NEW SOUTH WALES.

CIVIL SERVICE ACT, 1884.

(REPORT OF BOARD FOR 1892.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 48 Vic. No. 24, sec. 62.

REPORT

CIVIL SERVICE BOARD OF NEW SOUTH WALES,

For the Year 1892.

To His Excellency the Right Honorable SIR ROBERT WILLIAM DUFF, a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—

We have the honor to submit to your Excellency in Council our Report for the year 1892, in terms of section 62 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884."

In conformity with the provisions of the Act, that one member shall retire annually, Critchett Walker, Esq., C.M.G., Principal Under Secretary, retired on the 31st December, 1891, and the vacancy thus occasioned was filled by the appointment of James Powell, Esq., Collector of Customs.

Alexander Oliver, Esq., M.A., the Parliamentary Draftsman, and now President of the Land Appeal Court, was elected to the position of Chairman.

Forty-three meetings of the Board have been held for the transaction of business during the year.

The returns furnished in terms of sections 25 and 62 show—

Increases in the number of persons employed in the Public Service under the following heads, viz. :—

Appointments of probationers	29
" under section 7	279
" " 8	259
" " 28	8
" " 29	7
" of temporary officers	under section 31	213
" of teachers	479

— 1,274

And decreases as under :—

Retirements of Staff Officers	60
Officers dispensed with—contributors	31
Resignations—contributors	198
" non-contributors	195
Dismissals—contributors	41
" non-contributors	129
Non-contributors dispensed with	102
Deaths	79
The actual increase has therefore been	439

In their Report for the year ending 31st December, 1891, the Board had occasion to bring again under the notice of the Government various suggestions with a view to the amendment of the Civil Service Act, and during the past year the necessity for such amendments has been made still more apparent.

The Board have found considerable difficulty in dealing with many matters which have arisen—for want of explicit provisions in the Act—and at times their actions have been hampered because, while the general spirit of the Act indicated a certain course of procedure, a strict legal interpretation of certain clauses precluded them from doing what they were of opinion it was intended they should have power to do or to recommend.

The report of the Actuary appointed to investigate the state and sufficiency of the Superannuation Account for the second triennial period was received during the year, and after careful consideration the Board submitted a supplementary report on 15th November, 1892, indicating the causes which, in their opinion, had brought about the unsatisfactory condition of the Fund, as shown by the Actuary, and submitting certain propositions with a view to an amendment of the Act.

The most important cause was stated to be the action taken by the Government in dispensing with the services of a very large number of officers, and charging their pensions to the extent of £32,620 1s. 7d. per annum upon the Superannuation Account.

During the year 1892 the compulsory retirement of officers has been continued, and the annual charge on the Fund thus increased to £33,751 19s. 7d.

Papers in reference to further forced retirements have been submitted to the Board, and they have received intimation that it is intended to dispense with the services of other officers. These claims for retiring allowances will make a disastrous inroad upon the Fund.

The Board are clearly of opinion that the Legislature when providing for the creation of the Fund never contemplated the wholesale compulsory retirements of officers which have taken place, and they consider that it will be impossible to meet the rapidly accruing claims unless special provision be made, not only for those who have been already retired, but also for those whose retirement is now contemplated, or who may in future be dispensed with for purposes of retrenchment and reorganisation.

The Board desire to bring the matter under the notice of the Government in the most forcible terms possible, so that the accruing claims of those who are entitled to superannuation allowance, by reason of their age or infirmity, may not be imperilled by the forced retirements already referred to.

The

The Board invite attention to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and to the position which, in their opinion, they must be deemed to occupy in administering the Act, with reference particularly to the superannuation or retirement of officers. No charge should, in their opinion, be made against the Superannuation Fund until the report of the Board has been made to the Colonial Secretary.

The course ordinarily pursued has been for the Department in which the retiring officer is employed to report to the Board the desire of the officer to retire, or of his incapacity for duty. The Board then make the necessary inquiries and report thereon to the Colonial Secretary as Administrator of the Act, the minute for the consideration of the Governor-in-Council being based on such report. It has, however, occasionally happened that Executive minutes dealing with superannuation matters have been obtained without prior submission of the case to the Board, and the plea has been raised that under section 49 the power to deal with these matters rests with the Minister in whose Department the officer concerned may be; but the Board contend that section 49 is ruled by preceding sections, and that no payment should be made from the Fund until the claims of the officers have been adjudicated upon by the Board. Unless the course of procedure indicated by the Board be adopted in every case it will be difficult to prevent irregularities arising in dealing with retirements.

The promotions in the Service during the year have been carried out in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Appointments have in some cases been made from the Temporary to the Permanent Staff, in which the concurrence of the Board has not been asked, or having been requested has been withheld. These appointments have been made under the provisions of section 28 of the Act, and were objected to by the Board, as it was considered that the section was not intended to refer to junior clerkships or officers in the lower grades of the Service, but rather to the higher positions, where the duties necessitated technical knowledge or professional or special attainments.

SUPERANNUATION ACCOUNT.

The balance at credit of the Civil Service Superannuation Account, a statement of which is submitted herewith in accordance with the 62nd section of the Act, was, on the 31st December, 1891, £441,911 12s. 10d. This was augmented during the year by receipts to the amount of £104,711 16s. 0d., making the total £546,623 8s. 10d. The disbursements during the year were £72,994 4s. 8d., leaving a balance to the credit of the Superannuation Account on 31st December, 1892, of £473,629 4s. 2d., and showing an increase of the Credit Balance during the year of £31,717 11s. 4d.

The number of officers who have retired on pensions since the Act came into operation on 1st January, 1885, to 31st December, 1892, is 589, and the amount to which they were entitled, £76,342 13s. 9d. per annum. Five pensions, which are not yet payable, have been assigned by the Government, amounting to £1,671 10s. per annum. The question as to whether pensions of this nature should form a charge upon the Superannuation Account is under reference to the Attorney-General. Eighty-eight pensioners, whose pensions amounted to £12,120 8s. 9d. per annum, have died since 1st January, 1885, reducing the amount to £64,222 5s. 0d.

During

During the same period, gratuities, amounting to £82,634 11s. 11d., have been granted to 552 recipients, and one gratuity of £166 13s. 4d. has been assigned, but is at present in abeyance. The following statement shows the items in detail:—

To persons whose services have been dispensed with for purposes of retrenchment—

For 238 pensioners	37,838	4	7	per annum.
229 gratuitants	37,225	1	8
1 gratuitant (gratuity not yet payable)	166	13	4

Retirements under 60 years of age, consequent on ill-health—

For 137 pensioners	14,663	5	5	per annum.
95 gratuitants	15,440	9	0

Officers who have retired voluntarily, being over 60 years of age—

214 pensioners	23,841	3	9	per annum.
40 gratuitants	6,246	16	7

Officers who have received injury while in the execution of their duty—

	£	s.	d.
9 gratuitants	2,312	12	1
Gratuities to 179 widows and children ...	21,409	12	7

There are 16 pensioners, under Schedule B of the Constitution Act, receiving £3,258 12s. per annum.

As shown above, the pensions now payable amount to £64,222 5s. 0d., of which £30,470 5s. 5d. are paid to officers who were entitled to retire on account of their age being over 60, or were certified by medical report to be permanently incapacitated for performance of their duty.

In the opinion of the Board, the pension claims for which the Fund is legitimately liable amount to £30,470 5s. 5d. The balance, £33,751 19s. 7d., is to a large extent a charge upon the Fund not contemplated when the Superannuation Scheme was introduced.

The Secretary to the Board of Health to Mr. W. M. M. Arnold.

Sir, Offices, 127, Macquarie-street, Sydney, 5 August, 1893.
 With reference to your letter of the 21st ultimo, addressed to the Principal Under Secretary, intimating your willingness to wait upon the Medical Adviser for the purpose of being examined as to your fitness to return to duty in the Civil Service of this Colony, I have the honor, by direction, to request you to be good enough to attend at these offices at 3.30 p.m. on Wednesday next, the 9th instant, for such examination.

I have, &c.,

Mr. W. M. M. Arnold to The Secretary to the Board of Health.

Sir, 95, Pitt-street, Sydney, 7 August, 1893.
 I have to acknowledge your letter of the 5th instant, requesting me to attend at your office at 3.30 p.m. on Wednesday next, the 9th instant, for medical examination. In reply I beg to say that I will attend at the time and place named.

I have, &c.,
 W. M. MONT. ARNOLD.

Report of Medical Board.

Report of a Medical Board upon Mr. W. M. M. Arnold, retired on pension from the office of Clerk of Records in the Legislative Assembly.

WE examined Mr. W. M. M. Arnold, under directions from the Chief Secretary, on the 9th instant, and are of opinion that his health is now so far restored that he is able to perform any clerical or other duties during ordinary office hours.

Taking, however, his prior history into consideration, we are of opinion that a return to the special position which he vacated, and which involved lengthened and continuous duty under exceptional conditions, would, in his case, be likely to lead before long to another breakdown in health.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, 7 July, 1893.

In accordance with the Minister's instructions, I have revised the staff of this branch, with the view of reducing expenditure by dispensing with the services of all officers who can well be spared at present, owing to the cessation of new works and stoppage of dredges.

* * * * *

A few more changes and reductions, I think, can still be made, but I am not at present able to submit the names, as it will first be necessary to make provision for supplying their places, or to allow works in hand to be completed.

No. 2.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, 21 July, 1893.

When reporting on retrenchment in the staff under my direction, I referred to a proposed change in the management at Fitzroy Dock. I, however, made no recommendation then, until I was in a position to recommend a good successor to Mr. Hoey, who, I proposed, should be retired on a pension.

In justice to Mr. Hoey, I must state that I have no fault to find with his management. He is an old and faithful servant, and has carried on all work entrusted to his care in a zealous and most efficient manner; but as it is imperative that our present staff should be reduced, the only way I can see for doing so, with the least amount of hardship, is to let those retire who by age or service are entitled to a pension, and promote to their places other officers from the staff who would otherwise have to be retired without any pension. This is, however, on the supposition that there are other officers fitted for the vacated positions.

In this case care should be taken to secure a man of experience in general engineering practice, and one who can manage a body of men with tact.

From my own knowledge, as well as from inquiries made, I believe that the officer best fitted to take this position is Mr. E. J. H. Broad, now a mechanical draftsman in this branch. Mr. Broad has been a little over thirteen years in the Service. The first portion of his time he was in the Railway and Tramway Department in the position of foreman of workshops for some time, and the officers of the Department speak highly of his capabilities. He has had long practical experience in England as manager. Mr. Broad's age is about 53.

I therefore recommend that Mr. Hoey be retired on a pension after the usual leave of absence, and that Mr. Broad be appointed to succeed him at a salary of £400 per annum.

C. W. DARLEY,
Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers.

Approved;—but Broad to be put in temporary charge only at his present salary, until such time as I can further consider who should be permanently appointed.—W.J.L., 21/7/93.

No. 3.

The Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers to Mr. J. Hoey.

Harbours and Rivers Branch, 26 July, 1893.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. MAIR.

(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 18 October, 1893.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 5th October, 1893, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of all papers and correspondence in connection with the appointment of Mr. Mair.”

(Mr. Kelly.)

The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Melbourne, 2 January, 1893.

I have the honor to apply for the post of Validating Officer in Victoria for the Government of New South Wales, rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. E. Mitchell.

I have succeeded Mr. Mitchell as Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association of Victoria, and my appointment as Validating Officer would, I believe, prove convenient to those interested.

I have, &c.,

JOHN MAIR.

Telegram from The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association to The Chief Secretary.

Melbourne, 20 January, 1893.

REFERRING to my letter of second instant, great public inconvenience resulting from validating officer not having been appointed. Agreements awaiting validation.

A Bill is now before Parliament (copy herewith) which has passed its second reading, thereby it is proposed to repeal the Act under which the appointment is sought.—23/1/93. Inform and send copy.—C.W., 23/1/93.

The Chief Secretary to The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 24 January, 1893.

Referring to your letter and telegram, dated respectively the 2nd and 20th instant, regarding your application for the appointment of Agreements Validating Officer for this Colony, at Melbourne, vice Mr. E. Mitchell, resigned, I have the honor to inform you that a Bill (copy herewith) is now before Parliament, and has passed its third reading, having for its object the repeal of the Act under which the appointment is sought.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE R. DIBBS.

The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Melbourne, 7 March, 1893.

As I learn that the Bill to repeal the Agreements Validating Act, which has been before your Legislature, has been defeated, I beg to renew my application of 2nd January last for the post of Validating Officer in Victoria for your Government.

In support of this application, I would refer you to letters forwarded to you with my former application, and also state that it has the approval of the members of the council of the above association, many of whom are interested in properties in New South Wales.

As the office has been vacant since the close of last year, and great inconvenience may result in the event of agreements being entered upon here which cannot be validated, I beg respectfully to ask your early consideration of the application.

I have, &c.,

JOHN MAIR.

A.U.S.—20/3/93. Mr. Mair, the writer of this letter, has succeeded Mr. Mitchell, who was a Validating Officer, and asks that he may be appointed in his stead. It is alleged that the appointment is necessary as a public convenience.—29/3/93. Keep on hand.—C.W., 29/3/93.

The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Melbourne, 20 July, 1893.

I have the honor to direct your attention to my letters of 2nd January and 7th March last, in which I applied for the post of Validating Officer in Victoria for your Government.

To the latter letter I have received no reply, and I now beg respectfully to urge my application upon your early and favourable consideration.

There have already been cases in which agreements requiring validating have been brought under my notice, and considerable inconvenience has been caused by the absence of an officer to validate.

I have, &c.,

JOHN MAIR.

There does not appear to be any objection to this appointment.—C.W., 27/7/93. Approved.—G.R.D., 31/7/93.

Extract from Government Gazette, 15 August, 1893.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 12 August, 1893.

JOHN MAIR, Esquire,

to be the Officer at Melbourne, Victoria, in whose presence contracts or agreements made under the provisions of the "Agreements Validating Act," 39 Victoria No. 29, between any persons for any personal services to be rendered or performed within the Colony of New South Wales, may be made and subscribed.

GEORGE R. DIBBS.

The Principal Under Secretary to J. Mair, Esq.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 15 August, 1893.

His Excellency the Governor having been pleased with the advice of the Executive Council to authorise you to be the officer at Melbourne, Victoria, in whose presence may be made and subscribed contracts or agreements made at that place under the Agreements Validating Act (39 Victoria No. 29) ^{12 August, 1893.} between any persons for any personal services to be rendered or performed within the Colony of New South Wales, I have the honor to transmit herewith the necessary instrument that has been issued in your favour accordingly, and to request that you will be good enough to acknowledge its receipt.

2. The authority thus conferred upon you has been notified in the Government Gazette of the present date, a copy of which accompanies this communication.

3. I have the honor, at the same time, to transmit herewith for your information a copy of the Agreements Validating Act, and to invite your special attention to the duty imposed upon you by the first section of the Act in respect to agreements to be made or entered into by agents on behalf of other persons.

I have, &c.

(For the Chief Secretary),

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Principal Under Secretary.

The Secretary of the Pastoralists' Association to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Melbourne, 17 August, 1893.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 15th instant (93/9509) forwarding instrument authorising me to be Validating Officer at Melbourne, under the Agreements Validating Act.

I have, &c.,

JOHN MAIR.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Officer in Charge of Immigration matters.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 22 August, 1893.

I am directed by the Chief Secretary to inform you that His Excellency the Governor with the advice of the Executive Council has been pleased to appoint John Mair, Esquire, to be an Officer at Melbourne, Victoria, in whose presence may be made and subscribed contracts or agreements made at that place, under Agreements Validating Act (39 Victoria No. 29) between any persons for any personal service to be rendered or performed within the Colony of New South Wales.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Principal Under Secretary.

The Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Trades and Labour Council of New South Wales, Sydney, 18 September, 1893.

I have been instructed by the above Council to forward you a copy of the following communication received from the Melbourne Trades' Hall Council, and from which information may be gathered relative to Mr. John Mair, an officer appointed by the New South Wales Government, before whom contracts or agreements may be made and subscribed in Victoria, under the "New South Wales Agreements Validating Act of 1876":—

Trades' Hall Council, Melbourne, September 1st, 1893.

Sir,

I am instructed by the Trades' Hall Council to bring under your notice the appointment of Mr. John Mair, Secretary of the Pastoralists' Union, as the officer in Melbourne before whom contracts or agreements under the "Agreements Validating Act of New South Wales" may be subscribed. The objects of that Act, we believe, is to protect workmen being induced to agree to work in your Colony under circumstances that did not fully reveal the conditions of employment they were going to take up. The appointment of Mr. Mair, whom we formerly knew as an employer in the bootmaking trade, but now Secretary of the Victorian Pastoralists' Association, is the most glaring that could be conceived, because, clearly, under circumstances that probably may arise at any moment, it would be his business to induce persons to accept employment in your Colony at less than the ruling wages. All agreements made outside your Colony are invalid under the Act, unless subscribed and signed before a person invested with the powers of office by the Governor-in-Council, and it seems to us an overt act on the part of the Government of New South Wales to subvert the provisions of the law by putting this power in the hands of Mr. Mair. We believe, though we are not sure, that a salary is paid, and, if so, your Government is practically subsidising the Secretary of the Pastoralists' Union. We, therefore, request you to make inquiry, and take steps to induce the Government of New South Wales to cancel the appointment.

I have, &c.,

J. BARRETT,

Secretary.

To the Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council of New South Wales.

The members of the New South Wales Council are of the opinion that Mr. Mair cannot with any degree of justice or fairness to the working classes in both colonies, considering the position he holds as Secretary of the Victorian Pastoralists' Union, administer the laws contained in the Agreements Validating Act of 1876, more especially with regard to Schedule in the said Act, which states that "the Commissioner shall shall inform (the contracting party of the second part) of the current rate of wages for persons of his trade or calling, and of the current prices within the Colony of New South Wales, for house-rent, food, and clothing, according to the latest advices received by him (the Commissioner) from the Agent-General of New South Wales (or other officer duly authorised in that behalf by the Governor and Executive Council of the said Colony), &c., &c."

Of course we cannot prove to the contrary that Mr. Mair has not strictly adhered to the provisions contained in the Act, but nevertheless we are inclined to doubt that such has been the case, considering the position held by Mr. Mair as Secretary to the Pastoralists' Association of Victoria. We therefore request that the appointment of Mr. Mair as Commissioner in Melbourne, under the New South Wales Agreements Validating Act of 1876, be cancelled, and an independent person be appointed to the position.

With regard to the New South Wales Government paying a salary to Mr. Mair, or subsidising him in any way for services rendered, we believe that such is not the case, but the members of the New South Wales Council would like to be better informed on the subject.

Trusting to be favoured with an early reply.

I remain, &c.,
JOHN RIDDELL,
Secretary.

The Chief Secretary directs verbally that this should be only acknowledged.—C.W., 21/9/93.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Secretary to the Trades and Labour Council of New South Wales.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 21 September, 1893.

I am desired by the Chief Secretary to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, forwarding a copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Melbourne Trades' Hall Council relative to Mr. John Mair, an officer appointed by this Government under the Agreements Validating Act of this Colony.

I have, &c.,
CRITCHETT WALKER,
Principal Under Secretary.

Minute of the Chief Secretary.

Acknowledge and inform that the Colonial Secretary declines to accept the dictation of the Trades and Labour Council with regard to cancelling the appointment of Mr. Mair. If at any time a charge is made, and proof offered, that that gentleman has failed to perform the nominal duties of his office, he will be removed.—G.R.D., 22/9/93.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 25 September, 1893.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, I am directed to inform you that the Chief Secretary declines to accept the dictation of the Trades and Labour Council with regard to cancelling the appointment of Mr. John Mair as an officer before whom contracts or agreements may be made and subscribed in Victoria, under the Agreements Validating Act of this Colony.

2. I am desired at the same time to say that if at any time a charge is made, and proof offered, that Mr. Mair has failed to perform the nominal duties of his office, he will be removed.

I have, &c.,
CRITCHETT WALKER,
Principal Under Secretary.

GOVERNMENT LABORATORY.

(REPORT FOR 1892.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Board of Health Office, 127, Macquarie-street, Sydney, 6 October, 1893.
I have the honor to forward you herewith, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, a report by the Government Analyst on the working of the Analytical Branch of this Department for the year 1892.
I have, &c.,
T. P. ANDERSON STUART,
Medical Adviser to the Government.

The Government Analyst to The Medical Adviser to the Government.

Sir, Government Laboratory, Sydney, 24 August, 1893.
I have the honor to submit the following Report on the working of the Government Laboratory for the year ending 31st December, 1892.

The total number of analyses made, of which reports were duly furnished, were:—

For the Medical Adviser and Board of Health...	332
For the Inspector-General of Police	170
For the Collector and the Commissioners of Customs	76

Some of this work involved my absence from Sydney, which, excluding all inquests and attendances at the Metropolitan Courts, necessitated my travelling more than 8,000 miles during the year (8,128 miles).

The great variety of articles submitted for analysis included water supplies of Sydney and of various country towns; proposed new water supplies; water supply of asylums and other public institutions; the old Botany supply; brandy, beer, gin, schnapps, whisky, wines, rum, silent illicit and methylated spirits; rectified spirits and absolute alcohol; lime juice for the use of Her Majesty's Navy, dyes, colours, paints, white and red leads, kaimit, textile fabrics, metal cylinder-packing, buried bank notes, quack and proprietary medicines, tin-foil wrappers employed in packing food, poisonous cheese and tinned meats, calculi, cement, concrete, boiler fluids, sago, Chinese lozenges, lithographic stone, printing inks, "infants' preservative," "preservitas," tea, opium, chloroform, soaps, manures, sand, disinfectants, oils, naphthas, drugs, food, and medicines; water used for ice-making, blood-stains, and human viscera.

Periodical analyses were regularly made of the Sydney water supply, also that of Newcastle and Maitland, and of the effluents from the sewage farm at Shea's Creek. Of the former it may be said that few of the large cities of the world possess a better supply of drinking water than that supplied to the city of Sydney. In the following analysis it will be seen that it maintains its usual standard of purity, and may be described as an excellent drinking water and suitable for all household and dietetic purposes.

Samples of the old Botany water supply were forwarded for analysis early in the year, in order to note the effect (if any) caused on the nature and quality of the water through disuse. The results indicate that the stagnant water is not so good now as when the supply was made use of. There was an increase in the total amount of organic impurity, and much suspended vegetable matter, together with considerable numbers of living organisms, many discernible by the unassisted eye.

There was also a very large increase in the quantity of oxygen used to consume the organic impurity present. Should the water be again required for drinking purposes, an efficient method of filtration would become necessary.

Of the various samples of waters received from premises registered under the Dairies' Supervision Act, and analysed by order of the Board of Health, over 42 per cent. were found to be unfit for human consumption.

These results show a slight improvement on comparison with past years' work, as will be seen from the following figures:—

In the case of the Hunter District Water Supply the water is drawn from the Hunter River at Walka, above the town of Maitland. After passing through the filter beds, and consequent oxidation, the water, as it is presented for delivery in the mains, is a fairly good water, and one that may be freely used for all the usual household purposes.

The sewage farm at Shea's Creek, Botany, affords a typical example of what may be done with sewage by the aid of surface oxidation. A large proportion of the nitrogenous organic matter of the sewage is utilised by growing crops, the remainder passing away in the effluent—that is, the filtered watery portion of the sewage, which, when at its best is not much worse than some waters found in polluted underground tanks. In this condition such effluents may safely be permitted to flow away into rivers, tidal estuaries, and streams other than those used for sources of domestic water supply. It, however, must be borne in mind that the filter beds sometimes appear to be over taxed, and the effluent has an offensive odour, but the normal appearance of an effluent from this farm is usually that of a clear peaty water, quite free from odour.

A number of oils and paints have been sent in for analysis; many of the latter were found to be grossly adulterated, some samples containing more than 50 per cent. of earth, sand, whiting, ground spar, &c. The paints used in the public service are considerably less adulterated than formerly, and instead of paints or colours containing from 50 to 70 per cent. of foreign ingredients, the genuine article is supplied as tendered for, or in accordance with the terms of the specification.

Although the police have been on the alert respecting the subject of adulteration of spirits, very few cases presented themselves during 1892, the most remarkable instance being that of some rum found to be adulterated with methylated spirit. A conviction was obtained, and a heavy fine inflicted; the defence being that the liquor may have come in a cask that had previously contained methylated spirit.

Some

Some interesting facts came to my knowledge regarding quack medicines, which serve to show that simple, harmless substances are used by those who traffic upon the credulity of the public instead of running the risks inseparable from the unskilled use of potent drugs. A poor woman living in the country had a child hopelessly suffering from infantile paralysis—a cripple and quite unable to walk. One of the many quack advertisements in a Sydney evening paper was answered and brought the prompt reply that the child's case was not hopeless, and that on the payment of £1, medicines would be forwarded of such undoubted efficacy, as to make the child walk about quite naturally in less than six weeks from the date of applying the remedy. The money being sent to the Sydney address, the woman received in return a packet of twelve powders, which were carefully given to the child in good faith and according to the directions. A second supply of the powders was obtained on payment of another pound, but as the child was none the better for the course of treatment, the mother naively enough sends the powders to the local police for analysis. The powders came in due course and were submitted to chemical analysis and were found to consist of nothing more nor less than ordinary white powdered sugar; and although some were marked No. 1 and some No. 2 (to be swallowed by the patient on alternate days), yet both were composed of the same well-known and simple article—sugar.

The analytical investigations carried out during the year for the Department of Justice and the Inspector-General of Police embraced many cases of poisoning, criminal assaults, and other cases involving the minute examination of articles of clothing, weapons, and utensils.

The list included the "Makin" baby-farming case, in which a series of infants' remains were exhumed and submitted to chemical analysis; also the case of the sudden death of an infant after having been dosed with Atkinson's Infant's Preservative, a preparation found to contain morphine; the sudden death of a child; alleged assault with a lead-pencil; murder in which a bar of iron had been used as the weapon; case of hocussing or poisoning by drugging the victim's drink by means of opium; attempted suicide by strychnine; three suicides by arsenic; one case of poisoned tea; one of drugged beer; a case of accidental poisoning by arsenic at the Narrabri Hospital; blood-stained clothing and tomahawk from Walcha; two cases of ptomaine poisoning; "De Wayne's case," administering drugs for an unlawful purpose, besides several other criminal cases.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

SANITARY LEGISLATION AND ADMINISTRATION IN ENGLAND.

(REPORT ON.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 7 December, 1893.

Sir,

Sydney, 11th September, 1893.

When I was in England last year I was requested by you, in a letter dated 28th April, 1892, to inquire, on behalf of the Government, into the working of the various Acts in force in England relating to the public health, with a view to the introduction of similar legislation in this Colony.

The results of my inquiries are set forth in the accompanying report.

I have endeavoured, to the best of my ability, to give a clear and intelligible account of the subject as a whole without entering into such minute particulars as might prove tedious and uninteresting to readers who were not conversant with the details of the science of Hygiene. In particular, I have avoided the consideration of what is known as sanitary engineering in its bearings on the supply of water and the disposal of sewage. There are many books which give a perfectly trustworthy account of this subject, and the satisfactory solution of the questions involved in it depends so much on the special circumstances of each individual town or community to be dealt with, that it does not seem to me to be possible to give, within reasonable space, a general view which would possess any practical value.

I have also refrained from entering into the question of vaccination: this matter has been for some years in the hands of a Royal Commission, whose final report is anxiously expected by all who are interested in the subject.

The historical sketch with which my report begins is founded upon Sir John Simon's admirable work on English Sanitary Institutions, which gives an excellent account of the development of sanitary legislation and administration in England.

I have to express my grateful acknowledgment of the kindness shown to me during my inquiry by Dr. Thorne Thorne, C.B., Mr. W. H. Power, and Mr. Preston Thomas, of the Local Government Board. My thanks are also specially due to Professor Wynter Blyth, Dr. Shirley Murphy, Dr. Sedgwick Saunders; Dr. Tatham, of Manchester; Dr. Turner, of Broxbourne; and Mr. C. G. Jones, of the Metropolitan Asylums Board: and while in Scotland I was favoured with repeated interviews by Dr. Russell, of Glasgow; Dr. Campbell Munro, of Paisley; and Mr. A. Murray, of the Board of Supervision.

If there be anything of value in this report, I beg that it may be attributed to the cordial assistance I received from the gentlemen whom I have named.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

H. N. MACLAURIN.

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF ENGLISH SANITARY LEGISLATION AND ADMINISTRATION.

In England at the accession of King William IV. the only statutory enactment in existence bearing on public health was the Quarantine Act, for the prevention of infection brought from beyond the seas. There was no registration of causes of death, and therefore, no one knew with any accuracy the loss of life resulting from preventible diseases. No provision was made for the removal of filth from dwellings, which was commonly stored in cesspools on the premises; often, indeed, in the basement of the houses. Sewers, it is true, there were in many towns, but usually ill-planned and ill-constructed; acting more as receptacles of solid filth than as carriers, commonly diffusing liquid matter rather than removing it. Against nuisances there was no statutory provision; anyone aggrieved by his neighbour's neglect was left to the tedious, uncertain, and costly remedies of the common law. The sale of drugs and of poisons was free and untrammelled; adulteration of food or drink was only noticed by the law, when it affected the exchequer through the excise. Many years before, Lind, Blane, Trotter, and Pringle had shown what sanitary measures could do in controlling disease among our seamen and soldiers; but their beneficent labours were unregarded by the civil authorities, and while death from preventible disease was taking title of every household, the nation and its rulers looked on calmly with the apathy of ignorance.

From this condition the nation was roused in 1831, by the threatening invasion of Asiatic cholera, which gave rise to intense alarm in Great Britain, as well as on the Continent, and the powers given by the Quarantine Act were brought into action. A general Board of Health was appointed, with subordinate local boards; temporary Acts were passed providing for reports of attacks and of deaths by cholera; for the establishment of cholera hospitals; and for the empowering of local authorities to remove nuisances. At last the plague was stayed; the temporary Acts expired by effluxion of time; the Board of Health came to an end, and with the disappearance of the disease it seemed as if the nation would again fall into the apathetic condition from which it had been so sharply aroused. Towards the end of King William's reign, there was, however, passed an Act for the registration of births, deaths, and marriages, which furnished materials for the compiling of information as to the actual death-rate of the country, and as to the loss of life caused by diseases fairly to be regarded as preventible.

The alarming growth of pauperism in England gave rise to the passing of the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834, which was the indirect occasion of a new and more permanent interest in Public Health. In 1838, the Commissioners under this Act addressed an official letter to the Home Secretary, drawing attention to the charges incurred for the relief of destitution caused by diseases resulting from nuisances which generated contagion, and pointing out the alarming prevalence of fever in the metropolis. They suggested that certain powers should be given to Boards of Guardians for the abatement of nuisances, and for the removal of causes of disease; and they supplemented their letter by the addition of reports from their medical inspectors on the prevention of fever by proper sanitary measures, and on the removal of the causes of sickness and mortality among the poor by sanitary regulations. The evils they pointed out were excessive crowding, defective ventilation, absence of drainage, lack of scavenging, insufficient water supply, and consequent accumulations of putrefying organic refuse, poisoning the atmosphere of the surrounding dwellings. They pointed out, moreover, that these evils were not merely the cause of great national loss from the excessive charges incurred for the relief of sickness among the poor, but that the diseases produced by them spread freely into the households of the well-to-do, carrying suffering and death in every direction. They recommended the improvement of dwellings and of ventilation by an amendment of the Building Act, the construction of underground sewers with efficient surface drainage into them, and the immediate removal of nuisances by effectual scavenging. In conclusion, they pointed out that the policy they suggested was not only humane, but also economical, for the outlay required for sanitation would be more than repaid by the saving in the cost of destitution arising from sickness and death.

This important letter, which may be fairly regarded as the origin of authoritative sanitation in the United Kingdom, attracted no small share of public attention. As a consequence, in 1840 the House of Commons appointed a Select Committee to inquire into the circumstances affecting the health of the inhabitants of large towns with a view to improved sanitary arrangements for their benefit. After sitting for three months, and taking evidence, the Committee reported, recommending (1) that there should be a General Buildings Act; (2) that there should be a General Sewerage Act; (3) that in every town of a certain population there should be a Board of Health, partly medical, with power to inspect, to report, and to recommend; and (4) that in every large town there should be an Inspector, whose duty it should be to enforce the observance of sanitary regulations. They further recommended that a Sanitary Act of general import should be passed, which might be applied in particular places by local option; and they pointed out, as subjects for further consideration in the interest of public health, burial grounds, water supply, public open spaces, lodging houses, baths, and the granting of local powers for cleaning and improving building sites. In 1842 another Select Committee of the House of Commons recommended that legislation should be proposed for the abolition of intra-mural interments in all towns of more than 50,000 inhabitants, and for authorising the provision of extra-mural cemeteries.

In the same year a further report was issued by the Poor Law Commissioners in three volumes, the first and second containing local reports on England and Scotland, the third, by Mr. Chadwick the Secretary of the Commission, being a general report on the sanitary condition of the labouring population of Great Britain. These volumes gave a striking account of the evils resulting from filth and overcrowding in every part of the Kingdom. The methods recommended for their amelioration were mainly: removal of the decomposing refuse of towns by the flow of water in drains and sewers; improved water supply as a necessity for this system, and the appointment of District Medical Officers, independent of practice, for the prevention of disease occasioned by defective ventilation and other causes of impurity in workshops and other places where large numbers are assembled. In 1843 a further report was issued by Mr. Chadwick on the practice of interments in towns, strongly confirming the conclusions arrived at by the Select Committee of 1842.

The shocking disclosures contained in these successive reports so impressed the public mind that the political heads of the nation felt bound to give the matter their earnest consideration, and on 9th May, 1843, a Royal Commission was appointed, with the Duke of Buccleuch as Chairman, for the purpose of inquiring inquiring into the sanitary state of large towns in England and Wales, into the best means of securing the public health under the laws, regulations, and usages then in force, and as to how far the public health might be promoted by the amendment of such laws, regulations, and usages. In their two Reports of 1844 and 1845, the Commission fully confirmed the statements made in the reports of the Poor Law Commissioners, and they pointed out the necessity of new legislation, and the lines which such legislation should follow, their recommendations agreeing in the main with those of Mr. Chadwick. To carry these recommendations into effect a Bill was shortly afterwards introduced by the Earl of Lincoln, but owing to circumstances connected with the general political history of the country it did not pass until 1848, when it became law under the title of the "Public Health Act, 1848," with a provision that it should only remain in force for five years, and thereafter to the end of the succeeding Session of Parliament. This Act established a general Board of Health to exercise control on behalf of the Government; it provided a summary jurisdiction against nuisances, to be exercised by local justices; directed further powers to be conferred on populous places outside London where the death-rate should exceed twenty-three per 1,000, and conferred certain powers on the Privy Council in case of the exceptional prevalence of epidemic disease. This Act did not apply to London, but in the same year were passed two Acts, of similar purport, one for the City of London, and one for the metropolitan district outside the city. The Act for the city, with an additional Act in 1851, is to a certain extent still in force, the others have been superseded by more recent legislation, in particular by the Act of 1891.

The members of the General Board of Health under the Act of 1848 were the First Commissioner of Works for the time being, ex officio; the late Earl of Shaftesbury, well-known for his interest in all philanthropic measures; and Mr. Chadwick, a barrister by profession, whose name has been already mentioned in connection with inquiries under the Poor Law; and it was not until two years had elapsed that it was thought fit to add a medical member, Dr. Southwood Smith, to a board appointed for the care and promotion of the public health. During the six years from 1848 to 1854, the board did good service on the whole, more especially with reference to the removal of filth, to sewerage and drainage, and to the protection of the country from cholera: it also published valuable reports on quarantine, on intra-mural interments, and on metropolitan water supply. But the constitution of the board was not good; it came too much under the control of Mr. Chadwick, who, with great ability, was rather too despotic for the administration of a department which was not yet familiar to the public mind. Mr. Chadwick was impatient of opposition, and inclined to be peremptory in his methods, and there gradually arose a strong feeling of hostility to his administration. Consequently, in 1854, when the Act of 1848 came again under consideration, the House of Commons declined to renew the provision for a general board; the Act itself was continued, to be annually renewable, and a nominal board was established consisting of a paid president together with several Ministers of State, who were not expected or intended to act, excepting in unusual emergencies or during the temporary absence of the president. In 1857 it was provided that the Vice-President of the Committee of the Privy Council on Education should also be President of the Board of Health.

Of the various politicians who held the presidency, the best known was the late Sir Benjamin Hall; the secretary was the late Mr. T. Taylor, who was more distinguished as a writer of amusing comedies than as a contributor to the science of public health.

The main duties of the Board were to consider and, if satisfied, to sanction schemes for improvements submitted by local authorities; to act in certain cases under the Nuisances Removal Act; to make special inquiry into the state of interment in large towns; and generally, to act as an adviser in all questions connected with the public health. Among other matters, the Board had to deal with a severe outbreak of Asiatic cholera, which caused 54,000 deaths in England alone. The Board also published a report on quarantine adopting strongly an anti-contagionist theory of epidemic diseases. The views expressed in this report were at variance with the general medical opinion of the day, and their inaccuracy has been demonstrated by recent discoveries, especially in the domain of bacteriology. But we might expect errors in science from a Board of Health consisting mainly of a politician and a playwright. It may be stated generally that the success of English sanitary administration has been more marked in the direction of the abatement of nuisances than in matters more distinctly pathological or medical. The most important reforms effected by the new Board under the presidency of Sir B. Hall were the establishment of a metropolitan board of works for the management of London outside the city, with subordinate vestries and district Boards for sanitary and other purposes, and the appointment of a medical officer who became afterwards the medical officer of the Privy Council; this office was for many years held by Sir John Simon, without doubt the most distinguished English authority in sanitary science.

In 1858, the Board of Health ceased to exist, its medical functions being transferred to the Privy Council, to which the medical officer was attached, and its other duties to the Home Secretary. The Privy Council continued to discharge these functions till the appointment of a Local Government Board, to which they were finally transferred in 1876.

The medical department of the Council devoted its energies at first to a careful and systematic inquiry into the defects of sanitary law and administration, chiefly with respect to nuisances, to contagious diseases, and to diseases affecting particular trades. The results of these inquiries are to be found in the reports of the medical officer of the Privy Council, a mine of wealth for the student of sanitation. It was further the duty of the Privy Council to superintend the performance of public vaccination, and to issue such orders as might be required in view of threatening invasions of cholera.

From what has been stated it will be seen that up to this time the sanitary legislation and administration of England had been piecemeal and fragmentary in character, and, as might be expected, the result was a state of confusion as to legal provisions, as to the duties and rights of over-lapping local authorities, and as to the ill-defined powers of the central authority or authorities. At the suggestion of the British Medical Association, a Royal Commission was appointed in 1869 to inquire into the sanitary administration of England and Wales, excluding London, both city and metropolitan, with particular reference to the laws in force for the promotion of the public health and the prevention of disease, and to the improvements which might be suggested in the constitution of local authorities and the methods of local administration. The report of this Commission, which was completed in 1871, was naturally subjected to severe discussion; its details need not be enumerated here, but its general intention was to establish a Local Government Board as a central authority, to define the areas of local authorities all over the country, and to require that every local authority should retain the services of a Medical Officer of Health. To carry out in the main the recommendations of the Commission, the following Acts were passed:—In 1871, constituting a Local Government Board; in 1872, amending the constitution and powers of local authorities; and

PRESENT STATE OF SANITARY ADMINISTRATION IN ENGLAND.

In describing the present state of sanitary administration in England I shall endeavour to be as concise as possible, giving a general view of the subject, with no more detail than may be necessary to represent it fairly.

The Department of Public Health is, together with that of the relief of the poor, and several others, under the control of the Local Government Board.

In the English method of Government there are two classes of Boards:—

- 1st. Real Boards like the Admiralty, where the Board sits and acts regularly having usually a political head, several professional members, a parliamentary secretary, and an official secretary. Such a Board conducts, and is responsible for, the business of its department, the technical knowledge and practical experience of its professional members being brought directly to bear on the various exigencies which may arise in the management of a great branch of the Public Service.
- 2nd. Nominal Boards, theoretically consisting of a president and of several other Cabinet Ministers and great officers of State, but never sitting or acting as a Board. Here the entire administration is carried on by the president and his secretary or secretaries, the high professional members of the department occupying the position of superior and quasi consultative officers whose advice is demanded, adopted, or rejected at the sole will and decision of the parliamentary head, their direct connection with administrative duties being sometimes very limited.

The Local Government Board belongs to the second or nominal class. It consists of a President, who is usually a Cabinet Minister, of the Lord President of the Council, the Home, Foreign, Colonial, War and Indian Secretaries, the Lord Privy Seal and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. But these great officers and Ministers of State take no part in the conduct of the business of the office; once in a way one of them may be asked to sign a formal paper in the absence of the president; the Department is administered by the president and secretary whose signatures authenticate the official deliverances of the Board.

As usual in English great offices there are two principal secretaries; one, the parliamentary secretary, who goes out of office with every change of Government; the other the permanent secretary who is the head of the official staff, and whose duties are not in any way affected by political change. The business of the office, then, is nominally conducted by two political officers whose tenure is uncertain and often very short, and a permanent officer who becomes thoroughly acquainted with official routine. Naturally this permanent officer, although apparently in the background, tends to gather the reins of real power into his own hands; the parliamentary so-called heads having but little knowledge of the particular business of the office, and having at best a somewhat precarious position, tend naturally to assume more or less the character of figure heads, and authority passes gradually into the possession of the permanent head of the Department. But this phenomenon is not peculiar to the Local Government Board; it is common to all the English high Government offices, excepting where, as at the Admiralty, the influence of the permanent official is restrained by the authority of a Board which is strong by the professional knowledge and ability of its members, or, as in some other cases like, for instance, the Treasury and the Foreign Department, the political importance of the office requires that it should be filled by a Minister of first-rate ability and of long administrative experience.

The present permanent secretary of the Local Government Board is Sir Hugh Owen, K.C.B., a barrister-at-law.

The duties of the Local Government Board are extremely multifarious. They may be conveniently divided into four heads; (1) local Government and County Councils; (2) relief of the poor and poor-rates; (3) public health and local administration, including adulterations of food and drugs; and (4) local taxation and valuation.

Of these the third is the section with which I have to do, and with which the Medical Department is chiefly concerned.

The medical officer of the Local Government Board is Dr. Thorne Thorne, whose name among sanitarians ranks second only to that of his illustrious predecessor, Sir John Simon. The assistant medical officer is Mr. W. H. Power, well known for his researches into the causation of scarlatina. Under these gentlemen there are nine medical officers who are employed in making inspections and inquiries into the causes of unusual prevalence of disease in particular places. I believe the number of these inspectors is to be increased; there are also several medical officers employed in the supply and distribution of vaccine lymph.

In addition, among the officers of the Board there are an architect and an assistant architect; and seven inspecting engineers, four of whom, including the chief, are retired officers of the Royal Engineers. Of clerical officers, assistant secretaries, and legal advisers there is a full staff.

As regards the administration of the Public Health Act the powers and duties of the Local Government Board may be set forth as follows:—

- 1st. To explain by circular to the local authorities the powers conferred and duties imposed on them by recent sanitary legislation.
- 2nd. To draw up and issue to the local authorities such orders as may seem necessary for the prevention and suppression of epidemic disease and from time to time to modify these as may be requisite.
- 3rd. To superintend the vaccination service throughout England and Wales.
- 4th. To establish the boundaries of sanitary districts where this has not already been done by Act of Parliament and likewise to appoint Port Sanitary Authorities.
- 5th. To control the appointment, and dismissal of medical officers of health and of public analysts, and to receive copies of the analysts' reports.
- 6th. To prepare and publish a set of model by-laws for the use of local authorities and to examine, and, if satisfied, to confirm the various by-laws submitted for approval by local authorities.
- 7th. To inquire into the annual receipts and expenditure of local authorities, to sanction loans from the Public Treasury to local authorities for specific purposes, and to control all loan expenditure by local authorities.
- 8th.

- 8th. To inquire into and, if satisfied, to sanction schemes proposed by a local authority for better sanitation of their district, such as by improved sewerage, improved water supply, clearing away of insanitary areas and the like, where legal powers already exist for these purposes the approval of the board is final; where fresh legislation is required the board issues a provisional order which does not come into operation until the necessary Act of Parliament has been passed.
- 9th. To inspect the sanitary condition of any district, especially during the prevalence of any unusual amount of epidemic or other disease.
- 10th. Generally to exercise supervision and control over the sanitary administration of the country, and particularly to compel negligent or recalcitrant local authorities to exercise the powers and discharge the duties conferred on them by law.
- 11th. To prepare an annual report for the information of Parliament.

The authority for ordinary local administration in England is now the County Council, but for sanitary purposes, although the County Council possesses considerable powers, and in some cases uses them, administration is practically in the hands of much smaller bodies known as metropolitan, urban, rural, and port sanitary authorities. The number of these is very great, there being on the list 41 metropolitan, 1,011 urban, 574 rural, and 58 port authorities. The constitution of these authorities varies a good deal; thus in the metropolitan area we have the city under the Commissioners of Sewers appointed by the common councilmen out of their own number, the port under the corporation, twenty-six districts under vestries of large parishes, thirteen under boards of works of combined small parishes, and one under a local board of health. In the urban, rural, and port districts there is also a great variety, but without going into useless detail it may be said generally that the local authority is based either on the corporation in municipalities, or on the Board of Guardians for the Relief of the Poor in unincorporated places; in a few the authority is in the hands of Commissioners for Improvements appointed under local Acts of Parliament.

There are certain peculiar features in the administration of the city of London which make it desirable to set forth the constitution of that local authority a little more particularly. The administration of the city is distinct from that of the rest of London, and is quite independent of the London County Council; it is based on the City of London Sewers Acts, 1848, and 1851, somewhat modified by the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. It is carried out by a body called the Commissioners of Sewers; of these there are ninety-five appointed annually by the common councilmen out of their own number, besides the mayor, the recorder, and the common sergeant, who are commissioners ex officio. The commissioners are the rating authority for the city for sanitary purposes and the like, having power to impose a sewerage rate not exceeding 4d. in the pound per annum, and a consolidated rate for general purposes not exceeding 1s. 6d. in the pound per annum, and having power to borrow on the security of these rates. The authority of the commissioners is confined to the city, within which they control the lighting, paving, cleansing, and all sanitary measures, including markets and slaughter-houses; they regulate burials, providing for that purpose a cemetery at Ilford, in Essex, where, on an average, 9,000 corpses are buried in each year; they also administer the Food and Drugs Act.

For convenience, the commission is divided into three committees:—

- I. Finance and improvement: Manages revenue and expenditure and controls all permanent improvements which are to be a charge on the rates or on the security of the rates.
- II. Streets: Manages lighting, paving, cleansing, and dealing with house and street refuse, controls sewers, and maintains urinals and lavatories at suitable places.
- III. Sanitary: Is charged with all matters more immediately connected with health, such as prevention of infectious and epidemic disease, disinfection of infected premises and things, erection and maintenance of mortuaries, maintenance of a laboratory for the analyses of food, drugs, and water; inspection, condemnation, and destruction of diseased animals and meat in the markets and slaughter-houses within the boundaries of the city.

Every local authority is bound to appoint a medical officer of health and an inspector of nuisances. The appointment of the medical officer is subject to the approval of the Local Government Board, without whose consent he cannot be dismissed. He is engaged for five years; at the end of this term he may be reappointed, or simply dropped and another appointed in his stead, an arrangement which cannot be said to conduce to the independence of the medical officer. The medical officer is the servant of the local authority to whom all his communications must be addressed, to be dealt with by the authority as they shall see fit. He is not permitted under any circumstances whatever to communicate directly with the medical officer of the Local Government Board, but all correspondence on public affairs must pass through what is known as the official channel. Thus if a local medical officer wishes any matter of urgency to be brought under the notice of the chief medical officer he must lay it before the local authority, say, perhaps the Board of Guardians for the Relief of the Poor. They will take it into consideration at their next meeting and refer it most likely to the County Council; the County Council will consider it at their next meeting and send it on to the secretary of the Local Government Board, who will, with the sanction of the president, refer it to the medical officer for his advising, which is again sent back to the local medical officer by the same circuitous route. It will be seen that a good deal of water runs under London Bridge while a matter of life and death is being carried leisurely along the official channel.

It is clear that the position of the medical officer ought to be greatly improved, so that he should be invested with a due independence of evil local influence. His engagement should be permanent, and he should not be removable excepting on pension for age or infirmity, or by the Local Government Board for cause shown. He should be under the authority of the Medical Department, with which he should be permitted to communicate directly under the safeguards necessary for preserving the respect due to the local authority with whom he works. It is improper to ask men, however accomplished and high-minded, to perform delicate official duties without giving them the protection and assistance which are necessary to ensure their independence. The change proposed would, it is true, be a short step towards centralisation, a word of fear to conjure with in England. But persons whose children were saved from disease and death would not, I fancy, care very much whether they owed it to a central or to a local authority.

The relation of the County Council to the local sanitary authority is ill-defined, varying a good deal with the interest taken by the councillors in sanitary affairs. Some councils feel but little interest in the matter and do not even take the trouble to appoint a county medical officer; such a body naturally exercises exercises no power but merely acts as a conduit through which communications pass between the Local Government Board and the local sanitary authority. On the other hand the London County Council turns much attention to sanitary affairs, operating, it is true, under a special Act, the "Public Health, London Act, 1891." Generally, it may be said that so long as the local authority performs its duties, the powers of the council are not exercised in ordinary cases, but the following special subjects are reserved in London for the control of the County Council:—

- 1st. The management of the main sewers; connecting sewers are under the local sanitary authority (vestry or district board of works).
- 2nd. Regulating and inspecting offensive trades.
- 3rd. Licensing cow-sheds and slaughter-houses, and registering dairies and milk shops. Dairymen and milk vendors are registered but not licensed; so the council does not possess the ready means of stopping the sale of unwholesome or infected milk by withdrawing the vendor's license and so making it unlawful for him to sell.
- 4th. Under the Act for the notification of infectious diseases the council exercises the power conferred by clause 6, i.e., that of adding to the list of notifiable diseases enumerated by the Act.
- 5th. The County Council is the local authority for the purposes of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act.
- 6th. The County Council may make by-laws for the removal of nuisances and with respect to water-closets, earth-closets, privies, &c., but such by-laws shall not have force within the city. These by-laws are still in course of preparation.
- 7th. The County Council exercises a general control over the local sanitary authorities comprised within the metropolitan area excepting the city. If any local authority neglect to perform any duty under the Act with respect to the removal of nuisances, the institution of proceedings or the enforcement of by-laws, the County Council may perform any such duty and may recover the expenses from the sanitary authority, provided they have not been recovered from any other person and have not been incurred in any unsuccessful proceeding (sect. 100). In cases of default in sanitary duty not covered by this provision the County Council may make complaint thereof to the Local Government Board who, after inquiry, may make an order requiring the authority to perform the duty complained of within a limited time; and if such duty is not performed within the time limited, the order may be enforced by writ of mandamus, or the Local Government Board may appoint the County Council to perform the duty. Where such appointment is made the County Council may recover all expenses from the defaulting local authority (sect. 101).

These provisions do not extend to the City of London which is under the management of the Commissioners of Sewers, who do not appear to be in any way under the control of the County Council, although many of the more active members of the council would gladly see their powers extended in that direction.

As for the Commissioners of Sewers, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Local Government Board that they have made default of duty with respect to nuisances, the board may authorise any officer of police of the City of London to institute any proceedings which the commissioners might institute with regard to such nuisances, and the officer may recover his expenses from the commissioners. Where default is made by them in any other matter under the Act the Local Government Board may issue an order requiring them to perform the duty wherein default has been made within a limited time; and if the duty is not performed within the time limited, the Local Government Board may enforce it by writ of mandamus, or may appoint a person to perform the duty, with power to recover expenses and reasonable remuneration.

These various provisions for control appear to me to be obscure and even perhaps in some respects inconsistent. At least I have not been able to meet any one who could distinguish for me the circumstances which require the Local Government Board to proceed by mandamus from those which require the procedure by appointment. Nor is it easy to draw the line between the matters in which the County Council can act of its own authority, and those in which it can only act when appointed by the Local Government Board. Empowering enactments ought, one would think, to be as clear as possible; but I do not fancy these will be found to be clear till they have been explained by the costly commentary of an action at law. At present I cannot find that they are often turned to account.

The London County Council appoints a chief medical officer and two assistants, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, and has extensive powers of inquiry into sanitary matters. On the whole it cannot be denied that there is a certain degree of vagueness and probably of over-lapping of powers in the relations between the London County Council and the various local sanitary authorities of London.

Provision is made for the isolation and treatment of persons suffering from infectious fevers, diphtheria, or small-pox by the Metropolitan Asylums Board. This body consists of seventy-two members, of whom fifty-four are elected by the Boards of Guardians of the thirty parishes, or parish unions, which make up the metropolitan area, and eighteen nominated by the Local Government Board. The Asylums Board was established under the Poor Law Act of 1867, to provide accommodation for harmless insane poor persons and for poor persons suffering from infectious diseases. In 1889 its powers were extended to providing accommodation for all infected persons who might desire admission to the hospitals under control of the Board, irrespective of their station in life. The Board is also charged with the duty of training pauper boys for the merchant service or the Royal Navy, but in this report I shall confine myself to an account of the mode of dealing with the infectious sick.

For cases of infectious fevers there are five hospitals at Homerton, Hampstead, Fulham, Stockwell, and Deptford, with about 1,900 beds, and one convalescent hospital at Winchmore Hill with nearly 500 beds; for small-pox there are two ships at Longreach, in the river Thames, with 350 beds, and a convalescent hospital at Gore Farm, near Dartford, with 800 beds; the total accommodation comes to over 3,500 beds. The Board, I am informed, finds this amount insufficient, and is desirous of opening a new convalescent hospital; its intentions are, however, much impeded by the opposition of the County Council of Middlesex. Each hospital is under the control of a medical superintendent who is responsible for everything connected with his institution, under supervision of a visiting committee of twelve members appointed by the Board.

For

For the transport of patients by land there are three ambulance services, stationed in close proximity to the Homerton, Fulham, and Deptford Hospitals respectively, but under an independent administration; the total accommodation for the staff and for horses and vehicles is as follows:—

	Homerton.	Fulham.	Deptford.
Men	22	15	20
Women (including nurses)	14	11	12
Horses	16	15	20
Vehicles	30	13	25

At Homerton and Deptford the accommodation for horses can be increased, on emergency, by sixteen and twenty respectively.

For water transport to the small-pox hospital ships there are three wharfs, at Wandsworth, Rotherhithe, and Blackwall, respectively; and three specially constructed ambulance steamers for the conveyance of patients, with a steam pinnace for the use of the staff. As many as 100 cases of small-pox can be conveyed on one trip by the three steamers.

The chief office of the board is at Norfolk-street, Strand, and it is in telephonic communication with the various hospitals, ambulance stations, and wharves.

The management of these various establishments may be justly called a model of efficiency.

The removal of patients suffering from infectious disease is carried out as follows:—As soon as a medical practitioner certifies that a patient is suffering from fever, diphtheria, or small-pox, a telegraphic or telephonic message is sent by him or by the patient's friends to the chief office, if it be between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. on week days; if on Sundays, or between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m. on week days, the message is sent to the nearest ambulance station. The message must contain the name, age, and full address of the patient, the disease from which he is suffering, and the name of the person applying for his removal. The message is at once transmitted from the chief office to the proper ambulance station, and within five minutes of its receipt, an ambulance with nurse, driver, and a male attendant, if the patient be over 10 years of age, is despatched to the patient's address. If the case be one of fever or diphtheria it is at once taken to the nearest hospital, if it be one of small-pox it is taken in times of epidemic prevalence to one of the wharves where it is examined by a specially engaged medical officer, and if the diagnosis be confirmed the patient is at once sent by ambulance steamer to one of the hospital ships.

Patients may also be removed by the board's ambulances to places other than the hospitals under the control of the board. For this service 5s. is charged with 2s. 6d. extra for a nurse (if one is required) within the metropolitan area; if the removal be to a place outside the metropolitan area an extra charge is made of 1s. per mile.

After each journey the ambulance vehicle is at once thoroughly disinfected on its return to the station.

Many thousands of persons have been removed by the board's ambulances; removals have been carried out in all weathers, at all seasons of the year, and very often during the night, and I am informed that in no case has there been any detriment to the patients or any accident or injury to any person.

Persons receiving treatment for infectious diseases in the board hospitals, at the public expense, do not thereby become paupers in the eye of the law.

There can be no doubt that the action of the Asylums Board has been most beneficial to the sanitary condition of London, so far as regards the prevalence of infectious disease. It has been a most important factor in the extraordinary reduction of the London death-rate from fever, which will be noted in a later part of this report. As to small-pox, also the salutary effect of the system of speedy isolation of infected cases has been well marked. Since 1884, the year in which the methods of the board attained their present standard of thoroughness, there has been no year in which London has not been threatened by an outbreak of small-pox, and in no year has the action of the board failed to arrest the outbreak before it assumed serious epidemic proportions. It should never be forgotten that "isolation, disinfection, and vaccination are the three means for checking the spread of small-pox." (Birdwood Metropolitan Asylum Board Reports for 1891, p. 62.) I believe that speedy isolation and disinfection are the best means of dealing with the other infectious fevers.

There are, however, certain points in this excellent system which seem to me to be susceptible of improvement, and I may shortly note them here.

- 1st. Each infectious hospital is governed by its own committee. I fancy that it would be more conducive to efficiency, especially with respect to the speedy increase of accommodation in time of epidemics, if all these cognate institutions were managed by one general committee with small sub-committees for the inspection of each separate hospital.
- 2nd. A place for the isolation and inspection of suspected cases of small-pox is much wanted in London. No patient can be admitted to a small-pox hospital in London until the eruption has declared itself, however morally certain it may be that he is suffering from initiatory fever of small-pox.
- 3rd. There are no compulsory powers of isolation, excepting under a magistrate's order, which naturally requires considerable delay. And even when such an order has been obtained, the patient cannot be compelled to obey it; the only course is to wait till he is sufficiently recovered to be brought before a magistrate, when he can be fined for disobedience.
- 4th. Notification of infectious diseases, although carried out fairly well, has not yet been performed with that thoroughness which is required for the absolute suppression of infectious disease. This seems to be mainly due to the supineness of local authorities who have not insisted sufficiently on the exact performance of this duty.
- 5th. There is sometimes a difficulty in closing schools in which cases of infectious disease have occurred, the school board is not always willing to fall in with the views of the medical officers.
- 6th. Measles is not one of the diseases mentioned in the Act for notification, it may, however, be added to the list by any local authority.

I may under this head quote the words of the Statistical Committee of the Metropolitan Asylums Board (Report for 1891, p. 9) as applied to small-pox, they are, in my opinion, with some modification equally applicable to other infectious fevers. "It

“It is a matter for great regret that, although London possesses an ambulance service and a system of hospitals admittedly unrivalled, yet it has no central authority charged with the duties of tracing out an outbreak of this infectious disease ab initio, and of taking concerted action towards stamping it out by measures of disinfection and vaccination or re-vaccination. These matters still remain in the hands partly of the forty-one local sanitary authorities, partly of the thirty Boards of Guardians, partly of the Local Government Board, and partly of the London County Council; and the responsibilities appear to be divided as follows—After the managers—frequently, through their officials, the first to hear of the occurrence of cases of infectious disease—have isolated the patients in hospital, and given notice thereof to the local sanitary authorities, (1) those authorities institute such measures of disinfection as may be considered necessary; (2) then the Boards of Guardians may set in motion the vaccination officer and the public vaccinator; and lastly, (3) if they think proper to do so, either the Local Government Board or the London County Council, or both, may, after the lapse of time and the occurrence of many cases have been sufficient to render all their efforts futile endeavour to discover the origin of the outbreak.” And the committee go on to recommend that the necessary legislation should be obtained “to place entirely in the hands of a central body, powers, not only of isolating the sick, but of following the ambulance with the means of immediately disinfecting the premises, bedding, &c., from which the infected persons have been removed, of vaccinating or re-vaccinating those who may have been in contact with infected persons or things, of investigating by skilled assistance the origin of the outbreak, and of compensating when necessary persons detained in quarantine in the interests of the public health. Only by these means, the committee believes, will the Metropolis be saved from the occurrence of a wide-spread epidemic of small-pox, which the persistent attacks of this most preventible disease constantly threaten.”

It will be noticed that these paragraphs set forth in the main the principles which have guided the action of the Board of Health of New South Wales in regard to small-pox for many years past.

To give a detailed account of the sanitary powers which are conferred on local authorities by the various Acts of Parliament in force in England (of which I have already given a list) would swell this report to unreasonable dimensions. It will, I think, be sufficient for my purpose if I adopt the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, as a type of the rest, and endeavour to give an intelligible and concise account of its principal provisions. This Act is intended to do for the Metropolis what the Public Health Act of 1875 did for the rest of the country. It repeals various Acts and consolidates others with amendments constituting a real sanitary code for London, and it may be taken on the whole as a fair representation of the ideas in sanitary legislation which an experience of nearly twenty years has shown to be most useful and most practicable. It applies to the administrative county of London, or the area under the jurisdiction of the London County Council, including the City and the parishes and districts enumerated in the schedules to the Metropolis Management Act of 1855 and amending Acts.

The Act begins by declaring it to be the duty of every sanitary authority to inspect their district from time to time for the discovery of existing nuisances, and to enforce the provisions of the Act for the abatement of nuisances, as well as to put in force all powers vested in them relating to public health, so as to secure the proper sanitary condition of their district.

A general account is then given of the nuisances which may be dealt with summarily under this Act. It is expressed in wide terms, applying to premises, pools, ditches, drains, closets, privies, urinals, cesspools, dung-pits, and ashpits so kept as to be a nuisance, or dangerous to health; to animals kept in such place or manner as to be a nuisance or dangerous to health; to dangerous accumulations or deposits, to overcrowded houses, to houses without proper water fittings (which are afterwards declared to be unfit for human habitation), and to factories and workshops which are either filthy and subject to effluvia, or insufficiently ventilated, or overcrowded.

Any person may give information of a nuisance to a sanitary authority, and every officer of a sanitary authority is bound to give such information. The sanitary authority must then give notice to the person responsible for the nuisance, or to the owner or occupier of the premises requiring him to abate the nuisance and to prevent its recurrence. Failing obedience, the sanitary authority must apply to a petty sessional court who may enforce the requirement of the sanitary authority by a summary order, and who, in cases of wilful act or default, may also inflict a fine not exceeding ten pounds, or not exceeding forty shillings a day during the continuance of default; and the necessary rights of entry for inspection are given to the sanitary authority. Certain other provisions are enacted, and powers are given; in particular the sanitary authority are permitted, if they think proper, to proceed before the High Court instead of summarily.

Sanitary authorities are directed to make by-laws against particular nuisances, such as the accumulation of filth in the streets; the discharge of offensive matter from manufactories, breweries, slaughter-houses, dunghills, &c.; the keeping of animals, and in particular of swine, in improper places; and for regulating the transport of offensive matter, the filling up of cesspools, and the removal of house refuse.

The Act then proceeds to deal with offensive trades, prohibiting the new establishment of the following businesses, viz., that of blood boiler, bone boiler, manure manufacturer, soap boiler, tallow melter, or knacker; and of the following, excepting with the consent of the County Council, viz., that of fell-monger, tripe boiler, slaughterer of cattle or horses (for the purpose of the flesh being used as butcher's meat), or any other business which the County Council may declare by order, confirmed by the Local Government Board, and published in the London Gazette, to be an offensive business, saving however the rights of the corporation of the city of London as to the Metropolitan cattle market and the cattle market at Deptford. Provision is made for the licensing of cow-houses and slaughter-houses, and it is declared to be the duty of the sanitary authority to complain to a petty sessional court in case of any nuisance arising from an offensive trade. If a nuisance is caused by any sanitary authority from its method of removing house or street refuse, or in the premises used for the treatment or disposal of house or street refuse, then the duty of making complaint is laid upon the County Council.

In London, the nuisance arising from the pollution of the air by smoke is of very great moment, and the Act accordingly directs that all furnaces and steam vessels shall consume the smoke arising from them, and gives the sanitary authority power of entry for inspection as in the case of any other nuisance. But the operation of this section is somewhat limited by two provisions:—1st, that in the case of a nuisance arising from smoke, an information can only be laid under the direction of the sanitary authority; and 2nd, that the person using the furnace is not required to consume all the smoke, but only so much as the court may think reasonable under the circumstances. In the case of a conviction under this section the penalties are fairly heavy, being not more than five pounds for the first conviction, ten pounds for the second conviction, and for each subsequent conviction double the penalty inflicted at the previous conviction.

Provision is made for the lime-washing and cleansing of workshops and for the cleansing and ventilation of bakehouses, and this section applies to factories which are not subject to the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, and amending Acts.

In respect to dairies it is provided that the Local Government Board may make general or special orders for the following purposes :—

- (a) For the registration with the County Council of all persons carrying on the trade of dairymen.
- (b) For the inspection of cattle in dairies, and for prescribing and regulating the lighting, ventilation, cleansing, drainage, and water supply of dairies in the occupation of persons carrying on the trade of dairymen.
- (c) For securing the cleanliness of milk-vessels used for containing milk for sale by such persons.
- (d) For prescribing precautions to be taken for protecting milk against infection or contamination.
- (e) For authorising the County Council to make by-laws for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them.

For offences against these orders, fines may be imposed by an order of the Local Government Board, and power of entry for inspection is given to the County Council. As regards the city of London, the place of the County Council is taken by the Corporation.

The sanitary authority are bound to remove street refuse and house refuse; and, when required by the owner or occupier of any premises, to remove trade refuse, but in the latter case the owner or occupier must pay a reasonable sum for this service. Accumulations of filth, which it is not the duty of the sanitary authority to remove, must be removed by the owner of the accumulation, or by the occupier of the premises, on requisition by a sanitary inspector, failing which the sanitary authority shall remove it, and recover expenses by sale of the matter removed, and, in case of deficiency, by proceedings in a court of summary jurisdiction. Provision is also made for the removal of manure and other refuse from stables and cow-houses.

Regulations are laid down for the provision, maintenance and repair of water-closets in houses, factories, and workshops, with power of inspection by the sanitary authority, and fines are imposed for offences in respect thereof; sanitary authorities are instructed to cause offensive pools, ditches, or drains to be cleansed, covered, or filled up; and every sanitary authority is empowered to maintain public lavatories and sanitary conveniences in places where they may be required, and to defray the expenses of erection and maintenance as if they were expenses of sewerage, and to make regulations for their proper management and for the decent conduct of persons using them. An officer of any sanitary authority is empowered to enter any premises and examine any animal or any article, whether solid or liquid, intended for sale for the food of man. If he find such animal or other article of food diseased, or unsound, or unwholesome, or unfit for the food of man, he may seize and remove the animal or article of food, in order to have the same dealt with by a justice, if the animal or article of food be found to be diseased, &c., the justice shall condemn it and order it to be destroyed, and the owner thereof shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine of not more than fifty pounds for each animal or article of food, or, at the direction of the court, without a fine, to imprisonment for not more than six months, with or without hard labour. If any person be twice convicted under this section within twelve months, the court may order a notice of the fact to be affixed for twenty-one days to the premises which he occupies. If any person has on his premises any article of food unfit for human consumption, he may require the sanitary authority to remove it, as if it were trade refuse. This provision will take away the ground of the common defence, that any diseased article of food had been set aside before it was seized with the intention of destroying it.

Any occupied house without a proper supply of water is declared to be a nuisance, and if it be a dwelling-house, to be unfit for human habitation; no newly erected house is to be occupied as a dwelling-house until the sanitary authority have certified that it has a proper supply of water. If a water company cut off the supply of water from any inhabited dwelling-house, they shall give notice thereof to the sanitary authority within twenty-four hours, under a penalty of not more than ten pounds. Every sanitary authority shall make by-laws for the cleansing of tanks, cisterns, and other receptacles of drinking water; and sanitary authorities may provide and maintain public wells, pumps, and drinking fountains in convenient and suitable situations. Penalties are imposed for fouling or polluting water used for drinking, and sanitary authorities are empowered to close polluted wells, tanks, cisterns, or pumps.

The next part of the Act is practically a reproduction of the Infectious Diseases Notification Act of 1889. The diseases to which it applies are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, typhus, typhoid or enteric, relapsing, continued and puerperal fevers, and any other infectious disease to which the section has been applied by the sanitary authority for any particular district, or by the County Council for London as a whole, with the approval of the Local Government Board. When an inmate of any house is suffering from any such infectious disease it must at once be reported to the medical officer of health by :—

- (a) The head of the family, or the nearest relatives in the building or in attendance on the patient, or the person in charge of the patient, or the master of the house; and by
- (b) The medical practitioner in attendance on or called in to the patient, who shall send to the medical officer of health a certificate containing full particulars of the case.

As for division (a), a notice by any one in the list avails for all enumerated later in the list, but apparently not for those enumerated earlier. Thus a notice by the head of the family renders it unnecessary for the relatives to give notice, but a notice by the relatives does not relieve the head of the family from the consequences of himself failing to give notice.

Every one failing in this duty is liable to a fine not exceeding forty shillings, and every medical practitioner is entitled to receive two shillings and sixpence for each certificate sent by him in accordance with the Act, while the provisions of the Act do not apply to houses belonging to the Queen, or to ships belonging to any foreign government.

For the prevention of infectious diseases it is directed that sanitary authorities shall provide premises and apparatus for the removal, disinfection or destruction of infected articles, and may remove, disinfect, and return, or destroy such articles free of charge; for this purpose two or more sanitary authorities authorities may combine on such terms as may be agreed upon. On the certificate of a medical practitioner a sanitary authority may require the master or owner of a house to permit the cleansing of the house and the disinfection or destruction of infected articles therein; and the sanitary authority shall compensate the master or owner for any unnecessary damage caused by such disinfection, and for the value of the articles destroyed by the sanitary authority. The sanitary authority may require that bedding, clothing or other articles shall be given up to them to be disinfected or destroyed, and they shall return the disinfected articles free of charge, and shall compensate the owner for such articles as may have been destroyed. Any person casting infected rubbish into any ash-pit or dust-bin without previous disinfection shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five pounds, and to a further fine of forty shillings for every day during which the offence continues after notice.

Letting for hire any house or part of a house in which any person has been suffering from an infectious disease without having it disinfected is punishable by a fine not exceeding twenty pounds; this section includes the reception of a guest at an inn. If any person letting or showing a house or part of a house for hire shall knowingly make a false answer to an inquiry as to the existence of infectious disease therein at any time within six weeks, he shall be liable to a fine of twenty pounds, or to imprisonment for a month with or without hard labour. Any person ceasing to occupy a house in which there has been an infectious disease within six weeks shall either have it disinfected, or give notice to the owner of its infected state, under a penalty not exceeding ten pounds. Infected persons without proper lodging may be removed to a hospital by a magistrate's order under a penalty for disobedience, not exceeding ten pounds. The next section is so important that I shall quote its very words:—

“If any person—

- (a) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disease wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disease in any street, public place, shop, or inn; or,
- (b) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer; or,
- (c) Gives, lends, sells, transmits, removes or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding, clothing or other articles which have been exposed to infection from any such disease;

He shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £10.”

But proceedings under this section shall not be taken against persons transmitting with proper precaution any bedding, clothing or other articles for the purpose of having the same disinfected.

Infected persons are not to carry on business, so as to be likely to spread infection, under a penalty not exceeding £10. No infected person is to travel in any public conveyance, and if any public conveyance has become infected, it may be disinfected by the sanitary authority free of charge. If infectious disease break out in a dairy, the dairyman may be required to cease from supplying milk till the sanitary authority grant permission, under a penalty not exceeding £5, and 40s. for every day during which the offence continues. Provision is made for preventing infection from the corpses of persons who have died from infectious disease.

Powers are given to sanitary authorities to provide hospitals for the sick and to recover expenses of treatment from any patient who is not a pauper or suffering from an infectious disease, and they may provide ambulances for the conveyance of patients suffering from infectious disease into hospitals or other places of destination, as well as wharves for the embarkation and landing of persons removed to or from any floating hospital. It is expressly stated that any person who is reasonably believed to be suffering from fever, small-pox, or diphtheria, may, although not a pauper, be admitted to hospital and the expenses of his treatment shall be paid by the Board of Guardians of the Poor Law Union from which he is received, to be repaid out of the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund, but the admission of any person suffering from infectious disease into hospital shall not be deemed to be parochial relief, nor shall he by reason thereof be deprived of any right or privilege, or be subjected to any disability, or disqualification.

It is further directed that sanitary authorities shall enforce all epidemic regulations issued by the Local Government Board, in pursuance of section 134 of the “Public Health Act of 1875”; at present these relate only to cholera, and for this purpose the metropolitan asylums managers are declared to be a sanitary authority.

Sanitary authorities are directed to provide and fit up mortuaries, and powers are given to make by-laws for their management, and in certain cases in which a dead body may be a source of danger to health a justice may, on the certificate of a medical practitioner, direct its removal to a mortuary. Provision is also to be made for post mortem examinations, for coroners' inquests, and for keeping unidentified corpses with a view to identification.

Power is given to make by-laws for the regulation of lodging-houses, as to the number of lodgers, separation of the sexes, registration and inspection of lodging-houses, for enforcing drainage, ventilation and cleanliness, with periodical lime-washing, and for the prevention of infectious disease. The definition of common lodging-houses is attended with some difficulty and has often engaged the attention of distinguished lawyers. It would seem to include that kind of a lodging-house in which persons of the poorer class are received for short periods, and, though strangers to one another, are allowed to inhabit one common room, and this is the definition which seems to be accepted in the model by-laws issued by the Local Government Board. In the by-laws of the city of Glasgow, under the head of common lodging-houses are included all houses let in lodgings at a rate of not more than 6d. a night, as well as all lodging-houses for emigrants and seamen.

Sanitary authorities are empowered to make by-laws for the regulation of tents, vans, sheds, and similar structures used for human habitation, and in case of over-crowding or other injurious conditions, such structures are declared a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily under the Act. But this section does not apply to any tent, shed, or similar structure in use by Her Majesty's naval or military forces.

Provision is made in respect of underground rooms let or occupied separately as a dwelling, regulating their dimensions, providing for dryness, ventilation, lighting by means of an area, warming, drainage and closet accommodation. If two convictions for unlawfully occupying an underground room have taken place within three months a petty sessional court may direct the temporary or permanent closing of the room.

So

So far the Act in its first ninety-eight sections describes the various deleterious influences it is intended to combat. It then goes on to establish the authorities for the execution of the Act, already referred to as the sanitary authority, and to provide for the case of default by any sanitary authority; into these matters I have already gone at some length, and it is unnecessary to repeat them.

Provision is made for the general expenses of the Act as follows:—

In the case of the Commissioners of Sewers for the City, out of their sewer rate and consolidated rate, or either of such rates.

In the case of a vestry or district board, out of their general rate.

For the maintenance of hospitals, ambulances, &c., by the metropolitan asylums managers, partly from the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund,* and partly from contributions by the unions and parishes, according to their ratable value.

Borrowing powers are given for the provision of vessels (hospital ships), hospitals, mortuaries, sanitary conveniences, disinfecting apparatus, and premises for inquests and post mortem examinations; and for raising such loans the consent of the Local Government Board is required. Instructions are given for the appointment of medical officers of health and of sanitary inspectors, and the qualifications of such officers are defined.

Provision is made for the sanitary control of vessels, and in particular of the port of London, in which the corporation of the city is declared to be the sanitary authority, and the sections of the Public Health Act of 1875 relating to regulations and orders of the Local Government Board with respect to cholera and other epidemic diseases are declared to extend to London.

Sections 115 to 132 are mainly legal in character relating chiefly to procedure, penalties, expenses, and appeals and to the protection of sanitary authorities from personal liability. Sections 133 to 135 relate specifically to the city of London, declaring inter alia that the Commissioners of Sewers are independent of the London County Council, and prescribing the course to be followed in the event of the commissioners making default of duty in sanitary matters. These provisions I have already sufficiently explained.

The remaining sections are also chiefly legal, containing saving clauses for water rights and for the powers of the Thames conservators, temporary provisions for the case of officers holding office under appointment made before the passing of the Act, an elaborate interpretation clause, a repealing clause, an appointment of time for the commencement of the Act, and a short title (Public Health [London] Act, 1891).

The first schedule contains sections of enactments applied; of these the first declares that the absence of the prescribed water fittings from any house shall be a nuisance, and shall be deemed to render the house unfit for human habitation; others give power to sanitary authorities to take proceedings in respect of nuisances arising outside their district; declare the power of the Local Government Board to issue orders and regulations as to the treatment of persons affected with cholera in the harbours of the United Kingdom and on the seas within 3 miles of the coast, and to enforce them by means of the officers of Customs; give powers to the Local Government Board during the prevalence of epidemic or infectious disease to make orders and regulations for the speedy interment of the dead, for house visitation, for the provision of medical aid, and for ventilation, cleansing and disinfection, and for preventing the spread of the disease; provide for the making of by-laws by sanitary authorities subject to confirmation by the Local Government Board, and authorise the Local Government Board to make such inquiries as they may think fit in matters concerning the public health in any place. The second schedule enumerates the provisions of public health Acts extended to Woolwich; the third gives forms of notices, summonses, nuisance orders, &c.; and the fourth schedule contains a list of enactments repealed by the Act, amounting to thirty-six, of which sixteen are wholly repealed and the rest repealed in part.

As an example of the action of the Local Government Board in preventing the introduction of disease from abroad, under the authority of the various health Acts, I may give a short resume of the cholera orders now in force. The general orders in their present form were issued on 28th August, 1890, and slightly amended on 6th September, 1892. Under these orders if any officer of Customs has reason to suspect that a ship is infected with cholera he shall detain such ship, ordering the master forthwith to anchor the ship in the appointed position, and he shall give immediate notice to the sanitary authority, no one being allowed to leave the ship until she has been examined by the medical officer; provided that if the medical officer's examination shall not have taken place within twelve hours after notice has been given, the ship shall be no longer detained.

Every sanitary authority within whose district passengers are likely to be landed from ships coming from abroad shall, with the approval of the chief officer of Customs of the port, or of the Queen's harbour-master in ports where such an officer exists, appoint a suitable position where vessels may be anchored during detention for medical examination. The medical officer of health shall visit and examine vessels detained by the officer of customs and all other vessels which he may suspect of being infected by cholera.

If a medical officer shall find a ship to be infected by cholera, he shall certify the sanitary authority to that effect, and he shall also inform the Local Government Board. Persons infected by cholera shall be as soon as practicable removed to some hospital appointed for that purpose by the sanitary authority; and the other passengers shall not be permitted to land until they have satisfied the medical officer as to their names, places of destination and addresses; these names and addresses are to be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the sanitary authority to the sanitary authorities of the various places of destination. If a ship is not infected with cholera but has passengers on board who are in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition, the medical officer may similarly require the passengers to satisfy him as to their names and addresses, before allowing them to leave the ship; and he may in cases of infected ships, or of ships which have come from places infected with cholera, direct the bilge water to be pumped out before the ship enters a dock or basin. In infected ships the medical officer is to direct the necessary steps to be taken to prevent the spread of disease; bodies of persons who have died of cholera are to be taken to sea.

* The Metropolitan Common Poor Fund is raised by contributions from the several unions, parishes, and places in the metropolis, assessed according to ratable value, upon precepts issued by the Local Government Board. The fund is paid to a receiver appointed by that board, and it is applied to a variety of purposes, among which is the maintenance of patients in fever or small-pox asylums.

sea and committed to the deep properly loaded to prevent their rising, or to be interred on shore as the sanitary authority may direct; the ship is to be thoroughly disinfected, and all articles likely to retain infection are to be destroyed or disinfected, as the medical officer may require.

The master of every ship infected with cholera is to hoist a yellow flag under the national ensign, and keep it flying from sunrise to sunset.

Besides these general orders there are also special orders in force prohibiting the importation of rags from ports in France, in the Black Sea, and Sea of Azov, and from all ports in Europe to the north of Dunkirk, excepting the ports of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

The Local Government Board has also drawn up regulations and instructions for medical officers of health, providing for their appointment by local authorities subject to the approval of the board; for their tenure of office for a fixed period, subject however to one month's notice from the medical officer, and under certain circumstances to six month's notice by the local authority; and for the salary to be paid, of which one-half is to be contributed by the board. The duties imposed on the medical officers practically cover everything connected with the sanitary condition of a district, and may be readily gathered from the Act which I have just considered.

Perhaps the most important of the publications of the Local Government Board is the series of Model By-laws for the guidance of urban sanitary authorities in administering the Health Act, in framing which the board had the advantage of receiving the views of the Royal Institute of British Architects.

The contents of the series may be summarised as follows:—

I. By-laws which are intended for operation where the local authority do not themselves undertake or contract for—

- (a) The cleansing of footways and pavements adjoining any premises;
- (b) The removal of house refuse from any premises; and
- (c) The cleansing of earth closets, privies, ashpits, and cesspools belonging to any premises.

And which impose the duty of such cleansing or removal, at such intervals as the local authority may think fit, on the occupier of any such premises.

In general, however, it is desirable that local authorities should themselves undertake such cleansing and removal; and they may undertake this duty, and, when required by the Local Government Board, must undertake it. In such cases the by-laws under this head would not be required.

II. By-laws for the prevention of nuisances arising from snow, filth, dust, ashes, and rubbish, and for the prevention of the keeping of animals on any premises so as to be injurious to health. These and the preceding by-laws are under the 44th section of the Public Health Act (38 and 39 Vict., c. 55).

III. By-laws with respect to common lodging-houses:—

- (a) For fixing and from time to time varying the number of lodgers who may be received into a common lodging-house, and for the separation of the sexes therein; and
- (b) For promoting cleanliness and ventilation in such houses; and
- (c) For the taking precautions in the case of any infectious disease; and
- (d) Generally for the well ordering of such houses.

These by-laws are framed under the eightieth section of the Public Health Act (1875). The introductory note by the Local Government Board describes what constitutes a common lodging-house and what constitutes registration. It then points out the extreme importance of preliminary inspection of premises proposed to be registered, because the by-laws assume that, as the result of careful inspection, the structural fitness of the premises in all essential details will have been ensured in advance. The requirements of the by-laws are essentially directed to the maintenance of these conditions of fitness; and in connection with such maintenance frequent systematic inspection of such registered houses is essential.

The by-laws provide for the fixing of the number of lodgers, for the separation of the sexes, for the accommodation of married couples, for the cleansing of yards, rooms, passages, windows, woodwork, beds and bedding, for arrangements for personal ablution, for cleansing and maintenance of water-closets, earth-closets, and privies, and for keeping ashpits in good order. They direct that means of ventilation shall be maintained, that windows of sleeping apartments shall be kept open for stated periods every day, when the weather shall permit; and that bedding and bed clothes shall be aired for at least two hours every day. Regulations are laid down for the prevention of the spread of infection, and other provisions direct that kitchens shall not be used as sleeping apartments, that males above the age of 10 years shall not occupy the same bed, that no new lodger shall occupy the bed of a former lodger within a period of eight hours after the former lodger has vacated it, and that sleeping apartments are to be furnished with the requisite bedsteads, beds, bedding, and necessary utensils. Finally, every common lodging-house keeper is directed to post in each room a placard declaring the maximum number of lodgers who may be received in such room, and in a conspicuous part of the house a copy of the by-laws adopted by the sanitary authority; and the concluding by-law declares the penalties to be incurred, which are recommended to be not more than five pounds for each single offence, and forty shillings per day for each continuing offence.

IV. By-laws relating to new streets and buildings:—

- (a) With respect to the level, width, and construction of new street.
- (b) With respect to the structure of walls, foundations, roofs, and chimneys of new buildings, for securing stability and the prevention of fires, and for purposes of health.
- (c) With respect to the sufficiency of the space about buildings to secure a free circulation of air, and with respect to the ventilation of buildings.
- (d) With respect to the drainage of buildings, to water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ashpits, and cesspools in connection with buildings, and to the closing of buildings or parts of buildings unfit for human habitation, and to prohibition of their use for such habitation.
- (e) As to the giving of notices; as to the deposit of plans and sections by persons intending to lay out streets or to construct buildings; as to inspection by the sanitary authority; and as to the power of such authority to remove, alter, or pull down any work begun or done in contravention of such by-laws.

These

These by-laws are framed under section 157 of the Public Health Act (1875). They do not specify provisions for the sewerage of new streets, the reason being that by-laws for such a purpose must satisfy conditions to a great extent dependent upon the varying circumstances of different localities; moreover, ample powers are already given by the express provisions of the Public Health Act. The by-laws are elaborate and technical, being well illustrated by diagrams; it would therefore be impossible to give a reasonable précis of them. But some are so important, from a sanitary point of view, especially with relation to what has happened in Sydney, that it may be as well to quote them in extenso. Thus with respect to foundations and sites we have the following:—

“9. A person who shall erect a new building shall not construct any foundation of such building upon any site which shall have been filled up with any material impregnated with faecal matter or impregnated with any animal or vegetable matter, or upon which any such matter may have been deposited, unless and until such matter shall have been properly removed, by excavation or otherwise, from such site.

“10. Every person who shall erect a new domestic building shall cause the whole ground surface or site of such building to be properly asphalted or covered with a layer of good cement concrete, rammed solid at least 6 inches thick.

“10A. In every case where the intended site of a new building may have been or may have formed part of a clay-pit, or where, by reason of excavation and the removal of earth, gravel, stones, or other materials from such site, the whole or any part of the surface thereof, may be at such a depth below the level of the surface of the ground immediately surrounding and adjoining such site as may render the elevation of the whole or part of the existing surface of such site necessary for the prevention of damp in any part of any building to be erected thereon:—A person shall not construct any foundation of a new building upon such site or upon such part thereof as, for the purpose aforesaid, may require elevation, unless and until there shall have been properly deposited thereon a layer or layers of sound and suitable material sufficient to elevate such site or such part thereof to an adequate height, and to form a stable and healthy substratum for such foundation.

“10B. In every case where the intended site of a new building may be within an area bounded by [here insert boundaries of the area to which the following requirement is to apply], a person shall not construct any foundation of such building unless and until there shall have been properly deposited upon the site a layer or layers of sound and suitable material sufficient to elevate such site to a height at least feet above the ordnance datum, and to form a stable and healthy substratum for such foundation; or unless he shall so erect the building upon cement concrete, masonry, or brickwork, that the floor of the lower storey shall be at least feet above the ordnance datum.”

Here in Sydney we have had many instances of the evils which arise from the non-existence of such provisions as are contained in these by-laws.

In addition to by-laws concerning details of construction, provisions are made with respect to the sufficiency of the space about buildings to secure a free circulation of air, to the ventilation and drainage of buildings, with many diagrams, and to water-closets, earth-closets, privies, ash-pits, and cesspools in connection with buildings; and regulations are laid down as to the closing of buildings or parts of buildings unfit for human habitation, and to prohibition of their use for such habitation; and as to the giving of notices, deposit of plans and sections by persons intending to lay out streets or to construct buildings, as to inspection by the sanitary authority, and as to the power of such authority to remove, alter, or pull down any work begun or done in contravention of the by-laws.

V. The last series of by-laws relates to slaughter-houses:

- (a) For the licensing, registering and inspection of slaughter-houses;
- (b) For preventing cruelty therein;
- (c) For keeping the same in a cleanly and proper state;
- (d) For removing filth at least once in every twenty-four hours; and
- (e) For requiring them to be provided with a sufficient supply of water.

These by-laws are framed under Sect. 169 of the Public Health Act, and under Sect. 128 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, which, so far as regards slaughter-houses, is incorporated with the Health Act.

Any person desiring a license for a slaughter-house must make his application in proper form setting forth all necessary particulars as to the premises; and it is recommended that the following requirements be insisted on before license is granted.

The cattle lairs and slaughter-house must not be within 100 feet of any dwelling-place, and at least two sides of the slaughter-house must be open to direct communication with the external air; it must not in any part be below the surface of the adjoining ground; the approach to it should not be at an incline of more than one in four, and should not be through a dwelling-house or shop. No room or loft should be constructed over the slaughter-house, which should be provided with an adequate water-tank, of which the bottom should be not less than 6 feet above the floor of the slaughter-house. The pavement should be of asphalt or concrete, laid with proper slope and channel towards a gully properly trapped and covered with a grating, and the slaughter-house should be efficiently drained. The interior surface of the walls should be covered with hard, smooth, impervious material to a sufficient height. No water-closet, privy, or cesspool should be constructed within the slaughter-house, nor should there be any direct communication between the slaughter-house and any stable, water-closet, privy, or cesspool. The lairs should be properly paved, drained, and ventilated, and no habitable room should be constructed over any lair.

The aim and scope of the by-laws may be best understood from the following extract from Dr. Ballard's report on nuisances in connection with the slaughtering of animals (Med. Officer, L.G.B., 1876):—

“The essentials of slaughtering so as to avoid nuisances are scrupulous cleanliness of the slaughter-house and pound, of the atmosphere of both, and of all utensils, and the speedy removal of all decomposable matters. The business ought to be so worked that, except during the time when actual slaughtering is going on, there should be no unpleasant odour of any kind perceptible within the premises, or proceeding from them. In order to ensure these results much care is requisite in respect of details of construction of the buildings, and in respect of the mode of conducting the business.”

“I.

“I. As to the arrangement and construction of the buildings:—

1. The slaughter-house and pound should not be contiguous to any inhabited buildings; a fortiori, they should not, either of them, be within a dwelling-house or directly or indirectly communicating with one. The slaughter-house and pound should be two distinct and separate buildings, or should at least be capable of being entirely shut off from each other.
2. The inner surface of the walls of both should be of brick or stone, and the surface should be covered with a layer of limewash which can be renewed from time to time. The lower parts of the wall to the height of 5 or 6 feet should be covered with smooth cement, slabs of slate, zinc sheeting, or some similarly impervious material capable of being washed clean with water. At Mr. T. Harris's slaughter-house at Calne, where, from the mode of killing, blood becomes scattered high upon the wall, the whole of the walls are covered with a smooth cement. There should be no exposed woodwork within the slaughter-house; any woodwork which there may be should be covered with a layer of paint, tar, or zinc sheeting.
3. The flooring of the slaughter-house should be of some uniform material, sufficiently even to be capable of ready and thorough cleansing with water and a brush, and sufficiently rough to avoid slipping upon it. At the same time it should be firm and incapable of giving way under the fall of heavy beasts, or of breaking under rough usage. . . . The best paving of all is an even jointless paving, sufficiently hard and firm to resist rough usage, and sufficiently rough not to be slippery. Such a pavement is furnished by some concrete and some asphalt compositions. . . . With a jointless paving, and with the wall surfaces protected, as I have recommended, it is possible to maintain perfect cleanliness and sweetness of the whole inner surface of the slaughter-house.
4. The paving should be so sloped as that liquid matters shall run off to a proper channel leading to the inlet of a duly laid pipe drain. This inlet should be outside the slaughter-house, and should be provided with the means of arresting the flow of anything but liquid matter into the drain.
5. Slaughter-houses and pounds should be separately and very freely ventilated, preferably by louvres at the roof or in opposite walls, so as to provide for a horizontal movement of air across all the upper part.”

“II. As to the conduct of the business:—

1. During the process of slaughtering, as much care as possible should be taken to prevent the discharge of blood or other animal matters upon the floor of the slaughter-house. The emptying of the contents of the viscera should, where practicable, be performed in a separate place, and any filth should be swept up from the floor and taken away at short intervals.
2. Hides, skins, blood, fat, offal, dung, and garbage should be removed from the slaughter-house as quickly as possible, and while they remain on the premises should be so kept as not to become sources of nuisance. Where hides or skins are necessarily retained for a day or two before they can be removed, they might without injury be advantageously (especially in the summer) brushed over on the fleshy side with a solution of carbolic acid or some other antiseptic. Fat should be freely exposed to the air in a cool place. Blood, offal, dung, and other garbage should be placed in covered movable receptacles, constructed of galvanized iron or other non-absorbent material. Such articles as the last mentioned should be, under any circumstances removed from the premises, without undue delay, in the vessels in which they have been placed. A dung-pit, as a substitute for immediate removal, need not be requisite in any urban sanitary district properly administered.
3. Immediately slaughtering is completed, the whole slaughter-house floor and walls (to the height of the impervious portion) should be thoroughly washed with water and the pound thoroughly cleansed. All the vessels and implements used in the slaughtering, or brought from outside into the premises, should be made and kept clean and sweet. The inner walls of the slaughter-house and pound should have their surface periodically renovated by limewashing.”

The by-laws are mainly intended for the carrying into effect of the principles laid down by Dr. Ballard. In addition, provision is made for the prevention of cruelty to the animals in the process of slaughtering, and during preparation for slaughtering; and it is also provided that no dogs are to be kept in slaughter-houses. From the well-known agency of the dog in the spread of hydatids it will at once be seen that the last is a most important provision. The keeping of pigs in or about slaughter-houses is also forbidden except in preparation for slaughtering.

Finally a fine of not more than £5 is imposed for every offence against these by-laws, and, in the case of a continuing nuisance, of not more than 10s. for every day during which such nuisance shall be continued after the conviction for the first offence.

A very important portion of the sanitary legislation of the United Kingdom is the Housing of the Working Classes Act (1890), which applies to England and, with the necessary modification, to Scotland and Ireland. The Act is divided into three parts, of which the first deals with unhealthy areas, the second with unhealthy dwelling-houses, and the third with working-class lodging-houses.

Part I. (Unhealthy areas) does not apply to rural sanitary districts. In any urban sanitary districts, when a representation is made to the local authority by the medical officer of health, (either of his own motion, or at the instigation of two justices or of twelve ratepayers), that, within a certain area of the district, either any houses, courts, or alleys are unfit for human habitation, or the narrowness, closeness, and bad arrangement, or the bad condition of the streets and houses or groups of houses within such area, or the want of light, air, ventilation, or proper conveniences, or any other sanitary defects, or one or more of such causes, are dangerous or injurious to the health of the inhabitants either of the buildings in the said area or of the neighbouring buildings, and that the evils complained of can only be remedied by an improvement scheme for the rearrangement and reconstruction of the streets and houses within the area, then the local authority may pass a resolution declaring that such area is an unhealthy area, and, in that case, shall forthwith prepare a scheme for the improvement of the said area. This scheme, which must be accompanied by maps, particulars, and estimates, and must provide dwelling accommodation accommodation for the working classes displaced by it, after proper advertisement, and service of notice on owners interested, shall be sent with a petition to the confirming authority who shall be, for the county or city of London, the Secretary of State; for other parts of England the Local Government Board; for Scotland, the Secretary for Scotland, and for Ireland, the Local Government Board for Ireland. If, on examination of the documents, the confirming authority think fit to proceed with the case, they shall direct a local inquiry to be held in or near the area proposed to be dealt with, so as to ascertain the correctness of the representation, the sufficiency of the scheme proposed, and any local objections which may be made to it. On receipt of the report of this inquiry the confirming authority may make a provisional order declaring the limits of the area, and authorising the scheme to be carried out with such modifications as the confirming authority may think fit, but no addition may be made to the lands proposed by the local authority to be taken compulsorily; and it shall be the duty of the local authority to serve a copy of this provisional order upon every person interested, excepting tenants, for a month or less. This provisional order is not, however, of any validity until it has been ratified by an Act of Parliament, which the confirming authority applies for as soon as may be convenient, and which, when passed, is known as the Confirming Act.

When the Confirming Act is passed by Parliament it becomes the duty of the local authority to purchase the lands required for the scheme and otherwise to carry the scheme into execution; this may be done either by selling or letting the land under the necessary conditions as to buildings or by arranging with trustees or other persons to carry the scheme into effect; but the local authority may not themselves undertake the reconstruction part of the scheme without the express consent of the confirming authority. The Act does not contemplate the entire execution of the scheme by the local authority; they may clear the site and make streets, but they are, in general, to leave to third persons the work of rebuilding under the necessary conditions. If within five years after the land has been cleared the local authority fail to provide for the reconstruction of working-class dwellings the confirming authority may step in and direct the land to be sold by auction for the carrying out of the reconstruction part of the scheme.

Provision is made for the compulsory purchase of the lands included in the scheme and for compensation being paid at the fair market value without any allowance for forced sale or for improvement made after the scheme had been advertised; and it is also provided that upon the purchase by the local authority all rights of way and other easements are extinguished.

The expenses of the execution of the scheme may be paid from the local rates, or from money borrowed on the security of the local rates; and, on the recommendation of the confirming authority, the Public Works Loan Commissioners may lend to the local authority, on the security of the rates any money required for the purposes of the Act; and any such loan must be repaid within such period, not exceeding fifty years, as the confirming authority may recommend.

Part II. (Unhealthy Dwelling-houses):—When it appears to any local authority that any dwelling-house within their district is unfit for human habitation it shall be their duty to give notice to the owner or occupier to execute the works necessary to put the house in proper condition, and in case of his failing to do so to apply to a magistrate for an order prohibiting the use of the premises for human habitation (called in the Act a “closing order”); and every occupying tenant of the house in question shall receive notice of the closing order, and must obey the order by leaving the house within a period named in the notice, but not to be less than seven days. If a closing order has been made against a house, and the owner does not take the necessary steps to make it fit for human habitation, the local authority shall pass an order that it is expedient to order the demolition of the building, and give notice of the order to the owner of the building so that he may state his objections thereto. When an order has been made for the demolition of a house the owner shall carry it out within three months; and if he fail to do so the local authority shall take down and remove the building, sell the materials, and after deducting expenses, pay over the balance (if any) to the owner. Any person aggrieved by an order of the local authority under this part of the Act may appeal to a Court of Quarter Sessions, and no steps shall be taken under the order until the appeal has been decided.

If any owner has executed the works required by this Act with respect to any dwelling-house, he may, for his reimbursement, obtain from the local authority an order charging the house with an annuity for thirty years of £6 for every £100 spent; and this annuity shall take precedence of mortgages and ordinary charges.

Powers of compulsory purchase and demolition, or of demolition without purchase, are given to local authorities with respect to obstructive buildings, that is to say, any building which causes one of the following effects:—“Stops ventilation, or otherwise makes or conduces to make other buildings to be in a condition unfit for human habitation, or dangerous or injurious to health; or prevents proper measures from being carried into effect for remedying any nuisance injurious to health or other evils complained of in respect of other buildings.”

As to obstructive buildings the local authority may be set in motion either by the medical officer of health, or by any four or more inhabitant householders of the district. A reconstruction scheme may be proposed as in Part I, and ratified by an order by the Local Government Board; and this order does not require the sanction of Parliament unless an owner of the property in question petitions the Local Government Board against it. The arrangements for compensation of owners and for providing money for expenses are similar to those described under Part I, and in addition powers are given to county councils to put this part of the Act in operation in cases where a local authority has failed to do so; certain modifications are also enacted with respect to the county and city of London.

Part III. (Working-class Lodging-houses):—This part applies both to urban and to rural sanitary districts, and empowers local authorities to erect new buildings for the lodging of the working classes whether in town or in country, and where lodging-houses have already been erected, if convenient, to purchase them. It is also provided that in rural districts a working-class lodging may be interpreted to mean a cottage with a garden of not more than half an acre, but so that the estimated annual value of the garden shall not exceed £3. The usual provisions are made for the confirmation of the scheme and its execution by the local authority; power is given to make by-laws for the management of lodging houses; and authority is given to the Public Works Loan Commissioners to make advances for the purposes of this part of the Act, on terms laid down at length; and these advances may be made not merely to local authorities, but under certain conditions to owners of property, whether companies employing labour, or private persons, who may desire to erect working-class lodging-houses on their property.

The rest of the Act is mainly taken up with details of administration which do not apply in New South Wales.

A report on English sanitary legislation would be incomplete if it did not contain some notice of the very important Factory and Workshop Acts, 1878 to 1891. The regulation of factories has long occupied the attention of the authorities in England, the first Act on the subject having been passed in 1802, and many separate enactments on the subject at different times afterwards. In 1875, owing to the multiplicity of the regulations which had come into force under these different Acts, and the varying conditions of manufacturing operations which have rendered many of them but of little value, it was found advisable to refer the whole subject to a Royal Commission, which, after an exhaustive inquiry, issued a comprehensive report in 1876, tracing out distinctly the course of legislation and the causes of the difference of regulations in different trades, and setting forth a series of resolutions which should form a basis for preparing a consolidating and amending Act. The Act of 1878 was in the main founded on the recommendations of the Royal Commission; it was followed by the "Factory and Workshop Act, 1883," the "Cotton Cloth Factories Act, 1889," and the "Factory and Workshop Act, 1891."

By these Acts a factory is defined to be a place in which machinery is moved by the aid of steam, water, or other mechanical power; a workshop includes all works in which no steam, water or other mechanical power is used. Factories are divided into textile and non-textile; workshops into three classes, viz. :—

Workshops ;

Workshops in which neither children nor young persons are employed ; and,

Domestic workshops.

The last of these (domestic workshops) are defined to be workshops carried on in a private house, room, or place in which the only persons employed are members of the same family dwelling there.

The scope and bearing of the various Acts will, I think, be best shown by the following analysis of the regulations now in force, which I have extracted from "Redgrave's Factory Acts," 4th Edition, London, 1891.

The provisions which apply to workshops conducted on the system of not employing children and young persons (section 15) are the following :—

The period of employment for a woman shall be for a specified period of twelve hours, between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m., and of eight hours between 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

There shall be allowed to each woman for meals and absence from work, between such periods of employment, one hour and a half, except on Saturday, and on Saturday not less than half an hour.

Prohibition of work on Sunday.

The only provisions of this Act which apply to domestic workshops (section 16) are the following, applying only to children and young persons :—

The period of employment for a young person shall be between 6 a.m. and 9 p.m., and 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

There shall be allowed to each young person, between such periods of employment, four hours and a half, except on Saturday, and on Saturday, two hours and a half.

The period of employment for a child shall be between 6 a.m. and 1 p.m., or between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

A child shall be employed in morning and afternoon sets, changing every week.

The parent of a child must cause his child to attend school.

A child shall attend school daily for one school attendance.

A child shall not be employed for more than five hours without an interval of half an hour.

Prohibition of work of children and young persons on Sunday.

In domestic workshops overtime cannot be worked.

The enactments respecting inspection, duties, and authority of inspectors, legal proceedings, amount and levying of fines, definition of terms, &c., are alike applicable to textile factories, non-textile factories, workshops, and workshops in which neither children nor young persons are employed, and with the exception of the maximum amount of the fines to domestic workshops.

In flax scutch mills, in which women only are employed intermittently, and for not more than six months in the course of the year, their labour is entirely unrestricted, but the mills are subject to the sanitary regulations, and those relating to the fencing of machinery, &c.

The occupations of straw-plaiting, pillow-lace making, glove making (section 97), and manual labour in the manufacture of light articles, where the labour is exercised at irregular intervals, and does not furnish the principal means of living to the family exercising them in a private house (section 98), are entirely exempted from the provisions of the Act.

The administration of the Factories Act is under the Home Secretary, with power to appoint the necessary inspectors, clerks, and servants; the principal officers are the chief inspector and the superintending inspectors; the chief inspector's address is at the Home Office, Whitehall.

The last branch of English sanitary legislation to which I shall draw attention, is the provision made against adulteration, by the sale of Food and Drugs Act of 1875. For many years the law had taken some notice of the pernicious practice of adulteration of food and drugs, but rather for the purpose of protecting the public revenue than from any care for the preservation of the public health; and it was not till the famous inquiry by the Lancet newspaper in 1851, into the quality of the food and drugs commonly sold in London, conducted principally by Dr. Hassall, that public attention was drawn to the importance of this subject from a sanitary point of view. The revelations of the Lancet inquiry were sufficiently startling, showing that adulteration prevailed to an extraordinary extent; and some time afterwards, in 1855, a select committee of the House of Commons was appointed to inquire into the adulteration of food, drink, and drugs. The report of this committee confirmed in great measure the results of the Lancet inquiry; and in 1860 the Adulteration of Food Act was passed, which was based on the recommendations of the select committee. It authorised but did not enjoin the appointment of public analysts, and it left the procuring of samples in the hands of private persons, imposing a penalty not exceeding £5 on every person who should sell as pure and unadulterated any article of food or drink which is adulterated or not pure. The Act was practically a dead letter; very few analysts were appointed; private persons did not care to take up the somewhat invidious position of informers; and it was difficult to prove the sale of particular articles as pure and unadulterated. Another Act was passed in 1872 extending the definition of adulteration, providing for the purchase of samples by inspectors, and giving private purchasers the right of obtaining analyses at the rate of 2s. 6d. each.

This Act, although in many respects exceedingly valuable, was found to cause a good deal of hardship to many respectable tradesmen, partly in consequence of the want of a clear understanding as to what does and what does not constitute adulteration, and partly from the conflicting opinions and inexperience of the analysts; moreover the number of proceedings under it outside London and a few large towns was exceedingly small. Another committee was accordingly appointed in 1874, which recommended that the Acts of 1860 and 1872 should be repealed, and that a consolidating and amending Act should be substituted for them; that a court of analytical reference should be constituted at Somerset House; that provision should be made for sending samples by post to the Analyst; that fraudulent abstraction, e.g., of cream, should be included among the offences punishable as adulteration; and that protection should be given to retail traders selling goods which they had purchased under written warranty of their purity; and which at the time of selling they had no reason to believe to be other than pure. These recommendations were carried out in the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, certain doubtful points in which were made clear by the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879.

It would be tedious to set forth in detail all the provisions contained in the principal Act and the amending Act; anyone interested in the subject will find them clearly and elaborately stated in "The Law on Adulteration," by Thomas Herbert (Knight & Co., London, 1884). I shall content myself with a brief account of the operation of the law, for which I am indebted to Mr. Preston Thomas, of the Local Government Board, who has charge of that department.

For the purpose of dealing with adulterations each county and every quarter sessions borough of over 10,000 inhabitants must appoint a public analyst, subject in each case to the approval of the Local Government Board. It is the duty of the analyst to analyse such specimens as may be brought to him, on payment of a sum not exceeding 10s. 6d. Any private person, or any medical officer of health, inspector inspector of nuisances, inspector of weights and measures, inspector of markets, or police constable under the direction of the local authority, may purchase any article of food or drink, or any drug for analysis, informing the dealer of his purpose immediately on the completion of the purchase. He must then at once divide the article purchased into three parts; one for the public analyst, one to be retained by the dealer, and to be analysed on his behalf if he think fit; and the third to be sealed for analysis at Somerset House if it should be found necessary.

If the analyst find any adulteration in the sample, an information is laid before a magistrate, and the case is tried by him. Should the analysis on behalf of the dealer differ materially from that by the public analyst, the magistrate may, before deciding, send the third portion to be analysed at Somerset House, and the result of this analysis will determine the question. A fine not exceeding fifty pounds may be imposed for the mixing of injurious ingredients with any article of food or drink or with any drug; for a second offence the punishment is imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months with hard labour. For selling articles of food or drink, or drugs, not of the proper nature, substance and quality, the penalty is a fine not exceeding twenty pounds.

Although any private person has a right to purchase samples for analysis, yet in practice the right is exercised, with very rare exceptions, only by the public officers whom I have named.

The various local authorities are bound to furnish annual reports of their proceedings under these Acts to the Local Government Board, from which the board compiles a report to be laid before Parliament. From the report for 1891 it appears that the total number of analyses for that year was 29,028, there being one analysis for every 580 persons in London, and one for every 1,100 in the provinces; but the extent to which the Acts are put in force varies considerably in different districts. The report expresses surprise that in many cases the local authorities are content to leave the inhabitants without that protection against fraud by the sale of adulterated food, which the exercise of the statutory powers conferred on the authority would be likely to ensure. It appears from the report that the proportion of adulterated samples is rather more than 12 per cent. of those analysed. On this subject the analyst for Kent makes some very pertinent remarks which I quote:

"The practice of adulteration has become a fine art, scientific knowledge and technical skill being applied to the subject as perseveringly and, indeed, as successfully as the same things are being employed in other more legitimate directions. Works chemists of the highest skill in each special department of the food trade are continually engaged in the endeavour to produce articles that can be sold at a greater profit than the things they resemble at perhaps a less price. This gives rise to a perpetual conflict between the falsifier on the one hand and the public analyst on the other, in which the latter in some respects is placed at a great disadvantage, for whereas every move and method on his part that is devised to advance the art of detecting adulteration is done openly in the face of the scientific world, the arts of the adulterator are practised and perfected in secret. In point of fact the most refined and successful processes that have been introduced for the falsification of food have been devised in view of, and with the express design to elude those means of detection which from time to time are discussed and published in the transactions of our scientific societies. This will explain how it comes about, that from time to time new methods of adulteration are sprung upon us, and for a while a new fashion in adulteration sets in, until in turn, by the invention of new processes, or, perhaps by the perfecting of old ones, detection of the new fashioned mode of adulteration is made possible, and a check thereby put upon the evil practice, which in course of time dying out, is followed by other perhaps more cunning devices; and so it goes on year by year, an everlasting see-saw of attack and defence, from all of which it naturally follows that the pursuit of the public analyst day by day becomes more onerous and more exacting."

The report comments on this statement by remarking that it is satisfactory to be able to believe that the progress of analytical science has more than kept pace with that of fraudulent sophistication; and it is probable that one effect of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act has been to stimulate the discovery of new and improved methods of analysis.

One or two of the special points in the report may perhaps be of interest. Thus it is mentioned that at Worcester the analyst found that some genuine milk contained microbes and bacilli, being the produce of a diseased cow, and at Brighton two samples of milk were condemned on account of the presence of a considerable number of larvæ of gnats. With regard to condensed milk the analyst for the Strand district reports that one sample contained 1.5 per cent. fat. The original milk from which it had been prepared had therefore been deprived of at least 80 per cent. of its fat. For infants it was recommended that the milk should be diluted with from eight to thirteen times its bulk of water. The consequence of feeding a child on such a mixture would be semi-starvation.

Adulteration of butter seems to be on the increase in spite of the passing of the Margarine Act, 1887. Some of the samples analysed consisted almost entirely of foreign fats, and in one case a packet which was labelled as containing 80 per cent. of butter was found to have only about one-sixth of that proportion.

Mixtures sold under the name of coffee were often mainly composed of chicory, and in some instances the proportion of genuine coffee was as little as 30,15, and even 5 per cent. As to two cases in which nineteen-twentieths of the "coffee" was chicory, the analyst for Salford suggests that the presence of the trace of the genuine article must have been due to the accidental use of a coffee scoop to weigh out the chicory, and he adds that it is no wonder that there should be a decline in the use of coffee when adulteration is carried on to this extent.

In some of the lager beer examined it was found that salicylic acid has been used as a preservative. Whether the minute quantities employed for the purpose can be properly regarded as an adulterant or as injurious to health is a question upon which there appears to be some difference of opinion among analysts.

Many samples of spirits were found to have been diluted beyond what is allowed by the Act of 1879. In very few instances had anything but water been added; though in one case a small amount of treacle was detected, and in another there was some tincture of guaiacum.

Of aerated waters sixty-three samples were found to contain small quantities of lead, usually from some defect in the process of manufacture.

As to olive oil the following note by the analyst for West Sussex is interesting:—

"Of four olive oils, two only consisted of real olive oil; whilst one contained 67 per cent. of cotton oil, and another was a mixture of three parts of cotton oil and one part of mineral oil. Such a mixture, I need hardly point out, is utterly unfit for human food, mineral oils being absolutely indigestible. It is equally unfit for lubrication, as cotton oil has strong drying properties, and would rapidly clog any machinery to which it was applied."

"Cotton

"Cotton oil, manufactured in immense quantities, chiefly in America, is a sweet oil in every way suitable for human consumption, but has less than one-half the market value of good olive oil. It is in consequence largely used as an adulterant of the latter. Very little oil indeed is now sold under the name of olive oil, and indefinite terms like salad, Lucca, or household oil, with adjectives generally in the superlative, have been adopted by grocers and oilmen, in order to evade the provisions of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act."

All tea is analysed under the authority of the Commissioners of Customs before being taken out of bond. This system seems to work very well, inasmuch as of the 412 samples purchased from retailers during the year, not one was found to be adulterated. Of the 876 samples analysed under the authority of the Customs, 816 were found to be satisfactory, while, of the remainder, fourteen were ultimately admitted for home consumption, thirty-two being exhausted, damaged, or mixed with other substances, were restricted to exportation, and fourteen were condemned as unfit for human food.

Of the 29,028 samples analysed during the year, all but 177 were obtained by officers of local authorities. As invariably happens, a much larger proportion (34·5 per cent.) of the private than of the official samples was found to be adulterated, since (apart from the fact that inspectors, unless they take special pains to conceal the object of their purchase, often have superior articles supplied to them), a private individual is unlikely to saddle himself with the trouble and expense of procuring an analysis, unless his suspicion of adulteration is based on tolerably solid grounds.

RESULTS OF SANITARY LEGISLATION IN ENGLAND.

THE benefits accruing to a country from a sound system of sanitary legislation and administration may be expected to present themselves in two ways:—First, in the diminution of the general death-rate, and consequent increase of the general longevity: Secondly, in the diminution of the amount of sickness, actually existing, with a consequent increase in the working power of the population, and a lessening of the period of shattered health resulting from all serious illness, even though ending in recovery. How far the second of these benefits has actually resulted from the Public Health Act of 1875, it is impossible to say with accuracy. There are no data, statistical or other, in existence, from which we can ascertain the amount of sickness actually prevailing in England in any particular year. But a sufficient notion may be obtained inferentially, from an examination of the evidence bearing on the first of the expected benefits, i.e., the diminution of the general death-rate. If the number of fatal cases of sickness be diminished in any year, it is not unreasonable to conclude that the number of non-fatal cases of sickness is also diminished in a similar proportion, more especially if we bear in mind the considerable number of deaths resulting from epidemics in which a high mortality is generally associated with a correspondingly large number of non-fatal cases. A high mortality means generally not only a large number of deaths, but also a large number of cases of sickness followed by permanent or temporary recovery. Now the annual variation of the death-rate in England may be ascertained with the utmost accuracy from the reports of the Registrar-General dating from the year 1838 to the year 1890, the last which is as yet published. Let us then consider shortly what these reports tell us, and let us for convenience divide the period under consideration into three parts; first, from 1838, the first year for which materials exist, to 1875, the year in which the Health Act was passed; second, from 1876 to 1880, when the new system was in course of introduction; and third, from 1881 onwards, when it may be held to be fairly exercising its beneficial influence.

Here then are the facts. From 1838 to 1875, inclusive, the death-rate averaged 22·3 per 1,000 (Longstaff);* from 1876 to 1880 it averaged 20·8; from 1881 to 1890, inclusive, the average was 19·14; a reduction in the period 1876–80, as compared with 1838–75, of 1·5 per 1,000, and 1881–90 of 3·16 per 1,000. To those who are unaccustomed to percentages these figures may not appear to signify much; but when differently expressed they may be more intelligible. Thus Mr. Noel Humphreys, in a paper read before the Statistical Society, showed that if the fall in the death-rate of 1876–80 were to continue it would mean an increase in the mean duration of male life in England by two years, and of female life by 3·4 years, as compared with the English life table (Longstaff, p. 226). For the sexes taken together, so far as I can gather from the material at my command, the increase in the mean duration of life for the period 1876–80 as compared with that of 1838–75, if the low death-rate were maintained would amount to 2·366 years. Now the fall in the death-rate for the period 1881–90, in spite of the severe epidemic of influenza in the last year of the period, is still greater than that for 1876–80, as is shown by the figures I have just given. It is, therefore, clear that the prospect of an increase in the mean duration of life both for males and females is better than it was in 1880. According to my calculation the increase in the mean duration of life in England for the third period, as compared with the first, taking both sexes together, would amount to 4·28 years. If we bear in mind that this increase applies (as we shall see) chiefly to persons in youth and at the more vigorous periods of life, it will be seen to be no small gain. Or, the gain may be represented in another way, (Monod, "Les Mesures Sanitaires en Angleterre" p. 14) by calculating the number of lives preserved to the country, which would have been lost if the old high death-rate had been maintained. The numbers of lives saved are as follows:—†

1881...	85,722	1886	80,545
1882...	68,543	1887	95,757
1883...	72,177	1888	125,680
1884...	62,986	1889	142,446

This amounts to a total of 876,581 persons preserved from death in ten years; about two-thirds of the population of New South Wales. It

† M. Monod's figures are a shade too high: the Registrar-General's estimate of the population during the latter years, on which the calculations were based, was found by the Census of 1891 to have been a little in excess of the real population. But the excess is trifling, it has not amounted in any year to more than 0·35 per 1,000 in the death-rate; I have, therefore, quoted the figures as they stand in M. Monod's book.

It may be as well that I should here point out that the total death-rate per 1,000 cannot be used as a ground for comparing the sanitary condition of different countries, or different parts of the same country, without making the necessary corrections for their different constitution as regards sex and age of the inhabitants. It is clear that any country or part of a country, with an unusual proportion of its population between the ages of 10 and 35 will, ceteris paribus, have a low death-rate; while a country with an unusual proportion of its population above 45 will, ceteris paribus, have a high death-rate, and the well-known greater longevity of females is not without an effect on the recorded rate, according to the preponderance of either sex. Thus, as Longstaff points out, in 1883 the recorded death-rate of Bradford was 18·34, consequently 1·20 below that of England and Wales; but when the correction for age and sex was applied, the death-rate was found to be 20·26 or 72 above that of England and Wales. Similarly in Manchester for the same year the recorded death-rate was 27·64, while the corrected death-rate amounted to no less than 30·80, or nearly 60 per cent. above the average of the whole country. Hence it seems to be of little use to compare, as is sometimes done, the recorded death-rate of New South Wales with that of more settled countries, without making the necessary age correction which could only be done after careful investigation of the census returns. We should naturally expect a low recorded death-rate in a colony where the population is being steadily increased by the arrival of young and vigorous adults, and this death-rate cannot be fairly compared with that of older and more settled countries till the proper estimation has been made for the proportional difference in age and sex of the populations of the two countries compared. Before any trustworthy comparison could be made between the annual death-rate of two countries, it would be necessary to work out satisfactorily the relative proportion of the two populations compared as to infancy, youth, period of vigour, and period of decline. This, so far as I am aware, has not been done in any of the comparisons which are occasionally made between the death-rate of New South Wales and that of other countries. They do not, therefore, seem to me to have any very great value, as exact statements of the relative health condition of the Colony, although doubtless the circumstances of life in New South Wales are naturally in many ways more favourable to longevity than those which attend life in crowded cities of the old world.

But this is a digression. Having seen that there has been a substantial reduction in the death-rate of England and Wales since the passing of the Public Health Act in 1875, let us examine the question a little more closely, so as to find out what are the particular causes of death which have been beneficially affected, in other words, what are the diseases which have been rendered less fatal by the operation of sanitary legislation. This subject has been carefully investigated by Longstaff (op. cit.) to whose observations I am much indebted. To give a general view of the subject I insert here a table, extracted from his work (brought down as far as 1879), comparing the rise and fall in the death-rate per million for various diseases, in the quinquennial periods, 1850-54, and 1875-79.

Balance, a fall of 1,049.

Let us, however, extend our view over the whole period from 1838 to 1890, taking now the terms from 1838 to 1870 as representing the period before the Health Act of 1875, the intermediate or transitional decennium from 1871 to 1880, and then from 1881 to 1890, to represent the time since the Act began fully to produce its beneficial effect. The materials with which I have worked will be found at page xlv. of the 53rd Report of the Registrar-General.

Of the diseases which have been materially reduced in fatality by sanitary legislation, the most striking example is fever, including typhoid, typhus, and what is known as simple continued fever. The distinction into these three divisions was not made in the Registrar-General's Reports till 1869; up to that year they must therefore be included under one head; in the latter period they can be calculated separately.

The improvement in the fatality of fever is interesting to us because that disease has always been regarded as dependent on filth or bad water supply, and on what are commonly known as insanitary surroundings, and moreover in New South Wales, and particularly in Sydney, it has for many years figured amongst our most important causes of death. Fever also, for the most part, attacks persons in youth or in the prime of life, thus producing a disproportionate diminution of the working power of a community.

For the period from 1838 to 1870 (excluding 1843-46 for which the figures are not given) the average mortality per 1,000,000 living from fever was as follows:

1838-42	1,053
1847-50	1,246
1861-70	886

The average taken from these would be approximately 974; this would be, however, too low, inasmuch as the four years of presumably high mortality 1843-46 are left out. If we suppose that the mortality of these these years was, on the whole, a mean between the early lower and the late higher period, and if we complete the calculation on that datum we shall find the mean to be almost 994; and this may be taken to represent the average annual mortality from fever per million persons living in England and Wales for the thirty-three years ending in 1870, showing an appalling loss of life from this cause alone.

In the succeeding decennium 1871-80, the sanitary measures which I have described in the introduction, began to produce their expected effects in the reduction of the death-rate from fever; but as the great extending and consolidating Health Act of 1875 was passed in the middle of the decennium, it will be convenient to divide the period into two parts, the first before and the second after the passing of the Health Act. Now, also, we possess materials which enable us to distinguish between typhus, enteric (or typhoid), and simple continued fever.

For the first half of the decennium, from 1871-75, the figures are as follows:—

						Typhus.	Enteric.	Simple.
1871	121	371	186
1872	80	377	145
1873	70	376	132
1874	74	374	130
1875	62	371	108

From these it will be seen that the average of deaths from fever per million was reduced to 595, made up of typhus 81, enteric (or typhoid) 374, and simple continued 140.

During the second half of the decennium the reduction is more marked, as these figures will show:—

						Typhus.	Enteric.	Simple.
1876	48	309	81
1877	45	279	78
1878	36	306	71
1879	21	231	58
1880	21	261	58

For this quinquennium the average annual death-rate from fever is reduced to 380 per million (excluding decimals), which is distributed into typhus 34, typhoid or enteric 277, and simple continued 69.

During the succeeding decennium, 1881-90, the satisfactory diminution of death-rate continued, the figures being for fever, as a whole, 238, distributed as typhus 15, enteric 198, and simple continued fever 25; while for 1890, the last year of the period, the rate was reduced to 197 from fever, as a whole, made up of typhus 5, enteric 179, and simple continued 13. That is to say, under the operation of sanitary legislation, the mortality from fever per million living was reduced from 994, the rate prevailing before 1871, to 197, the rate of 1890, a saving of nearly 800 lives in the million, or on the whole population of England and Wales, as estimated in 1890, of 22,900 lives in one year. This is truly a result of which the English sanitarians may be proud.

Still more striking are the results if we confine our attention to the case of London, the largest town the world has ever seen, with a climate made wretched by almost perpetual fog and smoke, and containing many thousands of persons who live in the greatest poverty. In 1838, the death-rate from fever in London per million amounted to the enormous figure of 2,316. It must be acknowledged that this was an unusually bad year, for never again has the rate approached that figure; but even in 1864 it amounted to 1,278. For the years 1885 to 1890 the figures (for fever as a whole) are given:—

1886	175
1887	167
1888	180
1889	144

giving an average of 166 per million per annum. For the year 1890 the total of 154 was distributed into typhus 2, typhoid 144, and simple continued fever 8.

Comparisons are often misleading; but I think I am justified in comparing this result with what presents itself in Sydney, a city so favoured by nature as to climate and situation, where wages are high and where food is cheap. In Sydney and suburbs the fever death-rate calculated per million living, amounted in 1890 to 481, or more than three times the fever death-rate for London. And let it not be thought that 1890 was an exceptionally bad year for Sydney; in truth, it seems to be an exceptionally favourable year. For, as I showed some years ago, the fever death-rate per million in 1883 was 677, in 1884 it was 734, and for 1885 it rose to 782, or more than four times the fever death-rate of London for the corresponding year. Much has been done since 1885 to reduce the fever-rate in Sydney in the way of improved water-supply and of efficient drainage, and though last, not in my opinion least, by the active supervision of the supply of milk; but much remains to be done before we bring Sydney up to the level of London. These figures should never be out of the minds of conscientious public men. London with its detestable climate of fog, smoke, and rain, and its vast mass of poverty, and even starvation, gives a fever death-rate reduced to 154, and Sydney, with its charming situation, pure air and health-giving breezes, and with a population in comparative affluence, gives 481 at its best. Or, to put it in a clear and simple way; in 1890 in Sydney and suburbs 124 persons died of fever, whose lives would have been preserved if our comparatively small city had been managed with the success apparent in the administration of the huge bulk of London.*

It is worthy of note, in connection with the reduction in the fever death-rate, that fever for the most part claims its victims from the ranks of young adults, and of persons in the prime and vigour of life. The gain to the community, as I have already noted, is therefore, proportionally even greater than the mere figures would at first sight imply, as it is for the most part a gain of persons at the maximum of their capacity for work, with the greater part of their working lives before them, and therefore, belonging to what is, commercially speaking, the most valuable part of the community.

* The death-rate from fever in Sydney is still improving, though not yet so favourable as in London. By Mr. Coghlan's last report I find that in 1891 there were 109 deaths from fever in Sydney, which, with an estimated population of 399,270, would give a death-rate per million of 273.

The mortality from phthisis and other tubercular diseases in England, as in other parts of the world, is very terrible, but even here there has been a substantial reduction. In the three years from 1858 to 1860 the average death-rate from these diseases per 1,000,000 living was 3,304; in the quinquennium 1886-90 it was only 2,322, a reduction of nearly 1,000. It is true that in 1890 there was a rise as compared with the years immediately preceding, and the rate was 2,376. This would seem to have resulted from the severe epidemic of influenza, which was very fatal in persons with a phthisical taint.

The cause of the gradual improvement in the death-rate from phthisis is not quite easy to explain, but it would seem to be dependent on an improvement in the resisting power of the constitution due to improved sanitary conditions generally, and in particular to improved ventilation of workshops, and to increased dryness of the soil due to more efficient drainage. There is still, however, a great deal to be done in the way of sanitary action against the inordinately high death-rate of tubercular diseases, which in almost every country in the world show themselves the most deadly of the enemies of the human race. The discovery of the tubercle bacillus, due to the genius of Koch, leads us to infer that these diseases can be most efficiently prevented by measures of protection against communication, either from infected human beings or from infected cattle.

Infant mortality, that is to say, the rate of mortality among children under one year, shows signs of improvement. The death-rate per 1,000 born, which up to 1870 continued pretty steady at 154, is now reduced to 142 for the decennium 1881-90. But there is still a good deal to be done in this direction.

As for the specific infectious fevers, small-pox, measles, scarlatina, and diphtheria, the results cannot be said to be uniformly satisfactory. Small-pox, it is true, has been greatly reduced in prevalence and in mortality by the very efficient system of vaccination carried out under the compulsory Act. But the local outbreaks which occur from time to time in London and other large towns tend to confirm the opinion which I have long held that vaccination, however thoroughly carried out, will not act as an absolute preventive of occasional epidemics, although of course greatly reducing their severity, and that it requires to be supplemented by strict measures of isolation. This opinion, I believe, is now gaining ground in England, and it is carried into effect by the general establishment of small-pox hospitals, although public action against this disease in the way of isolation, is not as yet marked by the vigour which has produced such excellent results in the colonies of Australia.

As to measles, it may be said that there has been no improvement, the death-rate being now practically as high as in the period 1858-60.

In the case of scarlatina the results have of late been rather more favorable. Since 1881 the decrease in the mortality from this disease has been, on the whole, steady, from 548 per million in that year to 242 per million in 1890. This satisfactory result is, I believe, in some measure due to the recent discovery of the great importance of milk as a carrier of infection, and to consequent greater care in the supervision of dairies and milk shops.

Diphtheria, a somewhat allied disease, tends on the other hand rather to grow in severity. While much less fatal than it was in 1858-60, it has increased of late years from 93 per million in 1872, to 179 per million in 1890. Some of this apparent increase may be due to greater accuracy in diagnosis; but, on the whole, it cannot be denied that sanitary legislation has not as yet had much influence on this disease.

Whooping-cough, which, though not strictly speaking a fever, is an eminently contagious disease, presents the same unsatisfactory result; the death-rate still amounts to 478 per million, as compared with 389 per million in 1840, the maximum being 736 in 1866. Here, also, sanitation has as yet shown no particular influence.

Cholera has not for some years figured high in the mortality returns, and there can be no doubt that sanitary legislation deserves much credit for this satisfactory result, especially for the protection of England from the dreaded epidemic during the autumn of 1892. It would seem, however, that the disease is but smouldering in a few of its continental foci, and there is every likelihood that the summer of 1893 may again see England threatened by an importation of the poison. Whether the measures adopted by the port sanitary authorities will suffice to keep out the terrible visitor remains yet to be seen.

From a review of the facts which I have just stated, it will appear that the success of English sanitarians has been for the most part in the domain of diseases dependent on filthy surroundings and on contaminated water; while in the case of the more specifically infectious fevers results have been by no means so satisfactory. The reason is not far to seek. For years the actual administration of the public health laws was practically in the hands of persons who had no medical training, some of whom were imbued with notions as to contagion which were opposed to the best-known medical principles (see ante on Hall, Taylor and Stansfeld). Even now, I feel bound to say that great as is the influence of the accomplished medical officer of the Local Government Board, Dr. Thorne Thorne, I do not think that he and his colleagues occupy that position in the official hierarchy which their eminent abilities deserve and the public interest requires. But it is difficult to persuade people in England that any one is competent to fill a prominent public office unless he be a politician or an unsuccessful barrister. Gentlemen of these professions, however great their capacity, seldom possess the training which is requisite for the vigorous superintendence of the public health. Hence, it results that while great attention has been paid to the removal of nuisances and to the supply of pure water, much less interest has been taken, till quite recently, in more purely medical measures devoted to the prevention of the spread of infection. It is to be hoped that the Act for the Notification of Infectious Diseases (1889), incomplete in some aspects as it undoubtedly is, will be so far effectual in remedying this defect.

It would be interesting to consider in detail those diseases in which the death-rate has increased, but this would lead me too far from my immediate subject. I must content myself by saying generally that if a larger number of young persons are preserved by sanitary legislation from the dangers of youth and early manhood, there must be a correspondingly larger number of persons exposed to the risks of the middle and advanced periods of life. Public sanitation cannot bring about immortality, nor can it even guarantee old age; all it can do is to lessen and perhaps to extinguish the tribute levied on young and promising lives by disease which is preventible by combined action. Accordingly, a careful examination of the question would show that where increase in the death-rate is not the result of greater accuracy in diagnosis, it is for the most part due to diseases which prevail in middle life and in old age. For a more detailed notice I must refer to Longstaff's work already quoted, in which will be found a careful analysis of the figures given in his tables.

SHORT-COMINGS OF SANITARY ADMINISTRATION IN ENGLAND.

HAVING given an account of the general results of recent sanitary legislation and administration in England, I now proceed to set forth my views as to the points in which the English sanitary system falls short of the ideal which it is the aim of every sanitarian to realise. For this purpose it will be convenient that we regard the subject from three different points of view, so that clear ideas may be presented and confusion in discussion avoided.

I. The English sanitary system has achieved its greatest triumph in the domain of diseases like typhoid fever, which appear to depend mainly on filthy surroundings and on impure water supply. How great this triumph has been, especially in London, I have already sufficiently set forth. But although the reduction in the mortality from enteric fever in England as a whole has been very striking, yet this disease appears still to be unduly prevalent in certain parts of the country. This is especially the case with respect to the eastern parts of the counties of Northumberland and Durham, from Morpeth on the north to Middlesborough on the south.* In this district the death-rate from enteric fever for 1890 amounted to 394 per million living, being much more than twice the death-rate for the whole of England and Wales, which was only 179 per million for that and the two preceding years. This high death-rate appears to have prevailed in the district named for the three preceding years, 1887-88-89. The borough of Salford, in Lancashire, seems to be even worse. With a population given as 204,522, it had 83 deaths from enteric fever in 1890, thus showing a rate per million of 405. Moreover, there were a few cases of typhus and simple continued fever—if these are included the death-rate per million living is raised to 449. This is nearly three times the London rate for 1890, which, as already stated, was only 154. It is clear, therefore, that there must be some short-coming in the sanitary arrangements of the eastern districts of Northumberland and of the borough of Salford.

The precise nature of this short-coming it is, of course, impossible for a stranger like myself to state with accuracy. But from my general acquaintance with the English sanitary system I should expect to find it of twofold origin—arising first from the neglect of the local sanitary authority, and secondly from insufficient power in the central authority to compel the local authority to do its duty. In the case of a general neglect of duty by a recalcitrant local authority, the central authority (i.e., the Local Government Board, which is really the President) can practically only enforce obedience to its instructions by applying to the High Court of Justice for a writ of mandamus, the ultimate sanction of which is the imprisonment of the members of the local authority in the event of continued disobedience. This, like all action by law courts, is tedious and costly, and more than all other legal action, it gives rise to hostile feeling on the part of the persons put in peril of imprisonment. Local ill-feeling no timorous politician can venture to disregard, and the temptation is strong for a Minister, with the fear of a general election before his eyes, to take refuge in the secure haven of inaction. The initiative in such a case ought not to lie with a Cabinet Minister. His training has seldom been such as to enable him to speak with authority on sanitary matters, and he must generally act merely as the mouth-piece of his advisers, while the whole responsibility and possible unpopularity of his actions must rest on him alone, with occasional disastrous results to himself or to his party at the next elections. In these days of closely-balanced party struggles and severe, and sometimes unfair criticism, it is hardly reasonable to expect any Cabinet Minister to incur the dangers attendant upon a vigorous use of his power in a matter with which he is not himself personally conversant. It seems to me that it would be wiser to place the central executive authority for the administration of the Act in the hands of a board, containing among its members persons of high professional and scientific attainments, who should, of course, be responsible to the Minister for the due execution of their powers. It would seem best to give the Minister merely a controlling or restraining power, to be exercised if the board should, in his judgment, fall into error. This power in the hands of a strong and judicious Minister would be really an assistance to the board; with a weak Minister, his very weakness would keep him from using it excepting in cases, if any such should occur, where the board seemed to be flagrantly wrong; and if it were thought necessary that there should still remain a power of bringing disputed questions of administration under the cognizance of the law courts, it would be well to arrange that in such cases the objecting local authority should occupy the position of plaintiff rather than that of defendant. This is a matter of detail which could be easily accomplished, and my experience teaches me that it would prevent a great deal of litigation, while contested cases would not be followed by the extreme irritation which is inseparable from the procedure by mandamus. People are generally more ready to defend an action than to bring one, especially when the other party to the suit is a high public body backed by the resources of the Government.

These, however, must be taken simply as general reflections, without any special application either to Salford or to the Northumberland districts, regarding which I possess no more information than can be obtained from the Registrar-General's Reports. My object has been merely to show how, in my opinion, the central administration of the law might be made at once more vigorous and less likely to cause irritation.

II. As regards the suppression of outbreaks of contagious or infectious disease the English sanitary administration leaves a good deal to be desired. Take for example the case of small-pox. England is a very well vaccinated country; the law on the subject is well known; the vaccination department is admirably managed, and the public vaccinators are skilful and zealous in the performance of their duties. As a consequence of their exertions we find that the death-rate from small-pox is extremely low; for 1889 and 1890 it is returned as only one per million, the total number of deaths having been twenty-three in the former year and sixteen in the latter; but I have long maintained that vaccination, although an indispensable protection against small-pox and a sure means of reducing the death-rate from that disease, cannot in practice be carried out with such far-reaching thoroughness as quickly to arrest and suppress an epidemic outbreak. I am confirmed in this opinion by the consideration of what has taken place in England during the last nine or ten months. In the beginning of 1892 the disease was by no means prevalent; there were a few cases in London, and now and then a few in the larger provincial towns, and it was confidently expected that the outbreak would not assume serious proportions. This expectation expectation has, however, been disappointed; the disease has spread gradually to many other towns. How far it has extended will be seen from the following quotation from the Lancet of 28th January, 1893:—

“ Week by week the diffusion of small-pox proceeds on an extended scale, but with the exception of some half dozen places the outbreaks are neither on a wide scale nor do they present indications of special virulence. The list of places attacked is, however, a large one. Amongst them we would note as follows:—Alcester, Barnsley (where four fresh cases occurred last week, and where sixteen cases are in the Kendray Hospital), Batley, Bedale, Birmingham (where tramps are in question), Blyth, Blackburn, Bolton, Bradford, Bridgend, Brighouse, Coventry, Chadderton, near Oldham (with ten fresh attacks), Cleckheaton (in the neighbourhood of which the disease is spreading), Chester-le-street (where the disease has appeared in common lodging-houses), Derby, Durham (near which the disease is gaining ground), Dewsbury (where sixteen cases are in the hospital), East Marston, near Skipton (where navvies are attacked), Halifax (where fifteen new cases occurred last week), Hendon (where the workhouse is infected), Huddersfield (where a temporary hospital is being erected), Hull (where three cases have occurred in the prison), Keighley, Lancaster, Leicester (where eleven fresh attacks were recorded last week), Leyton, Leeds (where between fifty and sixty cases are in the hospital), Linthwaite (where thirteen cases have occurred), Llanelly (where a tramp has introduced the disease), Liverpool, Macclesfield, Manchester (where 200 cases have occurred since the beginning of December, and where an attempt to erect an hospital in Withington is being opposed before Mr. Justice Chitty), Middlesborough, Newcastle-on-Tyne, North Bierley, Northampton, Northallerton (where danger arises from tramps), Oxford, Oldham (where fifteen fresh attacks have occurred), Pontefract, Rotherham (where there are nine cases in the workhouse), Salford, Scholes, Settle, St. Helen's (with six fresh attacks), Sheffield, Southampton (where the disease still extends, and proper isolation arrangements are for the moment exhausted), Solihull, Sunderland, Skipton, Stockport, Thetford (where the disease has assailed the workhouse), Tynemouth, Wakefield (where about twenty are in hospital), West Hartlepool, Willington, Warrington (where the disease still lingers, twelve fresh attacks having occurred last week), and Leadon. In the metropolis, the number of cases under isolation in the hospital ships has steadily increased to seventy-two, but there was only one fatal attack last week. . . . We cannot cope with the erratic movements of our ignorant tramp and pauper classes except by preparing ourselves in advance by a recent vaccination against such small-pox as these classes may at any moment bring into our midst.”

The list does not pretend to be exhaustive, but it is long enough to be alarming. The cases are not commonly virulent, just as we should expect in a country where the protection afforded by vaccination is so widespread; but the disease is spreading slowly and surely to all the great centres of population and to many country towns and villages. I believe that in New South Wales such an outbreak would have been suppressed months ago.

What then, are the defects in the English system which have allowed this disease, though by no means of a virulent type, to creep gradually from one end of the country to the other? They are easily enough discovered:—

- 1st. The notification required by the Infectious Diseases Notification Act is insufficient, as it is not necessary to notify cases of doubtful diagnosis; in this way mild but infectious cases of varioloid may readily escape attention under the mistaken idea that they are only chicken-pox. In New South Wales the Act, which unfortunately is restricted to small-pox, requires that householders and medical practitioners should forthwith report every case which may be reasonably supposed to be small-pox. The responsibility for dealing with it then rests with the Health Department, which has, I think wisely, always acted on the principle that in cases of doubt it is best to secure the public safety even at the expense of a little private inconvenience.
- 2nd. The Notification Act is comparatively recent: its application by local authorities is optional: and local authorities who have adopted it do not yet seem to be, in all cases, sufficiently impressed with its importance to insure its being vigorously enforced. Thus the first prosecution in London under this Act, as I am informed, took place in July, 1892, when a lady and her medical attendant were fined for failing to notify a case of scarlet fever. From what I gather, I fear that many other cases of failure to notify must have been overlooked by the authorities, but of this I cannot of course have any definite knowledge.
- 3rd. There are no statutory powers of compulsory isolation, excepting under a magistrate's order, which naturally entails considerable delay; and even when such an order has been obtained the patient cannot be compelled to obey it. The only course open to the authority in such a case is to wait till the patient is sufficiently recovered to be brought before the magistrate, when he may be fined for disobedience. By this process I suppose the majesty of the law is sufficiently vindicated, but it can hardly be said that the spread of infection is satisfactorily prevented.
- 4th. In many places the provision for isolation of infectious diseases is insufficient: in some a part of the workhouse is used for this purpose, a practice which late experience has shown to be quite unsuited for coping with an outbreak of small-pox. In London the accommodation provided by the Metropolitan Asylums board is exceedingly good, but scarcely large enough for dealing with a severe outbreak. The board have been much impeded in their efforts to extend their accommodation by the opposition of the Middlesex County Council.
- 5th. No provision is made for the isolation and inspection of suspected cases of small-pox: no patient can be admitted to a place of isolation in London until the eruption has declared itself, even although it may be morally certain that he is suffering from the initiatory fever of the disease. As for the control and inspection of persons who are known to have been exposed to infection, and who are therefore liable to contract the disease, so far as I can find out, it is not even thought of. In Manchester, Dr. Tatham, the able and energetic medical officer of health, has provided a special house of observation for cases of doubtful diagnosis, especially in patients who are known to have been exposed to infection. This cannot fail to be of great assistance to him in dealing with an outbreak, but I fear that his accommodation for such cases is hardly large enough. It would be well if similar provision were made by every local authority, for there can be but little doubt that small-pox is infectious at a very early stage of its course, and therefore the sooner a patient is isolated the less risk there is of his spreading infection.

If the English, who are so well protected by vaccination, would but adopt these three measures, rigorous enforcement of the notification of all cases which might reasonably be supposed to be small-pox, immediate isolation of affected persons, and control and supervision of persons who have been exposed to infection, they would cut short their outbreaks of small-pox just as surely and as speedily as it is done in New South Wales.

As regards the other infectious diseases, such as scarlet fever, measles, and diphtheria, which occur for the most part among the young, similar drastic measures might perhaps be found impracticable. But the law gives considerable powers, which unfortunately are not given in New South Wales; and if it were amended by making notification compulsory in every place, and by including measles in the list of diseases to be notified, it would, I think, be quite satisfactory if it were vigorously carried out. But there is the difficulty. Local authorities are often easy-going and averse to taking trouble: and all the zeal of the medical officers of health, whose scientific attainments and enthusiasm in the cause of sanitation cannot be too highly praised, is sometimes insufficient to overcome the apathy of lazy and careless people. Not that this applies to all local authorities: many of them are honourably distinguished by an intelligent desire to discharge their duties to the public. But there is, and I fear always will be, a residuum which can only be driven to the energetic performance of its functions by a vigorous application of the spur from above.

Where the law is effectively carried out a great deal is done to stay the spread of epidemic disease by the enforcement, so far as is practicable, of measures of isolation. It would be a distinct improvement, however, if more care were taken to prevent the spread of infectious disease in schools. It is the opinion of many that much of the increase of diphtheria in recent years is due to the more thorough enforcement of school attendance; and it would seem also that this is not without its effect in helping to spread scarlet fever and measles. It would, I think, be a wise plan to give medical officers of health the power of temporarily closing schools when epidemic outbreaks occur among children, and when in the opinion of the medical officer continued attendance at school is the means of spreading disease. This would bring their responsibilities home to parents, to school masters, and to school managers, and would probably induce their zealous co-operation in the necessary measures of isolation, as to which I fear they are at present, in some cases at all events, less attentive than they might be.

III.—Few or no precautions are taken in England to prevent the importation of disease from abroad excepting with respect to small-pox and cholera. If a ship arrives, with small-pox on board, the affected persons are sent to a hospital, and the rest of the passengers and crew are advised to submit to vaccination or re-vaccination. But no steps are taken to prevent them from mixing with the general population during the period of a possible incubation of the disease.

In the case of cholera the procedure is as follows:—* When a ship arrives from a port which is known to be infected with cholera, she is at once boarded by the port medical officer who inspects the passengers and crew. If any persons are found to be suffering from cholera they are at once sent to hospital; the other passengers are not permitted to leave the ship till they have furnished the medical officer with their names and the addresses at which they propose to live when in England, and the local authorities of their various destinations are informed of their arrival, and the infected ship is moored in a separate anchorage till she has been disinfected, and all infected bedding destroyed. So far this plan has been successful in keeping the disease at bay, and I doubt if under the circumstances of English trade, and considering the constant intercourse with the continent, more stringent measures of restriction would be practicable. And there can be no doubt that the medical officers of the chief ports have carried out their duties with great vigour and energy.

There are however many deficiencies in the existing law, which throw unnecessary difficulties in the way of these gentlemen, and which might be supplied without causing any appreciable inconvenience to the trading or travelling public:—

- 1st. Power should be taken to proclaim infected ports or places, so that port medical officers should have authoritative information as to what ships it is necessary to board and inspect. I believe that no such general information is at present given.
- 2nd. All ships sailing from or having touched at infected ports should be obliged to hoist a distinguishing flag on arrival, and they should be required to anchor for inspection before being allowed to enter the inner and more crowded part of the port.
- 3rd. The port medical officer should have power to detain a suspected ship for a reasonable time to enable him to form a correct opinion as to her sanitary condition. For example, he should not be required to inspect a ship after nightfall; the ship might be detained till daylight, so that she should not escape from efficient inspection by arriving between sunset and sunrise.
- 4th. Vessels arriving from infected ports should be regarded as infected and prevented from communicating with the shore till the port medical officer has either declared that they are not infected or taken steps to remove any source of infection that he may find existing on board.
- 5th. No vessel arriving from an infected port should be permitted to discharge fresh water, whether carried as ballast or for the use of the crew and passengers, into the harbour.
- 6th. Masters of ships arriving from infected ports should be required to answer all questions of the port medical officer with reference to the ship, the voyage, the crew, and the passengers. Refusing to answer or giving false answers should be punished with great severity.

These points are essential to the maintenance of a due control over the possible importation of disease from abroad. As far as I know, they are not provided for by English law.

These seem to me to be fair examples of the chief defects which may be noticed in the English system. It must not be imagined, however, that they are not recognised in England, or that they have not been carefully discussed by English sanitarians. Such as they are they arise from the strong English feeling of respect for the autonomy of local authorities and for the absolute liberty of the individual, even if the individual is a tramp, carrying about with him the seeds of small-pox. But I believe that the sound good sense of the nation will gradually evolve a way of invigorating the central administration, and more thoroughly controlling the spread of infectious disease, without unduly interfering with the exercise of corporate rights or the enjoyment of personal liberty.

CONCLUSION.

* The importation of rags from infected ports is also forbidden.

CONCLUSION.

In New South Wales, as every one knows who has been engaged in sanitary administration, we fall in many particulars very far short of the high standard of legislation for the public health which has been attained in England, and our deficiencies in this respect have been frequently pointed out, more especially by the Hon. Dr. Mackellar, the first President of the Board of Health, who prepared a very excellent measure dealing with the subject so long ago as 1885. His bill was introduced into the Legislative Council and read a first time, but owing to a change of Government no further progress was made with it.

Since that date one or two useful measures of limited scope have been passed, such as the Dairies Supervision Act, the Leprosy Act, and the Diseased Animals and Meat Act, and two Acts amending the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Act were passed in 1888 and 1889.

But no attempt has been made to pass an Act of general scope and import, and there are many points of the utmost consequence as to which no legislative provision, or, at all events, no adequate legislative provision, exists in the Colony. Among these I may mention the notification and prevention of epidemic disease (excepting with respect to small-pox), the prevention of building on insanitary sites, the dealing with insanitary areas and insanitary buildings (excepting to a certain extent within the city of Sydney), the regulation of common lodging-houses, the regulation of factories and workshops, the dealing with noxious and offensive trades, the effectual prevention of the adulteration of articles of food and drink and of drugs, and, though last not least, but greatest in importance, the compelling negligent local authorities to carry out the sanitary powers with which they may be entrusted.

These are all matters of the highest importance from a sanitary point of view, and I trust that no long time will elapse before a measure embracing a full and complete sanitary code will be laid before Parliament for its consideration.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

DAIRIES SUPERVISION ACT.

(REPORT ON ADMINISTRATION OF, FOR THE YEAR 1892.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 18 October, 1893.

The Secretary to the Board of Health to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Board of Health Office, 127, Macquarie-street, Sydney, 12th October, 1893.

I have the honor, by direction of the Board of Health, to forward herewith, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, a report on the administration of the Dairies Supervision Act for the year 1892.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND SAGER,

Secretary.

[Enclosure.]

DURING the year 1892 the provisions of the Dairies Supervision Act, 50 Victoria No. 17, were extended to the following districts:—

- (a) The parish of Ellis, county of Brisbane (extension of Muswellbrook);
- (b) The borough of Cootamundra and an area of 5 miles outside such borough;
- (c) The municipal district of Lismore;
- (d) The municipal district of Forbes;
- (e) The boroughs of Mudgee and Cudgegong and an area of 10 miles outside the latter borough;
- (f) The portion of the Macleay Licensing District, lying east of a line commencing at Mount Kippara on the southern boundary, and extending due north to the northern boundary;
- (g) The borough of Armidale and an area within a radius of 8 miles outside such borough;
- (h) The boroughs of Orange and East Orange and an area within a radius of 15 miles outside such boroughs;
- (i) The municipal district of Yass; and
- (j) The borough of Grafton and the population area of Grafton outside such borough.

In Appendix A will be found a complete list of the districts to which the Act has been extended since it was assented to on the 30th September, 1886, together with a list of the various local authorities charged with its administration.

The officers of the Board have during the year inspected the premises of the registered dairymen and milkvenders within all these districts, with the exception of those to which the Act had been very recently extended.

In Appendix B will be found a synopsis of the reports of such inspections, together with the action taken by the Board consequent thereon. The dairies are now in a far more satisfactory condition, and the local authorities are administering the Act in a more efficient manner, much improvement having been made during the year by reason of the officers of the local authorities more thoroughly understanding the requirements of the Act.

By the appointment of Veterinary Inspectors the Board have been able to give greater attention to the condition of the stock and to the destruction of diseased cattle, and there can be no doubt that the information gained by the local inspectors from the visits of these officers has much tended to the proper administration of the Act.

During the year prosecutions have been instituted and convictions obtained for flagrant breaches of the Act in selling milk from diseased cows and for not reporting dangerous epidemic disease on dairy premises.

In Appendix C will be found the usual abstract of the annual reports furnished by the local authorities charged with the administration of the Act, from which it will be seen that the provisions of the Act are now being more strictly enforced. Many local authorities which hitherto displayed much antagonism to the operations of the Act, are now administering its provisions in a proper manner.

As in previous years, the Board caused the water supplies of the dairy premises in certain districts to be examined, and, of 103 samples so examined, forty-four were found to be so polluted as to be unfit for use on dairy premises. (Vide Appendix D.)

In all cases in which dairy waters are found polluted the local authorities are immediately advised to cause the supplies to be closed in accordance with the Act, or to cancel the registration. The importance of this matter is very great, though unfortunately the local authorities do not in all cases realise the danger, or their duties in regard thereto, and allow dairymen to continue to supply milk to the public whilst a known polluted source of water supply is accessible on their premises.

In accordance with the provisions of section 7 several cases of infectious disease have been reported on dairy premises during the year 1892. In every case the local authority concerned has been immediately notified, and requested to cause the registration to be cancelled until the recovery of the patient, or preferably, to cause the affected person to be removed to an hospital, and in either case to clean and disinfect the premises. By this action it is believed that the spread of infectious disease has been largely prevented.

Cases of infectious disease amongst dairy cattle have also been reported, and the Board have in all instances furnished veterinary assistance to the local authorities, and subsequently advised them as to the action to be taken in the matter.

In the reports for previous years the Board pointed out that the Act required amendment in several particulars, and a Bill to amend the existing Act has been prepared and forwarded to the Colonial Secretary. The chief points of the Bill are as follows:—

- (1.) To extend the provisions of the principal Act to persons producing milk for the manufacture of any product of milk, and also to those persons engaged in the manufacture of such product;
- (2.) To enable the local authorities to charge a registration fee to cover the cost of administering the Act;
- (3.) To give to the officers of the Board powers of entry and inspection similar to those now possessed by the local authorities; and
- (4.) To make provision for the issue by the Government of the necessary regulations for the working of the Act, and to provide for the enforcement of such regulations by penalties.

By order of the Board of Health,

EDMUND SAGER,
Secretary.

Sydney, 11th October, 1893.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SLAUGHTER-HOUSES THROUGHOUT THE COLONY.

(THEIR SANITARY CONDITION, AND INOPERATIVENESS OF PRESENT ACTS RELATING TO SAME.)

*Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 1 November, 1893.*The Secretary of the Board of Health to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Offices, 127, Macquarie-street, Sydney, 18 October, 1893.

By direction of the Board of Health I have the honor to forward, for the consideration of the Colonial Treasurer, a report on the condition of the slaughter-houses throughout the Colony of New South Wales.

When veterinary surgeons were appointed to act as Inspectors under the Dairies Supervision Act and the Diseased Animals and Meat Act, the Board determined to avail themselves of the services of these officers in obtaining an accurate account of the condition of the slaughter-houses in the districts which they had occasion to visit. The information thus obtained pointed to the prevalence of a condition of affairs that constituted a serious danger to the public health, and it was therefore decided to obtain, through the Police Department, special reports on the slaughtering establishments throughout the Colony, and the annexed epitome of these reports places beyond doubt the statement that the slaughtering trade is, as a whole, carried on under conditions that can only be described as filthy and insanitary in the highest degree.

At present licenses to slaughter are granted by the local Bench of Magistrates in accordance with the provisions of the Cattle Slaughtering Act. Accordingly, when the first reports on the condition of the slaughter-houses were received by the Board, copies were forwarded to the Department of Justice, with a recommendation that the attention of the Benches of Magistrates throughout the Colony should be called to the insanitary state of these establishments, and that they should be advised that before renewing any registration they should obtain a report from the local Inspector of Slaughter-houses as to the cleanliness and suitability of the premises.

The Department of Justice, upon referring the matter to the Crown Solicitor, was advised as follows:—

“I HAVE the honor to return herewith the papers relating to the state of slaughter-houses in certain districts, referred to me for advice as to what legal steps, if any, can be taken to compel licensed slaughter-houses to be cleansed and the necessary requirements in regard thereto to be carried out.

It has been suggested by the Board of Health, in drawing attention to the insanitary state of some of these places, that the benches of magistrates throughout the colony should be advised that before renewing any registration of any licenses a report should be obtained from the local inspector of slaughter-houses as to the cleanliness and suitability of the premises.

The licenses for slaughter-houses are granted in pursuance of the provisions of the old Act 5 William IV, No. 1. On referring to section 2 of that Act it will be seen that applications for such licenses should be made “on some day in the month of August next” after the passing of the Act. The Bench of Justices on such an application being made had to be satisfied on two points, namely:—

1. That the applicant was of unexceptionable character, and
2. That the situation of the proposed slaughtering-houses was not objectionable.

On being satisfied on these two points it would appear that the Justices had no alternative but to grant the license.

Section 3 then provides:—That it shall and may be lawful for any Bench of Justices to grant in manner as aforesaid a license for a slaughter-house to any unexceptionable person who may or shall apply for the same at any meeting of such Bench, and such license shall remain in force until the 31st December following.

Under this section Justices are directed to grant, in manner aforesaid, a license to any unexceptionable person, and I think the Act must be taken to mean that the Justices have no option but to grant such license if he be satisfied on the two matters referred to in section 2.

I do not think, therefore, that the Justices on such an application could take into consideration any report that may be put before them as to the state of the premises.

It may be that the premises have not been kept in such a manner as would be approved of by an inspecting officer, but it is difficult, I think, to hold that the applicant is on that account not "an unexceptionable person."

With regard to compelling these licensees to keep their premises cleansed, I cannot find in any of the Acts any power of this kind. As pointed out by the Inspector-General of Police, except in towns, the Acts appear to be silent in the matter of cleaning slaughter-houses, and also as regards building requirements.

The amending Act, 14 Victoria, No. 30, which prohibits slaughter-houses within the limits of any city or town to which the Act is extended by Proclamation, contains a proviso that this is not to prevent the renewal of any license already issued, but that such renewal is to be subject to the provisions therein contained. These provisions are those enabling the Justices to give notice to cleanse buildings and to issue a warrant authorising the Police to enter and inspect, etc.

These provisions, unfortunately, only apply to places of this kind—"within the limits of such city or town." They do not apply to a slaughter-house outside these limits.

An Act was passed last year for (amongst other things) empowering the Governor to make regulations for the inspection of animals on slaughtering premises; but the powers conferred by that Act relate only to the seizure, condemnation, and destruction of diseased animals, and diseased meat found on such premises. There is no provision made for ensuring the cleanliness of such premises.

I have, therefore, to advise that, under the existing Acts there is no power to compel licensees of these slaughter-houses situate outside the limits of a town to comply with any requirements of the kind indicated.

The reports submitted with the letter of the Secretary to the Health Board certainly disclose a very disgraceful state of things, and the matter appears to be one urgently requiring to be dealt with by the Legislature.

In any Bill that may be brought forward for this purpose, I would suggest that very full powers should be given, enabling the Executive to issue regulations for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the Act in the fullest manner possible."

As the very limited and inadequate powers contained in the amending Act, 14 Victoria, No. 30' only apply to those premises situated within the limits of a proclaimed town, and as the majority of such premises have been removed beyond the municipal limits, the provisions of the Act for the enforcement of sanitary maintenance of slaughtering premises are virtually inoperative, though all authorities agree that freshly-slaughtered animals are liable to become tainted with the germs of disease, and that it is therefore of the utmost importance, in the interest of the public health, that all slaughtering-places should be kept in a clean and sanitary condition.

Reform in this matter is urgently required, both for the protection of consumers in the home market and to inspire greater confidence in the treatment of the meat now being forwarded in such large quantities to the European markets. To accomplish this, fresh legislation is needed, and this should give this Board adequate powers of supervision over these establishments, which, if conducted in a proper manner, would not be in any way offensive. The eminently satisfactory results which have followed the enforcement of the Dairies Supervision Act can be as easily obtained by adopting the same machinery for the supervision of slaughter-houses. A measure dealing with the matter is now engaging the attention of the Board, and, when completed, will be submitted to the Colonial Treasurer for his consideration.

I am instructed to add that the Board is doing at the present time what is possible to carry on this work; but to ensure efficient supervision further legislation is needed. The Veterinary Inspectors, who now act under the Dairies Supervision Act and the Diseased Animals and Meat Act already referred to, have been instructed to continue their inspection of slaughter-houses when visiting these establishments for the purpose of examining the meat, and these officers could in future, armed with the requisite powers, carry out the supervision of slaughter-houses without additional cost to the Government.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND SAGER,

Secretary.

The Veterinary Inspector to The Secretary, Board of Health.

Sir,

Board of Health Office, 31st August, 1893.

I have the honor to report that in accordance with your instructions I have prepared a rough summary of the sanitary condition of the majority of the premises of those persons holding Slaughtering Licenses throughout the Colony, compiled from returns furnished by the different Inspectors of Slaughter-houses (Police) and other sources; and my personal knowledge of large numbers of such establishments in the suburbs of Sydney and many country districts has guided me in the endeavour to present a plain and correct statement in regard to the existing state of these premises.

It may be mentioned that in sending in these reports some of the Inspectors have included every person in their district to whom a license to slaughter has been granted, whilst others have only remarked on the premises, the occupiers of which carry on a bonâ fide business under such license. In explanation, it is necessary here to state who are the persons that apply to be licensed under the Slaughtering Act. In all the country districts a great many farmers or selectors, killing a few beasts per annum for home consumption, and from their own stock, sell the portion of the carcass to a neighbour, and in rare instances to travellers, and to protect themselves take out a license. They have virtually no slaughtering "premises," as a gallows in a corner of a stock-yard or paddock is all that is provided. The amount of meat that they sell is very small, the transaction being for mutual convenience, and they cannot be looked upon in any way as engaged in the butchering trade.

The other holders of licenses, persons who transact a bond fide business, are the wholesale and retail butchers, proprietors of boiling-down and meat preserving works, &c., and it is with the premises of this class of licensee that this report deals, and more especially with those of the retail butcher.

To the uninitiated a "Slaughter-house" would suggest premises comprising say, a killing-house with surrounding stock-yards, and perhaps a store for hides and skins, &c.—a place that would be kept in a fairly sanitary state, and where the business of preparing the carcasses of animals as food for human consumption would be carried on with such an amount of care and cleanliness as should be inseparable from a business of this nature, and such as the public would ordinarily conclude is usually exercised. Such a slaughter-house is however very rarely met with.

With few exceptions a variety of occupations are engaged in on the premises of those holding a license under the Slaughtering Act. In addition to the killing of animals and the preparation of their carcasses for food, boiling-down operations are carried on, piggeries and poultry farms are kept, and the business of a "knacker," viz., one who kills horses and cattle (diseased and otherwise) for boiling-down, is a frequent accompaniment to the general trade.

It may be well at this point to give a description of the structure and arrangement of the premises as they are generally met with.

That portion used for the slaughtering may be a house with masonry, sawn or slab wood walls, or perhaps just a roofed-over pen. The floors are variously concrete, cement, stone flags, brick, but chiefly sawn wood or rough wooden slabs, and in some instances the ground surface. The drainage (blood and swilling water) from this killing-house falls usually on to the ground or into a trough immediately outside one end of the building. The other houses for hides, boiling-down coppers, &c., are generally huddled close to the slaughter-house, and often all are under the same roof. Adjoining the killing-house are, of course, the stock pens, and also the pig-yards and styes. In many of the reports furnished by the police it is noticed that large businesses are carried on in some districts without any buildings whatever, as many as 300 animals and over being slaughtered monthly in an open pen without any flooring or drainage.

A few of these places are kept in fair repair, but the majority are defective, especially as regards the condition of the floors and drainage.

In reference to the sanitary measures adopted, it is but fair to state that occasionally a butcher is met with who shows a commendable desire to keep his premises, and conduct his business, in such a manner as might reasonably be expected of him; but unfortunately a man of this class is rarely found, and often this attempt at sanitation is frustrated in its results from lack of attention in detail to the general surroundings of premises. As an instance, no matter how clean the inside of killing-house may be, the dirty piggery immediately adjoining is often overlooked.

With very few exceptions slaughtering establishments are in a deplorable condition from faulty arrangement and disrepair, from the many occupations carried on in the same premises, and from the utter disregard of the fact that regular and effective cleansing is necessary. The inner walls of killing-house are plastered with fat and blood, the accumulation of long periods; the floors are broken and under-run with decomposed and highly offensive soilage; in corners and on the rafters overhead are heads and feet, in many cases in an advanced state of decomposition, and it is no uncommon occurrence for maggots to drop on to you when walking under them; the baulks (spreaders on which carcasses hang) are rarely cleansed from the first time they come into use; and the same remark is applicable to the saws, knives, cleavers, and other implements used in the trade, and to the men's clothes, cloths used in dressing, covering carcasses in carts, &c. The water used for dressing purposes is often of a very impure nature. Such is the condition of the inside of slaughter-houses very frequently met with.

The surroundings are of an equally revolting kind, and it is noticeable that in the few cases where attention is paid to the cleansing of the inside, the neglected state of the surroundings of the slaughter-house is almost universal. As before remarked, the blood and swillage generally runs on to the ground surface, or into a trough which overflows in the piggery adjoining; and the result is that the pigs are often wallowing in a black foul-smelling slush, up to their bellies, and extending for a radius of several yards. In any situation the effect of this arrangement is bad, but where the premises are in a low-lying situation, the result can be more easily imagined than described. In addition to this quantities of uncooked offal are frequently thrown to the pigs, who drag it about and leave it to fester in all sorts of holes and corners. The pigs are oftentimes shut up in the yards, but in several instances I have found them in the slaughter-house, tugging away at the neck of a carcass that was hanging to cool.

The boiling-down and hide houses are generally in a very unclean condition, and bones and offal are allowed to accumulate for unwarrantable periods.

The stock pens are often in a dirty state, in bad repair and imperfectly drained, and do not receive the attention that they ought.

Reports have been furnished from time to time by officers of your Department, on the slaughtering premises in some districts, and on individual establishments, and I have thought it fit to quote here some of the remarks contained therein:—

"Hoofs, sheep's paunches, and intestines are carted away into a large paddock, and there tipped out for pigs to feed on; the average number of these animals is from 1,000 to 1,200. These pigs have no care, being left to breed promiscuously, so that it is not surprising to find many die, &c. The paddock is so large that the pigs have ample room, but some prefer to congregate near the slaughter-yards, and lie about in the drains, &c. This I suggest should be prevented by fencing them across the creek."

"Some of the slaughtering-places are in most out of the way situations, hidden from view in the bush, and these are usually objectionably filthy; but the four largest business places are in anything but a satisfactory sanitary condition. The stock-yards and piggeries generally are in a very bad state, and beyond beyond washing down the killing floors little else is done in the way of cleanliness. Hides are usually cured under the same roof where the carcasses are dressed and hung. The slaughter-pen floors are often imperfectly constructed, and the crevices between the bricks harbor septic matter. The water supplied is in many cases of very doubtful purity. The objectionable practice of pig-feeding on blood and offal close to slaughtering-places is general. The piggeries are offensively filthy places. Much more attention should be given to drainage and cleanliness of stock-yards, and to the removal of accumulations of refuse from the immediate surroundings of the slaughtering-places. Scraping and then lime-washing the interior of the buildings periodically would add much to their salubrity."

"I have the honour to report having visited 25 places. They are all more or less in a bad sanitary state, which could be easily improved. Some butchers are willing to do so; others are indifferent and will require some compulsion. In consequence of the demoralising influences surrounding the trade, it is not surprising to find sanitary measures ignored, and individual convenience only considered in carrying on the work. I found the slaughtering-places usually in some secluded, out of the way place, back in the bush, on elevated ground draining into adjacent creeks or other water places. The use of the water being necessary, its subsequent pollution does not appear to have been thought of. It is used for removing blood from the carcase, and in washing down floors; but its use on the wood-work, walls, benches, posts, &c., is omitted altogether. As a rule, dry blood, grease, and filth form a disgusting coating over the interior of the slaughter-houses. Limewashing is almost unheard of. The slaughter-house is usually connected (under the same roof) with the baulks for hanging carcasses to set, a place for salting hides spread on the floors, a place for separating fat from offal, heaps of heads, horns, legs, &c., lying about. The walls are rough hewn battens, permitting the free circulation of air, also dust and noxious fumes, from the loathsome surroundings. Altogether the places are not nice to hang a clean looking carcase to set and dry for market. No wonder meat will not keep without speedily developing the taint of putrefaction. It cannot be too well known that fresh dressed, warm, moist flesh will readily absorb septic germs and noxious gases; therefore sanitation about slaughtering places is a very important matter. Blood and offal passes from the slaughter-houses to pigs kept just outside; the gutters or troughs in which the pigs wallow and fight are too disgusting to describe; offal is dragged about the pig paddock, where remains lie about putrid and filthy; offal is given to pigs raw. These scavengers are much neglected, badly sheltered, in very filthy yards and paddocks; many suffer with lung diseases, and others have cancerous sores &c."

"All these slaughtering establishments are similar in the nature of their business, viz.:—that of a slaughter-house, a boiling-down house, and piggery, and in some cases a poultry farm. As regards construction the buildings are in most cases very rough, huddled together, and of such arrangement that keeping them in a proper sanitary condition would be a difficult matter, even if attempted. At nearly all the places the piggeries are very close to the killing-house; numerous repairs and alterations are needed; and there is an almost total absence of such cleanliness as the nature of the business warrants."

"In the majority of the places visited (35), I found the whole of the premises, inside and out, in a very insanitary condition; and in a few not the slightest attempt at cleansing in any manner, ever appeared to be done. The hide-house and boiling-down coppers were under the same roof as the killing-house, in many cases no partition; decomposing heads, feet, and offal, lying about in corners, or on the rafters overhead, and the floors never washed off. The drainage from slaughter-house is usually into a pig's trough placed outside; but in several cases on the ground surface. Many of the butchers go to the nearest creek or waterhole for the water for dressing purposes and this usually is very impure."

"I visited in all ten, situate outside municipal limits, at distances from 2 to 7 miles from town. Although varying in regard to construction and arrangement of buildings, and the extent of business, the whole of the establishments are similar, as in addition to the slaughtering done, boiling-down operations are carried on, and extensive piggeries are kept. Some of the buildings are very old and dilapidated, others are of recent erection, but the state of repair of many and the surroundings of, I may say, all are such as to prohibit the proper sanitary maintenance of premises, which should be considered as necessary from the nature of the business conducted thereon. The carcasses of slaughtered animals hang in the killing-house amidst these surroundings for various periods up to four and five days."

Attached to this report are summarised notes of over 500 slaughtering places in different parts of the Colony, and from the plain facts disclosed in these notes, and from the remarks already made, it must be acknowledged that legislation is urgently called for in the public interests to protect the health of the community, by causing these premises to be maintained in a proper sanitary condition.

I have, &c.,

SYDNEY T. D. SYMONS, M.R.C.V.S., Veterinary Inspector.

District No. 1. Number of Slaughter-houses, 7.

Four of these places I consider satisfactory. Three are evidently unsatisfactory, from the following causes:—Offal fed pigs are either running loose on premises, or are immediately adjoining killing premises. Drainage at two places is bad, and one slaughter-house has no floor or drainage.

District No. 2. Number of Slaughter-houses, 14.

Three only of these establishments can be considered satisfactory. Of the remainder they are evidently unsatisfactory from the following causes:—At nine places the pigs are running loose, or kept in styes and paddocks immediately adjoining killing-house. At four places there is danger of pollution of creek water used for domestic purposes, from piggery and other drainage. Other places are in bad repair, and two slaughter-houses have no flooring.

District No. 3. Number of Slaughter-houses, 11.

Returns furnished from eleven places, but as four are persons who only occasionally kill I have not considered their premises. Of the remainder, who are evidently regular butchers, the premises of two only are satisfactory. The others, no matter how otherwise well kept, cannot be in a sanitary state as the pigs run loose or are kept adjoining the killing-house.

District No. 4. Number of Slaughter-houses, 5.

I find that at all these places pigs are either kept in paddock adjoining slaughter-house or are allowed to run in and about that building. The constable remarks "slaughter-houses kept fairly clean, but pig yards sloppy."

District

District No. 5. Number of Slaughter-houses, 1.

This place from a sanitary point is fairly satisfactory. The constable remarks, "fairly clean, but require repairing which the licensee has promised to do."

District No. 6. Number of Slaughter-houses, 3.

Returns are furnished of the condition of premises of twelve persons licensed to slaughter, but I have only considered that of the three who are evidently bona fide butchers. One place is described as "very old," which may mean in bad repair, and is probably so. The sanitary arrangement of the other two establishments is bad, as the pigs are yarded adjoining the slaughter-house.

District No. 7. Number of Slaughter-houses, 4.

From the returns the condition of the premises in this district is somewhat of an improvement on those preceding. They are stated to be in good repair and clean, and the pigs are kept in paddocks at distances 35, 10, 17, and 10 feet from the slaughter-house. Although the fact of the pigs being paddocked at such short distances as abovementioned is better than allowing them to be loose or immediately adjoining, such distances are not adequate to allow of the carcasses of slaughtered beasts hanging to cool in an atmosphere of sufficient purity.

District No. 8. Number of Slaughter-houses, 14.

The returns from this district are comprehensive, and I should consider that the buildings are in good repair, and well kept, due to proper supervision and advice. Of the fourteen places however, there are only three that can be supposed to be in a proper sanitary state. At the remainder the fact of piggeries being so adjacent to killing-house prevents that uniform state of premises that sanitarily ought to be maintained in such a business. Extracts from the Police Sergeant remarks:—"Piggery adjoining very dirty." "In good repair, but dirty and offensive owing to pig yards being too near slaughter-house." "Piggery adjoins slaughter-house, premises near main road, close to the village of ———, several residences within 200 yards, including public school." "Piggeries very offensive at times." "Pigs are kept in yards adjoining, and in a very offensive state. A large piggery abuts on slaughter-houses and will become very offensive in time, &c." In this district judging from the reports, the slaughtering establishments themselves appear to be well maintained, but the surroundings of the premises are very defective and objectionable.

District No. 9. Number of Slaughter-houses, 2.

The returns give only two establishments for this district. In reply to questions:—"These premises are in good repair and kept clean, pigs run in the paddock adjoining slaughter-house, fed with offal, &c." also, "Premises old but clean, occupier preparing to erect new ones. Pigs are kept in a paddock adjoining slaughter-house, fed with food boiled in a copper, &c." Both premises are returned as being "clean," but as the pigs run in the paddock adjoining slaughter-house, the conditions of the surroundings can be imagined, especially as the pigs congregate against that portion of the house from which the blood, &c., flows on to the ground.

District No. 10. Number of Slaughter-houses, 45.

The number of returns furnished by persons licensed to slaughter is forty-five. Out of this number eighteen are bona fide butchers, the remainder killing occasionally for themselves and perhaps neighbours. The slaughter-houses in this district were inspected by an officer of the Board of Health in April last, and on that occasion many of the premises were found in a faulty condition as to arrangement, and badly kept. From the returns now to hand, out of this number (eighteen), one place only is still in a defective state, and the licensee having been notified that his license will be opposed, preparations are being made to erect improved premises, both as regards construction, and arrangement. The different constables who are inspectors of slaughter-houses remark:—"The pigs are not 50 yards off. This place has been thoroughly cleaned and repaired within the last few weeks." "Pigs now 200 yards from slaughter-house." "The pigs are now styed 100 yards away. The drainage from the slaughter-house is caught in a tub and carried away to piggery after each killing. All the improvements recommended by Inspector Symons of the Board of Health have been done." "When Inspector Symons from the Board of Health inspected these premises the pigs were running up to the walls of the slaughter-house, but they have now been removed to where he pointed out to proprietor, and other repairs have also been effected." "Great improvements have been done at this place, all the pigs have been enclosed, walls have been scraped and lime-washed and offal is removed after each killing as recommended by Inspector of Health Department." From these and other remarks, it is apparent that a marked improvement has taken place in the sanitary keeping of the slaughtering establishments in this district, and the transformation has been effected with very little outlay, either as regards labour or material. It has all been done by advice, aided by police supervision, and occupiers of premises have readily acquiesced in carrying out the necessary alterations; but it is very doubtful if these improvements would have been attempted, was it known that they could not be legally enforced.

District No. 11. Number of Slaughter-houses, 18.

In the returns furnished for this district, the majority of the premises are referred to in the following terms:—"All the premises are kept fairly clean and in good repair." "All in good condition and clean." "Fair repair and clean," but others again are described, "these premises are not in good repair and not very clean." "They are in fair order but not clean." The above remarks bear solely on the keeping of the interior of the killing-house and in furnishing reports; little consideration is paid to the state of the surroundings, however bad they may be. Out of the total number of places, eighteen, it is noticeable that at only one place there are not any pigs; at all the others the usual piggery is present. "Pigs are kept at all the yards, close to the slaughter yards and fed on the blood and offal." "Yes, sixty kept in paddock adjoining slaughter-house, fed upon offal." "Yes, in a paddock adjoining slaughter-house, &c." "At these two places pigs are allowed to run loose about premises and are fed in troughs." "The drainage from No. 1 slaughter yard is likely to pollute the water of creek," &c. It will thus be surmised that it may be said the whole of the premises in this district are, from a sanitary point, defective, being bad in arrangement and generally lacking that cleanliness which should accompany such a business.

District No. 12. Number of Slaughter-houses, 16.

The reports for this district are carefully filled in, and evidently a number of the places as regards the slaughtering premises are well kept, owing to proper advice and supervision. Out of the sixteen places, "no pigs" is only returned from one. At the remaining fifteen, pigs are kept fenced off in three cases, distances of 5, 20, and 150 yards. Everywhere else, "pigs are kept in a paddock adjoining slaughter-house." "Pigs are kept and run in a paddock surrounding the slaughter-house." "The licensee of these premises keeps the inside of his slaughter-house clean and tidy, but the pigs, being fed so close, prevents him from keeping the outside as clean as it could otherwise be kept." In addition other places are described: "In good repair, but dirty, rubbish of all descriptions being allowed to accumulate; the pig yard is also in a very dirty state." "These premises are in a very dirty condition, the licensee allows bones, offal, &c., to accumulate." "Premises are in fair repair, but kept in a filthy condition," &c. The summary of the reports on this district point to the fact that the majority of the premises used for slaughtering are kept in good repair and clean, but that the surroundings vary little from those preceding, and must certainly be considered as bad, in that where pigs are kept in such close proximity to the killing house any benefit derived from the keeping of the inside of that building in a clean state is destroyed by the dirty (and it cannot be otherwise) condition of the immediate surroundings.

District

District No. 13. Number of Slaughter-houses, 19.

The remarks on the condition of nearly all these premises are "Fair repair and clean," "Good and clean," "Good repair and very clean," &c., and it is noticeable that the insides of the killing-house are in many cases regularly lime-washed. At three places "no pigs" are kept, but at all the others large number; and although in a few instances fenced off at distance of 8 chains, 500 yards, 45 yards, 29 feet, and 6 feet, the usual thing is for them to be yarded adjoining slaughter-house or running loose at will on premises. One establishment in this district, as regards premises, is described, "Good and clean, lime-washed," and in reply to pigs, "Yes, 100 in yard adjoining killing-house fed on offal," &c. It can be easily imagined that notwithstanding all ordinary care is exercised, the surroundings of these premises must be in a very offensive condition, more especially in summer weather. As slaughtering businesses are at present conducted, this district compares very favourably with some others, but the above remarks are sufficient evidence to show the generally bad and defective arrangement of premises in what is in all probability thought a model establishment in the neighbourhood.

District No. 14. Number of Slaughter-houses, 12.

These establishments are evidently large, as a great number of animals are returned as slaughtered in each. The condition of repair and cleanliness, in regard to slaughter-house, may be summarized as "fairly satisfactory." With one exception, the surroundings of same must be considered as bad, and arrangement similarly described. Pigs are kept at distances of 15, 12, 30, 80, and 130 feet from killing-house, and in large numbers. It is not mentioned whether the waters of these streams are afterwards drawn from for domestic use, but the Police-Sergeant, who furnishes most of the reports states, "there is likely to be danger," &c. At places other than those above-mentioned the pigs are kept adjoining the slaughter-house. The general condition of the whole of these premises must therefore be looked upon as lacking proper arrangement and sanitary keeping, and calling for numerous improvements.

District No. 15. Number of Slaughter-houses, 7.

There are seven licenses granted here, but only five licensees appear to be bona fide butchers. Of the premises of these persons, as regards repair and cleanly keeping, the reports state, "good repair," "fair repair" and "clean," but this evidently as usual only applies to the inside of slaughter-house. At all the places pigs are kept, and they run in yards adjoining the killing-house. In two cases there is undoubted pollution by drainage of a creek, the water of which is largely drawn from for domestic purposes, and there are other facts in the reports to show that these premises generally are not kept in such manner as they ought to be.

District No. 16. Number of Slaughter-houses, 9.

Only eight regular butchers, but these carrying on fairly extensive businesses. The condition of premises as regards repair and cleanliness is described in one case "very good," and of the others "fairly good." The reports are not very comprehensive, but at all the places it is stated, "Yes, pigs are kept and allowed to feed around the yard on the offal of cattle slaughtered, grain, &c." So it may be presumed that the state of the surroundings of the killing-house is not in any different from that of the generality of districts, the cleansing of premises being limited to cleaning off the floor of slaughter-house.

District No. 17. Number of Slaughter-houses, 5.

The persons licensed all carry on fairly large business. As regards state of repair and cleanliness, four are described as "in good repair and clean," and one "in bad repair and very dirty." These remarks evidently apply to the inner keeping of killing-house and conduct of business. At all the places the pigs are kept "in yards close to slaughter-house and fed on offal, &c." Other than for this bad arrangement the returns report favourably, with the exception of the one place mentioned. provided the inside of slaughter-house is kept moderately clean, very little attention is probably given to surroundings however much they may require it.

District No. 18. Number of Slaughter-houses, 34.

Out of the large number of these returns for these districts many of the places are small, and the reports speak favourably of the manner of their keeping; but of the larger establishments, in which the meat for town consumption is prepared, the remarks are very unsatisfactory. Some of the premises are dilapidated, and many of them are evidently in a very offensive state. Amongst other remarks by the Inspectors of Slaughter-houses are the following:—"Premises are very much out of repair and not kept clean, no drainage. Pigs are the cause of all the dirt on these premises." "Very old buildings; pigs in yard adjoining; pigs should be kept away off premises." "Premises in fairly good repair, but could be kept much cleaner if pigs were away," &c. "Pigs are kept and are running about the slaughter-house." "Premises very old and dilapidated," &c. The main establishments must thus be considered as bad, and lack all such proper arrangement and maintenance as the nature of the calling carried on therein warrants.

District No. 19. Number of Slaughter-houses, 9.

One or two of these places may be considered to be in a fairly sanitary condition as they are reported as clean, and no pigs are kept, but the majority may be looked upon as unsatisfactory establishments. Although the business is extensive, killing 130 and 70 animals per month, it is noticed that at two places there are not any properly floored and drained buildings, the slaughtering of such a number of beasts being done in an open yard with an earth floor, which absorbs a quantity of the blood and drainage. Such an arrangement cannot fail to render the premises in a very objectionable condition, and must give rise to a doubt of the wholesomeness of meat that has to cool and hang for a considerable period in such an atmosphere. Then again surrounding most of the premises the pig-yard or paddock is met with, adding to the already undesirable state of the premises. "Pigs are kept yarded 20 feet off." "Pigs are running loose adjoining the yards." "Pigs are running at large in yards adjoining, and fed on the refuse." The refuse probably means uncorked offal.

District No. 20. Number of Slaughter-houses, 17.

These are for the most part the premises of butchers carrying on extensive businesses, and the reports plainly indicate that the majority of the establishments are in a deplorable condition as regards arrangement and sanitary keeping. Many of the places are within municipal limits, and the others outside are only 2 or 3 miles distant from the Post Office. In only a few instances is there a proper floored slaughter-house, and at no less than fourteen places out of the seventeen, the reports state, "There are no buildings." The slaughtering is done in a post and rail yard, earth floor, no drainage. The number of animals slaughtered per month in such yards is variously returned as 120 sheep, 60 cattle, 4 pigs; 160 sheep, 48 cattle, 4 pigs; 350 sheep, 26 cattle, 4 pigs; 800 sheep, 40 cattle 20 pigs; 600 sheep, 40 cattle, 8 pigs; &c., and the universal reply to question; "What is drainage of buildings and yards?" is "Nil." At all the places pigs are kept, at a distance of 50 and 56 yards at two—at the others, "In yards adjoining the slaughter-house," "In yards adjoining the slaughter pen and running at large," "Yes, running at large, fed of offal," &c.; so it is very perceptible that the question "In what condition are the premises as regards cleanliness and repair, &c.;" is improperly answered, although perhaps unintentionally, when the reply in regard to such premises as are described above is, "good and kept clean," "In good repair and clean," &c. At two of the places a domestic water supply is polluted, the remarks on same being, "These yards are on side of a hill within 100 yards of water-course, which drains about 1½ miles east of yards into the Imperial Dam (Government) the water of which in dry seasons is used for domestic purposes."

District

District No. 21. Number of Slaughter-houses, 6.

The two chief slaughtering establishments in Denilquin killing 620 and 477 animals per month may from the reports be considered satisfactory, the same stating—"Both are in good repair and very clean pigs are kept at some distance from the slaughter-house. These places have complete and necessary arrangements for a slaughtering business." The same satisfactory arrangement is apparently adopted at ———. At ——— the condition of the premises is returned as "Good and clean;" but this, no doubt, only refers to the inside of killing-house, as it is noticeable that at all the places "Pigs are kept in paddock adjacent to yards," &c.; so their general condition cannot be looked upon other than as unsatisfactory.

District No. 22. Number of Slaughter-houses, about 25.

A few of these places judging from the reports are in a fairly satisfactory state. At some of them it is remarked that pigs are not kept, and that the condition of premises is good, being clean and having good natural drainage, &c. At the majority, however, the pigs are either in paddock surrounding the slaughter-house, or run loose, which means they have a free run of inside as well; so this, coupled with the fact that some of the houses are without floors and imperfectly drained, &c., point to the necessity of uniform regulations as to arrangement and keeping of all slaughtering premises.

District No. 23. Number of Slaughter-houses, 24.

A lengthy report on this district (extracts from same noted in other part) was furnished in September, 1892, by Mr. Stanley, Government Veterinarian, and disclosed that many of these establishments were in a wretched state of filth and neglect, and totally unfit for licensed slaughter-houses. The reports now sent in by the police, although not so lengthy, thoroughly endorsed many of Mr. Stanley's remarks, and still point to the fact that such places are totally unfit, from their arrangement and keeping, for the preparation of animals as food for man. At one place 1,200 sheep are killed monthly, and the quantity of pure water is totally inadequate, consequently water is used from a hole described as bad. Pigs and poultry are kept in large numbers and crowded around the killing-house, and there are only three or four of these licensed premises that can be looked upon at all favourably from a sanitary point. In fact, bad as the country are, those in the Metropolitan District appear to be in a far worse condition.

District No. 24. Number of Slaughter-houses, 16.

A few small places not considered. Only about two of these licensed premises can be believed to be in anything like a proper sanitary condition. The usual piggery is an accompaniment to the majority of the businesses, and it is either close to the slaughter-house, or the pigs run loose at their pleasure. Some of the butchers have no slaughter-house, but kill in an open unfloored pen, and doing extensive trades too. Altogether, these districts vary little from others, and the slaughtering establishments must collectively be looked upon as improper in arrangement and keeping, incidental to the nature of the business carried on.

District No. 25. Number of Slaughter-houses, 30.

Many of these establishments are large, being either boiling-down works, or chilling depôts. The reports are too meagre to form any decided opinion as to whether these businesses are as a whole improperly carried on; but there is ample evidence in the case of several to show that sanitarily they are very defective. Some of the places are returned as "good and clean," and offensive smells destroyed by the use of lime, and the pigs kept a short distance away, but others are not so arranged. "One place killing 140 animals per month, has a bark roof slaughter-house, ground floor [presumably earth], drainage natural slope to paddock. Pigs kept in small paddock of 1 acre adjoining fed on offal," &c., and yet the condition of premises is returned as "good and clean." As before remarked, provided the floor of the killing house is kept fairly clean, it is the usual thing to pay little or no attention to the surroundings of the place no matter how bad they may be.

District No. 26. Number of Slaughter-houses, 7.

The reports from this district are evidently carefully prepared, and are comprehensive. The officer furnishing them states his cases plainly and properly. Where credit is due it is given, as two places are mentioned to be "In good repair and very clean and well kept," "in good repair and fairly clean," but of the others the remarks are very unfavourable.—"These premises are in a very unsatisfactory condition." "These are very good and substantial premises, but are allowed to fall into very bad repair. The slaughter-yard and premises are in a filthy condition. A summons has been applied for to compel owner to clean and repair premises, but owing to the Act not being extended to Tamworth, the summons could not be granted." "These yards could be considerably improved if the Act was extended to Tamworth, when the butchers could be compelled to drain, whitewash, and cleanse their premises." From the above it is apparent that the butchers of this place are aware that they cannot by law be compelled to clean up, and act accordingly. Although the reports furnished by this Inspector of Slaughter-houses are descriptive, and evidently true, they are in no way exaggerative, and are applicable to the majority of the places where those filling up the reports have meagrely stated "Fairly good," "Fairly clean," &c.

District No. 27. Number of Slaughter-houses, 5.

Two places at ———; fairly extensive business. No buildings. Stock-yard with gallows. No pigs. Three places at ———; premises reported "In good repair and kept clean." It is noticeable, however, that at two establishments the pigs are kept in paddock in which slaughter-house is situated and when a beast is killed and being dressed, the pigs come to yard and eat the offal which is thrown to them.

District No. 28. Number of Slaughter-houses, 4.

At one boiling down establishment, killing 14,000 sheep per month, "Offal is carted away and buried in pits on the bank of the river. There would be danger of pollution of water in flood time. There is a very offensive smell from these premises." The other three places are described: "Bad repair"; "Fairly clean"; "Good repair" "In a filthy condition"; "bad repair"; "In a filthy condition," and the number of pigs in paddock where slaughter-house stands is respectively 100, 100, 250. Altogether pointing to the general unsatisfactory state of the whole of these premises.

District No. 29. Number of Slaughter-houses, 9.

Both the ——— places are described "In good repair and clean," but pigs are kept in paddock adjoining the slaughter-house. At ——— the condition of all the premises is given as very good, and the same phrase is used in regard to the pigs, viz.: "Pigs are kept in a yard near slaughter-house and fed on offal." The arrangement here is presumably the same as usual where pigs are kept—their paddock adjoins the killing house and they always congregate up against one side of it. At ———, pigs are styed away at distances of 100, 300, and 500 yards, but at other places adjoin slaughter-house.

District No. 30. Number of Slaughter-houses, 9.

All these establishments are apparently of the same class, those of butchers doing an extensive business. The slaughtering buildings are of durable construction, but badly arranged, and evidently very indifferently kept. Such reports as: "All the pigs are kept in a paddock and run round slaughter-house. Pigs are kept adjoining slaughter-houses," &c., in regard to the whole of the premises, is sufficient indication that very little attempt at sanitation is made; so these places are evidently to be considered as in no way differing from the ordinary run of such establishments.

District

District No. 31. Number of Slaughter-houses, 15.

At nearly all these places extensive businesses appear to be carried on, and defective arrangement and keeping is very evident at all. Some have no buildings, but kill in an open yard. At others the premises are reported in bad repair. Piggeries are as usual general, and the reports state :—" Pigs are kept about slaughter-yards running about yard and pen. These yards are dirty owing to the rains, and the pigs rooting them about," &c.

District No. 32. Number of Slaughter-houses, 16.

This number comprises the main slaughtering establishments in these towns, all of retail butchers. The majority of the premises are reported in fair repair, and one of the places may be considered satisfactory, in that the inspector states :—" Premises in good repair ; no pigs kept, places always clean and in a sanitary condition." The whole of the remainder are in some manner defective, chiefly from the objectionable piggeries, so close to the slaughter-house, and complaints have been made by local residents from the nuisance created by some of these places. One inspector reports that the premises are dirty "From fowls roosting in the slaughter-house," and although this is so far the first instance of such a practice being noted, many other inspectors might have (if they cared) remarked the same thing, as it is a common occurrence in country slaughter-houses for the fowls to regularly roost on the sapling beams overhead.

District No. 33. Number of Slaughter-houses, 20.

The reports from these districts as furnished do not differ materially from those of any other, and most of them must be considered unsatisfactory. Extracts from reports on both these districts made by officers from the Board of Health will be found elsewhere.

Returns from numerous other districts have been carefully read, but there is little or no difference in the condition of premises from those previously remarked upon. Throughout the Colony the whole of the butchers' slaughtering establishments, although varying in size, appear of the same nature in regard to the numerous occupations carried out thereon, and early measures are called for to rearrange, effect necessary repairs, enforce cleanly keeping of premises, and a better care in the conduct of business, such being urgently required in the interest of the Public Health.

Your Committee having examined the witnesses named in the list* (whose evidence will be found appended hereto) and carefully considered the evidence referred, find,—

* See list,
p. 5.

1. That on 4th February, 1892, John Deniff was indicted at Dubbo and found guilty (with a strong recommendation to mercy) on a charge of stealing £78 from one Christie Cunningham, and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.
2. That a doubt having arisen as to the prisoner's guilt, His Excellency the Governor appointed Mr. Henry Byrnes, J.P., to hold an inquiry.
3. That, on the 13th and 14th April, 1892, Mr. Byrnes held an inquiry at Nyngan, and examined twenty witnesses, including the prosecutor, Cunningham, and reported,—
 - (1) That the said Christie Cunningham did not have the said moneys to steal; (2) that there was no robbery whatever; (3) that the Prisoner's character was good; (4) that the said Christie Cunningham's character was bad; and (5) that the Prisoner should be released from custody.
4. That immediately on receipt by His Excellency the Governor of the said Report, that is to say, on the 23rd day of April, 1892, after having served about eleven weeks, accused was discharged from gaol and from custody.
5. That the said John Deniff suffered considerable pecuniary loss through the destruction of his business and credit, and heavy legal, medical, funeral, and other expenses.
6. That immediately after the charge had been preferred against John Deniff, his wife (who had hitherto enjoyed good health) took ill, and died on the 27th March, 1892; and the medical man attending her stated that the primary cause of her death was nervous prostration and shock, caused by the incarceration of her husband.

Your Committee, for the foregoing reasons, regard the case as one calling for special consideration, on account of the serious injustice done and the loss sustained, and therefore recommend it to the favourable consideration of the Government.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

ON

CASE OF JOHN DENIFF.

FRIDAY, 9 JUNE, 1893.

Present:—

MR. WADDELL,	MR. HINDLE,
MR. KELLY,	MR. MORGAN.

T. WADDELL, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Deniff called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] What is your occupation? Labourer at present.
2. In the month of January, 1892, were you charged at Nyngan, in company with a man named M'Dermott, with having robbed a man named Christie Cunningham of £78? Yes.
3. Were you remanded to be tried at Dubbo, and, subsequently, in the month of February, 1892, were you tried there on this charge? Yes.
4. Did a jury bring in a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy, and were you then sentenced by the judge to two years' imprisonment? Yes.
5. How long were you in prison before you were released? Eleven weeks.
6. Did Mr. Byrnes, of Parramatta, hold an inquiry at Nyngan, and as a result of that inquiry were you released? Yes, in about nine days.
7. You were found to be innocent of the charge? Yes.
8. When you were charged with this offence were you in business as a hotel-keeper on the Cobar Road? Yes.
9. Did your wife and family reside with you at the time? Yes.
10. Was your wife usually a healthy woman? Yes; she was never a day sick, and we had been married about fifteen years.
11. Shortly after you were convicted did your wife fall ill? Yes; she took ill in the Court, and she never got out of bed again. The shock killed her.
12. Who was the doctor who attended her? There were two doctors.
13. Are you satisfied that your wife died on account of the severe shock that she sustained through the position in which you were placed? Yes, as sure as I am sitting here.
14. At that time had you any intention of giving up business? No.
15. Was your business then a paying one? Yes.
16. Owing to your having been convicted, and to the sad end of your wife, was your business broken up and did you lose it? Yes.
17. Were you put to any legal expense in connection with this case? Yes; my wife paid away £300 or £400.
18. Was that for legal expenses? Yes; and for other expenses. She had the money.
19. Owing to the circumstances of the case did your wife pay £300 or £400 for legal and other expenses? Yes; and I am tormented now with bills coming in every day.
20. Were there also doctor's expenses? Yes.
21. And the expenses of the burial of your wife? Yes.
22. Owing to the loss of your wife have you been put to additional expense in keeping your family? Yes. When I came out of gaol I did not know that my wife was dead. I was told at Wellington that she was dead. I was heavily bound in irons, I fainted in the carriage, and was nearly dead when I got to Dubbo, but the man would not take off the irons.

Mr.
J. Deniff.
9 June, 1893.

- Mr. J. Deniff. 23. Have you suffered in health owing to your imprisonment? I was very sick all the time I was in gaol.
 9 June, 1893. 24. Are your children young? The eldest is about 11 years old and the youngest is about 4 years. I have four children.
 25. On account of their youth have you had to get somebody to take care of them? My sister in Sydney sent up her daughter and brought them down. Myself and my four children were kept by her for nine months; only for that I would have had to put them in an orphan asylum. Then I got work at Parramatta. Before I was charged with this offence my credit in Sydney was good for thousands of pounds. I was storekeeping as well, and anything I wanted in Sydney I could get. Owing to this affair I could not afterwards get sixpence credit. The day I was released my sister sent me a few pounds, and only for that I would not have had sixpence in my pocket.

Mr. Archibald Colquhoun Fraser, Under Secretary, Department of Justice, called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Mr. A. C. Fraser. 26. Chairman.] Do you remember the case in which John Deniff and a man named M'Dermott were imprisoned in connection with a charge brought against them by a man named Christie Cunningham? Yes.
 9 June, 1893. 27. Were they tried at Dubbo, in February, 1892, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment? Yes.
 28. Was a magisterial inquiry held at Nyngan two months afterwards by Mr. Byrnes, of Parramatta, and was the result of the inquiry such that the Minister of Justice decided to release the two men at once? Yes.
 29. Do you now produce the whole of the papers in connection with the case? Yes; representations were made to the Department in the shape of three petitions, which, I think, were presented by yourself; one from Cobar, one from Nyngan, and one from Nymagee. Inquiries were also made by the police, who rather favoured the holding of an inquiry. The grounds that were given in the sworn declarations were to the effect that no robbery had ever taken place, and that evidence could be produced to that effect. The accused were of exceptionally good character in the opinion of a large number of the inhabitants of the district, and the prosecutor was of very bad character. Judge Coffey was asked for a report, and he said that he thought that the reason of the conviction was, "that the witnesses for the defence contradicted themselves. If the case had gone to the jury without any evidence being called for the defence, I should have been surprised at the conviction, considering the state of intoxication Cunningham was in. But one of the witnesses for the defence being manifestly unreliable, and some of the others contradicting each other tended, I consider, to the verdict being returned. As to the statement set out in the declarations, no evidence of that description was tendered. Cunningham admitted going on the spree, as he termed it; otherwise he stood the test of examination as to his character. That accounts for the conviction." The Minister then acceded to holding an inquiry, and appointed Mr. Byrnes, a magistrate, on whom he had reliance to hold it. Mr. Byrnes, in his report, finds that Cunningham was not in possession of the money at the time he alleged it was taken from him, that no robbery had taken place at all, and that Cunningham was a man of unreliable and untrustworthy character. Also, that the prisoners were of good repute and esteemed as honorable men, and he recommended that the Government should exercise the prerogative of mercy.

Rev. Patrick Matthias Ryan, Roman Catholic clergyman, called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Rev. P. M. Ryan, 30. Chairman.] Have you some knowledge of the case before the Committee? Yes;—unfortunately I have a very intimate knowledge of it. The person whose life was lost was my sister.
 9 June, 1893. 31. Do you remember that the date when the charge was preferred was in January, 1892? Yes.
 32. Was your sister up to this date a strong healthy woman? Exceedingly so.
 33. Immediately after the charge had been preferred did she take ill? Yes; she was taken bad on the day itself as well as I remember. She got worse and worse until I was summoned to see her, and she was then in a dying state.
 34. Did her death take place at the latter end of January or February? It took place within a few weeks of the committal.
 35. Do you know the doctors who attended her? Yes; her doctor was Dr. Treseder, of Dubbo. The other local doctor of Dubbo was called in I do not know how many times.
 36. Did Dr. Treseder give any certificate as to the cause of her death? Yes; I gave it to the Minister of Justice with the papers.
 37. Did he state in that certificate that the primary cause of death was shock to the nervous system? Yes; he said that the primary cause of death was shock, or what was commonly known as a broken heart, and the secondary cause was atrophy of the liver.
 38. From your knowledge of the circumstances have you any doubt that Mrs. Deniff's death was caused by the shock of seeing her husband in this position? I am not a medical man, but I have no hesitation in saying that I am as sure that her death was caused by the sentence passed on her husband as I am that you are sitting in that chair. The doctors who attended her said the same thing. When I was summoned to her death-bed I asked the two doctors if anything could be done to save her life. They said that the only chance of saving her life was to have her husband called back. That might prolong her life or save it. They said it was the shock that brought about her death.
 39. At the time that Deniff was arrested, was he engaged in hotel-keeping near Nyngan? Yes; I understood so. I was never in that part of the country and did not know much about his business relations.
 40. Do you know what expense Deniff was put to? I do not know in pounds, shillings, and pence. Deniff was locked up; it was a question of saving the woman's life; and I spent a large sum on his behalf believing that justice ought to be done to him, and thinking that he might be able to repay me at some time or another. The money spent by myself and his friends were certainly legitimate expenses incurred by him. It was a question of saving the woman's life and her children. I stopped at nothing, and his friends in Sydney sent money. He was kept in gaol for about three months. There was no one to look after his children; he broke up two homes; there were the expenses of the two trials. Although the second trial was supposed to be costless as far as he was concerned, it cost a great deal, because all the witnesses had to be fossicked out throughout that great scattered country, and buggies and horses had to be hired trying to get get the people who had worked alongside of Deniff and who knew his character. A lot of money was spent in that way. I kept no account and I had practically to act for Deniff. I did not know that it would ever come to an inquiry like this. I said, "We must try to do the best we can to save his wife, and then try to get justice done." The loss would come to a very large sum if we reckon up the expenses of the two law suits, the doctors' expenses, the breaking up of two homes, and then, worst of all, the destruction of his credit in Sydney. He could go into any place in Sydney and get credit before this calamity, but all that was changed after he had been sent to gaol. He could not start in business in Sydney. He was for nine months living in Sydney as a pauper. He was trying to get work to keep his children. It would be hard to say what all this cost in pounds, shillings, and pence.

Rev.
P. M. Ryan.
9 June, 1893.

41. Mr. Hindle.] Do you know anything with regard to Deniff's financial position when he was arrested? I know they had money to their credit in the bank, but I do not know the amount. He was in a comfortable position. He was doing a good business, and he was in no way pushed for money. He could have lent a man a few hundred pounds if he wanted it.

42. Can you form any exact estimate of your expenses in connection with the case? I would not go through the work and loss of money again for £200. When I took in the state of affairs I did not stop to count the money. On the occasion of the second trial I spent an enormous amount of money on telegrams alone.

43. Mr. Morgan.] Was there any effort made by anyone to retain the business? There was no one there to look after it. There were only four little children.

44. What actually became of the business and the stock-in-trade? I think it was sold off.

45. Was there any mortgage over it? Not as far as I am aware.

46. Was no effort made by the friends of Deniff or his wife to keep the business? The whole effort made was to try to get justice done to him and to keep the children while he was in gaol. He had no friends who could go into the bush and who could look after the business for him.

47. Have you expended from £100 to £200 on the case? I cannot say the exact amount that I spent in money. I kept no record, but I spent a considerable sum of money. I thought it would be a matter between Deniff and myself.

48. Mr. Hindle.] Would you do the same again for £200? Certainly not.

Mr. John Deniff recalled and further examined:—

49. Mr. Morgan.] Was there any mortgage over your business? No.

50. Were you perfectly free? Yes; I was free from all debt.

51. Was any effort made on your behalf to keep the business together? No.

52. Had you any friend who could take up and keep your business together? No.

53. What became of the stock-in-trade and good-will of the hotel? My wife gave it up.

54. There was no possibility under the circumstances of carrying it on? There was no one there to carry it on.

55. What expenses have you incurred in connection with the loss of your business and during the time of your incarceration and since? £600 or £700.

56. Did you keep a banking account? Yes; at the Joint Stock Bank. My wife used to sign the cheques. She drew out the money required.

57. What amount did she draw? I do not know; all the money was drawn out except £20, and Mr. Lyons got that.

58. The whole of your business besides the money you had in the bank was entirely lost owing to your apprehension and incarceration? Yes. I had not a sixpence when I was released. My brother-in-law sent me up 30s.

59. Was your actual loss in this case between £600 and £700? Yes; besides my business.

60. Were you a healthy man before you were put in gaol? Yes; but my hair turned as white as snow five weeks afterwards.

61. Have you been in good health since? No; I have been in bad health ever since.

62. Are you able to follow any occupation? I have got work painting bridges at Parramatta, but I am scarcely able to do it. I am broken down in health.

63. Mr. Kelly.] Who is keeping your children at present? I am. I have been working for the last four months. I cannot do hard work. My sister kept me for nine months.

64. Mr. Hindle.] At the time of your arrest were you worth £700? Yes.

65. Was that all lost? Yes; I am not worth a shilling now beyond what I can earn from day to day.

66. Mr. Kelly.] How old are you? I am getting on for 50 years.

67. Mr. Hindle.] How came it about that you were charged with stealing this sum of money? I do not know. I was not in the house at the time I was said to have stolen the money. I was over at Thorndale for sheep. I was not acquainted with the man who made the charge. When I was going into Nyngan one day with my cart I met him on the road carrying his swag, and I gave him a lift into town. After he had been knocking about there for a week he went to the police and swore he had been robbed.

68. What age were you at the time of your arrest? I am now getting on for 50 years. It was a year and three months ago when I was prosecuted.

Mr. J. Deniff.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

TAKEN BEFORE

ON THE

CASE OF JOHN DENIFF.

THURSDAY, 5 OCTOBER, 1893.

Present:—

MR. WADDELL,
MR. HAYES,

MR. KELLY,
MR. MORGAN.

T. WADDELL, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Deniff called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Hayes.] At the time of your conviction were you an hotelkeeper and storekeeper on the Cobar Road? I was an hotelkeeper only.
2. Can you state the value of the stock in your hotel at the time you were convicted? Immediately before I was arrested I had about £40 or £50 worth of stock. There was furniture and other things that I could not value.
3. What was the average takings of your hotel for three months before your arrest? About £10 per week. Trade at that time had got very low.
4. Did you not say in your former evidence that you were storekeeping? I did not mean that I was storekeeping when I was arrested; but previously I had been storekeeping at Nyngan and Carcoar. At the time of my conviction I was not storekeeping.
5. How much money had you in the Bank at the time you were arrested? I am no scholar, and my wife kept all the accounts. The day before my trial I asked her, "How do we stand?" As near as I remember she replied, "We have between £600 and £700."
6. Were did you bank? At the A.J.S. Bank, Nyngan.
7. Do you produce your bank-book? I have no bank-book. When I came out of gaol I had no papers or anything.
8. Could you not have gone to the Bank and had a pass-book made up? It was my wife who got it made up.
9. In whose name was the account kept? In my wife's name. She used to draw the cheques and money.
10. Can you get an account made up showing the amount to your credit, or your wife's credit, at the time you were convicted? I suppose I will be able to do so.
11. Since you came out of gaol have you not been in a position to know the state of your accounts? I wrote to the manager of the Bank at Nyngan when I came out of gaol, and all that there was to her credit was £20.
12. Do you say that the expense of defending you was between £600 and £700? Yes, to the best of my belief; and there are debts in addition to that unpaid at present.
13. Can you give us any items of expenditure? No.
14. Can you tell us what were the items for, say, law costs, witnesses' expenses, and so on? I cannot say, because I was in gaol all the time. I know that there are amounts still to be paid.
15. How much has still to be paid? There is between £30 and £40 to be paid in Dubbo.
16. Is that in connection with your defence? Yes; and also £50 that a friend of mine sent down to Cowra. That was lost.

Mr.
J. Deniff.
5 Oct., 1893.

- Mr. J. Deniff.
5 Oct., 1893.
17. Are you in a position to give us any information from your personal knowledge as to what it cost for your defence? No.
18. You said in your previous evidence that you lost between £600 and £700 in your defence, and in addition to that you lost your business? Yes.
19. What do you estimate was the loss on your business? I cannot say.
20. Chairman.] Did you own the hotel? No; I rented it.
21. Had you taken it for any length of time? I took it for three years, but I could give it up at any time.
22. Was your credit good before you were arrested? Yes; it was good for thousands in Sydney. I was never refused anything in Sydney.
23. Is there anybody in Sydney who would be able to corroborate your statement as to your credit? Yes, Allt & Co. I also dealt with Prince, Ogg, & Co. when I was storekeeping, and I could always get £500 or £600 worth of goods from them when I wanted it.
24. Mr. Kelly.] Do you refer to your storekeeping business when you say that? Yes; I had nothing to do with Prince, Ogg, & Co. when I was hotel-keeping.
25. Mr. Morgan.] What was the nature of your dealings with Allt & Co.? I always dealt with them when I wanted liquor for the hotel.
26. What was the extent of your yearly transactions with Allt & Co. when you were at Cobar? I cannot say.
27. What rent did you pay? £3 a week for the first twelve months and £2 a week afterwards.
28. Was your income only £10 a week? It was only £10 a week during the latter end of the time after the navvies and others had left the district.
29. Was it larger than that at any one time? Yes; my income was about £50 a week when the navvies were there.
30. Mr. Hayes.] How long ago is it since you gave up storekeeping altogether? The last place at which I was storekeeping was in Carcoar. That was about four years ago, and before I went to Cobar.
31. Chairman.] Was your business, at the time you were arrested, sufficient to keep your family? Yes, because we lessened the number of servants.
32. If your arrest had not occurred, do you think the business would have continued to be sufficient to support your family? I cannot say, but if the business did fall off I intended to look for another place. We intended to stop as long as we could at that place, but we would have continued in business.

THURSDAY, 12 OCTOBER, 1893.

Present:—

MR. GORMLY, | MR. PERRY.
T. WADDELL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

The Rev. Patrick Matthias Ryan, Roman Catholic clergyman, called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Rev. P. M. Ryan.
12 Oct., 1893.
33. Chairman.] Did you state, in your former evidence, that you were the late Mrs. Deniff's brother, and that you knew a great deal of this case in connection with sums of money which were paid away in defending John Deniff? Yes.
34. Is this book which you produce Mr. and Mrs. Deniff's bank-book? Yes.
35. Will you read out some of the items which, to your own knowledge, were expended in connection with his case? The book does not represent all the expenditure. I see one item of £10 10s. paid to Messrs. Booth and M'Guinn, solicitors, of Dubbo. There are various other amounts in the pass-book which Mrs. Deniff drew herself, and I have no doubt they went to pay current law expenses. Then there is an item of £15 15s. paid to Mr. W. Blacket who, I think, was a barrister engaged in the case. Then I see there is an item of £1 5s., and another amount of £1 5s. paid to Dr. Treseder who attended Mrs. Deniff. That does not represent all the money paid for medical attendance as she was ill most of the time.
36. Were there any other sums which you paid for law expenses in connection with this case? Yes; I sent up by telegraph £20 to a person acting for Mrs. Deniff. That was the first amount I sent. The next amount I sent was £25 on 22nd April, 1892. Then I paid an undertaker at Nyngan £5, and £3 to Mr. Deniff's mother to keep the children at Dubbo after their home was broken up. Then there was paid to me by telegram, through Mr. Powell, £50. That was sent on to me, and spent by me for the defence of Deniff, and for the support of his family while he was in prison.
37. Mr. Gormly.] Is Mr. Powell a relative of his? Yes; a brother-in-law. I sent word to him that I could not go on any further without some money, and he sent that amount at once. I produce the original telegram with which that money was forwarded to me.
38. Chairman.] Are there any other sums which you could mention? There were a great many other expenses incurred by me in the case, but I cannot give the items.
39. Will you look at the pass-book again and see if it does not contain another item of £10 10s. for legal expenses? Yes; I see that on 23rd January, 1892, £10 10s. was paid to Booth and M'Guinn for legal expenses, and another payment was made to them on 15th February, 1892, of £10 10s.
40. Did you keep a record of all the expenses you incurred in connection with Deniff's case? No. The larger items occur to my mind, but the small ones do not. Most of the money was sent up by his friends, either by telegram or by post-office order. I did not think that these items of expenditure would be required, but during the last few days I have tried to trace them through the post-office. I have only succeeded in getting the telegram which I have handed in, but I find it impossible in the time at my disposal to trace all the amounts which were sent through. When I was travelling throughout the country with others, getting up evidence and so on, we had to pay ready cash for everything, as we were not known to the people, and therefore could not pay them in cheques, and therefore no record was kept of the expenditure.
41. Are you sure that there were other amounts paid besides those you have named? I am perfectly sure of that. There was money sent by other persons; Mr. and Mrs. Deniff had money in their house. The furniture in the hotel was sold, and there were proceeds from that.

Rev.
P. M. Ryan.
12 Oct., 1893.

42. Do you think that money was not placed in the bank to Mrs. Deniff's credit, and that she spent the money in carrying on the case? Yes. I would not like to swear it, but I am very sure that there were other large sums paid away. That must have been the case, because she was not able to sit up in bed and sign cheques.
43. Do you know of any expenses which accrued owing to Mrs. Deniff's death, and owing to the children having to be looked after by other people? Yes; two servants were kept in the house after the business was broken up until Deniff was released. They had practically nothing to do except to mind the children. About the time that Deniff was released his sister went up to Dubbo and brought all the children down to Sydney. There were expenses in connection with that journey. When Mrs. Deniff was not able to sign cheques Deniff's sister wired up £17 to her.
44. Mr. Gormly.] With reference to the £50 which you stated was sent to you by telegram from Mr. Powell, was the whole of that money spent by you in connection with the defence of Mr. Deniff or for the benefit of his family while he was in prison? Yes, most positively.
45. The money was sent to you for that purpose and was devoted to that purpose? Yes; it was devoted to Mr. Deniff's case and to his children. It was spent either in getting evidence or in helping his family.
46. Chairman.] By looking at this pass-book and seeing these items, which were paid in weekly, of £49 17s. 6d., would you be in a position to give us any idea as to what were the takings of the hotel at the time that Deniff got into this trouble? I am not in a position to speak about that. I was never in the house until after her death. I believe that they were doing fairly well.
47. Up to that time were you aware that they were embarrassed in any way? No; on the contrary, I always felt that if I asked Mrs. Deniff for £100 I could get it.
48. Did she do all the banking and monetary business for her husband? Yes; she did all the head work.
49. To your knowledge, was she generally in a position to have £200 or £300 to her credit? Yes; always. I do not know whether or not it was in the bank.
50. Mr. Perry.] Had she any other source of income besides that from the public-house? I am inclined to think she had. I do not see how they could have carried on after the home was broken up if she had not means.
51. Do you not think that the items of £49 17s. 6d. which appear in the pass-book show that £50 per week were remitted to the bank? Yes.
52. That would show a business of £150 per month, as the items appear in the bank-book every ten days? Yes.
53. Chairman.] Is there anything else you wish to state? I would like to point out that, first of all, evidence had to be obtained in connection with the Police Court proceedings. Deniff had to bring witnesses in from the Cobar line, and pay their expenses while they were in town. Then, when he was committed, he had to bring his witnesses down to Dubbo, and he had to pay the lawyers. After he was sentenced it was a question with his friends to search the whole country for people who knew the character of his accuser. That entailed enormous work and expense. Mr. Powell, his brother-in-law, went up there for that purpose, and when he returned to Sydney he sent up his son for several weeks. Mrs. Powell sent up to him various sums of money which I have tried to trace through the Post Office, but in the time at my disposal I have not succeeded. After the first trial there was the question of having an inquiry into the case, and we had to incur very great expense. We had to get all the witnesses together again. Some of the men were at Molong, some at the back of Cobar, and others at Bourke. We had to pay cash as we went along, and no records were kept of the expenditure. I got a letter from one gentleman the other day, and he took a very prominent part in working up the evidence. He states that he lost £160 while he was engaged in doing so, and I have no doubt that is a fact. He gave up his business and interested himself in the case for over two months, and he never expected any remuneration for his services. Deniff's first home was broken up and his furniture sold off. I do not know what loss was incurred thereby. Mrs. Deniff then followed her husband down to Dubbo when he was sentenced, and she set up her home there, so that she might be near him. When she died that home was broken up also, and the furniture was all sacrificed; in fact, I think some of it was stolen. Then of course there was the loss of Deniff's business, there was the loss of his wife, of his credit, health, and character. On the last occasion when I gave evidence I was asked if some testimony could not be obtained from the firms in Sydney with which he used to deal. I now hand in letters from some of the leading firms—from Hoffnung & Co., of Sydney and Brisbane; Williams and Co., of Sydney, boot manufacturers and importers; Robert Gray & Co.; John Fraser & Co. [See Appendix.] Deniff has bills unpaid now which he incurred in connection with the case. There is a bill of £11 11s. owing to Mr. Ryan, solicitor, of Dubbo.
54. Mr. Gormly.] Is Deniff now left destitute, and not able to meet his engagements? I do not say that he is altogether destitute, but he is very badly off.
55. Has he lost all the means which he possessed before this case occurred? Yes.
56. He has actually not been able to meet the debts incurred through the trial? Yes; since the trial he has been practically living on his friends.

Mr. John Deniff recalled and further examined:—

57. Chairman.] With reference to the expenditure shown in the bank book produced, do you know of any other sums which were spent? No; I cannot say anything about the money matters.
58. I see by the bank-book that on the 21st January, 1892, a sum of £49 17s. 6d. was paid into your credit at the Bank at Nyngan, and on the 30th January £49 17s. 6d.; then on 11th February £49 17s. 6d.; would these amounts represent the takings in the hotel? I have no idea. I left all that business to my wife, because she was a good wife; I left it entirely to her.
59. Had you any other source of income besides your business at that time? No; my wife had an allotment at Cootamundra, but there was a debt upon it. The income at that time would be from my business.
60. This is your pass-book at the Bank, showing what was there at your credit? Yes.
61. As this book shows that the sums I have mentioned were placed to your credit at those dates, were such sums derived from the takings of your business? Yes; my wife signed the cheques because I could not. My greatest loss is the loss of my wife. I need never have done any hard work if she had lived.

Mr.
J. Deniff.

- Mr. J. Deniff.
12 Oct., 1893.
62. Mr. Gormly.] Was the whole of the property which you possessed lost during the time you were prosecuted, and while you were in prison? Yes.
63. When you came out of prison were you left in destitute circumstances? Yes; when I came out of gaol I had only £20 left in the Nyngan Bank, and that went to the lawyers. Mr. Powell had to send me £2 or £3 to pay my fare down from Nyngan.
64. Were you in a very bad state of health when you got out of gaol? Yes; in a very bad state.

THIS deponent, William Cronin, on oath, saith as follows:—I am constable stationed at the Glebe; I remember the 6th of October last; I saw Mr. Toohey, and from what he told me I went to accused's house, and said I would have to take him to the station; Mr. Toohey was outside of the door; accused said, “Wait till I dress”; I charged him at the station with stealing a bag of chaff, value of 3s. 6d., property of Toohey.

To Mr. Burcher: The bag of chaff was lying in the street, a little distance from Toohey's; Mr. Toohey gave him in charge; he persisted in giving him in charge.

THIS deponent, Patrick Toohey, on oath, saith as follows:—I am a produce-dealer in No. 2, Glebe-street Glebe; I know accused (Law) some time; I have owned the store three years, and bought it from my brother, and then Law owed £23 to my brother; I was then a partner, but am now sole owner; Law has left a small balance on my books a few weeks ago, but now and of late he has always had to pay strict cash;

cash; it is seven months since he had the small balance; he bought 25s. worth, and only had £1 at the time to pay me; my stock has been mysteriously diminishing lately; on 6th October I went into the back of Mr. Schwench's baker's shop to get a view of my shop without being observed; Arthur Clanfield and Hudson were in my store; they are employed by me; while I was concealed I saw Law enter my store and go through; Charles Wilkes also went into the store, two minutes after Law, who went out of my sight in the store; about five or six minutes after I saw Law—it was a quarter to 8—he had then a bag of chaff; he went very quick; he had nothing before going into the store; I ran after him and asked where he got the chaff; he said, "In the store"; I said, "Who gave it to you?" he said, "I took it myself"; when asked who authorised him, he was confused; I called my two men, Hudson and Clanfield, and in Law's presence, they replied they had not given him permission to take any chaff; I see a bag of chaff in Court; it is my chaff, and the same bag as Law had; he struggled with me and got away; the value of the chaff is 3s. 6d.; I did not tell Law he could have it; I have no ill-feeling against him.

To Mr. Burcher: I was ordered to remove my chaff after the fire, as the Inspector said it was a nuisance, and I complained to Mr. Law about it; I don't remember if I told a lot of people that Law put the Inspector of Nuisances on to me; Law has bought off me for years; if I was there I would not let him take a bag of chaff without he paid me; I keep books, and if a person bought chaff for cash I would sometimes book it and sometimes not; I give receipts sometimes; last time Law got chaff he paid my man cash; I would make out a bill if any stuff was bought off me; people were passing up and down in front of my store on the day in question; Law's wife got wood on that morning and paid my man when it was ordered; it was not delivered until after the arrest; the value of the wood was 1s.; Law begged me not to give him in charge; he was 5 or 6 yards from his house when I grabbed him; his wife rushed out of her house and said, "What is the matter?" she seemed to know all about our struggle, and tendered me the money; I don't know how much; no one told her what was the matter when she asked; Law's father has been in the habit of buying up to £2 per week, but not of late; Law has been in the habit of using my scales to weigh skins; I did not object; I don't know how often he weighed skins; sometimes my men would weigh his skins, and other times he himself; Law always paid for everything but wood—his wife paid for it; there was a partition in my store with a door in it, and anyone in the back could not see a person in the front part.

To Mr. Meagher: During the last three years he has had to pay cash except for one or two small amounts.

THIS deponent, Arthur Clanfield, on oath, saith as follows:—I work for Mr. Toohey, in the store; I have been seven weeks there; on occasions I have sold to Law for cash; my employer gave me instructions in regard to Law; I remember the 6th October; I got to the store at 20 minutes to 8; I opened the store; Hudson was with me; I saw Mr. Toohey before leaving home; he told me something; I went to the back to do my horse; Hudson was with me; Law came and asked for 1s. worth of wood for his wife; he asked for no chaff; afterwards I saw Toohey and Law struggling in the street, and a bag of chaff was lying in the street; there is a particular brand on the bag of chaff, and I would know where to put it in the store by the mark; I picked up the chaff and put it against the fence.

To the Bench: I heard Mrs. Law ask Toohey to let him off for the sake of her and the children.

To Mr. Burcher: All said to me by Law was, "Will you send my missus in 1s. worth of wood"; the wife paid me for it; I did not authorise Law to take the chaff, and he did not say he was taking it.

DEFENCE.

THIS deponent, Thomas Law, on oath, saith as follows:—I live at 6, Glebe-street, about 30 feet from Toohey's store; I have known him years; have been on good terms until a fortnight ago; he showed me a notice that the Inspector of Nuisances had served on him, and he blamed me for it, and he said the Mayor and the lot of us could be bought for 5s.; I have generally paid cash to Toohey; while Costello was in charge of the store I used to get some carrots, and he used to let me pay during the day if I had not the cash on me at the time; I have taken things away from the store without paying at the identical time; on the 5th, I saw Toohey's two men in the store, and had been reading the paper; Clanfield went out to the back, and I weighed myself; I asked Arthur if he had change of half-a-sovereign, as I wanted some chaff; he said "No"; I pulled some chaff out of the bag that is now in Court, and told Hudson I would take it to-morrow; I weighed the bag, and threw it near the stack; it came to about 3s. 10d.; it was

was after 8 a.m., Thursday morning; I did not go there again that day; on the 6th, at about 7 a.m., I had some conversation with my wife, and gave her £1; I then went to my father's, and found there was no chaff there; I then went to Toohey's store, and at the back door I saw Arthur; I called out, "Arthur"; he said, "Well"; I then asked him if Percy, my son, had been in about the wood, if not, my wife will be in and pay you for some wood and a bag of chaff, and Arthur called out, "It's all right"; I took the bag of chaff, and went towards my front door to see my wife, and to get to the stables I would have had to go back past the store; when within 3 or 4 yards of my door, I felt someone get hold of me; it was Mr. Pat. Toohey; he said, "Where are you going with the chaff?" I said, "I am going to see my wife, and then to the stable"; he said, "I'll give you in charge"; I replied, "I weighed it yesterday to take it to-day, and I gave my wife £1 to get change to pay for the wood and chaff"; up to last Saturday week I owed Toohey 3d.; Toohey called one of his men, a witness here to-day, and asked if he served me, and then he said, "Go for a policeman"; I had not seen my wife that day from 7 o'clock until she came on the scene; she said, "What is the matter?" I replied, "Toohey charges me with stealing this bag of chaff"; she replied, "Oh, no, here is the money—he gave me it to pay for wood and chaff—he gave me it before he left home"; she said to Toohey, "Don't make a show of me before my place to disgrace me and my children"; I was going to take the chaff to Bay-street to the stable.

By Mr. Meagher: There are other produce-stores in Glebe, but Toohey keeps the best chaff; my wife and I have not talked only casually about this case; when I said "I will take it to-morrow" I saw Hudson at the store, and when I was struggling with Toohey I did not suggest to send for Hudson; I said, "Send for my wife"; I called Arthur, and said I was taking the chaff, but when the struggle was on I did not tell Toohey I had told Arthur; I was too much upset to do so; the men in Toohey's yard were about 60 feet away, and I had to call out loud for them to hear me; I saw Wilkes go through the store into the yard, but he went into the yard through the store after I had called out to the men.

To Mr. Burcher: I had a lot of Toohey's goods in my place since the fire; I looked after them; I did not tell Constable Cronin anything about the affair; I have handed all back to Toohey; I had his books, and have fixed up his invoices and way-bills.

To the Bench: I was on my way at the time to go and pay for this bag of chaff.

To Mr. Meagher: When I paid the 1s. for wood, I had the change of the £1 in my bedroom.

No. 1.

Mr. W. McCracken to The Minister of Justice.

Sir,

43, Oxford-street, Sydney, 24 July, 1893.

With my family, consisting of my wife and seven children, I have been a resident of New South Wales for the past twenty years, during eleven of which I have been a licensed victualler. By ordinary honesty and industry I had, prior to the 6th of June, 1893, acquired a competent livelihood and property, worth at least £1,000, as the lessee of the premises lately known as the "Robin Hood Hotel," Oxford-street, Sydney, but, by a decision of the Central Police Court (Licensing Bench), Sydney, I have been deprived of my livelihood and lost the value of my premises for hotel purposes, remaining liable for the high rental paid for hotel properties for a further period of six years. I am thus reduced, at the age of fifty, to poverty and destitution.

As I am advised that there is no legal form of appeal against the harsh and, as I think, most unjust decision of the Licensing Bench, and, as you are the representative of the public and the preserver of the public interests in the administration of justice in that Court, I beg your permission to bring the whole of the facts of my case under your observation, and to submit that a cruel injustice has been perpetrated upon me by the decision of the Licensing Bench. If, then, it remains that your office has no power to remedy the wrong done, I shall at least have the satisfaction of protesting against the decision, which I regard as an outrage upon my natural rights.

In

In May, 1892, I purchased from the then licensee—the lease having seven years to run, license, and goodwill of the “Robin Hood Hotel” for the sum of £1,000 cash, the purchase money representing the whole of my savings. The transfer was granted to me, without objection by the police or otherwise. In June, 1892, the ordinary renewal was granted, as a matter of course. After the renewal I renovated and improved the premises at a cost of £100. When I rented it, the house had been licensed from year to year, as a matter of course, since the passing of the Licensing Act, 1882.

On the 6th of June, 1893, I duly lodged the ordinary application for renewal, objections being made by Inspector Bremner, a copy of which is herewith enclosed. The second objection was at the hearing withdrawn, the police admitting that it had become unnecessary, as that ground of complaint had been already removed by me immediately upon their suggestion. The application was heard by the Licensing Bench on the 6th of June, 1893, and refused. The police objections to my renewal were the first intimation I had had that the premises were unsuitable.

Being willing and desirous of complying with the reasonable requirements of the licensing authorities, so as to preserve my interest in the hotel, upon which my family and I were entirely dependent, I had the premises inspected by an architect and plans prepared by him for certain suggested alterations, which I thought would be approved of by the police as sufficient.

On the 28th day of June, 1893, I lodged an application for a conditional license for the same premises, together with the plans of the proposed alterations; meanwhile, I had had the premises inspected, and the plans perused by the City Architect, and received from him the report enclosed. Inspector Bremner lodged the objections, copy of which is enclosed.

My application was heard on the 18th of July instant, before the Central Police Court, Licensing Bench, Sydney, when I submitted the following evidence:—

The architect (Mr. Shelvey) who prepared the plans, to prove the sufficiency of the proposed alterations to the premises generally, and who said, in his opinion, they compared favourably with many existing licensed houses which he had inspected. The City Architect's report above mentioned was admitted by the Bench as evidence in lieu of calling him. A petition favouring the reopening of the house.

I myself then proved the facts above stated in reference to my purchase of the good-will and license, and the terms of my lease, and that I had invested the whole of my savings in this property some fifteen months before, and that the business was my sole means of livelihood.

I then offered in Court to effect the alterations with expedition, and, in addition, to do any reasonable requirements of the Bench and the police. This closed my case.

Inspector Bremner then verified his objections of the 4th July instant, and still persisted therein:

Mr. Doyle, solicitor, who appeared for me, then addressed the Bench on my behalf, and fully brought under their notice all the facts and reasons herein referred to in favour of the granting of my application.

The Bench refused the application.

On the 20th July instant I applied to the Licensing Clerk for a copy of the depositions, or of the Magistrates' notes of evidence, presuming that such had been made in compliance with sub-section 5 of section 10 of the Licensing Act, 1882, in order that I might place the same before you, and I was informed that no such depositions had been taken, and that he had no notes.

If the above decisions of the 6th June, 1893, and the 18th July last, are allowed to stand, they will result in my pecuniary ruin, and involve the loss of hard and honest savings of my lifetime, deprive me of my livelihood, and leave me liable for rent at the rate of £4 10s. per week (add rates and taxes) for a period of six years from now, a rental greatly in excess of the value of the house for any other business.

I thereby humbly submit the whole case to you as the Minister charged with the administration of justice in the Licensing and all other Courts of this Colony, and I crave you will consider whether or not injustice has been done me, and, if you think so, whether there is any remedy which you, as such Minister, can apply to relieve me from the threatened injury. And, with great respect, I venture to hope that you will exercise a power that will prevent the administration of justice in these Courts exciting the odium and contempt of an honest and respectable citizen.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM McCracken.

No. 3 Police Station, Sydney, 4 July, 1893.

To the Worshipful the Magistrates of the Metropolitan Licensing Bench, Central Police Court, Sydney.

Gentlemen,

I respectfully beg to oppose the application of William McCracken for a publican's conditional license for premises known as the “Robin Hood Hotel,” Oxford-street, Sydney, on the following grounds, viz.:—

1st. That if the house would be altered in accordance with plans lodged with the application at the Central Police Court, the premises would then be altogether unsuitable for the purposes of a public-house.

2nd. That an additional public-house is not required, there being already two public-houses within 22 yards of the premises sought to be licensed, eight within 120 yards, and twelve within 220 yards, which are much more than ample for the requirements of the neighbourhood or the travelling public.

3rd. A renewal was refused on the 6th ultimo, on the ground that the premises were unfit to be licensed.

JAMES BREMNER,

Inspector.

The walls are soundly built and in good repair. The front portion is of stone and the rear brickwork.

The back wall facing lanc requires to be re-cemented and the brickwork on the openings repaired.

The premises I consider to be in first-class order, and are not amenable to the 29th section of the Act (42 Vic. No. 25.)

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on 28th ultimo, of your letter of the 24th idem, complaining of the decisions of the Metropolitan Licensing Court with reference to your applications for a publican's license, and to inform you that the same will receive due consideration.

No. 3.

Mr. Police-Inspector Bremner to Mr. Police-Superintendent Read.

Sir,

No. 3 Police Station, Sydney, 5 August, 1893.

I have the honor to report with reference to the refusal of a renewal and a conditional publican's license to Mr. William McCracken, for premises known as the "Robin Hood Hotel," situated in Oxford-street, Sydney.

In May last I inspected Mr. McCracken's premises, accompanied by Sub-Inspector Robinson. On the ground-floor there were a bar, small parlor, small dining-room, and kitchen. On the first floor there was a private bar, which was established by Mr. McCracken shortly after he obtained the license. (This room had previously been a bedroom.) There was a small parlor at the back of the bar, which was used by the barmaids and persons frequenting the bar. There were nearly always two barmaids in this bar, some of whom were of very questionable character, and the licensee had been made aware of that fact. The house where they resided had been complained of as a house of bad repute. I had been informed several times that the private bar had been sublet to the different barmaids who carried on business there. When Mr. McCracken was spoken to about the matter he denied it. I could not obtain sufficient evidence to warrant a prosecution against the licensee and the persons carrying on the bar.

There were four bedrooms, which are built over the kitchen and dining-room. These rooms are separated by wooden partitions, and the only access to them is by passing through each of the rooms. There are also two small attics over the main building. When I inspected the premises the whole of the house, beds, and bedding were very dirty, and utterly unfit for public accommodation.

Mr. McCracken, his son, and an old woman (whom he stated was a servant), were residing in the house. His wife and the remainder of the family did not reside there. I have been informed that they reside at Albury.

The trustee of the premises informed me, also Sub-Inspector Robinson, that he was willing to cancel the lease of the premises, and had informed Mr. McCracken to that effect.

The premises are altogether unfit for the purposes of a public-house. I informed Mr. McCracken before he obtained the license that the premises were unsuitable for a public-house.

When a conditional license was applied for plans were lodged which showed some slight alterations. A passage was to be built outside the four bedrooms, which I have already described, by which access could be got to these rooms separately.

There are now twelve public-houses within about 250 yards of the premises referred to, which are much more than ample for all the requirements of the place.

The principal cause of the constant violation of the Licensing Act is the large number of small public-houses, which are much in excess of the requirements of the place, and, in consequence many of the licensees have to resort to the subletting of private bars and systematic Sunday trading, which I have no doubt would not be done if their trade was remunerative without doing so.

An additional public house is certainly not required in the neighbourhood.

I gave evidence at the Licensing Court against a renewal of the license being granted, also against a conditional license being granted. Mr. McCracken gave evidence on the former occasion, but did not give evidence on the latter.

I have, &c.,

JAMES BREMNER,

Inspector.

I would respectfully beg permission to draw your attention to the fact that my house has been now closed for the period of six weeks, during which time my expenses have been running the same as when open.

Referring to your letter of this date, asking that the matter of the refusal of the renewal of the license lately held by you for the "Robin Hood Hotel," Oxford-street, Sydney, to which attention was drawn in your letter of 24th ultimo, may receive early consideration, I have the honor to inform you that inquiries are at present being made in regard to the matter.

No. 6.

Mr. W. Summers to The Honorable Sir G. R. Dibbs, K.C.M.G., Premier, N.S.W.

Sir,

43, Oxford-street, Sydney, 4 August, 1893.

Being an elector in the electorate of the Murrumbidgee, I venture to address you on behalf of a personal friend of mine, well knowing you are ever ready to interest yourself in the cause of justice.

Believing that an injustice has been done I respectfully crave permission to bring under your notice the following facts:—

In the month of May last year a Mr. McCracken came down from the country and bought an hotel business in Oxford-street, paying the sum of £1,000 for the same—I believe nearly all the money he possessed.

The license was granted to him without any opposition, and in the following month (June) he applied for and got a renewal of the license again without opposition.

This year, however, on applying for a renewal of his license he was opposed by Inspector Bremner on the ground that the premises did not have the required accommodation, and that the house in question was not fit to hold a license. He then got the City Architect to inspect the premises, who gave him a certificate to the effect that the premises were sound and in good repair. He also had plans prepared for what alterations were thought necessary.

On the 30th of June he had to close the house, and on the 18th July he again applied to the Quarterly Licensing Bench, but Inspector Bremner again opposed the application and it was refused.

Being informed that there is no appeal from the Licensing Court he has applied to the Minister of Justice, hoping he would move in the matter, as his case is a very hard one, and, I venture to think, a very unjust one, as there was nothing against the man or the manner in which he conducted his business.

I have known him personally for the last nine years as a most respectable man, and one who always kept a respectable house.

Under these circumstances I would respectfully ask you to use your great influence in his behalf, and endeavour to get the Bench to grant the man his license.

Mr. McCracken is a man of 50 years of age, and has a family of seven depending on him for support. If you would be good enough to see the Minister of Justice about the matter you could inspect the papers and proceedings of the Licensing Court. Mr. McCracken thinks that if the Licensing Bench were asked to visit the premises and review the case he would get his license. The premises are in a better condition now than when the license was first granted to him, and contain the required number of rooms, &c., as laid down in the Act.

Should you require any further information Mr. McCracken and myself will have great pleasure in waiting on you at any time suiting your convenience.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM SUMMERS,

Whitton.

No. 10.

Mr. Whittingdale Johnson, S.M., to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Central Police Office, Sydney, 11 September, 1893.

This application was refused by a Bench of no less than six Magistrates, of which Mr. O'Malley Clarke was Chairman. The report on the matter has been delayed for his return. In his absence we can only say that the matter was duly investigated in open Court, and, in pursuance of our policy of refusing licenses to all unsuitable persons, or for houses not in accordance with the standard required by the Act, after personal inspection by one or more of the Licensing Magistrates, the license was refused. The fact of the house in question not having been previously reported as unfit to be licensed by the police would apply to every other one condemned, and appears to us to be no reason for our not carrying out the provisions of the Act when the case is brought under our notice. No license can be cancelled without loss to someone concerned, but the Licensing Bench have steadily refused to entertain private transactions between landlord and tenant, but confine their consideration of the case solely as to the requirements of, or the objections taken under, the Act. In this instance it was considered that no amount of alteration would supply the necessary accommodation, and it was accordingly refused a second time by a full Bench. The practice of allowing landlords or licensees to condone their neglect by permitting them to rebuild, would put an end to the efforts of the Licensing Bench to reduce the number of licensed houses in Sydney and suburbs, and raise the standard of the remainder.

Papers herewith.

Gentlemen,

No. 3 Police Station, Sydney, 30th May, 1893.

I respectfully beg to oppose the granting of a renewal of a Publican's license to William McCracken, for premises known as the "Old Robin Hood Hotel," Oxford-street, Sydney, on the following grounds, viz. :—

- 1st. That the premises are unfit to be licensed, and do not contain the accommodation required by the "Licensing Acts of 1882-3."
- 2nd. The licensee opened a private bar in a room on the first floor which was formerly a bedroom.

James Bremner: The house is an old house; there are four rooms built over, and you have to pass one room to another; there are four bedrooms, and you have to pass through them to get into the parlor; the licensee is a man of good character.

Sub-Inspector Robinson: The hotel is in a very dirty state; the rooms are very narrow, and are partitioned with weatherboard.

Wm. McCracken: On 25th May last year I entered the hotel; if the renewal of the license is granted I will not open a private bar; I had a barmaid of doubtful character in the private bar.

Edmund Banes: I am trustee in the Banes estate; the place has been licensed for the last forty years.

No. 3 Police Station, Sydney, 4 July, 1893.

To the Worshipful the Magistrates of the Metropolitan Licensing Bench, Central Police Court, Sydney,— Gentlemen,

I respectfully beg to oppose the application of William McCracken for a publican's conditional license for premises known as the "Robin Hood Hotel," Oxford-street, Sydney, on the following grounds, viz. :—

- 1st. That if the house would be altered in accordance with plans lodged with the application at the Central Police Court, the premises would then be altogether unsuitable for the purposes of a public-house.
- 2nd. That an additional public-house is not required, there being already two public-houses within 22 yards of the premises sought to be licensed, eight within 120 yards, and twelve within 220 yards, which are much more than ample for all the requirements of the neighbourhood or travelling public.
- 3rd. A renewal was refused on the 6th ultimo, on the ground that the premises were unfit to be licensed.

I have, &c.,
JAMES BREMNER,
Inspector.

(Notes of Evidence.)

Robert Shervey states :—He is an architect, and prepared the plans produced; if the alterations are effected they will be quite effective, and the building will be quite strong.

William McCracken states :—He was the late licensee of these premises; Mr. McRae, the City Architect, visited the hotel, and I produce his report, also a petition for the granting of a license for the premises.

Sub-Inspector Bremner states :—The plans are the same as the old house, with the exception of a passage; the house is not necessary; there are twelve houses within a radius of 220 yards.

Application refused.—13th July, 1893.

No. 11.

Minute of The Under Secretary of Justice.

Submitted,

14 September, 1893.

THE Bench appear to have refused to renew McCracken's license on the ground that he had failed to maintain his premises (the "Robin Hood Hotel"), and the accommodation thereof at the standard required by the "Licensing Acts 1882-3," but the evidence of this given to the Court does not appear, the notes taken at the hearing of his application for renewal being very meagre. Information on the matter is, however, given in Inspector Bremner's report of 5th ultimo.

Section 42 of the Principal Licensing Act permits the Licensing Court to refuse the renewal of a license when it shall be proved that such license is liable to be forfeited or cancelled under any of the provisions of that Act; and section 58 provides that a license shall be liable to cancellation if (inter alia) the licensee fails to maintain his premises and the accommodation thereof at the standard required by the Act, or shall allow such premises to become ruinous or dilapidated otherwise than by fire, flood, or other uncontrollable cause.

Section 30 of the Principal Licensing Act provides that licensed houses shall contain, "in addition to and exclusive of such reasonable accommodation for the family of the licensed publican as the Court shall think requisite, at least two moderate sized sitting-rooms and four sleeping-rooms, constantly ready and fit for public accommodation"—such rooms to contain not less than 1,200 cubic feet of air space, and not be less than 9 feet in height.

Whether the Court was right or not in refusing to grant McCracken's applications, (1) for renewal, and (2) for a conditional license, this Department cannot interfere in the matter now, as the grant or refusal of an application for a license is discretionary with the Court to which it is made, and there is no appeal when the application has been refused.

Inspector

Inspector Bremner, in his report of 5th ultimo, states that the premises in question are altogether unsuitable for the purposes of a public-house, and that he so informed Mr. McCracken before he obtained the license.

Inspector Bremner has also stated in his report that the trustee of the premises informed him, and also Sub-Inspector Robinson, that he was willing to cancel the lease of the premises, and had apprised Mr. McCracken to that effect.

The Inspector has further intimated that Mr. McCracken's wife and family (with the exception of one son) did not reside at the hotel with him.

McCracken might be informed in terms of the last four paragraphs of this minute.

The Inspector-General of Police, in forwarding police reports with regard to this matter stated (7th August, 1893) "the cancellation of this license and many others was a public benefit."

The two objections filed by the police (on 31st May, 1893) to the granting of a renewal of McCracken's license were (a) "that the premises are unfit to be licensed, and do not contain the accommodation required by the Licensing Acts of 1882 and 1883"; and (b) that he "opened a private bar in a room on the first floor which was formerly a bedroom."

The second objection appears to have been waived by the police (vide notation on copy of objections attached to paper 93-11,751) and that letter—in which McCracken states "the second objection was at the hearing withdrawn, the police admitting that it had become unnecessary, as that ground of complaint had been already removed by me immediately upon their suggestion."

The circumstances causing the filing of the objection in question are given in Inspector Bremner's report of 5th August last.

At the hearing of McCracken's application by the Licensing Court the Inspector admitted that applicant was a man of good character (vide notes of evidence.)

Referring to your letters of the 24th July last, and 19th ultimo, respecting the refusal by the Metropolitan Licensing Court of your application; first, for the renewal of your publican's license for the "Robin Hood Hotel," Oxford-street, Sydney; and, secondly, for a conditional license for the same premises, I am directed by the Minister of Justice to inform you that inquiries have been made with regard to the matter, but that, whether the Court was right or not in refusing your applications, this Department cannot interfere in regard thereto now, as the grant or refusal of an application is discretionary with the Court to which it is made, and there is no appeal when it has been refused.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

(PETITION FROM P. J. STEPHEN, WESLEYAN MINISTER, AGAINST COMPENSATION TO LICENSE-HOLDERS.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 23 November, 1893.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

YOUR Petitioners, Members adherents of the Balmain Wesleyan Central Mission and various temperance bodies assembled in the Central Hall, Balmain, humbly pray that your Honorable House reject the proposal to compensate the liquor sellers for the loss of licenses under the Local Option Act, should it become law.

First, because the legal liberty to sell intoxicating drink is not a right common to all citizens, but only a personal privilege granted to a few.

Second, because this privilege, in the terms of the Act, is granted, not for an indefinite period, but only for one year.

Third, because this privilege has not been secured at the public request, but often in opposition to the expressed will of the people, and solely for the pecuniary benefit of the license-holders.

Fourth, because legislative enactments have already considerably restricted the liquor traffic, and no compensation has been granted for losses thus sustained.

Fifth, because if, in any case, the drink traffic has not been remunerative, no loss can be sustained by its being prohibited, and hence no compensation can be due; and in those cases where the traffic has been profitable the pecuniary advantage has been due to the possession of a privilege to which the license-holder had no special claim, and which was withheld from other members of the community, from whom the compensation, if given, must come.

Sixth, because when the drink traffic is prohibited it will be because it has been injurious to the best interests of the community, and if any compensation be due it must be to the public which has suffered, and not to the traffic which has inflicted the injury.

Upon these grounds your Petitioners humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the above reasons into your favourable consideration.

And, as in duty bound, your Petitioners will ever pray.

Signed on behalf of about 1,000 adult persons, assembled in the Central Hall, Balmain,—

P. J. STEPHEN,
Wesleyan Minister.

(PETITION FROM J. E. MOULTON, CHAIRMAN OF THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE ANNUAL TEMPERANCE MEETING, AGAINST INTRODUCTION OF COMPENSATION CLAUSE IN LIQUOR TRAFFIC LOCAL OPTION BILL.)

To the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

Your Petitioner, as Chairman of the meeting, and at its request, very respectfully asks that your Honorable House will give immediate effect to the wishes expressed in the said resolution.

And your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays that your Honorable House will take the premises into favourable consideration, and grant such relief as may seem best to your Honorable House.

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 5 December, 1893.

To the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled, in the Colony of New South Wales.

The Humble Petition of the undersigned,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That we, the Members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who are organised in various Unions throughout the Colony of New South Wales, and now assembled in annual convention, desire to express our emphatic approval of the Local Option Bill introduced into your Honorable House by the Hon. John Kidd, as it provides not only for the reduction of public-houses but also for their entire prohibition within electorates by a majority of the Parliamentary electors.

We would also earnestly recommend your Honorable House to amend the Bill by the insertion of a clause making provision for the exercise of the franchise on this question by the adult women of the Colony.

As the demoralising drink traffic has been the giant curse of this Colony for so many years, we humbly pray that you will take immediate steps to pass the said Bill into law, and thus enable the people to stamp out the blighting traffic wherever they so desire.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SYDNEY GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

(REPORT FOR 1892.)

Presented to Parliament, in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of Act 18 Vic., 1854.

The Chairman of Board of Trustees to The Minister of Public Instruction.

Sir,

Sydney Grammar School, 2 August, 1893.

I have the honor to submit the following Report of the proceedings of the Trustees, and progress of the School during the past year, in order that the same may be laid before His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, in accordance with the provisions of "The Sydney Grammar School Act."

The Honorable Sir William Windeyer was elected Chairman at the Meeting of the Trustees, held in the month of January, and held such office throughout the year.

The Trustees' efforts were specially directed towards carrying on the School with the least expenditure, consistent with providing for the efficient teaching of the boys, and keeping the school premises in a proper state of repair.

Beyond some minor changes the Teaching Staff remained as before, and continued to perform their duties most satisfactorily.

The extension of Natural Science teaching in the Upper School, and the introduction of systematic physical training in the Gymnasium, may be mentioned as features in the working of the School during the year.

The result of the school teaching is best evidenced by the Examiners Reports, which are hereto appended, while it seems clear from the attendance of Pupils—the average for the year being 420·5—that the popularity of the Institution is fully maintained.

Mr. Edward Sydney Simpson was awarded the R. A. A. Morehead Scholarship.

A statement of the Income and Expenditure of the School for the past year is forwarded herewith.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM C. WINDEYER,
Chairman Sydney Grammar School Trustees.

Reports of the Examiners.

Mr. C. H. Rendall, M.A., Late Scholar Hertford College, Oxford; Late Lecturer in the University of Melbourne; Head Master of Haileybury College, Brighton Beach, Melbourne; reports upon the Classical work of the Upper VI Form as follows:—

Gentlemen,

I have examined the Classical work of four boys of the Sixth Form. I have found them good and accurate scholars in both Latin and Greek. The translation and critical paper were especially good, Waddell obtaining forty-five marks out of fifty in a Greek critical paper certainly not easy.

Their style and power of expression shows cultivation, and they have been taught to think. Mitchell did a very able History paper. I consider the whole standard slightly higher than anything I have seen in the School before, and very nearly approaching the Upper Sixth of a great English school.

Mr. E. E. Morris, M.A., Professor of Modern Languages and Literature at the University of Melbourne, reports upon the English History and Composition of the Commercial School as follows:—

Gentlemen,

I have examined the Form called "English" and those called Commercial I and II. I consider that the first of these three has a good knowledge of English History and has been well taught. There are one or two very poor, and one or two with confused notions. Howell, Pettit and Pitt are very good.

I don't know the average age in these forms, but unless the boys in Commercial II are quite little boys I do not think they are as good in history as they ought to be. In both forms there is a great difference between the best and the worst. Cook 2, Rewohl and Morgan deserve prizes in Commercial I. Cameron is the best in the lower form.

English Composition. The division called "English" certainly has been taught English History well. On the whole the boys have a good idea of writing an essay; and they spell well. It is natural that the matter should be better than the treatment. There is a slight tendency to introduce what is irrelevant.

In the Composition of Commercial I, I find the Form much together. This shows that they are well sorted. I think they have been well taught. Essays are difficult at any time to mark satisfactorily: in the case of this Form I found it difficult to make differences in the marks. No one is bad: and the average of the spelling is surprisingly good.

The Composition of Commercial II is, as is natural, decidedly inferior to that of the higher form, especially in the matter of spelling.

Mr. E. E. Morris, M.A., Professor of Modern Languages and Literature at the University of Melbourne, reports on the teaching of French and German as follows:—

Gentlemen,

French. The work of the Sixth is as a whole good. Mitchell and Strickland are especially good. The paper of Unseen passages was long and hard, but many translated very well. The General paper revealed differences more than either the Composition or the Translation.

The French of the Upper IV is good. Only three boys obtained less than half marks. I marked the three parts of the paper equally, viz., unprepared translations, grammar and sentences to be turned into French.

The Middle IV had the same paper, and are certainly behind the higher form. There is a difference of 15 per cent. in their averages. The grammar is well known in both forms, not always well applied.

In passing to Lower IV and Remove I find regular gradations. Even in the lowest form there is no boy utterly ignorant of his subject. No one falls below quarter marks.

A curious instance of the way in which boys avoid thought. The words neven-nez are treated by more than half the number as a mysterious compound,—“nephew-nose”—because the printer had used a broken dash. A moment's thought must have shown it was a printer's mistake and a very little one.

German. I am much pleased with the work of Division I, especially with Strickland's General Paper and some of his translations. The translation paper was varied and long, but more than one found time to write verse translations of the German poetry set, and by no means bad translations they were. When German is taught as it has been to these boys, it is surely an excellent substitute for Greek. The only caution I would add is, that in the study of literature attention should be confined to what is first-rate. Histories of literature seldom so confine it.

Division II shows a very decided improvement on Division III in knowledge and attainments.

In Divisions III and IV there is a great difference between the boys in each division. In one case the best boy has ten times as many marks as the lowest. Some have worked very well, and some have shown a great power to forget all that they have been taught. In Division III, Williamson, Pilcher, and Stephen, 4, deserve most credit. The last two stand exactly at the end of a long row of marks. In Division IV, Wallace, 1, excels.

Mr. E. M. Moors, M.A., Cambridge, Mathematical Lecturer at Sydney University, reports as follows on the Mathematics of the Upper and Lower Schools.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to submit to you a report on the recent Examination in Mathematics.

I set the papers for the Upper and Lower Schools in Arithmetic, Algebra, Euclid, and Trigonometry, and examined the answers from the first three divisions in detail, and also certain papers from those of the other divisions.

Arithmetic. The results are good throughout. In the higher divisions the difficult questions calling for the exercise of thought were well done but at the expense of the accuracy of the elementary work. This may to some extent have arisen from the length of the paper, as almost all the answers were disfigured by blunders, which certainly would have been corrected on revision. The use of decimals instead of vulgar fractions seems to have had very little attention paid to it throughout the school. It would be well also to accustom the boys to work steadily forward in vulgar fractions without being deterred by their length of complexity.

Algebra. In the highest division some very good work indeed was done. The solution of equations was weak in the rest of the school and none of the candidates seemed to have verified the solutions they obtained. This verification is good training, as it emphasises the value of the solution and raises the reasoning above the level of mere rote work. In the lower divisions the mechanical work was, on the whole, accurate but very few seemed to have the courage to persevere when the expressions dealt with began to grow somewhat larger and more complicated than they were accustomed to. The simplification of the fractions was better done throughout than usual. In certain cases I noticed some very good work indeed in the lowest divisions, shewing good teaching and a thoroughly refreshing grasp of the subject on the part of the pupils.

Geometry. The Euclid papers have been thoroughly good throughout. The bookwork has been well learned and the intelligent way in which the riders have been successfully solved by some, and attempted by others, shows that the subject matter has been well understood.

Trigonometry. The two higher divisions only were examined in this subject. Throughout the two divisions elementary portions of the subject as treated in the modern textbooks were apparently imperfectly grasped and therefore loosely and inaccurately reproduced. In the higher division the solution of the equations was very poorly done. The more advanced portions of the work showed a very marked difference, being well known and produced exactly; neither too much nor too little. In the lower division the vagueness already alluded to also characterises the other portions of their paper. This is probably due, however, to the inherent difficulties attendant on a first acquaintance with a subject so novel to the ordinary boy.

An easy paper was set on Statics which was very creditably done by all. A higher paper was also set on Statics for two boys—and Strickland's paper was extremely good. A higher miscellaneous paper on general mathematics was set to two boys who came out very nearly equal on the totals, though these were obtained in different subjects. Neither did well in the questions on theory of equations and interest.

Mr.

Mr. James Bruce reports upon the Handwriting:—

Gentlemen,

I duly conducted an examination on Handwriting of pupils attending Commercial and Lower Schools with the following results:—

Forms Commercial I and English—

40 per cent. write a clear, fair hand and may reasonably be termed good penmen.

35 per cent. fair writers, but exhibit a stiff, laboured action.

25 per cent. very faulty in form and unbusiness-like in style.

Forms Commercial II and III. The work from these forms, especially in the speed exercises, shows that a large percentage of the pupils possess an awkward, erratic movement, and the writing therefore is irregular, and also much inferior to that of previous forms.

Lower School. Many of the papers, I am pleased to report, present a tidy and neat appearance and evidence habits of care and orderliness, and some very promising pupils are to be found in the Junior forms 1A and 1B.

Penholding. Position and Movement are details of great importance in the art of writing, and demand from all teachers much more attention; I am confident that improved results would speedily compensate for the extra time and attention so given.

Mr. F. W. Jonson reports upon the Shorthand as follows:—

Gentlemen,

Speaking of the work generally, it manifests an effort on the part of the students to turn out clear, neat outlines, and in this they have been very fairly successful.

Two hours a week for a subject such as this is an extremely small amount of time, and can hardly be expected to yield a satisfactory result. If the boys were first thoroughly taught Shorthand, the time devoted to it would be afterwards more than saved in the school life of each boy by the use of the system in ordinary school work, such as Compositions, Translations, &c.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC LOCAL OPTION BILL.

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 15 November, 1893.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Honorable Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That we, the members of the Primitive Methodist Church connected with an Intercolonial Conference, held in Sydney from October fourth to October twelfth, regard the traffic in intoxicating liquors as one of the main causes of demoralisation, poverty, and crime, and a constant menace to the happiness and welfare of the community.

We desire to express our hearty approval of the Local Option Bill introduced to your Honorable House by the Hon. J. Kidd, as it provides not only for the reduction of public-houses, but also for their entire prohibition within electorates by a majority of Parliamentary electors.

We, therefore, pray your Honorable House to take immediate steps to pass the said Bill into law, and thus enable the people (without any compensation) to stamp out the drink traffic wherever they so desire.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

GEORGE JAMES,
President.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

AUSTRALIAN MUSEUM.

(REPORT OF TRUSTEES FOR THE YEAR 1892.)

Presented to Parliament pursuant to Act 17 Vic. No. 2, sec. 9.

To HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR AND EXECUTIVE COUNCIL,—

The Trustees of the Australian Museum have the honor to submit to Your Excellency their Thirty-ninth Annual Report.

1. The hours during which the Museum was open to the public were, as in previous years, from 10 a.m. till 5 p.m.; but in summer till 6 p.m., except on Sundays, when they were from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., and on Mondays, when the Museum was closed for cleaning. The number of visitors was 130,701, being a decrease of 2,144. The largest attendance on any one week day was 2,536, on Monday, 3rd October. The largest Sunday attendance was 1,066, on 13th November. The average for the year was 265 on week-days, and 712 on Sundays.

2. The collections are still steadily increasing, although, on account of the temporary disarrangement of the Museum for building purposes, and for the sake of economy, the Trustees have continued to limit the acquisition of new specimens. The principal purchases during the year have been:—

Collection of Tasmanian Minerals.

Skeletons of two whales from New Zealand.

Casts of the remarkable shell, Pleurotomaria, fossil and recent.

Ethnological specimens from New Zealand, South America, the South Sea Islands, &c.

The most important acquisitions by exchange have been:—

A collection of Philippine Island shells, from Dr. Von Mollendorff.

Echinodermata from the United States National Museum.

A collection of rocks and minerals from the Dumfries Museum, Scotland.

The most valuable presentations were:—

Giant earth-worms from Queensland.

Portion of a Solomon Island canoe found buried on the foreshore of Port Jackson.

Portions of trees with aboriginal carvings.

3. Collecting expeditions were sent at the request of the New South Wales Commissioners for the World's Columbian Exhibition, Chicago, to the Seal Rocks, in the Government Steamer "Thetis," to the Bellinger River District, and to Blackman's Swamp, near Lithgow, with the result that 5 Seals and 61 other Mammals, and 500 Birds, Reptiles, Fishes, &c., were procured.

A few minor collecting expeditions were sent out for special purposes, the most important of which resulted in obtaining the skeleton of an Aboriginal, together with some curious relics buried in the grave with him.

4. The work connected with the building alterations having been completed, the new hall and galleries were lent for a few months to the Department of Public Works, for the exhibition of competitive designs for a proposed new Hospital at Rossville, Goulburn, and for the proposed new Pymont Bridge. Contracts were afterwards let for the erection of show cases for the more suitable display of certain of the collections, and these are well advanced.

Records of the Australian Museum, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, of Vol. II.

6. Full information with respect to the working of the Institution will be found in the Curator's Report, comprised in Appendix I.

7. The vacancy at the Board, caused by the death of C. S. Wilkinson, Esq., F.G.S., Geological Surveyor in charge, in 1891, was filled in the early part of 1892 by the election of Professor T. W. Edgeworth David.

8. It is with feelings of deep regret that the Trustees have to record the death, on 27th September, of Robert Hunt, Esq., C.M.G., one of the Elective Trustees, who occupied a seat on the Board from 1879 to 1892.

APPENDIX I.

CURATOR'S REPORT TO 31ST DECEMBER, 1892.

To the Trustees of the Australian Museum.

Gentlemen,

The alterations to the "Old Wing" of the Museum Buildings have now been completed, and contracts have been let for the erection of show-cases.

All the members of the staff have faithfully attended to their duties and the collections are in good order. The scientific staff has been strengthened by the engagement of Dr. T. Cooksey as Assistant in Mineralogy, and by the employment of three lads as cadets, to assist the officers in various departments.

I submit herewith a Report of the work done and the condition of each department.

MAMMALS.

The specimens acquired and registered in this Department are :—

Purchased	30 specimens.
Collected	65 "
Received by exchange	2 "
Presented	69 "

The most noteworthy were two rare whales from New Zealand.

The Foreign mammals have been, as already intimated, withdrawn from exhibition owing to the building alterations, but the Australian mammals are on view as usual in the north end of the ground floor. A catalogue of the Australian mammals, by Mr. J. D. Ogilby, has been published.

BIRDS (Mr. A. J. North).

During the year 1,314 specimens of birds, nests, and eggs have been determined and registered, viz. :—

Purchased	304 specimens.
Collected	634 "
Received by exchange	64 "
Presented	312 "

The unusually large number of specimens registered is chiefly due to the collections made by Mr. R. Grant, on the Bellinger River and Blaxland's Swamp, the greater portion of which has been since sent to the Chicago Exhibition.

The principal acquisitions consist of a specimen and egg of the rare Polytelis alexandrae, collected by Dr. Stirling at Newcastle Waters, Central Australia, received from the Trustees of the Adelaide Museum in exchange; a number of fine specimens of Charadrius veredus, a very rare visitant, procured by our Taxidermist, Mr. J. A. Thorpe, at Randwick, during September and October; and a collection of Kingfishers, purchased.

The Group Collection is being steadily added to, and forms one of the most interesting portions of the Ornithological Gallery; amongst others, twenty groups have been mounted during the year, showing the mode of nidification, eggs, and young of the birds found breeding in the neighbourhood of Sydney. The Nest Collection has been rearranged and named. The Exhibition Collection of Australian Birds' Eggs has been supplemented by other eggs, in sets where possible, arranged in separate boxes and named, and a large number of tickets in the Ornithological Gallery has been renewed.

Mr. North has published the following papers in the "Records" :—

- (1.) Supplement to the Descriptive Catalogue of "Nests and Eggs of Birds found Breeding in Australia and Tasmania." Part II.
- (2.) Note on the Nidification of Manucodia comrii, Sclater.
- (3.) Additions to the Avifaunas of Tasmania, and Norfolk and Lord Howe Islands.

A paper by Professor Alfred Newton, M.A., F.R.S., &c., of Magdalene College, Cambridge, entitled, "Note on the occurrence of the Sanderling (Calidris arenaria) in New South Wales," has also appeared in the "Records."

REPTILES, BATRACHIANS, AND FISHES (Mr. T. Whitelegge).

The acquisitions registered have been :—

Reptiles and Batrachians—Presented	162 specimens.
Purchased	75 "
Collected	62 "
Fishes—Presented	63 "
Purchased	40 "
Collected	7 "

Among the reptiles worthy of notice may be mentioned a valuable collection from the Peruvian Andes, including many rare species not hitherto represented among our exhibits. The most interesting addition to the fishes was Aulostoma chinensis, from Lord Howe Island.

MOLLUSCA—MARINE SHELLS (Mr. J. Brazier).

The acquisitions registered in this Department have been :—

Presented (99 species)	376 specimens.
Received by exchange (35 species)	123 "
Purchased (2 species)	7 "

The purchases include the cast (a coloured reproduction) of the recent species of Pleurotomaria adansoni.

The principal donation, consisting of shells that will fill up many gaps in the collection, was made by Mr. James Dall, of New Zealand.

The

The greater part of Mr. Brazier's time has been taken up in determining, naming, and cataloguing the marine shells; and in unpacking and selecting those of Australia and Tasmania, to be laid aside for an Australian collection as soon as cases to display them in are ready.

In literature, Mr. Brazier's work is represented by—

Catalogue of the Marine Shells of Australia and Tasmania, Parts I and II.

MOLLUSCA—LAND AND FRESH-WATER SHELLS (Mr. C. Hedley).

Mr. Hedley was engaged during most of the year in arranging the Australian land and fresh-water shells contained in the Brazier collection, and in mounting a collection of Pelecypoda, which had been named by E. A. Smith, Esq.

The principal exchanges effected were with Dr. Von Mollendorff, of Manilla, and Mr. Suter, of Christchurch, New Zealand. Messrs. Musson and Worcester presented the largest donations.

The additions registered were acquired as follows:—

Presented (92 species)	518 specimens.
Collected (14 species)	71 „
Received in exchange (142 species)	464 „

Mr. Hedley's literary work was represented by papers—

- (1.) On the structure and Affinities of Panda atomata, Gray. Published in the "Records."
- (2.) On Parmacochlea fischeri, Smith. Published by special permission of the Trustees in the Macleay Memorial Volume.

INSECTA (Mr. F. A. A. Skuse).

Upwards of 1,277 specimens have been received and registered as follows:—

Presented	440 specimens.
Exchanged	707 „
Purchased	130 „

These numbers represent the more important specimens which have been named, mounted and classified. In addition, 16 small miscellaneous collections have been acquired, and numerous other specimens have been reared and collected, the individual species of which, owing principally to minuteness and great numbers, have not yet been particularised, though provisionally registered.

An interesting collection of Madagascar Lepidoptera and Neuroptera, numbering 99 specimens (31 species) and a series of rare Wood-moths from the Newcastle district were purchased. Also a specimen of the scarce beetle Phalacrognathus muelleri was purchased from a correspondent in the Cairns district, this being the occasion of ascertaining for the first time the exact habitat of this beautiful Lucanid. Among the exchanges are a collection of exotic Coleoptera, 302 specimens (120 species), from Mr. A. M. Lea, Sydney, and a collection of South African Coleoptera, 365 specimens (96 species), from Mr. J. H. Brady, Cape Town.

Much time has been devoted to sorting, setting and re-setting series of the various orders from the duplicate collection, preparatory to their being placed on exhibition in the new gallery, to arranging the cabinet of Australian Rhopalocera (butterflies), and generally keeping the collections in good order and free from deprecation.

Papers were published by Mr. Skuse in the "Records," as follows:—

- (1.) Notes on Australian Aquatic Hemiptera, No. 1.
- (2.) Remarks on a new "Cyria" from New South Wales.

MARINE INVERTEBRATA (Mr. T. Whitelegge).

The acquisitions registered in this Department amount to 348 specimens, of 212 species, of which the different sections are represented as follows:—

Molluscoidea	39 specimens received in exchange.
„	4 „ collected.
Crustacea	88 „ presented.
„	5 „ purchased.
„	1 „ collected.
Vermes	21 „ presented.
Echinodermata	10 „ presented.
„	147 „ received in exchange.
„	32 „ collected.
Coelenterata	23 „ presented.
„	1 „ collected.
4 Packets of Foraminiferous Sand	received in exchange.

The most noteworthy additions consist of a large collection of Echinodermata, received in exchange from the U.S. National Museum, in which 16 genera and 58 species are represented, all of which are additions to the collection; and of a small collection of Crustacea from Port Phillip, for which the Museum is indebted to Mr. J. Bracebridge Wilson, M.A., of Geelong, Victoria.

Much of Mr. Whitelegge's time has been occupied with the registration of specimens, in attending to the exhibits, and to the extensive duplicate collection.

ETHNOLOGICAL,

ETHNOLOGICAL, NUMISMATICAL, AND HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS (Mr. A. J. North).

During the year, 506 Ethnological specimens have been registered, as follows:—

Purchased	363 specimens.
Received by exchange	37 "
Presented...	105 "
Collected	1 "

More space is wanted for the proper display of the exhibits in the Ethnological Hall, many of the specimens being hidden by recent acquisitions, although the greater portion of those obtained has been stored.

The most interesting additions consist of a number of specimens from the Dutch Moluccas, presented by Captain Carpenter, all of which are new to the Collection; eight portions of trunks of trees, with aboriginal carvings, from Narellan, presented by Mr. Albert Vickery; a number of weapons from Peru, South America, purchased; a small collection from the Solomon Islands, received in exchange; and the remains of a male aboriginal, together with a number of personal effects buried with him thirty years ago, collected by the Palæontologist, Mr. R. Etheridge, at Gorman's Flat, Parish of Wingecarrabee, County Westmoreland; and who has given a full account of the ethnological observations made during the expedition in the "Records of the Museum," vol. II.

Only one Numismatical and three Historical specimens have been received during the year, all of which were presented, the most valuable of the latter being an old M.S. pamphlet, with a coloured sketch of the Crucifixion, supposed to have been used by one of the early missionaries in New South Wales to teach Christianity to the Aborigines, presented by Mr. Carl Hoffman.

PALÆONTOLOGY (Mr. R. Etheridge, Palæontologist).

The specimens registered during 1892 numbered 2,974, comprising as follows:—

Purchased	143 specimens.
By exchange	119 "
By presentation	86 "
Old collections	2,626 "

The most important presentation consisted of bones of Diprotodon, Phascolonus, and other extinct marsupials, from Weetalabah Creek, by Mr. J. MacMaster.

The chief exchanges were a series of Lower Silurian Graptolites, from Sandhurst, through Mr. J. M. Knight, and South Australian Tertiary Mollusca, through Mr. G. B. Pritchard.

Those portions of the old collection registered comprised, amongst others, the late Rev. J. E. T. Woods' types of Muddy Creek Tertiary Mollusca, co-types of Professor R. Tate's Victorian and South Australian Tertiary Mollusca, and a large series of similar specimens obtained through the late Mr. Bailey, of Melbourne, in 1892.

MINERAL DEPARTMENT (Dr. T. Cooksey).

During the year 2,604 numbers have been added to the register, embracing, in all, about 2,850 specimens. Of these 322 have been acquired as follows:—

By purchase (during 1891 and 1892)	240 specimens.
By donation (do do)	31 "
By exchange	51 "

The remainder consists principally of mineral specimens which belong to the foreign collection now on exhibit in the Museum.

Among the purchases three Enhydros and some remarkably good specimens of Molybdenite are deserving of mention. These and some Bismuth minerals have been described by Professor A. Liversidge, M.A., F.R.S., in the Museum Records for August, 1892.

By exchange some very good specimens have been obtained, among which are several rare lead minerals from Scotland; and 340 specimens have been sent away.

LIBRARY (Mr. S. Sinclair, Librarian).

The books having been thoroughly cleaned have now all been placed in the new Library Rooms.

In spite of precautions taken, they have, in some instances, greatly suffered from their domicile in the temporary iron building, owing to the attacks of Dermestes, the damp, and the excessive heat. In some instances it will be necessary to rebind them.

A rough inventory shows about 6,500 volumes, of which about 460 were new acquisitions in 1891, and 220 in 1892.

The work at the catalogue was necessarily delayed, during the time the books were in temporary quarters.

The catalogue is to be in three parts, viz.:—

- Part 1.—Alphabetical Catalogue, by Author's Name.
- 2.—Periodicals, Proceedings, &c.
- 3.—Subject Index.

To the Honorable the Colonial Secretary,—

Sir,

In accordance with former custom, we, the members of the City of Sydney Improvement Board, have now the honor to present to you our Annual Report for the Board year ended 31st August, 1893. In doing so we have to express regret that, for some unexplained reason, during the past twelve months our services have not been called into requisition by the proper officer (the City Building Surveyor) whose duty it is to "inspect ruinous and dangerous buildings and projections in danger at all times when needful, and take all necessary measures thereupon," and "shall see that all the rules and regulations of this Act" (meaning the City of Sydney Improvement Act) "are well and truly observed."

Frequent complaints have been made to us by citizens in connection with various buildings and structures thought, by them, to be sources of public danger; but, for want of power in that direction, we could only cause a notice, under the 21st clause of the Act, to be given to the City Building Surveyor, with a view to the matter complained of being further dealt with by him.

On a former occasion—the third year of the Board's existence—similar unsatisfactory progress had to be reported. This is a state of inactivity which, we consider, should no longer exist, seeing that much useful and very needful work might be performed by this Board if only the requisite Legislative authority were given us by amending the present anomalous Act, which, as far as we are concerned, is almost unworkable, owing to the lack of initiative and administrative powers. These defects and deficiencies have, since the establishment of the Board in the year 1879, been pointed out in each succeeding Annual Report, and made known by every other available means in our power, but, so far, the desired object has not been attained. The necessity for amending the Act has been freely acknowledged by all who have given the subject their serious consideration. If once amended, under careful and judicious administration, it is believed the efficient working of the Act would have a very beneficial effect, and that much good would result therefrom. This, no doubt, was what the framers of the Act had in view when first they took the matter in hand, but they signally failed to produce a serviceable or properly-defined Act of Parliament, for once it became law it was quickly found to be so faulty in construction, and so contradictory in its wording, that many of the most important clauses are totally unworkable, and remain, in consequence, inoperative; so that, notwithstanding the best efforts of the Board in the interests of the public, the principal objects of the Act have been frustrated. We can only, therefore, once more urge upon your notice the necessity for immediate amendment of the Act, which, for the past fourteen years, has been required and persistently sought, and await the result of this renewed representation.

Since last report the Board offices have been removed from No. 131, Macquarie-street, to the new building of the Department of Lands, and again removed from there to the Public Works Building, Macquarie-street.

During the year, owing to retrenchment on the part of the Government, the services of Mr. F. C. Rooke, who since 1882 has been Secretary and subsequently Registrar and Board Officer, have been dispensed with, and Mr. J. D. Nelson, clerk in the office, was appointed as Clerk-in-Charge.

Mr. William Bailey, J.P., was re-elected Chairman for the Board year just ended.

Deputation.

DEPUTATION, 29th April, 1892, from the North Sydney Municipal Council with reference to the Petition from the Mossman's Ward for separation from the Municipality.

Introduced by the Mayor, Mr. E. M. Clark, M.P. Members: Aldermen Punch, G. T. Clark, Moody, and Anderson.

Mr. E. M. Clark: We wait upon you as the representatives of the Borough of North Sydney with reference to this vexed question of separation. The petitioners have not stated their reasons for asking for this separation, but we have heard that they give as reasons that they have not had sufficient consideration, and that enough money has not been spent upon them. We want to explain to you that upon these grounds alone they are not entitled to separation, as we have spent a great deal of money in the neighbourhood. Our municipality has only been in existence a matter of two years, and the whole of that time has been taken up in settling the finances and dividing the borough into wards. We have just got these adjusted when we are met with this application. If this separation takes place a very great difficulty will arise; the whole of our borough will have to be re-adjusted, together with the finances. We ask that you will cause an inquiry to be made, and are sure if this is done the report will be in accordance with our representations to-day. There is also the matter of our liabilities. We have lately borrowed the sum of £35,000 upon the security of the rates of the whole borough, and we propose to spend £9,000 in this particular neighbourhood, called Mossman's Ward. If this is separated we lessen the security on which the money was borrowed. If these matters are taken into consideration, and as ours is a municipality such as does not exist in any other part of New South Wales, we believe the Government will refuse the application.

Mr. G. T. Clark: I would like to draw your attention to the small amount of revenue that the portion of the district in question gives. At the last assessment the total amount was £1,500, and as a portion of this is unattainable through the owners of property not being found, the actual revenue is only £1,300. This sum is far too small to carry on a municipality. This separation movement is really the action of a few, and is not to the welfare of the public at large. Unfortunately, through the amalgamation of the borough, they have not had the representation they might have had, but by degrees this will come, as the elections occur. They will return, in course of time, three representatives. As a property owner in the locality, I think it would be a great drawback for separation to take place. The matter of separation has been fought once before, when the Government, for very good reasons, supported the Council of St. Leonards against the movement. The representatives of Mossman's Bay supported the amalgamation, and an alteration now would upset a great deal of what has been done in the past. There are a number of names on the Petition that I am sure require inquiry into. Several names are down on the roll who do not possess property now, and a number of persons who have signed the Petition are simply householders, who do not pay rates, and have no interest in the district beyond living there. I claim that only owners of property have a right to ask for separation. A number of people have objected to the separation who should be paid some attention, and I think the Petition requires the utmost scrutiny. The small population of the district, and the small amount of revenue derived, I think, are fatal to thier request.

Mr. Punch: I am glad to be here to-day to express my disapproval of the separation. I think there are a number of names on the Petition of gentlemen who are under very grave misapprehension. Several have informed me that the reason they signed the Petition was because it was placed before them that they were not getting a sufficient share of the money received by the municipality. I am interested in a good deal of property there, and I think some consideration should be given by the Government to those desirous of maintaining the unity. By the amalgamation of the three boroughs we have risen to a position only second to that of the city.

Mr. Moody spoke in support of the statements previously made.

Mr. Anderson stated the borough had been formed so short a time that the people of Mossman's Ward had not had the opportunity of testing whether they were receiving proper attention. Owing to the amalgamation there are at present three vacant seats in the North Sydney Council, which can only be filled up by special Act of Parliament, and if Mossman's Ward is separated it will cause a similar difficulty.

Mr. Suttor: I have naturally listened with very great pleasure to the representations you have made, because in a case such as this it is my duty to make myself thoroughly informed of all particulars possible. I will cause an investigation to be made, and reports furnished. The Act is very clear in stating that at least two-thirds of the ratepayers must petition before the separation can take place, and if it can be proved that this has not been properly complied with, the matter, of course, falls through. In making the inquiries I must necessarily consider the representations of both sides, and I hope the ultimate decision will be to the benefit of the ratepayers generally.

Re-submitted. Mr. Lewis might be instructed to make the necessary inquiry.—C.W., 4/8/92. Yes.—F.B.S., 5/8/92. The District Government Officer, B.C., 8/8/92.—C.W., P.U.S.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Division of the Borough of North Sydney--Petition for.

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 11 May, 1892.

I RECOMMEND the publication, in pursuance of the 10th and 18th sections of the Municipalities Act of 1867, of the substance and prayer of the accompanying petition, signed by 540 persons, who are alleged to represent at least two-thirds of the ratepayers of the Mossman's Ward, of the Borough of North Sydney, praying to be separated from that borough, and erected into a distinct municipality, with certain boundaries therein described, under the name of the Borough of Mossman.

F. B. SUTTON.

The Executive Council advise that the substance and prayer of the petition herewith submitted be published in the manner proposed.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Approved.—JERSEY, 17/5/92. Min. 92-20, 17/5/92. Confirmed, 23/5/92.

Published in Supplementary Government Gazette, No. 423, of 9th June, 1892; North Shore Times and North Sydney Recorder, 18th June, 1892; the Sydney Morning Herald, 20th and 21st June; Daily Telegraph, 20th and 22nd June; Australian Star, 20th and 21st June; and the Evening News, 20th and 22nd June, 1892.

The Council Clerk, North Sydney, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Borough of North Sydney, Town Hall, 22 June, 1892.

In reference to the petition in favour of the division of this municipality, and the incorporation of the district proposed to be separated as the Borough of Mossman, the substance of which petition has been published in the Government Gazette, I am directed by His Worship the Mayor to request that no further action be taken in respect to this petition until the Council has had an opportunity of making some representations on the matter.

I have, &c.,

W. BARNETT SMITH,

Council Clerk.

A.U.S., 24/6/92.—C.W. The matter may await the receipt of the Mayor's letter.—E.W.M'K., 28/6/92. Yes.—C.W., 28/6/92.

The

The Mayor, North Sydney, to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Borough of North Sydney, Town Hall, 15 July, 1892.

In reference to petition published in the Government Gazette of 9th June, 1892, in favour of the division of this municipality by the separation of that portion known as Mossman's Ward, and its creation into a distinct municipality under the name of the "Borough of Mossman," I desire, on behalf of the Municipal Council of the Borough of North Sydney, to submit that His Excellency the Governor should, in accordance with the powers vested in him by the Municipalities Act of 1867, refuse the prayer of the petition. In support of this view I desire to point out—

1. That in July, 1890, the Boroughs of St. Leonards, East St. Leonards, and Victoria were united and formed into the present Borough of North Sydney.
2. That the district proposed to be separated forms portion of the united borough.
3. That the united borough has not been sufficiently long in existence to determine the benefits or otherwise to be derived from amalgamation.
4. That since the amalgamation the revenue received from Mossman's Ward has been £2,924 15s. 9d., while the expenditure on works and proportionate share of management expenses has been £3,913 14s. 9d.
5. That the petitioners advance no reasons in favour of the proposed separation nor complain of any act of injustice or want of attention to the reasonable requirements of that portion of the district, the presumption being that the desire for division has not been prompted by any legitimate grievance.

On these grounds, therefore, there is nothing to justify the proposed division of the borough at the present time.

I also desire to point out that it is the policy of the present Government, as it has been that of former ones, to pass an Act to confer greater local self-governing powers upon the people, and that one of the provisions of such an Act should, and no doubt will be, the consolidation and union of small municipalities. It is only by such means that the proper work of local government can be economically and effectively carried out, and I submit for the consideration of the Government, that in view of such an Act being passed at an early date, it would not be expedient to undo the good work effected in this district by dividing the borough at the present time.

With the limited powers and revenues possessed by existing municipalities under the present law, it is but natural to expect that in every district there will be some malcontents who, because of something or another which may occur displeasing or unsatisfactory to them, forthwith commence an agitation in favour of creating a separate borough. Such persons are usually active and persistent in spreading abroad their own spirit of discontent, and find no difficulty in persuading others who are not well informed of the of the true state of affairs that some legitimate cause of grievance really exists.

From conversations which I have had with many of the signatories to this petition, I am satisfied they were persuaded to sign it under a misconception of the true facts, and that had those facts been fairly and reasonably presented to them their signatures would not have appeared on the petition.

Having regard to this reasonable view of the case, and also to the fact that the country has been long waiting for a Local Government Act to dissipate the causes which now render fruitful the many petty grievances arising in every community, I trust the Government will not sanction any division of this municipality.

Should it not be deemed advisable to refuse the petition on the strong grounds of public policy, I submit there are other reasons equally as strong to justify its rejection.

In the first place, I take an objection to the petition on the grounds that the declarations verifying the signatures thereto are not sufficient for the requirements of the Act, inasmuch as they certify that the persons signing such petition are persons liable to assessment for municipal taxes, in respect of property or household residence within the boundaries of the proposed municipal district, whereas, in accordance with section 18 of the Act, the petitioners should be electors, resident or owning ratable property, and the declarations should be to that effect.

The declaration used is one proper to a petition for the incorporation of a district, but is not in any way applicable to a petition for the division of an existing borough.

As there is no evidence, therefore, that the persons signing the petition have the requisite qualification, I submit that the case is the same as if the petition were presented without any declarations at all, as in fact it has been with regard to the last seven signatures, and that, therefore, in this respect the requirements of the Municipalities Act have not been complied with; under these circumstances, therefore, the petition should not be entertained.

At the present time the borough has debentures outstanding amounting to £33,500. There is also a bank overdraft amounting in round figures to £19,000, for which the bank holds debentures as security. Tenders have also been called for a further loan of £35,000.

These debentures are all secured upon the general rates and revenues of the whole municipality; and apart altogether from any question of the adjustment of liabilities, I submit that any division of the municipality would seriously reduce the value of the security pledged for the repayment of these loans.

Any such division, therefore, would be a reprehensible proceeding, a breach of faith with the creditors of the municipality, and altogether inexpedient, if not absolutely unlawful.

The Council has also agreed to purchase the works, plant, &c., of the North Shore Gas Company for a sum which is to be ascertained and determined by an inquiry to be conducted by three persons, one of whom is to be appointed by the Council, one by the Company, and the third by the representatives of the Council and the Company.

The Council has also incurred certain obligations and liabilities in connection with the establishment of municipal gasworks, none of which can be properly adjusted until the business is terminated.

In

In conclusion, I beg to point out that since the union of the boroughs, comprising the present Borough of North Sydney, much difficult work has been accomplished in placing the financial and administrative affairs of the Council upon a sound and systematic basis, and that a return to the regime which existed before the union will be in the highest degree detrimental to the best interests of the district.

I also maintain that the petition, even if in order, does not represent the present views of the majority of the electors of that portion of the borough, and does not contain the requisite number of genuine signatures as specified by the Municipalities Act, and should, therefore, on that ground, also be dismissed.

I have, &c.,
EDWARD M. CLARK,
Mayor.

MOSSMAN'S WARD SEPARATION.

SOME time ago certain residents of the Mossman Ward, North Sydney Municipality, presented a petition asking for separation from the borough. Yesterday morning Mr. E. M. Clark, M.P., Mayor of North Sydney, Aldermen Punch, G. T. Clarke, Moodie, and Anderson, called on the Acting Colonial Secretary (Mr. F. B. Suttor), and asked that the fullest investigation might be made before a decision was arrived at. It was pointed out that a good deal of trouble had been taken to bring the present amalgamation about. For two years past they had been adjusting the wards and finances, and any separation would call for an entire readjustment. The ward in question had received even more than a fair amount of attention in the way of having money spent in it. The borough had lately borrowed £35,000 on advantageous terms, and it proposed to spend at least £9,000 in the disaffected ward. If separation took place a difficulty would arise regarding liability for the loan, as the security given would be lessened. Mr. Suttor promised to have the fullest possible investigation made before any decision was arrived at.

J. F. Cullen, Esq., M.P., to The Acting Chief Secretary.

Sir, West-street, North Sydney, 4 August, 1892.

Herewith I beg to forward a request from the petitioners for separation of Mossman's Ward from Borough of North Sydney, that you will be good enough to grant their representative an audience in reply to representations recently made to you by a deputation from the said Council.

Yours, &c.,
J. F. CULLEN.

DEPUTATION from the Petitioners for the separation of Mossman's Ward from the Municipality of North Sydney.—12 August, 1892.

Present: Alderman Harnett, Dr. Cullen, Messrs. Withers, Wilson, M'Leod, Robb, and Cowles.

Dr. Cullen: The gentlemen before you represent the petitioners for the separation of Mossman Ward, and are here in view of the adverse representations put before you by the deputation the other day. The chief objection to the separation they put forward was that so soon after the amalgamation of the borough a reversal of the action was asked for, but we contest that a re-adjustment of the borough would, in any case, be necessary. Ours is a case exactly parallel to one that exists in the City of Sydney at the present time. We have a partially-settled district adjoining a much older established place, the latter having its roads and other works already carried out, while the former has theirs yet to make. We say that in any case this outlying part ought to be separated from the older part. Another objection stated was that lately a large loan had been floated, and it is said that the security to the lenders will be affected. With regard to this, the Borough of Kiama was recently separated into two divisions, and though the whole funds of the borough were pledged, it was found possible to adjust the securities. The security to a lender to a municipality differs from that to a private person, because the former knows that the Act provides for the separations of municipalities, and he runs that risk; again, a private security is property which can be realised upon, but the security of a municipality consists of the rates, and it is as easy for a receiver to be appointed to collect the rates from two boroughs as from one. Mossman Ward occupies financially the soundest position of any of the wards of North Sydney.

Mr. G. F. M. Withers, Secretary to the Separation Movement, read the following:—

"I have the honor, on behalf of the petitioners to the above, to submit for your consideration the following, mainly in reply to an opposition deputation from the North Sydney Council opposing above petition:—

1. That the said deputation that waited upon you on July 29, 1892, consisting of five aldermen, was not authorised by the Council to do so, and consisted only of those known to be in opposition to the movement—those aldermen favourable to our petition not being present nor invited. That when in Council a vote was taken upon the Mayor's minute with reference to separation, the voting was equal, so that one half the Council are favourable and deem it the best course in the interests of North Sydney.

2. That the area sought to be separated is over 3 square miles, and is defined upon plan accompanying petition, and, excepting the great Military Road made and maintained by the Government, we are severed completely from North Sydney proper, and our interests are in no way identical, our communication with Sydney being by water.

3. That the assessed annual value of ratable property in Mossman's Ward is £31,363 8s.

due to Mossman's Ward in the event of separation being granted.

In addition to which we are entitled to a sum of £9,000 being our proportionate share of the loan recently floated.

The amount of indebtedness of the six wards is as follows:—

Owing by Kirribilli Ward	£19,517	1	1
" Victoria Ward	11,279	11	5
" Belmore Ward	5,591	0	3
" Warringa Ward... ..	3,961	15	3
" Tunks Ward	3,844	12	3
" Mossman's Ward	1,151	2	5

These figures clearly show that our relative financial position is very satisfactory. The foregoing figures are taken from the published statements of the Council.

4. That your petitioners fail to see that there are any grave reasons for believing that the proposed separation will cause any undue disturbances, either of the finances or representation in the Council. To avoid any such consequence the ward, as a whole, has been included in the petition for separation; and as the accounts of the borough are at present kept separate for each ward, the rights and liabilities of each can be readily adjusted. The fact of the recent amalgamation of the North Shore boroughs has been urged as an objection to separation, on the ground that it would be only undoing what has been with some difficulty accomplished. In reply, we respectfully urge that the separation of Mossman's Ward would have been necessary under any conditions. Our position is that the former difficulty of working so peculiarly situated an area as the old Borough of St. Leonards has only been intensified by the increase of area caused by the amalgamation. The amalgamation of boroughs was only a necessary step in the re-adjustment of areas, which we seek to complete by the constitution of Mossman's Ward into a new borough.

5. That, in the words of the Engineer and Overseer of the Council, the existing borough is too large for the active supervision of the various works to be carried out.

6. We wish to deny the statement as published, of Alderman Punch, who formed one of the before-mentioned deputation to you, to the effect "that a number of names had been obtained by misrepresentation." Our petition contains 540 signatures, are all on the municipal roll, and we believe that the Act has, in all particulars, been strictly complied with, and we have respectfully to request that you will be pleased to hold the official inquiry at the earliest convenient opportunity, and, if possible, have evidence taken on oath.

7. The fact that considerably over two-thirds of those upon the roll have signed the petition clearly shows that the desire is strong and general to have the management of the district in which they are interested in their own hands, and not in that of those who reside miles away, and have little or no interest in the locality.

Mr. Harnett: As the representative of Mossman's Ward in the North Sydney Council, and being the only representative, I fully endorse everything that has been said. I have resided there over twenty years, and know all the works, and, after mature consideration, I have come to the conclusion that a separation is necessary. I find I have the utmost difficulty in getting essential works carried out. As you will see by the plan, Mossman's Ward occupies nearly half of the borough. It is about 3 square miles in extent, and the whole borough is nearly 7, and there is at present only one alderman for this ward, while there are fourteen representing the other half of the borough. This, of course, places the balance of power there, and where the power lies is where the money will be spent. The separation movement has been very carefully got up, and there are plenty of capable men at Mossman's Bay to occupy the position of alderman. Out of the recent loan of £35,000 I am informed that there is only £11,000 available, so that the amount of £9,000 which is owing to us looks in rather a curious position.

It was pointed out by a member of the deputation that the fact of Mr. Harnett being the sole representative of Mossman's Ward had arisen through two aldermen having to retire when the amalgamation took place. The number of representatives they should have was three, and the remaining two would be appointed in course of time, as the elections came round. With reference to the debentures, he stated that the petition was gazetted and advertised in the local papers before the parties tendered for the loan, and it, therefore, could not be considered unfair to the debenture-holders if they separated, as this was a course likely to occur. The tenders were called for knowing that this petition was drawn out and had been signed by the required number, or more, of the ratepayers. The aldermen all acknowledge that the present area of the borough is too large to properly manage.

In reply to Mr. Suttor, it was stated that the amalgamation had to take place before the separation could be effected, and it was only concurred in with this view.

Mr. Harnett stated that at the meeting of the Council at which this matter was considered, twelve aldermen out of the fourteen being present, the motion for separation was lost only by the casting vote of the Mayor.

Mr.

Mr. Suttor: It is only reasonable that you should desire to put your views before me in this matter, and I am glad to hear what you have to say. I will have a very careful investigation made, and give the fullest consideration to the case. Of course, I cannot make any promise to you, as I am not in a position to do so. Acting on the deputation received a short time back, of which you are aware, I have already given instructions to an officer to make a full report upon the matter.

Re Mossman's Ward Separation Petition.

Sir,

Mossman's Bay, North Sydney, 12 August, 1892.

I have the honor, on behalf of the petitioners to the above, to submit for your consideration the following, mainly in reply to an opposition deputation from the North Sydney Council opposing above petition:—

(1.) Dear Sir,

Borough of North Sydney, Mayor's Office, 21 September, 1892.

I regret that I cannot attend inquiry at Mossman's Bay on Monday, 26th, and it will be extremely difficult to administer the affairs of my important borough if this inquiry is conducted at the spot indicated. The books and documents are very voluminous to be dragging about in the manner they will be required to and from the spot indicated, apart from the fact that they will be required also for office reference. With no desire to interfere with the proper conduct of this inquiry, I suggested to you a few days ago that the most convenient place for the inquiry was the Town Hall, and I again urge upon you that it will be inconvenient to the majority of those interested to hold it otherwise, as I would like to call your attention to the fact that a very large number of signatures to the separation petition are not those of actual residents of Mossman's Bay, but of people living at Sydney and its suburbs who are owners of land in the neighbourhood.

Yours, &c.,

EDWARD M. CLARK.

The District Government Officer to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

District Government Office, 30 September, 1892.

A petition was received in which it was alleged that 540 ratepayers of Mossman's Bay Ward desired to be separated from the Borough of North Sydney and to be erected into a distinct municipality under the name of the Borough of Mossman. It was further alleged that the signatures represented at least two-thirds of the ratepayers within the proposed district.

The petition was gazetted on the 9th June, 1892, and I have now the honor to forward the result of an inquiry held at Mossman's Bay on the 26th instant, and at the Town Hall on the 29th instant, with reference to the signatures.

Mr. W. H. Pigott appeared on behalf of the Council, and Mr. George Wallace on behalf of the petitioners.

Mr. Pigott objected to the validity of the petition, on the ground that the declarations of the persons who collected the signatures to the petition were only declarations that the petitioners were liable to assessment, and not that they were electors; but, upon a perusal of the operative portion of the original petition, it will be seen that the petitioners specifically affirm that they are two-thirds at least of the electors resident, &c.; consequently it will be seen that the petition embodies more than was needed, viz., a statement (1) that they were electors; (2) that they were liable for assessment.

Upon a scrutiny, signatures 1 to 52 inclusive were admitted.

53, Frank M. Bladen, was disallowed, as the name did not appear on the electoral roll.

54 to 348 inclusive were admitted.

349, Walter W. Webb, was disallowed, as the signature was not obtained in the presence of the verifier, Mr. Webb having attached his signature at Adelong.

350 to 380 inclusive were admitted.

381, E. R. Satchell, was disallowed, the signature being by Mrs. Satchell, Mr. Satchell being on his way to China.

382 to 397 inclusive were allowed.

398, J. and W. Stevens. To this exception was taken by Mr. Pigott on the ground that they were not entitled to sign twice, James Stevens and Walter Stevens having each signed for properties of which they were distinct owners. To this exception I have to submit for your consideration that the name of J. and W. Stevens be allowed, as it appears on the municipal electoral roll after that roll had been prepared, completed, and certified to in accordance with the provisions of the Municipalities Act. If the name be disallowed, then I would submit that it also be disallowed as standing against the petition. Any interference with the electoral roll as certified to would, I submit, be an interference with the functional action of the Revision Court. The objection to the name appearing on the roll should have been made at the period and in the manner provided for by the Act.

399 to 415 inclusive were allowed.

416, Thomas Moore, was disallowed, as it was signed by Edwin Moore, and it was not so stated in the declaration, though the name was signed with Thomas Moore's authority.

417 to 431 were admitted.

432, Edward S. Daniel, was objected to, as the Daniel on the roll was William and not Edward S.; but in a communication from Mr. Daniel, dated 28th September, 1892, that gentleman affirms that he has been living at Mossman's Bay for five or six years, and that his rates are paid by the Ranger's Estate syndicate. He further affirms that the initials on the roll are erroneous. Mr. Daniel personally informed me that for the last four years he has received rate-papers, and upon these papers the rates have been paid. I therefore propose to allow the name.

433 to 533 inclusive were admitted.

534, W. Short, was disallowed, as the declaration by Mr. Dent purports to be made before himself, which appears both a physical and a mental impossibility.

535 to 540 are all disallowed, as these signatures are not accompanied by the usual declaration.

It

It will thus be seen that the signatures allowed number 529. The total number of names on the electoral roll is 746, two-thirds of which amounts to 497, giving a balance in favour of the petition of 32.

I would submit that the adjustment of debts, liabilities, and all other claims be carried out before further action is taken.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE LEWIS.

The adjustment of the accounts is the ordinary procedure in such cases under the law. The allowance or disallowance by the Minister will follow.—C.W., 13/10/92. Approved.—G.R.D., 14/10/92. The District Government Officer, B.C., 14/10/92.—C.W., P.U.S.

The Mayor of North Sydney to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Borough of North Sydney, Town Hall, 24 October, 1892.

In reference to the petition in favour of the division of this borough and the creation of Mossman's Ward into a separate municipality, I desire to call attention to my letter of the 15th July last, in which I urged that the petition should not be granted.

It would, I maintain, be in the highest degree detrimental to the best interests of this district, that it should again be subdivided. The union of the old Boroughs of St. Leonards, East St. Leonards, and Victoria, took some time to accomplish, and the old jealousies and divisions having by that act been swept away, it would be a public misfortune to have them again revived. It is but two years since the amalgamation was effected, and the full fruits of that union have not yet had time to mature.

I desire especially to call your attention to those portions of my letter relating to the amalgamation, to the public debt of the borough, and to the insufficiency of the declarations verifying the signatures to the petition. Any one of these, I respectfully submit, furnishes strong reasons for rejecting the petition; and whether it has the requisite number of signatures or not, the question should be decided on its merits, which, in this case, I most strongly urge, indicate that the dismemberment of the borough should not be permitted.

In order that you may judge as to whether this portion of the borough is being fairly treated, I forward a statement showing the division of the receipts and expenditure among the different wards for the half-year ending 1st August, 1892.

The proportion of management expenses charged to this ward for the same period was only £183 8s. 6d., composed of the following items:—Advertising, £13 3s. 1d.; miscellaneous expenses, £10 2s. 4d.; printing and stationery, £32 18s. 8d.; Town Hall, £6 17s.; salaries, £99 11s. 5d.; election expenses, £11 1s.; interest on Town Hall, £9 15s., being part of item £27 19s. 11d. It is evident that if this portion of the borough be created into a distinct municipality every one of these items must be substantially increased. The assessed value of the ratable property in the various wards of the borough is as follows:—Kirribilli, £64,700 8s.; Victoria, £56,758 19s.; Belmore, £40,735 11s.; Tunks, £19,539 18s. 6d.; Warringa, £34,924 3s.; Mossman's, £31,363 8s.; so that from this standpoint Mossman's Ward, though the largest in area, is fifth in order of ratable value.

I therefore respectfully submit, that upon the merits of the case, when seriously considered, the petition must fail, and that the case is one in which the discretionary power which the Municipalities Act vests in the Executive authority should be exercised to prevent a public calamity not only to the district, but to the cause of local self-government.

I have, &c,

EDWARD M. CLARK,

Mayor.

Town Hall, North Sydney.

PERCY A. TEMPLE,
Treasurer.

The Council Clerk, North Sydney, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Borough of North Sydney, Town Hall, 26 October, 1892.

In reference to a letter from His Worship the Mayor, dated 24th instant, addressed to the Colonial Secretary, on the subject of the proposed separation of Mossman's Ward, and its creation into a distinct municipality, I am directed to forward a copy of a letter from Mr. G. J. Cohen, one of the largest creditors of the borough, upon the subject, for the information of the Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,

W. BARNETT SMITH,
Town Clerk.

[Enclosure.]

The Mayor, Borough of North Sydney,—

Dear Sir,

10, Spring-street, Sydney, 25 October, 1892.

I notice that there is a movement to separate the borough into different wards, and that Mossman's Ward is to be made into a separate borough. I would like to know how this will affect the loan of £35,000 recently floated, as when I took up part I depended upon the responsibility of the whole municipality.

Yours, &c.,

GEORGE J. COHEN.

If Mossman's Ward is allowed to withdraw, what is to prevent the others becoming separate boroughs, and leaving the burden of debt to one small municipality, with resources insufficient to pay the interest.—G.C.

Edward M. Clark, Esq., M.P., to The Chief Secretary.

My Dear Sir George,

Parliament House, Sydney, 26 October, 1892.

I desire to bring under your immediate attention the important question now before your Department of the separation of Mossman's Ward from the important Borough of North Sydney. I called upon you this morning in hopes of having a chat with you on the subject, but you were engaged, and as I may not be in town again for a few days, I take the opportunity of writing, as the matter is a very urgent one. Some correspondence has been addressed to you lately on the subject from the Council, and among the latest is a protest from Mr. G. J. Cohen (David Cohen & Co.), who is a creditor of the Council. The papers in the matter are very important, and I shall be glad if you will peruse them. My reasons for approaching you on the subject is the fact that you are intimately acquainted with the history of municipal matters at St. Leonards, and was always an advocate for the amalgamation of the three petty boroughs that did exist there, and as scarcely two years have passed away since they merged into the Borough of North Sydney, it is, with every justice, urged that there is no reason for the separation, and the whole papers will show that. Then there is the danger of this innovation for, as the borough is divided into six wards, the slightest discontent will only lead to the preparation of a separation petition, so that the prospects are that, instead of having, as we did have, three petty boroughs, the danger would be increased by their conversion to six. In conclusion, the Council is now asking for a consideration of this matter on its merits, and I have approached you so that in the great amount of business you have in connection with departmental and other important duties, this very important matter may not be lost sight of by you.

Yours, &c.,

EDWARD M. CLARK.

The District Government Officer, B.C., 28/10/92.—C.W.

Mr. G. F. M. Withers to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Mossman's Bay, North Sydney, 25 November, 1892.

Re Mossman's Ward separation petition, I have the honor on behalf of the petitioners to the above, to submit for your consideration the following:—

(1.) A deputation that waited upon the Honorable F. B. Suttor, at that time Acting Colonial Secretary, on 29th July, 1892, consisting of five aldermen, was not authorised by the Council to do so, and and consisted only of those known to be in opposition to the movement, those aldermen favourable to our petition not being present, nor invited. That when in Council a vote was taken upon the Mayor's minute with reference to separation, the voting was equal, so that one half the Council are favourable, and deem it the best course in the interests of North Sydney.

(2.) That the area sought to be separated is over 3 square miles, and, excepting the great Military Road, made and maintained by the Government, we are severed completely from North Sydney proper, and our interests are in no way identical, our communication with Sydney being by water.

(3.) That the assessed annual value of ratable property in Mossman's Ward is £31,363 8s. :—

General rate	1,568	2	3
Lighting rate	392	8	6
Arrears due	1,400	15	10
	<hr/>
Total assets	3,361	6	7
Less debit on 30th June, 1892	1,151	2	5
	<hr/>

Leaving £2,210 4 2 due to Mossman's Ward in the event of separation being granted, in addition to which we are entitled to a sum of £9,000, being our proportionate share of the loan recently floated. The amount of indebtedness of the six wards respectively is as follows :—

Owing by Kirribilli Ward	19,517	1	1
„ Victoria Ward	11,279	11	5
„ Belmore Ward	5,591	0	3
„ Warringa Ward	3,961	15	3
„ Tunks Ward	3,844	12	3
„ Mossman's Ward	1,151	2	5

These figures clearly show that our relative financial position is very satisfactory. The foregoing figures are taken from the published statements of the Council.

(4.) That your petitioners fail to see that there are any grave reasons for believing that the proposed separation will cause any undue disturbances either of the finances or representation in the Council. To avoid any such consequence the ward as a whole has been included in the petition for separation, and as the accounts of the borough are at present kept separate for each ward, the rights and liabilities of each can be readily adjusted. The fact of the recent amalgamation of the North Shore boroughs has been urged as an objection to separation, on the ground that it would only be undoing what has been with some difficulty accomplished. In reply, we respectfully urge that the separation of Mossman's Ward would have been necessary under any circumstances. Our position is that the former difficulty of working so peculiarly situated an area as the old borough of St. Leonard's has only been intensified by the increase of area caused by the amalgamation. The amalgamation of boroughs was only a necessary step in the readjustment of areas which we seek to complete by the constitution of Mossman's Ward into a new borough.

(5.) That, in the words of the engineer and overseer of the Council, the existing borough is too large for the active supervision of the various works to be carried out.

(6.) Our petition contains 540 signatures, all on the Municipal Roll, and we believe that the Act has in all particulars been strictly complied with. The fact that considerably over two-thirds of those upon the roll have signed the petition clearly shows that the desire is strong and general to have the management of the district in which they are interested in their own hands, and not in that of those who reside miles away, and have little or no interest in the locality.

I have, &c.,

Mossman's Ward Separation Movement.

Mr. Geo. F. M. Withers to The Chief Secretary.

Dear Sir,

“Withersleigh,” Raglan-street, Mossman's Bay, 28 November, 1892.
Re Mossman's Ward separation movement, I have the honor, on behalf of the petitioners to above, to ask you to inform the Mayor of North Sydney to furnish me with a copy of the relative financial statement, as asked for by Mr. Lewis, Local Government Officer, for the adjustment of accounts.

I have, &c.,
GEO. F. M. WITHERS,
Secretary.

Refer to Mr. Lewis. The District Government Officer, B.C., 12/12/92.—C.W.

As the subject contained in this letter is of a public, and not of a private or departmental character only, the information asked for should probably be furnished. The Principal Under Secretary, B.C., 13/1/93.—GEORGE LEWIS. Urgent.

Supply.—C.W., 30/1/93.

Mr. A. MacAlpine to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Mossman's Bay, 12 December, 1892.

Re Mossman's Ward separation, I have the honor, on behalf of petitioners, to direct your attention to certain questions to be asked in the Legislative Assembly this evening by E. M. Clark, a Member for St. Leonards, and at present Mayor of the borough, the object of such questions being apparently to obtain by indirect means, and while the petition is still being dealt with by the proper authorities, a decision otherwise than upon the merits of the petition.

I would respectfully point out that our petition was lodged upon the 30th April last, when the Local Government Bill had not been introduced to the House, and consider it most unjust to the petitioners to suspend it, pending the passing of the proposed Act. This

This inquiry might now have been finally dealt with had the borough council, through its Mayor, not seen fit to ignore the request of the Local Government Officer for a statement of accounts made over two months ago.

Action is now contemplated by the ratepayers of the whole borough, and which will be brought under your notice, showing how little sympathy the great bulk of the ratepayers have in the proposed establishment of gasworks, as contemplated by the present Council.

I would again, in the interests of all concerned, respectfully request that the inquiry be proceeded with early.

I have, &c.,

ARCHIBALD MACALPINE,
Chairman of Committee.

Refer to Mr. Lewis: The District Government Officer, B.C., 28/12/92.—C.W.

The District Government Officer to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Local Government Office, 13 January, 1892.

I have been informed by the Borough of North Sydney that there is a total amount of loan in debentures of £65,500.

From the correspondence, I infer that the loans were floated in two amounts, the first being £30,500, and the second £35,000.

Will you kindly cause me to be furnished with the authorities given for the contraction of the loans.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE LEWIS.

Separation of the Borough of St. Leonards.

14 January, 1893.

WILL you send to Mr. Clark, M.P., and tell him that I cannot withhold my consent to the separation of Mossman's Bay, my only excuse for staying my hand is that the gas question would be settled.

If the corporation intend to start real work I must separate the borough.

G.R.D.

It would be inexpedient, I think, to express an opinion in this matter until the adjustment of accounts is settled, as the municipality cannot legally be divided until this is done.—C.W.

The Hon. W. H. Pigott, M.L.C., to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Fitz-Evan Chambers, 28, Castlereagh-street, 9 March, 1893.

I am instructed by the Municipal Council of the Borough of North Sydney to bring under your notice certain facts in connection with the proposed separation of Mossman's Ward from the said borough.

You may perhaps be aware that the now borough of North Sydney was only about three years ago amalgamated by the inclusion therein of three boroughs, viz., St. Leonards, East St. Leonards, and Victoria. That borough has since been divided into six wards, one of which wards, being dissatisfied, is now petitioning for separation.

It would appear, clear from your desire to pass the Local Government Bill, that the policy of your Government is to consolidate and enlarge the areas of municipal government rather than to scatter them into small areas, thus encouraging wasteful expenditure in their management, and also giving opportunity for the formation of petty cliques; but independently of this there are other grounds which I am desired to lay before you, and they are:—Firstly, that from the commencement the whole proceedings for separation have been based upon a wrong and illegal foundation. The section of the Municipalities Act requires that a petition for separation from a borough shall be signed by "electors" of that borough. If you will look at the petition for separation in this case, you will see that it does not state that the persons signing it are "electors," but simply that they are "persons liable to be rated." You, no doubt, are aware that there are three classes of persons liable to be rated, viz., owners, lessees, and occupiers, but they may not be all electors entitled to vote.

I may mention that this question was raised by me on behalf of the borough of North Sydney at the inquiry held before Mr. Lewis.

A much weightier reason is that it will be impossible, in the present state of the borough and its finances, to satisfactorily determine the amount for which the two boroughs, when divided, will respectively be liable in respect of the debts which have been already incurred. There is a liability for moneys already borrowed to the extent of about £62,000. The loans have been contracted upon the security of the rates of the whole borough, and the residents of Mossman's Ward are as much liable for those loans as the ratepayers of all the other wards; but the effect of the proposed separation may be to free the residents of Mossman's Ward from any liability to the lenders of these moneys, inasmuch as, so far as I can see, it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for such lenders to sequester the rates of the proposed new borough, the security having been the rates of the Borough of North Sydney.

It will thus be seen that it would be grossly inequitable that a separation should take place unless there is some unmistakable and enforceable security given by the new borough for the payment of its share of the debts incurred. How this security can be given I do not see.

The Municipal Council of the Borough of North Sydney most respectfully urges that these considerations may receive the utmost attention at your hands, and that the seriousness of granting any separation under the above circumstances may be fully considered.

I have, &c.,

W. H. PIGOTT.

The

The Hon. W. H. Pigott, M.L.C., to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

Fitz-Evans Chambers, 28, Castlereagh-street, City, 18 March, 1893.

By instructions from the mayor of the Borough of North Sydney, I desire to bring under your notice the following facts with reference to the proposed division of Mossman's Ward from the Borough of North Sydney.

All preliminary questions as to the division of the borough have been discussed before and dealt with by Mr. Lewis, who has adjusted the accounts between the Borough of North Sydney and Mossman's Ward, and has ascertained that a sum of £3,284 8s. 2d. is payable by the Mossman's Ward to the Borough of North Sydney.

It must be understood that the Municipal Council of the Borough of North Sydney does not desire to offer any objection to the separation of Mossman's Ward, nor to raise any difficulties in respect thereof, other than what are necessary to protect the rights of the ratepayers of the Borough of North Sydney, and the creditors of that borough, and with that object they desire to point out that, as a matter of common justice to the Borough of North Sydney, the separation should not be allowed to take place until the speedy payment of the above sum of £3,284 8s. 2d. shall be secured to the Borough of North Sydney.

The only means provided by the Municipalities Act of recovering the above sum is under the last portion of section 18, by which you will see that the Borough of North Sydney would have to take proceedings at law against the new borough.

The probabilities are that the new borough will not have moneys in hand for the payment of the above sum for many years. In the meantime no interest is payable in respect of this amount, inasmuch as the Municipalities Act does not provide for payment of interest, and the Borough of North Sydney will, during that time, have to pay interest upon this amount to its creditors, who are now the creditors of the whole borough, and may also have to meet the claims of these creditors in respect of principal.

Under all these circumstances you will see how unjust it would be that the new borough which has had, and will still retain, the benefit of the use of the before-mentioned sum, should be in a position to delay the payment to the Borough of North Sydney for, perhaps, several years.

The Borough Council of North Sydney, therefore, respectfully asks that separation might not be allowed to take place until some means are devised by which the Borough of North Sydney will be secured the practically immediate payment of the above-mentioned sum of £3,284 8s. 2d. found to be payable to it.

I have, &c.,

W. H. PIGOTT.

Mr. Geo. F. M. Withers to The Chief Secretary.

Dear Sir,

Raglan-street, Mossman's Bay, 18 March, 1893.

Re Mossman's Ward separation: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of above, held last week, it was unanimously resolved that the name of Mr. E. M. Sayers be submitted for your approval for appointment as first Returning Officer to the new borough, and the name of Mr. Wm. Dind be withdrawn, as he is suffering from serious illness.

I have, &c.,

GEO. F. M. WITHERS,

Secretary, Mossman's Separation.

When the borough has been divided the name of Mr. Sayers as Returning Officer may be submitted, provided Mr. W. Dind voluntarily resigns, not otherwise.—G.R.D., 20/3/93.

The District Government Officer to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Local Government Office, 21 March, 1893.

With reference to the adjustment of accounts between the Borough of North Sydney and Mossman's Ward, I have to report that I have investigated the accounts from the balance-sheets submitted to me by the treasurer of the borough, and I find that since the date of amalgamation (31st July 1890), the sum of £35,000 has been obtained by loan, and, after considering all charges and the assets, which are enumerated on the enclosed list, I beg to submit that an award of £3,234 8s. 2d. be made as the liability of Mossman's Ward.

All rates due and outstanding accounts for removing nightsoil to be collected by Mossman's Ward, and any existing contracts or other charges due at or legitimately incurred since the date of the balance-sheets (6th February, 1893), should, I submit, be adjusted up to the date of proclamation in the Gazette.

I would further submit that the request contained in the letter from the solicitor to the Borough of North Sydney be complied with, viz., that the Borough of Mossman, when constituted, be requested to furnish the Borough of North Sydney with a cheque for the amount named.

All plans and sections of roads, streets, or other works within the boundaries of the proposed new borough (at present in the possession of the North Sydney borough), together with extracts from the minute-books, account-books, &c., having reference to Mossman's Ward, be furnished when required by that district.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE LEWIS.

The Principal Under Secretary to Mr. W. O. Skillen.

Sir, Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 17 August, 1893.
 In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, wherein you assert that a breach of the Municipalities Act was committed in connection with the first municipal election of aldermen and auditors of the recently constituted municipal district of Dungog, as conducted by Mr. Piper, the returning-officer, I am directed by the Chief Secretary to request that you will be good enough to supply me with full particulars as to the alleged violation of the law on the occasion.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Principal Under Secretary.

Mr. W. O. Skillen to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Dungog, 22 August, 1893.

Your communication, dated 17th instant, duly received, and contents are carefully noted.

Enclosed please find a resume of the correspondence which appeared in the Newcastle Morning Herald, concerning the breach of Municipalities Act, as committed by returning-officer, Mr. Piper.

Complying with your request, I would now endeavour to supply you with some of the particulars as to the violation of the law on the occasion :

Firstly,—You will note that Mr. George Walker was announced as sixth on the list on election day, when Mr. E. Piper, as returning-officer, publicly announced the result of election and state of the poll, Mr. Walker polling 56, and Mr. T. A. Jones, 55.

The announcement was made a little after 5 o'clock in the evening, and did not include the result of election of auditors, Mr. Piper promising to count auditors' voting-papers later on, and officially announce result next day at noon. This is a breach of clause 83, Vic. 31, No. 12, that unless it be found impossible the result of the election must be ascertained and publicly announced on the same day that the poll has been taken. Mr. Piper had ample time to conform to the Act, but did not do so.

Secondly,—Mr. Piper had the ballot-box removed from the polling-place (School of Arts) to his own house, without being secured or sealed up in any way, and there (no scrutineers being present) had the auditors' voting-papers examined and counted, recounting the voting-papers of Walker and Jones, finding another vote favouring Mr. Jones, and making him an equal with Mr. Walker. N.B.—No voting-papers were recounted but those of Walker and Jones, although two others, Bruyn, 91, and Dark, 90, stood in similar position.

Mr. Piper, in his letter to the Newcastle Morning Herald, admits that he has counted roughly on Friday, in presence of two scrutineers and poll-clerk, yet is satisfied with the rough count so far as fourteen candidates are concerned, but must recount votes of Walker and Jones carefully, no scrutineers being either invited or present with him in his own house.

This simply amounts to a violation of the Municipalities Act altogether; it never was intended that such a thing should or could occur under its application. For proof I would submit clause 87, Vic. 31, No. 12: "The returning-officer shall forthwith, after the declaration of the result of the poll, seal up all the ballot-papers and other documents as aforesaid, in one or more parcels, as may be found convenient, &c., &c."

Immediately Mr. Piper found the vote for Mr. Jones, he sent a message by his (Mr. Piper's) son to acquaint him of the fact, although it is after 10 o'clock, but although Mr. Walker is elected no message or communication is sent to him from Mr. Piper. The action speaks for itself; comment is unnecessary.

Thirdly,—At noon, on Saturday, Mr. Piper officially declares the names of the successful candidates, thus:—Mr. F. A. Hooke, Mr. D. T. Bruyn, Mr. H. C. Dark, Mr. T. Abbott, Mr. John Robson,—then comes a full stop. Mr. Piper is very much affected, but states that since declaring the state of the poll on the evening of Friday he has discovered another vote for Mr. Jones; he is very sorry that this should have happened, very sorry for Mr. Walker, but fearlessly and conscientiously he must now give his casting vote in favour of Mr. T. A. Jones.

I contend that at this stage, again, Mr. E. Piper violates the law of voting by ballot. Mr. Piper could not give his casting vote on Saturday to Mr. T. A. Jones after his public announcement on the day of election, neither could he, in the above manner verbally give, as returning-officer, his casting vote. Clause 80, Vic. 31, No. 12, "Provided that in the event of any two or more candidates, of whom one or more is to be elected, being found to have obtained an equal number of votes, the returning-officer shall have a casting vote, and shall state in writing which of such candidates shall be declared to be duly elected."

Lastly,—

Lastly,—I would remark that Mr. Piper showed by his actions throughout his bias in favour of Mr. Jones. Even suppose it had been lawful and just to recount voting-papers with result of finding another for Mr. Jones, still Mr. Piper could have saved Mr. Walker the amount of trouble and vexation involved through his mistake by giving his casting vote in Mr. Walker's favour.

I sincerely pray that you will weigh the matter well and give it your most serious attention, causing due inquiry to be made.

I have, &c.,

W. O. SKILLEN.

A.U.S.—C.W., 25/8/93. Mr. Piper had better be asked for an explanation, and furnished with a copy of this letter; then the matter should, perhaps, be referred to the Crown Solicitor to say whether any action is necessary on the part of the Government as regards the alleged informalities.—26/8/93.

MUNICIPALITY OF DUNGOG—ELECTION OF ALDERMEN.

Dungog, Friday, 14th July.

THE first aldermen of the newly-created municipality of Dungog were elected to-day. The following gentlemen were returned: Messrs. F. A. Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, John Robson, and George Walker.

Correspondent's memo. in the same paper, Tuesday, 18th July, 1893.

DUNGOG.

SINCE the announcement of the result of the municipal elections, the returning-officer, Mr. E. Piper, has discovered that there was a tie for sixth place between Mr. George Walker and Mr. T. A. Jones. The returning-officer unofficially announced Mr. Walker as returned on Friday evening, and Mr. Walker returned thanks to the electors. Notwithstanding all this, the returning-officer, at the official declaration of the poll on Saturday, gave his casting vote in favour of Mr. Jones. Mr. T. A. Jones is a resident of nine years' standing. Mr. G. Walker is a young man, the only son of one of the oldest pioneers of the district. The mayor is to be chosen on Tuesday. It is almost certain to be Mr. F. A. Hooke.

Mr. E. Piper's reply to the above in the same paper, on 22nd July, 1893.

MUNICIPALITY OF DUNGOG.

To the Editor.

SIR,—Under the above heading your Dungog correspondent has made a slight error, which I would ask your permission to rectify. The aldermen were not declared elected until noon on Saturday, and consequently their names could not appear in your issue of that date. On a rough count being made of the votes on Friday, the names appeared as wired by your correspondent, but, on a recount being made before the official declaration, the last two names (Walker and Jones) were a tie, and I gave my casting vote in favour of Mr. T. A. Jones, so that the elected candidates were Messrs. Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, Robson, and Jones.

I am, &c.,

EDWARD PIPER,

Returning-officer.

Mr. Skillen's letter in the same paper, 29 July, 1893.

To the Editor.

SIR,—Returning-officer, Mr. E. Piper, in his letter appearing in the issue of Saturday, 22nd July, endeavours to rectify what he designates an error in your correspondent's statement re his (Mr. Piper's) announcement of the result of the election and state of the poll on Friday, the 14th. Your correspondent was not in error. Mr. Piper admits, "on a rough count of votes on Friday, the names appeared as wired by your correspondent, but, on a recount being made before the official declaration of the poll, the last two named (Walker and Jones) were a tie, and I gave my casting vote in favour of Mr. Jones." Would Mr. Piper kindly give his authority for having the voting-papers recounted? The Municipal Act (31 Vic. No. 12), clause 83, states most emphatically: "The returning-officer, immediately after receiving the ballot-box, shall, in the presence of the presiding-officer and such of the scrutineers as may then be in attendance, open the ballot-box and examine the voting-papers, and thereby ascertain the result of the election, and he shall then publicly announce the state of the poll." This Mr. Piper did on the day of the election, placing the names as follows, according to the result of the poll:—Messrs. Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, Robson, and Walker. Clause 87 of the same Act reads thus: "The returning-officer shall forthwith, after the declaration of the result of the poll, seal up all the ballot-papers and other documents as aforesaid in one or more parcels, as may be found convenient." This Mr. Piper did not do, but had the box conveyed to his own house, where he recounts the voting-papers, finding another vote in favour of Mr. T. A. Jones, making him equal with Mr. Walker. On the following day at noon he gave his casting vote in favour of Mr. Jones, so that the elected candidates were: Messrs. Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, Robson, and Jones. Would Mr. Piper kindly state did he recount all the voting-papers—those declaring in favour of Messrs. Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, and Robson,—or did he only count the voting-papers of Walker and Jones?

Trusting that Mr. Piper will please rectify any slight error in the above,

I am, &c.,

W. O. SKILLEN,

Nominator of George Walker.

Mr. Piper's reply to Mr. Skillen, same paper, 3rd August, 1893, under heading "Current News."

MR. EDWARD PIPER, returning-officer at the first municipal election in Dungog, writes as follows:—"In your issue last Saturday Mr. W. O. Skillen, of Dungog, asks me for certain information in connection with the above. In reply, I may state that I only live about 100 yards from Mr. Skillen, and if he is anxious for the information, and will call on me, I shall be most happy to answer him to the best of my ability, and give him what information he may require. I have neither the time nor inclination to enter into a newspaper controversy on the subject. I can occupy my time more profitably than that."

In transmitting herewith for your information a copy of a communication received from Mr. W. O. Dungog, 31 August, 1893.

In justice to me, I think I should have a copy of the same, so that I can answer and report in full.

The Principal Under Secretary to Mr. E. Piper.

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 5 September, 1893.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 31st ultimo, I am directed by the Chief Secretary to inform you that only one communication in addition to that already supplied you has been received from Mr. W. O. Skillen regarding an alleged breach of the Municipalities Act in connection with the recent first municipal election at Dungog, a copy of which I now enclose for your perusal.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Principal Under Secretary.

Dated 15th
August, 1893.

Mr. E. Piper to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Dungog, 7 September, 1893.

In reply to yours of the 30th August, in reference to Mr. Skillen's communications as to my alleged breach of the Municipalities Act in connection with the recent municipal election at Dungog, I beg most respectfully to reply as follows:—

The election took place on Friday, 14th July, and counting the votes for aldermen, with poll-clerk and two scrutineers, I found them as follows:—Hooke, 111; Bruyn, 91; Dark, 90; Abbott, 87; Robson, 75; Walker, 56; Jones, 55; and so on down to seven votes. I then, from the steps of the School of Arts, told the electors assembled that I would give them a rough count of the votes, but that they were not to consider them correct or official, as I would go over them carefully again and give them officially the following day at noon. I gave them as above, and did not, as stated by Mr. Skillen, declare the first six elected. It being then nearly dark, and a winter evening, I did not think I was violating any principle by telling the poll-clerk and scrutineers that I would recount the votes again in the evening at my own house, and also those of the auditors. Mr. Skillen says I had ample time to count all the votes. Perhaps Mr. Skillen could have done so, but I certainly worked as hard as I possibly could, and could not get them done in time. I may mention that the number of votes polled was double that expected, and, there being twenty-one candidates, it was no easy matter to go through 332 papers containing 3,486 names.

Secondly.—Mr. Skillen says I had the ballot-box removed from the School of Arts to my own house without being secured or sealed in any way. This is a glaring falsehood, as all the papers were securely locked up inside of two ballot-boxes, each with separate key (Parliamentary ballot-boxes borrowed for the occasion). They were locked in the presence of the poll-clerk and two scrutineers, and the keys never left my possession at any time. Where Mr. Skillen gets his information that they were not secured I cannot say, unless it emanated in his own brain. The boxes were never opened again until the poll-clerk arrived, and were then unlocked in his presence. Mr. Skillen says I recounted the votes (implying that no one else was present). This is another falsehood. It was no fault of mine that the scrutineers were not present also; I fully expected they would be. Mr. Skillen forgets they were not paid officers of mine, and I could not insist on their coming. Mr. Skillen says I recounted the votes, finding another for Mr. Jones, in plain terms meaning to imply that I manufactured one for him, and, as a clincher, he says no voting-papers were counted but those of Walker and Jones. He must have drawn on his imagination again, for I do not know where else he got his information. I assert most emphatically that the other papers were counted, and that not once or twice, but three or four times, so as to make things doubly sure. And I may here state that they were again counted next morning before the declaration of the poll, the poll-clerk and both scrutineers being then present, and as all four of the electoral rolls corresponded (the scrutineers having taken theirs home with them) they were perfectly satisfied that a wrong count was made in the first instance, and then the three with myself signed the official returns as follows:—Hook, 111; Bruyn, 91; Dark, 90; Abbott, 87; Robson, 75; Jones, 56; Walker, 56. This document is also with the official papers now. I had the papers conveyed to my own house for safety, as I thought them safer there than in a public building. Further on Mr. Skillen says I was satisfied as far as the rough count was concerned with the fourteen candidates, but must recount the other two (Walker and Jones), no scrutineers being present, keeping in the background the fact that the poll-clerk was there the whole time, but it does not suit him to mention this fact. In the next paragraph of Mr. Skillen's letter comes a lie so glaring and so miserably mean and contemptible that I can scarcely find words to answer it. He says immediately I found the vote for Mr. Jones I sent a message to him by my son, acquainting him of the fact, but did not send word to Mr. Walker, finishing up with the sneering remark, "This action speaks for itself; comment is needless." This last item I deny from beginning to end, and am prepared to prove it a lie without the slightest foundation. I doubt if any one but Mr. Skillen would believe me guilty of so mean an action. The facts of the case simply are that my son overheard me remark that we had found that the votes were a tie, and that I therefore had the unthankful task to perform of giving a casting vote. He then took it upon himself to go and tell several people about it, and boylke did not think he was doing any wrong in so doing. It was some weeks after before I even heard of it, as he knew well. Had I known I would not have allowed him to do such a thing. This is the plain truth, and in the words of Mr. Skillen himself, "Comment is needless." But even had I done so I fail to see what principle I violated.

Thirdly.—

Thirdly.—According to Mr. Skillen, he says at noon on Friday I officially declared the poll (no doubt he means Saturday, so I will forgive him this little error). He says I declared Hooke, Bruyn, Dark, Abbott, Robson, and then came a full stop, being very much affected, &c., &c. (Such childish nonsense as this is simply contemptible.) The position I was in was certainly not a pleasant one, having to decide between two men, both of whom I highly respected; but I gave my vote to the one I thought best suited for the position. And he then says I gave my vote verbally to Mr. Jones in contradiction to the Act (which says it should be done in writing). In this instance again Mr. Skillen's contemptible spite carries him into a fog. The casting vote was given in writing, and at the time being among the official papers, where it is now. No doubt this will be news to Mr. Skillen, and may be consoling to him. These facts he could have obtained if he had gone about it in a proper way and not sought to obtain them in an underhand manner.

And lastly, Mr. Skillen remarks that I showed by my actions throughout that I was biased in Mr. Jones' favour. This I again deny, and no one knows better than Mr. Skillen himself that I favoured Mr. Walker in his candidature almost to the extent of a breach of trust. Mr. Skillen says I could have saved Mr. Walker the amount of trouble and vexation involved through my mistake, by giving my casting vote in his favour. No doubt, had I done so, Mr. Skillen would have been satisfied, and the election would have been carried out in a very satisfactory manner, and he would probably have shook hands with me, and patted me on the back, while congratulating me on my efficiency. I think it right to mention the fact that on the day mentioned as the official declaration of the poll, Mr. Walker himself, the party supposed to be aggrieved, said publicly, in the presence of about 200 people, that he was perfectly satisfied with the result of the ballot, and gave me credit for giving my vote conscientiously in favour of Mr. Jones, remarking at the same time that he would come forward again in February. When thanking him (Mr. Walker) for his kindly feelings towards me, I said if he came forward in February I should be free to help him, and would certainly do so. This did not look like bias on my part.

In conclusion, there are some facts in connection with this very unpleasant business that I think it only fair to mention:

While acting as the champion of Mr. George Walker, Mr. Skillen keeps in the background the fact that he was himself a defeated candidate, having been defeated as auditor by a recent arrival in the district, in spite of the fact that Mr. Skillen, on nomination-day, offered his services gratis (if elected). It was, no doubt, base ingratitude on their part to reject him after such an offer, and this possibly is one cause of his biliousness, but I hope I am not accountable for this.

Mr. Skillen is a member of the firm, Skillen and Walker, of this town, rival tradesmen with myself, and the whole thing looks very much like petty spite. I have it from one, on whose word I can rely, that Mr. Walker said he would relieve me of the responsibility of a casting vote by retiring in favour of Mr. Jones, but that his nominator, Mr. Skillen, would not let him do so. I have been before the public of Dungog for over twenty years, and have held positions of trust and honour, and have therefore a public as well as a private character to maintain.

Mr. Skillen having sought to damage my character in this matter, I feel justified in speaking plain and at some length. It may be somewhat wide of the mark to mention the fact, but still I am convinced that Mr. Skillen's estimate of my character, as evinced during the election, is not shared by the public, for I have been congratulated on all sides for the efficient manner in which I conducted the election throughout. I may state that I knew nothing of the duties devolving upon me when I took the responsible position of returning-officer, and no one in the district could give me any information. I had simply to obtain it for myself, and I carried it out to the best of my ability, and to the satisfaction of all but one or two. I do not doubt for one moment but that I have made mistakes, which, to say the worst of them, were simply errors of judgment, and not wilful, or done with a wrong intention.

Re the newspaper paragraphs in connection with this election, they were sent as news to the paper by a Dungog correspondent, and of course I am not responsible for them, but thought I had a right to answer them, and put myself right with the public. I have very good reasons for not entering into a newspaper war with Mr. Skillen.

Apologising for taking up so much space, I will conclude, and, in the words of Mr. Skillen himself, "I sincerely pray that you will weigh the matter well, and give it your most serious attention."

What I have stated are simple facts, not mere hearsay surmises, as in Mr. Skillen's case.

I have, &c.,

Late Returning-officer, first Municipal election, Dungog.

Mr. Skillen has his remedy at law. It is not a matter for the Government to interfere with. Inform.—C.W., 15/9/93.

The Mayor of The Municipal District of Dungog to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Dungog, 9 September, 1893.

I have the honor to respectfully inquire if there is any probability of the last municipal election, held here in July last, being upset? My reason for asking is that I have heard the returning-officer, Mr. Piper, has been called upon for a report of the proceedings, and as our Council meet on Monday next I would like to know this week if such is the case, as our Council can then withhold important business awaiting further developments.

I have, &c.,

Sir, Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 16 September, 1893.
Referring to your letter of the 22nd ultimo, and previous correspondence, I am directed by the Chief Secretary to state that if you are of opinion that the recent municipal election at Dungog was illegally conducted it is competent to you to seek a legal remedy.

2. I am, at the same time, desired to point out that the question of the alleged illegality of the election is not one in which the Government is called upon to interfere.

41. No Mayor, Chairman, or Alderman shall speak upon any motion or amendment for a longer time than ten minutes except by permission of the Council.

44. If two or more Aldermen rise to speak at the same time, the Mayor or Chairman shall decide which of such Aldermen shall be first heard.

45. Any Alderman may request the question or matter under discussion to be read or stated for his information, or may require the production of any records of the Council bearing upon such question or matter which are readily accessible: Provided, however, that no such request or requisition shall be so made as to interrupt the discussion. Also, that if any such request or requisition shall appear to the Mayor or Chairman not to have been made bona fide, it shall not be complied with.

Mayor or Chairman may move or second motion, &c., and may address Council thereon.

46. The Mayor or Chairman may propose or second any motion, and such Mayor or Chairman shall have the same right as any other Alderman to speak once upon every such subject or amendment. The Mayor or Chairman shall rise when so speaking (unless prevented by some bodily infirmity from so doing), but shall be considered as still presiding.

Questions of Order.

Mayor or Chairman to decide points of order.

47. The Mayor or Chairman shall preserve order, and his decision on disputed points of order or practice shall be final, except in so far as the same may be questioned, as in the manner hereinafter provided.

Acts of disorder.

48. Every member of the Council who shall commit a breach of any By-law relating to the proceedings of the Council or to the preservation of order, or who shall move or attempt to move any motion or amendment embodying any matter as to which the Council has no legal jurisdiction, or who shall in any other way raise or attempt to raise any question, or shall address or attempt to address the Council upon any subject which the said Council has no legal right to entertain or to discuss, or who shall use any language which, according to the common usage of gentlemen, would be held disorderly, or who shall say or do anything calculated to bring the Council into contempt, shall be out of order.

Mayor, &c., may call member to order.

49. The Mayor or Chairman may, without the interposition of any other member of the Council, call any Alderman to order whenever, in the opinion of such Mayor or Chairman, there shall be a necessity for so doing.

*Any member may raise question of order.

50. Every member of the Council shall have the right of calling the attention of the Mayor or the Chairman to any motion, amendment, statement, argument, or observation moved, used, or made by any other member which such first-named member may consider out of order.

Mode of proceeding thereon.

51. A member named by the Mayor or Chairman as being disorderly, shall withdraw while the question of order is being discussed and decided upon, unless specially permitted to offer an explanation, retraction, or apology; but on obtaining such special permission such member may explain, retract, or apologise for the matter or remark alleged to have been out of order. And if such explanation, retraction, or apology be deemed satisfactory, no further discussion on the question of order shall be permitted. If any member, on being called to order, shall ask such permission to explain, retract, or apologise as aforesaid, the Mayor or Chairman may, of his own authority, grant or refuse such permission, as he may think fit, unless any member shall require the sense of the Council to be taken on this question. In such case it shall be the duty of the Mayor or Chairman to take the sense of the Council at once, and without discussion, as to whether such permission shall be granted. And when any such explanation, retraction, or apology shall have been made or offered by permission of the Mayor or Chairman, the latter shall in like manner decide, or, if required so to do, shall take the sense of the Council as to whether such explanation, retraction, or apology is considered sufficient. If such permission be refused, or such explanation, retraction, or apology be considered insufficient, the question of order shall be considered and decided before any further business is proceeded with: Provided that if such Mayor or Chairman shall have decided the question of order before any member shall have required the sense of the Council to be taken in reference thereto, such question of order shall not be reopened: And provided further that nothing herein contained shall be held to affect the right of such Mayor or Chairman to decide finally, as hereinbefore provided, upon any such point of order, after the same shall have been discussed.

Decision of points of order.

52. The Mayor or Chairman, when called upon to decide points of order or practice, shall state the provision, rule, or practice, which he shall deem applicable to the case, without discussing or commenting upon the same.

Motion out of order to be rejected.—Members to explain, retract, or apologise, &c.

53. Whenever it shall have been decided as aforesaid that any motion, amendment, or other matter before the Council is out of order, the same shall be rejected; and whenever anything said or done in Council by any Alderman shall be similarly decided to be out of order, such Alderman shall be called upon by the Mayor or Chairman to make such explanation, retraction, or apology, as the case may require.

Penalty for persisting in disorderly conduct.

54. Any member of the Council who shall have been named by the Mayor or Chairman as being disorderly, and who, after having been twice directed to withdraw as aforesaid, shall refuse to do so, or who shall persist in any line of conduct or argument or of observations which shall have been decided as aforesaid to be disorderly, or who shall refuse to make such explanation, retraction, or apology as aforesaid, when required so to do, or who shall be guilty of any other act of disorder, as defined in the forty-eighth By-law, and shall refuse to make such explanation, retraction, or apology as a majority of the Aldermen then present shall consider satisfactory, shall be liable, on conviction for the first offence, to a penalty of not less than ten shillings nor more than five pounds; and on second conviction for the like offence he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than one pound nor more than ten pounds; and on the third conviction and for every further conviction for the like offence he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than two pounds nor more than twenty pounds.

Power of Council to dissent from ruling.

55. Any Alderman who is dissatisfied with the decision of the Mayor or Chairman on any such question of order or of practice, may, by immediate motion, respectfully worded, invite the Council to dissent from such decision: Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be held to bind any Mayor or Chairman to put any motion to the Council which, in his opinion, is contrary to law.

Mode of Voting.

How questions are to be put.

56. The Mayor or Chairman shall put to the Council all questions on which it shall be necessary that a vote be taken, and shall declare the sense of such Council thereon; and he shall be at liberty to put any such question as often as may be necessary to enable him to form and declare his opinion as to the opinion of the majority.

Divisions.—Penalty for refusing to vote.

57. Any Alderman shall be at liberty to call for a division; in such case the question shall be put first in the affirmative and then in the negative; and the Aldermen shall vote by show of hands, and the names and votes of the Aldermen present shall be recorded. Any Alderman who shall be present when a division is called for, and shall not vote on such division, not being disabled by law from so voting, shall be liable for every such offence to a penalty of not less than ten shillings nor more than five pounds.

Protests.

Mode of protesting.—Protests to be recorded, but may, under certain circumstances, be expunged.

58. Every member of the Council (the Mayor included) may protest against any resolution or vote by the Council; notice of the intention so to protest must, however, be given at the meeting when such resolution is passed, or such vote is arrived at, and the protest itself must be handed or sent to the Council Clerk not later than seven days after such notice. The Council Clerk shall enter every such protest in the minute-book; but if, in the opinion of the Council, it be inconsistent with the truth, or disrespectfully worded, it may (by resolution on notice) be ordered to be expunged. In such case the expunction shall be made by drawing a perpendicular line with the pen through the entry of such protest, with reference in the margin to the resolution ordering such expunction.

Rules applicable to business in Committee.

59. The following By-laws shall (except as is herein excepted) be taken to apply to the conduct of business in Committee of the whole Council, namely By-laws 15 (except that it shall not be necessary that any motion or amendment in Committee shall be seconded), 16, 17, 18, 19, 36, 37, 40, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56, and 57.

Disorderly conduct in Committees.—Refusal to vote.

60. Whenever any member of the Council shall, while the Council is in Committee of the Whole, be considered guilty of an offence against good order within the meaning of By-law 51 it shall be competent for any Alderman to move that the Council resume its sitting, and that such matter be reported; and if such motion be carried such matter shall be reported accordingly, and an entry of such report shall be made in the minute-book; and whenever any Alderman shall have failed to vote on any occasion in Committee of the whole Council, as required by By-law 57, the facts shall be reported to the Council, and such report on such facts shall be duly recorded in the minute-book: Provided that in the case of an Alderman failing to vote as aforesaid, no special motion that the Council resume its sitting shall be necessary, but it shall be the duty of the Chairman of such Committee of the Whole, in making his report of the proceedings in such Committee, whenever such report may be made, to include in such report a statement of such failure to vote as aforesaid, and of the question as to which such Alderman has so failed to vote.

Decisions in Committee on points of order may be reported.

61. Whenever a decision upon any question of order shall have been given by the Chairman of a Committee of the whole Council, under the provision of By-law 47, any Alderman may move that such decision be embodied in the report to the Council of the proceedings in such Committee; and if such motion be carried, such decision shall be so embodied in such report, whenever the same shall be made.

How progress may be reported, &c.

62. Any Alderman may at any time during the sitting of a Committee of the whole Council move that the Chairman report progress (or no progress as the case may be), and that leave be asked to sit again at a later period of the same day, or on any future day; or that no leave be asked to sit again; and if any such motion be carried, the Council shall resume its sittings, and a report shall be made accordingly; but no discussion shall be permitted on any such motion, and if the same be negatived, the subject then under consideration shall be discussed before another such motion shall be receivable.

Reports of proceedings in Committee.—Want of quorum in Committee.

63. All reports of proceedings in Committee of the whole Council shall be made to the Council, vivâ voce by the Chairman of such Committee; and a report of such proceedings shall be made in every case, except when it shall be found on counting the number of members during the sitting of any such Committee that there is not a quorum present. In the latter case the sitting of the Council shall be resumed without any motion for that purpose, and the proceedings in Committee shall be considered to have lapsed: Provided that in making of any such report as aforesaid it shall not be necessary to report any such proceedings in extenso, but only to state the result, general effect, or substance of such proceeding.

How reports are to be dealt with.

64. All such reports of proceedings in Committee of the whole Council shall be recorded in the minute-book; but except as hereinafter mentioned, no such report shall be considered as adopted by the Council, nor shall any such application as aforesaid for leave to sit again be considered to have been granted by such Council until a motion shall have been made and passed for such adoption or for the granting of such leave. And every such motion for the adoption of a report or for the granting of leave as aforesaid and the order of debate on such motion shall be subject to all the same rules as other motions in Council and the order of debate on such other motions: Provided, however, that where a report shall have been made under By-law 60, of disorderly conduct in Committee, or under By-law 57 for failure to vote on division, or of any decision in Committee upon any question of order, such report shall, so far as it relates to such facts, be regarded and recorded as a statement thereof; and to that extent shall not, unless for the correction of a manifest error, be interfered with upon any pretext whatever.

Calls of the Council.

How call may be ordered.

65. A call of the Council may be ordered by any resolution of which due notice shall have been given for the consideration of any motion or matter of business before such Council.

Mode of proceeding.

66. The call shall be made immediately before the motion or business for which such call has been ordered shall be moved or considered. Such call shall be made as follows:—The Council Clerk shall call the names of all members in their alphabetical order; each member present shall answer to his name as so called; and if any members are absent a record shall be made of such absence; but if leave of absence to any such members shall have been previously granted, or if such an excuse in writing shall have been forwarded to the Mayor or Council Clerk, as a majority of the Council then present shall consider satisfactory, such absent member shall stand excused, and a record shall be made of such excuse and of the reasons for the same.

Penalty for absence without legal excuse.—Further call when question adjourned.

67. Any member of the Council who, having had notice of such call of the Council, shall not answer to his name as aforesaid, or who, being absent, shall not be legally excused as aforesaid, or who, if absent, and not so excused, shall fail to show that by reason of extreme illness or any other sufficient cause he has been unable to send an excuse in writing as aforesaid, or who, having answered to his name as aforesaid, shall not be present when a vote is taken on a motion or business as to which such call has been made as aforesaid, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty of not less than ten shillings nor more than five pounds: Provided that if the consideration of every such motion or matter of business be adjourned to a future day, there shall be a further call on the resumption of such consideration; and the provisions herein as to penalties for absence shall have reference to such further call. And if there shall be more than one adjournment this proviso shall be taken to extend to the resumption of the consideration of such motion or matter of business after every such adjournment.

Standing and Special Committees.

Standing Committees.

68. There shall be five Standing Committees, namely:—A Library and By-law Committee, a Committee for Works, a Finance Committee, a Parks and Commons Committee, a Lighting and Waterworks Committee. These Committees shall be re-appointed every year, at the first meeting of the Council which shall be holden after the election of the Mayor.

69. Each of the Committees shall consist of not less than three members, two to form a quorum.

70. The By-law Committee shall prepare, for the consideration of the Council, drafts of all such By-laws as may be required for the good government of the Borough. They shall also watch over the administration of the By-laws and of any statute of which the operation has been or may be extended to the Borough, and shall take such steps as may be necessary for the prevention or punishment of offences against such By-laws or statutes, and for the preservation of public health, order, and decency, and shall exercise a general supervision over the Free Public Library.

71. The Committee for Works shall have the general direction of all works ordered or sanctioned by the Council, and the general inspection of all streets, roads, ways, and bridges under the care and management of the Council. 73. The Parks Committee shall have the care, custody, and control of all public reserves and commons and other public places under the care and the management of the Council; and all works ordered or sanctioned by the Council to be made therein shall be under their general direction. 74. The Lighting and Waterworks Committee shall have the general direction of the lighting of the streets of the Borough, of the extension of mains and laying down of service-pipes, of the collection of the lighting rates, and of the revenue of the Gasworks, and generally of all matters connected therewith, and shall be charged with the general supervision of the waterworks, the reservoir, and the mains and service-pipes; of the supply of water and the imposition and collection of rates therefor; of the extension of mains, and the laying down of service-pipes; and generally of all matters affecting the supply of water to the Borough.

Special Committees.

75. Special Committees may consist of any number of members, and may be appointed for the performance of any duty which may be lawfully entrusted to a committee, and for which in the opinion of the Council a Special Committee ought to be appointed. And no Standing Committee shall interfere with the performance of any duty which may for the time being have been entrusted to any such Special Committee. The appointment of every such Special Committee shall be made by resolution of the Council; and it shall be incumbent on the mover of such resolution to embody therein a statement of the duties proposed to be entrusted to such Special Committee. The mover of any such resolution may name therein such members as, in his opinion, ought to constitute such Committee, or he may propose that such Committee consist of a certain number of members to be appointed by ballot; and in the latter case, or if an amendment to the effect that such Special Committee be appointed by ballot be carried, each member then present shall receive a list of all the members of the Council, from which list he shall strike out all names but those of the persons of whom, in his opinion, such Special Committee ought to be composed; and the Mayor or Chairman shall examine such list, and shall declare the result. And in the event of it becoming necessary, through an equality of votes, to decide as to which of two or more Aldermen shall serve on such Committee, such Mayor or Chairman shall so decide. The Council Clerk shall call a meeting of any Committee when requested so to do by the Chairman or any two members of such Committee.

Chairman of Committees.

76. Every Committee of which the Mayor shall not be a member shall elect a permanent Chairman of such Committee, within seven days after their appointment.

Term of service in Committee.

77. Appointments to the several Committees shall be for the whole municipal year. The appointment of every Special Committee shall be considered to endure until the duties for which such Committee have been appointed shall have been fully performed: Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be held to affect in any way the right of such Committee to remove any Chairman of such Committee, or to appoint another such Chairman in his stead, or to militate against the general provisions as to Committees in sections 109 and 110 of the "Municipalities Act of 1867;" and that so much of this By-law as relates to the appointment, powers, and duties of Committees shall be read and interpreted in connection with such last-mentioned general provisions.

Records of transactions in Committee.

78. The Chairman of each Standing Committee shall make or cause to be made, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, memoranda of all the transactions of such Committee, which book he shall, on ceasing to be such Chairman, hand over to his successor.

Emergent matters and necessary current expenses.—Expenses authorised to be reported.—Outlay to be in accordance with orders of the Council.

80. For emergent matters and for necessary current expenses during the intervals which may elapse between the meetings of the Council, outlays to the following extent may be incurred:—

1. By order of the Committee for Works, or of the Mayor and one member of such Committee, for repairs or emergent works, to the extent of five pounds.
2. By order of the Mayor for necessary current expenses, to the extent of five pounds.
3. By order of the Mayor and any two Aldermen—or of any four Aldermen—for any emergent purpose, to the extent of five pounds.

Provided that in every case a detailed report in writing of every such outlay shall be laid before the Council at its next meeting; such report to be signed by the Chairman of the Committee of Works, or the Mayor, or the Mayor and Aldermen, or the Aldermen without the Mayor, as the case may be, by whom such outlay shall have been authorised. Also that such outlay shall only be permissible in reference to matters coming strictly within the jurisdiction or functions of the Council, and that no outlay involving a disobedience or evasion of any order or resolution of such Council shall on any pretence be thus authorised.

All claims to be examined and reported upon by the Finance Committee.

81. All accounts and demands of money against or from the Council shall be examined and reported on by the Finance Committee, and certified to in writing as correct under the hand of the Chairman of such Committee or another member on his behalf, before any order shall be made for payment of such accounts or demands.

Certificate required with each claim.—Salaries and wages to be payable on Mayor's order.—Certificate to be attached to report.

82. No payment shall be so ordered unless there shall be a certificate memorandum from the Committee, Mayor or officer of the Council to whom the direction or guardianship of such expenditure properly belongs, showing that the demand is a legitimate one, and has been duly authorised or inquired into. It shall be the imperative duty of the Finance Committee to see that this requirement is fulfilled, or to report specially as to the reasons for its non-fulfilment, before recommending payment: Provided, however, that such special report as last herein mentioned may be embodied with a report by which payment of the amount in question is recommended. Provided also, that in cases of special expenditure under By-law 81, the report directed by that By-law to be laid before the Council shall, if the outlay shall have been lawfully incurred, be deemed a sufficient certificate. The Under Secretary for Lands, Sydney,—

Sir,

District Surveyor's Office, Tamworth, 20th September, 1893.

In accordance with your instruction of the 4th July, 1893, to report on the quantity, quality, situation, and suitability for settlement of the land in the resumed areas of the north-western part of the Central Division, I have the honor to furnish the following particulars with regard to the Land District of Narrabri, which appears to be the only part of the district under my control coming within the terms of your directions.

Quantity.—The total area available for settlement is about 830,000 acres.

Quality.—Of the 830,000 acres available, about 300,000 acres are inferior. About 280,000 acres are scrubby, but suitable for agriculture or fruit-growing, if cleared; excellent and abundant supply of water to be obtained from 12 to 15 feet sinking. About 150,000 acres are fair grazing country, capable of improvement by ringing, clearing, &c. Water supply in creeks, springs, and wells from 50 to 200 feet deep; good sites for tanks and dams. About 100,000 acres are good pastoral country, scattered in small areas through the counties of Nandewar, Jamison, Denham, White, and Baradine. Water is obtainable, as a rule, by sinking at depths of from 45 to 200 feet. Good tank and dam sites are also available.

Situation.—The land, other than the 100,000 acres, lies southerly from Pilliga, Wee Waa, and Narrabri, easterly from Narrabri, and north-easterly from Boggabri, at distances ranging from 5 to 50 miles. The population centres above enumerated are on or in close proximity to the Namoi River, the water frontage of the district.

Suitability.—With the exception of the 300,000 acres of inferior country the whole is suitable for settlement, provided the settlers are not afraid of work. The 300,000 acres are suitable for settlement under special conditions only, such as those which can be framed under the 37th section of the Crown Lands Act of 1889.

I have, &c.,
FRED. POATE,
District Surveyor.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

FOSTER'S CONDITIONAL LEASE, PARISH OF COFF, COUNTY OF FITZROY.

(RETURN RESPECTING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 22 November, 1893.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 11th October, 1893, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of papers in reference to Foster's conditional lease, No. 92-7,374 F, “Forest Department, parish of Coff, county of Fitzroy.”

(Mr. Ewing.)

The Crown Solicitor to The Under Secretary of Mines and Agriculture.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 29 August, 1892.

I have the honor to return herewith the papers relating to the cutting of timber on land held under conditional lease, submitted to me for advice,—

- (1.) As to the right of the conditional lessee to dispose of the timber on his land by sale or otherwise.
- (2.) As to whether Mr. Foster has any ground of action against the Department on account of the cutting and removal of the two cedar trees under the circumstances mentioned in the papers.

I have the honor to advise as follows :—

1. The rights of the holder of land under conditional lease as to the taking of timber are prescribed by section 98 of the Crown Lands Act of 1884. Such a lessee may take from the land comprised in his lease timber and other material, provided (1) that such land is not comprised within a timber or forest reserve, and (2) such timber and material is for building and other purposes upon the land, and such as may be required by such conditional lessee as tenant.

Under no other circumstances is a conditional lessee entitled to remove timber, and it is clear therefore that he has no right to cut such timber and dispose of it by sale or otherwise. The timber that he cuts must be for building and other purposes on the land.

It is stated that in the case referred to Mr. Foster, the holder of a conditional lease, has given permission to a saw-miller to erect a mill on his conditional purchase and make what use he can of the timber. In my opinion this is a breach of the conditions subject to which the conditional lessee holds his lease, and would render it liable to forfeiture under section 96 of Act, or he may be proceeded against under section 133.

2. It appears that a written permission was given to one Mr. Lee, the holder of a cedar license, to enter upon Mr. Foster's conditional lease to cut and remove cedar, and under this permission Mr. Lee entered and felled two cedar trees.

The authority for the granting of licenses to cut timber is given by section 115 of the Act of 1884. That section provides that it shall be lawful for the Governor to frame regulations for the issue of licenses to cut and remove timber on (inter alia) Crown lands whether held under lease or license or not.

Under

Under this section certain regulations were issued on the 2nd December, 1889, under which wood-cutters' and cedar licenses could be granted under certain conditions ; but such licenses do not extend to any lands held under conditional lease. (Regulation No. 4.)

It appears that no regulation whatever has been issued dealing with the question of the issue of permits to cut timber on lands conditionally leased, and in the absence of any such regulation no permit or license can be lawfully given to any one.

This matter came before the late Attorney-General, Mr. G. B. Simpson, in September, 1890, who advised as follows :—

“ I am of the opinion that under regulations properly framed in accordance with section 115 of the Land Act of 1884, as amended by section 3, and the Second Schedule of the Act of 1889, licenses or rights or permits may be issued to cut and remove timber, alive or dead, on land under conditional lease.”

From a circular letter of the Lands Department, of the 15th February, 1892, which is with the papers, it would appear that, although there is no regulation dealing with the matter, the Department raises no objection to lessees cutting timber for sale provided licenses are held. In my opinion this practice is not altogether regular. If it is intended to enable conditional lessees to cut and dispose of the timber on the lands comprising their lease, I think the matter should be dealt with by a proper regulation, framed, as indicated by the late Attorney-General, in accordance with section 115 of the Act.

In the case submitted I do not think that Mr. Foster will have any claim against the Department. I think that his remedy (if any) would be against Mr. Lee, who, without any proper authority, entered and felled the trees.

I have, &c.,
ERNEST A. SMITH,
Crown Solicitor.

 LEASE No. 318.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 17 October, 1893.

[Laid upon the Table of the House in answer to Question No. 8, of 17 October, 1893.]

 Question.

- (8.) DUDLEY COAL COMPANY'S MINERAL LEASE:—MR. SCOTT asked THE SECRETARY FOR MINES,—
 (1.) What amount of money has been expended upon the Dudley Coal Company's Mineral Lease, No. 318, 48 Victoria, portion 116, parish Kahibah, county of Northumberland, since the date upon which it was granted?
 (2.) Will he have any objection to lay upon the Table of this House a copy of the report of the Examiner of Coal-fields on the said lease?

Answer.

The Examiner of Coal-fields' Report on the Dudley Coal Company's Mineral Lease, No. 318, 48 Victoria, portion 116, parish Kahibah, county Northumberland.

ON 21st instant, accompanied by Inspector Dixon, I went to Dudley Colliery. Saw the Manager (Mr. Humphrey), and from him ascertained that on 28th August James Horn, John Greener, Alfrey Ritchley, William Rawlings, Joseph Rawlings, and Charles G. Watkin commenced a shaft on Mineral Lease 318, and after sinking it about 3 feet 6 inches deep and 15 feet in diameter, Mr. Croudace informed him that it was on the Durham Company's line of right-of-way, not yet constructed. Sinking was then discontinued there, and another shaft 15 feet in diameter was commenced, and is now sunk to an average depth of 7 feet. Sinking of it could not be continued until cribbing and slabs, &c., were got to secure sides of same. Five of the before-mentioned men have been on the mineral lease getting timber for the shaft, and I saw them at work on the 21st instant. Carpenters, when the colliery is not at work, are preparing pit-head frame, a portion of which is at the shaft. The Manager says that preliminary operations were commenced by him on 17th ultimo.

MINING ON PRIVATE LANDS BILL.

IN FAVOUR OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 27 September, 1893.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of miners and residents depending upon mining in the Hillgrove mining district of New South Wales,—

SHOWETH:—

That a meeting of miners was held at Hillgrove on the 24th and 25th of April, 1893, at which meeting the following resolutions were agreed to:—

- (1.) That a Petition be presented to Parliament craving the enactment of a measure for enabling legitimate miners to enter upon private lands in pursuit of their calling with the same facilities as now obtain on Crown lands, such legislation being, in the opinion of your Petitioners, urgently required for the following reasons:
- (2.) The dearth of employment for miners in this Colony at the present time would be considerably abated by thus extending the area for the operation of their industry, which, as now restricted to Crown lands, has been proved in recent years to be insufficient. To the knowledge of many of your Petitioners auriferous areas exist on certain private lands within certain districts, which the owners of such lands are either wanting in enterprise or in knowledge to work themselves, or else demand prohibitive tributes from miners willing to work them. The effect of this attitude is to prevent miners from disclosing discoveries they have made immediately adjacent to private lands, from which they are precluded under the present condition of the law from obtaining any benefit. To disclose discoveries obtained by a knowledge which has cost in many cases years to gain, when the benefit might be wholly appropriated by the owner of the surface, is deemed by your Petitioners too unfair to be expected.
- (3.) As it has already been affirmed by the representatives of the people in the Legislative Assembly that all gold contained either in private or Crown lands is equally the property of the Crown, and as such should be available to the holder of a miner's right, your Petitioners plead that the privilege of entering upon private lands to exercise such right should immediately be made legal by the passing of a Mining on Private Lands Bill in the Assembly, and that steps be taken to ensure the safe passage of the same through the Legislative Council.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray your Honorable House may be pleased to take the foregoing resolutions into your consideration.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Similar Petitions were received,—

- On 27th September, 1893, from certain electors and residents of Dudley, in the Northumberland Electorate; 163 signatures.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN RESIDENTS IN THE TOWN AND DISTRICT OF TAMWORTH, IN FAVOUR OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 3 October, 1893.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned residents in the town and district of Tamworth,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That in the opinion of your Petitioners it is highly desirable, in view of the present deplorable stagnation in trade, that every possible avenue of employment should be at once opened up.

That the immediate introduction and passing into law of a measure authorising mining on private property would undoubtedly result in the providing of remunerative labour for thousands of persons at present idle.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that your Honorable House will during the present session place upon the Statute Book a Mining on Private Property Act.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

No. 1.

Mr. E. Vanzetti to The Minister for Mines.

Form of application for permission, under section 28 of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine upon or under reserved lands.

Sir,

Forbes, 30 May, 1892.

By virtue of my miner's right of 30th May, 1892, I hereby make application for permission, under the 28th section of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine for gold under that portion, containing 3 acres, of the road hereunder described, such portion being more particularly defined on the sketch annexed.

See Appendix A.

I make this application subject to the notice of the 21st December, 1881, published in Gazette, No. 542, and I agree to accept the permission, if granted, subject to the terms, conditions, and restrictions set forth in such notice.

I have, &c.,

EUGENIO VANZETTI.

Description referred to.

Road commences at Wambat-street, and goes past the eastern boundary of G.L. 80, Britannia Gold-mining Company. Portion applied for commences at the south-east corner of the G.L. 80, and extends for 20 chains in a northerly direction. Width of road, $1\frac{1}{2}$ chain.

Conditions under which the application for authority is made.

1. The area upon or under which permission to mine for minerals or for gold, as the case may be, may be granted by virtue of an authority as aforesaid, shall not, except in special cases, exceed, in regard to coal or shale, 640 acres for each person; in regard to any mineral other than coal, shale, silver, and gold, 80 acres; and in regard to gold and silver, 20 acres.

2. In regard to mining for coal or shale upon or under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty of not less than 6d. per ton upon all coal or shale taken under such authority from any reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money; and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the coal or shale raised to date amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

3. In regard to mining for minerals other than coal, shale, or gold, under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty not less than five per centum upon the value of the ore raised from such reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient, require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money; and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the minerals raised to date amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

4. In regard to mining upon or under small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c., for coal, shale, or other minerals, the Secretary for Mines may require the persons to whom the authority is granted to hold a certain number of mineral licenses instead of paying royalty.

5. In regard to mining for gold upon or under any reserve, the Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom the authority is granted to hold such a number of miners' rights as shall appear to him necessary to represent a reasonable rent for the use of the land.

6. The Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom such authority is granted to deposit such a sum of money as he may think fit as security that such person will make good any damage that may be done to any road, street, or reserve, or to any adjoining property, by reason of the mine works carried on under or in connection with such authority.

The fee, £2 10s., may be asked for.—W.R.C., 6/6/92. Submitted. Approved, 7/6/92.
E. Vanzetti asked, 9/6/92.

MARKED off lease on Britannia. Made application 28th ultimo. My pegs taken out and destroyed by order of Vanzetti. Asked Warden's Clerk for summons. He refused to grant one. I appeal to you.

Forbes, 2 June, 1892.

Re Foster's pegs, in telegram of yesterday, I omitted to state that Mr. Vanzetti had lodged prior notice of intention to apply for same land, which he had duly marked out.

E. A. T. PERY,
Warden's Clerk.

It appears from the telegram herewith that Mr. Foster applied for a summons to enforce his rights under section 40 of the Mining Act, and the Warden's Clerk refused to grant the summons because Foster, not having then lodged an application and paid rent, was not in a position to proceed under section 40. Section 70, relating to the issue of summons, appears to give the Warden's Clerk no discretion in the matter. The question is, whether the Warden's Clerk should not have issued the summons, leaving Foster to take the consequences of having commenced proceedings too soon.

Approved.—T.M.S., 2/6/92. Inform Warden's Clerk, and tell Mr. Foster if he applies again the summons will probably be granted.—H.W., 2/6/92. Warden's Clerk, Forbes. F. Foster informed, 2/6/92.

Sir, Court-house, Forbes, 4 June, 1892.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 2nd instant (92-9,234), re removal of Foster's pegs, and in reply thereto to state that it was impracticable for me to issue the summons therein referred to, as the man (Foster) required it. He insisted in having it under the Mining Board Regulations in the first instance, and when told by me that he could have one for interference with gold lease on payment of rent, still persisted in requiring it as stated. He then wanted the summons against Mr. Vanzetti. Yesterday, however, when (on payment of rent) I issued summons, he required it against one Rimoldi, and after the issue pursued the bailiff in an endeavour to stop it. I have the honor to add that this man, who has on several previous occasions given trouble to both the Warden and myself, is no genuine miner, but one of a "trio" who live by "black-mailing" in connection with mining matters.

Application for Gold-mining Leases.

To the Honorable the Secretary for Mines, Sydney,—

Sir,

Forbes, 2 June, 1892.

We hereby make application for a gold-mining lease of that piece or parcel of land situated on the eastern boundary of an old surveyed lease (No. 80 on surveyed portion) containing 2 acres, of which we took possession on the 28th day of May, 1892, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of mining thereon and therein for gold for a period of fifteen years, by inserting posts set in L-shaped trenches at each angle thereof. The datum post is distant 1 mile in a southerly direction from the Court-house, Forbes.

Notice of our intention to make this application has been given in accordance with the Regulations in that behalf, and we hand herewith the sum of £2, being the first year's rent in advance of the said land, and £1 10s. to cover the cost of survey. And we hereby request that survey may forthwith be made of the said piece or parcel of land.

We hereby acknowledge that this application is made upon the distinct understanding and condition that if we shall abandon or fail to proceed with it, or if it is refused, the Secretary for Mines for the time being may deduct from the sum of £2 deposited as aforesaid any cost to which in his opinion the Crown may have been put in or about or in respect of this application; and this application shall thereupon become and be void, and the possession aforesaid shall cease and determine. And if the lease shall be granted we shall and will commence mining operations upon or in connection with the demised land within fourteen days from and after the granting thereof, and shall and will employ upon such land not less than two men during the first six months of the term thereby created, and not less than three men during the remainder of such term. And shall and will, at any time when called upon in terms of the Regulations relating to gold-mining leases to do so, execute and take delivery of such lease, or failing therein for a period of fourteen days after being so called upon we shall and will forfeit the said sum of £2 and all right, title, or interest in and to the said land and the possession thereof, and the said lease shall be forthwith cancelled.

Notice of Application and Deposit.

Sir,

Forbes, 2 June, 1892.

We have the honor to inform you that we have this day deposited with the Warden's Clerk at Forbes the sum of £2, being the first year's rent in advance of 2 acres of land at Forbes, for the purpose of gold-mining, and the sum of £1 10s., being the fees for survey of the said land. PETER McDUGALL.

The Under Secretary for Mines, Sydney.

No. 10.

Messrs. Foster, McDougall, and Party to The Under Secretary for Mines.

Sir,

Forbes, 4 June, 1892.

In answer to yours of the 2nd, in reference to the Warden's Clerk refusing me a summons on the 1st day of June for my being thrown out and the datum board broken and one of my posts chopped up by order of Mr. Vanzetti, a man named Gramaldi acknowledged to throwing the pegs out in presence of a constable and myself and others. I went to the Warden's Clerk on the 2nd, and he refused to give me a summons for illegal removing of my pegs. After a lot of consideration he would only grant me a summons for lost time in putting the pegs up again. He says there is no penalty for throwing out pegs. The case will be heard before the Warden's Court on Tuesday next. Mr. Vanzetti had an application to be completed on the 25th May. He failed to complete it, but posted another notice up on the 26th for the same ground and the same names. On the 27th drew the Warden's Bailiff's attention to it. He said it was illegal. We went on the 28th and marked 2 acres. Mr. Vanzetti has been carrying on this practice for years, and the working miner has no show. We hope you will see to this.

We have, &c.,

FREDERICK FOSTER, PETER McDUGALL, AND PARTY.

The removal of Foster and party's pegs appears to be a breach of Mining Board Regulation 116, and the penalty therefor is fixed by section 126 of the Mining Act. I see no reason why Foster should have been refused a summons.—H. W., 16/6/92.

Submitted. Approved.—T.M.S., 14/6/92. Mr. Warden Sharpe.—G.E.H. (for U.S.), B.C., 15/6/92.

Foster and party were granted a summons for trespass, and the case was dismissed without costs because the alleged trespass was committed before Foster and party had lodged their application (see section 40 of the Mining Act); and further, because another party had marked the same ground as a lease, and given the necessary notices before Foster's marking—by Vanzetti. Although a previous marking had taken place, and had not been followed up by an application, there is nothing in the Regulations to prevent re-marking, although the Minister could, and doubtless would, unless good cause could be shown, refuse to grant the lease. I may state that I had, before this dispute arose, taken steps to have Mr. Vanzetti's re-marking brought under the notice of the Minister. I was absent on duty when Foster applied for a summons, or he would have got one, and I have directed the Warden's Clerk to grant a summons in any case if the applicant insists on having one. In this case Foster has lodged an application for a lease, and Vanzetti and party have objected to it on the grounds, amongst others, that he (Vanzetti) had legally marked the ground, or part of it, and also that Foster and party's application included a 1½-chain proclaimed road. I may state that Vanzetti has applied to mine on the road, which application is referred to me for report. The fact is that Vanzetti and party found a reef, which appears to be rich, just inside the east boundary of the Britannia lease. This reef underlies out of the lease, and Vanzetti and party state that the reason they re-marked the ground in dispute was that they were not sure where the reef went, or if it was permanent. Foster and party wish to take advantage of the labour of Vanzetti and party. Mr. Vanzetti has been the means of expending something like £17,000 on the Britannia Mine, in machinery and labour. Foster calls himself a working miner; I think he deserves another title. The latter part of Foster's statement, that I advised him to let the matter drop, is not true. I explained to Foster and party why the case was dismissed, and they went away apparently satisfied. A man named Rimaldi threw out the pegs; and I certainly would have punished him if the law allowed it, and circumstances circumstances justified such punishment. He was obeying Mr. Vanzetti's orders, and the latter expressed his regret that he had so far forgotten himself.—E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden.

No. 13.

Messrs. Foster, McDougall, and Party to G. Hutchinson, Esq., M.P.

Dear Sir,

Forbes, 21 June, 1892.

We, the undersigned, ask you to see the Minister for Mines concerning our application for 2 acres on the eastern boundary of surveyed lease No. 80 on the survey peg. Mr. Vanzetti's notice of application on the 17th May to be completed on the 25th of May. He failed to complete, but on the 26th posted up another notice for the same ground, the road being within the pegs as before. On the 28th we pegged off 2 acres, as he was only dummyming the ground. There is very little use made of the road, and few people know of a road being surveyed there. We did not know at the time we pegged out the ground. We do not want to mine on the road at present, as there is ground between the old lease and the road that is inside our pegs. You will see on the tracing where we intend to sink, also where our pegs are placed. This is an old game of Mr. Vanzetti dummyming the ground, and locking it up against the working miner. We have known him hold 25 acres for seventy days for seven half-crowns, and other places in the same way. There has been four suspensions from work on the Britannia leases in fourteen months. The miners objected to the suspensions, but no notice was taken by the Warden of the miners' objections. Since the suspensions expired the labour conditions have not been fulfilled, only two men working for gold, six others quarrying stone and breaking on contract. On 31st May our pegs were thrown out and destroyed; datum board smashed out. Applied to the Warden's Clerk on the 1st June for a summons; was refused; granted on the 2nd June; case to be heard on the 7th. Warden dismissed the case; would not hear our evidence. We saw Mr. Sharpe since in his office. Pointed out penalty in the Mining Act. He said it would be no benefit to us if the penalty was inflicted, and advised us to let it drop. If it had been us that had thrown out Mr. Vanzetti's pegs, what do you think would have been our lot? Gaol. So you see we miners have no show with Mr. Sharpe, the Warden.

We remain, &c.,

F. FOSTER, P. McDOUGALL, AND PARTY.

Mr. Warden Sharpe for report.—H.W., 23/6/92. B.C.

The Regulation No. 28 allows applicants for a lease to mine at their own risk. I think labour would be wasted except on the road which Foster and party have no permit for. In order that the lease application 235, Forbes, and objections may be dealt with as quickly as possible, survey should be made to show position of road, the land applied for by Foster and party, and the land applied for by Vanzetti and party under a permit. I have no doubt that the District Surveyor will have the survey made at once, if he is requested to do so. I should like to be informed before the survey is made. I may add that Foster and party's statement that I refused to hear his evidence is not true. I told them that it was no use taking further evidence, as I must dismiss the case on the facts then laid before me.—E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden. The Under Secretary for Mines, B.C., 8/7/92.

The Chief Mining Surveyor will perhaps be good enough to ask District Surveyor to have these surveys completed as soon as possible.—G.E.H., 20/7/92. The Chief Mining Surveyor, 20/7/92. [Enclosures.]

Gentlemen,

Forbes, 16 June, 1892.

Please take notice that I have this day lodged with the Mining Warden, Forbes, an objection to your application for a gold-mining lease of 2 acres, adjoining the eastern boundary of the Britannia lease, on the following grounds, viz. :-

1st. That the land applied for by you had been taken possession of two days before you posted up your notice of intention to apply by W. Haselhurst and myself.

2nd. That the lease applied for by you includes a surveyed road.

Messrs. Foster and McDougall.

Yours truly,

E. VANZETTI.

Would you kindly ask the Minister if we could go to work in face of this objection on the place marked on the tracing, as we are idle, and oblige,

Yours, &c.,

F. FOSTER, P. McDOUGALL, AND PARTY.

G. F. Hutchinson, Esq., M.P., to The Minister for Mines.

Sir,

Forbes, 2 July, 1892.

I have the honor to enclose herewith an objection by Messrs. Foster and McDougall, of Forbes, miners of Forbes, against application dated 30th May, 1892, under section 28, Mining Act, made by E. Vanzetti. I spoke about Foster and Company's claim when in Sydney last week, and mentioned that their application for lease included a road, which, I was informed, was not material. I asked that these people be allowed to proceed with their work on the said claim and I lodged letters with Under Secretary having reference to this particular application. I trust that no impediment will be placed, or objection entertained, against Foster and McDougall. It would appear that Vanzetti's application under section 28 is made only to circumvent Foster and McDougall, and render difficulty to them in the working of the lease they have applied for.

I have, &c.,

G. F. HUTCHINSON.

[Enclosure.]

Sir,

Forbes, 2 July, 1892.

We, the undersigned, wish to object to this application on the following grounds:—1st. The ground from the south-east corner of portion G.L. 80, Britannia, is inside of our pegs; we pegged the ground out on the 28th May, and completed the application on the 2nd day of June. 2nd. All the road that Vanzetti has applied for in his application is in the 10 acres that he was dummiesing.

No. 16.

The District Surveyor, Forbes, to The Under Secretary for Lands.

4 July, 1892.

So far as I am aware, there is no objection to granting this application, provided proper precautions are taken to ensure the public safety whilst the work is in progress, and that after working has ceased the shafts or excavations are filled up level with the surface.

As the road is within the municipality, and has been cleared by the Council, it is recommended that the matter be referred to that body.

District Surveyor.

The Under Secretary for Mines.—J.L. (for U.S.), B.C.; Lands, 7/7/92.

Form of application for permission, under section 28 of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine upon or under reserved lands.

The Honorable the Secretary for Mines, Sydney,—

Sir,

Forbes, 30 May, 1892.

By virtue of my miner's right of 30th May, 1892, I hereby make application for permission, under the 28th section of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine for gold under that portion containing 3 acres of the road hereunder described, such portions being more particularly defined on the sketch annexed.

I make this application, subject to the notice of the 21st December, 1881, published in Gazette No. 542, and I agree to accept the permission, if granted, subject to the terms, conditions, and restrictions set forth in such notice.

I have, &c.,

EUGENIO VANZETTI.

Description referred to.

Road commences at Wambat-street, and goes past by the eastern boundary of gold lease 80 (Britannia Gold-mining Company, Limited). Portion applied for commences at the south-east corner of gold lease 80, and extends for 20 chains in a northerly direction. Width of road, 1½ chain.

Conditions

Appendix C.

Conditions under which the application for authority is made.

1. The area upon or under which permission to mine for minerals or for gold, as the case may be, may be granted by virtue of an authority as aforesaid, shall not, except in special cases, exceed, in regard to coal or shale, 640 acres for each person; in regard to any mineral other than coal, shale, silver, and gold, 80 acres; and in regard to gold and silver, 20 acres.

2. In regard to mining for coal or shale upon or under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty of not less than 6d. per ton upon all coal or shale taken under such authority from any reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money; and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the coal or shale raised to date, amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

3. In regard to mining for minerals other than coal, shale, or gold, under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty not less than 5 per centum upon the value of the ore raised from such reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient, require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money, and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the minerals raised to date amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

4. In regard to mining upon or under small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c., for coal, shale, or other minerals, the Secretary for Mines may require the persons to whom the authority is granted to hold a certain number of mineral licenses instead of paying royalty.

5. In regard to mining for gold upon or under any reserve, the Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom the authority is granted to hold such a number of miner's rights as shall appear to him necessary to represent a reasonable rent for the use of the land.

6. The Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom such authority is granted to deposit such a sum of money as he may think fit as security that such person will make good any damage that may be done to any road, street, or reserve, or to any adjoining property, by reason of the mine works carried on under or in connection with such authority.

Form of application for permission, under section 28 of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine upon or under reserved lands.

The Honorable the Secretary for Mines, Sydney,—
Sir,

Forbes, 30 May, 1892.

By virtue of my miner's right of 30th May, 1892, I hereby make application for permission, under the 28th section of the Mining Act, 1874, to mine for gold under that portion containing 3 acres, of the road hereunder described, such portions being more particularly defined on the sketch annexed.

I make this application subject to the notice of the 21st December, 1881, published in Gazette No. 542, and I agree to accept the permission, if granted, subject to the terms, conditions, and restrictions set forth in such notice.

I have, &c.,

EUGENIO VANZETTI.

Description referred to.

Road commences at Wambat-street and goes past by the eastern boundary of gold-lease 80 (Britannia Gold-mining Company, Limited). Portion applied for commences at the south-east corner of gold-lease 80 ; extends for 20 chains in a northerly direction. Width of road, 1½ chain.

Conditions under which the Application for Authority is made.

1. The area upon or under which permission to mine for minerals or for gold, as the case may be, may be granted by virtue of an authority as aforesaid, shall not, except in special cases, exceed, in regard to coal or shale, 640 acres for each person ; in regard to any mineral other than coal, shale, silver, and gold, 80 acres ; and in regard to gold and silver, 20 acres.

2. In regard to mining for coal or shale upon or under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty of not less than 6d. per ton upon all coal or shale taken under such authority from any reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money ; and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed ; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the coal or shale raised to date amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

3. In regard to mining for minerals other than coal, shale, or gold under any reserve (other than small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c.), the Secretary for Mines may impose a royalty not less than 5 per centum upon the value of the ore raised from such reserve, and may fix the times for payment of such royalty, and may in any case in which it may appear to him expedient, require the persons to whom the authority is granted to pay periodically a certain fixed sum of money ; and so long as such sum exceeds the royalty reserved under the authority, no further sum by way of royalty will be claimed ; but if at any time, upon adjustment, it appears that the royalty reserved upon the minerals raised to date amounts to more than has been received to such date by such periodical payments, the difference may be thereupon claimed.

4. In regard to mining upon or under small reserves, such as roads, streets, &c., for coal, shale, or other minerals, the Secretary for Mines may require the persons to whom the authority is granted to hold a certain number of mineral licenses instead of paying royalty.

5. In regard to mining for gold upon or under any reserve, the Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom the authority is granted to hold such a number of miners' rights as shall appear to him necessary to represent a reasonable rent for the use of the land.

6. The Secretary for Mines may require the person to whom such authority is granted to deposit such a sum of money as he may think fit as security that such person will make good any damage that may be done to any road, street, or reserve, or to any adjoining property, by reason of the mine works carried on under or in connection with such authority.

No. 23.

Mr. Warden Sharpe to The Under Secretary for Mines.

THE facts of this case are as follows :—On the 26th May last Mr. Vanzetti, the objector to the application in question, marked a 10-acre lease on or near the Britannia line of reef. On the 28th of that month Foster and party marked a 2-acre lease inside the 10 acres marked by Vanzetti. On the 30th May last he applied for a permit to mine on the surveyed road, which runs through the land in question, and abandoned the marking of the 26th May. The cause of the marking of this ground was that the Britannia Gold-mining Company were prospecting in the south-east corner of their gold-lease 80, on which they have expended a very large sum of money in machinery and other work, and found some rich specimens, but the reef appears to underlie under the road (see tracing with applications for permit). The applicants for the lease want this reef, and rely on the fact that Vanzetti marked the land twice, and therefore dummied it in defiance of the Minister for Mines' notice, levelled against re-marking and posting (Schedule 1, gold-mining leases). I do not think that this is a case of "dumming," and I am of opinion that gold-lease application should be refused, or, if granted, granted in a modified form, to exclude the road. I think that Mr. Vanzetti's application for a permit (herewith) should be granted for 360 feet along the road north-north-east from the south-east corner of gold-lease 80; that a deposit of £10 be required (see application annexed). The evidence taken before me on the 9th instant is herewith.

E. A. L. SHARPE,
Warden.

EVIDENCE.

In the Warden's Court, holden at Forbes.—Before the Warden.

Court-house, Forbes, 9 August, 1892.

Eugenio Vanzetti, being duly sworn, saith :—I am a chemist, and live at Forbes; I object to the granting of gold-lease application No. 235, at Forbes; I produce my objector's deposit receipt, marked "A"; I object to the application on the grounds stated in my written notice of objections of the 15th of June last, marked "B."

By F. Foster: I had nothing to complete on the 25th of May; I had on the 24th of that month; I had given notice of intention to apply for a lease; I did intend to apply, but my partners were unwilling and I let the application lapse; I marked again, or caused to be marked, the same ground on the 26th May; I did this because rich specimens were found by one Jones on the Britannia lease, and this made me re-mark the ground.

By the Warden: I let the first notice lapse because my partner would not go on with it; I marked a second time after two days, but I did not go on with this because I found I was on a road, and I then applied for a permit to mine, under section 28 of the Mining Act; I had no intention to dummy.

By F. Foster: I put my partner's name in, as the prospects were good in consequence of the specimens being found.

Taken and sworn before me, this 9th } E. VANZETTI.

E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden.

David Jones, being duly sworn, saith :—I am a miner, and live at Forbes; I remember the 25th of May last; I told Mr. Vanzetti I had found some good specimens in the Britannia lease; I marked a 10-acre lease on the 26th of May, about 10 a.m., in consequence of instructions I got from Mr. Vanzetti; I remember declining to go on with our first application, for which we marked on the 12th or 13th of May; I thought the prospects not good enough at the expiration of the ten days.

By Foster: On the 12th, 13th, or 14th of May we found the specimens; we marked that day; we marked again on the 26th May; I do not know the day of the week; I remember you coming down; you asked me how the pegs were situated; I do not recollect you making any remark about the way the ground was marked; I said nothing about my having paid my share of the money, and that Mr. Vanzetti had lodged an application.

Frederick Foster, being duly sworn, saith :—I am a miner, and live at Forbes; I produce my miner's right, and that of my partners; mine is dated 11th January last, and McDougall's the 18th of January last; I remember the 28th of May last; the lease application produced is mine marked "C," and bears the signature of my partner and me; we marked a 2-acre lease, in accordance with the Regulations, Regulations, putting in pegs, and cutting trenches the proper size ; on the 2nd of June we lodged our application, and paid rent and survey fee, for which I produced receipt ; we have complied with the Regulations in all respects ; I was aware that Messrs. Vanzetti and Hazelhurst had notices of intention to apply for 10 acres, which included our 2 acres ; we did not serve any notice, Schedule 1, on Messrs. Vanzetti and Hazelhurst ; I marked the ground because I considered that Messrs. Vanzetti and Hazelhurst were dummying it by re-marking, and not lodging any application to lease ; the first notice of intention should have been completed on the 25th of May, and on the 26th of that month another notice of intention to apply was put up at the Court-house, and at the Post Office ; the second application should have been completed on the 4th June ; Mr. Vanzetti states that the application should have been completed on the 24th May ; I say it was on the 25th May.

E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden.

Peter McDougall, being sworn, saith:—I am a miner, and live at Forbes ; I am one of the applicants for application 235, Forbes, which has been objected to by Mr. Vanzetti ; I marked the ground because it had been marked twice by Vanzetti and party, without any application being lodged ; I see the paper produced, marked D ; the dates are correct.

By Mr. Vanzetti : I intended to work the ground ; I was not aware that there was a road where we marked the lease of 2 acres.

Thomas Bruce, being duly sworn, saith :—I am a miner, and live at Forbes ; I remember the 27th of May last ; I was at the Britannia ; I saw some lease pegs ; I did see these pegs before the 27th of that month ; I saw a notice of application to lease the 10 acres next the Britannia, and the application was to be lodged on the 25th May ; on the 26th of that month, I saw another notice of intention to apply, with the names Vanzetti and Hazelhurst ; I heard Jones say Mr. Vanzetti had paid for the first application and completed it ; McDougall said he had not ; Jones said something about having paid his share of the lease to Vanzetti.

By Mr. Vanzetti : You did get a verdict against me in the last District Court.

Minute on Warden's Report on evidence.

23 August, 1892.

I REGRET to say I cannot agree with the Warden's view of Mr. Vanzetti's conduct. The evidence goes to show that the land was taken possession of on or before the 14th May, and notice posted of intention to apply to lease on the 25th. No such application was lodged, because the prospects were not good enough, but possession was retaken on the 26th, and notice of intention to apply again posted, but no application application was lodged; but in the meantime Mr. Vanzetti applied for authority under section 28 to mine on a road which formed part of the land. I think this application should be refused. The application to lease 235 should be refused, because possession was taken during the period within which Vanzetti and another had a right to apply for it, but beforehand notice should be given to Foster and McDougall.

G. F. Hutchinson, Esq., M.P., to The Minister for Mines.

Sir, Parliament House, 8 September, 1892.
I have the honor to direct your attention to the case of Vanzetti v. Foster and party, with regard to the latter's application for a gold-mining lease. It appears that application is to be refused on account of the ten days being still current at the time of pegging out. I am informed by Foster and party that the ten days of Vanzetti's application expired on the 25th May, 1892, and that Vanzetti went to repeg on 26th May, 1892, to dummy for another ten days, and on the 28th May Foster and party pegged and marked the lease, and sent in their application, so it will be seen that more than ten days elapsed, and Foster and party wish the lease to be granted, not refused, as I am informed by the Under Secretary it will be sent me enclosed copy of your regulation against dummyming ground. Hoping you will be pleased to reconsider the case, and grant the lease to Foster and party,

I am, &c.,

Subject :—Recommending the refusal of certain application for gold-mining lease.

Department of Mines, Sydney, 26 August, 1892.

It is recommended to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, that the application for the gold-mining lease of Crown lands specified in the annexed schedule be refused, because possession was taken during the period within which Vanzetti and another had a right to apply for the land.

His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council.

No. 34.

Mr. E. Vanzetti to The Minister for Mines.

Sir,

Forbes, 5 October, 1892.

I duly receive notification 92-14,787, to the effect that my application for permission to mine under the road adjoining gold lease 80, parish of Forbes, has been refused, I am also reliably informed that Foster and McDougall have been directed to reapply for the gold-mining lease to which I objected, and such notice was given to them before the notice of refusal of their application appeared in the Government Gazette, thereby rendering it impossible for me to take up the ground afresh, and lodge a new application in time. I am writing you under the impression that a great and undeserved injustice is being done to me, and I now earnestly entreat you to reconsider the matter. It is only by gross misrepresentations that the Minister for Mines may have been induced to refuse my application and to uphold Foster's, as I have done absolutely nothing likely to place me in contravention of any clause or regulation provided by the mining laws. I have no hesitation in stating that this is a clear case of blackmailing by Foster, who is a professional jumper, and by no means a genuine miner. Foster is the man who a few years ago jumped portion of the lease held by the Forbes Alluvial Company, thereby causing them to prospect the barren portion of their ground, and to spend £10,000 to no useful purpose. He in the meantime held the best of the ground, but never worked it for a single hour. Foster is a man who locked up many likely pieces of ground for years on Thompson's lead and other places, not working the leases himself, and preventing others from doing so. He is the man who was tried in Court of Law for stealing gold from his mates when he was connected with the Crinoline Gold-mining Company. It is probably owing to his being a unionist and an agitator amongst the discontented, that he has secured the good offices of our local member of Parliament in support of his application.

For the last five years my heart and soul and all my money have been devoted to developing the Britannia mine, where, through my endeavours, a sum of not less magnitude than £15,000 has been spent in searching for payable gold. When the old Company was dissolved I went deeply into debt to buy the property from them, and subsequently I have spent up to my last available shilling in trying to prospect it, convinced as I am that a payable reef exists there somewhere, which, if found, would give fresh impetus to gold-mining in this district, and assist me to recover from the heavy and disastrous losses sustained. When at last a reef was discovered by my miners in May last, which promised to be a payable one, it so happened that it was situated on the very boundary of my lease; in fact, about 5 feet from the surveyed line underlying outwards. Therefore, I secured some additional ground by notifying my intention to apply for a lease, and, later on, from information assumed at your Department, I was made aware that no lease would be granted that included a surveyed road (which would have been the case in this instance). I applied for a permit under section 28. No sooner Foster learnt of the discovery of a new reef than a plot was concocted by which he tried to despoil me, not of a portion, but the whole of the ground likely to contain the reef, by falsely representing that I was in contravention of the mining laws, and, to my dismay, I am now given to understand that he will get the ground. Against such apparent injustice I now enter a formal protest, and request that a full investigation of the case be made, and that it be judged on its intrinsic merits. I always acted in bonâ fide manner, and do not boast when I say that I have been instrumental in prospecting and developing scores of different places in this district, and I never marked out any land but had it worked. On the strength of this new reef I was able to form a local syndicate, with a capital of £500, which is now on the point of being transformed into a company, with a solid capital, for the purpose of working this new reef to advantage, and it becomes a matter of vital importance for me to secure this ground, to which in all equity I have an indisputable right. Through my sanguineness and eagerness in following mining pursuits, I brought myself on the brink of ruination, and this would be for me the fatal blow.

Trusting that my request will meet with due consideration.

I have, &c.,

E. VANZETTI.

Application for Gold-mining Leases.

To the Honorable the Secretary for Mines, Sydney,—

Sir,

Forbes, 6 October, 1892.

We hereby make application for a gold-mining lease of that piece or parcel of land, situated on the eastern boundary of an old surveyed lease (No. 80 on survey post), containing 2 acres, of which we took possession on the 30th day of September, 1892, at the hour of 2:40 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of mining thereon and therein for gold, for a period of fifteen years, by inserting posts set in L-shaped trenches at each angle thereof. The datum post is distant 1 mile in a southerly direction from Forbes Court-house.

Notice of our intention to make this application has been given in accordance with the regulations in that behalf, and we hand herewith a receipt for the sum of £2, being the first year's rent in advance of the said land, and to cover the cost of survey.

We hereby acknowledge that this application is made upon the distinct understanding and condition that if we shall abandon or fail to proceed with it, or if it is refused, the Secretary for Mines for the time being may deduct from the sum of £2 deposited as aforesaid any cost to which, in his opinion, the Crown may have been put in or about or in respect of this application; and this application shall thereupon become and be void, and the possession aforesaid shall cease and determine. And if the lease shall be granted we shall and will commence mining operations upon or in connection with the demised land within fourteen days from and after the granting thereof, and shall and will employ upon such land not less than two men during the first six months of the term thereby created, and not less than three men during the remainder of such term. And shall and will at any time when called upon in terms of the regulations relating to gold-mining leases, to do so, execute, and take delivery of such lease, or failing therein for a period of fourteen days, after being so called upon, we shall and will forfeit the said sum of £2 and all right, title, or interest in and to the said land and the possession thereof, and the said lease shall be forthwith cancelled.

Sir,

Forbes, 6 October, 1892.

I have the honor to inform you that I have this day deposited with the Warden's Clerk, at Forbes, a receipt for the sum of £2, being the first year's rent in advance of 2 acres of land, at Britannia Reef, Forbes, for the purpose of gold-mining, and the sum of £1 10s., being the fees for survey of the said land. The number of my application is 241, Forbes.

G. F. Hutchinson, Esq., M.P., to The Secretary for Mines.

Sir,

Parliament House, Sydney, 12 October, 1892.

I have the honor to ask that you will be good enough to cause to be sent to me at once a copy of the depositions in the case of Vanzetti v. Foster. It is important that a copy should be given me. Hoping same will be sent to me in a day or two at the furthest.

I have, &c.,
G. F. HUTCHINSON.

Submitted vide Mr. Vanzetti's letter herewith, 92-16,806.—E.C.P., 6/10/92. Reapplication 241, Foster and party, not yet received.—E.C.P. Copy may be supplied.—H.W., 19/10/92. Copy sent to G. F. Hutchinson.—22/10/92. Ask Warden to send Foster's application as soon as possible.—H.W., 31/10/92. Application 241, Forbes, by Foster and McDougall, now with Charting Branch for action; resubmitted as to Mr. Vanzetti's letter of 5th instant.—E.C.P., 31/10/92.

I know nothing of the parties to this dispute, and I feel sure the matter in dispute has, so far as the Department is concerned, been dealt with in good faith, still, in view of the representations made by Mr. Vanzetti, some injustice may, inadvertently been done to him, and it may perhaps be advisable to request the Warden to hold an inquiry in connection with Messrs. Foster and McDougall's application 241, into the allegations made by Mr. Vanzetti. On the other hand, it is alleged that Mr. Vanzetti was not the holder of a miner's right when the conflict first arose (say) prior to the 30th May last. This also might be inquired into.—H.W., 2/11/92.

Submitted. Approved.—T.M.S., 2/11/92. Mr. Hutchinson informed.—5/11/92. Urgent. Mr. Warden Sharpe.—G.E.H. (for U.S.), B.C., 5/11/92. Urgent.

In accordance with instructions, I have held an inquiry concerning lease application 241, Forbes, and the statements of Mr. Vanzetti. The evidence taken is annexed. I would draw attention to the fact that Mr. Vanzetti states that the land he is accused of dummies was open to be applied for by anyone after the 24th May till the re-marking, on the 26th of that month. It also appears that Mr. Vanzetti had no miner's right till he applied for his permit. Taking all the circumstances of this case into consideration I would most respectfully submit that Mr. Vanzetti is entitled to the land he applied for under his permit, which permit was refused; my reason for taking this view is that I do not think Foster and party should reap the benefit of a discovery made at the expense of Vanzetti and party.—E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden, B.C.

I quite agree with the Warden that Foster and party should not reap the benefit of Vanzetti's discovery, but in view of the facts I do not see how that is to be prevented. Foster and party took possession on the 28th May. At that time Vanzetti had no miner's right, and, consequently, could have no adverse title. When Vanzetti applied for the permit, under section 28, the land applied for by him was in the possession of Foster and party, and, therefore, his application had to be refused. It is of course competent to refuse Foster and party's application, but so far as I know there is no precedent for it in the circumstances.—H.W., 7/12/92. Submitted.

I regret that Vanzetti, by his neglect to provide himself with a miner's right has lost the land, but I do not see how I can refuse Foster and party's application.—T.M.S., 7/12/92.

Evidence taken at Inquiry before Mr. Warden Sharpe.

Warden's Court, Forbes, 18 November, 1892.

Frederick Foster, sworn, saith:—I am a miner, living at Forbes; the application produced is mine and my partner's; I marked out the land applied for on the 30th September last, by erecting posts and cutting trenches at 40 minutes past 2 in the afternoon; I did this in consequence of the notice I received from the Mines Department [notice produced], stating that the ground would be open after half-past half-past 2, Sydney time, on the afternoon of the 30th September last; I did not know that anyone claimed a right to the ground; on the 6th October we lodged our complete application, and I had previously posted notices of our intention to apply on the 30th September; in making this application I complied with the regulations in all respects; I made previous application for the ground, number 235, which was refused; notice of refusal appears in the Government Gazette of 30th September last.

Taken and sworn at Forbes, this 18th

November, 1892, before me,—

F. FOSTER.

E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden.

Eugenio Vanzetti, sworn, saith: I hold a miner's right, and live at Forbes; I produced my right, dated 30th May, 1892; I have been connected with the Britannia Gold-mine for the past five years; I have spent over £2,500 of my own money for prospecting for a payable reef, which I believe to be in the Britannia Company's ground; I have been instrumental in providing a further sum of £12,000, which has all been spent in mining for gold in the Britannia leases, and in purchasing and erecting suitable machinery for the purpose; when the company prayed for a dissolution on account of lack of funds, I endeavoured to reorganise it, but failed; then prompted by my strong faith in the mine I borrowed the money necessary for the purchase of the property, and purchased it, and from the beginning of February last, at the cost of great sacrifice and inconvenience, I managed by struggling to keep on prospecting; I gave Mr. David Jones a share in the mine, and he succeeded in discovering a new reef at a very short distance from the eastern boundary of gold lease 80; I then tried to secure some of the land adjoining, because on sinking on the new reef we found it underlaying very strongly to the east, so that it would have been out of our lease completely in the course of a few feet; at the time I posted up notice of my intention to apply, on the 13th May last, I was not then in possession of a miner's right; the application was signed by Mr. Hazelhurst and myself; Mr. Hazelhurst had a miner's right; the reason that I found myself without a miner's right is that on the previous year (1891) I had not taken one out till the month of September, and this made an impression in my mind that I had a proper miner's right; however, whether I had marked the claim in such a way as would entitle me to the lease, I did not complete the application, but bought a miner's right, and then applied for a permit to mine under the road, under section 28; I did this from information elicited from the Mining Department that no lease would be granted which included a surveyed road; my application for a permit was refused, which I consider a great injustice; I did not re-mark the ground at the expiration of the ten days, as stated by Foster and party, but allowed nearly two days to elapse before re-marking; anyone could have taken possession of the ground in the interval; I have good reasons for believing that Foster and party marked out their lease on account of the discovery of the reef on the Britannia ground; the reason for my twice posting up notice of my intention to apply is as follows—that at the time Mr. Hazelhurst, of Parkes, held an interest in the mine, and he had left instructions with me that unless the new reef gave indications of permanency I had better not go on with the lease; up to the 25th May the prospects were not encouraging, and it was late in the afternoon of that day that the miner Jones informed me that he had found another good shoot of stone, carrying payable gold, when I instructed him to re-mark the ground the next morning, and told him I would post up fresh notices; the next morning I came to the Warden's Clerk at Forbes with the intention of having the forms filled; he was then busy in Court, and he asked me to leave a memo. on the counter in his office, so that he could fill the notices later on and send them to me; Constable Hawkins showed me the room of the Warden's Clerk, and gave me a piece of writing paper, on which I wrote, "Memo.—Remember filling forms for Vanzetti's lease;" I believe the notices were posted up; I have succeeded in forming a local syndicate, with a small capital of £500, my own financial position not allowing me to carry on by myself; this syndicate was formed since the ground has been in dispute, and since I applied for the permit Mr. William Nicholas, a mining expert from Melbourne, has lately visited the mine; whatever leases I have taken up I have worked until I proved their value; Mr. Foster has done the same thing as this on previous occasions in Forbes, and by jumping portions of the Forbes Alluvial Company's ground, which he never worked, caused that company to waste a sum of £9,000, which was intended to develop the very ground he took possession of; Mr. Foster also held other leases on Thompson's Lead for a long time without working them, and prevented other people from working them; I may state that I can bring evidence to bear that Mr. Foster is not a bonâ-fide miner.

By Mr. Foster: Some time back I may have applied for a 25-acre lease on North Hill, Forbes, but did not complete the application because the prospects were not good; I do not recollect putting up notices of intention to apply for land near Green's; I never took up any land with the intention of dummying; I always worked any land I took up; it is usual for me to take out miners' rights towards the end of the year, but I have always held a current miner's right for years past.

Taken and sworn before me, this 18th

E. VANZETTI.

E. A. L. SHARPE, Warden.

David Jones, sworn, saith:—I am a miner, living at Forbes; I remember the 25th May last, and on the following day, the 26th May, I marked out the lease in dispute two days after the ten days had expired.

By Foster:—It was on the 12th or 13th May that I found the rich stone on the Britannia ground; I marked the ground about 10 o'clock (the first marking expired on the 24th or 25th May last) on the morning of the 26th May last; I saw Mr. Vanzetti's notice on the peg of his intention to apply; I saw you (Foster) at the mine on the 27th May, and on the 28th you marked out the ground; Mr. Vanzetti authorised me to mark out the ground for him as his agent.

By Warden:—The reef discovered on the Britannia ground is a valuable one, is 10 feet; I think it would dip out of the ground towards the eastern boundary.

Taken and sworn at Forbes, this 18th May, 1892, before,—

DAVID JONES.

Sir, Department of Mines and Agriculture, 5 November, 1892.

Adverting to my letter to you of the 22nd ultimo, forwarding copy of evidence taken at the inquiry held by Mr. Warden Sharpe, Forbes, with reference to gold lease application 235, Forbes, I have the honor, by direction of the Secretary for Mines and Agriculture, that nothing is known here of the parties to the dispute in question. So far as the Department is concerned, the matter has been dealt with in good faith, still, in view of the representations made by Mr. Vanzetti, some injustice may inadvertently been done to him, and it may, perhaps, be advisable to request the Warden to hold an inquiry in connection with Messrs. Foster and McDougall's application 241, into the allegation made by Mr. Vanzetti. On the other hand, it is alleged that Mr. Vanzetti was not the holder of a miner's right when the conflict first arose (say) prior to the 30th May last. This also might be inquired into.

I have, &c.,

Assistant Under Secretary.

II.—CONDITION OF THE LINES.

III.—SPECIAL RATES.

A statement of the special rates, and the reasons for making the same, will be found attached. [Appendix, page 4.]

IV.—STAFF.

These returns are given as an Appendix, pages 5 to 9.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The following new lines have been opened for traffic :—

St. Leonards to Milson's Point, 2 miles 78 chains. Opened 1st May.
 Kiama to Nowra, 22 ,, 43½ ,, Opened 3rd June.

The great financial disturbance through which the Colony has just passed seriously affected the Railway traffic, and the revenue shows a decrease for the quarter of £73,840, £36,424 being lost in the Passenger Department; the expenses, however, have been reduced by £65,674.

The percentage the working expenses bear to the gross traffic is 67·39, or 2·40 per cent. less than last year. The comparatively high percentage of working expenses for this quarter arises from the fact that an additional fortnight's pay for the whole of the wages staff is included each year in this quarter for convenience of accounts and comparison.

The percentage of Expenditure to Earnings for the twelve months closed by this report will be 59·39.

CONDITION

CONDITION OF THE LINES AND ACCOMMODATION FOR THE TRAFFIC.

The condition of the Permanent-way has been improved during the quarter, and the whole of the damage caused by the floods in the Hunter River District in March last has been repaired, and the cost thereof debited against the working expenses of the quarter.

The facilities for the traffic generally are satisfactory, a few minor works requisite in various places having been authorised.

TRAMWAYS.

The traffic has been prejudicially affected by the prevailing depression, but the expenses have also been curtailed, and the working for the whole year will show satisfactory results.

We have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient Servants,

E. M. G. EDDY,

Chief Commissioner.

W. M. FEHON,

Commissioner.

CHARLES OLIVER,

Commissioner.

II.—CONDITION OF THE LINES.

A report as to the condition of the lines will be found as an Appendix, page 5.

III.—SPECIAL RATES.

A statement of the special rates, and the reasons for making the same, will be found attached. [Appendix, page 5.]

IV.—STAFF.

These returns are given as an Appendix, pages 6 to 8.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The line from Cootamundra to Temora, a distance of 39 miles, was opened for traffic on the 1st September.

The revenue for the months of July and August showed a very serious decrease, but since that date a material improvement has taken place in consequence of the wool coming forward much more rapidly than was the case last year. The total decrease in revenue for the quarter amounts to £20,435, the working expenses at the same time showing a decrease of £50,322. The percentage the expenditure bears to the earnings shows a decrease of 5·35 per cent.

The

The coaching traffic has fallen off to the extent of £22,711, or 8·86 per cent., no less than £19,472 of this amount being in first-class passenger revenue. The total number of passenger journeys made during the quarter shows a decrease of 118,979, or 2·44 per cent. only; practically therefore the same amount of work has been performed, although the revenue has fallen off so much.

The intercolonial passenger traffic, in consequence of the general depression in the Colonies, continues to show a very heavy decrease, the loss during the quarter amounting to 31·26 per cent.

In the merchandise traffic the live stock and wool show an increase of £30,303; the mineral traffic, however, shows a decrease of £17,407, being 28·90 per cent. of the value of the mineral traffic for the same quarter of 1892.

General merchandise shows a falling off of £12,242, or 5·21 per cent.

Out of the gross decrease in the mineral traffic, £14,177 is attributable to coal, there being a loss of 142,000 tons. This decrease is following one of 114,081 tons in the corresponding quarter of last year.

The increased revenue derived from wool is caused by 40,715 bales having been carried in excess of the quantity carried for the same period in 1892.

The earnings per train mile show an improvement of $3\frac{1}{4}$ d. per mile as compared with last year, and the expenses per train mile have been reduced by $2\frac{3}{4}$ d. per mile, thus giving an additional net profit of 6d. per mile upon the 1,800,931 miles run; representing a sum of £45,000. The earnings per train mile show an increase of 1s. $2\frac{3}{4}$ d. per mile as compared with the September quarter of 1890.

With regard to the general position of the Railways and Tramways, and the Estimates placed before Parliament last year for the financial year 1893, it may be of interest to note that while the exceptional financial depression caused the revenue to fall short, from the 1st January to the 30th September, of what was estimated by a sum of £254,840, the estimated working expenses have been reduced by £275,691, thus leaving the Treasury in a better position by £20,851 than the Estimates provided for.

CONDITION OF THE LINES AND ACCOMMODATION FOR THE TRAFFIC.

The work of improving the permanent way, by substituting steel rails in the main lines for iron rails and by resleepering has been continued, and the lines have been considerably improved during the quarter in these respects. Minor facilities for dealing with the traffic have been provided where necessary, but the improvements effected previously have materially assisted the working.

TRAMWAYS.

TRAMWAYS.

The traffic on the Tramways shows a slight decrease; the expenditure, however, has been curtailed to a slightly greater extent.

RAILWAYS.

(COPY OF LETTER, DATED 30TH DECEMBER, 1891, FROM MR. ROBERT SMITH, SOLICITOR, TO MESSRS. LEVY, HEMSLEY, & PERKINS, SOLICITORS, RESPECTING CONTRACT BETWEEN MESSRS. PROUDFOOT & CO. AND THE RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 30 November, 1893.

2, O'Connell-street, Sydney, 30 December, 1891.

Proudfoot and the Railway Commissioners.

Messrs. Levy, Hemsley, & Perkins, solicitors,—

Dear Sirs,

I have perused the draft contract submitted by you in this matter, but I cannot place it before the Railway Commissioners for approval as it is not a contract in accordance with the terms entered into with the late David Proudfoot.

In order to get rid of further disputes about the matter, I shall be glad to know, for the information of the Commissioners, whether you will advise your clients to submit the settlement of the contract to the Equity Court in the form of a friendly suit or special case, leaving all the disputed matters to be the subject of an inquiry by the Court or before the Master. It strikes me that this will be much the simplest way of disposing of the matter.

On my part I will undertake to do everything in my power to speed the cause, including sittings in vacation.

Yours truly,
ROBERT SMITH.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CONTRACTS FOR THE RAILWAY SERVICE.

(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 12 October, 1893.

RETURN to an Order of the Legislative Assembly, dated 15th February, 1893,
That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of all correspondence and other documents between the Colonial “Treasurer and any other persons, relative to the refusal of the Railway “Commissioners to supply certain information asked for by Mr. Schey “relating to certain contracts for the Railway Service.”

(Mr. Schey.)

W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P., to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Dear Sir,

“Kosmos,” 257, Abercrombie-street, Redfern, 13 August, 1892.

I am very desirous of obtaining two copies of the Report and Appendices (as far as they may be available) of the late Royal Commission on Railways. The Printing Office will not give them to me without an authority, which I now desire you will be kind enough to issue to me, or, better still, have the copies sent to me at the above address.

I shall also esteem it a favour if you will procure from the Railway Commissioners, and send to me at your earliest convenience, a return showing the amounts of the monthly measurements of the earthworks executed at Wallis' Creek, near West Maitland, from first to last, and giving dates up to and inclusive of which these measurements were made.

Hoping for an early and favourable reply.

I am, &c.,

WM. F. SCHEY.

Send him the reports asked for.—J.S. Ask the Commissioners if they will supply the information.—J.S., 16/8/92.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade to W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P.

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 17 August, 1892.

I am directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 13th instant, and to intimate that two copies of the report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the truth of certain charges made by you in the Legislative Assembly, on 9th March last, against the Chief Commissioner for Railways, are in course of transmission to you per parcel post in accordance with the request therein contained. I am to add that the Railway Commissioners have been communicated with concerning the return asked for in the latter paragraph of your letter under notice.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade to The Secretary for Railways.

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 17 August, 1892.

I am directed by the Colonial Treasurer to inform you that Mr. W. F. Schey, M.P., has written to this Department requesting that he may be furnished with “a return showing the amounts of the monthly measurements of the earthworks executed at Wallis' Creek, near West Maitland, from first to last, and giving dates up to and inclusive of which these measurements were made,” and I am to inquire whether the Railway Commissioners will supply such particulars.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK.

The Secretary for Railways to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Government Railways of New South Wales,

Sir,

Secretary's Office, Sydney, 22 August, 1892.

I am directed to acknowledge your letter dated the 17th instant, intimating that Mr. Schey, M.L.A., has requested that he might be furnished with a return in respect to certain earthworks executed at Wallis' Creek, near West Maitland, and inquiring if the Railway Commissioners would supply such information. I am to point out that only quite recently the Wallis' Creek works have been inspected and specially reported upon by a Royal Commission, assisted by an independent engineer appointed by the Commission in question. When the report and evidence are laid on the Table of the House and printed, they will no doubt contain all the particulars considered necessary for public information.

I have, &c.,

H. M'LACHLAN,

Secretary.

Perhaps Mr. Schey might be so informed.—F.K., 23/8/92. Approved.—J.S., 23/8/92.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade to W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P.

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 24 August, 1892.

With reference to your letter of 13th instant, and to Treasury reply thereto of 17th idem, I am directed by the Colonial Treasurer to intimate that the Railway Commissioners advise that only quite recently the Wallis' Creek works have been inspected and specially reported upon by a Royal Commission, assisted by an independent engineer appointed by such Commission, and that the report and evidence will be laid upon the Table of the House in due course and be printed.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK.

W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P., to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Dear Sir,

"Kosmos," 257, Abercrombie-street, Redfern, 27 August, 1892.

I have to acknowledge receipt of your favour of 24th instant—M. 2,468, 519 Railways—in reply to mine of 13th idem. Permit me to point out that the contents do not answer the question raised in my letter at all. I was fully aware that the Wallis' Creek works have been specially inspected and reported on under instructions from the Royal Commission, and also that the report and evidence will be laid on the Table of the Assembly and printed. This, however, when printed will not furnish the information which I have asked for. What I want is a transcript of the figures standing in the books of the Railway Department in relation to this work—the periodical measurements, with dates, period by period, showing the amount of work returned by the departmental officer as being done by the contractors in each period, and on which the contractors were subsequently paid, or still have to be paid. This must have been on record long before the Royal Commission was appointed, and no subsequent inspection can alter the figures which I am now asking for.

Also in relation to the copper slag obtained from the Bullock Island smelting works, for ballast, for which Proudfoot & Co. also had the contract. I obtained certain information concerning it when the Commission was sitting, but it is not detailed enough for my purpose. I want a similar return to the one above asked for, which will show the amount of slag returned by the departmental officer as having been supplied by the contractors, period by period, with dates. There was a return made at least once a month, and, I think, oftener. It is those figures which I want, as they stand in the books of the Department.

I will esteem it a favour if you procure these two returns, both small, and let me have them at once, as time is a matter of great importance here.

Asking the favour of immediate and full reply,

I have, &c.,

WM. F. SCHEY.

The Secretary for Railways to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Government Railways of New South Wales,

Sir,

Secretary's Office, Sydney, 5 September, 1892.

With reference to your endorsement of 31st ultimo on a further communication from Mr. W. F. Schey, M.L.A., of the 27th ultimo, returned herewith, I am directed to say that after the late exhaustive inquiry at the hands of a Royal Commission, and in view of the findings and report of that Commission, it does not appear to the Railway Commissioners that any public advantage would be gained by preparing the returns in the form and with the particulars suggested in the communication in question.

I have, &c.,

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade to W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P.

Sir, The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 7 September, 1892.

I am directed by the Colonial Treasurer to acknowledge receipt of your communication of 27th ultimo, and to inform you, in reply, that your requirements, therein referred to, have been again brought under the notice of the Railway Commissioners, who report that "after the late exhaustive inquiry at the hands of a Royal Commission, and in view of the findings and report of that Commission, it does not appear that any public advantage would be gained by preparing the returns in the form and with the particulars suggested in the communication in question."

I have, &c.,

W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P., to The Honorable the Colonial Treasurer.

Dear Sir, Parliament House, 6 September, 1892.

I beg to remind you of my two previous letters (the last one now a week old) in which I ask for certain information from the Railway Department, and which has not yet been furnished to me. Also to our conversation of last week regarding the matter. I beg to point out that all the information asked for is in the books of the Department, and can be readily extracted by a clerk in a single half hour, in view of which fact, and of the importance to me of the information asked, I beg to ask that you will kindly have the same furnished to me without further delay.

I am, &c.,
WM. F. SCHEY.

The Commissioners for Railways.—J.S., 10/9/92. The Secretary for Railways.—F.K., 10-12/9/92. Please see reply sent to you on the 5th instant, which apparently crossed Mr. Schey's communication.—H.M'L., 12/9/92. Under Secretary, Finance and Trade. Seen.—J.S., 14/9/92.

W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P., to The Honorable the Colonial Treasurer.

Sir, Legislative Assembly, New South Wales, Sydney, 15 September, 1892.

I do myself the honor to acknowledge receipt of your M. 2,587-550 Railways, and must once more demur to the conclusion therein conveyed.

I have asked for certain information which can readily be obtained in a few minutes from the books of the Railway Department, and have twice been informed that "it does not appear to the Railway Commissioners that any public advantage would be gained" by furnishing same. Permit me to point out that this is in no sense an answer to my request. I, in my capacity as a representative of the people, have asked you, as the Ministerial and political head of the Railway Department, for certain information as to the expenditure of public money by that Department, and in such a connection, it surely cannot be maintained that the Railway Commissioners have any right to be the arbiters as to whether the information would confer any public advantage or otherwise. I am quite aware that those gentlemen will never afford me any information, however trivial, which they can contrive to withhold, but I have put the request to yourself as the Minister responsible to Parliament, and thus certainly the superior of any non-political servant of the Crown, a position insisted on by every constitutional authority. It is for you to grant or refuse my request, and as you have already told me that you have intimated to the Railway Commissioners a wish that the information sought should be supplied, I must now ask you to take such steps as will ensure compliance with your wishes.

It is imperatively necessary that the information sought should be supplied, and failing to obtain it in this proper and rightful fashion, I shall be compelled to ask for it in Parliament, even to the extent of moving the adjournment of the House to draw attention to the usurpation of the Railway Commissioners of powers and functions which in no wise belong to them.

Accept the assurance that I impute no lack of courtesy to yourself, as also of my high consideration.

I have, &c.,
WM. F. SCHEY.

The Railway Commissioners.—J.S., 16/9/92. Please return this after perusal.—J.S.

The Commissioners for Railways to The Honorable The Minister for Railways.

Sir, Office of the Railway Commissioners of New South Wales, Sydney, 23 September, 1892.

We have the honor to return, and have to thank you for the opportunity of perusing, Mr. Schey's letter to you of the 15th instant, and to which we infer you do not desire we should frame a reply.

We do accordingly refrain from commenting upon the references which the writer makes to the Commissioners, and do not add to or amend the purport of our previous replies. If Mr. Schey desires any further information respecting the matters referred to beyond what appears in the proceedings of the Royal Commission, and the Legislature considers that any substantial public advantage would be obtained by furnishing the same, whether in the shape of a return or otherwise, the Commissioners will, of course, have pleasure in supplying it, but as Mr. Schey has already charged (though he has failed to substantiate, and has not even attempted to support the charge) that the Commissioners have frequently furnished false replies, and false returns, the Commissioners are not anxious, if it can be avoided, to voluntarily place themselves in the position of being again subjected to a like charge.

We have, &c.,
E. M. G. EDDY,
W. M. FEHON,
CHARLES OLIVER.

Send Mr. Schey a copy.—J.S., 19/10/92.

W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P., to The Honorable The Colonial Treasurer.

Sir, Parliament House, Sydney, 18 October, 1892.

I do myself the honor to remind you of my letter of 15th September last, numbered C.A. 92-44, to which I have not received any reply of any kind up to date.

Asking your kind attention and the favour of early reply,

I have, &c.,

WM. F. SCHEY.

The Railway Commissioners.—JOHN SEE, 19/10/92.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade to W. F. Schey, Esq., M.P.

Sir, The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 22 October, 1892.

Referring to your letter of the 18th instant, I am directed to hand you enclosed copy of a letter from the Railway Commissioners in regard to your communication of the 15th ultimo.

I have, &c.,

TAKEN BEFORE

ON THE

SILKSTONE COAL-MINE RAILWAY ACT FURTHER AMENDING BILL.

TUESDAY, 21 NOVEMBER, 1893.

Present:—

MR. STEVENSON,		MR. PERRY,
MR. WADDELL,		MR. BOWES,
	MR. SCOBIE.

J. W. BOWES, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Bowden, Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the promoters of the Bill.

Mr. Richard Tilden Smith called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Mr. Bowden.] I believe you are one of the promoters of the Silkstone Coal-mine Railway Act of 1889? Yes.
2. By that Act you obtained certain rights to construct a railway? Yes.
3. Are those rights still vested in your company? They have been transferred to the Clyde Coal, Land, and Investment Company (Limited).
4. You were also a promoter of the Silkstone Coal-mine Railway Act Amending Bill of 1891? Yes.
5. Under which Act you obtained an extension of the time for the completion of the railway? Yes.
6. Has any portion of the railway yet been constructed? Yes, 2½ miles.
7. By whom? By the company.
8. Are you prepared to construct the remainder of the line within the time limited by the amending Act? Scarcely.
9. Is it practicable? We are rather in doubt as to whether we could do so.
10. Can you give any reasons as to why it has not been possible to construct the line up to the present time? There has been a good deal of delay in raising the necessary capital. We are now advised that it has been obtained.
11. For the construction of the balance of the line? Yes.
12. I believe that under this Bill you are desirous of obtaining not only a further extension of time, but an extension of distance for the railway? Yes, a further distance of 4½ miles.
13. Where will that take the line to? To a coal property we wish to develop.
14. Is it a property belonging to the company? Yes.
15. Through whose lands will this extension of line go? Through Crown land only.
16. Will it cross any roads? None.
17. Is there any other way of getting the coal to market unless you get this authority? No.
18. Seams of coal have been discovered in the land? Yes.
19. Do you anticipate any considerable traffic should the line be constructed? We do.
20. And it is probable that the whole railway will be constructed if you get the extension of time for which you now ask? Yes.
21. You have actually arranged for the capital? Yes.
22. You know of your own knowledge that 2½ miles of the line have been already constructed? Yes.
23. And unless you get this extension of time it will be practically impossible to construct the remainder? Yes.
24. I believe you have spent a considerable sum of money on the property? About £15,000 or £16,000.
25. Can you give me any idea of what the line has cost up to the present? I think about the sum I have named.
26. Is that simply for the construction of the line? It includes everything.
27. You are entering into negotiations with the contractors to complete the work? Yes. Contracts are prepared and we expect that the whole work will cost about £140,000.]

Mr.
R. T. Smith.
21 Nov., 1893.

- R. T. Smith.
21 Nov., 1893.
28. That will include the machinery for the mines? Everything.
29. If this Bill becomes law I suppose it would give employment to a number of men? Yes.
30. And they will be put on to the work almost immediately? Yes.
31. Have you heard of any objections to the construction of the line? None.
32. And you have been about the district? Yes.
33. You have been in such a position that you would have heard of any objections had any been made? Yes; I went to the district and saw the different people interested, and they are all favourable to the construction of the line.
34. Mr. Stevenson.] What was the length of the line sanctioned by the original Act? 9 miles 40 chains.
35. How many miles were you compelled to complete by the 30th September, 1891? Under the Principal Act, 9 miles 40 chains.
36. Mr. Bowden.] Your failure to complete the balance of the line is in some measure attributable to commercial depression? Yes, the depression has delayed us.
37. It has had a serious effect upon the work? It has so delayed it as to necessitate an application for extended time.
38. I suppose that we may take it that that is the primary cause of the delay? It is one of the causes; but of course one of the principal reasons for our asking for the extension contained in this Bill is the proposal to extend the line $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles.
39. Mr. Perry.] You obtained an extension of time under the Amending Act of 1892, and it was provided that in the event of 2 miles of the line being constructed within the time limited by both Acts that portion should not revert to the Crown? Yes.
40. You are now asking for an extension of time to complete the full distance of 9 miles and the further proposed extension? Yes.
41. And you are prepared to go on with the work at once? Yes.
42. Mr. Stevenson.] Did not the late floods retard your works? Yes, very seriously.
43. But they are going on now, are they not? Yes.
44. Mr. Waddell.] In addition to the balance of 7 miles, you propose to construct a further distance of $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles, making a total distance of $11\frac{1}{2}$ miles? Yes.
45. And you want in reality a further period of two years for the completion of that work? It would be about two years.
46. In that time you propose to construct $11\frac{1}{2}$ miles of railway? Yes.
47. Will the line cross any creeks? Two.
48. Will you require any expensive bridges? There will be one very expensive bridge at Deep Creek.
49. What is the estimated cost? The estimate has been made, but I cannot say at this moment what it is. I may mention that it has taken eighteen months to construct this $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles.
50. What has been the cause of that? The weather.
51. Have you had any engineering difficulties? Yes; we have had a swamp difficulty to contend with, and the floods have come in and delayed us.
52. You have no knowledge of the estimated cost of the bridge? I know that the whole work will cost about £90,000—that is, including what is already constructed. The line we have yet to construct will cost about £70,000. I do not think the bridge is likely to delay the completion of the work.
53. Are there any other difficulties—have you to cut through any high hills? No.
54. Chairman.] As a matter of fact you are asking for an extension of time, chiefly because of the proposed extension of $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles? Yes. You might perhaps be able to complete the 7 miles within the time allowed.
55. Mr. Bowden.] You have taken into consideration the possibility of delay occurring from floods and other causes? Yes.
56. Mr. Perry.] If you have fine weather you will have the whole works done considerably within the proposed time? Yes, we expect to finish it at the end of 1894.
57. Mr. Scobie.] The swamp difficulty to which you have referred is overcome now? Well, we have another swamp to contend with further on.
58. Is the water deep? Very deep. If we have another flood such as we had in March we could not get over the difficulty, to which I refer, in less than six or eight months.
59. There is no difficulty about capital? No, we have the capital promised if we can get the extension of time.
60. How far from the township of Cessnock will the extension go? It will go almost into the township.
61. Mr. Stevenson.] The company do not intend carrying the line point beyond the point indicated on the plan? No.
62. Mr. Scobie.] And you think if you carry the line to that point you will get a considerable amount of traffic? Yes, a requisition is now being signed for the proposed extension.
63. And it would bring a certain amount of traffic on to the main north line? Yes.
64. Mr. Bowden.] Have you any guarantees of coal carriage over the line? We have not the guarantees yet, but they are being prepared. We are promised 150,000 tons per annum.
65. And that would go over the main line? To Newcastle.
66. Chairman.] This promise is given by persons who own coal land alongside the proposed extension? Yes.

Hugh McLachlan, Esq., called in, sworn, and examined:—

- Hugh McLachlan, Esq.
21 Nov., 1893.
67. Chairman.] You are Secretary for Railways? Yes.
68. Mr. Bowden.] You have seen the Bill before the Committee? Yes.
69. Have you any objections to offer to the construction of the line? No. So far as the Commissioners are concerned they can see nothing in it to prejudice their interests. They have no objection to offer. The extension does not affect the connection already approved of.
70. Have you any suggestions to make? No; the Commissioners would not enter into matters of policy.
71. Do you know whether the extension would open up any fresh coal land? I could not say. I have no local knowledge.

Capital indebtedness.

Sir, Newcastle, 7 November, 1892.
 Referring to the figures supplied by Mr. Johnston, showing the expenditure on the Hunter District Water Supply under different heads, the Board have asked me to request you to be good enough to furnish them with a complete return showing the detailed items from which the totals were compiled, and also a schedule giving full particulars of the land and other property transferred to and vested in the Board.
 Pending the receipt of these particulars, the Board have postponed consideration of the matter.
 Might I ask you to be good enough to place this request before the Honorable the Minister? It is, in my opinion, a reasonable one, and I take the opportunity of recommending it to his favourable consideration.
 I have, &c.,
 ALEXANDER BROWN,
 President.

No. 4.

Minute by Mr. J. Johnston to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Capital indebtedness of the Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Board.

To furnish a "complete Return showing the detailed items from which the totals were compiled" would entail enormous labour.

As you are aware, in making up the total indebtedness, only the monthly totals of the items composing the expenditure were extracted from the Department's account books, and even this work took a week or two to complete; but if these monthly details are to be analysed and a detailed transcription furnished of the thousands of items connected with the Hunter District Water Supply which passed into the account books during the twelve and a half years ended 30th June, 1892, such a work will occupy some months, and as it could only be done by the Harbours and Rivers Accounts Division staff at spare moments (which, as you know, are difficult to find), it is impossible to foretell when the work could be accomplished.

Certain subdivisions of several of the principal headings could easily be supplied to the Board, and might, I think, serve every useful purpose.

JAS. JOHNSTON.

No. 5.

The President to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Dear Sir,

Newcastle, 21 November, 1892.

I am somewhat at a disadvantage in addressing you on the subject matter later on referred to herein, in consequence of my not having before me the complete and detailed particulars of the basis on which Mr. Darley arrived at the apportionment of the indebtedness of the Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Works, but the importance of the questions that I desire to submit to you for the consideration of the Hon. the Secretary for Public Works warrants my addressing you without waiting for the Return.

The whole of the question of repayment appears to be provided for in part 4 of the Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Act (55 Victoria No. 27), and the carrying out of the various sections 129 to 133 will impose upon us such serious obligations that it will be almost impossible for us ever to get into anything like a solvent state, that is, if the conditions set forth are to be carried out in their integrity.

The

The first position to which I take exception is this: That no provision whatever has been made in the Act for the transfer of the works to the public, who practically pay for them. Assuming that at the expiration of the different times allotted for the payment of permanent and renewable works they have been paid for, then some arrangement should be made, as in the Metropolitan Act, whereby the works become the property either of the municipalities interested or some public trust, and the revenue arising from same being theirs.

Another question that presents itself is this:—That the opportunities offered to previous Governments to do what the Honorable the Minister for Works did, viz., to put this water business under a Trust, and make it self-supporting, was neglected for a period of something like nine or ten years, and for this carelessness, which might have been avoided, a very large sum has been added to the capital cost, in the way of capitalised interest, which the present consumers in limited numbers are called upon to pay.

No provision has been made for the necessary depreciation in the life of the materials in the renewable works which, according to competent authority, have depreciated in value to the extent of at least, one third.

Again, inasmuch as no provision has been made for the passing over in time of the reversionary value of the works at the expiration of the time limited in the Act, it is suggested that, for the present at any rate, no further charge should be made against the Board than the sum of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. upon the capital value of the works, after providing for the maintenance and depreciation, and that an arbitrary line should not be drawn between permanent and renewable works, and every possible item that can be charged to permanent works should pass to that debit, so as to make the charges for maintenance and depreciation as light as possible.

These are but a few of the many objections which present themselves to me in administering the Act, and whilst I recognise that no change can be made which will be of any value to us without an amended Act, I shall be glad of an opportunity to meet the Minister and discuss with him (with a section or the whole of my Board, if necessary) the very difficult and delicate questions which arise in Part 4 of the Act, because I am assured that if the provisions of sections 129 to 133 are carried out in their integrity, the venture can never hope to accomplish anything like the responsibilities set before it, and we shall be absolutely a bankrupt Trust from our very beginning.

I take it that if to-morrow the citizens could borrow sufficient money to relieve the Government of the obligations incurred on their behalf and repay the Government the amount of their expenditure, there would then be an end to any contention as between the Government and the citizens; and I maintain that, as a commercial enterprise, if money was so borrowed, no provision would be required for repayment at the expiration of any set period, and the whole concern would be regarded as a venture on which the payment of a sufficient sum for a dividend to the shareholders would be all that was required of a public company.

I consider if we can manage to pay the State the interest that they have incurred in any special expenditure in this locality, it is really all we can be called upon to meet.

Yours, &c.,

ALEXANDER BROWN,

Report of Deputation from Board to The Hon. the Minister for Public Works.

29 March, 1893.

Liabilities of the Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Board.

A DEPUTATION representing the Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Board waited upon the Minister to-day to urge that the following concessions might be made to the Board:—

- (1.) That a proper allowance should be made by the Department for depreciation of permanent and renewable works—based on the proportion of the estimated life spent, say, from the average date of construction to the date of the transference of the works to the Board.
- (2.) That interest upon the capital expenditure should not be capitalised, as proposed.
- (3.) That the time for repayment of renewable waterworks should be extended to sixty years, as is provided by law in the case of renewable sewerage works.
- (4.) That proper renewal funds should be established, as indicated in table B (annexed); also
- (5.) That the Board are quite prepared to collect revenue sufficient to provide 3½ per cent. interest on the original cost of the works, less the allowance asked for depreciation.
- (6.) That the Board are quite prepared to provide for all working expenses properly chargeable against revenue—such as Board's fees, salaries, office expenses, wages, &c.
- (7.) To establish renewal funds, by setting aside a certain annual sum with the Treasury sufficient, with the interest (3½ per cent.), to provide for the reconstruction of permanent and renewable works, of not only the original, but all subsequent works of construction (as per table B, before referred to).
- (8.) That the life of permanent waterworks be taken for the purpose of determining the contributions of original and subsequent work as 100 years, and renewable (water) as sixty years.
- (9.) That against the proposed renewal funds all wages, charges, and cost of materials incurred in connection with maintenance, repairs, and reconstruction should be debited.

THE HON. A. BROWN (President of the Board) explained that it was the desire of the Board that the Minister should arrive at some conclusion in the matter of the reduction of charges against the Board. The deputation consisted of the elected members of the Board, who, as such, took particular interest in the matter. The only other two things they desired to mention, in addition to the matters already enumerated, were the questions of the pipe line and of the survey, now being undertaken.

THE MINISTER here remarked that the Department knew nothing of the latter matter, and if any claim were made by the Lands Department in respect of it the claim would have to go on to the Board. It was just sufficient for him to know that such a work was in hand, and he would have an investigation made to learn the exact circumstances under which operations were commenced.

MR. J. R. RODGERS represented that the elected members of the Board took deep interest in the question as to the amount, and the circumstances in connection with the payment of interest by the rate-payers, debited against the Board. Their first contention was that there should be no question in regard to the provision of funds for the purchase of the works, especially if provision were made for reconstruction, repairs, renewals generally, extensions, and the payment of interest. The elected members of the Board believed that if provision were made for interest, and a fund for reconstruction, maintenance, &c., this was all that should be required of them. They contended that if the works were to be purchased at all it should be at their depreciated value, as the works had been in the hands of the Government for about eight years, during which time the Board had no control whatever over them. They considered, for one thing, that an allowance should be made in respect of public buildings for the period during which the works were in the hands of the Department.

M.B.

MR. RODGERS also pointed out that the Act did not provide that the works, even after purchase, should become the property of the people of the district.

MR. A. GARDINER pointed out that the Act only provided for simple interest being charged. According to the figures, they had a capitalised interest of £52,238 to meet, and they contended that the Department should forego that amount, in respect of depreciation, &c. The amended figures prepared by the Board as contained in tables A, B, C, and D (annexed), were then reviewed; and, the Minister was urged to allow the £52,000 odd, charged as interest on capital expenditure, computed at the rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent per annum, from the establishment of the works to 30th June, 1892, after deducting £39,240 7s. 10d., on account of revenue and interest thereon.

MR. RUSHTON said that their greatest contention was that it was unfair that the Board should be charged with interest from the very time the waterworks were commenced, when they had no control whatever over them for several years. Their population was very limited, and it would be hard upon the people if they had to find money to pay off the full amount charged against them by the Department in connection with the waterworks.

MR. A. C. LEE said there would be great difficulty in the way of finding money to meet the amount charged against the Board; and it seemed as if it would be impossible to do so from revenue.

The MINISTER, in replying, said this was a matter in which so many points had been brought forward that it would be unwise on his part to give an immediate answer in respect of them. One very strong argument in favour of the representations of the deputation was that it was scarcely fair to charge fully for everything before the Board took charge of the works. He was quite prepared to consider the whole question carefully, and meet the Board as fairly and liberally as he could. He recognised that it was not a very pleasant task for the Board to undertake the work they had in hand, especially under the present depressed state of things. Within the next few days he would go through the papers relating to the matter, and see whether he could meet the Board in any way. He would not say he would allow the whole of the amount asked, for £52,000 was a pretty large sum. He would consider the whole question at an early date, and meet the Board as fairly as possible.

HUNTER DISTRICT WATER SUPPLY AND SEWERAGE BOARD,—CLAUSE 129 : CAPITAL INDEBTEDNESS.

The figures given in accompanying tables marked A, B, C, and D are based upon the following principles:—

1. That the Board should not be compelled to purchase the works in connection with the Water Supply.
2. That if they must purchase them or provide interest upon the capital value of them:—
 - (a) A proper allowance should be made by the Hon. the Minister for depreciation of permanent and renewable works, based on the proportion of the estimated life spent, say, from the average date of construction, to the date of transfer to the Board.
 - (b) That interest upon the capital expenditure should not be capitalised as proposed.
 - (c) That the time for repayment of renewable water works should be extended to sixty years, as is provided by Act in the case of renewable sewerage works.
 - (d) That proper renewals funds should be established, as indicated in table B.
3. That the Board submit that they are quite prepared to collect revenue sufficient to—
 - (a) Provide interest at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the original cost of the works, less the allowance asked for depreciation.
 - (b) Provide all working expenses properly chargeable against revenue, such as Board's fees, salaries, office expenses, wages, &c.
 - (c) Establish renewals funds by setting aside a certain annual sum with the Treasury, sufficient with the interest ($3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.), to provide for the reconstruction of permanent and renewable works of not only the original, but all subsequent works of construction. (See Table B).
 - (d) That life of permanent water works be taken, for purposes of determining the contributions of original subsequent work, as 100 years, and renewable (water) as 60 years.
 - (e) That against the proposed renewals funds all wages, charges, and cost of materials incurred in connection with maintenance, repairs, and reconstruction be debited.

Board's Offices, Newcastle, 27th February, 1893.

TABLE A.

SHOWING THE ANNUAL SUMS THE BOARD WILL BE REQUIRED TO PROVIDE TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 129 OF THE ACT 55 VICTORIA NO. 27, TAKING CAPITAL INDEBTEDNESS AS SHOWN IN THE HON. THE MINISTER'S FIGURES.

Repayment, Permanent Works—
Annual sum required to provide for the repayment of the capital value of permanent works in 100 years:—
Present value (as given), £225,741; adding interest thereto yearly, as required, the sum in 100 years amounts to £7,043,119, and will be liquidated by an annual sum bearing interest yearly of	8,165
Repayment, Renewable Works—
Annual sum required to provide for the repayment of the capital value of renewable works in 30 years:—
Present value (as given), £228,351; adding interest thereto yearly, as required, the sum in 30 years amounts to £639,382, and will be liquidated by an annual sum bearing interest yearly of	12,386
Reconstruction Fund. (See Table "B.")—
*Annual sums to provide funds for the reconstruction of permanent works, £134,363 in 100 years. (See Table "B").....	156
Reconstruction of renewable works—£195,042 in 30 years. (See Table "B")	3,778
Total annually	24,485

* These annual sums, bearing interest yearly at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., will reach the sums shown. Of course amounts will be drawn from the fund which will tend to lessen the result by detracting from the interest, but as heavy items for renewals will be late in the term it will not be affected seriously.

TABLE B.

THE QUESTION OF PROVIDING A FUND FOR RECONSTRUCTION OF PERMANENT AND RENEWABLE WORKS.

(See Clause 129.)

The last paragraph of clause 129 reads:—"That Board shall levy and collect such rates, charges, and sums of money as shall be sufficient to cover the annual sum (repayments) so fixed as aforesaid, as well as all expenses incurred in the carrying out of the provisions of this Act or any Acts amending same, including the reconstruction of renewable works."

It will be advisable to provide an annual sum for reconstruction of renewable (and as reconstruction of permanent works will be "an expense in carrying out the provisions of the Act") and permanent works also, that is, of course, such items under latter heading as require reconstruction.

And an annual sum to build up a fund will the more evenly distribute the expenditure than if nothing were provided one year and a heavy sum, involved (say) through some long length of pipes requiring cleaning or relaying, required the next.

The

The fixing of an annual sum will be just, too, inasmuch as each year will then bear its proper share of the depreciation of the plant.

No. 14.

The Under Secretary for Public Works to The Crown Solicitor.

Dear Mr. Smith,

Sydney, 19 April, 1893.

A deputation, consisting of the members of the Hunter District Water and Sewerage Board, has waited upon the Minister for the purpose of asking him to reduce the capital charge to be debited against the Board as the cost of the works, on the ground that when they took the works over the life of certain portions had been considerably encroached upon, and therefore that it was not fair to debit them with the full work. Eventually, as far as I can understand, the request narrowed itself down to that of interest, which, by the 129th section of the Act, we are entitled to charge from the date of disbursement to 30th June (see sub-section 2), but you will notice this only refers to permanent works. Turning to the 4th sub-section of the same section, which refers to renewable works, you will see that the proviso as to charging for interest from date of disbursement, has been omitted. We have been charging interest on the two classes of work, i.e., "permanent" and "renewable," and the total interest chargeable, viz., £67,505 2s. 5d., we have appropriated £40,503 to permanent works, and £27,002 2s. 5d. to renewable works. On looking at the Act, I am inclined to think that we cannot charge interest upon the latter amount. In other words, we are in error in charging interest on renewable works from the date of disbursement to 30th June.

Will you oblige by looking through the Act, and advising the Minister on the subject?

Yours, &c.,

J. BARLING.

No. 15.

The Crown Solicitor to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Re Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage.

Dear Mr. Barling,

Sydney, 26 April, 1893.

In reply to your note of the 19th instant as to the proper construction of section 129 of the Act with regard to payment of interest on the cost of "renewable works," I confess that I have had some little difficulty in coming to a conclusion, but I think that the right conclusion must be that indicated by you in your letter—namely, that interest cannot be charged on the cost of renewable works.

The first part of the section, you will note, provides that "out of the rates to be collected by the Board, the whole cost incurred in respect of the work shall be repaid by the Board, together with interest thereon in manner following." Sub-section 1 then proceeds to divide the repayments into two classes, one in respect of what is called "permanent works," and the other in respect of what is called "renewable works." It, therefore, appears that the cost of renewable works, as well as that of permanent works, is included in the expression "the whole cost incurred in respect of every work," and so far, therefore, it would appear that the intention of the Legislature was (as expressed in the first part of the section) that interest should be paid on the whole amount of the cost, that is to say, on "renewable" works as well as "permanent."

But, as pointed out by you, sub-section 2 contains a provision as to the rate of interest to be calculated on the amount expended upon permanent works, which is to be added to the amount of the certificate to be given. But sub-section 4, which deals with renewable works, contains no provision at all as to interest. Whether this omission in the Act was intentional or not it is impossible to say.

At present I can see no reason why interest should be charged in one case and not in the other. But taking the Act as it stands, I must come to the conclusion that as the whole cost with interest thereon is "to be paid in manner following," and the subsequent sections provide only for interest on cost of "permanent works," and not on cost of "renewable works" there is no authority for charging the Board with interest on such latter amount.

Of course this only refers to the interest from the date of disbursement up to the 30th June. Subsequent interest on the amount certified for renewable work is provided for by sub-section 5.

Yours faithfully,

ERNEST SMITH,

Crown Solicitor.

The President to The Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Newcastle, 26 June, 1893.

I do myself the honor to transmit herewith the following resolution unanimously passed by the Board at their sitting this morning:—

"The Board desire to place on record the fact that, notwithstanding the strong representations made by them to the Hon. the Minister when the deputation interviewed him, they find that the Hon. the Minister has absolutely ignored all their representations, has not treated them with ordinary courtesy, and that this resolution be communicated to the Hon. the Minister with the assurance that, though under the Act as the law stands he has large prerogatives, it is not always judicious they should be exercised in this offensive way, and that the Board feel that they were entitled to more respect at his hands."

I have, &c.,

ALEXANDER BROWN,
President

No. 24.

The Under Secretary for Public Works to The President.

Sir,

Sydney, 3 July, 1893.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, which would have been done before had not the Minister been absent from town, covering a resolution of your Board with respect to the Hunter District water debt, and to say that Mr. Lyne cannot help expressing his surprise at the terms in which the Board have thought fit to couch their resolution. Mr. Lyne wishes to point out that the Department cannot be charged with any undue haste in the matter of the publication of the figures relating to the debt, seeing the Act provides that the whole amount of the debt shall be published as soon after the 1st of July, 1892, as practicable; and it is only within the last few days that the figures have actually been gazetted.

I am to recall to your mind that this action has been from time to time postponed at your request, and to draw your attention to the fact that a deputation from the Board waited on the Minister on the 29th of March last, with the object, it is understood, of asking for the remission of the whole of the sum of £52,000 for interest on the permanent and renewable works. You had been previously informed that the sum of £11,000 had been remitted, by reducing the interest from compound to simple interest; and Mr. Lyne, in reply to the deputation, stated he would see whether he could meet the Board in any way. He would not say that he would allow the whole amount asked—for £52,000 was a very large sum—but he would consider the whole question at the earliest moment and meet the Board as fairly as possible.

In pursuance of this promise the advice of the Crown Solicitor was at once obtained, and, acting in accordance therewith, the Minister decided to forego the amount of the interest charged upon renewable works, which amount came to the large sum of £39,000, out of a total of £52,000. This decision was communicated to you on the 28th of April, and you endorsed the papers as seen on the 29th of that month.

The figures, as originally given, had been before the Board for a very long time, and they were therefore practically acquainted with the details of the account. I am further to remind you that the delay in publishing these figures has already put the Board in serious jeopardy in the Law Courts, the circumstance of our not publishing having been taken as a ground of objection to the Board's actions. Also, that at your request, one of the accountants of this office was sent to Newcastle for the purpose of carefully explaining all the figures to the Board, and that, from time to time, the Board were invited to examine the accounts in the office.

Mr. Lyne is, therefore, entirely at a loss to understand on what ground any charge of want of courtesy can lie against the Department; and he desires me to say that in dealing with this question he has not only to consider the interests of the ratepayers of the Hunter District, but the taxpayers of the Colony generally, who are really responsible for the large debt incurred in connection with the Hunter District Waterworks. It was only on the advice of the Crown Solicitor that Mr. Lyne consented to so large a reduction in the capital sum as has already been made, and he would not have himself been disposed to have made so large a concession except for this advice. He thinks that the Hunter District Board have no reason to complain, but rather the contrary; and if a deputation had again waited upon him he could have given no other decision than that at which he had already arrived.

As bearing upon the question generally, it may be stated that, in view of the urgent necessities of the Colony at the present time, all the country towns who are indebted to the Government, on account of waterworks constructed for them by the Department, have been notified that their engagements must be at once met.

Mr. Lyne is therefore satisfied that on further consideration your Board will come to the conclusion that, while meting out justice to them, he has done no more than his duty to the Colony at large.

The President to The Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Newcastle, 3 July, 1893.

Referring to my communication to you of the 26th ultimo, I have now the honor to inform you that, at the meeting of the Board to-day, the following resolution was arrived at:—

“That the Board, if possible, interview the Honorable the Minister, as they are sure that a representation of the facts from the Board's point of view might relieve any misapprehension which now apparently exists between the Minister and themselves, to the effect that the Minister has not regarded all the issues put before him, and the Board are confirmed in this opinion, as it appears from Mr. Barling's letter of the 19th April last, addressed to the Crown Solicitor, that the only issue set out by the deputation from the Board was (quoting Mr. Barling's own words), ‘Evidently as far as I can understand it, the request narrowed itself down to that of interest,’ which was really not the case, as the Minister will remember. And the Board, as a justification for the stand taken up by them, respectfully request an interview, which they are sure will be of mutual service.”

I desire to add, for the information of the Minister, that the Under Secretary has taken great pains in his private correspondence with me to deal with the various matters at considerable length, and his letters have largely enabled my overcoming the difficulty which the Board found themselves in in connection with the question of capital indebtedness, and their interview regarding it, when the matter was under their consideration.

I trust that the Honorable the Minister will grant the interview, and although the capital indebtedness of the Board to the Government has been gazetted, and no alteration can now be made by law with regard to it, I think that the proposed interview will render the working of this Department with the Minister more harmonious in future.

I have, &c.,
ALEXANDER BROWN,

The Under Secretary for Public Works to The President.

Sir,

Sydney, 5 July, 1893.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 3rd instant, in which you ask that the Minister for Works will be so good as to grant the Board an interview on the subject of the water debt, and am to say that Mr. Secretary Lyne will be pleased to accede to the request of the Board at any time that may be convenient. Thursday week, the 13th instant, at 2 o'clock, will suit Mr. Lyne.

I am, however, to point out that the Board are evidently under some misapprehension with regard to the letter which I wrote to the Crown Solicitor on the subject of the debt. Mr. Lyne is well aware that the Board asked for other concessions besides the reduction of the item of interest, but he regarded the request for the writing off of any portion of the capital indebtedness as quite beyond his power to grant in the interest of the whole of the Colony. He desires to point out that the debt was incurred for the benefit of the Hunter district, and that it would be most unfair to saddle the taxpayers of the Colony generally with any portion of it. The question, therefore, in the Minister's mind, narrowed itself down to the issue, which, by his directions, I placed before the Crown Solicitor. In writing to that gentleman, there was, of course, no need to go any further into the question, as Mr. Lyne only needed legal advice on the point submitted.

The President to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Newcastle, 10 July, 1893.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of 3rd instant, and in reply, to advise you that your letter was considered by the Board at its sitting this morning.

I am requested to state that, whilst very much regretting the Honorable the Minister has not been able to make the allowances which the deputation asked for, they feel sure now, from the review of the situation which you give from your standpoint, that there has been no intentional discourtesy to them.

With regard to the other matters dealt with at length in your letter under reply, my communication to you of even date, acknowledging yours of 5th instant, you will kindly read in conjunction with this.

ALEXANDER BROWN,

The President to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Newcastle, 10 July, 1893.

I do myself the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of 5th instant, intimating that the Honorable the Minister has been good enough to grant the Board an interview on the subject of the water debt, and stating Thursday next, at 2 o'clock, will suit Mr. Lyne.

Your letter engaged the attention of the Board at its sitting this morning, and, in view of the fact that the Honorable the Minister regrets that the request of the Board for the writing off of any portion of the capital indebtedness is quite beyond his power to grant in the interests of the whole of the Colony, they desire me to advise him that inasmuch as the remission of capitalised interest and the allowance for depreciation were two of the strongest points they wished to have the opportunity of again submitting for his consideration, they think the deputation will be unnecessary, and the expense can therefore be avoided.

It has been decided in lieu of the deputation to submit for the consideration of the Honorable the Minister the basis on which the Board think the Act might be amended in the interest of the people of the district whilst at the same time doing full justice to the Colony as a whole.

This matter is, however, not yet sufficiently far enough advanced for me to embody in this communication, but the Board will at their next sitting go into it again at length, and I shall have the pleasure of submitting their views by letter to the Honorable the Minister.

No. 31.

The President to The Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

Newcastle, 21 July, 1893.

Referring to the various communications which have passed between this Board and your Department, and the interviews which have taken place upon the question of capital indebtedness for purposes of water supply, with the administration of which this Board are charged, I desire respectfully to say that, carefully considering all the correspondence and the facts which are now in possession of the Board, they are reluctantly compelled to recognise that correspondence and interviews are absolutely useless for the accomplishment of the objects that they have had from time to time in view when attempting to ameliorate the heavy and excessive charges under which the ratepayers labour in their efforts to repay the expenditure incurred by the Government over the Hunter District Water Supply, and they realise that there is no other way by which they can be relieved from these heavy responsibilities except by an alteration in the Act of Parliament under which the Board is constituted; and they, with great respect to you, submit that, taking all the facts into consideration, they are entitled to ask at your hands, and at the hands of the Parliament of the Colony, a certain measure of relief from the burdens now imposed upon them, and I am to ask that if you concur with the recommendations they now make you will take an early opportunity of bringing such a measure before Parliament as will accomplish the more than desirable results they have in view.

They freely admit that the Act (55 Victoria No. 27), under which they work, must be construed strictly, and that neither you nor they can depart outside the strict letter of the law, as it would be optional on the part of anyone, by Mandamus, or other Court procedure, to compel them to observe the principles of the legal conditions contained in such Act. As the law at present stands the ratepayers are asked asked to find a revenue sufficient to repay the capital indebtedness, which is more than twice as large as the estimated amount that was furnished them as being the prospective capital sum with which they were likely to be charged if the water-works were erected. They are also compelled by law now to provide for the extinction of the capital debt, the reconstruction of renewable works, ordinary maintenance, and all other expenses; a sum of money which involves a striking of the highest rate permitted by the Act, and the demand for which is felt to be excessively heavy by those called upon, in many instances, to unjustly pay it.

The Board respectfully submit that the provisions of the Act are of a far too drastic character, and, in their opinion, were conceived altogether in ignorance of the national character of such works as water supply, and that it never could have been intended that the present generation should, with the ever-increasing, advancing values of water-supply property, be called upon to pay such rates and charges as would, in a certain period—and a very short one—practically relieve successive generations from the responsibility of any payment whatever. They submit in all confidence that in no other national undertaking of such a character as this is the principle applied, and it has been held that under circumstances like those of a water supply, sewerage, State railways, or any other large commercial undertaking of a similar character, if a fair and reasonable amount of interest was provided on the capital expended, and a necessary amount provided for maintenance and depreciation, beyond making such provision no further payment should be required. I would point out to you, in justification of the position taken up by the Board, that shares in water companies in the vicinity of the City of London, which were sold for nominal sums at their early inception, in after years realised thousand of pounds, consequent upon the increased values given to the properties. In confirmation of this assertion I quote the following extract taken from the London Daily Telegraph, of 22nd May, 1890:—

“Now, gentlemen, for the King’s shares in the New River,” so began Mr. Bousefield at the Mart in Token House-yard yesterday at the latest sale of these remarkable properties. “The Royal Shares differ from those of the adventurers in that the holders are wholly absolved from any part in the management of the concern, but the luckless Charles the First made a bad bargain when he sold thirty-six of them for a paltry annuity of £500. In 1889 each single share realised £2,600, and occasionally with dividends like these a consolatory bonus of £1,000 is thrown in. Bidding, which yesterday was not so lively as usual, began at £80,000, and left off at £95,100. The purchaser was congratulated by the auctioneer, and with justice it would seem, seeing that in July last an adventurer’s share realised £122,800.”

And though the supply of water to the City of London may be regarded as an extreme example, it is furnished to the Minister solely with the view of supporting the assertion that the values of water properties never decrease, but are always aggregating, and become, in time, of formidable value. History may probably repeat itself in connection with the Hunter District Water Supply Scheme in later years on a similar, though necessarily smaller, parallel to that of the illustration given above, and the citizens a century hence will find themselves in possession of an immensely valuable asset compulsorily provided for them by their predecessors, and the interest on a loan, such as they could negotiate on the then value of the works, would almost pay all working expenses, and provide them with water, if not absolutely free, certainly at a very nominal rate.

The evidence before the Board is undeniable that in no part of the world other than in Australia, are waterworks administered on the same arbitrary basis, as far as the consumers are concerned, as they are under the present Act by which the Board are constituted. In some cases, even with public companies, the citizens have a right to arbitration of “supervisors” whose business it is to see that the works are maintained in a satisfactory manner, and at the same time assess such a rate as will give not more than a sufficient amount of interest to the public, whose money is invested in the undertaking. But in the case at present under notice not only is no provision made in the Act itself that at the expiration of the time stipulated for the payment of the capital indebtedness the water and sewerage works become the property of those who have paid for them, but they are practically hedged round with such conditions and restrictions that the actions and decisions of the Board are really those of the Government. The Board are regarded as a public body, possessing responsibilities to the ratepayers which they are wholly incapable of exercising, and the ratepayers look upon them as the authors of all the evil.

I am ready to admit, and the Board are willing to publicly acknowledge, that in no case has the Minister exercised the arbitrary powers that he possesses over them, but they feel that if the Act is to be amended this feature of Ministerial control, which might be exercised prejudicially, may well be modified to a considerable extent, or left out altogether in view of relations that might possibly arise if a Minister other than yourself were in office.

The conclusions arrived at by the Board are that the Act should not only be amended in this particular, but in the following directions, in order to make it acceptable to the general public who are concerned in the payment for these very expensive and costly waterworks, and which, as I pointed out in the beginning, have exceeded the original estimates twice over:—

Capital Indebtedness—Clauses 129 and 130.

That the Board should not be called upon to do more than strike a rate sufficient in the cases of both water supply and sewerage:—

- (a) To cover interest at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the cost of the works as gazetted.
- (b) To provide all working expenses properly chargeable against revenue, such as Board’s fees, salaries, office expenses, wages, stores, &c.
- (c) To provide certain annual sums sufficient with interest thereupon at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to make provision for the reconstruction of such items classified at present as permanent works for water supply which will require renewal (as, for instance, pipe-line and suction culvert, reservoirs, engine and boiler houses, and engineers’ residences), on 100 years’ life basis, and of renewable works on sixty years’ life basis on original and all subsequent extensions.
- (d) Against the proposed renewal funds all wages, charges, and cost of materials incurred in connection with the maintenance, repairs, and reconstruction be debited.
- (e) And that clauses 129 and 130 be so amended so as not to compel the Board to strike a maximum rate, should they deem it inexpedient so to do, making it compulsory for the Board to submit a statement of their affairs to the Minister for Works on the 30th of June in each year, together with their recommendation as to what rate should be imposed for the ensuing twelve months, and provision to be made so as to make the rate legal and collectable from the beginning of the half year.

A comparative statement of figures is enclosed showing the annual sums required to be provided in connection with water supply, to comply with the Act as it stands at present, and as would be necessary if amended on the lines indicated above. The figures speak for themselves, and the disparity in the case of sewerage will be even more pronounced.

The recommendations contained in the foregoing paragraphs are submitted to the Minister with very great respect, and with the gravest regard for all leases appertaining to the first year's administration on the part of the Board and with the relations they feel exist between them and the ratepayers upon whom the responsibilities for these repayments and charges rest, and it is to be hoped that the Honorable the Minister will see his way clear at the first opportunity to fall in with the wishes now expressed and endeavour to accomplish fresh legislation which, while harmonising more with the views of the public, will at the same time do justice to the interests of the Colony at large.

The Board feel that they are not asking any concession or any consideration beyond that which should attach to undertakings of such an important and semi-national character as water supply and sewerage.

I have, &c.,

ALEXANDER BROWN,

President.

Parramatta Sewerage Scheme.

It cannot but be a matter of considerable satisfaction to the Minister to be assured that the scheme for the sewerage of Parramatta, to which he, on the advice of his responsible officers, was committed, has been shown, after a very searching inquiry by three professional and independent engineering experts, to be the "simplest, cheapest, and best method of meeting the requirements," and so far from the farm being too small, they are of opinion "that 40 acres (out of the total of 62) will be amply large enough to meet the requirements for many years to come."

While on this point I might be permitted to remark that engineers have a great deal to learn yet as to the actual capabilities of a sewage farm composed of sand and in a climate such as ours.

The Botany Sewage Farm has certainly surprised me, and makes one feel how very little one really knew on the subject. It was originally designed to serve a population of 800 persons per acre, which, at the time, was considered a large number. As a matter of fact, however, it is now (after being at work some five years) dealing, without creating any nuisance whatsoever, with the sewage from a population of over 1,400 per acre; and I am of opinion, if no more land could be obtained and the population increased, the same area could be made to serve for a larger number of people, which leads one to think the Rivers Pollution Commissioners were not so far wrong when, in 1870, they fixed the limit at 2,000 persons per acre.

It should also be remembered that the size of sewage farms is generally decided more from a commercial point of view than from that of a sanitary one. The larger the farm, of course within reason, the better it will pay, the revenue increasing in direct proportion to the size of the farm, while the expenses of management will not increase at anything like the same rate; and this, no doubt, to some extent accounts for the large farms, in proportion to the population, which are generally in use.

The exclusion of the storm-water from the sewers suggested by Messrs. Wardell, Bell, and Chamier, will receive careful consideration when the details of the scheme come to be worked out. I would, however, point out that this is a matter on which the leading sanitary engineers of the present day hold very different views.

Leaving out all artificial schemes, there are three means of dealing with the sewage of towns, as follows:—

- 1st. "Combined System," by which all storm-water is carried off with the sewage.
- 2nd. "Separate System," by which sewage only is dealt with, storm-water being carried by other means.
- 3rd. "Partially Separate System," by which a certain portion of the storm-water is allowed into the sewers.

Each of these systems has its own advocates, and I am inclined to think the "Partially Separate System" is, as a rule, the best. It is this system which has been adopted in the sewerage of Sydney and suburbs, the quantity of water allowed into the Sydney sewers ranging from 4 cubic feet per minute per acre to 1.19 cubic feet per minute per acre, while for Parramatta that quantity was reduced to .92 cubic feet per minute per acre. But, as I said before, it may be quite possible to exclude all storm-water from the Parramatta sewers, in which case a saving in the cost of the scheme might be effected.

The question now to decide is, what is the next step to be taken? and, though this is a matter which rests entirely with the Minister, I might be permitted to say, it would appear of little use to resubmit a purely sanitary engineering question such as this, which has been fully dealt with by a Scientific Board, to a committee of laymen.

ROBT. HICKSON.

Messrs. W. W. Wardell, C. N. Bell, and G. Chamier to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Parramatta Sewerage.

Sir,

Sydney, 28 July, 1893.

Referring to your letter of the 15th July instant, conveying to the undersigned their appointments by the Hon. the Minister of Public Works as a Board to inquire into proposals made for sewage works for the Town of Parramatta, and to your instructions that we should review the evidence given in the Report of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works relative thereto, inspect the site of the proposed works, calling further evidence if necessary, and advise on the question raised as to whether the scheme proposed by the Department for treating the sewage entirely by sewage-farming, as at Botany, should be carried out, or whether it is more desirable to treat it by a process of precipitation and filtration, we have the honor to report as follows:—

In compliance with these instructions we have carefully considered all the evidence adduced, the separate professional reports on the subject, and the finding of the Parliamentary Committee. We also visited the Town of Parramatta, and examined the localities where it is proposed to lay the main sewers, also the condition of drainage of the township, the adjacent river, and the site for the proposed pumping station. We visited the reclamation works at Neutral Bay and Long Cove to ascertain the nature of the material which is to be obtained, and its suitability for sewage-farming uses, and we examined with every care the site chosen for the proposed farm at Parramatta, where a block of land has already been secured by the Government for the purpose.

We made, also, a careful inspection of the Sewage Farm at Botany, and found it in excellent working order, giving satisfactory results, and without any nuisance whatever.

The evidence already before us is so abundant that we did not consider it necessary to invite any further, and we proceeded to weigh it in respect to the two schemes on which our opinion is desired.

There can be no doubt that the evidence given in favour of precipitation and filtration shows how useful it would be in cases of necessity, or where sewage-farming would be impracticable; but as all the conditions necessary to make sewage-farming successful are present in the case of Parramatta, we found no difficulty in arriving at a unanimous decision in its favour, as we consider it the simplest, cheapest, and best method of meeting the requirements.

In this opinion we are supported, not only by the preponderance of the evidence before us, but by the overwhelming concurrence of the leading authorities of the present day on sanitary engineering, many of whom have been quoted in the Commissioner's reply, dated 12th November, 1892, to the Report of the Parliamentary Committee. Those engineers, also, who have recently advised the Australian Governments on the drainage of their principal cities have been of one accord in recommending sewage irrigation, and where their designs have been carried out a perfect success has been realised. The examples at Adelaide, S.A., Christchurch, N.Z., and Botany, are instances in point, and similar works are now in course of construction for the sewage of Melbourne. At Christchurch, N.Z., the area prepared and used is 42 acres, the population draining to it is 30,000, and the sewage discharge 1,200,000 gallons per day. It has been in use ten years without complaint of any kind, although surrounded by houses and farms.

We think, indeed, there can be no reasonable doubt, in view of the varied experience of the past twenty years, that where suitable land is available the practice of distributing the sewage on its surface is the best means for its disposal.

The very important question raised by the Committee as to the area of the ground available being sufficient for the purpose intended, has been so completely answered by the Commissioner's reply, 12/11/92, that we need only refer to it, and we think that the sandy material with which it is proposed to reclaim the low lying portion of the farm is well adapted for sewage irrigation, and the area, 40 acres, so reclaimed will be amply large enough to meet the requirements of the sewage of Parramatta for many years to come. The more elevated portion of the ground, comprising 22 acres, can by means of subsoil drainage be rendered equally serviceable when required, and the whole area of 62 acres then available would, in our opinion, be sufficient for three times the present population of the town. On this account we consider that the initial outlay provided for the preparation of this portion may be postponed for many years, or very largely reduced.

We would also advise the diversion of the rainfall. In the case of Parramatta there is no reason why any rain at all should be admitted to the sewers. The Town of Parramatta is situated on sloping ground, where all rain-water will flow with ease to the nearest storm-water channels or drains. If the rainfall is diverted the quantity of sewage would be reduced by more than one half, and, therefore, the capacity of the land to deal with is at least doubled, while the sewage itself, being so much less diluted, would be better suited for farming requirements. It would also require less pumping and smaller conduits, and would probably reduce the cost of construction by 25 per cent.

We also find that, under the proposal to exclude the rain-water in both cases in comparing the two systems of sewage-farming and the "International," both the initial and annual cost of the former would be about 25 per cent. less than the latter.

Subject, therefore, to what we have suggested, our own judgment and experiences confirm the recommendations of the Department, and supported as we are by the opinion of those who are accepted as the best authorities in Europe on this branch of science, we have no hesitation in advising that—with the modifications mentioned—they should be adopted.

We have, &c.,

Petition to the Legislative Assembly.

PETITION FOR FURTHER WHARF ACCOMMODATION FOR TRAFFIC BETWEEN SYDNEY AND BALMAIN.
(Received by the Legislative Assembly, 26th June, 1888.)

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled,—

The Petition of the undersigned residents and others travelling to and fro between the western suburbs, via Balmain and Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH TO YOUR HONORABLE HOUSE,—

That the only wharfage accommodation available for the ferry steamers carrying passengers has, owing to the rapid growth of the traffic, become quite inadequate to the requirements, and no wharfage whatever at present exists for the use of vehicular traffic.

That the daily foot-passenger traffic over the wharfs, at present used by the travelling public at Erskine-street ferries, exceeds 12,000 ; and the shelter from the weather at the command of the ferry company there plying will accommodate 100 persons, and on occasions, when the traffic is crowded, many persons are compelled to remain in the open street without any shelter whatever.

That the want of wharf accommodation on the Sydney side, for vehicular as well as foot-passenger traffic, is daily growing more urgent for Balmain and suburbs, whose population now numbers upwards of 30,000.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Honorable House will take into consideration the urgent needs of the public in this respect, and cause provision to be made for obtaining the necessary increased wharf accommodation for foot and vehicular traffic without delay.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

REFERRING to the petition I had the honor of presenting to Parliament, praying for wharfage accommodation for travellers by the Balmain ferries, and which was signed by nearly 5,000 persons, may I beg the favour of an intimation from you as to what, if any, steps are being taken regarding the prayer of the petitioners by the Government? I am continually being asked for some information on the subject by my constituents, who are anxiously awaiting your reply.

F. J. Smith, Esq., M.P., to The Honorable Sir Henry Parkes, G.C.M.G.

Dear Sir Henry,

Ionia, Balmain, 29 July, 1888.

Will you pardon my sending you this note as a reminder of the matter of the wharfage accommodation for the Balmain ferries at Erskine-street, petition about which I had the honor of presenting to Parliament during last Session.

You kindly promised me that it would receive early attention during recess, and though I know your time is severely taxed I venture to plead the urgency of the case on behalf of my constituents.

I have, &c.,

FRANK J. SMITH.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.—C.W. (pro U.S.), B.C., 11/8/88.

No. 4.

Report by the Government Wharfinger.

THE wharf accommodation and waiting-rooms occupied by the Balmain Ferry Company are totally inadequate to the present requirement of the traffic between Balmain and Sydney, and it is yearly increasing, but as the Government have no water frontage at this particular part of Darling Harbour, it would be necessary before better accommodation could be provided to resume about 100 feet of the water frontage of the late Mr. Cox's property, with a depth of 30 feet, sufficient for a roadway. This I would recommend. I think with jetties erected, similar to those on the Quay, and leased, a fair interest on the outlay could be obtained.

Re horse ferry, Captain Peters, the manager for the company, informs me that there is no necessity for a ferry for vehicles.

CAPTAIN JACKSON will be good enough to peruse the petition presented to the Legislative Assembly last Session on the wharfage accommodation provided on the Sydney side for the Balmain passenger traffic, and let me have his opinion on the subject at his convenience.

No. 6.

Report by The Government Wharfinger.

Circular Quay Office, 12 September, 1888.

IN compliance with the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer's minute referring to the petition presented to the Legislative Assembly, asking that better wharf accommodation be provided for the Balmain passenger and vehicular traffic on the Sydney side of Darling Harbour, I have the honor to report that I have visited and examined the wharf at present used for the above purpose at the northern side of Erskine-street, and to state that the accommodation provided for the passenger traffic, both with regard to wharf and waiting-rooms, is about the worst in Sydney, and that it is totally inadequate to the present requirements. The inadequate accommodation of the wharfage at this ferry is, however, owing to the facts that the ferry company cannot purchase any of the water frontage occupied by them, nor can they obtain a lease of same for sufficient length of time to warrant the company expending large sums of money on improvements. If either could be obtained the company themselves would provide the necessary accommodation.

The present ferry is situated on the northern side of Erskine-street, on land formerly owned by the late Mr. W. Cox, and of which there is about 170 feet water frontage. The street adjoining Erskine-street is about 60 feet wide; the water frontage is only used by two or three watermen, for whom accommodation could be found elsewhere.

As there cannot be a doubt that better accommodation is urgently required for this large and increasing traffic, I would most respectfully suggest for the Honorable the Treasurer's consideration, that the water frontage of Erskine-street, 60 feet, be utilised for this purpose, but as this alone would not be sufficient, I would recommend in addition thereto that a portion of Mr. Cox's property be resumed, about 40 feet, or sufficient to construct two ferry jetties similar to those on the Circular Quay.

Referring

Referring to wharf accommodation for vehicular traffic, I am of opinion that it is not required at the present time, as there are good roads from Balmain to the city, and it would take a longer time for vehicles to come by water to and from Balmain than by the road.

The resumption of this land, and construction of jetties as suggested, would necessarily involve a large expenditure, and to recoup the Government for same, I would suggest that the Balmain Ferry Company, who would have the use of the jetties, should guarantee a yearly rental for same equal to 10 per cent. on the outlay.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

I have, &c.,

JOHN JACKSON,

Manager.

Mr. F. J. Smith, M.P., can be informed that this matter is under the consideration of the Government.—J.F.B., 26/9/88.

It was decided by the Cabinet some time ago to make better provision than at present exists for wharfage accommodation for the Balmain passenger traffic on the Sydney side of the harbour, and preliminary inquiries were made with the view of giving effect to its decision in the best manner possible, but as the Ministry has tendered its resignation, I must leave the matter to my successor.—J.F.B., 16/1/89.

Dear Sir,

Balmain, 20 November, 1888.

I beg to hand you the enclosed letter, which is but one of numerous urgent appeals. The matter is growing daily as one of most serious and great importance, not only to the comfort, but the safety of the public, and I would respectfully urge that the Government will at once proceed with the work.

Dear Sir,

2 Erskine-street, Sydney, 19 November, 1888.

I am instructed by my directors to remind you of a petition that was signed by a large number of the inhabitants of Balmain some time ago, petitioning the Government and Parliament to provide better wharfage accommodation for ferry purposes.

My directors are desirous to know if there is any likelihood of its accomplishment, as we find, by the continued increasing traffic, that the accommodation is totally inadequate.

My directors are anxious to get better facilities, but it is entirely out of their power to do so.

Our lease of the present wharfs has only a short time to run, and, in the event of our being not able to secure a renewal, it would be extremely awkward. Independent of that larger boats are required, and there is no accommodation for them. My directors, on behalf of your constituents of Balmain, trust that you will press this on the Government and Parliament.

My dear Sir,

Ionia, Balmain, 14 March, 1889.

Will you kindly inform me what steps the Government are taking to carry out the works of establishing a wharf for the Balmain ferry passengers on the Sydney side, the construction of which was agreed to in the Cabinet of the former Parkes Ministry, but which seems to have remained in abeyance for some time? The urgency of the matter is my excuse for troubling you and asking for an early reply.

Minute by The Honorable the Colonial Treasurer.

The Treasury, 26 March, 1889.

On the 26th June, 1888, a petition, signed by 3,304 persons, was presented to the Legislative Assembly, pointing out the inadequate wharfage accommodation for the ferry steamers carrying passengers from Balmain and suburbs to Sydney, and praying that provision might be made for obtaining the necessary increased wharf accommodation for foot and vehicular traffic without delay.

The object of this petition was favourably considered by the Government of Sir Henry Parkes in the year 1888, and, under a minute of the then Colonial Treasurer (Mr. J. F. Burns), in August, 1888, a report was obtained from Captain Jackson, the Manager of the Public Wharfs, strongly supporting the views of the petitioners already alluded to, and suggesting that a sufficient quantity of land at the bottom of Erskine-street should be resumed, with 170 feet frontage to the waters of Darling Harbour, for the purposes stated in the petition.

As I consider this a matter of great importance, and that the congestion of traffic at this particular locality, which is greatly increasing, should be remedied, I propose to the Cabinet that certain land, described below, and understood to be the property of the late Mr. William Cox, be resumed under the provisions of the "Lands for Public Purposes Acquisition Act," for the purpose of constructing thereon certain jetties and otherwise providing suitable wharf accommodation at that part of Darling Harbour.

To meet the expense of purchasing the land required for the purposes indicated, I recommend that the sum of £38,250 be set apart from the Treasurer's Advance Account for the purpose of resuming the land, land, which is valued by the Government Land Valuer at that sum, and that the Hon. the Minister for Works be requested to obtain the minute of the Governor and Executive Council authorising the resumption of the land in question, and that thereupon, when approved by His Excellency in Council, a proclamation in terms of the Act should issue immediately.

W.M.

DESCRIPTION OF LAND.

All that piece or parcel of land situate at the foot of Erskine-street, Darling Harbour, in the city of Sydney. Bounded on the north by the property of the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company; on the south by Erskine-street; on the east by Lime-street; and on the west by the waters of Darling Harbour, 170 feet, with all the buildings erected thereon.

No. 11.

The Land Valuer to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Estimate of the Value of certain Wharf Property on the eastern side of Darling Harbour.

29 March, 1889.

In compliance with the verbal request of the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade on the 27th instant. I have now the honor to submit an estimate of the present value of certain wharf property in the city of Sydney, bounded on the south by Erskine-street, on the east by Shelley-street, on the north by the property of the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company, and on the west by Darling Harbour, to which it has a frontage of 170 feet, by an average depth of about 130 feet.

This estimate is as carefully made as was possible in the brief period allowed me for the purpose, and it is based upon a consideration of all the transactions in wharf properties on the eastern side of Darling Harbour of which I could find any trace in Land Titles Office, or in the auctioneers' weekly reports since 1881, and also, to some extent, by the municipal assessments. I was confined to the sources of information mentioned, which are, however, probably the most reliable, by the necessity for pursuing my inquiries with the utmost caution, as strongly impressed upon me by the Under Secretary.

The land now in question is undoubtedly of great value by reason of its possessing several important advantages, of which I shall only mention—1st. That it is in one of the best positions in Darling Harbour, regarded as a wharf having good accommodation for berthing vessels, and being conveniently situated in relation to the principal warehouses and produce stores in the city. 2nd. As a site for warehouses the eastern frontage to Shelley-street is in every way suitable; and the frontage to Erskine-street, which is a most important and busy thoroughfare, is especially adapted for retail business of almost any kind. 3rd. The excellence of the approaches by way of Kent, Sussex, Lime, and Erskine Streets, the latter, with the exception of a break of 2 or 3 chains in York-street, leading direct from the General Post Office, add considerably to the value of the property.

I estimate the present value of this property at £225 per foot for 170 feet harbour frontage, or, altogether, £38,250. This amount includes the value of improvements and compensation to tenants for forced surrender should such be required.

I annex a tabulated statement of prices realised for wharf properties in Darling Harbour, and also the annual value of the property in question as fixed by the municipal assessors, and I beg to observe, with reference to the former, that none of the transactions shown have taken place since 1882; and, with reference to the latter, that the value was assessed upon the improvements, and as these are of a very inferior character, and altogether unworthy of the site, it does not even approximately indicate the value of the land.

Not being aware of the nature and extent of the improvements which would be made upon this land should it be resumed, I am unable to say to what extent the cost might be recouped by the sale or lease of surplus land, but, should the whole area not be required, there is no doubt it would be so to a considerable extent, as any improvements effected on the harbour frontage of this property would much enhance the value of the residue.

Case for Opinion of Counsel.

A OWNS a valuable wharf property which has been resumed by the Government, the date of resumption being the 3rd day of January, 1890. A leased the jetties, which form a portion of the wharf property, from the Government at a rental of £150 per annum, payable in advance. A, however, did not pay the rent, and the Government, by a notification which appeared in the Government Gazette of the 19th day of September, 1890, declared the lease forfeited. The lease contains the following clauses:—

"The lease not to confer any right to purchase the land. The lessees to remove the structures or any of them at their own cost and without compensation whenever required by the Government to do so. Should the land be resumed any erection upon it may be retained without compensation beyond the cost price, less a sum of deterioration."

A question has now arisen as to what time the forfeiture would take effect. Counsel will please advise whether the forfeiture takes effect from the date of notification in Gazette, viz., 19th September, 1890, or from the date when payment should be made, viz., 1st January, 1890.

Opinion.

UNDER 90th section of Crown Lands Act of 1884, the Governor may, for default in payment of the rent declare any lease to be forfeited. There must be a declaration of forfeiture before the forfeiture takes place. It appears that the declaration of forfeiture in this case was only made upon the 19th day of September, 1890. I am clear that the forfeiture did not and could not take place at any time prior to that date. The forfeiture took place upon the 19th September, 1890, and not before.

Land at Darling Harbour.—Claim of Eliza Cox and Robert Henry Cox, and Messrs. Rock Davis, Edmund Parks, and Henry Farnsworth.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, 20 May, 1890.

I have the honor to forward herewith notice of claim and abstract of Eliza Cox and others, in respect of land at Darling Harbour resumed for wharfage accommodation purposes.

The claim is made in respect of land situated in Darling Harbour, foot of Erskine-street, Sydney, known as Victoria Wharf.

I have examined the title produced to me, and find that by grant dated the 30th November, 1847, 2 roods 34 perches, allotment 1, section 56, Sydney, were granted to George Allen in fee, and he, by indenture dated 10th May, 1865, registered No. 19, book 93, conveyed part thereof to James Cox and Henry Robert Cox, in fee as tenants in common.

I also find that the latter persons were also registered as the proprietors as tenants in common under the Real Property Act of 14 perches, situate on the west of the 2 roods 34 perches abovementioned, and lying between the original high-water mark and the present high-water mark of Darling Harbour, and forming part of 2 roods 5 perches granted to George Allen on the 30th March, 1865, by grant registered, volume xiii, folio 216.

As to one undivided moiety in the lands mentioned, Henry Robert Cox by his will dated 21st January, 1884, after making certain specific bequests of personalty, gave, devised, and bequeathed the residue residue of his personalty and all his real property whatsoever and wheresoever unto his trustees and executors, Eliza Cox, James Cox, and Henry Robert Cox, upon the trusts therein mentioned, but did not confer any power of sale on his trustees.

The testator died on the 8th October, 1885, and his will was duly proved on the 12th November following.

As to the other undivided moiety.—James Paul Gee Cox—who, I presume, is identical with James Cox above mentioned, but no evidence of this is given by his will, dated the 9th of October, 1886—after certain specific devises and bequests of personal property, devised all his real estate whatsoever and wheresoever unto his trustees, Rock Davis, Edmund Parks, and Henry Farnsworth, their executors and administrators, as to all his estate and interest in that part of his property known as the Victoria Wharf, upon trusts in favour of his nephew, James Paul Gee Cox, for life, and his wife for life, and after their decease upon trust for the former's children, as tenants in common with remainder over in default of issue. The will does not confer any power of sale on the trustees.

The testator died on the 15th November, 1887, and his will was duly proved on the 25th January, 1888.

I am unable to say whether the land resumed comprises the land or part of the land above referred to, that being a matter for a surveyor to determine; but, assuming such to be the case, I think that Mrs. Eliza Cox and Henry Robert Cox, as surviving trustees and executors of the will of Henry Robert Gee Cox, deceased, as to one moiety of the land, and Messrs. Rock Davis, Edmund Parks, and Henry Farnsworth, as trustees and executors of the will of James Paul Gee Cox, as to the other moiety of the land, may be dealt with as to the compensation to be paid for their respective interests, but the amounts should be paid into Court.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WILLIAMS,
Crown Solicitor.

Dear Sir,

At the conference held between the firms of Messrs. Mills, Pile, and Wilson, Hardie and Gorman, Batt, Rodd, and Purves, and own, on the matter of valuation of the freehold, comprising Cox's Estate wharf property, &c., Darling Harbour, Erskine-street, and Shelley-street, the amount fixed was the sum of £57,000, and the question of the value of jetties was left for you to have determined by a practical man. It was suggested, say, a wharf contractor or engineer.

It was pointed out to us that one or two offers had been made to lease the property for a long term, and in one case to purchase it, but that the trustees had no power of sale.

Report by The Land Valuer.

Report and valuation on the claim of Eliza Cox and others in respect of land at Darling Harbour resumed for wharfage accommodation purposes.

Department of Public Works, Valuation Branch, Sydney, 5 November, 1890.

Particulars of claim:—Claimant and owners, Eliza Cox and others. Area taken, 3 roods 8 perches. Amount of claim, £88,000.

REPORT.

THIS claim is made in respect of land situated in Darling Harbour, foot of Erskine-street, known as Victoria Wharf.

The land in question is of great value being in one of the best positions in Darling Harbour, having good accommodation for berthing vessels, and being conveniently situated in relation to most of the principal warehouses and produce stores in the City. Its value might be immediately and very largely increased by the construction thereon of warehouses and other improvements more worthy of the site than the inferior class of buildings, &c., by which it is now occupied.

It will be seen by the annexed copy of a letter from Richardson and Wrench, that a joint valuation of the property was made by that firm together with Mills, Pile, and Wilson, Hardie and Gorman, and Batt, Rodd, and Purves, who assessed the value at £57,000, and on the assumption that Mr. H. Clarke had a claim as tenant of a considerable amount, and without making any allowance for the value of the wharfs and jetties which should be added to that of the freehold, Mr. Clarke's claim was £2,263 which is, however, untenable, and the value of the wharfs and jetties is estimated by a competent valuer at £4,236 12s. 6d.

These

These two items added to the estimate of the firms mentioned would have shown a value for the property of £63,499 12s. 6d. I also annex a copy of an offer of which I have seen the original made by Messrs. Corrigan and Reidy, eleven months before date of resumption to lease the property now in question for £3,000 per annum, or to purchase for the sum of £60,000.

Although, I am of opinion that the value assessed by the firms mentioned is very high, yet in view of the fact that to reject their valuation would involve the Department in a hopeless contest, as, there have been no recent transactions in wharf properties which would clearly justify such rejection, I, therefore beg to recommend the payment of the £57,000 mentioned, together with a further sum of £3,000, being £1,000 in consideration of the erroneous assumption that Mr. Clarke had a valid claim, and £2,000 for the cost price of the materials of the wharfs and jetties which is £1,336 12s. 6d. less than the valuation of Mr. Davies on account of deterioration, or altogether £60,000, which amount will include compensation for forced sale.

The Crown Solicitor reports that Mrs. Eliza Cox and Henry Robert Cox as surviving trustees and executors of the will of Henry Robert Cox deceased, as to one moiety of the land, and Messrs. Rock Davis, Edmund Parks, and Henry Farnsworth as trustees and executors of the will of James Paul Gee Cox, as to the other moiety of the land, may be dealt with as to the compensation to be paid for their respective interests, but the amounts should be paid into Court.

The Crown Solicitor to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Land in Erskine and Shelly Streets, Sydney—Claim of Robert Francis Geary Henderson.

Sir, Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 20 May, 1890.

I have the honor to forward herewith notice of claim and abstract of Mr. R. F. G. Henderson, in respect of land in Erskine and Shelly Streets, Sydney, resumed for purposes in connection with the Darling Harbour wharfage accommodation.

The claim is made in respect of lot 3 of the Phoenix Wharf property, Sydney, having frontages of 60 feet 2 inches to Erskine-street, and 54 feet to Shelly-street, with depths from Erskine-street to 54 feet 5 inches, and from Shelly-street of 59 feet, upon which are erected premises known as "Noonan's Family Hotel."

I have examined the title produced for my inspection, and find that, by indenture dated the 15th May, 1865, registered number 414, book 93, the Honorable George Allen conveyed to Robert Henderson lot 3 of the Phoenix Wharf property, Sydney, having a frontage to the west side of Shelley-street 54 feet 5 inches, by a depth on the north of 59 feet, and a frontage to the north side of Erskine-street of 60 feet 2 inches, by a depth of 54 feet on the west, being portion of 2 roods and 34 perches, granted to said George Allen on 30th November, 1847, as allotment 1 of section 56.

This deed contains a covenant to produce the grant, and also a conveyance, 20th March, 1865, George Allen and Jane (his wife), first part; George Wigram Allen, second part; and said George Allen, third part.

By his will, dated the 20th April, 1869, Robert Henderson appointed William Speer and Henry Clarke trustees and executors, and devised to them all his real estate, and as to said lot 3 upon trust in favour of testator's grandson, Robert Francis Geary Henderson until he attained twenty-one, and after he attained that age, upon trust for him in fee.

The

The testator died on the 11th November, 1869, and probate of his will was granted on the 17th February, 1870.

The trustees, by indenture dated 3rd December, 1888, registered number 333, book 403, conveyed, inter alia, the said lot to R. F. G. Henderson.

It will be observed that the land is under lease to Thomas Noonan, expiring on 22nd February, 1898, and another lease, expiring on the 22nd February, 2011. From a letter I have received from the claimant's solicitors, it would appear that the latter year has been inserted in error, and that the year 1911 is meant.

I am unable to say whether the land resumed comprises the land described in the above-mentioned deed, that being a matter for a surveyor to determine; but, assuming such to be the case, I think that Mr. Henderson may be dealt with as to the amount of compensation to be paid, but of course the lessees' interests will be considered in determining that amount.

To Robert Francis Geary Henderson,

Claimant in respect of the land hereunder described, resumed under the Lands for Public Purposes Acquisition Act,—

Take notice that the land hereunder described, being that in respect of the resumption whereof, under the authority of the aforesaid Act, your claim for compensation has been lodged, has been valued at the sum of £7,865.

Description of land or damage in respect of which claim has been made.

All that piece or parcel of land, being lot 3 of the Phoenix Wharf property, situate in the city of Sydney, and having frontages of 60 ft. 2 in. to Erskine-street, and 54 feet to Shelley-street, upon which are erected premises known as "Noonan's Family Hotel."

No. 34.

Messrs. Norton & Co. to The Secretary for Public Works.

Sir, Marlborough Chambers, O'Connell-street, Sydney, 12 December, 1890.

Referring to the notice of valuation of 5th December instant, served by you upon Robert Francis Geary Henderson in respect of his claim for lot 3 of the Phoenix Wharf property situate in the City of Sydney, and having a frontage of 60 feet 2 inches to Erskine-street and 54 feet to Shelley-street, and in respect of which you only value his claim at £7,865, we think some error must have been made in the valuation of the property at this low price.

We are inclined to think that the valuers, in arriving at their valuation, must have taken into account the value of the reversion, without also taking into account the present value of the rent of the property.

There is no doubt that the land alone, at the time of the resumption—apart from the buildings—was worth £300 a foot on the Erskine-street frontage, or £18,000, a price which the claimant could have got for it from more than one buyer, the present value of which, without allowing anything for its probable increase, due at the end of the lease, or twenty-one years' time, at 4 per cent., being the reversion rate, is, say, £7,898, whilst the value of the lease, which gives a net rental of £5 a week for twenty-one years, valued on a 5 per cent. basis, amounts to £3,875 18s. 6d., making together £11,773, adding to which 10 per cent. for forced sale, amounting to £1,177, we get a result of £12,950 without taking into account either the value of the buildings or the probable increase in value of the property.

From the above figures we think it is manifest the Government valuers omitted to take into account the value of the lease—£3,875, and have made no allowance for forced sale.

Whilst setting out the above as the basis of valuation on which we assume the Government valuers have acted, we would point out to you that in resuming properties held under long lease, the correct rule has been established in England and is laid down, that the property should be valued at its full market value at the date of the resumption, and the owner of the freehold and reversion is entitled to be paid the full market value of the property, including goodwill, as it stood at the date of the resumption, after deducting the market value of the leaseholder's interest in respect of his lease, and that to this sum there should, in general, be added 10 per cent. for forced sale.

Applying this as the correct principle for valuing such properties, we think you will have no hesitation in estimating the total value of our client's claim at the amount at which it was stated, viz., £15,000, especially considering that it is a family property, which belonged to the claimant's grandfather.

In the event of your not seeing your way to amend the valuation Mr. Henderson will reluctantly be compelled to commence proceedings.

We have, &c.

Valuation Branch, Sydney, 6 February, 1891.

The resumption of R. F. G. Henderson's freehold property, corner of Erskine and Shelley Streets, Sydney.

Messrs. Norton, Smith, Westgarth, and Company, Solicitors for the claimant, by their letter of 12th December, 1890, set out their ideas of how this property should be valued in the interests of the claimant for the purposes of compensation, and stating their opinion as to what should be the correct basis for the valuers appointed by the Crown to go upon.

We consider we have taken the full market value of this property as on the date of resumption, viz., 3rd January, 1890, and having deducted therefrom the amount due to the tenant under his long lease at a rental of £5 10s. per week for the approximate average of the twenty-one years, we have given the freeholder the full value also of his interest in the property, together, in each case, with the sum of 10 per cent. for forced sale. The amount we have given will, at 5 per cent., return the owner an annual sum of £107 over and above his rent returns for the property during the twenty-one years—which he had tied himself up to by his voluntary lease.

With reference to your letter of the 12th December last, in connection with the claim of Mr. R. F. G. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Sir,

133, Pitt-street, Sydney, 17 March, 1891.

Messrs. Norton & Co. have handed to us your letter of the 17th February in connection with a claim of Mr. R. F. G. Henderson for land resumed for wharfage purposes, Erskine and Shelley Streets.

We have been requested to make a valuation and to ask permission to interview the Government Valuer with a view of pointing out a very serious mistake which has been made in filling up the notice of claim, namely, that the property is leased up to the 20th February, 2011, whereas it should be up to 20th February, 1911, showing a mistake of 100 years.

Our valuation of the property free from leases at the present time is £15,000, and we have valued for Mr. Noonan his interest in the lease, through Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, and we understand that Mr. Noonan's claim has been settled.

Our valuation for the lease was £3,000. We, therefore, have told Messrs. Norton & Co. that in our opinion Mr. Henderson should receive £12,000 for compensation—that is, £15,000 less £3,000 = £12,000, and we are now instructed by them to endeavour to settle the matter on this basis.

We shall be glad, therefore, if you will favour us with your early reply.

In reply to your letter of the 17th ultimo, in connection with the claim of Mr. R. F. G. Re R. F. G. Henderson's property at corner of Erskine and Shelley Streets.

Sir,

133, Pitt-street, Sydney, 29 April, 1891.

Adverting to your letter of the 8th instant, we have now the honor to state that our Mr. Gorman has had an interview with the Government Valuer (Mr. Thompson), and Messrs. Gregg and Mills.

We understand that the valuers for the Government have based their estimate for compensation on the assumption that this property was an investment for a certain number of years at a certain rental. We respectfully submit that this property should not be treated as though it had been for sale subject to a certain lease; but, on the contrary, the owner of the property could not dispose of it for a long number of years, and therefore he not only leased it but received a cash consideration for a longer lease covering certain building improvements, with the ultimate object of participating in an increased value, and which would certainly have followed, and for this strong reason it appears to us that it would be manifestly unfair to treat this case in the same way as you would treat a property offered in the present market and subject to a long lease.

We, therefore, respectfully submit that compensation should be paid in the following way:—By estimating the market value at the time of resumption, subject to a deduction for the beneficial interest in the lease, and which we estimate as follows:—Say 60 feet fronting Erskine-street at £250 per foot. £15,000, our estimate at the time of resumption, less £3,000, our estimate for Mr. Noonan's lease. This we made for Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, who act for Mr. Noonan, leaving £12,000, a fair sum for compensation, including allowances for forced sale, &c.

We may be permitted to remark that for the destruction of the business of the hotel and for the interest in the lease, the tenant has been compensated by the payment of a higher sum than has been offered the freeholder, and we think that an interest in a lease terminating in 1911, and the destruction of the business carried on in the premises by the lessee should not be so high a sum as would be paid to the owner of the freehold and buildings.

We, therefore, ask that the matter may be reconsidered on the basis of our figures, and respectfully submit that if the matter cannot be considered by the valuers in the way we put it, it comes well within the discretionary power of the honorable the Minister.

We therefore ask for an early consideration and reply.

Henderson's Resumption.

Sir,

133, Pitt-street, Sydney, 29 July, 1891.

Adverting to our Mr. Gorman's interview with you this morning, and to your promise to soon obtain for us the Minister's decision, permit us to emphasise the following:—

Firstly, Mr. Henderson could not sell.

Secondly, that he leased for the best rental up to the time that he could sell, and on an improving lease.

Thirdly, that it would appear to be inequitable to Mr. Henderson to receive a less sum than the present market value, less the beneficial interest in the lease, and which has been determined by the Government Valuers.

Fourthly, that the sum offered was a lower amount than has been paid to Mr. Henderson's tenant.

We, therefore, respectfully submit that compensation should be paid on the basis set out by us.

The solicitors, Messrs. Norton & Co., representing Mr. Henderson, are very anxious to have this matter settled early.

Yours faithfully,

HARDIE AND GORMAN.

Advice on Evidence.

MR. THOMPSON and the others who valued the property on behalf of the Government will, of course, be necessary witnesses. I think that some other witnesses with experience in valuing interests in land should also be called.

The main point in the case, as raised by Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, seems to be as to what is the correct principle to govern the valuation. If capitalizing the rent is correct, there seems to be no doubt of the accuracy of the Government valuation. Will it make any difference if the whole freehold value is taken and the lessee's interest deducted? It appears to me that the same result ought to come out either way. It would be desirable for defendant's witnesses to work out the calculation from the two points of view. If an actuarial calculation is required, evidence should be obtained from some competent actuary. There seems to me a good deal in Hardie and Gorman's argument that a freeholders' interest is something more than the rent capitalized. But, of course, if Hardie and Gorman's freehold valuation, £15,000 is excessive, their whole calculation fails, so far as it is based upon it. If the freehold value is correct, it would seem incumbent upon defendant to show that the Government valuation is all that the plaintiff ought to get of it, and that the lessee's interest is equal to the residue.

Mr. Andrew Lyell to The Government Valuers.

In re Henderson's claim for land resumed in Erskine-street.

Gentlemen,

68, Pitt-street, Sydney, 13 May, 1892.

I have carefully considered the question of the value at the date of the resumption of Henderson's interest as the owner of the freehold of this property—subject to a lease, then having an unexpired currency of about twenty-one years, at a rental of £260 per annum for the first eight years, and £312 for the remaining thirteen years—together with a building covenant on the part of the lessee of £1,800.

I may premise that I do not base my estimate of value upon the price which might have been obtained for the property at the time of resumption had there been no lease, but exclusively upon its value as an investment—subject to the above lease.

1. The average annual rental, for the whole remaining period of the lease of twenty-one years, was	288	0	0
2. The average annual rental, for which the building covenant of £1,800 was an equivalent, was	140	0	0
Total per annum	£428	0	0

The owner was, therefore, at the date of resumption, deriving a rental of £288 per annum from his property, and it was to be improved by his tenant to an extent which was equivalent to his paying an additional rental of £140 per annum.

I understand that about the date of resumption the lessee, Prescott, sold out to Noonan for £3,100, who also fulfilled the building covenant.

It must, however, be assumed that a portion of this bonus was paid for the goodwill of the business, and unless it were possible to distinguish between what was given by reason of the increased rental value of the property and what for goodwill of the business, I could not estimate how far this bonus being given affected the freehold value of the property.

I must, therefore, fall back upon the only other two modes of valuation which are open, viz.:—

a. So many years' purchase of the accruing rental value, at £428 per annum.

As to this—looking at the contingencies likely to affect public-house properties during the currency of the lease, and at a time when improvements in such properties involving considerable expenditure are essential to maintaining the business—I cannot value such property at more than seventeen years' purchase, or £7,276. Or,

	£	s.	d.
b. 1. The present value of an annuity of £288 per annum for twenty-one years, computed at 5 per cent. interest per annum	3,692	0	0
2. The present value of the property at the end of the lease, adding to its present value an increase of (say) 40 per cent., i.e. , £7,276 + £2,910 = £10,186, computed at 5 per cent. interest per annum	3,699	0	0
	£7,391	0	0

Henderson v. the Minister for Works.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, 2 September, 1892.

I have the honor to report that the plaintiff in this case has offered to settle this action upon payment of the amount offered by the Government, namely, £7,865 and £125 towards payment of his costs.

This case, which is not free from difficulty, has been very fully considered in consultation with Sir Julian Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, the counsel for the Crown, and the conclusion arrived at was that we ought to be able to sustain before a jury the figures of the Government valuation.

But in view of the fact that the trial will last several days; that there are certain intricate points to be elucidated in order to make the matter plain to a jury; and that the additional costs of such a trial which could not be received from the plaintiff as party and party costs in the event of success would amount at least to the sum now agreed to be taken by the plaintiff; and, further, that there is always a certain amount of risk in cases tried before a jury,—counsel are of opinion that the proposal of the plaintiff should be accepted, and I have, therefore, the honor to recommend that the case be settled upon the lines mentioned.

The plaintiff's claim in the case was £15,000.

The case stands in the list for Monday next, and I shall, therefore, be glad if you will let me have instructions by to-morrow morning, in order that the case may be struck out if settled.

Premises, Shelley and Erskine Streets, Sydney.—Claim of Henry Clarke.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, 2 May, 1890.

I have the honor to forward herewith notice of claim and abstract of Henry Clarke in respect of premises as above, known as "Victoria Wharf," Darling Harbour, resumed for wharfage accommodation purposes.

The claim is made as lessee in respect of premises known as Victoria Wharf.

I have examined the title, and find that by lease, dated 10th April, 1885, registered number 639, book 315, between James Cox and Herbert Henry Cox of the one part and Henry Clarke of the other part, all those stores and jetties then occupied by the said Henry Clarke, and known as the "Victoria Wharf," were demised unto the lessee, his executors, administrators, and assigns for the term of six years from the 10th day of April, 1885, at the yearly rental of £1,200. In the lease is contained a special clause as follows:—"In the event of the Government resuming any portion of the property known as the Victoria Wharf, the lessee, his heirs or assigns should not have any claim on the Government for remuneration in any shape whatever, the lessors claiming solely all remuneration that might be given by the Government for such resumption."

The lessee appears to have underleased the premises.

In view of the special clause above quoted, I fail to see that Mr. Clarke can substantiate any claim for compensation in consequence of the resumption.

Land Erskine and Shelley Streets.—Noonan to The Queen.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, 16 March, 1891.

I have the honor to inform you that this matter has been completed, and to return herewith the papers herein.

I am not aware if your Department has made any arrangement with Mr. Noonan as to remaining in occupation of the premises resumed, and would draw your attention to my letter to you of date the 13th instant, wherein I pointed out what it appeared from a receipt produced to me that Mr. Noonan was still paying his former landlord, Mr. Henderson, rent for the premises.

I take it that the latter will have to account for the rent received by him since the date of resumption, when his claim is being dealt with.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WILLIAMS,
Crown Solicitor.

The Treasury has been communicated with on this subject. This letter should have accompanied the papers mentioned herein forwarded to your Department yesterday.—JOHN WILLIAMS (per C.E.P.), 17/3/91.

The Land Valuer to The Under Secretary for Public Works.

Valuation Branch, Sydney, 2 June, 1891.

HEREWITH I beg to submit a memorandum of agreement between the Minister for Public Works and Thomas Noonan, with reference to land and premises in Erskine-street, Sydney. It has been prepared by the Crown Solicitor, and is now ready for execution, with the exception of a blank to be filled by the day of the week on which the payments should be made, and which I think should be Monday. As to the amount payable, Mr. Noonan objects to it being fixed at £6 weekly, as his rent was £5 per week before resumption, and taking into consideration the uncertainty of the tenure under which he is to be permitted to occupy the premises, viz., on sufferance, I think a fair payment would be £5 10s. per week.

No. 73.

Mr. J. W. Saunders to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

18, Castlereagh-street, 15 July, 1891.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instructions of the 9th instant, as to the collection of the rent of the property in Erskine-street, occupied by Mr. T. Noonan, for which I am much obliged; and the matter shall have my best attention.

There are also certain stores in Shelley-street, belonging to the Government, the rent of which I have not as yet been instructed to collect.

Kindly let me know if I am to do so, and oblige.

I have, &c.,

J. W. SAUNDERS.

Report by The Treasury Inspector.

Inspecting Branch, the Treasury, 8 August, 1891.

THESE papers deal with the collection of rents on certain Government properties situated at Victoria wharf, Erskine and Shelley Streets.

Mr. J. W. Saunders, the Government Agent, was authorised to collect these rents by Treasury minute, 16th September, 1890.

This

This has been done in all cases, with the exception of the following:—

Stores occupied by H. Clarke	400 per annum.
" " Jarvis & Co	48 "
" " J. Carter	48 "
" " F. Buckle	45 "

I understand from Mr. Saunders that Mr. H. Clarke rents all these properties, and declines paying rent until a certain claim against the Government for compensation has been satisfied, and that he, Mr. Saunders, received verbal instructions from Mr. Eagar, to leave these rentals in abeyance.

With a view to the matter being settled, I would now suggest that Mr. Saunders be instructed to apply for these rents, due since 3rd January, 1890, and in the event of the lessees declining to pay, to furnish a report to the Treasury for submission to the Crown Solicitor.

PERCY E. WILLIAMS,
Treasury Inspector.

Mr. Clarke, it appears, declines to pay rent until his claim for compensation is settled. Mr. Williams recommends that Mr. Saunders be instructed to apply for the rent, and, in the event of a refusal to pay, to furnish a report to the Treasury for reference to the Crown Solicitor.

Submitted for approval.—J.J.H., 10/8/91. The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.
