of getting £8 13s. 6d., as in the previous year, for compensation, got £16 7s. 6d.; but I cannot say who was responsible for the omission of this from the schedule. The prisoner used to draw up the schedule with the Colonel and myself. It was a matter of detail; it had to be gone into rather closely. I did not cause that omission in any way. I never looked on it as part of my duty to look after the clothing. The report as to what the contractor would charge for these things I obtained from the prisoner. I made no inquiries myself about it. I believe there is the absolute quotation in existence. I think that Webster produced a letter from Henderson, saying what he would make these things for; at least, that is the impression I am under. At all events it would not be a record of my department. If in existence, it ought to be produced by the brigade quarter-master sergeant, as it was in his department. I never authorized in any way the master tailor's making the same charges for "re-makes" as for "makes;" or, in other words, I never authorized him making the same charges for extensive alterations as for making the whole garment. It would not be any part of my business to authorize that. Only after these proceedings had begun was it that I heard of such a thing being done. In the year 1886 the warrant-officers were included under the head of sergeants and staff sergeants, and Brigade Quarter-master Webster was included in the contract also. I cannot say whether he took compensation for that year. The clothing imported for him, if he did take compensation, would remain in the store to the credit of the Government. The following year he took compensation again, but the clothing would not necessarily be in his store. It might have been used up during the year. A man might have been promoted from the position of sergeant to staff-sergeant, and in that case he could make use of the articles for him. Any such transaction as that ought to be recorded in Mr. Webster's stock book. I produced to the Board that was inquiring into these matters some documents. I furnished the Board with a return of the deceased casualties during the years 1886, 1887, and 1888. The warrant officers are attached for pay and rations to No. 3 battery, I think, but not for clothing; and, to the best of my knowledge, there are three Petersons in the force. Sergeant Peterson is no longer sergeant—he has been reduced to a gunner; and there is an acting bombardier called Peterson. In 1886 there was a Corporal Peterson, and he was the same as Sergeant Peterson. I cannot say whether there were three Petersons in the force in 1886. I think I can identify his handwriting. To the best of my belief that is the signature on the compensation roll for 1886. The whole of the warrant officers in 1887 did not take their compensation. I cannot say whether two of them did not. Although they only got compensation the year before for £8 13s. 6d., in the following year they got £16 7s. 6d. for the same garments.

garments. The point was raised in the usual regimental manner, and the money was allowed, that is all I know, as to whether it will be allowed or not, for the following year. I do not know the question has not been decided. The garments that come out for staff sergeants and warrant-officers in 1856 went into Webster's store. They were never issued. Next year those garments could have been issued to them if they wanted compensation that year as long as they had never been issued. It does not follow that because they did not choose to take the garments in the hope of getting £8 13s. 6d., that they would get £16 7s. 6d. I cannot tell you how it came about that the prisoner's clerk came to have a duplicate key for the brigade store. I did not direct that he should have a duplicate key. How he came to sleep in the brigade quartermaster-sergeant's office was at the personal request of the prisoner, as a better means of looking after the valuable clothing there. It seemed a reasonable request, and it was granted to him. The store is at the Victoria Barracks and at the Brigade Office. The prisoner does not live in barracks. He is a married warrant officer, living out of barracks with permission. He lives at Ashfield. The store is in rather an isolated position. I cannot give you any idea when it was that he asked for this man to sleep in the store. It has been since we have been located at the barracks. He never complained to me that that arrangement in any sense diminished his responsibility. He never said that his responsibility was any less on that account. He never said that the issue of this duplicate key gave him less security for his department. He has had an opportunity of making such complaints to me if he liked. He complained to me latterly of carelessness on the part of his clerk, but not before the institution of these proceedings, only since this inquiry began. He said his clerk was careless, and that through several mistakes of his in the returns, he had been rapped over the knuckles, and I advised him to get rid of the clerk. His excuse to me for not doing so was that he had had some little trouble in training him for his duties. It requires a man of some little education, and that particular bombardier possessed the required amount. He could not have got rid of him out of the force because he did not think he was sufficiently careful, but the man might have been sent on to some other duty. It was not for Webster to get rid of him himself, but the officer commanding would not have foisted a clerk on to anybody in Webster's position if he had not thought him suitable. I think the man gets 6d. a day extra for helping the quartermaster-sergeant. I do not know, as a matter of fact, that he got anything. I should not think that a man that gets 6d. a day would take any responsibility on himself.

793. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General:—Yes, sir, I do.

Cross-examination:—

794. The Attorney-General:—Webster never insinuated that this man has been dishonest? No. Simply that he could not personally attend to all these details, and that sometimes the clerk had to do it in his absence.

795. Was not that the subject of his complaint? Yes.

796. And that through his clerk doing things wrongly he (the warrant-officer) got called over the coals? I think you said that Webster was anxious that everything should be looked after; and as the store was in an isolated place he asked that the clerk might be allowed to sleep there? Yes.

797. And the clerk did sleep there? Yes.

798. Had not Webster to leave the barracks occasionally? Yes; he had to leave the barracks every afternoon at 3 in order to go to Kidman's, the contractors.

799. And he has other outside duties to attend to also? Yes; he has very responsible outside duties.

800. And they would take him away from the barracks? Yes.

801. Frequently? Yes; he would have to go on parade, and see to stores on the Governor's guard, and also at out districts. The stores on the Governor's guard are looked after by us, and there are also daily complaints, and he has got to go and see after them.

802. When he told you, as you say, after the commencement of the investigation, the custom was, in respect of the contractor keeping one-third for himself, he never suggested that there was any impropriety in the thing? No; he referred to it as a matter of custom.

803. Was it not at that investigation that, as far as you recollect, you first heard of this custom being questioned? Yes. Upon Mr. Whitehouse's evidence.

804. The first time you ever heard the custom questioned, if it was a custom, was upon the investigation before the Board of Inquiry? The first time that I ever heard that the one-third was given to the contractor was at the investigation.

805. And the first time that you ever heard of it being questioned was at the investigation? Subsequent to the investigation, when Webster, myself, and the Colonel, were in conversation about it.

806. You know Colonel Airey don't you? Yes.

807. He was in command of the forces at one time, was he not? Before I joined.

808. Did you know Captain Fitzsimons? I have heard of him, but I did not know him personally.

809. Do you know when he died? I do not.

810. Have you ever heard of Colonel Airey and Captain Fitzsimons going to General (then Colonel) Richardson, and asking him about this matter of compensation, and the General saying, "make the best arrangements you can with the contractors?" About three weeks ago I was standing at the side gates of the barracks with Lieutenant Le Mesurier.

Mr. Heydon:—Does the Court think that a conversation took place three weeks ago between the witness and another officer can be given as affecting the knowledge of the Major-General.

The Attorney-General:—I have asked you to call the Major-General long ago, and you do not seem inclined to do so.

Mr. Heydon:—If ever hearsay evidence was objectionable I think it is objectionable here. My learned friend says that he has asked me to call Major-General Richardson, but surely there is nothing to prevent my learned friend calling him himself if he likes.

The Attorney-General:—I shall not ask Captain Savage about the conversation at all.

Witness:—I cannot answer your question more directly. I was going to say that I heard —

Mr. Heydon again objected.

The Attorney-General:—I want to ask him if he has ever heard of Colonel Airey and Captain Fitzsimons going to General Richardson when he was Colonel Richardson about this matter. I have heard that there was such a custom, and now I want to find out if it was authorized by Major-General Richardson. Now, not that the General knew exactly what it was going to be, but that he gave a sort of authority authority to Colonel Airey and Captain Fitzsimons to do what they thought best with the contractor. I have already got Colonel Airey to say that he had a knowledge of such a custom, and now I want to show how such a custom originated.

Mr. Heydon :—If my learned friend wants to prove this matter he must prove it in a proper way. He must call Major-General Richardson himself.

811. The President :—Can you answer that question of your own knowledge? I can tell the Court what Colonel Airey informed me, if that will do.

The President :—The Court are agreed unless the witness can answer of his own knowledge, he cannot give any evidence on that point.

812. The Attorney-General :—Then I ask you this. "Did Colonel Airey himself tell you that he had done this very thing, that he had gone with Captain Fitzsimons to General Richardson when he was Colonel Richardson, and got authority to make the best arrangements he could with the contractors?"

Mr. Heydon again objected.

The Attorney-General :—I am told that I asked Colonel Airey this very question yesterday. I have no distinct recollection of it myself, but if I did, then I say I have a right to contradict what he then told me if I like.

The President :—The Court disallows the question, Mr. Attorney-General.

The Attorney-General :—Then I shall ask the Court to recall Colonel Airey.

The President :—You may interpose him now if you like.

Witness :—I wish to correct a statement given in my evidence with regard to the schedules being made up by the prisoner. The size-rolls are made up by officers commanding batteries, and forwarded to the Brigade Office; and the prisoner has generally attended with myself before Colonel Roberts when these size-rolls have been gone into. The size-rolls are then sent forward as received, and the schedules are made up from them in the Treasury.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.

Lieutenant-Colonel George John Airey, New South Wales Artillery, appears again before the Court; and being reminded of his former oath, is further cross-examined by the Attorney-General through the Court:—

813. The Attorney-General :—Colonel Airey, yesterday I asked you whether you had not gone with Captain Fitzsimons to General Richardson (then Colonel Richardson) and spoken to him about this matter of compensation, and whether he did not tell you to make the best arrangement you could with the contractor;—you said that you did not remember having gone to him, but you might have done? Yes.

814. Now I want to know whether you didn't say in the presence of Captain Savago, within the last three weeks, that you had gone to the General when he was Colonel Richardson and spoken to him about this matter of compensation, and that he had told you what I have said? I cannot say whether Captain Savago was present or not. I said to Colonel Roberts —

815. Did you say the same thing to Colonel Roberts? Not in those words exactly.

816. Now, Colonel Airey, I must ask you to answer this question.

Mr. Heydon objected to the course the Attorney-General's cross-examination was taking.

The President :—I think the Court will ask the question. (To Witness) :—Would you answer this question, Colonel Airey, yes or no, that Mr. Attorney-General will put to you? I do not think it is a fair way to put it.

817. Oh, that is for the Court to say? I will not answer unless I am allowed to explain.

818. The Attorney-General :—Have you been thinking about it since you went outside? Yes; I have.

819. Didn't you say to Colonel Roberts within the last three weeks that you had actually gone to General (then Colonel) Richardson with Captain Fitzsimons to ask him about this matter of compensation, and that he told you to make the best arrangement you could with the contractor? I don't think those are the words that I used.

820. Will you swear it? I believe I did not say it in those words.

821. Now, will you swear that you did not? I believe I did not use those words, but I will not swear that I did not.

822. Well, what did you say? I said that both Major Fitzsimons and myself received the sanction of the General to make arrangements for compensation.

823. Why didn't you mention that to me the other day when I was asking you these things? Because you didn't ask me.

824. Is that your reason? I didn't know what you wanted to bring out by your questions.

825. Were you speaking about the compensation of the men? I was speaking about the compensation of men in my battery.

826. Was there a question of compensation or payment to the contractor or compensation or payment to anybody else except the men mentioned in that conversation? Only of compensation to the non-commissioned officers and men.

827. Did the word contractor appear at all in your late conversation with Colonel Roberts? I don't think so.

828. Did you say to Colonel Roberts that you and Major Fitzsimons had had permission from the General to make the best arrangements you could with the contractor for compensation? Yes; that is the substance of it.

829. Was what you told Colonel Roberts the fact? Certainly.

830. Can you tell us the time of Major Fitzsimons' death? Not exactly; I think it was about 1833.

The President :—That can be found out, Mr. Attorney-General.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock the same afternoon.

At Two o'clock the Court reassembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present—the same members as before.

The President:—It comes to the knowledge of the Court that Captain Fitzsimons died with the rank of Major, in November, 1882.

Captain Savage is recalled, reminded of his former oath, and the cross-examination continues.

831. The Attorney-General:—Captain Savage, you have said to-day, positively, that Webster never called your attention to the manner in which the contractor was being paid, or rather to the way in which he was in the habit of deducting one-third? Not until the proceedings before the Board of Inquiry commenced.

832. Do you remember when you were examined before the Board of Inquiry, in October, 1888, did you not then say that you had no recollection of his having drawn your attention to the matter? If it is on the proceedings of the Board, I said it.

833. And I suppose your recollection would have been better then than it is now? I don't see that it would. Since those proceedings were instigated my mind has worked a good deal upon these questions.

834. You know when one's mind dwells upon a question for a long time, that one is very likely to become imaginative? Yes; but placed in the position that I am now in, on my oath, where my recollection affects the prisoner, I have been particularly careful as to my answers, and have spent a good deal of time in assuring myself of the facts and thinking over all that has transpired between myself and the prisoner.

835. Just look at that copy of the proceedings and see whether you did not say that you had no recollection of the prisoner having drawn your attention to the fact that the contractor deducted one-third? I did say that.

836. Had you any knowledge at all as to how these compensation claims were paid before the investigation? Not as a matter of fact; my impression was that they were paid through the paymaster to the contractor, and not by the Treasury to the contractor.

837. So that you really have not any knowledge at all about this proceeding? Not about the one-third being retained.

838. No! You didn't even know whether it was the Treasury or the paymaster who paid the contractor? No.

839. Do you find you are wrong about that belief? Yes, sir.

840. Do you know that there was an inspection of the books of the prisoner by the General himself? I have heard so, although I was not present with the brigade at the last general inspection. I was told off for special duty at Middle Head. Captain Milward was then the Acting Adjutant, and I cannot say of my own knowledge.

841. There is generally an annual inspection of the books by the General, is there not? Yes.

842. Do you, of your own knowledge, know that Webster ever paid away money for which he did not obtain receipts? Yes; frequently.

843. Not his own private money, but public money? Yes; public money. I have also known that Mr. Webster has on one or two occasions advanced money out of his own pocket to meet the pressing claims of men who are looking for such moneys as ration moneys.

844. Had he a great deal to do as Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant? Yes; at times his duties were very onerous.

845. During the time you have known him what has been his character? I have always found him to be an excellent reliable man.

846. And strictly upright and honorable in everything? Yes; in everything in which I have had anything to do with him.

Re-examined by the Prosecution:—

847. Mr. Heydon.] You said to my learned friend that the time of the inquiry before the Board was the first time that you had ever heard the custom questioned. Was it the first time that you had ever heard of the custom at all; I mean the custom by which the contractor retained one-third of the compensation-money? Yes.

848. You say that you have known the prisoner to pay away public moneys without getting receipts. Was that a proper thing for him to do? Well, I hardly understand the meaning of the question. Was it the recognized thing by the authorities do you mean?

849. Well, was it a proper thing to do? It was a foolish thing to do—foolish for the man's own sake.

850. In paying away these moneys without getting a receipt for the payment. Do you know whether any record of the payment would be kept? The particular monies I am alluding to are moneys paid away in lieu of rations.

851. I take it that where public moneys are dealt with and paid away there should be a record of the payment. Do you mean, when you say that it was paid away without a receipt being obtained, that there was actually no record of it? No; there would be a record of Webster's obtaining the money for disbursement.

852. But ought there not to be a record of the disbursement? It is not in my department. I cannot say.

853. Did the prisoner ever apply for any books to you? No; not to my knowledge.

Examined by the Court:—

854. You say that the compensation for the warrant-officers amounted to £16 7s. 6d. each, and that it was made out in the way you have described, and received sanction and so on? Yes.

855. Now the next year was not the money for warrant-officers made out in the same way? Upon the same basis.

856. And the amount ascertained in the same way? I cannot ascertain that.

857. Was it not made out for that year in the same manner and forwarded to the Major-General for sanction? It was made out on that basis, and to the best of my recollection it was forwarded in the same manner by Colonel Roberts to the Major-General for his sanction.

858. How far did your duties as adjutant bring you into contact with the prisoner as regards clothing, or perhaps I had better put it to you in another way—what are your duties in your present position? My duties as adjutant, I take it, are to look through all the correspondence passing through, and to the best of my ability to ascertain when all the vouchers that come in for the Colonel's signature are correct, and and generally, in a military sense, to be looked on as the voice of the colonel; to see that his orders are being carried out; to see that nothing is going on wrong; and if it will help the Court I will hand in a letter which will explain my position I think, and also that of the quartermaster-sergeant.

859. Is that letter in your handwriting? No; it is a copy of a letter which was addressed by the officer commanding the artillery to the General upon Mr. Webster's promotion.

860. Does it define both your duties? It defines the prisoner's duties.

861. Well, can you answer the question now. Do your duties as adjutant bring you into contact with the prisoner in regard to the safe custody of the clothing and the keeping of the clothing account? No; I have nothing to do with the clothing account, nor yet with the safe custody of the clothing.

862. Just now we have received certain books for which you have vouched as being responsible? No, sir; I hope the Court did not understand that I am in any way responsible for those books.

863. That is what I want to know. You are not responsible to the officer commanding for the clothing or the accounts? No.

864. Do not all official papers pass through your hands, and are not they placed by you before the commanding officer? Yes, they should, but it frequently happens when I am away on duty that papers are passed directly to the officer commanding.

865. Would there be no record of them? Yes, there would.

866. It was mentioned that the officer commanding should sign an order for clothing;—can you tell me on what paper those signatures should be? They should be on the vouchers, I think; there is an order to the effect that the officers commanding batteries should initial for all orders; I can produce that order if you like.

[Order produced and read by the President.]

867. That means Colonel Baynes before he was Chief Paymaster? Yes; he was then called Brigade Pay and Quartermaster; that order has been to a certain extent modified by this memorandum, issued on the 29th of August, 1883.

[Memorandum produced and read by the President.]

868. You say you have been Adjutant since February, 1885;—since then, has that order been carried out? Not in its entirety.

869. Can you tell me to what extent it has not been carried out? I have no recollection of seeing anything of the rolls referred to here since I have been adjutant.

870. Would it not have been your duty as adjutant to have seen that these orders were complied with? I can only say that since I took over the adjutancy I was informed by Mr. Webster of the usual custom in regard to these matters. I deemed it no part of my duty to interfere with the standing custom of the regiment at that time.

871. You carried on the custom as it was told you by the brigade quartermaster sergeant? Yes. There is one part there which says you are to refer accounts quarterly, but Mr. Webster said that it would complicate accounts, and it was better to send monthly instead of quarterly returns.

872. Was there any suggestion made by the commanding officer about these orders not being complied with? No, not that I am aware of.

873. You talk about the orders for the warrant officers' clothing having gone through your hands to get the signature of Colonel Roberts, and then going on to the General to be forwarded to the Colonial Secretary;—should these vouchers not have come back through you before you gave authority for the payment? In the ordinary course they ought to have come back.

874. But you have no recollection of seeing these vouchers again after they left your hands for the first time? Never.

875. Can you tell me how the staff of the New South Wales Artillery draw their clothing or compensation, and who pays it? They draw it through the brigade quarter-master sergeant, but I don't know who pays it.

876. You don't know who pays it? No.

877. It is left, as far as you know, entirely to the brigade quarter-master sergeant? Yes, sir.

878. Did the prisoner ever complain to you that he was overworked—that there was more work than he could well do? Yes; the prisoner has informed me from time to time that he thought his work was very heavy.

879. Did he ever ask for more assistance? He has asked for extra storemen.

880. And was that assistance supplied to him? Yes.

881. Did he ever apply to your knowledge for an increased rank of quarter-master, seeing that the duties were such as to warrant a quarter-master's position? No, sir; he applied for warrant officer's rank.

882. And he got that? Yes.

883. Did he never apply for the position of quarter-master? He might have done, but I have no recollection of it.

884. Amongst the books that we have in evidence there is no book or ledger containing the master-tailor's accounts;—are you aware whether the prisoner ever had such a book? The prisoner once produced a book to me purporting to be an account of the master-tailor's.

885. You have seen such book? I have seen that book.

886. Did you examine it at all? No; beyond looking at it, I never considered it any part of my duty to look into these books.

887. Although you were not in any way apparently in charge of the clothing account you have told us something about the prices—in fact we have had documents before us showing that the cost of a tunic is 19s. 6d., and the cost of remaking that tunic, which has not been worn, is authorized as 18s.;—do you know who authorized this scale? No.

888. When the compensation lists come in from the various batteries you say that all the documents as a rule go through your hands? Yes.

889. Can you remember these documents bearing the colonel's initials? The documents I allude to are those for compensation for Battery No. 3;—did they pass through your hands? No; I cannot remember that they ever passed through my hands, but in the ordinary course they would have passed through my hands.

890. To the best of your belief, is it likely that corrections would be made before or after the officer commanding initialled certain vouchers for compensation? They would have been made before; every correction should be made before it comes to us and initialled by the officer or other person making such correction; that is the usual custom.

891.

891. Can you tell us how these vouchers are submitted; have you any knowledge of your own? No; only what I have known since the Board of Inquiry.
892. Well there are several corrections in red ink on this copy which is initialled by Colonel Roberts and Colonel Murphy; who are they likely to have been made by? I should say by Colonel Murphy.
893. Do these lists come straight from the officers commanding batteries to the officer commanding the force? Yes.
894. Is it the custom for the officers commanding batteries to sign them at once, or to pass them over to pass them over to the brigade quarter-master for correction? That I cannot say; when they are received they are registered and passed through the brigade department to be registered in the departmental registers before being submitted to the Colonel.
895. So they may have been registered in the quarter-master's department before being seen by the Colonel? Yes, that would be the proper thing.
896. So that if these corrections have been made before Colonel Roberts saw them they would be initialled? Yes, although they may have been passed over.
897. Would you pass corrections that were not initialled? Not in an ordinary sense; I might by oversight.
898. Are these compensation lists filed in your office? Copies are kept in the brigade quarter-master-sergeant's office, I believe.
899. Yes, but are the copies of them under your control? No, but I can get at them at any time by calling for them.
900. By the Court.] Do you remember any order being issued for destroying any clothing that was condemned by any board; either a board in 1886 or 1887? I don't remember any brigade order being issued to destroy such clothing, but instructions were given to members of a certain board to destroy certain clothing.
901. That would be on the face of the proceedings of the board? Yes.
902. And was there any authority given them to strike off charge of the clothing destroyed in that way? Not that I know of, but I should imagine that the authority to destroy the clothing would be synonymous with the authority to strike the clothing off charge.
- [His evidence is read to the witness according to Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

Thomas Lovedale Nicholson having been called and duly sworn was examined by the Prosecutor and said:—

- In the year 1879 I was the contractor for clothing for the Permanent Artillery; when the tenders were called in the first instance, the clothing was all made in the country; we had to make it to fit to the satisfaction of the officer commanding battery; there was a probable number, not the exact number as there is now; there was a probable number of the warrant officers' clothing required; we imported all the fittings that would be required—the gold lace and so on; after the goods had arrived, I found that there were a number of men entitled to what was called compensation; the men used to parade, I have seen them myself, before the commanding officer, with their tunics on, and if they were passed as correct, they had an order upon me as contractor, and I gave them two-thirds of the value of the tunic and trimmings; the full value of the tunic and trimmings at that time was something like £5; £1 18s. I think; they received two-thirds; I got the order and was paid the full amount from the paymaster, Major Baynes; the money did not go through the Treasury at that time; in some cases where the men preferred it, they got private clothing, and in that case they got the full amount of the value in claiming, as the one-third came out of the amount as profit; in those days we used to make the clothing in the Colony, and if the man got compensation we did not make or deliver his suit at all; this compensation was never mentioned in the contract at all; the suits would be in the contract; there was a probable number named; I had to make the things fit; I did not get anything extra for making the things fit; supposing it was a very bad fit, the commanding officer would very soon send it back to me; we did not send any vouchers for remakes in those days, as there were no remakes; these orders the men brought down to me were for clothing included in the contract; I gave them two-thirds, and got one-third; or, if they got a private suit of clothes, then I gave them the full money, because I got the profit upon the private clothing.
903. The President.] Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? Attorney-General.] Yes, Mr. President.
904. The President.] They were all "makes," then? Witness: Yes, all "makes."
905. In 1879, when you asked to keep back for yourself one-third, what used you to do for the one-third? I had the cloth and trimmings in my hands.
906. Which you could make up for next year? Well, if I was lucky enough to get the contract. The blue cloth was only available for regimental clothing, and it is hard to get rid of the trimmings.
907. At all events you did not supply anything for that one-third? No.
908. Who was the man with whom you had to deal? Mr. Webster was one, Swinbourne was another, and Davey was the third.
909. Have you heard of a man called Lannigan? I heard of Lannigan, but I do not remember having had any dealings with him. The other three men were battery sergeants.
910. You said there was no mention whatever in the contract about this compensation? Yes, I said that.
911. According to the contract you had to supply a probable number of clothes? Yes.
912. You might have to supply 100, or you might have to supply 150? Well, I suppose they could have compelled me to have done it.
913. But you could not compel them to have taken any particular number at all? No.

Examined by the Court:—

914. Did you retain that one-third for yourself? Decidedly.
915. Was it upon those probable quantities that you tendered? Decidedly.
916. You mean in the expectation of getting them? Yes, I took the chance of it.
- [His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

No. 1093. First-class Master Gunner Tristram, senior warrant officer New South Wales Artillery, having been called and duly sworn, was examined by the Prosecutor, and said :

I did not get compensation in lieu of clothing in 1887. I did not get the clothing instead. I got a portion of my clothing. I claimed compensation for a tunic and never got it. I never had any conversation with prisoner about how it was that I did not get that compensation. However, I never got it. In the year 1886 I got compensation I got £5 odd. That is my signature. Now I know that the exact amount of compensation I got was £5 15s. 8d. in the year 1886. I was a warrant officer in 1886. I believe it was Lieutenant Bridges gave me the £5 15s. 8d. I said I would sign it and take the money, but that that would not deter me from finding out why I did not get more. That remark was made to the officer who paid me. I have not received the difference from that day to this.

The Attorney-General :—What particular charge has this reference to ?

Mr. Heydon :—This is the eleventh charge.

The Attorney-General :—This eleventh charge is, obtaining an excessive sum of money for himself and other warrant officers, and as far as this evidence has gone this witness was a warrant officer who received a smaller sum of money than was his due.

Mr. Heydon :—If I find that a warrant officer gets two thirds the value of his clothing, and I find that he is entitled to two thirds, then I prove that two thirds is what a warrant officer should get for his clothing.

The President :—What I understood from Mr. Jesso's evidence yesterday was that the prisoner drew from him the whole of the warrant officers' money, amounting to £8 odd for each warrant officer.

Mr. Heydon :—Yes, he drew the full amount. But we say that he only paid a portion of it, leaving a balance in the prisoner's hands unaccounted for. Here is a statement in the prisoner's handwriting to the effect that the warrant officers are entitled to two thirds, and yet we find him in the following year claiming the whole of the money for himself and the other warrant officers.

The Attorney-General :—In reply to what my learned friend says to the effect that that paper was evidence under the eleventh charge of the prisoner having obtained an excessive sum of money for himself and other warrant officers, I should like to point out that he also says in 1887 he obtained for warrant officers the full amount of their compensation, whereas he ought only to have obtained, according to his own entry on that paper, two thirds. Then my learned friend says that inasmuch as he ought to have obtained two thirds when he got the full amount in 1887, therefore he obtained an excessive amount. Now I maintain that that is quite immaterial, because that refers to 1886, and the evidence for the prosecution shows that in 1887 the warrant officers for that year were by the direct authority of the Colonial Secretary allowed their compensation in full. Surely this evidence cannot prove us guilty under the eleventh charge. I certainly submit that it is quite immaterial.

Mr. Heydon :—The question is not that the Colonial Secretary authorised this money, but how he authorised it.

The President :—The Court disallow the objection.

Witness continuing.] I have been here nearly five and a half years. There were no warrant officers in the corps when I came. I was the first appointed so that the first time compensation was given to them must have been since that date. I drew compensation for years 1884, 1885, and 1886. In 1887 I got nothing. I was entitled to it but I did not get it. The warrant officers do not parade in order that the commanding officer may inspect their clothing. Their word is taken. In 1887 I applied for compensation.

Cross-examined by the Counsel for the defence :—

917. To whom did you apply for compensation? There was no regular way of applying. Mr. Webster might wire "Do you apply for compensation," and I should reply "Yes."

Examined by the Court :—

918. It did not go through the battery office? Yes.

919. Did you receive full compensation in 1884 and 1885, or only two thirds? I received a great deal more than in 1886. I believe that I never received less than £5.

920. Would there be a great difference in the number of articles for which you received compensation that would account for that difference? Oh no! As far as I understand the system here, the amount annually is equal.

921. In the year 1886 you received £5 15s. 8d. for sundry articles put down here. In 1884 had you more articles for which you would receive compensation? Was that why you received £9 formerly instead of £5! No the same clothing as far as I remember.

922. And was that what made you make the remark that you did not think it was enough? Yes, I was astonished at the amount, having received larger amounts on two previous occasions.

923. And did you apply for anybody for the difference? No Sir, I believe I mentioned it to yourself on one occasion, and you recommended me to bring the matter forward. Several things prevented it. We were very busy at the time, and so were you; and, I thought I would rather let the matter slide than have a row about it.

[His evidence was read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws].

At 4 o'clock the Court adjourned until the following day.

On Friday, the 15th March, at 10 o'clock, a.m., the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before.

No. 1 Brigade Sergeant-major Green, warrant officer, having been duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and said :—

In the year 1886 I received my compensation. I cannot exactly state the amount I received. I received for a tunic. I took it for granted that it was the right amount. I received it from Mr. Webster. I did not sign anything. I belong to the staff but am attached to Battery No. 3 for pay and rations. I believe that staff-sergeants are all included on the staff for clothing. In the year 1887, when I received compensation, I did not get clothing. That was the year I got £16 7s. 6d.

924. The President :—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General : I do, sir.
925. The Attorney-General :—If you got compensation money, you could do what you liked with it? It was given to me for that purpose.
926. You are not bound to buy clothing with it? No.
927. You have been for many years in the force? Nearly eighteen years.
928. What rank had you when you first joined? I joined as a battery sergeant-major.
929. Would that be a warrant officer? No, sir.
930. Had you compensation in those days? If I wanted it in lieu of clothing.
931. How would you get it? I should get it from my own battery.
932. You would get it from the commanding officer of your own battery in the same way as the men? Yes.
933. What year are you speaking of now? I cannot go back all those years.
934. Yet you did not get the full amount then? I cannot tell whether it was the full amount or not.
935. You know that for many years men have been allowed two-third's compensation? I cannot say. I have nothing to do with the payment of the men. My duty is not that way at all.
936. But you might know about it all the same? No, I do not.
937. Have you never heard it spoken about in the force? Well, you see, I am away from the men. I am a senior, and don't mix up with the men in conversation of that sort.
938. Well, but have you never heard it from the seniors? No.
939. Have you known Mr. Webster long? About seventeen years.
940. And what has been his character as an honorable man? I have always known him so.
941. During the whole of those seventeen years? Yes. Well, I would not say the whole of the time, because the first year or two he got into a little trouble.
942. Yes, we all get into a little trouble occasionally; but it was nothing dishonorable I suppose? It was nothing dishonorable. I should always trust him.
943. The President :—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon :—Yes.
944. Mr. Heydon :—How long have you been a warrant officer? Since 1884.
945. When the compensation was got through your commanding officer, how would it be carried out? At one time it was done by the men going down to the army contractors themselves.
946. Did you ever do that? Yes; I have done that once or twice.
947. And after that it used to come to you through your commanding officer? Yes.
948. Can you tell me how long it is since Mr. Webster was appointed quarter-master sergeant? I cannot give the exact date.

Examined by the Court:—

949. Mr. Green, you will remember, I suppose, the difference of money for compensation—for instance, if in 1886 you received £3 or £4, would you remember whether the amount made in 1887 was the same? That is the year they applied for compensation for warrant officers; then I got £16 odd.
950. And in 1886 you received much less than that? Yes; I received for a tunic, but I cannot recollect the amount.
951. Would the difference in the amount of money cause you to make any inquiries why it should be so much greater one year than another? Well, when we had our clothes altered, I had my tunic altered, and I believe that Anderson charged me £2 odd for putting on a new collar, and that makes a deal of difference to a tunic. Now it is made differently. I found that Anderson got £4 10s. for a coat without any tracing lace on it at all, and the trousers now are of a better quality than they were formerly.
952. But I believe in 1886 you were a warrant officer? Yes; but it was not all broad-cloth. I may say that the tunic was the same as a staff sergeant's.
953. But what I want to arrive at is, that you attributed the difference between this amount to the quality of the clothes, so that they would not make you wonder how it was that you received £16 one year and only £3 or £4 the year before? No, sir.
- His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B. The witness withdraws.

No. 401.—Superintending Clerk Frank Bennett, Warrant Officer in the New South Wales Artillery, having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and said:—

I got £8 odd for compensation in 1886. It was compensation for all four articles of clothing that I am entitled to. I also got compensation in the year 1887—£16 7s. 6d. I did not get any clothes at the time. Staff-sergeants are most of them attached to Battery No. 3. The staff-sergeants are Steer, Brakespere, and Goodall. Those are the only three now. Steer would not be a staff-sergeant in 1887. Staff-sergeants are attached to Battery No. 3 for everything.

Examined by the Court:—

954. I believe you are in charge of all vouchers that come to Colonel Roberts' office? I see most of them.
955. And I presume you make an entry in your books? When they belong to another department I do not make any entry at all; I pass them on.
956. Do you remember seeing these vouchers [Exhibit 42]? I remember this one, and this, and any of them bearing my stamp.
957. Look at them again, and tell me if you know any reason why some of them should be initialled by the Major-General and some not; it appears that they all bear on the same subject? I cannot say. They are usually all initialled by the Major-General. I should think that all these vouchers should have gone through the Major-General.
958. Is there any order for the payment of the money? No; I don't recollect any order.
959. Would such vouchers go through your Department to the Major-General? Yes; they go to the Paymaster first, and he takes them down to the General for his approval.
960. But would they go direct from your office to the Paymaster? Yes.
961. So that in that case you would have a record of them? We should have a record of those that are stamped.

962. I suppose you are very careful about your stamp? Oh, yes. This for £284 13s. 4d. could not have gone through our office at all; it does not bear our registered number; those that bear our registered number are the only ones that pass through our office.

963. How is that some of them went through your office and some did not? They have been entered in the Quarter-master Sergeants books without going through our books at all.

964. But is that regular? Well, we like to keep the Department vouchers separately.

965. Is Staff-corporal Almond in the Force now or not? No, sir; he is dead.

Cross-examined by the prisoner's Counsel:—

966. How long have you known Webster? Twelve years.

967. And what has been his character during that time—has he been an upright, honorable, and honest man? Through all that time I have known him to be a thoroughly straightforward and honorable man.

Examined by the Court:—

968. Are Staff-corporals attached to No. 3 battery as well as Staff-sergeants for clothing? Yes.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

Second-class Master Gunner John Griffith, Warrant-Officer, New South Wales Artillery, having been duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and states:—

I remember Riley's year; it was the year 1886; I got my compensation for clothing in that year; it was £8 odd for all the garments that I was entitled to; I received it from Mr. Jesse, at least, I think it was from Mr. Jesse; at all events it was from a gentleman in Mr. Riley's office; I think it was for £8 13s., but I cannot say the exact amount. For the following year I got for compensation £16 7s. 6d.

969. The President:—Would you like to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—Yes, sir.

970. The Attorney-General:—How long have you known Webster? Seventeen years.

971. What has been his character during that time? He has been a thoroughly good comrade.

972. No, but as an honorable man? A thorough upright and honorable man.

Examined by the Court:—

973. How did you obtain your compensation for clothing in 1887? I received it from Webster.

974. Did you give any receipt for it? I think not.

975. There was no book or anything of that kind to sign? No sir.

976. Did you ask how it was that you received more than you had before? No sir; except that there was an improvement in our dress and we had to pay for the alterations ourselves.

977. Do you know anything about that one-third deduction? I know all about it.

978. You are the man we want then. But I mean of your own knowledge? I know that I have received two-thirds since 1873.

979. And do you know where one-third went to? The contractor.

980. And when you received this £16 odd would it be the full amount or two-thirds? It would be the full amount.

981. And how is that? Since 1885; ever since I have been on the staff I have received the full amount.

982. That means that the staff received the full amount and the rank and file two-thirds? Yes, because our accounts do not go through the batteries.

983. In 1887 did the warrant-officers apply for an increase of compensation? No; they applied for compensation in lieu of clothing.

984. To whom was it made? First of all to Mr. Webster, and to my belief Webster made out the lists and submitted them to the Colonel to approve of them.

985. Did it ever strike you as peculiar that the alteration in the cloth and trimmings should come to nearly double what it was before? Yes. This year there is no contract price and no discount off, as there was the year before, so that this year we got the full amount that was we should have to pay if the clothes had been made in the Colony.

986. Do you know when the clothes ceased to be made in the Colony from your own personal knowledge? No sir; I cannot give the date from my own personal knowledge. I might tell you that the last suit I had was made in the Colony in 1885.

987. And since that you have obtained compensation and bought your own clothes? Yes; for instance this jacket was made in 1885 and so is the tunic that I wore at the opening of the Court. I have been exceptionally lucky as an employed man in being able to save my clothing.

988. In fact the compensation was a great boon to you? A great boon, sir.

Mr. Heydon:—I have ascertained from the brigade orders that the prisoner was made quarter-master sergeant on the 6th May, 1880, and on the 5th June, 1884, he was made a warrant-officer in consideration of the extra duties he had to perform.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B. The witness withdraws.

No. 1582. Band-master Martin Devery, New South Wales Artillery, having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, and said:—

I did not receive compensation in 1887. I have received no compensation since I joined the corps in September, 1886. I do not know why I did not get compensation in that year. I was appointed a warrant-officer in December, 1887.

The prisoner's counsel declines to cross-examine this witness.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B. The witness withdraws.

Colonel Charles Fysho Roberts having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor, said:—

I am the Colonel Commanding the Permanent Artillery. I remember the inquiry that was held in the the matter of clothing; after that on the 4th of February. I may have forwarded an application made through me by the prisoner. Yes, I did forward such an application. That is it. [Application produced.] Later on the prisoner made an explanation to me of an alleged deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. It was after this that he made an explanation to me. It was certainly after this that he made the explanation to me. To the best of my belief, he had not previously made any statement to me about the £9 12s. 2d. At the present time I do not remember anything of any explanation he made to me. He stated to me that he could not exactly find the receipts for them at the time, but that he felt positive that he had compensation for these articles mentioned in this memorandum—three battery jackets, one tunic, two pairs of cloth trousers, one pair of serge trousers, all for sergeants. That was the explanation he gave at the time. He informed me that there was a supplementary list drawn up for these articles, and I believe there was too, but that at that time he was not able to find it. That was the explanation which he had given to me when I wrote that memorandum on the 4th of February, 1888. In the year 1887, I never authorized the prisoner to make a payment of £4 1s. 10d. to Sergeant Lynch. A similar payment to Gunner Bailey, and full compensation whatever it was to Loveless by name. But I gave instructions that all compensation should be paid. I never authorized the payment of compensation to these persons behind the back of their commanding officer, unless what I have said is behind the backs of the commanding officers. I never gave a deliberate order that these payments should be made behind the backs of the commanding officers. The signatures on these vouchers are my initials. They were put on after the vouchers were made out. I never sign a blank paper; they were drawn up in the usual form. I have nothing to do with drawing up these. I should say they were drawn up by the contractor. I did not authorize the drawing up of these vouchers. I did not authorize the contractor to draw them up. On one of these documents there is a certificate that services have been performed and so on. Before signing the certificate I asked whether it was correct. To the best of my recollection I asked the adjutant. I do not remember whether I ever had any conversation with the prisoner about it. One of them has the word "correct" on with the prisoner's initials to it. That was on before I put my initials and name on. I took it for granted that the documents were correct. I took it for granted that they were correct, because I have never known the prisoner to mislead me at all. When the compensation lists came up from the batteries they were laid up before me. I believe I initialled them and passed them on. I believe they came in the ordinary way. They were laid on my desk in the ordinary routine of business. The ordinary custom is that when I go into my office I find a set of documents before me which I have to deal with. I suppose that somebody has put them there, but how they got there I do not know. They came through the Brigade Office clerk or the adjutant. Finding these compensation lists on my table I should initial them and forward them on the quartermaster-general or to the person who has charge of the clothing department. I am unable to say what the next thing done with them would be. It would be after the compensation lists of the year were laid before me and initialled by me that such a document as the £344 odd would be put before me to be signed by me. That pay voucher would as a rule be on my table. After signing it I should pass it to the clerk or whoever was responsible for a record of it and it would then leave my office. When I signed the pay voucher and the certificate, I was aware that the clothing had not been supplied; because it was on the compensation list. It was supposed to be a summary of the battery compensation lists which I had initialled. I did not check the details to see whether there was a summary of them. I have not time to do that sort of thing. I did not check it because I have not sufficient time to go into all those details. When I signed the compensation pay vouchers, I was not aware where they were got from. I always believed that it was got from the paymaster or through the paymaster. I was not aware of what was done with the money after it was got, beyond the fact that two-thirds of it was returned to the Permanent Artillery. I had no knowledge whether the paymaster paid the other one-third at all. I have no knowledge at the time this was signed that the contractor retained the other one-third. I have learned it within the last six or seven months. When furnishing compensation lists the prisoner did not say to me at the time, that for merely putting in his voucher and drawing his cheque, the contractor got one-third compensation for every garment for which he got compensation; but he told it to me afterwards—lately. It is not the fact that when presenting the compensation lists on two or three occasions that he told me of this. The compensation lists are presented to me for my signature on an average once a year, and unless supplementary lists are sent in, it is all the compensation for one year. I do not think I could have forgotten the prisoners telling me that, if I had been told it on two or three occasions. Beyond initialling the compensation lists when I found them on my desk, I did not give any other authority verbal or written in reference to these compensation lists. I cannot tell you by what authority warrant officers received full compensation instead of two-thirds, beyond that they were allowed it by the Colonial Secretary. I think it was in 1887 to 1888, that warrant officers were allowed full compensation by the Colonial Secretary. Assuming that the warrant officers obtained compensation in full for the year before 1887 to 1888, I know of no authority by which they got it. I suppose it was on the usual authority if they got it. Application would have to be made to authorize them receiving compensation and if the contractor chose to do it without it was his lookout. If the contractor gave three-thirds to the warrant officers and did not get the money from the paymaster it is his business. I really cannot explain. I cannot at this moment remember the pay voucher for 1887 being submitted to me. I remember it now. I cannot say who laid it before me. I wrote an explanation here as to prices. The explanation says the prices here quoted are less than they have been hitherto charged. I ascertained that as far as I can remember from the lists that we have for reference as to the value of a warrant officer's tunic. I am not aware that I referred to the contract for the previous year. We are not furnished with contract, or copies of them. I cannot remember whether it was by reference to the previous year that I made that explanation. I know this, that the cost of a warrant officer's tunic has always been very high. I cannot remember upon what authority I made that statement about the rate of prices. I remember Mr. Webster speaking to me and saying that the warrant officers should supply themselves. If a man's garment should last for another year he would be entitled to receive compensation, but he would be obliged to supply, at his own expense, any clothing he might require afterwards for the current year. Suppose he took compensation for a pair of trousers, and another pair of trousers were wanted, he would have to supply himself with them. If he took compensation, compensation, and the Board recommended that he might still obtain a casualty tunic without having to pay for it. This document (exhibit 42) bears either my initials or signature. They are for the year 1886. At the time I signed them I suppose that I was aware that they were for compensation. Webster's compensation for that year was £8 13s. 6d. When I made the statement on the fact of the £65 10s. voucher that that rate was less than had hitherto been paid, I cannot say that I remembered that Webster had during the previous year received only one half that amount. It was under a different contract. When I said that the price £16 7s. 6d. was less than had hitherto been paid, I did so upon a list of the prices at which the contractor would supply the articles. I do not remember who made the list before me. I believe I asked for it, and, as well as I can remember, I asked the adjutant, Captain Savage. I signed the certificate on the £334 voucher because I trusted the prisoner, and I knew at the time that the voucher was for compensation. This is the usual form you have to sign; the words "services rendered" do not mean that the clothing mentioned on it have been supplied. It is the only form of voucher we have to make anything out upon. It is a mere form. One has to sign that the computations are correct. I merely sign this as a claim, and the services cannot be faithfully performed until the money has been paid. I signed the £334 voucher as a claim for men who were entitled to money in lieu of clothing. The word "services" mean this as far as I am concerned in signing it—that the men for whom this claim was made made were justly entitled to it. It is necessary, in order to obtain this money for compensation, that some article should be placed opposite to the account for the same. Money compensation should represent certain articles of clothing. These are the articles which the men do not receive, but to which they would be entitled. Each man is entitled to a certain amount of clothing every year, and if he does not get them he gets compensation, and to recover this compensation you must have something to show for it; hence these articles not supplied are put down, I believe. There is an authorized scale by which the master tailor charges as much for re-makes of garments as for making them in the first instance. I believe that order was issued by the Commandant. I know that whenever the master tailor's accounts have been submitted, the same amount has been put down for re-makes as for makes, and I believe that that was by the authority of a Garrison order. It emanated from the Commandant's office. I was under the impression that all the charges were correct when the master tailor's vouchers were submitted to me. The master tailor's vouchers were submitted to me for my initials in the course of the usual business routine—possibly by the Adjutant. I should ask if these garments had been made. I should probably ask the Adjutant. There are certain rules which have to be gone through. I do not know whose initials these are in blue pencil. It is something like the Commandant's if he ever wrote with a blue pencil, which I do not think he did. I cannot recognise them. I cannot say whether they were there before I signed. I signed these after making inquiry from the proper person, whoever that was, whether the proper services had been rendered. These vouchers are for work done for the different batteries, for which the officers commanding them have to satisfy themselves that the claim is correct. I should not inquire from them whether the orders were all right. I should just ask if it was correct, and suppose that it would not have been done unless the necessary orders had been made. I should probably ask the Adjutant if it was correct, and if he told me that it was I should sign as a matter of course. It is the proper course to inquire from the proper authorities if the matters are all right, and if I am told that they are all right to sign those vouchers. The proper authority really is the officer commanding the battery. If the Adjutant was not present I should send for the officers commanding the batteries. If he was present then I should ask him. These vouchers are submitted under an order, No. 83.

Examined by the Court.

There is nothing on these documents to show that the battery commanders have signed them. It possibly might not be right that they should come before me without the battery commander's signature. There is nothing on those documents to show that the battery commanders know anything at all about them. I think this is in Loveless' handwriting.

Examined by the Prosecutor.

There is no signature by the Adjutant to show that the "services" have been correctly performed. Unless that person initialled his authority there is nothing to authorise them. Captain Milward was Adjutant for the time being whilst Captain Savage was away at the School of Gunnery.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 p.m. same day.

At 2 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before.

Witness again appears before the Court, and being reminded of his former oath, continues:—

I cannot remember if I ever authorised these sums for re-makes. If I did it was not on my own authority. I never authorised the same charges for re-makes as for making garments upon my own authority. I suppose in signing vouchers a certain amount of authority was given. Except in that way I never authorised the charge being made. I have become aware lately of the custom by which the contractor retains one-third of the money on these vouchers for which no goods were supplied. That is since July. I was not aware of it before.

989. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General:—Yes, sir.

990. The Attorney-General: You had become aware of the custom since the Board of Inquiry? Yes.

991. How long have you become aware that that custom has existed? I have been aware that this custom has existed within the last fortnight or three weeks; that this custom has existed for some fifteen or sixteen years;—that is, that the custom that one-third has been retained by the contractor has existed for that length of time.

992. The question put to you by Mr. Heydon was this: Were you aware of the existence of the custom by which the contractor got one-third for doing nothing? Are you aware now that there was ever a custom that the contractor got one-third for doing nothing, or that the contractor got one-third to cover a possible loss that he might sustain by the men not requiring their clothes? What I understood was that the contractor received one-third, but for what I do not really know.

993. It is not part of your duty to go into every detail? No, certainly not.

994. You have a great deal of work to do, and you have people under you, and consequently you must take a great many of these things upon trust? Certainly.

995. It is not part of your duty to see whether the clothing of any individual man had been passed by the officer commanding a battery? Not of any individual man; I believe that is the duty of the battery officer.

996. I believe as far as this system is concerned you have recommended certain alterations? I have from time to time.

997. The system which has been in vogue for some years by which men received the clothing has not met with your approval? Not entirely. I think the present system is the best;—that the Government should get the size clothing from England, in which case the alteration is reduced to a minimum.

998. Do you remember ever having been told by Mr. Webster that men ought to get compensation who were not included in the battery lists? I have some recollection of the supplementary lists being brought in.

999. By Webster? Yes, by Webster.

1000. Supposing a man was entitled to compensation, and his name did not really appear in the battery list, and you were satisfied that he was entitled to compensation, sending the detail back to the officer would cause a certain amount of delay, would it not? Yes, considerable delay.

1001. So that the amount of money which a man ought to get for compensation might be included in a voucher sent in by the contractor, although the name of the man did not appear in the ordinary list? Yes, perfectly possible that is. In fact for all I know the officer of a battery may send word that a man requires compensation.

1002. Whose name is not in the list? Yes.

1003. And it was not an unusual thing under those circumstances for the amount that would go to that man to be included in the voucher? It may happen. Several months often happen before we get the pay voucher, and changes must take place. In No. 3 Battery the list has just been considerably altered owing to the delay in getting compensation.

1004. And if the lists have to go back to the battery officer the delay would be still greater? Yes, because it would have to go through the whole routine again.

1005. Colonel Airey said he was in command of the artillery for a time. Where were you then? I had not joined the force then.

1006. Did you take command of the artillery after that? Yes.

1007. Then if a custom existed before you took command the fact is that that custom would still go on, and it being an old custom it would not have been brought to your knowledge, and you would not know anything at all about it? I inquired what the custom was, and was told that it was for the men to get compensation; and we usually accept the custom until it has been countermanded. Indeed, now I know that a custom of compensation did exist in 1873, because I have seen orders bearing that date. I could produce them if necessary, I have some of them in my pocket. [Exhibit 50 handed in].

1008. Did Webster ever produce the receipt for the payment of money to amounts which did not appear in the compensation list? Not to my recollection.

1009. For instance, Lynch, is £4 10s.; did he produce you a receipt for that? When I was taking a summary of evidence for the Court he produced a receipt for £4 odd. Lynch admitted that it was a receipt.

1010. Did he show you a receipt for a man called Loveless? No, he did not, but he told me that he had one.

1011. Did he mention having received receipts from other men which he had lost? He mentioned the names of several men to whom he paid compensation money, but he was not very sure of the amounts. I think Burgess was one of the names that he mentioned. I remember that very well, because Burgess died very shortly afterwards.

1012. Was he alive at the time? No, I think not.

1013. Do you know where Loveless is? He is at present in hospital, sick.

1014. Can he be examined; Yes, I think so, but not down here.

1015. Have you had knowledge of Webster for many years? I have known Webster for nearly 13 years.

1016. All that time what character has he borne? He has been strictly honest as far as I know.

1017. You believe him to have been strictly honest during the whole of that time? Yes, to my knowledge.

1018. That is your belief? I have never discovered anything wrong with him. I have discovered a certain amount of carelessness, but nothing deliberately wrong.

1019. Well, in your opinion has he been all that time as far as you have been able to ascertain, a very upright and honorable man? As far as I have known. If I may make a statement, Mr. President, I would like to inform the Court that in addition to those orders I was verbally informed by Colonel Airey that the custom for the contractor to retain one-third had been in existence for many years.

1020. How long ago was that? About a fortnight ago.

1021. The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon:—Yes sir.

Re-examined by the prosecution:—

1022. Mr. Heydon:—Can you tell me what was the date upon which you took the summary of evidence when the prisoner made this statement to you? I cannot tell you exactly. It was within the last month. It was some time during the latter half of the month.

The President:—It was received by the A. A. G.'s Department on 16th February, 1889.

1023. Was it while you were taking that summary of evidence that he told you about this receipt? Yes; I asked him about it. I said are you quite certain you cannot find them? And during adjournment he found them amongst some old papers of his.

1024. Well, did you put those statements of his down in his statement? I cannot remember just now.

1025. I have been looking for it, and here is what he says: "I deny having embezzled the sum of £9 12s. 2d. paid me for compensation. In fact I am out of pocket by all the compensation columns, and this I feel I shall be able to prove too." You say that it was at that time that he told you about the receipt, and about Burgess? As well as I can remember it was. We sent for Lynch, and Webster produced this document from an old file.

1026. There is nothing about Lynch in this summary;—did you get anything from him? I called Lynch before me and asked him if this was his receipt, and whether he had received the money, and he said "yes."

1027. Would you look over this and tell me whether there is anything about Lynch in it? If there is not, I know that I forwarded a memorandum to the Brigade Office to say that the receipt had been produced. No; it is not here, but I know that I gave information about it directly I got it.

1028. Well, with regard to this custom which you say that you have heard about during the last fortnight, and were not aware of before;—can you tell me what was the difference between the custom followed in 1879 and the custom followed in 1887? I really cannot tell you, because 1879 was ten years ago. This compensation depends upon the contractor.

1029. From what you learned a fortnight ago about the custom, can you tell me what the difference was in 1879 and the custom in 1887? No; I cannot remember what the custom was in 1879.

1030. Yes, but merely taxing your memory with the conversation of a fortnight ago, can you tell me what the difference was between 1879 and the custom in 1887? None, I should suppose, unless it was by some special arrangement with the contractor.

1031. You have said that after the list was made up information would be sent that some additional man was entitled to compensation, and then he would get it without the trouble of sending the compensation list back, because that would lose so much time? If there was any money to get he would certainly get it.

1032. He would get it without the list being sent back to the officer? Yes.

1033. The pay-voucher simply records the number of garments. It does not record the names of the men. Would any supplemental list supplying the names of those men? It might be.

1034. Would that be a proper course? If there was no money, certainly.

1035. Then he would be entitled to pay without putting the name down at all? No; the officer commanding the battery would have to account for it.

The President:—I understand that Colonel Roberts means that if the officer commanding a battery had money over from some other compensation he could pay that man.

1036. Mr. Heydon:—Yes, but I am asking about cases now which occur when the name is not on the list. I understand that a list of men is made out (of men entitled to compensation), and the compensation that each man is entitled to is put beside his name. The amounts are added up into a total, and that amount of money is paid to the officer commanding a battery in order that he might disburse it to these men? Yes. As I have explained; so much time elapses frequently between the list being sent in and the money being received for payment that it might be necessary for a man to draw some article of clothing; then he would not receive compensation for that article, and that money would remain in the hands of the person who drew it or the officer commanding a battery.

1037. In the case of any man, who should be discovered subsequently, being made out, and the payment to whom of compensation is authorized, what record would be made of such a man? I should say that when the officer commanding a battery paid this compensation he would have to correct the list to show that he did not give the man clothing as well as compensation.

1038. But you told us that the list would not be sent back to the battery before correction, so as to save time? I am talking of when the compensation is to be paid. If you refer to No. 3 Battery you will find out where alterations have taken place.

1039. You say that after battery lists have come up word comes that some additional man is entitled to compensation? Yes.

1040. Then that compensation is put in the pay-voucher, is it? It is not added on to the pay-voucher because the money is already in hand.

1041. How can that money be in hand when that man's name is not in the compensation list? For the reason that I have given you.

1042. But that might answer in some cases, but not invariably? I should think it would invariably operate.

1043. Is there any other record taken of that man's name? What other record do you refer to?

1044. Would there be any records of the names of the men I am referring to? A supplementary list would have to be sent in.

1045. And whose duty would it be to send that list in? It would be the duty of the officer commanding the battery.

1046. And if there were no supplementary lists we would take it for granted that there would not be any other men desiring compensation? No.

1047. Do you know where the supplementary list would be? I should think in the pay-office.

1048. Would there be any record of them taken on the way? The batteries would have copies of them I should think.

1049. However, if there is one in existence at all we ought to be able to find it amongst the records at the pay-office? Yes, I should think so.

1050. How long would it take? Of course a man entitled to pay, you would ascertain if he was entitled to compensation because his commanding officer informed you that he was? Or sent up a notification.

1051. Then how long would it take to send down the battery compensation lists to him for the battery officer to add on the name of the man who was entitled to compensation? Well, it might take a long time, because the lists might have left our possession.

1052. I thought that you said that you did not send it down because it would take so much time? For this very reason, but I should have to get it back from some other office.

1053. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Supposing the voucher was being prepared for the contractor to send to the Treasury, and it turned out that in the battery list the name of one man was omitted (who was entitled to compensation for a tunic), would not the amount (the value of the tunic it would really be)—would not that be inserted in the voucher and sent on to the Treasury as if it had been supplied, when we know it had not been supplied, to prevent the delay that would accrue if that list had to be sent back to the battery officers? I should think that would be the reason.

1054. So that it does not follow that because compensation appears for five tunics whilst there are only four in the list that the man does not get that compensation money? No, certainly not.

1055. And that would subsequently come under your knowledge, and you would approve of it and ratify it? Yes, if he was entitled to it.

1056. Then it follows that the men would get compensation if his name did not appear on the list? But as I have said before the battery officer must account for it.

1057. I believe you have said already "I told the prisoner to pay all compensation but I cannot say whether the name of Lynch." It is not a fact that you told him to pay all the compensation that men were entitled to, even although their names might not appear in that list? Well my order would cover that.

By Mr. Heydon, through the Court:—

1058. Colonel Roberts has told us that he had nothing to do with making up the pay vouchers, and that he did not authorize the making up of the pay vouchers; I should like to ask him how it is that he has said to my learned friend that the value of the tunic for compensation would be inserted in the pay voucher without being inserted in the compensation list? I said, "might," be.

1059. By the President:—Would you look at that No. 3 Battery list; it is initialled by you. If you will look on the page I have shown you, you will find a red ink correction, and there are some others on some of the other pages. We want to know whether that correction would have been on the list before or after the list had been submitted to you? In all probability it would have been made afterwards. Probably one of those men had clothing, and the amount of compensation was reduced afterwards.

1060. But these red ink corrections were not made as far as you remember when it was signed by you? As far as I can remember it was a perfectly clean copy.

1061. Did you give anybody authority to alter what you had sanctioned? I did not.

1062. And if those alterations in the money columns had been made by you, would you not have initialled them? I should have initialled them, and probably given some explanation on the body of the list below.

1063. The very first name here on the No. 3 compensation list is that of Staff-sergeant Goodall. There are several red ink alterations, and in Goodall's case one in pencil. An alteration from £5 2s. 7d. to £4 13s. 3d. Can you tell by whose authority or by whom these alterations are made? I cannot.

1064. Can you tell us by whose authority they should have been made? By the authority of the officer commanding the battery.

1065. But the officer commanding the battery has already told us that they were not made by him. Is it a proper thing that vouchers that you have initialled should have been altered without your authority? I should have been informed of it, certainly. These books are battery records, you see; and I have nothing more to do with them. This is a correct copy evidently. I simply receive these battery compensation lists, and any alterations that take place after I cannot be answerable for.

1066. Can you tell us whether the voucher of Henderson & Co. are made out from the corrected lists or from the original? I cannot say. I believe Henderson made it out himself.

1067. Do the staff-sergeants as a rule draw their compensation for clothing through the batteries? As a rule I believe they do.

1068. And warrant-officers? If they are included on the battery lists, then they would draw it from the battery too.

1069. But we want to know what the custom is? I think you will find that they are attached to No. 3 Battery for everything. For rations, pay, and clothing. If you have any size rolls you will find their names on them.

1070. We want to know whether the prisoner was authorized to pay the various warrant-officers? Yes, this was authorized by me after the money was received for this reason—the contractor had got nothing on his schedule; they had to be specially made, and the contractor was paid in full.

1071. Then what is the custom with regard to warrant-officers? The officer commanding the battery should certify that their clothing is good.

1072. And all the warrant-officers are attached to No. 3 Battery? Yes, I think so.

1073. And claims from compensation should go in from officers commanding batteries? Yes; but in cases like this, where their claims have been omitted, there would have to be a special arrangement, because they have no claim upon the contractor.

1074. Reverting to 1884, when Messrs. Riley had the contract, various vouchers went in for several warrant-officers—Webster and Green, and others—apparently initialled by you;—will you look at them? There is my signature, but no initial to this one of Webster's; Peterson's is initialled, but not signed.

1075. And I should also like to know whether some of these vouchers have been apparently sent on to the Major-General, and others have not? I cannot tell you; I know that at that time Riley was asking us very frequently for his money, and perhaps these vouchers went on to the General for him to sign whilst I was away. I know some of the contractors have gone to the General for him to sign vouchers whilst I was away.

1076. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Is this the memorandum you sent on to the General:—"From Colonel Roberts. Telephoned 15th November, 1889, from Colonel Roberts to Assistant Adjutant-General. Have traced two payments for certain out of £9 12s. 2d., amounting to £6 12s. 4d. Now investigating a third payment. This refers to first charge. Compensation lists do not appear to be correct in addition?" Yes.

1077. So you were satisfied about two of the payments at all events? Yes, Loveless and Lynch's. [Exhibit 51 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

1078. By the Court:—You said that some of these vouchers were sent on very likely whilst you were away;—they are all initialled by you? No, there is one that is not, I think. In some cases these payments have been made through the pay office.

1079. Then you do not know why these vouchers are all differently initialled? No.

1080. There is one more question I want to ask you—were you satisfied with the way that Mr. Webster kept his books? I found fault with him once or twice for careless entries.

1081. But, as a rule, were you satisfied with the way his books were kept? Yes.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws. The Court adjourns until 10 o'clock Monday, 18th March.

On Monday, the 18th March, at 10 o'clock, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present:—
The same members as before.

No. 462 Acting Brigade Quarter-master Sergeant Frederick James Wilson, having been duly sworn, was examined by the Prosecutor and said:—

This is No. 3 Battery compensation list for 1887; I made those lists out in the first instance; When I made them out they were handed to the officer commanding No. 3 Battery; after that I saw them in No. 3 Battery Office; Colonel Murphy, the Officer Commanding, was present; nothing was done with the list in my presence then; I do not remember having seen them afterwards; I made the other list out too, they are supposed to be made out in duplicate; the first item in that list of Thomas Frost, is a tunic £3 17s 6d; one of these lists embodies the alterations made in the other one; they were both made out by me; I cannot say whether I made the second list out after seeing the alterations in the first. This is a true copy; they are both true as far as that goes but one is an office copy; both of these copies are supposed to be made out at the same time; they are both in my handwriting; to the best of my belief the red ink figures are in Colonel Murphy's handwriting; I never had any conversation with anybody about those alterations; I do not remember noticing them even when I made out the fair copy; Colonel Murphy passes the men and gets their signatures; there is nothing in my office that would refresh my memory as to when I made out the clean copy; to the best of my knowledge both these copies at the same time; one would be a copy of the other; Sergeant Goodall was a Staff-sergeant at that time; these figures represent the amount coming to the man after deducting 26½ per cent. and one-third.

1082. The President:—Do you wish to cross examine the witness, Mr. Attorney General?

The Attorney General:—I do, sir.

1083. Attorney General:—I see opposite Charles Goodall, there seems to have been something written in pencil? Yes.

1084. And then when this list was prepared Goodall was down for a pair of serge trousers? Yes.

1085. And the compensation for serge trousers has been struck out and compensation for a Norfolk jacket has been substituted? I don't know about the Norfolk jacket.

1086. Well look at this? That is a patrol jacket.

1087. Look at that, you see there is a No. 1 put there in the Norfolk jacket column? Yes, sir; it has been struck out.

1088. Originally it was compensation for serge trousers and that was struck out and compensation for a Norfolk jacket was put in, and then compensation for a patrol jacket? Yes, sir.

1089. And after he seems to have got compensation for a patrol jacket? Yes, sir.

1090. Here is a man called Wilson, the third man on the list; was he not down originally for compensation for serge trousers? There is a smudge, sir; I cannot tell.

1091. It is an erasure; but at all events there has been something in that column which has been rubbed out Is that not so? Yes, sir.

1092. So with Woodbridge. Does not Woodbridge appear to have been down originally for cloth trousers and then a Norfolk jacket? Yes, sir.

1093. When were those alterations made. After you prepared the list or before? It must have been afterwards, sir.

1094. Goodall was originally down for £5 2s. 7d. in that list. That is struck out and £4 13s. 3d. is put in—can you account for that alteration. Do you know how you first came to put him down for £5 2s. 7d., and then to put £4 13s. 3d. in. You have done it in both—look. I suppose you cannot explain at this distance of time how it was done? No, sir.

1095. Is that alteration in ink, in your handwriting? No, sir.

1096. Do you know whose handwriting it is? No.

1097. You see in the other list an alteration in pencil, £5 0s. 7d. has been altered to £4 13s. 3d. Do you know whose handwriting that is in? No, sir.

1098. Is it in yours? No.

1099. So that it has been altered since it left you? Yes.

1100. By whom you cannot say? No, sir.

The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness Mr. Heydon.

Mr. Heydon:—Yes, sir.

1101. Mr. Heydon:—I think you said to my learned friend that Staff-sergeant Goodall was first of all down for a pair of serge trousers, and then that was scratched out and a Norfolk jacket put in place of it, and then that was scratched out and a patrol jacket put in place of it? No, sir; the patrol jacket remained.

1102. If a patrol jacket was put down instead of a pair of trousers the amount of compensation would be increased? Yes, sir.

1103. By the Court:—By whose authority did you deduct one-third the value of the garment? My authority was Mr. Webster's.

[His evidence is read over to him as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy, being recalled, is reminded of his former oath, and examined further by the Court:—

1104. Would you look at that list, Colonel Murphy. I think there is Sergeant Goodall's name at the top, and there have been some alterations? Yes.

1105. Were those alterations done with your sanction? I should like to see my own list. There were two lists sent in.

1106. Here is your list? There were some differences, and we had to send in another list. It was sent in in blank—I mean without signatures. This is the first list that was sent in; there were some mistakes, and a second list had to be made out; and these were the fair copies of the second list embodying the corrections.

1107. Whom were they made by? They were not made by me, nor, as far as I know, in my office.

1108.

1108. Then that second list had also got alterations in it? Yes; I explained that in my evidence.
1109. Yes; but Sergeant Goodall's alterations appear on the corrected list? I understood that it was corrected before it went into Colonel Roberts' office.
1110. That is a copy of the corrected copy? Yes.
1111. That alteration in Goodall's amount was made in your office? Yes.
1112. And it ought to have been initialled by you? Yes, it ought to have been initialled by me. If this list is to be added up with the corrections in, you would find that it would come to the correct amount. If it had been added up without that alteration, you would find that the amount would come to more.
1113. But we want to find where the alteration was made? Oh, that alteration was made in my office, and ought to have been initialled by me.
1114. Do you know what compensation Goodall got? £4 13s. 3d.
1115. He signed for it in your presence, I suppose? Yes.
1116. Was Sergeant Goodall the only staff sergeant in your battery who drew compensation that year? He was the only staff-sergeant in my battery who was paid compensation by me.
1117. You have all the staff-sergeants attached to you? I have all the staff-sergeants attached to me.
1118. Are they attached for clothing as well as pay and rations? Some are attached for clothing, and some for pay and rations only.
1119. And warrant officers are attached to you also? Yes.
1120. Are they attached for pay, rations, and clothing? They ought to be.
1121. Did you ever pay them compensation for clothing? No; I don't remember having paid any staff-sergeants or warrant officers compensation for clothing. I remember applying for it.
1122. Would you look at that list and tell me if you have ever seen it before? No; I have never seen that list.
1123. Turn over three or four pages, and you will see another from Battery No. 3? No; I have never seen that list either.
1124. You were in command of the battery in 1886? Yes, sir.
1125. You say that these warrant officers and staff sergeants were attached to your battery, and are you aware whether they were ever paid any compensation? Not in 1887, as far as I know.
1126. And would it have passed through your hands if they had received compensation? I think it ought to have done.
1127. Do you know whether it is the custom in the corps to which you belong, for the warrant officers and staff sergeants to draw their compensation through any other means, except through the officer commanding their battery? I do not really know of my own knowledge.
1128. Do you know that it is the custom for anybody else to pay compensation? Well, as a matter of inference, I conclude that, as it had not come through me, it must have come through somebody else.
1129. By Mr. Heydon, through the Court:—When the prisoner paid you the £154 10s. 6d., did he ask you how much he wanted, or did he pay you the amount without asking you what you wanted? The prisoner said, I have received the compensation from the contractor, and the amount is £154 10s. 6d., which was two-thirds of the compensation on the list, less 26½ per cent.
1130. He did not ask you how much was coming to you;—how much was your share? No; he gave me the sum that I applied for.
1131. Then there ought really to be four existing copies of this list—there would be the original and duplicate of the one that was sent in and corrected, and the original and duplicate of the one that was sent in after correction? Yes.
1132. By the Attorney-General, through the Court:—You are clear about that, Colonel Murphy, that the money was paid to you without your asking about the amount? Yes; the amount on the corrected list. There was no question about it.
1133. You do not mean to say that the prisoner said to you, your share or the share of the battery is so much;—he simply gave you the money? Yes; he simply gave me the money.
1134. What did he say to you when he gave you the money? He said that it was compensation money from the contractor, and handed me £154 10s. 6d., and that is the amount on my corrected list.
1135. There is a compensation list missing? Well, I do not know whether it is missing or not.
1136. You do not see it before you, do you;—and there was an original and duplicate of that list, was there not? Yes; and it is not before me.
1137. Can you say what appeared in that list from recollection? This is the original list which was sent in, and here are the corrections made. The original list is apparently before me.
1138. Then what is not before you, Colonel Murphy? The original and duplicate of the second list. There were three lists made.
1139. Have you the list retained in the office? Yes.
1140. You have only one original before you? This may be an original or it may be a duplicate.
1141. And there is another one that is not there? There are two lists that are not there.
1142. What did this Goodall get compensation for eventually? He got compensation for one tunic, one pair of cloth trousers, and one patrol jacket.
1143. When the list left you, was he not down for compensation for serge trousers? Yes, it was on it.
1144. Well that is what I say;—when that list left you, he was down for compensation for serge trousers? No, for cloth trousers.
1145. When that list left you, was not Goodall down for compensation for serge trousers;—look at it? Apparently there is an erasure here.
1146. So that, can you say that when that list left you, he was not down for serge trousers? I cannot say, for this is not the list upon which the compensation returns were made out.
1147. Well try again;—was he not put down for a Norfolk jacket in the first instance, and was not a patrol jacket put down afterwards? Yes.
1148. Well, when the list was sent in originally, was he not down for serge trousers? No.
1149. But you said he was? No; I say he was down for a Norfolk jacket.
1150. Well, let us take it that you must have passed his Norfolk jacket as being good enough for another year? If the other list was as wrong as possible, it does not matter as long as this was the one that was sent in.
1151. It does appear from that list that he was entitled to a Norfolk jacket? Yes; it does appear as if he was.

1152. The President :—Do staff sergeants wear Norfolk jackets? No, they do not.
1153. The Attorney-General :—Well, it may have been a mistake for a patrol jacket? Yes.
1154. All I care about showing is that these lists are altered and corrected, and although they are sent in as correct they are not always correct. You knew perfectly well when you prepared that list that the men were only to get two-thirds? Yes, when the second list was prepared.
1155. And you knew where the other third went? Yes. I knew it went to the contractor.
1156. You knew that all along? Yes.
1157. And you knew when you sent in that list that two-thirds went to the men and one-third to the contractor? Yes.
1158. Do you know of your own knowledge that the custom by which the contractor deducted one-third for himself received the approval of General Richardson? I cannot say.
1159. Have you heard it spoken of in the Force? I have heard it spoken of.
1160. You have heard it spoken of in the Force that the custom which has existed that the custom was approved by General Richardson when he was Colonel Richardson? Yes, I have heard it spoken of as having received his approval.
1161. You know that Colonel Airey was commanding this Force before Colonel Roberts? Yes.
1162. In those two lists you say you received £154 10s. 6d. On the amended list the amount only comes to £149 8s.; there is a difference of £5 2s. 6d. to account for. Why was it you received from the prisoner the whole amount on the first list, not on the amended list? I stated that if the Court would add that list up they would find that it would come to £154 10s. 6d. I reported that there was a balance.
1163. Were the alterations which changed the total from £154 10s. 6d. to £149 8s.—were those alterations made after receiving the money from the prisoner? Yes, they were.
- [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness retires.]

Mr. Claude Solomon, chief paymaster to the Military Forces, having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor, and states :—

I have made a search for the contracts for the supply of clothing for the Military Forces as far back as I can find them. I have them here; they represent the years 1874, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1881, 1882, 1883, and 1884, also 1887 and 1888. Those are the forms of the contract as far as I can see from them, and those are all that I have been able to find. There are eleven, including two for 1887. I discovered them in the office. I cannot say whether there is such a form recorded in the office every year. They may have been sent on to the pay office with the vouchers.

Mr. Heydon :—I tender these documents, Mr. President.

The Attorney-General objected to the documents being placed in evidence on the grounds—(1) that they were not original contracts, and (2) that they were immaterial to the case.

Mr. Heydon admitted that the first was a fatal objection and did not further press the point.

The President :—The Attorney-General's objection is upheld.

Witness continuing :—We know nothing whatever of compensation vouchers. I know nothing at all of papers with regard to compensation in 1877. I have never seen any compensation pay vouchers since I have been in the Force; but I have seen vouchers for clothing supplied by the contractor. I have seen vouchers for clothing of late years. Up to 1888 the vouchers were paid by the Treasury. Since 1888 they have been paid by the pay office. If vouchers for clothing supplied were paid at the Treasury they were passed through the pay office for the signature of the paymaster; they would be sent to the Treasury and paid; I remember a voucher for clothing supplied to the amount of £65 10s. coming to the pay office for signature—that is the document; that was sent on by the pay office to the Treasury for payment in the ordinary course; it returned to our department with a minute on it; I have the minute from the Treasury with me; the voucher was handed by a clerk into the pay office to Warrant-Officer Webster, and the minute was held at the pay office with the duplicate voucher; it was Pay-clerk Loney who handed the voucher to Mr. Webster; I was not present at the time; I did not give him the pay voucher to take up to Mr. Webster; I know that he handed it to Mr. Webster, because he told me so; the duplicate voucher was held in our office; the other voucher never came to our office again; this voucher which has an endorsement on it by Colonel Roberts was the one Loney gave to Mr. Webster; at the time that voucher came to me it had not a minute on it from Colonel Roberts or from the Colonial Secretary; these vouchers came to the pay office from the Artillery Brigade office, and were forwarded by us to the Treasury; I have some of the pay vouchers in the time of Master-tailor Behan; they are receipted by Behan; these are all that I can trace; they extend from the 1st September, 1883, to December, 1885, a period of sixteen months; I do not know of any authority for a charge of re-making at the price of making garments; I know of no authority for a charge of re-making at all; I do not know of any authority for charging as much for making extensive alterations as for making a garment altogether; as far as I am aware, there is no authority for the pay office paying vouchers for re-makes.

1164. The President :—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General :—Yes please, sir.

1165. The Attorney-General :—I see here in this first voucher an item for making goods, can you say whether they were made or not? I cannot.

1166. And here is an item for re-making? No.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdrew.]

Major-General John Soame Richardson, C.B., having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor, and states :—

I AM the officer commanding the Military Forces of New South Wales; I have been in command of the local forces since 1865; I was not aware of a custom by which the contractor for the supply of clothing received one-third of the value of the clothing for nothing; I was not aware that he received one-third of the compensation for clothing; I first heard of it just before the Court of Inquiry commenced; I was not not until latterly aware of a custom by which warrant officers received the full value of their garments in compensation, instead of two-thirds, although I believe a case in which it was done came before me, and I have forgotten whose case it was; there is an endorsement by me of the £65 10s. voucher; I took the signature of the officer commanding the Permanent Artillery, to the effect that the amount was correct, and I endorsed it accordingly; my endorsement was after that memo. signed by Colonel Roberts; at the time that I endorsed that, I was not aware what amount to warrant officers had previously been paid. [Exhibit 51 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] There was an alteration in the form of contract about the date of my garrison of the 9th February, 1883; I cannot tell you whether it was an extensive alteration or not; then, on the 5th June, 1883, and the 29th June, I issued a general order authorizing certain charges for making garments and certain charges for the fitting and alterations of the garments. [Exhibits 52 and 53 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] I never authorized any charges for making garments, other than this charge of "fitting and alteration" mentioned in this order; I was not aware that charges were being made by the master tailor, that charges were being made for re-making garments on the same scale as for making them; I would not have authorized it; it would be necessary to issue a garrison order to authorize such an alteration as that; I cannot remember whether I authorized any change in the quality or pattern of the warrant officers' uniform between 1886 and 1887; there might have been such an order regarding trimmings and so on, but I cannot recollect; I am not aware of any order justifying an increase in the cost of the warrant officers' clothing from some £8 odd in the year 1886 to some £16 odd in the year 1887; I do not remember the question of increasing the cost of the warrant officers' garments being brought under my notice; if I had made such an order for increasing the cost of warrant officers' clothing I think I should remember it; I remember in the very early days, after the Force was first organized, some of the officers came to me to point out that the men would be entitled to compensation, and I remember saying to them, "Well, see what arrangements you can make with the contractor," but what the arrangement was I really cannot say; I should think that would be about the year 1872; in those days the clothing was all made in the Colony, and the man, instead of having his clothes made up for him by the contractor, elected to receive a certain amount of compensation, which would be settled, I believe, with the contractor; I have never heard what custom was adopted; compensation never comes before me; I make an annual examination of books under section 25, paragraphs from 27 to 44, Queen's Regulations.

1167. The President.—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? If you please, sir.

1168. The Attorney-General.—I suppose you really mean that these compensation matters are matters that you have not been in the habit of dealing with? I have not dealt with compensation.

1169. Somebody else inferior to you in the Force does that? It has been between the officer commanding the artillery, the paymaster, and the contractor.

1170. When you say that the officers came to you to say that some of the men were entitled to compensation, do you mean that those officers were Colonel Airey and Major Fitzsimons? I think they must have been, for they were the commanding officers of the corps; so I think they must have been.

1171. Were they the officers? I cannot swear that they were.

1172. Do you remember? I don't remember the individual officers.

1173. That is not an answer. I ask you whether it was Major Airey and Captain Fitzsimons, and you say you don't remember? No.

1174. Do you remember those officers coming to you and saying that they had made an arrangement with the contractors? No.

1175. Would you take it upon yourself that these officers, whoever they were, did not tell you that the arrangement they had made with the contractor was that he was to receive one-third and the men were to receive two-thirds. Mind, it is a question of asserting; it is not a question of swearing? No, I won't assert it.

1176. Is your memory a good one? On some points.

1177. And you found it necessary to make some little memoranda up? Certainly.

1178. And you made them up from books and documents, haven't you? No; it was more in order to refer, if necessary, to the exact section under which we do certain things.

1179. Then it is not to refresh your memory at all? No; it is more to refer you the sections under which we do certain things.

1180. Is there a master tailor in the Volunteer Artillery as well as in this Force? I do not know. They manage with the clothing entirely themselves without any reference to us.

1181. Supposing there is a master tailor, have not the charges of the master tailor to be authorised by you? No; the whole thing is handed over to the officers commanding the different regiments. The Government merely pays £2 a head for each efficient man.

1182. Do you know that the same charges are made in the Volunteer Artillery for re-makes that are made for makes? I know nothing at all about it.

1183. Who would be the officer who would tell us that? Colonel Wells or the Adjutant, Captain Nathan. All I have to do with the Volunteer Artillery is to see that the corps is properly clothed.

1184. The President.—Do you wish to re-examine the witness Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon: There are some questions I should like to ask him.

1185. Mr. Heydon.—General Richardson, you cannot say whether or not these officers who waited upon you told you that the contractor was to get one-third? No, I cannot.

1186. Do you remember that they told you that he was to get one-third to which he was not entitled? No, certainly not.

1187. You were asked by my learned friend whether you could say positively whether the contractor was to get one-third of the cost for garments that he never did supply, and that he had no right to supply? No, I was never told that.

1188. By the Court.—You were three or four days inspecting those books, were you not? I cannot say positively.

1189. About how long did it take you? I dare say it took one or two days. Webster's books were included amongst them.

1190. Would that be an audit? No. The inspecting officer is not an auditing officer. He merely has to see whether all the books are kept in the prescribed system.

1191. Who would audit them, then? The Commanding Officer, Colonel Roberts, or other officers of the regiment acting under him, are supposed to audit them.

1192. Did those vouchers ever come before you, General Richardson? No.

1193. What is done with vouchers as a rule for the payment of money? They go direct to the paymaster, except perhaps one or two which may be submitted to me accidentally. If there is any question of the hastening of payment, for example.

1194. Now will you look at those vouchers for 1886—you will see that some are initialled by you and some are not. We want to know the reason for this? That may be a case in point, but as a rule they do not come before me. It has sometimes happened that the contractor has brought them to me to ask me to initial a voucher particularly in order to facilitate his payment.

1195. Has the officer commanding the Artillery authority to sanction the charges made by the master tailor for what are termed re-makes? Certainly not.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned for luncheon. At 2 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled. Present: The same members as before.

Major-General Richardson was reminded of his former oath and further re-examined by Mr. Heydon through the Court.

1196. Mr. Heydon:—Colonel Roberts has initialled some of these vouchers, and in some cases the quartermaster's initials are on as well? The initials of the officer commanding the Artillery will be on before mine.

1197. Would the initials of the prisoner be on before yours? Oh, certainly.

Mr. Heydon:—I tender this document,

The Attorney-General objected to the document inasmuch as it contained a reference to the clothing of Sergeant Peterson, whose evidence had been previously expunged by the direction of the Court.

The President:—The Court will receive this document, not as having anything to do with Peterson's evidence, which is expunged, but merely because it shows the procedure of the orders from the prisoner to the contractor. It appears that this compensation voucher went through the pay-office on the 21st June, and this jacket was ordered on the 22nd May. It does not show when the garment was received. It merely shows that there was an order from Mr. Webster to Mr. Riley, countersigned by the Adjutant.

1198. By the Court:—The Paymaster used to be called the Pay and Quarter Master I think? Witness: Yes, previous to 1885.

1199. Did his duties as Pay and Quarter Master extend to the supervision of the Brigade Pay and Quarter Master's accounts? No. He was merely a vehicle for getting the clothing and for the payment.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B.]

[The witness withdraws.]

Gorwillock Loney, having been called and duly sworn, says:

I am a clerk in the pay office; this voucher came from the contractor to the paymaster in the first place, and then it was signed by the paymaster, and sent to the Treasury; the examiner sent it back; the examiner's name is Cantor; an artilleryman came to the pay-office for it; I do not know whether I said anything to him; I do not know who the man was; he brought a memorandum for it; Mr. Solomon has the memorandum that this man brought.

1200. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General:—No, sir, thank you.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B.]

[The witness withdraws.]

No. 1060, Quartermaster-serjeant John Taylor, New South Wales Artillery, is called and duly sworn:—

The Attorney-General (to Mr. Heydon): What charge are you going to examine this witness upon?

Mr. Heydon:—On the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth charges.

The Attorney-General submitted that the fifth charge was invalid, on the ground that the prisoner was not charged therein with having embezzled any goods with the care of which he was charged; it was perfectly consistent with the wording of the charge, he argued, that the prisoner had embezzled goods over which he was not the custodian at all, or indeed that he had embezzled goods which were not the property of the New South Wales Artillery.

Mr. Heydon submitted that the objection was not a good one, inasmuch as the prisoner had been charged under the proper section in the words of the section, and that it was unnecessary for the explanatory words of the charge to be technically accurate; on page 609 of the Queen's Regulations that very principle was laid down.

The Attorney-General argued that it was not a mere matter of form, it was a matter of substance; there was really no offence at all laid down in the charge.

The Court is cleared. Upon the reopening of the Court

The President said: Mr. Attorney-General, the Court overrules your objection.

The witness was then examined by the Prosecutor and said:—

One of the initials to the Norfolk jacket is not mine; as battery quartermaster serjeant I have prepared compensation lists; in 1886 I sent in a compensation list of each item that each man requires; I was not present in 1886 in Mr. Webster's office when there was a conversation as to how those sheets should be drawn up; I was present in 1887 when such a conversation took place; we were told by Mr. Webster that we had to deduct one-third, consequently the lists were sent back by him; he did not explain that to me, but I heard some rough words spoken between Mr. Webster and Sergeant Wilson; we made out a fresh list then, and deducted the one-third; this is my battery clothing book for 1888 and 1889; we put down the men's names and a red ink "C" in some instances where the man has applied for compensation; they are supposed to sign here when they have received the whole of the amount, but as it was not due until the 31st March they put their signature there; I am responsible for the correctness of of the book; wherever a garment is put down and initialled, you may take it that the man has received his clothing, and wherever there is a red ink "C" you may take it that he applied for compensation; this book is not signed by me.

Mr. Heydon:—I beg to tender the books.

The Attorney-General:—I object to the receipt of the books by the Court.

The Court was closed. When the Court reopened, the President said:

The Court upholds the objection entered by the Attorney-General, and they cannot receive these books in evidence, as they are not signed by the commanding officer or the officer whose duty it is to make such a record.

Witness continuing:—I issued the articles of clothing and entered them in the books. The officer commanding the battery certifies to the correctness of the books; of course, I keep the books—in one sense. 1201. The President.] Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General: No, sir.

1202. By the Court.] Does the commanding officer certify annually to the correctness of the clothing books? I cannot say.

1203. During the time you have been quarter-master sergeant, has he ever signed those clothing books? No, sir.

1204. Does he ever see them? Yes, he sees them about once a month.

1205. What does he see them for? To see that every article is signed for.

1206. In fact, to see that the book is properly kept? Yes.

1207. And he has never signed it? No, although he has looked over it about once a month to see if it was correct.

1208. Is that your signature in that book opened before you there? Yes.

1209. Well, tell us what it all is? Before the Commandant's inspection, the prisoner called me up and said that it was necessary to have my signature in the column, and after looking to see that they were correct, I put my signature there. That was in 1887 to 1888;—that is, the articles that I have received, and also some of the men from the Brigade Store—I don't say that I have received them all.

1210. And those with the "C" over them—what does that mean? Those are the men who applied for compensation, and in this year—1887 to 1888—received it? Yes.

1211. And you certify that they received it? Yes.

1212. In fact, your compensation list ought to correspond with this list? Yes.

1213. And you signed that to your knowledge those men received the compensation money? Before signing this book, I have a look at my own private compensation list, and if these articles are correct, I sign it.

1214. In fact, if any man's name was done with a small "C" against it, and that was not correct, you would not sign your name to the sheet? Certainly not.

1215. Can you tell what those are? Yes, this is 1887 and 1888.

1216. And what is the next? That is the same list.

1217. How do those lists come there? I cannot say, sir.

1218. Do you put them there? No, sir.

1219. Which is the original of these two, or are they both made together? I cannot say which is the original list.

1220. How is it made out? I made it out in triplicate.

1221. Two of them you sent to the Brigade Office? No, I keep two myself.

1222. Which is the one you sent to the Brigade Office? This is the one, according to the stamp.

1223. Were these alterations made in your office? No, not to my knowledge.

1224. Are the alterations embodied in the second list? From the appearance of the list they have been made in the second one.

1225. Is this a copy in your handwriting of the second one? No, it is done by a clerk in No. 1 Battery.

1226. You send this sheet in clean? Yes, sir; I would not think of sending it in with all these alterations in.

1227. And you don't know how they came there? No, sir.

1228. You said just now that you heard some rough words between Sergeant Wilson and the prisoner. Do you remember the purport of those words or the words themselves? I cannot remember the exact words, sir.

1229. Do you remember the purport of them? I remember the subject of the conversation; it was about the one-third. The first list we sent in was less the 26½ per cent. only, and Mr. Webster said he was not going to do our work; we were to take off the one-third.

1230. But do you remember what Sergeant Wilson said? Sergeant Wilson asked what the one-third was for, and I don't think he gave him any satisfactory answer.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

The Court adjourned till 10 o'clock the following day.

On Tuesday, the 19th March, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment at 10 a.m. Present:
The same members as before.

The Attorney-General asked the permission of the Court for an accountant, whom he was going to call as a witness for the defence, to be present during the examination of the remaining witnesses for the prosecution, and, Mr. Heydon offering no objection, permission was granted. [Exhibits 63 and 64 handed in signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

Lieutenant-Colonel George John Airey being recalled is reminded of his former oath and further examined through the Court by the Attorney-General.

1231. The Attorney-General:—You said the other day that General Richardson, then Colonel Richardson, had authorised you to see the contractors and make arrangements with them about compensation, and so on? Yes.

1232. Did you, as a matter of fact, make arrangements with the contractor that they were to keep for themselves one-third and that the other two-thirds were to go to the men for compensation? Certainly not.

1233.

1233. What arrangement did you make? As I explained the other day, the men got their order and took it down to the contractor themselves and made their own arrangements with him.

1234. Did you make any arrangement with the contractor? To the best of my recollection I did not.

1235. Will you swear that you did not? I could not swear it at this length of time.

1236. Did you tell General Richardson, then Colonel Richardson, that you had made an arrangement with the contractor, and that the contractor was to receive one-third? No, I did not.

1237. Did you say in the presence of Colonel Roberts and Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy, within the last three weeks, that you had made such an arrangement, and that the General, when he was Colonel Richardson, had approved of it? To the best of my recollection I did not.

1238. Will you take it upon yourself to say that you did not say this to Colonel Roberts and Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy? To the best of my belief I did not.

1239. Will you go beyond that and say positively that you did not? To the best of my recollection I did not.

1240. It is only three weeks ago? To the best of my recollection I did not.

1241. Did you say that you could make short work of this case against Webster by saying that you had made such an arrangement, and that the General, when he was Colonel Richardson, had approved of it? I never said anything of that sort.

1242. Nor to that effect? Nor to that effect.

1243. The President:—Do you wish to further re-examine this witness Mr. Heydon, because if you do you may put the questions through the Court. Mr. Heydon: I do sir.

1244. Mr. Heydon:—What is your belief, Colonel Airey, as to making any arrangements with the contractor yourself; do you believe that you did or that you did not? I do not believe I did make any arrangement myself as far as I can recollect.

1245. Have you any recollection of making any arrangements with him yourself? No.

1246. Do you think that if you had made such an arrangement yourself it would have gone so completely out of your mind as to leave you no recollection of it? I think not. To the best of my recollection all these arrangements were made through the Paymaster in those days.

1247. You have been asked whether you said, within the last three weeks, that you had made any arrangement with the contractor, that you had told General Richardson, when he was Colonel Richardson, and that he had approved of it; have you any recollection of having said that to anybody? I don't recollect having said it.

1248. If you had said it—of course we will presume that you would not make untrue statements—if you had said it, would it have been true? No.

1249. By the President:—Do you remember who the contractor was when the arrangement was first made? There have been several contractors.

1250. Yes; but in 1872 or 1873, when the arrangements were first made, can you tell who the contractor was? I cannot be sure, I think it was Moore and Henderson.

1251. Was it not Moore, Henderson, and Co.? I think it was.

1252. That firm became Henderson and Boucher, and now it is Henderson and Company? I believe so.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81B. The witness withdraws.]

The Attorney-General stated that he had forgotten, when asking Lieut.-Colonel Airey about the alleged conversation, to refresh his memory by allusion to the time and place at which such conversation was said to have occurred. Perhaps it would be as well if the witness was recalled and further examined on the point.

Lieut.-Colonel Airey, being recalled, is reminded of his former oath, and cross-examined by the Attorney-General:—

1253. The Attorney-General:—I want to ask you if you did not say in the presence of Colonel Roberts and Lieut.-Colonel Murphy what I have asked you already, since the beginning of March, and at the Victoria Barracks? I think I have said no.

1254. Yes, but I did not refer to the place. Now I want to direct you to the place in which the alleged statement was made;—the place is in the messroom of the Victoria Barracks, and the time, since the beginning of March? I can say —

1255. You have already denied it, and now I am directing your attention to the time and place;—do you still say that you did not say it? I still say that I did not.

1256. Are you prepared to swear it? Will you repeat the question. I believe what you ask me is that I have made arrangements —

1257. Have you forgotten it already; the shorthand-writer will read the question to you (question read). Will you take it upon yourself to swear that you did not say what I have asked you in substance and effect? I have already said —

1258. Will you take upon yourself to say that you did not say it in substance? I have no recollection of it.

1259. Will you swear that you did not? I will not answer that question. I have already sworn that I did not say any one of them, and I will not swear the other. I am prepared to say that I never said that I will make short work of the case.

1260. Very well. Did you say, in substance, the same thing;—will you swear that, in substance, you never said you could soon put an end to the case against Webster? I will swear that I did not say it, in substance or in meaning.

1261. Will you say that you didn't say, in substance and effect, that you had made arrangements with the contractor, and told General Richardson, when he was Colonel Richardson, that you had done it, and that he approved of it? To the best of my recollection I did not say that.

1262. Will you swear it? To the best of my recollection I did not say it.

1263. I submit that the witness is bound to answer my question—to say whether he will swear it or not. The liberty of the prisoner may depend upon his answer?

The President:—You must answer the question—Yes or No—Colonel Airey.

May I have the question read again?

Question read again by the shorthand-writer.

1264. Will you now swear that you did not say it? Ah, now it is beginning to dawn upon me—
1265. Oh, it is beginning to dawn upon you, is it;—will you answer my question, yes or no? I decline to answer it, yes or no.
1266. The President:—An answer is required from you, as to whether you will swear the conversation did or did not take place? I will swear that a conversation took place.
1267. Then will you answer the question as to the subject and effect of that conversation? It is putting it in a different light from the Counsel altogether.
1268. The Attorney-General:—The Counsel knows what he is about without help from you, Colonel Airey? Yes; but you are trying to put words into my mouth which I did not say.
1269. Will you swear that in the mess-room of the Victoria Barracks, since the 1st March, in the presence of Colonel Roberts and Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy, you did not say what has been read to you? I am certain that I did not say—
1270. Will you swear it? Yes; I will swear that I did not say in substance or effect what was put by you.
1271. The President:—Do you wish to put any question to the witness, Mr. Heydon?
Mr. Heydon:—Yes, sir.
1272. Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—Now for your explanation, Colonel Airey;—I would ask you what you did say? My conversation was relative to something else altogether; it was about the compensation of 1886. I had said that I had seen the General about it that morning, and he had said that he would approve of it.
1273. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—That is, that he would approve in 1889 of something that had taken place in 1886? The matter had not been settled. The money had not been paid.
1274. And you will swear that you didn't say the other thing? I will swear that I did not say the other thing.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81B. The witness withdraws.

Lieutenant and Quarter-master Little having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor, and said:—

I was a Member of a Board of Inquiry on the clothes and compensation, and during the time of that inquiry I made investigations in the matters of cloth and clothing received into the prisoner's store with the view of balancing those matters as far as possible; I made inquiry into the quantities of rank and file tunics, cloth trousers, serge trousers, jumpers, and Norfolk jackets that had been received and issued; I could make no investigation into the staff-sergeants' and band clothing because there was no record of it in the prisoner's books, therefore this inquiry was confined to rank and file garments and sergeants' trousers; the prisoner was asked if he could show where staff-sergeants' and sergeants' clothing was entered, and he said in effect that he could not; he did not say that he could not show where the band clothing was entered; he said it was entered amongst the rank and file clothing; the books were before the Board when he was asked that question; I think he had access to them, but I cannot say, as the President had the books under his control; I think he referred to them two or three times, but I cannot be sure; the Brigade clothing-book (exhibit 45) covers from 1881 to October of 1887; the entries cover the clothing up to the end of March, 1888; from that book it appears that there were on hand on the 31st March, 1886, 10 tunics, 8 serge trousers, 18 serge jumpers, 14 Norfolk jackets; it is stated there also that the following articles were received from the batteries in 1886: 12 cloth tunics, 5 cloth trousers, 8 serge trousers, 5 serge jumpers, and 11 Norfolk jackets; I did not say that there was any balance of articles in the store in 1887; then the following articles were received from the batteries in 1887, at least I take it so, although there is no date to the entry: 30 cloth tunics, 50 cloth trousers, 7 serge trousers, 5 serge jumpers, and 10 Norfolk jackets; the amounts stated to have been received from the contractor for clothing in the year 1886 was from the 17th September to the 19th November: 543 cloth tunics, 517 cloth trousers, 540 serge trousers, 541 serge jumpers, 540 Norfolk jackets; on the 13th May, 1887, the following articles were received from Henderson & Company: 396 cloth tunics, 425 cloth trousers, 438 serge trousers, 417 serge jumpers, 433 Norfolk jackets; the following articles are here stated to have been received from the contractor for the year 1888: 50 cloth trousers and 50 serge trousers; during the course of the inquiry I made certain investigations as to the quantity of cloth that had been received into the prisoner's store; I mentioned to him that there was a great deal of cloth received that I could not see any account of, and he forwarded me one subsequently of the garments made from cloth, showing the quantity of cloth used in the making up of these garments, and the number of garments made; on this return the following figures are given: 13 tunics, 49 jumpers, 170 cloth trousers, 91 serge trousers; these were received from master-tailor in 1886; in 1887 the numbers made were: 17 cloth tunics, 2 jumpers, 26 cloth trousers, 21 serge trousers; and in 1888: 1 tunic, 88 cloth trousers, and 149 serge trousers were received from the master-tailor; this is a return which the prisoner forwarded to me subsequently; I did not tell him that there was a deficiency; I was furnished with another return made by the master-tailor; this second return contains the following figures:—cloth trousers 64, from material; serge trousers 104, from material; and taking those items into account I cannot find any deficiency in the cloth. [Exhibits 66 and 67 were handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.] The following articles were issued to batteries from 6th April to August, 1886: 9 cloth tunics, 36 cloth trousers, 18 serge trousers, 7 serge jumpers, 8 Norfolk jackets; the following articles were issued to Nos. 1, 2, and 3 Batteries, on the 4th November, 1886: 350 cloth tunics, 350 cloth trousers, 368 serge trousers, 350 serge jumpers, 361 Norfolk jackets; the following articles were issued to Nos. 1 and 3 Batteries on the 1st April, 1887: 210 cloth tunics, 238 cloth trousers, 260 serge trousers, 229 serge jumpers, 231 Norfolk jackets; the following new articles appear as having been issued by sale: 57 cloth trousers, 63 serge trousers; the Board assembled and took stock, and I was present on the 27th October last year; there were in stock at that time 96 cloth tunics for gunners, 19 Norfolk jackets, 28 serge jumpers; then there appears here a statement that the following articles were issued since the 6th July, 1887: 34 cloth tunics, 63 cloth trousers, 72 serge trousers, 35 serge jumpers, 35 Norfolk jackets; I have a record of the clothing issued in 1888, as appears in the prisoner's books; I have got his entries in the book: 291 tunics, 309 cloth trousers, 333 serge trousers, 312 Norfolk jackets, 308 jumpers; in the prisoner's stock-book the following articles appear in hand on the 1st January, 1886.

60 cloth tunics, 112 cloth trousers, 119 sergo trousers, 100 sergo jumpers, 78 Norfolk jackets; from No. 3 Battery 12 tunics, 5 cloth trousers, 8 sergo trousers, 5 jumpers, 11 jackets; the issues to the batteries of 1886 also appear; issued since 1st January, 1886—50 cloth tunics, 112 cloth trousers, 111 sergo trousers, 82 sergo jumpers, 61 Norfolk jackets; from the contractor in 1886—543 tunics, 511 cloth trousers, 510 sergo trousers, 541 jumpers, 540 Norfolk jackets; from the contractor in 1887—396 tunics, 425 cloth trousers, 438 sergo trousers, 417 jumpers, 433 Norfolk jackets; then, as before, from the contractor in 1888—500 cloth trousers, and 50 sergo trousers; received from 1, 2, and 3 batteries in 1887—30 cloth tunics, 50 cloth trousers, 7 sergo trousers, and 10 Norfolk jackets; then from the return which has been put in by the prisoner to account for the cloth received from the master tailor in 1886—130 tunics, 170 cloth trousers, 91 sergo trousers, 49 jumpers; then from the master tailor, 1887—17 tunics, 26 cloth trousers, 21 sergo trousers, and 2 jumpers; from the master tailor in 1888—1 tunic, 150 cloth trousers, and 253 sergo trousers, which make up a grand total of 1,072 tunics, 1,507 cloth trousers, 1,530 sergo trousers, 1,119 jumpers; I ascertained the issues in the year 1886, by taking the battery book between the 1st January and the 31st March, 1886; the issues were—76 tunics, 74 cloth trousers, 77 sergo trousers, 75 Norfolk jackets, 70 jumpers.

[Questions interposed by the Attorney-General.]

1275. Are there not entries in these battery-books—not a single one here and there, but many entries showing issues of goods which did not appear in Webster's books? I cannot point out one; the totals of Webster's books and these battery-books do not agree; the battery-books show a greater issue than Webster's, and I took the battery-books to give him credit for them.

1276. What is the total difference of issues shown? I did not make any account of it, but to the best of my knowledge it might run from five suits of clothing to fifteen.

1277. And where were the others entered that were issued; supposing there was more clothing issued where would it appear? I do not think that it would appear at all. If it did not appear in those books I do not think you would find them anywhere.

1278. They would appear in the soldier's private books would they not? I do not know.

1279. Every soldier has got a private book in which he puts down things of this kind, does he not? I do not know, sir.

Examination-in-chief continued:—

[During the course of the inquiry the officers commanding batteries were asked to furnish a list of the clothing appearing in the battery lists for the years 1886 and 1887, but not for year 1888, and they did so, these are the returns that were furnished. Two of them are signed by the officers commanding the battery. This amended one is not signed yet. It was sent in before it was signed, but the difference is very slight.]

The President:—It appears that I have here in the summary of evidence the returns counted by the quartermaster-sergeant, counted in Colonel Roberts' office, and vouched for by the signatories of officers commanding batteries.

The Attorney-General:—That does not make it evidence, sir.

The President:—Yes; but if we have the Quartermaster-sergeants in to say that they had counted these figures, and the officers commanding batteries in to prove their signatures, that would be sufficient.

[The further evidence of this witness was postponed, during the interposition of other evidence.]

Quartermaster-Sergeant Taylor was recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined through the Court by the Counsel for the prosecution:—

1280. Do you remember a demand being made for you to prepare an order for the amount of clothing issued between 1886 and 1887 as appearing in your battery-books? Yes.

1281. Did you prepare such a statement? Yes.

1282. Did you add them up correctly? To the best of my belief I did.

[Exhibit 68 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

1283. Does this show the numbers? Yes.

1284. The President:—Do these include sergeants, or only rank and file? They include sergeants' tunics, but I don't think they include the annual issue to recruits. I also sent in a second list.

1285. The second list includes the recruits for that year—twenty-three of everything; and then there is also an included item of purchase—ten cloth-trousers and eight sergo trousers. That is for the year 1886 to 1887?

Mr. Heydon (to witness):—What would that item of purchase be?

Any man who wants to purchase a pair of trousers I give him an order upon Mr. Webster, and he gives the order to the master tailor or to the contractors, as the case may be, and that year I think there were a number mentioned on that list who obtained clothes by purchase.

1286. Then you made another examination? Yes, sir; some time afterwards.

1289. Where did you do it? In my own office.

1290. Does this represent the copy you made in your own office? Yes.

1291. And you handed it to your commanding officer? Yes, sir.

1292. By the Attorney-General:—You said you made the first count for somebody? No, sir, not the first count, I made the second count in Colonel Roberts' office.

1293. Then you found you made a mistake in the first count? No; I cannot say that.

1294. Where is the first count? By the order of the officer commanding No. 1 Battery I was told to make a list of the number of the articles of clothing that had been issued.

1295. And what did you do with it? It is here. That is the first list.

1296. And then you made another one? I was ordered to go to Colonel Roberts' office and in his presence count the number over. The numbers were taken by Colonel Roberts, but I do not know what they were. The list that the President has will not agree with the first, because there were no recruits and purchases in the first and there were in that one.

1297. And you say that those garments were made by the master tailor? In some cases; in other cases they were made by the contractor.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

No. 936 Quartermaster-sergeant William McMillan (Field Battery), having been duly sworn, was examined by the prosecutor, and states:—

I MADE up a list of clothing issued between the years 1886 and 1887; I made it up to include all the articles issued excepting sergeants'; to the best of my belief I made it up correctly; I did not make the first count up including sergeants; the last one I made up did include sergeants; in the first instance I was told not to include sergeants, and I did not include them. [Exhibit 69 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the Proceedings.] Afterwards I made another count and another list; my methods of making up the lists differed; in the last I included recruits and sergeants and everybody; 1886 to 1887 there were twenty-one recruits; that would be twenty-one of everything; that would include the year 1886 to 1887 from the 1st January to the 31st December, 1886; for the year 1887 to 1888 there was clothing issued to nineteen recruits, and the next year twenty-three recruits; when I sent in the first list I do not know whether I included recruits; I cannot say whether I included recruits for 1887 to 1888 in my first count or not; those amounts are from the 1st January, 1886, as far as recruits go, and the clothing year from the 1st April; the only issue between January and March would be recruits' and people who purchased their clothing.

The President:—Would you like to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—I should, sir.

1298. The Attorney-General:—You were asked to make up some accounts and some calculations last night, were you not? Yes, sir.

1299. And you refused to do it? I said that I did not think it was correct, as my commanding officer was not here.

1300. Mr. Heydon:—It was only to count up some tunics, was it not? Yes.

1301. And we counted them up, didn't we? Yes.

His evidence is read over to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure §1 B. The witness withdraws.

At ten minutes past 1 the Court adjourned for luncheon.

At 2-15 the same afternoon the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present —The same members as before.

Quartermaster-sergeant Wilson is recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined through the Court by the Prosecutor:—

1303. You remember being told to make a return showing the issues of clothing to sergeants from 1866 to 1867? Yes, sir.

1304. Is that the return? Yes.

1305. And making this out did you count it up from the books? Yes.

1306. Did you to the best of your belief do that correctly? Yes, sir.

1307. Did you do it again? Yes, sir.

1308. And what did you include the second time? I included sergeants.

1309. Is this the one? Yes.

1310. And on this occasion also I suppose you used your utmost care to make a correct return? Yes, sir.

1311. Did you count up the issues to recruits for the first three months for the year 1886? Yes, sir; I carried them right through; that would include from the 1st January up to the 1st April for the year 1886, including the annual issue, and for recruits.

1312. In your first return you took for the clothing year? Yes, sir.

1313. In the second return you took from the 1st January, 1886? Yes, sir.

1314. So you took the last three months of the previous clothing year? Yes, sir.

1315. During these last three months your issues are for recruits and for purchased clothing? Yes, sir.

1316. The President:—Do you wish to cross examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—I do, sir.

1317. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—In what books did you make these returns? In No. 3 Battery Clothing Book.

1318. That is in the battery book? Yes, sir.

1319. Do you know that the men themselves have small books? Yes, sir.

1320. Did you look at them at all? Yes, sir.

1321. All the books? Well, that is the Colonel's duty, it is not mine.

1322. Well but did you look at them, at the small books of the men? I may not have looked at them all.

1323. But did you look at any of them? Yes, sir; about two-thirds.

1324. Did they assist you in making up the returns. They were no use to you were they? No, sir.

1325. Did you find that clothes were entered in the small books which were not entered in the battery books? No, sir; clothing is not entered in the small book at all.

1326. So that if a man got a tunic and so on, the small book would not show what he had got? No, sir; a man merely signs for the amount of clothing that he has received.

1327. And does a man sign Webster's book as well? No; I think not.

1328. Well, he initials it, doesn't he? Yes, sir.

1329. Did you examine Mr. Webster's book at all? No, sir.

1330. Do you know that men have signed the battery books for the receipt of clothing for which they have not initialled Mr. Webster's book? I cannot say, sir. I cannot speak of Mr. Webster's book at all.

1331. Would you look at that book? That is my signature.

1332. What is that signature to? To the clothing received.

1333. Turn over the page;—do you see it all bracketted? Yes, sir; that is my signature.

1334. What does that sign refer to? The clothing that I received for the men of my battery.

1335. Has it anything to do with compensation? All the compensation is marked in red ink.

1336. So you have signed for the compensation and clothing as being correct? Yes, sir.

1337. How is that signature put there? The book was brought to me for the Commandant's inspection, and it was signed by Mr. Webster, and I signed on his requisition. I took it for granted that all was correct.

1338. I do not know whether I understand it aright—is that the second list you made out, and does that include the recruits clothing from the 1st January, 1886, to the 1st April? Yes, sir.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure, §1 B. The witness withdraws.

Quartermaster-sergeant

Quartermaster-sergeant William McMillan was recalled, reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Court:—

1339. Just look at that book; is that your signature across the page? Yes sir, it is my signature.
 1340. Turn over the leaf backward? Yes sir, those are my signatures.
 1341. What does that signature refer to? It must refer to the fact that the clothing has been received by the men of my battery.
 1342. Anything else besides clothing? Yes sir, compensation too.
 1343. How is that signature obtained—did you go to Mr. Webster's office to sign it? I should certainly go to Mr. Webster's office because it is his book.
 1344. Did you sign it as correct? Yes, sir; I did not compare lists to see whether it was correct; I took it as a matter of course.
 1345. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—Do you remember one year getting clothing in lump from the store, and signing for it, and it was afterwards returned? I remember one year getting a certain amount of my clothing in bulk, and the balance was returned, but not in bulk.
 1346. Did you sign for it when you got it in bulk? I believe I did, sir.
 1347. Was this the entry? Yes, sir.
 1348. I see ninety of each was issued in bulk, and you signed for them? Yes, sir.
 1349. Some of the articles were returned? Yes, sir.
 1350. And what you issued would appear in your battery books? Yes, sir.
 1351. The amount finally received by you from the prisoner, is included in your battery returns? Yes, sir.
 1352. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Those goods that were returned to Webster, he is charged with the receipt of; is he not? Certainly, sir.
 1353. Now do you remember the troops coming back from the Soudan, in June, 1885? I do, sir.
 1354. That was the end of the clothing year after the clothing year for 1885 had passed; was it not? The clothing year begins on the 1st April.
 1355. I suppose most of these men wanted clothing, didn't they? In fact the whole of them.
 1356. Do you know when they were supplied? In June or July, 1885, I think. I know they were all supplied with clothing in that year.
 1357. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—What did you sign for in this book? I signed a return showing the amount I had received and the amount I had returned. Mr. Webster started to issue the suits to individuals, and the order came that he was to issue them in bulk; and I returned the balance, and what I had issued to the men appears in my books.
 1358. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Do you know of any of your men, or any men in the artillery, having an extra lot of clothing at any time. You know they get clothing once a year, and you would know if they had double suits, or more suits than they ought to have, or more jumpers and Norfolk jackets? They get them by purchase. Dozens of them get them by purchase.
 1359. After their clothes are worn out? Yes, sir.
 1360. And would they be entered in the books? Only in my pay ledger.
 1361. Suppose a hundred men got jumpers, and tunics, and Norfolk jackets, and all this sort of thing, they would be issued from the store, would they not? Yes, sir.
 1362. Would the issue to these men of jumpers and Norfolk jackets appear in the battery clothing books? No, sir.
 1363. So that it is perfectly consistent with men getting a lot of clothes from the store of which no record appears in the battery clothing book? I know of men getting dozens of articles in my battery by purchase that would not appear in the battery clothing book.
 1364. And the same thing takes place in the other batteries, I suppose? Yes; I suppose so. But I am not certain.
 1365. The President:—But when men purchase goods it is recorded in your ledger, and it would be paid to the paymaster at the end of the month. Does any of that money pass through Mr. Webster? No. None at all.
 1366. A man who gets a jumper is charged in your pay ledger, so much for the jumper, and at the end of the month it is paid to the paymaster, and shown in your abstract? Yes, sir.
 1367. By the Attorney-General:—The goods would go out of the store, of course, and there would be no entry in that book? Yes, sir.
 1368. The President:—There is one more question I want to ask you, you said that ninety suits of clothes would not be shown in your battery clothing book except those that were issued? That is so, sir.
 1369. Would you not have put the receipt down in your battery clothing book, and have struck a balance between what you received and what you issued? No, sir; they only show the number issued to the men. I had to make up a return showing the number I received, the number I issued, and the number I returned to the store, for Colonel Roberts.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

Quartermaster Sergeant Taylor was recalled, reminded of his former oath, and further re-examined by the prosecutor through the Court:—

1370. Can you account for the clothing issued in bulk? Here is my receipt for the garments mentioned in the clothing ledger.
 1371. What was done with them? We had orders to commence fitting clothing in the afternoon or morning. In the afternoon or morning I received orders from Mr. Webster to return them again, on the ground that the officer of No. 2 Battery had objected to the men of No. 1 and No. 3 receiving their clothing, because there was not enough to complete his own battery. So I returned them to Mr. Webster. If I received 130 suits those marks opposite each man's name would not be there. I believe that 130 suits were issued to Battery No. 3 in the same way.
 1372. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Have you any entry in any books showing that you returned those 130 uniforms? I cannot say, sir. The officer who commanded would have obtained the receipt.
 1373. Have you any receipt? No, sir, I can only bring Mr. Webster's clerk as a witness.
 1374. Have you any entry in any books showing that you returned them? No, sir. 1275.

1375. Have you any receipt from Mr. Webster? The officer commanding the battery would have that.
 1376. If he had received them he would have given a receipt, would he not? Yes, sir, to the officer commanding the battery.
 1377. By the President:—You were present when each amount was issued? Yes, sir.
 1378. To make it quite clear, can you tell me whether they go from Mr. Webster's store to the officer commanding the battery, and then to the men? I take so many men of the battery into Mr. Webster's store; those men, in the presence of the master tailor, are fitted in, and the master tailor marks them. The men do not give any receipt until they are completely fitted.
 1379. The officer commanding the battery is present in Mr. Webster's store? Yes, sir, and they are supposed to be passed by him before leaving the tailor's shop. He sees them all before they are passed.
 1380. Was that the custom in force in 1886? Yes, sir.
 [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

- Quartermaster-Sergeant Wilson recalled, and reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Court:—
 1381. In 1886 I signed for 130 of each rank and file garments issued in bulk.
 1382. Do you remember what became of this 130? I cannot say for certain. I believe they were returned to the Brigade store.
 1383. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—You cannot say; you did not do it yourself? I did, sir.
 1384. And the men afterwards received their garments in the usual way? Yes, sir. From Mr. Webster's store.
 1385. As well as you remember, you returned those 130 the same day? Yes, sir.
 1386. Have you got any entry in your books showing that you returned them? No, sir.
 1387. And you have no receipt from Mr. Webster, I think? No, sir.
 1388. They were simply ordered to be returned, and they were returned? Yes, sir.
 [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant and Quartermaster Little is recalled, and reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Prosecutor. He said:—

From my own counting the amount of clothing issued in 1886 was—289 tunics, 319 cloth trousers, 318 serge trousers, 297 Norfolk jackets, and 295 jumpers. In 1887 it was—303 tunics, 323 cloth trousers, 325 serge trousers, 298 jumpers, 296 Norfolk jackets. I arrived at the issue of clothing for the year 1888 by counting each one separately, from the Brigade books produced before the Court. There were 291 cloth tunics issued, 303 cloth trousers, 333 serge trousers, 308 jumpers, 312 Norfolk jackets. I took steps to ascertain what amount of clothing was sold from the prisoner's store. I got the returns of necessaries, which included these things, from the pay office. I have them here, and subsequently I got the documents from Mr. Webster—2 tunics, 135 cloth trousers, 142 serge trousers, 7 jumpers, and 4 Norfolk jackets. This shows the clothing issued by payment from the store in 1886 to 1888. This last, which is in the prisoner's handwriting, agrees with these returns. [Exhibit 71 is handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

The President:—That makes 1,057 tunics, 1,169 cloth trousers, 1,195 serge trousers, 1,000 serge jumpers, 1,003 Norfolk jackets.

Witness continuing:—I put down the issues on the 31st March, 1886, and those I obtained from the battery books from my own count. The prisoner has down in his books for the same quarter, amounts somewhat different. Less in some cases, and larger in others. These are as correct as I can make them. I saw those figures in the prisoner's book. But I counted them by the battery books, because I thought that they would show a greater issue, but they did not. I have not checked those by the prisoner's books at all; I cannot swear that those were the real figures that we got at the Board of Inquiry. Now I know that they are the results of what I found out, when I was sitting on the Board of Inquiry. I have ascertained the value of these things at contract price. The value of them, according to my calculation, is £546 12s. 3d., that is the value of the deficiency. That is the contract price. The tunics are the dearest things.

At 4 o'clock the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning.

On Wednesday the 20th March, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment at 10 a.m. Present: The same members as before.

Lieutenant and Quartermaster Little was recalled, reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Prosecutor; he said:—

That (upon exhibit 38) is the initial which the prisoner said, when before the Board of Inquiry, that he saw Quartermaster Taylor put there. I have made out from the master tailor's vouchers that the proportion of remakes to the total quantity charges (including the fitting and alteration charges), is about 40 per cent. of tunics. I made this calculation last night, and I cannot entirely remember it now without entirely refreshing my memory with it.

The Attorney-General objected to the witness being allowed to refresh his memory in this instance, and insisted that the calculations should be made by the prisoner before the Court, there and then.

The President:—The Court are of opinion that the memorandum can be referred to by the witness, and the objection is therefore disallowed.

Witness continuing:—The proportion of remakes to the total quantities is as follows:—21½ per cent. cloth trousers, 25½ per cent. serge trousers, 35 per cent. jumpers, 42 per cent. jackets. Jumpers are a kind of loose jacket which falls over the waist and buttons. I did not check this line with the prisoner's own book. The figures shown in the prisoner's book at 36 c. as received from the contractor, are for rank and file garments alone, and not for the sergeants. Looking at these figures on exhibit 35, I find that 565 tunics were received from Riley, including those of the sergeants and the band; 438 tunics appear in the the year 1887, under Henderson's contract, including those of the sergeants and band. This includes 21 sergeants and 21 bandmen, that is, 42 altogether, and deducting the 42 it leaves 395, which is the amount which the prisoner has debited himself. In debiting himself, he has omitted the sergeants and the band. In my credits I have omitted the sergeants, but I do not think that I omitted the band. I think the band is included, so that that extent in my brief, I have credited the prisoner in excess. The returns which I obtained from the officers commanding batteries were supposed to include all people excepting sergeants, in the case of tunics for that year 1887, it would make a difference of 21. In 1886, there were 20 band tunics, so that that would make a difference of 41 tunics altogether, in favor of the prisoner.

[Exhibit 72 handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

This represents accounts against Nos. 1, 2, and 3 batteries, and they amount to £234 19s. 4d. There is a very strange and striking coincidence in two of the vouchers, they having the same number of alterations. It is the February voucher for No. 3 battery, and the February voucher for No. 1 battery which shows this coincidence, 15 tunics are said to be remade for both batteries, 17 Norfolk jackets, 11 cloth trousers, 12 serge trousers, and 12 jumpers; fitting and altering cloth trousers 117 on each; Norfolk jackets 114, cloth trousers 122, serge trousers 121, serge jumpers 121. Down to that point the two vouchers agree in every respect, and then comes an item in which they vary for the first time. That is in the matter of two chevrons. The work done for those two batteries up to that time with the exception of the two chevrons, appears to have been identically the same in every respect, and during the course of my inquiry on the Board, I could not find any explanation of that coincidence. There was no explanation asked. I do not remember that there was any explanation asked of any of the witnesses. One of the witnesses called was the master tailor. I don't think that he was asked to explain that, I don't remember that he was at any rate. The coincidence was noticed during the sitting of the Board. But I think it was after we had done with the evidence, and were going over some papers. So far as I can recollect, Lyttleton was not asked for an explanation of that fact. At the same time I cannot say that he was not. Though, it strikes me that he was not. During the investigation that was made by the Court of Inquiry, there was no document produced justifying the charge for remaking that I am aware of.

The Attorney-General objected to the last statement of the witness on the ground that this Court could not be bound by any opinion expressed by the Board of Inquiry.

1389. The President:—Would you like to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General:—I should, sir.

1390. The Attorney-General:—Mr. Little, have you any idea who is on his trial here? Why, yes, Mr. Webster.

1391. That is your idea? Yes.

1392. And that is mine, too; but you know that indirectly, and behind this there is a great deal more? I do not understand you, sir.

Mr. Heydon objected to the course the Attorney-General was pursuing in his cross-examination. His learned friend's questions, if they meant anything, insinuated that somebody else was on his trial but the prisoner. He was responsible for the conduct of the case for the prosecution, and he challenged his learned friend to throw off his mantle of insinuation, and tell the Court what he really meant.

The Attorney-General:—I will not speak directly now. I will tell you what I mean at the proper time.

Mr. Heydon:—I ask my learned friend not to make cowardly insinuations in this way. He is protected by his robe, and I ask him not to go on in this cowardly way.

The Attorney-General:—Anything that Mr. Heydon may say I attribute to a little ill-temper, and I do not like charges of this kind. I am only asking the prisoner questions, and I shall conduct the case as I think proper.

1393. The Attorney-General:—Have you been connected with the Artillery Volunteers for any time? Yes, connected in duty.

1394. You are a Volunteer Artilleryman are you not? I am not.

1395. Is not that the uniform of a Volunteer Artilleryman? No.

1396. You have been a Volunteer Artilleryman? Never in my life.

1397. You are connected with them now are you not? Yes.

1398. Have you ever been a member of the Permanent Artillery? No.

1399. Have you ever said if ever you were an officer you would make it very hot for the Permanent Artillery? No.

1400. Would you say such a thing? No.

Well, I will not ask you any more about it.

Mr. Heydon:—Perhaps my learned friend will name a time and place for that statement also?

1401. The Attorney-General:—Well, I will give you the time and I will give you the place as near as I can,—about fifteen months ago at the Victoria Barracks did you ever say that if you ever got your commission, you would make it—perhaps you did not say very hot—but you used some word conveying the same meaning, for the Permanent Artillery? I never said such a thing. I may have said that if I was quartermaster in the artillery I would have things conducted in a different way. I may have said something of that sort.

1402. Have you ever been an accountant? Never, sir.

1403. Until you investigated these accounts you have never been an accountant at all? I have been a soldier all my time.

1404. But you have suddenly blossomed into an accountant? No, sir; anybody can make figures.

1405. You have evidently made figures. Do you know Mr. Roberts, of the firm of Blomfield and Roberts? I have heard of him.

1406. Do you know that is one of the best firms of accountants in Sydney? I have never heard it.

1407. You don't know much about accounts or accountants then, do you? No.

1408. You know he brings out a totally different result from you, don't you? Yes.

1409. From the same material? No, not from the same material.

1410. From the same material with the exception of what? Of information forwarded to me at one time by the prisoner, which is not in Mr. Roberts' calculation.

1411. Don't you mean that he has arrived at different results from you, with the same material with the exception of that one paper from the master tailor? No, I don't.

1412. Is not that what you meant just now? I don't know.

1413. Don't you mean that he had not that one account of the number of articles made up from cloth by the master tailor? I don't know that. I know that he had not certain information that I have.
1414. What information have you that he had not? It is the statement of clothing made from material.
1415. Hadn't he the same material with the exception of that? I don't know that he had the same material, but I know that he had not that particular statement.
1416. Look at that, and say if that is not the account you meant which Mr. Roberts had not? That I believe he had not.
1417. You also say that he had not that? I do not know about that.
1418. You believe that Mr. Roberts had not this account, numbered 66, but you do not know whether he had the account numbered 67? No.
1419. Now, you, in basing your calculation as to the number of tunics and serges, and so on, deficient, assume that that account (66) is correct? Yes, sir.
1420. Is not that account made out by your own clerk, and in your own clerk's own handwriting? I do not know.
1421. Well, hand it back, please. Now, then, you do not dispute, do you, Mr. Little, that if the results arrived at by Mr. Roberts from the books and documents, and so on, all of which you had before you—you do not dispute that if Mr. Roberts' results are correct, then you must be all wrong? No; I do not admit that I am all wrong.
1422. Put this on one side and take the battery books, and all the books to which you have had access don't you admit that you are wrong? No.
1423. Are you right? Well, as right as a man can be.
1424. You have said you do not know whose handwriting that is, look at it again? I must say that it is like my clerk's handwriting, but I never noticed that before.
1425. Oh, Mr. Little, Mr. Little? I am here sworn to tell the truth.
1426. I asked you five minutes ago whether that was your clerk's handwriting, and you said you didn't know? Well, I would not swear to it now.
1427. So that really when you arrived at your conclusions you were guided by the statement in that paper in the handwriting of your clerk? I would not swear that it was his handwriting.
1428. Well, we will assume that that is your clerk's handwriting? Very well, suppose you do.
1429. Well, but I may, may I not? Yes, you may, if you like; but I do not know that it is my clerk's handwriting all the same.
1430. How long has he been your clerk? Four years.
1431. Well, don't you believe it to be your clerk's handwriting? I will not swear it.
1432. Do you believe it, do tell me? It is very like it.
1433. Do you believe it to be? I would not swear that it is.
1434. Then I may assume that you believe it to be, may I? You have my answer, sir.
1435. Assuming that this is your clerk's handwriting, have you not based your calculations upon the correctness of that document? I have partly based them upon that and upon many other things too.
1436. Well, but I cannot deal with everything at once. You have based your calculations to a material extent relying upon the calculations of that account, have you not? Yes, so far.
1437. Has that account been added to since it was given to you by Mr. Webster? These red figures?
1438. Answer me in detail—has that account been added to since it was given to you by Mr. Webster? That I cannot say.
1439. You see that there appear to be alterations in that account, don't there? Not in these figures; it is only in bringing the cloth into one denomination.
1440. There are alterations on the face of that paper, are there not? Not in the number of garments.
1441. When were they made? I think they were made before Mr. Webster signed it.
1442. You see, originally it was total 539 yards used, and it has been altered to 933, has it not? Yes.
1443. So that whether you made those alterations before Mr. Webster signed, or whether you did not, if your clerk has made this account up before or after Mr. Webster signed it, he has been out 400 yards? No, it does not follow. There were two different widths.
1444. Well, but if your clerk made it out he must have been nearly 400 yards out in his calculation? Yes. Well no, I don't say that, because if this was double width he would not have been wrong at all.
1445. Who put those two figures there? I did.
1446. Didn't you put them in after Mr. Webster signed it? No; I put them in before.
1447. Will you swear that you did not put them in after Mr. Webster signed it? No.
1448. When did you put them in? When I made the red remark.
1449. When did you make the red remarks? On the same day that I made the other figures.
1450. Can you say why you did not put them in with the same kind of ink? Because I cannot do two things at once.
1451. Was it the same time or the same day then? It was the same day, I think, but I cannot even swear about that.
1452. Has anything else been added since Mr. Webster signed that? That was added.
1453. You had a pen with red ink in it, had not you, when you made those alterations? Yes.
1454. Didn't you give that pen, with the same dip of ink in it, to the prisoner and say, "Here Webster sign that?" I cannot say yes or no to that question. It is a very likely thing that something of the kind happened. I said this, "What you have handed in is no authority without a signature."
1455. Did you say this, "That you have handed in?" I might not have said "handed in." I said, "This is no authority without a signature."
1456. When you said "handed in" did not you wish the Court to believe that Webster had handed it in? No, I never intended that.
1457. Did Webster hand it in or is it not a fact that your clerk made it out and that Webster merely signed it? I don't know who made it out; my clerk could not have made it out without being employed by Mr. Webster.
1458. Is it not a fact that you, without the authority of the commanding officer or without the permission of Webster, went to the barracks and got his books? No; not without authority.
1459. Of the commanding officer? I did not do it without the authority of the Board.
1460. The Board had no control over the books of the Permanent Artillery, had it? Whatever was said by the President we had authority to do.

1461. Did you take your clerk with you? No.
1462. Now look here, do you see that there is Webster's red ink signature, is there not? Yes.
1463. Has that been added since Webster put his red ink signature there? It has not been added on since then; it was there before.
1464. Are you certain? Yes, I am.
1465. Was your clerk there when he signed it? My clerk was in the same building, but in another office, when he signed it.
1466. Not present? No, not present.
1467. Look on this paper marked "a true copy" with some initials on the bottom? Yes, I see it.
1468. Are those your initials on the bottom? Yes.
1469. Now just look at this which is put in evidence—issued on the 31st March, seventy-six tunics—do you see that? Yes sir.
1470. That is the table as amended? Yes sir.
1471. When you certified that that paper is a true copy, did you mean a true copy of that? No, I meant that it was a true copy of the original.
1472. Didn't you know when you certified that to be a true copy that that was required for Webster's defence? No, I didn't know that he was going to be tried.
1473. Well, why didn't you give him a true copy of that? Because I was not ordered to.
1474. He has never had a true copy of that then? I don't think he has.
1475. You say you have put down fifty tunics here? Yes.
1476. It is not a true copy of that? No.
1477. The number 395 is only down as 285 in the amended return? Yes.
1478. Here we have tunics 287, and in yours it is 255, and in that before the Court it is 303, is it not? Yes.
1479. Now, again, here in your copy there are 295 cloth trousers for all ranks in the year 1887, and in this count it is 323, is it not? Yes, but this in favour of Mr. Webster.
1480. Never mind who it is in favour of, Mr. Little, thank you. You heard my learned friend say that, and you now say the same thing? I don't know; I didn't hear him that I know of.
1481. Here it is again, Norfolk jackets 270 here and 296 there, a difference of twenty-six; somebody is wrong somewhere? Yes; but it is all in favour of the prisoner.
1482. Never mind that; you seem very anxious to favour the prisoner; then again, in 1887, there are 203 jumpers down in your list, and there the number is 298? Yes.
1483. Now, which is correct of these two? I think the original one is near the truth; but, to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt, we put those numbers down.
1484. Which is correct? I vouch for the correctness of my original one; for the correctness of the other one I cannot vouch.
1485. Will you vouch for the correctness of either? I will not vouch for the perfect correctness of either, but they were both made out in good faith.
1486. Do you know that a very large number of garments are said to have been issued in bulk to the batteries and returned to the prisoner? Yes; I saw it in the book.
1487. Have you, in the results at which you have arrived, given the prisoner credit for these things—a very large number of tunics and other things that were issued to the batteries? I have not taken any notice of that entry at all.
1488. So that if the prisoner issued to the batteries 500 or 600 garments in globe, you have not given him the benefit of these issues, have you? No; I knew nothing about these issues.
1489. And therefore you have not given him the benefit of them? No.
1490. Have you charged him, debited him, with the re-issue of any articles that might have been returned to him from the battery; suppose 100 garments were issued in bulk to the batteries (it has been said that these garments issued in bulk have been returned to him)—supposing he has re-issued any of those, have you given him the benefit of those re-issues? Yes; I have.
1491. You are not charging him with the receipt of these things, then? I have not taken those things into account, but if he received those articles from the battery, and issued them again, he got credit from me.
1492. You have not given him credit even for the issue of this large number of things in bulk, have you? No; neither credit nor debit.
1493. Did you say to Webster, at the time he wrote his name in red ink, "If you sign this document, Webster, it will square the amount of cloth you say you have received, and there will be nothing more about it"? No.
1494. Did you say that, "If you sign this document it will square the amount of cloth you have received"? No; not in those words; I said, "This is no authority without your signature."
1495. How many tunics do you make him out to be deficient in? That I cannot quite remember.
1496. Cannot you tell from that paper you made out last night? No; I did not make out any paper last night.
1497. In your true copy you put down balance to be accounted for eighty-three tunics? Yes.
1498. In this amended table it only shows fifteen tunics to be accounted for, does it not? Yes.
1499. Which is correct of these? One is taken from the brigade books; the amended account is made up from the battery book.
1500. Is that it? Yes.
1501. Although the same? Yes.
1502. Now be careful—see what you are saying? Yes, they are.
1503. When did you certify this to be a true copy? When it was made out.
1504. On the 15th November, 1888? Yes.
1505. Do you know when this was made out? That is after this date certainly.
1506. Where did you get your bulk issues from? From the brigade books.
1507. The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon?
Mr. Heydon:—If you please, sir.
1508. Mr. Heydon:—In regard to what has been said, Mr. Little, I will clear it away at once about anything indirect and so on; you were appointed, I believe, as a member of the Board of Inquiry, and as a member of that Board you had to do your duty, extending over a period of six months? Yes.

1509. And since the Board you have been called here as a witness to give evidence in this case? Yes.
1510. During all that time have you been influenced by any other motive or influence, except the desire to do your duty to the best of your ability? I have not been influenced to do other than to give fair play to the Government.
1511. Can you tell me how it was that that return, which is like your clerk's handwriting, came to be made out? As far as I can remember, I mentioned to Mr. Webster that there was a great deficiency in the cloth, and he said that it was made up into garments. Subsequently he furnished me with that list.
1512. The Attorney-General:—You say he furnished you with it? Yes, sir.
- The Attorney-General*:—I objected to that.
1513. The President:—How did that paper come to you? So far as I can recollect he handed it to me, saying, "This is the account of the garments made up from the cloth by the master tailor." And I took it from him and looked over it; and in going over it I said, "The yards of cloth I cannot calculate without bringing them all under one denomination;" and I made those calculations, and asked Webster to sign this paper as a document of authority; and he did sign it as such.
1514. Now this document was furnished to account for certain deficiencies of cloth? I take it to be so.
1515. And the cloth, as worked out in the document, appeared to account for some 500 odd yards, did it not? 500 odd yards of cloth, but it did not say of what width.
1516. Then you brought them to a common denomination and found it accounted for a much larger amount of cloth? Yes, sir.
1517. Would you kindly look at it and tell me how many yards of cloth that account purported to represent when it first came into your hands? 539½ yards.
1518. How many yards of cloth did it account for when you had altered it? 933 yards.
1519. Then did that go further to account for the deficiency of the prisoner's cloth than it did before? Yes; it was an alteration in his interest to the extent of 400 and odd yards.
1520. And was the deficiency of cloth accounted for, or was the subsequent account given, required to account for it? Yes; the subsequent account was required.
1521. How did the subsequent account come to be made up; it is all in his handwriting? I do not know how. I suppose it was handed in to the Board by Mr. Webster. It might have been handed to me, but I do not remember exactly the circumstance.
1522. Do you remember whether you said anything to the prisoner as to whether the first return that came into your possession fully accounted for the deficiency of the cloth? No; I do not remember saying any such thing, because when I made it up I found that it did not fully account for anything.
1523. Can you tell me whether the other account (the one in the prisoner's handwriting) came into the hands of the Board subsequently to the first? Subsequently.
1524. And taken together they do account for the deficiency of cloth? Yes.
1525. Had you anything at all to do with the making up of that document signed in red ink by the prisoner? No, I had not.
1526. Whether it was made up by your clerk or not; was it made up by your directions or under your supervision? Neither by my directions or under my supervision.
1527. Now you have been asked about a certain table 1 and an amended table 1; you made up table 1 in the first instance from what materials? From the Brigade books.
1528. The prisoner's books? Yes.
1529. Was that paper No. 1 correct, according to the prisoner's books? As far as I can see it was correct.
1530. Did you, after that, get information as to the amount shown in the battery books? I did, but it was not until the batteries were asked to furnish it.
1531. Just so. The Board of Inquiry made a request to the battery to furnish certain information, and the returns were made which I put into the Court. Will you tell me how much deficiency the unamended account shows? I really cannot tell you, unless you let me see the account.
1532. According to the unamended account what was the deficiency of tunics? 83.
1533. And of cloth trousers? 337.
1534. And of serge trousers? 299.
1535. And Norfolk jackets? 95.
1536. And jumpers? 127.
1537. The amended account was more in favour of the prisoner than the other one you say? Yes it is.
1538. Now with regard to those bulk issues that appear in the books. Did you take any notice whatever of those in making up your accounts? Of the 130.
1539. Yes? I took no notice of them one way or the other.
1540. So that if you did not credit him with them, neither did you debit him with them? No.
1541. You debited him with what he received from the contractors, and you credited him with what he issued to the batteries, and that return you took no notice of? Yes.
1542. You have said that you did not tell Webster to sign that, and that there would be no more said about the matter? No, I did not say that.
1543. Are you certain? Yes.
1544. You are certain, are you, that you never said to him that there would be nothing more about it if he signed that document? I am quite certain on that point.
1545. Was there any one there at the time you told him, that the document would be no authority unless it was signed? Nobody was standing near.
1546. Then there was nobody there to report such a thing unless the prisoner himself? No sir.
1547. What cloth would these different garments be made of? Some would be made from what they call broadcloth, and some from doeskin, and others of serge, trimmed with scarlet.
1548. Then it is not a cloth that would be perfectly useless except to the Military? By no means.
1549. It is a marketable cloth? Yes.
1550. Can you tell the Court why that alteration was made in red ink on that voucher? It was made to bring all cloth under one denomination so that I could make the calculation of how much cloth it would take to make those garments.
1551. It was taken from double width to narrow width? Yes; it would have been impossible to count them up if it had not been.

1552-3. We have got down "by sales" in the prisoner's book (without any date), fifty-seven cloth trousers and sixty-three serge trousers;—is there no other entry in the prisoner's book of garments sold? I do not think there is, sir; I have not noticed.

1554. Is there no other entry in the book that would show sales of garments from 1886 to 1888? I didn't find any.

1555. Are they not shown in some other book? No, I don't think they are. I have not seen them in any book, but I have taken them from papers produced by the pay office.

1556. I do not quite understand your answer;—I ask you whether there is any other book in which entries of sales may have been made? Not to my knowledge, though I have not looked over this book this morning. I do not remember having seen it. There is a remark here—"issued by purchase to troops," and annual issues are both included for this year 1887 to 1888; but you cannot take one from the other. I have not taken any account whatever of this. In my account of issues from sales I took my figures from other documents.

1557. What other documents? From the pay office.

1558. How did you get possession of the prisoner's books in order to make these calculations? They were ordered to be sent in to the Board.

1559. Was he ordered to send in all his books? I forget now. Colonel Eden was President, and whatever he ordered was got.

1560. You merely formed your calculations upon books supplied to you by the Court? Yes, sir.

1561. By Mr. Heydon:—Can you tell me to whom the order to get the books was given? I think it was to Captain Savage.

1562. And do you know how they came before the Board? They were brought in by somebody.

1563. By the Attorney-General:—Did you go up and examine books at the prisoner's store? I don't remember doing any such thing.

1564. It was not only before the Board you had the books, was it;—you must have had them some other time? Yes; we had them from time to time.

1565. Mr. Heydon:—Did the Board make an examination of the books from time to time? Yes.

1566. Not you alone? No; not me alone.

1567. They came into the possession of the Board and went out of the possession of the Board several times? Well, more than once.

1568. And after the Board had done with them, where did they go? I suppose they were returned to their several owners. When the Board had done with them the last time they were sent down to Dawes' Battery.

1569. The Attorney-General:—Will you take upon yourself to say that you did not go to the store on several occasions and examine his books there? I really do not remember.

1570. In the store I am talking about? I do not remember. I remember going to the store on one occasion about a certain amount of cloth.

1571. Mr. Heydon:—Major Mackenzie's serge, was it not? Yes, and something else.

1572. By the Attorney-General:—Didn't you at that time examine his books whilst you were there? I don't think I did.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

No. 1429. Sergeant John Lyttleton, master-tailor, having been called and duly sworn, was examined by the Prosecutor, and said:—

I have been acting as master tailor for some time past for the New South Wales Artillery; I commenced working for the Artillery in May, 1885; I am sure it was 1885, because the troops were away in the Soudan that year; I never kept any books, only private accounts of private work that I did; I mean that my accounts and pay vouchers were made up by Mr. Webster, according as each article required a "make" or a "re-make"; of course he valued them, and by that means the accounts were made up; they were made up by Mr. Webster and his clerks; I never made them up myself; I kept no account of what I was entitled to myself; when the pay vouchers were made up I signed them; I had no means of checking them when I signed them; I was not very well up in figures, and indeed, apart from that, I have not the time; I signed them without checking them; I cannot answer the question whether I had any conversation with respect to the quantities I charged for, and the amounts I charged, as general conversation about it was necessary; as I marked the alterations in Mr. Webster's store, I understood that they were put down; I remember having a conversation with the prisoner's clerk about the cloth and the amount I was charging, and so on; the clerk to whom I refer is the late Gunner Ritchie, who is now dead; the prisoner had two clerks in his place for a short time, but only for a short time; those two clerks were the late Gunner Ritchie and Bombadier Lovelock; since that time there has only been one; I don't remember having conversations with anybody but the prisoner and his clerks about the work I had done or the work I was charging for.

[Exhibit 72 shown to witness.]

The charge against No. 3 Battery is for making 15 cloth tunics, and the charge against No. 1 Battery is for making 15 cloth tunics also; then there is a charge for 17 serge Norfolk jackets against No. 3 Battery, and a charge for 17 Norfolk jackets for No. 1 Battery; there is another charge for 11 cloth trousers against No. 1 Battery, and a similar charge against No. 3, and so on; the items are all the same in the case of each battery until you come to a difference of 40 as against 42 chevrons; I cannot account for that similarity; when the pay vouchers were made up I always thought that they were correct; in fact, I used to be rather jealous that they were underrated sometimes, but I hadn't time to examine them; the annual supply of clothing used to be imported by the contractor according to size rolls; during my time there were something like 40 per cent. of the tunics required for re-making altogether; I can explain why such a large number of tunics require re-making; the tunics that came out were altogether too large, and during my time they had increased the strength of No. 2 Battery, and several short men had joined as drivers, so these things would not fit; formerly the men were of a larger size, but in my time they were smaller men and consequently the clothing required re-making; the size roll contains a list of the sizes of the men for whom the garments were wanted; after they had indented for these things they increased increased the corps apparently with short men; I think they were shorter than the average men of the corps; those men would be recruits, and when each recruit came up of course they have to fit him; if a lot had joined in the last three months they came in for a double issue of clothing, and that would necessitate a great deal of expense; I cannot answer whether that will explain all the difference.

At 1 o'clock p.m. the Court adjourned for lunch; at 2 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The same members as before.

The witness is reminded of his former oath, and the examination continues:—

I explained how the master tailor's bills came to be so large as £765 14s. 2d. in the ten months from September, 1887 to July, 1888; a number of them had a double issue; it was not a usual amount; I never had a "usual" amount, I had to pay a very heavy price for civilian labour, and, of course, I had to charge accordingly; there was no other ten months in which so much was done; there is a voucher dated July, 1888, against No. 1 Battery; the charge for remaking forty-one cloth tunics and altering and fitting twenty-five cloth tunics out of sixty cloth tunics appears in that voucher; there is nothing "usual" about it; if it was necessary to have these garments remade I had to have them remade; I had to use great discretion right through; it must have been unusual or no, I won't say that, because as alterations were marked down they were charged for, so I will not say whether it was usual or unusual; I cannot say that it was either; it was apparently necessary; the fact of the matter is that the whole of them had to be remade as far as that goes; it was an exceptional case to have to remake 41 out of 66 cloth tunics; the serge jumpers had to be ripped up, but, of course, the alterations in them would not take as much time as the alterations in the tunics; the jumpers were too large altogether; out of 67 serge jumpers I remade 39, and I altered and fitted 28; it was an exceptional case; there was an old stock of clothing that had to be used; out of 55 cloth trousers 33 required remaking; that was not usual, and out of 38 serge trousers 24 had to be remade, whilst 14 had to be altered and fitted; that was not usual; out of 64 Norfolk jackets 37 had to be altered and remade; that was not usual; this was remaking to such an extent that I felt justified in charging the same price that I should have charged for making the garments in the first instance; the amount of work to be done in remaking these things was decided upon by myself, but they had to be paraded outside on the verandah before the officers; the necessary alterations were not taken down until I marked them, and they valued them; there was no valuation made at the time, and, indeed, the matter was always arranged quite in this way; what was marked in the store was valued, I think, by Mr. Webster; discretion was used all through; a record was taken in the Quartermaster-sergeant's books of the alterations that I marked upon the garments when the men were paraded; the record was taken by Mr. Webster or his clerk as the case might be; after the clothing had been marked, and was put into my hands I made the alterations, but I cannot say Mr. Webster always estimated the value of my work, I presume that the voucher was made out according to what was in the book, I had a conversation with the prisoner about a charge for "remakes"; when I joined the Force first the prisoner showed me a book with the list of prices in, and he told me this was what the previous tailor had been allowed; when I marked the alterations I decided on the nature of the work and told Mr. Webster's clerk to put down either a "mark" or a "remark"; Mr. Webster was not present on all occasions when I gave these instructions; on the occasions when he was present he heard the instructions and used to come and look at the garments as I marked them; I have not time to keep books; there was another reason, I cannot go into very heavy accounts and I was not allowed to keep a clerk; I keep a private book of my own with the wages paid in it; I gave evidence before the Board of Inquiry; I did not show them that book; I gave evidence seven or eight times before the Board of Inquiry I will not say that I ever lost this book; on second thoughts I should like to say that I did not keep any account until latterly—since the Board sat—I thought I should like to keep accounts, lest men should come upon me for their money twice over; so that at the time the Board was sitting I had no book to produce to them; I did not keep a bank account; all the money that I had was kept by my wife; on the 7th of December I drew £224; I used to get my money from Colonel Baynes, that amount was kept at home by my wife; I never kept a banking account in my own name; my wife used to keep a banking account; when we got married she had a little more money than I had; I did not give cheques to the men I employed for their wages; my wife used to pay me the money for their wages every week; some weeks I remember the wages used to amount to £13 odd in other weeks £11; then there were weeks it would amount to £12, and other weeks again when it would not be more than £9; but, whatever it was my wife would draw it for me; I do not know whether I can find out exactly from my wife's pass book what amount of money had been drawn for wages, because I kept no record of it; she used to keep the £200 or £300 on hand for fear of being short; she had a bank account of her own; I did not say just now that she used to pay it into the bank; I said that she had a banking account; this sum of £234 which I got in a lump from the Paymaster was paid in wages; I gave it to my wife when I drew it out of the Paymaster's office and she used to give me the money for the men's wages.

The Attorney-General drew the attention of the Court to the fact that if the Counsel for the prosecution pressed the witness any further on these points he might lead him to criminate himself.

The President (to witness):—Are you not under arrest? I am under open arrest.

The President:—Then you are not now obliged to answer any questions that may criminate yourself.

Examination-in-chief continued:—I am not aware that I can give you any information by which you can trace these wages.

By the President:—I did not give my workmen an average of £12 per week, I should think I gave them an average of £9 or £10 per week.

Examination-in-chief continued:—I used to get private work from the officers and men outside of these vouchers I really cannot tell you how much I got out of that. The private work would not amount to anything like £2 a week; it might amount to £3 or £5 or perhaps only £1 for the whole of the batteries during the course of a month, that would be about £65 a year; that was work that I did but had to supply the materials out of my own pocket; I used to make up work for which the material was supplied. I made a lot of material up into jackets, and tunics, and so on. This sum, whether it was £65 a year or not, would be for tunics, and trousers, and other garments. I had some work to do for warrant-officers, for which the material was supplied, but very little indeed. Then I made tunics, trousers, &c., for other members of the Force, for which material was also supplied. I could not tell you how much that amounted to; if I was even to try I could not answer your question. When I gave my evidence before the Board of Inquiry I do not think my memory was fresher than it is now. That was nearer the time, but I think I remember quite as badly as I do now. I recollect something about telling them how much I made for private work during the course of a year. I told them it was somewhere about £48 a year. I could not tell to a penny, but as near as I can recollect I told them that it was something about £18 a year. My profit used to vary from 30s. to £2 per week, but not every week the same. It was perhaps about 35s. a week on an average. I should like to know what particular ten months they were that you were asking me about when you wanted to know how the £215 came out of the £765. May I ask you also what the first voucher was, and the date upon which I got it, because I used to let my accounts run on for three months, and then I shall be better able to know how much my pay and allowance was. I cannot tell you how much my pay and allowance amounted to during the year; I got 4s. a day. I got some allowances also. Lodging allowance, 12s. a week, and rations. I got no allowance as master tailor; merely the pay of a sergeant. I might have said to the Board that my pay and allowances came to £122 a year. I draw rations for myself and family; that comes to 12s. 6d. a week. I can explain that £215. I have paid away not only what I paid in the shop, but I also gave work out and that might amount to £2 or £3 a week more. Parties used to take away work sometimes which amounted to £3 or £4. I think that I can satisfactorily account for the whole thing. I have refunded some £290 on certain conditions. I did not mean that that was satisfactorily accounted for, but you will see all about that if you will read the letter I sent to the Major-General. The terms upon which I refunded the money were that I used not to keep any accounts. I made no bargain about returning this money. I had to be satisfied or else I could not make up the account. If I did make an overcharge it was not my fault. The late Gunner Ritchie kept my accounts, and Loveless also kept them a part of the time. Loveless kept them for about two years. This is my signature; it is put there as a receipt for the amount shown there.

1574. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—I do, sir.

1575. The Attorney-General:—This account here is £765 14s. 6d.; can you tell me over what length of time that account extended—take the first one, September? It might have begun two months back, but I cannot tell very well.

1576. Would it not go back considerably more than two months? Yes, it might; it might go back three months.

1577. The next item is from September to December? Yes sir.

1578. And then from December to July? Yes sir.

1579. Who was the man who told you or suggested to you to refund that money—the £290? Nobody told me to do it.

1580. No one put you up to it? No sir.

1581. Are you sure? Quite sure.

1582. Didn't Mr. Little suggest it to you? Oh, yes sir; I did go to Mr. Little and I asked his advice about the matter, and I told him I kept no books myself, and that if they tried me by Court-martial that will be no excuse.

1583. Who told you that? I thought it myself; and he said, "Well the accounts have been reckoned up fairly, and the best thing you can do is to refund the money to the Government;" and I said, "Well, to save all trouble, I will give them the money—not the same money but my own money."

1584. You were frightened, were you not? Yes sir; I was frightened, I will admit that.

1585. You were saying something just now about losing your pension, who told you that? Nobody; I thought so.

1586. The President:—Is this pension that you receive as an old soldier of the imperial army? Yes sir.

1587. You were not referring to any pension you might receive out here? No sir.

1588. The Attorney-General:—Is that document in the handwriting of Mr. Little's clerk? No sir; I think it is written by one of our men in the Artillery.

1589. I want to ask you solidly and seriously, Lyttleton, was there any conversation between you and Mr. Webster as to these alleged overcharges? No sir.

1590. You swear that positively? Positively.

1591. Loveless was examined, was he not, before the Board of Inquiry? I don't believe he was, sir,—not to my knowledge.

1592. By the Court:—What service were you in before you came here as master tailor? In the seventh Royal Fusiliers—the second battalion.

1593. And you retired after 20 years service? I had 25 years and 335 days service.

1594. Did you apply for the position of master tailor in the force here? Yes sir.

1595. What were your qualifications—had you any experience of master tailor before? I was thirteen years and nine months a sergeant master tailor in my own regiment prior to discharge.

1596. And in the Royal Fusiliers didn't you keep any accounts? No sir. No account against the Government; minor accounts I did keep, but not accounts against the Government. They were kept by the quartermaster in his office, as is done everywhere.

1597. And you were not prepared to keep accounts when you came here? No sir; I was too busy.

1598. And did you ask Mr. Webster if he would allow you to have his clerks to keep your accounts for you? Yes, sir.

1599. And did you apply for a clerk for yourself? No sir; I did not.

1600. When you were posted as master tailor did you receive any orders from anybody as to what your duties would be? Yes sir; from Mr. Webster.

1601. And had you no dealings with the Officer Commanding or with the Adjutant? No sir.

1602. They never took any notice of you? No sir.

1603. And you were under Webster entirely? Yes sir; entirely.

1604. Who fixed the charges for makes and remakes? They were on a board in the office, and the prices and everything.

1605. Is that board in existence now? Is it signed by anybody? Yes, I believe it was; although I cannot say for certain whether Colonel Roberts' name was on it or not, although I think it was.

1606. Is the board there now? Well, I am not sure whether it was not given in for the information of the Board of Inquiry.

1607. You never saw any alteration in the scale of charges you were to make? There was only 1s. allowed and 18s.; there were only the two set prices.
1608. On whose authority, then, did you charge 18s. instead of 1s.? On the authority of the printed board.
1609. Yes, that is right enough; but on whose authority did you charge the 18s. upon an individual garment? Well, I determined it myself. I chalked it. I said 1s. would not pay, no matter how little would be done. It would take a man half a day, and we used to pay 7s. 6d. a day, so that it would not have paid me to have charged 1s. I might have charged 1s. for two or three garments that cost me 1s. to have altered, and then perhaps I would have another garment upon which I would charge 18s.
1610. In the regiment to which you belonged, were there different rates? No; there was a fixed price of £44 a year for alterations alone.
1611. How many people did you employ on an average? Different numbers. Sometimes twelve or thirteen, or seven, or six, or five, and I used to work myself as well.
1612. It just depended on the amount of work you had? Yes, sir; and I used to give work out too.
1613. Was it all civilian labour, or did you get any of the gunners to help? All civilian labour, except one soldier, who was merely a handy man; to him I used to give 10s. a week, or clothing and 5s. a week.
1614. When these long vouchers were presented to you for signature, were you able to add them up yourself? I never tried.
1615. But supposing you had tried? Yes sir, I think I could.
1616. Well, just add-up this little sum for me here? I have not got my glasses.
1617. Well, can you add-up a long column of figures to see whether it is right or wrong? No, not for certain.
1618. Did you not have two or three gunners—one was Edwards—helping you? I had two, sir; I forgot to mention the other one, M'Mahon; I used to give him 5s. a week.
1619. What is the name of the first man you mentioned? Nain.
1620. Was there not somebody else? Oh, yes sir, there was; a man of the name of Moran; he was discharged.
1621. Don't you remember a man named Carr? Yes sir; he was not in the shop at the same time.
1622. You have told us that you were not good at figures. Can you read writing? Oh, yes.
1623. Read that page then? I cannot see, sir, without my glasses.
1624. Can you make anything of it? I could, sir, if I had my glasses.
1625. Well, if you could not read the writing, and you could not make up the figures, apparently, you could not know much about your vouchers, whether they were correct or otherwise? Well, I really did not know much about them.
1626. How was the alteration of clothing done—was it done by batteries? Well, there was some of each battery, in fact some of each battery on hand at the same time.
1627. And when you told the clerk the amount for your vouchers you said you told him how much to put down? No sir, I did not tell him that; he went by what was marked down in the store, whether it was a make or a re-make.
1628. Therefore you could not have said whether it was twenty-five cloth tunics for No. 3 or seventy-five cloth tunics for No. 3 Battery? No sir.
1629. And so long as you got the whole amount, that was all that you cared about? Yes, sir.
1630. Can you tell me exactly where you last saw this notice-board that you speak of? In Mr. Webster's office.
1631. Was it hanging up? It was hanging on the side of a partition, but I believe I read the prices in a book too.
1632. Can you tell me what sort of a book it was? Something like a ledger.
1633. Where was this board hanging up? You could see it from the door, sir.
1634. When did you see it last? Just before the Board of Inquiry; it was there I am sure.
1635. You told us just now that you saw it at the Court of Inquiry? I understood that it went up there; I understood that when the books went up it went up with them.
1636. Did you see it produced before the Board of Inquiry? I cannot say, sir.
1637. But you have not seen it since? Not to my recollection.
1638. Nor the book in which the writing was? No sir. I have seen none of the books since.
1639. Were there two scales of charges—one, such and such a scale of prices, and the other, such and such a scale of charges—one beginning with 1s., and the other beginning with 18s.? Yes sir; there were those two items which you say.
1640. Did you ever hear of this order:—"Dated the 29th June, 1883. In pursuance with the recommendation of a Board of Officers, in connection with the management of tailors' shops, the Commandant is pleased to approve of the garrison order of the 5th instant being amended as follows:—Fitting and alteration of garments—cloth tunic, 1s.; cloth trousers, 9d.; serge trousers, 9d.; Norfolk jacket, 9d.; jumper, 4d.; removing old and sewing on new buttons—tunic, per set, 10d.; Norfolk jacket, 6d. By command.—J. A. COMPTON, Capt., Acting Major of Brigade?" No sir; it could not be done at that.
1641. I am not asking whether it could be done at that, but whether you had ever seen or heard of that order? No sir; I have no recollection.
1642. Did you ever hear of an order, dated the 5th June, 1883, which gives the scale of charges for making garments? No sir; I do not remember it.
1643. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—When you were fitting the men, did they come up in different batches to be fitted and altered? Yes sir.
1644. Then you would know what battery the man belonged to that you were fitting? Oh yes sir.
1645. Then, as you were fitting the clothes on, you would call out the name of the battery to which the man belonged? Yes sir.
1646. Would the names of the men be down in the book too? Certainly. Of course.
1647. Do you know what book these names were put down in? They belonged to the stores.
1648. You say you decided whether a "re-make" or an "alteration" was necessary—was that checked at all? Sometimes I had to determine it myself, and at other times an officer had to determine it, or Mr. Webster himself, or the commanding officers of the batteries.

1649. Would the prisoner be present? Well, he was not in front of the officers. He was only present during what we did in the store.

1650. Then what you did in the store Mr. Webster was present whilst you did it? Yes sir.

1651. Was that measuring and fitting on clothes and so on? Yes sir.

1652. Would you not have to pass an examination before you become a sergeant? Not for my business, sir.

The President:—It is merely an honorary rank.

1653. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—I suppose you would have to pass an examination before you became a tailor? No sir.

1654. As a matter of fact I understand from what you say there seems to have been an arrangement by which alterations or re-makes were either 1s. or 18s.? Yes sir.

1655. There was no medium? No sir; no second charge.

1656. Did you say that supposing there were five or six slight alterations you would very likely throw them in as one. Would you charge 1s. for each one or 18s.? Perhaps there would be six or eight before I got a "re-make."

1657. There might be five or six which you would alter at 1s., and the next would be something more than you could possibly do for 1s., and then you would charge the 18s.? Yes sir.

1658. I believe you yourself condemned this system—pointed out that it was what it ought not to have been? Yes sir; I pointed out to the officers on the Board of Inquiry.

1659. You gave in a list of prices which you recommended ought to be adopted, is not that so? Yes sir.

1660. In any part of the world where you have been before, did you ever hear of such a system as this with charges of 1s. and 18s. and nothing between? No sir.

1661. Did you ever get any money for altering the clothing until it was finally passed by the officer commanding the battery? No sir.

1662. You never did, whatever your charge was? No, whatever the charge was.

1663. I believe you said so before the Board of Inquiry? Yes sir.

1664. Did you say before the Board of Inquiry as follows:—"I demanded 18s. for re-makes, and am the person who assessed the charges. In fact I do all charges?" Yes sir.

1665. And that is a fact, is it not? Yes sir.

1666. Are you still the master-tailor? No sir.

1667. Did you remember being asked at the Board of Inquiry to explain how it was during the time of the other master-tailor there was a less percentage of re-makes than during your time, and did you say that in his time they were all big men, and consequently not so much alteration was needed—the new men are smaller, and therefore it is necessary to alter nearly every tunic? Yes sir.

1668. Is that so? Yes sir.

1669. Well, if that is so, there are smaller men in the force now than there used to be? Yes sir.

1670. And yet under this system they keep sending out clothes according to the old sizes? Yes sir, seemingly so.

1671. And that necessitates a great many alterations? Yes sir.

1672. Would that remark of yours about there being smaller men in the force extend to all the batteries 1, 2, and 3—indeed throughout the force? Yes sir.

1673. Well, I suppose that would account to a certain extent for there being a certain number of tunics to be altered in No. 2 Battery, and the same in No. 3 Battery? Yes sir.

1674. And the jumpers and Norfolk jackets are all too large right through the force? Yes sir.

1675. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—You were asked as to what you said before the Board of Inquiry; did not you say this—that Webster was your only authority for the charges you made? Yes sir, I daresay I did.

1676. My learned friend asked you if you did not suggest before the Board of Inquiry an amendment on a different scale of charges to be made by the master-tailor;—is it not a fact that that different scale of charges suggested by you made a difference of £271 5s. 10d. on a body of 350 men? Yes sir.

The President:—The tailor recommended a system by which a large amount of money would be saved to the Government?

Mr. Heydon:—Yes.

1677. By Mr. Heydon:—Didn't you say this—"The alterations at these charges could have been done; of course a larger alteration could have been made for 2s. 6d. than for 1s. charged for; and a larger alteration still for 7s. 6d., and the extreme price would have been 12s. 6d.?" I only say it could be done; perhaps it might suit other people, but I would only give it a trial at those reduced rates, on the scale which I handed to the Board the other day.

1678. By The President:—On your own showing, did you think that reduction would be made? Yes.

1679. By Mr. Heydon:—Were there two lists of charges on the notice-board, one beginning with 1s. and one with 18s.? There might be more, but I don't know now.

1680. Did you say that there was one list beginning with 1s., and the other beginning with 18s.: let me put it in this way, what was the charge of fitting a tunic? I think a shilling.

1681. What was your charge for fitting a pair of cloth trousers? I think it was 1s. or 9d.

1682. Was there not a list on that board of charges for this fitting beginning with 1s.? Yes sir.

1683. Now, what do you charge for making a rank and file tunic? 18s.

1684. What do you charge for making a sergeant's tunic? Somewhere about 18s.

1685. It was a little more, was it not? It might be a little more.

1686. And a staff-sergeant's tunic, was there not a price for that? Yes sir.

1687. Well, was there not another list of charges beginning with 18s.? They were all on one board.

1688. I know that? I have said so; but were there not two lists of charges, one beginning with 1s. on the top of the column, and the other beginning with 18s.? I suppose so.

1689. You say your charges were made on the authority of that board; now, will you swear that there was a single word about charging 18s. for re-making a rank and file tunic; was it not 18s. for making a rank and file tunic?

1690. The President:—Can you tell me, Lyttleton, whether, when the clothing was fitted on a battery were the battery quarter-masters' sergeants present? Yes sir.

1691. And did they put down in their battery books a note of the alterations required? No, sir.
1692. When you mark the clothes for altering, you take a piece of chalk and make some hieroglyphics, some on the neck, some on the back, and some on the arm;—would the officer be able to tell whether it was for a “remake” or for an “alteration”? Yes; but I used to tell them the nature of the work.
1693. What I want to get at, is this—it remained to you to judge whether it was a “remake” or an “alteration”? Yes, sir. Nobody could judge but myself.
1694. Is it not a fact that you get 1s. for every tunic you see fitted, whether there is an alteration or not? I believe so, sir.
1695. You said that in these battery lists’ “remakes” you did not get the money until they were vouched for by the officer commanding the batteries? Yes, sir. The work must be passed by the officers commanding the batteries.
1696. You are quite sure of that—the work? Yes, sir; the work.
1697. You say you did not get the money until the vouchers were passed? The Commanding Officer Colonel Roberts, signs them, I know.
- [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure, 81 B.]
The witness withdraws, and the Court adjourns at 4 o’clock until 10 o’clock the following morning.

On Thursday, the 21st March, at 10 a.m., the Court reassembled, pursuant to adjournment. Present: The same members as before.

Joseph Murphy, having been called and duly sworn, said:—

I am the staff quarter-master’s clerk. I have been his clerk since 1885. This document (Exhibit 66) is not in my handwriting. I first saw that document yesterday afternoon. Yesterday afternoon I sat down and wrote certain words which you dictated to me. The letter from Sergeant Lyttelton to the General is not in my handwriting either.

[Exhibit 74 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

I never write out any document containing what is in that one.

1698. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General: I do sir.

1699. The Attorney-General:—Have you any idea whose handwriting it is, if it is not in yours? I cannot say.

1700. Has Lieutenant Little any other clerk? He has not.

1701. Have you tried to form an opinion as to whose handwriting it is? I cannot say.

1702. Have you tried, since you were asked to write something by Mr. Heydon, to form an opinion as to whose handwriting that document is in? Yes, I have.

1703. And have you found out? I have not.

1704. Have you any opinion on the matter? It might be in one of the Artillery Brigade clerk’s handwriting, but I cannot say that it is.

1705. Was any clerk sent up from the Quarter-master’s Department to assist you at any time? Yes.

1706. When these investigations were going on? No, sir.

1707. When? It was fully eight months since, and he returned to the Military Staff Office.

1708. Do you remember when the inquiry was first talked about. The inquiry into these matters of the deficiency of the cloth and tunics and so on. Well, about that time or after that inquiry was set on foot was there any clerk from the Quarter-master’s Department sent to assist you? No, sir.

1709. How long was this man assisting you? Twelve months.

1710. What was his name? Blakeley.

1711. Where is he now? He is at Dawes Battery.

1712. Do you know whether it is his handwriting? No, sir.

The President: Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon: No, sir.

[His evidence having been read over to the witness and certified as correct according to Rule of Procedure 81 B, the witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant and Quarter-master Little having been recalled and reminded of his former oath, is further re-examined by the prosecutor through the Court:—

1713. Mr. Heydon]. Do you remember when you were on the Board of Inquiry a notice board being produced having any reference to lists of prices on it? There was a printed paper produced showing the prices for making garments and also the prices for alterations.

1714. Do you remember who produced it? I do not. I do not know whether it was Captain Savage or Mr. Webster. In fact I forget who produced it.

1715. Can you tell me whether on that there was any authority for remakes? There was not; no authority.

1716. Was there any price for remakes? There was not. There was no mention of remakes.

1717. The President:—Was this paper attached to a board? I do not know.

1718. Were there any marks on it looking as if it had been nailed on a board. Was it on a card or on a piece of paper? I cannot recollect.

1719. Was it signed by anybody? No; so far as I can recollect it was in print, and the authority was in print too, so far as I can recollect.

1720. Do you remember the date of it? I do not. It was a pretty old date, though.

1721. Mr. Heydon:—Can you say whether any written board at all was produced, and written board for pasting documents upon? I do not remember any written board being produced.

1722. Did you see anything but this paper having anything about remakes on it? Not so far as I can recollect. I only saw the one.

1723. Now do you remember Lyttelton coming to ask your advice as to what course he should adopt? He came and asked me whether I could not reduce the numbers that he was charged with. That was what he came to me about, and I told him that I could not reduce them. That they were as low as I could conscientiously make them.

1724. Has he consulted you about making a refund? No. I knew nothing at all about a refund until he produced the papers.

1725. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—What position do you occupy in this matter? I am a witness, I think.

1726. That is all? That is all, sir.

1727. You have worked nearly the whole of this up, have you not? Yes; I have worked up the figures.

1728. And you have taken a very active part in the whole of the proceedings? I have done just what I was told to do.

1729. Have you not taken an active part? Certainly. I always take an active part in any duty that I am called upon to perform.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.

Colonel Eden recalled, reminded of his former oath, is examined through the Court by the Prosecutor:—

1730. Do you remember when you were on the Board of Inquiry whether any documents were produced in answer to an inquiry as to what authority there was for remakes, a Board, or document, or anything? There was no Board. There was a document, as far as I can recollect, purporting to be a garrison order, but it did not authorize remakes.

1731. And no notice Board was produced at all? No.

1732. Do you remember who it was who produced this document which purported to be a garrison order? No; I do not. I think it was the adjutant.

1733. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—Did not you ascertain that there were only two prices, that is 1s. and 18s., whether for alteration or anything else? Yes.

1734. Did you report this to the General in your report—"The Board considers one of the worst phases in this investigation to consist in a very large number of men annually allowed to receive compensation involving a continuous increase of unfitting garments, ultimately to be re-made, in order to fit men of different stature. This appears to have been carried on without any regard to conserving the public interests. This is shown by the fact that fully two-thirds of the clothing issued is charged for as having being re-made at the full price of making garments from the web, so that each tunic of this class costs the Government from 17s. to 21s., in addition to the ordinary price of the garment, and plus the 1s. allowed for alteration?" Yes.

1735. The President:—How did the Board obtain the information that there was only two prices, 1s. and 18s., do you remember? From this document I think.

1736. In that report we have just heard read, you said that one of the worst phases exists from this custom. I want to know how you arrived at the fact that there were only two charges, namely 1s. and 18s.? From the Garrison Order, I believe.

By the Attorney-General, through the Court:—

1737. On page 107 of the Proceedings of the Court of Inquiry did you not report as follows in reply to the Major-General's Remarks, in detail—"15th October, 1888. They (that is, the Board) submit their hereunder answers to Minute No. 1. There is no authority for remaking the garments, but the custom has never hitherto been challenged, and all charges of this nature have previously been paid on the signature of the officer commanding the corps. No. 2. The Paymaster cannot produce any authority for passing these remake charges. He appears to have taken the signature of the officer commanding the artillery force as sufficient. The practice commenced in January, 1885." Did you report that? Yes, sir.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, having been recalled and reminded of his former oath, is examined through the Court by the Prosecutor:—

1738. You remember being called as a witness before the Board of Inquiry? Yes.

1739. Do you remember whether you produced before them any notice board or document or anything bearing upon the authority of the master tailor to make charges? I cannot recollect at the present time. If I did so it would be recorded in the proceedings of the Board. I would safely say that I produced no board of charges—no board.

1740. Did you produce anything which you had obtained or cut off from a notice board? Not to my recollection.

1741. Can you tell me who it is who prepared the size rolls each year? They are prepared by the officer commanding the artillery batteries.

1742. Can you tell me whether they contained the sizes of all the men in the batteries? I do not know whether they contained the individual sizes. I think they were sent in a collective form, as far as I can recollect.

1743. Do you remember when that voucher—that £63 10s. voucher for compensation for warrant officers in 1887—do you remember at the time that that matter was being considered, whether you obtained and laid before Colonel Roberts a list of contractor's charges? I am under the impression that I did so.

1744. Whose charges? Well, it was an offer by Henderson to make these garments. What I am speaking about now I have already stated in my evidence.

1745. Do you remember whether you got a list of former charges and laid it before Colonel Roberts? No, I did not.

1746. Are you clear about that? As clear as I can be.

1747. What you did get then is what you have already mentioned—the offer by Henderson? Yes.

1748. That was the amount for which compensation was allowed? Yes; I think so, but I will not be very sure, but I know that the prisoner was instructed to put himself into communication with the contractors and that that was the result of it.

1749. Do you know any writing at all purporting to be an authority for remakes? No, I do not.
1750. In that document, that £65 10s. voucher, was your signature attached to that before the prisoner's was put there? I do not think that my signature appeared in that document at all.
1751. Have you made inquiries as to who were the staff-sergeants in the year 1887? Yes. I forwarded a list to Colonel Mackenzie.
1752. Who were they? Including warrant-officers they are all down on that list. [Exhibit 75].
1753. That includes staff-sergeants and warrant-officers separately? Yes.
1754. And one of the staff-sergeants deserted, I think? Yes; an artificer.
1755. Do you prepare the schedule in the contracts? No. I have been present generally when Mr. Webster brings these matters before the Colonel. The schedules really are made up at the Treasury from the size rolls of batteries which are forwarded, that is of my own knowledge.
1756. And you say that you are generally present when they are gone over? Yes. They are brought to the Colonel, and I generally go over the papers with him and Mr. Webster.
1757. Have you anything to do with the master tailor's vouchers? Nothing whatever.
1758. Or have you anything to do with the payments in full of warrant-officers or with the originating of that practice? Not beyond bringing their claims before the Colonel.
1759. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Did you ever see Mr. Little in Mr. Webster's store apparently examining books there when you told him that he had no business to be there without authority? Yes.
1760. By the President:—You have just handed in a paper, can you tell me whose handwriting it is in? In the handwriting of the clerk belonging to the Brigade Office.
1761. Can you tell me whether this paper [Exhibit 66] is in the same handwriting? Yes; I should say it was.
1762. It has been stated in evidence that certain papers were signed relying on your supervision—can you tell me whether you supervised those two papers before they were signed? [Exhibits 21 and 22 shown to the witness.] No, I did not. May I ask you to tell me what you mean by supervising?
1763. It has been stated in evidence that they were signed as correct relying upon your supervision? They were brought to me in the ordinary course of office routine, and I saw the signature of the prisoner as to their correctness, and passed them on to the Colonel.
1764. You did not supervise them? No; I did not hold myself responsible for them in the slightest degree.
1765. Would you look at the first two vouchers [Exhibit 72] amongst those and tell me if you supervised those in the same way? No; when these papers were brought to me by the prisoner, marked as correct, and signed by him, I took them on for the Colonel's signature.
1766. Would you have noticed any similarity between those two if you had supervised them? No; I should simply have looked for Mr. Webster's signature as to the correctness of the paper and passed it on.
1767. Do you remember any garrison or regimental orders issued about January, 1885, authorizing scales for fitting and remakes? Not of January, 1885.
1768. Would you look at that exhibit [Exhibit 72] and tell me whose initials are to the corrections in the figures? They are mine.
1769. And there are some on other pages also? They are mine.
1770. How is it that your initials appear there? Because I saw that the figures had been altered and I wished the Colonel to see that I had noticed the fact.
1771. Then you supervised them? No; I did not supervise them, I simply saw that there had been a scratching out. I am not responsible for the figures.
1772. You did not initial them as correct? No; I simply initialled the corrections without knowing whether they were right or wrong.
1773. Mr. Heydon:—Is it the rule that alterations of that kind should be initialled? Every alteration of that kind should be initialled, or every erasure.
1774. The President:—But is it not a rule that the initials should be by the person making the alteration? Yes.
1775. Well, apparently you put your initials to something that you did not know anything at all about? I did not initial it with any intention of vouching for the correctness of the amount. I simply initialled it to draw the attention of the Colonel commanding to the fact that there had been erasures there and that I had seen them.
1776. And you initialled it so that no further alterations or erasure could be made? Certainly.
1777. Do you remember when this scale of charges of 1s. and 18s. first began? I have a copy of the garrison order from which I could find out. On the 5th June, 1883, and an amended scale on the 29th June, 1883. [His evidence having been read over to the witness and certified as correct by Rule of Procedure S1 B, the witness retires.]
- Mr. Heydon*:—My learned friend suggested early in the case that all the proceedings before the Board of Inquiry should be admitted. I objected then, because it appeared to me that in those there was so much that was irrelevant, but my learned friend is still of the same mind. I am now willing to put all the prisoner's evidence before the Board of Inquiry in as evidence in this case.
- The Attorney-General*:—My learned friend may tender them if he likes, and if he does tender them, I shall know precisely how to act.
- Mr. Heydon*:—Then if you will not say whether you are agreeable to my tendering them or not, if you will not say what you want, I shall not tender them.
- The Attorney-General*:—Very well. (Exhibits 76 and 77 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.)

Quartermaster-sergeant Wilson having been recalled, is reminded of his former oath, and examined through the Court by the prosecutor:—

1778. Do you remember taking up your compensation list to the prisoner upon one occasion when you were told to make some alteration, or addition to them? Yes sir.
1779. Would you be kind enough to tell the Court what took place between yourself and the prisoner? An order was given that we should take up our compensation lists, which I did. I happened to be wrong according to Mr. Webster's version, and he sent for the three quartermaster-sergeants, and told us that he was not going to be bothered doing our work, and he said we would have to take off one-third. I asked him what that was for, and he did not give me any satisfactory answer. He told me to do what I was told. 1780.

1780. Can you tell me what the words were that were used? They were hot and hasty words. He told me to mind my own business, and I told him I was doing so, and he told me that if I did not mind my own business I should be placed under arrest.
1781. Previous to that, did you know what the one-third was deducted for? No, sir.
1782. Had it been deducted in former years? No, not to my own knowledge.
1783. Do you know why it was deducted then? No sir.
1784. You got no satisfaction, but was told to do your duty or would be put under arrest? Yes, sir.
1785. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—Then you have no love for Webster, have you? He is a particular friend of mine, as far as I am concerned.
1786. What lists are you talking about? The 1886 list.
1787. No. 3 battery list? The list of the men belonging to that battery.
1788. You had sent in a list claiming full compensation for your men, less 20½ per cent., and he told you that you were to take one-third off? Yes.
1789. Did you take it off eventually? Yes.
1790. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—How long have you been quartermaster? For nearly five years.
1791. The President:—In reply to the Attorney-General you said that this conversation between Mr. Webster and yourself about the list took place in the year 1886. Are you sure that it was that year? I would not be positive, but I think it was.
1792. It might have been 1886 or it might have been 1887? Yes, sir.
1793. If you saw the list would you know what year it was? I daresay I would, sir. I think those are the lists, but I don't exactly remember the year.
1794. How much was the percentage in the year that you spoke about? It was either 20¼ per cent. or 20½ per cent.
1795. Do you know who the contractor was that year? I think it was Henderson.
1796. It was not Riley, was it? No, it was not Riley; it was Moore & Henderson.
1797. Are you quite positive that it was not 26½ per cent. that you took off? I cannot swear, sir. I know of late years it has been 26¼ per cent.
1798. Would you remember whether it was 20¼ or 26¼ per cent.? I cannot remember.
1799. But you are almost sure that Henderson was the contractor? Yes, sir.
1800. Was there only one occasion on which all the three quartermasters were sent for? Only one occasion.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B., the witness withdraws.]

Quartermaster-Sergeant Taylor, re-called, and reminded of his former oath, is examined by the Court:—

1801. In your previous evidence you stated that on one occasion all of the quartermaster-sergeants were sent for by the prisoner with reference to compensation lists? Yes, sir.
1802. And the Quartermaster-Sergeant Wilson and the prisoner had some words about it? Yes, sir.
1803. Can you definitely fix in your memory the year in which that took place? Yes, sir.
1804. What year was it in? In 1886.
1805. Who was the contractor that year? I think Riley.
1806. And do you remember the percentage that was taken off in the year in question? Yes, sir.
1807. What was it? 20¼ per cent.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B., the witness withdraws.]

Mr. Claude Solomon is re-called, reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Court:—

1808. Have you looked through that list? Yes, and I find that from the month of January, 1886, to October, 1888, the clothing recovered from the battery was as follows:—Cloth tunics, 2; cloth trousers, 131; serge trousers, 137; jumpers, 7; Norfolk jackets, 5.
1809. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—Those are the returns upon which the payments are actually made? No; these are the amounts recovered from the batteries. These items are charged against the batteries, and they have to account for this amount of money in addition to what is paid from the pay office.
1810. They have to recover it from the men? Yes, sir.
1811. By the Attorney-General:—How long have you been connected with this Force? Since May, 1886.
1812. And you have to do with accounts nearly all that time? Yes, sir; I have had to do with the accounts of the Force.
1813. Did you ever happen to hear, in connection with the accounts that have come into your office to be passed, that the custom has been to allow for re-makes, "as if for makes"? No, sir; I have not heard that it has been the custom to allow for re-makes as for makes.
1814. Have you heard that it was the custom to allow for re-makes as for makes? Well; there was no authority for the payment of re-makes.
1815. Do you know that there has been a custom ever since you have been connected with the Force, not only for the master tailor to make a charge for re-makes, but for the tailor to be paid for re-makes? Yes, sir; there has been that custom.
1816. It has been authorized as far as you know? Well; authorized by the paymaster.
1817. You know that, do you? I know the paymaster has passed all the vouchers for re-makes for payment.
1818. Knowing what he was doing—knowing they were charges for re-makes? Yes; knowing that they were charges for re-makes.
1819. As distinguished from alterations I mean? Well; I should read alterations and re-makes as distinct items.

1820. Who was the paymaster? Colonel Baynes.
1821. How do you know that he passed these charges for re-makes? His attention was drawn to them.
1822. By whom? By myself.
1823. Are you sure about that? Yes.
1824. What year was that in? I cannot determine the year, but I fancy it was in 1887.
1825. And having drawn the attention of Colonel Baynes to these charges for re-makes, he passed them you say? Yes.
1826. Do you remember any observation that Colonel Baynes made to you at the time you called his attention to it? As far as I can recollect I drew the attention of Colonel Baynes to the matter of Master Tailor Lyttleton's vouchers—they were heavy vouchers at that time, and I pointed out so many re-makes in them, and Colonel Baynes at that time when they were pointed out to him as far as I can recollect said that re-making was more trouble than making, and that the voucher would be paid upon the claims made.
1827. So that you have understood all the time that you have been there that there have been charges for re-makes? and that these charges for re-makes have been almost as high as the charges for makes? Yes they have, as far as I can tell.
1828. Colonel Baynes was an officer who was connected for many years with these forces—indeed he might almost be called the father of the volunteers? Yes—you may say that he was the father of the volunteers.
1829. Colonel Baynes was paymaster when you called his attention to this matter I believe? Yes, sir.
1830. By Mr. Heydon:—You said that Lyttleton's vouchers at that time were heavy? Yes.
1831. And that was why you spoke to Colonel Baynes about it? Yes.
1832. Were they unusually heavy? Yes, the three vouchers that came in at that time were unusually heavy.
1833. Were they unusually heavy in the item of re-makes? I cannot say that from memory, but they were very large vouchers; one was for over £100, and I think that they all amounted to something like £300.
1834. Was there a heavy percentage of re-makes in them? No sir, I cannot say that.
1835. Comparing the re-makes with the fitting and all? That I have not looked into at all.
1836. Can you tell me whether there was a larger amount of payments for re-makes than there had been before? In this particular lot I fancy there were heavier charges for re-makes than upon any previous occasion.
1837. When was that? September, 1887.
1838. There were three vouchers paid at the same time? Yes, amounting to £294 altogether.
1839. When a payment like that is made by the pay office, is there a record of the amount paid, and to whom it is paid? Yes.
1840. Would your books show how much has been paid to the master tailor on the master tailor's vouchers for the last five years? Well I cannot answer for the time before I took office, but I believe that it can be shown.
1841. I shall be glad if you will trace it Mr. Solomon? I can turn up the vouchers for each year.
1842. By the President:—Would not the vouchers be approved of by someone before Colonel Baynes passed them? The vouchers before Colonel Baynes passed them were signed by Colonel Roberts as the officer commanding the Artillery, and in this instance approved by Colonel Roberts as the officer commanding the Garrison, in other instances they were approved of by him as commanding the Artillery Force, but here they were approved of by him as commanding the Garrison.
1843. The Attorney-General:—Do you know with regard to the voucher for the month of September how many months it covers? I cannot say.
1844. Did it cover several months? As far as I can recollect it covered about three months.
- [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Daniel Behan having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the prosecutor, and said:—

I was the master tailor before J. Lyttleton. I was master tailor for a period of seven years and nine months, ending on the 5th April, 1885. Towards the end of that time I re-made certain garments that were supplied by the contractor and charged for the same rate as I charge for the making of garments. I had a conversation with the prisoner in 1883 when clothing was given out, and that conversation was to the effect that it was quite impossible to alter for the amount given. There was only 9d. given for a Norfolk jacket and 1s. given for a tunic. Those were the amounts laid down by the Board which took place in 1883 and established the prices for making and altering. It was quite impossible to fit men for either 9d. or 1s. Some of the garments had to be totally ripped to pieces and recut, over which I had to employ men. The conversation was with the prisoner, and I explained matters to him, and he told me to make out a list of men's names and make an application to the officers commanding batteries. First of the batteries was No. 2. The only conversation that I remember was that I called the prisoner's attention to the state of affairs. That was before I had made any re-makes or had made any charge for any of the re-makes. After I had pointed out to him the state of affairs he desired me to make up a list with the men's names and the garments requiring re-making. I did that. It was before I had fitted the men. I knew what garments require re-making, because the men are paraded and they have the garments on. It was then that this list was made of the men's names and which of them wanted re-making. I did that. The only conversation that took place was that I have always made him acquainted with the garments and the men's names. After I had explained the nature of affairs to him and he told me to put down the names of the men, I had no conversation with him further. Then the list was duly made out, initialled by Mr. Webster, and forwarded to the officers commanding batteries for their signature. That was a list of men's names requiring re-made garments, one for each battery. They were in most cases initialled by the prisoner, Mr. Webster, as recommending them as correct. Then they went on to the officers commanding batteries and came back to me. I put them on the file. I have not got them now. I did not leave it behind me when I left the office. The file belonged to me and everything on it. I have destroyed the documents—they were mine. It was after these documents came back to me and I put them on the file, that I made out my pay voucher charging for these garments—that they were re-made at the price of makes. I never had any conversation about the price with the prisoner to my knowledge. I charged charged for remaking by the authority of the officer commanding the battery who signed the requisition. That is the requisition with the men's names upon it. I told you that they were signed by the officers commanding batteries—that was my only authority. I charged for remakes at the same price as I charged for makes. By the authority of the officer who signed the documents no price was attached to it. My only authority for fixing the price at the same amount as for making was the authority given out by the board of officers before making, and I may say that there is more trouble in remaking a garment than in making it in the first instance. The authority for charging for remakes at the same price as makes was the authority of the majors or officers commanding the batteries who signed the document. Those documents did not contain any price. A re-make is as good as a make, and worse, in fact. It was this way: When I got authority to remake a garment I considered it authority to charge for it at the same price as a make. I always got authority in this way that I speak of, but I do not know that there was any other way. I either have the authority of the major commanding the battery or Mr. Webster. The conversation that I had Mr. Webster that it was an understood thing that remaking was to be the same as for making up, I do not remember what passed at that conversation. The prisoner and I understood that a remake was as good as a make, and was to be charged as a make. I do not know that the prisoner ever gave me particular authority to do that sort of thing. I took the authority from a little brigade printed arrangement on a notice board. The conversation with the prisoner was of course that we had to do it. It was I who said that we should have to do it, and the prisoner said that it could not be helped. It may not have been that; but something like that, I suppose.

The Attorney-General:—This case has lasted more than a fortnight already. Matters have been gone into which are quite outside the range of the case; and now I want to ask whether it is right that our time should be taken up by an inquiry into the custom upon which charges were made by the master tailor when this man occupied that position.

At 1 o'clock the Court adjourned for luncheon.

At 2 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled. Present:—The same members as before. Mr. Heydon submitted that he had a right to pursue the examination on its present lines, as it was calculated to throw some light upon the second lot of charges against the prisoner.

The President ruled that the questions could be asked.

Witness, being reminded of his former oath, was further examined by the Prosecuting Counsel. He said:—10, 15, or 20 per cent. of the tunics required remaking, but you will get the information from my returns. Very few of the jumpers wanted remaking. It is very hard for me to give you a percentage of the cloth trousers.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Captain and Adjutant Savage was recalled. After making an examination of the necessary books, is reminded of his former oath, and further examined by the Court:—

1845. You find in the necessary books the following articles put down as issued on payment to batteries? Yes; one cloth tunic, 130 cloth trousers, 135 serge trousers, five serge jumpers, and three Norfolk jackets, errors and omissions excepted. The last date is the 3rd day of the 9th month, 1888.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

The Court adjourned at 2:30 p.m., to proceed to the Garrison Hospital, Victoria Barracks, to take evidence.

At 5 minutes past 3 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled at the Garrison Hospital, Victoria Barracks, pursuant to adjournment.

Present:—The same members as before.

Gunner Charles James Loveless, Acting Bombardier New South Wales Artillery, having been duly sworn, was examined by the Prosecutor and said:—

I was acting as clerk to Mr. Webster for some time. I had a duplicate key of the clothing store whilst I was his clerk. Whilst I was his clerk I did not make away with any of the clothing or any of the things in the store. I did not permit anybody else to do so. I got my compensation in the year 1887. I got £2 10s. 6d.; Webster gave it to me. I signed a receipt when I got it. I did not sign any book.

The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine witness? The Attorney General:—Yes, sir.

Cross examined:—

1846. I believe you used to make out the vouchers for the master-tailor's accounts, didn't you? Yes, sir.

1847. Did you make them out from books? From the clothing book.

1848. And who used to tell what to do—Mr. Webster or the master-tailor? The master-tailor would tell me his quarter was up and he wanted some money, and Mr. Webster would tell me to make the voucher out from the time he was last paid up to date.

1849. Do you remember whether you used to tell Mr. Webster whether they were correct or not before he signed them? I do not know. I might have done.

1850. Is that your receipt? Yes, sir.

[Exhibit 80 handed in, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

1851. Mr. Heydon:—You signed that at the time you got the money, I suppose?

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

No. 1378. Corporal Emanuel Keesing, N.S.W.A., having been called and duly sworn, is examined by the Prosecutor. He said:—

I AM a district corporal, and I do clerical work in the Artillery Brigade Office. This document (No. 66) is in my handwriting; I cannot say that I remember the circumstances under which I drew it up. There is no date on it at all. I do not remember anything at all about it.

The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General? The Attorney-General:—No, sir.

[His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Mr. Heydon:—This finished the evidence for the prosecution, with the exception that to-morrow morning I may want to tender a document, so that I shall not formally finish my case at present.

At 3.25 the Court adjourned until the following morning, at Dawes' Battery, at 10 o'clock.

On Friday, March 22nd, at 10 a.m., the Court reassembled at Dawes' Battery pursuant to adjournment.

Present: The same members as before.

Mr. Claude Solomon, Chief Paymaster, having been recalled and reminded of his former oath is further re-examined by the prosecutor through the Court.

1852. Have you ascertained the amounts paid to the master tailor since the year 1883, including the year 1888? I have.

1853. Can you tell me what they were? In master tailor Behann's time for 1883 they amounted to £242 8s. 10d. In 1884 to £279 4s. 5d., and in 1885 up to April, £110 7s. 9d. Under master tailor Lyttleton, in 1886, they amounted to £295 4s. 3d. In 1887 to £658 19s. 3d., and in 1888 to £411 4s. 6d. up to the end of July.

1854. Can you tell me what Sergeant Lyttleton got in 1885? I cannot without reference to the vouchers.

1855. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—Of course you know perfectly well that the amounts paid to the master tailor would either increase or decrease, according to the necessity for, and the amount of alterations to be made? Yes; the amounts would increase or decrease, according to the quantity of alterations.

1856. And you are not in a position to say what alterations were necessary, are you? Certainly not, sir.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

1857. Mr. Heydon:—That closes the case for the prosecution.

1858. The President:—Mr. Webster, do you wish to call any witnesses in your defence? Yes, sir.

1859. Are they witnesses to character only? No.

1860. Do you intend to make a statement in addition to the address made by your counsel. Yes.

1861. The President (to the Attorney-General):—Do you wish to address the Court, Mr. Attorney-General, before calling your witnesses?

1862. The Attorney-General:—I will formally state that I do not wish to make any address now. I will address the Court later on.

Colonel Roberts having been called by the prisoner, is reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Counsel for the defence.

1863. Do you remember some time within the last three weeks having a conversation with Colonel Airey at the Victoria Barracks, about this question of compensation? I do.

1864. About when was it? Within this month; in the messroom at the Victoria Barracks.

1865. Was there one conversation outside first? I understand there was, but I did not hear it.

1866. Then the only conversation you heard was in the messroom. Now, what was it? I went into the messroom and found Colonel Airey speaking to Colonel Murphy, and I found out that they were speaking about the compensation for clothing for the year 1886, and I said to Colonel Airey—"What do you know about it," and he said, "I saw the Commandant and recalled to his memory that I had previously seen him when parading with Major Fitzsimons, about the compensation for 1872, and that he had then directed us to make arrangements with the contractor. We saw the contractor, who said he could not give the whole amount as he must have some profit. I then returned and informed the Commandant."

1867. Well, anything more? Nothing went on further about that subject.

1868. Do you remember his saying anything about his having reminded the General or the Commandant?

Mr. Heydon:—This evidence is in contradiction—Colonel Airey was never asked whether he had reminded the Commandant.

The Attorney-General:—You are not restricted to the exact words in contradiction.

1869. He recalled to the Commandant's memory the time when he and Major Fitzsimons paraded before him? Yes.

1870. Did he say that by reason of his having reminded the Commandant of that circumstance that this compensation question of 1886 was settled? He did not say it to me, I believe he said it to somebody else.

1871. I believe nothing was said in your presence about Colonel Airey having made short work of the matter? No, he did not say it in my presence.

1872. You have only heard of his having said it? Yes.

The Attorney-General:—I think it right, sir, to mention here in justice to Colonel Airey—I only ascertained the matter yesterday afternoon—that when I asked him whether he said in the presence of Colonel Roberts that he could make short work of the matter as far as Webster was concerned, I was under a wrong impression. I thought that whatever had been said had been said in the presence of Colonel Roberts—it seems that it is not so, and also I think it right for him to say that this question which was put to him about his having said he could make short work of it as far as Webster was concerned, arose from a misapprehension of facts. I believe that what he did say was that he had made short work with the General and not with Webster.

The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? I do, sir.

1872. It was with reference to compensation for clothing for 1886 that Colonel Airey had seen the Commandant? The conversation that took place in the mess-room was about that 1886 compensation.

1873. And you said that he had seen the Commandant about it, reminded him about the former conversation between himself, Major Fitzsimons, and the Commandant, and that then the Commandant had allowed for compensation for 1886? He did not say that to me at all.

1874. Then you did not hear, from anything he did say to you, whether the Commandant had allowed the compensation for 1886 or not? No.

1875. Then, although the conversation was about the compensation for 1886, reference, in the course of that conversation, was made to an old conversation in which Major Fitzsimons was concerned? Yes; he said that he had recalled to the Commandant's memory the time when he and Major Fitzsimons paraded before him about compensation.

1876. I thought you said that that had not been said in your presence? I commenced by saying that he had recalled to the Commandant's memory.

1877. When did he say that he recalled it to the Commandant's memory? During the last conversation he had with him. It was during the last three weeks that he had seen the Commandant. There was an amount of £2 11s. 7d. per man for a certain number of men outstanding, and it had to be settled.

1878. A short time ago, say within the last few weeks, Colonel Airey had occasion to see the Commandant about the compensation for 1886, which was partially unsettled, and he mentioned in this conversation which you heard at the Victoria Barracks, that he had seen the Commandant about this compensation, and that when seeing him about this 1886 compensation he mentioned the old conversation in Major Fitzsimons' time? Yes.

1879. Can you remember, Colonel Roberts, how this conversation became known to the other side? I cannot, except that I reminded the Commandant about it, openly telling him what had occurred. There were several people standing about, and anybody might have heard it; in fact, it had been common conversation.

1880. Was it then that anything was said about making short work of the prosecution? I never said that either in my conversation with the Commandant or at any other time.

1881. I think you said something about authority for the charge for re-makes;—have you been able to find it? I have not been able to find any written proof of it.

1882. You said that when you wrote the memorandum on the back of the £65 10s. voucher, saying that those prices were less than were usually made at that time, you had a list of the former charges before you, and that you thought that it was produced by the Adjutant? Yes.

1883. The Adjutant said that he never produced anything of the kind;—can you tell me now who it came from? I said that this list was placed before me, and that I thought the Adjutant had placed it before me; that was my impression.

1884. In the endorsement on that, you begin by saying that it is less than was charged before, or less than the usual charge, and I asked you about that, and you said that you wrote it after having before you a list of the former charges? I do not think I said so. You asked me upon what basis I signed this voucher, and I said that there was a memo. from the contractor before me, saying what he would do it for.

1885. I asked you why this £16 7s. 6d. was less than the former charges? I understood you to ask me why I passed these prices. I did not say that I had a list of the former charges before me.

1886. Then why did you say that this £16 7s. 6d. was less than the former charges? I do not think that I said that.

1887. Yes; "the prices here quoted are less than they have hitherto been charged at"; what was your authority? I think it was from memory, because one sergeant had a tunic costing him nearly £9—a sergeant-major, I think.

1888. Then that was from memory? Yes, from memory.

1889. Were you informed at the time that these garments had been in the contract for the previous year at something like half that price? No, I was not. To the best of my recollection, I was thinking of what they could be done for at the time. They vary every year. To the best of my recollection, the warrant officers' clothing was not on the schedule.

1890. Were you informed when you wrote that memo. that one of the staff-sergeants, whose clothing is also not included in that contract, and who is entitled to the same value clothing as the warrant officers, was receiving only the same compensation as on the previous year? No, I was not; to the best of my recollection.

1891. Staff-sergeant Goodall appears, in the compensation list for 1887, to have received compensation at the old contract price, and he was not in the contract for that year? I think you will find probably that the artificers are in that contract, although staff-sergeants may not be.

1892. Yes; but staff-sergeants clothing is not in the contract for that year, so that the contractor did not bring out clothing for that year; you were not informed that Goodall was getting his compensation based on the former contract? No, I was not.

The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness Mr. Attorney-General,

The Attorney-General:—I do sir.

1893. The Attorney-General:—Are the mountings for staff-sergeants and warrant officers different? Oh, quite different.

1894. Would that make any difference in the value? First of all warrant officer's are of a very much better kind of cloth.

1895. And what else? In fact their tunic is near approaching an officers tunic than anybody else's.

1896. You said to Mr. Heydon a short time ago that you could not find any written authority for this charge of re-making? Yes; I said that.

1897. And you emphasised the word written? Yes.

1898. Was there any authority—not written? Yes; I was under the impression that there was. I have always been under that impression for a good many years.

1899. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—You have always been under that impression? Yes; I have always been under that impression, and I was under the impression that it was written.

1900. Where did you get that impression from? Well, I suppose I have brains, and can think.

1901. Well, but impressions generally come from outside, Colonel Roberts—there is generally some reason for thinking that you have seen something; can you tell me how it was that you came to have this impression?

impression? No; not unless you consider what the contractors and tailors have told me—that it is more trouble to cut down an old tunic than to make a new one—was something told to me.
 1902. It was from that that you were under the impression that there was authority? From my own powers of observation and discrimination.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure S1 B, and the witness withdraws.

Colonel Murphy recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Counsel for the Defence:—

1903. Do you remember a conversation in the mess-room of the Victoria Barracks in which Colonel Airey made some reference to the question of compensation—a conversation within the last three weeks? The Court said that I was not to answer that question on a previous occasion.

1904. Well they do not say so now at all events; do you remember it? Yes; I remember a conversation. Colonel Airey came to the mess-room, and stated that he had come from the General and settled the matter of compensation for 1886, and the General wanted to stop one-third; but he told him that the one-third should not be stopped, because there was seven months compensation for the non-issue of clothing; and then he said to Colonel Roberts that he drew the General's attention to the fact that he and Major Fitzsimons had paraded before him with regard to compensation, and that he had told them to go to the contractor, and to make the best arrangements they could with regard to compensation; and they went to the contractor, and he said that he could not give full compensation because he had to make his profit. That was the conversation.

1905. Do you remember his saying anything more about recalling it to the mind of the General? I think he said that he reminded the General about his having paraded.

1906. Yes; but about his having been back to the General? No; I cannot remember his having said that he went to the General.

1907. And that having reminded the general of certain things he had settled this matter for 1886? Oh, he based his argument upon that. He told him that the men were entitled to compensation as they had not received any clothing.

1908. By the President:—It was a very small amount? It was a matter of £2 7s. 11d. It was seven months compensation.

1909. The Attorney-General:—That was for each man, and it would come to a large amount in the total? Yes.

1910. The President:—How many men? Oh, I cannot say, because it dealt with the whole corps.

1911. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon:—I do sir.

1912. Mr. Heydon:—This was not ordinary compensation—that is to say, it was not compensation for men who had clothes good enough to last for the year and did not want more clothes? No, it was special compensation for the non-issue of clothes.

1913. The President:—In Colonel Airey's conversation with you at the time we were speaking of, did he make quite clear to you the full extent of his previous conversation with the General? Yes; he said he had reminded the General that he and Major Fitzsimons paraded before him, and that the General told them to go to the contractor to make the best arrangements they could.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure S1 B, and the witness withdraws.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, having been reminded of his former oath, is examined by the Counsel for the Defence:—

1914. The Attorney-General:—Do you remember having a conversation with Colonel Airey within the last three weeks? Yes; within the last month I have had several conversations with him.

1915. Yes, but about the matter of compensation?

Mr. Heydon objected to the question.

1916. The Attorney-General:—Very well; I will ask Captain Savage another question;—Do you know anything about the survey that was held last year? On the quartermaster's stores, do you mean.

1917. Yes? Yes; Boards of Survey were held in 1886 and in 1888, and consisted of three officers commanding batteries;—in 1886 Colonel Spalding, Colonel Murphy, and Colonel Airey, and in 1888 Colonel Spalding, Colonel Airey, and Major Murray.

1918. Do you know why there was no Board of Survey held in 1887? These Boards were generally held after the annual issue of clothing had been made, and the issue was made so late in 1887 that it was not considered necessary to hold a Board.

1919. I suppose the object of this Board of Survey being held is to test the correctness of the prisoner's books, and to see what stock there is in store after the issue? Yes.

1920. And the prisoners' stock, therefore, was passed as correct in 1886 and 1888, by this Board? Well, I cannot say that they were passed as correct. The Board made its report.

1921. Do you know where that report is? Yes; the reports and the proceedings of the Board are in the Artillery Brigade Office.

1922. And under the control of Colonel Mackenzie or General Richardson? No; they are in our possession. In the Artillery Brigade Office.

1923. Yes; but General Richardson has the control of them, has he not? They are under the immediate control of Colonel Roberts; but General Richardson can get them.

1924. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon:—Yes, please, sir.

1925. Were you present at these Boards of Survey? No; I was not.

1926. And I am under the impression that Colonel Spalding, Colonel Airey, and Colonel Murphy were not asked a word about it;—you say you were not present on the Board? No; I was not.

1927. The President:—Will you be kind enough to produce the reports of the Boards of Survey? Yes, sir; I will send for them.

1928-9. Can you tell me whether it would be the duty of the Board to make an investigation of the prisoner's books? Yes; it would be the duty of the Board to make an investigation of the prisoner's books.

1930. What would be the orders of the Board? They were published in Brigade Orders, and can be produced at any time.

1931. The Attorney-General (through the Court):—Though you do not know it of your own knowledge, I take it for granted that it is not at all likely that a Board of three Commanding Officers would be appointed to look at the outside of books? No.

His evidence is read to the witness as directed by Rule of Procedure 81B, and the witness withdraws.

David Roberts, having been called, and duly sworn, is examined by the Counsel for the defence.

He said:—

I AM a member of the firm of Roberts and Bloomfield, accountants; I have been an accountant for the last ten years, carrying on business, and we do a very large business; I have been employed to make an examination of the books of the prisoner, and lists, and other documents bearing upon this case; I commenced to make my examination about three weeks ago; I was supplied with a table; I think table No. 1; that was a table supplied having the initials of Mr. Little upon it verifying that copy to be a true one; those are the papers that I had; I examined Mr. Webster's clothing issue book on the first examination, and secondly the battery books; but only so far as to find any issues not included in Webster's books; I examined in the first place Webster's clothing book, afterward I examined the battery books; I took as correct the goods received and on hand, with the exception of the goods received from the master tailor; with the exception of these goods said to have been received from the master tailor, all the other goods said to be received are not disputed; I dispute the three master tailor's items; I made a most careful examination of all these documents and books, and of course I have no interest in the case one way or the other; this paper is a copy of the result at which I arrived as to the receipts, distribution, stock on hand, and so on; I will swear that it is correct on the books that I examined.

Mr. Heydon objected to the document being received.

The President:—The Court are of opinion that as the books are in evidence, and as they are the best evidence, Mr. Roberts had better open them as he reads his statement.

Witness continuing:—The first issue that I find, 1885 to 1886, clothing roll, in Webster's book, is as follows:—18 tunics, 24 cloth trousers, 25 serge trousers, 22 serge jumpers, and 13 Norfolk jackets; for No. 2 Battery the same roll and similar extracts, 24 cloth tunics, 28 cloth trousers, 28 serge trousers, 26 serge jumpers, and 22 Norfolk jackets; for No. 3 Battery the same roll and similar issues, 29 tunics, 32 cloth trousers, 32 serge trousers, 28 serge jumpers, and 56 Norfolk jackets; for No. 1 Battery, clothing roll, 1886 to 1887, I find separate issues—1 cloth tunic, 7 cloth trousers, 6 serge trousers, no serge jumpers, 4 Norfolk jackets; and in bulk issue, No. 1 Battery—130 tunics, 130 cloth trousers, 130 serge trousers, 130 serge jumpers, and 130 Norfolk jackets; No. 2 Battery, in separate issue I find 44 cloth tunics, 40 cloth trousers, 52 serge trousers, 47 serge jumpers, and 49 Norfolk jackets, and a bulk issue of 90 of each class of clothing, tunics, trousers, serge trousers, jumpers, and Norfolk jackets; No. 3 Battery, separate issue—12 cloth tunics, 4 cloth trousers, 4 serge trousers, no serge jumpers, 3 Norfolk jackets, and in bulk issues 130 suits; that covers the issues for 1886, and the totals are—478 cloth tunics, 494 cloth trousers, 497 serge trousers, 473 serge jumpers, 477 Norfolk jackets, that includes the whole issues from 1st January, 1886, to the 31st December, 1886; in 1887 No. 1 Battery (these figures are extracted from the 1886 roll, dated 1887), I have only taken issues in 1886 in my 1886 roll, but in the 1886 roll I find some trifling issues in 1887; No. 1 Battery—3 tunics, 3 cloth trousers, 2 serge trousers, 1 serge jumper, and 2 Norfolk jackets; No. 2 Battery—9 tunics, 10 cloth trousers, 10 serge trousers, 9 serge jumpers, and 10 Norfolk jackets; No. 3 Battery—14 cloth tunics, 15 cloth trousers, 15 serge trousers, 12 serge jumpers, and 14 Norfolk jackets; for 1887, No. 1 battery—96 cloth tunics, 105 cloth trousers, 110 serge trousers, 97 serge jumpers, 100 Norfolk jackets; No. 2 Battery—97 cloth tunics, 105 cloth trousers, 102 serge trousers, 97 serge jumpers, and 96 Norfolk jackets; No. 3 Battery—62 cloth tunics, 87 cloth trousers, 102 serge trousers, 69 serge jumpers, and 60 Norfolk jackets; then in the 1888 roll, belonging to 1887, No. 1 Battery—4 tunics, 3 cloth trousers, 3 serge trousers, 5 serge jumpers, 4 Norfolk jackets; No. 2 Battery—4 cloth tunics, 4 cloth trousers, 4 serge trousers, 4 serge jumpers, and 5 Norfolk jackets; No. 3 Battery—4 cloth tunics, 4 cloth trousers, 5 serge trousers, 4 serge jumpers, and 5 Norfolk jackets; totals for 1887—293 cloth tunics, 336 cloth trousers, 353 serge trousers, 298 serge jumpers, and 296 Norfolk jackets; then in 1888, the totals were—291 cloth tunics, 309 cloth trousers, 333 serge trousers, 312 serge jumpers, 308 Norfolk jackets; that is up to the 31st October, 1888; then comes the clothing sold (but that agrees with the table of the prosecution)—2 tunics, 135 cloth trousers, 142 serge trousers, 7 serge jumpers, 4 Norfolk jackets; now stock on hand on 31st October—96 cloth tunics, no trousers, 28 serge jumpers, and 90 Norfolk jackets; that also agrees with the table of the prosecution; then I have the totals of the lot, which come to 1,160 cloth tunics, 1,274 cloth trousers, 1,325 serge trousers, 1,118 serge jumpers, 1,104 Norfolk jackets; I have found in the battery books for 1887 and 1888, 37 cloth trousers and 30 serge trousers, in which the name of the parties were not entered in the clothing book of Mr. Webster; that makes the grand total a little different—1,160 cloth tunics, 1,311 cloth trousers, 1,355 serge trousers, 1,118 serge jumpers, 1,104 Norfolk jackets; then there are the receipts from the master tailor; this book gives the articles received from the master tailor in 1886, and taking various extracts from that I aggregate 6 cloth tunics, 149 cloth trousers, 89 serge trousers, 39 serge jumpers, and 3 Norfolk jackets; taken from book of clothing made by master tailor, beginning page 3, since the 1st May 1885, I have extracted the accounts which I have just read as having been made in 1886; this book only includes a few entries in 1887; in 1887 there were only a few items—25 cloth trousers, no tunics, and 1 serge trouser; in 1888, the 73 cloth trousers, 131 serge trousers; this brings out a grand total, including the master tailor's receipts, of 1,047 cloth tunics, 1,406 cloth trousers, 1,383 serge trousers, 1,107 serge jumpers, 1,075 Norfolk jackets; he appears to have issued 113 more tunics than he really has according to his books; all those issues are either initialled for or signed for; then, on the other hand, he seems to have received 95 cloth trousers more than he has issued; so that he is short of 95 cloth trousers, and has a lot of tunics to the good; he seems also to have received 28 serge trousers more than he has issued; then he has to the good 29 Norfolk jackets; he has issued 29 Norfolk jackets more than he appears to have received, and he has also signatures or initials to those; he has 11 jumpers to the good so that is debtor for 123 garments—he should be credited with 153 garments and on the whole there is a difference of 30 garments to his credit; that is what I found by the books; I suggested in my report that as there were such a large number of columns a tunic might have been issued and entered as something else; the accounts extended over three years; I see in the table that Lieutenant Little had credited Mr. Webster with goods returned from the Battery; I see there 12 and 30 tunics; I have nothing to say about these returns: in this amended table of the prosecution in the annual issue we find 289 tunics issued, whereas Webster's books show a bulk issue of 350; the only bearing that the returns from the Batteries could have upon, that would be this, that if the bulk issues were charged against Mr. Webster, they should also be credited to him and they are not; but that does not interfere in any way with my calculations; I have not taken that assumption of mine as a correct one in order to found my accounts upon it; I have not acted upon it at all.

At 12:30 p.m., the Court adjourned for luncheon. At 2 o'clock the same afternoon the Court reassembled.
Present:—The same members as before.

David Roberts, is again called before the Court and reminded of his former oath.

The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon:—I do sir.

1932. The difference I think Mr. Roberts, between your account and the account laid before you, is entirely in the receipts from the master tailor; in the receipt side and the first two lines in the issue to batteries on the issue side? Yes, sir; with the exception of the lines from the Battery Books 37 cloth trousers and 30 serge trousers; the only difference between my table and the amended table No. 1, are as to the receipts in the lines showing the quantities received from the master tailor and as to the issue in the lines showing the clothing issue for 1886 and 1887, and the extra quantities extracted by me from the Battery Books.

1933. First of all we will take the difference in the receipts; in your account you make out the total received from the master tailor, as 6 tunics, 247 cloth trousers, 221 serge trousers, 39 jumpers and 3 jackets? Yes.

1934. Whereas an amended table there are what? 31 tunics, 318 cloth trousers, 368 serge trousers, 51 serge jumpers and no jackets.

1935. Now you have drawn yours, you say, from two books which were shown to you and one of which is before the Court? Yes, sir.

1936. I believe that one, the one before the Court which you have looked at shows no receipts for anything; I am speaking of the small one? I am not quite sure, there are names to each issue; I do not know whether they are signatures or not.

1937. It is a list of names with numbers opposite to them indicating garments in a book of the prisoner's, is it not? Yes.

1938. And it is headed, clothing made by master tailor from 1st July, 1885? Yes.

1939. Is there any thing or were you shown any book showing any balance of it, or any check of it, or have you taken that book as it is given you? I have simply taken my figures from that book and the other book.

1940. Have you ever seen any book showing that that was balanced or checked? No; I have not.

1941. Then your figures rest on supposition that that book is correct? Yes; I have based my figures upon it.

1942. And you know nothing about that book except what Mr. Webster told you? No.

1943. From whom did you get the other book which we cannot find now? I got the two books at the same time from Mr. Webster.

1944. From where? From his office, I believe.

1945. And where did he give them to you? The first time it was in his office, and afterwards I had them at my private house for a night.

1946. Do you think the other book can be astray at your office? No; I gave them back, I think it was to Mr. Webster's clerk.

1947. Do you know his name? Loveless.

1948. That is for the difference in the receipts from the master tailor, now we will come to the difference in the issues. Your first line in your issues, that is to say, clothing issued in the year 1886, includes the first line in amended Table No. 1, and the second line in Table No. 1, or at least a considerable portion of it? My figures cover the same time as in amended Table No. 1.

1949. You see the first line in amended Table No. 1 issues from 1st January to 31st March, 1886, and then it gives certain figures;—is that included in your first line, "Issues in 1886?" Yes.

1950. Now the second line in amended Table No. 1 is the annual issue; that would be to the 31st March, 1887;—does your first line include all that period except the first three months in 1887? My first line included the period up to the end of 1886.

1951. Now you will see that there are very great differences in those;—our first three lines are the same as your first two lines? Not if, in 1887, you include the first three months of 1888.

1952. But with that exception they would include the same time? Yes; except for that.

1953. Your first line is how much? 478, 494, 497, 473, 477.

1954. The first two lines of amended Table No. 1,—365, 393, 395, 365, 372, is that right? Yes.

1955. Then your second line, that is for the year 1887 is 293, 336, 353, 298, 296? Yes.

1956. Our line for the same period is 303, 323, 325, 298, and 296? Yes.

1957. The difference there for the year 1887 is not very great? No.

1958. There is a difference of ten in the first, thirteen in the second, ten one way in the first, thirteen the other way in the second, twenty-eight in the third, and the last two agree. The main difference is in the year 1886? Yes.

1959. The difference is in principally what has been received from the master tailor and what was issued in the year 1886? Yes.

1960. Now we will come down to the year 1886; was any explanation given to you about those books when they were put before you? Well beyond an explanation that the items initialled were issued, I think there was nothing further said.

1961. Were you told anything about not including sergeants' clothing? I do not remember.

1962. Did you include sergeants' clothing in your account? I cannot say unless it was pointed out to me in the book.

1963. Were you told about certain matters being left out because they were compensation? Yes.
1964. And you did leave them out? Yes, all marked "C."
1965. But as to sergeants you are not able to say? No.
1966. Were you told anything about these bulk issues, amounting to 350 altogether? I think I asked Mr. Webster about it, and he said that in that year they were issued in bulk.
1967. I see. He didn't say anything about them being returned? No, nothing.
1968. Now we will take 1886 and 1887;—which is the one that the real difference arises about. We will take No. 1 battery, leaving out the sergeants, and I will ask you to be kind enough to count up the number of names that you see there with articles opposite to them. This is the 30A clothing book. Did Webster explain to you that the names here represented 130 men who represented the 130 clothes issued. Now if these men are included in that 130, then all we have taken from you here you have taken twice over? No, certainly not. I did not take any from here.
1969. If the 1, 7, 6, 4, were included in the 130 you have taken them twice over, have you not? Yes.
1970. Now we will take No. 3 battery which I think is the other 130? There are 138 there.
1971. Well did he ever tell you that the 130 there represented the 130 of the men whose names were down here? No he did not tell me so.
1972. If that 130 represented a portion of the 138 men whose names are down here and you have taken any of them then you have taken them twice over? If they did not consist of the eight they would be.
1973. No. 3 batteries separate issue was 12, 4, 4, and 3? Yes.
1974. The bulk issue appears to have been ninety to a battery showing 140 men? Yes sir.
1975. Were you ever told that those 130's and 90's were returned? Not until I heard it here.
1976. Of course your duty is to make a careful and accurate examination of the books and to bring out the result shown by the books as truthfully and carefully as you can? Yes, that is what I understand.
1977. Would you be kind enough to make out what these separate issues come to? Yes.
1978. 60 cloth trousers, 60 serge trousers, 47 jumpers, and 56 Norfolk jackets? Yes.
1979. Disregarding this 130 and 90 these are the numbers as appearing in the prisoner's books to have been issued to men during the years 1886, 1887, and 1888? No, during the year 1886 only.
1980. But there would have to be added on to that for the year 1886, would there not, these first figures? Yes, previous to the 31st March.
1981. 71, 84, 85, 76, and 71—you make the issues to individuals, as shown by prisoner's books, 128 tunics, 144 cloth trousers, 147 serge trousers, 123 jumpers, and 137 jackets? Yes.
1982. Whereas in the amended table No. 1 we find credit given for 365 tunics, 393 trousers, 395 serge trousers, 365 jumpers, and 372 jackets. These are credits? Yes, these are credits; but the time might be a little longer.
1983. It comes to this, then: We will assume that the figures in amended table No. 1 were taken from the battery-book and these separate issues of yours have been taken from Webster's book. It follows then that as far as separate issues are concerned the battery issues are very much more favourable to the prisoner than his own books? Yes, taking those figures to be correct; but I have only examined his own books.
1984. But assuming them to be correct, they are much more favourable to the prisoner than his own books? Yes, because I have taken the bulk issues from Mr. Webster's own books.
1985. I want to find out what the difference is in your 1886 issues and our 1886 issues—113 tunics, 101 cloth trousers, 102 serge trousers, 108 jumpers, and 105 jackets. You have got that quantity more issued in the year 1886 than we have? Yes.
1986. Roughly speaking, you make an issue of 100 more of each in the year 1886 than we do? Yes, that is so.
1987. Now, where did you get these receipts—Riley Bros.' figures and Henderson's figures; did you take them from the amended table No. 1, or did you check them in any way? I took them from the original.
1988. They are the same in the original as in the amended table? Yes, I believe they are.
1989. Did you check them in any way? No.
1990. Why did you assume that they are correct? Well Mr. Stephen of Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen pointed out to me that there was no question about those particular items.
1991. After taking out these issues did you include issues to the band? Well I took all issues I found in the clothing roll. I cannot say whether the band was there.
1992. Very well, assuming that the band was not in this, assuming that the band is left out of the receipts and included in the issue, to that extent your account is wrong in favor of the prisoner? Yes, if the band is included in the issue, and not in the receipts.
1993. When the prisoner put those books of his before you, of which that is one as showing the clothing made by master tailor, did he inform you that he had handed the list of the clothing made by the master tailor to the Board of Inquiry? I do not remember that he did.
1994. Did Webster ever tell you that he had ever made any list, or signed any list of the clothing issued by the master tailor? No, I cannot remember that he did.
1995. Do you issue.
The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness Mr. Attorney-General?
The Attorney-General:—Yes sir, I do.
1996. The Attorney-General:—You have examined those books which purport to show the goods issued by the master tailor. Can you see anything in those books in any of them from which that list could have been made up. In other words is there any evidence in that book agreeing with the statement in that list? No. [Exhibit 60.] I see what it is.
1997. It purports to be a list of articles received from the master tailor to a much greater extent than the books show does show, does it not? Yes sir.
1998. Is there anything from which he could have made it up? He could not have made it up from any books that I saw.
1999. Does it appear to you to be a calculation based upon a number of yards; look at it; you see there in the last column so many yards and so on. Does it appear to be an average arrived at from the number of yards of cloth and the supposed size of the men? Yes. It appears to show that this number of garments took a certain quantity of cloth to make up.

2000. Therefore it appears to be a calculation arrived at by somebody. I am not saying by Mr. Webster now or by Mr. Little, arrived at by somebody from the number of yards of cloth and serge used, and the probable size of the men? I judged so from the list.

2001. Is there anything in the battery books to show a return of those articles in bulk. There were certain articles issued in bulk amounting altogether to 350. Is there anything in the battery books to show that those articles were ever returned to Mr. Webster? Well I only made a slight examination of the battery books.

2002. Well, would you turn up the entries now? That "90" shows the delivery to the battery.

2003. Is there a single entry in their own battery book to show that these articles were ever returned from the battery.

The President :—Will you take No. 1 or No. 3 instead of No. 2 Battery, because we have it in evidence that No. 2 would not take the clothing?

2004. The Attorney-General :—Yes, we will. (To witness): Is there anything there to show that they were returned? Witness :—No sir; nothing in that.

2005. You were asked whether Mr. Webster had ever told you that those bulk issues had been returned to him? Yes; I was asked that.

2006. You said that you did not remember him telling you? Yes; I am quite sure he did not tell me.

2007. Did not he tell you to give him credit for 130 for No. 1 Battery, 130 for No. 3 Battery, and 90 for No. 2? He might have told me that; he said they were bulk issues.

2008. But, at all events, he led you to believe that you ought to give him credit for these? Oh, yes, he told me that.

2009. He led you to believe that they were matters not at all referring to him? Yes.

2010. Did you charge Mr. Webster with the return of any clothing from the batteries? Yes, sir; I had the same as I found in the original table.

2011. Which original table? The table issued by Mr. Little; and it is the same as in the amended Table No. 1.

2012. All these articles here, the receipt of which you charged Webster with, are entered in his book as having been received from the battery? Yes; I believe they are.

(His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81B, the witness withdraws.)

Captain Savage recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Counsel for the defence:—

2013. The Attorney-General :—Do you remember a Board of Survey condemning a quantity of clothing that was in the store? One of the Board's that I alluded to in my evidence this morning suggested that condemned clothing should be destroyed.

2014. Did they condemn the clothing in the first instance and order that it should be destroyed afterwards? Well, that would be condemning it.

2015. Do you remember when that was? In April, 1886.

2016. Mr. Heydon :—Were you present on the Board? I was not.

Mr. Heydon objected to the evidence of what was done by the Board being given from hearsay.

The President :—Would not the best evidence of what was done by the Board be the proceedings of the Board.

2017. Do you know that a large quantity of clothing was destroyed? No; I do not know that it was destroyed, but the President of the Board could tell you, I dare say.

2018. Who was that? Colonel Spalding.

2019. You said that there was a Board of Survey in 1886 and 1888? Yes.

2020. Was there not one on the 6th July, 1887? Not what we call a Remainder Board.

2021. What do you call a Remainder Board? When anything is received from the contractor or elsewhere, a Board is at once held on those articles. A Remainder Board would be a Board held on the remainder of clothing or stock in store.

2022. Well, was there any such Board held in July, 1887? I think not.

2023. You do not know, I suppose? No; but I think not.

2024. You see this entry here in this book; can you tell me now? I cannot. I could tell you by the order.

2025. Do you know anything about a garrison order directing the commanding officers of batteries to make a return of the clothing on hand or clothing that had been issued or returned? I cannot remember that; I should have to refer to the orders.

2026. This is not a garrison order at all;—do you remember a brigade order for the officers commanding batteries to make a return of the clothing they have issued, and to return the balance to the brigade store? I cannot remember without reference to the brigade order, but I will try and find it.

2027. The President :—Can you tell the date? It was about the latter end of November, 1886.

The Attorney-General said that he intended asking the witness some questions about his conversation with Colonel Airey.

Mr. Heydon objected to the question.

The President suggested that the Attorney-General should ask the questions through the Court.

2028. The President :—You had a conversation with Colonel Airey during the last three weeks about compensation? Yes.

2326. And do you remember him saying something about making short work of something? What he did say referred to a matter of compensation, what we called the "Delayed Supply of Clothing Compensation" in 1886; Colonel Airey came in when I was speaking to another brother officer (Le Mesurier) and volunteered this statement to me, "Oh, it is all right about compensation. I have just seen the General, and it did not take me 3 minutes to explain to him the whole thing about this claim." I said, "I am very glad to hear that." Then he said the General asked me "How these compensation claims arose," and I reminded him that it arose from a visit which I paid to the General (then Commandant) with Major Fitzsimons, upon which occasion we represented to him that the men had made some claim for compensation. After hearing what we had to say, the General said, "Oh, quite so. I see that the men should have some compensation, and will you, as commanding officers, make the best arrangements you can with the contractor. There was no reference to this case at all.

2029. By Mr. Heydon:—I suppose you never told anybody that Colonel Airey said that he could make short work of this case if he liked? No.

2030. Will you look at No. 3 Battery Clothing Book, and tell me where the Band is included in the Roll for 1887 and 1888? Yes; to the best of my knowledge they are, and I see the names of a number of them here.

(His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81B, and the witness withdraws).

The Attorney-General:—It is not likely that I shall have any more witnesses to call, and therefore I hope that my learned friend will not object to my asking the indulgence of the Court not to close my case formally now.

At 4 o'clock, the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning, for the purpose of reading over evidence to certain witnesses.

On Saturday, the 23rd March, at 10 o'clock, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment.

Present:—The same members as before.

The President announced the unavoidable absence, through illness, of the learned Counsel for the Prosecution.

The shorthand writer then proceeded to read certain evidence over in the presence of witnesses, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81B.

At 12:45 p.m. the Court adjourned until Monday, the 25th March, at 9 a.m.

On Monday, the 25th March, at 9:30 a.m., the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment.

Present:—The same members as before.

Captain and Adjutant Savage was recalled and reminded of his former oath, and further examined through the Court by the counsel for the defence.

2031. The Attorney-General:—I believe you found out that some evidence which you gave me on Friday about a Board of Survey in 1887 was not quite accurate? Yes, I wish to amend my evidence given on that date.

2032. I asked you whether such a Board was held in 1887, and you said "No"? Yes; but I find upon looking up orders that a Board was held in 1887, and my answer was that the clothing was received too late in the year. I am wrong, I find, for I got mixed up in the two Boards that were held. There was no Survey Board held in 1887, when the clothing was received on the authority of the General, as the clothing was received so late, and there were no scaled patterns. I had mixed up that with the business of 1887.

2033. Then it comes to this, that there was no Board held in 1886, but one was held in July, 1887? Yes, though Remainder Boards were held in 1886, 1887, and 1888.

2034. As shown in Webster's book? Yes, as shown in Webster's book.

2035. And that Board of Survey in 1887 would really be a stock-taking at that time? Yes.

2036. So we will assume that if that Board of Survey was properly conducted, and we will suppose that it was, the prisoners stock must have been all right in July, 1887? I should say it was. The proceedings of the Board can be produced.

2037. Now there is a book we have heard about, but which is not here—did you get an order from Colonel Eden that caused the Clothing Board to be supplied with the brigade stock book and issue book of 1887 and 1888? I believe I did.

2038. Do you know whether they were supplied? Every book which the Board asked for they were supplied with.

2039. Do you know what regimental or garrison order—do you know that there was an artillery brigade order on the 22nd November, 1886? Yes.

2040. That would have reference to the clothing issued for the year 1886, would it not? Yes.

2041. Is that a true copy? Yes. [Exhibit 81 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

2042. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—Clothing destroyed would be casualty clothing, or useless clothing, would it not? Yes, it would not be new clothing.

2043. It would be second-hand clothing, which upon examination appeared worthless and not worth keeping? Yes.

2044. I suppose these Boards can be produced? Yes; they can be produced.

(His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of procedure 81B, and the witness withdraws.)

Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy, recalled and examined through the Court by the Attorney-General:—

2045. The Attorney-General:—Do you know anything about clothing issued to the different officers, Colonel Murphy? I cannot say I do to the different officers.

2046. You do not know about the different officers, but do you know about yourself? Yes; I can speak for myself.

2047. Do you remember getting some cloth trousers? Yes; I got some black cloth trousers.

2048. Is that all you got? Yes; that was all I got.

2049. You got them from the store? Yes; I got them from Mr. Webster.

2050. Where is Mr. Le Patourel? Mr. H. Patourel is in the barracks.

2051. By Mr. Heydon (through the Court):—You got the trousers from the Brigade Store? Yes.

2052. Well I understand from former evidence that has been given that the officers get an allowance in lieu of clothing? Yes; but this was to be paid for. It was a purchase from the store.

2053. Then in purchasing this pair of trousers of course you became bound to pay for them. Have you as a matter of fact paid for them, or is it yet owing? Yes. I have looked it up, and I find that it is still owing. I had the master tailor's bill.
2054. I thought they came from the store? Yes; but they had to be altered, and I find that I am billed for the alterations, and not for the trousers at all.
2055. But who would you go to pay for the trousers? As far as I can understand, it is the custom to be billed through the pay-office.
2056. When was it you got these pair of trousers? I cannot tell you exactly, but it was some time in 1887, I think.
2057. And that ought to come through the pay-office vouchers, should it? Yes, I think so.
2058. By the Court:—Would it not come through the D.A.Q.M.G.'s Department? I should think that it would come through the pay-office.
2059. Mr. Heydon:—At all events you ought to be debited with that pair of trousers somewhere? Yes.
2060. And information, in order to debit you with them, ought to be supplied by the prisoner? I should think so.
- By the Court*:—When you return clothing to the Q. M. Sergeant's Store, is it all new clothing that you return. I am speaking of your battery clothing? No, not all new clothing.
2061. Would you explain what clothing it is? Part-worn clothing.
2062. In 1887, did you return any part-worn clothing amongst the clothing that you returned? I cannot remember.
2063. In the items put down in several returns we have had there is clothing "returns from batteries" in 1886 and 1887, does that include part-worn clothing? That would include part-worn clothing.
2064. You have been a Member of Remainder Boards, have you not? Yes.
2065. In 1886 and 1887? In 1887, I think.
2066. Which one do you remember best? The 1887 one.
2067. July, 1887? Yes.
2068. Did you examine the prisoner's clothing-books? Yes.
2069. Was there any mention in the prisoner's book of part-worn clothing? I cannot remember.
2070. If there had been, would that have been taken into any account? I think we only counted the new clothing in the store.
2071. You disregarded all part-worn clothing? I don't think that we professed to count it. The Board was not held to deal with part-worn clothing.
2072. You cannot remember whether you touched part-worn clothing or not from your own recollection? No.
2073. Was part-worn clothing ever issued to your own battery; I don't mean as an annual issue, but to recruits? No; that has not been the annual custom; recruits are always clothed in full with new clothes.
2074. Can you tell me what took place with regard to the part-worn clothing? No; I remember we recommended the destruction of some of it—a large quantity which was in a very bad state.
2075. Then you cannot tell me what becomes of any of the part-worn clothing? No; most of the clothing that is returned as part-worn clothing is really not fit to re-issue.
2076. Have you ever had the case of a man deserting very soon after he has been clothed? I remember that a man shortly before he took his discharge did get clothing and trousers, and I think they were returned as new.
2077. They were returned new after they had been worn? Well, my impression is that they were only worn slightly.

The evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, the witness withdraws.

Major Murray, called for the defence, was duly sworn, and examined by the Attorney-General. He said:—I REMEMBER receiving from the brigade store in 1887 some cloth for trousers and some serge for trousers; I do not remember the value, and I do not remember the quantity; there was one pair of cloth trousers and one pair of serge trousers.

The President:—Do you wish to cross examine the witness, Mr. Heydon?

Mr. Heydon:—If you please, sir.

2078. Who would you pay? I think the account was rendered to the Paymaster.
2079. Have you received the bill for them? Yes, lately.
2080. Do you remember about what time it was that you got them? It was in 1887.
2081. And the account has come in only lately;—when you say lately, what time do you mean? Within the last three months, I should think.
2082. From whom would the account come in, or through whom;—how would it come in? I don't know. I found it in an envelope on my office-table.
2083. A bill or a memorandum? A memorandum of the amounts.
2084. Within the last three months? Yes.
2085. There is no doubt that you had the cloth, I suppose? No; not the slightest.
2086. The Court:—You have been in command of a battery lately, have you not? Yes; since January, 1886.
2087. Since then, have you ever returned any battery clothing to the brigade quartermaster's store? Not to my recollection.
2088. There has been nothing left over to return? No.
2089. Did you ever return any part-worn clothing? No; I don't think so.
2090. Were you on the Remainder Board in October, 1888? Yes.
2091. Did you examine the prisoner's books at that date? No; I don't remember examining the books, as far as I can recollect.
- 2091A. It was a Stock-taking Board in 1888? I don't remember taking stock of the prisoner's things.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.

Captain

Captain Baynes, New South Wales Artillery, having been called as a witness for the defence, is duly sworn, and examined by the Attorney-General, states:—

I RECEIVED some trousers from the brigade store, 1887; I have been in the Artillery close on thirteen years; I have known the prisoner all that time; he has borne a very good character; he has always borne a very high character.

His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by Rule of Procedure 81 B. The witness withdraws.

[Exhibits 82 and 83 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

Lieutenant-Colonel Spalding having been called as a witness for the defence was reminded of his former oath and examined by the Attorney-General.

2092. Do you remember a quantity of clothing being destroyed? No; I did not see it destroyed.

2093. But you know that there was an order for its destruction? Yes.

2094. And you believe that it was destroyed? Yes.

2095. Do you know how much? I think the Board would give it. There were thirteen moth-eaten tunics of 1881 destroyed, and twenty-four of 1882.

2096. Was this new or part-worn clothing? It was part-worn clothing.

2097. The Attorney-General:—Is there any new clothing destroyed? Not that year, 1886. I was wrong in saying that those were part worn they were all new—thirteen slightly moth eaten tunics of the issue of 1881, and twenty-four of the issue of 1882. These tunics were of a heavy English cloth—the R. A. cloth, to the best of my knowledge. The Board reported them fit only for casualties during the winter months.

2098. Then these were not destroyed? No; but there were some which I shall come to now. There were forty-two tunics returned by batteries part worn, thirteen returned for issuing for casualties, and thirty-two useless, recommended by the Board to be destroyed; Norfolk jackets returned by batteries, total fifty-two; total for refit for casualties, fifteen; the balance useless, recommended to be destroyed, namely, thirty-eight; of cloth trousers there were nine pairs and serge twenty-six recommended to be destroyed.

2099. Were these returned from batteries? Yes.

2100. Serge jumpers, twenty-five, from batteries also recommended to be destroyed; this was the Board held on the 2nd April, 1886. I have a further document here which shows the stock remaining on hand on the 31st March, 1886?

2101. The Attorney-General:—When were those you have referred to destroyed? That order was approved by Colonel Roberts on the 10th of the fourth month, 1886.

2102. The President:—Do you know if these articles were destroyed? Not of my own knowledge.

2103. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Heydon? Mr. Heydon.] Yes sir.

2104. You were a member of the Board to count up the balance of the clothing on 31st March, 1886? Yes.

2105. Did that balance include the clothing which was destroyed? No.

2106. In examining the balance of clothing on hand in the store, it looks at the books, does it not, to see what the balance shown in the books is, and to show whether the amount of clothing in the store agrees with them? Does the Board, in addition to this, examine the books to see whether there is a correct balance? No; this is not an Audit Board.

2107. In counting up clothing in that way, does that include the old clothing, what is known as casualty clothing—or does it count new, unfit for issue? In this case they were not included.

2108. Whether that is always done I suppose you cannot say? There are other Boards here.

2109. Can you tell me the dates of them? The next Remainder Board was held 6th July, 1887.

2110. Did that include in the amount shown any of the old second-hand clothing? This document marked "A" included the whole of the clothing in store.

2111. The President:—Part worn and otherwise? Yes.

2112. Were those thirteen tunics and twenty-four tunics that were fit for casualties included in return of 31st March, 1886? No; they were not included.

2113. None of the casualty clothing? No; not on that list, but this Board distinguished between the clothing that was in store prior to 1886 to 1887; it distinguished the 1886 and 1887 clothing from any other clothing.

2114. Mr. Heydon:—Did that Board distinguish in any way the part-worn clothing from the new? I should think that at this time there was no part-worn clothing in store.

2115. There is no mention of any? No; it is all fit for issue.

2116. The next Board comes in in 1888? On the 13th August, 1888.

2117. Does that also deal with the whole of the clothing? Yes.

2118. And is any of that clothing shown to be part worn, or is it too treated as fit for issue? It was not all fit for issue; some of it was damaged by rats and moths.

2119. Was any of it part worn? To the best of my belief there was no part-worn clothing.

2120. Has there been any Destruction Board since this Board of 1886? Of 1888.

2121. No, that was a Remainder Board, was it not? They are all Remainder Boards.

2122. Yes, but under the Remainder Board of 1886 there was a recommendation that a certain amount of clothing should be destroyed, and that amount you did not include in the amount you counted up in the store? No.

2123. And since then there has been no recommendation for the destruction of clothing? Yes; I think there was in the case of one tunic; it states here that in the opinion of the Board one tunic was damaged by moths, and useless, but the Board does not recommend its destruction.

The President:—Do you wish to re-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney-General:—I do, sir.

2124. That report of the Board of Survey, 6th July, 1887, was made after an examination of the stock in the store? Yes.

2125. And a comparison of Webster's books also? Yes.

2126. And everything up to that time, July, 1886, was right, I suppose, according to the report of the Board? That Board was to find out what was in the Quartermaster's store, and to compare it with what appeared in his books.

2127. Exactly; and it was found to be all right to that date, was it not? No; there was found to be some slight discrepancy.

2128. To what extent? As regards rank and file tunics, 1887 to 1888, there are two damaged by rats, and two damaged by moths. There was a difference of five tunics between Webster's books and the number, but they were accounted for by a document which is marked "C2," signed by the prisoner, saying that they were five tunics issued from the 31st July and the 31st August. There were three tunics, three Norfolk jackets, and three serge jumpers issued.

2129. The President:—Could you from that document give me the balance that you found in the store on the 6th July, 1887? Yes. There were in store on that date 431 tunics, and of that number 83 being of the 1886 to 1887 issue; 410 Norfolk jackets, 29 belonging to the 1886 to 1887 issue; 401 serge jumpers; 362 cloth trousers, 29 pairs belonging to 1886 to 1887 issue; 297 serge trousers, one pair belonging to the 1886 to 1887 issue; 27 sergeants' tunics, 3 sergeants' patrol jackets, 7 sergeants' trousers, and 19 band tunics.

2130. That was your counting? Yes.

2131. And did they agree with the prisoner's books at that time? Yes.

2132. Who made up the proceedings of that board? I cannot recognise the writing.

2133. Was it handed in to you for your signature? It was checked by us and then signed.

2134. Was there any part-worn clothing added up with that, or was that all new clothing? That was all good clothing and fit for issue, and there was no other clothing in the store.

2135. Might that not include good part-worn clothing that was fit for issue? Yes; but as a matter of fact trousers were never considered fit for issue.

2136. Yes, but tunics? Yes, it might.

2137. And that is not included in the board? There is nothing about part-worn tunics on the face of the board.

2138. Now, before checking the brigade books did you check our own battery books to see if they agreed with what were issued to the battery from the brigade books? No.

2139. So that you really have nothing to prove that the remainder in the brigade-book were correct? Nothing at all.

2140. Was part-worn clothing ever issued to your men? From the brigade store?

2141. Yes? I have no doubt it was at times when we were pressed and had to wait many months for clothing.

2142. That was in 1886, was it not? But generally speaking there was sufficient in the battery store.

2143. Would the return of part-worn clothing be shown in your battery books? Probably it was.

2144. Because there was an item of clothing returned from batteries from 1886 to 1887, there has been a great deal of talk about it, and I want to know whether it would include part-worn clothing as well as new clothing? There was one occasion in 1886 when a single quantity of clothing was returned.

2145. The President:—I am not talking of that, I am talking of other returns being sent in? It would be all part-worn clothing, because as a rule the clothing is put on the men the same day that it is issued.

2146. When you were present at these Boards did you examine the prisoner's books at all? No, we looked at them to find the balance.

2147. But you didn't go into the matter to see how the balance was obtained? No, we had not the material. We simply took his balance.

2148. When men are fitted for clothing in the ordinary way, do you know whether the clothing bears a tally showing the size of the tunic? Yes. I will not say that it always does, but it does as a rule, and the fact that the ticket was pasted on instead of been sewn on was the reason why so much was destroyed by rats.

2149. Do you know what information that ticket gives? The men's height and size round the chest—that is about all.

2150. Have you ever been present when these tunics have been fitted on? Always, as far as my battery is concerned.

2151. And is it difficult to fit a man with a tunic? Very.

2152. How do you account for that? The clothing has been made outside of the Colony as a rule and not to actual measurement.

2153. You think that the clothing was not made to actual measurement sent in by the battery size rolls? Yes.

2154. There would be a battery size roll called for in the latter part of 1886, and that clothing would come out in 1887. There would be no material difference in the size of the men in those months, would there? Yes there would; particularly with regard to the younger. A tunic which would fit them at the beginning of the year might not go near them in six months time.

2155. What percentage of recruits would you have at that time? I cannot say.

2156. Would it amount to 50 per cent.? No; perhaps to 10 or 20 per cent. The men being enlisted then and getting good food and plenty of exercise would expand so much that their tunics would not fit them when they came out.

2157. And they would require extensive alterations, would they? They would require remaking very often to the extent of 10 or 20 per cent.

2158. Would those recruits have joined previous to the size rolls being taken or afterwards? That would be the total number of recruits for the year.

2159. Then there would only be about half that number of recruits? Yes, but the rest would have to be fitted. Hardly any of the tunics fit.

2161. Suppose the clothes came out according to the size rolls, would there still have to be a number of remakes? There ought not to be.

2162. Mr. Heydon:—Do you know how long clothing has been imported, instead of being made here? I cannot answer that question, but to the best of my knowledge it has been imported for many years, and I have no doubt it has been imported from these size rolls.

2163. The President:—Have you got a size roll for your battery for 1887? We have a rough copy, but the original was sent on by us.

2164. It is the 1886 one I am talking of—the clothing for 1887? Yes, I have one here.

[Exhibits 84, 85, and 86, admitted, signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.]

[His

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure §1 B, and the witness withdraws.]

The prisoner then handed in the following statement in addition to the address to be made by his Counsel, which was read, numbered S7, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings:—

Mr. President and Members of General Court-martial,—

The true explanation of the alleged deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. is as follows:—As you are no doubt aware, lists are sent in by the officers commanding batteries to the officers commanding artillery forces, containing the names of the men entitled to compensation. Sometimes, for different reasons, names are omitted from such lists. With regard to the compensation lists for 1887 and 1888, I was informed, after the lists had been sent in, that Sergeant Lynch and Bombardier Loveless' names had been omitted from No. 3 Battery list, and on inquiry I found that Colonel Spalding had passed their clothing, and had authorized them compensation in lieu of clothing to the extent of £4 1s. 10d. and £2 10s. 6d. respectively. I was informed that Gunner Burgess, of No. 3 Battery, was also entitled to compensation to the extent of £2 10s. 6d., and that his clothes had been passed by the officer commanding the battery. In addition to this there was a gunner in No. 3 Battery (whose name I cannot at present recall, but I believe it was Smith) who was entitled to compensation, as I was informed and believed it to be true, for a Norfolk jacket, in addition to the articles placed against his name in the list. The lists, as sent in by the batteries, were not looked upon as being the only compensation due, provided the compensation was allowed by the officer commanding the batteries. I accordingly caused to be included articles for these amounts in the vouchers placed before the officer commanding the Artillery forces for compensation, and at the time mentioned to him that such voucher included all the compensation due, and that the same included certain additional articles which had been passed by the officers commanding batteries. I received from Wm. Henderson & Co. £229 12s. 7d., and paid to the officers commanding batteries £220 0s. 5d. This left £9 12s. 2d. in hand, out of this I paid Sergeant Lynch £4 1s. 10d., Bombardier Loveless £2 10s. 6d., and hold their receipts for same. I handed 9s. 4d. to the gunner, and the remaining £2 10s. 6d. I paid to Burgess, and obtained a receipt. I have searched for it high and low, but cannot find it. Burgess is now dead, and I always knew him to be an honorable man, and I think it only right to his memory to state that I don't believe he ever received the £2 10s. 6d. signed for by him in No. 3 battery list, and that if he did so it must have been by mistake. However, I paid him £2 10s. 6d. I was examined many times before the Board of Inquiry, and was always questioned as if under cross-examination, and the statements made therein were not voluntary. I was confused and anxious from something that I had heard, and although at the time I believed the statements then made to be correct, on thinking over the matter carefully I found the same were incorrect. I knew all the time I had paid away all the money received from the contractor, and it was only after careful consideration that the above-mentioned circumstances came back to my memory. With regard to the compensation voucher for staff sergeants, there was no provision made for them in the contract, and the prices mentioned in the voucher were obtained from William Henderson & Co. as the prices at which they would make the articles, and were laid before the officer commanding the artillery forces. The custom as to the contractor retaining one-third of the compensation has been in existence ever since I have been in the force, and was no benefit to me. It was no fault of mine that casualty men took compensation for 1887. The master tailor's charges for remaking when extensive alterations were made, was according to a scale which I was then under the impression duly authorized many years back. It was no benefit to me for the master tailor to get more than he was entitled to. When the master tailor told me he wanted money, I instructed my clerk Loveless to make out what the master tailor was entitled to, and when placed before as correct I was informed by Loveless and the master tailor they were correct, and believing them to be so I initialled them as such. I entrusted implicitly to Loveless, knowing him to be an honest man, and he kept my book principally. I never had any reason to suspect that the master tailor Lytleton was anything but honest. When I wrote to the Major-General Commandant, offering to pay the £9 12s. 2d., I did so as I was anxious to avoid the misery and anxiety of a court martial, and because I had been told the Major-General Commanding had allowed the master tailor Lytleton to make good a sum of £290 1s. 6d., which he was said to have overcharged. I handed the Major-General the receipts from the officers commanding batteries, and all other papers that I had, and would not have done this unless all privilege were granted to me. I deny that I refused to tell Sergeant Wilson what the third deduction was for, but I had a few words with him because I refused to make his calculation for him. The paper produced by Quarter-Master Little, of the alleged returns from master tailor's department, was signed by me without enquiry, as Mr. Little told me he (Mr. Little) had made it out, and that if I signed it it would clear everything up. This was only signed under these circumstances and in no way shows the receipt from the master tailor's department as my books will show. It is not true as sworn by Sergeants Wilson and Taylor that they returned me the suits issued in bulk to them the following day. Had they done so surely there would be some entry of it in their books or mine, or receipts to produce. They say they returned the suits in bulk and that they were re-issued separately from the store, but if this had been done there would be the initials under each garment of the individual issued to, but as there is only a receipt in bulk signed by Sergeants Wilson and Taylor which proves their statement to be false. Wilson and Taylor are both enemies of mine. The former I placed in arrest for which he was placed back for court martial, and I afterwards got him relieved. I have been under arrest nearly two months, and all the hard savings of years have gone in my defence and I am practically ruined, and had it not been for the consideration shown me by the solicitors, Stephen, Jaques, & Stephen, I would have been unrepresented here some days back. My wife had a little money of her own and I had a present made to me which enabled me through a Building Society to purchase the house I live in at Ashfield, but there is a mortgage to its full value. If there is any deficiency in clothing it is due to nothing but mistakes and overwork. I have done my duty to the best of my ability. The clothes would be no use to me nor could I sell them. Paper marked No. 67 containing the item cloth trousers made from material 64, serge trousers made from material 104 was written out by me from a paper given to me by Mr. Little and not from anything in my book. I looked upon Mr. Little as my friend and thought he was anxious to help me to put matters right. He told me that the figures on paper marked No. 66 did not account for all the cloth supposed to be missing; and said that the figures as to cloth and serge trousers, on paper marked No. 67, would account for balance. Relying on this I wrote it all from what he gave me on a rough paper and signed it. In conclusion, I ask you to sweep away the disgrace that is imminent, taking into consideration that I have a wife and three young children purely dependent on myself.

(Signed)

W. WEBSTER,

Warrant Officer, Brigade Quartermaster Sergeant.

Lieutenant Little is reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Prosecutor:—

2166. Do you remember a second paper; is it a fact that that document was made up by the prisoner from materials supplied from a paper given to him by you? If he means a paper that I furnished him with some years ago, that is a scale showing the quantity of clothing that would do for making up of each separate garment. I did furnish him with such a scale.

2167. At the time, or about the time, that that paper was made up did you furnish him with any scale or paper? No.

2168. With regard to the first document—the one that is signed in red ink—is it a fact that you had told the prisoner that you had made it up, and that if he signed it he would be clear of everything? That is not a fact.

2169. The President:—Do you wish to cross-examine the witness, Mr. Attorney-General?

The Attorney General:—No, sir.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant-Colonel Airey is recalled by the Court, reminded of his former oath, and further examined:—

2170. The President:—Do you recollect 130 garments of all sorts being issued to your battery in bulk? Yes.

2171. From your own personal knowledge, do you remember whether these garments were sent back to the brigade quartermaster's store? Yes; I hold a receipt for them; "130 garments were returned to store and reissued to men at once, 90 tunics, 98 Norfolk jackets, 98 jumpers, 95 cloth trousers, and 96 cloth trousers; leaving balance 35 tunics, 2 Norfolk jackets, 32 jumpers, 35 cloth trousers, 34 serge trousers;" that is Mr. Webster's receipt.

2172. By the Attorney-General (through the Court):—That is Mr. Webster's receipt for what? For the balance of the 130 garments.

2173. But you said you hold a receipt for the 130? That is the receipt.

2174. These were issued to the men? Yes.

2175. Not returned to Mr. Webster, though? They were issued from his office and returned to him; issued on the spot to the individuals.

2176. The President:—Could you produce the size-roll of the men in your battery in 1886? A rough copy of it. Of course it is possible between the time of the size-roll being sent in and the clothes arriving some of the men might leave.

[Exhibit 89 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

2177. Do you know what time of the year this was taken? It is generally taken about October or November.

2178. This is the clothing for 1887, which would be taken about October or November, 1886? About that time.

2179. Were you present when the men were fitted in 1887? I cannot say. I inspected the men after they were fitted. They generally got their things out of the store, and I generally see them in my own office, though sometimes I inspect them in the store.

2180. Did you see them fitted before the alterations were made? Certainly.

2181. Was there any difficulty in fitting the men? There were a great many alterations required.

2182. Were there 50 per cent. of alterations? No; 12 or 15 per cent. would be the highest, and that would include everybody, recruits and everybody, who was clothed at that time.

[His evidence being read over in the presence of the witness, according to rule of procedure 81 B, the witness withdrew.]

Colonel Spalding recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Court:—

2183. Do you remember an issue of ninety complete sets of clothes in the year 1886 in your battery? Yes.

2184. Do you remember their being returned to the Brigade Quartermaster's store? Some of them.

2185. Would you tell me how it came about? We got bulk issues, and then I think there were some orders to return those as far as I remember.

2186. Did you get any receipt from the prisoner for the clothing you returned? I neither gave a receipt for the bulk issue nor did I get a receipt for the balance returned.

2187. Do you know of your own knowledge that a balance was returned? I saw them being taken out of my store.

2188. And you gave orders that they were to be returned to the brigade store? Yes.

2189. And to the best of your knowledge the order was obeyed? Yes.

2190. Can you produce the size-rolls of your battery for the clothing of 1887? I can produce a rough copy. [Exhibit 90 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

2191. By the Attorney-General:—You were asked whether you knew of your own knowledge whether any of the things were returned; did you ever see any of them returned to the brigade store? All I did was to give an order, and I saw certain things leaving my office.

2192. But you did not know where they were going to? No.

2193. You have no better proof that that order was obeyed than any other man who gives an order has? I did not see the articles taken into the prisoner's store, and I did not deliver them myself.

2194. By Mr. Heydon:—Is there not an endorsement in your writing at the back of that? Yes.

2195. Can you tell me, seeing that endorsement of it, whether a copy of it was delivered to the prisoner? A copy of this sent to the brigade store with the clothing returns.

2196. By the Attorney-General:—Did you take it yourself? No.

2197. Can you say how many articles were taken out of your store? No.

2198. Mr. Heydon:—Whose handwriting is that document in? Quartermaster-Sergeant M'Millan's. [Exhibit 91 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Lieutenant-Colonel

Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy recalled, reminded of his former oath, and examined by the Court:—

2199. Do you remember a bulk issue of clothing to your battery in 1886? Yes, I do.
Do you remember that bulk issue being returned to the brigade quartermaster's store? Yes.
2200. Do you know of your own knowledge that it was returned? I saw it being returned.
2201. You were present when it was returned? I saw it on its way to the store. I was on the verandah and saw it go from my store to the quartermaster's store.
2202. Have you any receipt from the prisoner? No; I can't find any.
2203. Did you sign any receipt for the delivery of it? No.
2204. So that no receipt or delivery voucher passed between your or the brigade quartermaster's department? No; not for that particular clothing.
2205. Can you produce a size-roll for your battery for the clothing for year 1887? This is a rough copy; it was taken in August, 1886.
- [Exhibit 92 handed in, signed by the President, and attached to the proceedings.]
2206. The Attorney-General:—Can you say how many clothes were returned? The whole were returned.
2207. Were they not reissued? I cannot say.
2208. When were they returned—can you remember? In November.
2209. Was there not an order to return any that were not used up? Yes.
2210. Was it not after that order? No; it was before that order, because there was only a small quantity left.
- [His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

Honorary Lieutenant William Holmes, Chief Clerk on the Staff, having been duly sworn, is examined by the Court:—

He said: The strength of the Permanent Artillery, 1883, January—315 men and establishment 320. Strength on 1st January, 1885—312, establishment 320. Strength 1st January, 1885—319, establishment 320. Strength 1st January, 1886—486, establishment 502. Strength 1st January, 1887—380, establishment 376. Strength 1st January, 1888—371, establishment 376. Strength 1st January, 1889—424, establishment 500. In July, 1885, the corps was increased to 502, that would be—from 320. On 1st January, 1887, they were reduced to 376, and they were again increased, August, 1888, to 500. That document is in my handwriting.

[His evidence is read to the witness, as directed by rule of procedure 81 B, and the witness withdraws.]

This concluded the evidence.

ADDRESS OF THE COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENCE:—

THE Attorney-General said that he was perhaps justified in expressing a certain amount of surprise that after the evidence which had been produced in this case, those who were responsible for the prosecution had not thought it their duty to withdraw the matter from the further consideration of the Court, because it appeared to him that it was manifest to every one who had taken an impartial view of the proceedings, and who was not influenced—he did not say by any improper motive—but who was not influenced by a foregone conclusion that the principal charges against the prisoner had entirely fallen to the ground. In this instance, they had what was called a prosecutor—his learned friend, Mr. Heydon, appeared there on the part of that prosecutor, and the prosecutor, as they knew, was Major Mackenzie. He was the nominal prosecutor, and the gentleman making the charges against the prisoner was Major-General Richardson. They had also there his young friend, Mr. Williams, enjoying himself as he was happy to see he had been doing for the last few days, nominally assisting in the prosecution; and his learned friend, Mr. Heydon, was instructed nominally by the Crown Solicitor—but really, the prosecution was a prosecution not by the Crown, but a prosecution by the military authorities. Having spent six months in making this investigation in some serious irregularities, they had thought it their duty to put the criminal law in motion against the prisoner, and they had gone on with that prosecution down to the very last moment—having allowed to remain upon the charge sheet against him, a charge of embezzling £9 12s. 2d., notwithstanding that Colonel Roberts had reported to General Richardson early in February of the present year that he had investigated that so-called charge of embezzlement, and that he had cleared up two of the matters, and was then inquiring into the third with every prospect of clearing that up also. Notwithstanding that—notwithstanding that they had Colonel Roberts, the officer commanding the Artillery, uninfluenced by any consideration but a desire to see justice done to the humblest man in the corps, making that report to General Richardson—even telling him that Webster had shown him receipts for two portions of that £9 12s. 2d., amounting to upwards of £6. Still that charge had to be allowed to remain on the record, and he must deliberately express his surprise that the military authorities had not acted in a very different manner—they must have pressed those charges as they did with some ulterior object. He did not blame them in the first instance for those inquiries—it was their bounden duty when irregularities and neglects or omission had been discovered, to inquire into those irregularities—but he did think that the Court would agree with him that as far as that charge of embezzling that £9 12s. 2d. was concerned, it should not have been allowed to remain on the charge-sheet against the prisoner. If he were addressing a jury upon the question, he would have no doubt in his mind as to what their finding would be, but he was addressing a body of officers, and it might be that those officers, although well versed in military law—had not the knowledge of the world and of men of the world that would be possessed by an ordinary jury, and it would be for that reason necessary for him to occupy their time in drawing their attention to the evidence given by the Crown on behalf of the prosecution with regard to that particular charge. They had put upon that charge sheet every possible offence that the mind of man could imagine; they had determined if possible—but he did not say improperly—by hook or by crook to secure the conviction of the prisoner on some charge or other. Eleven charges had been levelled against him and when they were carefully looked at it would be observed that they really all arose out of one or two transactions.

transactions. The first charge was, that he had embezzled that £9 12s. 2d.; the second was that he had paid away unlawfully that sum of money, and then in the fourth charge he was indicted with having been culpably neglectful in keeping the compensation accounts for clothing, and that in consequence of that there was a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. Thus as far as that sum was concerned, they had no less than three charges against them, and not only so but in spite of all the evidence that had been given they were still allowed to remain, and being allowed to remain it was possible that to some extent they might prejudice the minds of the Court. Those charges were utterly inconsistent with themselves. The prosecutor did not seem notwithstanding the investigation that had occupied six months—notwithstanding all the material at his command, notwithstanding that they had ample opportunities of arriving at a just and proper conclusion—the prosecutor did not seem to know exactly what to charge the prisoner with. They had got something into their heads about the £9 12s. 2d., but whether the prisoner had embezzled, whether he had allowed somebody else to embezzle it, or whether he had been culpably negligent in the keeping of his books, and that it was in that way that the deficiency had arisen they did not seem to know. And therefore he would ask how the Court could possibly say, whether the prisoner had embezzled the money or not, when the prosecution themselves so evidently did not know, and if they did not know that he had embezzled it, how could they tell if he had allowed anybody else to embezzle it, and if they did not know that he had allowed anybody else, how was it that they could charge him with culpable negligence—first of all he would deal with the charge of embezzlement—it was said that he had embezzled that money by having received it from the contractor, and instead of handing it over to the Commanding Officers had put it in his own pocket. Then they said that if he did not put it into his own pocket and they were doubtful about that—then he had paid it away without any due authority, and that if he would do that then he was guilty of culpable negligence inasmuch as there was a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. Now could any case for the defence be better proved out of the mouth of opponents witnesses than this has been proved—because with the exception of the evidence of Lynch and Loveless, as far as this money was concerned admissions had been dragged out of the witnesses for the prosecution. His learned friend had made all kinds of technical objections to his endeavours to illicit the proof and yet at the very last moment—at the conclusion of the case a witness was allowed to state only by hearsay that certain goods had been restored to the Brigade Office. But never mind in spite of all the difficulties with which he would have to contend with, he had shown that that money the £9 12s. 2d. had been paid away by the prisoner. The military authorities initiating those charges against him, thought it a matter of justice to have omitted that particular charge—what justification could there be for the course they had taken. Colonel Roberts had sent a memorandum to Colonel Mackenzie in February last, saying that he had practically cleared the matter up, and then he had told the Major-General himself that Lynch had been called before him and produced a receipt for £4 1s. 6d., and that he had also obtained a receipt of £2 10s. 6d. from Loveless. Of course it might be said that Lynch had never received the £4 1s. 6d., but Lynch himself would not venture to say it, and the document bore the evidence of being a genuine document; indeed, when Lynch was shown the receipt by Colonel Roberts he admitted that he had received the money; and when subsequently seen by Mr. Nathan he had said, "I am not in the habit of giving receipts unless I have received the money," therefore they must consider that Lynch had received £4 1s. 6d. out of the £9 12s. 6d. which the prisoner is charged with embezzling. Loveless, whom they saw examined in a very bad state of health, told them distinctly that he had received the money, so, that assuming that the members of the Court have not left behind them their common sense, and assuming that they would bring to bear upon the consideration of a question of this kind their knowledge of the world—he did not see that they could have any doubt—but that the prisoner had paid away the double portion of the money. Then he stated that he had paid 9s. 4d. to a gunner, but to which gunner he could not remember, and £2 10s. 6d. to a man of the name of Burgess, and they must remember that he said that when he was examined by Colonel Roberts, and not merely now that he was on his trial before a court martial. Of course, they knew that Burgess was dead—and it might be said that the prisoner had picked upon a dead man as an easy way of accounting for a further portion of the deficiency. He asked the Court, however, whether they did not think that if the whole thing was a fraud and a mere subterfuge it would have been much easier for Webster, who was a great favourite amongst his comrades, to have got some man who had left the corps, or some one, at all events, who was still alive to say that he had paid the money to him. By doing that he would certainly have succeeded in confusing the matter instead of telling a plain straight forward story as he had done to the effect that he had paid the money to Burgess. Moreover, if he had wanted to deceive the Court, would he have hit upon a man who actually appeared in the list to have received the £2 10s. 6d., beyond doubt he would not. He would have said, I paid money to Lynch, and I paid money to Loveless, and the rest I paid to Smith or Jones, or somebody else whose name did not appear in the compensation list. Supposing he had gone to an attorney who was not very strict in connecting his cases—that attorney would have said to him—"Why you are a perfect fool—if you want to make out to the Court that you paid this money away to hit upon a man who appeared in the compensation list. Then, too, why did you hit upon Lynch;" the mere fact of his having upon the names of those two men was conclusive evidence to every one who has not left his common sense behind him, that the prisoner's story was perfectly true—thus they had disposed of all doubt respecting that portion of the money that was paid to Lynch, to Loveless, and to Burgess. Now only 9s. 4d. remains, and that small sum the prisoner said that he had paid away to some gunner in the Artillery. Colonel Spalding had told them that there was a man named Bailey, and that the money had been paid to him by Webster, and that perhaps he had received it in addition to some other sum. If the prisoner had been attempting to deceive the force he would have jumped at such a suggestion as that, and at once said, "Oh, yes, I paid it to him;" but the prisoner did not say that. Apparently, he had proved himself an innocent man by the admission that he had paid it away to a gunner, whose name he had forgotten. If it were not so, he would in all probability have said that he had paid to another dead man. Colonel Spalding told them that after his compensation list had been sent in to the Brigade Office, Loveless and some other man had paraded before him with their clothes, and that he had certified that they were entitled to compensation. Then there was Colonel Roberts' evidence. Colonel Roberts had told them that he did not remember telling the prisoner to pay those particular men by name, but that he had told him to pay all outstanding lists for compensation. And they had also the evidence of an officer commanding battery, to the effect that it was no unusual thing to alter the compensation lists after they had been sent in to the Brigade Office. Colonel Murphy himself had admitted that one man in his battery was put down by him for £1 9s. 6d., when in reality he obtained compensation, and obtained obtained it quite justly, for £2 4s ; then if they would look at the lists before them they would find that in No. 3 battery a man called William Lowe had been put down for £1 9s., when he had actually received £2 7s. 6d., and that another man was down for 10s. who eventually obtained considerably more. The lists were not perfect lists. It would be a monstrous thing for any Court to dream of thinking of convicting a man for an offence of that kind, when both the documentary evidence and the viva voce evidence against him were so weak, to say nothing of its strength as far as his innocence was concerned. If the Court had come to the conclusion that that matter of embezzlement of £9 12s. 2d. was at an end, then the other charge against him of having paid it away without due authority had fallen to the ground; also, because Colonel Roberts said "Although I do not remember the name of Lynch or Loveless, I have authorized him to pay all compensation." If a man who has received authority to pay away all moneys due, then surely it could not be said that he paid any portion of it away without due authority, even although he might not be able to produce the exact authority by which he paid it away. Then the prisoner was charged with being culpably negligent in keeping the compensation lists, and in the care of the money of which he was the custodian; and that as a result of that there was a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. for which he could not account. Now, so far from there being a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d., the man had shown that he drew that amount, that he had given a receipt for it, and that he had handed over all the moneys that he had received less that sum, which he had explained in full having paid away to the men whose names he had just alluded to. Hence the fourth charge fell to the ground. In that instance he was entirely at the mercy of Mr. Henderson if he was guilty of a fraud, because he gave a receipt to Mr. Henderson for the whole £229 10s. 2d. out of which the alleged deficiency arose; and not only so, but he had placed himself in the position of possibly being prosecuted for forgery. If he had been guilty of fraud he had the risk of being prosecuted for a double forgery—for forging the names of both Lynch and Loveless; and it was clear law that if he had been found guilty of forgery in respect of Lynch's compensation the name of Loveless could have been brought up against him as a forgery also. They would now proceed to consider the third charge. He was there charged with having in a certain pay-voucher, of the contents of which it was his duty to have ascertained the accuracy, been privy to the making of a false statement, in that he on the 24th May, 1887, initialled as correct a claim for compensation involving an overcharge to the amount of £15 13s. 4d. That charge amounted to this (for they were still dealing with the £9 12s. 2d.), that in that voucher the prisoner had put down £15 or thereabouts, the price, less 26½ per cent., of the jumpers or jackets that he had said that he gave compensation to Lynch and Burgess for. It was the same thing again; the £9 12s. 2d. was a portion of that sum of £15. In other words, the £15 was the price of the clothing for which the £9 12s. 2d. represented as being two-thirds of it. And inasmuch that there could only be a desire on the part of the Court that justice should be done, if he (the Attorney-General) were wrong in the view in which he took in dealing with the case he would like to be corrected.

Mr. Heydon :—I did not say that.

The Attorney-General continuing said that he understood all along, and had conducted his case upon the assumption that that £9 12s. 2d. was a portion of the £15 odd mentioned in the third charge. If those men were entitled to compensation, then of course they would be included in the voucher. And further, in connection with that matter of £9 12s. 2d. it was necessary for them to look at the tenth charge. There the prisoner was charged with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in that he, being aware that a large sum of public money—£114 16s. 3d.—was being obtained by the contractors for the supply of clothing without any right thereto, and without having given any value therefore, concealed the said act from his superior officers, and connived at the payment of the said money and assisted the contractors to obtain the same. That charge must be dealt with in connection with the third charge. The prosecution said not only had you been privy to a false statement in the voucher, the accuracy of which it was your duty to ascertain, not only did you allow Henderson to put down there a charge for goods amounting to £15, but you also allowed him to put down a sum of £114, and you did that being privy to a fraud on the part of Henderson. Whether Mr. Henderson would have any remedy or not it was for him to determine. It was evident that he had felt it very keenly—that it should have been suggested that, in order to put money into his own pocket, he should have sent in a false voucher for the purpose of obtaining money from the prisoner. When his learned friend came to conduct that case he seemed to have been a little adrift as to what the facts of the case really were. It had been suggested by him—indeed, not suggested, but actually said—that the prisoner had put into Mr. Henderson's pocket the sum of £114 16s. 3d.; but his learned friend seemed to have been then under the impression that that voucher was altogether false, because he said, and he thought he used the very expression, that Henderson had sent in a voucher initialled as correct, that that voucher was for £344, less the discount, when he had not supplied a single thread of clothing. Whereas, it transpired now, that the custom had been, in order that the contractor might get his share of the compensation, or in order that the men might obtain their two-thirds of the compensation, to send in a voucher as though the goods had been supplied. In point of fact, if those vouchers had not been sent in, apparently showing on the face of them that goods had been supplied, how were the men to have obtained their money? It was admitted that they were to have obtained two-thirds. He wanted to know how that proportion was to have been obtained, where it was to have come from? Certainly, not as in the old days, from the paymaster. Whether it should have been got in that roundabout way, instead of coming through the paymaster, it was very difficult to say, but if the voucher had not been sent in to the Treasury, and that was what he wanted to make particularly clear, how was the money to have been obtained. It had been admitted that the contractor obtained the money, but it was not admitted by the prosecution that he was to retain one-third of it. What had become of the case they had started with? Colonel Roberts himself had said—and that would be a complete answer to the charge—Colonel Roberts himself had said in reply to Mr. Heydon, that he knew that the goods had not been supplied, that he knew of the compensation voucher, and therefore, was he not justified in expressing some surprise that this charge also should have been allowed to remain on the sheet. Why had the prosecution not said, "We are wrong; we blundered over this thing—been blundering from beginning to end?" but Major Mackenzie had said that he would not withdraw the charge, and Mr. Heydon had merely to do what Major Mackenzie told him, while Mr. Williams had nothing whatever to do with the proceedings. It was Major Mackenzie, and behind Colonel Mackenzie, a still greater man. But the charge had not been withdrawn, and he was left to occupy their time and his own time and everybody else's time in defending the prisoner for having initialled a voucher for the supply of goods which were never supplied at all. Let them take the warrant-officers, it had been admitted on all all hands that the clothes for warrant-officers were not supplied; this had been admitted by Colonel Roberts himself, by Captain Savage, the adjutant, and by everybody else. It had been admitted that that was a genuine voucher for £65 10s., although not a single thread had been supplied; and yet that voucher for £65 10s. bore upon the face of it the very same allegation that the voucher for £114 16s. 3d. bore upon its face, and the paymaster's signature was also upon it, following the words "first-class material," although it was known to everybody that no material at all had been supplied. It was all very well for the prosecutor to make those charges against the prisoner, and to stand by them to the bitter end, in the hope that the man might be convicted of something; but they must not forget that Mr. Henderson has to be considered in this matter. No serious consideration could be paid to that charge unless Mr. Henderson was also believed by the Court to be guilty of fraud. Mr. Henderson knew that no goods had been supplied; Mr. Whitehouse, his manager, knew that no goods had been supplied, just as Colonel Roberts knew that no goods had been supplied. Then, too, how could there possibly be any distinction between Mr. Henderson and Mr. Riley; because it was admitted that if Mr. Henderson was guilty of fraud Mr. Riley had been guilty of fraud also. Now Mr. Henderson was a member of one of the oldest firms in the city, and Mr. Riley was a member of the well-known firm of Messrs. Riley Brothers, and he would be the last in the world to suggest any impropriety on the part of the Rileys; yet, if Mr. Henderson had been guilty of any improprieties, so had Mr. Riley; and if this charge against Webster was maintained, they could come to no other conclusion than that both Mr. Henderson and Mr. Riley had been guilty of obtaining moneys under false pretences. Then came the question of the retention of one-third of the amount of those compensation vouchers by the contractor. It was said that the prisoner had initialled that voucher for the supply of clothing when he knew that no goods had been supplied; that he had enabled the contractor to draw £344 8s. 10d. out of the Treasury, and to keep £114 odd for himself; and that by so doing he had been guilty of culpable neglect, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. In sustaining that charge, the prosecution had described the retention of the one-third as a fraud. Now, in his opinion, if ever a custom was proved, it had been proved that it was the custom for the contractor to retain one-third of the money due to the men of the Permanent Artillery as compensation; and it had been conclusively proved out of the mouths of the witnesses for the prosecution. Colonel Airey had said that he knew of the custom, and his only difficulty had been in determining when that originated. Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Whitehouse, Mr. Bridges, and one or two of the staff-sergeants had said that they knew of the custom all along, and indeed it was perfectly clear that the contractor would not have been enabled to retain that £114 unless there was some authority for its being retained. The prosecution did not charge the prisoner in express terms with having allowed the contractor to retain it; but they charged him with being guilty of neglect, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, by allowing the contractor to do it. He trusted that the Court saw this—that unless the contractor was to send in a voucher for goods, showing that they had been supplied, the money could not have been obtained from the Treasury. The money was to be got from the Treasury, and it had to be divided. Therefore a voucher was sent in, in one column of which one-third was calculated, and in another column of which 26½ per cent. discount was knocked off. Why should that be done unless it was known that that money was to come through the contractor, and that he was to retain one third of it. At last they had succeeded in finding out the date when that custom originated. Colonel Airey had told them that it had originated in 1872, when he and Major Fitzsimons went to the General to see what was to be done about compensation, and the General told them to make the best arrangements with the contractor that they could. It might be said that that was under a different system of clothing the force; but what did that amount to? it only proved that, in consequence of improper supervision and control, the system had been allowed to continue. Founded probably upon reasons and propriety in the first instance, it had been allowed to continue after the reason had ceased to exist, and when, therefore, instead of being a proper course of procedure, it had been an improper one. The contractor evidently thought that he had some claim upon the money, and that having brought the goods out from England he was entitled to a certain amount of profit upon those that he might have sold. It must not be forgotten that the conversation between Colonel Airey, Major Fitzsimons, and the Major-General, had completely passed out of the recollection of the General; because it showed that within the last three weeks Colonel Airey had settled the question of compensation of 1886, by recalling to his mind what had taken place in 1872; thus it was very evident that the General had forgotten all about it. Mr. Whitehouse had told them that he had deducted the one-third upon the authority of a custom which he had found in vogue when he first entered the employ of Messrs. Henderson and Co. Mr. Henderson had told them that there was such a custom—that he would have lost the profit on the garments if he had not got the one-third, and Colonel Airey himself has said that he knew it to be the custom for the men to receive the two-thirds. He would not admit that he knew of his own knowledge that the contractor received one-third; but he evidently did know of it perfectly well when he prepared the compensation lists for his battery, and sent them in to the Brigade Office, based upon a calculation of two-thirds after a reduction of 26½ per cent. Indeed, the President himself, when examining Colonel Airey, had said—"I suppose that you know it did not go into the sea." Then, could there be any doubt in the mind of anybody that Colonel Airey knew perfectly well that it went to the contractor. He would not say even that it was his belief that the money was being improperly retained; but he did say that he knew that it had been the custom. Lieutenant Bridges had said that since he had been in the force it was understood that the men got two thirds and the contractors one-third, and that he thought that he first heard of it from a sergeant-major—indeed, that it was a general topic of conversation. Colonel Murphy told him that always one-third went to the contractor, although he could not say it of his own knowledge, but that he had heard of it, and that it had received the sanction of General Richardson. Although a man may not be able to speak positively of the existence of a custom, saying he did not know this or that of his own knowledge, an officer of the Artillery would know perfectly well whether the matter had ever been talked about; and Colonel Murphy had told them that he had frequently heard it talked about. Sergeant Taylor and Wilson had admitted that they knew of it in 1886, and it had been sought to bring that evidence against his client. If that had been in 1887 it might have told against him; but they both admitted that in 1886 they knew of the deduction of one-third. The prisoner told them in very rough language to deduct the one-third, and that in itself was a circumstance in favour of his client. If he had been privy to a swindle, would he have been likely to have talked to them in that peremptory manner? Of course not. The very way in which he spoke to them—the very way in which he ordered them to do that which he believed to be their duty—was, at least, conclusive evidence that he believed that he was following a well-established custom. Then, Mr. Jesse, the manager for Messrs. Riley Brothers, had said that he would not have put the cheque before Mr. Riley to sign unless he had been sure that it was the custom for the contractor to retain his profit of one-third. Staff-sergeant Griffiths had said: "I have known, since I have been in the force, that two-thirds went to the men and one-third to the contractor, and that the Staff got the full amount;—thus, it was very evident, that the custom was known to all those people, although it was not known to the General, and although Colonel Roberts does not seem to have known it until lately. Why did not Colonel Roberts know? Because he came into existence as the Commanding Officer of the Artillery, finding the custom already established; thus it was that he knew nothing at all about it. Had it been a new custom, of course he would have known. It was a very difficult thing to prove the existence of a custom by any direct evidence or approval on the part of the authorities, and especially when that custom was one which ought not to have existed. There might have been some grounds for it when it first came into existence, but now there were none, and, as in the case of the notorious "Railway Frauds," no one was willing to come forward and accept the responsibility. There has been a tacit knowledge that this custom had been in force for years, and now, because of the amount of public attention that had been drawn to it, they could not get the authorities to admit even that it was a custom; but by proof from the lips of so many witnesses of the fact that the custom had existed, and that it existed for so many years, the charge against the prisoner of enabling Mr. Henderson to improperly retain the £114 was exploded. It was a very hard thing for a man like Webster, standing alone with all the power of military authority against him, to prove a matter of that kind—the knowledge of a custom. He could only prove it by the witnesses called for the prosecution, and by the argument that if the custom did not exist why were those lists made out as they had seen that they were made out? Why was the money allowed to go into the hands of the contractor at all; and why did Colonel Roberts say, when he signed the voucher, that he knew no goods had been supplied—that he knew that it was a compensation voucher? He hoped the Court would see that there could be no evidence against the prisoner in connection with that £114 unless they were satisfied Mr. Henderson was guilty of fraud, and that Webster had assisted him in obtaining money by false pretences. If the voucher was not to be filled up as prisoner had filled it up, why was the contractor to go to the Treasury and draw the money? What Mr. Whitehouse really meant to convey in his evidence was not that the contractor obtained the one-third merely for the trouble of writing out his account and going up to the Treasury for it, but that if the men were to get two-thirds and the contractor was to get nothing, why was he to go up to the Treasury at all and take any trouble in the matter? If it was nothing to the contractor and two-thirds to the men the old system would surely have been put in force again, and the men sent to the pay office and not to the contractor for their money. Then the prisoner was charged with getting £65 10s. for himself and other warrant officers as an exorbitant and excessive sum of public money. He really did not know that he need address the Court at all upon that charge. It seemed so very clear that there was nothing in it. There was a voucher signed by Captain Savage. The practice of allowing full compensation arose in the year 1887-1888. He admitted that in the year before that the men only got £8. The prisoner had been instructed to apply to Messrs. Henderson to find out what they would supply the warrant officers clothing for. They said they would supply it for £16 odd. That sum was subsequently fixed as compensation for the warrant officers and the approval of the Colonial Secretary obtained. Sir Henry Parkes had given authority for the money to be drawn. Staff-sergeant Griffiths had told them that they got the full amount, and Colonel Roberts had told them that payment of the warrant officers in full was authorized by him, and yet against this evidence the prosecutor had set up the argument that, in 1886, the warrant officers did not get the £16 for compensation, and they had called some warrant officers to prove that in 1886 they did not get the full amount, and, therefore, that they had no right to get it in 1887. Now he admitted that the warrant officers had not obtained £16 in 1886, and for a very good reason—because they were in the contract. In 1887 they were not in the contract. Then they had called some witnesses to show that Staff-sergeant Goodall received a smaller amount. Colonel Roberts further explained that that was easily accounted for by the clothes of the warrant officers being much better in quality than those of the staff-sergeants; so that against that particular charge there was the direct authority of Captain Savage, of Colonel Roberts, and of the Colonial Secretary. It was now necessary that he should recur for a few moments to the £9 12s. 2d. Of course his learned friend would say the prisoner had given three different accounts of it, and eventually had sent in a memorandum to say he could not account for it at all. He would not trouble the Court with repeating those statements, because he would admit at once they were inconsistent with the defence now set up. The document which the prisoner had sent in admitted his inability to account for the £9 12s. 2d., and contained an offer to repay it. Of course, people could hardly imagine what a man in Webster's position must have suffered when the charges were first brought against him. He had the highest reputation. According to the testimonials that had been sent in he had served in the Imperial force, and since then in the local force, and always with credit to himself. Nothing could be more evident than that there had been a jumble from beginning to end. There had been a certain amount of carelessness all through; and when the prisoner was called before the Board of Inquiry and commanded to give an account of the deficiency, it was all very fine to say that his statements were voluntary—they knew that they were made in obedience to a direct command. It was only natural that he should feel a certain amount of embarrassment. Books of evidence teemed with cases in which men gave inconsistent statements under circumstances of that nature. The prisoner gave one or two accounts in the hope of accounting for the deficiency, and eventually said that he found he could not manage it; and he wrote to the authorities, saying,—“If my books had been properly supervised it would have been correct. The shortest and best way is for me to admit my inability to account for the money, and to offer to refund it to the authorities, than to be subject to the disgrace and indeed the ruin”—for it would mean ruin, whatever the result of the case might be of a trial by a Court Martial. Subsequently, however, he had thought the matter over again, and as a matter of fact he succeeded then in accounting for the greater part of the deficiency, and accounting for it to the complete satisfaction of Colonel Roberts. They must not forget that innocent men from time to time had made inconsistent statements, and he hoped that the statements made by the prisoner would not be considered as evidence against him. Now they came to the charge of having embezzled goods to the value of £800. That was the fifth charge. The sixth charge was apparently the same, although in that the prosecution said, “Well, if he did not embezzle them we will charge him with having connived at the embezzlement.” Now, what foundation was there, he would like to know, unless they were bent upon putting on the charge sheet all the charges they could conceive, for having charged him with conniving at the embezzlement of the goods? If anybody embezzled them, he had embezzled them himself. Was not that a very unsatisfactory way of dealing with a criminal charge? As a matter of fact, embezzlement did not consist in a failure to account for goods that had been traced into one's possession; the failure to show that tunics had not been properly accounted for, and so on—that was not embezzlement. The way in which the books were kept, had been kept, the admission to enter in books what ought to have been entered, the sin of entering in books things which ought not to have been entered there, might all be evidences of embezzlement, but they certainly were not acts of embezzlement. Every day they found that people who were not skilled in bookkeeping, and who had made mistakes, were brought before Criminal Courts and acquitted. This man had not concealed anything. Even after the accountant had gone through his books, by the advice of his attorney, he sent them to the prosecutor with the result of the accountant's investigation. Was it likely that that would have been done if there had been any real acts of embezzlement. Mr. Roberts, the accountant, had told them that as far as the tunics were concerned there was a surplus; that as far as something else was concerned there was a deficiency; but, on the whole, there was a surplus in favour of the prisoner. Mr. Roberts had further said that Webster might have made a mistake in putting some things in their wrong columns. Then it was argued by the prosecution that Mr. Roberts was wrong because he had placed certain articles to the credit of the prisoner when they ought to have been debited against him. As a matter of fact, they had heard from the officers commanding batteries that those goods were issued, and that some of them were sent back again, and that the prisoner gave a receipt for them, but forgot to enter them in his book. It showed that Webster had made an omission in not making those entries; but that did not show any embezzlement or, indeed, any guilt on his part. Embezzlement generally existed in making false entries; but this man had only been guilty of sins of omission. There was not a single false entry in his book from beginning to end. That the 130 suits were issued in globo was perfectly true, that some of them had been returned to the brigade store and not entered in the book was equally true—that the prisoner had received some back from battery No. 1 was evident because he had given a receipt for them, but as far as Colonel Murphy's battery was concerned they did not know how many goods had been delivered. Colonel Murphy himself did not know, nor, as far as Colonel Spalding's battery was concerned, did Colonel Spalding know. He found in the "Red Book," which, although not a law book, contained very good law, the principle laid down "that a mere error or irregularity in accounts or a mistaken application of money or goods does not constitute an offence under this section." The mere fact of the prisoner keeping his books improperly, the mere fact that his books did not show everything that he had received, was certainly not the offence of embezzlement. There must be an intended fraud on the part of the accused, either for the benefit of himself or somebody else. What could become of those goods, of those 347 cloth trousers? Now the whole force must have been in collusion with the prisoner if he had embezzled them, because it was impossible for him to go and sell military trousers to people he might meet in the city. But did the Court for one moment think, if Webster had been getting rid of property in that wholesale fashion, some man with a grudge against him or some man wishing to curry favour with the authorities would not have told what was going on. Then it might be said that the prisoner was in collusion with Messrs. Henderson, but when Messrs. Henderson's contract was to send in globo a large number of goods out of the barracks it would have been impossible for him to have withheld them. Perhaps the goods were destroyed; no one could possibly tell. How many tunics had been destroyed by rats and moths and so on. All that the prosecution could possibly prove was that a certain number of goods appeared to be missing from the account books of an honorable man. In the prisoner's favour, however, there was this pregnant fact, that he had shown so much respect for and care of Government property that he had even asked that his clerk might be allowed to sleep in the store, and permission had been granted. Thus, if embezzlement had been proceeding, Loveless must have been cognizant of it as well as Mr. Henderson. Then they came to the alleged overcharges on the part of the master tailor. It had been said that the prisoner had allowed the master tailor to make a great deal of money to which he had no right. He admitted that the master tailor seemed to have made a very decent thing out of his first year's work and all because there had been a want of supervision or proper control or because foolish orders had been issued which it was impossible could be carried out. Substantially the only two charges in the master tailor's shop were 1s. and 18s. No doubt it was a serious thing that the tailor had been allowed to make all that money, but was Webster to suffer because of it? The case for the prosecution was the prisoner had allowed the master tailor to charge for "remakes" which had not been heard of before. That was the result of a number of badly fitting garments coming out from England. The clothing was imported according to the different sizes of the men. The custom of remakes became necessary when clothing was first imported, and the prisoner had signed the authority for the master tailor to make remakes. But they had heard Colonel Roberts himself express his opinion on the matter. He looked at it in a common-sense light, saying he knew perfectly well that these vouchers for the master tailor were really charges for remakes. Upon the vouchers it was actually stated that they were remake, and they were signed by Colonel Roberts not only as commanding the artillery corps but as the officer commanding the garrison at that time. Loveless had told them the other day that he used to put the accounts down in the book for the prisoner, and Captain Savage had told them that the General's order bearing upon the subject had by tacit consent been ignored. In Webster's favour there was this very strong circumstance that the battery books showed a great issue than his own books, that in point of fact that he had issued great many more tunics and so on than he had entered in his own books. Then again he had not credited himself with the clothing issued by purchase to the officers. Mr. Roberts in making out his books had taken it for granted that the issues were all correct with the exception of the issues from the master tailor. Lieutenant Little had produced two other tables, and it was said that Webster had obtained a great many more things from the master tailor than he charged himself with in his book. Then too it was said by Mr. Roberts, in answer to Mr. Heydon, that in his calculations he had not taken into account some 26 or 27 tunics that had been supplied to the band by Messrs. Riley Brothers. Amongst the circumstances that struck the suspicious mind of somebody they had one circumstance that had been brought to the knowledge of the Court—a strong evidence of fraud on the part of Webster. There happened to be a little black "c" and a little red "c" in a certain book, and it was said that these men, Loveless and Lynch, to whom the prisoner had paid respectively £4 1s. 10d. and £2 10s. 6d., were marked down in that book with a black "c," whereas all the other "c's" were written in red ink. But nobody had denied that Bailey's compensation was a genuine compensation, compensation, and opposite that a black "c" appeared. Therefore, the fact that black "c's" appeared in the cases of Lynch and Loveless proved absolutely nothing at all. One thing more. Here was a man who had stated that everything in the world depended to him on the result of this Court Martial; everything that he had possessed had gone; he had been there for fourteen or fifteen days attempting to defend himself against those charges. The Court was composed of gentlemen who were possessed of a certain amount of judicial knowledge, and he wanted to bring this before them, that it was not the mere fact that the prosecutor chose to insert in a charge-sheet a statement that this or that was prejudicial to good order and military discipline that it really constituted a charge and offence. He did not know whether the Court would take judicial knowledge of the fact that if a man neglected to keep his books in a proper way, whereby there was a deficiency, it must be clearly proved that it was neglect to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. But he did not know how it could be conduct amounting to neglect, to such greivous neglect, that a man did not enter in his book something which he ought to have entered there. It was a mistake in keeping accounts that was all; and was a mere mistake in keeping accounts neglect to the prejudice of good order and military discipline? The Court will be able to decide that question. After all it only had been attempted to prove the case by circumstantial evidence. There was an entire absence of direct evidence. He submitted that though there were circumstances of suspicion against Webster, that these circumstances of suspicion were circumstances which would necessarily arise from the position in which the man had been placed, and that the statements of his which were inconsistent with facts, were statements which any innocent man might make. The whole circumstances showed want of control, want of supervision, want of discipline, which ought not to exist in a large force like this; and in deciding upon the case, it would be for the Court to consider, not only whether those circumstances entailed a certain amount of suspicion, but whether they were all inconsistent with the hypothesis of innocence. Why should the prisoner be, in plain English, the scape-goat of others? Why should those sins of omission be visited on his head with further degradation and ruin than had already befallen him?

ADDRESS IN REPLY OF THE COUNSEL FOR THE PROSECUTION.

Mr. Heydon said that he would deal first with the four charges in the order in which they came. The first charge was one of embezzling a sum of £9 12s. 2d. Now a charge of that kind was what was called a distributed charge. It did not follow that, because a man was charged with embezzling that amount, that if he succeeded in proving that he had not embezzled the whole of the amount that he was therefore not guilty. The Court would still have to find him guilty of embezzling upon a charge of embezzling any part of it. It was not necessary for him, as counsel for the prosecution, to show any plainly branded guilt—it was enough for him to show that there was a deficiency. This amount of £9 12s. 2d. appeared by comparison with the amounts received by the men who were entitled to compensation—with the amounts received by Mr. Henderson to pay those men with. When giving evidence before the Board of Inquiry, the prisoner produced two compensation lists, and he produced nothing else—not it appeared subsequently that a pay voucher had been prepared by Mr. Henderson for £344 odd, and that two thirds of that amount was given to the prisoner for the officers commanding the batteries to pay their men with. That two thirds being £220 0s. 5d.—the prisoner said that the amount he had received was £220 0s. 5d. whereas he had actually received from Mr. Henderson the sum of £229 12s. 7d. Now, unless he had a bad memory—unless he had a particularly bad memory, he would not have forgotten that. But in addition to having a bad memory, the prisoner seemed to have a memory which suggested untruths. When examined on the question before the Board of Inquiry, he said, alluding to the £9 12s. 2d., "Yes, this sum represents my own compensation, which Henderson when paying me for the usual compensation added to the cheque as a convenient way of paying me." Now, there was a definite statement; if it was a lie it was a lie with circumstance told with all particulars. Now that particular year in which the prisoner said that Henderson had paid him his compensation in that way, he had received as compensation the sum of £16 7s. 6d.—he had received it for the first time in his life, and he had received it after a great deal of trouble. Yet with that fact in his mind, a fact which it would have been impossible for him to have forgotten, he said, in his glib manner, "Yes, that sum represents my own compensation, which Henderson, when paying me, added on to the cheque, as a convenient way of paying me." Now, as a matter of fact, they knew that £9 12s. 2d. did not represent his compensation; and that, further, that it was not added on to the cheque by Mr. Henderson. The prisoner was first called before the Board of Inquiry on the 26th June; then, after having three months to find out all about this compensation, he was again called before the Board on the 18th September, and from that date he had to the 3rd October to think the matter over, and on that occasion they found the following evidence given by him. He was asked this question:—"Did you receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. as compensation in lieu of clothing for year 1887-1888; if so, how do you account for the discrepancy of £9 12s. 2d. between the account shown as received by the contractor and handed over to officers commanding batteries for the same year?" To that question he answered, "No, I did not. I received my clothing." Now, could they believe that that answer was given in good faith, when they knew perfectly well that he had not received his clothing for years? Then, on reconsideration, a moment afterwards, the prisoner informed the Board, "I find I did receive the sum of £16 7s. 6d. for the year 1887-88." That was another account of the matter given by the prisoner after having two or three weeks to turn the circumstances over in his mind; yet for the time the Board, not having the full examination that it subsequently had, and consequently not having its subsequent knowledge to guide it, was perfectly satisfied with the explanation. More than four weeks went by, and the prisoner was again spoken to about it. This question was put to him by the Board: "You stated in evidence that the £9 12s. 2d., money not accounted for by the battery officers receipts, was your own compensation due to you—do you adhere to this statement?" and the prisoner's answer was simple and to the point. He said, "Yes, I do." Then the Board began to press him—they were already becoming suspicious, and at length he said that it must have been an oversight of his not to mention when getting the £65 (compensation for warrant-officers) that he had had that advance. Now it was admitted by the prisoner that those statements were every one untrue, and the defence absolutely inconsistent with them had been set up. If untrue, were they lies or not? Surely they could not have been instances of ordinary forgetfulness; they contained so many particulars and involved such circumstantial details—but that was not all. On the 11th December, they got the following statement: "Mr. Webster states that the list sent on to the Treasury is really a mere voucher. The compensation lists are received from the batteries with each man's name on, the items are recapitulated on another list; the list is then signed by the commanding officer and forwarded to the contractor, who therefrom makes out the vouchers, which are in like manner signed by the Colonel Commanding the Artillery." That was another statement. The next statement was one inconsistent again with all the former statements. It was a statement on the 4th February and conveyed by Colonel Roberts to the officer commanding in the form of a memorandum, at the time of the prisoner's application to be allowed to refund the money. He then stated that he had failed to discover to whom he paid the money, but that it was for compensation in lieu of three patrol jackets, one tunic (sergeant's), three pairs of cloth trousers, and one pair of serge trousers, all for sergeants. Now, what could that mean? Were they to believe it or not? If they were to add the value of those articles up they would find that they represented exactly £9 7s. 2d.; and if the statement were true, how was it that they had had no evidence about it? How was it that it had been abandoned altogether by the learned counsel for the defence? Finally, when the summary of evidence was being taken by Colonel Roberts, then, and then only, they heard for the first time that the deficiency could really be cleared up; then it was that Colonel Roberts wrote the memorandum which had been received in evidence to the effect that he had succeeded in tracing £6 11s. 10d. of the £9 12s. 2d. His learned friend had inquired how it was that when that memorandum was sent in by Colonel Roberts the charge had not been abandoned. At that time, they must remember, the prisoner was about to be tried by court martial, and surely it would have shown an extraordinary amount of incredulity on the part of the prosecution if, after hearing so many different versions of the story, they had taken the last as Gospel truth. No; the proper thing was to put the prisoner on his trial, and to let the Court say whether this explanation brought forward at the eleventh hour, so loaded with suspicion, was worthy of acceptance. Since then, as they knew, the prisoner had succeeded in solving the problem after a fashion as to the whole of the deficiency. The main item was a sum of £4 1s. 10d. which he stated that he had paid to Lynch. They had of course seen a document purporting to be a receipt from Lynch for that amount—it was a very strange thing however, that during those months of anxious inquiry by the Board that receipt should have been put away so far that the prisoner was utterly unable to find it, and that it was only on the eve of his trial that he could put his hands upon it. But apart from that altogether he had succeeded in proving that Lynch had already received his compensation; but the prisoner had even attempted to account for that; he had told the Court that as Lynch was not in the list for compensation he had induced the Colonel to add his name with the names of one or two others to a supplemental list; but they found that with the exception of Loveless, the names of all the men were on the compensation list. The same extraordinary statement was made with regard to Burgess. The prisoner stated that he had paid another portion of the money away to Burgess, but in that instance he was unable to produce a receipt, and Burgess was dead. There was another singular circumstance, however, with regard to Lynch to which he must direct the attention of the Court, that £4 1s. 10d. was said by the prisoner to have been paid to Lynch, as compensation for a patrol jacket. But, as a matter of fact, they knew very well that Lynch was entitled to compensation for a Norfolk jacket. Surely it was a most suspicious transaction—a transaction beclouded with suspicion, whichever way they regarded it.

At 6 o'clock the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning.

On Tuesday, March 26th, at 10 o'clock in the morning, the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment.

Present: The same members as before.

Mr. Heydon continuing his address in reply, said that the last account of the deficiency put forward by the prisoner was now said to be the true one. It must not be forgotten however that the previous accounts were all said to have been true ones. As a matter of fact, the prisoner's explanation of the deficiency, now that he was on his trial, seemed to rest upon the receipts produced from Lynch. The explanation with regard to Burgess merely rested upon the prisoner's word. Burgess was dead; and against the statement that he had been paid by the prisoner, they found his signature as having received compensation in the ordinary way. His learned friend had evidently been oppressed by the consciousness that the prisoner had made those conflicting statements, although he had said that he was very much surprised that the prosecution had gone on with the case, he had done his best to explain them away. He had said that an innocent man was quite likely to make these statements. He would admit that it was in accordance with human nature that a man in alarm, seeing no way out of trouble except by telling a falsehood, might be led into untrue explanations, but such cases were exceedingly few indeed; he only remembered one of them in the law books. Judges always told juries that misstatements such as the prisoner's must be taken into account when considering the case. Indeed, what was there in this instance enough to have frightened the man if he had been innocent. There was nothing to frighten him in the report of a Board of Inquiry, nor yet in the fact that he was called upon by that Board of Inquiry to explain certain documents. There might be a great deal to frighten a guilty man, but an innocent man would feel sure of vindicating his honesty, and would not immediately fly to misstatements, as the prisoner had done, in the hope of extricating himself. Nothing could be plainer than that the prisoner had every chance of offering to that Board a true explanation of how matters stood. He was called before it several times—upon one occasion after the lapse of three months—and was perfectly free to have answered the questions put to him or not. Indeed, if he had not had a guilty mind, he would have found no difficulty in explaining exactly what had become of the money; or, at all events, would not have been led into circumstantial misstatements. The statement to Colonel Roberts that the deficiency was to be accounted for by compensation for a certain number of garments, all of which belonged to sergeants, had now been abandoned. It was not insisted upon by his learned friend nor yet by the prisoner as being a true explanation. Still, it was a statement made by the prisoner at the time, and the question for the Court to consider now was whether it was a simple mistake or a wilful untruth. To him it seemed that up to that time the prisoner had been at his wit's end to explain the deficiency, that he had a guilty mind about it, and was making statements all round the compass in order to get out of the difficulty. The second charge was, that without due authority, he had paid away a portion of public money, to wit, £9 12s. 2d., that was also a distributive charge. If the Court said that he had paid away a smaller sum than the £9 12s. 2d., then he might still be found guilty. It seemed to him that that charge had been admitted.

admitted. His learned friend had observed that if those men were entitled to compensation if their clothing had been passed by their superior officers, then the prisoner had paid the money with the authority of his superior officers; but he submitted that it was necessary for him to have had distinct authority to pay the money to those particular men. Evidence had been adduced to show that it was paid behind the backs of his superior officers. Colonel Spalding had told them that he did not give the prisoner authority to pay any portion of that money; but that when he found that it had been paid, he sanctioned the payment. Colonel Spalding might ratify that act if he liked—he might condone it if he choose; that did not clear the prisoner of a criminal intention, and the act still remained a distinct breach of military discipline. Colonel Spalding had given them his reasons for ratifying that payment. He had told them that he confirmed it under the impression that the consent of Colonel Roberts had been previously obtained; but they knew that Colonel Roberts had not sanctioned it. He had told them so himself. Then Loveless was also paid behind the back of his superior officer. That was a grossly improper thing. The very object of paying the money through the proper channel was that it should not be improperly paid, otherwise money might be paid to men who were not entitled to compensation—to men whose clothes had not been worn out, because they had been in prison or in hospital through vice.

The next charge was that the prisoner had made an overcharge. The voucher upon which that overcharge was made was for £344 8s. 10d. It was Mr. Henderson's pay voucher for the year. The materials for making up that pay voucher were supplied to the contractor by the prisoner, and it was distinctly his duty, and nobody else's, to make the contractor acquainted with the facts upon which the document was founded. That pay voucher had been improperly made out, and when it was sent back to the prisoner to be initialled, it was his duty to see that it was correct; but instead of being correct, it represented an excess of 5 tunics, 6 cloth trousers, 4 Norfolk jackets, 4 jumpers—amounting to £16 5s. 1d. The prisoner's explanation of that was this: That he had added on to the voucher, or induced the contractor to add on to it, the garments for which he said that he had paid compensation to Lynch, Loveless, Burgess, and the gunner, whose name he had forgotten. As a matter of fact, however, the men were not entitled to that amount. Loveless and Burgess were entitled to one of each class of garments; the third man was only entitled to one garment, and Lynch to one class of the garments only; so, clearly, the document was inaccurately made out. Of course it might be said—and there were a number of circumstances in the case which justified the suggestion—that it was quite possible that those garments were added to the pay voucher, in order that the prisoner might get some profit for himself. However that might be, the fact remained that the pay voucher was incorrect, and at that time everything was fresh in the prisoner's mind. The drawing up of that document was his present and immediate duty, and yet it had been made out wrongly, and drew more money from the Treasury than it ought to have drawn. The observations that he had made with regard to the prisoner's failure to account for the £9 12s. 2d. applied, perhaps in a less degree, but still applied to this matter. They had evidence of the care with which the prisoner had attempted to exonerate himself from this trouble. They had had evidence that he had been through the battery books, in order to find something with a plausible aspect, and he had signally failed in his attempt. It was by an improper manipulation of the pay voucher—there could be no doubt of that—that this £9 12s. 2d. had come into his hand. The previous year Mr. Riley had been the contractor; but Mr. Riley knew nothing whatever of what his learned friend described as a custom. He had had to depend for his knowledge of the fact from the prisoner. Mr. Jesse, his manager, had told them that he had satisfied himself that Mr. Riley was entitled to the money, or else that he would not have placed the cheque before him to sign, but that he had obtained his information from the prisoner. It was clear, too, that in that instance the prisoner had had to deal with the contractor, who was ignorant of the real facts of the case—a gentleman to whom he could tell just as much or just as little as it suited him. They found that in Riley's pay-voucher that prisoner had received more than two-thirds; but unfortunately they had not been able to ascertain what was paid to the men during that particular year. Of course, if they had discovered that he had paid away a less sum to the men than he had received from Mr. Riley, it would have been a very meaning and pregnant fact. Then they found him getting full compensation during that year for Sergeant Lytleton, and other men who were not entitled to full compensation. Indeed, that was the prisoner's case. He had told them that they were not entitled to more than two-thirds. Thus, in getting the whole of compensation for them, he had either robbed Mr. Riley or wronged some of his comrades. He was wishful to have given evidence upon that point, but it had been objected to successfully by his learned friend. On the other hand, however, they did find that out of the three-thirds which he had obtained from the contractor, from Mr. Tristram, who was a warrant officer, he had only paid two-thirds away.

The fourth charge was simply this, that the prisoner had kept his books so carelessly, and with such culpable negligence, that, in consequence, a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d. for which he could not account had accrued. The prisoner had told the Board of Inquiry that that discrepancy would not have occurred if his books had been properly checked; but what the Court must remember was that it was not an isolated instance of carelessness; it was not the negligence of a few months only; but it was constant and systematic negligence, running over a period of several years, and carelessness for which the prisoner was undoubtedly responsible. There had been no attempt to explain the matter away. The only question was whether it amounted to culpable negligence, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline; and he thought that it did, if for no other reason than this, that by his reprehensible conduct the prisoner had caused the country the expense and trouble of that prolonged investigation.

He would now pass on to the tenth charge. That was a charge that had given the Court a great deal of trouble, but he took it; as he might consider it satisfactorily proved that the contractor had obtained the money referred to in it without any right whatever to do so. If looked at in its true light, if beclouded by no reference to custom, the transaction amounted to a sheer swindle. There was no contract for the supply of that clothing, and the contractor had no right to obtain the money for it. Of course, the Treasury did not know that; they believed that the clothing had been supplied. If they had known of it they might be perfectly sure that they would not have passed the voucher. They would have referred it back to the military authorities as they had done in the matter of £65 10s., even in spite of Colonel Roberts' sanction. That instance threw a light on the way in which the officials there treated these matters. There was no disguising the nature of the transaction as far as the contractor was concerned. He had already obtained his profit out of the contract by its fulfilment. It was all very well for his learned friend to say that Mr. Henderson felt very much—was hurt at the way way in which his name had been dragged before the public, but he failed to see that Mr. Henderson was hurt at all. To his mind he had given his evidence in a most unsatisfactory manner. If he had been misled why does he not, when he found his mistake out, offer to refund the money? An honest man who had obtained money to which he was not entitled would have refunded every penny of it as soon as the matter was explained to him. Be that as it might, however, he would show to the Court that the prisoner at all events was aware of all the facts, and that he was aware of the meaning of the facts, namely, that the contractor was obtaining this money without any right for it, and without having supplied any of the goods. Again, it would be necessary for him to refer to the prisoner's statements before the Board of Inquiry. On the 9th July the prisoner stated to the Board, "I produce the battery compensation lists for 1887 to 1888, which show that the following amounts have been paid for compensation:—No. 1 battery, £46 5s. 4d.; No. 2 battery, £19 4s. 7d.; No. 3 battery, £154 10s. These amounts are paid by the contractor, and are at the rate of two-thirds value of the article, as paid for by the Government. The articles for which compensation is claimed as allowed are stored in my store and used for recruits as they join, or deducted in the schedule for the following year. The contractor is in no way bound to pay any compensation claims. It is purely a personal matter between the contractor and the individual to whom it is paid, though it is paid through a recognised channel." It would almost seem from that that it was a favour on the part of the contractor to draw this money from the Treasury, and to deduct the one-third for himself. Undoubtedly, at one time, it had been a matter between the contractor and the individuals—under the old system when the cloth was imported with fittings from England and the clothes were not made for the men who claimed compensation, but it had long since ceased to be anything of the kind. Then the Board of Inquiry upon that said to the prisoner, "Can you explain how it suits the contractor to give a cash two-thirds compensation for articles not required by any individual which would have been issued to him had he needed them from those delivered and paid for?" and the prisoner's answer was, "No, I cannot; the contractors for clothing have never made any application for the return of the clothing for which they have paid compensation claims." That was the luminous explanation afforded by the prisoner to the bewildered Board. Notwithstanding that, however, they did seem before long to have obtained some light for themselves, for, on the 15th September, the Board asked him if he considered that the contractor was obtaining money improperly, and to that question he said, "Yes, he does, no doubt, and I spoke about it. I pointed it out to the adjutant and to the Colonel when furnishing compensation lists that for simply putting in his voucher and getting his cheque he charged one-third cost about which he gave compensation." Then a good while later than that, on the 24th October, the Court reminded him that he said in his evidence that he had told Colonel Roberts and the adjutant of the improper manner in which the contractor was obtaining money, and they asked him when he did so. To that he replied, "On one or two occasions I have mentioned this to the Colonel when presenting the compensation lists for signature. On the separate occasions when presenting this list I mentioned this—so it must be over a twelvemonth I suppose." Now what could they make out of a statement like that? Both Colonel Roberts and Captain Savage had denied before the Board, as they had denied within the last few days before that Court, that Mr. Webster had ever pointed out to them that the contractor was obtaining money in an improper way. This was not a question of one man's word against another man's word. It was a matter of one man against two, and two men who could not have been mistaken on a point like that. Now in answer to that charge a number of questions had been asked with reference to custom, and the defence set up appeared to him was this: "It is true that this was an improper transaction; but it was a matter of custom, and surely the prisoner ought not to be held accountable for it any more than anybody else. It was known throughout the force, it was known to a large number of persons excepting himself, strange as it might be, it was a custom undoubtedly, and what could be more natural than that the prisoner knowing that it was a custom, had felt justified in following it?" He would admit that if the learned Counsel for the defence had succeeded in proving the genuineness of the custom, it would be his duty to have withdrawn that particular charge. If the defence had shown that Colonel Roberts had known that the contractor was getting the money in that particular way and had authorized the prisoner to continue it, if they had shown that the Major-General had known it and authorized it—or if even they had proven that Captain Savage had authorized it, then it might indeed have been making a scapegoat of the prisoner to have continued the prosecution upon that particular charge. But the other side had failed to prove the custom, whilst he had called a number of witnesses, not one of whom said that he knew of it in the manner that the contractor and the prisoner knew of it. Some of them said that they were aware that one-third went to the contractor, but they did not know the reason why it went to him. Colonel Roberts, although he knew that the goods were not supplied, was evidently under the impression that Henderson was entitled to a portion of the money, for he had told them that when he had signed the voucher he believed that it was a strictly financial transaction. It might have been that Colonel Roberts would have acted more prudently if he had probed the matter a little further. It might have been that he would have done better to have inquired the reason why the contractor was to retain one-third, but that was no excuse for the prisoner—an omission by Colonel Roberts to inquire into this matter was no justification at all for the prisoner, who was well acquainted with all its conditions. This custom in the beginning was a perfectly clear and proper custom, they had seen that the articles in respect of which compensation was paid in the early days of the Force were articles which were included in the contract, and which, when the contractor did not supply, involved a distinct breach of contract on the part of the Government both cloth and trimmings imported in those days from England, in order that the clothes might be made in the Colony, and every man who received compensation instead of clothing meant a reduction of the articles for which the contractor would be paid by the Government, and an increase of the stock of unmarketable goods that would be left on his hands. Supposing, for instance, that a man had engaged to supply 336 garments, had imported the cloth and engaged the tailors, and that then the Government and come to him and said, "After all, we shall not require any of these things;" clearly under those circumstances, although legally the Government might have shielded themselves behind the words "more or less" in the contract, the bargain could not have been broken without laying the Government under a moral obligation to the contractor. It had been clearly explained how compensation money was obtained in those days. The men obtained an order from their commanding officer upon the contractor, and they practically sold that order to him, getting for themselves two-thirds of the value of their regimental clothes if they liked, or, if they preferred it, a suit of civilian clothes, in which case the contractor would give them the full value of the money, as he obtained his one-third in the form of profit. Thus it was perfectly perfectly evident that in its origin the retention of that proportion of compensation money by the contractor was fair and honest enough. It was in Henderson's time and the prisoner's time, however, that the transaction came to bear this complexion, and from an honest and proper transaction became a dishonest and fraudulent one. The system by which the clothes were supplied to the Force was altered. Instead of importing the cloth and making the garments the contractor imported the garments ready-made and supplied every one that had been ordered by the Government, thus leaving himself without the slightest claim to one penny's compensation. Now, if that had been properly explained to the authorities, there could be no doubt that the custom would not have been allowed to continue. As it was, however, it was not explained to them; there was nothing but vague idea floating in the minds of superior officers of why and how the money was retained, whilst the prisoner possessed the actual knowledge and must have known that it was a dishonest and improper transaction. The old practice did not depend on Mr. Nicholson alone for confirmation; it had been confirmed by the evidence given antecedently by Colonel Airey, who explained in former times he used to give his men an order upon the contractor, and that they used to go down and make their own arrangements with him; and, indeed, the very fact that the Major-General had told him to go to the contractor and make the best arrangements he could with him was a circumstance distinctly in favour of the line of argument adopted by the prosecution. Would the Major-General have done that if the contractor had no right to compensation. No; certainly not. It was because the contractor had a claim upon the Government for clothing that he ought to have supplied. No doubt, as he had already said, the old contracts were for the supply of so many garments "more or less"; that was a point that might be dwelt upon in favor of the prisoner. It might be argued that under the old contract the contractors had not any right to supply a definite number of articles, because the contract contained the words "more or less"; but they knew very well that those words were not put there in order to enable the Government to wrong the contractor. If the Government thought it right to deprive him of the profit that he was entitled to under his contract, perhaps as he had said they might have sheltered themselves behind those words, but they could not have honestly done so, and it was evidently in the first instance the desire of the authorities to give him a chance of recouping himself for any loss sustained through the non-completion of the contract. Then there was a quarrel or conversation between the prisoner and Quartermaster Sergeant Wilson. The prisoner had stated that those two men were enemies of his. But that rested merely upon his assertion, and to him it appeared that the manner in which they had given their evidence would be taken by the Court as sufficient proof that they were not animated by any desire to injure him, indeed, that they did not entertain unfriendly feelings towards him. The Court would remember that Taylor had given his evidence reluctantly, he had tried to pass the matter over, and it was only when pressed by the Court that he had admitted that Sergeant Wilson had asked what the one-third was to be deducted for, and had obtained no satisfaction. The way in which he had given his evidence did not show that he had any illwill towards the prisoner. In the same way when Sergeant Wilson gave his evidence, he did not press the matter unduly; it was only after being asked by the Court, and asked in such a manner, that it was clear they meant to have a decided answer, that he admitted having been told in reply to his question to mind his own business, or else to consider himself under arrest. At the time of the quarrel between the prisoner and Sergeant Wilson, the men had made up their compensation lists without deducting the one-third, and the prisoner had told them to do it. They asked what it was for; that was significant. If the custom was such a well-known custom, how was it that those sergeants had not known of it; and if it was a proper custom, why had the prisoner refused to give him a reason for his orders. Of course it might be said that the rough words were only an outcome of temper, but then the misfortune to the prisoner was that all the facts seems to point in the one direction—a desire to keep from others the knowledge that one-third was still being retained by the contractor. Then there was the conversation between Colonel Airey and Colonel Roberts; he did not know that there was any necessity for him to refer to it at great length; but his learned friend had thought it worth his while to recall Colonel Airey and then, having done so, to recall Colonel Roberts, as though for the purpose of contradicting him, so that it evidently appeared to the other side to be a matter of some little weight. But he wanted to know how a custom could possibly be proved in a manner like that? Colonel Airey had been called and asked if he knew of a certain custom, and he had said that he did not. What he was speaking about in the Victoria Barracks a week or two previously he told them had no reference to that question at all. How could a custom be proved in that way? Two officers had been called and both of them had said distinctly that they knew nothing about a custom. Then one of them was told a fortnight ago he had said something quite different, and he replied that he was speaking about something quite different, and that if he had said what he did in reference to this particular case that it would not have been true. And whilst he was speaking of that matter he might say that it seemed to him that greater pains should have been taken by the other side before Colonel Airey was asked the question at all. He had been asked deliberately whether he had not said that he would make short work of the case against Webster. Anything more abominably wicked than to have the power by tendering evidence to put an end to the criminal charge and still to withhold that evidence could hardly be imagined. The question has been reported in the public prints and the insinuation that it had involved had been talked about over the town, and yet what did they find? They found that Colonel Roberts had never heard Colonel Airey say anything of the kind, and that Captain Savage had never heard anything of the kind said either. Surely there could have been no difficulty in getting to know from those officers what the real facts of the case were before Colonel Airey was subjected to a cross-examination like that of the Attorney-General. It did seem to him that Colonel Airey had been treated very improperly.

He now came to the eleventh charge:—That the prisoner had been guilty of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline and that he procured the payment of exorbitant and excessive sum of public money to himself and certain other warrant officers of the New South Wales Artillery, by way of compensation for clothing." They had heard something about custom with regard to that charge too; and, really, one felt inclined to ask, after all that had been said on the subject, "What is a custom?" Did the doing of a thing once constitute a custom? Because those warrant officers were paid in full in the year 1886—all except Tristrum, who for some reason or other was not paid in full—did it follow that they were to be paid in full the next year also? He submitted that to say that involved a gross abuse of the word custom. Because the warrant-officers had upon one occasion been allowed the full amount of compensation, were they always to be allowed full compensation. He did not think that it would be denied for a moment by anybody that the amount paid to the warrant-officers in 1887 was exorbitant exorbitant and excessive that appeared on the face of the matter. In the previous year staff-sergeants and warrant-officers were included in the contract, and if the Court would look at Riley's contract they would find that they were down by name, with the amounts opposite to their names, and that there was no difference in that contract between warrant-officers and staff-sergeants—more than that, they would find that if they turned up Riley's compensation vouchers that there was no difference in that year between the amount actually paid to staff-sergeants and warrant-officers. So there, they had it from the prisoner's own statement that staff-sergeants and warrant-officers were entitled to the same compensation, and that clothing was valued at that year at a sum which would allow a man who took compensation for everything £8 13s. 6d. But the following year they found that staff-sergeants were omitted from the contract, and the first question that he would ask the Court was, how it was that they came to be omitted. Why were they omitted? He would only think of one legitimate answer to that question. It seemed to him that they had been omitted for the purpose of opening the door for the payment of this excessive compensation. If, on the other hand, they had been omitted because they had plenty of clothing in store for warrant-officers and staff-sergeants, that would have been a perfectly proper and legitimate reason. However, when they were left out, why should the fact that they had been left out, because there was clothing in store, have entitled them to higher compensation than they had obtained before? The prisoner said, "You see we are not in the contract this year, so that if we want clothing we should be supplied with enough money to go to a tailor and purchase it," and that notwithstanding the fact that there was plenty of clothing for them in store. If the Court thought that that was how the matter had been brought about, he would ask them to consider that it was no answer to his objection to say that the claim had been endorsed by the Colonial Secretary. It was no excuse to say that the General had authorized it. It would have been no excuse if it had gone to the Governor himself, or to have been placed before Her Majesty the Queen. No doubt the Treasury had plenty of authority for paying the money, but what they had to determine was, how the claim had been preferred and the money procured. As he had already said, the argument had been used that the excessive compensation was fair and reasonable, because staff-sergeants and warrant-officers having been omitted from the contract would have had to get their clothes made out here; but there was a staff-sergeant of the name of Goodall equally entitled to use the same argument, and yet he had only received compensation at the rate at which clothing would have been imported. Why was compensation on the higher scale not procured for Goodall? He submitted that it was because Goodall was not a warrant-officer, like the prisoner, and that therefore there could have been no object in obtaining as large an amount of compensation for him. On the 3rd October, 1888, the prisoner was asked this question by the Board of Inquiry:—"How do you calculate the amount of compensation due to warrant-officers; are they allowed a higher rate than staff-sergeants, and are they entitled to a patrol-jacket annually?" Now, they knew that in the previous year the prisoner had obtained £16 7s. 6d. on the ground that that was the amount which Henderson would have charged had he made the clothes for him. And this was the answer that he gave to that question: "According to schedule for contract price, 1886-1887, tunics, £5; warrant-officers' and staff-sergeants' patrol-jackets, £4; cloth trousers, 23s. 6d.; serge trousers, 14s. They are entitled to a patrol-jacket annually." Inasmuch as the prisoner had really calculated the compensation for warrant-officers on the rate at which Henderson would have made the clothes, and not at the rate at which they would have been imported for at all, that statement was, at all events, untrue. Then he was asked whether he had preferred a demand like one marked H, which had been previously handed in and attached to the proceedings of the Board, signed by himself, to the effect that the items were paid, or due to meet claims for compensation for 1887 and 1888, and why did that document need Captain Savage's signature, and what was his answer? That Captain Savage's signature was attached prior to his, and that he considered it to mean that he had approved as to the correctness of the vouchers, and then he proceeds: "I should suppose that the Colonel Commanding the Artillery Forces, seeing his adjutant's signature, is satisfied therewith as an assurance that the document needing his initials is correct, and the matter is forwarded in the usual way." The prisoner evidently considered that when Colonel Roberts saw the signature of some person in whom he had confidence he would take the voucher as correct, and affix his signature to it without further inquiry. That fact might throw a light upon other circumstances which otherwise would be very difficult to explain. Now, on the 4th October, Webster was asked about the same matter again. He was asked this question: "How are the prices mentioned in the compensation lists for warrant-officers higher than the last contract referred to by you yesterday?" and this was his answer: "The amount of compensation was referred to the contractor to determine. He fixed the price for such garments as shown in the compensation lists. He sent his voucher to Colonel Roberts, by whom they were forwarded to the Paymaster, and submitted to the General, and being returned to my department to reply to certain questions, I therefore knew they had been through these channels. Before the account was duly paid by the contractor, the amount, some £65 odd, was authorized by the Colonial Secretary to be paid. Hence, same amount for individuals has been submitted for the current year. There was a great deal of correspondence before these amounts were put through and got sanctioned." Now, they knew very well that it was the prisoner who supplied the contractor with the materials from which the vouchers were made up. That was a matter that interested the prisoner very closely, and the only question that would arise in his mind was, "How much am I to put down for myself?" He had evidently said to himself, "I am not in the contract; I want to get more this year than I got the year before." So he went to the contractor and asked him how much he would supply certain articles for. The contractor thereupon drew up a voucher, the amount at which he would supply the things. The voucher went to Colonel Roberts, and then to the Treasury, but the Treasury were more wide awake than the prisoner had expected, and they declined to pay the money. Then the voucher went back to Colonel Roberts, and he made a memorandum upon it, after it had been signed as correct by Mr. Webster. In that memorandum Colonel Roberts stated: "The prices here quoted are less than what they have hitherto been charged." But if they looked at Mr. Riley's contract they would find that that was a mistake; the prices were really nearly double what they had previously been charged at. Colonel Roberts had told them that in making that memorandum Colonel Roberts stated that he must have been influenced by his memory. But he also said that he was never told at any time—that it had never been pointed out to him that the compensation for those garments for the previous year had only been half the amount. That was the suppression of a material fact by the prisoner. If it had not been suppressed, did anybody believe for one moment moment that Colonel Roberts would have sanctioned the charges. From the appearance of the document it really looked as if Colonel Roberts was under the impression that the men wanted the garments and not the money. It was very evident, therefore, that he had been misled, and that he had been misled by the prisoner.

The President interposed that a note had been made by the Court to the effect that one witness had explained the difference in the price of warrant officers' clothing by saying that it was now made of better cloth than it used to be.

Mr. Heydon continuing, said that he was aware that there was evidence of a certain character to justify the excessive amount put down by the prisoner in the vouchers of which he was alluding; but the Court would remember that he asked the Major-General particularly whether he knew of any change that would involve greater expense in the dress of warrant officers between the years 1886 and 1887 and the General had stated very positively that there was no change of that nature during those years. There was absolutely no evidence to the effect that the cloth was of a better quality in 1887 than it had been the previous years. Of course it was perfectly natural that the warrant officers would like to get that large amount for their compensation every year, and perhaps, indeed, that they thought that they were entitled to it; but that was a very different thing from any positive evidence to the effect that there was a change in the quality of the cloth or in the design of the garments between the years 1886 and 1887. He therefore put it to the Court, that this was an exorbitant and excessive charge, unauthorized by the General, and passed by nobody but the prisoner. Now, with regard to the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th charges—which all dealt with the same offence. The fifth charge charged the prisoner with having embezzled 15 tunics, 347 cloth trousers, 335 serge trousers, 67 Norfolk jackets, and 113 jumpers, of the value of £800 or thereabouts. That charge was also a distributed charge, and the Court were not bound, in order to convict the prisoner upon it to find that the quantity mentioned there had really been embezzled. In the first of that batch of charges the prisoner was charged with having embezzled the clothing himself. In the second of them at having connived at the embezzlement of the articles. In the third charge with being culpably negligent in keeping the clothing, in consequence of which the deficiency arose. And in the last of the series with having been culpably negligent in keeping the clothing books. The deficiency was a very large one; it was a deficiency of something like £800 worth of goods in the course of two years and a half. Such a large amount of clothing could hardly have gone from the store without the prisoner's knowledge. The deficiency was shown very clearly, but at the same time there had been an attempt to account for it by the evidence of the actuary; and therefore it would be necessary for him to probe the matter rather more fully than he otherwise would have done. First of all they must take into consideration the manner in which the prisoner accounted for the deficiency at the Board of Inquiry. He stated that he balanced his books between the 1st March and the 30th October, and that there was no Survey Board held in the year 1887. The prisoner only balanced his books once a year, just before the Survey Board came round, and it was, to say the least of it, strange that the amounts, according to the books, appeared to be balanced to a single article. Now the evidence as to the deficiency was merely the evidence taken from the prisoner's books and vouchers, and the Court had before it the two statements by the Board of Inquiry and the Actuary. Comparing those two statements it would appear that there were two main lines of difference—one in the receipts and the other in the issues. The difference in the receipts was contained in the list of clothes made and supplied by the master tailor. Of course what was put down in the receipts was a debit against the prisoner, and it was to his interest to make them as small as possible. The Board of Inquiry had found a large deficiency in the cloth, for which the prisoner could not account. Naturally he would perceive that it was a very serious matter, so he accounted for it by supplying two returns—one of them signed by himself and the other in his own handwriting. Those returns had really been prepared by the prisoner, and he wanted to know how it was that someone had suggested to his learned friend that one of them had been supplied by Mr. Little's clerk, whereas, as a matter of fact, it was made up by a corporal in the Brigade Office. Evidently no one but the prisoner had made that suggestion to his learned friend; but the second return was in the prisoner's own handwriting, and he could not get away from that. He stated, however, that Mr. Little had given him the materials from which he was to make it up; but they had heard Mr. Little deny that he had ever done such a thing. Consequently, they had before them those returns, both of them signed by the prisoner, and one of them in his handwriting, so they were justified in taking the statements contained in them as true. And taking those statements as true they found that the receipts were exactly what they were found to be in the table of the Board of Inquiry. In the issues, the main difference lay in the year 1886. Other differences were of such small account that it was hardly worth while inquiring into them. The important question was how the difference had arisen. To his mind it is perfectly clear that the actuary, taking the prisoner's books and not being informed of the books kept by the quarter-master sergeants of the batteries, omitted to take into account the return to the store of 260 suits and a balance of the ninety issued to No. 2 Battery, and in that way the Actuary, roughly speaking, showed a surplus in favour of the prisoner of thirty garments—in other words, he showed that the prisoner issued thirty more garments than he was supposed to have received. But if the number of garments that were returned from the batteries had been debited against the prisoner, there would still have been a deficiency of at least 108. At the same time, in the account placed before the Court by the prosecution of the number of clothes in the prisoner's store, they had taken notice of the fact that the goods had been returned by the battery, and that left the amount at what they said. There was another matter that would make the prisoner's position worse to the extent of about 200 garments. It had been proved that the debits against the prisoner for clothing received from the contractor did not include sergeants nor yet the band, whilst the returns made up by the quarter-master sergeants of batteries did not include the sergeants but did include the band. Consequently the prisoner did not show by his books the receipt of 210 additional garments. On that charge the prisoner was asked (on page 64 of proceedings)—“Whose are the initials under this receipt for a Norfolk jacket to Gunner Hough?” And he answered, “They are those of Battery Quarter-master Sergeant John Taylor.” The erasure by knife was done by me, and was necessitated by having to remove the “G” which was for compensation in order to insert JA for the issue of a Norfolk jacket for alteration. He (the battery quarter-master sergeant, J. Taylor) put those initials in my presence.” Now, Taylor's evidence was that those were not his initials at all. As to what he had said about the band clothing, he would read from the evidence of the prisoner on the 4th October: The prisoner said that he could not show where the clothing for the band was entered in his books as having been been received from the contractor for the current year and for 1886; and, further, that he had none of the above-mentioned clothing on hand on the 1st April, 1886—they had been supplied in the following November by the contractor. Previous to April, 1886, the staff and other sergeants' clothing were made in the Colony, and the band clothing also. Thus it was perfectly clear that he had not been debited with the band clothing. In October, the prisoner was asked what number of tunics, patrol jackets, Norfolk jackets, jumpers, cloth trousers, and serge trousers, had been made from material furnished by the Government during the period that Sergeant Lyttleton had been master tailor, his answer was:—"I can tell by making it up from my books and the master tailor's measurement book and will produce it when the Board meets to take stock." Again on the 15th October, the prisoner was asked for an account of the discrepancy shown on certain tables. In answer he said, "I would like a copy of these documents to enable me to furnish an explanation. I shall require receipts of all materials supplied to my Department. The clerk, my assistant, acting Bombardier Loveless, has been supplied with a duplicate key of the clothing store, by a verbal order of the adjutant, and is allowed to sleep in my store. Having to go every day, Sunday excepted, to Mr. Kidman's to inspect the next day's rations—this is by a Board order—I made no proposition that any one should have a duplicate key of my store. Having to leave my store open I cannot be held responsible for what is issued during my absence. I know, for a fact, that things have been issued and received without my knowledge. I have noticed that in looking round my store. I have found articles of necessaries especially, and clothing received from the master tailor, made up from material irregularly delivered to my store through the clerk Loveless, and no entry to have been made of them until I have made inquiries, hence the new books I compiled to get a more proper receipt and issue of accounts." Now if the prisoner had noticed the things were going on wrongfully why did he not take a more frequent balance, and see that things were not issued in that irregular way. But that statement was quite inconsistent with another made by the prisoner on the 19th November. It was then said to him, "You complained in your former evidence that your responsibility was not complete, in fact that it was not the same since your clerk had a duplicate key of and allowed to sleep in your store. To whom then did you first complain, and when and to whom did you raise an objection to this arrangement which you allege reduced your responsibility for the store, previously admitted to be under your sole charge." To this the prisoner said, "I never objected to this arrangement." Then he is asked if he did not propose it, and answered "Yes, I did propose that Loveless should have a duplicate key." [The Board then reminded him that on the 15th inst. he had stated that he had made no proposition that anyone should have a duplicate key of the store, and they asked him to which statement he intended to adhere. His answer was, "I made no proposition; the proposition was in the first place made by the adjutant, in order that during my absence he could refer to books, &c., in the Brigade store." According to that it would appear that Loveless was to be held responsible for the deficiency in the clothing.

Coming to the last charge of all, the ninth charge, which charged the prisoner with directing and conniving at the exorbitant charges of master tailor Lyttleton—of course that charge, he might say, included a charge against two people, as far as they could include a charge against two people when they were only trying one, at all events as far as the prisoner was concerned—was that he directed and connived at these excessive and exorbitant charges on the part of the master tailor. They arose in two ways. First of all, the master tailor had been allowed to charge for remakes at the price of makes when he was not entitled to charge for them as such, and he had not only done so, but he had charged for an excessive number of remakes. He found it such a profitable transaction that he wanted to reduce the number as much as possible. If he established either charge it would be enough for his purpose, so he would take the first. No authority whatever had been shown by the other side for making extensive alterations at the price that would be paid for making new garments. Indeed, there was a garrison order in existence the terms of which were perfectly plain and explicit, giving a scale of making garments, and for fitting and altering garments, but giving no authority for charging for remakes at the price of makes. That law which had been promulgated by the proper authorities had never been repealed. They had discovered, however, it came to be disregarded. Behan had told them that that scale would never pay, and that he could not go on altering garments to the extent of remaking them at the rate of 1s. 9d. Consequently he had a conversation with Webster about it. He told Webster that he must charge at a higher rate, and Webster said, "Well it cannot be helped." That was the custom originated in 1885. But what they had to consider was the fact that it was not the quartermaster-sergeant's duty to authorize any charge above that referred to in garrison order. Whilst that order was in force it was law and binding upon everybody, and the prisoner had no more right to allow those excessive charges than to have gone into the street and to have picked anybody's pocket. On the 26th June the prisoner was asked by the Board of Inquiry what the scale of charges was, and on that occasion he gave the charges as they appeared in the garrison order. Then he went on and said that for any "extensive alterations" the following scale was allowed—and he gave a list of figures, which included the 18s. for altering rank and file tunics. Then he gave some evidence which was certainly very important. He said,—“From my knowledge of tailoring I assessed an amount for the different alterations from the scale laid down above. The high rate as compared with the Imperial Office was rendered necessary from the enforced employment of civilian labour in the tailor's shop.” Thus it would appear that the prisoner, and only he, was the person who made the allowance, and that he, and only he, from his knowledge of tailoring, assessed the amount. On the 29th of the same month he produced a garrison order, and stated that the material for making up all alteration is paid for by Government, and is ordered on the annual contract on requisition as required. This, of course, is extra to amounts laid down as above, gas and fuel being also paid for by the Government. The master tailor's accounts are first rendered to them, and I examine them and certify to their correctness or otherwise and take them to the brigade adjutant for signature of the colonel commanding. The accounts are then forwarded to the paymaster for payment. Copies of the accounts are filed in my office. On the 9th July the prisoner told the Board that he produced the rough notes from which he made up the master tailor's bills. And lastly, when further questioned by the Board, he stated that the master tailor kept no books excepting the measurement book. In answer to the question by whose authority has the item remaking been introduced, said the authority was quoted in the garrison order of the 5th June, 1883, signed J. A. Compton, Acting Brigade Major. Thus it was very evident that the prisoner and nobody else was responsible for those excessive charges, and that he had clearly allowed them without any authority whatever. If further proof were required of the prisoner's responsibility it would be found in the statement

statement that the material supplied to the master tailor was supplied by the Government and expended by him; that the whole of the master tailor's shop was under his sole charge and direction, and that no one could go into it without his permission. Undoubtedly the disobedience of that garrison order of the 5th June, 1883, and the charge for remaking garments had been entirely owing to the prisoner. It was quite true that Colonel Roberts, if he had expressly authorized the prisoner to allow those charges, would have removed the blame from his shoulders, but he had not done so, and even Colonel Roberts would have no authority to go behind the garrison order. The excessive charges spoke for themselves—when the force was at its weakest the master tailor's bills were at their highest—and they knew that Lyttleton had refunded a large sum of money. The only question was whether those enormously excessive charges could have gone on without the prisoner's knowledge, and submitted to the Court that that was impossible.

The Court then adjourned until Thursday, the 28th day of March, to enable the Judge-Advocate (Major H. B. Lassetter) to prepare his summing up.

On Thursday, 28th March, at 10 a.m., the Court reassembled pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The same members as before.

The Judge-Advocate (Major H. B. Lassetter) makes the following summing up:—

The prisoner (Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant William Webster) has been arraigned before the Court on eleven different charges, to each of which he has pleaded "not guilty." The whole case is one of great complication, but after the able addresses which have been delivered by the Attorney-General and Mr. Heydon I do not propose to detain the Court by summing up at great length, merely intending to lay before them the evidence for and against the prisoner in order to enable the members to come to a true and just finding on each and every charge. As the Court have already been informed, the charges against the prisoner, although eleven in number, are practically reduced to six.

The first charge brought under the notice of the Court was charge 10, being "Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in that the prisoner was aware that Messrs. Henderson & Co. (the clothing contractors for the year 1887) obtained a large sum of money,—to wit, £114 16s. 3d., to which they were not entitled, and that the prisoner did conceal this fact from his superior officers."

The prosecution proved that, under a certain contract, Henderson & Co. were to supply articles of clothing for the New South Wales Artillery, and that they received as payment for the same the sum of £2,004 4s. 5d. This contract appears to have been carried out. The prosecution contend that when this contract was completed Henderson & Co. were not entitled (under the terms of their contract) to supply any further garments, and were therefore not entitled to retain one-third of the cost of the garments contained in the voucher for £344 8s. 10d. The defence admit that the contractors retained the sum of £114 16s. 3d. for their own use; but contend that they were entitled to do so by the custom that obtained in the Force for many years, in fact since the formation of the artillery; and, further, that the officers of the corps knew of this custom and allowed it. The prosecution assert that although compensation was paid in former years, it was paid on very different grounds; that the contractors were then entitled to supply the clothing for which compensation was claimed; and that the one-third was retained as the profit they would have made if they had been allowed to complete their contract with the Government. To prove that the officers of the Force did not know of the custom, the prosecution called Colonel Roberts, who states that he did not know what the contractor got the one-third for, and that the prisoner did not tell him until lately that Henderson, for merely putting in his voucher, got the one-third. Captain Savage said that he was ignorant of the practice, and General Richardson stated that he first heard of this custom just before the Court of Inquiry was held. To convict the prisoner on this charge the Court must satisfy themselves that they knew that Henderson & Co. were obtaining this sum of £114 16s. 3d. improperly, that it was done with his connivance, and that he neglected to inform his superior officers of this fact.

I will now proceed to the charges connected with the sum alleged to have been paid by Henderson to the prisoner for the purpose of paying the compensation to the men of the Artillery.

The first charge is for embezzling the sum of £9 12s. 2d. out of a sum of £229 12s. 7d. paid to the prisoner by Henderson. The second charge (laid under section 40 of the Army Act) is an act to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in having paid away the sum of £9 12s. 2d. without due authority. The fourth (under the same section as the second charge) is for being culpably negligent in keeping the compensation accounts for clothing, so that there was a deficiency of £9 12s. 2d.; the second and fourth charges are alternative to the first charge. The prisoner cannot (according to law) be found guilty of all three, but he can be partly guilty of one and partly guilty of the others. Before proceeding to review the evidence on these charges it will be as well to explain to the Court what the law of embezzlement is. The law says:—

"Whoever being a clerk or servant, who shall have fraudulently misapplied or disposed of money or goods entrusted to his care, shall be guilty of embezzlement." On a charge of embezzlement the fraudulent conversion of the money or goods charged to be embezzled may be inferred by the Court, either from the fact that the accused person has not handed them over or accounted for them in the ordinary course, or from the fact of his having falsely accounted for it, or from the fact that on examination of his accounts there is a general deficiency, for which he is unable to account.

The evidence adduced by the prosecution was that the prisoner had obtained the sum of £229 12s. 7d. from Henderson and Co., and by the evidence of Colonels Airey, Spalding, and Murphy, we see that the prisoner paid to those officers a total sum of £220 0s. 5d., leaving a sum of £9 12s. 2d. in his hands. This sum the prisoner is charged with embezzling. Having received this money from the contractors, it was his duty to account for it. The learned counsel for the prosecution has read to the Court the different explanations made by the prisoner to clear up this amount. These explanations the prisoner made before a Court of Inquiry ordered by the General Officer Commanding to assemble to inquire into and report upon the system of clothing in force in the New South Wales Artillery. I need not allude to these statements in detail, as they were sworn to by Colonel Eden in his examination-in-chief, and have been quoted by Mr. Heydon in his reply. With regard, however, to these various statements and explanations before this Court of Inquiry, the learned Attorney-General has urged in defence that the prisoner was flurried when under examination by the Board, and that the statements made by Mr. Webster were not voluntary, but were wrung from him by severe cross-examination on the part of the President and members of this Board. If these statements were not made voluntary and without compulsion they are inadmissible as evidence against him. I would point out to the Court that in the rules laid down for the conduct of Courts of Inquiry (Rule of Procedure, 123) it is stated that:—

“Whenever any inquiry affects the character of an officer or soldier, full opportunity must be afforded to such officer or soldier of being present throughout the inquiry, of cross-examining witnesses whose evidence, in his opinion, affects his character, and producing any witness in defence of his character.” This does not appear to have been done, and I leave it to the Court to decide whether the prisoner had the proper opportunity of making his statement to the Board. The prosecution also produced a letter (Exhibit No. 20) written by the prisoner to his Commanding Officer, offering to refund the sum of £9 12s. 3d. In his letter he expresses a hope that the Major-General will be pleased to forgive what was, on his part, purely an oversight and carelessness. The defence now say that when this was written the prisoner was unable to find any document to account for the deficiency. They now produce a receipt from Sergeant Lynch for the sum of £4 1s. 10d., from Bombardier Loveless for £2 10s. 6d. These men swore that the signatures on the receipt were theirs, and this leaves a sum of £2 19s. 10d. To account for this balance the prisoner says in his statement, “I paid the sum of £2 10s. 6d. to a man called Burgess, and obtained a receipt from him. I have searched high and low for this receipt, but cannot find it anywhere.” He also says that he paid the remaining 9s. 4d. to a gunner, and that he cannot now recollect his name. Colonel Roberts says, in answer to the Attorney-General, that when taking down the summary of evidence before the trial that Mr. Webster informed him that he had paid Burgess the sum before mentioned. This is not actual evidence that Burgess received the money, and it is a question for the Court as to whether it is a satisfactory way to account for it. Mr. Heydon (for the prosecution) suggested that the receipt alleged to be signed by Lynch was a very suspicious document, and asked why it was not produced before. The defence state that they were unable to find it until the last moment. Lynch was undoubtedly paid the sum of £2 15s. 5d. for compensation by Lieutenant Bridges at Middle Head; and he says in his evidence that he does not think he has been paid twice. In cross-examination by the Attorney-General, he admits that the receipt produced by the prisoner was in his handwriting, and that he would not sign the receipt if he had not obtained the money. Now, as to the second charge, viz., paying away the £9 12s. 2d. without due authority.

On behalf of the prosecution, Colonel Spalding states, “I did not authorize the payment of any money as compensation for clothing to any other men than appear in the list. The payments to Bombardier Loveless were unauthorized by me.” He also says that he can only speak from hearsay about the amounts paid to other men. The other officers commanding batteries, also say that they did not authorise any payments to the men outside the compensation list.

In answer to this, the defence states that the payment was authorised by the prisoner's Commanding Officer; Colonel Roberts states that he did not authorise the payment to the men by name, but that he gave general instructions that all compensation should be paid by the prisoner to the men entitled to the same, and it was apparently on this that the learned Attorney-General relied. Colonel Roberts further said that he did not give a deliberate order that the men were to be paid behind the backs of their Battery Officers. The question for the Court is whether this was proper authority or not. Charge 4 is also connected with the sum of £9 12s. 2d. Mr. Heydon (for the prosecution) contends that this charge is practically admitted by the prisoner in his letter [Exhibit No. 20] to Colonel Roberts, dated 4 February, 1889. The prisoner's answer to this charge is the same as to the first charge, viz., that the money was not deficient, and it was paid away by him.

Charge 3 is being privy to the making of a false statement in a pay voucher, the accuracy of which it was the prisoner's duty to ascertain.

To convict on this charge the prosecution must prove.

Firstly—That the prisoner was bound to acquaint himself with its contents.

Secondly—That the statement was false.

And lastly that it was made out with the consent of the prisoner, with the full intent of carrying out the fraud specified.

It appears that the officers commanding batteries send in a list for compensation for clothing to enable the compensation voucher to be drawn up. By Quartermaster Little's evidence it seems that this voucher (initialled by the prisoner) differs from the battery lists, giving an excess of different articles of clothing to the value of £16 5s. 1d., or a cash excess of £15 13s. 4d., and Mr. Heydon maintains that these extra articles of clothing should not be inserted in the voucher. The defence urge that some men entitled to compensation were not inserted in the battery lists, and that in order to expedite the payment the prisoner (by order of Colonel Roberts) directed Messrs. Henderson & Co. to insert these names in the voucher. Colonel Roberts says on this point, in answer to the Attorney-General, “It might happen that under these circumstances the omission of these names would would cause a delay, and it would not be an unusual thing to include the names of men (not in the battery lists) in the voucher forwarded to the Treasury. The garments, according to the evidence of Mr. Little, are in excess of the numbers paid for as compensation to Lynch, Loveless, Burgess, and the unknown gunner.

Charge nine is for directing and conniving at excessive and exorbitant charges made by Sergeant-master-tailor Lyttleton.

The prosecution state that by a garrison order the only authorized scale of payments to the master tailor was for altering and fitting and for making garments. They contend that there was no authority but the authority of the prisoner for the charges for remakes. On this point Sergeant Lyttleton says that his accounts were made up by the prisoner and his clerks according as each garment required a make or a remake, that the prisoner valued them and by that means his accounts were made up. Mr. Heydon contends that Behan's evidence proves that there was no authority for the commencement of this charge for remakes, and that as Sergeant Lyttleton was under the prisoner that these charges were carried out under his direction.

General Richardson, in his evidence, says: "I was not aware that charges were being made by the master tailor for remaking garments on the same scale as for making them, and I would not have authorized it. It would be necessary to issue a garrison order to authorize such an alteration as that." Captain Savage states: "I do not know of any writing at all purporting to be an authority for remakes."

The prisoner, in his statement, says: "The master tailor's charges for remaking, when extreme alterations were made, was according to a scale which I was under the impression was duly authorized many years back. It was no benefit to me for the master tailor to get more than he was entitled to."

The order about the scale of charges was issued in 1883, after the prisoner was quartermaster-sergeant.

To find the prisoner guilty of this charge the Court must fully satisfy themselves that the prisoner actually directed and connived at these charges, and that they were both exorbitant and unauthorized.

Charge eleven is conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in that the prisoner procured the payment of an exorbitant and excessive sum to himself and other warrant-officers by way of compensation for clothing in the year 1887.

The compensation paid in the year 1887 appears to have been greater than in the year 1886, and the prosecution states that this charge was unauthorized by anyone. The question for the Court is, whether the prisoner procured these charges, and if so, were they exorbitant, excessive, and unauthorized.

Major-General Richardson says: "I cannot remember whether I authorized any change in the quality or pattern of the warrant-officer's uniform between 1886 and 1887. I am not aware of any order justifying an increase in the cost of warrant-officers' clothing from some £8 odd in 1885 to £16 odd in 1887. If I had made such an order I think I should have remembered it." On the back of Exhibit No. 33 there appears some correspondence on the subject of this increased compensation. The prosecution contend that the memo. written by Colonel Roberts was written on information given by the prisoner. Colonel Roberts in this memo. states that the prices are less than have hitherto been charged, and that this is the price the contractor would charge if the warrant-officers had to buy their own uniform. Sergeant Goodall (a staff-sergeant) appears to have only received compensation at the rate of two-thirds of the contract rate for 1886, whereas the warrant-officers obtained the amount of £16 7s. 6d. without any deduction whatever. In reply to this the prisoner calls Colonel Roberts, who states: "The mounting for staff-sergeants and warrant-officers are quite different, and that the warrant-officers' clothing is of a very much better kind of cloth, in fact their tunic is nearer approaching an officer's tunic than anybody else's." In cross-examination by Mr. Heydon, Colonel Roberts states that when he said in his memo. of June 8th, 1887, that the prices quoted (viz., £16 7s. 6d.) were less than in former years, he wrote from memory, and he was not informed at the time that these garments had been in the contract for the previous year at something like half the price.

The last group of charges that I have to deal with are those comprised under charges 5.

In the fifth charge the prisoner is charged with embezzling public goods. The prosecution submit that according to the evidence taken from the prisoner's books, and from the statements made by him, there appears to be a large deficiency of clothing, amounting to the quantities shown in the charge.

The defence to answer this called an actuary (Mr. Roberts) who has made calculations which differ from those submitted by the prosecution, as shown in Quartermaster Little's evidence. The actuary and Mr. Little differ mainly in two particulars—one in a line of issues, and the other in a line of receipts. The actuary's calculations show that instead of the prisoner having a deficiency he has a surplus. The line of receipt in which the two evidences differ is in the quantities received by the prisoner from the master tailor. The actuary states that he has taken these amounts from the books in the prisoner's office. The difference in the line of issues involves the question of the clothing issue in bulk to the batteries. The prisoner has debited No. 1 Battery with 180 garments, No. 2 with 90, No. 3 with 180, and also a few individual issues, some 60 or 70. Mr. Heydon maintains that it is shown by the evidence of the officers commanding batteries, and their respective quartermaster-sergeants, that these garments were issued in bulk, and that the two lots of 180 were returned to the prisoner, and also a balance of the 90. The actuary does not appear to have taken these into consideration. It appears that some of the above clothing was reissued, and is summarized by the returns furnished by the quartermaster-sergeant, and laid before the Court. These non-commissioned officers further swore that the only clothing they received from the prisoner was what appeared as issued in the battery books.

No evidence appears to have been offered by the prosecutor on charge 6, the charge for conniving at the embezzlement.

Charges

Charges 7 and 8 are alternative charges to charge 5. Charge 7 is for keeping the clothing in a culpably negligent manner and causing the deficiency mentioned in the fifth charge. Charge 8 is for keeping the clothing books in a culpable and negligent manner.

The Court have had full evidence before them as to how the books were kept, and I need not go into this matter.

In conclusion, I would remind the Court that the burden of proof rests with the prosecution, and they are bound to prove in substance and in fact every essential part of the case. Seven of these charges are laid under section 40 of the Army Act. Heading a charge in the words of this section does not constitute an offence, and as this heading is of very comprehensive application, it especially behoves the members of this Court to carefully consider whether the act, conduct, or neglect is really and substantially to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, and if they think that it is not, they are bound to acquit him.

Every officer that has given evidence before you has spoken of the uniformly good character borne by the prisoner—they state that they have always found him to be an honorable, straightforward, and upright man. We have before the Court testimonials signed by the prisoner's commanding officer in the Royal Marines, and also by the captains of the various ships in which he has served, stating that his character has always been that of a thoroughly good soldier in every sense of the word. Taking this high character into their most earnest consideration, I must ask the Court to give a verdict of acquittal on any charge on which in their minds any conscientious and reasonable doubt may arise.

The Court then closed to consider their finding.

Finding.

- (1.) Guilty. THE Court find that the prisoner, No. 95, William Webster, Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant, Warrant Officer, New South Wales Artillery, is guilty of the first charge, with the exception that he did not embezzle the sum of £6 12s. 4d.
- (2.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the second charge, with the exception that he did not without due authority pay away the sum of £2 19s. 10d.
- (3.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the third charge.
- (4.) Not guilty. That the said prisoner is not guilty of the fourth charge.
- (5.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the fifth charge, with the exception that he did not embezzle public goods to the value of £253 7s. 9d.
- (6.) Not guilty. That the said prisoner is not guilty of the sixth charge.
- (7.) Not guilty. That the said prisoner is not guilty of the seventh charge.
- (8.) Not guilty. That the said prisoner is not guilty of the eighth charge.
- (9.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the ninth charge.
- (10.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the tenth charge.
- (11.) Guilty. That the said prisoner is guilty of the eleventh charge.

Proceedings on Conviction—Evidence of Character, &c.

THE Court being reopened the prisoner is again brought before it.

Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie being reminded of his former oath is further examined:—

2211. The President: Have you any evidence to produce as to character and particulars of service of the prisoner? By witness: Yes, I will call Captain Savage.

Captain and Adjutant Savage, of the New South Wales Artillery, being reminded of his former oath, hands in a written statement:—

The above statement with the schedule of convictions is read, marked, and signed by the President and attached to the proceedings.

2212. Is the prisoner the person named in the statement which you have read? Yes.

2213. Have you compared the above statement with the regimental books? Yes.

2214. Are they true extracts from the regimental books and is the statement of entries in the defaulter's book a fair and true summary of those entries? Yes.

The prisoner declines to cross-examine this witness.

[The witness withdraws.]

The Court is closed to consider the sentence.

Sentence.

THE Court sentence the prisoner, No. 95, Brigade Quartermaster-sergeant William Webster, Warrant Officer, New South Wales Artillery, to be reduced to the ranks, and further to be imprisoned, with hard labour, for one year.

Signed at Dawes Battery, Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, this twenty-eighth day of March, 1889.

H. B. LASSETTER, Major,
Permanent Mounted Infantry
(Major South Staffordshire Regt. of Foot),
Judge Advocate.

E. BINGHAM, Colonel,

CABLE FOR TORPEDO PURPOSES.
(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING TENDERS FOR.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 5 March, 1889.

The Honorable Jno. M. Creed, M.L.C., to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

29 December, 1887.

Will you please ascertain as quickly as possible whether tenders were called for the supply of 30 knots of cable supplied by Messrs. Johnson and Phillips, 14 Union Court, Old Broad-street, E.C., for torpedo purposes—invoice dated July 7, 1885. It is highly desirable that this information should be obtained before the Select Committee on Torpedo Defence makes its report, which it is hoped will be done immediately on the resumption of Parliament.

I am, &c.,

JNO. M. CREED,
Chairman.

The Clerk of Select Committees, Legislative Council, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Sydney, 13 January, 1888.

I am directed by the Chairman of the Select Committee on the "Torpedo Defences of the Colony," to ask if you have yet obtained from the Agent-General's Office the information asked for by him, as to whether tenders were called for the supply of armoured cable in 1885 for the use of the Torpedo Corps.

I have, &c.,

E. A. GARLAND,
For the Clerk of Select Committees.

Inform them the information appears of such an unusual character that the Colonial Secretary would be glad to be informed for what special purpose it is required before incurring the expense of obtaining it by cable.—H.P., 16/1/88.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Clerk of Select Committees, Legislative Council.

Sir,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 17 January, 1888.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 13th instant, requesting that certain information may be obtained from the Agent-General, regarding armoured cable for the use of the Torpedo Corps, for the Select Committee on the Torpedo Defences of the Colony, I am directed to inform you that the information appears of such an unusual character that the Colonial Secretary would be glad to be informed for what special purpose it is required before incurring the expense of obtaining it by cable.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,
Principal Under Secretary.

The Acting Agent-General to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, 5, Westminster Chambers, Westminster, S.W., 2 March, 1888.

I have the honor to inform you that I have been "asked by the Honorable John Mildred Creed, M.L.C. (Chairman of the Committee of the Legislative Council to inquire into the purchase, &c., of cables), to furnish to him certain particulars in regard to the cables purchased through this Department." The information asked for I enclose herein, and request that you will be so good as to cause the same to be forwarded to Mr. Creed.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL COOPER.

Shall these be forwarded to Dr. Creed?—C.W., 10/4/88.

[Enclosures.]

Sir, 5, Westminster Chambers, Westminster, S.W., 2 March, 1888.

Sample of cable,
30 knots.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th January last, No. 88-18, asking to be informed with full particulars in regard to the 30 knots of cable, and 6 knots of seven-core multiple cable, ordered in the Honorable the Colonial Secretary's despatch, No. 85-212 of the 10th January, 1885; and 3 miles of 50 conductor cable, ordered in despatch No. B 84-7,208 of 30th June, 1884.

In response to your request I append hereto full particulars in reference to the three cables in question, which I trust will meet with your requirements.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL COOPER.

The Honorable John Mildred Creed, M.L.C., &c.,

Chairman, Committee of Legislative Council to inquire into the purchase, &c., of cables.

INQUIRY by Select Committee of Legislative Council into "the purchase, storage, and present condition of insulated cable," the property of the New South Wales Government.

Memoranda in answer to questions raised in letter of the Honorable J. M. Creed, M.L.C., M.R.C.S., Chairman of Select Committee, addressed to the Agent-General for New South Wales, dated 16th January, 1888, No. 88-18.

RE purchase, &c., by Agent-General for New South Wales of 30 knots of single core armoured copper conductor, ordered in C.S. despatch, No. 85-212, of 10th January, 1885.

Question.

- (1.) Whether tenders were called for the supply of 30 knots of cable ordered in C.S. despatch, No. 85-212, dated 10th January, 1885, Torpedo Branch?
- (2.) If not, was it ordered direct from the manufacturers, Messrs. Johnson and Phillips, 14, Union Court, Old Broad-street, E.C., who supplied it, accompanied by invoice dated 7th July, 1885.
- (3.) If ordered direct from this firm without tenders being called by whose recommendation was this order given to them?
- (4.) Furnish copies of all the papers in the possession of your office, and any other information which can be procured relating to the purchase of this cable.

Answer.

- (1.) Yes.
Upon receipt of this indent from the Honorable the Colonial Secretary it was referred to Major-General Steward, R.E., who recommended that the undermentioned firms should be invited to tender for the 30 knots of cable in question, and on the 7th April, 1885, tenders were received from the firms referred to, viz., Messrs. W. T. Henley & Co. (Limited) the India-rubber Gutta-percha and Telegraphic Works Co. (Limited), Messrs. Siemens Bros.
- Copies of those tenders are appended hereto, marked respectively A, B, & C. (In connection therewith see also documents marked A, B, C 1 and A, B, C 2.)
- On the 20th of the same month an estimate was received by the Agent-General, through Major F. C. Cracknell (then on a visit to England) from Messrs. Johnson & Phillips of 14, Union Court, E.C., for the supply of the same description of cable (See documents annexed, marked D, E, and F.)
- The whole of the foregoing documents were submitted to Major Cracknell for consideration, and the paper marked G contains a copy of his recommendation.
- A copy of the acceptance of Messrs. Johnson and Phillips' tender is hereto appended, marked H.
- Copies of the following correspondence, having reference to the inspection of the cable are also attached, viz. :—
- Letter from Messrs. Johnson & Phillips, dated 1st May, 1885.—I.
- Agent-General to Major Cracknell, 5th May, 1885.—J.
- Minute by Major Cracknell to Agent-General, 14th May, 1885.—K.
- Agent-General to Johnson & Phillips, 15th May, 1885.—L.
- Johnson & Phillips to Agent-General, 12th June, 1885.—M.
- Agent-General to Major Cracknell.—N.
- Major Cracknell to Agent-General.—O.
- Invoice of Messrs. Johnson & Phillips—certified by Major Cracknell.—P.

TENDER.

To the Agent-General for New South Wales, 5, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, S.W.,—

Sir,

We hereby undertake and agree to manufacture and supply for the Government of New South Wales, and to deliver properly and securely packed for shipment to Sydney, and in good order and condition, free on board in London, the several goods mentioned on the other side, or such of them as you may accept this tender for at the respective prices set opposite to the description of the same respectively, and that the same shall be ready for shipment within the times set opposite to the description of the same respectively, and be subject to inspection during their manufacture and to approval on their completion by you or your nominee.

We

We will advise you where the goods are being manufactured, and afford you all such facilities and means as you or your nominee may require for the inspection and testing of the same, and of the materials of which the same are being manufactured, and will observe and comply with any directions which you or your nominee may from time to time give with reference to such goods or materials.

We will also, within the time or times respectively named for the goods ordered by you to be ready for shipment, send you particulars of the weight, dimensions, and mode of packing, and five copies of invoice, so that you may send the necessary shipping instructions for the goods, when approved, and we undertake and agree to deliver the said goods, or any of them, as you may require, free on board, from time to time, within seven days after receipt of your shipping instructions.

And we hereby guarantee that any goods supplied under this tender shall be of our own manufacture, and of the best quality and workmanship, and shall comply in all respects with the description given below, and with any other instructions given by or on behalf of the New South Wales Government; and we undertake and agree that no approval by you, or on your behalf, nor any payment made to us in respect of such goods shall in any manner, or to any extent, prejudice any claim or demand which you or the Government of New South Wales may have against us in the event or in consequence of the goods supplied not being properly or securely packed, or not being duly and punctually ready for shipment, or not being such as is hereby guaranteed.

It is understood and agreed that payment is to be made within seven days after receipt by you of clean bills of lading.

It is also understood and agreed that if we should at any time sublet the work, or any part of it, or fail to comply with your orders or instructions in accordance with this tender, if accepted wholly or in part, you are to be at liberty to rescind the contract wholly or in part, and to obtain elsewhere the goods or any of them not then approved by you, or if approved, not shipped within the time limited; and we will pay any increased costs and expenses which may be incurred by reason of our default.

Yours, &c.,

MEMO. by Major-General Steward, R.E., to Agent-General, respecting the tenders for 30 knots single-core cable, invited from the Indian-rubber, Gutta-percha, &c., Company, Messrs. Siemens Bros. & Co., and Henley's Telegraph Works, &c., Company.

Agent-General,—

With reference to the 30 knots of single-core cable required by Colony, tape covering is specified for the protecting wires. As this takes up less room than hemp, it will be necessary to increase number of protecting wires from eight to ten. This has been done in the wires recently supplied to the War Department. Unless done the covering will be incomplete.

Notification to the firms invited to tender will be necessary.

E. HARDING STEWARD,

Major-General, 26/3/85.

The Agent-General for New South Wales, 5, Westminster Chambers, S.W.

G.

I forward you a sample of a cable, single core, armour coated, for submarine mining, manufactured by Messrs. Johnson & Phillips, which is in every way suitable for the purpose, and in every respect as good a cable as that specified for by the Government of New South Wales, and I recommend that the thirty knots ordered be sent out of this kind, the price being much lower than the one quoted (vide Submarine Mining Manual, 1880, page 344), Class F.

Its purchase, &c., by Agent-General for New South Wales, of 6 knots of seven core multiple cable copper conductor, ordered in C.S. despatch, No. 85-212, of 10th January, 1885.

Question:—

(1.) Whether tenders were called for the supply of 6 knots of seven core multiple cable, ordered in C.S. despatch, No. 85-212, dated 10th January, 1885. Torpedo Branch?

(2.) If not, was it ordered direct from the manufacturers, Messrs. Siemens Bros., who supplied it?

(3.) If ordered direct from this firm without tenders being called, by whose recommendation was this order given to them?

(4.) Furnish copies of all the papers in the possession of your office; and any other information which can be procured relating to the purchase of this cable?

Answer:—

(1.) Yes.

Upon receipt of this indent from the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, it was referred to Major-General Steward, R.E., who recommended that the undermentioned firms should be invited to tender for the 6 knots of seven core multiple cable copper conductor in question, and on the 7th April, 1885, tenders were received from the firms referred to, viz.:—Messrs. W. T. Henley & Co. (Limited), the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works Co. (Limited), Messrs. Siemens Bros.

Copies of those tenders are appended hereto, marked respectively No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3.* These tenders were then referred to Major Cracknell for consideration, and on the 22nd April, 1885, that gentleman recommended the acceptance of Messrs. Siemens' tender. See copy of letter herewith, and copy of acceptance of tender, numbered respectively 4 and 5.†

F. 1256, 6 knot cable.

Sir,

5, Westminster Chambers, 7 July, 1885.

I have the honor to inform you that an order has been placed by me with Messrs. Siemens Brothers and Co., of 12, Queen Anne's Gate, S.W., for the supply of 6 knots of seven-core multiple cable, copper conductor, 20 B.W.G., four strand in each conductor, india-rubber hooper core, armour 18, No. 9 galvanized iron wires, each covered with tape and two servings of hemp, and covered with a composition of pitch and tar, and I shall feel extremely obliged if you will be so good as to allow an officer of the Submarine Mining Branch of your Department to test and report upon the cable, which is now ready.

I shall of course be prepared, on behalf of my Government, to repay the cost of any expenses which may be incurred in carrying out the tests.

I have, &c.,

SAUL SAMUEL.

The Under Secretary of State for War, War Office, S.W.

12.

Sir, In reference to your letter of the 7th instant, desiring that an officer of the Submarine Mining Branch of this Department might test and report upon certain cable ordered of Messrs. Siemens Bros. & Co. for the Government of New South Wales, I am directed by the Secretary of State for War to acquaint you that the cable in question has been examined and that the accompanying tables of tests (Nos. 1 and 2) show the results.

Re

Re Requisition as to purchase by Agent-General of $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles of 50-conductor cable supplied by Callender's Bitumen Telegraph and Waterproof Company, Limited. Invoice to Agent-General, dated 8th July, 1885, ordered in Despatch No. B 7447, dated 30th June, 1884; and the like as to $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles of 50-conductor cable supplied by the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works, Limited. Invoice of about the same date, ordered by same Despatch.

THE Indent received by the Agent-General in letter B 7447 of 30th June, 1884, from the Honorable the Postmaster-General, Sydney, was for 3 miles of 50-core Multiple Cable, Callender's Bitumen and Waterproof Patent, at £480 per mile, to be obtained from the makers, Callender's Bitumen Telegraph and Waterproof Company, Limited, 101, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.

A tender was invited from that Company, and on the 30th August, 1884, the same was sent in to the Agent-General, together with a letter dated 29th idem, copies of which documents are attached hereto, marked respectively A 1 and A 2.

The tender and letter were then referred to Mr. Preece, of the General Post Office, London, on the 30th August, 1884, for examination, and on the 1st September following Mr. Preece returned the same with his recommendation endorsed thereon (copy attached, marked A 3).

On the same date (1st September, 1884) the order was placed with the Callender's Bitumen Telegraph and Waterproof Company, Limited, for 3 miles of cable at £400 per mile (copy of acceptance of tender herewith marked A 4).

A letter was received on the 8th January, 1885, from Mr. Preece, stating that the Callender's Bitumen Telegraph, &c., Company were unable to make this cable to his specification, and enclosing a letter from that firm, addressed to himself, dated 5th idem, to that effect. (See copy letters marked respectively A 5 and A 6.)

As Major Cracknell was, at this time, expected in England, the Agent-General wrote to Mr. Preece suggesting that the matter should remain in abeyance until Mr. Cracknell's arrival. (Copy attached, marked A 7.)

On the 15 April, 1885, Mr. Preece wrote to the Agent-General, and suggested that an order for $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles of cable should be given to "The India-rubber, Cutter-percha, and Telegraphic Works Company, Limited," and that an order for a similar quantity should be placed with "The Callender's Bitumen Telegraph and Waterproof Company, Limited" (a copy of this sent herewith, marked A 8).

Mr. Cracknell attached a minute, to the above letter, containing his recommendation on the subject, (copy appended, marked A 9).

Copies of the tenders of the abovenamed firms are hereto attached, marked respectively, A 10 and A 11.

Copies of the acceptances of those tenders are also attached, marked respectively A 12 and A 13.

The following documents are herewith enclosed, viz:—

Copy of letter from Callender's Bitumen, Telegraph, &c., Company, reporting cable ready for inspection—"A 14."

Minutes thereon as to inspection—"A 15."

Report of inspection, by Mr. Preece, of cable at the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, &c., Company's Works—"A 16."

On the 6th January, 1885, the Agent-General wrote to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, and furnished answers to certain questions which had been asked in the Legislative Assembly, Sydney, respecting this order for 3 miles of cable; and on the 3rd February following the Agent-General furnished to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary the opinion of Dr. J. Hopkinson, F.R.S.C.E., as to the value of the two samples of the cable under notice.

TENDER.

To the Agent-General for New South Wales, 5, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, S.W.,—

Sir,

101, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C., 29 August, 1884.

We hereby undertake and agree to manufacture and supply for the Government of New South Wales, and to deliver properly and securely packed for shipment to Sydney, and in good order and condition, free on board in London, the several goods mentioned on the other side, or such of them as you may accept this tender for, at the respective prices set opposite to the description of the same respectively, and that the same shall be ready for shipment within the times set opposite to the description of the same respectively, and be subject to inspection during their manufacture and to approval on their completion by you or your nominee.

We will advise you where the goods are being manufactured, and afford you all such facilities and means as you or your nominee may require for the inspection and testing of the same and of the materials of which the same are being manufactured, and will observe and comply with any directions which you or your nominee may from time to time give with reference to such goods or materials.

We will also, within the time or times respectively named for the goods ordered by you to be ready for shipment, send you particulars of the weight, dimensions, and mode of packing, and five copies of invoice, so that you may send the necessary shipping instructions for the goods, when approved; and we undertake and agree to deliver the said goods, or any of them as you may require, free on board, from time to time, within seven days after receipt of your shipping instructions.

And we hereby guarantee that any goods supplied under this Tender shall be of our own manufacture, and of the best quality and workmanship, and shall comply in all respects with the description given below, and with any other instructions given by or on behalf, of the New South Wales Government; and we undertake and agree that no approval by you or on your behalf, nor any payment made to us in respect of such goods, shall in any manner or to any extent prejudice any claim or demand which you or the Government of New South Wales may have against us in the event or in consequence of the goods supplied not being properly or securely packed, or not being duly and punctually ready for shipment, or not being such as is hereby guaranteed.

It is understood and agreed that payment is to be made within seven days after receipt by you of clean bills of lading.

It is also understood and agreed that if we should at any time sublet the work or any part of it, or fail to comply with your orders or instructions in accordance with this tender, if accepted, wholly or in part, you are to be at liberty to rescind the contract wholly or in part, and to obtain elsewhere the goods or any of them not then approved by you, or if approved, not shipped within the time limited, and we will pay any increased costs and expenses which may be incurred by reason of our default.

Your obedient servants,

For Callender's Bitumen Telegraph and Waterproof Co. (Limited),

JAMES D. SARGENT,

Secretary.

Description of goods.	Price, stating the discount to be allowed for payment as above.	Time to be ready for shipment.
3 miles of 50-core multiple cable, Callender's Bitumen and Waterproof Patent (for the use of the Electric Telegraph Department at Sydney, N.S.W.), as per specification given this day to Mr. W. H. Preece.	£400 per statute mile, net cash.	Delivery within two months from receipt of order.

Drums and packing extra.

A 2.

Dear Sir,

101, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C., 29 August, 1884.

Referring to the tender we are asked to make to the New South Wales Government for 3 miles of 50-core multiple cable, we propose to make it up to the following specification.

We may state that the cable is intended for arial purposes and telephonic use.

Each conductor to be composed of copper wire of No. 21 B.W.G., guaranteed of not less than 96 per cent. conductivity, insulated to No. 12 B.W.G. When insulated and before braiding, we guarantee that the resistance per mile in water at 60° Fahr. will be not less than 100 megohms per statute mile. Each

Each core will be braided, passed through a solution of bitumen, and then stranded. When cabled it will be passed through another solution of bitumen, doubly taped with bitumenized tape and braided overall.
When finished the whole cable will be passed through another solution of bitumen. We guarantee that the resistance of each wire when complete—tested in water—will be not less than 100 megohms per statute mile.
The cable when manufactured will have a capacity of 235 microfarads per mile.

We are, &c.,

I have looked through the attached specification, and, as Messrs. Callender agree that the cable, when finished, shall be tested in water, it now meets with my approval. I beg to recommend the acceptance of the tender.—W. H. PREECE, per J. H. C., 1st September, 1884. Agent-General.

Gentlemen,
I hereby accept your tender dated 29th ultimo for the goods hereunder specified.
Be good enough to acknowledge the receipt of this letter, and to inform me where the goods will be manufactured, and when they can be inspected.

Agent-General for New South Wales.

Description of Goods.	Price.	Time to be ready for Shipment.
3 miles of 50-core multiple cable, Callender's bitumen and waterproof patent, for the use of the Electric Telegraph Department in Sydney, N.S.W., as per your specification, 29th August, 1884. After inspection and approval, to be properly packed and delivered f.o.b. in London. Drums and packing extra. Please furnish a pro forma invoice of this order at once, with packing and delivery f.o.b. in London included.	£400 per mile net.	In two months.

A 5.

Sir,
It will be seen from the enclosed letter which I have received from Messrs. Callender & Co., that the 3 miles of 50-core multiple cable which they have made for New South Wales under order F, 1,147 will not comply with the tests required by my specification. Some of the wires give an insulation resistance of only 137,000 ohms per mile. I was afraid of this when the cable was ordered, for my experience of bitumen is that while it is very durable when buried underground, it quickly deteriorates when exposed to the atmosphere; it is therefore most unsuitable for aerial cables—in fact, for such cables india rubber is the only suitable material, and the Post Office uses nothing else. Unless, therefore, the colonial authorities in New South Wales will consent to the cable being placed underground (in which case bitumen might be used), I can only recommend that the order to Messrs. Callender be cancelled, and a cable covered with india rubber substituted.
I certainly cannot endorse the statement that "the cable as it stands * * * is in all respects fit for work," inasmuch as the tests of some of the wires are so much below our standard that we should regard them as faulty.

I have, &c.,
W. H. PREECE.

The Agent-General for New South Wales, Victoria-street, S.W.

A 6.

Dear Sir,
101, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C., 5 January, 1885.
Referring to the conversation we had with you a few days ago on the subject of the order for Sydney, we regret to say that the cable as made will not comply with the tests to which you desire to submit it.
We have made the entire 3 miles, but now find the insulation resistance of each of the wires when stranded will not come up to your specification of 100 megohms in water. We are very sorry for this, and, under the circumstances, do not wish to tender it as in execution of your specification.

We may mention that the sample we sent out to Australia consisted of wires very lightly insulated, and was intended to have a very slight insulation resistance, being simply for light overhead work.
It was on this that the order was sent Home, and we have endeavoured, whilst following our original plan in the manufacture, to comply with your conditions as to testing. This we now find we cannot do.

The cable as it stands, though it will not do what you require of it, is in all respects fit for work, and if laid on the plan we adopt (by embedding it in bitumen) would certainly give satisfactory results.

We would be much obliged if you could suggest its use in this way to the Agent-General for New South Wales, and if they would consent to take it for work such as this we would endeavour to meet their views.

We are, &c.,

Sir,
5, Westminster Chambers, 13 January, 1885.
I am desired by the Agent-General for New South Wales to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th instant, reporting on the letter which you received from Messrs. Callender & Co. in regard to the order for 3 miles of multiple cable, and, in reply, to inform you that if you are not inclined to recommend the acceptance of the cable which the Callender Bitumen, &c., Co. have made, Sir Saul Samuel will not accept it.

Mr. Cracknell, the Superintendent of Telegraphs in the Colony, will shortly be in England, and it is therefore thought desirable to allow the matter to remain in abeyance until his arrival, when it will be brought before him for consideration.

Sir,

New G.P.O., E.C., 15 April, 1885.

With reference to your letter of the 13th instant, I beg to inform you that since my last report I have had the opportunity of consulting with Mr. Cracknell and obtaining his views on the matter. Samples of cable have been submitted by the Indiarubber and Telegraph Works Company, and by Messrs. Callender & Co., which Mr. Cracknell has approved of, and I beg to recommend that an order be given to each firm for 1½ miles—that of the former Company being made of Indiarubber, and that of the latter of Callender's special compound, the prices being £395 and £400 per mile respectively. The cables to be made according to the samples submitted, and to be subject to my inspection.

Sir Saul Samuel, Agent-General for New South Wales, 5 Westminster Chambers, S.W.

The Colonial Secretary to The Acting Agent-General.

Sir,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 19 July, 1888.

With reference to your letter of the 2nd March last, received here on the 6th April, stating that you have been asked by the Honorable Dr. Creed (Chairman of the Committee of the Legislative Council to inquire into the purchase, &c., of cables) to furnish to him certain particulars in regard to the cables purchased through your Department, and transmitting a number of documents, I have the honor to inform you that as this information has been sought to be irregularly obtained through you without reference to, or the knowledge of, the Government, I must request you to avoid any similar irregularity in the future.

I have, &c.,

HENRY PARKES.

Extract from Minutes of the Proceedings of the Legislative Council, 19 July, 1888.

6. TORPEDO DEFENCE OF THE COLONY.—PURCHASE OF ARMOURED CABLE:—Mr. Creed, having pursuant to Notice, asked the Vice-President of the Executive Council,—On what date was the letter of the Acting Agent-General, containing particulars as to the purchase of armoured cable, sent for the information of the Select Committee on the "Torpedo Defence of the Colony," which was forwarded from London in March last, directed through the office of the Colonial Secretary to the Chairman, but which never reached that Committee, received at that office?

Mr. Salomons replied,—A communication from the Acting Agent-General was received at the Colonial Secretary's Office on the 6th of April last, covering a number of documents which had been sought to be irregularly obtained without reference to, or the knowledge of, the Government of the Colony. The Agent-General has been instructed to avoid any similar irregularity in the future.

The Acting Agent-General to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir,

5, Westminster Chambers, Westminster, S.W., 2 August, 1888.

I have the honor to inform you that upon perusing the "Report from the Select Committee on 'Torpedo Defence of the Colony' (ordered by the Council to be printed, 7th June, 1888)," I find that in the fourth paragraph on page 4, it states:—

"We, through the Chairman communicated with the Principal Under Secretary in January, asking that the Colonial Secretary would obtain definite information, and also by a letter, direct to the Agent-General, asking for a copy of all papers relating to this purchase, dated 10th January last. From neither source have we received any information, and are therefore only in a position to recommend that your Honorable House do order that the whole of the papers be obtained from the Agent-General, and as quickly as possible laid upon the Table for its information."

I desire to point out that on the 22nd February last I received the Honorable Mr. Creed's letter, dated the 16th January, No. 88-18, asking to be furnished with information, as quickly as possible, from the records of this office, in regard to:—

30 knots of cable ordered in Colonial Secretary's despatch to the Agent-General, dated 10th January, 1885, No. 85-212;

6 knots of 7-core multiple cable, ordered in the same despatch;

One and a half miles of 50 conductor cable supplied by "Callenders' Bitumen Telegraph Company," ordered in despatch No. B 84-7,208, dated 30th June, 1884; also

One and a half miles of 50 conductor cable supplied by The Indiarubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Company, ordered by same despatch.

In obedience to the urgent request for information (the importance of which I fully realized), I lost no time in furnishing the fullest particulars in my possession, relating to the orders in question; and on the 2nd March last I had the honor to forward my replies direct to your Department, for transmission to the Chairman of the Committee. (See my letter of that date S. 82-88.) This letter should have reached you on or about the 8th of April, and is formally acknowledged in your despatch to me dated 18th April last.

I observe that the report, from which I have previously quoted, is dated the 6th June, 1888; I am therefore quite unable to account for the remark contained therein, which is practically a reflection upon this office, that "From neither source have we received any information, &c., &c.," seeing that the specific information asked for, which was exceedingly voluminous, must have been at hand very little short of two months, at the time the report was written, I respectfully beg to ask that this erroneous impression, that "no information had been sent" by me, may be removed as quickly as possible.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL COOPER.

(RETURN OF GUNS IN STORE FOR PURPOSES OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 7 August, 1889.

Questions and Answers.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY, 10 JULY, 1889.

- (2.) Guns in Store for Defence Purposes:—Mr. DIBBS asked the Colonial Secretary,—
- (1.) The number of guns for defence purposes now in store; the sizes and calibre of such guns?
 - (2.) When such guns arrived in the Colony?
 - (3.) The cost of such guns (approximately)?
 - (4.) When is it proposed to mount such guns in position?
 - (5.) The reasons for the delay in mounting such guns?
 - (6.) Has money been voted for the cost of these guns and for the cost of erection?
 - (7.) The number, sizes, and particulars of guns ordered from England?
 - (8.) When so ordered, and when expected to arrive in the Colony?
 - (9.) Is it proposed to lodge such guns in store for a period of years before taking steps to have them mounted?

SIR HENRY PARKES answered,—I will lay a Return upon the Table this afternoon or to-morrow, giving the required information.

- The following answers have been supplied by the Major-General Commanding the Military Forces:—
- (1.) Two 8-in. B.L. guns, 12½ tons; twenty 6-in. B.L. guns, 5 tons; three 5-in. B.L. guns, 38 cwt. In store and in charge of the Artillery unmounted, fourteen 1½-in. Nordenfeldt.
 - (2.) 8-in. in 1886, 5-in. in 1887, 6-in. in 1886, 1887, 1888, and 1889, Nordenfeldt, in 1887.
 - (3.) 8-in., £5,100 each; 6-in., £3,400 each; 5-in., £1,370 each; Nordenfeldt. £360 each.
 - (4.) As soon as the works are ready.
 - (5.) The works are not ready.
 - (6.) For the guns, yes, and the cost of some of the works has been authorized.
 - (7.) Four 9.2 in. B.L. guns on hydropneumatic mountings.
 - (8.) In May, 1889. In about 12 or 18 months.
 - (9.) Unless the construction of works for guns now in the Colony is expedited they will have to be stored.

COLONIAL DEFENCES.

(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING ARMAMENTS AND GARRISONS FOR KING GEORGE'S SOUND AND THURSDAY ISLAND.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 23 August, 1889.

Telegram received on 8th August, 1889, from The Governor of South Australia.

FOLLOWING from Secretary of State:—Her Majesty's Government ready to undertake provide armaments King George's Sound and Thursday Island at cost of 26,460 pounds, and permanent garrisons of marines as specified Colonial Conference Paper, by Colonies paying annual charge. Total expenditure of Colonies for works, 14,300 pounds at King George's Sound, and 17,100 pounds at Thursday Island. Annual charge for garrison and maintenance, 3,513 pounds and 4,807. This would be modified of proposals of West Australia delegates. Reply as soon as possible.

Telegram from His Excellency the Governor to The Right Honorable the Secretary of State.

Sydney, 14 August, 1889.

THIS Government is prepared to join other Colonies in providing armaments for King George's Sound and Thursday Island, and in maintaining the necessary garrisons; but it cannot assent to any arrangement at variance with the principle first laid down by England that Colonies must provide for their own military defence. It is therefore submitted that the garrisons should be furnished from the military forces of the Colonies, and placed under Federal command. This Government has in store four 6-inch rifled breech-loading guns on hydro-pneumatic mountings, complete with overhead shields, ammunition, and spare parts (Armstrong's), which might be handed over for the forts in question, if desired, in view of saving time, on the condition of the said guns being replaced at Sydney within fifteen months.

Circular Despatch to The Governments of Queensland, Victoria, and South Australia.

Sir,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 14 August, 1889.

I have the honor to enclose, for your information, copy of telegram which has been transmitted by His Excellency Lord Carrington to the Right Honorable the Secretary of State, in reply to the message received on the 8th respecting armaments and garrisons for King George's Sound and Thursday Island.

I have, &c.,

HENRY PARKES.

Telegram from The Honorable Duncan Gillies, M.P., Victoria, to The Colonial Secretary, New South Wales.

Melbourne, 20 August, 1889.

IN your telegram to Secretary of State, copy of which you forwarded to me, it appears that to some extent you have misapprehended the proposal. The Imperial Government proposes to provide the cost of the armaments (not the Colonies), the Colonies meeting the cost of the works and the subsequent maintenance. I agree with you it will be better to abide by the understanding come to at the London Conference, that Western Australia should provide the garrison at King George's Sound, and Queensland should provide the garrison for Thursday Island, and in the event of war each of the Colonies should, at their own cost, increase the number to the war standard. It is well to bear in mind that the annual cost of the garrison will be greatly increased by their being manned by Australian troops, and special provisions will be required to be made to secure efficiency, probably by means of the garrisons being frequently recruited from other Colonies. Some competent body will require to consider the whole of this question, and I am pleased that you recognize the necessity of Federal provision. New South Wales joining the Federal Council will make this easy.

Telegram from The Honorable P. O. Fysh, M.L.C., Tasmania, to The Colonial Secretary, New South Wales.

Hobart, 20 August, 1889.

THIS Government is willing that Thursday Island be garrisoned, and works and maintenance of garrison be a charge upon all the Colonies on the basis of contributions to naval defences, and is of opinion that the manning of that defence appears to settle the propriety of an Imperial garrison coaling station must necessarily be garrisoned by the Imperial troops, as the Imperial navy must depend thereon for supplies. As to King George's Sound, a coaling station only, it is suggested that the defence of a commodity which can be so easily destroyed in the harbour is of little importance compared with the defence of this harbor, which lies near to Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, and New Zealand, and which necessarily, if undefended, would be an important strategic position for an enemy to possess. Having already spent £100,000 on permanent works and armaments here, this Government waits the development of a federal scheme of harbour defence, as to share in the cost of which Parliament would doubtless make liberal provision.

Telegram from The Honorable P. O. Fysh, M.L.C., Tasmania, to The Colonial Secretary, New South Wales.

Hobart, 21 August, 1889.

DEFENCE of coaling stations.—Reference of entire question to Federal Council undoubtedly best method of securing agreement. I have differed on the question of Imperial or Colonial troops for garrisons, because we have already accepted Imperial naval service as first line of defence, and the coaling stations as an integral part thereof should be under kindred services.

Telegram from The Chief Secretary, Queensland, to The Colonial Secretary, New South Wales.

Brisbane, 22 August, 1889.

GOVERNOR of Queensland has telegraphed to Lord Knutsford that this Government is willing to pay its proportion of cost of constructing and maintaining the fortifications and providing the garrisons at King George's Sound and Torres Straits on basis of proposal made at Conference of eighteen eighty-seven. The garrisons to be provided from Colonial Military Forces and commanded by officers in the Colonial Service.

Telegram from The Honorable Duncan Gillies, M.P., Victoria, to The Colonial Secretary, New South Wales.

Melbourne, 22 August, 1889.

Re King George's Sound and Thursday Island since wiring you on the 20th inst., Sir James Lorimer has drawn my attention to the entire inadequacy of the amount offered by the Imperial Government for armaments, more particularly as regards King George's Sound. I will send you a copy of Sir James' memorandum by post, and I am sending a copy to General Edwards, who is just about to proceed to Western Australia in the course of his mission. Perhaps it would be well to await his return before coming to a conclusion on that part of Lord Knutsford's telegram which refers to the amount proposed to be expended by the Imperial Government on the necessary armaments, as it is urged that it is quite insufficient. With regard to the concluding sentence of Lord Knutsford's telegram, I think, on fuller consideration, it must refer to the offer of Western Australia, to provide £5,000 out of £12,700 for cost of construction. (See letter of 22nd April, 1887, volume two (2) of London Conference Papers, page 277.)

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

DEFENCE OF THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES BY IMPERIAL TROOPS.

(MEMORANDUM BY SIR HENRY PARKES, COLONIAL SECRETARY, 22 AUGUST, 1889.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 27 August, 1889.

In the year 1870 steps were taken to withdraw Imperial troops from the Australian Colonies.

In reply to a proposal by the late Sir Charles Cowper to retain four companies of Infantry, at an increased rate, on the condition that they should not be withdrawn in a time of war, Lord Granville (Secretary of State) said:—

“Although Her Majesty’s Government readily acknowledge the reciprocal duty of defending every portion of the Empire, and that a Colony which pays for the presence of troops during peace may fairly expect that they should not be removed during war except under the strongest necessity, yet the exigencies of a state of war are so unexpected, and the necessity for entire freedom of action so great, that it would not be possible for them to give a pledge to that effect.”

When Major-General Chute was making preparations for the embarkation of the troops in Melbourne, the Governor of this Colony, the Earl of Belmore, wrote to him the following letter:—

“Sir,

“I am requested by my Ministers to inform you that they propose to submit to Parliament a proposition for engaging, under the terms of the Despatch, 19 May, 1870, with the Battery of Artillery, or such portion as it may be considered desirable to retain, and to ask you whether you will consent to postpone the departure of the Artillery until the decision of Parliament can be obtained. This will probably be ascertained within a month from the assembling of Parliament, which takes place on the 11th instant.

“Government House,

“Sydney, 4 August, 1870.

I have, &c.,

“BELMORE.”

The reply was telegraphed:—

“Telegram from Major-General Chute to Governor the Earl of Belmore.

“TONNAGE having been taken up and date of departure fixed for twentieth (20th) instant, in compliance with instructions I have received from Home, which have also been communicated to your Lordship, it is impossible that I can comply with your Lordship’s request to delay embarkation of any of the troops.”

In the early part of 1875 the Earl of Carnarvon (Secretary of State) sent out a despatch proposing to return to the system of defending the Colonies by Imperial troops. I was not in office at the time, but I was asked by the Governor (Sir Hercules Robinson) to state my views on the proposal, and I addressed the following letter to His Excellency:—

“My dear Sir Hercules,

Ashfield, 21 April, 1875.

“Sometime ago you were good enough to express a desire that, for the information of the Secretary of State, I should place you in possession of my views on the expediency of returning to the system of providing for the defence of the Australian Colonies by detachments of the Imperial troops. As I understood the proposal submitted by Lord Carnarvon—in its application to New South Wales for example—it was that one of the Queen’s regiments should be stationed in the Colony, with its concurrence, at the expense of the local Government, on the condition that the force so received should not be withdrawn at any time to meet the exigencies of Great Britain.

“Assuming that that is the proposal—and if I am in the main correct, it is sufficient for my purpose—I cannot think that the course proposed would be expedient, or would meet with the approval of the Colony. The mere annual expense of maintaining a regiment of Infantry, or any equivalent in numbers, of the Imperial forces, would be made a question of chronic public discussion, renewed with heat and unscrupulousness at every general election, and serving at all times to give point to the arguments of public economists in the newspapers. It is not difficult to foresee a state of circumstances, for instance, such as may arise at a time of financial pressure, when a Parliamentary majority would be returned by the constituencies directly opposed to the expenditure, and little disposed to consider any arrangement previously made. The unpopularity of the officer in command, or one or two flagrant instances of misconduct on the part of the men, would aggravate this feeling of opposition. The effect under such circumstances, as it would manifest itself in turmoil with which British authority would be associated, could not tend to strengthen the bonds of Imperial connection. Nor am I disposed to attach much value to the condition that the Colony once consenting to receive and take upon itself the expense of the Imperial soldiers, they should not afterwards be withdrawn to meet the demands of Imperial service. Without any reflection on the honour of Government, a hundred reasons might present themselves in a season of national trouble for modifying—for one party in a qualified manner withdrawing from, or the other party voluntarily giving up—a condition of this character made in a time of peace. A time of war often is, and may in any case become a time of unmitigable necessities when the only consideration is what for the moment is best, or what is possible. I do not see how any condition could be made which in the nature of things could be or ought to be permanently binding in the unseen future.

"In my judgment the step taken by the Imperial Government in withdrawing the troops a few years ago was one of too much national significance for both countries, and has had too abiding an effect on the rapidly-developing character of the Australian communities to be now retraced. It was popularly regarded here as the acknowledgment of Great Britain—not simply of the political freedom of the Colonies, but of their complete power to provide for themselves; as the removal of the last symbol of Imperial authority in the management of Australian affairs. And the colonies had abundant reason for so regarding it. English statesmen of the highest influence had for years been exhausting argument to prove that the colonies ought to provide for their own defence. Not to go further back, the late Lord Lytton, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, counselled an Australian Governor on his appointment in 1859 in these words:—"A colony that is once accustomed to depend on Imperial soldiers for aid against riots, &c., never grows up into vigorous manhood." Again, eleven years later, in one of the latest of his thoughtful speeches, Lord Lytton says:—"In vain may you communicate to a Colony your industry, your arts, your literature, and your laws, if you do not also communicate that spirit of courage and manhood by which the inhabitants will submit to hardship and privations in fitting themselves to defend from aggression their hearths and altars." I might multiply examples of similar reasoning on the part of men in the first rank of public life in England. The Colonies, therefore, were not unprepared for the step which was taken, and, so far as I am aware, they accepted the decision of the Imperial Government without remonstrance or complaint. But I am satisfied that the act was widely felt by all classes in Australia as a concession to their virtual independence. The feeling, not unaccompanied by a sense of pride, was that in the estimation of the mother country the time had arrived when the Colonies ought to be left to shift for themselves. It would not have been creditable to the character of the Australian populations if so great a change in their relations to England had not produced a corresponding effect on their political intelligence; and the continuous and expanding effect has undoubtedly been to give new strength to the rude and resolute spirit of self-reliance which the work of colonisation is at all times so calculated to awaken and foster. This I regard as a very wholesome effect. And its extent and deep-seatedness must not be estimated by the limited success of the Volunteer movement. I cannot admit, because the Colony has not all at once succeeded in a military organisation, that therefore the Colony is not perfectly capable of defending itself. The best way to teach it success is to leave it, with its feelings already prepared for the task, to face the necessity. In considering this question it must be borne in mind that several years have elapsed since the troops were withdrawn, that the sentiment and spirit of self-dependence have since grown with the growth of a largely increased population, and that in another ten years these Colonies will unitedly possess the numbers and all the elements of strength of a powerful State. I do not doubt but persons of influence in the Colony will be found to favour Lord Carnarvon's suggestions, but I altogether doubt, chiefly for the reasons I have stated, that they would be able to find the means of carrying them into effect.

"Even if no other objections presented themselves, the geographical conditions of the Australian Colonies must not be lost sight of in estimating the practicability of a return to Imperial provision for their defence. The dense capitals of Sydney and Melbourne might be easily dealt with in this view of the subject; but the remote country districts and the large inland towns, already sensitively jealous of any expenditure confined to the capitals, would not be easily reconciled to a large annual appropriation of revenue (which would be characterized as extravagant and useless) confined to Sydney or Melbourne. And again, how would the troops be distributed among the widely-separated seaport cities with limited populations along the extensive seaboard of Queensland?"

"So far as New South Wales is concerned, the Legislative Assembly unanimously agreed to the following resolution fifteen years ago (December 20th, 1859):—"That the true principle of military defence, and the only course which would ensure effective resistance in extreme circumstances, is to habituate the subjects of the Queen in this Colony to the use of arms, and to foster among all classes a loyal and patriotic spirit of reliance on their own valour and military organization."

"I am, my dear Sir Hercules, yours very truly,
"HENRY PARKES."

I received the following acknowledgment:—

"My dear Mr. Parkes, * * * * * Government House, Sydney, 29 April, 1875.

"I duly received your Military letter and will send a copy of it to Lord Carnarvon. I have got no answer yet from Mr. Robertson, but your view, although I cannot quite agree with it, practically disposes of the question, as Lord C. would not move unless at the desire of all sides.

Yours very truly,
HERCULES ROBINSON."

1889.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

IMPERIAL OFFICER FOR THE INSPECTION OF FORTIFICATIONS AND DEFENCE FORCES.

(DESPATCH RESPECTING.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

New South Wales,
No. 35.

The Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 17 June, 1889.

With reference to the telegraphic correspondence which has passed on the subject of the appointment of Major-General Edwards, R.E., C.B., to inspect the local forces of the Australian Colonies, I have the honor to transmit for the information of your Government a copy of the instructions addressed to that officer by the Secretary of State for War.

It will be within your recollection, that in my circular of 31st January, 1888, it was proposed, in accordance with the feeling expressed at the Colonial Conference in 1887, that an Imperial Officer of high standing should be appointed to advise the respective Governments in the first instance as to the uniform organization of their local forces, with a view to enabling them to co-operate effectively, in the event of joint action becoming necessary, and further to make provision for periodical inspection in subsequent years.

It was not, however, found practicable to arrange for the apportionment between the Colonies of the cost of that proposed arrangement, and it occurred to Her Majesty's Government, that as a preliminary measure, if it should be acceptable to the Governments of the Australasian Colonies, or to a sufficient number of them, Major-General Edwards, R.E., C.B., who is at present in command of Her Majesty's troops on the China Station, might be instructed to take an early opportunity of visiting those Colonies for the purpose of inspecting the forces and conferring with the Colonial Governments on any matters regarding which they might desire his advice. The expenses of this visit are to form a charge upon Imperial funds.

I observe with pleasure that this proposal has been received with general satisfaction in Australasia, and I trust that it will be found that the advice of General Edwards will be productive of much good to the Colonies, while at the same time it will be very advantageous to Her Majesty's Government to receive from this experienced officer full information as to the present state of training of the Colonial forces and their organisation for war.

I have, &c.,
KNUTSFORD.

Colonial Secretary.—CARRINGTON.

[Enclosures.]

Sir,

Horse Guards, War Office, 3 June, 1889.

In confirmation of the telegram from this Department of the 31st May (copy enclosed), I am directed to acquaint you that the Commander-in-Chief has approved of your inspecting and reporting upon the Australasian Military Forces, and you will accordingly place yourself in communication with the Governors of the respective Colonies, and make arrangements with them as to the dates, &c., on which these inspections can most conveniently be carried out.

Your Aide-de-Camp may accompany you.

I am to add that the reports of your inspections, and any recommendations you may consider it advisable to make in regard to the organisation of the various local forces on a uniform basis, should be addressed to the Colonial Governments concerned, and duplicates furnished for His Royal Highness' information.

His Royal Highness, whilst anxious that your inspection should be as complete as possible, trusts that no unnecessary delay will take place in your returning to your command.

I have, &c.,

GODFREY CLERK,

The General Officer Commanding the Troops in China and the Straits Settlements.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

NAVAL DEPÔT.

(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING ERECTION OF BUILDINGS AT GARDEN ISLAND AND WOOLLOOMOOLOO BAY, AND AS TO SYDNEY BEING HEAD NAVAL DEPOT OF HER MAJESTY'S SHIPS IN THE PACIFIC.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 27 September, 1889.

RETURN to an Address of the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 25th September, 1889, praying that His Excellency the Governor will be pleased to cause to be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of all letters, documents, papers, minutes, &c., between Admiral Fairfax and His Excellency the Governor, during the past three years, in reference to the carrying out of the arrangement made by the Government of this Colony and the Imperial Government, with regard to the Port of Sydney being the head Naval Depot of H.M. Ships in the Pacific.”

Minute by The Acting Colonial Secretary.

Subject :—As to erection of Stores and other Offices at Woolloomooloo Bay and works at Garden Island for Naval authorities.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 7 January, 1885.

CAPTAIN Ackland having called here this morning, on behalf of the Commodore, for information as to the erection of the stores and offices at Woolloomooloo Bay in connection with the Naval Station and all the other works at Garden Island, I am now in a position to inform your Excellency, in order that you may communicate with the Commodore, that the necessary works will be prosecuted without any delay.

The Cabinet yesterday approved of the plans of the stores in Woolloomooloo Bay, and the Secretary for Public Works will call for tenders for their erection at as early a date as possible. The other works in connection with the Naval Station will also be vigorously proceeded with.

In accordance with the recommendation made by Mr. Moriarty, that Mr. Fishenden, the gentleman who was recently sent by the Admiralty here to arrange matters relating to the Naval Station with the Colonial authorities, should co-operate with and advise the Agent-General and our inspecting engineer in London in the selection of the machinery, &c., the Cabinet request His Excellency to invite the Commodore to procure the necessary authorization from the Admiralty.

WILLIAM BEDE DALLEY,
Acting Colonial Secretary.

For His Excellency.—W.B.D., 7/1/85. Communicated to H.E., 7. The Under Secretary for Public Works, B.C., 7 Jan., '85.—C.W.

The Acting Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir, Department of Public Works, Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 9 December, 1885.
With reference to works in progress for Naval Station on Garden Island, I do myself the honor to forward herewith plans of proposed rigging-house, sail-loft, &c., in connection with the same, estimated to cost £13,000, chargeable to votes taken for Naval Station. The papers respecting these works are with the Works Department.

I have, &c.,

W. COLES,

Acting Colonial Architect.

Minute by The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, Sydney, 5 July, 1886.

Subject:—Naval Station Works, Port Jackson.

In reference to paragraph 4 of the Colonial Architect's memo. respecting the above (86-3,686), the only information required from this Department is in relation to the columns for carrying the traveller, for which the design is now finished, and is in course of transmission to the Colonial Architect.

As to the Woolloomooloo Bay buildings, I have not undertaken to put in the foundations, which will be an exceedingly difficult and costly work; but I mentioned to Mr. Coles, of the Colonial Architect's Department, that I thought it would be well to postpone determining on the plan of the foundations until the foundations for the crane had been put in, when we should have information as to the nature of the ground.

This has been reported on by Mr. Williams. [See his report herewith, 17th instant, which was forwarded for the Minister's information on the 21st inst. (86-3,631).]

A copy of Mr. Williams' report has been this day forwarded to the Colonial Architect.

Department of Public Works, Harbour and Rivers Branch,

Sydney, 6 August, 1887.

Subject:—Admiralty Wharf, Woolloomooloo Bay.

I BEG to make the following suggestions with respect to changing the site for the Admiralty Wharf, Woolloomooloo Bay.

I attach a print showing the Admiralty Wharf as executed (in brown).

As it has been found impossible to procure safe foundations for the large stores required, without incurring a very heavy expenditure, I recommend that the wharf be extended northward as far as Robinson's Ladies' Baths, as shown in pink.

About 320 feet of the northern end of this extension might then be set apart as an Admiralty Wharf, and behind this portion very good rock foundation can be reached at an easy depth, and with some excavation this site will afford as much accommodation for the buildings as that first set apart. Very good storage for inflammable articles, such as oil, tar, turpentine, &c., can be procured by excavating drifts into the rock at back, under the Park Road.

If this is carried out, the present Admiralty Wharf might be extended southward to Cowper Wharf, and thus provide an additional 672 feet of wharfage, or two good berths.

As each berth brings in a revenue of about £1,000 a year, the sum of about £2,000 a year can thus be obtained at an expenditure of about £8,000, which I estimate will be the cost of the whole of the new wharfs, as shown in pink; but this sum will alone be saved in the difference in cost between erecting the stores where first proposed and where now suggested.

This change would enable the Admiralty buildings to be put in hand and proceeded with almost immediately; the wharf extension could be constructed simultaneously.

C. W. DARLEY.

P.S.—I omitted to call attention to the fact that this scheme will necessitate the removal of the Corporation Ladies' Baths, but as they are not much used, owing to the shallow and foul water, their removal will cause no inconvenience, and I am given to understand the lease has expired, and has not been renewed.—C.W.D.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers.

As the construction of the Admiralty stores comes under Mr. Barnett, I recommend that this papers be sent on to him for his consideration in the first instance. It will then be necessary to submit the proposed alteration of the site for the consideration of the Admiral. The suggestions seem to me to get over the difficulty in regard to the foundations, which the borings show to exist at the first proposed position.—E.O.M., 8/8/87. Under Secretary P. Works, B.C. Col. Architect.—J.R., B.C., 10/8/87.

I see no objection to the change of site suggested, but the proposed position of the two stores for inflammable materials should not, I consider, be adopted, as in the event of their contents taking fire the main stores would be almost certain to follow. As to encroachment on Ladies' Baths, this is not a matter for my Department to deal with. Should the proposed alteration of site be approved, plans and specification can be prepared by my Department during the progress of the foundations under the Harbours and Rivers Department. I would, however, suggest that perhaps the storage accommodation required might be obtained by utilizing the stores lately resumed by the Government from the A.S.N. Co., Circular Quay.—J.B., 8/11/87.

Harbours and Rivers.—J.R., B.C., 12/11/87. Let Mr. Darley have this.—S.S., 17/11/87. I think Mr. Barnett's suggestion in reference to the store should be submitted to the Admiral.—E.O.M., 22/11/87. B.C., Under Secretary Public Works. Principal Under Secretary.—J.R., B.C., 23/11/87.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Respecting suggested Wharfrage Extension, Woolloomooloo Bay.

Sydney, 20 September, 1887.

As provided in my minute of the 26th ultimo (87-5,962), dealing with improvements to the Circular Quay, I now beg to submit for the consideration of Mr. Secretary Sutherland, my proposals with regard to Woolloomooloo Bay, as desired by the Treasurer.

The accompanying plan will better illustrate my views than the most elaborate descriptions.

Not with papers.

The plans will show:—1st. A large jetty 700 feet long by 100 feet wide. 2nd. Widening Cowper Wharf to the west of the present passenger wharf. 3rd. Extending the present Admiralty Jetty, both to the north and south.

In a previous minute, 87-6,612, I recommended that a part of the proposed northern extension should be used for Admiralty purposes instead of the present wharf.

In that paper I gave my reasons at length for this suggestion, the principal one being that at the new site good foundations can be obtained for the large stores about to be erected which cannot be got at the rear of the Admiralty Wharf.

The whole cost of the work I estimate at £42,000.

It is not for me here to enter into any statement of the probable revenue to be derived on account of these large extensions. On this point, however, I think Mr. Burns was well satisfied, and it only remains for me now to leave the matter in the hands of Mr. Sutherland as requested.

In conclusion, I may perhaps be permitted to suggest with reference to the stores proposed to be erected for the Admiralty, whether they would not be better suited for the requirements of the Naval Service if they were erected on Garden Island instead of at Woolloomooloo Bay. It may be desirable to submit this proposal to the Admiral.

E. O. MORIARTY.

The Admiral Commanding Australian Station to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

H.M. Ship "Nelson," Sydney, 22 October, 1887.

I beg to enclose for your Excellency's information reports of progress of works, (1) at Garden Island, (2) at Spectacle Island, and (3) at Woolloomooloo Bay.

2. I have the honor to request that your Excellency will call the attention of your Government to the want of progress in the naval stores at Woolloomooloo Bay for which plans were drawn up and forwarded to the Commodore commanding on the Station in November, 1883. This is a matter to which serious attention is now required to be given. The present naval depot at the Circular Quay is overcrowded with stores, and many of the floors are bearing weights for which, through age and decay, they are quite unsuited. The general state of the building is decay, and very shortly, to ensure only temporary safety, large repairs will be necessary.

3. Any increase to the naval force in those waters will render the present store quite inadequate to requirements.

4. I shall be glad if your Excellency will bring the matter forward and furnish me with any remarks or proposal on the subject, so that I may forward it to the Admiralty and satisfy their Lordships that works are contemplated which will provide storage necessary to meet additional requirements consequent on an increased squadron.

I have, &c.,

H. FAIRFAX, Rear-Admiral,
Commander-in-Chief.

The Colonial Secretary.—CARRINGTON, 25/10/87. The attention of the Colonial Architect should perhaps be invited to this matter.—C.W., 27/10/87. The Col. Architect.—H.P., 29/10/87. The Under Secretary for Public Works, B.C., 31/10/87.—C.W., P.U.S. The Colonial Architect.—J.R., B.C., 1/11/87.

Sketch plans have been prepared for the stores at Woolloomooloo Bay, and details of foundations for same forwarded to the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, under whose department this portion of the work has to be carried out. Nothing, however, has yet been done I believe, pending consideration respecting great expense of building on the site originally proposed, which it is suggested should be changed. See my B.C. report of this date on other paper herewith.—J.B., 8/11/87.

Forward to Colonial Secretary. The Principal Under Secretary.—J.R., B.C., 12/11/87.

JAMES R. W. QUINN,
Staff-Commander.

The Admiral Commanding Australian Station to His Excellency The Governor.

My Lord,

H.M. Ship "Nelson," Sydney, 24 October, 1887.

I beg to offer a few remarks on the works at Garden Island, which I visited and inspected on the 22nd instant.

The rigging-house and sail-loft are erected; all now required to complete, are the internal fittings already decided on and asked for, and the papers are in the office; similarly, the boat's-shed is complete except boat slips.

The barracks are making good progress: the verandahs and balconies when fitted will much improve the appearance of this (at present) unsightly building.

The buildings next in order on the plan are, fire-engine house, the anchor and chain store, and the blacksmiths' and engineers' shops, and the works attached to them.

I understand the fire-engine has either arrived or is on its way, and now that the buildings are completed its services might well be made available.

Perhaps the anchor store and the blacksmiths' and engineers' shops, &c., could be undertaken simultaneously, but should a preference be given to any work to be done, I venture to suggest that the buildings for which much valuable machinery has arrived should be taken in hand first, so that chance of deterioration may be avoided as far as possible.

There

There is an unsightly tongue of rock now left in the centre of the island. I would recommend for the consideration of your Government that it should be removed, and to avoid expense in lightcrage the whole of it might be tilted into the water where there is a shoal on the side of the island, in such form as to include a space of water which could be used as a bathing-place for seamen and a boat chamber. A personal visit would explain this idea and the practicability of it.

I noticed that for the cottages already erected no wash-house had been provided; a dividing wall in the rear with roof and sink are all that is required. I think it was an accidental omission from the design.

I have, &c.,

H. FAIRFAX,

Rear-Admiral,
Commander-in-Chief.

The Colonial Secretary.—CARRINGTON, 30/10/87. The Colonial Architect to report direct to this office.—H.P., 9/11/87. The Colonial Architect, B.C., 10 Nov., 1887.—C.W., P.U.S.

The Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.
(No. 101.)

My Lord,

Downing-street, 17 November, 1887.

I have the honor to transmit to you, for communication to your Government, a copy of a letter from the Admiralty respecting the works which are being carried out for that Department at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, and I am to request to be informed what answer your Government would wish to be returned to the representations of the Lords Commissioners on this subject.

I have, &c.,

H. T. HOLLAND.

Colonial Secretary, for the desired information.—CARRINGTON, 7/1/88. Colonial Architect's report on Despatch No. 17 will, I assume, cover this.—H.P.

[Enclosure.]

(D.W., No. 4219.)

Sir,

Admiralty, 7 November, 1887.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to state, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that it appears from the latest reports from the Commander-in-Chief on the Australian Station as to the state of the works at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, Sydney, which the Colonial Government of New South Wales are carrying out for the Admiralty, that at the former place, with the exception of the rigging-house and sail-loft, which are nearly completed, the general progress of the works at the new naval depot has of late been very slow, whilst at the latter, where naval storehouses are to be built, no work of any kind has recently been done.

I am to request that Sir Henry Holland will have the goodness to represent to the Colonial Government that their Lordships are very desirous that the construction of the buildings at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo should be proceeded with more expeditiously.

The Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, Colonial Office.

I am, &c.,

EVAN MACGREGOR.

Minute by The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Subject:—Garden Island Naval Station.

Department of Public Works, Sydney, 18 November, 1887.

THE Colonial Architect has submitted the enclosed drawings (2) for engineers' shed, &c., proposed to be erected at Garden Island, and being a portion of the works for the Imperial Naval Station, as detailed in the list forwarded to the Colonial Architect, with instructions to prepare plans, &c., dated 3rd May, 1883. These instructions were issued by the then Colonial Secretary, Sir Alexander Stuart, as the outcome of the arrangement arrived at with the Naval authorities, with whom the Colonial Architect has conferred from time to time during the progress of the drawings.

The Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Department of Public Works, Colonial Architect's Office,

Sir,

Sydney, 25 November, 1887.

I do myself the honor to request a decision as to the accepting of W. Parley's tender, £623 10s. for fittings required in the rigging-house and sail-loft at Garden Island, submitted on the 22nd August last.

I have, &c.,

JAMES BARNET,

Col. Architect.

Principal Under Secretary, with reference to previous paper sent to him on the 21/10/87.—J.R., B.C., 26/11/87.

The Colonial Architect to The Principal Under Secretary.

Department of Public Works, Colonial Architect's Office,

Sir,

Sydney, 9 December, 1887.

In attention to the request conveyed by the minute of Sir Henry Parkes on accompanying correspondence forwarded to me under blank cover on 10th ultimo, I do myself the honor to report as follows, with respect to the works therein referred to.

Rigging House and Sail Loft.—A tender for supply of internal fittings to this building, amounting to £623 10s., was submitted to Works Department on 22nd August last, but authority has not yet been received for accepting same.

Boat Slips.—Have not yet been commenced, as the requirements in regard to them have only recently been made known—the cost of the work required in connection with the slips will be about £1,500.

Fire Engine House.—No particulars have yet been furnished as to the requirements of this building, but the cost will probably not exceed £500.

Engineers and Blacksmiths Shop.—Plan for this building, estimated at £17,900, was submitted to Works Department for approval on 14th ultimo.

Anchor and Chain Store.—Plan herewith, estimated to cost £4,000.

Wash-house for Cottages.—Will probably cost about £170.

If the works named, estimated at say £25,000, are approved, they can be commenced at once, but I am unable to say whether sufficient funds are available to defray their cost, as it is not known what sum will be required to pay for works now being carried out on the Island by the Harbours and Rivers Department.

With regard to the unsightly tongue of rock in the centre of the island, also alluded to in the correspondence, this is a matter which will probably be dealt with by the Harbours and Rivers Department.

I have, &c.,

JAMES BARNET,
Colonial Architect.

Inquire how much of the £25,000 has been spent by Harbours and Rivers Department.—C.W., 21/12/87. Will Mr. Williams please look carefully into this matter and report.—For E.O.M., S.S., 21/12/87.

Estimate of amount received by Harbours and Rivers Department, herewith.—For E.O.M., S.S., 23/12/87.

Naval Stations, Garden Island:—Expenditure to 31st December, 1887, £51,910 2s. 2d.—J.C., 4/1/88. F.T., 4/1/88.

Will the Colonial Architect please let me know how the whole question stands with regard to the votes for naval purposes—i.e., supply a statement showing votes taken, expenditure under each vote, balance, if any, on each vote, and if possible estimate of expenditure to complete works.—J.R., B.C., 9-11/1/88. B.C., Principal Under Secretary.—J.R., 3/2/88.

PORT JACKSON NAVAL STATION.

ESTIMATED Cost of completing Works now in progress and Works authorized, but not commenced. (Harbour and Rivers Department.)

Works in Progress—	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Completing removal of rock authorized, to make room for new buildings	800	0	0
Completing concrete wall as per original contract	2,500	0	0
Completing wharf all but 150 feet under sheer legs, say	400	0	0
Percentage kept back from contractor, as per last voucher	1,714	10	10
						5,414 10 10
Works not yet Contracted for—
Dock and landing stage for torpedo boats	4,600	0	0
Gantry for lifting boats	800	0	0
Concrete sea wharf wall in place of timber wharf for a length of 150 feet under the 160-ton sheer legs asked for by the Admiralty, and recommended	8,000	0	0

Copy of Colonial Architect's Minute on P.W. 38/336.

STATEMENT herewith showing balance of £19,781 at present available, also statement giving approximate estimate of expenditure required for completion of works amounting to £94,000. This estimate, however, does not include the list of works in progress and being carried out by the Harbours and Rivers Department, with papers P.W. 87/15,958, which may be estimated at about £30,000. Therefore, if all the works proposed are to be carried out, further provision of about £105,000 will be necessary.

The Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.
(No. 17.)

My Lord,

Downing-street, 1 February, 1888.

With reference to my Despatch No. 101, of the 17th November last, I have the honor to transmit to your Lordship a copy of a further letter from the Admiralty, inquiring when the buildings, &c., for the new Naval Depot at Sydney will be completed and handed over to the Naval authorities.

I request that you will inform me what answer your Ministers desire to make to this inquiry, and that you will call their attention to the last paragraph of the Admiralty letter.

I have, &c.,

H. T. HOLLAND.

[Enclosure.]

The Admiralty to the Colonial Office.

Sir,

Admiralty, 26 January, 1888.

With reference to Admiralty letter of 19 November last, I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to request that you will move the Secretary of State for the Colonies to cause them to be informed at what date it may be expected that the buildings, &c., for the new Naval Depot at Sydney will be completed and handed over to the naval authorities.

2. The Commander-in-Chief on the Australian Station has again called attention to the unguarded state of the stores, magazines, &c., at Spectacle Island, and my Lords have directed him to submit for their approval a scheme of the establishment which he considers will be necessary for the Naval Depot, when handed over by the Colonial authorities.

3. This scheme is to include the provision of a guard for the buildings and stores, both at Spectacle and Garden Islands, for the safety of which my Lords will then be prepared to make the necessary arrangements.

4. In the meantime my Lords conclude that the police guard already provided will be continued by the Government of New South Wales.

The Under Secretary of State, Colonial Office.

I am, &c.,

EVAN MACGREGOR.

The Colonial Secretary.—C., 16/3/88.

Colonial Architect for report on buildings at Garden Island, and also as to Spectacle Island, so far as he has knowledge.—H.P., 22/3/88. The Under Secretary for Public Works.—B.C., 22 March, 1888, C.W., P.U.S. The Colonial Architect.—J.R., B.C., 23/3/88.

The whole of the buildings proposed to be erected on Garden Island could be completed in about eighteen months if authority were given to proceed with the work. Plans for engineers' and smiths' shops estimated to cost £17,000, were submitted to Works Department on 8th September last, and for chain and anchor store—estimated at £4,000—to Colonial Secretary's Department, on 9th December last; but neither neither have been returned. At Spectacle Island all works pointed out will be completed in a few weeks. I would also say that sketch plans for buildings at Woolloomooloo Bay have been prepared, and detail drawings for foundations furnished to the Harbours and Rivers Department, under which they will be carried out, but the work has not yet, I believe, been commenced; when the foundations are in the buildings can be erected in about twelve months.—J.B., 28 March, '88.

Harbours and Rivers for report as to buildings at Woolloomooloo Bay.—D.C.M'L., pro U.S., B.C., 29/3/88. Mr. Darley, 3/4/88.

With respect to the latter part of the Colonial Architect's minute, the delay is, I believe, now owing to the proposed change of site not being decided upon, owing to the unsuitableness of the first site, and expense and difficulty of obtaining foundations. I made a proposal to move the building to the north, and then construct a new wharf and crane for the Admiralty. I have not undertaken to put in the foundations for this building, on the contrary I pointed out that it would be much better for the same department that has to erect the building to put in the foundations also.—E. O. MORIARTY, 10/4/88. B.C., Under Secretary for Public Works.

The Acting Agent-General to The Secretary for Public Works.

30-ton Overhead Travelling Crane, F/1270/27.

Sir,

5, Westminster Chambers, Westminster, S.W., 24 February, 1888.

I have the honor to report, with reference to the 30-ton overhead travelling crane supplied by Messrs. Ransome and Rapier, for naval station works, Garden Island, just shipped per "British Merchant," that while their tender was accepted at £894 net, it was made a condition that I should retain 10 per cent. of the contract amount until the crane had been erected and worked in the Colony to the satisfaction of the Government Engineer. 90 per cent. of Messrs. Ransome and Rapier's invoice has been paid, and I have the honor to invite your attention to the conditions above referred to, under which the balance is due to them, and to ask that you will give me as early an intimation as practicable when the same may be paid.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL COOPER.

Engineer-in-Chief Harbours and Rivers, for report.—J.B., B.C., 5/4/88. Mr. Darley.—S.S., 6/4/88. I am not aware that authority has yet been given for erecting the engineer's shop within which this crane will be erected; so probably it may be considered reasonable to reconsider the arrangement rather than keep the firm out of their money for an indefinite period.—E.O.M., 12/4/88. B.C., Under Secretary Public Works. Submitted.—J.B., 13/4/88.

Minute by The Engineer-in-Chief.

[Very urgent.]

Department of Public Works, Harbours and Rivers Branch,

My dear Barnett,

Sydney, 13 March, 1888.

We are getting into a great fix about the Garden Island workshop. We are having a very large amount of valuable machinery landed, and I much fear it will be injured by exposure to the weather.

Faithfully yours,

James Baruch, Esq.

E. O. MORIARTY.

My Lord,

Downing-street, 22 March, 1888.

With reference to my despatch, No. 17, of the 1st February, and to previous correspondence, I have the honor to transmit to you, for communication to your Government, a copy of a further letter from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty respecting the works at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, Sydney, and I request that you will move your Ministers to be good enough to cause a report to be furnished at the earliest date possible upon the various points noticed by their Lordships in connection with these works.

I have, &c.,

KNUTSFORD.

[Enclosure.]

Sir,

Admiralty, 17 March, 1888.

With reference to Admiralty letter of the 7th November, 1887, D.W. No. 4,219, relating to the state of the works at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, Sydney, which the Colonial Government of New South Wales are carrying out for the Admiralty, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that they have received a further report on the subject from the Commander-in-Chief on the Australian Station.

From this report it appears that, as regards the new Naval Depot, Garden Island, the work is practically at a stand still, and up to the 10th December last there was no apparent preparation for continuing it; whilst the erection of the Naval Storehouses at Woolloomooloo seems to have been practically abandoned, presumably owing to some difficulties as to the foundation for the building, without any steps being taken for the adoption of another site.

The Commander-in-Chief has suggested as the only feasible plan for providing a store which would possess equal advantages to one on the site at Woolloomooloo Bay, that it should be erected on the space now occupied by a tongue of rock on Garden Island, where, with some alteration in the plans that have been prepared, there would be ample space for the building.

2 This

This change of situation would involve the loss of a store and office on the mainland for the Paymaster-in-charge, and to counteract this it would be necessary to secure to the Navy a receiving store and office close to the Circular Quay, as well as to reserve right to a portion of the quay where vessels or lighters might be placed at any time.

I am to request that you will have the goodness to move the Secretary of State for the Colonies to obtain from the Colonial Government of New South Wales some definite information respecting the abovementioned points

The Under Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I would suggest for the consideration of my hon. colleague the Colonial Secretary, with a view to some definite conclusion being come to on this very important matter that the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers and the Colonial Architect be put into communication with the Admiral; a practical suggestion may be the outcome of such an interview which will enable my colleague to settle the difficulty with satisfaction to the Admiralty and advantage to the Colony.—JOHN SUTHERLAND, 4/6/88.

Principal Under Secretary.—J.B., 4/6/88. Submitted, 13/6/88.

The Admiral Commanding the Australian Station to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

"Nelson," at Sydney, 8 April, 1888.

On the 22nd October, 1887, I had the honor to address your Excellency on the subject of the works for the Navy at Garden Island, at Spectacle Island, and at Woolloomooloo Bay, and, for reasons stated, I specially asked your Excellency to call the attention of your Government to the want of progress in work at Woolloomooloo Bay.

Your Excellency's acknowledgment, dated 25th October, 1887, informed me that you had forwarded my letter to the Colonial Secretary, but since then I have heard nothing further, and I venture to again bring my letter to your notice in the hope of receiving a reply.

Your Excellency may remember that I drew attention to the decayed state of the present Naval Depot, and to the probable increase of the squadron in these waters as being causes which render it very necessary that attention be immediately given to the subject.

Since then the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have recently (on 26th January, 1888) called on me to furnish a scheme of the staff required for the new Naval Depot, and for the works, machinery, and engines to be placed on Garden Island, and as to the quarters to be provided, I may say that, at this time I find a difficulty in giving a reply. I am unable to estimate a date for the completion of the buildings, for which so much valuable machinery is already provided and lodged at Garden Island, nor can I form any estimate as to the new Naval Depot. I should be very glad if your Excellency's Government will give me any information on the subject.

I have, &c.,
H. FAIRFAX,
Rear Admiral, Commander-in-Chief.

The Colonial Secretary.—CARRINGTON, 7/4/88.

The Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Department of Public Works, Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 9 May, 1888.

In reference to the barracks at Garden Island, now approaching completion, I do myself the honor to submit herewith tracing showing the fittings, furniture, &c., required for same, as pointed out and considered necessary by Captain Hammill, of H.M.S. "Nelson." The cost of these fittings, &c., is estimated at £1,530, chargeable to Vote for "Naval Stations."

I have, &c.,
JAMES BARNET.

B.C., Principal Under Secretary.—J.B., 11/5/88. The Colonial Architect is desirous of proceeding with the work at once.—C.W., 21/5/88. Submitted for approval.—C.W., 21/5/88.

The Colonial Architect to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 22 June, 1888.

In compliance with the verbal request of Sir Henry Parkes, I do myself the honor to report upon works connected with the Naval Station, as originally proposed, and the conditions on which they were undertaken, as far as can be ascertained by the papers. The works completed and in progress and those remaining to be carried out are also given.

By the papers referred to, I find that on 16th April, 1883, Mr. Stuart, the then Colonial Secretary, in a letter to the Governor, Lord Loftus, submitted a minute, describing the mode in which the Government was prepared to carry out the Naval Depot expenditure, by providing for works on Garden Island and mainland of Woolloomooloo Bay; also purchase of a suitable residence for the representative of the Navy in those seas; also the works when carried out to be conveyed in perpetuity for the use of Her Majesty's Navy, it being understood the Imperial Government will surrender all the lands known as Ordnance Reserves, and all other lands or buildings in the Colony to which it may have any claim or title.

On

On 30th April, 1883, the Commodore—Erskine—-notified by letter to the Governor that he had submitted these proposals by telegraph to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and had received a reply accepting same, provided necessary storehouses, &c., were built on situation at Woolloomooloo and Garden Island, with approval of Commodore. As instructed, detail drawings were then prepared by my Department for foundations on Garden Island and Woolloomooloo Bay shore, and furnished to the Harbours and Rivers Department, under which this portion of the work had to be carried out.

The works already completed and in progress under my Department are as follows:—

Garden Island.
Erection of two cottages for men in charge—completed	£1,390 10 0
„ rigging-house, sail-loft, &c.	16,289 18 11
„ barrack, contract price—in progress	8,003 0 0
Spectacle Island.
The following works in connection with Naval Depot have been carried out at this island, but are not referred to in Mr. Stuart's minute:—
Construction of cable tanks	£821 0 0
Erection of shell-store, &c.	6,775 0 0
Works already carried out and in progress	£33,279 8 11
Works remaining to be carried out:—
Garden Island.
Engineer's shop—plan submitted	Estimated cost £17,000 0 0
Chain and anchor store—plan submitted	4,000 0 0
Fittings, &c., Barrack	1,530 0 0
Saw-mill, spar shed, boat-house, and pitch store	13,000 0 0
Prison	4,500 0 0
Water-closets, drainage, &c.	4,000 0 0
Resident officers quarters	4,000 0 0
Woolloomooloo Bay.
Erection of stores, &c.—superstructure	Estimated cost 40,000 0 0
Estimated cost of work remaining to be carried out	£88,030 0 0

The sum (£105,000) submitted for Loan Estimates, will, it is anticipated, be sufficient to cover cost of above works, and works being carried out under the Harbours and Rivers Department.

The papers alluded to, which have been borrowed from your Department, are herewith returned, some of recent date having apparently not yet been dealt with. I forward as well a tracing showing proposed buildings, Woolloomooloo Bay, also asked for by Sir Henry Parkes.

I have, &c.,

JAMES BARNET,
Colonial Architect.

Minute Paper.

Subject:—Re Machinery, Garden Island Naval Works.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, Sydney, 13 July, 1888.

AFTER having visited Garden Island to day, I would strongly urge the necessity of steps being taken for the erection of the buildings at the Island for the reception of the valuable machinery which has arrived and is ready to be put in place, and which is now receiving considerable damage through exposure.

I suggest that the matter be referred to the Colonial Architect under whose supervision the buildings are to be erected.

ROBT. HICKSON.

The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Report on Machinery at Garden Island for Naval Depot.

Harbours and Rivers, 4 October, 1888.

As per M.P. 192-10/1/88, we have been, and are at present, engaged in examining and overhauling this machinery.

There are about 1,381 pieces and 212 cases at Garden Island, representing about 56 machines, 162 cases have been opened; the contents have had the rust removed from them; they have been thoroughly cleaned, redubbed, repacked, and the cases have been properly lettered and numbered, according to indent, and carefully stacked. The pieces have been gone through in a similar manner.

The remaining fifty cases and other pieces will be done in a like way. For your inspection I produce two small pieces, taken from one of the cases, comprising part of the cargo last received; they may be taken as a fair specimen to represent the general state of the machinery as it has been received, and had not prompt and proper precautions been taken a quantity of it would have only fit for the "scrap-heap."

Owing to the want of shed-room there are several bed-plates and frames of valuable machines exposed to the weather; they have been painted, and the bright parts redubbed with a composition, put on hot, which for a time is impervious to the weather. If it is not intended to take immediate action in reference to the erection of this machinery, I strongly advise that a new shed be made to receive them, not only to protect from the wet, but also to prevent any damage through the blasting operations now going on in removing the rock close to where they are placed. As these pieces of machinery are conveniently placed for removal to their proper position in the building, it would involve unnecessary expense to bring them back again, but to protect this material I see no other alternative, unless the buildings be proceeded with at once.

There are some pieces, as per indent, have not yet been received; and a few extra machines, not specified in the indent, have been landed. All particulars in reference to this machinery have been, as per instructions, given by me to Mr. Roseback.

Boilers

Boilers have been, as required, painted on the outside; they are placed above the ground resting on wood blocks. The interior has been occasionally examined. I intend, as a further precaution, to suspend in them some unslacked limestone, to absorb any moisture. All openings, not otherwise closed, are covered with wood flanges.

The number and kind of men employed varies according to the kind of work required to be done.
Mr. G. A. Tillet, Acting Principal Assistant Engineer, H. B. DAWSON.
Harbours and Rivers Department.

Submitted for the information of the Engineer-in-Chief.—G.W., 5/10/88. Write again, drawing attention to the want of buildings for this machinery.—R.H., 9/10/88. Write.—S.S., 10/11/88. See M.P. 7,404/88 herewith, Jno. P., 11/10/88—J.S.

From the paper hereto attached it will be observed that the necessity for the erection of buildings for the reception of the machinery at Garden Island is daily becoming more apparent, I would therefore again respectfully urge that steps be taken to carry out this much needed want. Copy of my minute of the 13th July herewith.—ROBT. HICKSON, B.C., 12/10/88. Under Secretary for Public Works.

Colonial Architect,—Report.—J.B., 18/10/88. Urgent.

Drawings of proposed buildings for reception of the machinery referred to, estimated at £17,000, were submitted to works on 8th September and 14th November, 1887, also subsequently referred to on 28th March last.—P.W., 88-3574.—I have not since received any instructions in the matter.—J.B., 25/10/88. P.W.O., 26/10/88.

Memo. to Mr. Dawson.—Cleaning Machinery, &c., Garden Island.

THE cost of this work, about £30 per month, seems rather large. Will Mr. Dawson be good enough to report as to its necessity, and whether what is absolutely necessary could not be done for less money?

G. A. TILLET,
30/10/88.

Mr. Tillet,—Report attached.—H.B.D., 30/10/88. Mr. Tillet.

The Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Respecting works, Garden Island, in connection with Naval Station.

Sir, Department of Public Works, Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 21 August, 1888.

The sum of £165,000 having been voted on Loan Estimates this year for work in connection with Naval Station, I do myself the honor to refer to my blank cover minute of 28th March last and previous correspondence, submitting plans for engineer's shops and chain and anchor store, proposed to be erected on Garden Island, estimated respectively at £17,000 and £4,000, but for which funds were not then available. Therefore, if it should be decided to carry out these works, tenders can be invited at once.

I have, &c.,

JAMES BARNET,
Colonial Architect.

The Principal Under Secretary.—J.B., B.C., 25/8/88. P.W., 88-336, 88-3574. Submitted.—J.B., 12/9/88. For approval.—C.W., 15/9/88.

Men Cleaning, Overhauling, &c., Machinery for Garden Island.

Harbours and Rivers Department, 31 October, 1888.

THE number engaged can only be regulated, with safety to the men and machinery, according to the weight and kind of material we have to deal with. Carrying out this principle, the expense varies, and has been reduced as low as possible.

From previous reports representing the bad condition (through rust) in which some of this machinery was received, and the way in which it has been cleaned, painted, stacked, and numbered, I think the expense incurred is reasonable.

When I find there is not full employment for the men their services are dispensed with, and when required they are again employed. As this work requires care the most useful men are retained.

If you could please state a time when you can make it convenient to go to the island, as I require your advice about several things in connection with this work, and you could then see what has been done and what requires doing, and, if possible, reduce the expense.

H. B. DAWSON.

Mr. G. A. Tillet, Acting Principal Assistant Engineer, Harbours and Rivers Department.

After visiting Garden Island I have come to the conclusion that only such labour as is absolutely necessary is being employed to clean and store the machinery which has been, is now being, and is to be, landed and stored there; in fact, before much more can be received there, fresh shed-room will be required. There is now a large mass of machinery of a costly kind exposed to the weather, the bright parts being only protected by dubbing. In addition to it being a source of expense, it seems a pity to see valuable machinery exposed as that is. The wooden frame-work and bodies of some half-dozen large lorries are cracked and split in all directions, and will probably not be of any use when required. There is no reason that I am aware of why the shops should not be built, and thus allow of the machinery being put in its proper place. I wish also to draw attention to the fact that in consequence of some blasting operations lately made by Batty and Sheehy, contractors, near the store in which the machinery is placed, some 10 or 15 tons, at the least, of rock are left in a dangerous condition, overhanging the store at its northern end. The rock is much shaken, and should it fall will do a serious amount of damage. I think Mr. Williams should be instructed to have this shattered rock taken down.—G. A. TILLET, 5/11/88. The Engineer-in-Chief.

Mr. Williams to get this rock removed at once, and return the paper. Urgent.—R.H., 5/11/88. This matter will be attended to at once.—S.W.R. (for A.W.), 7/11/88.

I would again draw attention to the necessity of having the buildings erected for the machinery which is now on Garden Island and exposed to the weather. It is costing about £30 per month for cleaning and overhauling the machinery, and, what is far more important, is continually depreciating in value, owing to rust, &c. I suggest the Colonial Architect be asked how long it will be before the buildings are commenced.—ROB. HICKSON, B.C., 7/11/88. Under Secretary Public Works.

The Chairman, Parliamentary Standing Committee, Public Works, to Admiral Commanding Australian Station.

Sir,

Sydney, 26 September, 1888.

I have the honor to state that this Committee, in pursuance of its duties under the Public Works Act of 1888, 51 Vic., No. 37, are engaged considering the expediency of carrying out certain proposed improvements and additions to the wharfage accommodation at Woolloomooloo Bay, referred to them for inquiry by Parliament, and as one of the proposed improvements is the construction of a wharf for the use of Her Majesty's ships on this Station, in lieu of the wharf for that purpose, at present in Woolloomooloo Bay. The Committee desire to know whether, in view of the arrangements between the Government of New South Wales and the Admiralty, for the construction of certain works for the use of the Squadron in these waters, the alteration meets with your approval.

The new wharf, according to the plan before the Committee, is to be constructed to the north of the present wharf, on the western side of the bay, and is to be 588 feet in length; 320 feet of this to be for the use of Her Majesty's ships, and the remaining portion for commercial purposes; and the evidence before the Committee is not sufficiently definite to enable them to understand whether this has been sanctioned by the Naval authorities.

I have, &c.,

JOHN LACKEY,
Chairman.

His Excellency the Governor.—H.P.

The proposed New Admiralty Wharf, Woolloomooloo Bay.

Rear-Admiral Fairfax to His Excellency Lord Carrington, in reply to a letter from the Chairman of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works, on the subject of wharfage accommodation for the Royal Navy, proposed to be provided in Woolloomooloo Bay.

My Lord,

"Orlando," at Sydney, 12 November, 1888.

In reply to letter, dated 26th September, 1888, from the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works, forwarded by your Excellency, on the subject of wharfage accommodation for the Navy, to be provided in Woolloomooloo Bay, I beg to say that the arrangements between the New South Wales Government and the Admiralty have been completed some years ago, and without reference to their Lordships I could not concur in any extensive departure from the plans already approved.

If, however, as now appears, there is a difficulty in completing the wharf and buildings, as designed, in the assigned position, owing to want of foundation, I am satisfied that there will not be difficulty in obtaining authority to alter the position to the extent proposed, provided equal advantages in all respects are offered as were arranged in the former position, and as regards exclusive possession to the Navy of the wharf to the extent originally proposed, with the naval store buildings situated in the same relative position in the rear of the wharf.

Owing to increasing requirements, the want of the new naval store and wharf is very much felt, and further increase of the squadron is anticipated. I should be prepared to submit for Admiralty approval any approved change of position from the original plan which would accelerate the building of the new naval dépôt: And should your Excellency's Government think any such change advisable with that view, I will endeavour to fall in with the arrangement and recommend its adoption if I find the plan proposed to be suitable and feasible.

I have, &c.,

H. FAIRFAX,
Rear-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, New South Wales.

The Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.

(No. 105.)

My Lord,

Downing-street, 18 December, 1888.

With reference to my despatch No. 33 of 22nd March last, respecting the works at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, I have the honor to transmit to you for communication to your Government a copy of a further letter from the Admiralty on the subject.

I request that you will furnish me with a report on the progress of the works at as early a date as possible.

I have, &c.,

Subject :—Again urging erection of buildings for machinery, Naval Station, Garden Island.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, Sydney, 21 December, 1888.

I would again beg to strongly urge that steps be at once taken to proceed with the erection of the necessary buildings for the reception of the valuable machinery for the Naval Station at Garden Island. I should point out that within a month the machinery will probably be landed, and there is no place available as yet for storing it.

Telegram from The Admiral Commanding the Australian Station to His Excellency the Governor.

Auckland, 28 December, 1888.

Will your Excellency's Government kindly inform me whether any prospect continuation naval works Garden Island and Woolloomooloo.

ADMIRAL FAIRFAX.

The Admiral Commanding Australian Station to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

"Orlando," at Wellington, 22 February, 1889.

I have been repeatedly obliged to write and ask your Excellency's attention to the slow progress of the naval works at Garden Island, and delay in building the proposed depôt at Woolloomooloo Bay, and to make inquiries from your Excellency with the object of replying to letters which I have received from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

2. In acknowledging them your Excellency has in each case replied that they have been handed to the Colonial Secretary, but no reply on the subject of my letters, giving the information that I sought, has ever reached me.

3. The barracks and sail-loft and boat-house appear to be nearly complete, but neither of these buildings have been yet handed over to the Navy, and no progress has been made with other buildings designed for Garden Island, or with the Naval Store at Woolloomooloo Bay.

4. I had hoped that the barracks would have been available for the crew of the "Dart," about to be thoroughly repaired for recommission on the station, but I have been obliged to withdraw her from Sydney to Auckland, where the crew can be provided for in the Naval Depôt, and necessary work of repairs effected.

5. For efficient performance of work connected with repairs and maintenance of Squadron, Sydney affords no greater facility than can be obtained in other leading Australian ports by employing contract. In other Colonies I have been assured on the best authority that Government would be ready to place such buildings and store-houses at the disposal of the Admiralty as might be required. I and the officers preceding me in command of the Naval Station have been unwilling to suggest any alteration in the arrangements, believing that the Government of New South Wales intended to carry out their agreement entered into with the Admiralty without delay, but now that all works on Garden Island are apparently abandoned, I feel disposed to advise that, in view of the large increase of stores that will be required in anticipation of the Auxiliary Squadron, we should seek buildings where our stores can be conveniently placed, and where they will not deteriorate.

6. Hitherto the performance of necessary work has been confined to Sydney, as the Naval Head Quarters, and the amount of Imperial money passing through the Naval Depôt annually exceeds £80,000.

7. The completion of the agreement made in 1881, and of the buildings, as by plans drawn up in 1883-84, has been always and continuously expected as the means of obviating difficulties with which I have to contend in arranging for the efficient maintenance of the squadron.

8. The letters quoted in margin are those above referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2, to which I would request attention of your Government, with a view to reply.

The Colonial Secretary.—CARRINGTON, 4/3/89.

Letters from Admiral Fairfax.

5 March, 1889.

REFERRING to the letter of the 22nd February from Admiral Fairfax, received from His Excellency the Governor this morning, I should like the whole of the communications referred to by the Admiral in the margin of the last paragraph of his letter of the above-mentioned date, and I should also like a précis of the present position of our agreement with the Imperial Government in regard to the works which the Stuart Government agreed to erect.

If necessary, to finish the works which the Colony is pledged to erect, further provision must be made upon the next Loan Bill.

It is clear that we are not carrying out our agreement with the Imperial Government with such vigour and promptitude as to prove our good faith, and the consequence of our neglect will be the removal of the whole, or at least a large part, of the Imperial fleet to one of the other Colonies, and with such removal this Colony would sustain considerable loss of prestige, besides a large annual expenditure, from which much benefit is now secured to a great number of the trading firms of the city.

Works at Garden Island and Storage at Circular Quay.

5 March, 1889.

The whole of the papers connected with the works on Garden Island are with the Department of Works, as will be seen by the memorandum on the next page. There are plenty of funds available to carry out the various buildings, &c., and all that is required now is the approval of the Colonial Secretary, which cannot be given until the papers are returned here. There has been no delay here; if any has occurred it has been in the other Departments.

Perhaps Mr. Dibbs will kindly give his sanction, without waiting for the papers, for the works to be proceeded with at once, and direct that a communication to that effect be made to the Works Department.

Works at Garden Island.

5 March, 1889.

I RECEIVED a communication from the Naval authorities this morning complaining of the delay in carrying out the works on Garden Island, and also of the long neglect in answering various communications from the Admiralty regarding these works.

I shall be glad, as all the papers I understand are with the Minister for Works, if he will kindly cause instructions to be given to have the whole of these works carried out at once, and that the Colonial Architect may be instructed to take the necessary action in the matter.

GEORGE R. DIBBS,
Colonial Secretary.

The Under Secretary for Public Works, B.C.—C.W., P.U.S., 6/3/89.

Instructions to this effect have been given on another paper, P.W., 89/1,269, H. & R., and tenders are now being invited for some of the most important buildings.—J.B., 11/31/89.

The Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 8 March, 1889.

In reference to accompanying papers respecting works for Naval Station, returned to me this day, and copy of letter with same, from Lord Knutsford, dated 18th December last, referring to copy of further letter from the Admiralty—not enclosed—asking for report as to progress of works at Garden Island and Woolloomooloo, I do myself the honor to state that the following works, as reported in my letter of 22nd June last, with papers, have been completed at Garden Island, viz:—

	Cost.
	£	s.	d.
Two Cottages for Caretakers	1,390	10	0
Rigging-house, Sail loft, &c.	16,289	18	11
Barrack for Seamen	8,003	0	0

Those remaining to be carried out at the Island, also reported in my letter referred to, for which estimates were submitted on the dates named in margin, comprise—

	Estimated Cost.
	£	s.	d.
Engineer's Shop	17,000	0	0	Plans submitted 8th Sept. & 9th Dec., 1887.
Chain and Anchor Store	4,000	0	0
Fittings for Seamen's Barrack	1,530	0	0	Submitted 9th May, 1888.
Saw-mill, Spar-shed, Boat-house, Pitch-store, &c.	13,000	0	0
Prison	4,500	0	0	Submitted 2nd February, 1888. P.W., 88/336.
Latrines, Drainage, &c.	4,000	0	0
Resident Officer's Quarters, &c.	4,000	0	0

Having yesterday received your communication conveying full authority for performance of all works connected with the Naval Station, I forwarded forms of notice inviting tenders for the two first-named works, viz:—Engine Shop, Chain and Anchor Store, and now forward notice for the Saw-mill, Spar-shed, &c.; the fittings for the Seamen's Barrack will be proceeded with at once, and the remaining items—Prison, Latrines, &c., Officers' Quarters—will also be dealt with and tenders invited as soon as possible.

In regard to the Naval Store-houses, proposed in the first instance to be erected on the shores of Woolloomooloo Bay, for which sketch plans have been prepared, I would state that on reference to the papers it appears the Commander-in-Chief has suggested, as difficulties were in the way of erecting them on this site, that they should be erected on Garden Island, and a store and office provided for the Paymaster-in-charge, close to Circular Quay, and a portion of the Quay reserved where vessels or lighters might be placed at any time. Under date, 8th November, 1887, on papers respecting change of site, I reported that perhaps the stores and wharf at Circular Quay resumed by the Government from the

A.S.N.

A.S.N. Co. might answer for the Naval requirements. Should it not however be considered desirable to utilize these premises for the purpose, the plans prepared for Woolloomooloo Bay can be altered to suit the site on Garden Island; but as to reserving any portion of the Circular Quay, this is a matter that will, I presume, require to be dealt with specially by the Government.

Subject:—Naval Station, Garden Island.

Department of Public Works, Sydney, 11 March, 1889.

All matters appear now to be in a fair way for settlement, with the exception of that relating to the stores which it was proposed to erect on the shore of Woolloomooloo Bay for the use of the Admiralty. The site first proposed was found unsuitable on account of the difficulty in obtaining foundations. A proposition was then made that the stores should be built on a site further to the north, where better foundations could be found, and a suggestion was made that the Admiral should be put in communication with the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers and the Colonial Architect with a view to the settlement of the matter, but this does not seem to have been carried out. Meanwhile the question came before the Public Works Committee in connection with the proposed wharfage improvements at Woolloomooloo Bay; and the Committee, after taking a considerable amount of evidence, amongst which was that of Captain Kane, on behalf of the Admiral, passed the following resolution:—"That the Committee recommend that the Government enter into negotiations with the Imperial Naval authorities with the view of providing the necessary accommodation at Garden Island in lieu of the proposed site for a Naval wharf and store at Woolloomooloo Bay."

I would therefore suggest to my honorable colleague that he act on the suggestion already made, viz., that the Admiral be put in communication with the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers and the Colonial Architect, and I have no doubt that as the outcome a definite course will soon be decided upon.

Memo. for The Principal Under Secretary.

REFERRING to statements made in the newspapers about a fortnight ago, I wish to know how the works at Garden Island are progressing, and the precise grounds of Admiral Fairfax's complaints.—H.P., 14/3/89.

The Colonial Secretary wishes to know how the works at Garden Island are progressing, and the precise grounds of Admiral Fairfax's complaints.—C.W., 14/3/89.

Register and resubmit at once.—J.B., 14/3/89.

The whole of the papers are with the Department of Works, where they have been since June, last year. The works have now all been approved, and I have asked Mr. Barling for a précis, which will be furnished to-morrow.—C.W., 14/3/89.

After this précis is submitted it will be desirable that the Colonial Architect see me on the subject.—H.P., 14/3/89.

The Colonial Secretary to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 20 April, 1889.

In reference to the provision to be made by this Government for ships of the Royal Navy, I desire to assure your Excellency that there is no disposition to delay unnecessarily the works agreed upon for that purpose, nor do I think any ground exists for doubting that Parliament will be fully prepared to sanction future expenditures which from time to time may be considered expedient for additional accommodation. With respect to the works remaining to be carried out on Garden Island, amounting to an estimated cost of £48,030, I learn from the Architect's department that tenders have now been accepted for the whole of them, and their erection will be steadily proceeded with. They consist of:—Engineer's shop, chain and anchor store, barrack, saw-mill, spar-shed, boat-house, and pitch store, prison, resident officer's quarters, &c., &c., &c.

There has been some difficulty in regard to the proposed Naval Stores at Woolloomooloo Bay, which are estimated to cost £40,000. The site appears to be unsuitable, and one which will be found inconvenient from the first, and increasingly so in the future, while the foundation is admittedly very bad. There is reason to believe that it was selected without sufficient consideration for the main object which should have been kept in view, namely, making adequate provision for the storage of the material of Her Majesty's ships on this station. Moreover, the erection of the stores on this questionable site would, according to the plans, involve an encroachment on the land of the Government Domain, which, I think, would give rise to much public dissatisfaction. It seems to me that it would be well for your Excellency to invite the Admiral's attention to these circumstances before the irrevocable step is taken of erecting the stores on the cramped-up spot at Woolloomooloo Bay.

It may be well to inform your Excellency, though I am of course aware that it is a matter in which the Naval Authorities at present have no concern, that a resolution was adopted by the Legislative Assembly a few years ago to set Garden Island apart for ever as a marine resort for the people of the Colony; and that the agreement made by the late Sir Alexander Stuart with Commodore Erskine was executed either in ignorance or in defiance of this resolution. It is by no means improbable that this violated decision of Parliament may yet be revived in an unpleasant form, and I mention it now in connection with the question of adequate provision for the increasing needs of the Navy in this Port in the not distant future, say, for the next twenty to thirty years. Would it not be advisable and prudent to select some much larger area of land, with deep water frontage on the shores of Port Jackson, as the principal Arsenal.

Arsenal and Dockyard, keeping the portion of Garden Island already occupied as an emergency Naval Depot? I offer this suggestion for the consideration of the Naval Authorities, and at the same time beg to repeat my assurance that the Government of the Colony are desirous of consulting the wishes and meeting the necessary demands of the service on this station.

I have, &c.,
HENRY PARKES.

The Admiral Commanding Australian Station to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

"Orlando," at Sydney, 30 April, 1889.

It affords me great pleasure to transmit to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the letter forwarded to me by your Excellency on the 20th instant, in which your Government state that tenders have now been accepted for the whole of the works for the Navy at Garden Island; and remarks also on the unsuitable site proposed for the Naval Store at Woolloomooloo Bay.

As regards site for Naval store, should your Excellency's Government propose any other available site affording equal facilities, I shall be prepared to depute an officer to visit and report in conjunction with any official your Government may be pleased to name with the view to meet their wishes if practicable—observing that there is urgent necessity for this building, on account of present pressing requirements.

My Lord,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 8 May, 1889.

In reference to the latter part of the letter from Rear-Admiral Fairfax of the 30th instant, I should be glad to learn whether the erection of the Naval Stores on a portion of Garden Island would meet with approval. It has been mentioned to me, though not with authority, that this would be considered a suitable site. It is not suggested by the Government, the only object now being to elicit information on the subject before any other step is taken.

Dear Sir,

25 June, 1889.

Here are the notes as to the probable requirements of the Depot, &c., at Garden Island, and the receiving shed, &c., on the mainland.

We leave for a somewhat extended cruise to-morrow afternoon.

Yours, &c.,

T. F. HAMMILL.

[Enclosures.]

NOTES as to the probable requirements for Naval Store on mainland, Sydney, supposing the Depot to be established on Garden Island.

1. A wharf of, say, 75 feet extent by 15 feet wide, with exclusive right to its use. This wharf to be provided with landing steps, and a crane capable of lifting 5 tons.
 2. A receiving shed or store.—Dimensions, say, 50 feet by 40; a well built, well lighted, and secure shed, containing an office in one corner for storeman's use.
 3. Office.—An office contiguous to the receiving-shed will be required. It should consist of—(a) a room for the officer-in-charge, of suitable dimensions, in which he would transact the business of the Depot on the mainland; (b) a similar room for clerk or writer and a lavatory.
- This establishment on the mainland should be, if possible, on Circular Quay, and so in direct contact with the business parts of the city.

Office Accommodation on Garden Island.

The requirements will be:—

- (1.) Office for Naval Victualling and Store Establishment.—One room for Head of Department; one room, First Assistant, Victualling Branch; one room, First Assistant, Naval Store Branch; two rooms, clerks or writers, or one large room for this purpose; one audit and consultation room and stationery room.
 - (2.) Inspector of Machinery.—One room for Head of Department; one room for Assistant and writer; one room for draughtsman.
 - (3.) Staff-Commander or Captain-in-charge.—One room for Staff-Commander or Senior Executive Officer; one room for charts.
 - (4.) One room, carpenter of yard.
 - (5.) One room, boatswain of yard, or one large subdivided room for both of these officers; a general writing-room or hall, lavatory, W.O.'s, &c., and messengers' room.
- Provision should be made on the Island for a place where the officers can take their luncheon, and accommodate them at times when they are off duty. It is proposed that the officers' quarters in the barracks should be utilized for this, or in working out the office building it might be provided for.

General considerations with regard to the construction of the Victualling and Naval Store Building.

The building should be arranged so as to provide accommodation for two distinct varieties of stores, viz.:—(1) Victualling Stores; (2) Naval Stores, the amount of the former being to the latter in the proportion of about two to three there should therefore be a general subdivision for this purpose.

(2.) Each store-room or store-rooms for particular description of stores, should contain an issue office and a "lay apart" room for convenience and regularity of issue. Every facility with regard to tramways, hatchways, &c., should be provided to each store-room.

The amount of total floor space necessary can only be approximately estimated. It should not be less than 7,500 square yards, but the maximum limit of 10,000 square yards should be attained if possible.

The jetty accommodation must be adequate and provided with a crane and other facilities.

The present jetty on Garden Island should be extended at least 100 feet to the southward, and a causer for lighters and yard craft should be constructed at the end of it. Tramways should run from the jetty to the store, and through the store under the hatchways.

Dwellings required on Garden Island in addition to accommodation provided by Barracks.

Staff-Commander or Senior Executive Officer, one dwelling-house; Inspector of machinery, one dwelling-house; carpenter of yard, one house; boatswain of yard, one house (present cottages to be added to); six cottages for permanent staff.

The Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor.

(N. S. Wales, No. 39.)

My Lord,

Downing-street, 25 June, 1889.

With reference to my Despatch No. 33 of the 22nd March, 1888, and to previous correspondence, respecting the Naval establishment at Sydney, I have the honor to transmit to you, for communication to your Lordship's Government, copies of two letters from the Admiralty on the subject.

I should be glad to be informed of the views of your Government on the subject.

I regret that a delay has occurred in transmitting these letters.

I have, &c.,
KNUTSFORD.

[Enclosures.]

Sir,

Admiralty, 20 April, 1898.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that in view of the importance of the Naval establishment which will be located at Sydney, when the various buildings to be erected by the Colonial Government have been completed, their Lordships consider that it should be under the charge of an officer of Commander's rank.

I am also to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a letter from Rear-Admiral Sir George Tryon, and an extract from one dated 30th December, 1887, from the present Commander-in-Chief on the station, with reference to the provision of suitable quarters for such an officer, and to request that Lord Knutsford will have the goodness to ascertain the views of the Government of New South Wales on the subject.

I am, &c.,
EVAN MACGREGOR.

The Under Secretary of State, Colonial Office.

Extract for.—C. in C., 30/12/87. G. Tryon.—22/3/88.

Extract from letter of Commander-in-Chief, dated 30th December, 1887.

5. I venture to recommend the appointment of officers for local duty at Sydney. The value of the buildings proposed to be constructed is very great, and an officer who understands the requirements of the yard and of the Navy would then at all times be at hand to advise the Colonial Architect's Department when requested. I notice that the plans of Garden Island do not provide a house suitable for an officer of Commander's rank, who probably would have the charge of such an establishment. The quarters marked "Officer-in-charge and Engineer" would be suitable for the departmental officers.

6. With the growing requirements of the station the officers of the Flagship are severely taxed, and I beg leave to refer to my predecessor's letter of March 18th, 1887, paragraphs 14 and 15, on this point. He there remarked that "very soon such a staff will be imperatively required," and "in fact no inconsiderable part of the squadron is employed maintaining the rest." This is quite the case.

Sir,

Sir,

5, Eaton Place, London, 22 March, 1888.

In reply to your letter of the 17th March, be pleased to inform my Lords that I am strongly of opinion that quarters should be provided on Garden Island for an officer of Commander's rank.

The island when the buildings are completed will become Imperial property, and the value of the plant there will be great, and the only way to secure an effectual and at the same time economical charge and supervision of the whole is by maintaining a limited establishment on it. A residence elsewhere, viz., on the mainland, would entail a very costly annual charge, and would not secure proper supervision by night and day.

It probably would commend itself to my Lords to place the vessels held in reserve under the arrangement recently arrived at with the Australasian Colonies, under this officer, who also might well have the supervision of Spectacle Island, and of the establishment there.

I have, &c.,
G. TRYON.

The Secretary of the Admiralty, Whitehall, London.

(D.W., 4,702.)

Sir,

Admiralty, 13 December, 1888.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to call the attention of the Secretary of State for the Colonies to their letter of the 20th April, 1888 (D.W., 4,434), respecting the provision in the buildings to be created at Sydney by the Colonial Government of New South Wales of suitable quarters for an officer of Commander's rank in charge of the Naval Establishment, to which no reply has yet been received, and at the same time to point out that it will be necessary also to provide accommodation for the Commander-in-Chief's secretary and his clerks.

With regard to this latter subject, I am to observe that my Lords are aware that for many years past the Government of the Colony have provided a house for the use of the Senior Naval Officer on the station, and that about four years ago a house was purchased and appropriated for the Admiral's use, but no provision has been made for housing the Commander-in-Chief's staff referred to above.

My Lords hesitate to ask the Colonial Government, who have so liberally provided for the Admiral, to provide also for his staff free of cost to the Imperial Government; but it occurs to them that if the Colonial Government would furnish a small house for the secretary, and quarters for two young officers (clerks), the matter might be arranged by the Admiralty paying a rent for the accommodation thus afforded.

I am further to state, that in the opinion of the late and of the present Commander-in-Chief, accommodation will hereafter be required for the Fleet Engineer and Second Engineer, as well as a house for the Captain-Superintendent of the Naval Establishment.

The ever-increasing work at all naval centres, and especially at Sydney, has convinced my Lords that an establishment on similar lines to those provided for Bermuda, the Cape of Good Hope, Malta, Jamaica, &c., is required at the naval centre of the Australian Station.

I am, &c.,
EVAN MACGREGOR.

The Under Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Col. Sec. for the views of the Government.—CARRINGTON.

The Colonial Architect to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney, 19 July, 1889.

In reference to the enclosed communication from Rear-Admiral Fairfax, informing His Excellency the Governor that he had nominated Captain Hammill, H.M.S. "Orlando," to confer with the Colonial Architect as to the suitability of a position on Garden Island for the Naval Store, forwarded to me under blank cover on 29th ultimo,—

I do myself the honor to report that, at the verbal request of Sir Henry Parkes, I met Admiral Fairfax and Captain Hammill on Garden Island, with the view of arranging for the store and other accommodation considered necessary for the requirements of the Naval authorities, named in accompanying notes furnished by Captain Hammill. The Island and plans of buildings proposed to be erected thereon were then examined, and the sites for store, offices, residences for senior officer in charge, and inspector of machinery; also cottages for men, as shown on general plan herewith, considered the most suitable. Additions to the present cottages, to adapt them for the requirements of the boatswain and carpenter of the yard, were at same time approved, together with extension of wharf and boat camber, as indicated on plan.

The following are the works specified in the notes referred to, viz.:—

Offices.		Estimated cost.
1. Offices for naval victualling and store department—8 rooms		£1,800
2. Offices for inspector of machinery—3 rooms		900
3. Staff commander or senior officer in charge, and charts—2 rooms		500
4, 5. Boatswain and carpenter in charge of yard—2 rooms		500
General waiting-rooms, lavatory, w.c., messenger's room, &c.		600
		£4,100
Stores.
1. Victualling store	£20,000
2. Naval store	30,000
		50,000
These stores to be in one block, and to have 10,000 square yards of floor-space, instead of 4,800, as in first instance approved by Mr. Fishenden.
Extension of jetty, with crane and boat camber		5,000
Dwellings.
Staff commander, or senior executive officer—1 dwelling	£3,500
Inspector of machinery—1 dwelling	2,000
Carpenter and boatswain of yard, each 1 dwelling; present cottages to be added to	400
6 cottages for permanent staff	5,000
		10,900
		£70,000
Summary of Estimate.
Office buildings		£4,100
Stores		50,000
Extension of jetty, &c.		5,000
Dwellings		10,900
		£70,000
Total		£70,000

The

The cost of these works will be chargeable to the vote for Naval Station Loans, 1888.

The notes also state that if the depôt is established on Garden Island the following requirements will have to be provided for on the mainland, Circular Quay if possible, viz. :—

1. Wharf, say 75 feet by 15 feet, with exclusive right of use to same, including crane to lift 5 tons.
2. Receiving shed, 50 feet by 40 feet.
3. Offices for officer in charge of shed, and clerk, two rooms.

With respect to these requirements they might perhaps be provided for by utilizing portion of the stores and wharf at Circular Quay resumed by the Government, formerly belonging to the Australian Steam Navigation Company.

The Colonial Secretary to His Excellency the Governor.

My Lord,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 11 September, 1889.

I shall be glad if your Excellency will communicate to Admiral Fairfax to-day, if you can do so conveniently, that the Government, having had under consideration the altered plans for the erection of naval, victualling, and other stores and offices to meet the wants of the naval authorities on this station, have felt some hesitation on account of the largely increased estimate of expenditure.

Referring to the estimate for the proposed works at the time (a few months ago) when it was considered inadvisable to proceed with the proposed buildings on the western side of Woolloomooloo Bay, the new estimate for buildings required on Garden Island shows an excess of £30,000. In addition to this direct increase of expenditure, provision is required for storage and offices at the Circular Quay, which would take up a valuable portion of a property recently purchased by the Government at a cost of £275,000.

Your Excellency will oblige me, however, by informing Admiral Fairfax before he leaves the Colony, that I have authorized the Colonial Architect to proceed with the works as now proposed, and that the Government will ask Parliament to appropriate the additional sum which will be necessary for their completion.

I have, &c.,

HENRY PARKES.

The Admiral Commanding Australian Station to His Excellency The Governor.

My Lord,

"Orlando," at Sydney, 12 September, 1889.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's letter of this date respecting altered plans for the erection of Naval, victualling, and other stores and offices to meet Naval requirements, and to express my thanks to your Excellency's Government for the instructions given for their being proceeded with.

I hope it may be convenient to forward plans at an early date, so that approval of the Admiralty may be obtained.

CIVIL SERVICE ACT, 1884.

(REPORT OF BOARD FOR 1888.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 48 Vic. No. 24, sec. 62.

REPORT

OF THE

CIVIL SERVICE BOARD OF NEW SOUTH WALES,

For the Year 1888.

To His Excellency the Right Honourable CHARLES ROBERT, BARON CARRINGTON, a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies :

YOUR LORDSHIP,—

We have the honor to submit to your EXCELLENCY in COUNCIL our Annual Report, in terms of the 62nd section of the "Civil Service Act, 1884."

2. The vacancy occasioned by the retirement from the Board of A. C. FRASER, Esq., in the order of rotation, on the 31st December, 1887, was filled by the appointment of A. OLIVER, Esq., M.A., Parliamentary Draftsman.

3. At a meeting of the Board, held on 24th January, JOHN WILLIAMS, Esq., was elected Chairman in pursuance of the terms of the 13th section.

4. The business of the Board has necessitated the holding of forty-one meetings during the year.

112—A

[1,053 copies—Approximate Cost of Printing (labour and material), £17]

5.

5. The returns furnished by Heads of Departments, as required by section 25, show that the following changes have occurred throughout the Service during the year :—

Abolition of offices for purposes of retrenchment and reorganization	15
Deaths	40
Resignations	71
Retirements on superannuation allowance	99
Dismissals	10
Appointments of probationers	5
Appointments under section 7	398
" " 8	188
" " 28	21
Creation of new offices under section 29, in which the appointments were made by the Governor-in-Council without reference to the Board	2
Appointment of temporary officers by Ministerial authority under section 31	257

6. The returns of Teachers in the Department of Public Instruction, show 17 retirements (which are included in the above), and also 261 resignations, 34 dismissals, and 5 deaths.

7. We have dealt with 187 appointments, promotions, and transfers under the provisions of section 27, and have to report that the recommendations made by the heads of Departments have generally been in strict accordance with the provisions of the Act, and have had the full concurrence of the Board. In a few cases we were of opinion that the claims of certain senior and eligible officers had been overlooked, and the matter having been referred back for further consideration, the views of the Board prevailed, and promotion was secured for the officers entitled thereto; but we have further to report that in two cases, full particulars of which will be found in the Appendix, we deemed it necessary to give emphatic expression to our dissent from the recommendations submitted to us, and finally to invite the attention of the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, as the administrator of the Civil Service Act, to what we considered the improper preference shown to ineligible officers.

8. In the one case, the point raised by us, and on which we based our objection to the proposed promotion, was that the officer had, in 1879, been dismissed from the service for serious dereliction of duty, and that such dismissal entirely obliterated and annulled all claim to count his service prior thereto. The dismissal was followed by a long break of service, after which he was appointed to a subordinate and temporary position, not by the Governor-in-Council who had confirmed his dismissal, but by the authority of the Minister only. We held that the claims of officers who had efficiently performed their duties should be considered in the order of their seniority before we could give our assent to the promotion of a person whose misconduct had merited so severe a penalty as dismissal from the service.

9. In the other case it was proposed to promote a young man, whose conduct had previously been reported on more than one occasion to be unsatisfactory, over the head of an officer stated to be efficient, and we, having recapitulated the reports received, requested to be informed why we should be asked to assent to what appeared to be an unwarranted superseding of a competent and senior officer by one who was shown by the reports of his superior officers to be inefficient. We were of opinion that we were entitled to be furnished with clear and definite reasons for the implied disqualification.

disqualification of the senior officer, and such not having been furnished by the head of the Department, we reversed his recommendation and reported the senior officer to the Minister as the most eligible for promotion.

10. It should perhaps here be stated (though the final action has been taken since the close of the year to which the Report relates) that our contention was not upheld by the Minister. In both cases the proposed appointments dissented from by us were made by the Department of Justice.

SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNT.

11. The balance of the Civil Service Superannuation Account, a statement of which is submitted herewith, in accordance with the 62nd section of the Act, was on 31st December, 1887, £235,436 11s. 8d. This was augmented during last year by receipts to the amount of £102,289 18s. 1d., making the total receipts to the end of 1888, £337,726 9s. 9d. The disbursements during the same period were £38,129 7s. 6d., thus leaving a balance to the credit of the Superannuation Account on 31st December, 1888, of £299,597 2s. 3d., showing an increase during the year of £64,160 10s. 7d.

12. The number of officers who have retired on pensions since the Act came into operation on the 1st January, 1885, to 31st December, 1888, is 228, and the amount to which they are entitled is £28,009 15s. 7d. per annum.

13. The gratuities granted during the same period amounted to £36,773 18s. 8d., the recipients numbering 239.

14. Of these, 18 pensions and 79 gratuities have been granted to persons whose services have been dispensed with for purposes of retrenchment or reorganization.

15. Gratuities to the amount of £10,298 3s. 10d. have been paid to eighty-seven widows.

16. Retirements under 60 years of age, consequent on ill-health, were 112 in number; the payments amount to £7,768 11s. 7d. for gratuities, and £8,095 10s. 8d. per annum for pensions.

17. Eleven pensioners have died within the above period, reducing the amount to be paid by £1,025 per annum.

18. The Triennial Investigation into the state and sufficiency of the Superannuation Account is now being made by the Actuary, but as the calculations involved are of a very complicated and voluminous character, and have not yet been completed, it is considered undesirable to delay this Report for receipt of same. A supplementary Report will be issued giving the result of the investigation when the Actuary's Report is received.

19. We think it proper to mention that the delay in furnishing the Actuarial Report has been chiefly created by the death of Mr. H. S. Hawkins, the late Actuary, who was specially charged with this matter.

20. We desire respectfully to invite your Excellency's attention to the Appendices hereto, numbered I to VII, which give full details of the matters under the several headings.

Given under our hands, at Sydney, this 9th day of May, 1889.

APPENDIX I.

COPY of Correspondence between the Civil Service Board, the Under Secretary for Justice, and the Principal Under Secretary, in reference to the appointment of Mr. F. B. Hales as Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie.

Department of Justice, Sydney, 4 June, 1888.

Minute Paper.

Subject:—Appointment of F. B. Hales, J.P., as Police Magistrate, Clerk of Petty Sessions, &c., at Port Macquarie, vice Reeve, retired.

THE office of Police Magistrate, Clerk of Petty Sessions, &c., at Port Macquarie, having become vacant by the retirement of Mr. Edward Reeve, it is proposed to appoint Mr. Frederick Barnwell Hales, J.P., one of the Emergency Clerks of Petty Sessions, whose present salary is £320 per annum, and who has been for some time performing the duties of Mr. Reeve's office, to be Police Magistrate, Clerk of Petty Sessions, and Registrar of the District Court, &c., at Port Macquarie, with salary at the rate of £390 per annum, from the 13th ultimo.

Mr. Hales has been twenty-one years in the Petty Sessions Branch of this Department, but his service is not continuous. He is an efficient officer and has had considerable magisterial experience, and has been specially recommended by the local Bench of Magistrates for the above position.

There are no applicants for the vacancy, and it is considered that Mr. Hales is fairly entitled to the position under the above circumstances.

ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

The Secretary to the Civil Service Board, B.C., 4th June, 1888.

Appointment of Police Magistrate, Clerk of Petty Sessions, &c., at Port Macquarie, vice Reeve.

THE Civil Service Board are unable to concur in the recommendation in favour of Mr. F. B. Hales' appointment as Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie. They are of opinion that as he was dismissed from the Service in 1879, and was only reappointed to the Permanent Staff on 1st December, 1886, such appointment having been made under section 29 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," without the concurrence of the Civil Service Board, he cannot be considered senior to officers who have satisfactorily performed their duties continuously during his break of service. The only way in which Mr. Hales' service previous to his dismissal could count would be if the minute of his dismissal for cause shown, had been again brought under the consideration of the Executive Council, and reversed.

The Board are of opinion that as Mr. F. W. Edwards, P.M., and C.P.S. at Coonabarabran is, by virtue of his salary of £350 and length of service, the senior officer entitled to promotion, he should be nominated to the Hon. the Minister as the officer best qualified for appointment as P.M., &c., at Port Macquarie, with salary of £390 per annum.

E.G.W.P.

The Under Secretary, Department of Justice, B.C., 9 July, 1888.

Sir,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 6 August, 1888.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of the Minute of the Civil Service Board, dated 9th ultimo, in which the Board state that they are unable to concur in the recommendation of Mr. F. B. Hales for the position of Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie, and give their opinion that Mr. F. W. Edwards, P.M. and C.P.S. at Coonabarabran, should be nominated as the officer best qualified for the appointment.

By direction of the Minister of Justice, I referred the papers to the Attorney-General, through the Crown Solicitor (see letter herewith), asking for an opinion as to whether in the nomination by the head of this Department of an officer for an appointment under section 27 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," that section should be interpreted (in accordance with the opinion of the Civil Service Board) as excluding from recognition the eighteen years' service of Mr. Hales, which the Board refuse to recognise. I enclose a copy of the Attorney-General's opinion, in which he says that the question raised as to whether Mr. Hales is entitled to have his service up to the date of his dismissal recognised is not one of law, and that he is not in a position to answer it, and goes on to say that the Board, in their report to the Minister of Justice, do not appear to have complied with the requirements of section 27 of the Act. I am, therefore, to invite the attention of the Civil Service Board to the view taken by the Attorney-General, and to ask them, provided they concur therein, to be good enough to furnish to the Minister of Justice such report as is required under the section referred to, which will enable the Minister to make his recommendation to the Governor and Executive Council in accordance with the provisions of the said section.

I am further to mention that Mr. Edwards was not an applicant for, and in fact has stated that he does not desire, the appointment of Police Magistrate and Clerk of Petty Sessions at Port Macquarie.

I have, &c.,

ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

The Secretary to the Civil Service Board.

Department

* This is a clerical error; it should have been "by" the Minister. The Minister does not appoint, but recommends to the Governor and Executive Council the appointment of officers. [See form of minute by which appointments are submitted to the Executive Council.—J.W.]

Sir,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 17 July, 1888.

In transmitting to you the accompanying recommendation of Mr. F. B. Hales for appointment as Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie, together with Minute of the Civil Service Board thereon, in which they state their inability to concur in such recommendation. I am directed by the Minister of Justice to invite you to have the goodness to place these papers before the Attorney-General for the favour of his opinion, as to whether in the nomination by the Head of this Department, of an officer for an appointment under section 27 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," that section should be interpreted (in accordance with the opinion of the Civil Service Board) as excluding from recognition the eighteen years service of Mr. Hales, which the Board refuse to recognize.

Mr. Hales was dismissed from the Civil Service in 1879, and reappointed in 1886, by the Governor and the Executive Council. Under these circumstances the question is raised as to whether Mr. Hales is not entitled to have his service up to the date of his dismissal, counted in the same way as broken periods of service are counted in cases of resignation or otherwise, and further, whether Mr. Hales' reinstatement does not amount to an admission on the part of the Government that he had been sufficiently punished, and so render unnecessary any such Minute of reversal by the Governor and the Executive Council, as is referred to by the Civil Service Board.

I have, &c.,
ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

The Crown Solicitor, Sydney.

Minute Paper.

Subject:—Appointment of Mr. F. B. Hales as Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 27 July, 1888.

I have the honor to return herewith the papers relating to the above matter, which were forwarded to me from your Department on the 18th day of July, 1888, and to state that I have submitted them to Mr. Attorney-General Simpson, a copy of whose advising thereon will be found upon the other side of this letter.

I have, &c.,
JOHN WILLIAMS,
Crown Solicitor.

The Under Secretary, Department of Justice.

Copy Opinion.

I AM unable to see how I can advise as a matter of law upon the question submitted to me by direction of my colleague, the Minister for Justice, which is "whether on the nomination by the head of this (the Justice) Department, of an officer for an appointment under section 27 of the 'Civil Service Act,' that section should be interpreted (in accordance with the opinion of the Civil Service Board), as excluding from recognition the eighteen years service of Mr. Hales, which the Board refuse to recognize."

It is stated in the letter of the Under Secretary for Justice, that the question is raised, under the circumstances stated therein, whether Mr. Hales is not entitled to have his services up to the date of his dismissal counted in the same way as broken periods of service are counted in cases of resignation or otherwise, and further, whether Mr. Hales' reinstatement does not amount to an admission on the part of the Government, that he had been sufficiently punished, and so render unnecessary any such minute of reversal by the Governor and Executive Council, as is referred to by the Civil Service Board.

It must be obvious I submit that the question thus raised is not one of law, and I am not in a position to answer it. I am equally unable to give an opinion as a matter of law, upon the question as to whether the section 27 should be interpreted as excluding from recognition the eighteen years service of Mr. Hales, which the Board refuse to recognize. I have read the section very carefully and after consideration I fail to see how it in any way touches the questions submitted to me. I do not see that it points out how length of service is to be computed, or that it deals with the question as to the effect of the previous dismissal and subsequent reinstatement in the service of a dismissed officer. It is very badly drawn and very difficult to construct.

The Superior Officer of a Department, whoever that may mean, in which a vacancy occurs, shall transmit to the Board through the Head of the Department a report in writing, and may recommend, that is, the Superior Officer may recommend, any officer in such Department competent in his opinion to fulfil the duties of the vacant office, and the Head of the Department may in like manner make a report and recommendation, and the Board shall report to the Minister the name of such officer (that is the officer so recommended), and of any other in the same or any other Department * * who, in the opinion of the Board, are qualified to fill such vacancy, and in such report the respective lengths of service, degree of competency, and attainments of such officers shall be specified, and if it be expedient to fill up such vacancy the Governor may, on the recommendation of the Minister, promote the officer thus reported as best qualified to fill the vacancy giving preference to an officer of the same Department if equally fit, &c., &c. The Board shall report to the Minister the name of such officer (so recommended), &c., &c. Instead of doing this, they say that they are unable to concur in the recommendation in favour of Mr. Hales, and that they are of opinion so and so, and that he cannot be considered senior to officers who have, &c., &c., and they go on to say how Mr. Hales' service, previous to his dismissal could (be made to) count, and they express an opinion that as Mr. Edwards is the senior officer is entitled to promotion he should be nominated to the Minister as the officer best qualified for appointment as Police Magistrate at Port Macquarie, with salary of £390 per annum.

The Board do not appear to me to have complied with the requirements or provisions of section 27, unless their report can be considered as such a compliance, and I do not think it can. They should follow the directions of the section, and have no power to go beyond it.

G. B. SIMPSON, A.G., 21/7/88.

Sir,

Civil Service Board, Sydney, 19 September, 1888.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 6th ultimo, enclosing a copy of the Attorney-General's opinion on a case submitted to him by the Honorable the Minister for Justice, as to whether Mr. Hales is entitled to have his service, up to the date of his dismissal, recognized for the purpose of determining his seniority over officers who were on the staff prior to his re-entry to the Service in 1886.

The Civil Service Board note that the Attorney-General is of opinion that the question is not one of law. The Board concur in this opinion, and hold that it is a matter of administration, which is purely within the functions of the Board, as the Civil Service Act is to be administered by them.

Mr. Hales was not reinstated in the position from which he was dismissed, which would have been a virtual annulling of his dismissal; but he was first employed by the Minister as a temporary officer without the approval of the Governor-in-Council, and then appointed to an entirely new position without any reference to his previous career in the Service; and under a section of the Civil Service Act, which it has been held leaves with the Minister the power of appointing to a new office any person he may see fit to appoint without the matter being submitted for the concurrence of the Civil Service Board.

As a matter of administration the Board consider that Mr. Hales' service can only be counted from the date of his re-entry into the Service.

The Board are therefore of opinion that the officers of the Department eligible for promotion should be informed of the vacancy, and allowed an opportunity of applying for the promotion it would afford.

Mr. Hales not being in the line of succession, his appointment to the position of Police Magistrate at Port Macquarie would not merely affect the rights of the officer who may be eligible and willing to take the position, but it would stop the promotion of all the Clerks of Petty Sessions below such officer.

As regards the latter portion of your letter, the Board consider that they have conformed with the requirements of the 27th section, as in their report they did not fail to mention the name of the officer recommended by the Head of the Department, but nominated Mr. F. W. Edwards as the senior officer entitled to promotion.

As Mr. Edwards declines the position, the officer next in seniority should be asked whether he is desirous of the appointment, and in the event of his declining to go to Port Macquarie, the same opportunity should be afforded to each officer in succession.

I have, &c.,

E. G. W. PALMER,

Secretary, Civil Service Board.

The Under Secretary, Department of Justice.

Sir,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 1 October, 1888.

I am directed by the Minister of Justice to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 19th ultimo in answer to mine of 6th August last, respecting the recommendation of Mr. F. B. Hales, Emergency Clerk of Petty Sessions, for appointment as Police Magistrate and Clerk of Petty Sessions, Port Macquarie, and to reply as follows:—

The Attorney-General, in his opinion dated 21st July last, stated that he did not think the report of the Civil Service Board, dated 9th idem, was a compliance with the provisions of section 27 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884." But as he did not give a positive opinion, and the Board consider that they have conformed with the requirements of the 27th section, which says "the Board shall report to the Minister the name of such officer" (Mr. Hales) "and of any other" (Mr. F. W. Edwards) "who in the opinion of the Board are qualified to fill such vacancy," the Minister, in deference to the Board, is willing to assume that they have in such report complied with the section. The Board having recommended Mr. Edwards, it appears to the Minister that to comply with the section it would appear he must nominate to the Governor and Executive Council one of these officers for the vacancy. If such be the case he can only nominate Mr. Hales, Mr. Edwards not being an applicant.

In the last portion of your letter you say that "As Mr. Edwards declines the position the officer next in seniority should be asked whether he is desirous of the appointment, and, in the event of his declining to go to Port Macquarie, the same opportunity should be afforded to each officer in succession." The Minister is unable to see under what authority the Board lays down this proposition. There appears to be nothing in section 27 which would even imply that such a course should be taken, or to justify the Minister in exceeding the functions assigned to him by that section. On the contrary, to select one officer after another, on account of his "seniority," would appear to be in direct contravention of the section which states that "degree of competency and attainments," as well as "length of service," should be qualifications to be considered.

Under the circumstances, therefore, the Minister regrets he cannot see his way to adopt the course stated by the Board to be the proper one.

The Minister accepts the opinion of the Attorney-General that the question is not one of law "as to whether, in the nomination by the Head of this Department of an officer for an appointment under section 27 of the 'Civil Service Act,' that section should be interpreted (in accordance with the opinion of the Civil Service Board) as excluding from recognition the eighteen years service of Mr. Hales, which the Board refuse to recognize," and therefore, of course, agrees with the Board that, so far as their functions are concerned, they are entitled to treat the question as a matter of administration by them of the Act. At the same time the Minister thinks that, in the exercise of their independent functions under the Act, "the Minister," "the Head of the Department," and "the superior officer of the department in which the vacancy occurs," ought not to be bound by any view the Board for the time being may entertain on this question.

The

The Minister would feel great reluctance in acquiescing in the establishment of a precedent by which so severe a rule would be recognized as would deprive any officer who had been dismissed from, and afterwards reappointed to, the public service of the advantage of the term which he had served previous to such dismissal. In the present instance, having regard to this and other considerations mentioned, the fitness of Mr. Hales for the position, as evidenced by the recommendations of the Bench, and the necessity of at once terminating the long delay in filling up the vacancy and inconvenience caused through deprivation to this Department of the services of an Emergency Clerk of Petty Sessions, the Minister sees no other course left open to him but to recommend to the Governor and Executive Council the appointment of Mr. Hales to the position of Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie.

With reference to your statement that "Mr. Hales, not being in the line of succession, his appointment to the position of Police Magistrate at Port Macquarie would not merely affect the rights of the officer who may be eligible and willing to take the position, but it would stop the promotion of all the Clerks of Petty Sessions below such officers," I am further directed to add that, as Mr. Hales is a Clerk of Petty Sessions, and his salary as a permanent officer is paid out of the Petty Sessions vote, with great respect to the opinion of the Board, the Minister thinks, so far as he understands the meaning of the term, that Mr. Hales is "in the line of succession," and taking the view which the Minister does as to his seniority, there can be no such injustice done as the Board points out.

I have, &c.,

ARCH. C. FRASER,

Under Secretary.

The Secretary to the Civil Service Board.

Sir,

Civil Service Board, Sydney, 5 December, 1888.

I have the honor, by direction of the Civil Service Board, to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 1st October, in which you inform the Board that the Minister had determined "to recommend to the Governor and Executive Council the appointment of Mr. Hales to the position of Police Magistrate, &c., at Port Macquarie."

The Civil Service Board fully recognize the fact that the responsibility of recommending to the Governor the promotion of any officer rests ultimately with the Minister, but they regret that the Minister "sees no other course left open to him," as in their opinion, the course proposed is not in accordance with the spirit and provisions of the Civil Service Act, which was framed with the intention of securing to officers of good character and attainments, a proper recognition of their right to receive promotion in due order of seniority.

An examination of section 27 will fully maintain this contention. Before the Minister is in a position to act, the Board are enjoined to report to the Minister, not alone the name of the officer recommended by the Head of the Department, but of any other officers in the same or any other Department, who, in the opinion of the Board, are qualified to fill the vacancy. It is therefore clear that the Act confers upon the Board a very large power of nominating—from the whole Service, if necessary—persons in their opinion qualified for promotion to the vacancy so reported.

But how are the Board to exercise this power if the Head of the Department declines to furnish to them the names and qualifications of the officers from whom the nomination might be made? It is evident that the duty of furnishing the required information to the Board must rest with the Head of the Department, and if the information be not afforded the Board are thereby precluded from carrying out an express direction of the section.

In your letter you assume that because the Board nominated Mr. Edwards, the question of appointment necessarily rests between Mr. Edwards and Mr. Hales, and you state that you are unable to see under what authority the suggestion is made that the appointment should be offered to the persons qualified to fill the appointment in order of seniority. You also intimate that in the Minister's opinion this course is in direct contravention of the clause of the Act, which states that the degree of competency as well as length of service should be considered. It has never been disputed that competency and attainments must be taken into consideration, but it appears to the Board that the several officers in the Department filling offices similar to that now to be dealt with must be taken to be competent or they would not have been retained in the service; and there is nothing to show that the officers passed over are not in every way as efficient as Mr. Hales.

As the Board's nomination of Mr. Edwards is rendered void by that gentleman's refusal to take the position, the Board should have the opportunity of nominating an officer both eligible and willing to accept the office. The main points at issue in this case, however, are (1) whether dismissal from the service by the Governor-in-Council for serious dereliction of duty does or does not annul all rights acquired by such service; and (2) whether the presumed revival of those rights ought to operate detrimentally to officers who are eligible by seniority, attainments, and good conduct.

The Board desire to place on record their opinion that such dismissal entirely puts an end to any rights acquired by the officer to claim consideration for any services prior thereto, and that such rights will not be revived by his being allowed to enter the service by an appointment at some other position in the Government service, and that therefore Mr. Hales' right to nomination fails on the score of seniority, apart from the circumstances under which he was dismissed from the public service.

The Board, in view of all the facts, respectfully decline to concur with the recommendation in favour of Mr. Hales, because in their opinion there are officers in the Department of Justice, senior to Mr. Hales, who are eligible for promotion by reason of their competency and attainments.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WILLIAMS,

Chairman, Civil Service Board.

The Under Secretary, Department of Justice.

Sir,

Civil Service Board, Sydney, 5 December, 1888.

I have the honor, by direction of the Civil Service Board, to request that you will submit for the consideration of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, as the Minister charged with the administration of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," the following matter connected with the administration of that Act.

It is with very great reluctance that the Board take the liberty of addressing the Minister on this matter, but they consider the question involved, is one of such importance, as affecting the discipline of the Service, that they would be failing in their duty if they neglected to do so.

The question is, whether a Civil Servant who has been found guilty of gross irregularity, and dismissed the Service by order of the Governor and Executive Council, and whose dismissal has not been set aside or varied by the Governor and Executive Council, and who after years of absence from the Service has been employed as a temporary clerk, and after serving for some time in such capacity has been placed on the staff, is entitled to count his service prior to dismissal on a question as to seniority.

The Board consider that the fact of his having been allowed to join the Service in the same way as a stranger might have done, did not give him a right to have his former service taken into account.

The effect of his dismissal for cause, and of the order for such dismissal still standing unrevoked, the Board think absolutely extinguishes any right to have his services prior to such dismissal counted in his favour, and that the only services he can be credited with, should a question of seniority arise, are those rendered subsequent to his second appointment.

This question has arisen in consequence of a gentleman (who was dismissed for cause, and in respect of whom the order of the Governor and Executive Council for his dismissal still stands unrevoked) being an applicant for appointment to an office to which there are in the Department several gentlemen, filling similar positions, who are, so far as the Board can learn, all competent to fill the vacant office, which would be a promotion to them. It is contended on behalf of the applicant that, by taking into account his services prior to his dismissal, he is senior to the other gentlemen. The Board, however, do not take this view of his position, and consider that the appointment should be offered to the other officers in succession, and only in case of their refusal should it be given to the present applicant.

It is understood however that the Head of the Department supports the claim of the applicant, and that the Minister will be moved to submit his name to the Executive Council for appointment.

The Board admit fully that they have no power to control the action of the Minister, and they respectfully request that their reasons for objecting to the appointment may be considered before it is made.

The proposed appointment is that of Mr. Hales, Emergency Clerk of Petty Sessions at Port Macquarie, to be Police Magistrate at that place.

The Board desire to add that they are not personally acquainted with Mr. Hales, or (so far as they are aware) with any of the persons who they think are entitled, in seniority, to the appointment in preference to Mr. Hales.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WILLIAMS,

Chairman, Civil Service Board.

The Principal Under Secretary, Sydney.

Sir,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 3 January, 1889.

I am directed by the Minister of Justice to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th ultimo, in reply to mine of 1st October last, respecting the case of Mr. F. B. Hales, and to inform you that after full consideration of the same he is unable to alter his previous decision on the subject.

There appears to be a misapprehension on your part in supposing that this Department has declined to furnish you with the names and qualifications of officers, to enable the Board to make the necessary nominations. Any information which this Department can reasonably be expected to furnish would always be supplied when required by the Board.

Accepting the main point at issue to be Mr. Hales' rights, under the Civil Service Act, to claim service before dismissal, the Minister desires me to say that he has not altered his view of the matter, and that he considers the question is not one upon which it is his duty to give way to the opinion of the Board, as, on the other hand, he freely admits that the Board, so far as the Act empowers them to do so, are entitled to act on their own opinion, irrespective of that held by the Minister.

I have, &c.,

ARCH. C. FRASER,

Under Secretary.

The Chairman, Civil Service Board.

Sir,

Civil Service Board, Sydney, 7 February, 1889.

I have honor to inform you that the Civil Service Board are of opinion that as the matter of the vacancy of the Police Magistracy at Port Macquarie is still undecided, the papers in the case should be submitted for the consideration of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, whose attention may be drawn to the fact that the position which the Board take is that the services of an officer who has been dismissed from the Public Service by the Governor-in-Council, for cause shown, and whose dismissal has not been reversed, cannot be counted, in considering claims to promotion.

Mr. Hales having been dismissed from the Service is, therefore, in their opinion, not entitled to count his service prior to such dismissal.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WILLIAMS,

Chairman, Civil Service Board.

The Principal Under Secretary, Sydney.

APPENDIX II.

COPY of Correspondence re filling the vacancy of Seventh Clerkship in the Central Police Office—Qualifications of Messrs. F. W. C. Crane and A. Reeve.

Minute by The Under Secretary of Justice.

Subject :—Appointment of Mr. F. W. C. Crane as Seventh Clerk, Central Police Office.

THE position of seventh clerk in the Central Police Office having become vacant through the appointment of Mr. H. F. Roberts as Deposition Clerk in that office, it is recommended that Mr. Frederick W. C. Crane, at present ninth clerk in the Central Police Office, be appointed to be seventh clerk in that office, with salary at the rate of £144 per annum, from the 1st September next.

Mr. Crane, who has a service of seven years and five months, is recommended by the Stipendiary Magistrates as the officer, in the Central Police Office, best qualified for this position.

The Secretary, Civil Service Board, B.C., 30th August, 1888.

ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

The Civil Service Board are unable to concur in this recommendation, and are of opinion that Mr. Andrewes Reeve, who is senior to Mr. Crane, should be promoted as next in succession, unless cause can be shown for refusing him the promotion.—E.G.W.P. The Under Secretary for Justice, B.C., 5/9/88.

Forwarded to the Stipendiary Magistrates, Central Police Office, with reference to Minute of Civil Service Board, and for favor of report.—A.C.F., B.C., 11 September, 1888.

If promotion is to go by seniority and not by merit, the conclusions of the C. S. Board are correct. If otherwise, the recommendation of those who have a personal knowledge of the applicants should deserve some attention.—T.K.A., S.M., 13/9/88.

Minute by The Under Secretary of Justice.

Subject :—Re appointment of Seventh Clerk, Central Police Office, Sydney, vice Roberts.

WITH reference to the minute of the Civil Service Board of the 5th instant, regarding my nomination of Mr. F. W. C. Crane, as seventh clerk in the Central Police Office, vice Roberts, it will be seen that Mr. T. K. Abbott, Stipendiary Magistrate, Central Police Office, has reported that although Mr. Andrewes Reeve would be entitled by seniority to the position, Mr. Crane is better qualified therefor by merit.

Under these circumstances I think that sufficient cause is shown from Mr. Abbott's report for refusing to recognise Mr. Reeve's claim to the vacant position.

The Secretary to the Civil Service Board, B.C., 17th Sept., 1888.

ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

The Civil Service Board desire to point out that the papers submitted to them do not contain any report on the qualifications or attainments of Mr. Reeve, his name not being mentioned by the Stipendiary Magistrate. As Mr. Reeve is at present senior to Mr. Crane, the Board are of opinion that Mr. Reeve should have the promotion, unless it is shown that he cannot perform the duties of the higher position.—E.G.W.P. The Under Secretary for Justice, B.C., 19/9/88.

Minute by The Under Secretary of Justice.

Subject :—Re appointment of Seventh Clerk, Central Police Office, Sydney, vice Roberts.

THE Board having pointed out that the papers submitted to them do not contain any report on the qualifications or attainments of Mr. Reeve, I assume they consider it necessary that the papers should contain that information.

With much respect for the opinion of the Board, I fail to see that I have omitted, in any way, to comply with the requirements of the 27th section of the Act.

The superior officer of the Department (Mr. Abbott, Stipendiary Magistrate), in which the vacancy occurs, has transmitted to the Board, through the Head of the Department, a report in writing, recommending an officer (Mr. Crane) in his Department competent in his opinion to fulfil the duties of the vacant office, and the Head of the Department has in a like manner made a report and recommendation in favor of Mr. Crane, and in such reports the length of service, degree of competency, or attainments of that officer have been specified.

Under the section referred to, and in accordance with the opinion of the Attorney-General, concurred in by the Board in their minute of the 19th ultimo, re the case of Mr. Hales, Emergency Clerk of Petty Sessions, it now remains for the Board in their discretion to report to the Minister of Justice in addition to the name of Mr. Crane that of any other officer they may think better entitled to the position. It is clearly no part of the duty of the Head of the Department to go beyond the nomination of one officer, and disparage the competency or attainments of other officers, and place such depreciatory remarks on record. In this instance Mr. Crane has a greater length of service than Mr. Reeve—seven years as against five—and receives the same salary, although he is designated as ninth clerk, and Mr. Reeve eighth clerk.

The term "senior" used by the Board apparently means to involve something beyond greater length of service, but the word does not appear to be used in the Act, and I am unable to say what definition the Board attach to it that ought to outweigh in this case the recommendations of the superior officer and the Head of the Department.

The Secretary to the Civil Service Board, B.C., 11th October, 1888.

ARCH. C. FRASER,
Under Secretary.

Vacancy

Vacancy of Seventh Clerkship in the Central Police Office.

THE Civil Service Board, having considered the B.C. minute of the Under Secretary for Justice of 12th October last, are still of opinion that they are entitled to claim from the Heads of all Public Departments the fullest and most complete information as to the length of service, degree of competency, and attainments of all or any of the officers of the Department.
