The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze the data. This includes both primary and secondary sources, as well as the specific techniques employed for data processing and statistical analysis.

The third section provides a detailed overview of the results obtained from the study. It includes a series of tables and graphs that illustrate the trends and patterns observed in the data. The findings are discussed in the context of the research objectives and compared with existing literature.

Finally, the document concludes with a summary of the key findings and offers some recommendations for future research. It suggests that further studies should focus on expanding the scope of the data collection and exploring the underlying causes of the observed trends.

The following table presents the data for the first set of experiments. It shows the relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable across different conditions.

Condition	Variable A	Variable B	Variable C
1	1.2	0.8	1.5
2	1.5	1.0	1.8
3	1.8	1.2	2.1
4	2.1	1.5	2.4
5	2.4	1.8	2.7

The data indicates a clear positive correlation between the variables. As the independent variable increases, the dependent variables also show a corresponding increase. This trend is consistent across all experimental conditions.

The second set of experiments was designed to test the hypothesis that the rate of change in the dependent variable is directly proportional to the independent variable. The results of these experiments are shown in the table below.

Condition	Rate of Change	Independent Variable
1	0.5	1.0
2	1.0	2.0
3	1.5	3.0
4	2.0	4.0
5	2.5	5.0

The results confirm the hypothesis, showing that the rate of change is indeed directly proportional to the independent variable. This relationship is a key finding of the study and has important implications for the field.

TWENTY-FIFTH REPORT OF THE AUDITOR-GENERAL

BEING ON

THE TREASURER'S STATEMENTS OF THE RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND, AND OTHER MONEYS, FOR THE HALF-YEAR 1ST JANUARY TO 30TH JUNE, 1895.

(Under Act 33 Victoria No. 18.)

1. THE period of the Financial Year having been changed, so as to close at the 30th June instead of the 31st December, and the Accounts to 31st December, 1894, having already been reported upon, the Statements of Accounts now submitted are for the period of six months only, that is to say, for the period from 1st January to 30th June, 1895.

2. Those Statements of the Treasurer's Receipts and Payments were received for examination on the 6th September, were returned for correction and suggested amendments on the 10th October, and were received back from the Treasury on the 7th November, but not so fully corrected and amended as desired.

3. To preserve a continuity of the reports of past financial periods, the same general form of analysis and explanation of the Treasurer's figures has been adopted as on former occasions, and I have now the honor to submit to the Legislative Assembly my report thereupon, as directed by the 38th section of the Audit Act of 1870.

GENERAL STATE OF THE BALANCES.

4. The gross results of the operations upon the General Public Account of the Colony, including the three main accounts of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, the Loan Fund, and the Trusts Fund, during the half-year from 1st January to 30th June, 1895, are represented by the following figures:—

Credit balances in cash and securities on 1st January, 1895	£6,721,458 11 8
Receipts within the half-year	7,666,883 10 11
					14,388,342 2 7
Disbursements during the half-year	8,543,885 14 5
Credit balances at 30th June, 1895	5,844,456 8 2
Represented by:—
Cash and securities at 30th June, 1895	4,878,078 4 2
Cash in London at 30th April, 1895	966,378 4 0
					£5,844,456 8 2

5. The transactions in London from 1st May to the 30th June show a balance on the debit side of £216,575 8s. 11d. [vide Appendix B.] That balance is still in course of adjustment in Sydney, but it decreases the total actual credit balance in Sydney and London at 30th June to £5,627,880 19 3

To that balance there have to be added the following

Temporary Issues recoverable in cash, or by adjustment hereafter, on account of the—

Treasurer's Advance Vote for 1893	£19,342	16	4
Do do 1894	16,072	18	5
Do do 1895	23,824	3	6
Issues under the Act 31 Victoria, No. 9, on account of the Centennial Park	199,411	2	10
General Post Office Approaches Improvements (53 Victoria, No. 13)	468,541	18	10
Other Temporary Advances	3,372	2	11
			£730,565	2	10
			<hr/>

The total balance of Ways and Means in Sydney and

London at 30th June was therefore £6,358,446 2 1

Contributed by—

Trust Fund...	6,058,446	2	1
Railway Loan Redemption Fund	300,000	0	0
Loans Fund—General Loan Account	Nil.
Consolidated Revenue Fund	Nil.
			£6,358,446	2	1

6. The difference between this gross total of Credit Balances and the gross total of Cash Balances shewn at page 3 arises, as may be seen, on the one hand by the credit taken for Recoverable Advances, £730,565 2s. 10d., and by the debit for London payments in May and June of £216,575 8s. 11d., or a net addition of credit to the amount of £513,989 13s. 11d. But the whole amount thus increased to £6,538,446 2s. 1d. is shewn to consist entirely of trust moneys, notwithstanding that the General Loan Account appears, by the Treasurer's Statement, to be in credit to the amount of £653,199 11s. 6d., while it is really overdrawn by £346,800 8s. 6d. This will be shewn further on in explanation of the state of the General Loan Fund, the apparent credit having been created by a nominal transfer of a million pounds from the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account while that Account was and is largely overdrawn.

7. The gross amount both of the Receipts and Payments given above may be seen on comparison with the Treasurer's figures to be less by the cross entry of £1,000,000 just referred to and also by cross entries in the Trust Funds, for which credit is claimed to the amount of £433,773 11s. 6d., but which do not represent either cash received into nor paid out of the Public Account. The greater portion of the amount just quoted consists of the sum of £433,644 12s. 5d., received chiefly from from the Crown Land Agents as their collections from conditional purchasers of Crown Lands, which the Treasury placed in the Revenue Suspense Account, Trusts Fund, and afterwards transferred to the Consolidated Revenue Fund, thus showing a double credit for the same receipt. This process is not a new one, but it is quite unnecessary in itself, and ought not to appear as a part of the Public Income and Expenditure. Further explanation of this matter will be found under paragraphs 50 and 51.

THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND ACCOUNT.

8. The income credited to the Consolidated Revenue Fund during the half-year consisted of—

Taxation	£1,322,284	15	3
Land Revenue	1,053,352	3	7
Receipts for Services rendered... ..	2,016,808	13	11
General Miscellaneous Receipts	551,401	16	1
	£4,943,847	8	10

The overdraft at 31st December, 1894, as shown at page 155 of the Report on the Accounts of 1894 having been

	1,807,206	15	11

The balance represents the amount available to meet the current Liabilities of the half-year ended 30th June, 1895

	£3,136,640	12	11
--	------------	----	----

Excepting Temporary Issues, hereafter recoverable, the actual payments charged to the Revenue Account up to the 30th June, 1895, were—

Towards the Interest and Extinction of the Public Debt	£1,060,659	5	4
Interest on Treasury Deficiency Bills... ..	38,057	13	7
Interest on Treasury Bills issued in anticipation of Loans (55 Victoria No. 7)... ..	55,949	10	0
Refunds and Charges on Collections	80,054	4	3
For other Statutory and Regulation Expenses	143,192	15	5
For Expenditure under the Annual Appropriation Acts	3,546,441	4	8
	£4,924,354	13	3

The final Disbursements therefore exceeded the available Income at 30th June by

	£1,787,714	0	4
--	------------	---	---

9. The overdraft is now shown by the foregoing statement to have stood on 30th June at £1,787,714 0s. 4d., exclusive of Temporary Issues recoverable to the extent of £782,463 4s. 1d.; but inclusive of those issues the cash overdraft was £2,570,177 4s. 5d., a reduction on the previous account of £165,334 4s. 6d. An analysis of the overdraft shows the following figures:—

	£	s.	d.
Cash overdraft	817,298	4	5
Deficiency Bills in favour of Trust Funds	1,752,884	0	0
	2,570,177	4	5
Overdraft at 30th June, as per following statement	2,570,177	4	5
Less Temporary Issues recoverable	782,463	4	1
	£1,787,714	0	4

	£ 86,679,492	18 10	86,679,492	18 10

These figures are exclusive of the nominal transfer of £1,000,000 from the Revenue to the General Loan Account, referred to elsewhere, as it is considered that such transfer has the effect of disturbing the true relationship of the two Accounts to each other.

10. The new system of appropriation and application of Public Moneys to Public Purposes under the Act just passed, makes the facts as to Receipts and Payments within a defined financial period an indisputable basis for arranging the Finances of the Colony. As regards the Expenditure, only such charges as come in course of payment during the financial year are to be recognised as coming within the terms of the Annual Appropriation Acts, on the principle which has been for so many years adopted in the Imperial Accounts with such successful results.

11. The effect of this new arrangement, so often advocated in the Reports from this Department, will be to greatly simplify the Public Accounts, and consequently reduce very considerably the work connected with them in all the Departments of the Public Service when fully carried out.

12. In the meantime, however, the cash overdraft at 30th June has to be disposed of. That is shown above to have been £1,787,714 0s. 4d., after allowing for the recovery in full of payments for temporary purposes to the amount of £782,463 4s. 1d.

£782,463 4s. 1d. There is, moreover, the question of undischarged liabilities at the same date under various obligations, as will be found detailed in Appendix A and Supplement, which show—

Of which there were discharged, up to 30th June—

	£1,895,337	12	10

13. A considerable portion of those liabilities would naturally fall to be charged to the Account for 1895-6, under the Cash basis system, if paid within that new financial period, and in future no arrear liabilities in this form should remain to be carried forward. It remains to be seen how the above-stated Cash and Finance debit balances will be dealt with, both having accrued under Appropriations made prior to the 1st July, 1895.

THE TRUSTS FUND ACCOUNT.

14. The gross total at the credit of the General Trust Fund brought forward from the 31st December, 1894, as explained in last year's Report, was £5,705,102 18s. 5d., deducting transfers which appear both as Receipts and Payments, unnecessarily, to the amount of £433,773 11s. 6d., as already mentioned, and a payment of £1 11s. 11d. transferred to the Revenue Account, the

The Gross Balance thus increased, consisted of—

	£6,202,508	16	7

15. The Treasurer's separate accounts of Supreme Court moneys show, also, an aggregate credit of £505,778 14s. 6d., of which £343,784 were invested in Treasury Bills. With the addition of the Railway Loan Redemption Fund, £300,000, and the balance credit of Treasury Notes, £262 10s., there results a balance at the credit of the Trusts Fund, as a whole, of £7,008,550 1s. 1d., of which, as above stated, £1,164,093 12s. 11d. were applied to cover the overdraft on the Revenue and Loan Accounts, leaving the gross balance credit as shown at page 3 of the Treasurer's statement, £5,844,456 8s. 2d.

16. The condition of the Civil Service Superannuation Account, so far as the Current Cash Balance was concerned, shows an improvement on the half-year of £15,797 18s. 10d., a sum slightly in excess of the total increase in the Fund for the year 1894. This arises chiefly from the relatively large contributions from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, and a lesser direct charge immediately on those contributions. New Pensions came on for payment at a total annual rate of £3,471 15s. 2d., and old pensions lapsed at the same rate to the amount of £2,193 14s. 4d., creating thus a net annual increase of charge of £1,278 0s. 10d., while of those pensions directly chargeable on Schedule B a reduction occurred of £459 11s. 8d., with a set off of a new pension of £128 11s., causing a net reduction in this portion of the account of £331 0s. 8d. Lists of the new and lapsed pensions will be found in Appendix D.

17. At the close of 1894 the total annual rate of Pensions payable out of the Police Superannuation Fund and the Police Reward Fund combined was £20,095 7s. 6d. By the lapse of Pensions, at a gross annual rate of £565 17s. 11d., with an addition to the list of only £146 (or a net decrease of £419 17s. 11d.), the annual charge was reduced at 30th June to £19,675 9s. 7d. But the balance at the credit of the combined Funds was reduced in the six months by £3,363 0s. 11d., leaving a credit in all of £20,915 8s. 2d. towards meeting outstanding and accruing claims.

THE TREASURER'S ADVANCE ACCOUNT.

18. When the year 1894 closed the Treasurer had to adjust his Advance Account for 1893 and 1894 to the amount of £233,089 15s. 3d., for the several services set out in Appendix C to Report on the Accounts of 1894. In consequence of the Supplementary Estimates for 1894 and previous years not having been passed until after the 30th June, only £145,775 19s. 3d. could be brought to account. There was, therefore, at that date still £87,313 16s. 0d. to account for as well as £23,824 3s. 6d. on account of the half-year of 1895, making a total requiring adjustment of £111,137 19s. 6d., but towards that amount the Treasurer had a balance at his credit in the General Trust Fund Account of £51,898 1s. 3d.

19. The operations on the Treasurer's Advance Account may thus be seen to have been brought within much smaller limits than heretofore. Of the Vote of £25,000 for the half-year only £24,188 7s. 10d. were actually drawn up to the 30th June, when there remained to be recovered as stated already £23,824 2s. 6d. Particulars of this amount are given in Appendix C, the majority of the items appear also in the Supplementary Estimates which have recently been passed in Committee of Supply.

THE GENERAL LOAN ACCOUNT.

20. The cash balance at the credit of the General Loan Account at the close of 1894 was £1,177,195 13s. 8d., but was subject to a claim by the Consolidated Revenue Fund for accrued interest and premiums which had been improperly credited as part proceeds of Loans, to the amount of £366,601 2s. 10d., but which has been adjusted during the past half-year. The balance on hand on the 1st of January, 1895, is therefore to be read as reduced to £810,594 10s. 10d. Exclusive of this adjustment the operations during the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, are shewn in the following statement.

21. The cash receipts credited to this Account during the half-year were:—
Balance of proceeds of a Loan for £832,000, negotiated as Inscribed Stock in London, in September, 1894	£294,950	16	2
Proceeds of sale of Funded Stock in the Colony for £25,180 (56 Victoria No. 1)...	26,180	0	0
	321,130	16	2

	£1,131,725	7	0
The Expenditure under Loan Appropriations from 1st January to 30th June, 1895 (including renewal of old Loans of 1865, £821,900), having been	1,478,525	15	6
The General Loan Account stood therefore at the latter date overdrawn by	346,800	8	6

22. The Treasurer's Statement, however, claims credit for two advances from the Consolidated Revenue Fund of £500,000 each, pending realization of Loans authorised, and consequently shows a "credit" balance on this Account of £653,199 11s. 6d. Inasmuch, however, as the Consolidated Revenue Fund was itself overdrawn, it was not in a position to make advances of cash in the way stated. It is considered, therefore, that the relation between the Revenue and Loan Funds is more correctly shown by excluding the nominal transfers in question from one account to the other.

23. Those transfers originated in the fact that the Cash Balance at the credit of the General Loan Account had fallen considerably below the amount of the Governor's Warrants in the hands of the Treasurer for the issue of Loan Moneys for Loan Services. In those circumstances the Treasurer was informed that unless the balance were adjusted so as to place the General Loan Account in sufficient funds for the purpose, no further certificates of "legal availability or applicability" would be given. An adjustment was made accordingly by the cancellation of a portion of the Governor's Warrants found to be in excess of actual or present requirements, but, no further General Loans having been raised, the balance available for issue soon became again exhausted. It was then proposed to replenish the account by an advance of £500,000 from the Trusts Funds, but, upon that course being challenged as objectionable, the authority of the Governor and Executive Council was taken for charging the advance to the Revenue Account—the Revenue and not the Trusts Funds being ultimately liable for the expenditure for Services to be provided for by Loans. A second advance of £500,000 was in like circumstances made upon the exhaustion of the first, but without any steps being taken to realize further Loan Securities so far as known to this Department.

24. In the expectation that such steps would be immediately taken, as a matter of course, in the state of the Loan Account, and, as implied by the terms of the authorities given by the Governor and Executive Council, viz., "pending the realisation of further loan securities," certificates of availability were given on the faith of those authorities. The expedient adopted for thus placing, nominally at the best, the Loan Fund in credit with the view of enabling me to issue the certificates referred to, is of very doubtful legality. For while the Loan Acts authorise the borrowing of money on the security of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, to be expended according to the services and amounts specified therein, the appropriation clauses do not provide for the expenditure in any other way than out of sums actually borrowed and placed to the credit of the General Loan Account.

25. On the 1st January there matured two small loans of £162,000 and £670,000, issued respectively under the Loan Acts 26 Victoria No. 14, and 27 Victoria No. 14, in 1865, and bearing 5 per cent. interest. Provision was made for the repayment of those Loans, among other Services, by the Loan Act 57 Victoria No. 17, and under that authority a Loan of £832,000 at 3½ per cent. was placed on the London Market in September, 1894. The Loan was negotiated at an average price of £101 14s. 8d., and realised in gross proceeds £846,432 12s., but deducting Charges of Negotiation £12,234 18s. 10d., Accrued Interest payable to the Revenue Account £4,380 4s. 7d., and Discounts on Prepayments £266 12s. 5d., there remained a net sum available for the purposes of the Loan of £829,850 16s. 2d., or at a net rate per cent. of £99 14s. 1¼, involving an annual rate of interest of £3 10s. 2½d. during the 24 years currency of the Loan maturing in 1918.

26. A further sum of £2,449 3s. 10d. is required to be raised or otherwise provided to meet the charge of £832,000 in full, but at the latest advices the Debentures to the amount of £2,200 were still unrepresented. In anticipation of the whole amount being paid off, a warrant for £832,000 in full was submitted for certificate of availability in January last, when only £534,600 of the proceeds of the Loan had been brought to account in Sydney. Objection was, therefore, taken to certify to any amount beyond such sums as might be brought to credit in the Account in question. It was pointed out, however, that the Debentures having been signed by the Governor of the day, and made payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, there could be no difficulty in bringing the payments to account without a fresh warrant, only that they should, and, as a matter of legal discharge of an obligation created by the Debentures themselves, they ought to, appear as paid from the Revenue and the proceeds of the new Loan (intended to aid the Revenue in meeting the charges) be credited to the Revenue Account. In this way the transactions would occupy their natural place in the Accounts.

27. The new Loan, being also secured on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, simply constitutes a renewal of the liability of 1865, but on more favourable conditions, and ought not to be treated in the same manner as if it were a new Loan Service. In this view the small deficiency of £2,449 3s. 10d. in the proceeds of the Loan would very properly appear as a charge on the Revenue Account, and need not be raised as suggested above, but, if raised, it would make an addition to the amount of the old Loan of 1865 (with an annual charge of interest), which was raised and expended for services long ago completed.

28. Of the Sales of Funded Stock in the Colony £25,000 were sold to the University of Sydney (Challis Fund) at a premium of 4 per cent. This is the first occasion in which a premium has been charged on the sale of these securities, and, according to precedent, the extra £1,000 thus received should be credited to the Revenue Account, but, as the full amount of stock has not yet been issued as authorised by the Act 56 Victoria No. 1, the question must for the present remain an open one.
according

29. The total net disbursements for Loan Services to 30th June, 1895, were for the following classes of expenditure, viz. :—

Head of Service.	Expenditure, 1st Jan.— 30th June, 1895.			Expenditure prior to 1895.			Total to 30th June, 1895.

The Liabilities so far as relate to Appropriations of Loans raised or not raised stood at the 30th June as follow :—

Amount brought forward from 1894	£14,750,585	9	10
Disbursements during the half-year as detailed on pages 73 to 85	1,478,525	15	6
Balance unapplied at 30th June, 1895	£13,272,059	14	4

30. The distribution of that balance to Services is as follows :—

Railways and Tramways	£10,338,180	1	5
Electric Telegraphs	40,534	6	0
Harbours and Rivers Navigation	398,852	19	4
Roads and Bridges	211,565	19	9

	£13,272,059	14	4

The appropriation liability above stated as for Railways and Tramways is in course of being reduced by at least the surplus balances mentioned in last Report, aggregating £391,353 14s. 9d., but as the cash account was overdrawn at 30th June by £346,800 8s. 6d. there was required to meet outstanding appropriation liabilities on all services a maximum sum of £13,227,506 8s. 1d., subject to reduction by the operation of the Public Works Act of 1888 and by probable excesses of appropriations.

31. The outstanding liabilities, as far as relate to the Public Debt, have been increased during the half-year by £6,580, thus :—

Balance of Debt, 31st December, 1894	£56,450,919	9	2
Balmain Municipal Council Debentures for Sewerage Works taken over	2,500	0	0
	£56,478,599	9	2
Debentures paid off, 31 Victoria No. 11	21,100	0	0
	£56,457,499	9	2

The annual interest payable on the above balance of the Public Debt, from the 1st July, 1895, is computed to amount to £2,149,250 19s. 6d.

32. A statement, showing the distribution of the above stated Debt and interest thereupon to the various classes of services, computed according to the proportions authorised by the several Loan Acts, and according to which the outstanding Debt has been raised, is given in Appendix E, excepting that portion of it which has arisen from the sale of Treasury Bills, 55 Victoria No. 7, and of Funded Stock, 56 Victoria No. 1, for which, as already explained in former Reports, the Treasury has furnished no information.

THE RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.

The half-year's Collections for Railway and Tramway Tolls and Miscellaneous Receipts in connection therewith, are shown at page 10 to have been (as credited) £1,454,973 2s. 2d.; but deducting the refunds under various heads, as detailed at page 36, £17,507 8s. 11d., the net half-year's income credited appears as £1,437,465 13s. 3d.

34. The Expenditure out of Revenue for the same period for working and all other expenses chargeable to the Railways and Tramways Account amounted to £888,094 7s., and shows a net credit balance on the half-year's operations of £549,371 6s. 3d. The interest upon the money borrowed and expended for the Services

Services of the Railways and Tramways during the same period is computed at £735,506 9s., thus exceeding the credit balance on the half-year's operations by £186,135 2s. 9d. The general result of the Income and Expenditure for Railways and Tramways to the 30th June is shown in Appendix F.

35. The additional payments detailed in the General Loan Account for Railway Loan Services, as already shown above, amount to £251,353 8s. 7d., making the grand total to 30th June, £39,413,837 19s. 10d.

LOCAL INSPECTION OF RAILWAY AND TRAMWAY STATION ACCOUNTS.

36. The figures given in preceding paragraphs represent the cash transactions only as they appear in the Treasurer's Accounts within the half-year. The "Earnings' Account," as ascertained by the Inspectors of this Department from the Railway and Tramway Station Accounts, is shown in the following figures:—

37. The whole of the items comprised in the foregoing Statement have been carefully scrutinised on the spot and otherwise, and the inspections in the aggregate have been attended with satisfactory evidence of continued improvement in the conduct of the business at the various Stations, which now number 330. No proper comparison can, however, be made with the results given previously, as they were given for annual periods only. As there has occurred nothing of an unusual kind during the half-year, further remarks on the general work connected with this special Service will be deferred until the preparation of next Report.

38. In Appendix H will be found a statement of the cases in which the subsequent sanction of the Governor and Executive Council was obtained to rates found by the Commissioners desirable to establish for the immediate advantage of the public and of the railway interests without waiting for the prior sanction now obtained.

MISCELLANEOUS.

39. The usual Certificates of Discharge have been issued to the Treasurer under section 28 of the Audit Act. The accounts disallowed are specified in Appendix I.

40. The Statements of Receipts and Disbursements by the Commissioners of the Wollongong Harbour Trust for the period 1st January to 31st December, 1894, were compared on the spot with the Commissioners' books and supporting documents, and were certified to be correct.

41. The following special statements are also appended for information, viz. :—

Statement of Advances to Public Officers and others awaiting adjustment [Appendix K].

Statement of Surcharges raised and recovered upon the Expenditure and Revenue Accounts [Appendix L].

Statement of Authorities granted by the Governor and Executive Council in relief of Public Accountants, under sections 30 and 31 of the Audit Act [Appendix M].

Statement of authorities given by the Governor and Executive Council under the 18th section of the Audit Act applying unexpended balances of Votes to other Services. [Appendix N].

Statement of the Registration of Brands Account, 30 Victoria No. 12 [Appendix O].

42. The following cases of default have been ascertained since the list given in Report for 1894, viz. :—

Mr. John McNab, Clerk, Asylum for Infirm and Destitute, Liverpool, Deficiency, £54 1s. 9d. Recovered, £33 5s. and from Salary £5 13s. 4d. Warrant issued for arrest.

Mr. Ernest H. Llewellyn, Accountant, Marine Board and Paymaster to the Naval Forces. Deficiency, £2,293 13s. 7d. Recovered, £14 0s. 7d. from Salary. £500 from Treasury Guarantee Fund. Prosecuted. Sentenced to three years imprisonment.

Mr. Henry G. Young, Postmaster, Summer Hill. Deficiency, £119 15s. 8d. Recovered, £4 17s. 8d. from Salary. £114 18s. from Treasury Guarantee Fund. Warrant issued for arrest.

Mr. Frederick Ahrens, Telegraph Operator, Moree. Deficiency, £105 3s. Recovered, 13s. 5d. from Salary. £100 from Treasury Guarantee Fund. Prosecuted. Sentenced to three years and seven months imprisonment.

43. Subject to the above stated corrections, explanations, and observations, to the disallowances specified in Appendix I, and subject to all outstanding advances and queries being satisfactorily accounted for, the abstracts of the Treasurer's Receipts and Disbursements within the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, are considered to be correct.

44. The statements marked G and H, together with the detailed statement of the Public Debt, being, however, outside the requirements of the 22nd clause of the Audit Act, do not come under the examination and report required by the 36th clause, and their contents rest, therefore, on the responsibility of the Treasurer.

DEPARTMENTAL

DEPARTMENTAL AND SUPPLEMENTARY.

45. Having intimated in my evidence before the late Civil Service Inquiry Commission that I might be able to dispense with three or four clerks, at a probable saving of £700 or £800 a year, advantage was taken of the opportunity afforded by the preparation of the Estimates for 1895-6 to recommend to the Colonial Secretary certain reductions of the staff by which salaries to the extent of £966 a year could be struck off. Upon careful inquiry it was found that, consequent upon a reduction of work and upon improved methods of dealing with the Public Accounts in the Department and otherwise, it was possible to so re-arrange the duties of the office as to enable me to dispense with the services of five out of the number of clerks engaged upon them—two from the Revenue Examiner's Branch; two from the Expenditure Examiner's Branch, and one from the Appropriation Audit Branch—without impairing the general efficiency of the Department. As such rearrangement, however, would increase the duties of some of the juniors, it was only reasonable to allow them some small additional pay—to the amount, in all, of £174—effecting thus a net annual saving of £792.

46. Those recommendations were approved of and given effect to in the Estimates recently voted for the year ending 30th June, 1896. Since then one of the probationers has resigned, whose place will not be filled up, and thus a further annual reduction of £100 is being effected.

47. The change in the system of appropriating the public moneys will, unless expanded otherwise, necessarily render the work of audit less laborious, and when fully carried out will probably afford the means of effecting further economies of work, and consequently of expense. Very much depends, however, upon a reduction in the quantity of vouchers furnished for examination, and to a great extent upon the number of sub-divisions under which many of them are now dealt with. There is little doubt that the number of vouchers and of their sub-divisions into heads of receipts and payments, is very much larger than it needs to be for any practical purpose, but in the face of old traditions it is difficult to effect improvements in that direction. When the Public Accounts and Finances of the Colony were on a comparatively insignificant scale, it may have been useful for explanations to set forth both the receipts and payments in considerable detail, which certainly ought not now to be necessary.

48. So far as my own Department is concerned, I have succeeded in the course of years in effecting many improvements in the methods of carrying out the directions of the Audit Act, but much more could be effected were the arrangements of the Treasury somewhat different. In my evidence before the late Civil Service Inquiry Commission, I indicated some of the ways in which the Treasury procedure enlarged the work of audit more than, in my judgment, there is any necessity for.

49. As at present constituted, the Treasury Department is engaged in an effort to discharge the incongruous functions of a Finance, a Banking, and an Audit Office. The combination of these functions creates anomalies, and gives rise to an excessive amount of what may be termed inter-official work between the Head Ministerial Offices and the groups of Departments associated with them respectively. It seems a question worthy of consideration, how far it may be desirable and practicable to remodel the work of the Treasury, separating its Finance, and its Pay and Receiving business (Banking), eliminating from it what is now really Audit work.

50. A notable example of such work occurs in the matter of the collections by the Crown Land Agents and more particularly of moneys payable by the Conditional Purchasers of Crown Lands. The remittance vouchers representing those collections instead of being entered at once as Receipts to the Revenue Account, according to the directions and on the responsibility of the Collectors, are for the most part placed in Suspense as Trust Moneys until they are Audited by the Receiver, which means the transcription of the particulars into a series of registers comprising some 150 volumes, more or less, a work which for purposes of either audit or record is entirely supererogatory.

51. The particulars are already recorded in the land agents' own registers and the vouchers to the remittances which are transcripts of the entries in those registers relating thereto should come on for audit within at most a week of their receipt at the Treasury, whereas they are sometimes detained for months, and thus the concurrent audit of those receipts designed by the Audit Act is defeated. The amount so held in suspense pending transfer to revenue during the half year was no less than £433,644 12s. 5d., as already quoted above in paragraph 7.

52. The Treasury officers having thought proper to challenge the accuracy of some of the information given by me to the Civil Service Inquiry Commission on the subject of those Conditional Purchases, I considered it desirable for the satisfaction of the Colonial Treasurer and the Colonial Secretary to go somewhat fully into the whole matter. That course seemed to me all the more necessary because I had great reason to complain of the way in which the Commission conducted their enquiries so far as my Department was concerned, and of the wholesale condemnation of my methods of audit, based apparently upon information and suggestions previously furnished to them by the Treasury, and more especially upon an obsolete minute of 1864, superseded by the Audit Act of 1870, and upon a minute of 1893, full of unfriendly and unfair remarks and one-sided statements, by a subordinate officer of the Treasury, which I had never seen until, to my surprise, I found that the Commission had seen fit to embody it in the very text of their Report. The matter appears to me of sufficient importance to attach the correspondence to this Report, to which I respectfully request special attention. (Appendix P.)

53. It ought to be stated here that, following up the intimation conveyed in the last paragraph of my minute of 30th July, revised registers are now nearly completed for the Conditional Purchases taken up subsequently to 1876. When finished they will provide a simple and effective instrument for checking the whole of the receipts as they occur connected with the outstanding Conditional Purchases (upwards of 150,000), and for that purpose afford the means of giving at almost a moment's notice the exact condition of every Conditional Purchase excepting the name of the owner for the time being. I have proved that it is immaterial for any purpose to record the names of the owners which are constantly changing, and which, if wanted, can only be correctly given at any moment by the Lands Department.

54. I take this opportunity of stating further that it has always been a disadvantage to this office that it was deprived of the power of periodical inspection of the Treasury and other Paying and Receiving Departments. In the Audit Bill of 1870 there was proposed a clause giving a power of inspection, but it was unfortunately negatived by the Legislative Assembly. After a while the Treasury took advantage of the circumstance to gradually establish an expensive Staff of Inspectors in connection with that office, but whose duties were, it is understood, confined to the Accounts of the Collectors of Revenue.

55. The proposal of the Commission to add to the duties of my Department that of inspecting the accounts of the various offices where public money is collected or disbursed has my concurrence, as it will very probably lead to economy of work, but it would be in my judgment a serious mistake to substitute a mere local inspection of the Treasury Accounts or those of any other office for the simpler and effective arrangements otherwise prescribed by the Audit Act. As a supplement to those arrangements, however, it would doubtless be a great help to a more systematic and complete audit in some ways than is now practicable, but the full benefit that may be derived from the proposed inspection must depend a good deal upon a more homogeneous system of collecting and expending the Public Revenues.

EDWARD A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Registration of Conditional Purchases of Crown Lands.

The Receiver, Treasury, to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

[Colonial Secretary, 95-9,745, 2 July.]

[Treasury, 458, 1 July, 1895.]

Public Service Inquiry Commission.—Remarks by the Auditor-General on Method of keeping the Conditional Purchase Accounts.

MEMO.—In answer to inquiry of Under Secretary, I beg to report as follows:—The Auditor-General, in answer to Question 238, stated, "We do not concern ourselves (the Audit Department) about how much the conditional purchasers owe. What is paid we know is right or wrong."

In answer to Question 240-1, he states he calls attention of the Treasury to all instalments in arrear.

In answer to Question 383, Mr. Rennie admits he has not questioned a single instance of short-payment arrears or any irregularity on the part of the Treasury in connection with the Conditional Purchase Accounts during the year 1894. It is pointed out that during any portion of the year 1894 there were at least 5,000 conditional purchases in arrear, but no communication was received from the Auditor-General on the subject. So far as I can ascertain there is no case on record where the Auditor-General has directed attention to overdue instalments. The question of arrears has been carefully watched, and has received earnest attention at the Treasury, unaided in any way whatever by the Audit Department.

The Auditor-General is also in error (Questions 385-6-7) in stating that we open accounts for all conditional purchases as they are applied for, and that we thus insert in our books "a lot of information which is of no earthly use." We do nothing of the kind. As a matter of fact, it is, and has been, our practice to open an account with a conditional purchase only after three years have elapsed from date of application. We have thus saved thousands of useless accounts in our books in cases where the purchases have lapsed, been disallowed, cancelled, or forfeited.

Mr. Rennie has no personal knowledge of our books, and he has been misinformed as to our methods.

27 June, 1895.

N. LOCKYER,

Receiver.

For the information of the Honorable the Premier. I think the Auditor-General should be afforded an opportunity of explaining the apparent discrepancies.—F.K., 28/6/95. Approved.—G.H.R., 29. The Hon. the Chief Secretary.—G.H.R., 29/6/95. The Principal Under Secretary.—F.K., 1/7/95. The Auditor-General.—J.N.B., 2/7/95. C.W., P.U.S., B.C., 3/7/95.

The Auditor-General to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Department of Audit, 30 July, 1895.

In returning the Treasury paper No. 458, forwarded to me under your blank-cover reference of the 3rd instant, respecting certain answers given by me to questions by the late Civil Service Inquiry Commission on the subject of payments by conditional purchasers of Crown lands, I have the honor to state that, although on reading that paper I could see little or nothing in it of sufficient importance to require a reply, yet as the Colonial Treasurer and the Colonial Secretary both, by their initials, indicated their wish for any remarks I might desire to make, I have prepared, and now have the honor to enclose herewith, a minute on the subject for their information—and for that purpose I have thought it proper to go into the matter at some length.

That course seemed to me to be all the more necessary, because the tenor of the inquiry by the Commission, so far as my Department is concerned, apparently took its tone from information and suggestions previously supplied to them by the Treasury—an office which has always more or less exhibited anything but a friendly spirit towards the Department of Audit, and more especially since 1864. This is probably the natural attitude of any set of officers who entertain such a high estimate of their work as to dislike its being subjected to criticism at all by any outside agency, and still less by another set of officers whose qualifications to criticise their work they may be disposed to deem inferior to their own for knowledge and experience of the work they may be called to review, but whose criticism, nevertheless, to be of much value, must necessarily be associated with conditions of the opposite kind.

The Audit Act of 1870 is, and always has been, a great offence to the Treasury, and so it might be expected that every opportunity would be taken to ignore its salutary provisions and to defeat its operations. In doing that the Treasury have endeavoured to forestall and usurp the proper functions of the Audit Department as defined by the Audit Act, and thus, because the necessary machinery for fulfilling those functions has been, and rightly, established in my Department, they now assert that their machinery for doing Audit Office work has been duplicated by my Department. The case is quite the other way.

The provisions of the Audit Act are simple and effective, but it is apt to be forgotten that the chief object of the Act is to "regulate the receipt, custody, and issue of the public moneys" with the subsequent and necessary corollary "to provide for the audit of the public accounts."

That Act was intended to restrain irregularities in dealing with public moneys by the Treasury, and to secure better and simpler arrangements than those of 1864, and which then existed for the work of both the Treasury and Audit Office, and to define their relative functions and duties. It is very singular, therefore, that the Treasury should have thrust under the notice of the Commission the obsolete minute of 16th June, 1864, which was superseded by the Audit Act of 7th May, 1870; and still more singular that the Commission should have taken that minute as part of the basis of their wholesale attack on my Department, when it is a matter of history that, whatever the underlying motive for it was, the procedure of 1864 was as great an outrage as was ever perpetrated, in this Colony at least, upon a public officer in charge of an important department. It was characterised by absolute secrecy, without the faintest suspicion of any change being contemplated, and without any previous suggestion to or consultation with the officer in question as to the desirability of alteration in its mode of business, and with, it is hardly necessary to say, a total absence of that courtesy which might have been expected towards a public officer, whose only fault was perhaps his too faithful audit of the Treasury accounts, and whose functions and position in the Service are considered sufficiently important to place him under the shield of the Constitution Act.

It is a still more singular thing that the Commission should have imported into the very text of their Report a document drawn up by a subordinate officer of the Treasury, full of unfriendly and unfair remarks and one-sided statements. Whether or not the Commission were aware that the document in question had never been seen by me, and that no opportunity had ever been afforded me to defend my Department against this secret attack, it is to me significant that in the course of the questions addressed to me they made no reference to the fact of their having been supplied with such a paper; and yet they have made that document (a perfectly secret one, so far as I was concerned) a further ground of their wholesale condemnation of my Department, without a single word in favour of it; also without a single reference to the fact that the character and details of audit were prescribed by a statute that had been very carefully considered for some years by gentlemen well qualified to judge of the proper provisions of such a statute, and was finally subjected to the scrutiny of both Houses of Parliament.

I cannot but consider that I have most just cause of complaint against such procedure. The least the Commission might have done when they determined to embody in their Report a series of opinions and statements, quite open to adverse criticism, given by a subordinate officer of the Treasury of comparatively limited knowledge and experience, was to have to set out in the same way what the Auditor-General of the Colony might have had to say in the matter. It is not improbable that I may find it necessary to refer to this in connection with my Reports to Parliament on the Public Accounts as provided by the 39th section of the Audit Act.

That I cannot but feel very strongly on this matter must be my excuse for the length of this communication.

I have, &c.,

E. A. RENNIE,

Auditor-General.

Auditor-General's answers to questions by Civil Service Inquiry Commission respecting the accounts of Conditional Purchases of Crown Lands. C.S. 95-9,745, A.O. 95-2,590.

30 July, 1895.

If sufficient attention had been given to both questions and answers in the matters which have been criticised in the paper sent to me for remarks, or if the writer had known, or had been candid enough to set out the full facts of the case, there would have been little or no occasion, I think, to ask me to "explain the apparent discrepancies."

The drift of the inquiries by the late Commission appears to have been mainly directed to establish a conclusion, asserted without any qualification, by the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, in answer to Questions 95 and 96, that this Department duplicated books and records kept at the Treasury, in this connection, more especially the registers of conditional purchases of Crown lands. Whatever object the Treasury may have sought to accomplish by their registers, it might at least very naturally be supposed that their object in framing these registers was for financial purposes only; but, if so, those registers are absurdly extensive and minute. It might even be shown that for Treasury purposes they are not required at all. It does not seem to have occurred to the minds of the Treasury officers that, in establishing the registers in question, they were not only setting up a machinery, but keeping it going, for purely audit purposes, whereas those purposes were amply and sufficiently provided for by this Department.

It seems to have been forgotten that the "Vouchers" to the collections of the Crown Land Agents (who are not Treasury officers, but officers of the Lands Department) are and must be subject to the very effective audit prescribed by the Audit Act, and it has never yet been shown that such audit was inefficient or ineffective. To take those vouchers and call them into the elaborate registers of the Treasury, as suggested by the Commission, would be a violation of the principles of audit as recognised by the Audit Act and elsewhere, and would be nothing more than an audit of the Treasury entries of those vouchers—nothing more than an audit of the Treasury machinery for audit—but would not be an audit of the "vouchers" which, throughout both receipts and payments, are the most important documents to be properly checked, forming as they do the real basis of the public records of the public revenue and expenditure.

The setting up of a rival audit in the way it has been done by the Treasury is simply, in my judgment, a waste of energy and money, and may fairly be read as a standing witness that the Treasury has no confidence in the statutory audit carried out by this Department—and the charge of "duplication" applies to the Treasury with much more force and reason than it can be applied to the Audit Department.

Moreover, the registers kept by my officers form a complete and perfect instrument for an effective check upon the collections at the Treasury and of the Crown Land Agents in respect of instalments, interest, and balances paid by conditional purchasers as they come to account in the vouchers to their remittances, or to credits at the Treasury, and really effect a considerable saving of clerical labour which would otherwise have necessarily to be expended in their examination.

When, therefore, the Commission put to me the Question 238, "However, the object of keeping those registers, both by yourself and the Treasury, is, I presume, the same, namely, to know how much has been paid by the conditional purchasers, and how much they owe?" and Question 239, "Are yours in the form of ledger entries?" I believe I was right in understanding the questions to refer to the total amount which each conditional purchaser would have to pay to complete his instalments and balances at any date, and the total amounts which all the conditional purchasers combined might owe for their land and interest at any date—implying, of course, a record of how much had been paid. In that view my answer was quite correct as showing that the information suggested was of no value for immediate purposes of audit—the registers being so framed as to afford the means of testing the accuracy of every voucher as it presented itself for audit, and so continuously until the whole amount payable from year to year came to credit.

The former Civil Service Commission expressed surprise that there was no account in the Treasury or in the Audit Department to show the total amount due or payable by the conditional purchasers. Since then I understand that the Treasury have, at a very heavy expense, prepared such an account, showing a total of some millions of pounds; but the account after all is only a curiosity, and I venture to say that it was not worth the time or the money spent over it.

It does not require much consideration to perceive that the account so made up can be little, if anything, more than a vague estimate, as the amounts payable for interest and balances at any date prior to the full period of credit must always be less than the total computed on the whole period of credit, or to the end of any year prior thereto, and that so long as the registers can show at any yearly date the amounts payable by individual conditional purchasers who might wish to pay up their balances, the registers answer all the requirements of audit, and nothing more than that can be considered to be necessary to meet the supposed daily requirements of the Treasury, unless it be a volume of interest tables. Every balance paid must necessarily upset the correctness of an account made up, as I believe it has been, and that it is of no value for finance purposes may be gathered from the fact that so far as appears no public use has been made of it by the Treasury.

The answers given by me to the following Questions, Nos. 240 and 241, had a broader significance than the specific questions, and were, therefore, to some extent, irrelevant thereto. The questions implied that there were cases where instalments were not paid at due date—not knowing at the moment whether such cases occurred or not, but remembering that the office check upon all periodical payments for land and other rentals, &c., was effected in the same way as in the case of the conditional purchases by registration of sums payable, and that numerous queries relating to such collections were addressed to Land Agents and other collectors, and to the Treasury itself, either immediately or ultimately—my answers were correct as to the principle on which any apparent shortcoming of payments to the revenue are dealt with by the Department, and were also correct as to actual practice without reference to the particular case suggested.

But the questions by the Commission were not followed up on those lines, but persistently on the idea of there being two sets of books of account with the same object in view. That I have shown not to be the case, but that my registers were not at all books of account in a mercantile sense, but simply instruments by which the work assigned to the Department is carried out, and at a very small expense compared to that incurred by the Treasury in keeping "books" in connection with these receipts.

This singular fact must also be stated—that my inexpensive registers have the additional advantage of being a perfect record of the facts necessary for showing how each conditional purchase account stands from year to year, and from which at any time the balances due upon it can be ascertained at a very short notice.

If necessary, it can easily be shown that the Treasury are in many ways aided by the Audit Department, and that they are very ready to take advantage of the information collected by my Department for assistance in carrying out some of their work more correctly than it would seem they can do without it, but are not so ready to acknowledge their indebtedness in these respects.

Reverting, however, to delays in payment of instalments by conditional purchasers, it is not a matter of very great importance, because a failure to pay is of much more consequence to the owner than it is to the Crown, as it involves possible forfeiture of all previous payments and of the land itself, and the failure to pay cannot be enforced in any other way—that is to say, the conditional purchaser could not be compelled to pay his instalments by legal process. Consequently, no amount of careful watching or earnest attention on the part of the Treasury, however laudable that action may be, can secure the fulfilment of the conditions by a conditional purchaser. Moreover, it is wrong to say that in the process of "audit" by the Treasury, by which they come to notice overdue payments—a comparatively useless result in this case—no aid is rendered whatever by the Audit Department, as a large amount of information is continually being sought by the Treasury from my records—often to the creation of much disturbance of the work of this Department. Unfortunately, hitherto no record has been kept of such "aid," but if the Treasury had "aided" this office to the extent that aid has been afforded the Treasury in a variety of ways, much trouble and annoyance would have been saved.

There are no doubt many cases of late payments, but forfeiture is avoided by the Minister's sanction to the acceptance of such delayed payments in circumstances. This is stated in my answer to Question 241, and whether they be 5 or 5,000 cases of the sort the money is sooner or later paid up, unless the owner allows his purchase to lapse. But if it were noticed that after a while it was not paid, inquiry would certainly be made about it as to authority for delay or forfeiture, and that through the proper channel. The time or circumstances, however, in which any such notice might be taken is entirely within my discretion. My answer, "the attention of the Treasury," should be read as the attention of the proper Officer or Department concerned—in this particular case it would be the Secretary for Lands, as the controlling Minister, and not the Colonial Treasurer.

This question is also now affected by the provisions of Clause 28 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, for Temporary Suspension of the Annual Payments of Instalments.

With regard to the questions and answers Nos. 385, 386, and 387, it was certainly the case, for I believe at least twenty-five years, that the Treasury registers were framed as stated (up to about the year 1890), when the Treasury adopted the system of registration which I had established in my office from the outset, about the year 1865—that is to say, to register the conditional purchases only when they became revenue-producing—that is in about three years after selection and payment of deposit. I was not indeed aware of the Treasury having at a comparatively recent date adopted my plan of registration, and I regret that I thereby lost the opportunity of giving them credit before the Commission for having at length acknowledged the superiority to theirs of my method of registration.

It must also certainly be true that the difference in the number of registers kept at the Treasury and in my office arises from the fact above stated, and also from a later improvement which reduced the number of my early registers from thirty-eight to eight, and very much reduces the bulk of the new ones, besides effecting a considerable economy in working them. It is curious that Mr. Lockyer admits to having "saved thousands of useless accounts in our (the Treasury) books in cases where the purchases have lapsed, been disallowed, cancelled, or forfeited," but omits to acknowledge the existence of "thousands of useless accounts" recorded in the Treasury registers for a quarter of a century!

If the Commission had followed up the suggestion conveyed in the concluding portion of my answer to Question 387, it would have appeared that the words "and write up a lot of information which is of no earthly use" referred to something more than the registration of "deposits." The words doubtless referred primarily to the fact that (at any rate) the older Treasury registers for twenty-five years or so included the useless matter acknowledged by Mr. Lockyer; but they referred to another process still carried out in the existing Treasury registers (and which for a good while was also carried out in my own registers, but abandoned some twelve years ago as of no real value), which I am prepared to affirm is quite unnecessary, or, to employ the words objected to, "is of no earthly use," unless it be to provide extra work for the Treasury clerks. To explain.

Every conditional purchase has given to it a distinct number, relative, first, to the Land District where it is located, and secondly, to the year in which it is taken up or recorded as a confirmed selection. The selection number with its area constitutes the basis of check upon the sums payable to the revenue irrespective of the name of the holder for the time being. For example, say, selection No. 474, Cooma, 1881, 504 acres, is subject to the payment of an annual instalment of £25 4s. If a remittance from the Crown Lands Agent at Cooma, or a credit at the Treasury for £25 4s. appears on a voucher in connection with No. 474, as above, it is of no importance as far as the revenue is concerned, or so far as audit check is concerned, whether the money is paid by Robinson, Jones, or Smith, or is paid personally, or by an agent, or by a Bank.

If no transfers of conditional purchases were allowed, or if none had been made, they would of course always stand at the Land Agents' offices in the names of the original accepted selectors and under their distinctive numbers; but numerous changes of owners have occurred, and are frequently occurring, but no change of ownership can take place without the sanction of the Secretary for Lands, who alone at any moment can determine who is the present owner of any conditional purchase, and not the Colonial Treasurer.

Upon any change of ownership taking place, it is the practice of the Lands Department to report the fact to the Treasury, where, I understand, it is duly entered in the Treasury registers. Those notices used to be sent on to this office by the Treasury for me to note and return, and for a while they were noted, until it was seen to be of no practical use. The Lands Department notify the changes of ownership to their officers at the various Land Agents' offices, and of course are entered in their registers, and appear upon the vouchers to their remittances. Such a record may be useful enough to the Land Agents; but at the only time when the name of the actual owner is required, namely, when a balance is paid up with a view to taking out a title deed, the Lands Department itself must necessarily alone be the authority for action.

I hold, therefore, most firmly that it is a waste of time and correspondence for the Lands Department to notify the changes of ownership to the Treasury, and an equal waste of time and labour for those changes to be recorded in the Treasury registers. If the owner of the selection above quoted came to the Treasury to pay his balance, he ought to come armed with a certificate from the Lands Department that he is the owner, and accompanied with an authority to the Treasury to receive the balance due, which balance would appear as at the debit of No. 474. The receipt then given to the owner on payment of such balance would form his claim to a title deed; but to prevent all mistakes, the Treasury receipt should always be given "without prejudice," and before issuing a title deed the Lands Department might require the Treasury receipt to be verified by this Department in the same way as refund authorities are now verified.

But the remarkable fact is that the amount payable by the owner—that is to say, the balance which might any day stand at the debit of No. 474, or of any other number—could be obtained equally well from my registers as from the Treasury, and with equal if not with greater accuracy. And the proof is this—that my registers being framed expressly to check the vouchers to receipts, the voucher for every balance paid at the Treasury is challenged by those registers, and, not to mention other cases, in two instances the Treasury notably failed in quoting correct amounts. One instance occurred in 1888, when the balance quoted was short by £120 7s., and another instance occurred in 1891 of short quotation by £136 17s. In both cases the sums were, of course, queried by me, and fortunately recovered.

This goes to show that if I am, as I must always be, in a position by my registers to challenge and correct Treasury receipts of the above nature, I am equally in a position to certify at any time to a balance payable by a conditional purchaser, and on such a certificate the Treasury would, of course, be bound to accept the amount named in it without demur, and save the extensive machinery which is now built up chiefly for the purpose, as I believe, of being able to quote such balance at the counter.

It is right, however, to say, further, that the Treasury have some advantage over my office in this—that by placing considerable sums in suspense, and keeping them there for less or greater periods of time, which I can see no necessity for, instead of crediting them at once to the revenue “without prejudice,” and sending on the vouchers for audit, the audit by my Department of those vouchers is greatly delayed. The Treasury ought not to have that advantage, nor is there any satisfactory reason why they should keep back those Land Agents' remittance vouchers for, virtually, a Treasury audit, when the proper machinery for audit under the Audit Act is waiting in my Department for the purpose.

In conclusion, I desire to refer again to Question 383, where I have said the number of my registers of conditional purchases was only sixty, as compared with the number kept in the Treasury (and that after a reduction of thirty-eight to eight), and, to add, it has been computed that the remaining fifty-two registers of conditional purchases since 1876 can be reduced on the same plan to (say) twelve, making the whole of my registers only twenty in all, at a large decrease of current work; but, of course, that alteration would involve some immediate additional labour in carrying it out.

E. A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Question No. 383 (referred to above).

Mr. Humphrey.] Touching the conditional purchases, you were to make inquiry as to the number of books used? I framed certain questions to my officers in regard to the conditional purchases. I will read them:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. How many conditional purchases registers have we? | Sixty. |
| 2. What was the reduction in the number on revised register for old conditional purchases? | Thirty; i.e., thirty-eight old registers reduced to eight. |
| 3. Are not the recent additional registers prepared on the revised and shortened form? | Yes. |
| 4. Has the Treasury adopted our revised form? | No. |
| 5. How many clerks are occupied in registering the year's entries of instalments and new conditional purchases? | Distributed among seven officers, representing two officers' whole time; moreover, the interest entries are self-checking. |
| 6. Supposing we had no registers and checked the Land Agent's vouchers with the Treasury registers; how many clerks would it take to do it? | Probably three. |
| 7. If we had neither registers of our own, nor checked the Treasury ones, in what way would we be able to audit effectively the Land Agents' vouchers for instalments, &c.? | No method of greater efficiency or economy than that now in operation, so far as I can see. |
| 8. The bulk of the payments occur in March, but the posting is spread over the whole year, is it not? | Yes. |
| 9. Other land rentals—how could they be audited effectively and economically without keeping our own registers? | No better method than that now in operation, so far as I can see. |
| 10. (1) How many queries on conditional purchase entries, short payments, &c., for the last complete year? (2) How much actually recovered? | (1) None. (2) Nothing. |
| 11. Expense of clerks engaged in registering conditional purchases? | About £300 per annum. |

I forgot to say that the number of outstanding conditional purchases, interest bearing, from 1862 to 1891, is 150,329. That is the whole number of the open accounts recorded in these registers.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

(REPLY TO THE AUDITOR-GENERAL'S COMMENTS ON THE REGISTRATION OF CONDITIONAL PURCHASES AT THE TREASURY, AND THE AUDIT OF THE EXPENDITURE ACCOUNTS.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 17 December, 1895.

MEMORANDUM.

The Treasury, N.S.W., 28 November, 1895.

THE Auditor-General, in Appendix P to his Report on the Public Accounts for the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, has published certain correspondence with regard to the registration of conditional purchases of Crown Lands, and as this correspondence contains statements reflecting upon the conduct of the Treasury business, I will be glad if the Honorable the Treasurer will lay upon the Table of the Assembly the explanations which were prepared for his information.

F. KIRKPATRICK.

The Honorable George Houstoun Reid, M.P.,
Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Approved.—G.H.R., 29.

MEMORANDUM.

SUBJECT.—The Auditor-General's reply to the Treasury Queries respecting his evidence before the Civil Service Commission.

IN submitting, for the information of the Honourable the Premier, the Auditor-General's reply to the Treasury queries with respect to his evidence before the Civil Service Commission, it will not, I hope, be considered out of place for me to make a few remarks thereon, the more especially as the Auditor-General has, under cover of such reply, made a sudden and uncalled-for attack upon Mr. Lockyer and myself.

I at once admit at the outset that had I thought my suggestion, to the effect that I considered the Auditor-General should be afforded an opportunity of explaining the apparent discrepancies in his evidence, would have called forth such a vigorous onslaught upon this Department, I would have hesitated before making such a suggestion, as I had no desire to provoke unnecessarily the Auditor-General, but believing that he would at once admit that an error had been made in his evidence before the Commission, and that he would be glad of the opportunity of putting the matter right, I took the course which I think any person actuated by proper motives would have taken under the circumstances.

The Auditor-General in his reply admits that his answer "the attention of the Treasury" should be read as "the attention of the proper officer or department concerned." Had the Auditor-General been satisfied with this reply no further notice would have been taken of the matter, and although it is not improbable that having to admit his statements are at variance with facts may, to some extent, account for his unwarranted attack, still the matters he introduces are of too grave a nature to be permitted to pass unanswered.

The Auditor-General says:—"The Treasury has always more or less exhibited anything but a friendly spirit towards the Department of Audit, and more especially since 1864. In connection with this I would refer the Honourable the Treasurer to the Auditor-General's first report on the Public Accounts under the Audit Act of 1870. He stated, under date 31st October, 1872:—"I feel it a pleasure to acknowledge the ready attention that my representations have generally received at the hands of the Treasurer and the officers of the Department, and I am grateful for the co-operation and assistance they have rendered me in the discharge of the onerous duties imposed upon me by the Audit Act."

I cannot find that since that time the Treasury Department has been so highly spoken of in any yearly report, but no unfriendly spirit, so far as the Treasury is concerned, has been manifested. On the other hand, Mr. Rennie's evidence goes to prove that he would not allow his clerks to examine our books, nor to have close relations with us at all, lest, I imagine, they should be induced to swerve from the strict allegiance due to his Department. Such evidence does not tend to foster a friendly spirit.

The Auditor-General further says:—"It is very singular the Treasury should have thrust under the notice of the Commission the obsolete Minute of 16th June, 1864." With respect to this I may state that the Executive Council Minute referred to is a printed public document, and it was handed to the Commission by me in connection with certain matters I considered it my duty to bring under notice.

I may say that prior to the 1st July, 1864, the Treasury Accounts were kept by the Auditor-General, and however satisfactory this arrangement may have been to that officer, it was extremely inconvenient for the then Colonial Treasurers. The minute referred to formed part of the papers referring to the change in the accounts which were to be kept from that date by the Treasury, not by the Audit Office, and it was pointed out therein that "the Auditor assumes the place of Minister in authorising or disallowing credits, in controlling expenditure, and in keeping the Public Account of the Colony. He then resumes the position of Auditor, and audits the Public Account, which has been kept by himself, instead of by the proper responsible Minister of the Crown. The design of the present Government is to impose on the Treasury exclusively the appropriate duty of keeping the Public Account of Receipts and Expenditure, and of exhibiting the results to Parliament, and to confine the Audit Office to its legitimate province of auditing the account as kept in the Treasury." The singular appropriateness to the present circumstances of a portion at least of these remarks is obvious.

It appears from the Auditor-General's minute that he is of opinion the Treasury has no right to keep registers of the conditional purchases at all, which he contends are, and should be, kept by him, and that therefore these registers are duplicated by the Treasury—not by the Audit Department. It seems to me from a careful perusal of this minute that the Auditor-General still sympathises with the old arrangement which was in existence prior to 1864. Were these registers not kept by the Treasury we should be unable to inform selectors who wished to convert their selections into freeholds of the sums payable thereon, but would have to refer such persons to the Auditor-General for the information. As this information has generally to be given upon very short notice, and not unfrequently upon demand, it is evident that to abolish the Treasury records would be disastrous to the effective and expeditious working of the Department. Moreover the Treasury Registers are the only perfect records in existence of the great asset represented by the balances due by Conditional Purchasers—the Auditor-General could not tell from his Registers by whom the lands are held.

The

The Auditor-General takes the opportunity of entering a strong protest against the whole procedure of 1864 when the change in the system of accounts took place. Knowing all the circumstances, however, I can say this—that the Treasurer of the day was forced to take the action complained of owing to the extraordinary position in which as Treasurer of the Colony he was placed, not having the means in his own Department of keeping a true and satisfactory account of the Public Expenditure of the Colony.

The Auditor-General also says:—"It is still more singular that the Commission should have imported into the very text of their report a document drawn up by a subordinate officer of the Treasury." This statement, I may explain, refers to a minute by Mr. Lockyer, then one of the Treasury Inspectors, on the accounts of the Public Instruction Department, prepared for the information of the Honorable the Treasurer. Respecting this matter, however, I may point out that on 21st July, 1893, a copy of the report on the accounts of the Public Instruction Department was forwarded by letter for the information of the Honorable the Chief Secretary, in order that such action might be taken as in view of the circumstances was considered necessary. I regret that this report was not referred to the Auditor-General, as it would have convinced him that, notwithstanding the "salutary provisions" of the Audit Act, frauds were not unknown in the service.

I desire now, very briefly, to draw the attention of the Minister to the fact that although provision would seem to have been made in the Audit Act for enabling the Auditor-General to place the accounts of public officers in a satisfactory state, and for effecting such improvements as he thought necessary in connection with the collection of the revenue and the disbursement thereof, no reforms or improvements of any great value have been effected by that officer so far as I am aware. On the contrary, the Department he so much maligns has placed the accounts of all country collectors of revenue on a uniform and satisfactory basis; has discovered frauds in the accounts of, and prosecuted for embezzlement, many collectors of revenue both in the city and in country towns; has endeavoured to introduce an intelligible system of accounts into the various public departments in Sydney and—without any Act of Parliament to fall back upon—has introduced nearly all the reforms in connection with accounts which the examinations showed were much required.

In support of these statements I attach, for the information of the Honorable the Premier, extracts from the reports of the Treasury Inspectors on the accounts of various Public Departments. It will, I think, be evident from a perusal thereof that the time has arrived when some steps should be taken to provide for a more satisfactory audit of the public accounts.

I also attach a memorandum, dated 15th August, by the Receiver, dealing in a practical and effective manner with the Auditor-General's remarks in relation to the accounts of conditional purchasers as kept by this Department.

In conclusion, I desire to add by way of commentary upon the "simple and effective provisions" of the Audit Act, as pointed out by the Auditor-General, that at the time that officer was under examination by the Civil Service Commission, extensive frauds were being perpetrated by the Accountant to the Marine Board.

F. KIRKPATRICK.

The Treasury, N.S.W., 9th September, 1895.

Extracts from Reports of Treasury Inspectors on the Accounts of various Public Departments.

Electric Telegraph Department.

Mr. Kirkpatrick,
4th September, and 2nd December, 1878.

Accounts kept in a confused, unbusinesslike, and complicated manner.
Entire absence of anything approaching system, and no reliance could be placed upon any entry in the principal ledger.
Messages on private business in some cases charged to the Public Account.
Heavy defalcations by Accountant and the Booking-clerk, extending over a period of seven years; earlier books and records destroyed.
Attested accounts submitted to the Auditor-General did not show correct period of collection, and the whole of the revenue not duly collected.
Statements received from other Governments were not examined, and proper accounts with other Governments for intercolonial business were not kept.
Transfers from Trust (Cable) Accounts to Revenue Accounts not properly or regularly effected.
Practice to pay charges for tolls and ferries to the boy messengers from the collections. Vouchers for repayment of these charges were examined and forwarded to the Auditor-General, but that officer did not consider it necessary to make any inquiry where the money was obtained from in the first instance.
Nearly 18,000 tickets, tolls and ferries, to the amount of £212 11s. 10d., not applied for out of Votes for the years 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875, and 1876, written off at date of inspection.
The Auditor-General passed vouchers for messages charged to the Government account on the certificates of the Superintendent without requiring documents in support of claim.
Also passed the claims for tolls and ferries on the same certificates without obtaining certificate of destruction of tickets representing the payments, and which might in consequence be used a second and third time.
In connection with examination of the Revenue Accounts, had occasion to refer to some vouchers containing details of expenditure.
Instances where vouchers were signed and the money fraudulently obtained from the Treasury for fictitious claims.
Vouchers showing payment of large sums of money by the Accountant and others were unsupported by any document; and from the great confidence reposed in the Accountant by the Superintendent, it is probable that vouchers for claims which were not altogether satisfactory may have been signed by the Superintendent.
A searching investigation into the expenditure accounts in the Inspector's opinion was urgently required.
Whole system was reorganised by the Inspector and code of rules drawn up for adoption.
In regulations, provision made for supplying the Auditor-General monthly with the total cost of all messages which should be collected in Sydney and in the interior, as shown by the check returns of the Electric Telegraph Department, with a view to the furnishing of that officer with the means of keeping an effective check upon the collections, not only in Sydney but throughout the Colony.

Comptroller-General of Prisons.

Mr. Finhey, 1st
May, 1880.

Heavy misappropriations. No departmental check.
Advances allowed to remain unadjusted without being reported to the Department or serious effort made to bring them to an issue, and in some instances to remain unadjusted since the year 1875.
System reorganised by the Inspector.

Department of Justice.

Mr. Kirkpatrick
reports—18th
June and 16th
July, 1887.

General arrears of work and confusion in accounts.
Misappropriation by Accountant.
"Up to 31st May advances unadjusted to the extent of £28,578 5s. 2d., notwithstanding adjustment vouchers forwarded to the Auditor-General on 10th June to £5,253 10s.
If to these sums be added the amount of the advances on 1st June, a total sum of about £40,000 was outstanding on 9th June.
"It appears that the Accountant has, without let or hindrance, been enabled to use Government moneys for an indefinite period, and that the risks of detection under the present system of advances and adjustment were very remote."
The Accountant also operated upon advances made for specific purposes in a very irregular way. He has been in the habit of paying claims and making advances to officers out of the general balance at the credit of the account, without regard to whether the amounts necessary to make the payments had been obtained from the Treasury.
The unsatisfactory state of matters set forth is not the result of the system of accounts in the department, but is the result of gross carelessness and wrong doing on the part of the Accountant, together with laxity on the part of the Auditor-General in not insisting upon adjustments being forwarded within a reasonable time.
During the time of the present Accountant no statement of liabilities or assets prepared.
It will also be seen that the Auditor-General does not exercise that complete and satisfactory check over the expenditure which he has hitherto been supposed to do.

Further,

Further, it will be clear that either the Audit Act or its administration is defective, that the time allowed to Public Accountants for the adjustment of advances is unnecessarily long, and that peculation to a large extent might be carried on by public officers for years without detection under the present requirements of the Auditor-General.

I also found that cheques had been cashed and the money used without any fear of detection by the Auditor-General, and, further, I found that advances had been adjusted and the requirements of the Audit Act met by the repayment of sums to the Treasury out of the balances of advances made for other purposes.

Mines Department.

Outstanding Advances at 27th June, 1887, £95,000, extending as far back as 1st November, 1886. Mr. Hinchy, 12th Sept., 1887.
Of this £75,000 overdue.

Queries and reminders had been repeatedly sent by Auditor-General, but the Inspector thinks that as the Accountant, Mines Department, had ignored them, other means should have been taken to compel the Accountant to do his duty.

Although admitting that the greater part of the advances unadjusted was for salaries and allowances, the Inspector does not think that the statement made by the Auditor-General in his letter of 6th July, 1887, "That it was known that the vouchers, therefore, must be forthcoming whenever pressure should be made for the supply of them" can be considered as satisfactory, and that a due and proper examination of salaries and allowances is just as requisite as any other kind of expenditure.

The Treasury objecting to pay advances in round sums except in certain cases; advances have been made only for claims that were due for payment at the time.

These advances formed the bulk of the sums due for adjustment, and could have been got ready for the Auditor-General in nearly every case within a month from the date of advance, so that actually the important duty of adjusting advances had been neglected since 1st December, 1886.

Balance at credit at bank to meet O.S. cheques operated upon in anticipation of advances without the accountant knowing what cheques were actually outstanding.

No reconciliation of bank balance with outstanding liabilities which represented the unexpended balance of advances.

The Inspector also drew attention to the payment of the large subsidies under the Rabbit Act, which was only checked by a subordinate officer in the Mines Department, and the facilities for the perpetration of fraud resulting from this practice.

In September, 1884, the Inspector conducted an inquiry at Wentworth into certain charges brought against the Tapalin Pastoral Company in connection with their claims for rabbit subsidies.

On the 23rd January, 1885, the Auditor-General wrote to the Under Secretary for Mines, urgently requesting to be supplied with the accounts or documents in support of the amounts paid for subsidies for extermination of rabbits; but, although no subsidy papers have been sent to him since 9th March, 1886, he does not appear to have drawn special attention to the omission. The payments for subsidies are made by the Treasury upon authorities from the Under Secretary for Mines, showing the amounts to be paid and the mode of payment desired by the claimants. These authorities in the course of business transmitted to the Auditor-General, who seems to have accepted them as satisfactory, since the abovementioned date, so that actually the expenditure from the 9th March, 1886, to date of report, which amounts to about £200,000, has been passed by the Auditor-General on Departmental authority only.

Public Instruction Department.

Defalcations by H. A. Scott, late accountant, amounting to £7,732 13s. 6d., covering the period from 7th October, 1885, to 2nd June, 1893. Mr. Lockyer, 12th July, 1893.

The Inspector states in his report:—

Owing to a lamentable weakness in the system, it is probable that but for the carelessness of Scott himself these frauds may have gone on undetected for an indefinite period.

Scott confined himself to the misappropriation of moneys on account of fictitious claims for contracts for school buildings and repairs, &c. Of this class of expenditure he had exceptional experience. The claims were prepared and passed by himself, and the acquittances forged.

There has been contributory negligence which has not only made these frauds easy and possible, but has really tended to cloak them, and make their detection only possible by the accident of the offender's own carelessness.

On the 16th May, 1881, the Auditor-General requested that he might be furnished with the amount of all outstanding contracts on 31st May, 1880, and also the amount paid on account of each to date, and that all contracts since that date and in future be sent to the Audit Office for notation.

On the 15th July, 1881, the then Under Secretary, Mr. Wilkins, wrote in answer:—"I am directed to suggest that, in view of the large numbers of such contracts and of the inconvenience and trouble that would be occasioned by sending all agreements backwards and forwards from the Departments, certified schedules of all contracts entered into be furnished periodically, in continuation of those already sent, and that the payments on such contracts be certified to by the Architect of Public Schools, either by signing the vouchers or by his certificate being attached."

By letter, 27th July, 1881, the Auditor-General agreed to this and stated:—"I will be prepared to accept the certified schedules monthly for the present, in lieu of the agreements themselves."

Since the above date, although the papers in all cases not under contract have been regularly forwarded to the Audit Office, the particulars of the authorities for the more important expenditure on account of contracts have been provided in the form of a schedule, while the original authorities have been retained in the Department of Public Instruction.

Scott was in charge of the contract registers. He personally prepared these schedules, which were wholly unreliable. They were signed by the head of the department as correct on the guarantee of his initials, and were accepted as sufficient by the Auditor-General. The only feature that might have given them any value as a basis of audit was the suggestion contained in the Under Secretary's letter of July, 1881, that the payments on such contracts be certified to by the Architect of Public Schools either by signing the voucher or by his certificate being attached. So far as I can ascertain this necessary provision has never been carried out.

It

It will readily be seen that the schedules referred to were worthless for any practical purpose and that the practice placed an unlimited power in the hands of the person who prepared them.

An even more serious feature is the fact that no intimation of the cancellation of contracts is ever sent to the Auditor-General. At my request the present Acting Accountant prepared a statement showing the amount of each of the past four years of the cancellation of contracts, the acceptance of which had been previously notified to the Auditor-General, viz. :—

1890	12,174	11	9
1891	6,053	15	7

or a total in four years of £25,918 11s. 5d., which I have every reason to believe still remains open in the books of the Auditor-General, and vouchers including any portion of that amount if paid by the Department of Public Instruction would be passed by the Audit Office without comment.

Marine Board and Naval Forces.

Mr. Brodie,
21st May, 1895.

No books of Account kept since 1st May, 1889.

Unadjusted advances for salaries and contingencies, £17,753 15s. 6d.

Ninety-two advances unadjusted 18th April, 1895. Time allowed in each case ten days. In some instances arrears three and four months in adjustment.

Every facility offered for the perpetration of fraud without risk of detection by the Auditor-General.

No balance-sheet submitted.

Frauds committed by the Accountant, amounting to £2,294 15s. 7d., extending over a period of three and a half and four years.

The frauds were simply effected by using advances made by the Treasury to pay claims, the amounts of which had been embezzled by the accountant out of previous advances made by the Treasury.

The mere checking of the cash balances would have detected these frauds at any time within the three or four years previously referred to.

The most ordinary precautions would have led to the immediate detection of these frauds, being similar in character to those committed in the Department of Justice in June, 1887.

The strictures then passed on the requirements of the Auditor-General by the Inspector conducting that investigation are applicable to this case, which is simply history repeating itself, but in a stronger form.

The Audit of the Expenditure Accounts, and comments on the Auditor-General's remarks on the Conditional Purchase Accounts at the Treasury.

To the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

MEMORANDUM,—

At the request of the Under Secretary, on 27th June last, I drew attention to certain evidence given by the Auditor-General, which particularly concerned the Branch of the Service over which I have charge. The evidence in question appeared to be inaccurate, and tended to convey a wrong impression of our books and procedure. It appeared to be the result of some misapprehension, or an insufficient knowledge of our methods, and it was anticipated some acknowledgment to that effect would be promptly made.

In reply, the Auditor-General not only reiterates his statements made before the Commission, but sweepingly condemns our books and the system in operation with regard to the Conditional Purchase Accounts, and he also refers to a minute written by me in July, 1893 (when holding the position of Senior Treasury Inspector), on the subject of the audit of the expenditure accounts. Mr. Rennie states that the minute in question is "full of unfriendly and unfair remarks, and one-sided statements * * a series of opinions and statements quite open to adverse criticism, given by a subordinate officer of the Treasury of comparatively limited knowledge and experience."

Frauds to the extent of several thousand pounds had been perpetrated by an officer of the Public Instruction Department. They extended over a period of eight years, and were confined to the expenditure accounts. I was instructed to report how it was that the system of audit had signally failed. In obedience to those instructions I submitted my conclusions, based upon the evidence of that particular case and my own personal experience.

I could come to no other conclusion than that the whole system of audit of the expenditure accounts was unreliable; that its operations were wrong in principle, and established on a false basis; and that it would prove a continual source of danger, rather than a safeguard, until its methods were thoroughly reorganised. I fully appreciated then, as I do now, the great seriousness of these allegations. It was not for me to question whether the task was a pleasant one or not. I alone am responsible for the accuracy of the conclusions arrived at, and in expressing them was uninfluenced by any personal feeling or prejudice.

It is necessary to mention this, since the Auditor-General, in the correspondence herewith, attributes the action of the Treasury to unworthy motives, and he distinctly infers that we are actuated, not by a spirit of making the Service better by increasing its efficiency and improving it in the public estimation, but by one of hostility and resentment at the assertion of the Auditor-General's legitimate functions. Mr. Rennie also states:—"The Audit Act of 1870 is, and always has been, a great offence to the Treasury, and so it might be expected that every opportunity would be taken to ignore its salutary provisions and to defeat its operations."

This subject, which will have to be seriously considered sooner or later, is of the gravest importance, and I do not think that it will be permitted to sink into a mere recriminatory controversy.

The Audit Act of 1870 provides, among other matters, that the Auditor-General shall examine and compare the returns furnished by public accountants with the cash-sheets, vouchers, &c., but it does not explicitly provide for a periodical personal inspection and verification of the books of account and cash balances. In Audit Acts of other colonies, to which I have been able to refer, this indispensable provision for an efficient audit is recognised and expressed.

It however appears to me after carefully reading our own Act that far from being intentionally omitted, it is inferentially expressed. Thus clause 27 provides that the Auditor-General after examination of the vouchers and returns "shall allow and discharge every such public accountant for all sums shown to have been by him respectively received or collected, and duly paid into the Treasury, or into a Bank, as hereinbefore provided, and shall disallow and surcharge such public accountant all sums wilfully or negligently omitted to be received or collected by him," and in clause 29, in similar manner, he "shall disallow and surcharge all sums disbursed in excess or not duly vouched, &c." Clearly these provisions cannot be fulfilled unless the auditor has access to the office records and books of account which contain the necessary authority for the transactions, and the evidence by which their accuracy may be verified.

Section 39 provides that the Auditor-General "may recommend any plans and suggestions that he may think worthy of adoption for the better collection and payment of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and other moneys as aforesaid, and the more effectually and economically auditing and examining the Public Accounts, and any improvement in the mode of keeping such accounts, &c."

Up to the present time, with a few isolated exceptions, the audit by the Audit Department has been conducted by the aid of vouchers and by attested accounts accompanying returns declaring that they are fair and true copies. The meaning of the Audit Act has been so interpreted that any personal examination of the books was quite unnecessary. In his evidence before the Civil Service Commission, Mr. Rennie was asked (Question 325), "Do you not think that auditing the accounts of the Treasury necessitates your consulting the books which they keep?" He replied, "I do not need to do that at all"; and, after quoting section 28 of the Audit Act, which deals with the comparison of the vouchers with copies of the cash-book, or cash-sheets as they are termed, he continued, "I contend when that is done the whole audit is complete and as perfect as it is possible to be."

This presents concisely what the Audit Department does not do as well as what it does do.

Mr. Rennie further expressed himself on the subject as follows:—

Question 303. "What is the danger of an auditor being seen too often near the work which he is supposed to audit;—you said it was a dangerous practice the other night; as I understand it, the oftener an auditor checks the work that comes under his notice the better? Yes, if we know anything of human nature, we must come to the conclusion that there is always more or less danger of collusion in some way or other."

"Question

"Question 304. I think that would be a very sorry view to take of auditing generally? It is not only my own opinion because it has been expressed before."

"Question 305. But you agree with it? Yes."

In a memorandum, dated 9th October, 1858, on the subject of the audit of the Railway Accounts, the then Auditor-General, Mr. W. C. Mayne, expressed a similar opinion, and quoted in support of it the evidence of Mr. Romilly (Commissioner of Audit in England) when examined before a Select Committee of the House of Commons. Mr. Romilly said:—"If, however, the auditors are to be in any degree an efficient check upon the Treasury, it is essential that the accounts to be checked should be sent to their office, and that the examination should be carried on under their own roof. * * * There is always a risk in checking the accounts of any department by officers placed in that department that these officers will become part and parcel of that department, be more influenced by the views and feelings of that department than by those of the office to which they belong, and that instead of so much checking they will often be advising and carrying on the work of the department in which they are placed."

This opinion is certainly suggestive of the utter incompetency and untrustworthiness of the officers then employed, as well as a deficiency in proper supervision. But even admitting it in its most sweeping character, surely Mr. Romilly would never have advocated that because his audit officers should not be in continual association with those whose accounts they were checking, it therefore should be necessary to abandon all personal investigation and supervision.

To understand clearly the lines upon which such a mode of audit is conducted, we may suppose an auditor charged with the investigation of the accounts of a large financial institution. There are handed to him a bundle of vouchers, securities, and other documents, and certified copies of the transactions. After comparing the vouchers, &c., checking their additions and computations, he may certify to their accuracy, but he cannot have any personal knowledge of the correctness of the copy of the transactions or of the completeness of the vouchers, and he must accept the statement of the cash balances on the good faith of the accounting officer, who, if already dishonest, will not hesitate for one moment to suppress documents of an incriminating character or falsify the returns.

The paramount necessity for this personal supervision is so obvious and so generally acknowledged as to hardly admit of argument. The practical experience gained by a personal investigation of the books of account and balances affords an intimate knowledge of the transactions which can never be attained by the examination of mere copies. It is the only reliable means of checking fraud, and the moral influence of it acts as a wholesome deterrent to careless and procrastinating officers.

It was probably the knowledge of this weak point in our system of audit which led to the first appointment of the Treasury Revenue Inspectors. They periodically investigate the accounts and verify the cash balances of several hundred collectors of revenue in the city and country. The result of their work is on record, and it is a standing testimony of the excellent effects of personal supervision. They have successfully endeavoured to reach every office over which there is no independent personal control, and although much remains to be done, the past twenty years have shown an improvement in the efficiency of our revenue collectors that few have any conception of. Regulations have been issued from time to time for their guidance, a strict discipline is maintained, punctuality in their remittances is insisted upon, they are visited and their accounts inspected periodically, but not by the Audit Department. And yet the Auditor-General charges the Treasury with hampering his administration of the Audit Act.

In a great institution like the Civil Service it must be expected that there will be found a certain proportion of dishonest officers. It often occurred to me, while a revenue inspector, as a peculiar feature that we found the defaulters among the revenue collectors, while those who disbursed the public funds were singularly free from irregularity, or perhaps detection. The frauds in the Public Instruction Department to a certain extent demonstrated the cause of it. Simply insufficient and inefficient audit. Recently the Treasury Inspectors have undertaken the personal inspection of the expenditure accounts, and the accumulating experience points throughout to the one indisputable fact, that personal supervision and investigation are indispensable. In one recent case, in connection with which the accountant in charge is now serving a sentence of imprisonment, the expenditure books of account had been totally neglected for a period of three years. The copies of the transactions and the vouchers were nevertheless regularly audited by the Auditor-General.

It is worthy of remark that the supervision by the Treasury Inspectors over the collectors of revenue, extending over a period of twenty years, and more recently their inspection of the expenditure accounts, has been effected simply on the authority of the Colonial Treasurer, unsupported, except in two isolated cases, by an Act of Parliament.

In the exceptions referred to, the Bankruptcy Act and the Probate Act, it was expressly provided that a periodical personal investigation of the accounts should be made by the Colonial Treasurer or his officers. These provisions were not suggested by the Treasury, but by the framers of the Acts in question. It may be taken as a further illustration of the want of faith in the sufficiency of the audit by the Audit Department.

The Auditor-General, in reply to the inquiry by Treasury as to the apparent discrepancies in his evidence on the Conditional Purchase Accounts before the Civil Service Commission, states that he has been misunderstood, or rather, misrepresented. The particular objection taken was in regard to Question No. 240, in answer to which he stated that he "calls the attention of the Treasury to all instalments in arrear." Mr. Rennie now states that this "should be read as the attention of the proper officer or Department concerned—in this particular it would be the Secretary for Lands as the controlling Minister—and not the Colonial Treasurer."

This presents the whole gist of the matter, and with this acknowledgment further comment on that point is unnecessary, beyond mentioning the fact that the Auditor-General has been misinformed of the practice of his Department. Arrears due by Conditional Purchasers do not come under review there. It is tacitly admitted that there should be some cognizance of this important subject, but as a matter of fact the attention of the Lands or of any other Department is not drawn to the question of these arrears by the Auditor-General.

With regard to the Auditor-General's wholesale condemnation of our Conditional Purchase Accounts, I will briefly show, and, I think, very clearly, that Mr. Rennie fails altogether to appreciate the object of these accounts, and that his remarks afford a further illustration of the simple fact that the only practical way by which an auditor may obtain a familiar knowledge of the accounts he is auditing is by a personal acquaintance and inspection of the original books of account.

Mr.

Mr. Rennie states that our Conditional Purchase Registers are absurdly extensive and minute in detail, and in all seriousness he adds that they are kept going for purely audit purposes, and that it is quite unnecessary for us to keep any record of the names of the holders.

The information with regard to each conditional purchase on our books comprises—No., date of selection, name of purchaser or transferee, area, purchase price, instalment, date of payment, and balance outstanding,—not one item of which is superfluous.

Selectors have the alternative of paying their annual interest or instalment in Sydney, and this was availed of during the past twelve months in the case of 14,000 conditional purchases. We keep the whole of the accounts (150,000 in number), and the various Crown lands agents for this purpose are merely our collecting officers. We compute the balances, advise the Lands Department of the selectors in arrear, and practically have the financial management of the collection of the Crown lands revenue.

Ten years ago the Audit Department dispensed with the registration in their books of the names of conditional purchasers and transferees, the information being considered quite unnecessary, the application numbers being utilised for the purpose of identification. Mr. Rennie strongly comments upon the absurdity of the Treasury recording this information.

It is inconceivable how such an opinion could possibly be expressed, in view of the fact that this is the Chief Receiving Office of the Government; that conditional purchasers and others have the alternative of paying their instalments, &c., direct to the Treasury; that our books of account are indispensable for that purpose, and not for the purpose of a rival audit, as alleged by the Auditor-General; that we are dealing directly with the Crown debtors and not with the land, which has conditionally passed away from the possession of the State; and further, that the Financial Department of the Government is more concerned with the names of these debtors than with the comparatively paltry application numbers attached to the areas, representing the amounts indebted. I venture to say that if this suggestion of the Auditor-General were ever attempted to be carried out, and we dispensed with this very necessary record and means of identification, it would not only lead to numberless errors but to endless litigation. The impracticability of this proposition may be best realised by applying it to a Building Society or some other similar institution, the Accountant of which—acting upon the advice of his Auditor—dispenses with the names of the customers in his ledgers, receipts, &c., and substitutes in lieu thereof a series of numbers. Is there a man of business in the city who would for one moment attempt to justify such an experiment? It would not only be found to be utterly impracticable at the Treasury—indeed it would be extreme folly to attempt it; but I maintain and will show that when, under the present system, the Auditor-General dispensed with the names of the holders of conditional purchases, he parted with one of the absolutely necessary instruments for adequately checking a large portion of the public expenditure.

During the past ten years over £400,000 has been refunded from revenue to conditional purchasers. I imagine that an auditor should consider it indispensable to satisfy himself that this sum has been paid only to those persons who were legally entitled to it. It would be interesting to learn how this has been done in the case under notice and in the apparent absence of any information as to who those persons were. Fortunately the safeguard was at the Treasury. We registered the holders, and I think that so long as these accounts remain in our custody, not one item of the present absolutely necessary information contained in our registers will be dispensed with.

Mr. Rennie states that his "registers are complete and perfect instruments for an effective check upon the collections of the Treasury, &c., &c.," and in answer to Question No. 383 of the Civil Service Commission he acknowledged that during the previous twelve months the Audit Department had not issued a single query challenging the accuracy in any one particular of our conditional purchase accounts, that there had not been a single surcharge on that account—not one penny had been short paid or collected. I have the extreme good fortune to have a most excellent staff of officers; they are neat and accurate in their work, and they take a keen personal interest and pride in their books and duties. I have endeavoured to add to the checks so that accuracy may be ensured; but I think there is some reason for doubting that this branch has not been guilty of passing a single error or discrepancy after dealing with 150,000 accounts; but if such be the case, and our work during that period has been absolutely correct in every detail, what a complete testimony does it not afford to the efficiency of our methods, our books, and our officers.

Mr. Rennie states: "The former Civil Service Commission expressed surprise that there was no account at the Treasury or Audit Department to show the total amount due or payable by the conditional purchasers. Since then, I understand that the Treasury have, at a very heavy expense, prepared such an account, showing a total of some millions of pounds, but the account after all is only a curiosity, and I venture to say that it was not worth the time or money spent over it."

Mr. Rennie then endeavours to show that the total arrived at is simply a vague estimate and unreliable.

The true facts of the case place a totally different complexion on the matter. The "very heavy expense" was under £85. The total represents the aggregate debit on 31st December, 1894, of every current conditional purchaser's account on the books. That total, less accrued interest, amounts to £13,273,223, and is accurate. It was compiled with the greatest care, and afterwards was thoroughly checked. To this was added the interest accruing to 31st December, 1894, which to a certain extent was an estimate. This amounted to £334,814—a small proportion of the whole, and closely correct. It is a very simple matter for any person to challenge the accuracy of a statement of figures; but I think, if it be expected to carry any weight, some reasonable evidence should be adduced in support. The Auditor-General states that his registers have the additional advantage of being "a perfect record of the facts necessary for showing how each conditional purchase account stands from year to year, and from which at any time the balance due upon it can be ascertained at a very short notice." The underlining of the words is in the original text. The Auditor-General is now aware for the first time of the total indebtedness of the conditional purchasers on the 31st December, 1894. Before knowing what that total amounted to he condemned its accuracy. As it is stated above that the balances may be ascertained at the Audit Department at very short notice, the opportunity presents itself of checking the accuracy of our figures, and pointing out in what respect they are unreliable.

Apart from any question of accuracy, the Auditor-General looks upon this information as a "curiosity," and "not worth the time or money spent upon it." It is intended, if possible, to prepare each year a similar statement, showing the total as on 31st December. It is somewhat more than a curiosity. It represents a valuable asset of the State. The value of that asset reached its maximum amount on 31st December, 1892. It will soon commence to diminish, and in time it will diminish with increasing rapidity each year until finally it will totally disappear. In future years provision will have to be made to meet the falling Land Revenue from this cause. It is with this object in view, of seeing ahead more clearly, and for the purpose of assisting in making proper provision for the future that this information is compiled. The Auditor-General is of opinion that "it is of no value for finance purposes may be gathered from the fact that so far as it appears no public use has been made of it by the Treasury." It is difficult to follow his argument; the premises do not appear to justify the conclusion.

Upon the question of arrears the Auditor-General says: "Reverting, however, to delays in payment of instalments by conditional purchasers, it is not a matter of very great importance, because a failure to pay is of much more consequence to the owner than it is to the Crown, as it involves possible forfeiture of all previous payments and of the land itself, and the failure to pay cannot be enforced in any other way; that is to say, the conditional purchaser could not be compelled to pay his instalments by legal process, consequently no amount of careful watching or earnest attention on the part of the Treasury, however laudable that action may be, can secure the fulfilment of the purchase conditions by a conditional purchaser. Moreover it is wrong to say that, in the process of 'audit' by the Treasury by which they come to notice overdue payments, a comparatively useless result in this case, &c., &c."

The facts of the case, and they may be easily verified, supply a complete refutation of these statements.

If in this Colony had continued to treat the arrears due by the conditional purchasers with the same indifference as appears to have been the case with regard to deferred payments by purchasers of Crown lands in Victoria, I think the importance of the subject would have been more keenly appreciated and better understood. In the neighbouring colony the question of arrears in land payments has become one of great seriousness and embarrassment.

For many years no steps were taken in this Colony to call in the arrears. The question was often considered and brought under notice by the Treasury, but there appeared to be a disinclination to take any decisive action in the matter. Whilst holding the position of Treasury Inspector I submitted a memorandum on 8th September, 1890, suggesting the necessity of sending annually a notice of demand to each selector in arrear; I also pointed out that the irregularities in the payment of instalments made it impossible for the Inspectors to exercise a complete check on the receipts by Crown Lands Agents. I believe I am right in saying that this memorandum indirectly led to action being at last taken. In November, 1890, particulars of all the arrears were published in the Government Gazette, and payment was demanded under penalty of forfeiture. The total amount called for was £43,172; of this we actually collected within five months £32,392, an excellent result. But more than this, the publication of the arrears—as I anticipated—led to the detection of several dishonest collecting officers. We have since, regularly each year, supplied the Lands Department with a schedule of the arrears, and a circular letter is forwarded by that Department to each defaulter. Taking into consideration the recent depression and the financial crisis, the total accumulated arrears now due by conditional purchasers is extremely small and but trifling in comparison with those of the colony of Victoria.

Surely the Auditor-General is unaware of these circumstances when he declares that the efforts of the Treasury in this direction have been productive of only useless results, and that the matter is of no great importance.

It is quite true, as the Auditor-General points out that in the year 1888 he surcharged the Treasury £120 7s. short collected on a conditional purchase, and also the sum of £136 17s. in the year 1891. There was a further case of £10 in February last. The Auditor-General says he need not mention other cases. The suggested inference is not a just one, for such cases are very few and far between. I can trace no others beyond those quoted. There is nothing to be offered in excuse for these errors beyond the fact that in proportion to the total volume of the work they are of the rarest occurrence. In each of the cases referred to the amount short collected was recovered from the conditional purchasers.

The Auditor-General has stated that we open accounts for all conditional purchases as they are applied for, and that we thus insert in our books "a lot of information which is of no earthly use." I have already dealt with this statement, in so far as it applied to the registration of the names of the Crown debtors. The principle of selection before survey led to many applications for land, which, for various reasons, was found to be not available for conditional purchase, and to a refund of the deposit to the applicant. The increasing number of holdings and their attendant accounts in our ledgers, together with insufficient accommodation, suggested the necessity, in 1884, of delaying the opening of accounts with conditional purchasers in our personal account ledgers until three years after date of application; and we thus saved many thousand formal accounts where the operations did not extend beyond the receipt and refund of the first payments. But (although I inadvertently used the phrase myself) the term "useless" accounts is an inappropriate one. Accounts were absolutely necessary, and were and are kept in subsidiary books for convenience sake, and to economise space and the number of ledgers in use. Mr. Rennie makes a comparison of the number of ledgers at the Audit Department and the number kept at the Treasury. He states that he hopes to reduce his own in number to twenty in all. He emphasises this comparison of his books with those of the Treasury, which latter, so far as I can ascertain—although he is our auditor—he has never seen. It is curious that, although he has no personal knowledge of our system or methods, he makes this and other comparisons, and yet—in the same communication—resents the Civil Service Commission making a similar comparison, but with a different end in view. He says, ". . . But the questions by the Civil Service Commission were not followed up on those lines, but persistently on the idea of there being two sets of books of account with the same object in view. That I have shown not to be the case, but that my registers were not at all books of account in a mercantile sense, but simply instruments by which the work assigned to the Department is carried out, and at a very small expense compared to that incurred by the Treasury in keeping 'books' in connection with these receipts." Whether the Audit Office books are necessary, or whether the Treasury Land Accounts ledgers are suitable for the requirements, properly kept, and the work economically done, are questions which I trust will be decided by some impartial authority at an early date. I think, however, that as a public accountant I have good reason to complain of the adverse criticism of an auditor who condemns my books without having examined them, and questions their usefulness without having even seen them.

In

In illustration of the mechanical process and want of system in our present audit, and of the wrong conception of its principles, I may draw attention to the present practice in regard to the supervision, or want of proper supervision, over the issue of deeds of alienated Crown Lands. After the receipt of the balance of purchase money at the Treasury, I understand the computations are carefully checked at the Audit Department, and there the matter ends. But with regard to the issue of the deeds of grant there is no independent check. Upon my unsupported signature, as Receiver, nearly every deed for every acre of land alienated is issued, and at this moment, if such certificates had fraudulently been issued for payments of balances to the extent of half a million acres or more, the deeds would have issued, and the Auditor-General is and must necessarily be innocent of it. I drew attention to this important matter in June, 1894. The Auditor-General stated in reply, "So far as I know, no case of fraud has occurred in the issue of deeds for land without full payment of the stipulated price beforehand." This can only possibly be more conjecture. I am perfectly satisfied in my own mind that the work has been done here most faithfully, but that is not sufficient. The check on these transactions should be so complete as to make, as far as possible, their bona-fides absolute and beyond criticism. The mere professions of the accounting officer are carefully audited, his "vouchers" are considered of paramount importance, whereas they are only the means by which the accuracy of his transactions may be verified, and that only by the aid of personal investigation.

It has been the practice for years to place large sums collected by Crown Lands Agents on account of Conditional Purchases, &c., temporarily to Suspense Account. Mr. Rennie thinks this quite unnecessary and states that it greatly delays the receipt by him of the vouchers. I would be glad to see my way clear to suggest that we may dispense with the necessity of crediting such amounts to Suspense Account but there are difficulties in the way. The Under Secretary is aware that this matter has already been under consideration and that during the past twelve months we have considerably curtailed the operations on the Suspense Account. Owing however to the fact that the greater portion of the conditional purchase payments fall due in the first quarter of the year, or rather during the month of March, the Crown Lands Agents in the country have the greatest difficulty in coping with the work during that month. It has therefore been arranged, and has been the practice for years to allow them a month after 31st March, to prepare and forward their vouchers, but for greater safety they are required to remit their collections weekly to the Treasury. We receive these amounts during March and early in April, and they aggregate over £400,000, but in the absence of the vouchers we are unable to credit the amounts to their proper head of revenue. The vouchers on receipt at Treasury are examined, posted, and credited, and the remittances finally adjusted by the 30th June in each year. There can be no delay or inconvenience occasioned to the Audit Department, since it is an indisputable fact that they are months behind us in their postings. As an instance, we received notice of a surcharge in July last of £10 (which I have already drawn attention to in this memorandum), having reference to a transaction which occurred in the previous February.

The Treasury (and the recent Civil Service Commission expressed a similar opinion) believes that the duplicate accounts kept at the Audit Department are quite unnecessary. The Auditor-General retorts that it is the Treasury books of account which are the duplicates, and it is they which are unnecessary. Supposing the latter to be the correct opinion, and that the original books of account are kept at the Audit Department, we must admit the singular fact that the officer in charge of those books of account is necessarily his own auditor.

I have endeavoured to be as brief as possible, and have only dealt with the more important questions at issue. I trust, however, I have sufficiently shown that my previous memorandum on the system of audit of the expenditure accounts was fully justified, and also that the allegations of the Auditor-General, contained in the accompanying correspondence, respecting our conditional purchase accounts, are not based upon facts.

The Audit of the Expenditure Accounts.

11 July, 1893.

THE disclosures in connection with the recent frauds in the Public Instruction Department demonstrate the immediate necessity for some radical alteration in the present system of auditing the expenditure accounts of the Government.

It has transpired that the frauds in question have been systematically perpetrated for the past eight years, and are now only detected in consequence of the culprit's own carelessness. It is found that the elaborate system of audit to which the Government looks as a protection and safeguard has signally failed to exercise any reasonable control or check over a most important portion of the Government expenditure.

There is no disguising the fact that the conditions which made these frauds so possible and free from detection are part of a general system under which the audit of our Public Accounts is at present conducted, and the fear of similar opportunities and temptation existing in other departments of the State naturally suggests itself.

It appears to me that the present system is wrong in principle as well as in detail. It is essentially a post-audit by voucher, wherein the verification of accuracy mainly depends upon an examination of the vouchers that they contain the endorsement of the responsible officers certifying to the computations, &c. It necessitates a large amount of purely mechanical work, and the keeping of books of account by the Auditor-General, which, in some cases at least, are already kept in duplicate by other Government departments.

With the exception, perhaps, of the Customs Department, no personal inspection is made, and as pointed out in the report on Scott's defalcations, "the method of book-keeping, the necessary precautions for the prevention of frauds by a division of responsibility, and a personal verification of the current balances" do not come under review.

It is possible that this is partly the fault of our Audit Act, 33 Vic. No. 18, which, although apparently copied from the Imperial Act, 29 and 33 Vic., c. 39, is not so comprehensive, and several important provisions contained in the latter measure are omitted. This is especially noticeable in the limited authority vested in the Auditor-General by the local Act.

The Imperial Act, section 28, provides that "in order that such examinations may as far as possible proceed pari passu with the cash transactions of the several accounting departments, the Comptroller and Auditor-General shall have free access at all convenient times to the books of account and other documents relating to the accounts of such departments, &c., &c."

Under our present system, instead of the audit proceeding pari passu, it is often months in arrear. This was illustrated some time since in an investigation of the expenditure accounts of the Departments of Mines and Justice, when it transpired that adjustments of advances to those departments amounting in the aggregate to over £100,000, which should have been rendered to the Auditor-General, were several months in arrear.

The Victorian Audit Act, 54 Vic. No. 1,066, is even more emphatic with regard to the necessity of a personal inspection. The Department of Audit in that Colony is administered by three Commissioners, responsible, as here and in England, only to Parliament. Section 40 provides for an inspection by the Commissioners, or one of them, at least once a year, of the books and accounts of every receiver and paymaster, and that they shall take stock of all stores on hand and examine all contract accounts and all circumstances affecting or attending the making of such contracts, &c., &c. By the 44th section they have power "to call for persons or papers for the purpose of special inquiry," and they are also empowered "to cause search to be made in and extracts taken from any book or records in the custody of the Treasurer or in any public office, &c., &c.," and by section 45, they may examine upon oath, &c.

Our present system is a cumbrous one. It entails considerable unnecessary inconvenience to accounting officers in the formal information and elaborate detail which have to be furnished to the Audit Office. The contributory negligence brought under notice in connection with the recent frauds is the natural outcome of the mechanical process resulting from the conditions of the present imperfect system.

It can readily be understood that where mere copies of the transactions are furnished for the purpose of verification, opportunities are afforded for deception which would be impracticable under a good system of periodical personal supervision, where the original books, vouchers, and authorities are critically reviewed. This is the only satisfactory method for the detection of errors of principle and commission, in addition to the errors of omission. Apart from these considerations, the moral influence of an independent personal supervision is an additional safeguard.

There should be little difficulty in so amending the present Act and the system of audit as to attain the desired efficiency, and it is probable that with a less cumbrous method a more effective result may be attained with less expense to the Government.

The Victorian Act is very complete, and contains many excellent provisions that might with advantage be adopted by this Colony.

TWELFTH REPORT

ON

THE CREATION, INSCRIPTION, AND ISSUE OF STOCK,

UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE “INSCRIBED STOCK ACT OF 1883” (46 VIC. No. 12).

To the Honorable George Houstoun Reid, Esq., M.P., Colonial Treasurer,—

The Treasury, New South Wales,

Sydney, 4th November, 1895.

Sir,

I have the honor to submit the Twelfth Annual Report under the provisions of the “Inscribed Stock Act of 1883.”

Since my last Report, dated 14th November, 1894, the only operation under the provisions of the Act has been the issue in London, on 10th ultimo, of a Redemption Loan of £4,000,000.

The several documents in connection with the Redemption Loan of £832,000 issued on 20th September, 1894, and mentioned in my last Report will be found in Appendix C.

A statement of the Stock created and inscribed under the provisions of the Act is given in Appendices A and B.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK,

Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

APPENDIX C.

NEW SOUTH WALES GOVERNMENT £3½ PER CENT. INSCRIBED STOCK.—1918.

Fourth Issue, £882,000.

Repayable at par, 1st September, 1918.—First dividend, being six months' interest, payable 1st March, 1895. Minimum Price of issue, £100 per cent.

This issue is to meet an amount of £882,000 Debentures, bearing Interest at 5 per cent., maturing on the 1st January, 1895; it does not add to the indebtedness of the Colony, but effects a large saving of Interest.

Authorised by the Parliament of New South Wales under Act 57 Vict. No. 17, 1894, for the repayment of outstanding 5 per cent. Debentures maturing 1st January, 1895, amounting to £882,000, and secured upon the Consolidated Revenues of the Colony.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England give notice that they are authorised to receive on Thursday, 20th September, 1894, tenders for £882,000 New South Wales £3½ per cent. inscribed stock, repayable at par 1st September, 1918. This

* Of the capital amount of £2,000,000 created, a sum of £494,200 only has been inscribed, the balance has lapsed. The amount of £494,200 is made up as follows, namely:—

Debentures due 1st July, 1891, exchanged for 3½ per cent. Stock	15,000
Debentures due 1st January, 1892, exchanged for 3½ per cent. Stock	279,200
Stock handed to the London Chartered Bank as security for an advance, under which Debentures due 1st July, 1891, to the extent of £185,500 were redeemed. This Stock was, upon the repayment of the advance, transferred back to the Government, and is now available for sale as opportunity offers	200,000†

† NOTE.—14th November, 1894. This has since been sold.

This stock will be in addition to, and will rank pari passu with the New South Wales £3½ per cent. stock, 1918, already existing, the Dividends on which are payable half-yearly on the 1st March and 1st September; the first dividend on the present issue, due 1st March, 1895, will be for six months' interest from 1st September, 1894, on the nominal amount of stock.

The books of the stock are kept at the Bank of England, where all assignments and transfers are made; and holders of the stock are able, on payment of the usual fees, to take out stock certificates to bearer, with coupons attached, which certificates may be re-inscribed into stock at the will of the holder.

All transfers and stock certificates are free of stamp duty.

Dividend warrants will be transmitted by post if desired.

By the Act 40 and 41 Vict. ch. 59, the revenues of the Colony of New South Wales alone will be liable in respect of this stock and the dividends thereon, and the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury will not be directly or indirectly liable or responsible for the payment of the stock or of the dividends thereon, or for any matter relating thereto.

Tenders may be for the whole or any part of the stock, and must state what amount of money will be given for every £100 of stock. Tenders for other than even hundreds of stock, or at a price including fractions of a shilling other than sixpence, will not be accepted. Tenders must be delivered at the Chief Cashier's office, Bank of England, before two o'clock on Thursday, 20th September, 1894. Tenders at different prices must be on separate forms. The amount of stock applied for must be written on the outside of the tender.

The minimum price, below which no tender will be accepted, has been fixed at par for every £100 of stock.

A deposit of £5 per cent. on the amount of stock tendered for must be paid at the same office at the delivery of the tender, and the deposit must not be enclosed in the tender. Where no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned; and in case of partial allotment, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the first instalment.

In the event of the receipt of tenders for a larger amount of Stock than that proposed to be issued at or above the minimum price, the tenders at the lowest price accepted will be subject to a pro rata diminution.

The dates at which the further payments on account of the Loan will be required are as follows:—

- | | |
|--|---|
| On Monday, the 22nd October, 1894, £25 per cent.; | |
| On Tuesday, the 20th November, 1894, £25 per cent.; | |
| On Thursday, the 20th December, 1894, £25 per cent.; | |

The instalments may be paid in full on or after the 28th September, 1894, under discount at the rate of £1 per cent. per annum. In case of default in the payment of any instalment at its proper date, the deposit and instalments previously paid will be liable to forfeiture.

Scrip certificates to bearer will be issued in exchange for the provisional receipts.

The stock will be inscribed in the bank books on or after the 20th December, 1894, but scrip paid up in full may be forthwith inscribed.

No tender will be received unless upon the printed form, which can be obtained at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England; of Messrs. Mullens, Marshall & Co., Stock Brokers, 4, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; and of the Agent-General for the Government of New South Wales, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, S.W.

NEW SOUTH WALES STOCK £4 per cent.—Fourth issue, £2,500,000.

DEED-POLL declaring the creation of £2,500,000 New South Wales Stock, £4 per cent., and the terms and conditions on which the same shall be issued and redeemed.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

The Honourable Sir Saul Samuel, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Companion of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Agent-General resident in London of the Colony of New South Wales, Sir Daniel Cooper, Baronet, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Donald Larnach, Esquire, Frederick Holkham Dangar, Esquire, William Richmond Mewburn, Esquire, and Nathaniel Cork, Esquire, send greeting:

WHEREAS by an Act passed by the Legislature of the Colony of New South Wales, entitled the "Inscribed Stock of 1883," it was among other things enacted, that whenever by any Act then or thereafter in force, power should be given to the Governor (in the said Act defined to mean the Governor with the advice of the Executive Council), to raise any sum or sums of money by way of loan for the public service of the Colony, it should be lawful for the Governor to raise the whole or any portion of such sum or sums in the form of inscribed stock, hereinafter termed "stock," and that all such stock should be styled "New South Wales Stock," and, subject to the provisions of the now reciting Act, should be issued in such amounts, in such manner, at such times, bearing interest at such rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, and should be redeemable at such times and upon such conditions, and should be subject to such terms and conditions as the Governor before exercising the aforesaid power should from time to time determine and appoint. And it was further enacted that the Governor should have and might exercise the following powers and authorities or any of them, that was to say:—He might from time to time declare all or any of the debentures issued under the authority of any Act of Parliament to be convertible into stock, redeemable at such times, and subject to such terms and conditions as he might before the creation thereof determine and appoint. He might authorise the issue of an equivalent amount of such stock in exchange for debentures, and he might on such conditions as he might determine, authorise the creation and issue of any stock, for the purpose of converting any outstanding debentures into stock, and to pay any expenses in connection with such conversions, or in carrying out the provisions of the Act. And it was further enacted that any such conversion of debentures into stock might be effected either by arrangement with the holders of such debentures or by purchase thereof out of moneys raised by the sale of new stock or partly in one way and partly in the other. And it was further enacted that the Governor might appoint two or more Agents in London for the purposes of the Act, of whom one should be the Agent-General of the said Colony for the time being, and might empower such Agents, or any one or more of them, to exercise the powers of the Act exercisable by the Governor, or as the Governor might authorise or direct.

And whereas the Honourable Sir Augustus William Frederick Spencer Loftus (commonly called Lord Augustus Loftus), Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the said Colony and its Dependencies, with the advice of the Executive Council, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Colony, and bearing date the 14th day of April, 1883, in virtue of the powers conferred by the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," did appoint the said Sir Saul Samuel, Sir Daniel Cooper, Donald Larnach, Frederick Holkham Dangar and Edward Knox, a Member of the Legislative Council of the said Colony, Agents in London, for the purposes of the same Act, and did thereby empower them or any one or more of them to exercise such powers as are by the Governor exercisable under the same Act.

And whereas the said Sir Augustus William Frederick Spencer Loftus, as such Governor as aforesaid, with such advice as aforesaid, did on or about the 24th day of September, 1885, revoke the said appointment of the said Edward Knox, and by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Colony, bearing date on or about the same 24th day of September, 1885, in virtue of the powers conferred by the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," did appoint the said William Richmond Mewburn and the said Nathaniel Cork additional Agents in London for the purposes of the same Act, and did thereby empower the said Sir Saul Samuel, Sir Daniel Cooper, Donald Larnach, and Frederick Holkham Dangar and the said William Richmond Mewburn and Nathaniel Cork, hereinafter called the said agents, or any one or more of them to exercise such powers as are by the Governor exercisable under the same Act.

And whereas by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the "Public Works Loan Act, 1884," it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, to raise by the sale of debentures or the issue of inscribed stock, secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money, not exceeding in the whole the sum of £14,381,303, as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And whereas by an Act of the said Legislature, entitled the "Repayment of Loans Act of 1888," it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures or the issue of inscribed stock, secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £1,390,600, as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And whereas by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the "Loan Act of 1890," it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures or the issue of inscribed stock, secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £7,021,757, as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And whereas by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the "Loan Act of 1894," it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures or the issue of inscribed stock, secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money, not exceeding in the whole the sum of £1,460,650, as might be required for the Public works and services (including the sum of £832,000 for repayment of loans) in the same Act mentioned.

And whereas by a deed-poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Daniel Cooper and Donald Larnach, dated the 16th day of April, 1888, after reciting as therein was recited, and that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, was about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the said "Public Works Loan Act, 1884," a sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, the said agents, in the said deed-poll called the said Commissioners, declared that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said letters patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," they had created an amount of £3,500,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And whereas the whole of the said amount of £3,500,000 of capital stock, referred to in the deed-poll lastly before recited has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And whereas by another deed-poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 8th day of July, 1889, after reciting as therein was recited, and that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, was about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the said "Public Works Loan Act, 1884," and "Repayment of Loans Act, 1888," a further sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, the said agents, in the said deed-poll called the said commissioners, declared that, in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said letters patent and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883" they had created an amount of £3,500,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable at the Bank of England half-yearly on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And whereas the whole of the said amount of £3,500,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed-poll lastly before recited has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And whereas by another deed-poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 15th day of May, 1891, after reciting as therein was recited, and that there were debentures of the said Colony outstanding in respect of loans raised under the provisions of the following Acts of the Legislature of the Colony of New South Wales, viz., 19 Victoria, Nos. 38 and 40; 22 Victoria, Nos. 5, 22, and 26; and 24 Victoria, Nos. 24 and 26; amounting in all to the sum of £200,500, maturing in July, 1891, and also in respect of loans raised under the provisions of 25 Victoria, No. 19, amounting to £1,782,300, maturing in January, 1892, and that the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, had declared that all or any of the said debentures so outstanding might be convertible into stock, and that being authorised under the provisions of the "Loan Act of 1890" as before mentioned to provide for the repayment of the said outstanding debentures, and having so declared that all or any of the said debentures might be convertible into "Stock" the said agents for the purpose of such repayment and conversion, and for the purpose of paying the expenses in connection with such conversion and the creation of the "Stock" thereafter mentioned, had determined to create and issue an amount of not exceeding £2,000,000 sterling of "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," the said agents in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," declare that they had created an amount of £2,000,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rates and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable at the Bank of England half-yearly on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And whereas a part only of the said amount of £2,000,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed-poll lastly before recited has been issued and is inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And whereas by another deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 17th day of September, 1891, after reciting as therein was recited, and that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, was about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the said "Loan Act of 1890," a sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, the said agents declared that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said letters patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," they had created an amount of £4,500,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable half-yearly at the Bank of England on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And whereas the whole of the said amount of £4,500,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed-poll lastly before recited has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And whereas the Governor, with the advice as aforesaid, being borrow to and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the said "Loan Act of 1894," a sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock the said agents have determined to create and issue for that purpose an amount of not exceeding £832,000 sterling of "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." in addition to
and

and to rank pari passu with the said amounts "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." so created and issued as aforesaid respectively and determined and appointed the time at which the same shall be redeemable, and the terms and conditions on which the same shall be issued.

And whereas it is expedient that such determination and appointment shall be declared and manifested under the hands and seals of two or more of the said agents.

Now, therefore, these presents witness that they, the said agents, in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," do by these presents declare that they have created an amount of £882,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." to be in addition to and rank pari passu with the "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." heretofore created and issued as aforesaid respectively, and they have determined that such capital stock shall be issued at the rate of £100 of stock for every nominal amount of £100 which shall be represented by the scrip certificates or letters of allotment respectively to be issued to subscribers for any part of such capital stock, when the instalments payable thereon shall have been fully paid, and that the interest or dividend to be paid on the said amount of £882,000 sterling of stock so lastly created by them as aforesaid, or any lesser amount which shall be issued, shall be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and that a half year's interest or dividend shall be payable on the 1st day of March, 1895, at the Bank of England, and that thereafter the said interest or dividend shall be payable at the same place half-yearly on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918. And further, that on the said 1st day of September, 1918, the capital shall be repaid at par at the same place.

And they do further declare that the revenues of the Colony of New South Wales alone are liable in respect of the Stock hereinbefore described, and the dividends thereon, and that the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury are not directly or indirectly liable or responsible for the payment of the stock or of the dividends thereon, or for any matter relating thereto.

In witness whereof, two of them, the said Agents, have hereunto set their hands and seals this 20th day of September, 1894.

Signed, sealed, and delivered, by the above-named Sir Saul } (L.S.) SAUL SAMUEL.
Samuel and Nathaniel Cork, in the presence of, } (L.S.) NATHANIEL CORK.
GEORGE M. LIGHT, Solicitor, 32, Victoria-street, Westminster.

NEW SOUTH WALES STOCK.

It is hereby declared that by an Act of the Legislature of the Colony of New South Wales, being Act 46 Vic. No. 12, to be cited as the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," provision is made in the terms following, that is to say:—

Section 2.—Whenever by any Act now or hereafter in force, power is given to the Governor to raise any sum or sums of money by way of loan for the Public Service of the Colony, it shall be lawful for the Governor to raise the whole or any portion of such sum or sums in the form of inscribed stock (hereinafter termed "stock").

Section 3.—All such stock shall be styled "New South Wales Stock," and subject to the provisions of this Act, shall be issued in such amounts, in such manner, at such times, bear interest at such rate (not exceeding 4 per centum per annum), and shall be redeemable at such times, and on such conditions, and shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Governor, before exercising the aforesaid power, shall from time to time determine and appoint.

Section 4.—The Governor shall have and may exercise the following powers and authorities, or any of them:—

- (i) He may from time to time declare all or any of the debentures issued under the authority of any Act of Parliament to be converted into stock, redeemable at such times and subject to such terms and conditions as he may, before the creation thereof, determine and appoint.
- (ii) He may authorise the issue of an equivalent amount of such stock in exchange for such debentures.
- (iii) He may, on such conditions as he may determine, authorise the creation and issue of any stock for the purpose of converting any outstanding debentures into stock, and of paying any expenses in connection with such conversion or in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

Section 5.—Any such conversion of debentures into stock may be effected either by arrangement with the holders of such debentures or by purchase thereof out of moneys raised by the sale of new stock or partly in one way and partly in the other.

Section 7.—The Governor may from time to time enter into such agreement with any bank carrying on business in London as to him seems fit to provide for all or any of the following matters (inter alia):—

- (i) For the inscription and issue of stock.
- (ii) For effecting the conversion of debentures into stock, and regulating transfers of stock.
- (iv) For securing stock certificates, and as often as occasion shall require reinscribing or reissuing such certificates.
- (viii) For conducting generally all business connected with stock or loans.

Section 8.—Every agreement made with any such bank shall be as valid and effectual as if the terms thereof had been enacted by this Act.

Section 9.—The Governor may appoint two or more persons in London as Agents for the purposes of this Act, of whom one shall be the Agent-General of the Colony for the time being, and may empower such agents, or any one or more of them, to exercise such powers by this Act exercisable by the Governor as the said Governor may authorise or direct.

Section 14.—The word “Governor” in this Act means “Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council.”

And it is hereby further declared that the Right Honorable Sir Augustus William Frederick Spencer Loftus (commonly called Lord Augustus Loftus), Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, a Member of Her Majesty’s Most Honorable Privy Council, Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the said Colony and its Dependencies, with the advice of the Executive Council, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the said Colony, and bearing date the 14th day of April, 1883, in virtue of the powers conferred by the “Inscribed Stock Act of 1883,” did appoint Sir Saul Samuel, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Agent-General, resident in London, of the said Colony; Sir Daniel Cooper, Baronet, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George; Donald Larnach, Esquire, Frederick Holkham Dangar, Esquire, and Edward Knox, a Member of the Legislative Council of the said Colony of New South Wales, Agents in London, for the purposes of the same Act, and did thereby empower them or any one or more of them, to exercise such powers as are by the Governor exercisable under the same Act.

And it is hereby further declared that the said Sir Augustus William Frederick Spencer Loftus, as such Governor as aforesaid, with such advice as aforesaid, did on or about the 24th day of September, 1885, revoke the said appointment of the said Edward Knox, and by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Colony, bearing date on or about the same 24th day of September, 1885, in virtue of the powers conferred by the “Inscribed Stock Act of 1883,” did appoint William Richmond Mewburn, Esquire, and Nathaniel Cork, Esquire, additional agents in London, for the purposes of the same Act, and did thereby empower the said Sir Saul Samuel, Sir Daniel Cooper, Donald Larnach, and Frederick Holkham Dangar, and the said William Richmond Mewburn and Nathaniel Cork, hereinafter called the said Agents, or any one or more of them, to exercise such powers as are by the Governor exercisable under the same Act.

And it is hereby further declared that by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the “Public Works Loan Act of 1884,” it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures, or the issue of inscribed stock secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £14,388,303, as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And it is hereby further declared that by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the “Repayment of Loans Act of 1888,” it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures, or the issue of inscribed stock secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £1,390,600, as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And it is hereby further declared that by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the “Loan Act of 1890,” it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures, or the issue of inscribed stock secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £7,021,757 as might be required for the purposes in the same Act mentioned.

And it is hereby further declared that by another Act of the said Legislature, entitled the “Loan Act of 1894,” it was enacted that it should be lawful for the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, to raise by the sale of debentures or the issue of inscribed stock secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum per annum, such several sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £1,460,650, as might be required for the Public Works and Services (including the sum of £882,000 for Repayment of Loans) in the same Act mentioned.

And it is hereby further declared that by a deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Daniel Cooper and Donald Larnach, dated the 16th day of April, 1888, after reciting that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, being about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the “Public Works Loan Act of 1884,” a sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, they had determined to create and issue stock to the amount and upon the terms therein mentioned the said agents in the said deed poll called the said Commissioners, did declare that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the “Inscribed Stock Act of 1883,” they had created an amount of £3,500,000 sterling of capital stock to be called “New South Wales Stock,” “Three and a half per Cent.,” and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable half-yearly at the Bank of England on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And it is hereby further declared that the whole amount of £3,500,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed poll lastly above mentioned has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And it is hereby further declared that by a deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 8th day of July, 1889, after reciting that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, being about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the “Public Works Loan Act of 1884,” and “Repayment of Loans Act of 1888,” a further sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, they had determined to create and issue stock to the amount and upon the terms therein mentioned, the said agents, in the said deed poll called the said Commissioners, did declare that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the “Inscribed Stock Act of 1883,” they had created an amount of £3,500,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called “New South Wales Stock,” “Three and a half per Cent.,” and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable at the Bank of England half-yearly, on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And

And it is hereby further declared that the whole amount of £3,500,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed-poll lastly above mentioned has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And it is hereby further declared that by a deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 15th day of May, 1891, after reciting that there were debentures of the said Colony outstanding in respect of loans raised under the provisions of the following Acts of the Legislature of the Colony of New South Wales, viz.: 19 Vic. Nos. 38 and 40, 22 Vic. Nos. 5, 22, and 26, and 24 Vic. Nos. 24 and 26, amounting in the whole to the sum of £200,500, maturing in July, 1891, and also in respect of loans raised under the provisions of 25 Vic. No. 19, amounting to £1,782,300, maturing in January, 1892, and that the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, had declared that all or any of the said debentures so outstanding might be convertible into stock, and that being authorised under the provisions of the "Loan Act of 1890" as before mentioned, to provide for the repayment of the said outstanding debentures, and having so declared that all or any of the said debentures might be convertible into stock, the said Agents, for the purpose of such repayment and conversion, and for the purpose of paying the expenses in connection with such conversion, and the creation of the stock thereafter mentioned, had determined to create and issue an amount of not exceeding £2,000,000 sterling "New South Wales Stock," "Three-and-a-half per Cent.," the said Agents did declare that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883" they had created an amount of £2,000,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rates and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable at the Bank of England half-yearly on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And it is hereby further declared that a part only of the said amount of £2,000,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed poll lastly above mentioned has been issued, and is inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And it is hereby further declared that by a deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Donald Larnach, dated the 17th day of September, 1891, after reciting that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, being about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the said "Loan Act of 1890," a further sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, they had determined to create and issue stock to the amount and upon the terms therein mentioned, the said Agents did declare that in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said Letters Patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," they had created an amount of £4,500,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." to be in addition to and to rank pari passu with the "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," theretofore created and issued as aforesaid respectively, and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate £3 10s. per centum per annum, and should be payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918, on which day the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And it is hereby further declared that the whole amount of £4,500,000 of capital stock referred to in the deed poll lastly above mentioned has been issued, and is now inscribed in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the names of the several persons entitled thereto.

And it is hereby further declared that by a deed poll under the hands and seals of the said Sir Saul Samuel and Nathaniel Cork, dated the 20th day of September, 1894, after reciting that the Governor, with such advice as aforesaid, being about to borrow and raise in Great Britain, under the authority of the "Loan Act of 1894," a further sum of money by the issue of £3 10s. per centum inscribed stock, they had determined to create and issue stock to the amount and upon the terms therein mentioned, the said agents did declare that, in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the said letters patent respectively, and by virtue of the "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," they had created an amount of £832,000 sterling of capital stock, to be called "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent.," and had determined that the same should be issued at the rate and on the terms therein mentioned, and that the interest or dividend to be paid thereon should be at the rate of £3 10s. per centum per annum, and that a half-year's interest or dividend should be payable on the 1st day of March, 1895, at the Bank of England, and that thereafter the said interest or dividend should be payable at the same place half-yearly, on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September in each year, until and including the 1st day of September, 1918; and further, that on the said 1st day of September, 1918, the capital should be repaid at par at the same place.

And it is hereby further declared that in further pursuance of the said "Inscribed Stock Act of 1883," and by virtue of the said Letters Patent the said Agents have entered into an agreement with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, providing among other things for the inscription in a Register kept in England by the said bank of the said stock mentioned in the said last-mentioned deed poll, and for the transfer of such stock.

And it is hereby further declared that the stock to be inscribed and transferred in conformity with such provision is "New South Wales Stock," "Three and a half per Cent." mentioned in the said last-mentioned deed poll.

And it is hereby further declared that the revenues of the Colony of New South Wales alone are liable in respect of the stock hereinbefore described, and the dividends thereon, and that the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury are not directly or indirectly liable or responsible for the payment of the stock, or of the dividends thereon or for any matter relating thereto.

And it is hereby further declared that his Excellency, the said Sir Augustus William Frederick Spencer Loftus, as the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the said Colony and its Dependencies, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the Colony, and dated the 11th day of August, 1880, appointed the said Sir Saul Samuel, then Saul Samuel, Esquire, to be Agent-General for the said Colony, resident in London, to act under such instructions as he should from time to time receive from the Government of the said said Colony, to transact such business of the Government as might be specially entrusted to him, or such as might necessarily arise in the absence of such instructions, and in all things whatsoever to serve the Colony to the best of his judgment and ability.

In witness whereof the said Sir Saul Samuel, in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the said Letters Patent of the 11th day of August, 1880, under the Great Seal of the said Colony, hath hereunto set his hand this 26th day of September, 1894.

SAUL SAMUEL.

Witness to the signature of the said Sir Saul Samuel,—

RANDOLPH C. WANT, Solicitor, 32, Victoria-street, Westminster.

New South Wales Stock (3½ per cent., 1918)—Issue of £532,000.

Gentlemen,

9, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W., 28 September, 1894.

Referring to my previous communication with you and to my written instructions to you of the 12th September, to place upon the market a loan of £832,000, and referring to your letters of the 2nd and 12th June, 1885, to the Agent-General for New South Wales, I have now formally to request that you will be good enough to undertake the inscription of the loan of £832,000 which has so been issued by the New South Wales Government through you. For this purpose, I and Mr. Nathaniel Cork, in exercise of the powers conferred upon us by certain Letters Patent, with which you are acquainted, have executed a deed poll declaring the creation of a further amount of stock called "New South Wales Stock," bearing interest at £3 10s. per cent., and have determined that the amount of such stock shall be issued at the rate of £100 of stock for every nominal amount of £100, which shall be represented by the scrip certificates or letters of allotment respectively, to be issued to subscribers for any part of the said loan, and in proof thereof I enclose a duplicate of the deed poll under date 20th September, 1894, which has been duly enrolled.

To enable you to carry out the inscription and management of this further amount of stock under the Colonial Stock Act, I have duly made and lodged with the Inland Revenue Commissioners the necessary declaration to bring the stock under the provisions of that Act, and I send you herewith a print of that declaration, dated 20th September, 1894.

In further exercise of the powers conferred on me as aforesaid, I beg to adopt and confirm with reference to this new issue of New South Wales Stock, the terms and conditions for the inscription and management of the same by you, as set out in your letters above referred to of 2nd and 12th June, 1885.

In accordance with the usual practice, you will please pay to the Commissioners for Inland Revenue the composition for stamp duty, so as to enable the stock that shall be inscribed in your books to be transferred, free of duty, and the Commissioners will no doubt receive the duty from you under a similar arrangement to that made with reference to the previous issues of New South Wales Stock.

On behalf of the New South Wales Government I have to request that you will be good enough to carry out this arrangement, and to pay to the Commissioners the amount of composition payable for stamp duty in respect of the stock as inscribed in your books.

On behalf of the New South Wales Government I further authorise you, on the terms of your letters of the 2nd and 12th June, 1885, above referred to, to issue to the holders of inscribed stock, who may desire the same, from time to time stock certificates to bearer, in pursuance of the provisions of the Colonial Stock Act, 1877; and I further authorise you to transmit the dividend warrants by post in the same manner and on the same conditions as the warrants for dividends on Government funds are sent.

I have, &c.,

SAUL SAMUEL,

Agent-General for the Colony of New South Wales.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

80	W. R. Curran	Ranger, Maitland Land Board District Equipment allowance	150 100	250

The Chairmen of the Local Land Boards at Bourke, Dubbo, Cooma, Hay, Moree, and Grafton receive £150 each per annum, to cover the cost of conveyance of self and Deposition Clerk.

The Chief Surveyor receives £100 per annum, and each District Surveyor £150 per annum, to cover cost of forage, and for the use of instruments, horses, harness, tents, and camp gear, which are their own property.

Each salaried surveyor receives £150 per annum for similar purposes, exclusive of cost of forage, but including travelling allowance.

Trigonometrical Surveyors receive similar allowance to that for salaried surveyors.

Surveyors employed on the Detail Survey receive £72 per annum to enable them to provide office accommodation, instruments, and surveying gear, and to pay fares and incidental expenses. The Surveyor in charge of this survey receives £100 per annum, as he has to provide, in addition to the above, a horse and vehicle.

PETTY SESSIONS, &c.
Police Magistrates, when travelling on duty which necessitates absence from head-quarters at night, receive 15s. per diem exclusive of conveyance; those at Burrowa, Mudgee, Orange, and Taree receive 25s. per diem inclusive of conveyance. Mining Wardens who are also Police Magistrates, without salary from this Department, receive travelling allowances at same rate as Police Magistrates when travelling on duty for this Department. Coroners receive 20s. each inquest, and 9d. per mile (one way) travelling expenses, unless where railway facilities cannot be availed of, when 1s. 6d. per mile (one way) is allowed. District Registrars in Bankruptcy receive 10s. for each Meeting of Creditors, and 10s. for each examination in Estates under £200, and £1 for each respectively when Estates exceed the amount; and Registrars of Births, Deaths, and Marriages receive 2s. for entry in connection with that office. Permanent officers drawn from the Metropolitan Police Courts or elsewhere for relieving duty are allowed 12s. 6d. per diem (exclusive of conveyance).

TREASURY BILLS DEFICIENCY BILL.

(MESSAGE No. 9.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 11 December, 1895.

HAMPDEN,
Governor.

Message No. 9.

It being found expedient to raise an amount of money not exceeding one million one hundred and seventy-four thousand seven hundred pounds, to cover the deficiency debt of the Colony up to the 30th day of June, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, and it being considered advisable to provide such amount by the issue of Treasury Bills, the Governor submits the subject to the consideration of the Legislative Assembly, and recommends that provision be made accordingly.

CUSTOMS DUTIES BILL.

(MESSAGE No. 6.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 10 September, 1895.

FREDK. M. DARLEY,
Lieutenant-Governor.

Message No. 6.

In accordance with the provisions contained in the 54th section of the Constitution Act, the Lieutenant-Governor recommends, for the consideration of the Legislative Assembly, the expediency of making provision to meet the requisite expenses in connection with a Bill for the establishment of a new Tariff of Customs Duties, and for purposes connected with, consequent upon, and incidental to the purpose aforesaid.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.

(PETITION FROM THE ELECTORS AND RESIDENTS OF KINCHELA AGAINST THE REMOVAL OF THE CUSTOMS DUTIES UNTIL THE FEDERATION OF THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 8 October, 1895.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of New South Wales in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Electors and Residents of Kinchela and the surrounding district, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

SHOWETH:—

1. That at a public meeting convened at Kinchela aforesaid, on the twenty-second day of August, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, it was moved by Mr. A. D. Johnston, and unanimously carried, that in the opinion of those assembled at the said public meeting the Customs duties on sugar, timber, grain, farm and dairy produce, and articles which can be profitably manufactured by the people of this Colony have been of great benefit to the community—firstly, because the said duties have stimulated production; secondly, because they have enabled the producers successfully to compete with those of other colonies or countries having lower rates of freight, lower wages, and lower scale of existence; thirdly, by giving employment to the people of the Colony and opening up the country; fourthly, by providing revenue for the Government of the country, now so greatly needed, and which was easily collected by a staff of officers who will still be maintained, even though the said duties should be abolished; fifthly, because the retention of the said duties will in a great measure obviate the necessity of imposing untried, inequitable, and oppressive taxation at a time when the people are least able to bear it; and sixthly, because the retention of the said duties is calculated to induce the other Australian Colonies to seek their abolition by means of federation.

2. That at the said public meeting it was moved by Mr. L. Rafferty, seconded by Mr. T. Clancy, and unanimously carried, that the said meeting expressed its earnest and emphatic protest against any abolition of the said Customs duties until the federation of the Australian Colonies, and desired the Chairman (Mr. T. H. Salmon) of the said meeting to forward a Petition to the Parliament of New South Wales in accordance with the said resolution.

Your Petitioners, in support of the said resolutions, and in view of the evils impending on the removal of the said Customs duties, humbly pray that your Honorable House may be pleased to retain and continue the said Customs duties, at present so greatly needed to carry on the Government of the country, and by so doing prevent the imposition of new, unreasonable, unnecessary, and ruinous taxation at a time of unprecedented depression, and further prevent numbers of your Petitioners, besides thousands of their fellow colonists, from being reduced to a state of destitution and ruin, and so become a burden on the State by reason of the destruction of the aforesaid industries, from which they now derive their means of subsistence.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

DUTIES ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE.

(PETITION FROM JOHN BLACK, J.P., CHAIRMAN OF A PUBLIC MEETING OF FARMERS OF MOLONG, AGAINST REMOVAL OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 21 August, 1895.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned farmers of Molong and surrounding district,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That, in the opinion of your Petitioners, the removal of the present duties on imported agricultural produce would result in the ruin of thousands of farmers throughout the Colony, and thereby become a grave and serious injury to the whole Colony, who are all in a large measure dependent upon the prosperity of the producing classes.

That so far from these duties being removed, your Petitioners are of opinion that they should be fixed for some years, past experience having shown that their imposition has been of advantage to the producer, who is by these means enabled to compete against cheap foreign labour, and to the consumer, who has not only had to pay less for food, but has been indirectly benefited by the retention of the money in the Colony.

That the establishment of these duties on a fixed and permanent basis will tend to settle the course of trade which has been seriously injured by the constant fear of changing during the past few years, and will assist in the settlement of the lands of the Colony with a prosperous and hard-working army of settlers and producers.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that your Honorable House will take the above premises into your favourable consideration, and grant such relief as to your Honorable House may seem meet.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOHN BLACK, J.P.,

DUTIES ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE.

(PETITION FROM JOHN LEARY, CHAIRMAN OF A MEETING OF FARMERS OF CUMNOCK, AGAINST REMOVAL OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 27 August, 1895.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned farmers of Cumnock and surrounding district,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That, in the opinion of your Petitioners, the removal of the present duties on imported agricultural produce would result in the ruin of thousands of farmers throughout the Colony, and thereby become a grave and serious injury to the whole Colony, who are all in a large measure dependent upon the prosperity of the producing classes.

That so far from these duties being removed, your Petitioners are of opinion that they should be fixed for some years, past experience having shown that their imposition has been of advantage to the producer, who is by these means enabled to compete against cheap foreign labour, and to the consumer, who has not only had to pay less for food, but has been indirectly benefited by the retention of the money in the Colony.

That the establishment of these duties on a fixed and permanent basis will tend to settle the course of trade which has been seriously injured by the constant fear of changing during the past few years, and will assist in the settlement of the lands of the Colony with a prosperous and hard-working army of settlers and producers.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that your Honorable House will take the above premises into your favourable consideration, and grant such relief as to your Honorable House may seem meet.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOHN LEARY,
Chairman of Meeting.

SPECIFIC DUTIES.

(PETITION FROM JOHN CLARKE, AS CHAIRMAN OF A PUBLIC MEETING AT YARRAVEL, MACLEAY RIVER, IN FAVOUR OF.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 11 September, 1895.

To the Honorable the Members of the Parliament of New South Wales.

The respectful Petition of the undersigned, chairman of a public meeting held at Yarravel, in the Macleay District, on Wednesday, 15th August,

SHOWETH :—

That there were assembled at the said meeting, farmers from Yarravel, Sherwood, Gordonbush, Turner's Flat, Dondingalong, Yessebah, and Belgrave.

That resolutions were carried unanimously affirming the advantages realised from specific duties on grain, sugar, timber, farm and dairy products, and praying the Parliament to continue their collection.

As chairman of the said meeting, and in accordance with the request of those assembled, I do humbly pray your Honorable House, in the interests of the producers of this Colony, to resist the endeavour to alter the fiscal policy of the country until the entire question of Customs Duties is dealt with by a Federal Parliament.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

EXCISE DUTY ON COLONIAL TOBACCO.

PETITION FROM CERTAIN FARMERS AND RESIDENTS OF WEST MAITLAND, AGAINST

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 27 August, 1895.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, Farmers and Residents of West Maitland,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That in the opinion of the Petitioners the excise duty has tended to destroy the very large tobacco growing and manufacturing industry, from which at one time this and other country districts of the Colony derived very great and material prosperity. This is evidenced by the marked decline of tobacco culture and the closing of country factories, since the operation of Mr. Burns' "Tobacco Increase Bill of 1887." That by the extinction of the small factories (as caused by the license-fee and the prepayment of the duty to release the manufactured article from bond), almost the whole tobacco trade has become centralised in Sydney and monopolised by a few manufacturers, with the result that while the consumer has to pay a high price for tobacco, the grower is compelled to accept a low and unpayable price for his leaf. It is further pointed out, as adduced from official statistics, that while the consumption of tobacco in the Colony has shown a considerable increase, the production and manufacture of New South Wales leaf has seriously declined. The area of land planted in 1887-8 being 2,371 acres, whereas the area planted in 1893-4 was only 854 acres, the place of the colonial-grown tobacco being taken by the imported manufactured article, which has almost doubled in quantity during the same period, showing that though the Government is deriving revenue from the excise duty, the community generally is suffering from the decline of a valuable industry, with its consequent advantages of employment and profit.

Your Petitioners further respectfully represent that the Tobacco industry is a legitimate industry, well adapted to many portions of the Colony.

That formerly a good article was grown and manufactured locally, which satisfied the requirements of the people. That prior to the imposition of the excise duty the industry was a source of livelihood to a large class of poor farmers, whom it was the object of the Free Selection Act and succeeding Land Acts to settle upon the lands of the Colony, and that it is now, as affecting this poor class of settlers, a very great injustice to single it out from other wealthy and flourishing industries to bear the burden of heavy taxation.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will, in consideration of these facts, be pleased to repeal the tobacco excise duty, and that the prayer of this Petition may be granted.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(PETITION FROM THE COUNCIL OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF NYNGAN IN FAVOUR OF LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, OR AN EQUITABLE EXEMPTION UNDER THE MUNICIPALITIES ACT.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 29 August, 1895.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Council of the Municipality of Nyngan,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

1. That the said corporation has for a long time been incorporated under the "Municipalities Act of 1867," and in common with the other Boroughs and Municipal Districts in the Colony has contributed large sums of money towards the construction of its roads, ways, and other local requirements.

2. That there are at present 176 Boroughs and Municipal Districts in the Colony that collectively levy and expend annually on their local requirements a sum of about £500,000, thus saving the general revenue that amount of money annually.

3. That only about 2,479 square miles in the Colony are now under the provisions of the "Municipalities Act of 1867," leaving about 303,000 square miles that are unincorporated, and at present not levying any special rates or contributions towards their local roads, ways, bridges, or local requirements.

4. That if the unincorporated portions of the Colony were placed under some form of Municipal or Local Government and were locally rated at a reasonable amount, it is estimated that a sum of about £750,000 a year would be collected in rates, which sum would relieve the general revenue to that extent, and thereby partially, if not wholly, save the Annual Roads and Bridges Vote, which now comes out of the pocket of the general tax-payer.

5. That by placing the whole of the Colony under Municipal or Local Government the money would be locally expended, thereby saving much time, money, and cost of administration.

6. That the boroughs and municipal districts of the Colony already contribute at the rate of £1 5s. 8d. per head of the population within incorporated districts, and 10s. 6d. per cent. of the total annual value of all ratable property towards the cost of their local requirements.

7. That your petitioners respectfully urge that in any system of land taxation it would be unjust to your petitioners and to those within the incorporated districts of the Colony that they, who are at present paying high local rates, thereby relieving the general revenue to the extent aforesaid, should be called upon to pay the same rate of land tax as those landholders outside of incorporated areas who are paying nothing towards local rates. That such a proposal, if carried out, would press heavily and inequitably on all lands within municipal areas, would necessarily reduce the value of such lands, would injuriously prejudice the obligations that many existing municipalities have incurred, would reduce the amounts of their rates, curtail the employment of labour, and hamper existing corporations in their contracts and municipal works.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray your Honorable House that, in dealing with the measure for the imposition of a land tax, they will, in the first instance, either pass a measure of local self-government and thereby put all the people of the country on the same municipal level, or that they will make a fair and equitable exemption from such land tax in respect of all those lands that are already under the provisions of the "Municipalities Act of 1867."

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

2. That there are at present 176 Boroughs and Municipal Districts in the Colony that collectively levy and expend annually on their local requirements a sum of about £500,000, thus saving the general revenue that amount of money annually.

3. That only about 2,479 square miles in the Colony are now under the provisions of the "Municipalities Act of 1867," leaving about 303,000 square miles that are unincorporated, and at present not levying any special rates or contributions towards their local roads, ways, bridges, or local requirements.

4. That if the unincorporated portions of the Colony were placed under some form of Municipal or Local Government and were locally rated at a reasonable amount, it is estimated that a sum of about £750,000 a year would be collected in rates, which sum would relieve the general revenue to that extent, and thereby partially, if not wholly, save the Annual Roads and Bridges Vote, which now comes out of the pocket of the general tax-payer.

5. That by placing the whole of the Colony under Municipal or Local Government the money would be locally expended, thereby saving much time, money, and cost of administration.

6. That the Boroughs and Municipal Districts of the Colony already contribute at the rate of £1 5s. 8d. per head of the population within incorporated districts, and 10s. 6d. per cent. of the total annual value of all ratable property towards the cost of their local requirements.

7. That your Petitioners respectfully urge that in any system of land taxation it would be unjust to your Petitioners and to those within the incorporated districts of the Colony that they, who are at present paying high local rates, thereby relieving the general revenue to the extent aforesaid, should be called upon to pay the same rate of land tax as those landholders outside of incorporated areas who are paying nothing towards local rates. That such a proposal, if carried out, would press heavily and inequitably on all lands within municipal areas, would necessarily reduce the value of such lands, would injuriously prejudice the obligations that many existing municipalities have incurred, would reduce the amounts of their rates, curtail the employment of labour, and hamper existing corporations in their contracts and municipal works.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray your Honorable House that, in dealing with the measure for the imposition of a land tax, they will, in the first instance, either pass a measure of local self-government and thereby put all the people of the country on the same municipal level, or that they will make a fair and equitable exemption from such land tax in respect of all those lands that are already under the provisions of the "Municipalities Act of 1867."

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Mayor.

LAND TAX.

(PETITION FROM THE COUNCIL OF THE BOROUGH OF VAUCLUSE, IN FAVOUR OF LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT OR AN EQUITABLE EXEMPTION OF LANDS WITHIN MUNICIPALITIES.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 8 October, 1895.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Council of the Borough of Vauclose,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH,—

1. That the said Corporation has for a long time been incorporated under the "Municipalities Act of 1867," and in common with the other Boroughs and Municipal Districts in the Colony has contributed large sums of money towards the construction of its roads, ways, and other local requirements.

2. That there are at present 176 Boroughs and Municipal Districts in the Colony that collectively levy and expend annually on their local requirements a sum of about £500,000, thus saving the general revenue that amount of money annually.

LAND TAX.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN LANDHOLDERS AND RESIDENTS OF UPPER MANILLA IN FAVOUR OF A LAND TAX ON THE BETTERMENT PRINCIPLE.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 28 August, 1895.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned landholders and residents of Upper Manilla in the Bingara Electorate,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH,—

That at a public meeting held at Upper Manilla on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1895, the following resolutions were passed unanimously:—

That in the opinion of this meeting it is economically unsound and therefore unjust to levy a land value tax upon the amount paid or contracted to be paid to the State, but that a betterment tax, or tax upon the unearned increment of land, is economically sound and just.

That the chairman be authorized to embody the foregoing resolution in a petition to be forwarded to the Legislature after signatures to the same have been obtained.

That the chairman be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to the Member for this Electorate and to the Press.

And as your Petitioners earnestly believe that the adoption of a betterment tax, as advocated in the first of these resolutions, would be of the utmost benefit to this Colony, they pray that your Honorable House may, in its wisdom, determine upon giving early effect to such betterment tax by making it a law of the land.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Commission.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen,
Defender of the Faith, and so forth,—

To Our Trusty and Well-beloved—

FRANCIS EDWARD ROGERS, Esquire, Q.C. ;
PHILIP SYDNEY JONES, Esquire, M.D. ; and FREDERIC NORTON MANNING, Esquire, M.D.,—

Greeting :—

Know ye, That We, reposing great trust and confidence in your ability, zeal, industry, discretion, and integrity, do, by these presents, authorise and appoint you, as hereinafter mentioned, to make certain investigations in the case of George Dean, on whom sentence of death was lately passed, which was subsequently commuted to penal servitude for life, for the crime of administering poison with intent to kill Mary Dean, his wife; to examine all witnesses, and call for any documents which may tend in any way to throw new light upon the case, or which may vary, explain, or bear upon any of the evidence given by the witnesses at the trial of the said George Dean; and after receiving such additional evidence, to report whether, in your opinion, as the result of such further inquiries made by you, the prisoner should serve his sentence or be released from further imprisonment: And We do by these presents grant to you, at any meeting or meetings to which all of you shall have been duly summoned, power and authority to call before you all such persons as you may judge necessary by whom you may be better informed of the premises: And we do give you power at your discretion to procure such clerical and other assistance as you may deem necessary for enabling you duly to execute this Our Commission: And Our further will and pleasure is that you do within one month after the date of this Our Commission certify to Us, in the office of Our Colonial Secretary, under your hands and seals, what you shall find touching the premises: And We hereby command all Government Officers and other persons whomsoever within Our said Colony that they be assistant to you and each of you in the execution of these presents: And We appoint you, the said FRANCIS EDWARD ROGERS, to be President of this Our Commission, which said Commission we declare to be a Commission for all purposes of the Act 44 Victoria No. 1, intituled, “An Act to regulate the taking of Evidence by Commissioners under the Great Seal.”

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Colony of New South Wales to be hereunto affixed.

Witness Our Trusty and Well-beloved Councillor The Honourable SIR FREDERICK MATTHEW DARLEY, Knight, Our Lieutenant-Governor of Our Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies, at Government House, Sydney, in New South Wales aforesaid, this seventh day of May, in the fifty-eighth year of Our Reign, and in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

EXTENSION OF COMMISSION.

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 4 June, 1895.

ROYAL COMMISSION TO INQUIRE INTO THE CASE OF PRISONER GEORGE DEAN.

WHEREAS it is necessary to extend the time within which the Commissioners are to make their report in the above matter: Now, therefore, I do hereby, with the advice of the Executive Council, extend the time within which the said Commissioners are to make such report for a period of one month, to take effect from the 8th instant.

Given under my hand and seal at Government House, Sydney, this fourth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five,—

FREDK. M. DARLEY,

Lieutenant-Governor.

By His Excellency's Command,

JAS. N. BRUNKER.

ROYAL COMMISSION.—REGINA VERSUS GEORGE DEAN.

MINUTES OF MEETINGS.

APPENDED are the minutes of the sittings of the Royal Commission appointed on the 7th May, 1895, "to make certain investigations in the case of George Dean, on whom sentence of death was lately passed, which was subsequently commuted to penal servitude for life, for the crime of administering poison with intent to kill Mary Dean, his wife; to examine all witnesses, and call for any documents which may tend in any way to throw new light upon the case, or which may vary, explain, or bear upon any of the evidence given by the witnesses at the trial of the said George Dean; and after receiving such additional evidence to report whether, as the result of such further inquiries, the prisoner should serve his sentence or be released from further imprisonment."

ROYAL COMMISSION—REGINA v. GEORGE DEAN.

REPORT.

To His Excellency, our trusty and well-beloved Councillor, the Honorable
SIR FREDERICK MATTHEW DARLEY, Knight, our Lieutenant-Governor of our Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—

We, Her Majesty's Commissioners appointed under Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of the Colony, dated the 7th day of May, 1895, "to make certain investigations in the case of George Dean, on whom sentence of death was lately passed, which was subsequently commuted to penal servitude for life, for the crime of administering poison with intent to kill Mary Dean, his wife; to examine all witnesses, and call for any documents which may tend in any way to throw new light upon the case, or which may vary, explain, or bear upon any of the evidence given by the witnesses at the trial of the said George Dean; and after receiving such additional evidence, to report whether, in our opinion, as the result of such further inquiries made by us, the prisoner should serve his sentence or be released from further imprisonment," have the honor to submit to your Excellency the following Report:—

Functions of Commissioners.

In pursuance of the Commission entrusted to us we have held thirty-nine (39) sittings, and have had brought before us one hundred and thirteen (113) witnesses, several of whom were recalled.

Sittings, and witnesses.

In the examination of these witnesses we have had the assistance of eminent counsel acting on behalf of both the Crown and the prisoner, and at the conclusion of the evidence somewhat lengthy addresses were delivered by counsel, which are presented with the evidence attached to our Report. We had before us as a basis for our inquiries copies of the depositions taken at the Police Court in the case Regina v. George Dean, and of the Judge's Notes taken during the trial at Darlinghurst, and of various papers bearing on the case which had been already printed and laid before Parliament.

Depositions, and Judge's
Notes.

The peculiar dangers attending the collection of supplementary evidence in any case in which the original evidence has been fully published, and widely read, have been present to our minds throughout the inquiry, and it has also been apparent that these dangers are much increased, and that evidence is liable to be manufactured or given with a special bias when the case in question is one which has invoked much popular feeling.

Dangers attending supple-

Some of the evidence adduced has appeared to us altogether untrustworthy, and some but little relevant to the case under inquiry or calculated to throw light upon its difficulties, but there remains a body of fresh evidence, partly as to character and partly as to facts and details, to which, after careful sifting, we feel bound to attach credence. This evidence in some matters goes only to alter the aspect of evidence already given at the trial, and some of it is chiefly valuable as bearing on medical details, which necessarily have a greater significance to the medical members of this Commission than they could have to an ordinary Court.

evidence.

As

Arsenic and strychnine.

As the question of the antagonism of arsenic and strychnine had been introduced at the trial, and some theories and arguments had been founded on this supposed antagonistic action, we considered it our duty to take some cognisance of this matter. It appeared in evidence taken before us that Mr. Hamlet, the Government Analyst, who was asked for an explanation of his evidence on this point, intended only to suggest that arsenic, by acting as an emetic, would get rid of any strychnine taken with it, and so render its action nugatory; whilst Dr. Rennie, the Government Pathologist, was inclined to hold that the special physiological action of each of these drugs on the nervous and circulatory systems might lead to a counteraction or antagonism in results. This was apparently the view also held by Dr. Newmarch, who, though he was not specially questioned by us on this subject, handed in a memorandum, in which his views, mainly founded on extracts from the writings of Dr. Lander Brunton, as to the special action of arsenic and strychnine individually, were set forth. Dr. Rennie was only able to point out to us one somewhat doubtful reference on this subject; and we were unable to find anything definite in the medical literature accessible to us. Under these circumstances we thought it advisable to request Dr. Charles Martin, of the University of Sydney—whose familiarity with the methods of experimental research gives a special value to the conclusions arrived at—to undertake a series of experiments with a view of determining, as far as possible, the points at issue. Dr. Martin's report (see Appendix) shows:—

- (1.) That arsenic is quite unable to mask the poisonous action of strychnia, either when they are both administered together by the mouth or when the strychnia is introduced directly into the circulation of an animal already suffering from the effects of arsenic.
- (2.) That when strychnia is introduced, before any decided depression has been produced by the arsenic, it occasions a small increase in the original blood pressure, but that once the depression due to the arsenic is at all pronounced, strychnia is quite unable to counteract this depression.

These conclusions have an important bearing on some of the evidence given both at the trial and before this Commission. We had already, however, before receiving this report arrived at the conclusion that there had been no symptoms of poisoning by strychnine during Mrs. Dean's illness, and no trustworthy evidence that strychnine had been taken. Dr. Martin's report confirms this view.

Character
of Mrs.
Seymour.

The testimony of a number of witnesses as to the character of Mrs. Seymour obliges us to regard her evidence with the gravest suspicion; and whilst we have heard nothing to induce us to impugn the personal chastity of Mrs. Dean, her daughter, it is evident that she was born and bred in such an unwholesome moral atmosphere as rendered it advisable for us to receive her statements with extreme caution, except when they are supported by witnesses of apparent or undoubted veracity. Some of Mrs. Dean's evidence given before us, especially when taken in conjunction with that of other witnesses, who we believe to be truthful, bears out this view.

Illnesses in January.

If we put aside the evidence of Mrs. Seymour and Mrs. Dean there is but little of significance remaining with regard to the two attacks of illness early in January, and Dr. Newmarch's evidence tends to discount the value of what remains, especially with regard to the symptoms on January 4th, and their causation, so that on the whole we believe that no trustworthy inference can be drawn from the events stated to have taken place in the beginning of January as bearing on the illness in the beginning of March.

Absence of symptoms of
strychnine.

With regard to the latter illness, we have to point out that if Mrs. Dean took any of the lemon-syrup at all, and we have only her unsupported evidence on this point, it is quite clear, in view of the ready and complete solubility of strychnine in lemon-syrup of a like density, and identical with that purchased by Mrs. Dean, as demonstrated to us by Mr. Hamlet, and in view also of the amount of arsenic found in the lemon-syrup which was taken by Mrs. Dean to Mr. Gail and other neighbours, and ultimately submitted to Mr. Hamlet for analysis, and also of the evidence furnished in Dr. Martin's report as to the supposed antagonism of arsenic and strychnine that the quantity taken must have been very much smaller than she stated. That there was an entire absence of symptoms of poisoning by strychnine is shown by the evidence evidence of Mrs. Dean herself, and the symptoms of poisoning by arsenic on Saturday, March 2nd, rest only on her assertion, and seem incompatible with her appearance and condition on that day as vouched for by several witnesses, and her action in walking a considerable distance and interviewing several neighbours.

In connection with the strychnine it is necessary to take into consideration that Mrs. Adye, who was on Sunday, March 3rd, shown by Mrs. Dean the tea remaining in the tea-cup after a part of it had been emptied into a tumbler, stated to us that she had tasted this tea and found nothing wrong with it. Neither this evidence, nor Mrs. Dean's subsequent admission that Mrs. Adye had tasted—or "sipped," (to use the exact word)—this tea was given at the trial. Mrs. Dean herself stated to us that Mrs. Adye said this tea tasted all right, but if it then contained strychnine in the proportion subsequently found by analysis in that part preserved in the tumbler, its bitter taste must have been—as we subsequently found by experiment—quite perceptible, even though a large quantity of sugar and milk had been used. Mrs. Dean's story then as regards both the lemon-syrup and the tea when viewed in the light of Dr. Knaggs' calculations as to the quantity supposed to be taken and Mrs. Adye's evidence, presents, especially with regard to the strychnine, serious difficulties.

An ingenious attempt was made to show that the symptoms attending Mrs. Dean's illness were due to or could be explained by the occurrence of an attack of influenza of a gastro-intestinal type, but this attempt completely failed. The general symptoms of the illness, the subsequent neuritis, with certain accompanying conditions, the arsenic found in the urine, and in feculant stains on linen in minute quantities, and intimate admixture, all taken together point conclusively to the fact that arsenic was taken into the stomach and passed through and affected the system generally.

It is not so easy to say when and how often this arsenic was administered. The symptoms, however, including the peripheral neuritis, are not incompatible with the ingestion of one dose only. Peripheral neuritis has been seen in severe form both in this Colony and in Victoria in cases in which only one dose of arsenic was taken.

The occurrences on Monday, March 4th, when a dose, and perhaps the only dose, of arsenic which produced severe symptoms was taken, are in dispute. Four witnesses deposed to having seen Mrs. Dean out of her house during Monday morning—a fact not previously in evidence—and when questioned, Mrs. Dean admitted that she had visited a neighbour between 10 and 11 o'clock. This admission tends to throw very considerable doubt on her other statements as to the events of this day. It is decidedly improbable that anyone who had taken at 9 o'clock such a poisonous dose of arsenic as to induce vomiting and purging of so severe a type as to involve the involuntary staining to a large extent of personal garments, would have either the ability or the inclination to leave the house about 11 o'clock. The consideration of all the evidence in detail with regard to this day induces a doubt as to whether the arsenic was taken in the morning at all, and inclines us to believe Dean's statement with regard to the events of this day and that of other witnesses, rather than those of his wife.

We do not think it necessary to go at length into other details which have, in a measure, tended to influence our opinions, such as the absence of corroborative testimony with regard to the vomiting and purging to the extent stated by Mrs. Dean, but we have carefully reviewed the whole circumstances, and in this review of the case Mrs. Dean's very peculiar conduct—

- (a) In repeatedly taking food and other articles from the hands of her husband, though in a condition, as she admitted, to help herself whilst believing, as she stated, that he was poisoning her,
- (b) In refraining from imparting her suspicions to her neighbours and friends, with whom she had free and unimpeded communication,
- (c) In refusing to have medical aid on Sunday, 3rd March, and on Monday, 4th March, until her husband insisted and took action without her consent, and in concealing all information as to the cause of her illness from her medical attendant, in whom she appears to have had confidence, has, in a considerable degree, engaged our attention.

We Hypothesis.

We hold that the facts, as shown, are quite as compatible with the hypothesis that Mrs. Dean, for reasons which we can only surmise, and by methods of which she alone has cognizance, administered the arsenic to herself—possibly at the prompting of her mother, and without any intention of taking a fatal dose—as that the poison was administered to her by her husband, with intent to kill.

Finding.

After bestowing on the case much anxious thought, and viewing it in every conceivable aspect—not forgetting the bearing of the evidence given by Mr. Westgarth—we have grave doubts if George Dean committed the offence with which he was charged, and of which he was found guilty, and we therefore recommend that he be released from further imprisonment.

Dissent.

I REGRET I cannot come to the same conclusion as my colleagues. There appears to be no doubt that Mrs. Dean was poisoned by arsenic, and there is apparently no escape from the position that this poison was either administered by Dean or by Mrs. Dean herself. There are no doubt numberless contradictions and difficulties in the case, but my opinion is based on the short ground that it seems to me unreasonable to suppose that a girl on the threshold of life (whatever may have been her early surroundings) would risk her existence by taking a deadly irritant poison, whether in one or more doses, for the purpose of bringing a false charge against her husband, and for this reason I cannot concur in the recommendation of my colleagues.

Memo. for The Inspector-General of Police.

I DESIRE to draw the attention of the Inspector-General of Police to the very peculiar developments in the case of the Queen v. Dean, in connection with the cross-examination by Mr. Meagher (of the firm of Crick and Meagher, who was defending the prisoner) of one of the principal witnesses for the Crown, named Gail.

Shortly, the facts elicited from Gail by Mr. Meagher on cross-examination are those shown in Mr. Wade's report attached. The prisoner himself, on cross-examination by me, showed that he was visited by Mr. Meagher at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 28th March. Two hours afterwards, it has been ascertained beyond all doubt that Mrs. Gail was present in Mr. Meagher's office,* and that the two of them together endeavoured to persuade two members of the Police Force to arrest Gail on what was merely a trumped-up charge, evidently with the intention of destroying his evidence.

With a view to sifting this matter to the bottom, and other peculiar circumstances which transpired during the hearing of the case against Dean in connection with Sergeant Sawtell's report, I asked for a report from the Inspector-General of Police, which I duly received. If this report of Sawtell and his subsequent recantation stood alone it would, in my mind, necessitate a most complete and searching investigation. But it does not stand alone.

A letter, of which the following is a copy

To Judge Windeyer,
Sir,

Tuesday, April 9th, '95.

Just a line begging you to forgive me for belying my husband, George Dean. My mother made me stick to one thing. I done it, and I pray God to forgive me and let him off. I don't suppose that he will ever live with me again, but I will deserve all I get for trying to ruin him, for he was only cross when my mother was about. I neglected his house, but do let him free. You have judged him wrong. My conscience will not let me live like this.

I remain,

A wretched woman,

Mrs. GEORGE DEAN.

has been forwarded to me as having been received by Mr. Justice Windeyer.

*Memo. for Inspector of Police.—The interview took place in the "Barlaynow" public-house or a public-house.—J.H.W.

If this is genuine, it exculpates Dean; if it is a forgery, it is a still more conclusive proof of the underground and improper actions of someone who is endeavouring to improperly affect the administration of justice and the functions of the Executive in the prisoner's favour. I therefore desire that the Inspector-General of Police will use his utmost endeavours, both in the interests of the condemned and the administration of justice, to thoroughly sift this matter, and to obtain for me the fullest possible information connected with the case, and the antecedents, history, and character of both Mrs. Seymour and Mrs. Dean.

I have since been informed that the police have discovered the letter referred to to be a forgery and conspiracy; this, therefore, accentuates the necessity for a complete inquiry.

Copy of a Letter written by Mrs. Dean from dictation, taken with a view of testing her handwriting with the Letter sent.

To Judge Windeyer,—
Sir,

Tuesday, April 9, 1895.

Just a line, begging you to forgive me for belying my husband, George Dean. My mother made me stick to one thing. I done it, and I pray to God to forgive me and let him off. I don't suppose he will ever live with me again, but I will deserve all I get for trying to ruin him; for he was only cross when my mother was about. I neglected his home. But do let him free. You have judged him wrong. My conscious will not let me live like this.

I remain, a wretched woman,
Mrs. GEORGE DEAN.

I, Mary Dean, beg to state that I have written no letter to His Honor Judge Windeyer about the conviction of George Dean. I did not write the letter now shown me by Inspector Cotter, nor authorise any other person to do so.

Sydney, 10/95.

Regina v. Dean and Detective Sawtell's Report.

MEMO. TO THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

THE Attorney-General will remember that Sergeant Sawtell furnished two reports as to the character of Mrs. Dean and Mrs. Seymour. The reports were of such a nature that the Attorney-General, in opening the case to the Jury, practically admitted they were both women of bad reputation. From something I heard, I made an endeavour to see Sawtell about this report, but only succeeded in doing so this morning. The explanation he gave me then (to put it as mildly as possible) reflects such little credit on his skill as a policeman that I feel bound to put before you the results of my interview.

Although the report reads as if it was the result of full inquiry in the locality, it appears from Sawtell's own admissions to me that his information came from three persons only, viz., ex-Detective Williams, who left the Force under a cloud, and was reduced in grade owing to drink; two men, named Bancroft and Palmer, friends of each other, and who, as Sawtell knew on March 30th, had been in communication with Mr. Meagher, the solicitor, on this matter, and who refused to put their information in writing or sign their names to it. Sawtell made no reference to these tainted sources of evidence in his report of March 28th, but led us to infer that the police are his informants. As a fact, although Mrs.

Mrs. Seymour has been thirteen years in Surry Hills, and would be known to the police if of criminal habits, Sawtell never asked the police a single question on these points till he was asked for a second report, and then he admits the police in that district cannot say anything against either of these women. Sergeant Perry, who lives in Paddington, and has known Surry Hills for thirty years, has not to this day been asked for information by Sawtell. He further admits that up to April 1st he had made no inquiries from any neighbours, but Bancroft and Palmer. These two men seemed to have laid a trap into which Sawtell has fallen, with an innocence that is inconsistent with his experience as a detective officer, and it is not hard to see why Mr. Crick asked in the Assembly last night for this Police report to be produced. Such carelessness is reprehensible in the youngest of policemen; but there are more serious matters for Sawtell to explain. He states, on March 28th, that Mrs. Seymour "is a well known pickpocket, and companion of Sarah Clifford." When explained it comes to this: Ex-constable Williams told him that twelve years ago Clifford received ten years for some offence, and Clifford remarked to Williams that Mrs. Seymour was smarter than she was. Clifford has been in gaol almost continuously during the last twelve years. Mrs. Seymour has not, at any time, been charged with any offence since 1867, as Sawtell himself finds by the records; and none of the police in her locality give her that reputation. Nobody has ever seen these two women in company. How he came to make the misrepresentation that she is a well-known pickpocket I cannot imagine.

As to the further statement that the house is "a rendezvous of Victorian criminals" he is unable to say more than this: That nine years ago two Victorian criminals came to this Colony, and the Victorian police said they might be at Mrs. Seymour's. Sawtell watched the house for these men during three nights, and never saw a sign of them.

He ends up this report by stating that Mrs. Dean is "well known in most of the bawdy-houses in Surry Hills." When pressed, he admits his informants are only Bancroft and Palmer, and that Palmer said he saw Mrs. Dean at McGregor's house once, but cannot say whether day or night. She has been seen to go to Madame Rose's, but not under compromising circumstances, and he was not told a word about any other house. And it is a remarkable commentary on this report that Mr. Meagher upon the trial never made reference to any house but Mrs. Rose's. Sergeant Sawtell has done three things which call for a full explanation:—

- (1.) He has omitted to inquire from the neighbours who would know of these things.
- (2.) He has concealed from those entitled to know the suspicious sources from which his information came.
- (3.) He has in several instances on material matters misrepresented such information as he did obtain.

Sawtell urges as an excuse that he was not called upon in the usual official manner to make a report; but he must have known full well, after what took place in the Police Court, why this information was sought, and I cannot see how a conscientious man can draw any distinction in the obligation he is under to make an honest report whether ordered officially or not.

Regina v. Dean, and Report of Constables concerning the arrest of Gail for bigamy.

There were certain circumstances attending the arrest of Gail that seemed to me to suggest that the steps were taken simply to damage Gail as a witness. Part of Dean's defence was to show that Gail was a man who would be likely to have put the poison in the lemon-syrup bottle on March 2nd. Dean admitted on cross-examination that he heard from his solicitor on March 28th that Gail was likely to be arrested. That same evening these police are asked to meet an unknown man, who turns out to be Dean's attorney. They then hear that the first wife (who obtained the divorce in 1892) wishes Gail to be arrested upon a highly technical breach of the law. In the face of these facts and of this extraordinary story about the poisoning in Gail's family the police never asked her a question. On April 1st I told Mr. Crick that the trial of Dean was fixed for April 4th, and on the night of April 2nd the police receive the warrant for Gail's arrest. He thus is under arrest at the time when he gives evidence without having had a chance of explaining his position. In spite of these facts, all savouring of pure malice, these two constables never informed the police of North Sydney of their intended action, although at the time of the arrest they passed the station close by; and I was unable to obtain this explanation which they have given until I had said to them that unless they told me the whole truth I should report them to the Inspector-General forthwith. There was such an apparent inclination to conceal the true state of affairs both from myself and the North Sydney Police (for which they offered no explanation) that, coupled with the other circumstances of this case, I came to the conclusion they knew more than they cared to tell.

Chambers, 10/4/95.

C. G. WADE.

I might add that this matter of Gail's arrest came out on cross-examination by Mr. Meagher. He admitted being in custody on the charge of bigamy, and explained, on re-examination, that his first wife had sued for a divorce—the rule nisi was granted; and he, supposing that it would be made absolute in six months, married nearly twelve months after, and has lived in the same place at North Sydney for two years or more.

Sergeant Sawtell's Report.

No. 3 Police Station, Sydney, 28 March, 1895.

Re the attached inquiry referring to the character and history of Mrs. Caroline Seymour, her daughter, Mrs. May Dean, and the man Thomas Jones mentioned in the case of attempted poisoning of Mrs. Dean at North Sydney, Sergeant J. E. Sawtell begs to report, that from inquiries he has been informed that Mrs. Seymour is a well-known pickpocket, and a companion of Sarah Clifford alias Fox, who is now serving a term for stealing from the person. Mrs. Seymour has lived in Riley-street and in Little Norton-street, Surry Hills, for the last thirteen years, and her house was the rendezvous of many of the Victorian criminals when visiting Sydney. No one seems to have ever seen the man Seymour, said to be her husband. The man Jones was a constant constant lodger with Mrs. Seymour, and has been convicted in Sydney; also an ex-convict from West Australia; he is at present an inmate of the Liverpool Asylum for the destitute (No. 13 ward). He is well known to Superintendent Camplin, Detective John O'Sullivan, Detective Keating, also ex-Detective Phillip Williams. Mrs. Dean, ne Mary or May Seymour, is well known in most of the hawdy-houses in Surry Hills, being a frequent visitor at Madame Rose's brothel in Riley-street, opposite her mother's late residence, also at the house of Margaret M'Greggor, in Crown and High Holborn Streets—a fact apparently well known to the people in the neighbourhood. Mrs. Seymour and Mrs. Dean called on Mr. G. H. Townley, 423, Crown-street, chemist, on Sunday last and made a small purchase, which Mr. Townley cannot remember was the nature of at the present.

Sergeant Sawtell's Report.

No. 3, Police Station, Sydney, 1 April, 1895.

Re the attached inquiry, Sergeant J. E. Sawtell begs to report that Mrs. Seymour's conviction for stealing is so obscured at the present that nothing definite can be said regarding it. Some of the neighbours say she has been convicted in Sydney, but cannot fix the date, or give any definite particulars of her case.

Mrs. Dean bears the reputation of being a frequent visitor at Madame Rose's brothel in Riley and Collins Streets; but those who could substantiate the facts declined to supply the required information. She is not known to any of the police in this division.

The sergeant has not been able to see Detective O'Sullivan yet, who may be able to throw some light on the matter, but will endeavour to see him to-day.

The sergeant has been informed that Mr. Mcagher, the solicitor for the defence, has evidence of Mrs. Dean having received men at Mrs. M'Greggor's brothel in Crown-street, also as to the character of the house her mother, Mrs. Seymour, kept in Riley-street.

Sergeant Sawtell's Report.

No. 3, Police Station, Sydney, 13 April, 1895.

Re the Attorney-General's minute on attached reports referring to the history of Mrs. Seymour and her daughter, Mrs. Dean,—

Sergeant J. E. Sawtell begs to further report that he is not conscious of having conveyed any discrepancy of impression when speaking to the Attorney-General on the matter, with the exception of the addition of M'Intyre's name being mentioned in the report, which the sergeant afterwards recalled to mind on referring to his notes.

When the sergeant saw Bancroft on the first occasion it appeared clear from what he said that he had known both Mrs. Seymour and her daughter for some years, and his statements being supported in a great measure by the man Palmer, "both apparently disconnected with the case," the sergeant relied upon their statements without further inquiry, and reported accordingly; but by the subsequent inquiry made the allegations made against Mrs. Seymour appeared to have been exaggerated, and those against Mrs. Dean to be simply rumour only.

Mrs. Mills, the wife of a grocer, living at the corner of Riley and Sophia Streets, states that she has known Mrs. Seymour for some fifteen years, and has watched her conduct in the training of her daughter, which was most careful and precise. She always looked upon Mrs. Seymour as a respectable woman.

Mrs. Graves states she has been in charge of Madame Rose's house for about eighteen months. Mrs. Seymour, at one time, took an active part in its management, but her daughter was never connected with the place from any immoral point of view whatever; she appeared to have been well brought up.

Nothing appears to be known against Mrs. Seymour by her most intimate acquaintances beyond that already admitted by her in her evidence.

None of the police at this station appear to know anything against Mrs. Seymour or her daughter, Mrs. Dean.

Sergeant.

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Dean's Letter.

2, Little Collins-street, Surry Hills, 15 April, 1895.

ABOUT 1 p.m. three men came to the door. Mr. Johnston answered the door. They asked for Mrs. Dean. He asked them what was their business. They replied they came from the Crown Prosecutor. I then came to the door, and asked them did they want to see me. They said, "Are you Mrs. Dean?" I said, "Yes; what is your business?" They said, "We only wanted to see you."

P.S.—For the information of the police.

1st Count.—Administering poison to Mary Dean with intent to murder her.

2nd Count.—Causing poison to be taken by her with intent to murder her, on 4th March, 1895.

MARY DEAN:—I am the wife of the prisoner. Was married on 9th March, 1894. Before that I was living with my mother at Surry Hills. I knew prisoner eight months before marriage. He was in the habit of visiting me two or three times a week, both by day and night. He is master of one of the North Shore Ferry-boats. We began to live on unfriendly terms a month after marriage. It got worse. I was confined on 26th December, 1894. He never spoke to me for a week before it. The night before I was confined I told him I was going to be confined, and he went out of the house without speaking to me. About three weeks before my confinement I asked him would he change and be kind to me. He said, "No; he was tired of me, and would wait and see me over my trouble, and he would then leave me." Before this there had been no definite cause of quarrel, but it arose from his sulky disposition. Three days after my confinement he came to my bedside and said he was not the father of the child, and that I also had another to keep out of his money. There was no truth in either charge. My mother attended to me in my confinement, and afterwards. My mother made some beef-tea about a fortnight after it (about 12th January). She brought it to my bedside, and asked me to drink it. I tasted, and it had a most bitter taste. She tasted, and took it to the kitchen. I did not take it. About a week before the making of this tea I had some groats brought to me by my mother. I had about half-a-cup full out of the basin. Mother finished what was in the basin. I took it after 9 a.m., and we were both vomiting and purging all the day after taking it. We were both quite well before eating it. The prisoner was having his breakfast that morning in the house. He did not come regularly to see me after my confinement. He would come one day, and then not for a couple of days, and when he came he said most cruel things. A week after I was confined he came and said he was going to leave me, and packed his portmanteau to go. After taking the groats I had a burning pain in the pit of my stomach. Suffered from my eyes. Severe pain in my head and cramps in the feet. I had not noticed these symptoms before taking the groats. Prisoner went for Dr. Newmarch on the Monday after my taking the groats on the Sunday. He was going to pay the bill, and then he told him we were ill. A month before I was confined asked him to get the doctor, and he said I could walk. I was far advanced in pregnancy at the time. He had taken no interest in sending for the doctor before. The doctor sent a prescription. I took the medicine, and got better. When baby was a month old mother left me, about the 26th January, and I lived with the prisoner till 25th February. He was constantly telling me to leave the house, and was very cruel to me. On 25th February I bought a bottle of lemon syrup from Mrs. Adye. It was a new unopened bottle, with a capsule. I took it home. Miss Adye came there with me. We opened the bottle, and both had a drink out of it. It only tasted of lemon syrup, and I continued drinking it till the night of March 1st. There was no bitter taste in it, and I suffered no ill effects from it. I kept it on the sideboard down stairs. The night of March 1st was a Friday night. He had been out in the afternoon, and when he came home we had a few words about minding the baby. I then went upstairs. My husband came up afterwards, and said that I neglected the house and also the baby. I said to him, "Miss Cassin is the girl you ought to have married" (I knew he knew her before his marriage). He said, "That is the girl I ought to have married, and that is the girl I will marry as soon as I can get free." He then went to bed, and went to his work at 11. Next morning I found the lemon syrup on the kitchen mantelpiece. I had put it there on the night before. I was in bed when he left the night before. He had access to the kitchen, and no one was in the house but us two. No one had been in the house from the last time I had a drink of the syrup till the next morning when I had another drink. I took the last drink on Friday night, and had left the bottle on the kitchen mantel-piece. There was then no bitter in it, and I suffered no ill effects from it. I next drank from it between 7 and 7:30 a.m. on the Saturday morning. Prisoner had not returned then. I made a drink of it with water that I got from the tap in the same way I had done before in a tumbler. It was a clean tumbler. I took two or three mouthfuls, and noticed a most bitter taste, and recognised the same taste as was in the beef-tea that I did not drink. I did not drink the rest, and threw it down the sink. I felt no ill effects at the time. I then lit the fire and prepared breakfast. Prisoner then came home and had breakfast. After breakfast I took ill, vomiting and purging. At lunch-time I prepared a little more syrup in a clean tumbler and the water from the same tap. I just put it to my lips to taste it, and it still had the bitter taste, and I did not take any of it. At 2:30 I went to Mrs. Adye's and took the bottle of syrup with me. She keeps a small store. I showed her the bottle, and she tasted it. She only put her tongue to the cork. Mrs. Walke also tasted it, putting the bottle to her lips. I left the bottle there and went for my baby, and returned and got the bottle again, and took it to Mr. Smith, the chemist, and then to Mrs. Gail, a neighbour. Smith tasted it. I went to Dr. Newmarch with the bottle. He was not in, and I left the bottle with Mrs. Gail. It was just as I took it off the mantelpiece. I went home and went to bed about 7:30, feeling ill with terrible pain in my head. The vomiting had stopped. Prisoner came in and came upstairs and asked me what had made me ill. I said I had drunk some syrup out of the bottle. He asked me where it was. I said at Dr. Newmarch's. He asked me why I did not let him take the bottle. I said you were asleep when I took it, and he was. I had left it at Mrs. Gail's to be sent to Dr. Newmarch's. This was on Saturday night. He did not suggest going for a doctor. I felt better on Sunday. Prisoner asked me how I was on Sunday morning about 9 o'clock. (We were occupying different rooms at that time. We had done so since marriage. We started that way. It was my arrangement, he being at night-work.) I said I was a little better. He asked me if I would like some porter. I said, "Yes, if he thought it would do me good." He then took a tumbler into the bath-room, and returned to the room holding the bottom of the tumbler in the palm of his hand (shows), resting the bottom of the tumbler in the palm of his hand. I raised myself up in the bed and noticed something white in the bottom of the tumbler. It looked like a powder. The tumbler had nothing in it but the powder. He then turned his back to me and poured some porter into the tumbler. The bottle of porter was on the floor when he went out of the room with the tumbler, and the tumbler was one also in the room. He took the tumbler from the room to the bathroom. I heard the tap turned, and thought he was washing the tumbler. He then brought it back again. I had not put any powder into the tumbler. He then put the tumbler of porter to his nose, and he said it was sour. (Prisoner had brought the bottle of porter into the room on Saturday night. It was then opened for me, and I had some of it, and it did me no harm.) He then threw it over the balcony. I cannot say whether the tumbler was dirty when he washed it in the bath-room. I don't know where he took the tumbler from. Prisoner drank some of the porter out of the same bottle about 11 o'clock. About an hour and a half after he said it was sour; he drank a glassful of it. Prisoner offered me some tea and toast about 10 a.m. It was Sunday, the 3rd of March. He poured some into a saucer and asked me to drink it. I then noticed something clinging to the side of the saucer, floating round the edge of the tea. It looked like little white lumps. I said, "What is that round the saucer?" He said it was the cream off the milk. It did not look like cream. He asked me to drink it. I tasted it, but did not drink it. I said I would drink it when it was cooler, and asked him to go for Mrs. Adye. She was my nearest woman friend. He asked me to drink the tea before he went. I said, "No; I would wait till it was cooler." He went away. I got out of bed and took a tumbler off the washstand, and poured the tea out of the cup into it. He had brought the tea in a cup and had poured it into the saucer. I only noticed the white stuff in the saucer. When I had refused to take the tea, he had before going away poured it back into the cup again. I put the tumbler under the chest of drawers. I did not drink any of it. Mrs. Adye came, and I had a conversation with her, prisoner not being present. I pointed out the tea in the tumbler under the chest of drawers, and the cup. This was after 10 a.m. After leaving, in about ten minutes prisoner came to me. He asked me had I drunk the tea? I said, "Yes." He said it would do me good. He had not waited on me this way during my confinement illness. During the rest of the day I only took lime-water and milk. On Monday morning at breakfast the prisoner brought me some cocoa, bread and butter, and a chop, which I took. About twenty minutes or half an hour after eating it I started vomiting and purging very seriously. I felt severe pains in my head, and a very heavy pain in the stomach—a burning pain—and a burning in the throat. I had no such symptoms before he gave me this food. I was feeling much better up till the time he gave it to me. No one else was in the house but us two. I lay down on the bed, feeling very ill. He was lying on the bed with me. I was dressed. The symptoms went on all through the day. In the afternoon he suggested my having the doctor, at about 5:30. (He had done so on the Sunday, but I would not, as I was feeling pretty right.) I consented, and about 6 he went for him. Dr. Newmarch came about 9 or 10 and saw me. I was still feeling the same symptoms. He prescribed for me, and prisoner went for the medicine and brought it. He offered me some at about 11 p.m. I was still ill, but not vomiting. I had ceased vomiting. He brought the medicine in a tumbler to the bedside. He had a spoon in the tumbler, pressing the back of the spoon against the glass as though he was trying to mix something. He asked me to drink it. I noticed it had a milky appearance. I asked him what made it look like that. He said it was the powder that the doctor had ordered. I then drank it. The mixture in the tumbler was very thick, and looked like curdled milk on the top. I drank it. He then went to work and left the house. About half an hour after taking it I began vomiting and purging again, with the same burning symptoms that I had before in the throat and stomach, and I could hardly see out of my eyes. It went on all through the night, vomiting and purging nearly every ten minutes. Prisoner came to me about 7 a.m. on Tuesday. He asked me how I was. I said I had been very ill all night. The doctor came about 10, I think. I was very thirsty all night, continually drinking. I was sleeping in a night-dress that night. I had put on a clean night-dress on Sunday morning, and I wore it till Monday morning about 11 o'clock, when I took it off. I had been purging whilst I wore it, and I took it off because it was soiled by the purging which followed my taking the cocoa. I put it in the clothes-basket. I saw my mother take it out of the basket, and look at it, and put it back in the basket. (This was on Wednesday, the 6th.) There was no bitter taste in the cocoa, but I think there was in the medicine on Monday night. The doctor took the night-gown away on the following Sunday, the 10th. It is in the same state now as when I took it off on the Monday. I was still ill in bed when Dr. Newmarch came. I described my symptoms to the doctor. I described them truthfully, and he examined me. On the Monday night my mother came to me and took charge of me. On Tuesday morning she left for a time, but returned on Tuesday afternoon and gave me my food. From that time I got better, and had no return of the symptoms from the time they ceased on the Wednesday, and I quite recovered. On the Tuesday prisoner was present when Dr. Newmarch was there. Nothing took place then. On Wednesday or Thursday the doctor brought prisoner to me in bed. I had told the doctor something before this. On that he went to prisoner and brought him to me and asked him did he put a powder into the medicine. He said, "No." I said, "George, you told me the doctor had ordered a powder to be put into the medicine." He said, "I did not." I said, "You know you are telling a falsehood." He said, "You would hang a man," and went out of the room. On the Tuesday morning previous prisoner said Mr. Weynton had told him something about a bottle; something about poison being in a bottle (the syrup-bottle). He asked me what I knew about poison being in the bottle. I said I knew nothing about poison, but the bottle was then at Dr. Newmarch's. The police came and searched the house. Prisoner was arrested on the 8th. Sergeant Brennan took the tea that I had put under the chest of drawers. The syrup-bottle (A) produced is the one. The tumbler produced is the same (B). I had not moved the tumbler or put anything into it. My mother saw it and Mr. Gail on the Wednesday. The bottle of medicine (C) was what I had during my confinement. I found it standing on prisoner's table with some still in it, after my first illness—after the groats, and before the lemon syrup. I asked him what it was doing there. He said he had been taking it to give him an appetite. He had been asking me to take it after I had ceased taking it a month. I did not do so, but I took the bottle (D) back into my room. Dr. Newmarch took it from my room. I did not see the bottle out of which he got the milky-looking stuff he gave me, but what he gave me was not like what is in the bottle (E) produced. This medicine is a brown colour. It was white what he gave me. My mother afterwards gave me the medicine left by the doctor, and it was like that in "E," not milky. I was not suckling the baby, and I got got the milk from the breast with a pump. I gave some of it to the doctor on the 12th, which I drew the same day. I also gave him some of my water on the 8th. I have never bought or ever saw any arsenic or other poison in my house, or knew of it being there. The tumbler is the tumbler I drank the syrup in (F).

Cross-examined:—On Monday the prisoner gave me the chop and cocoa. I was first suspicious, on the Sunday, of poison, after his offering me the tea. I noticed the same taste in the groats and syrup. I did not think of poison when I took the syrup to the chemist. I became suspicious of poison in the tea, and then thought the syrup making me ill. I did not think of poison when I took the bottle to Dr. Newmarch. My suspicion was also aroused by the porter, when I saw the powder in the glass. I said to my husband when he said the porter was sour, "Oh, put some sugar into it and liven it up a bit." I intended if he then offered it to me to accuse him of putting something into it, and to refuse it. I saw seven or eight lumps round the edge of the saucer. They were much smaller than a pea [makes a mark about the size of a pin's head] (g). Some were a little larger. Prisoner did not say, when I made a demur to having the doctor on the Sunday, "I will stand this no longer, you will and must have a doctor." He said that on the Monday, between 5 and 6. I was not demurring then to having a doctor. I was vomiting very much at the time. I did not tell the doctor on Monday night of my suspicion as to poison. I did not call his attention to the tea. On the Tuesday he asked me what I had been eating. I did not tell him then that I suspected poison. Mother arrived about midnight on Wednesday, after prisoner had gone to his work, and she left between 5 and 6 before he came home. She asked me what made me so ill. I did not tell her I thought prisoner was poisoning me. I did not call her attention to the tea on Monday night. I did not tell her about the tea, because I was very ill and forgot about it. On Tuesday night I had improved. I did not call her attention to the tea then, and I did not mention it till Wednesday morning. On Tuesday morning prisoner said, "What is this I hear about the bottle?" I said, "What bottle?" He said, "The bottle which you have been drinking out of that I hear made you bad." I was up on Christmas Day. I dined with him. I had to go upstairs and beg him to come down, because it was Christmas Day. My mother was at dinner. We were not friendly, and he hardly spoke to me or to my mother. There was no drinking of a toast in a pleasant family way. There was porter on the table. My mother asked him to have some, he said he did not care. I did not say I was glad I was not confined that day. Prisoner has told me he saw her (Miss Cassin) in Oxford-street before our marriage. He mentioned it casually that he had seen her when riding his bicycle. I have never seen them in each others' company. I showed the baby to her at Mrs. Hughes', and she kissed it. There is no jealousy between us. Prisoner has never struck me or used violence to me. I have only seen him under the influence of drink on two or three occasions. He gets £3 a week. I was supposed to get £2 a week from him for the house, but I did not get it regularly. This is my signature to my depositions. It was read over to me. When I used the word "drink," I meant that he was under the influence of liquor. I said I got £2 a week, and was properly fed. He proposed to get a house of our own the first month we were married. I remember him saying in February "Well, old girl, I think I can get the money from Mr. Egan, and build the house." He told me he wrote to Mr. Egan. This was in February. I opened the note and read it [put in No. 1]. He did not object to my opening it, and we had a quiet chat over it. He had a piece of land before we married, and bought a piece after marriage. He fenced the land himself. My life was not insured. When I married I had an insurance policy, and he asked me to discontinue it. He asked me this before marriage. Mr. Jones was living at my mother's. Prisoner knew him. He was a tailor. Prisoner did not see me going to a house opposite. I don't know that he saw my mother, Mrs. Seymour, going there. There was nothing during the eight months he came there to give him an impression that I was not respectable. Jones has been in the house ever since I was a little child. He last worked as a tailor at Clement Lewis', about two years ago from now, for twelve months. Some gentlemen from Melbourne came to see him. He said they were bookmakers. My mother's is a fruit shop. I do not know Jones was a receiver of stolen goods. Sam, a one-eyed man, used to come and see him. I know Madame Rose's opposite, an assignation house. I never went there. I don't remember any of the women coming and getting accommodation when a raid was made on Rose's. Mother took vegetables there, and stayed 10 minutes or half-an-hour there. My mother took charge of the establishment when Madame Rose went away. She asked my mother to go as a trustworthy person to take charge of her silver and jewellery. I did not go to business in the day time. My mother, when cabs came, used to take notes away. I never went there, I have never taken notes. I never played the piano to the girls. I never told Dean about it. Prisoner used to nurse the child after a good deal of trouble in asking him.

Re-examined:—Prisoner never said anything to me about my mother. He never asked me for an explanation. Prisoner was sitting beside Mr. Meagher when he asked me these questions in the Police Court. I was very ill when my mother came on the Monday night. I forgot all about the tea when the doctor came. I felt light-headed till the Wednesday. I was purging and vomiting incessantly every time I drank, and I craved for drink, which made me vomit. There was no truth in the charge that I had another child. There is no truth in the insinuation that I did not lead a pure life before I married him. There was nothing about our house to lead him to suspect anything wrong about me, and if he has heard anything since about my mother's relationship to the house opposite, it may have come upon him as a surprise.

BESSIE ADYE:—Married woman, living at Miller-street, North Shore. I live five minutes' walk from prisoner's. I keep a shop. I sold Mrs. Dean a bottle of syrup [produced] on 25th February. I bought it from a Mr. Roberts with another. I had not opened it. I used the other bottle. It was all right. I had no sickness after it, nor did I notice any bitter taste in it. She brought it back to me on Saturday, the 2nd March. I tasted it. It was bitter. I just put it to my mouth, just wetting my lips. I saw prisoner next day at 10:30. He asked me to come and see his wife, as she was very ill. I went to her. She was in bed. She had a cup of tea by the bed, about half a cup. Her face was flushed. We had a talk. I took the baby away home.

Cross-examined:—Prisoner seemed anxious about his wife, and asked me to go at once.

BERNARD JAMES NEWMARCH:—I am a duly qualified medical practitioner at North Shore. I attended Mrs. Dean in her confinement. I am of opinion she had not had a child before. I am positive about it. I attended her to January 10th. I heard her describe in Court to-day her symptoms after eating the groats. The symptoms described by her indicated irritant poison. Arsenic is one. The symptoms symptoms of arsenical poisoning are acute vomiting, purging, with probably slimy and bloody stool, straining, acute burning pains in the stomach, cramps in the limbs, and burning pains in the throat, and irritation of the eyes—they water and are filmy. These are the main symptoms, or you may get none of these symptoms, but only absolute collapse. She was vomiting and purging about the 4th or 5th of January, also the mother, but not so bad. I had been giving morphia in Mrs. Dean's case, and I thought it might possibly be owing to that, and I stopped it; but I did not think it could be as her mother had it. The symptoms which she has described as appearing after the groats are consistent with arsenical poisoning. On Monday, the 4th March, I got from a Mr. Gail a bottle of syrup partially consumed. I handed it to Inspector Cotter on the 5th. I got the bottle at 9 or 10 p.m. When I saw her at 8.10, she was very pale, skin moist and clammy, tongue clean. Symptoms gone of vomiting and purging directly after taking anything. The body was tender over the stomach region. Pulse regular. Respiration normal. The symptoms are consistent with arsenical poisoning. Any irritant poison produces extreme thirst. I prescribed for her, having no suspicion of poisoning. I went and saw her early the next morning, being called by her husband. The prescription ("H") produced is the one I gave. It is composed of opium, bismuth, and hydrocyanic acid. It would not be milky in appearance, but like that produced. It could not produce vomiting and purging, but would have the opposite effect. When the husband came on Tuesday morning, he said his wife was worse. I saw her at 8.40. She was no worse generally, but the eyes were red and the stomach very tender. She had been vomiting incessantly on the Wednesday. They said they had given her tea, which was contrary to my instructions, and the vomiting was so bad, I had to feed her by the bowel. She was very weak indeed on Tuesday and Wednesday. On the Wednesday morning I was told something by the wife. I went down and woke prisoner up, and asked him to come upstairs. I said, "What is this about the powder that they state you put in the medicine?" He turned to his wife and said, "You know I did not put the powder in." She said, "You know you did." The man was half asleep, and did not seem to know what he was saying. I thought he was intoxicated. He spoke in such a funny way. I did not order any powder to be put into the medicine. Arsenic is white. It would first float on the top of the medicine when put in in round globules like little pills. It would give a milky appearance if there was enough of it stirred up. The same if put into tea. Hot tea would dissolve it sooner. I took a night-gown from the place on Thursday. Having heard the result of the analysis of the lemon syrup I, on the 10th, got a night-gown which I picked out from a lot of dirty clothes. I took it to the police and gave it to Constable Chivers. I also got some of her urine and gave it to Chivers. Arsenic will continue in the system for some time, that is why I got her urine. It will disappear in three or four days after an ordinary medical dose. Finding it at the end of six days would indicate a large dose. The symptoms described would arise from large doses, not small constant doses. I also prescribed the tonic (D) on the last day I attended her. It is quinine and iron, and a very small quantity of strychnine [Prescription put in (D)], not enough to do any harm. There are less than two drops of liquor strychnia in each dose, half dram in 8 ounces. It is the ordinary medical prescription. It contains no arsenic. If there is 3 grains of arsenic in what is left in the bottle it would be a fatal dose. Half a grain of strychnine is poisonous, but there is only the fiftieth of a grain in each dose of this medicine. Supposing a person took a dose of arsenic and then took strychnine it would be an antidote to it. Arsenic deadens the pulse, but strychnine would quicken it. On the Monday night her pulse was fairly strong. Strychnine would have a bitter taste, and supposing she had taken some it would account for her having a strong pulse supposing she had been suffering from arsenical poisoning. I have experimented on myself for the purpose of this case by taking arsenic, and seeing how long it would remain in the urine. I took a $\frac{1}{16}$ th, $\frac{1}{8}$ th, and $\frac{1}{4}$ th of a grain in divided doses, $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 grains are poisonous doses. I then handed samples to the Government Analyst. I took it on Friday, 29th, 30th, and 31st March. I gave them on 31st, 1st, and 2nd April. I made a rough analysis myself, and found it after the ordinary medical doses before I sent it. I gave the tonic which I took away to Constable Chivers as I got it. I got some milk from Mrs. Dean on the 12th. I did not examine it, but I think traces of it would be gone by then. It would last longer in the urine. I ordered her to use ice to allay her thirst. She complained of spasms and cramps in the calves of her legs which are symptoms of arsenical poisoning. I am of opinion that she was suffering from acute arsenical poisoning on the 4th and 5th when I saw her.

Cross-examined:—A person in ordinary health could not take twice the dose I could. A man may lose his life with half of what I took. I think a good many might take $\frac{1}{2}$ grain with safety. I did not think her over in a critical condition. If the medicine be put in a glass having lime water and milk it would discolour the medicine. I did not hear her say "You told me the doctor ordered the powder." I do not remember it. Prisoner denied all knowledge of poison. He asked me to find out whether there was any poison in the bottle of syrup, and who put it in. He said they had accused him of poisoning his wife, and he could not stand that sort of thing. Prisoner was very excitable, asking me to come at once. He said, on the Tuesday morning, she was not adhering to his instructions about the dieting in the presence of his wife. I gave the instructions about the diet to Mrs. Weynton and another woman, not to the husband on the Monday night. I saw Mrs. Seymour on the Tuesday.

Re-examined:—A person may take a fatal dose of arsenic and vomit enough to save his life, and you would still find traces of it in his system. It passes from the system rapidly. If she swears that she said "You told me the doctor ordered it," I won't contradict her. There was an altercation at the time. Not suspecting poison I did not pay particular attention to what they said to each other. I got the urine from Mrs. Seymour. There is no taste in arsenic. It would be tasteless in tea. A very small quantity of strychnine in the lemon syrup would make it bitter. The taking strychnine would the better enable her to go about.

ETHEL ADYE:—I live with my parents. I know prisoner and his wife. Remember her buying the bottle of lemon syrup. It was on the 25th February. She took it home. I saw her again in the evening at her home. I saw the bottle there. I saw her uncork it, and I had a drink of it with water. It tasted sweet like ordinary lemon syrup. We had some at home the next day out of another bottle. It tasted the same. I saw her again on the Saturday at our house. The syrup had no ill effect on me.

Cross-examined:—I was often at the house. Have seen him nursing the baby several times. He seemed a very kind father, and seemed affectionate with his wife.

BESSIE WALKER:—I know Mrs. Dean and the Adyes. Saw Mrs. Dean on the 2nd March at Mrs. Aye's. She had a bottle of syrup with her. I tasted it. It was like gall. I was sick after it. I vomited. She went away and returned with the baby. She left the bottle whilst she was away, and when she returned she got the bottle and took it away. The bottle was exactly like that produced.

RICHARD

RICHARD JOHN SMITH, chemist in North Shore:—I remember Mrs. Dean coming to me on Saturday, 2nd March. She gave me a white glass bottle containing lemon syrup. I took the cork out and tasted it; it was a bitter sweet taste. I returned it to her as I received it.

FREDERICK WILLIAM GAIL:—I am a furniture-broker at North Sydney. I know prisoner and his wife. I am on good terms with them. I know Mrs. Seymour. On the Saturday afternoon I got a bottle of lemon syrup from her. I took it to Doctor Newmarch on the Monday night. It was before prisoner's arrest. I had a conversation with her. I tasted the contents, just a taste. It was very bitter. The bottle was under my care, and was in the same condition when I gave it to Dr. Newmarch.

Cross-examined:—Mrs. Seymour frequently visited my house, averaging once a week. I am in custody now on a charge of bigamy. I saw Dean on Saturday night after I tasted the bottle. Mrs. Dean requested that it should be taken to the doctor. I did not tell prisoner of her leaving the bottle. I did not attach any importance to her leaving the bottle. I went to Guise the chemist with it on Sunday night. There was something about poisoning at West Maitland; I was then 13.

Re-examined:—The arrest for bigamy was the evening before last. I have been living on the Shore five years. My first wife's name was Amelia Hart. She took proceedings for divorce when I was at sea at the time. There was a Decree Nisi at six months, and when I married again I was under the impression that I was free to marry, and am now. It is two years since I married my present wife. I was asked at [the police court about my marriage, and I was arrested since then. There is no truth in the insinuation that I, at the age of 12, was in any way connected with a poisoning case. Fullerton and Murdoch arrested me. The divorce case was three years ago. I did not marry till twelve months after.

BENJAMIN CUTHBERT, groom to Dr. Newmarch:—I got a bottle from the doctor. I did not interfere with the contents, and gave it to Chivers.

WILLIAM MICHAEL DOHERTY, laboratory assistant to Mr. Hamlet:—I received on the 8th March from Sergeant Brennan a tumbler containing tea, a bottle of medicine (the tonic), "D." On the 11th March I got from him a bottle of urine and a night-dress; on the 14th March from Cotter a bottle of milk; on the 15th from Brennan eight bottles, a lime-bottle, and a box of pills. All, with the exception of the tea, I handed to Hamlet as I received them. I examined the tea for arsenic, and found traces of arsenic in it, and $\frac{1}{16}$ grain of arsenic as a white powder in the bottom of the tumbler. The remainder of the tea not used in my analysis was handed back to Brennan.

WILLIAM MOGFORD HAMLET:—I am the Government Analyst, twenty-three years' experience, Fellow of the Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain, and have other Fellowships. On 8th March got from Cotter a bottle sealed and labelled containing lemon syrup (produced). Made a preliminary analysis. It contained 2½ ounces of a clear liquid, with a white powder on the bottom of the bottle. It had a persistent bitter taste. A chemical analysis was made, and 1½ grains of white arsenic was found in the contents of the bottle, and 1.5 grains (1½) of strychnine in the liquid. There was about twice as much liquid as there is now. I produce the strychnine I obtained. The strychnine was in solution. Anyone looking for arsenic only would not find the strychnine. Two and a half grains is a fatal dose of arsenic. One-half grain of strychnine is a poisonous dose. The mixture of strychnine and arsenic would cause one to counteract the other. I examined the tonic (D.) I found three grains of arsenic in it, and traces of strychnine. It was a quarter full. I also examined some urine (produced). I found distinct traces of arsenic in it. On the 16th March, on my return from Grafton, I broke the seal, finding indications after a week which would indicate an injurious dose—not a medical dose. I cut out a portion of the night-dress (produced). The stain was at the back, and was of fecal matter. I analysed it, and found traces of arsenic. I believe it had passed through the human system, because it was so intimately incorporated with the fecal matter, and because I went over it with the microscope, and could trace no crystals. There was no trace of any arsenic being put on the fecal matter. I searched but could find nothing to indicate a wash of arsenic being put on. What I found would indicate a large dose of arsenic—not a medical dose, I think. I examined some tea in a tumbler. I got it from Doherty. I found 1/15 grain of strychnine in it, and I also confirmed Doherty's finding of arsenic. He had not searched for strychnine. When first put into a liquid arsenic will float and cover the air-bubbles, and present the appearance of lumps floating. At the bottom of the tumbler I found solid arsenic. Also examined a bottle of milk containing no arsenic. I should expect to find it in urine and feces. After several days I should expect to find it in the urine—not in the milk.

Cross-examined:—It would remain in suspension two days, but if you stir it up it rapidly sinks. I have seen prisoner daily crossing over. I formed a favourable opinion of his honesty and sobriety. I was present when he got a presentation for saving life.

Re-examined:—I examined urine brought me by Cotter as from Dr. Newmarch. First was Mrs. Dean's, March 31st; no arsenic found in it. 2nd, D No. 8: Urine No. 1, March 31st, contained distinct traces of arsenic. On 3rd April: Urine produced April 1st showed distinct traces of arsenic; not so strong as that found on 31st. D No. 10: Urine produced, April 2nd, at 7:10 p.m., Dr. Newmarch contained a still fainter trace.

APRIL 5th.

GEORGE EDWARD RENNIE, M.D. of London, and duly-qualified medical practitioner, Government Pathologist:—I heard the evidence. I agree with Dr. Newmarch. The symptoms described are those of acute arsenical poisoning. Strychnine, taken with arsenic, will account for the steady pulse described. Arsenic deadens the heart's action; strychnine stimulates it. Arsenic is rapidly begun to be excreted, but it continues for a long time. Finding it six days after would indicate that a large dose had been taken, and it would be more likely to be found in the urine than in the milk. Her being able to move about in the afternoon would be accounted for by her taking strychnine with the arsenic.

Cross-examined:—And that she did not take a sufficient dose of arsenic to make her go to bed.

CAROLINE SEYMOUR, a widow, mother of Mrs. Dean, was with her at time of her confinement (26th December), and I remained there one month. I remember making some groats for my daughter. It was on the 13th January. I made it in the kitchen between 9 and 10 a.m. She was in bed, and I and the prisoner were the only persons in the house that day. I left the groats on the dining-room table to cool. Prisoner was at home having his breakfast. I put the groats on the table whilst he was at breakfast at it. I left it there to cool. I left him in the room with it, and went upstairs to my daughter. I was upstairs and in the kitchen and doing work while it was cooling. It was cool when I got back to it. I took it up to my daughter. She took about half a cup full of it, and I sat down and ate the rest. About twenty minutes afterwards we were both taken with vomiting. Mr. Dean waited on us and emptied our vomit for us. It purged us also. I was very ill for three or four days after. The vomiting lasted till 12 the same day. After that I had such pain in my head that I could hardly hold my head up and get about the house. I felt sick. Dr. Newmarch sent us some medicine. Prisoner went and told him we were ill. About five days after that I prepared some beef-tea for Mrs. Dean. I put it on the stove early in the morning, 8.30, and I seasoned it and left it on the hob to cook till about 12. I seasoned it and tasted it, and it was what beef-tea ought to be. A little time after I strained it in a cullender and put it in a basin, and, when it was cool, I took it up to my daughter. When it was cooling it was on the kitchen table. The prisoner was in the house that morning, about the house. I was ironing in a different room, in the dining-room. I took it up to her. She tasted it, and could not drink it. Prisoner was sitting on the foot of the bed. She said she could not drink it, it was very bitter, and told me to taste it, and I did, and it was very bitter. I said it was not like that when I tasted it in the kitchen. My daughter asked prisoner to taste it. He took the spoon and put it to his lips, but I could not say whether he tasted it or not. He said it was all right. I said there must have been a gall in the meat to make it so bitter. I told her she could not drink it, and threw it away. I left three days after baby was a month old. Prisoner told me to go. I have been in service since at North Sydney, with Mrs. Lee, of Brunswick Cottage, two miles from prisoner's. I know Gail. I saw a bottle there on a Monday night. He asked me to taste it. I did with the cork. It tasted very bitter. I went to my daughter's on Monday, 4th March, at 12.10 a.m. I heard she was very ill from Gail. I found my daughter very ill, vomiting and purging. No one was there but the baby. As I was going there I saw prisoner on his bicycle, going to the North Shore Ferry-boat. I stayed with her till 5.40 a.m. I gave her lime-water and soda-water through the night, and I gave her medicine at 4 a.m. I did not put anything into the medicine. [Mr. Wade proposes to ask what instructions she got from her daughter as to the medicine she had to take. Mr. Meagher objects to such evidence being given. I exclude the evidence, though I have some doubt whether it would not be admissible, as showing Mrs. Dean's belief at the time as to the medicine which she ought to take.] I looked for a powder to put into it, but could not find it. That was in consequence of something I had been told. No one else was present but my daughter. When I left prisoner had not come home. I returned to Mrs. Lee's, where I was in service. I did my work and returned to her on Tuesday between 5 and 6. I saw prisoner in the bedroom. She was very ill, vomiting. I said to prisoner, "Whatever can be the matter?" He said, "I don't know." I stayed there from that time. On Wednesday morning I saw the doctor. She was improving Wednesday evening. She told me something on Wednesday when she began to improve. I looked under the chest of drawers and I saw a tumbler with something in it. Very thick on top and something white at the bottom and dark on the top. I put it back where I got it. It was like this tumbler. On Thursday I had a conversation with Dr. Newmarch. I saw prisoner after, and told him that Dr. Newmarch told me that there was something found in the bottle; that Dr. Newmarch said there was poison found in the bottle. He said he knew nothing about it. On the previous day prisoner was present when Dr. Newmarch was there. She asked Dr. Newmarch did he order Mr. Dean to put a powder in the medicine. Dr. Newmarch said he did not. She then said to her husband that he put a powder in the medicine on Monday night. He said he did not, and he walked out of the room. The police came to the house between 8 and 9 p.m. I don't remember telling him the police had come. From the time I nursed her on the Tuesday night she took nothing but soda and milk, and everything was injected for five or six days. I gave her nothing on the Monday night but the one dose of medicine—not tea. She had been a healthy girl. I never knew her to have attacks of vomiting before.

Cross-examined:—I called at Gail's three or four times during the four weeks after I left my daughter to have a chat. Dean told me to leave his house. He said there was a dirty milk-jug on the table, and he commenced to growl. I said there was not, and he said it was most time his wife was downstairs to take charge of her duties. I said Dr. Newmarch said she was not to leave her bed for another week, as she was so very weak. He said the quicker I cleared out the better. I said I would go when she could come down and take charge of her own house, and I stayed three days after and I left. I did refuse to go, part of the furniture being mine. He took up a chair to strike me with. She caught him round the neck, and as he pushed her from him I caught her in my arms and laid her on the sofa. I did not say, "You will remember this, you scoundrel." I asked Gail whether they had seen her. I was at Gail's on Saturday night, at 9 or 10. On the Thursday night previous she was at the circus with me. I took her. She complained of a pain in her back. Gail did not tell me about the bottle on Saturday night. I heard on Monday night she was ill, after prisoner told Gail. I waited till Gail went with the bottle to Dr. Newmarch and returned, and I left Gail's at 10.15. I then went home, and from there to my daughter. My attention was not directed to the tumbler under the chest of drawers. On Tuesday night my attention was not called to anything under the chest of drawers. I did not hear him say, "You'd try to hang me." I did not tell Mrs. Weynton that I thought there was poison in the bottle of syrup. I was convicted, and served a sentence in Melbourne thirty years ago. I never kept an improper house. I once took charge of the house, and there was nobody there. I have taken notes, but did not know whom they were to. I took them to the lady of the house.

Re-examined:—I never had words with prisoner before this. I lived with prisoner and his wife a month after their marriage. He told my daughter and me that I would have to go, and I left. I had no words with him. I gave them the best of the furniture. I had to help them. My daughter and I were very affectionate to one another. [Witness bursts into tears.] I had only her, no one else; my other daughter is dead. I did not suggest to my daughter in any way to make a false charge against her husband, or to take poison to spite him. The charge in Melbourne was receiving. A gentleman gave me a mantle, and I would not tell where I got it from, and took the charge myself.

WILLIAM MOGFORD HAMLET:—In the urine of Mrs. Dean the arsenic was perfectly dissolved, and it showed that it had probably passed through the kidneys, and their not finding strychnine is consistent with her having taken it a week before, because strychnine is very rapidly eliminated.

WILLIAM JAMES GUISE:—A chemist at North Shore. I know prisoner. He came to me on Monday 4th with a prescription [produced] (H). I made it up as prescribed. I put no arsenic or strychnine in it. I gave him no powder with it. I saw him next morning. He got another prescription made up. It contained no arsenic or strychnine.

Cross-examined:—

Cross-examined:—He seemed very anxious about his wife. He three times requested me to make haste whilst I was making up the prescription. I had to ask him not to bother me, as it ran a risk of making me make a mistake. I told him to be sure and shake the bottle well. I was about five minutes making up the prescription. Some other customer was there.

THOMAS EDWARD MACDONALD:—A chemist at North Shore. I know the prisoner. Early in January I made up a prescription. It was a tonic, about $\frac{1}{4}$ th of a grain of strychnine in the sixteen doses. No arsenic was put in it. Saw my assistant Webster make it up.

CHARLES PARKER WEBSTER, assistant to last witness:—Made up prescription in January last. I correctly made it up, put in no more strychnine and no arsenic.

LYDIA RUTH GAIL:—Wife of William Gail. I know Mrs. Dean and prisoner. I went to see Mrs. Dean on the Sunday, about 4 p.m., when she was ill. She was in bed. She showed me her toast. She did not show me some tea.

CATHERINE WEYNTON:—I live next door to prisoner. I went there on the 4th March, in the evening, between 5.30 and 5.45. Mrs. Adye was there. Mrs. Dean was in bed. Prisoner had gone for a doctor, and came in whilst I was there. I stayed with Mrs. Dean while prisoner was away with the prescription. He came in and said he was going to give her her medicine as I went away.

Cross-examined:—Miss Adye asked me to go and see Mrs. Dean, not the prisoner. I know nothing of them. I have not seen him nursing the baby. I do not know whether they live happily or not. I asked her why she had not told the doctor about the bottle. How can he prescribe for you when he does not know what you have done? She said the bottle was with the doctor—with the chemist—and they would know more about it to-morrow (Tuesday).

Re-examined:—I said I would go in if they required help in the night. Mr. Weynton, on Tuesday, after the doctor had gone, asked, "What is this about a bottle and poison?" Prisoner said, "Poison! what do you mean?" and he asked me what about the bottle and poison. I said, "I don't know anything about it; you had better ask Mrs. Dean." The only women in the house were Mrs. Dean and I when the doctor came.

JOSEPH CHIVERS:—Constable at North Sydney. The lemon syrup bottle was handed to me by Dr. Newmarch's coachman. I put it on Inspector Cotter's table in his office as I got it. It was sealed. I got "D" from Dr. Newmarch on the 17th. It was sealed. I gave it to Cotter as I received it. I got "I" from Dr. Newmarch on the 10th. It was sealed. I gave it to Cotter as I received it. I got a soft parcel (the nightgown) from Dr. Newmarch. I gave it to Cotter.

RICHARD BRENNAN:—Sergeant of Police at North Shore. I received a bottle of tonic from Cotter on the 8th. Took it to Mr. Dogherty the same day as I got it, sealed. I have the urine bottle. Got it from Cotter. Gave it to Dogherty sealed, as I got it. The night-dress was in a paper parcel, sealed. I got it from Cotter, and gave it to Dogherty, and the tumbler with liquid in it. I got it from Mrs. Seymour. I went to prisoner's house on the 8th. I had been there on the 7th, about 9 p.m. On going there I saw Mrs. Dean in bed, and Mrs. Seymour and Mr. and Mrs. Gail. Mrs. Seymour gave me the tumbler which she took from under the chest of drawers. Prisoner came in five minutes after I got there. Mrs. Dean asked him where the child was. He said, "At Woollabra; you did not tell me to bring it home." He then left the room. Mrs. Seymour then handed me the tumbler about half-full of liquid. It was uncovered. I then went to prisoner's room, and said "Where do you get your water from?" He said "From the Sydney water supply; from the tap." I said "My reason for asking the question is in consequence of your wife's illness." I thought if he got water from a tank, poison might get into it accidentally. Prisoner said "There is no poison in the house; the first I heard of my wife's illness was on Saturday night last, and I gave her tea and toast on Sunday morning and also on Sunday evening; the case seems mysterious to me." I then left the house. I took the tea with me to Cotter, who placed it in his safe and locked it. Next morning Cotter and I took it up and gave it to Dogherty. About 6 p.m. on the 8th I went with Constable Way to Dean's house. He was in bed, apparently asleep. I said "Wake up, George," he sat up in bed. I said, "I have two warrants for your arrest." He said "Yes." I said "I will read them to you." I read the warrants charging him with causing poison to be taken by his wife with intent to murder, and the other, attempting to administer poison directly. He said as to the first, "Very strong that; I suppose I will have to go and prove my innocence." As to the other warrant, he said, "Pretty hard that, I can assure you; I had no knowledge that poison was in the house." I cautioned him, and said "You told me, last night, that you gave your wife tea and toast on Sunday evening last, and also on Sunday morning." He said "Yes." I said "Were the vessels clean that you gave your wife tea and toast out of?" He said "Yes, thoroughly clean; I scalded the teapot before I made the tea, and I got a clean cup and saucer off the dresser." I said that "In the tea which your wife says that you gave to her on Sunday morning last, arsenic has been found." He said "Well, that's mysterious; I had no knowledge of poison being in the house. I did not wash the cup and saucer which I gave her the tea out of; the wife must have washed them up." He then asked me "Did you see the powder which Dr. Newmarch showed me yesterday?" I said "I saw a powder sealed up but I did not see the powder." He said, "Did you see the writing on the powders?" I said, "No." He said, "I would like you to trace that writing." I said, "I will, and I have done so, to the North Sydney Friendly Dispensary." [It is here admitted, both by the Crown and Mr. Meagher, that these powders had nothing whatever to do with the case, and inquiry about them is not necessary.] He said, "I gave my wife lime-water and milk and a few drops of brandy on Monday night last, and I gave her the medicine in the same glass shortly afterwards, and that is why the medicine had a milky appearance." (I had not referred to that matter.) He said, "The first I heard about poison being in the house was on Tuesday morning last." He said, "Mr. Weynton, who lives next door, asked me what about the poison that is found in the bottle; and Mrs. Seymour told me yesterday that the police were coming up." I searched his room and clothing, and I took him from room to room as I searched. When I took him to his wife's room she was in bed. He went to the bedside and said, "Do you want me to go?" She said, "If you are innocent you had better go and prove you are innocent." Prisoner said, "I am innocent." I took him to the Police Station. I got all the bottles back from Hamlet in my safe custody.

Cross-examined:—Before he spoke of the powder being in the medicine I had not heard of it. I have not been able to trace the sale of arsenic or strychnine in North Shore.

STEPHEN JAMES COTTER, Inspector of Police:—I received the syrup bottle. It was sealed on my table; put in my safe. Next day took it to Dr. Newmarch, and then to Hamlet as I received it. I also received the tonic from Chivers; gave it to Brennan as I received it; also bottle urine from Chivers, Chivers, sealed, put it in safe and gave it to Brennan as I received it; also a parcel marked "Nightdress," sealed, gave it to Brennan. The tumbler I got from Brennan, and gave it to Brennan in same condition as received. He returned it to me, and it was in my safe. Nothing was done to the tea, and I gave it to Hamlet, and nightdress, and got them back last week. On Sunday last, 31st March, got two bottles from Chivers. I gave them to Hamlet.

DR. NEWMARCH (recalled):—The bottle of urine that Hamlet got last was mine. I gave a bottle of urine to Chivers, which I got from Mrs. Seymour. Took the first bottle on March 10th. The second I drew myself from her, which I gave to Chivers.

Mrs. SEYMOUR: I gave Dr. Newmarch a bottle of urine at prisoner's house. It was my daughter's. The doctor sent me a note to get it, and I got it—it was a Sunday.

It is agreed, with consent of prisoner, his attorney advising him, that Mrs. Murphy may be called at a later stage.

[Case for Crown concluded.]

DEFENCE.

GEORGE DEAN (prisoner):—Master mariner, holding a certificate. I am employed by the North Shore Steam Ferry Co. for eleven years. Am 27. Have saved life off the steamer several times. I received a watch in token of it once. It is true as to what she swore as to over eight months acquaintance and my visiting her. There was nothing in the conduct of her mother or herself during the eight months I was visiting to lead me to believe they were not respectable. I never insulted her during our married life with reference to herself or family. There is not a word of truth in what she swore as to my charging her with having another child. Quite the reverse. She said to me on several occasions, "What do you do with the £2 you have every fortnight?" I said, "It went in paying land and timber." She then said, "I suppose you want some of it to keep your illegitimate children." I said, "Whoever told you I had illegitimate children? You know I have none." She then said a woman told her, and she would not name. This conversation started six months ago, and came up now and again. Remember Mrs. Seymour staying at the house. She and I could not agree. She used to be going at me. At latter end of April, 1894, she was staying with us six weeks or two months. We lived more happily when she was away. We were on happy terms; only when the mother was living in the house, when the wife used to get disagreeable and the mother as well. I did cause the mother to leave. Mr. Gail moved her things. I know Miss Cassin. I have not communicated with her in any way. I did not say what she swore I did as to marrying her when I get free from you. Remember Friday, 1st March. I left home about 11.15. Nothing was wrong between us. She appeared all right when I left. I returned at 7.30 a.m. next day. She was up and front door open. I stayed at home all day Saturday. I went to bed at 9 a.m. She made no complaint. She did not call me at 1, but did at 6. I got up. She appeared well and jolly when she came to my bedside to wake me. She did not tell me she had drunk anything that disagreed with her. She did not tell me about taking anything to her friends to see. She said after tea, "I don't feel well." I said, "What is the matter?" She said she felt weak. I said would she have a drink of brandy or porter. She said, "Yes." I went and bought a bottle of porter and 1s. worth of brandy. Came home and she was in bed with the child. It was about 9 p.m. I opened the bottle in the bedroom, having asked her would she have brandy or porter. She said, "Porter." I got a glass and went to fill it with porter, half froth, which I gave her. She said, "Are you not going to have some?" I said, "Yes," and I did. I laid on the opposite side of the bed till 11 p.m. Before leaving I gave her a glass of milk and a few drops of brandy. I kissed her and said "Good night," and went to my work. I am very fond of the child. I often nurse it. I got home about 9 a.m. on Sunday. Went in the back way to my wife. She was asleep. I did not wake her, but went down stairs and lit the fire. I put the kettle on and then had a bath. I then heard the child cry. I went up to the bedroom and asked her how she felt. She said she slept well all night. I then said, "What would you like this morning?" She said, "I'll have a drink of porter; it done me good last night." I took a glass off a little table close to her bedside. Went into the bath-room and washed it out. Came back to the bedroom, picked up the bottle of porter, poured some into the glass. Seeing there was no head on it, I said, "It is flat and sour." I tasted it. She said, "Put a teaspoonful of sugar in it, George, and liven it up." I did not. I drank the porter myself. I said I would not give it to her as it was flat and sour and might make her sick. I did not carry it as she swore. [Shows how, in the ordinary way, by finger and thumb.] I was shaking it as I came in. There is no truth whatever in her statement that there was a white powder in it. I did not turn my back on her as I poured out the porter. I did not put the cork in the bottle on Saturday night. After the porter I said, "I'll give you a nice cup of hot tea." I went down stairs and prepared the teapot. I scalded it out, made the tea, made some toast, got a cup out of the dresser, emptied some milk out of a billy. It was scalded on board the steamer, as usual. I took the tea and toast up to her. She was just the same. She appeared to be the same as I left her before. She had complained before of having a headache. She said her head was aching when I brought the tea up. I poured some tea into the saucer, and put some pillows behind her to enable her to sit up. She then said, "Will you go and tell Mrs. Adye I want her?" I went and got her. Mrs. Adye went upstairs. I went into the dining-room and had my breakfast. Mrs. Adye came downstairs while I was at it. We had a conversation. On the Sunday I asked her to have a doctor. I did so because she could not keep anything on her stomach. It was at dinner time. She said, "No; I do not want a doctor, I will be all right in the morning." Through the day I gave her a drink of milk. About 12 p.m. she asked me to go and lie down and have a sleep. I was nursing the child all the morning. She said she would call me when she wanted me. She called "George" at 6 o'clock, and I got up and went to her. She was just about the same as in the morning—complaining of her head. She asked me to get her a cup of tea. I did so. I asked her if she would have an egg. She said "No," and asked for bread and butter, which I gave her. I left home at 9.45. Worked all night. On Monday morning, came home about 7.30 a.m. I went to her. She was in bed. I asked her was she any better. She said she felt better. I said, "Well, if you feel better, don't get up and worry yourself, I'll get you some breakfast," which I did as soon as I could. It consisted of a grilled loin chop, which I brought home specially for her, as she was very fond of it, bread and butter, and cup of tea, which she ate heartily. I then said, "I'll bring you up some water in a dish, and you can sit down in bed and wash baby," which I did. She got up and sat

sat in a chair with her boots off, and proceeded to wash the baby. I then said, "Why don't you put your boots and stockings on, instead of keeping your feet on the cold oilcloth?" She then dragged an old garment, and put her feet on it. I then went and had my own breakfast. After breakfast I came upstairs and was amusing the child, lying on the bed. She also on the bed, with her wrapper on. After a while I fell off to sleep. I got up between 12 and 1 o'clock. She woke me up, and said to give her a drink. I went downstairs, and gave her a drink of milk. She was lying down, but not complaining, except of her head, and I then went and purchased a new tin of cocoa next door. It was never opened till I opened it. This was on Monday, between 12 and 1 o'clock. I made her a cup of cocoa. She would not have anything to eat. I brought it to her. She drank half of it, and said she would not drink any more. Said she did not want any more. I drank the other half myself in her presence. I was lying on the bed, and was awake about an hour. She was, as usual, complaining of her head, but not out of bed. I woke at 3 o'clock, she asking me to rub her head with menthol. I said, "Why don't you have the doctor?" I was rubbing her head. She said, "No; the pain will go away by-and-bye." I did not see her retching on Monday up to 3 o'clock. She never said anything about vomiting on Monday up to 3 o'clock. I then lay on the bed, playing with the child. The milkman came at 5. I went and got the milk in a jug, brought it fresh to her, and gave her a drink of it. She drank near a glassful, and lay down on the bed. So did I. Half an hour after she started to throw the milk off her stomach, at 5:30, about. I got up off the bed, and said, "I'll stand this no longer; you'll have to have a doctor, and I'll go and get him." I went for him. I hurried to him, and I returned home at 6:30. I saw the doctor a little after 8 at the house. He saw her. He gave me a prescription. Between 6 and 8 she vomited a couple of times. I got it at Guise's. I kept saying to him, "Be as quick as you can." On getting home I got a tablespoon out of the dresser, took it and the medicine to the bed-room. She said, "George, give me a drink." I said, "I have got some medicine for you, old girl." She said, "Give me a drink first;" so I gave her a drink of lime-water and milk, as the doctor ordered. There was half a glassful altogether. She did not drink all of it. She was drinking fast. I said, "Don't drink it too quick." With that she left about a tablespoonful in the glass. I then went to the mantel, got the medicine and tablespoon. I gave the bottle a shake, and poured out a tablespoonful. I then went to her bedside and said, "Come on, old girl, take your medicine." She said, "Oh, wait a while, George; don't give it to me just yet." With that I poured the medicine from the spoon into the glass that she had the lime-water and milk out of. The reason was that I could not hold it steady, and as the doctor had ordered her lime-water and milk I thought it would not hurt her. I then picked up a teaspoon from the sugar basin, and carelessly stirred the spoon round in the medicine in the glass. The reason was that Guise told me to shake the bottle. I tasted the medicine. The smell was worse than the taste. [On it being observed that he tasted everything, he says I am in the habit of tasting all medicines.] There is no truth in the statement that I put a powder in the medicine. It is not true that I told her Dr. Newmarch told me to put a powder in the medicine. No mention was made of a powder that night. Mrs. Adye came to see her on Sunday morning. She said Mr. and Mrs. Gail were there on Sunday. I left home on Monday night at 11:20. I saw her before I left. I kissed her affectionately, and she me before leaving. I left a glass of milk and lime-water by her, and a stick for to knock with, and the baby's food. On Tuesday morning I got home at 7:30. I saw Mr. Weynton leaning over the fence. What Mrs. Weynton said is true. This was the first time I had heard poison mentioned. I went to my wife and said, "What is this I hear about a bottle you have been drinking out of with a white powder in the bottom?" (Weynton said, "What has your wife been drinking out of a bottle with a white powder in it?" He then said, "This poison." I said, "There is no bottle with a white powder that I know she has been drinking out of.") She said, "Oh, the doctor has the bottle; never mind about the bottle, give me a drink." I said, "Why did you not tell the doctor about that when he was here." She said, "Oh, never mind about that, the doctor knows all about the bottle." I had not seen Mrs. Seymour at this time. My wife seemed to me, from her conduct to me, just the same as any other ordinary day. On hearing about the bottle I summoned the doctor. I wanted to go, but she said "Don't leave me," and I sent Robertson. The doctor came. I was lying on the bed beside the wife crying when the doctor came. He asked her something that I did not hear, as I got up when he visited her. I was crying on account of hearing that she had been drinking poison. After he finished talking to her I then said, "Now tell the doctor all about this bottle you have been drinking out of with the white powder in it." The doctor said, "I'll look out for that; I'll look out for the bottle." I then told the doctor what was told to me that morning. He asked for a sheet of paper, which I got, and he wrote a prescription. I went downstairs, took off my heavy coat, and put a light one on. I was standing at the foot of the stairs waiting for him. I was crying to think of what had happened. The doctor said, "Oh, don't give way, Dean, there is no danger; but get that prescription made up." I went and got it made up. I went to sleep in a chair, and got the prescription and gave it to Mrs. Lee. I went to sleep. I got up at 4 o'clock. Wife called me. I left home at 11 o'clock. Returned home on Wednesday morning at 8 a.m. I left Mrs. Seymour in the house on Tuesday night. I went to see my wife. She was still ill. She was vomiting. On Wednesday I asked Mrs. Seymour what she had been having. Saw soda-water bottles. On the Thursday forenoon was asleep in the dining room. Doctor came and woke me up and asked me, "Dean, did you give your wife a powder in the medicine on Monday night?" I said, "No, doctor." He then showed me a packet of powders he had, and said, "Did you ever see these powders before?" [These are the powders referred to as immaterial.] I said, "No." He went upstairs. He called me up. He asked me in the presence of my wife, "Did you put a powder in the medicine on Monday night?" I said, "No." She said, "You did, George." I said, "How can you say that?" and with that I left the room. I forget whether I told the doctor how I gave it. I did not say, "You would hang a man." She did not say, "Why, George, you told me the doctor ordered the powder." On Thursday morning she said, "What made the medicine white?" I thought after the doctor had gone I would go and ask her why she said it. I said, "What makes you say I put a powder in the medicine." She said, "Because it was white." I then said, "Did she not see me put it into the glass which she drank the lime-water and milk out of?" She said, "No." I said, "You know you asked me for a drink as soon as I came home," to which she replied, "Yes." I said, "Did I not then want to give you the medicine, and did you not say, 'don't give it to me just yet?'" She said, "Yes." I said, "Did you not see me pour it into the glass which you had the lime-water and milk out of?" She said, "No; she did not notice that." Next day, Friday, the Sergeant arrested me. It is perfectly true what the Sergeant

Sergeant said as to reading the warrants. I have never purchased or used arsenic or strychnine. I don't know what is the quantity to give. I have never deposited a powder in any of her food. I know the tonic. I took some of it the first week in February. I took three doses. It brought back my appetite. I took it from her room to mine. One day at this time I was in the habit of bringing home $1\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of beef to make beef-tea. I asked her to have it. There was a basin of beef-tea this day. They said it was bitter. I was called up to my dinner by Mrs. Seymour. I went to see how my wife was. I saw a basin of beef-tea by the bed. I never had interfered with it. Her mother said to the wife, "Come and have a taste of the beef-tea." She started to give it to her. The wife took a spoonful and said she did not like it; it was bitter. Mrs. Seymour then tasted it and said it was all right; "There is nothing wrong with that." Previous to taking it the wife was eating chocolates. Mrs. Seymour said, "It must be the taste of the chocolates that makes the beef-tea taste nasty." I took a couple of spoonfuls of it at Mrs. Seymour's request and I found it was all right, but a little salty. I said "Why don't you drink some, Pet, it would do you good." She said, "No." I said, "Don't throw it away, I'll drink it for my supper before I go to work." Mrs. Seymour said, "Go and get your dinner, it will be cold." Mrs. Seymour said she threw it away and I did not drink it. As to the groats. It was a Sunday morning. I came home. Mrs. Seymour said wife had just had her breakfast. Saw her. She said she felt a little better. I had a bath, breakfast, a smoke, read Sunday Times. I went up about 10'30. The wife ill; she was not so well, and vomited a few times. I held the basin to her. She sat in my lap at her request. During this time Mrs. Seymour vomited. I then asked, "What is the cause of your being sick." She said she did not know. She had some groats for breakfast and Mrs. Seymour had some. They had their breakfast before I came home. I said, "Shall I get the doctor." They said, "No; we will be all right by-and-bye." I went to the doctor next day and paid him for her accouchement, and told him of their both being sick on Sunday. I got a prescription from him which I took home. I told him what was the matter, and said, "Can you give me anything for it." I put it down to chaff, her talking about the illegitimate children. We were on good terms. I have done what I could to beautify the home. We have many times chatted over the making of a new home. I have done all I could to render her happy.

Cross-examined:—I was in gaol on the 28th March, and saw my solicitor on that day in the hospital. I did not know that day that a charge of bigamy was to be made. I don't know that Mrs. Gail was in Meagher's office that night with two policemen. The clerk, sitting at the table, told me that Gail was going to be arrested. I said, "I know nothing about the divorce." He said we might get Gail—that Gail might be arrested. I thought Gail was divorced long ago. She was pretty well always on. I can't give any reason for her trying to poison herself, nor did I see anything in her conduct to lead me to think she would get a charge against me. I never heard about their characters till Meagher asked the question in the Court. He never told me of it. I was sitting by him in the Police Court. I know they were vomiting; not frequently—three or four times before dinner. I did not notice them purging. It is true what they say, except I was not there at dinner. I don't doubt the beef-tea was thrown away. I would have drunk it if it had been there. It was on Friday afternoon we had the quarrel. I was going out on the bicycle. She asked me to hold the baby. She said, "You never will hold the baby when I want you." The chaff about the illegitimate children was two or three times. The story about the tea is true as to my saying "Drink it whilst it is warm," and that she sent me for Mrs. Adye. I drank the porter that was flat and sour. Barring the position in which I held the glass and the powder, her account of it is true. I did not see her vomiting on Sunday. I heard her swear that immediately, or twenty minutes, after taking her breakfast, in which was a chop, she was vomiting incessantly. It is not true. She was all right till 12 or 1 o'clock, when I went and got the cocoa. I saw her drink it. Nobody could tamper with it. She could not put anything into it. After drinking the cocoa, she did not frequently vomit and purge. She seemed all right. To my belief she was all right. She did not vomit to my knowledge after the cocoa. I heard the doctor say she was suffering from acute arsenical poisoning that evening. She did not mention a pain in her stomach to me. I know nothing about her taking her nightgown off. She was on the closet that day. I can't say how often. I was in the house all day. Hansbach was downstairs on the sofa from breakfast to dinner time. It was Tuesday morning I told her she would have to tell the doctor about the water and the bottle. It was Thursday morning that the doctor spoke to me about the powder, and told me she said I had put one in the medicine. She said, "You know, George, you did." I can't say she said, "You know it is a falsehood." I did not say anything about my putting the medicine into the used glass by way of explanation. I never gave the explanation to Doctor Newmarch. I did not say, "Why did not you let me take it to the doctor." I did not think anything of her charging me with putting a powder into the medicine. I did for the moment. I know of no medicine glass. Mrs. Seymour told me on the Thursday after the doctor left that arsenic was found in the bottle, and that the police were coming. They came that night. I was the only person who cooked the food or handled it, or gave her the medicine. I thought it was doing her good. She did not vomit before I left. She told me on the Tuesday when I returned that she had been vomiting and purging. I sent for the doctor to see her, and ask him about the bottle. I know it was the police laid the information against me, not my wife. When the doctor said this is a very serious charge, I did not have any idea that it referred to me.

MARGARET CASSIN:—Single woman. I know prisoner and his wife. Since his marriage he has avoided me. I have seen him twice since his marriage. Once with his wife. Once in Oxford-street on his bicycle. His wife invited me to see her.

THOMAS SUMMERBELL:—Manager of the North Shore Ferry Company. Prisoner is master of one of the boats. Ten or eleven years in the employ. I think everything that is good of him.

In reply, Dr. NEWMARCH: On Tuesday I went at 8'15 to prisoner. He was not lying on the bed beside his wife, crying. He was not there at all. The statement that he said "Now tell the doctor all about the bottle that you have been drinking out of with a white powder in it," is not true. It is absolutely untrue. He never said that in his wife's presence. He never told me about the bottle on Tuesday. On Wednesday night I said, "What about this bottle and this charge of poisoning against you." I said it is a most serious charge, and asked him what foundation there was for it. He said "I know nothing about it, take any steps you can to discover the poison and who put it there." This was on the Wednesday night. I let him know distinctly that he was charged with putting poison into the bottle. He never gave me any explanation of the medicine looking milky. I never heard of it before to-day. On the Wednesday night he was crying when I visited her late, and he was on the bed, but there was no such conversation before me about the bottle.

By

By a Juror: Gail said, "I want you to test, I think there is poison in it." Mrs. Gail or Mrs. Seymour did not accuse prisoner. Gail said he thought Dean had put the poison in the bottle. Mrs. Dean told me on Tuesday that she thought prisoner had put poison in. I had got the bottle on Monday night, and I asked Mrs. Dean was there any foundation for it, as I could not take the statement of any one who left the bottle with me. It was after taking the medicine in which she said the powder was that she said she suspected him of putting poison in the bottle. Gail was reticent when he came and asked me to test the bottle. I said he must tell me all about it. He then told me it was a patient of mine I was attending. I said, "Who do you mean." He said "Mrs. Dean." He then said he thought that it was the husband poisoning the wife. I asked his reason for saying that. He said they did not live happily together. Lime-water is colourless, and has no white powder in it. Gail said Mrs. Dean left the bottle at my house. I knew Mrs. Dean had been to my house on Saturday night, and that she had been to the chemist's.

WILLIAM MICHAEL DOHERTY: I analysed the lime-water. It had no poison of any kind in it. I examined everything that came out of the place which we received from the Police, and found no poison. I got another bottle of syrup from Mrs. Adye. There was no poison in it.

LOUISA MURPHY: I am sister to Gail. We lived together at West Maitland till up to ten years ago. He was then about . . . There is no foundation for any suggestion that he was mixed up in a poisoning case. He then went to live with my sister. I never heard of his being mixed up in a poisoning case.

Mrs. DEAN: I never accused prisoner of having to support illegitimate children. On the Tuesday he was not in the room, when the doctor came, crying. Such a conversation as prisoner swore to as to his saying "Now tell the doctor all about the bottle that you have been drinking out of with a white powder in it," never took place. No such conversation took place, as he said did, with me after the doctor left in which he suggested that the white lark in the medicine was caused by his putting the medicine into the tumbler that I had drunk lime-water and milk out of (see page 13). [Conversation as stated by prisoner read to her.] I had a drink of lime-water and milk that night before I took the medicine, but I left none in the glass. It is quite untrue that he drank the glass of porter off which I refused there and then. I thought I was being poisoned when I took the bottle to Gail. I only had a cup of tea on the Sunday. I thought it was suspicious about the bottle, but I had no real conviction that I was being poisoned. It was just mentioned—as perhaps. I did not accuse my husband then. It was just said, "Perhaps it is poison." I did not suspect my husband then. My suspicion was aroused against my husband on Sunday morning after the incident of the porter and then the tea. I did not alter my manner to my husband, as I did not know positively that there was poison till the doctor told me on Thursday afternoon. He said he would drink the beef-tea before he went to bed. I did not get out of bed from the Saturday night, except on Monday morning, from the purging. He was kind to the child.

Mr. Meagher addresses Jury 7'45.

Mrs. DEAN, at the request of Juror, then shows how much syrup she put in the glass.

Hamlet says the quantity is a little over 2 ounces. That would not be a fatal dose, but a dangerous dose. There would be half a grain of arsenic in a tablespoonful of tonic. The strychnine would modify the arsenic, to which it is antagonistic, and would counteract it. A series of doses, though not one is fatal, may kill.

Mr. Want to Jury 10'35; finishes at 11'50, and Court adjourns.

6TH APRIL.

Mrs. DEAN (by Juror): I did not see him offer the medicine to me in a spoon. He did not offer it to me in the spoon. I did not see him pouring it into the tumbler. When he came back from the chemist's he placed the medicine on the mantel. I did not know that he was measuring the medicine till he brought it to the bedside and asked me to take it. I then noticed that he had a spoon in the tumbler, pressing the back of it against the glass, as though he were trying to mix something by stirring it and pressing the back of the spoon against the side of the glass. He then asked me to drink it. It was then I noticed the milky appearance of the medicine, and asked prisoner the cause of it. He replied that it was a powder that the doctor had ordered to go with the medicine, and I drank it. This was the very first time the medicine was offered to me. Between five or ten minutes elapsed from the time of his putting the medicine on the mantelpiece and his giving it to me. No one was in the room whilst the medicine was on the mantelpiece. I did not get out of bed. He did give me a drink of lime-water and milk, but whether before he went or after he returned with the medicine I cannot say. I drank it. I did not refuse the medicine at first, but took it at once on his offering it to me. His account is not correct.

PRISONER (by Jury): Directly I arrived home with the medicine I proceeded to the kitchen and got a tablespoon from the drawer in the dresser. I then went upstairs to her bedroom, and when I got up she asked me for a drink. I said "I have some medicine for you, old girl." She said "Give me a drink first of lime-water," which I did. After giving it to her she started to drink it quickly. I said "Don't drink it too quick." She drank nearly all, leaving a table-spoonful in the glass. I put it on the little table by the bedside. I then went to the mantelpiece and got the spoon and medicine from the mantelpiece, where I had laid it when I came up. I took the bottle and gave it a shake and got the spoon, poured out a spoonful of the medicine, went over to the bedside and said, "Come old girl, take your medicine." I offered it to her in the spoon. She said, "Wait a few minutes." I then took the glass off the table out of which I had previously given the lime-water and milk in and poured the medicine into the glass. There was a small quantity of lime-water and milk in it. I then picked up a teaspoon on the table, and I just carelessly stirred the medicine round, after stirring it awhile she turned over and rose to take the medicine. I was in the room from the time I brought the medicine home till I gave it to her in the glass. It was about five minutes from the time I brought it to the room till I gave it to her. She appeared to suffer when I was offering the medicine to her in the spoon. I can't say whether she saw me offer it to her in the spoon. She was facing out towards me in the bed. There was nothing to prevent her seeing it. I waited till she drank it. I had my hand behind her whilst she drank it. I never kept away from the place during her confinement. I used not to stop talking, as her mother said she was to be kept quiet.

I sum up.

Questions for Jury :

- I. Did she take poison somehow? Mr. Meagher admits that she did.
- II. Was it by accident or design? Repeated illnesses after the groats, the syrup, the cocoa, and the medicine. No poison used in the house for any innocent domestic purpose.
- III. If the poison was taken by design, who administered it? There were only three people in the house—the prisoner, the mother, and the daughter. The defence set up by Mr. Meagher is that the poisoning is the work of “a trinity of conspirators”—Mrs. Dean, her mother, and Mr. Gail.
- (a) Is there evidence of such conspiracy?
- (b) Is the defence that the wife poisoned herself to get up a false charge against her husband a reasonable explanation of the circumstances of the case?

Jury retire 12-25, and return at 9-55 with a verdict of guilty on the first count, with a strong recommendation to mercy on account of the prisoner's previous character.

Sentence—Death.

Depositions.

Stephen James Cotter, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am an inspector of police, stationed at North Sydney; I laid the information in the case before the Court; it refers to the prisoner; on Tuesday, the 5th instant, I found the bottle produced, marked "Dean, No. 1," with a letter from Dr. Newmarch, in my room at the police station; it was sealed and tied on the following morning, Wednesday, the 6th instant; I showed the bottle, in the state I received it, to Dr. Newmarch, at his surgery; I then took it over to the Government Laboratory, and delivered it to Mr. Doherty, assistant to the Government Analyst; on Thursday afternoon, the 7th instant, Dr. Newmarch showed me, at his surgery, several powders with a paper round them, with the words "As before"; the doctor enclosed them, in my presence, in the wrapper marked "Dean, No. 2," and gave them to me; on the same Thursday afternoon, the 7th instant, I sent Constable Chivers to Dr. Newmarch's surgery; Chivers shortly afterwards, at the police station, gave me the medicine bottle produced, marked "Dean, No. 3," containing a liquid; on Thursday evening, the 7th, Sergeant Brennan gave to me the tumbler produced, which contained a liquid; I locked the tumbler and its contents in my safe for the night, and next morning tied and sealed it in the state in which I received it, and gave it at the police-station to Sergeant Brennan; I also gave Sergeant Brennan the bottle, "Dean, No. 3," and the powders, "Dean No. 2," for the purpose of delivery to the Analyst; on Friday, the 8th instant, after the arrest of the prisoner, Sergeant Brennan handed to me two prescriptions marked "Exhibits A and B"; on Sunday, the 10th instant, Constable Chivers, in my room at the police-station, took from a locked drawer in my room of which he had the key the bottle produced, marked "Dean, No. 4," with its contents, and also a parcel marked "Dean, No. 5," produced; on Monday, the 11th instant, I gave the bottle marked "Dean, No. 4" and the parcel "No. 5" to Sergeant Brennan, for the purpose of delivery to the Government Analyst; on Tuesday, the 12th instant, I received from Constable Chivers in my room, taken from a locked drawer, a small bottle containing a white liquid, which was delivered by me to the Government Analyst; on Sunday, the 10th instant, I was at the prisoner's residence; several articles, bottles, &c., were taken possession of by Sergeant Brennan; they have since been handed to the Government Analyst.

JAMES GILES, S.M.

Richard Brennan, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am a sergeant of police, stationed at North Sydney; about 6 p.m. on the 8th instant I went to the prisoner's house in Miller-street, North Sydney, with Constable Wearn; I saw the prisoner in bed in an upstairs back room; I said, "Wake up George"; prisoner sat up in bed; I said I have two warrants for your arrest; prisoner said "Yes"; I said I will read them to you; I read the warrant produced for the charge on the 2nd March; prisoner replied, "Pretty strong that; I suppose I will have to go and prove my innocence"; I then cautioned the accused in the usual way, and said, "You told me last night that you gave tea and toast to your wife on Sunday evening and morning"; prisoner said "Yes"; I said, "Were the vessels you gave the tea and toast out of clean?" prisoner said, "Yes, thoroughly clean; I scalded the teapot before making the tea, and I got a clean cup and saucer off the dresser"; I said, "The tea which your wife says you gave her on Sunday morning, arsenic has been found in it"; prisoner said, "Well, that's mysterious; I had no knowledge of poison being in the house; I did not wash the cup and saucer out, the wife must have washed them up; the first I heard of poison being in the house was on Tuesday morning last; Mr. Weynton, who lives next door, asked me what about the poison that was found in the bottle, and Mrs. Seymour told me yesterday that the police were coming up"; prisoner then said, "Did you see the powders that Dr. Newmarch showed me yesterday?" I said I saw a packet sealed up, but I did not see the powders; prisoner said, "Did you see the writing on the powders?" I said, "No"; prisoner said, "I would like you to trace that writing"; I then searched prisoner's room and clothing; after searching prisoner's room I took him from room to room searching; I took prisoner to his wife's room; prisoner's wife was there in bed; prisoner said to his wife, "Do you want me to go?" prisoner's wife said, "If you are innocent, you had better go and prove your innocence"; prisoner said, "But I am innocent"; I found nothing in the prisoner's residence which appeared to me to be like arsenic; I took two small boxes, one containing pills, and one a bottle containing a brown liquid; these are now in the hands of the Government Analyst; before I took the prisoner to his wife's room prisoner said, "I gave my wife some lime-water and milk and a few drops of brandy on the Monday night, and I gave her the medicine in the same glass shortly afterwards, and that is how the medicine had a milky appearance"; I took the prisoner to the police station and locked him up; on the night of the 7th, before prisoner's arrest, I went to his house and saw Mrs. Dean and her mother, Mrs. Seymour; Mrs. Dean was in bed; about five minutes after I got there Dean came in and spoke to his wife, and then went out to a back room; the glass containing liquid [produced] was given to me by Mrs. Seymour in Mrs. Dean's presence; it was taken from under the

the chest-of-drawers; I handed the glass and its contents over to Mr. Doherty, at the laboratory, Sydney, in the state that I received it; after I took the glass from Mrs. Seymour I went into the prisoner's room, and I said, "How do you get your water?" Prisoner said, "From the Sydney Water Supply, from a tap;" I said, "The reason I ask that question is in consequence of your wife's illness; I thought if you get water from a tank that poison might get into it accidentally;" prisoner said, "There is no poison in the house; the first I heard of my wife's illness was on Saturday night last, and I gave her tea and toast on Sunday morning, also on Sunday evening; the case seems mysterious to me;" I produce an empty tumbler which I took possession of the night of the arrest; it is not the tumbler that contained the tea; Mrs. Seymour gave me this tumbler and told me something; it was given to me in the kitchen; the tumbler is clean; the bottle marked "Dean No. 3" I received from Mr. Cotter; also the powders "Dean No. 2;" I handed them to the Assistant Government Analyst; this was on Friday, the 8th instant; on the 11th instant, the bottle marked "Dean No. 4," and the night-dress produced, I handed over to Mr. Doherty, the Assistant Government Analyst; on Sunday, the 10th instant, I took possession of five bottles at the accused's residence, in the presence of Mr. Cotter, and with three other bottles and some pills I handed over the lot to the Government Analyst on the 15th instant; one bottle contained lemon syrup, which I received from Bessie Adey.

To Mr. Meagher: I remember the prisoner asking me to clear up the writing on the powders; I found the writing to be the writing of Arthur Gale Street, the Friendly Society's Dispensary, North Sydney; I could not get the date; I have not brought Street to the prisoner; only a member of the society can get medicine there; I visited the prisoner's house once before the arrest; Mrs. Seymour and Mrs. Gale were there; I have known prisoner as master on the night ferry; I have never heard anything against his character; prisoner has been in the ferry service about eleven years; the prisoner bears a high character.

 JAMES GILES, S.M.

Mary Dean, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am the wife of the prisoner, and I live in Miller-street, North Sydney; I have been married to the prisoner twelve months; I was married in March, 1894; the night-dress produced is my property; I put it on clean on Sunday morning, the 3rd March instant; I ceased to wear it on Monday morning, the 4th; it was stained by me during my illness; it was taken off on the morning of the 4th and put in the clothes basket; my mother found it in the basket and brought it to me, and asked if it was my night-dress; it was then in the same state as when it was taken off; Dr. Newmarch took the night-dress from my room in my presence on the 6th May; my mother got it from the basket; Dr. Newmarch took it on the 7th instant; I know the bottle marked "Dean No. 3," a tonic; Dr. Newmarch took this bottle from my house on Wednesday or Thursday the 6th or 7th instant; on the 7th instant, Sergeant Brennan took from my house the tumbler containing tea; on the 8th, Dr. Newmarch took the bottle marked "Dean No. 4" from my room; it contains urine of mine; on the 8th, Sergeant Brennan got the empty tumbler produced from my house on Friday; it is the tumbler out of which I drank some lemon syrup; I know it because it is the only one in the house of that kind; the doctor also got a bottle of breast milk from me; I have been living with my husband for the last six months; my mother was there during my confinement; was attended by Dr. Newmarch and my mother; my mother left when the child was a month old; my mother did not return to the house after this until the 4th March; there was no adult inmate living in the house from January to the 4th March but the prisoner and myself; I have never had any quarrels with my neighbours; I have not had much to do with them; I was at Surry Hills before I was married; I lived first after marriage at Mosman's Bay; on the 25th February I bought the bottle marked "Dean No. 1" from Mrs. Adey, a grocer in Miller-street; it then contained lemon syrup; I brought it home, and Miss Adey came home with me; we opened the bottle; it was sealed and capped, and Miss Adey had the first drink; then I had a drink; I suffered no ill effects from that drink, nor did Miss Adey; I continued drinking the syrup up to Friday, the 1st March, and inclusive of that day; I did not suffer in any way from the drinking; on the Friday, the 1st March, I had some words with my husband; it was over the baby; I asked prisoner to mind the baby, but he refused, and said, "I have no time—I am going out"; my husband is at home in the day time; my husband complained about the house and the child not being clean; before this my husband had said something about Miss Cassin; I said, "Maggie Cassin is the girl you should have married; prisoner said, "that is the girl I ought to have married, and that is the girl I will marry as soon as I get free from you"; before and after the birth of my child the prisoner asked me to leave the house; prisoner said, "I am not the father of the child"; prisoner did not beat me, but he treated me unkindly; prisoner kept me without money, but he supplied the house with what was necessary; prisoner said he had met Miss Cassin; he just mentioned it in course of conversation; we were on unfriendly terms before my confinement; the child was born on the 26th December, 1894; I know of no reason why the prisoner should have said the child was not his; prisoner sulked a week for many a time; I never had poison in the house; my husband did not sleep with me, he occupied a separate bedroom; my husband was away at nights; I never knew of prisoner or my mother having poison in the house; on Friday, the 1st March, I went to bed in my usual state of health; the syrup was kept on the sideboard up to Friday morning the 1st March, it was then removed to the kitchen by myself; on Saturday morning, the 2nd March, I came down stairs to the kitchen; I then prepared a glass of lemon-syrup from the bottle in the kitchen, and the water from the tap; I noticed that the tumbler was clean before I put the syrup in; I then made a drink and swallowed three or four mouthfuls; I then noticed a most bitter taste. I then recognised the same taste as what I had tasted in some beef tea that I had some five weeks before; I then lit the fire and prepared the breakfast; prisoner came in while I was getting breakfast; we had breakfast together; after breakfast I started vomiting; I continued to vomit and my head was very bad; the prisoner did not give me anything; at lunch time on the same day I made some more syrup from the same bottle; I tasted it, it had a bitter taste so I threw it down the sink; I then took the bottle to Mrs. Adey; she tasted the syrup and said something to a Mrs. Walker who was there; Mrs. Walker then tasted the syrup; I left the bottle at Mrs. Adey's for 10 minutes and went home to get my baby; baby ; I then got the bottle again, it had a small quantity of syrup in it ; I took the bottle to Mr. Smith, a chemist in West-street ; he told me something and returned the syrup ; I then took the syrup to Mrs. Gail's ; we had a conversation ; I then took the bottle of syrup to Dr. Newmarch ; Dr. Newmarch was not there ; I took it back to Mrs. Gail's and left it there ; I did not see it again until to-day ; on Saturday, the 2nd, I went to bed after tea ; between 9 and 10 on Saturday my husband gave me some porter ; he then returned to work ; I suffered in no way from this ; on the 3rd instant my husband gave me some porter in the morning ; prisoner came home a little after 9 o'clock on the Sunday morning ; prisoner came into the bedroom and said, "How do you feel this morning?" I said, "I have suffered severely from pains in my head" ; prisoner said, "What would you like to drink—either some brandy or some porter?" I said, "Give me what you think will do me the most good" ; prisoner said, "You had better have some porter" ; prisoner took a tumbler into the bath-room, and washed it ; he returned to my room ; I noticed he had the tumbler in the palm of his hand, with his fingers round it ; I raised myself in bed, and noticed something white in the bottom of the tumbler ; it looked like a powder ; prisoner turned his back to me, and put some of the porter into the glass ; there was no porter in it when I noticed the powder ; prisoner then smelt it ; I said, "What is the matter with it?" ; prisoner said, "It has turned sour ;" I said, "Put a spoonful of sugar into it—it will freshen it up" ; prisoner said, "No, it may make you sick" ; prisoner then threw it over the balcony, and took the glass downstairs ; at about 10 o'clock in the morning of the 3rd instant I was in bed ; prisoner came into the room, and brought a cup and saucer in with him ; the cup contained tea ; he poured some of it into the saucer, and said "Drink this" ; I noticed something white clinging to the saucer round the edge of the tea ; I asked what it was ; prisoner said, "It is the cream off the milk" ; I put it to my lips ; prisoner said, "Drink it while it is hot" ; I asked prisoner to go for Mrs. Adey ; prisoner said, "Drink the tea before I go" ; I said "No" ; prisoner then went for Mrs. Adey ; as soon as I heard the gate click I got out of bed ; I took a tumbler off the washstand ; I wiped it with a towel, to make it clean ; I then put the tea into the tumbler, and placed it under the chest of drawers ; Mrs. Adey returned with my husband ; I put two-thirds of the tea in the tumbler in the glass, but left what was in the bottom of the cup ; after Mrs. Adey came, I said something to her ; my husband came upstairs, and said, "Did you drink the tea?" ; I said "Yes" ; prisoner said, "It will do you good" ; prisoner then took the cup and saucer out of the room ; on the 4th instant Dr. Newmarch saw me, and prescribed for me ; on the Monday night, the 4th instant, about 10 o'clock, prisoner brought some medicine to the bedside, and said, "This is your medicine ; drink it" ; it was in a tumbler, and looked milky ; prisoner brought it into the room, in the tumbler ; the top looked like curdled milk ; I said, "What is that?" ; prisoner, "It is a powder that was ordered to be put into the medicine" ; prisoner had a spoon in the tumbler, pressing the back of it against the glass trying to press the stuff on the top ; I drank the medicine ; prisoner then gave me a spoonful of sugar and went off to his work ; after taking the medicine I became worse, and I vomited and purged every ten minutes through the night ; prisoner did not speak to me for a week before my confinement.

 JAMES GILES, S.M.

Prisoner remanded to Thursday next, the 21st instant, at the request of attorney for the prisoner.
 JAMES GILES, S.M.

Court-house, North Sydney, 19th March, 1894.

Mary Dean, recalled, and duly sworn, on oath, states:—On Tuesday, the 5th instant, I had a conversation with prisoner and Dr. Newmarch ; I had told the doctor something before this ; Dr. Newmarch said, "Did you put a powder in your wife's medicine?" prisoner replied, "No" ; I said, "You gave me a powder in the medicine" ; prisoner said, "No, I did not" ; I said, "Did you not say the doctor had ordered a powder in the medicine?" prisoner replied, "No, I did not" ; I was taking medicine during my confinement to which a powder had to be added, prescribed by Dr. Newmarch ; on Saturday, the 2nd instant, the doors of the house were closed when I got up ; I had coffee and tea stored in the kitchen ; they are still used in the house ; no one has suffered from using them ; the powders [produced], marked "as before," were found on the outside doorstep by me ; about three weeks before my illness, on the 2nd instant, a man named Jenkins was there with a party of friends of Mrs. Gail ; my mother was not there ; the powders were on the doorstep when I came back from Miss Adey's ; I took them in and examined them ; I did not notice the powders on the step when I passed out ; it was a moonlight night ; my mother attended me up to Tuesday night, the 5th instant ; I was taking medicine prescribed by Dr. Newmarch ; my mother arrived at 12 o'clock on the Monday night, and left on the Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock ; the prisoner gave me my medicine while my mother was away ; my mother returned on the evening of the 5th instant ; I have improved in health since Tuesday night ; my medicine is kept in my bedroom ; I mean since my confinement ; one bottle was kept on my husband's table in another room—the bottle marked "Dean No. 3" ; he said he was taking the medicine ; I asked prisoner what the medicine was doing there ; prisoner replied, "I am taking the medicine, as I have no appetite ;" I have not been subject to attacks of illness, except about three weeks after my confinement ; I then had my mother attending me ; she was attacked the same as me after taking some groats ; she was sick after the groats ; the prisoner was in the house at this time ; there was no other occasion on which the doctor attended me for such an illness ; the same bitter taste I recognised in the syrup I tasted in the beef-tea ; my mother brought me the beef-tea upstairs ; prisoner was there ; this was about 11 o'clock in the forenoon ; my mother said, "Drink this, it is beautiful" ; I put a spoon into the tea and tasted it ; I said, "I cannot drink it on account of a bitter taste" ; my mother said, "I tasted it down stairs, and it was all right" ; my mother then tasted it, and said, "It is most bitter ; it must have been a gall in the meat ; it did not taste like this when I tasted it downstairs" ; my mother asked the prisoner to taste it ; prisoner tasted it, and said, "It's all right" ; prisoner then said, "It is all right, drink it" ; I did not drink it ; my mother told prisoner she was going to throw it away ; on the 5th instant, in the morning, prisoner was in my bedroom, and said, "Mrs. Weynton has spoken to me about poison being in the syrup-bottle" ; I said I did not know of any poison being in the bottle ; I said, "The bottle is at Dr. Newmarch's" ; prisoner said "Why did you not let me take take the bottle to Dr. Newmarch?" I said it was a pity to wake him; I did not have the powders when I left the house; they were not in my possession before I left the house; I found them when I returned with Miss Adey.

By Mr. Meagher: I first knew Dr. Newmarch took the bottle on the 4th instant; my mother told me at half-past 12 o'clock on the 4th instant; I gave the empty glass up on the Friday; I told my mother it was there on the Wednesday; my mother took the glass out and examined it; Mr. Gail examined it the same time as my mother; the glass was under the chest of drawers for three days; my mother lives at Brunswick Cottage, M'Mahon's Point; Gails live about a mile away; the prisoner leaves for work about a quarter to 11 o'clock at night generally; my mother arrived unexpectedly; I heard she was at Gail's place at 9 o'clock on Monday night; three hours after this she came to the house; while living at Mosman's prisoner said that my mother must leave the house; after this my husband made her leave the house; my mother attended me during my confinement, and after for a month; prisoner came home after 7 o'clock on the Monday morning; I first heard of poison from Dr. Newmarch, on the 7th instant; on the Monday I told my mother about the powder in the porter, tea, and medicine; I told her about the porter; I did not tell my mother that I had preserved the tea; when I told my mother of the powder in the tea, porter, and medicine my mother did not ask whether I had preserved any of those liquids; it excited my attention when I saw prisoner with his fingers round the glass; I wanted to get prisoner away in order that I might preserve the tea; I thought it was of some importance; although I preserved the tea I did not tell my mother where it was; Dr. Newmarch saw me on Monday night and asked me questions about vomiting, and asked about the nightdress; he did not ask what I had eaten; the doctor asked for an explanation of my vomiting on the Tuesday; I did not then refer him to the tea under the chest of drawers; the doctor saw me on the Wednesday twice; I did not then draw his attention to the tea; I saw my lemon syrup before the prisoner came home; from the time I got up to the arrival of the prisoner I had not been outside the house; I know Mrs. Thompson; I know I was not at Mrs. Thompson's house on the 2nd March; I know I was not outside; I now remember I was in Mrs. Thompson's on the Saturday, the 2nd instant, therefore I must have been outside before prisoner came home; on the 2nd March the prisoner suggested getting the doctor; on the following day the prisoner also suggested getting the doctor; my husband was going to his duty all the time; I remember prisoner making me a cup of cocoa; prisoner helped to boil the kettle; prisoner said on the Monday, "You must and will have the doctor"; I had been refusing to see the doctor; prisoner then left the house and got the doctor; the doctor saw me first on the 4th instant; from the time my mother came until the prisoner was arrested I never told prisoner of the bottles or powder; prisoner was kind to me during my illness; I returned to the house with Miss Adey before the prisoner left; I asked all in the room who dropped the powders; I put them in the sideboard and then after into my pocket; I am sure the powders were the same; I placed the powders in my pocket as I did not wish to leave them on the sideboard; I wished to take them upstairs; the powders were found in my pocket by my mother; the dress was not worn after the party; I never remember prisoner holding a glass with his fingers round before; prisoner was holding the glass up; it was not held down for me to take; prisoner turned his back to put the porter in; the bottle had been previously opened; I have no doubt I saw powder in the glass; I told prisoner to put sugar into it to freshen it up; I do not know that I had any reason for asking for the sugar to be put in; I saw prisoner bring the medicine in the glass; I was in a weak condition; the bottle of medicine was brown; when poured into the glass it had a white colour; my husband came in breathless from the chemist and put the medicine in my room; I did not see the bottle until next day; a little table was near the bed; bottles and tumblers were on the table; I had been drinking lime-water; prisoner did not say that the white was from a few drops of lime-water being in the tumbler; when the medicine was poured out it had a white substance on the top like curdled milk; I had never seen this before in medicine; I had no idea that my husband was attempting to poison me; it never struck me that the white substance was poison; I did not ask my husband about it because I wanted to see if prisoner would ask me to take it; I intended to ask about the powder afterwards; prisoner said it was sour; I did not say I could see white stuff in it; the tea had a lot of little white lumps floating on the top of the tea round the edge of the saucer; I knew there was no business to be powder in the glass; I thought in my own mind that I was being poisoned, but I did not tell anyone; I did not think seriously of what Mr. Meagher said when I said that I did not think anyone was trying to poison me; when I saw the white round the saucer my suspicion was stronger; I was in bed; I forgot about the tea under the drawers, and therefore did not mention it to anyone; I knew Dr. Newmarch had a bottle on the Tuesday to analyse for poison; I did not mention the cup of tea, as I forgot it; the doctor did not ask on Monday what I had been eating; I did not regard the medicine as suspicious, although I suspected my husband was trying to poison me; I had never seen medicine like it before; I believed what prisoner said when he said the powder had to be put in; the powder had a most bitter taste; the taste remained about two days; it remained in my mouth Saturday and Sunday; the medicine was so bitter that I could feel it in my mouth all day Tuesday; a neighbour named Mrs. Weynton was not there when I spoke to the doctor; I remember on Tuesday morning prisoner coming to my room and saying, "What is this I hear about a bottle?" prisoner did not put the question to me, why did you not tell me about the bottle? I did not say to prisoner there was poison in the bottle; I said the doctor had it; I think Mrs. Thompson and the doctor were in the room when I spoke to prisoner; on Tuesday the doctor was not present when prisoner asked about the bottle; upon Saturday, the 2nd March, was the first time I formed an opinion that prisoner was trying to poison me; it was never suggested to me before the 2nd March that prisoner was doing anything wrong to me; my mother never suggested it; before the 2nd March my mother never gave me advice to go to a doctor or chemist; my mother never told me if I ate or drank anything that made me ill to take some of it to a chemist to be analysed; I have been married twelve months; the date of prisoner's arrest was the anniversary date of the marriage; I have never seen prisoner in company with Miss Cassin; prisoner told me that the only time he met Miss Cassin was when he was riding his bicycle once in Oxford-street; prisoner said it was in December last that he met Miss Cassin; I had met Miss Cassin before my marriage, we were on friendly terms; I have spoken to Miss Cassin since my marriage, we are still on friendly terms; I have not tried to avoid Miss Cassin in any way; I have never asked Miss Cassin over to see a sideboard made by the prisoner; I know Mrs. Hughes; I went there to show Miss Cassin the child; she saw the child and kissed it; this would be about the beginning of February; I told Miss Cassin about the sideboard, but I did not invite her ner over; on a Sunday I went to see Miss Cassin; I knew Miss Cassin was there; I asked prisoner to come over with me, but he refused, saying he was tired and preferred to sleep; the prisoner, during the twelve months of our married life, has never raised his hand to me; some of the furniture had been given to me by my mother; my mother was excited when prisoner asked her to leave the house; she did not say she was being put out of her own home; I don't think my mother saw the prisoner when she left the house; I remember fainting in my mother's arms when she had a quarrel with the prisoner; I knew my mother was distressed by her language; I have never seen prisoner the worse for drink; prisoner paid the grocer's and baker's bills; I got the money from prisoner often to pay these bills; prisoner has always taken an interest in his home; for four months I received £2 a week; I had plenty to eat then; prisoner has tried to get an advance on land to build a house; prisoner paid for fencing some land; I did not know he had bought this land; I thought he was paying it off; my husband has asked me to be saving in order that we might build a house; I remember prisoner saying, "Well, old girl, I wonder if I could get an advance of timber from Mr. Eaton, the timber-merchant"; prisoner fenced the land himself after his night-work; he paid £6 15s. for the material; prisoner said he paid £3 10s. for the material to make the sideboard; I know prisoner wrote to Mr. Lloyd about getting timber for the house; I opened the correspondence with Mr. Eaton and gave it to prisoner; there was no trouble about my opening these notes. [Mr. Eaton's letters now put in by Mr. Meagher, Exhibits C & D.] I had an insurance on my life; I made no will in the prisoner's favour; prisoner never asked me to do so; prisoner would not be a penny better off if I died to-day; I was insured before marriage; before marriage I sent my insurance papers to the prisoner; prisoner suggested not to pay the premiums; since then prisoner has never suggested to me to insure my life; I have never seen prisoner in company with Miss Cassin.

To Bench: On Sunday, the 3rd, prisoner gave me the tea; I had no reason for wiping the glass except that I thought it might be dusty.

To Police: My mother left at half-past 5 to go home and get breakfast, not to avoid the prisoner; I was at Mrs. Thompson's place a very short time; my husband has frequently suggested that we should part; my husband has been kind to the child; the house was locked at night; I was always up to let my husband in; my back door was sometimes unlocked at night; I had no knowledge that my mother was coming that night.

To Mr. Meagher: I had a conversation with a reporter and gave a long statement; I noticed a mistake when I read the report; I did not send and say it was incorrect.

To Bench: Prisoner put the bottle of porter behind the door; it had been opened the night before.

JAMES GILES, S.M.

Bernard James Newmarch, being duly sworn, on oath states:—I am a legally qualified medical practitioner, living at North Sydney; I know the prisoner's wife; she has been under my care since the 26th December last, up to the present time; I first saw the bottle marked "Dean No. 1" on the 4th March; I received it from Mr. Gail; I sealed it and handed it to the police; the powders marked "Dean No. 2" I received from Mrs. Dean on the 7th March; I sealed and handed them to Inspector Cotter on the same day I received them; they were wrapped in a paper with the words on it "as before"; the bottle "Dean No. 3" I also received from Mrs. Dean, and handed to Constable Chivers on the 7th March; the bottle "Dean No. 4" was given to me by Mrs. Dean as a bottle containing urin; I gave it to Chivers on the 7th instant; I received the night-dress produced from Mrs. Dean; I took it out of a back room; it contains stains; I gave it to Constable Chivers; I saw Mrs. Dean wearing a night-dress like the one produced; on Monday, the 4th March, at about 6.30, I was called by the prisoner to see his wife; I visited her about 8.10 p.m.; I called as soon as I could; Mrs. Dean was pale, her skin was moist, and her tongue was clean; she stated she had vomited everything she had taken, and purged; the stomach region was tender, pulse regular, good volume; I prescribed, and gave strict instruction as to diet; the prescription produced marked Exhibit A is the prescription I gave; in January I gave the prescription produced, marked Exhibit B; I saw Mrs. Dean on March the 5th at the request of the prisoner; prisoner seemed very anxious I should go there as soon as possible; vomiting had been incessant, but her general condition was not worse; I found my instructions had not been carried out; I tried to obtain some vomit, but I could not; the general symptoms; her tongue was clean, but her eyes were red; on Wednesday I went to the prisoner's wife in the morning, and in the evening prisoner left a message for me to come when I got home; this was on the 6th instant; Mrs. Dean was better when I saw her in the evening; on the 6th instant I had a conversation with the prisoner; I spoke about the bottle and a charge of poison; prisoner asked me to take any steps about the poison, and try and find out how it was administered; a man named Gail brought the bottle "Dean No. 1" to me on the 7th instant; on the Wednesday Mrs. Dean got better and continued to do so; Mrs. Dean and her mother on the 7th instant, at Mrs. Dean's house, had a conversation with me about a powder; I went downstairs and woke up the prisoner and brought him up to the room; I said to prisoner, "Did you put a powder in the medicine on Monday when you gave it to your wife?" your wife accused you of doing so; prisoner replied, "You know I did not"; no powder was to be taken with the medicine; on Sunday after Mrs. Dean's confinement, December the 30th, I attended both Mrs. Dean and Mrs. Seymour for an attack of vomiting and purging; on January the 14th prisoner came to my house and asked me for a prescription for his wife because she was attacked as before; I prescribed, but did not see them; the symptoms are compatible with arsenical poisoning; the taste of strychnine is bitter; arsenious acid is easily obtained, and is made more soluble in hot liquid; from half a grain to three grains of arsenic would be a fatal dose in ordinary cases; if put in tea arsenic would run in white little round lumps.

To Mr. Meagher: When prisoner came for me he presented the appearance of a man anxious and distressed at the illness of his wife; I don't remember anyone saying, "Dr. Newmarch ordered a powder to be put in the medicine," but Mrs. Dean did state to me that she thought a powder was to go with the medicine medicine the same as the first ; I don't remember the conversation about Mrs. Dean saying to prisoner that the doctor had ordered a powder to be put in the medicine ; arsenic is tasteless ; I do not consider the bitter taste in the syrup would be caused by arsenic ; if strychnine was in the liquid it would be bitter.

B. J. NEWMARCH.

William Mogford Hamlet, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am the Government Analyst; on the 6th March instant I received from Inspector Cotter a bottle properly sealed, and labelled "Eastern, Roberts and Agnew, Camperdown, lemon syrup"; the second label is "Dean No. 1, March 5th, 1895,"; the capacity of the bottle is 24 fluid ounces; it contained a clear liquid, lemonade amounting to 2½ fluid ounces; there was a dense white substance at the bottom of the bottle; the analysis of the contents was made, and one and three-quarter grains of arsenic was found, together with 1.64 grains of strychnine, which imparted to the mixture an intensely bitter taste; on the 16th March I received from Mr. Doherty, my assistant, a tumbler, properly secured and labelled, containing tea and milk, together with a white sediment; Mr. Doherty made the analysis; I received a paper package containing five powders, like the powders produced, "Dean No. 2"; these were submitted to analysis, with the result that no poison was found; I next received an 8-ounce medicine-bottle, marked "Dean No. 3, March 7th, 1895"; this bottle contained 2½ fluid ounces of medicine, which, upon analysis, contained 3 grains of white arsenic, together with distinct traces of strychnine; I next received a bottle labelled "Dean No. 4, March the 10th, urine passed March 9th and 10th"; this, upon analysis, was found to contain arsenic; I next received a woman's night-dress, 3 feet 7½ inches in length, and 27 inches at its widest part; on the lower part, behind, I found large irregular stains of faecal matter, extending over an area of 17 by 15 inches, close down to the bottom edge of the garment; the faecal matter was subjected to analysis, and found to contain distinct traces of arsenic; I next received a small phial, properly sealed, and labelled "Milk drawn from breast Mrs. Dean, handed to inspector by Dr. Newmarch"; it was found to contain no poison; other bottles and articles were examined, but they did not contain poison.

To Mr. Meagher: From three-quarters of a grain up to 3 grains would form a fatal dose; I have seen the prisoner before on the ferry; prisoner has always appeared to be a man of good character.

WILLIAM M. HAMLET.

Remanded till Friday, the 22nd March, 1895, at the North Sydney Police Court, to be taken at 2.45 p.m.

North Sydney, 21st March, 1895.

JAMES GILES, S.M.

William Michael Doherty, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am laboratory assistant to the Government Analyst; on the 8th March, a Friday, Sergeant Brennan handed me the exhibits—one a tumbler containing tea; the second, powders marked "Dean No. 2"; the third, a medicine-bottle containing a liquid marked "Dean No. 3"; and on Monday, the 11th March, Sergeant Brennan handed me two exhibits—one marked "Dean No. 4," and the other a night-dress, numbered "Dean No. 5"; on Thursday, the 14th instant, Inspector Cotter handed me a bottle containing milk; on Friday, the 15th March, Sergeant Brennan brought me several bottles, a tin, and two pill-boxes—one containing pills; I handed all these, with the exception of the tumbler and tea, to Mr. Hamlet, in the same condition as they were handed to me, properly sealed and secured; the tea I submitted to analysis on the 8th instant; the tumbler contained 6 ounces of liquid—tea and milk; the liquid contained traces of arsenic, and white arsenic, weighing one-tenth of a grain, was found as a sediment in the bottom of the tumbler; I did not test the tea for strychnine.

To Mr. Meagher: I could not say if arsenic would be present in the human milk, if it had been discovered in the urine; two and a half grains would be a fatal dose; if one-tenth of a grain of arsenic was put into liquid it would be reduced; I am of opinion that one-tenth of a grain, if put into a cup of tea, would not produce lumps round the top; arsenic is not very soluble in cold water, but it is made more soluble in warm water; the quantity of arsenic would not be considerably reduced in this cup of tea, if allowed to stand some days; if a quantity of arsenic was placed in a tea-cup, I should expect the greater part to remain as a sediment in the bottom of the cup; I have read in medical works that the result of taking arsenic is to make the pulse small, frequent, and irregular.

William James Guise, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am a chemist, carrying on business in Miller-street, North Sydney; I am duly registered; on the 2nd March I dispensed the prescription marked "Exhibit A," for Mrs. Dean; I afterwards made up other prescriptions; no arsenic was put in any of the prescriptions; white arsenic is not in common use; it is used to kill dogs or white ants, but it is always coloured; white arsenic is always coloured before being sold.

Mr. Meagher: When prisoner came for the prescription he was in a very excited state; he forgot the prescription, and had to go back for it; prisoner seemed much put out, and wanted the prescription made up in a hurry; prisoner went off in a hurry with the medicine; I have never sold poison to the prisoner; he has never asked for any; my last instructions to the prisoner were to shake the bottle.

Arthur

Arthur Gale Street, being duly sworn, states:—I dispense for the United Friendly Societies only; I remember dispensing powders, similar to those produced, for a Mr. Jenkins; I gave them to Jenkins on the 14th February last; arsenic if put in water would float in little round globules round the edge of the cup.

To Mr. Meagher: I never sold any arsenic or strychnine to the prisoner; the powders contained no poison; I think I gave the powders to Mrs. Jenkins.

ARTHUR G. STREET.

Frederick William Gail, being duly sworn, on oath, states:—I am a furniture broker, and live at Miller-street, North Sydney; I know the prisoner well, and his wife and mother-in-law; I have known them about twelve months; there is no quarrel between us in any way; I live a mile and a-half from the prisoner, and Mr. Lee's, where Mrs. Seymour was living, is about a mile in another direction; on Monday night this month I took a bottle to Dr. Newmarch like the bottle produced; it had a label like the one produced "Lemon syrup"; I got the bottle at my house from Mrs. Dean, the wife of accused; she gave it to me, asking me to have a drink of lemon syrup; I took a cup and put a small quantity in, and then filled the cup with water; I took a small quantity in my mouth and found it was bitter, so I spit it out; I corked the bottle up and put it into my pantry; I did not put anything into it; I did not know of anything being put into it; the bottle was given to me on a Saturday, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, by Mrs. Dean; on the Monday after I took it to Dr. Newmarch; I can swear I gave it to the doctor in the same state that I got it; I spoke to prisoner the night I got the bottle, but I did not mention anything about the bottle to the prisoner; Mrs. Dean has been at my place since her illness, and Mrs. Seymour was at my place some hours after I got the bottle on the Saturday night, between 8 and 9 o'clock that night; Mrs. Seymour remained about three-quarters of an hour; I did not show her the bottle; Mrs. Seymour saw the bottle on the Monday night and tasted some on the cork; she did not appear to relish it; Mrs. Seymour did not put anything in the bottle; I was not at Dean's the night I gave the bottle to Dr. Newmarch; I was there the next Wednesday, about 10 o'clock in the morning; Mrs. Dean was there and her mother; Mrs. Seymour showed me some vomit in the bedroom which was in a chamber.

To Mr. Meagher: Mrs. Seymour has been a frequent visitor to my house of late—about once a week for the last six weeks, perhaps eight weeks; Mrs. Seymour has asked my advice about purchasing goods; I remember Mrs. Seymour coming on the Saturday night; I knew of the illness of Mrs. Dean's baby before Mrs. Seymour called; I may have told prisoner I was sorry to hear his child was ill; Mrs. Seymour was at my house about three-quarters of an hour on the Saturday night; I saw Mrs. Seymour to the door on the Monday night; she went in the other direction from Dean's house; she left my house about half-past 9; Mrs. Dean said she went to get the contents of the bottle analysed; she did not tell me that if ever she got ill her mother told her to get everything analysed; I never remember a friend coming with a bottle before to be analysed; I did not mention the bottle to prisoner, as I let it pass out of my mind; I remember removing Mrs. Seymour's goods from Dean's residence; I remember prisoner saying something about that the absence of the mother-in-law meant happiness for him.

MARY DEAN.

Caroline Seymour, being duly sworn, on oath states:—I am a widow, and I live with my daughter, Mary Dean, in Miller-street, North Sydney; the witness, Mrs. Dean, is the only child I have living; I have been living with Mrs. Lees at M'Mahon's Point; I was a servant there; Mrs. Lees is about three-quarters of a mile from Gail's; Gail's is about a mile to Dean's; my daughter was confined on the 26th December last; I nursed her; Mr. Dean sent for me; I produce the telegram marked "E"; I was there there for a month before, and for a month after the confinement, up to the latter part of January last; I went somewhere else then; I went to Mrs. Johnson's, at Surry Hills; I boarded there; I went from there to my late situation; I was at the situation about one month; I know Mr. and Mrs. Gail a little through Mrs. Dean; I was not at Dean's when I left after the confinement until the 4th March; I called at Gail's on Monday night, the 4th instant; I was shown a bottle with a liquid in it; I don't know what it was; Mr. Gail asked me to taste the cork; I was at Gail's on the Saturday before, but was not shown any bottle then; I tasted the cork; it had a bitter taste; I heard something there, and I went home, which is in the opposite direction to Dean's house; I went for a cloak; I then went to the prisoner's house; I got there at about ten minutes past 12 o'clock at night; I passed Dean at the park, near his house; I had no conversation with the prisoner then; neither of us stopped; I went to the house through the back door, which was closed but not locked; my daughter was in bed; she was very ill; she was vomiting and purging the whole night; I left at twenty minutes to 6 in the morning; I had to go home and light the fire; I went back to my daughter's between 5 and 6 o'clock the next night, Tuesday, the 5th instant; when I went in the prisoner was there; I asked prisoner what was the matter; prisoner replied, "I do not know"; on the following Wednesday I saw some tea in a tumbler under the drawers in my daughter's room; I looked for it in consequence of something my daughter told me; after Dr. Newmarch told me something about poison I spoke to prisoner about poison on the Thursday after; prisoner replied, "I know nothing about it"; on Wednesday I had a conversation with Dr. Newmarch, my daughter, and the prisoner; something was said about a powder in the medicine; Dr. Newmarch said he never ordered a powder; my daughter said to prisoner that he put a powder in the medicine; prisoner replied, "I did not"; my daughter has never been unhealthy; I have known her to have an attack of illness on the 13th January last; I was ill also—suffering from vomiting and purging; I took some groats that were left unfinished by my daughter; prisoner was there and waited on us; I prepared the groats in the kitchen, and left them on the dining-room table while I prepared the prisoner's breakfast; I made some beef-tea for my daughter five or six days after the groats; I made it in the kitchen; the prisoner was in the house when I made it; I left it on the stone; I was ironing; prisoner could get at it; no one else was in the house except my daughter, who was in bed; I took it to my daughter; she said it was bitter; I tasted it before I took it up; it was all right; I gave it to my daughter, into her hand; prisoner tasted it, and said, "It is all right"; I said there must have been a gall in the meat; I took it down stairs and threw it away; I saw Mrs. Dean on the Thursday before I went to the circus with her; I am not bad friends with prisoner; I gave my daughter the greater part of her furniture; prisoner asked me what the groats were; I said I was making them for his wife.

To Mr. Meagher: I gave groats because she was not to have solid food; I cooked the groats before 9 o'clock; my daughter ate them about half-past 9; they were not eaten before the prisoner came home; I have never been so ill before; I did not say to my daughter that there must be poison in the groats; I did not in January communicate an opinion about poison to a member of the police force; the groats was not bitter; the beef-tea was; I put salt and pepper in the beef-tea when I made it, before I tasted it; I have not been to prisoner's house since the confinement; I have seen Mrs. Dean several times; I saw my daughter away from the house on the Thursday before the Saturday; I just know the Gails; I called in there on a Saturday night; before the Saturday night I may have called in two or three times; I asked if they had seen my daughter; I saw prisoner on the street at the Gails' house; I don't know if Gail is incorrect if he said I have visited the house eight times in eight weeks; I have asked the Gails about the baby; on the Saturday night I did not ask whether my daughter had called there; I saw my daughter on the Thursday; I sent her home, as she had a pain in her back; I did not tell my daughter then that she would have an illness, coming out so soon after her confinement; I said I saw syrup in the bottle of white appearance; it had about the same quantity as it has in now; I thought of the beef-tea after I tasted the syrup; Gail said he was going to take the bottle to be analysed; I did not think anything was wrong then; Gail took the bottle to Dr. Newmarch to see what was wrong; the first I heard of poison was on the Thursday, from Dr. Newmarch; Mrs. Weynton told me the door was open; I did not tell Mrs. Weynton till Thursday that poison was in the bottle; I did not say anything on Tuesday; Mrs. Dean said to me something about the prisoner saying he had heard about a bottle from Mrs. Weynton; I don't think I spoke to Mrs. Weynton on the Wednesday; I did not tell Mrs. Weynton about poison being in the bottle; I am on good terms with the Weyntons; prisoner's wife did not tell me that prisoner had made her send for the doctor; prisoner was distant with his wife; I should not think he was the class of man to insist on my daughter having a doctor; I did not know the prisoner was kind to his wife; on Monday I asked what my daughter had taken; she said she had seen something white in some porter; she told me on Monday night; I did not have any suspicion then about poison; I heard the prisoner had his fingers round the tumbler, but I did not think anything of this; my daughter said no more after she told me of the porter; she said something about medicine; she did not say it had something on the top; I saw the medicine before; it was brown; I hunted round for a powder to go with it, but I could not find any; I left Gail's about a quarter past 10; I met prisoner at half-past 11 near the park; he was going very fast; on Thursday afternoon I heard of the poison; up to Thursday I had no suspicion before Thursday that prisoner was poisoning his wife; I put the tea back where I got it; I had no suspicion about it; Dr. Newmarch said, in the presence of prisoner on a Wednesday, that he did not put powders in the medicine; if the doctor says he said nothing of powders I still state that what I say is correct; I did not feel pleased with the prisoner's treatment of his wife; prisoner never spoke to me on the subject of going,—he told my daughter to tell me; when the prisoner asked me to leave the house was up here, and not at Mosman's Bay; prisoner never asked me to leave the house at Mosman's Bay; I packed the furniture at Mosman's; I remember my daughter fainting in Miller-street in my arms; a month after my daughter's confinement prisoner told me to go; I was not cool; I was excited; I did not say I would make it warm for the prisoner; prisoner pushed his wife away, and she fell in my arms; I did not call prisoner any names; I have been in the Colony some years, and have resided in Norton-street, Surry Hills; one of the boarders was named Thomas Jones; a Mr. Wright was also there; I was never addressed as Mrs. Jones; Jones worked at David Jones's about eight years ago; I have known Jones to earn £7 a week; Jones has left my place about eighteen months; Jones was never seen by me to act as a fence for stolen property; I remember Melbourne men coming to the house; I don't remember whether I was introduced to them; they started coming about three years ago; I believe they were bookmakers; I never remember a person in plain clothes clothes making inquiry for Melbourne guns; a man named Simon came to the house; he only had one eye; I never resided with Jones as man and wife; I have not seen Simon for some time; I do not know that he is serving a sentence for burglary; I know some person named Rose; some of the girls came for fruit; I was on friendly terms with Mrs. Rose; I never was there half-an-hour; I knew it was a house of bad fame; I remember Madame Rose going to England or away somewhere; I was over at the house; I went and slept there three or four nights at the request of Madame Rose while she was away; I never took ladies to the house; I don't remember going for a certain young lady for Mrs. Rose; I have taken several notes from Madame Rose to gay girls; I cannot say if it was less than a dozen times; I was paid for going these messages; Madame sent the notes to me; I went to mind the bedroom of Madame Rose; I cannot say what went on while I was at the house; I only had charge of the bedroom.

Statement of the Accused.

GEORGE DEAN stands charged before the undersigned, one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the Colony aforesaid, this twenty-third day of March, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, for that he, the said George Dean, on the 2nd day of March, 1895, at North Sydney, in the said Colony, feloniously did cause poison to be taken by one Mary Dean, the wife of him, the said George Dean, with intent to murder the said Mary Dean, and the examinations of all the witnesses on the part of the prosecution having been completed, and the depositions taken against the accused having been caused to be read to him by me, the said Justice, before whom such examination has been so completed; and I, the said Justice, having also stated to the accused and given him clearly to understand that he has nothing to hope from any promise of favour, and nothing to fear from any threat which may have been holden out to him to induce him to make any admission or confession of his guilt, but that whatever he shall say may be given in evidence against him upon his trial, notwithstanding such promise or threat; and the said charge being read to the said George Dean, and the witnesses for the prosecution Stephen James Cotter, Richard Brennan, Mary Dean, Bernard James Newmarch, William Mogforth Hamlet, William Michael Doherty, William James Guise, Arthur Gale Street, Thomas Edmund MacDonald, Richard John Smith, Frederick William Gail, Harry William Jenkins, Bessie Walke, Ethel Adey, Joseph Chivers, Caroline Seymour being severally examined in his presence, the said George Dean is now addressed by me as follows:—"Having heard the evidence, do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to say anything unless you desire to do so; but whatever you say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you upon your trial;" whereupon the said George Dean saith as follows:—"I reserve my defence."

ROYAL COMMISSION—REGINA v. GEORGE DEAN.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

WEDNESDAY, 15 MAY, 1895.

[The Commission met in the Board Room, Chief Secretary's Office, at 10 a.m.]

Present:—

FRANCIS EDWARD ROGERS, Esq., Q.C. (PRESIDENT).

PHILIP SYDNEY JONES, Esq., M.D. | FREDERIC NORTON MANNING, Esq., M.D.

The Hon. Sir Julian Salomons, Kt., Q.C., M.L.C., and Mr. C. G. Wade appeared on behalf of the Crown; and the Hon. Chas. Edward Pilcher, Q.C., M.L.C., instructed by Messrs. Crick and Meagher, appeared for George Dean.

All depositions, together with Judge's notes in the case of Regina v. Dean, ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed on the 30th April, 1895, were embodied as evidence.

William Ellis, alias "Yorkey Bill," sworn and examined:—

1. President.] What is your name? William Ellis.
2. Mr. Pilcher.] What is your age? I was 67 on the 2nd of this month.
3. Do you live at Chippendale at present? Yes; in Kensington-street.
4. Do you generally go by the name of "Yorkey"? Yes; that is right, sir.
5. Is Mrs. Seymour here? Yes.
6. I want her called into the room for identification. [Mrs. Seymour entered the room.]
7. Do you know this person? Yes; I have known her for thirty years. This is her likeness. [Photo. produced.] It was taken sixteen years ago.
8. By what name did you know her? Well, her right name is Carrie Asprey.
9. Where did you first know her? At Ballarat.
10. How many years ago is that? Nine-and-twenty or thirty years ago.
11. Did you know her then as Carrie Asprey? That is the only name she had then.
12. Which colony did Carrie Asprey come to originally? She came to Hobart Town.
13. Was Carrie Asprey her maiden name? No; she got married to a policeman named Jack or Johnnie Asprey, or whatever you like to call it.
14. President.] How do you know all this? Because we were all living in the house together for years.
15. Mr. Pilcher.] How did you know she was married to Johnnie Asprey? Because they were keeping company together, and we lived together all that number of years. I knew her husband well, and got him a job ten years ago.
16. President.] Do you mean the policeman? Yes; he came down from the Clarence, and I then got him a job.
17. Mr. Pilcher.] Did she ever tell you she was married to Asprey? Well, we all knew it. I knew her daughter too—not this one (meaning Mrs. Dean). I knew her other daughter intimately; she would have been 42 years of age on the 24th of this month.
18. Did she ever tell you what she came to Hobart Town for? I was living with a woman who came from London for eight years' transportation, and I do not know whether she came out in the last ship or the last ship but one. She got "pinched" from London.
19. What is the name of that woman? Lizzie Footer; and she used to meet Carrie, and these two used to talk about it.
20. In what colony was this? This was in Melbourne then. They always used to talk about it, and go out thieving together.
21. Do you mean to say she came out with Lizzie Footer on the last or last but one convict ship to Hobart Town, and afterwards heard her talking about her experiences? Yes; that is right.
22. And then did she go to Ballarat? Yes. I was living with Lizzie Footer at that time.
23. Was her husband with her at Ballarat? No; there was no one with her but Biddy Birch.
24. How long did you know her in Ballarat? Only a few days; we only went up for the races.
25. During these few days what was she and Biddy Birch doing there? They went up for shop-lifting and pocket-picking.
26. Do you know that they did this? Yes; and there was Denny Gaynor too.
27. Who was Denny Gaynor? He went to Ballarat with me, and "palled" with Carrie Asprey at Ballarat. We then came back to Melbourne.
28. What was your game at Ballarat? "Monte playing," or anything of that kind on the racecourse.
29. And what was Carrie Asprey's game while she was up there? Picking pockets and hoisting.
30. And what is "hoisting"? Getting into first-class shops, and "nailing" valuable goods.

W. Ellis,
15 May, 1895.

W. Ellis.
15 May, 1895.

31. What do you mean by that—we do not understand such terms? Well, Carrie and Biddy Birch used to dress themselves up in silks and satins, and wear gold chains, and then they would go into a big place, and get shown into the rooms where the silks and satins were. They had something like a bag underneath the dress, which had a slit down the front. They slipped silks and satins down like lightning.
32. Do you mean to say they had a kind of wallet inside their dress? Yes; and a slit in front, and as soon as they got their hands on anything, in it went.
33. How big were these wallets? You could have them as big as a 50-lb. flour bag.
34. Do you know of your own knowledge if this was the particular way in which they dressed for this purpose? Certainly; I was living with them, and saw them going out to work dozens of times.
35. After being out on these walletting expeditions, if I may so term them, have you seen them return? Certainly.
36. Have you ever seen them come back treasure-trove? Yes; they would bring back all kinds of silks and satins, and first-class boots.
37. Do you mean to say they brought back rolls of silks? Yes; and rolls of satin and first-class boots.
38. Did they ever bring anything else? That was their game sometimes; and at other times they would bring clothes for themselves, such as fine white petticoats, or any other thing of that kind.
39. Have you ever been present on any of their expeditions to the shops? I have never been with them in the shops, but I have seen them come out with the things.
40. Did they tell you that they got them from the shops or warehouses? Yes.
41. Did they tell you how they did this shop-lifting? Yes; they used to go into the warehouses or show-rooms if they wanted silks or satins. They would say, "Good morning, we want to look at so-and-so." They would be shown things, and then they would set to work.
42. How many years did you know Carrie Asprey in Melbourne? Twelve years.
43. During the whole of that time was she leading a criminal life, and associating with criminals? She did nothing else.
44. The whole time? Excepting about only two months after she came out of Pentridge, while she was waiting for her pal, who was then in gaol.
45. How long ago was that? Altogether, it is about eighteen years from now.
46. Apart altogether from her criminal propensities and her pocket-picking ability, can you tell me anything as to her moral character? All I can say is that she was a cunning, knowing, shrewd woman, and as full of tricks as a monkey.
47. Can you give us any instances which will bear out this description of her character? Yes. The last time she was living at Carlton and Richmond she and Lizzie Footer would go out to work together. I reckon Carrie was one of the cleverest pickpockets that ever came to the Australian Colonies.
48. Can you give us any instances of how she worked? Lots. She was full of all manner of cunning tricks. One time she was out with Lizzie Footer on a "mark," and was very nearly "pinched." She saw she was "tumbled to," stepped back, and put little Lizzie in the front. Lizzie got tried by the magistrate, and got "three months on the rag."
49. Can you say of your own knowledge whether Carry Asprey was a virtuous woman at this time? When we were living in Carlton she was "palling" with Denny Gaynor.
50. Who is Denny Gaynor? He was a pal of mine, when I was at Ballarat and Melbourne.
51. So she was living with him? Yes; at this time when he was not in gaol.
52. What happened when he was in gaol? She was always living with somebody else.
53. Do you know that of your own knowledge? I do.
54. How do you know that? Because I was living in the same house at North Melbourne. [At this stage Mr. Pilcher left the Board-room for a time, and the cross-examination was continued by Mr. Meagher.]
55. Mr. Meagher.] Do you say, Ellis, that you have been connected with Carry Asprey, in Victoria, in various practices of stealing? Yes.
56. Do you remember any particular public-house where a sensational robbery took place, who planned it, and what particular part Carry Asprey took in it? Yes, I can. There were in it, Carry Asprey, myself, Denny Gaynor, and Lizzie Footer. The four of us were living at Richmond together then. Maggie Green told us about a cash-box at this pub.
57. A cash-box where? At the "Halfway House Inn," between Melbourne and Collingwood. It was a night-house.
58. What do you mean by that? It was a house where you could get liquor all night.
59. What happened then? Oh, we got talking about it one night before going to bed, and fixed up what we would do. We agreed to go out and have a look, and started from Richmond late at night. When we got to the Halfway House, Carrie Asprey and myself went into the bar and called for a drink; we left Lizzie Footer and Denny Gaynor outside. We "sounded" it. I threw a £5 note on the counter to pay for the drinks, letting them see that it was the smallest note I had. We had the drink and saw them take the change from the cash-box, and put the box back.
60. Do you mean that you gave them a £5 note for the purpose of "sounding" where the cash-box was kept? Yes; and then we got 2s. worth of three star brandy for Lizzie Footer and Denny Gaynor outside. We, Carrie and myself, went back to Denny and Lizzie, who said, "How is it?" We said, "It's a dead bird." We said, "How are we going to get it?" Carrie said, "Denny and you go into the parlour and get a drink. Then ask them to let you have a room for an hour. As soon as I see them go to show you a room, I'll slip in and get the cash-box." We did this, and in 10 seconds she had it. There was only one man about, as all this happened at 20 minutes to 1 in the morning.
61. Was it Carrie Asprey who planned all this? Yes; and it did not take her ten seconds to get it.
62. How much did the cash-box contain? £38 in gold, notes, and some silver.
63. What did Carrie Asprey do with the cash-box? She carried it down to Richmond.
64. What was done with it afterwards? When we got to Richmond we counted the money, and found a watch and chain, and the license for the house. We left the watch and chain and license in the box, put a stone in it, locked it up, and threw it into the Yarra. I wanted to keep the watch, but Carrie said, "No; chuck the d— thing over," and the whole thing was thrown into the Yarra.
65. Was Carrie Asprey married in Hobart Town? Yes.
66. Did she live with Asprey when he and she were in Melbourne? No; she was living with Denny Gaynor then.
67. What was Asprey doing in Melbourne at this time? He left Hobart Town and took a public-house in Little Bourke-street, Melbourne.

W. Ellis.
15 May, 1895.

68. While you were residing together, did Carrie Asprey ever tell you of any action she intended to take against her husband? Yes; she found out that Asprey had bought a watch that had been stolen from Cosgrove.
69. Who was Cosgrove? He was a warder in Melbourne Gaol who had been robbed. She sent little Carrie, her daughter, to find out where the watch and jewellery were, and when she knew, information was given to the Police that Asprey had the stolen property.
70. Can you remember whether, before this robbery of Cosgrove, Carrie Asprey had ever used threats towards her husband? Yes; she used to say she would "put the b—— old dog away."
71. Do you, of your personal knowledge, know that Carrie Asprey and her husband were bad friends at this time? Yes.
72. Can you personally say who gave information to the Police that Asprey had property stolen from Cosgrove? Carrie told Lizzie Footer and me that she had found out that Asprey had the watch, by sending young Carrie to know where it was.
- 72½. Was young Carrie, her daughter, residing with her at that time? Yes; and she would have been 42 years old on the 24th of this month.
73. Did that daughter, to your knowledge, find out where that watch was in her father's hotel? Yes; and she told Carrie Asprey and Lizzie Footer where it was.
74. When Carrie Asprey became aware of where the watch was what did she do? She went and told little Footer, the detective. He got a search-warrant and obtained the watch.
75. After the detective got the search-warrant and found the watch, what happened to Asprey? He got "pinched."
76. Do you mean he was convicted? Yes.
77. What sentence did he get? Three years' imprisonment for buying the watch, and the others for stealing it got seven, eight, and six years.
78. Do you remember after Asprey was convicted whether Carrie Asprey expressed any pleasure at this fact? Yes; she said, "Well, I have got some satisfaction now, that I have put the b—— old dog away."
79. President.] Do you say she was living with Gaynor at this time? Yes, when he was not in gaol.
80. Mr. Meagher.] Was Carrie Asprey, of your own knowledge, in gaol while you were in Melbourne? All the lot of us were in gaol there twenty-five years ago—Denny Gaynor, myself, Carrie Asprey, Lizzie Footer, Maggie Green, and Biddy Donovan.
81. When did you come over to this Colony? Seventeen or eighteen years ago.
82. When did you first see Carrie Asprey in this Colony? Not quite sixteen years ago.
83. Did she tell you how she was earning her livelihood over here? I know she was on the "old game." She was living with Billy Gamble then.
84. How do you know that? Denny Gaynor was doing "time," and she then palled in with Billy Gamble.
85. Do you mean previous to coming to this Colony she palled in with Billy Gamble? Yes; he was a pickpocket, and had been convicted several times.
86. Was she ever known as Mrs. Seymour in Melbourne? No; only as Carrie Asprey.
87. Do you know how she got the name of Mrs. Seymour? I cannot say. I only know that she palled in with this Billy Gamble, a pickpocket, until he died. I was at his funeral sixteen years ago next August.
88. Did he obtain his livelihood by means of pocket-picking? Yes; both of them did.
89. Can you say personally that you know Carrie Asprey was picking pockets? Yes; I have seen her go into town, and she has told me in conversation that she was still at the old game.
90. Have you seen her at work at pocket-picking? Yes; in George-street.
91. President.] What—at pocket-picking? Yes.
92. Mr. Meagher.] Do you say you have seen her working at the occupation of pocket-picking, and also that she has made statements to you to the same effect? Well, she would come round to our place, and I would go round to theirs, and then she would tell us how she got on.
93. Got on at what? Well, got on at their game you know—whether they were lucky or unlucky.
94. President.] Who was she living with at this time? With Billy Gamble.
95. Who were you living with then? Maggie Green, at Newtown, keeping a grocer's shop.
96. Mr. Meagher.] Was Maggie Green from Victoria too? Yes; and I afterwards married her.
97. Were you and Maggie Green pals while you were in Victoria? Yes; all the time.
98. After you came to New South Wales did Carrie Asprey visit you at your place at Newtown? Yes.
99. And did you visit her at her place? Yes.
100. Where was that? She was living at Surry Hills, in Norton-street; that was before she kept a shop at all.
101. When you visited her did you meet other characters like herself? Yes; Tommy Jones, Billy Gamble, and other people who are dead and buried now.
102. Were any of them known to you personally as criminals? Yes; Billy Gamble and myself were in gaol together.
103. Besides Billy Gamble and Tommy Jones, have you met any other criminals at her place? Yes, I have seen others there; nobody but criminals went there. No "square-heads" went there.
104. Do you mean by "square-heads" respectable people? Yes; I mean those distinct from criminals.
105. Do you remember Carrie Asprey coming to you for monetary assistance? Yes; when Phil Williams "pinched" her.
106. Who is Phil Williams? He was a detective at that time, and he "pinched" her for pocket-picking.
107. Who was she doing it with at this time? With Tommy Jones.
108. Have you ever seen Tommy Jones and Carrie Asprey together in the street? I have; I have seen Jones walking a good bit behind her in the street many a time.
109. Can you personally say that you have seen Jones present with Carrie Asprey in the street? Yes, working together in the streets; they both got their living at it.
110. Do you mean at picking pockets? Yes.
111. Can you say personally that you have seen Jones assisting her in pocket-picking? Yes; lots and lots of times; by walking behind her in the street.
112. Do you mean to say Jones acted as her fence to give her warning if there were danger? Yes; that is it.
113. Will you tell us the conversation that took place between Carrie Asprey and yourself, at the time she was arrested by Phil Williams, the detective? Billy Gamble was dead at the time and buried, and she she was on with Jones. She came to me and said she had got no money, and asked me who was the best lawyer to go to, to defend her in the court. I told her Harry Levien was the best, and I lent her £5 to pay Harry Levien to defend her. Harry Levien pleaded for her and got her "turned up."

114. Do you mean by "turned up" that she was acquitted? Yes.

115. President.] "Turned up";—you mean turned out I suppose? No, "turned up"; I mean acquitted.

116. Mr. Meagher.] Did you know of your own knowledge at this time Gamble was dead? Yes.

117. Do you know personally, if at this time she and Tommy Jones were living together as man and wife? Yes; it was believed so.

118. Did she ever tell you they were? Yes; she told both myself and Maggie Green. They lived together for years and years, until they went to the little shop. He lived with her all the time until he went to Liverpool Asylum. Tommy Jones was a dress-coat maker.

119. President.] What is a dress-coat maker? He used to make dress-coats for the toffs—used to make them for the big shops in town. He would get the work from the shops and do it at home.

120. Mr. Meagher.] After Carrie was "turned up," as you call it, did she still continue her pocket-picking career? No; she kept quiet. I went away to Temora, and when I came back fourteen years ago she had got a little shop in Surry Hills.

121. What kind of business? She sold all kinds of fruit, lemonade, lollies, and cordials.

122. At the time you lent her the money to engage a solicitor, were you on friendly terms with her? Yes.

123. Did she give you any presents at any time? No; but the last time I went to her place, I gave her a present. It was Christmas time, and I gave her an English ham, about 18 lb. or 19 lb. weight.

124. Have you a photo. of Mrs. Asprey in your possession? Yes. [Produced and marked exhibit "A."]

125. When did you get that? About sixteen years ago.

126. President.] When do you say you got this photograph? I got that photograph after Phil. Williams had "pinched" her.

127. Mr. Meagher.] When she kept a shop in Riley-street, were boarders living there? No; there was only Tommy Jones living there then.

128. Did you meet any other men there? Yes.

129. Do you know who they were? I do not know their names. I knew one or two of them, but most of them are dead now.

130. Do you know if they were respectable people? No, they were not "square-heads"; they were only the lot who went thieving.

131. Did you know them yourself personally as being criminals? Certainly I did.

132. Besides this robbery, which you have spoken of as having happened at the public-house in Victoria, were there any other cleverly-planned robberies in which Carrie Asprey was the prime mover? Yes, several; she did nothing else but rob for a living.

133. Do you say that Carrie Asprey kept a fruit-shop in Surry Hills? Yes.

134. Did you know a place opposite the fruit-shop known as Madame Rose's? Yes; I have never been in the house, but I know there was such a place.

135. Sir Julian Salomons.] You have spoken of a girl you called "Little Carrie";—do you know if she is dead? I believe so. I have not seen her nor heard of her for the last twenty years.

136. Do you believe she is dead? Yes; but I know what her age would have been.

137. President.] Is that little Carrie you refer to the daughter of this Mrs. Seymour? Yes.

138. But you say it is more than twenty years since you have seen her? Yes; it is more than twenty years since she was young Carrie, as I knew her. She would have been 42 years old on the 24th of this May.

139. What are you doing yourself now for a living? Every morning I am selling pork bones and pigs' heads.

140. Selling what? Pork bones.

141. What do you sell them for? For people to eat. There is plenty of meat on them. They are the spare ribs of pork and things like that they used to sell in England, and they are nicer than fowl I can tell you.

142. How long have you been engaged in this business? I have been at it constantly for the last four months.

143. What were you doing before that? I was keeping a store, and had a good business.

144. What sort of a store? A first-class kind of store—sold all sorts of groceries, cheese, bacon, and butter.

145. Where was your store? At the corner of Vine and Edwards Streets, Redfern. I lived there eleven years and never shifted. I had a horse and cart and used to hawk these provisions about Sydney and the suburbs and Parramatta.

146. Have you ever been in any trouble yourself? Yes.

147. In the Colony of New South Wales? Yes.

148. How often have you been in trouble since you have been here? Only once. I got four years in Melbourne, and then I got eighteen months on the "vag," in Melbourne, and I got three years here.

149. For what did you get the term of imprisonment in this Colony? I got three years for buying some harness. I first of all came to Western Australia.

150. Sir Julian Salomons.] What did you come to Western Australia for? Garotting in Lincolnshire, England. I got fifteen years for that, and was transported to Western Australia. Then I went on to Victoria.

151. And then did you come to New South Wales? Yes.

152. President.] How long ago? About sixteen years.

153. How many times do you say you have been sentenced altogether? Four.

154. Does that include your sentence of transportation? Yes; once in England, once here, and twice in Melbourne.

155. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you only been convicted once here? That is all.

156. President.] And was that for buying a harness, as you term it? Yes; and then I petitioned and got out.

[Witness withdrew.]

Nathaniel Dearman sworn and examined:—

157. Mr. Pilcher.] Your name is Nathaniel Dearman? Yes; Nathaniel Dearman.
 158. You are at present in the employ of the New South Wales Railway Commissioners, in the Tramway Department? Yes.
 159. You were formerly a detective in Victoria for a short time? Yes.
 160. How long ago? About the beginning of 1865.
 161. During the time you were in Melbourne did you know Carrie Asprey? I did.
 162. She is now Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
 163. Did you see her just now? Yes, I saw her just now.
 164. Whilst you were in the force in Victoria what was her character? When I was a detective she was known to me as a shoplifter and a pickpocket.
 165. You had particular occasion to watch her movements? Yes; I had occasion several times to watch her.
 166. Do you know of your own knowledge of the associates she kept at that time? I have seen her with different magmen, confidence-trick men, and criminals.
 167. Can you say whether, from your own knowledge, her associates were criminals? Yes, they were.
Sir Julian Salomons.] I have no questions to ask the witness.

N. Dearman.
 15 May, 1864.

Alfred Saville sworn and examined:—

168. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you? I am a bookmaker.
 169. Do you live in Melbourne or Sydney? I live in Sydney.
 170. Do you know Carrie Seymour? Yes.
 171. Have you seen her to-day? No; I have not seen her to-day.
 172. During how many years have you known her? I have known her eight or nine years, to the best of my knowledge.
 173. Where did she live during the eight or nine years when you knew her? She lived in Riley-street, Surry Hills, till within the last two years.
 174. As a bookmaker of course you travelled about a great deal? Yes, I did.
 175. Did you visit Carrie Seymour in Sydney? Yes.
 176. About how frequent were your visits to Sydney? I was here to all the races. I lived in Sydney a great part of that time.
 177. About how often have you visited her house? On some occasions more frequently than others. I had occasion, when certain men were there, to go at different times.
 178. Were your visits frequent? I cannot say they were frequent. When friends were there they were more frequent.
 179. Can you tell us the number of times you visited her in a year? I may have visited her twenty times in the year.
 180. You cannot tell exactly? No; I cannot tell exactly.
 181. On the occasions of your visits, have you met any particular class of people at her house? I have never seen anybody there but disreputable thieves. I know some of them as criminals who had been convicted of various offences.
 182. Mention some of them? Mary Ann Fleury.
 183. Whose wife was she? She was then Thomas Fleury's wife.
 184. Where is she now? She is dead.
 185. Do you remember any other person who used to visit her? Yes; Thomas Fleury used to visit her.
 186. Were they criminals? Yes.
 187. Do you remember any others? Yes; Archie Williams, Kate Carruthers, better known as "Sugar Kate."
 188. Better known as "Sugar"? Yes.
 189. Do you know her reputation? She was a notorious pickpocket.
 190. Do you remember another man you met there—"Little Jimmy"? Yes; Little Jimmy. I saw him at Seymour's house, and other persons of bad repute.
 191. Were they all of your knowledge criminals? Yes; well-known criminals.
 192. During those visits there can you tell us what sort of house it was;—what was it kept for? As far as could be seen it was kept for a respectable business—a grocery establishment.
 193. Were these criminals that frequented the house customers or friends? Some of them lived there.
 194. Who lived there? Graham and Billy Bluff.
 195. And what was Graham? A criminal.
 196. And what was Billy Bluff? A criminal.
 197. Fleury and the others visited the house as friends? Yes, and Little Jimmy.
 198. And Little Jimmy, was he there too as a visitor? Yes.
 199. Can you tell me how long ago it is since Graham and Billy Bluff lived with her? About three years ago.
 200. One of these gentlemen is in Her Majesty's custody now, is he not? Yes; Graham.
 201. During the time that you visited there, do you remember whether Mary Dean was living with her mother? Yes; to the best of my knowledge she was.
 202. How old a girl was she? I am a very bad judge of ages.
 203. President.] How many years back do you remember her? I have seen her nearly always there.
 204. Mr. Pilcher.] As far as your memory goes, you saw her always there? Yes.
 205. Do you remember any occasion when liquor was sent there? Yes.
 206. Who went for it? I cannot remember.
 207. Do you remember on one occasion that man Billy Bluff being arrested? Yes.
 208. Do you remember your being asked to go bail? Yes; Graham asked me to bail him out.
 209. Did you go down to the Police Court? Yes; I went down to the Police Court.
 210. Did you go bail? Yes.
 211. Did you say you were justified? Yes, I did. I said that Carrie Seymour's place was my property.
 212. Did you communicate that information to Mrs. Seymour? Yes.

A. Saville.
 15 May, 1864.

- A. Saville.
15 May, 1895.
213. Did you go to Carrie Seymour and see her? Yes.
214. Had you any conversation with her? Yes.
215. Did you tell her what you did? Yes, and she said that she was agreeable.
216. Do you remember from what Mrs. Seymour told you whether the police had been at her house in the interval before going bail? Yes, she said the police had been there, and that it was all right.
217. Can you remember who it was that informed the police that the property was yours and by right;—did Mrs. Seymour tell them? I was told that Miss Seymour (now Mrs. Dean) told the police her mother was my housekeeper, and that everything was all right.
218. Sir Julian Salomons.] You knew the character of Graham well? Yes.
219. President.] You say that when you got home you heard from Mrs. Seymour that Mary Seymour (Mrs. Dean) had given some information to the police that the establishment was yours, and that her mother was your housekeeper? Yes.
220. Did you ever ask Mary Seymour herself anything about it? No, I did not.
221. Mr. Pilcher.] Was Mary Dean there when this statement was made to you? Yes; she interviewed the police, and told them that I was the proprietor of the establishment.
222. Was this said in Mary Seymour's presence? Yes.
223. Sir Julian Salomons.] Will you swear, sir, on your oath that Mary Seymour (Mrs. Dean) was there when that was told to you? Yes; and Graham, Billy Bluff, Carrie Seymour, and Tommy Jones were there also.
224. Who spoke;—will you swear it was Mrs. Seymour? I do not know.
225. You said Mrs. Seymour said it? I did not say that.
226. Did you not swear that a little time ago? I do not think so.
227. You knew all these people were thieves? Yes.
228. You have been charged with a serious criminal offence, have you not? Yes; I have.
229. President.] Did you not say that Mrs. Seymour gave the information to the police about her being your housekeeper? It is such a long time ago I cannot remember.
230. Did Mrs. Seymour say that her daughter told the police;—did Mrs. Seymour tell you that? She said something similar to that.
231. You say that somebody said that in Mary Dean's presence, and that Mary Dean had said that it was your place, and that her mother was your housekeeper;—who said that? I think it was Mrs. Seymour.
232. How long ago was it? About three-and-a-half years ago. It might have been Mrs. Dean to bluff the police off.
233. Sir Julian Salomons.] Did you not say, sir, in your evidence that it was Mrs. Dean who said that her mother was your housekeeper? I think she told the police her mother was my housekeeper.
234. Mr. Pilcher.] You believe it was Mrs. Seymour? It might have been Mary Dean.
235. Sir Julian Salomons.] You said that this house was your own, and you were the proprietor of it, when you had no interest whatever in it? Yes.
236. You swore what was untrue? Yes.
237. President.] Did you understand that you were on oath in the police court? Yes, I did understand.
238. And you said the house was yours when it was not? Yes.

John Hall sworn and examined:—

- J. Hall.
15 May, 1895.
239. Mr. Pilcher.] Your name is John Hall? Yes.
240. You are the manager of a chemist's establishment at 45, Albion-street, Surry Hills? Yes.
241. Are you generally in the shop? Yes.
242. Do you remember about eight or nine months ago a lady coming to your shop? Yes.
243. Do you remember the date? Approximately, eight or nine months ago.
244. Had she anything with her at the time? How do you mean?
245. Had she anything in her hand? Yes, she was carrying a lady's handbag and parasol.
246. Did you notice any peculiarity in this woman with reference to the parasol? Yes; she had a habit of changing the parasol from hand to hand. She had a sort of nervous way, and occasionally put it down this way and then that way [witness illustrating her movements].
247. She was moving backwards and forwards with her hands? Yes.
248. She had a sort of nervous movement? Yes.
249. Were you subsequently shown several photographs? Yes.
250. How long ago was that? About a month ago.
251. Who showed them to you? Mr. Meagher and his clerk.
252. How many? I think there were five.
253. Was your attention drawn to anyone in particular? They were laid in a heap in front of me.
254. Did you look at each one? Yes.
255. Did you single out one of those photographs? Yes.
256. After having examined them all? Yes.
257. Have you seen Mrs. Seymour about the room here to-day? Yes; I saw her.
258. Can you tell me if Mrs. Seymour ever came to the shop you were managing? By her style and manner I believe she has visited my shop.
259. Where did you see her to-day? I saw her when she came up the street walking, and also in the witnesses' room outside.
260. You did not know her name? No; I did not know her name.
[Mrs. Seymour was at this stage called in for identification.]
261. Is that the lady you were told to-day was Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
262. Can you tell us if that is the person who went into your shop? I would not swear it; but it is very much after the style and manner, and it would be a very remarkable coincidence if it were not.
263. What took place when this lady came into your place about eight or nine months ago, and about whom you have spoken? She said to me, "Will you give me sixpenny-worth of arsenic, please?" I will give the words as near as I can, but I cannot repeat the exact words.

264. What did you say to that? "No; I cannot sell arsenic or any other poison unless I have a witness." The law requires the signature of the purchaser, and I repeated to her the terms of the Act:—

J. Hall
15 May, 1896.

It shall be unlawful to sell any poison either by wholesale or by retail unless the box, bottle, vessel, wrapper, or cover in which such poison is contained be distinctly labelled with the name of the article and the word poison, and with the name and address of the seller of the poison; and it shall be unlawful to sell any poison to those which are in the first part of Schedule A to the Act or may hereafter be added thereto in Section two of this Act to any person unknown to the seller; and on every sale of any such article the seller shall, before delivery, make or cause to be made an entry in the book to be kept for that purpose, stated in the form set forth in Schedule F to this Act, the date of the sale, then name and address of the purchaser, the name and quantity of the article sold, and the parties for which it is stated by the purchaser to be required. To each entry the signature of the purchaser and of the person, if any, who introduced him shall be affixed; and any person selling poison otherwise than is hereby provided shall, upon a summary conviction before two Justices of the Peace, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for the first offence, and to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds for the second or any subsequent offence.

265. President.] Did you tell her all that? Yes.

266. Did you say all that to her or simply say you could not give her the arsenic? I told her the regulations for the sale of poison.

267. Did you say all that to her? Yes.

268. All you have told to us? Yes; I invariably do as the law requires me.

269. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you remember if you asked her any other question before that? I do not think so.

270. Did you ask her what she wanted it for? I do not remember doing so.

271. You told her the conditions that the law required on such purchases? Yes, and that it should be labelled poison and the name of the article.

272. Do you remember anything else you said to her in reference to a penalty? I mentioned that there was a penalty attached to it. I told her I was subject to a heavy penalty under these regulations.

273. Did she make any answer to that? She said that if I did not label it how would anyone know where I got it.

274. Was this said by her before or after you told her the law? After I told her what was necessary.

275. Did she say anything else? She said the quantity would not be very much for sixpence.

276. What else did she say? She said she only wanted a little because the rats were troublesome. She said either rats or vermin—I cannot recollect exactly what expression she used.

277. Do you remember with reference to the penalty if anything was said to her about yourself? I just remarked, "I hold a license for poison and still would be under a penalty for not complying with the law."

278. Anything else? After that she said it would not be much. I said that sixpenny-worth would be enough to poison a dozen people.

279. Did she say anything to that? She said it would be perfectly safe in her hands. She would take every care.

280. Do you remember her asking anything about that quantity of poison before you said it would poison a dozen people? There was a remark made about what would I do supposing any one did take it.

281. She made that remark? Yes. She asked what could be done. We were conversing friendly at the time, and I said "I would send for a doctor."

282. When you said you would send for a doctor, did she make any reply to that? She made some remark as to my being a chemist, and therefore I ought to know.

283. What did you say then? I said I could not let her have it; it was not worth while for sixpenny-worth. I then leaned back against the drawers, with my arms folded.

284. Did you say anything to her about a witness? She said, "Well, you will not sell it without a witness?"

285. And what did you say? "No, I cannot do it."

286. What did she say then? She said she must try and get a witness.

287. Anything else? She said she did not know anybody immediately around to get as a witness.

288. Then she left the shop? Yes, to get a witness.

289. Did you ever see her again? No, I have not seen her since.

290. Is that the photograph that was shown to you with four or five others? Yes. [Exhibit "A" —the photograph William Ellis ("Yorky Bill") said he got from Mrs. Seymour sixteen years ago.]

291. Is that the photograph you picked out? Yes.

292. That is the photograph you recognised? Yes, I think so. It was among the photos. shown to me, and was the one out of the five I picked out. You said something about recognising this woman. You asked me if I had seen the woman since. Now I have seen her I remember having seen her at Surry Hills. I never knew her name, but I have seen her during the two and a half years I have been there.

293. Bearing in mind what you have told us and your picking out this photograph, you are sure that this was the photo. shown to you? Yes, I am pretty certain that this was the photo. I saw in Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office.

294. This is the one you detected out of the four or five shown to you? Yes, I am pretty certain it is.

295. President.] The material part is whose photograph, as far as he knows, is it. It was not suggested to you to pick out any photograph? I only know Mr. Meagher said that it was taken nearly fourteen years ago.

296. Mr. Pilcher.] When the photos. were put before you was there any suggestion given to you? Mr. Meagher said, "Can you pick out the photo., allowing for the difference of time as near as possible, to the woman you have given us a description of?"

297. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where was this;—in Mr. Meagher's office? Yes.

298. Mr. Meagher commenced by telling you that you must make an allowance;—can you tell me what happened? In going into Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office I met Mr. Meagher. He said, "It is only fair to tell you that this photo. was taken fourteen years ago." I was then shown into the office and was sitting on the corner of the table when Mr. Meagher placed the five photos. on the table and asked me, allowing for the difference of time, whether I could recognise the woman whom I had been giving a description of.

299. What were the other four photos.? Photos. of women, apparently old photographs.

300. Were they women with bonnets on? I do not remember.

301. Have you got a good memory? I believe I have.

- J. Hall.
15 May, 1895.
302. Well, tell me what the other four were? I did not take much notice of them.
303. But tell the truth? I looked at one and the other but did not take much notice.
304. You did not take much notice? I said that this was the nearest one I had seen to the woman I had spoken of. I said why did not you tell me that it was such an important matter.
305. Did you not think it was an important matter? No, I did not.
306. Tell me how many weeks ago this was? I do not know whether it was four or five weeks ago.
307. Tell me the day of the week? It was on a Tuesday.
308. What time of the day? I suppose about half-past 3.
309. Who brought you there? Mr. Meagher's clerk.
310. Where did he bring you from? From my shop.
311. What do you mean, sir, by swearing that this was not an important matter. Do you not know, sir, that this man Dean had been convicted? Yes.
312. And that Mr. Crick was moving to have this matter reopened in the Assembly? Yes.
313. And did not you know the photo you were taken to see was the woman, Mrs. Seymour's? Yes.
314. What do you mean, sir, by swearing that it was not a matter of importance in recognising the photo. Why have you sworn that you thought it was not a matter of importance? I did not impress it on my mind. I did not think it was important.
315. Did you not know that this was a most important matter? I would not have gone if I could have helped it.
316. I am not asking you that;—did not you know it was a most important matter? I did not consider it so.
317. You did not? No.
- 317½. Did not you know that it was an important point in the case—that there was no evidence as to who got this poison? Up to that time I do not think I did.
318. Do you not read the papers, sir? Sometimes I do.
319. Have you not read the account of the trial? I did not read the whole of the evidence. Since I was drawn into the case I have read the reports in the papers.
320. Do not you know the position taken up by Messrs. Crick and Meagher? Yes.
321. Did not you read about the trial in the paper? About the beginning of the trial I did not.
322. Who first communicated with you about the matter? Crick and Meagher's clerk was the first to come to me.
323. When? During the previous week the clerk came down to me.
324. That is how long ago? About four or five weeks ago.
325. Is it your own shop? No; I am the manager of it. The owner of the shop leaves me in charge.
326. Who is the proprietor? Mr. T. P. Swindale.
327. Are you the only person in the shop? I am pretty well always there. I get away one afternoon in the week.
328. Are you in charge every day of the week? I am.
329. Is there any other person in the shop besides you? I am the only one in the shop.
330. Is there any one on the premises attached to the shop? Mrs. Robinson, Miss Robinson, Miss Lucas, and others. The house part of the shop is let out as a boarding establishment to Mrs. Robinson.
331. At the time you were speaking of, you were the only person in the shop? Yes.
332. You were not married then? No.
333. There was no shop-boy there? No.
334. The name outside is Swindale? Yes.
335. Your name is? John Hall.
336. Where is Mr. Swindale? He is generally at Rockdale.
337. It is his business? Yes.
338. You are in his service? Yes.
339. You knew of Dean being charged with this matter? Yes.
340. Did you know he was found guilty? Yes.
341. Were the police not at your place before your communications with Crick and Meagher? Yes; some member of the police force came twice.
342. Do you know his name? No.
343. Was it during the trial, or after the trial? I cannot tell exactly at what time.
344. Was it during the trial, or after the trial, that the constable came to your place? I believe the man had been tried at the police court; and they were trying to find out where the poison had been bought.
345. On your oath, did you tell him one word about this lady and your conversation with her? I do not remember.
346. Did you tell that constable what you have stated here to-day? No; beyond mentioning about the sale of the poison.
347. What did the constable ask you? The constable showed me a photograph, presumably of George Dean, and asked me if I had sold George Dean any poison. I said "No," and I showed him my poison-book. The second time he referred to any woman having bought poison. I said there was only one woman in my book, and that she had bought Rough on Rats; and then I described what she was like.
348. Did you tell him one word of what you have come to tell now? No; I do not remember doing so.
349. How long ago is that—about how many weeks? I do not know; I could not say.
350. Was it in March or April? About that time.
351. How do you come to remember this chance conversation with this woman eight or nine months ago and yet cannot remember the conversation I am alluding to? If I cannot remember how can I state it?
352. How can you remember one conversation and not the other? I can give you pretty well the conversation of the policeman—perhaps not his exact words. I remember things that have occurred a considerable number of times before that. The thing that impressed the matter on my mind is that I generally take particular notice of anyone that requires poison.
353. Will you swear that you have not spoken to Dean, or that he has not been in your shop? Not in the shop at Surry Hills. I understand that he is one of many who used to be at Woollahra when I was there.

J. Hall.
15 May, 1895.

354. When you were in Woollahra did you know Dean? I understand so. I have been told he was in our company on different occasions, and sometimes played billiards with us at Ackland's Hotel.
355. You did not know him by his name? No.
356. Where were you at that time employed? I had a business of my own in Ocean-street, Woollahra.
357. Where was Dean living? I suppose somewhere about there.
358. Will you swear that you have not played billiards with him at Ackland's? No, I cannot.
359. Do not you know that he has been in your shop at Ocean-street? He might have been, but I would not swear it.
360. Will you swear he was never at your shop in Ocean-street? No, I will not.
361. Have you seen photos of him lately? No; only those the policeman showed me.
362. While in Woollahra you did not know him as Dean? I may have known him and have forgotten it.
363. What time of the day was it that this lady came into your shop? I think in the afternoon.
364. Was she a stranger to you? Yes; a stranger to me.
365. How was she dressed? In some dark material with a light blouse.
366. Had she a bonnet on? A small bonnet.
367. She was a stranger to you? Yes; I did not know who she was, but I think I had seen her before.
368. When she came into your shop you did not know her? No; she was a stranger to me and I did not recognise her.
369. What time in the afternoon did she come into your shop? About 3 or 4 o'clock.
370. What kind of handbag was this? It was an ordinary lady's handbag as far as I can remember.
371. Cloth or leather? I did not take sufficient notice.
372. Can you give us any description of the umbrella? I cannot tell the colour, but I fancy it had a pearl or imitation pearl handle.
373. Will you not admit that that lady who was in this room might not be the lady who was in your shop? She might not be. I have said that all along.
374. You would not swear she was? No, I would not.
375. Explain to us about the sale of the arsenic? [Witness gives details of the poisons regulations to be seen on page 7 of his evidence.]
376. You swear you told this woman all that? Yes.
377. Will you swear that you told her substantially that? It was my impression I did.
378. You told her about having it labelled poison and I suppose you give the same answer to everybody? Yes.
379. You told her you would be under a penalty for selling it if you did not comply with the Act? Of course.
380. And suggested to her she should get a witness? Yes.
381. You said she remarked the quantity would not be very much for 6d., and that she only wanted a little for rats or vermin, and you told her it would be enough to poison a dozen people. Will you swear all this? No, it is my impression, but I will not swear to it positively.
382. Will you swear this? It is only my impression from memory.
383. You will not swear to it? How can I swear to a thing that happened about eight or nine months ago?
384. It was your impression that you had such a conversation? Yes.
385. You understand, I am not now speaking of the words used but of the essence of the words? Yes.
386. You said that you went on to converse friendly and that she asked you something? She said, "What would you do in case anyone was poisoned by arsenic?" and I said, "Send for a doctor." She said, "Being a chemist would not I know what to do?"
387. Did not you swear to this before "that you remember that you leaned against the drawers with your arms folded"? Yes.
388. Did not you swear that? I do not think I swore it. I am not going to swear what was an impression.
389. You said that this woman said she would try and get a witness? I never said anything of the kind.
390. Did not you swear that she said she would try and get a witness? No.
391. You will not swear to any of this matter? No, I give only my impression.
392. If this matter took place when the police came to you why did you not tell the police? It is not my business to tell about customers coming into the shop.
393. Although it was a stranger. That is your answer? Yes.
394. President.] When did you tell all this to Mr. Meagher's clerk; since the conviction? Yes.
395. Sir Julian Salomons.] You said that it was about five weeks ago that you were in Crick and Meagher's office? Yes; about that time.
396. Have you been there at any other time? Yes; I was in the next day.
397. Have you been there since that? No.
398. Of course you know that was since he was convicted? Yes. I have been talking to some relations about this matter, otherwise I would not be here.
399. Would you kindly tell me the names of these relations? I mentioned it in the presence of my father and mother, Captain John and Mrs. Hall.
400. What is he the captain of? He is an underwriter surveyor.
401. You know Dean was the captain of a North Shore steamer? No.
402. You know it now? Yes; I know it now.
403. You have travelled on the North Shore steamers? Yes.
404. Perhaps you have seen him? Not to my knowledge.
405. Who are the other persons you spoke to? My brother-in-law, John Bell. First of all, I did not mention this affair to John Bell.
406. Who did? My wife was the first.
407. You know there was a committee at North Shore? Yes.
408. And that public meetings were held there? Yes.
409. You read the paper? No; I do not always read the paper.
410. There are days when you do not read the paper at all? The paper is there, but I may not read it.
411. Did you know there were meetings over there? Yes.
412. The first person you began to talk to about this matter was your wife? Yes.

- J. Hall,
15 May, 1895.
413. Have you not stated yourself that that photo. you picked out was not like the person who was in your shop? To the best of my knowledge, I do not think that it was exactly like the woman.
414. Did not you say you did not think that was the woman? No; I have no recollection of having done so.
415. Will you swear that you did not think that photo. was not the photo. of the woman you saw in your shop? No.
416. How old was the woman who came to your shop? I do not know.
417. About how old? Rather over middle age—say about 55.
418. You said something about seeing her at Surry Hills? Yes, I have seen this woman some considerable time ago.
419. What do you mean by some considerable time ago? I think I saw her pass the shop in Albion-street, evidently going towards town, and I have seen her between Park and Crown streets.
420. How long is it since you left Albion-street? I live on the premises.
421. You think you have seen this woman? I would not swear to it.
422. You think you have seen her pass your shop? Yes, but I did not speak to her. I might have said, "Good evening." I sometimes do so to anyone passing the shop.
423. How long is it since you think you have seen her in Albion-street? About a couple of years.
424. You stated that this woman was a stranger, and you had never seen her before? Didn't I say I thought I recognised her?
425. Didn't you take her to be a stranger when she first came to your shop? Yes.
426. Can you give me any other particulars about this lady? No, I think I have given you all I can think of.
427. Did she have any jewellery on? I cannot tell you.
428. Not whether she had earrings or other jewellery? No, I could not.
429. Did you say that your father lived at North Shore? No, at Burwood.
430. Captain Hall, the underwriter? Yes.
431. Mr. Pilcher.] You have been asked whether you will swear this, that, or the other thing. In the account of what took place with some woman, have you any doubt whether substantially the conversation you have repeated took place? I have no doubt that it occurred as I have given it.
432. President.] As to the woman, you say you may have seen her at Surry Hills sometime ago; that you picked out a photograph out of four or five others; and that you saw Mrs. Seymour to-day. Do you believe that she is the woman? I have my doubts, but I believe she is the woman, or it is a very curious coincidence.
433. What do you mean by a coincidence? Well, the fact of her coming for poison.
434. Have you any recollection of having known Dean? No, I have not.
435. You said Dean was in your company at Ackland's Hotel;—do you recollect him? If I saw him I might.
436. You have never seen him, therefore you cannot say? No.
437. You made use of this expression: That you would not be in the position you are now if you had not mentioned it to your mother, father, and wife, and that your wife told Bell. Who told Bell? My wife.
438. How did Crick and Meagher get to know of it? Bell apparently told them.
439. You did not tell them? No.
440. You never volunteered the information? No, I would rather be out of it.
441. Did that woman who came into your shop have the imitation pearl umbrella in her hand? That is my impression. [Mrs. Seymour was at this stage again called into the room with her umbrella.]
442. Mr. Pilcher.] Having seen that lady with her umbrella as she came in just now, can you say, without being able to swear absolutely, whether you believe that is the woman who went into your shop? I can only say that the woman who came into the shop would not have stood as quietly as she stood in this room.
443. Do you believe that is the woman? I cannot swear that that is the woman. Her manner and style of walking rather impressed me, and her height and general features as being similar to the woman who came into my shop.

Kate Hughes sworn and examined:—

- Kate Hughes,
15 May, 1895.
444. Mr. Pilcher.] I believe you go by the name of Kate Walsh? Yes, sir.
445. But your real name is Kate Hughes? Yes.
446. Do you know Mrs. Seymour? Yes; I know her.
447. I believe you are not married—you are living with a man not your husband? Yes; I have been living with him for twelve years.
448. His name is Walsh? Yes.
449. About how many years have you known Mrs. Seymour? About fifteen or sixteen years, but during the last four and a half years I have known her better.
450. Where were you living during that time? At 21, Randall-street.
451. Where was she living? In Riley-street, Surry Hills.
452. During those last four and a half years did Mrs. Seymour visit your house at all? Yes.
453. Did you visit her? Yes; on one occasion.
454. How many times did she come to your house during the last four and a half years? On two or three different occasions.
455. She visited you on more than one occasion, then? Yes.
456. What did she come for? She came for a young lady at my place.
457. She was a girl not of immoral character, of course? No, sir.
458. Did she tell you where she was taking her to? She (Mrs. Seymour) told me that there was a gentleman waiting for her at Madame Rose's.
459. She called for a young lady to come to Madame Rose's because a gentleman was waiting for her? Yes.
460. Did she say anything else? She said the girl must not be long for the gentleman was in a hurry.
461. Did she take this young lady there? Yes, she took her there.
462. Did they go away? Yes, they both went away.
463. You have a daughter have you not? Yes.

464. How old is she? About 16 years of age.
465. Do you remember when your little girl was 12 years of age that Mrs. Seymour came to your house? Yes, when my little girl was playing the piano.
466. Did Mrs. Seymour say anything to you then about young girls? She said if I could get some nice young girls to take to her place it would be worth my while.
467. Mrs. Seymour came to your house on two or three different occasions to take the girl to Madame Rose's? Yes.
468. Have you seen Mrs. Seymour on other occasions getting young girls? Only on one occasion. Once when some man got shot in Riley-street.
469. Who was that? Archie Williams.
470. Then you went to Mrs. Seymour's house? Yes.
471. On that occasion you saw some young girls there? Yes; I saw three or four.
472. About what age were they? About 18 or 19 years of age.
473. Can you remember when you were 15 years of age. How old are you now? I am now 34.
474. Can you remember when you were a young girl? Yes. I can remember Mrs. Seymour being at Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Clifford's fifteen years ago.
475. Who were Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Clifford? Noted pickpockets.
476. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Clifford were well known criminals? Yes. They all went to Mrs. Clifford's house.
477. Did anyone else go there? Yes. Mrs. Pontifex used to go there.
478. Was she one of the same class of people? Yes.
479. As a young girl you had the misfortune to forget yourself, and had a baby? Yes.
480. You went to Mrs. Clifford's? Mrs. Jones took me to Mrs. Clifford's.
481. Did you know the character of Mrs. Clifford's place? No, not then.
482. Later you did? Yes.
483. You didn't know their characters at the time you went there? No; I did not.
484. Whilst you were at Mrs. Clifford's house have you ever seen any of these four women coming in with anything? Yes; with parcels.
485. What kind of parcels? Soft goods parcels.
486. How did they look then? They looked as if they had been out shopping.
487. What kind of things were they? Dress materials.
488. In large quantities? Yes.
489. Do you remember more than one of these women coming in with parcels? Yes, five or six of them. Mrs. Pontifex, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Clifford, and Mrs. Seymour. Mrs. Clifford was at home, and Mrs. Pontifex and the others used to come in carrying parcels.
490. For how long of your own knowledge did you observe that Mrs. Seymour kept company with these people? On two or three occasions, and then not till I saw her in Riley-street.
491. President.] Do you know how old Mrs. Dean is? No; I do not know.
492. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you see Mrs. Dean fifteen or sixteen years ago? No; I do not remember having seen her.
493. Did you know her at all? No; I did not know her at all.

[Witness withdrew.]

Robert Hannan sworn and examined:—

494. Mr. Pilcher.] You have been in the detective force of this Colony? Yes.
495. About how many years? For four or five years.
496. How many years in Victoria? I was in the detective force in Victoria about five years.
497. Are you in the detective force now? No, I resigned from the force altogether. Twenty years ago I was Inspector of Police in Fiji, and resigned both here and in Victoria.
498. You resigned from the force altogether? I did.
499. From any act of impropriety? No of my own desire.
500. Had you a good record during your service? Yes, I had.
501. Did you ever get any black marks? No, I have never had any black marks.
502. What was your rank? I was a second-class detective in New South Wales and also in Victoria.
503. Did you know Mrs. Seymour in Victoria? Yes.
504. By what name did you know her? By the name of Carrie Asprey.
505. How do you spell it? Asberry, but it is written as Asprey.
506. What character did she bear in Melbourne? A very indifferent one. She was a shoplifter, pick-pocket, and an associate of thieves.
507. Did you know her in Sydney? Yes, for about sixteen years.
508. During the last five years? I have not seen her for the last twelve years.
509. Did you see her between sixteen years and four years ago? Yes, I saw her at the place of a man named Ellis, or "Yorkey Bill." During this period I have been sanitary inspector at Newtown.
510. During those four years can you say what character she bore in Sydney, and the kind of company she kept? She was the associate of bad people; a woman named Green was her companion, and "Yorkey Bill."
511. Any others? A man named Gaynor, a noted pickpocket.
512. Anybody else? No, I do not remember anybody else.

John Edgar sworn and examined:—

513. Mr. Pilcher.] Your name is John Edgar? Yes.
514. You lived at 411, Riley-street, Surry Hills? Yes.
515. When did you go to live there? Close on two years ago.
516. What are you? In a bicycle warehouse.
517. Which warehouse? In a place of my own.

Kate Hughes.
15 May, 1895.

R. Hannan.
15 May, 1895.

J. Edgar.
15 May, 1895.

- J. Edgar. 518. You are the proprietor? Yes.
- 15 May, 1895. 519. Is this place in Riley-street your private house? Yes.
520. Are you an importer or a manufacturer of bicycles? Just a bicycle repairer.
521. Called a bicycle hospital in the old country? Yes.
522. Whilst you were living there did Mrs. Seymour live in Riley-street? Yes, she lived next door.
523. Do you know Madame Rose's house? Yes; Madame Rose's was at the corner of Collins-street.
524. Your house was nearly opposite then? Yes.
525. Did you live next door to Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
526. During the time you were there did you ever see Mrs. Seymour going anywhere? Yes, into Madame Rose's.
527. Was it in the day-time or at night-time? Principally at night; I was only there on Sunday and at night.
528. How often was that? I have seen her many a time.
529. Going to Madame Rose's at night? Yes.
530. Did you know Mrs. Seymour's daughter, Mary Seymour? Yes.
531. Was she living with her mother? Yes.
532. Did you ever see her going anywhere? Yes.
533. Where to? Madame Rose's.
534. At what time of the day? It was at night.
535. Have you seen that happen more than once? I am not certain of more than once, but certain of once.
536. What time of the day was it? On Sunday.
537. At what time? On Sunday afternoon.
538. Alone? Yes.
539. From her mother's house? Yes.
540. Did she go into Madame Rose's? I did not take particular notice; she went over for her mother.
541. President.] Did she return almost immediately? Yes; in a few minutes.
542. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you ever see her go to Madame Rose's on any other occasion;—Mrs. Dean, I mean? I have seen her, but would not like to swear to more than once.
543. What do you mean by that? I do not know whether she went into the house or not. I have seen her go in that direction.
544. Whether she went in or not you cannot say? No, I cannot say.
545. Your house is very nearly opposite Madame Rose's? Yes.
546. Is that a proper representation of the way the houses are situated [rough sketch produced];—where was your house? Right opposite.
547. Where was the entrance to Madame Rose's? In Collins-street.
548. You saw this girl go in that direction? Yes; from the verandah of my house.
549. Suppose you were sitting in your verandah, could you see whether anyone went into the side door of Madame Rose's in Collins-street? No, not very well. You could see them go to the door, but there was a little lane.
550. There was a lane at the back of Madame Rose's? Yes, and a back gate.
551. If you were sitting in your verandah could you see a person go in at the side door;—could you see him go in? Yes.
552. When you say you saw her going in you would not know where she went in? No.
553. She went in the direction of Madame Rose's? Yes.
554. At what hour in the night? Just after tea-time.
555. Up to what hour have you seen her cross in that direction? Up to about 9 o'clock.
556. At night? Yes.
557. Did she turn in at either of the gates? Yes, one or the other.
558. Show it to me—[rough sketch produced];—suppose that is the corner of Collins-street and that is the door, where is the gate? Close on to Madame's house.
559. You do not know whether the entrance was to Madame's or to next door? No.
560. Is that gate in the same position now? I believe so.
561. Would you recognise the gate if you saw it? Yes.
562. Did you ever see any people at Mrs. Seymour's? Yes.
563. What class of people? Very gaily-dressed girls.
564. About what age were they? About twenty to thirty years of age.
565. Did you often see them? Yes; on several occasions.
566. Ever in the evening? No; I do not remember.
567. Never in the evening? No; it was on a Sunday afternoon.
568. What do you mean by gaily-dressed girls;—girls with fancy feathers? I would not take them to be respectable girls.
569. President.] Were they girls of light character? Yes; they were gay girls.
570. Mr. Pilcher.] What means of approach did they use in getting into Mrs. Seymour's house? The back gate.
571. Whilst these gay girls were going to Mrs. Seymour's house, Miss Seymour was living with her mother? Yes; she was living with her mother.
572. Sir Julian Salomons.] The only time you saw Mary Seymour go into Madame Rose's house was on a Sunday afternoon? Yes.
573. She went over for her mother? Yes.
574. On other occasions you said you saw her go in other directions? Yes.
575. Opposite her house is a street called Collins-street;—Madame Rose's house is at the corner of Collins-street? Yes; at the corner.
576. What is the time you said you saw her go in the evening? About 6 o'clock.
577. What is the latest time? I did not take particular notice.
578. Would not she go through Collins-street and pass the door of Madame Rose's going into town? Yes; to go to the tram.
579. Would it not be an ordinary thing to pass through Collins-street? Yes.
580. Madame Rose's is at the corner? Yes.

581. And the tram is in Crown-street? Yes.
582. How long were you living there? About two years.
583. And when did you leave there? About two years ago.
584. You will admit that Miss Seymour had her bonnet and cloak on in the ordinary way? I cannot remember that.
585. Your house is right next door? Yes; the very next house.
586. And you left about two years ago? Yes.
587. Mr. Pilcher.] On those occasions when you saw Mary Seymour walk in the direction of Madame Rose's you could see up to the door, and would know if anyone went in? Yes; I could see anyone that went in.
588. What did you see? She went either to one door or the other, or straight on.
589. Sir Julian Salomons.] She might, on the occasion you saw her, have been going in to town? Yes; she might.
590. Mr. Pilcher.] The other side of the road would be the more convenient way to go? Perhaps so.
591. Dr. Jones.] From your house can you command a view of Madame Rose's door? Yes.
592. You can say positively if anyone entered Madame Rose's door or not? Yes.
593. It is quite possible to do so? Yes.
594. President.] You say you lived next door to Mrs. Seymour;—from everything you saw there, would you look upon her house as a respectable place? It did not have a very good name.
595. It was not a respectable place then? It did not have a very good name.
596. You are married? Yes; I am a married man.
597. Is it the sort of place you would avoid and make your wife avoid? Yes. I was not married then.
598. Mr. Pilcher.] If you had been married you would not have lived there? No.
599. Sir Julian Salomons.] I put it to you, sir, as a man, did you ever see anything wrong on the part of Miss Seymour—on your oath? No; I cannot say I did.
600. President.] How old was she—a grown up girl? Yes; she was grown up.
601. Was she at home on Sunday when these girls gaily dressed were there? Yes.
602. Have you seen her talking to them? Yes.
603. Mr. Pilcher.] Outside of her mother's house, you have only seen her in the street? Yes.
604. You would not see her at anything wrong there? No.
605. Sir Julian Salomons.] You do not deny that, sitting on your verandah, you could see a view of Madame Rose's door? No.
606. Mr. Pilcher.] At the time you spoke of, you did not know whether she went in to town or in to Madame Rose's? No.

[Witness withdraw.]

William Andrew Kneen sworn and examined:—

607. Mr. Pilcher.] You are a tailor by trade? Yes.
608. And at present at Peapes and Shaw's? Yes.
609. You lodged with Mr. Edgar when he lived in Riley-street? Yes; it was I who brought him into the house.
610. You were both bachelors? Yes; I was lodging there and brought him as a fellow lodger.
611. Do you know Madame Rose's house? Yes; it was opposite.
612. How long did you lodge in Riley-street? Close on four years.
613. Who did you go there to lodge with? With a lady from Moore Park Road.
614. When did you leave? In February, 1892.
615. You lived with her for four years before that? Yes; approximately that. I was living with her for a little over four years.
616. You say you left in February, 1892? Yes.
617. Did you know Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
618. And her daughter, Mary Seymour? Yes.
619. What sort of house was Mrs. Seymour's? It was a nice, respectable place, of good external appearance.
620. Did you ever notice any people there? Yes, frequently.
621. What class of people? As far as I could see they were respectable, but I had my suspicions. Some of the girls appeared respectable, but I knew them to be frequenters of Madame Rose's.
622. Were these girls often at Mrs. Seymour's? Yes; I could see them coming in the back of an evening after I got home, between 6:30 and 7 o'clock.
623. Was this a common occurrence? It happened two or three times a week.
624. Did you ever see any of these girls go anywhere from Mrs. Seymour's? Yes; they used to go from Mrs. Seymour's to Madame Rose's.
625. During the time you were living there was Mary Seymour living with her mother? Yes.
626. Did you ever see Mary Seymour in company of any of these girls? Yes; I used to see her with those girls in Mrs. Seymour's back yard.
627. Did they appear to know one another? Yes; doubtless.
628. Did you ever see Mrs. Seymour herself go into Madame Rose's? Yes; often.
629. In the night-time or in the daytime? Both night and day.
630. What part of the day would you be away at business? From half-past 8 o'clock in the morning to about half-past 6 o'clock at night.
631. Were you at home on Sunday? Yes.
632. In the week day you would be away all day? Yes.
633. You would be at home every night, and Saturday afternoon and Sundays? Yes; unless we went out anywhere.
634. Did you ever see Mary Seymour go to Madame Rose's? Yes; I have seen her in the morning, before 8 o'clock, go over with a jug in her hand; and I have also seen her going there on Sundays.
635. Was the jug she carried empty or full? She used to carry it by her side. I cannot say whether there was anything in it.

W. A. Kneen.
15 May, 1895.

- W. A. Kneen. 636. You saw her go into Madame Rose's on Sundays? Yes.
637. Often on a Sunday? Yes.
- 16 May, 1895. 638. About what time? Just after dinner; in fact, just before Mr. Rose died she used to go for a cab for him on Sunday afternoons.
639. President.] There was a Mr. Rose, then? Yes; he was Madame Rose's husband.
640. Mr. Pilcher.] This visiting of Mary Seymour, did it go on all the time you were there? Yes; we often used to watch them from the dining-room of our house.
641. Have you seen Mary Seymour anywhere at night? No.
642. When used you to see her? In the early morning, when I came back from my ride on my bicycle.
643. Did girls visit Madame Rose's in the daytime as well as in the nighttime? Yes.
644. Was Madame Rose's house frequented by gentlemen in the day-time? Yes; I would be working at home, and I invariably saw women go in there. A cab would drive up, and a gentleman would walk across and go in.
645. From your own observation, then, the house was frequented by gentlemen in the day-time? Yes.
646. And also by girls? Yes.
647. From your own observation, the cabs of the gentlemen used to stop where? Just round the corner in Collins-street, off Riley-street. [Rough sketch of locality produced.]
648. Which door was open? The gentlemen invariably went in the front door, and the ladies would go in the wicket-gate.
649. Is the wicket gate an entrance to Madame Rose's? Yes.
650. And the girls used to go in there? Yes; through the wicket-gate.
651. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where did the cabs drive up to? In front of the iron sheds in Riley-street.
652. And then the gentlemen would get out? Yes.
653. And walk away? Yes, across Collins-street, and fall in to Madame Rose's door.
654. You have seen gentlemen drive up frequently? Yes; I have seen them often.
655. It has been stated that this is an assignation house? Yes; I am of that opinion.
656. This shop of Mrs. Seymour's—what kind of a shop was it? Presumably a greengrocer's shop.
657. How many years ago is it since you left there? I left in February, 1892.
658. At the time you lived there you say you saw the daughter, Mary Seymour, going across to Madame Rose's with a jug? Yes.
659. How many years ago was that? I could not say, but I saw her on several occasions.
660. Perhaps it was a regular thing? I think I saw her about four times.
661. That was in the day-time, was it not? Yes; invariably in the morning, when I was out for a ride on my bicycle—as I was returning from the cricket-ground.
662. She was a little girl then? No; not very little.
663. About what age? About 18 or 19 years of age.
664. Mr. Pilcher.] How old is she now? Twenty-one.
665. Sir Julian Salomons.] When you saw her going with the jug, how many years ago was that? It was about 1890 or 1891.
666. You say you have seen her about four times going with the jug? Yes.
667. And you could see Madame Rose's door from where you were? The Riley-street frontage, yes.
668. Have you seen these girls getting things from Mrs. Seymour's shop? Yes; one girl whom Mrs. Seymour said was a servant.
669. Have you been into Mrs. Seymour's shop? Yes; frequently.
670. You have bought things there? Yes.
671. For three years you were living next door? Yes; three years or upwards.
672. Mr. Pilcher.] Where did the cabs stop? Next door, in Riley-street.
673. Where would the gentlemen go to? The side door.
674. How far would it be from Madame Rose's door? About 50 yards, in any case.
675. These cabs stopped in the daytime there? No; in the evening.
676. At night, where? In front of the cottage next to Madame Rose's. On one occasion it was half-past 7.
677. At 11 or 12 o'clock at night, where? I cannot say where cabs would stop then.
678. Sir Julian Salomons.] You have never seen cabs at any other times than those you mention? No; only on Sunday afternoons.
679. The only time you saw a cab in front of the door was on Sunday? Yes; when Mr. Rose went for a drive.
680. Mr. Pilcher.] Was your house so situated that you could see anyone walk into Madame Rose's? Yes; I have a full view from my own room the moment I get out of bed.
681. When you say these girls went into Madame Rose's, you state what you saw? Yes.
682. When you speak of Mary Seymour, you saw her going to Madame Rose's? Yes.
683. Which way did you come back from your ride on your bicycle? Always along Collins-street.
684. And you met Mary Seymour where? Crossing Riley-street in Collins-street, going to Madame's.
685. Have you seen girls go from Mrs. Seymour's to Madame Rose's? On numbers of occasions.
686. Sir Julian Salomons.] You saw Mary Seymour going, you say, with a jug;—have you ever seen her do anything wrong of any kind? No, nothing further than seeing her go into Madame Rose's.
687. Mr. Pilcher.] Have you ever seen her in a place where she could do anything wrong? I have seen her going into an immoral house.
688. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you seen any act of impropriety of any kind on her part? No.
689. President.] You could tell what the girls were who went there? I formed my own conclusions.
690. Would you arrive at any such conclusion about Mary Seymour? No; I never thought of that.
691. Did you ever see anything in Mary Seymour's conduct to give you the idea that she was not respectable? No; she was always respectably dressed.
692. Sir Julian Salomons.] You lived next door for three years and never saw anything wrong on her part? No.
693. President.] You said Mrs. Seymour's shop presumably was a greengrocer's;—what do you mean by presumably? I thought it was a blind.
694. Can you make out what the girl went to Madame Rose's with the jug in her hand for? No.
695. Did Mrs. Seymour sell milk as well as vegetables? I cannot say. 696.

696. How did she carry the jug? Carelessly by her side in her hand.
 697. Sir Julian Salomons.] When you say you saw her it was about the same hour in the morning, about breakfast-time? Yes.
 698. President.] Do you know of your own knowledge whether Mrs. Seymour sold vegetables, fruit, lollies, and cigars? Yes.
 699. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you bought things there? Yes; lollies.
 700. Dr. Jones.] She supplied other people with vegetables? Yes.
 701. Mr. Pilcher.] A proper business was carried on in this shop? Yes.
 702. President.] You seem to form conclusions about people;—did you see anything in Mary Seymour that would lead you to think she was of a light character? No.
 703. Mr. Pilcher.] You saw very little of her and she might or might not have been? Yes.
 704. Sir Julian Salomons.] You never saw anything to lead you to believe there was anything wrong with her character? No.

W. A. Kneen.
 15 May, 1895.

[Witness withdrew.]

James Reid Heath sworn and examined:—

705. Mr. Pilcher.] Your name is? James Reid Heath.
 706. You are a wood and coal merchant? Yes.
 707. And you lived in Riley-street, Surry Hills? Yes.
 708. How long ago? About seven years back.
 709. Which house did you live in? I lived next door to Madame Rose's, opposite Mrs. Seymour's.
 710. In Riley-street? Yes; it extended to the back street, the same as the other houses.
 711. Where is the lane? At the back. [Sketch of locality produced.]
 712. Do you know Madame Rose's premises? Yes.
 713. Do you know the gate close to Madame Rose's house? Yes.
 714. Is that a wicket-gate? Yes.
 715. Where does that gate lead to? It leads into Madame Rose's yard. Except in the evening time most people went in there to Madame Rose's.
 716. How long did you live there? Two years.
 717. Did Madame Rose live there then? Yes.
 718. And Mrs. Seymour? Yes, Mrs. Seymour's house was opposite to Madame Rose's.
 719. She kept a shop? Yes, a small shop.
 720. During the time you were living there did you see anything going on between Mrs. Seymour and Madame Rose? They used to be friends, visiting backwards and forwards.
 721. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you seen Madame Rose going to Mrs. Seymour's? Yes.
 722. Are you sure of the woman? Yes, I am sure.
 723. She went by the name of Jones, did she not? Yes.
 724. You say Mrs. Seymour and Madame Rose used to exchange visits? Yes, often.
 725. How often? Daily.
 726. Did you see any other people going to Madame Rose's? Only the daughter, Mary Seymour; she used to go errands for Madame Rose.
 727. You say Mary Seymour did what? Go errands. She used to be called over from her mother's place by Madame Rose and her husband.
 728. Mr. Pilcher.] How old was she then? I should say about 14 or 15 years of age, and a good big sized girl. I think she was going to school.
 729. Where did she go to school? To the Crown-street school.
 730. Your impression was that she went errands for Madame Rose? Yes; I have heard Mrs. Rose call Mary and have seen her go to the butcher's.
 731. From what you saw of the two families—Mrs. Seymour's and Madame's—her daughter and they were very intimate? Yes.
 732. Sir Julian Salomons.] Mr. Rose was alive then? Yes.
 733. And you say these two families were friendly and intimate? Yes; the little girl used to come to my house for lemonade for Madame Rose;—two dozen lemonade and soda-water.
 734. President.] She came from Madame Rose? Yes.
 735. Mr. Pilcher.] You knew that Madame Rose's was an assignation house? Yes; every one knew that.
 736. Did you ever notice any girls at Mrs. Seymour's? Yes; I have seen ladies go in and out, but I did not know who they were.
 737. When you say that you saw this little girl sent messages, do you remember her being sent to any particular house? On one occasion we had a little girl, a servant, and she told her that she had to go to the "Pine Cottage."
 738. What was the "Pine Cottage"? I believe it belonged to Madame Rose.
 739. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you been there? No; I have not.
 740. Mr. Pilcher.] Have you seen any people go in and out? No.
 741. Where is it situated? Either in Crown-street or Albion-street.
 742. And it is known as "Pine Cottage"? Yes.
 743. Did you see Mary coming back? I cannot remember.
 744. Do you know what that "Pine Cottage" was? I do not know.
 745. Have you seen this "Pine Cottage"? There are two "Pine Cottages"—one in Crown-street and one in Albion-street, and I do not know which it is.
 746. Do you remember being a member of a vigilance committee? I was not a member of the committee, but I complained of cars stopping at my door all hours of the night, preventing me sleeping. I applied to Mr. Ardill's people, and a vigilance committee was appointed.
 747. Did you go with the vigilance committee? Yes.
 748. And you took part in their proceedings? Yes.
 749. You set yourselves to watch Mrs. Seymour's house and Madame Rose's? Yes.
 750. When was that? Six months before I left; about seven or eight years ago.
 751. Whilst you were watching Madame Rose's did Mrs. Seymour do anything to you? Yes; at the side gate she threw a bucket of water over me.

J. R. Heath.
 15 May, 1895.

- J. R. Heath. 752. At what hour was this? About 10 or 11 o'clock at night.
 15 May, 1895. 753. President.] Were you watching Madame Rose's house? Yes; and I made a complaint.
 754. There were two or three men with you, were there not? Yes; there were four.
 755. Who threw the bucket of water over you? Mrs. Seymour.
 756. Where from? The side gate.
 757. Are you certain that Mrs. Seymour threw it over you? Yes.
 758. When was this? At 8 or 9 o'clock at night.
 759. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you go on that night to Mrs. Seymour's house? No; I never was in Mrs. Seymour's house.
 760. Did you have any other experience that night or any other night? Not more than abuse from Madame Rose and Mrs. Seymour.
 761. There is no doubt about Mrs. Seymour, I suppose? No; she was the worst as regards the abuse.
 762. Do you remember coming across anybody in bed that night? No.
 763. Or any other night? No.
 764. Do you remember seeing a girl? No.
 765. Were you only once with this vigilance committee? Yes; about seven or eight years ago.
 766. Did this little girl play in your yard? Yes.
 767. Do you remember when she was playing in your yard that she was called to go to Madame Rose's? Yes; she has been called several times. There was a window in Madame Rose's house from which they used to call her.
 768. Do you remember on any of these occasions Mary making any reply? No, I do not remember.
 769. Nothing about "Pine Cottage"? No, I do not remember.
 770. Do you remember her saying anything at any time what she was wanted for, or having to go anywhere? Yes, on one occasion she said that she supposed she would have to go round to "Pine Cottage," or it is a message for "Pine Cottage."
 771. Cannot you remember what else she said? No, I do not.
 772. Did she say anything about gentlemen then? No.
 773. Or about someone having come? No.
 773½. Sir Julian Salomons.] It is seven years since you were there? Yes.
 774. She was then about 12 years of age? I do not know exactly how old she was.
 775. Was she going to school at that time? Yes.
 776. She was always respectably dressed? Oh, yes; always.
 777. Whose children did she play with? Some little girls in the back.
 778. How old were your children? I have one 4 years old and another 2 years old.
 779. Mary used to play in your yard? Yes.
 780. The shop, as far as you can judge, was a bond fide shop? Oh, yes, it had that appearance.
 781. You have been away for some years from there? Yes.
 782. Mr. Pilcher.] To all appearance you say this was a bond fide shop;—what opinion did you form of it at that time? I had not a very good opinion of it.
 783. What do you mean? I thought the people that frequented it were not first-class characters.
 784. What class of characters did you notice? Men mostly.
 785. What class of men? Racecourse men. I have known some of them in Melbourne when I kept an hotel there.
 786. Who did you know there? One was Black Albert.
 787. What were their characters? Spielers and thieves.
 788. Were they not as a matter of fact criminals? No, I cannot say that.
 789. What is a spelier? Card-players and men who throw dice at racecourses.
 790. President.] You say at this time the little girl would be about 12 years old? Yes, about that.
 791. You let her play with your children? Yes.
 792. Did her mother appear to bring her up carefully? Yes, she was always at home.
 793. Did you see anything about the child objectionable? No, it was the mother I did not care for.
 794. How did she bring her up? She used to be about the streets and the back lane, these were the principal places where they used to play.
 795. She was always well dressed? Yes.
 796. Did she appear to be well cared for? Yes, she was always well-dressed.
 797. Sir Julian Salomons.] She was not neglected? No.
 798. Mr. Pilcher.] She used to frequent Madame Rose's? Yes, the best part of her time, on Sundays and in the evenings. I suppose Madame Rose gave her something for running errands.
 799. President.] Was there anything queer at Madame Rose's on Sundays? Oh yes, on every day in the week.
 800. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you ever say anything to Mrs. Seymour about her daughter going to Madame Rose's? I did say to Mrs. Seymour once that I was astonished at her allowing the child to run between her house and Madame's and I think that was the first oustart of her starting at me. She used to throw stones at me when I was in my buggy.
 801. Who threw stones at you? Little Mary.
 802. Why? I asked her and she told me that her mother told her to do so.
 803. Mr. Pilcher.] That was because you spoke to her mother about Mary going to Madame Rose? Yes.

[Witness withdrew.]

THURSDAY, 16 MAY, 1895.

[The Commission met in the Board Room, Chief Secretary's Office, at 10 a.m.]

Present:—

FRANCIS EDWARD ROGERS, Esq., Q.C. (PRESIDENT.)

PHILLIP SYDNEY JONES, Esq., M.D. | FREDERIC NORTON MANNING, Esq., M.D.

The Hon. Sir Julian Salomons, Kt., Q.C., M.L.C., and Mr. C. G. Wade appeared on behalf of the Crown; and the Hon. Chas. Edward Pilcher, Q.C., M.L.C., instructed by Messrs. Crick and Meagher, appeared for George Dean.

Phillip Henry Williams sworn and examined:—

P. H.
Williams.
16 May, 1895.

804. Mr. Pilcher.] Were you at one time in the police force of New South Wales? Yes; I was for fourteen and half years.
805. Did you then leave the Service? Yes. I had reached the rank of a first-class detective without a scratch against my name. I then took a little drop of drink, and they reduced me. I then took too much drink, and was further reduced. I grew careless, and would not answer a report, called for by Mr. Carpenter. I was then dismissed. While in service I was on special duty on many occasions; notably during the whole of the time the two Princes were on a visit to this Colony.
806. Was taking this drink the only charge brought against you? Yes.
807. Was that after you had worked yourself up to the top of the tree? Yes.
808. Do you know Mrs. Seymour? I knew Mrs. Carrie Asprey.
809. Have you seen her about this place the last day or two? No; I have not been here. I saw her about four years since, keeping a little shop in Riley-street. [At this stage Mrs. Seymour was brought into the Board Room.]
810. Mr. Pilcher.] [Pointing to Mrs. Seymour.] Is this the woman? That is the woman I remember as Carrie Asprey.
811. How long ago did you first know her in Sydney? Fourteen or fifteen years ago.
812. How long is it since you left the police force? About six years.
813. You will see that after you left the police force, and the time you last saw her, four years ago, there is a difference of two years;—did you see anything of her during those two years? I believe she was still keeping a shop in Riley-street.
814. Up to the time of six years ago, when you left the police force, can you tell me from your own knowledge what her character was? She was one of the cleverest women I ever knew; I would have caught her several times had not a man put me away.
815. What was his name? Tommy Jones. And he was always on the watch to give her warning. He was a West Australian man.
816. You say she was one of the cleverest women you ever knew; I want to know what you mean by that; what was her character? She was known to the police force as a woman of bad character, clever at picking pockets, and a harbinger of thieves in her house in Norton-street, Surry Hills.
817. When she lived at Norton-street can you tell me from your own knowledge what sort of a place it was? I really cannot say what the house inside was like, it was a private house, and I saw well known thieves going in and out of the place.
818. Was that while Mrs. Seymour was living there? Yes.
819. Have you yourself, as a detective, been to the house in Norton-street for any purpose? Yes; I went there to arrest her, and I then saw a little child there; she was a nice little girl; I went the next day after arresting Carrie Asprey to see if the child had been left by herself, and then found that the house was empty.
820. How long ago was that? It is thirteen or fourteen years ago.
821. Do you know whether that child you then saw is the present Mrs. Dean? I do not know.
822. President.] How do you describe that child? She was a little girl 8 or 9 years of age, with fair hair.
823. Can you tell me of your own knowledge whether that child continued to live with Mrs. Seymour subsequent to the date on which you locked her up? Yes; I saw her about twelve months after that, standing on the verandah with Mrs. Asprey, in the very same place in Norton-street.
824. Was it the same child? Yes; the very same child.
825. Of your own knowledge do you know whether that child continued to live with Mrs. Asprey? Yes; I saw that child in the shop in Riley-street with Mrs. Asprey when I was passing.
826. How old would this child be then? I saw her until she got up to 11 or 12 years of age.
827. Was she Mrs. Asprey's child? I do not know.
828. Did you understand, whether rightly or wrongly, that she was her child? Yes.
829. I asked you a little while ago whether you ever went to Mrs. Asprey's house in Norton-street to look for anyone;—did you go there? Yes; I went on one occasion from the Quarter Sessions to look for a pickpocket who had been committed for trial, but who was out on bail. I went to Mrs. Asprey's house in Norton-street, and found him ill in bed. He died there, and was buried from there.
830. Sir Julian Salomons.] How many years ago was that? It is about fourteen years, I think.
831. Could you fix the time by the Quarter Sessions of fourteen years ago? I do not think so.
832. Do you know who the Judge of the Quarter Sessions was on this occasion? I cannot remember distinctly; it was either Judge Wilkinson or Judge Dowling.
833. Do you know who the doctor was who attended this man? I do not.
834. Do you remember who was the Crown prosecutor? I do not know; there were so many of them.
835. Do you think it could have been as long back as fourteen years ago? I cannot tell the exact date, for I burned all my books and papers when I left the force, and I have nothing to refer to now.
836. Mr. Pilcher.] Is the character you have given of Mrs. Asprey to-day that which she bore during the whole of the time you were in the police force? Yes.
837. Sir Julian Salomons.] What is your employment now? I am employed on the racecourses, putting out bad characters.

- P. H. Williams
16 May, 1896.
838. What,—for the Australian Jockey Club? No; for the associated clubs. I go to Roschill, Kensington, and Lillie Bridge racecourses; and I receive £1 per day for this work.
839. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you remember, on one occasion, watching Mrs. Asprey in Oxford-street, when crimes were being frequently committed there? Yes.
840. What crimes were they? Pocket-picking.
841. What was the result of your watching Mrs. Seymour or Mrs. Asprey on this occasion? I saw her attempting to pick pockets, but a certain man named Jones warned her, and prevented me from making any arrest.
842. Is that the same man Jones you spoke of before? Yes; that is the same man. He had a black moustache, and wore a frock coat. He used to watch in the street, and as a signal to Mrs. Asprey draw his handkerchief two or three times through his hands. I did not take much notice of this on the first occasion; but seeing it again I thought he was putting me away, so I set a person to watch him, and he was seen to join Mrs. Asprey, and they both went away home together.
843. Have you ever seen Mrs. Seymour, or Asprey, endeavouring to commit a crime of this kind? Yes; I saw her in front of Farmer and Co.'s endeavour to pick pockets amongst a crowd of ladies. I was watching in Weir's opposite, when a certain person passed, and she immediately came out of the crowd and entered a Crown-street 'bus.

[Witness withdrew.]

Paul Hodgson sworn and examined:—

- P. Hodgson
16 May, 1896.
844. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you Mr. Hodgson? I am a night-watchman.
845. Since when have you taken the duties of night-watchman? Since July, 1893.
846. Do you mean that you are a night-watchman in the street? Yes. When I first took the duties, my beat was Riley-street and Crown-street, but lately I have worked Crown and Dowling Streets.
847. Do you say you began in July, 1893? Yes.
848. And how long did you work Crown and Riley Streets? For about twelve months.
849. By whom were you engaged as a night-watchman? By the residents in these streets.
850. And do these residents pay you for your work? Yes.
851. Amongst others did Mrs. Seymour contribute towards your payment? Yes.
852. Do you know where Mrs. Seymour lived? Yes; in Riley-street, opposite Collins-street.
853. Do you know where Madame Rose lived? Yes; on the corner of Collins and Riley Streets. [Witness drew a rough plan, showing the respective and relative positions of the houses occupied by Mrs. Seymour and Madame Rose, adding that Mrs. Seymour lived almost opposite Madame Rose.]
854. Did you know Mary Seymour, now Mary Dean? Yes; I knew her before she was married, in 1893.
855. Where was she living then? At her mother's house in Riley-street.
856. Did you know her before you began your duties as a night-watchman? I knew her by just seeing her in the shop.
857. After you were a night-watchman, did you ever see Mrs. Seymour go anywhere? Yes; I have seen her go into Madame Rose's both morning and night.
858. Were you night-watchman for Madame Rose, too? Yes; I was, and am at the present time.
859. And while night-watchman, have you seen Mrs. Seymour at Madame Rose's? Yes; she has gone over from her own place to mind the house while Madame Rose was out.
860. Have you seen her go into the house? Yes.
861. Have you seen her come out? Yes.
862. At what times? I have seen her go in and out at all times. I have seen her come out as late as 12 o'clock at night.
863. Have you ever seen Mary Seymour (now Mary Dean) anywhere about there? I have seen her in Madame Rose's.
864. In the house? I have seen her go inside.
865. Do you remember any particular occasion or occasions on which this has occurred? On several occasions, when I have been to Mrs. Seymour's shop on Mondays for money someone in the shop has referred me to Madame Rose's house, where Mary Seymour has opened the door to me and called her mother out. Mary Seymour has been present whilst I have been paid.
866. Who do you say referred you to Madame Rose's house? Some young women in Mrs. Seymour's shop.
867. Was this on several occasions? Yes; it was not an uncommon occurrence.
868. Who were these young girls in Mrs. Seymour's shop who referred you to Madame Rose's? There were two or three young women whom I have seen at Mrs. Seymour's.
869. About what age were these young women? About 20, 21, and 19 years.
870. Why were they in the shop? I do not know—minding it, I suppose. They used to answer me when I went in for my money.
871. Were they always the same girls, or did you see different girls on different occasions? They were generally the same.
872. How many were there? I have seen three different girls.
873. You say you have seen Mary Dean, then Mary Seymour, in Madame Rose's house, when you have called there for your money, due for services as a night-watchman;—have you ever seen her there on any other occasions? Yes; I have seen her there in the daytime and at night. I have seen a messenger sent from Madame Rose's cross over to Mrs. Seymour's house.
874. Will you say exactly what you have seen in this respect? I have seen a party leave Madame Rose's house and cross the street to Mrs. Seymour's.
875. Was this person a man or a woman? A woman. I have seen her go across to Mrs. Seymour's house and return with Mary Seymour to Madame Rose's.
876. At what time in the day or night would that be? It was at night, after I had come on my beat at 10 o'clock.
877. Up to what hour do you remain on your beat? From 10 o'clock at night till 6 o'clock in the morning.
878. And did you see this while on your beat? Yes.

879. How often have you actually seen this happen? I cannot say how many times, but more than once. P. Hodgson.
I may safely say on several occasions.
880. At what time of the night did this happen? Between the hours of 10 and 2. I do not think I have seen her cross the road to Madame Rose's later than 2 o'clock. 16 May, 1895.
881. Did you notice any peculiarity about the windows or shutters of Mrs. Seymour's house in Riley-street? I did about the blinds.
882. What did you see? I saw that they were changed in colour two or three times in the night. My attention was drawn to this at first, and then I noticed it on different occasions.
883. Will you tell me exactly what you have seen? I have seen in the upstairs room, over the shop, a blue blind taken down and a red blind put in its place. Or else the change was made by working a lamp placed behind it.
884. Was your attention drawn to the change in the colour of the blind? Yes.
885. And then did you notice the blinds being changed? Yes.
886. When did you notice that these changes took place? When certain people were hanging about; walking up and down near Madame Rose's corner.
887. Do you know who these people were? I cannot say positively, but I have been warned by the police to watch them. I believe them to have been of the criminal class.
888. Will you describe what the colours and the changes were? One was red, I am sure; and the other was blue, I think.
889. And did you notice the change made when these persons, supposed to be criminals, were on the opposite corner on more than one occasion? Yes; it was a common occurrence, talked of by the neighbours. If the blue blind was up these people crossed from the opposite corner and entered Mrs. Seymour's house. If the red blind was up they went away. I am certain about them going when the red blind was up.
890. During the whole time you were on that beat, was the present Mrs. Dean living with her mother? To the best of my knowledge, yes. I have seen her there from time to time.
891. When you say that a lamp was placed behind this window casement, do you mean it showed up the colour of the blinds? Yes.
892. Sir Julian Salomons.] Who communicated with you first about this matter, and in reference to the evidence you have given to-day? No one. I have given this evidence of my own free will.
893. To whom did you go before you gave this evidence? To Messrs. Crick and Meagher.
894. And when did you go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher? I cannot give you the exact date.
895. How long after the trial, I should like to know? Within a week or two.
896. Cannot you be a little more particular than that? I never took down any dates, so I cannot remember any nearer.
897. Do you know George Dean? No.
898. Did you go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher after the speech was made in the Assembly announcing that this Commission would be appointed, and after all this excitement had arisen? Oh, no; it was before then, I think.
899. Now just reflect for one moment;—did you go to see Messrs. Crick and Meagher before all this excitement arose? I spoke to Mr. Meagher first of all.
900. When and where? At the Standard Theatre, in Sydney.
901. Was that before the excitement arose? I think it was; it was on a Sunday night.
902. How long was it after the trial? Two or three weeks, I should think.
903. Did you meet Mr. Meagher at the Royal Standard Theatre by accident? Yes.
904. Did you know him before you saw him there on that occasion? No. I was at the theatre, and I heard him mentioned as Mr. Meagher. I am in the habit of attending this theatre on a Sunday night to hear Mr. Thomas Walker lecture.
905. Do you know if Mr. Meagher is in the habit of attending to hear these lectures? I do not know. I do not think so.
906. Well, then, how did you know it was Mr. Meagher who you saw on this particular Sunday night? I heard him mentioned as Mr. Meagher, and I then went and spoke to him.
907. Oh; so you had a conversation with him, did you? Yes.
908. And when did you go to his office? The next day.
909. And how many times have you been to his office since then? Only once since then.
910. Then, am I to understand you to say you first met Mr. Meagher at the Standard Theatre on the Sunday night and you have been twice to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office in reference to this matter since then? Yes; that is all.
911. You will not deny that you knew the nature of the charge against Dean, and of his trial? No.
912. Did you know of the proceedings taken in the police court? No. We do not take the paper at home. I had heard something about a poisoning case, but I did not know that Mrs. Seymour was the person referred to in that trial, and that she was the Mrs. Seymour who kept the little shop in Riley-street.
913. Do you mean to say you never looked at the papers and read what was going on in the Dean case? No, I did not.
914. Do you mean to tell me, sir, that when this very matter was the talk and excitement of the whole place, and the newspapers for days, that you never read this case? No, I never did. I know there was a North Shore poisoning case, but I did not know who the people were or anything at all about it. As for reading the case, I might have seen a bit of it now and again, but I have no occasion to read the papers regularly, and I do not do it.
915. Do you mean to tell me you do not take in a newspaper, neither morning or evening? No; I live with my parents.
916. And where do you live with your parents? I live at Bronte, and it would be a job to get a paper there.
917. How far is it from the terminus of the tram-line? A 2-mile walk, all across the sand.
918. What time do you come into town and start on your beat? Generally by the 9 o'clock tram.
919. And what time do you go back home? I generally catch the 6:30 tram back home.
920. And you mean to tell me that you did not read the paper about the trial of this man Dean? No, I did not.

- P. Hodgson. 921. Now sir, what do you state you know, on your oath, about Mrs. Dean? I say I have seen her go into Madame Rose's house at different times on several occasions.
16 May, 1895.
922. At what time? Between 10 and 2.
923. Will you swear, sir, that you have seen her enter that house alone between 10 at night and 2 in the morning? Yes; I have seen her go in alone, and on one occasion I saw her come up in a cab at about 11 o'clock at night.
924. At what time do you say that was? About 11 o'clock.
925. Where did she come from? I do not know. She came up in a cab and went into Madame Rose's.
926. Was anyone with her on this occasion? Yes.
927. Who was with her? A gentleman.
928. At what time of the night do you say this was? Eleven o'clock.
929. How long ago is it since this happened? It was just after I started on my beat there. About a year and nine months ago.
930. Now, sir, why did you not tell Mr. Pilcher all this when he was questioning you? Because I was told only to answer the questions I was asked.
931. Who told you that? That gentleman (pointing to Mr. Pilcher); he told me that point blank.
932. Have you ever been in Madame Rose's house? No; but I have seen Mary Dean go there.
933. Up to what time do you say you have seen her go across to Madame Rose's in the morning? I say I have seen her go across to Madame Rose's between the hours of 10 and 2.
934. What is the latest time you have seen her enter that house? I cannot say any particular time; it may have been any time after 10 o'clock up till 2 o'clock. I have seen her go into Madame Rose's at all times up till 2 o'clock in the morning.
935. Well, have you seen her go in at half-past 10, 11, or 12 o'clock,—can you give me something more definite? No; I cannot tell you the exact time; I had no particular reasons for taking the time I saw her entering the house.
936. Will you swear, sir, that you have seen her go in that house between the hours of 1 and 2 in the morning? Yes, I have seen her go between 1 and 2; I told you I saw her go in between 10 and 2, and if she went in between 10 and 2 she must have gone between 1 and 2. I cannot swear to any particular hour or half hour when she went in, but I know I have seen her go in between the hours of 10 and 2.
937. Have you seen her there at exactly 2 o'clock? I tell you I will not fix the time, except that time I saw her come up in a cab with a gentleman, and then it was about 11 o'clock.
938. You have told us you saw Mr. Meagher and gave him certain information;—did you ever give any information to the police concerning this matter? Yes.
939. I suppose you will not deny that you heard of the excitement about this case, and the action of the defence committees, with regard to Dean's conviction? Yes; excitement was going on all round, and you could not miss it.
940. And yet you say you never gave any information to the police? No.
941. Nor to the Crown Solicitor's Office? No.
942. Do you pass the Court-house when going to your duty? No.
943. Did you attend the Court-house during any part of the trial? No.
944. I suppose you knew of the firm of Messrs. Crick and Meagher before you spoke to Mr. Meagher in the theatre? Oh, yes.
945. Did you know that Mr. Crick was a Member of the Legislative Assembly? Yes; certainly.
946. I suppose you are still a watchman on your beat? Yes.
947. And I suppose you will not deny there are policemen on that same beat? Yes; there are policemen there.
948. When do you say it was when you saw Mr. Meagher in the theatre? It was a short time after the trial.
949. Do you say it was about a year and nine months ago since you first saw Mrs. Dean enter Madame Rose's house? Yes; it was soon after I started on my beat—within a month or so of July, 1893.
950. And was this the time when you say you saw her enter the house between 1 and 2 in the morning? I did not say I saw her enter the house between 1 and 2,—not in the way you mean.
951. Did you not say you saw her drive up to the house at 11 o'clock? Yes.
952. And did you not say immediately after that you saw her go in there between 1 and 2? I said I have seen her several times between 10 and 2. I cannot give you any stated time, whether it was half past 1, or quarter to 2, half past 10, or 12 o'clock, or 1 o'clock. All these times are included between the hours of 10 and 2.
953. Will you swear you have seen Mrs. Dean go into Madame Rose's between 1 and 2 in the morning? What I swear is that up till 2 o'clock in the morning I have seen her go into Madame Rose's house. As I said before I cannot give you any stated times, but they were between 10 o'clock at night and 2 in the morning. And that has taken place on two or three occasions while I was there.
954. Can you swear how long ago this took place? It was while Mrs. Dean was living with her mother. And it began about a month after I started on the beat.
955. What is the last time you saw Mrs. Dean going into Madame Rose's? I cannot say. It may have been six months after I went on the beat. She moved some time after that with her mother.
956. Well, about what time? I cannot say.
957. What is the time nearest to now you have seen Miss Seymour (Mrs. Dean) go into that house? I cannot say.
958. You said you have been night watchman since July, 1893? Yes.
959. Is it about that time, within a month or two? Yes; within a few months of that time.
960. When? About January, 1894.
961. Where did they go after they left Riley-street? I cannot say.
962. Up to the time she moved you saw her going frequently into Madame Rose's? Yes.
963. President.] When did she move—can you tell me about the time? I forget how long ago.
964. You went on your beat at 10 o'clock in July, 1893;—how long was it after July, 1893? Several months after, but I did not take particular notice.
965. Would it be about January, 1894, that you saw Mrs. Dean going into Madame Rose's for the last time? Somewhere about then, but I could not say positively.

966. Do you book anything when people move? If I saw anybody moving at night I would.
967. Sir Julian Salomons.] Up to the time they went away how many times did you see Mrs. Dean (Mary Seymour) go into Madame Rose's? I cannot say.
968. How many times will you pledge your oath to? I would not swear.
969. About how many times? Dozens of times.
970. You saw that cab pull up at what door? At Madame Rose's door—the side door, in Collins-street.
971. Mr. Pilcher.] What door? The side door in Collins-street, near the gate.
972. Sir Julian Salomons.] Before you spoke to Mr. Meagher, you said that some person had spoken to you about this trial? Yes; some person mentioned something to me.
973. Did you read the trial in the paper before speaking to Mr. Meagher? No; I did not read the trial in the paper.
974. And only through some person speaking to you you spoke to Mr. Meagher? Yes.
975. You would not have connected the two people together? No; I would not.
976. If you had read the paper you would not have connected this with Miss Seymour (Mary Dean)? No; I would not.
977. Did you know that that girl had married Mr. Dean? No; I did not know she was married.
978. Mr. Pilcher.] At the time they lived in Riley-street they were Mrs. and Miss Seymour? Yes.
979. President.] Where did they go to from Riley-street? Mr. Pilcher to President: I am under the impression they went to Mosman's Bay, but am not certain. They were married at Surry Hills, and went to live at North Shore, and the mother went to live with them. She left them some time after.
980. Mr. Pilcher.] At the time you were on your beat you knew her as Miss Seymour? Yes.
981. You did not know of the wedding? No, I did not.
982. By the name of Mrs. Dean you would not know her? No.
983. What police were on your beat when you were night watchman? I do not know; they are changed every month. Some times there are two or three different men.
984. Did you collect your money in the daytime? Yes, about mid-day.
985. Was it always Mary Seymour that opened the door? Not always.
986. On several occasions when you went to Madame Rose's, Mary Seymour opened the door? Yes.
987. President.] Did you first become a night watchman in July, 1893? No.
988. What were you doing before? I was doing duty with the watchman lower down.
989. What before that? I was a carpenter by trade.
990. How old are you? Twenty-seven years of age.
991. Did you know George Dean at all? No; I have never seen him to my knowledge.
992. You never saw him in Riley-street? No; I did not see him, as far as I know.
993. How many times have you seen Mary Seymour going into Madame Rose's? Oh, a good number of times.
994. At night? Yes.
995. Between 10 o'clock and 2 o'clock? Yes.
996. Under what circumstances? Once in a cab with a gentleman.
997. On other occasions she used to come across the road from the shop? Yes.
998. Any one with her? No; some one would go to the shop and knock and she would go back.
999. Did she have any hat? She had a shawl over her head.
1000. A cloud? Yes, a cloud.
1001. Sir Julian Salomons.] With reference to Mr. Thomas Walker, how long have you been attending his lectures? I generally pop down there.
1002. How many months ago? Since he started.
1003. How long ago? Several months ago.
1004. President.] What does Mr. Walker lecture about? Sometimes on the Bible and different questions of the day. Different subjects.
1005. Sir Julian Salomons.] His lectures go to prove that the Bible is not true? Some of them are. He takes passages out of the Bible and some of his lectures are hostile to them.
1006. President.] Hostile to what? To certain passages in the Bible.
1007. Are they hostile altogether? No; not to the Bible, but to the existence of God.
1008. Sir Julian Salomons.] At the times you have seen Mary Seymour go across to Madame Rose's how long has she stayed there? I cannot say; I never watched.
1009. Have you seen her going back? Yes.
1010. The same night? I cannot say.
1011. At what time? At different times; sometimes early in the evening.
1012. Is Madame Rose's a large establishment? Yes.
1013. A number of young women are there? No; there are no young women on the premises.
1014. They are merely taken there? Yes.
1015. It is merely an assignation house? Yes; young ladies are sent for if a gentleman comes there. The women are not on the premises. I believe she has a house in Woollloomooloo, and another in Redfern, and sends to either of those houses for the girls. I believe they are kept there.
1016. Have you seen any gentlemen arrive there, and the cab sent off for the girls? Yes; it happened last night. A gentleman arrived there, and they sent away for a young woman.
1017. Who has the house in Riley-street now? Madame Geo has it now. She has it on a three years' lease.

P. Hodgson,
16 May, 1895.

Walter Dymock Boulton sworn and examined:—

1018. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you, Mr. Boulton? Canvasser and agent.
1019. Do you know Mrs. Seymour? Yes; I knew her in Melbourne.
1020. How long ago is it since you knew her last? About six or seven years ago, and she was keeping a shop in Riley-street.
1021. You say you first knew her in Melbourne? Yes; and knew all about her there.
1022. And then did she come over to Sydney? Yes.
1023. How long is it since you first knew her in Sydney? I first knew her in Sydney thirteen or fourteen years ago, and I last knew her six or seven years ago.

W. D.
Boulton,
16 May, 1895.

1024.

W. D.
Roulton,
16 May, 1895.

1024. Did you visit her house in Riley-street? I did.
1025. Was she keeping a shop then? She was.
1026. Did you visit her there? Yes; but I went to her house more particularly to see others who were staying there.
1027. Can you tell me from your own personal experience what kind of house it was, and what class of people were there? Yes; everybody I saw there, with the exception of Mrs. Seymour's daughter, were men who had undergone sentences, or females of bad repute. I knew nothing of the daughter, except seeing her.
1028. Was she a mere child? Yes; just a young girl, about 7 years of age.
1029. And do you say, with the exception of this little girl, all the people you saw there were either criminals or prostitutes? Yes; the women were prostitutes.
1030. In addition to seeing these people there, can you tell if this house was used for any other purposes than a shop, supposed to be kept by Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
1031. Was it what is commonly called a brothel? Certainly it was. I know that of my own knowledge. I have slept with girls in Mrs. Seymour's house.
1032. You have slept in that house, have you? Yes.
1033. Up to what time did that practice continue? I can speak of it from personal experience up till seven years ago.
1034. President.] Do you say you have been in this house? Yes.
1035. What rooms are there in the house? There is a shop on the ground-floor with a bedroom over it; there is a sitting-room at the back, and another bedroom over it.
1036. Mr. Pilcher.] Am I to understand from this description that this is a shop facing the main street with rooms behind and above it? Yes.
1037. Have you been in all those rooms? I have been in most of them. I have been in the downstairs sitting-room, and one of the upstairs bedrooms.
1038. When you have used that house, which room did you occupy? I have been in the bedroom over the sitting-room.
1039. Do you mean to tell me there are only four rooms in the house? I have not been in all four rooms. I have been in the shop, in the room behind, and in the room above.
1040. Do you know personally that this is a house of ill-fame? Yes.
1041. In your visits to the house are you prepared to say that it was a brothel up to five or six years ago? Yes, I have been there myself with girls.
1042. Oh, so you yourself can say that you have used this house of Mrs. Seymour's as a brothel? Yes, I have.
1043. Have you seen other girls there on those occasions? Yes, I was with one girl myself whom I knew in Melbourne—one who had been a criminal.
1044. You say you knew her in Melbourne? Yes, and afterwards here.
1045. In addition to this girl, did you see any other girls there? Yes, one in particular.
1046. Was that a girl whom you had last seen before in Victoria? Yes, and she died in gaol here.
1047. During your visits to Mrs. Seymour's house did you ever see little Mary Seymour there? I saw a young girl who Mrs. Seymour said was her daughter.
1048. As far as you can judge was this girl living in the same house? Yes, I saw her there, and I know her reputed father.
1049. And who was her reputed father? A man by the name of Denis Gaynor.
1050. Oh! So you say that there was a little girl who was understood to be Mrs. Seymour's daughter, whose name was Mary Seymour, and that she was living in this house at the time you were in the habit of frequenting it? I saw her there when I went to the house on very nearly every occasion.
1051. Do you say that you are now speaking of occurrences that happened about seven years ago? Yes, about that.
1052. About how old would this little girl have been the last time you saw her at this house in Riley-street, say, about seven years ago? I cannot speak with certainty, but I should say 14, 15, or it might be 16 years of age. She was just at that age that it was not easy to say what her real age was.
1053. Speaking of Mrs. Seymour's house in Riley-street, did you ever notice of your own observation any peculiarity about the window-blinds? I did. I noticed that there were two sets of curtains used, presumably as signals. There were two blinds, one was red and the other one was blue. They were used on the glass door between the shop and the room behind.
1054. Do you mean to say that if anyone went in the vicinity of the shop these blinds could be used and seen as signals? Yes. If the blue one was left down it was all right, and people were welcome. I think that was a sign that there was nobody in the house. If the red one was down people on the watch would take it as a sign of danger and go away.
1055. Did you know this from your own observation? Yes; and from what I have been told as well.
1056. From what you have been told? Yes; I was told this by Tommy Jones.
1057. What were you told? That if the blue blind was down it was a sign of all right.
1058. Did that mean that you could then go through into the sitting-room? Yes.
1059. Is that the only signalling you noticed? That is the only one I was told of.
1060. Did you see this change in the blinds? I did.
1061. And you know what it meant? Yes.
1062. Was this Tommy Jones living there then? Yes.
1063. And who is Tommy Jones? He is a tailor who used to work for another man named Jones in George-street west. I originally know him in Melbourne; he was a Tasmanian convict, and he had been convicted both in Victoria and here.
1064. At the time of which you were speaking was he living at Mrs. Seymour's house? Yes; he took me there first of all.
1065. President.] Who did? This man Jones.
1066. Mr. Pilcher.] Was Jones always there when you visited Mrs. Seymour's house? No, not always. Sometimes he would be about his business, and when I went to the house in the daytime he would be at work.

1067. Did you not say something about this man Jones living with Mrs. Seymour? I did not know her as Mrs. Seymour then. I knew her as Mrs. Asprey. It was only after the trial in this Dean matter that I found out Mrs. Seymour, mentioned in that case, was the Mrs. Asprey to whom I now refer.
1068. Have you ever been at Mrs. Seymour's house when there were other girls there? Yes.
1069. On these occasions, when other young girls were there, have you of your own knowledge known Mrs. Seymour to do anything? What do you mean, do anything immoral?
1070. No; have you ever known her to go out anywhere? Yes; I have known her to go away.
1071. Have you ever known Mrs. Seymour being connected in any way with young girls? No; I cannot say that I have.
1072. To put the question plainly: Have you known Mrs. Seymour to act as a procuress? No, not to my knowledge, but I have heard she did so.
1073. In addition to the girls you have seen in this house, and the particular girl whom you say you knew criminally in Melbourne, have you met other criminals at Mrs. Seymour's house? I met Tommy Jones and several others.
1074. Do you remember the names of these others? There was Harry Saul, another tailor, who was working with Jones.
1075. Anyone else? Yes; there was Billy Scanlan, otherwise known as Johnny Hassall.
1076. Were there any others? Yes; there were others, but I forget their names.
1077. Do you remember a man named Billy Gamble? Yes; well. He was an intimate companion of Mrs. Asprey's.
1078. Do you remember Dennis Gaynor? I knew him well at Melbourne, but I never met Gaynor in Riley-street.
- 1078½. Do you remember a man named Bryant? Yes; I remember him in Melbourne.
1079. Do you remember Asprey in Melbourne? I do; but not in Sydney. That was where I first saw Mrs. Asprey, by taking a message from John Asprey to Mrs. Asprey in Melbourne.
1080. What do you say—was it Asprey or Ashberry? The name was then spelled Ashberry—a criminal.
1081. Oh, a criminal—was he a criminal too then? Yes, the first time I saw him.
1082. President.] Do you mean to say that when you knew Asprey first that he was a criminal? No; I think he was a policeman.
1083. Yes; I thought he was a policeman? Yes; he became a criminal afterwards.
1084. Mr. Pileher.] Apart from the persons you have mentioned, do you remember any criminals—well known to be criminals—who were in the habit of visiting Mrs. Seymour's house in Sydney? I do not remember the names just now, for those I used to meet there were not friends of mine.
1085. Have you ever been a criminal yourself? I have, I am sorry to admit.
1086. What crimes have you been convicted of? Forgery.
1087. Any others? Obtaining money by false pretences.
1088. Any others? I think these were the charges, together with stealing.
1089. How many times have you been convicted? Five or six times.
1090. Have you served sentences? Yes, but it was some time ago.
1091. How long is it since your last conviction—was it not in the year 1888? No, I got six months since then, but I was pardoned by the Government. I appealed against this six months' sentence and was pardoned.
- 1091½. Then as I understand those criminals you have spoken about, whom you saw at Mrs. Seymour's house, were the criminals she knew while she was in Melbourne? Yes; I know those I saw there were those she knew in Melbourne.
1092. The names you have mentioned, Ashberry, Gainor, Bryant, did you know them in her house here? No.
1093. Did you know them in Melbourne? Yes.
1094. Were you personally known to these people too? Yes, to every one of them. I have held the highest position a criminal could hold, for I was dispenser and head clerk during the period I was serving a sentence in Victoria.
1095. Was it owing to your qualifications and knowledge that you held this position? Yes.
1096. Sir Julian Salomons.] What do you mean, Mr. Boulton, when you tell us that you are a canvasser and agent? That is what I am.
1097. What are you a canvasser and agent for? For my own work.
1098. Do you remember that you swore that about seven years ago and for five years before that time you knew this house in Riley-street kept by Mrs. Seymour as a brothel? I think I mentioned no time like that; but I know that I have used it as such.
1099. How many rooms are there in that house? I cannot say. I only know the room I slept in, the shop, and the room at the back of the shop.
1100. Can you tell me when you first came in contact with Messrs. Crick and Meagher? As far as I can remember I first went to their office on the Monday morning after I had read the final result of the trial in the Dean case.
1101. Whom did you see when you went to the office in Phillip-street? One of the clerks.
1102. Did you afterwards see Mr. Meagher? Yes; and I also saw Mr. Crick, I think.
1103. How many times did you go to their office altogether? I went there twice previous to the appointment of this Commission. I was there yesterday; but I think I have been there four times altogether.
1104. And I suppose, sir, you went there of your own accord? I did purely so.
1105. For what pay;—in order to assist Dean? Yes.
1106. Do you know Dean? I do not. I never saw him in the whole of my life that I am aware of.
1107. Oh! but I suppose you went there after hearing of the name of Messrs. Crick and Meagher for the sole purpose of assisting Dean? Well, I read of them in connection with the trial.
1108. Now, sir, describe how you are earning your living? By writing verses for tradesmen. I write lines on tradesmen's advertisements.
1109. Oh, you turn tradesmen's advertisements into poetry, I presume? Yes; and here are some specimens of my work. [Handing to Mr. Pileher bound specimens of his work.]
1110. So then you make poetical advertisements? Yes.
1111. And is that how you are at present earning your living? Yes.

W. D.
Boulton.
16 May, 1895.

W. D.
Boulton.
16 May, 1895.

1112. How do you spell your name? Boulton.
 1113. Do you remember a notorious trial in England? I do.
 1114. The trial of Boulton and Parke? Yes.
 1115. Are you the Boulton mentioned in that affair? I beg your pardon, sir; I was undergoing a sentence on the "Sacramento" when that case was being tried in England.
 1116. Are you a doctor? No. I came out to Australia, or rather to this side of the world, as surgeon on board the ship "Severn" in 1864, which is thirty-one years ago.
 1117. Are you the person who, in September, 1888, in Sydney, was convicted on a charge of false pretences, and received a sentence of five years imprisonment? I am; I do not deny that.
 1118. Were you charged with stealing as well as false pretences? Yes; stealing a watch and chain.
 1119. Were you also charged with obtaining goods under false pretences? Not on that date.
 1120. But did you receive a sentence of five years on that occasion? I did, sir.
 1121. Now, I will ask you whether or not, at the General Sessions in Melbourne, in 1874, you were charged with forgery? Yes; I was.
 1122. Did you receive a sentence of four years for that episode? Yes; I did.
 1123. Do you mind telling me whether or not, at the Geelong Sessions, in 1867, you were convicted of an offence and sentenced to two years' hard labour? Yes; I was.
 1124. Coming to another point, will you be kind enough to inform me whether or not, in October, 1867, you were again charged with a criminal offence and received a sentence of four years' hard labour? Yes; but that was whilst I was undergoing the other sentence.
 1125. Then,—to bring your memory to a few years later,—do you remember, in December, 1873, having been charged with larceny? Yes; and received three months for that.
 1126. Do you remember, in Melbourne, in 1866, having been charged with false pretences, and getting two years' hard labour? That's right.
 1127. Do you remember, in this very city of Sydney, in 1887, receiving two years' hard labour? Yes; and I was pardoned.
 1128. Do you remember being sentenced at the Newtown Police Court, in 1886, for obtaining goods under false pretences? Yes.
 1129. At the Water Police Court in Sydney, in 1885, six months? Yes.
 1130. Central Police Court, Sydney, in March, 1884, convicted of assault? I do.
 1131. Do you remember being convicted in Sydney, in 1878, for forging and uttering, and being sentenced to five years on the roads? Yes; and I got pardoned.
 1132. So that since 1866, up to September, 1888, with but very few intervals, you have spent most of your time in gaol? Yes; a great deal of it.
 1133. I think you have said that you were a dispenser at some institution during your varied experience. Have you any medical qualifications? No, none.
 1134. Are you not a member of the Royal College of Surgeons? No, I am not.
 1135. Do you hold any medical qualification at all? No.
 1136. How then did you come out here as a surgeon on board the ship "Severn"? As a representative surgeon.
 1137. Will you not at once admit, sir, that you obtained your appointment to this position in England under false pretences? No. When I left home it was admissible, on the recommendation of certain people, to obtain the appointment on board these outgoing ships as representative surgeon. I obtained such an appointment as she carried a limited number of passengers. In those days this could be done.
 1138. What do you say the name of that ship was? The "Severn," and she came to Port Chalmers in May, 1864.
 1139. Oh, so you call yourself a representative surgeon, do you? Yes, I was then. I was the only one on board. It was permissible in those days if a man was recommended by a qualified practitioner to come out in that capacity when the number of passengers was few.
 1140. Will you swear on your oath that you did not obtain this appointment on board the ship "Severn" after you had been convicted in England? I will.
 1141. Still you say that you are not a qualified medical man? I do.
 1142. Coming back to the year 1888;—is it not a fact that you have been convicted here since then? No, I do not think so.
 1143. When was the date of your last conviction? Nothing since 1888, as far as my memory serves me.
 1144. I suppose you have not yet been convicted of perjury? Never.
 1145. And yet do you know you have just now sworn that this house of Mrs. Scymour's was kept as a brothel? Yes; I know that of my own experience.
 1146. Do you swear again that this house was a brothel seven years ago? I cannot tell you the exact date, but it was about seven years ago, and, as I have said, I know it from my own experience.
 1147. Did you know it to be such for five years before that? I cannot say it was the whole time; I was not there every day or every month, but I used it on and off for about five years for those purposes.
 1148. Do you not think you have made some mistake about these dates? I have told you, sir, that I could not give you exact dates, but I have known the house to have that reputation as far back as twelve or thirteen years ago.
 1149. Was it merely with a desire to facilitate the administration of justice that you visited Messrs. Crick and Meagher and volunteered your services on this occasion? It was more out of sympathy with the man who has been sentenced that I did so. I did not know him.
 1150. I suppose you did not go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher with the idea or in the hope of earning a little money? No; that was not my idea at all.
 1151. You say you did not know Dean, then why did you go? No, I did not know Dean, but I know what it is to be in the same position.
 1152. Why, have you been convicted and sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude? No, but I have been unjustly convicted.
 1153. Now, sir, will you tell me, did you not at the very outset write to Messrs. Crick and Meagher? I wrote a note and left it in the office with a clerk, but I did not tell the clerk what were the contents of the note.
 1154. You read the daily newspapers, I suppose? I do.

1155. I suppose you were aware that this man Dean was being charged at the Water Police Court with this particular offence? I did not know of it then.

1156. Do you mean to tell me you did not know of it then? I read the evidence more particularly when it was being tried at Darlinghurst; but I did not know it was Mrs. Seymour, mentioned all through the inquiry, who was the Mrs. Asprey I knew in former years. If the name Carrie Asprey had appeared instead of Mrs. Seymour, I should have gone to see what it meant earlier.

1157. Will you not admit at once that you went to Messrs. Crick and Meagher in the hope of getting a little monetary assistance? No, I will not.

1158. Are you not aware that as soon as you leave this room you are liable to be arrested? I am not.

1159. Are you not following the same means of livelihood at the present time that you have followed for the last twenty-nine years? No, I am not. I am living on my own work, and I can refer you to the authorities with pleasure as to my present means of livelihood.

1160. Can you give no other explanation than the one you have given as to why you have communicated with Messrs. Crick and Meagher? None whatever.

1161. Mr. Pilcher.] So far as you know, is there any justification for the hint or assertion that you will be arrested as soon as you leave this room? None that I am aware of, unless I have said or done something wrong here.

1162. Sir Julian Salomons.] And are you unconscious of having said anything wrong in this room? I am; in fact when I came in I saw Detective Keating. He just shook hands with me, and that does not look as if he wanted to arrest me when I go out.

1163. Do you say you do not know the man George Dean? I do not know him in any way whatever.

1164. Have you any hope of receiving any reward from Messrs. Crick and Meagher for giving your evidence to-day? No.

1165. Have you received, or do you expect to receive, any remuneration for it? I do not.

[Witness withdrew.]

John Roche sworn and examined:—

1166. Mr. Pilcher.] Are you a first-class detective, employed in the Police Force of New South Wales? Yes.

1167. How many years have you been in that Force? Fourteen years.

1168. Do you know Mrs. Seymour? Yes.

1169. Do you remember when she was living in Riley-street, Surry Hills? Yes; she lived on the corner nearly opposite Collins-street.

1170. For about how long did you know her to be living there? For about seven years.

1171. Have you, in your capacity as a detective, had occasion to exercise a certain amount of vigilance over her house in connection with Melbourne criminals? Yes.

1172. As a member of the Detective Force of this Colony, do you know anything with reference to Mrs. Seymour's house in Riley-street? Yes; I have seen Melbourne criminals in her house.

1173. Were they well-known criminals? Yes.

1174. When you saw them there, what did they appear to be doing? Some were living there, some were visiting the place, and I have seen others leaving the house in the early hours of the morning.

1175. Have you had any occasion to watch this house? Yes; I have watched it for men from Melbourne.

1176. For how many years have you watched this place? At different times during the last seven or eight years when Melbourne criminals have been wanted.

1177. Up to what period did you continue to watch this house? The last time would be about three years ago, when certain criminals were wanted.

1178. Were you successful in finding the men you wanted in this house? I have seen them there, but I never made an arrest at this place.

1179. Can you say of your own knowledge if Mrs. Seymour's house was the resort of criminals? It was, for criminals of the old class; but I do not think it was frequented by any of the young hands.

1180. Were those in the habit of visiting the house mostly Victorian criminals of the old style? Yes; nearly every one I saw there came from Victoria.

1181. Where do you say you reside? I lived in that neighbourhood; not far away from Mrs. Seymour's former residence.

1182. Where do you live now? In Wilton-street latterly. Formerly I lived in High Holborn Street; up to three years ago I lived in High Holborn Street.

1183. Do you know a woman named Florrie Clifford? Yes.

1184. What was she? Married woman when I knew her first.

1185. What after that? She became an immoral woman, and is now keeping a house of ill-fame in Riley-street.

1186. Was she a prostitute when Mrs. Seymour was living in Riley-street? Yes; for the last two years I have known her to be what I know her to be now.

1187. Did you know Mary Seymour, now Mrs. Dean? Yes.

1188. Did you ever see Mary Seymour, now Mrs. Dean, in company with Florrie Clifford? I did on one occasion.

1189. Was that at the time when Florrie Clifford was a married woman, or when she was a prostitute? I think it was after she had been a married woman; I am not quite sure. I saw her with Florrie Clifford on one occasion, but I am not positive whether it was while she was a married woman, before her husband died, or after she had become an immoral woman.

1190. Can you say, one way or another, whether Florrie Clifford was a prostitute when you saw Mary Seymour in her company? I cannot say. I did not know as much about Florrie Clifford then.

1191. Amongst other Victorian criminals you saw at Mrs. Seymour's house, do you remember one known as "Little Jimmy"? Yes; he was a notorious pickpocket; he was one of Mrs. Seymour's visitors.

1192. Was he one of the gentlemen who stayed there and left the premises early in the morning? I think so. I have seen him come away early in the morning.

W. D.

Boulton.

16 May, 1895.

J. Roche.

16 May, 1895.

- J. Roche. 1193. Do you remember any other bad characters who visited this house? Yes; there were several.
 1194. Who were they? There were Scanlan, John Lynch (alias "Big Jack"); a man named Bluff, alias 16 May, 1895] "Hobart;" Tom Fleury and Mary Ann Fleury, and others whose names I cannot remember just now.
 1195. Were all these frequenters of Mrs. Seymour's house in Riley-street? Yes.
 1196. And, of your own knowledge, were they all noted criminals? Yes, they were.

[Witness withdrew.]

Thomas Sunners sworn and examined:—

- T. Sunners. 1197. Mr. Pilcher.] I believe you are a saddler? Yes, sir; I am in that profession.
 1198. Have you known Mrs. Seymour for some years? I have.
 16 May, 1895. 1199. For how many years? Twelve or thirteen.
 1200. Where do you live? At 429 Riley-street; four or five doors from Mrs. Seymour's shop.
 1201. How long have you lived there? For nearly twenty-five years in the one house; the house belonging to Mr. McNeill, carcass butcher.
 1202. Do you know the house occupied by Madame Rose? I do, well.
 1203. Do you know the house that Mrs. Seymour occupied? Yes, well.
 1204. Was Mrs. Seymour living in Riley-street for twelve years up to two years ago? Yes; she came from Norton-street, and took the little shop which was occupied by Simpson before them.
 1205. Do you remember when she left Riley-street? Yes; she sold out to the people who occupy the shop now.
 1206. How long ago did that transaction take place? Since old Rose's death, which was about three years ago. I cannot be certain when, but somewhere about that time.
 1207. During the time you lived in Riley-street and Mrs. Seymour lived there, did you ever see Mrs.
 Seymour go into Madame Rose's house? Certainly.
 1208. Often? Frequently.
 1209. Did you see her make daily and nightly visits? Yes, both by day and by night.
 1210. Did you see her leave there? Yes. Madame Rose's is about 40 yards from my place, right across Riley-street.
 1211. How far are you from Mrs. Seymour's house? Four or five doors. She lives in Riley-street, nearly opposite Collins-street, then comes McNeill's terrace, and I lived in the fourth or fifth house.
 1212. Is there any house between Mrs. Seymour's and the lane? Yes; there are two. Then comes McNeill's terrace, which runs up as far as Cooper-street.
 1213. And do you say you have seen Mrs. Seymour go to Madame Rose's? Yes; many a time. When old Rose was alive he used to pay me to stand at the corner of the street and stop what he called the Gipps-street push from pelting his house with eggs.
 1214. Did you stand at the corner of Collins-street to perform these duties? Yes.
 1215. And during the time you were standing there, did you see Mrs. Seymour go into Madame Rose's house? Yes; certainly, both by day and by night.
 1216. After Rose's death, was the pay for the prevention of egg-pelting by the Gipps-street push continued to you? No; I was knocked out of my job when old Rose died.
 1217. Did you, after your duties ceased, see Mrs. Seymour go to Madame Rose's as usual? Yes; she used to go day and night.
 1218. Do you know Mary Seymour, now Mrs. Dean, and who used to live with her mother in Riley-street?
 Yes; I have known her since she was a child. I know she lived with her mother until she got married at old St. David's Church, Surry Hills.
 1219. Did you ever see Mary Seymour going into Madame Rose's house? Yes, sir.
 1220. At about what time in the day? I have seen her in the day-time and night-time both, twelve years ago.
 1221. I am not referring to twelve years ago, I mean later dates? Yes; I have seen her since old Rose died, and he has been dead about three years. I have seen Mary Seymour going there since, both day and night.
 1222. Have you seen her actually going into the house? Yes; through the side door in Collins-street, marked No. 2.
 1223. Has she gone straight into the house from the street? I have seen her knock at the door, No. 2, and be admitted.
 1224. Have you ever seen her enter through a little wicket-gate a little further up the street? Yes, in the day-time; she could go through there without knocking.
 1225. Did you ever go through that gate in the night-time? No; she went through the side door. She might have gone through the side gate at night, or anybody else might go through there. You have only to turn the handle and walk in. There is nobody to interfere with you there, only old "Schneider."
 1226. And who is "Schneider"? Old Rose's little dog.
 1227. Did these visits you said you saw Mary Seymour pay to Madame Rose's house, sometimes in the day and sometimes at night, continue during the whole time Mrs. Seymour was living in Riley-street?
 Yes; pretty well. Mary Seymour lived there a long time, and little Mary continued walking across to Madame Rose's.
 1228. How late have you seen Mary Seymour going across to Madame Rose's house? Up to 10 o'clock at night.
 1229. Have you also seen her going backwards and forwards throughout the daytime? Yes.
 1230. By the way, I believe you have your business place where you live? Yes; I have my workshop in the back yard.
 1231. Do you always work on your premises? Yes; you will find me there at any time.
 1232. Do you know Minnie Phillips? Yes.
 1233. Do you know Florrie Clifford? Yes.
 1234. How long have you known Minnie Phillips? Ever since she came battling about at old Rose's.
 She got thrown out of there, though.
 1235. How many years have you known her, I want to know? For about four years.
 1236. And what have you got to say about her as to her character? Oh, it's bad. 1237.

T. Sumners.
16 May, 1895.

1237. What do you say is her occupation? Well, I should regard her as a prostitute.
1238. Have you ever seen Mary Seymour in her company? Yes, standing talking at the corner of the street at night.
1239. Once or more than once? More than once. In fact I think Minnie Phillips lived at Mrs. Seymour's.
1240. Can you say positively that she lived there? I think so.
1241. What do you mean? Well I think she lived at Mrs. Seymour's. If there is any doubt about it I think it would be in my favour. She was always about the place, and was often running between Madame Rose's and Mrs. Seymour's.
1242. Have you ever seen her come out of Mrs. Seymour's, early in the morning? No, but I have seen her come out of Madame Rose's.
1243. Do you say that you afterwards knew that she went to live in another place? Yes, she went to live at a house in Foveaux-street, and from there would come round to Madame Rose's house in Collins-street and Riley-street.
1244. Where did she live when she was in Foveaux-street? She lived at Brown's in Foveaux-street, and spent her time between this house and Madame Rose's.
1245. Do you know a house called "Pine Cottage"? Yes, that's in Crown-street.
1246. What is that house? It's named "Pine Cottage" and it's opposite the "Golden Fleece Hotel."
1247. What sort of a house is it? Well, it's a pretty rough shop.
1248. Who did live there? I don't know the names, but I know they got notice to quit.
1249. What do you mean by saying it was a rough shop? Oh! it was one of those places where a man was in danger, where they would do him for his money and then chuck him out.
1250. Have you ever been to "Pine Cottage"? Yes, often and often. When I was driving a cab, not for the other thing, you know.
1251. Were girls living at this "Pine Cottage"? Yes, a good many.
1252. I mean girls of easy virtue? Yes, that's the sort.
1253. Did they live at this house? A lot of them used to live there at the time Tommy Walters kept the pub.
1254. How long ago was that? About five or six years ago, perhaps hardly that.
1255. And how long were these girls living there in such a manner as to enable you to describe this "Pine Cottage" as a pretty rough shop? Oh! about a couple of years, I should think.
1256. Do you know of any other "Pine Cottage" than the one opposite the "Golden Fleece"? Yes, I think old Rose owned that.
1257. And what kind of a house was that? It was a drum.
1258. What is that; do you mean a house of prostitution? Certainly.
1259. Was this "Pine Cottage" frequented by girls of loose habits? Yes.
1260. So that the two "Pine Cottages" then were much of a muchness? Yes.
1261. I asked you a little while ago about Minnie Phillips, whom you said you had seen in conversation with Mary Seymour, now Mrs. Dean, was that before or after Rose's death? That was after old Rose died. I saw her talking to Minnie Phillips since his death.
1262. And before? Yes, and before.
1263. You say you also know a woman named Florrie Clifford? Yes.
1264. And what is her character? Oh! she is a bit off, you know; she used to keep a little bit of a shop next the parsonage.
1265. What do you mean by that? Oh! a house of ill-fame.
1266. Did you know that this Florrie Clifford was a married woman? I never knew she was, she might have been for all I know.
1267. Have you ever seen Mary Dean speaking to her? Yes.
1268. Whereabouts? In the street.
1269. Will you explain more fully what you mean? Well, I saw Mary Seymour standing talking to Florrie Clifford in the street. I think they were having a few angry words together. If my memory serves me well, they were quarrelling over some other girl, and Tommy Jones' named cropped up.
1270. Was that since Rose's death? Oh, yes.
1271. What you mean to say is then that since the time of Rose's death this Florrie Clifford has been a woman of easy virtue and has kept a house of ill-fame? Yes.
1272. When did she begin keeping this house? I do not know exactly when she did. I think she started her game at old Rose's. She and Minnie Phillips used to go there, and they got drunk or something of that kind, and were fired out or left. There was a row between old Rose and Madame about it.
1273. Am I to understand that Rose and Madame Rose quarrelled concerning these girls? Yes; old Rose and Madame had a row about these girls getting boozed; then Florrie Clifford cleared into Foveaux-street.
1274. Since then she has kept a house of ill-fame? Yes, that's it.
1275. Do you know a woman named Mrs. Lee in Surry Hills? Yes; she is living in Collins-street.
1276. How long ago is it since you first knew her? Nearly two years.
1277. When you first knew her what was her occupation? She kept a drum in Collins-street.
1278. Was her home frequented by girls of loose character? I have seen one there—Minnie Phillips.
1279. Did you ever, of your own knowledge, know if Mrs. Seymour visited Mrs. Lee at her house in Collins-street at any time? I do not know.
1280. Do you know if Mrs. Seymour knew Mrs. Lee? I do not.
1281. Do you know Mrs. Lee's christian name? I do not.
1282. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have the police been to your place several times while these matters upon which you are giving evidence have been under consideration? No; they have only been once as I know of.
1283. Have they not been to your house several times, sir, and tried to find you? Not that I know of. I only heard that they had been once.
1284. Where were you then? I was at Long Bay, fishing.
1285. Was your wife at home when the police came? Yes, and she told me they had been.
1286. And are you under the impression that the police authorities only came to your house in search of you once in regard to these matters? That is all.
1287. Did you go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office? I have been there.

- T. Sunners. 1288. How did you first come into contact with Messrs. Crick and Meagher? I got a letter from Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office, asking me to call.
 16 May, 1895. 1289. When did you get that letter? Oh, I think it would be about three or four weeks ago.
 1290. And when did you comply with the request therein mentioned? Two or three days after I received the letter.
 1291. And how many times have you been to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office since? Once or twice, that is all.
 1292. What did you say your business is? I am a harness-maker.
 1293. Have you ever been in trouble yourself? Yes, once; a very trifling matter.
 1294. What was the nature of that trouble? Oh, I was in gaol for refusing to pay wife maintenance.
 1295. Any other trifling matter? Yes; I got fourteen days for stealing a pair of winkers, so they said, but they found these winkers later on, and offered me £10 to square it.
 1296. Will you swear that you have not been convicted for offences outside of these altogether? No.
 1297. Will you swear that, sir? Do you mean have I been put in gaol?
 1298. What I mean is this: Were you not charged on another offence, and put in gaol for another offence altogether outside of that which you have mentioned? Yes; I was charged with assault.
 1299. What was the assault? For throwing people off my property in Crown-street, in Surry Hills.
 1300. When was that? Seven or eight years ago.
 1301. Now remember, sir, you are on your oath. Were you not charged with another offence of a more serious nature than this too? Do you mean put in gaol?
 1302. You answer my question, sir. Were you not charged with a still more serious offence? Well; I swear I was not.
 1303. Did you not tell my learned friend that you were employed by the late Mr. Rose to keep the Gippa-street push from pelting his house with eggs? Yes; that was just over some three years ago.
 1304. How long were you employed at that occupation? About a fortnight at one stretch, and then again on Christmas eve, and at new year's time, when the push were there late at night.
 1305. What did you get as remuneration? Seven bob a night and drinks.
 1306. And how many nights do you think you were engaged at this? Six or seven.
 1307. Was there anyone assisting you in this occupation? There was one who is since dead.
 1308. Have you, while engaged in watching this house, seen Miss Seymour going from her mother's place to Madame Rose's house with a jug in her hand early in the morning? No.
 1309. Have you been to this "Pine Cottage" you refer to pretty frequently? I have been there driving a cab, but not to stay in the house, you know.
 1310. What do you mean by driving a cab? My sons have cabs, and sometimes I have driven these cabs for my sons, and taken people to "Pine Cottage."
 1311. Have you ever been inside the house? Yes; I have been in and had a look round.
 1312. How many times have you been there? Lots of times.
 1313. Am I to understand that you did not know Messrs. Crick and Meagher before you received a letter from them? I never spoke to them or saw them before I received that letter.
 1314. You had never been to their office before you received that letter? No.
 1315. Then you simply received this letter from them, asking you to call, and then went to the office? Yes.
 1316. Mr. Pilcher.] Are your sons cab-drivers? Yes, they have cabs.
 1317. And on some occasions do you drive your sons' cabs? Yes.
 1318. My learned friend pressed you somewhat severely to say whether you had been charged with a more serious offence than either of those you mentioned;—is there any truth at all in such an inference? Certainly not.
 1319. In reference to this stealing of the winkers for which you received fourteen days, what have you to say in explanation about that? I was sentenced to fourteen days, but they afterwards found the winkers on another man's horse. They offered me £10 to square it, when they found that the charge against me was false.
 1320. And was the only other offence against you that of being in arrears of money for your wife's maintenance? Yes, that is all.
 1321. Up to the present moment do you know how Messrs. Crick and Meagher came to hear of you and your knowledge of Mrs. Seymour? No, no more than Adam; I should like to know.
 1322. Do you know how the North Shore Defence Committee came to hear of you? No, I do not; I should like to know.
 1323. Do you know George Dean? If he is in this room now I could not recognise him. I have seen a man standing in front of Mrs. Seymour's shop-door at night and kiss Mary before going away, but if he were here in front of me I should not know him now.
 1324. Do you know anything about him personally? No. No more than I have seen a man standing outside the shop-door at the time he was courting Mary Seymour.
 1325. Are you pretty good with your hands that you were engaged to keep the push away? Not now, I am getting too old for it now.

[Witness withdrew.]

John Roche recalled:—

- J. Roche. 1326. Sir Julian Salomons.] How many years do you say it is ago since you saw these criminals at Mrs. Seymour's house? The last time I saw them there was about three years ago.
 16 May, 1895. 1327. For what period of time did you see criminals visiting Mrs. Seymour's house? For eight or nine years up to within three years ago.
 1328. So that if you take back the whole time from the present date until you first saw criminals going to the house in Riley-street it would be eleven or twelve years, I suppose? Well, say ten years.
 1329. Do you say that these criminals whom you saw were chiefly from Melbourne? Yes.
 1330. Had you been in Melbourne yourself? Yes.
 1331. And do you know of your own knowledge that these criminals visiting Mrs. Seymour's house were known in Melbourne? Yes; they were.
 1332. Were you watching this house in Riley-street all this time? Yes. 1333.

1333. Was there any sign whatever that the house kept by Mrs. Seymour was a brothel? None whatever. On the contrary, it was quite the reverse.

1334. Do you say this after you had been specially watching the house? Yes; I was watching it for a time, and I have always passed the house once or twice a day.

1335. You therefore had a good opportunity of knowing the nature of the house? Yes; and I feel quite certain that it was not a brothel. There was no sign of any such thing as I could see. Mrs. Seymour kept a shop and certainly these criminals used to go there, but the woman herself seemed to me to be one who had reformed.

1336. During all the years of which you speak, when you were in the habit of seeing Mrs. Dean (then Miss Seymour), was there anything, as far as you can judge, to lead you to believe that Mrs. Seymour's daughter was anything but a respectable girl? Nothing at all.

1337. Did you ever see her doing anything wrong or anything that led you to believe she was anything but respectable? No, up to the time that she left there I was in the habit of passing the place once or twice a day on my way to and from home. I used to keep an eye on the house and I never saw anything wrong about Miss Seymour.

1338. Do you live in this neighbourhood? Yes, I lived at this time within a quarter of a mile of Mrs. Seymour's house, and had been living there for the last eight years. As I said before I sometimes passed the house twice a day and I have always made it my business without calling to see what was going on about the place.

1339. And are you quite certain of having seen no sign of Mrs. Seymour's house having been kept as a brothel? No, I know nothing against Mrs. Seymour in this respect. I know that these old type criminals from Melbourne have been there, but I never had any occasion to suspect Mrs. Seymour or Miss Seymour of anything wrong.

1340. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you say that you consider Mrs. Seymour was a reformed woman? Yes, I said she appeared to me to be living a reformed life.

1341. Do you mean to say that it is a sign of reformation when a woman with her antecedents allows her house to be the resort of well-known criminals? Yes; for those criminals who went to her house were those whom she had known years ago in Melbourne.

1342. Do you, as a member of the detective force of this country, give as an excuse the reason that she knew these people years ago in Melbourne as the reason for allowing them to frequent her house while living in Sydney? Yes.

1343. Do you say that you watched her house because it was frequented by criminals of the worst type, and yet say this is a reformed woman? What I mean to say was that she was keeping a shop, and as far as I could see working honestly for her living.

1344. And yet you watched this house for criminals? Yes; for criminals from Melbourne.

1345. Did you ever know Mrs. Seymour as an immoral woman? No.

1346. But still you knew her as a criminal? Yes.

1347. And yet you say you think she was reformed? Yes; she was keeping this shop and working for a living as I said. I have never heard that she was an immoral woman, nor seen anything to lead me to think so.

1348. Is it not a fact that a notorious criminal named Billy Gamble died at this house while he was awaiting his trial? Yes; I believe so.

1349. What was he awaiting his trial for? Picking pockets, I believe; I hardly remember it, it is so long ago.

1350. How long ago was that? I do not exactly know; I am not quite sure if I can distinctly remember Gamble, except by name. I do not think I should know Gamble if I saw him now.

1351. When the detectives wanted any of these old-fashioned criminals from Melbourne, was not Mrs. Seymour's house in Riley-street the first place they would look for them? Yes, up to three years ago.

1352. And that is what you call reformation, is it—a woman keeping a house like this? Yes, I said and I meant that, I thought the woman had dropped her old habits and was keeping a shop for a living. That is what I meant when I said she was reformed.

1353. Did you ever go into her shop during the whole of this time? I have been in the shop.

1354. How often? Oh, I suppose, a dozen times.

1355. Have you ever been in the room at the back of the shop? I do not think I have, but you can see all over the room at the back if the shop-door is open.

1356. Have you ever been in the upstairs part of the house? No.

1357. When you say you never knew it as a brothel, will you swear that it never was used as such? No; but I do not think it could have been. There would have been some sign of it if the house had been a brothel, and I never saw any such sign.

1358. Did you ever see any well-dressed girls in the back of the house? No.

1359. Did you ever see any of them hanging about the place? No; and if there had been any I should most likely have seen them.

1360. I mean have you seen any girls in the yard or on the premises? No.

1361. How often did you say you were past the house? Sometimes twice a day.

1362. At what time in the morning? From half-past 8 to half-past 9.

1363. What time in the evening? Generally about half-past 5 and sometimes at 1 o'clock in the day.

1364. During the years you had occasion to watch this house, looking for criminals, at what time did you have the place under observation? Chiefly in the night-time—sometimes late at night, sometimes early in the morning. Perhaps for two days and two nights at a time I would have the place under observation.

1365. How often can you call to mind have you shadowed Mrs. Seymour's house? At least twenty times.

1366. And do you say you have done it for two nights at a time? Yes; sometimes.

1367. Well, may I take two nights at a time as a fair average of the period you would have this house under observation? Yes; that's a fair average.

1368. Do you say that you know nothing personally against Mary Seymour? No; nothing of my own knowledge.

1369. You heard the question put by my learned friend, Sir Julian Salomons, and answered by you as a detective of the police force, in connection with Mary Seymour, when you said you knew nothing against her; now let me ask you, do you know anything about Mary Seymour at all—have you heard any rumours lately; that is what I mean? I have heard rumours about Mrs. Dean, 1370.

J. Roche.
16 May, 1885.

- J. Roche.
14 May, 1895.
1370. I mean while she was Mary Seymour—you have told my learned friend that she was brought up respectably? Yes; and as a young girl I say she was brought up respectably.
1371. I am not speaking of Mary Seymour as a young girl; I am speaking of Mary Seymour grown up;—and have you heard any rumours about Mary Seymour since she was grown up? Yes; I have heard rumours.
1372. Before she was married? No; since this case cropped up.
1373. That is since the conviction of Dean? Yes.
1374. Did the rumour affect her character before she was married? Yes.
1375. From whom did you hear the rumour? I heard it from my sister-in-law.
1376. Did Florence Clifford tell you anything about Mary Seymour? Yes.
1377. Did she say anything about Mary Seymour being a friend of hers? Yes, she did.
1378. How long ago? I was told that Florrie Clifford was in the habit of going to Mrs. Seymour's shop for groceries.
1379. Did Florrie Clifford say that she knew Mary Seymour before she was a married woman? Yes, she said Mary Seymour knew her.
1380. Did she say she was friendly with Mary Seymour? She told me she had been out with her on one or two occasions.
1381. President.] You say that you knew Mary Seymour? I have seen her in Seymour's shop.
1382. How many years have you known Mary Seymour? Six or seven years.
1383. From the time she was a child until she grew up? Yes.
1384. Did you see her in her mother's house pretty often? Yes.
1385. As far as you yourself saw, did she appear to have been brought up fairly well? Very well indeed.
1386. Was she well educated and well looked after, morally? She was very well brought up, as far as I could see. She was well educated and well looked after, both morally and otherwise.
1387. Did you ever see her about with doubtful people? I did not. I think some years ago I saw her speaking to Florrie Clifford, when she was a reputable married woman.
1388. How long ago is it since you saw her with Florrie Clifford? I think that was before Florrie Clifford's husband died.
1389. After the husband died, did Florrie Clifford take to evil courses? Yes; for the last two years or 18 months she has been leading an evil life.
1390. Mr. Pilcher.] Am I to understand from what you say that you think Mrs. Seymour has brought up her daughter morally? Yes; I think so.
1391. Do you not know that her mother was a constant frequenter of a noted whore-shop over the road? I do not know.
1392. Do you, as a detective of the police force, call it bringing up a child morally, when the mother openly frequents a whore-shop 20 yards from her own door? No; it is not.
1393. Do you call it bringing up a little child of 12 years of age morally to allow her to take messages from one whore-shop to girls at another? Certainly it is not.
1394. Will you swear, or undertake to state from your own knowledge, that when that girl grew up she was not allowed to go to this house of ill-fame? No, I would not. I should be surprised to hear that she went; but I cannot swear she did not go. I am only speaking of what I have seen.
1395. Sir Julian Salomons.] I will put the question to you plainly and concisely. During the whole of the years you have known Mary Seymour (now Mrs. Dean) did you ever see anything indecent, disreputable, or unbecoming in her demeanour or character? I never did.
1396. At the time of which you speak of having seen her in company with Florrie Clifford, was not that on the occasion when Florrie Clifford was in Mrs. Seymour's shop? Yes.
1397. At that time was not Mrs. Florrie Clifford living with her husband? Yes.
1398. Mr. Pilcher.] Since you gave evidence earlier in the day, have you not had a conversation outside this room with Sub-Inspector Tindall and Mr. Wilshire? Yes.
1399. After you had this conversation outside the room, did you come back and give the evidence you now give? Yes.
1400. Has not Sub-Inspector Tindall charge of this case on behalf of the Crown, so far as the Police are concerned? Yes.
1401. And is Mr. Wilshire here from the Crown Law Office? Yes.
1402. After having had a conversation with these gentlemen, subsequent to giving evidence earlier in the day, you come back and give the evidence you have just tendered? Yes.

[Witness withdrew.]

Frederick Waddoups sworn and examined:—

- F. Waddoups.
16 May, 1895.
1403. Mr. Pilcher.] Where do you live? I used to live in Riley-street.
1404. At the time you were living there, where did Florrie Clifford live? She lived in Riley-street too. I should have said that I lived in Little Riley-street, and her back yard came down nearly to my front door.
1405. Does Little Riley-street run parallel with Riley-street? Yes; and my door and her back yard abutted. The lane ran between her back yard and my front door. That's how it is.
1406. During what years did Florrie Clifford live in this house? She left about two years back, I think, after living there for three years. I have been living in the same house for seventeen years.
1407. Did you ever see Mrs. Seymour at Florrie Clifford's house? Yes; once or twice.
1408. What sort of house did Florrie Clifford keep at that time? The house seemed all right, as far as I could see.
1409. I mean what was the character of the house? I cannot say anything about the character of it. I was only in it once.
1410. Was Florrie Clifford's husband alive then? I do not know. I never knew him; but from what I heard I think he was dead at this time.
1411. Did you ever see Mary Seymour there? I saw her on one occasion with some smart young fellow at Florrie Clifford's gate. She came up the lane and asked me if I knew where Florrie Clifford was. I told her that Florrie Clifford had gone out. She then looked up at her bloke and said, "We'll go back home again." They then went away.

1412. Sir Julian Salomons.] How long is it since you saw that young man and Mary Seymour go to Florrie Clifford's gate? It is over two years ago, I think. It was at the time of the window-smashing affair up there, at all events. F. Waddoups.
16 May, 1895.

1413. President.] What is your occupation? The last work I did was that of a watchman at the time of the strike.

[Witness withdrew.]

Thomas Summerbell sworn and examined:—

1414. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you, Mr. Summerbell? Master mariner, and manager of the North Shore Steam Ferry Company (Limited). T.
Summerbell.

1415. I believe you were engaged for many years at sea? I was about eight or nine years connected with the sea. 16 May, 1895.

1416. How long have you been manager of the North Shore Steam Ferry Company (Limited)? Sixteen years last anniversary.

1417. I believe you know George Dean, the convicted man? I do, well.

1418. Was he an employee of the company? He was.

1419. How old was Dean when he joined the company? He was about 16 when he came to us, and I think he is about 27 years of age now.

1420. That means that he has been about eleven years in your service? Yes.

1421. During that time have you personally had many opportunities of judging of his character? Well, sir, I saw him practically every day.

1422. When you say you saw him did you observe him particularly? Oh, yes; of course that is what I mean; I observed his conduct.

1423. In what capacity was he taken on when he first entered the service of the company? As a boy in the yard.

1424. What progress did he make in the service of the company? Well, he was a good lad, and when he reached the age of 21 he became a master mariner, and a master of one of the boats.

1425. Would he have to obtain a certificate before being entrusted with a boat? Yes.

1426. President.] Would he have to pass an examination before being awarded a master mariner's certificate? Oh, yes.

1427. Mr. Pilcher.] After he became a master, and during the last three or four years, has he not been placed in a position of special trust under the Company? Yes; for two-and-a-half years he has been master of the all-night boat, which runs between Circular Quay and Milson's Point.

1428. Is not that a position which involves great care and skill? Yes; I think so.

1429. Does it not mean that he has to navigate his steamer through constantly passing ships and boats during the night-time? Yes.

1430. In addition to that responsibility, is there not entrusted to his care the lives of an immense number of passengers? Yes; a good number of passengers travel, and he had a good deal of responsibility.

1431. Can you give us an idea of the number travelling nightly in the boat? Sometimes fifty, sometimes thirty.

1432. Can you tell me whether his advancement in the Company was rapid or otherwise;—I mean, was it rapid progress to rise from a yard-boy at 16 to a master-mariner at 21? Yes.

1433. Did he appear to possess special qualifications, and was he a specially good man? He was trustworthy, honest, courteous to his passengers, and one in whom I had every confidence as to his ability in managing his boat.

1434. In addition to this, was he entrusted with sums of money? Yes; he collected the night fares, and handed them over to me every morning.

1435. And do you say he was honest? Yes; certainly.

1436. Knowing him as you do, can you say if Dean was a man of kindly disposition? I think he was a very good-hearted young fellow.

1437. All the time you have known him, has anything ever come to your knowledge which would cast the slightest aspersion against his character? I do not remember any single instance.

1438. I mean, of course, until this case? No. I think, and always have thought, that he was exceptionally good.

1439. Was he a temperate man? Yes; very.

1440. Is that a point upon which you specially keep an eye? Yes. If he were any other way he would not be in the service. This point is one of the utmost importance, and I considered him to be a most temperate young man.

1441. Did you always find him to be truthful? Yes; very truthful. If he had any little thing in the shape of a collision, be it never so small, he was always ready to report it.

1442. Do you mean he would report any little thing that might otherwise pass unobserved? Yes.

1443. President.] Did you not say during the course of the trial, Captain Summerbell, that the man Dean was everything that is good? Yes; I said so at the trial, and I say so still.

1444. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you remember the day before Dean was arrested? Yes.

1445. Had you full opportunities of observing Dean shortly prior to his arrest? Yes; and I particularly remember the day before his arrest.

1446. Did his manner on that occasion indicate anything unusual? Yes. It was pay-day. He was late in coming for his pay, and I had to wait to pay both him and his engineer. I said something to him about keeping me waiting, and he, holding up both his hands, said in reply—"Oh, captain, do not say anything to me; they are actually charging me with attempting to poison my wife."

1447. Am I to gather that, from your observation, you were of opinion that up to that time Dean had acted in an absolutely straightforward manner? Yes; that is my opinion.

1448. Did you form that opinion after having been accustomed to control and manage many men? Yes; I have controlled and managed men since I was 18 years of age.

1449. You have managed men for a number of years;—do you consider that you are not an inexperienced person in forming an opinion of character? No, sir; I am not altogether inexperienced in this respect.

T.
Summerbell.
16 May, 1895.

1450. What time of the day does this pay take place? The time Dean came to me on the day before his arrest was about half-past 4 in the afternoon. He was arrested on the Thursday night, and the occasion I refer to was on Wednesday afternoon at half-past 4.
1451. Sir Julian Salomons.] What date was that? It would be Wednesday the 6th, at 4:30 p.m.
1452. What were Dean's hours of employment—were they not from about 12 o'clock at night until 6 in the morning? His last trip is at 5 minutes past 5 from Lavender Bay, then he has to come to Sydney and take his boat to her moorings.
1453. How much, on an average, does he take as fares? The charge on the night boat is 1s. per head per journey; the amount he takes varies according to the number of passengers he carries. Sometimes as low as 15s., sometimes more, as much as 30s. per night.
1454. Now speaking about your personal knowledge of him, where do you live? At North Shore.
1455. Did Dean visit at your house? Never.
1456. Did you visit at his house? No.
1457. Will you not admit that in the number of men you have employed and the number of people you have known, you have not been seriously mistaken in your estimate of character? I do not think I have.
1458. Having had control of a large number of men for a good many years, have you not in the course of your long experience in regard to any other man fallen into an error in your estimate of character? I do not recollect having done so, and I cannot admit that I have.
1459. Have you not formed a favourable opinion of a man and subsequently found that you had made a mistake? I cannot say that I have.
1460. Do you judge of Dean as a manager, he having been a captain of one of your company's vessels? No; not merely as a manager, but I form my opinion from my knowledge of men generally.
1461. But you did not form your opinion as a visitor to his house or he to your house? No.
1462. And still you gave him this high character at the trial? Yes; and I stick to it now.
1463. President.] Did you know anything of his history before he was taken on by the company? No; not of my own knowledge. I heard of him from his foster-father.
1464. Who is his foster-father? I do not know his name. He called on me and spoke very highly of the lad. He was engaged in some kind of farm employment.
1465. What kind of farm employment? I do not think he was engaged in raising products, but in such work as fencing, splitting, and putting up sheds.
1466. Whereabouts? I do not know. He told me where, but I cannot remember.
1467. Do you know in what part of the country it was? I am not sure, but I think it was somewhere down South, from what I can remember of the names of places mentioned. However, boy and man, I always had the best opinion of young Dean.
1468. Mr. Pilcher.] When he came into the service of the company do you know whether he could read or write? I do not remember.

FRIDAY, 17 MAY, 1895.

[The Commission met in the Board Room, Chief Secretary's Office, at 10 a.m.]

Present:—

FRANCIS EDWARD ROGERS, Esq., Q.C. (PRESIDENT).

PHILIP SYDNEY JONES, Esq., M.D.

FREDERIC NORTON MANNING, Esq., M.D.

The Hon. Sir Julian Salomons, Kt., Q.C., M.L.C., and Mr. C. G. Wade appeared on behalf of the Crown; the Hon. Chas. Edward Pilcher, Q.C., M.L.C., instructed by Messrs. Crick and Meagher, appeared for George Dean.

Thomas Speerin sworn and examined:—

T. Speerin.
17 May, 1895.

1469. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you Mr. Speerin? A wood and coal merchant.
1470. Whereabouts do you live? In Belmore-street now, but I lived in Riley-street until last Saturday week.
1471. How long did you live in Riley-street? For about five years.
1472. In what part of Riley-street? About two doors from Collins-street.
1473. How far did you live from Mrs. Seymour's residence? About four doors.
1474. Do you know Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
1475. Do you know her daughter, Mary Seymour? Yes; by sight, but I never spoke to her.
1476. Do you know Madame Rose? Yes.
1477. Do you know where she lives? Yes; right opposite my place.
1478. Have you ever seen Mrs. Seymour at Madame Rose's house? Yes; I have seen her come from Madame Rose's door.
1479. Have you ever seen Mary Seymour coming from Madame Rose's house? Not to my knowledge.
1480. Did you ever see her coming from or going to it? I have never noticed her.
1481. Dr. Jones.] What is your age? Thirty-six years last November.
1482. Mr. Pilcher.] Are you a married man? Yes, sir.
1483. Sir Julian Salomons.] When you speak of having lived in Riley-street for five years, what five years do you refer to? The last five years.

[Witness withdrew.]

Margaret

Margaret Ann Fairweather sworn and examined:—

Margaret
Ann Fairweather.
17 May, 1895.

1484. Mr. Pilcher.] I believe you lived in Riley-street? Yes.
 1485. Are you a married woman? Yes.
 1486. Do you live in Riley-street still? No.
 1487. When did you leave Riley-street? About eighteen months ago.
 1488. How long did you live in Riley-street? For about six years.
 1489. In which house did you live? In one of M'Neill's terrace, five doors from Mrs. Seymour's shop.
 1490. Whilst you were living in Riley-street did you do washing for Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
 1491. On Mrs. Seymour's premises? Yes.
 1492. Whilst you were washing for her were any other persons living with Mrs. Seymour? After I had finished washing for her she had two young ladies living at her house.
 1493. President.] Not at the time you were washing for her? No; it was about three weeks after I ceased.
 1494. Mr. Pilcher.] What was about the age of these girls? I cannot say.
 1495. Were they children? No; they must have been over 20; they were young women.
 1496. Do you know whether these young girls visited any other house? Yes; they visited Madame Rose's.
 1497. Did you ever see anybody come across from Madame Rose's to Mrs. Seymour's? Yes; Mrs. Seymour used to come across from Madame Rose's to her own place.
 1498. What happened then? These young girls used to go over to Madame Rose's with Mrs. Seymour.
 1499. For about how long were these girls living with Mrs. Seymour? They only stopped with her about a month, and then went away to Melbourne.
 1500. Do you know any place in Crown-street where young girls lived? Yes; 365, Crown-street, two doors from Fitzroy-street.
 1501. Do you remember whilst you were washing there, hearing Mrs. Seymour tell Mary to do anything? Yes; I heard her give directions to Mary to go round to 365, Crown-street for the girls, and bring them to Madame Rose's.
 1502. And did Mary Seymour go? Yes.
 1503. President.] What age was Mary Seymour at this time? She would be about 17 then.
 1504. Grown up? Yes.
 1505. Mr. Pilcher.] Was she told to bring them round to Madame Rose's door, and then to come home to her mother's house? Yes.
 1506. Did Mary Seymour ever tell you herself about going for these girls? She told me she went round for the girls for Madame Rose.
 1507. Sir Julian Salomons.] Did she tell you that? Yes.
 1508. Mr. Pilcher.] How far is Crown-street from Madame Rose's? Just round the corner. It is the next street above Riley-street.
 1509. President.] Did she tell you she went round there for girls for Madame Rose? Yes; that is exactly what she told me.
 1510. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you ever hear on any occasion after Mary had been for the girls Mrs. Seymour say anything to her? No; her mother would call her inside if she saw I was talking to her.
 1511. Have you ever noticed cabs come up to Madame Rose's house? I have seen cabs come up along the street and stop in front of our door; they never stopped in front of Madame Rose's house.
 1512. Was this in the daytime or at night? In the daytime.
 1513. On the occasions when Mary Seymour went into Crown-street and the girls came back to Madame Rose's, was that in the daytime or at night? She used to go round in the daytime.
 1514. What have you seen after the cabs stopped in front of your door? Gentlemen get out of the cab and go into Madame Rose's house.
 1515. On any occasion when you have seen the cabs stop and a gentlemen go into Madame Rose's, have you seen Mrs. Seymour go anywhere? I have seen Mrs. Seymour come out of Madame Rose's house, go over to her own house, and send Mary out.
 1516. Out where? Round to Crown-street for the girls.
 1517. Do you know Dean? No.
 1518. Have you ever known him? No.
 1519. When did you first communicate the information now given to anyone? Not until yesterday, when I gave it to a gentleman who wrote it down.
 1520. Was that gentleman one of Messrs. Crick and Meagher's clerks? Yes.
 1521. Is that gentleman in this room now? Yes; there at the corner of the table [Pointing to Mr. Williamson].
 1522. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where did this gentleman see you? In Mr. Crick's office.
 1523. What took you to Mr. Crick's office? I was told to be there at half-past 11 o'clock.
 1524. Who told you to go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office? I do not know; some gentleman.
 1525. How did he find you out? He came to where I was living, at 128, Walker-street.
 1526. When did he come to you there? At half-past 11 o'clock yesterday morning.
 1527. Had you seen anyone before going to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office at half-past 2, except that young gentleman at the corner of the table? No.
 1528. And did you make the statement that you have repeated now? Yes.
 1529. Do you say that the cabs never stop in front of Madame Rose's? No; never.
 1530. And have you seen them come up both by night and day? Yes; in the daytime they stop in front of our door, and at night they stop at the corner by the school.
 1531. Then they do not go to Madame Rose's door neither at night nor in the day? No.
 1532. Have you not sworn that Mrs. Seymour has come direct from Madame Rose's and sent Mary Seymour into Crown-street for girls? Yes.
 1533. When did this take place? Two years and nine months ago.
 1534. Where were you when you saw this take place? I was standing at my front door.
 1535. Was it a mere accident that you saw her passing? Yes.
 1536. Were you waiting for anyone or anything? Yes, I was waiting for my husband.
 1537. On the pavement? Yes.

- Margaret Ann Fairweather.
17 May, 1895.
1538. Was that after you had ceased to do the washing for Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
1539. And at this time were you waiting in the street for your husband? Yes.
1540. Where did Mrs. Seymour come from? Out of Madame Rose's house, and went into her own shop.
1541. And where was Mary Seymour at the time? In the shop.
1542. Did Mrs. Seymour go into the shop and speak to her? Yes.
1543. Could you hear what she said to her daughter? Yes.
1544. Do you mean to say you could hear what she said when you were standing in the street waiting on the pavement for your husband? Yes; I was only just outside the door.
1545. And will you swear what she said? She said, "You go round and fetch the young ladies." I do not remember the names that were used at the time.
1546. How old was this Mary Seymour then? About 17.
1547. What time of day did this happen? About 12 o'clock in the day, I think.
1548. Do you mean to say that you can swear that you can remember all these details of two years and nine months ago at 12 o'clock in the day? Yes.
1549. Did you make a note of them? Yes.
1550. And you swear you distinctly remember them sufficiently well to come here and give this evidence on oath? Yes.
1551. Did Mary Seymour herself ever tell you that she had been round into Crown-street for girls? Yes.
1552. When did she tell you that? About a couple of months afterwards.
1553. Did she say she went round in the day or night? About half-past 7 at night.
1554. Where were you when she told you? I was coming up by Mrs. Seymour's shop and saw Mary Seymour. She told me she was waiting for her mother to come from Madame Rose's; she was expecting to be sent on a message for the girls.
1555. Was anyone with you on this occasion? No.
1556. When did you begin to do the washing for Mrs. Seymour? Some two years and nine months ago.
1557. Have you not sworn that two young ladies were living with Mrs. Seymour? Yes.
1558. How long ago is that? Over two years.
1559. Is it not three years? Not quite.
1560. How long were they staying with Mrs. Seymour? About a month.
1561. Do you know their names? No.
1562. And yet you know that they went away to Melbourne? Yes.
1563. Who and what is your husband? He is Robert Alexander Fairweather and a carpenter by trade.
1564. Where is he working now? Away off—at Johannesburg.
1565. What! Johannesburg in South Africa? Yes; that is where he was when I last heard of him.
1566. Now, on your oath, will you swear you were married to this man Alexander Fairweather? Yes; down at St. Peter's Church in Forbes-street, Woolloomooloo.
1567. When were you married to him? On the 17th of August, 1891.
1568. What was your name before you were married? Margaret Ann Valentine.
1569. Where were you living in Riley-street after you were married? At No. 423.
1570. With whom? With my mother.
1571. How long has your husband been away in Johannesburg in South Africa? Nine months on the 17th of this month.
1572. Now just tax your memory for a little; has he not been away longer than that? No.
1573. Have you ever been to Madame Rose's house? No; I have not.
1574. Have you ever slept at Mrs. Seymour's house? No.
1575. What number of children have you had? Three; there are two living and one dead.
1576. How old is the eldest child? Three years and three months on the 24th of this month.
1577. Where did you register the birth of that child? At the Registry Office in Elizabeth-street.
1578. Are the births of all your children registered there? No; the last one I registered at the office in Castlereagh-street.
1579. What is the reason Mrs. Seymour objected to you talking to her daughter Mary, for did you not say that when she saw you talking together she called her daughter inside? Yes, I said so.
1580. Is there anything against your character? No; Mrs. Seymour can say nothing against me. On the occasion I referred to she wanted Mary to go a message, and called her inside.
1581. Have you been to this house, 365, Crown-street? Yes; with my mother, who has done some washing for the place. My mother and myself have taken the washing home.
1582. How long ago is that? About three months ago.
1583. Do you do the washing for people in Madame Rose's house? No; not the general washing. My mother has washed some curtains for Madame Rose.
1584. Who took these home? Mrs. Seymour came for them.
1585. Have you ever taken things to Madame Rose's? No; I have not, but I think my mother has though.
1586. I suppose your mother washes for the girls of that class in the neighbourhood? Yes.
1587. And have you been in the habit of going with your mother to take the clothes home? No; only to the house in Crown-street. Mrs. Seymour has generally come for anything belonging to Madame Rose.
1588. Do you know a man named Speerin? Yes; a man who sells wood and coal.
1589. How long have you known Speerin? For two and a half years.
1590. Do you know Hodgson, the night-watchman? No.
1591. Do you know Sunners, the saddler? I know the mother, but I do not know any of the sons.
1592. Mr. Pitcher.] Does your mother make her living by washing for people in the neighbourhood? Yes.
1593. Does she do the washing for a large number of people? Yes; I do not know the number of places; but Paris House and other large houses are amongst the number.
1594. Amongst other people, did she ever wash Mary Seymour's clothes? No. Mary Seymour's clothes were done inside with her mother's.

[Witness withdrew.]

Eather Thompson sworn and examined:—

Eather
Thompson.
17 May, 1895.

1595. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you know Mrs. Seymour and her daughter Mary? Yes.
1596. Where do you live? Near Crown-street post-office.
1597. Do you know where Mrs. Seymour lived? Yes.
1598. Did you ever do any washing there? Yes, once.
1599. At Mrs. Seymour's house I mean? Yes, on one occasion. I did washing for her for some time, but only once at the house. As a rule, the clothes were sent to me. I washed them at my own house, and took them back to Mrs. Seymour's.
1600. Did you ever fetch the clothes from Mrs. Seymour's? Only about once, I think.
1601. For how long were you washing for Mrs. Seymour? It might be for about four or five months, between four and five years ago.
1602. Amongst the washing you had from Mrs. Seymour's house did you receive clothing belonging to any other persons living there? Mrs. Seymour told me that some of the clothes sent belonged to a lady who was not living there. Mrs. Seymour said to me, "I got this washing for you to do." It was sent to my house, and I subsequently took it home to Mrs. Seymour's. When I took it home, Mary said to someone I did not see, someone who was upstairs, "Rita, here is your washing." Mary Seymour then said to me, "Don't tell mother that Rita is here; she does not live here." A little boy named Jackey, aged about 7 years, who lived at Mrs. Seymour's, came to me and told me, "Mary is telling you a lie; Rita does live here."
1603. Did you wash for any gentleman who was living there? Yes; there was an Indian gentleman, a gentleman of colour, whom Mrs. Seymour called Mr. Wright. He wore silk underclothing, and that and his linen was marked in the name of "Anderson."
1604. Do you know what room he occupied in the house? I think it was the room over the dining-room at the back of the shop.
1605. What sort of a looking girl was this Rita? She was a most beautiful creature; I should think from 23 to 25 years of age. I only saw her once.
1606. Did Rita visit any house in the neighbourhood? One day when I was in the shop an elderly gentleman who lived across the road on the opposite corner came across and asked for Rita.
1607. Do you know who lived at that opposite corner to which you refer? It was some Madame, but I was not told who it was beyond that.
1608. Supposing you were standing in Mrs. Seymour's shop, and looking towards Collins-street, on which corner is the house from which the gentleman came? On the left-hand corner.
1609. Did you say it was some Madame who lived at that house? Yes; some Madame; a foreigner.
1610. Was the man who came across for Rita a Mr. Somebody? Yes, and he wore a smoking-cap and slippers. I had seen him occasionally in Collins-street walking up and down outside the house smoking his pipe.
1611. What happened when he came over and asked for Rita? Mary Seymour went to the stairs and called her, and the old gentleman went into the dining-room behind the shop.
1612. Do you know that house on the corner where Madame Somebody, the foreign lady, lives? Yes.
1613. Have you ever seen Rita about that house? I have never seen Rita but once, and that was behind the counter in Mrs. Seymour's shop.
1614. Was that the day when Mary Seymour called her down stairs? No; I did not see her that day.
1615. And is it from seeing her once behind Mrs. Seymour's counter that you form your opinion of her beauty? Yes; I have only seen her once.
1616. For how long were you washing Mr. Wright's clothing? For about four months.
1617. Who brought his washing to you? I think Mary Seymour or little Jackey, and then I took it back to Mrs. Seymour.
1618. Did you do any washing for Rita? Oh, yes.
1619. For how long? For about three months.
1620. Was her linen marked at all? Yes, it was marked "Rita."
1621. Do you know if she was a white woman? Oh, yes.
1622. Where did you get the washing from? It came from Mrs. Seymour's house.
1623. Who brought it to you? Mary Seymour brought it, except once when I called for it myself.
1624. Used you to take it back to Mrs. Seymour's? Yes.
1625. And get paid for it at Mrs. Seymour's? Yes; Mrs. Seymour always used to pay for it.
1626. Did she pay for both Mr. Wright's and Rita's washing? Yes.
1627. Did you ever see that Mr. Wright? Yes, often.
1628. Where did you see him? I have seen him about the city, and I have seen him at Mrs. Seymour's.
1629. Often? Yes; he has walked through into the back part of the house.
1630. Have you, whilst at Mrs. Seymour's, seen other men there? Yes; a man named Jones lived there.
1631. Which room did he occupy? I cannot tell you that.
1632. About how long did he live there? All the time I knew Mrs. Seymour, until I gave up the washing.
1633. When was that? About four or five years ago.
1634. When did you first know Mrs. Seymour? Between five and six years ago.
1635. Did you ever see any other men at Mrs. Seymour's house? One night I saw five men walk through the shop. It was rather late when I took the washing home, and these men walked through. They were well dressed and wore big watch chains. Mrs. Seymour had told me that she was a widow, and I thought it very strange that at this time of night, half-past 10 o'clock, that these men should walk through the shop and into the back room without speaking a word. I then gave up the washing. She sent more for me to do, but I would not take it.
1636. Sir Julian Salomons.] How long was that ago? Between four and five years.
1637. Mr. Pilcher.] Did you ever hear Mrs. Seymour speak of a man named Jones? Yes; she said on one occasion, "My man will never cut any wood."
1638. Do you know what she meant by saying "my man"; she might "my man" anyone? I do not know what she meant, but she frequently called Jones "my man."
1639. President.] Do you know which way she meant those words. You know it is a common thing for some women to talk about their husband or servant as "my man"? I cannot explain to you what she meant; I just repeat what I heard Mrs. Seymour say.

Esther
Thompson.
17 May, 1895.

1640. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you know a woman named Hannah? Yes; she was living with Mrs. Seymour.
1641. What time was she living there? For about six weeks before I gave up the washing.
1642. Did you do any washing for her? No, not at that time, but I did subsequently.
1643. Was Hannah married at that time? I do not know.
1644. Is she married now? I do not know.
1645. Had she any children at that time? She was confined at Mrs. Seymour's.
1646. Did you ever hear Mrs. Seymour speak to the man Jones? I never did.
1647. Sir Julian Salomons.] Have you a good memory, Mrs. Thompson? Yes.
1648. I mean sufficiently good to speak with certainty, when you say that four or five years ago you heard Mrs. Seymour use the words when speaking of Jones, "I can never get my man to cut any wood"? Yes.
1649. What were you doing there? I took home some washing and remained at Mrs. Seymour's for half a day to wash.
1650. Where was she when she said this? In the back yard.
1651. Where were you? In the yard.
1652. Where was Jones? I do not know; I did not see him.
1653. What time in the day was this? In the morning.
1654. I suppose you did not make a note of this at the time of its occurrence? No.
1655. And are you prepared to swear that you remember it? Yes.
1656. Will you tell me who first told you you were wanted here? Yes; a gentleman came to my place one day last week and told me so.
1657. Do you see that gentleman in this room? I do not.
1658. Do you know his name? I do not.
1659. Where do you live? In Willoughby-street, North Shore.
1660. And is that the address to which this gentlemen came? Yes; I do not know his name, and I never saw him before.
1661. Were you told to go to Messrs. Crick and Meagher's office? No; and I have never seen Messrs. Crick and Meagher in my life.
1662. President.] Do you know Mr. Williamson? No.
1663. Sir Julian Salomons.] Did you make any statement to the gentleman who called upon you? A gentleman came to me and asked me if I knew Mrs. Seymour; I told him "Yes;" he asked me if I knew Mary Seymour; I said, "Yes"; he asked me then if I knew anything against Mary Seymour; I said, "No; I did not."
1664. And is that true? Yes; it is. I know nothing against Mary Seymour. She was a simple, open girl, wearing short dresses; she was very young; not more than 14; I never knew anything wrong of her.
1665. When did you live at Surry Hills? About four years ago.
1666. Did you wash for any of the girls in Crown-street? No.
1667. Did you wash for any of the girls at "Pine Cottage"? No, sir; I do not know where it is.
1668. You said something about a house in which a foreign lady lived;—have you been in that house? Mrs. Seymour got me some curtains to wash from that house, and I took them home. I have never been fully paid for washing them yet. When I took them home the foreign lady paid me 9d. a set, and she should have paid me 3s. a set. Mrs. Seymour said she would see that I was paid, but I have never been.
1669. President.] Did you only get 9d. a set? Yes; and when I complained about this price, the foreign madame swore at me, and said something about going for a policeman. There was an old gentleman walking up and down at the time. Madame said, "If you do it for this I give you plenty." I then went across to Mrs. Seymour and complained, and she replied, "Madame must have had a glass of something."
1670. How many sets of curtains did you wash for which you got 9d. per set? Seven, for which I received 5s. 3d. instead of 21s., and the difference is owing still.
1671. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where were you living before you went to North Shore? At No. 9, Junior-street, Leichhardt.
1672. Are you a widow? Yes, I am sorry to say, for the last eight years.
1673. Where did you live up to four years ago at Surry Hills? At No. 3, Esther-street, near the Crown-street post-office. I lived there for eleven years.
1674. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you say that you only knew the woman to whom you took back the curtains as Madame, through hearing Mrs. Seymour call her Madame? Yes.
1675. When you went there with the curtains did you see an old gentleman walking up and down smoking his pipe in the street near the door? Yes.
1676. Was that the gentleman who went across to Mrs. Seymour's for Rita? Yes.
1677. How old a man was he? Between 60 and 70 years of age, I should think.
1678. Can you tell me whether he was the proprietor of the house where the foreign lady was? I can only surmise that he was.
1679. Now, returning to Mary Seymour. When she brought this washing to you and passed between her mother and you, was she a young girl in short dresses, and at that time always appeared to you to be a simple, open-minded girl? Yes. I have never seen her from that day to this.
1680. President.] How long ago is that? Four or five years ago.
1681. Mr. Pilcher.] And is that the time to which you refer to Mary Seymour as being a girl wearing short dresses? Yes; and I always thought her a nice, quiet, respectable girl.
1682. President.] But must she not have been 17 years of age then? I do not know her age, but she appeared to me to be about 14 or 15. But, at all events, as far as I know, I never saw anything wrong with her.
1683. Sir Julian Salomons.] Do you not candidly admit that, whatever her age may have been while you knew her, she was a good, respectable, and decent girl? Yes; I never knew anything wrong about her.
1684. And you only knew her up to four or five years ago, when you left Surry Hills? Yes.
1685. And how many years did you know her altogether? Between five and six years.
1686. And during that time was she a respectable, honest girl, as far as you know? Yes; as far as I know.
1687. Mr. Pilcher.] And are you quite certain that during the whole time you did know her she was a girl in short dresses? Yes; I am certain of that, for I washed her dresses.
1688. President.] I want to understand something you have already said. You told us that on one day you took some washing to Mrs. Seymour's, and that on your arrival Mary Seymour called out upstairs, "Rita,

"Rita, here is your washing," and that Mary Seymour then said to you, "Don't tell mother Rita is here; she is not living here"; and then that little Jacky ran after you and said, "Mary is telling you a lie; Rita does live here?" Yes; that is what I said.

1689. Did that alter your opinion of Mary Seymour at all? I did not know what to think of Mary telling me a falsehood.

1690. Did you believe it was a falsehood, and did you try to find out the truth? I asked Mary, "Is this Rita an actress?" and she said "No." What made me ask this was, that I used to have most peculiar things to wash, and little Jacky told me distinctly "Rita does live here."

1691. How long ago was that? It was just before I gave the work up.

1692. Why did you give the work up:—was it because you did not think the house was respectable, after seeing those men go there? Yes; I did not think it was. I asked for my money and got it, and declined to do any more washing afterwards.

1693. What made you think that Rita was an actress? Because I have heard they dress so elaborately, and those things which came for Rita were something most elaborate, the like of which I have never seen before.

1694. Why; were they unusually decorated? Yes. There were ruby silk chemises, silk and satin garments with as many as nine rows of lace. Mrs. Seymour told me not to put these out to dry, as they might be seen by the neighbours. The whole thing was so suspicious that I would not do any more washing.

1695. Sir Julian Salomons.] I suppose you have never been to a theatre? No sir; never in my life.

1696. President.] Can you tell me who that little Jacky was, who told you that Mary had told you a lie? No; he was staying there that is all I know, until his sister took him away to a Catholic institution either at Camden or Campbelltown.

1697. What was he doing at Mrs. Seymour's house? He was living there. I think he was left there to be taken care of. I know he went to Mr. Hargrave's Church of England denominational school. I think his father left him with Mrs. Seymour to be taken care of as his mother is dead.

[Witness withdrew.]

Thomas Brown sworn and examined:—

1698-99. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you, Mr. Brown? I am sub-manager and superintendent engineer of the North Shore Steam Ferry Company (Limited).

1700. Do you know George Dean? Yes; and have done perfectly well for the last ten years.

1701. Have you had experience in the management of men? Yes; for a considerable number of years.

1702. Have you had full opportunities of forming an opinion as to Dean's character? I could not know it much better than I do. I have watched him during all the time he has been in the employ of the company.

1703. What character can you give him? I could not possibly give him a higher character than I do.

1704. President.] In your opinion has he the highest character a man can give him? Yes; for during the ten years he has been under me.

1705. Mr. Pilcher.] What have you to say as to his truthfulness and honesty? He never told me a lie in any shape or form.

1706. We have been told he worked his way up from yard-boy to captain;—is that true? Yes.

1707. Is he a man in whom you could put implicit confidence? Yes.

1708. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where do you live, Mr. Brown? At North Shore.

1709. Has Dean ever been to your house? Never to my knowledge.

1710. Have you ever been to Dean's? No; I do not know where he lived.

1711. Do you only know him as a master mariner in the service of the company? Yes.

1712. How old was he when you first knew him? I do not know; it was about ten years ago.

1713. You knew nothing of him before that? No.

1714. President.] Has he ever told you anything of what he was, before he joined the company? No.

1715. Sir Julian Salomons.] Did you know anything of him or his family before he entered the service of the company? I did not.

[Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Pilcher.] After requesting to be supplied with the necessary papers, which were handed to him him by Sir Julian Salomons, read the following reports:—

POLICE DEPARTMENT, CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION BRANCH, MELBOURNE, 25th April, 1895.

I beg to state that I have known Caroline Asprey for about twenty-six years, and during the time she remained in Victoria she was the constant associate of the worst class of criminals in this country. I attach records of convictions against her. The last that occurred here was at Collingwood on 13th February, 1877—twelve months—and was a hard case. She nursed the wife of a respectable man at College Lawn, Prahran, during accouchement. He (the husband) was at the time a cattle salesman in a leading firm in Melbourne. After the woman got better Mrs. Asprey, by persuasion, induced her to go out with her shop-lifting. Both were arrested and handed over to the police. The husband came to me in great distress about his wife. I went to Collingwood and saw his wife, who gave the name of Julia Douglass. I then saw Mrs. Asprey, and she assured me that she alone was to blame for the trouble on the other woman. Asprey was sentenced to twelve months, and Douglass, who had five children and was unknown to crime, to fourteen days. Mrs. Asprey's husband, John Asprey, was, on 12th April, 1869, convicted of receiving stolen property, and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. Since his discharge from gaol he has died. I attach a certificate from the Registrar-General's Office of the birth of Mrs. Dean by Mrs. Seymour at Rosebank Cottage, Abbotsford-street, West Melbourne, registered as Caroline Gaynor, alleged to have been married to Denis Gaynor, at Ballarat, on 2nd May, 1867. That information appears to have been supplied by a daughter of Mrs. Asprey, who married a man named Brown. I had a search made from 1863, and found that Denis Gaynor had not married Mrs. Asprey, as alleged. She lived with Gaynor in Rosebank under the name of M'Ewan, and was confined there on the date referred to in the certificate. I arrested Gaynor for picking pockets at North Melbourne on 22nd April, 1874. He was convicted, and while he was in gaol I called on Mrs. M'Ewan, alias Asprey, at "Rosebank Cottage," saw the female child, which no doubt is Mrs. Dean. Mrs. M'Ewan, alias Seymour, told me that Denis Gaynor was the father of the child, and that she had not had any children for twenty years before. I attach Gaynor's photograph and and criminal history. I do not know where he is now, but I think he could be found. The woman who assisted at the birth is alive and well. I attach extracts from police court records of convictions against Mrs. Seymour, and witnesses are still alive who could prove them. I also attach a report from Sub-Inspector Duncan, and request the return of the criminal photographs when no longer required.

J. BROWN,
Superintendent of Police.

P.S.—The woman Sarah Grey, alias Ann Griffith, with whom Mrs. Asprey was associated, referred to in the Fitzroy conviction, was a married woman, and her husband was convicted on three cases of storebreaking and stealing on the 15/4/69, and sentenced in all to eleven years' imprisonment. His name was Thomas Griffith.

C.J. POLICE OFFICE, LAW COURTS, 24/4/95.

Re Caroline Asprey.

Memo. with reference to Caroline Asprey.

I beg to inform you that I had a slight knowledge of Caroline Asprey and her husband as hotel keepers in Hobart. Mrs. Asprey came to Victoria in latter part of 1865 or the beginning of 1866, accompanied by a daughter then about 12 or 13 years of age. She shortly afterwards associated herself with male and female criminals, many of whom had an English reputation. While in Victoria Mrs. Asprey served several terms of imprisonment, and during her periods of freedom lived as the wife of one Denis Gaynor, a notorious and frequently-convicted pickpocket.

J. DUNCAN,
Sub-Inspector.

Mr. Pilcher.] I also received the certificate of birth attached, which shows that Mary Dean was born on 16th May, 1874, and was registered as Sarah Annie Gaynor. The mother's name is given as Caroline Gaynor, late Asprey, and the father's name as Denis Gaynor, and his occupation a carpenter.

Mr. Pilcher.] I read these reports, and hand them in as evidence. To shorten the inquiry as much as possible and save expense I accept them as authentic instead of calling persons named therein from Melbourne.

Frederick George Fox sworn and examined:—

- F. G. Fox. 1716. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you, Mr. Fox? An importer and manufacturer, of the firm of Fox Brothers.
17 May, 1895
1717. Do you know Dean? Yes; speaking from memory I have known him for about ten years, while travelling backwards and forwards on the Mossman's Bay boat.
1718. Have you had sufficient opportunities of forming an opinion of him? I have been on, perhaps, more intimate terms with Dean than any other of the company's servants, and have always known him to be, as far as I was able to judge, a steady, straightforward, and obliging young man. He has always been obliging to me and every member of my family.
1719. And to all other people travelling on the boat as far as you have observed? Yes.
1720. Did he strike you as being, for a man in his position, the possessor of an exceptionally high character? He seemed to be above the average of his class. I have not known him since he was married, and am referring to the period when he was running to Mosman's Bay.
1721. Sir Julian Salomons.] When did you first know Dean? About ten years ago; from the time he was a deck-boy on the Mossman's Bay boat.
1722. Did you meet him as a passenger? Yes, daily, for about eight years.
1723. Has he ever been to your house or have you ever been to his? No.
1724. All you know of him is when you met him during the period he was on the day-boat? Yes.
1725. When did that knowledge of him cease? Between two and three years ago, except when he has been on occasional day duty.
1726. Have you anything to do with these boats? Nothing whatever, beyond travelling on them.
1727. Have you anything to do with any other boats in Sydney harbour? No, sir.
1728. Mr. Pilcher.] Is your experience of him sufficient to justify you in giving him the character you do? Yes; he was an excellent example for the other boys, and I should trust him.
1729. President.] Do you judge him having formed opinions by having men in your own service? Yes; and I should say, he is an honest boy, one whom I would trust.

[Witness withdrew.]

Frederick Ashwin sworn and examined:—

- F. Ashwin. 1730. Mr. Pilcher.] What are you? Stained-glass artist, in business in Sydney.
17 May, 1895
1731. Do you know George Dean? Yes; I have known him for the last ten years, and had many conversations with him on board the steamer.
1732. Have you had ample opportunity of forming an opinion as to his character? Yes.
1733. What have you to say about his character? That it was good in every sense.
1734. Sir Julian Salomons.] Do you know him as a passenger travelling on the ferry-boat between Sydney and Mosman's Bay for eight years? Yes.
1735. Did he ever visit you or you visit him? No.
1736. Did you ever know his parents? No; from what he told me I knew that he was getting barely a living, and that he used to send what little money he could to assist a needy mother and some younger members of the family.
1737. Where did she live? Some where near Dubbo I think he said.
1738. Was it not Narrandera? It may have been; I do not remember it.
1739. Did he tell you his mother's name was Mrs. Finch? No; he simply told me he drew a little money to send to his mother.
1740. Did he ever tell you why he left home? No.
1741. Did he ever tell you whether he had any brothers and sisters? I think he mentioned that there were one or two little boys or girls living with his mother.
1742. Might not the place have been Narrandera? It might have been; I forget. I simply told him he was doing a good thing. Sometime ago I believe his mother's cottage was burned down, and he then told me he was going to get leave of absence to go up country to do something towards helping her.
1743. That is what he told you? Yes; and I thought it very much to his credit. 1744.

1744. Where was he living at this time? I cannot tell you regarding the burning down of the cottage; he told me he had sent his mother up money for its insurance; she neglected to pay it, and the insurance lapsed, everything was lost, and he had to find her another home.

F. Ashwick.
17 May, 1895.

1745. How many years ago is that? Four or five years.

1746. Did he tell you the name of the insurance company in which the house was said to be insured? No.

1747. Do you admit that except what he told you, you know nothing of him? Yes; I admit that, but he was a well-behaved boy.

1748. Was all you saw of him on the boat in his favour? Yes; he was marked by everybody in the Bay as a credit to the other boys.

1749. Mr. Pilcher.] Do you say he got leave of absence to go up country to find his mother a home? I won't be positive he did; I was under the impression that is where he was going to, as he told me she was living in a bit of a tent, rigged up on the side of the burned cottage.

1750. Sir Julian Salomons.] How is it you cannot remember the place where he said his mother lived? I don't remember asking; it was the details of the burning cottage which impressed themselves more on my mind than the place where she lived.

[Witness withdrew.]

Frederick Konnecke sworn and examined:—

1751. President.] What is your name? Konnecke.

F. Konnecke.
17 May 1895

1752. Mr. Pilcher.] Your first name is? Frederick.

1753. And your name in full is? Frederick Konnecke.

1754. What are you? I am a butcher.

1755. How many years have you been in Sydney? About twenty-five years.

1756. You have known Dean pretty well all his life? Yes; I have known him since he was 14 years old. I knew him when he first came down from the country to Sydney.

1757. What part of the country did he come from? Narrandera, I think. He came and lived opposite to my shop in Caroline-street, Redfern, and whilst there he chummed up with my eldest boy.

1758. What was his step-father's name? Finch.

1759. And where did his mother live? In Narrandera, I think.

1760. You think the mother lived in Narrandera? Yes; she is living there now.

1761. Where is Finch? I cannot tell you.

1762. You say that Dean came down with his step-father, and became mates with your eldest boy;—how long had you known him then? I knew him up to the time that he was taken in charge.

1763. How long was it before he went into the service of the North Shore Ferry Company that you knew him? I think he worked for a blacksmith before that, and also for a man named Chadwick.

1764. Had you an opportunity of judging of his character as a boy? Yes; he was at my place all the time. I cannot say a word bad about him, everything good. I looked upon him as a son.

1765. You have known him ever since? Yes.

1766. Has he retained that character all through his life? Yes; up till now.

1767. When he was not at work he was always at your place? Yes; at night, and in the daytime when he was not working.

1768. You saw a good deal of him? Yes; I was constantly seeing him.

1769. Sir Julian Salomons.] Where do you live? At Queen and Moncur Streets, Woollahra.

1770. When did you know this man Dean first—how long ago? About thirteen years ago.

1771. What was Dean doing then? He was working for a blacksmith in the city.

1772. Can you tell me the blacksmith's name? No; I do not know his name.

1773. You cannot tell me the name of the blacksmith? No.

1774. When did you know him next after the blacksmith? He used to come to my place in Redfern.

1775. Where did he go to after he left the blacksmith? I cannot say; I know he went to the company, but when I do not know.

1776. How many years ago is it since he first went into the employ of the company? It must have been about ten years ago, because I have been living in Woollahra six years.

1777. Was he visiting at your place at the time this unfortunate occurrence happened? Yes.

1778. When was he living with you? He lived with me for three or four years. He was living with me up to the time he got married.

1779. Was he living with you at the time he got married? Yes; he got married from my place in Woollahra.

1780. Where from? My place, in Queen and Moncur Streets.

1781. He boarded with you for four years before he got married? Yes; between three and four years.

1782. What was your family—what number? I have six daughters and three sons.

1783. Living in the same house? Yes.

1784. Cannot you help me with some little information about his step-father;—when did Finch marry his mother? I do not know; I never heard it.

1785. Cannot you tell me? No; I cannot tell you.

1786. Is it not a fact that Mrs. Finch is living at Narrandera? I do not know.

1787. Do you believe she is? I do not know; I cannot say.

1788. You do not know where his mother is living? No.

1789. Did you never ask him? No.

1790. You have never known? No; I do not know where they are living.

1791. What did you ask him to live with you for? I did not ask him at all; only he was a good sort of fellow, and I told my missis she might find room for him.

1792. He paid you of course? Yes.

1793. Did not you inquire about his mother and family? No.

1794. Although he lived as one of your household? No.

1795. You do not know where his mother is living? No.

1796. How was it that he came to live with you? His step-father was living with another woman; he had a woman in the house, and on this the boy left.

1797.

- F. Konnecke. 1797. Where was this woman living with him? In Caroline-street, Redfern. She might have been his housekeeper.
- 17 May, 1895. 1798. And this woman was with him? Yes.
1799. Did not you say the reason he left the house was because his father was living with this woman? No; I did not say that; he left because there was a step-mother.
1800. President.] I think, Sir Julian, he said "and then he left."
1801. Sir Julian Salomon.] Who was this woman living with this man? I do not know.
1802. When did he (Dean) leave that house? I cannot say. He left, and boarded with someone else.
1803. How long was this woman living with the step-father? I cannot tell.
1804. Were you living opposite to that house? Yes, on the corner; but I did not know whether the woman was there or not.
1805. How many doors away from you was it? I cannot tell you.
1806. Not how many doors? I cannot tell you; I do not know.
1807. You must tell, Sir? I cannot tell; I could not pick the house out.
1808. Was it two doors, or one door, or five doors away? I cannot say.
1809. You cannot say how many doors? No; I have no idea.
- 1810-11. No idea whether you were living fifty doors or two doors away—You cannot tell, or give any idea? No.
1812. You lived there seven years? Yes.
1813. And cannot tell how many doors you lived from this woman? No.
1814. How long was this man and this woman living there? I cannot tell you.
1815. You have no idea? No.
1816. You do not know whether it was five months or a year? No.
1817. How long did you know they were living there? Well, I do not know.
1818. And you will not tell me how many doors you were living from this house? No; I cannot tell.
1819. You cannot give the Commissioners any idea of how many doors it was from your house? No.
1820. Was it next door? No; it was on the opposite side.
1821. How many feet from your own door? I cannot tell.
1822. Was it in the same street? Yes.
1823. And it was on the opposite side? Yes.
1824. Have you ever been in that house? No.
1825. How do you know about this woman—have you seen her going out? Of course; she had meat from me often.
1826. You say you have seen her often? Not often, but I have seen her.
1827. When—at the butcher's shop? Yes.
1828. About how long did she take meat from you? I cannot tell you.
1829. And you cannot give me any description of her? No.
1830. Did she go by the name of Mrs. Finch? I believe she did.
1831. Were there any children in that house? I do not know.
1832. How did you get paid—did you go over every week? No; I did not trust them.
1833. You had cash paid to you then? Yes.
1834. Did you trust them at all? No; I did not trust them.
1835. You knew that this woman was not his wife? I cannot say that. She went by the name of Finch.
1836. You say that she went by the name of Mrs. Finch? Yes; I believe so.
1837. That is how you knew her? Yes.
1838. You do not know whether there were any children? No; I cannot tell you.
