217. You have given a good deal of attention to endeavouring to make your establishment recuperative in its expenses? I have.
218. Have you found a difficulty therein by reason of the high rates of contract prices? Yes, in some things I have.
219. Is it the case that you could have gone out into the market and purchased many of the articles which you require as material for manufacture at a much less rate? Yes, some articles, but I cannot bring them to my recollection just now.
220. But you have been of that opinion? Yes.
221. That the contract system worked against your making the prison profitable by reason of certain prices being put upon the supply of material for manufacture? Yes.
222. Can you say how that difference between the market price and the contract price has arisen? No, I cannot.
223. Captain Hixson.] As a whole, have you any great cause of complaint against the Stores Department? No, I have not; I think they have been very willing to assist me in every way.
224. As far as your experience is concerned, do you think that the establishment has been worked as a reasonable success? I have found the Stores Department very anxious to assist me as far as lay in their power.
225. Do you think that the Government have been put to a greater expense in regard to it than they need have been? I do not know about that.
226. Chairman.] As a matter of fact, you received your supplies chiefly from the contractors direct, not from the Stores? Yes.
227. So that your intercourse with the Stores in regard to the supply of goods is necessarily of a limited character? Yes; I get my supplies through requisitions; and I have found the Stores very willing to assist me in getting material for the prisoners to make up. When the prisoners have been waiting for material, Mr. Brennand has been round and endeavoured to buy it, that is when the contractor did not or could not supply it.
228. Your knowledge of the Stores Department is confined to its work in regard to your own department, and does not enable you to judge of the work generally? It is confined to my own department.
229. Are you aware that some time back an arrangement was made for one of your officers to carry the orders from the Stores to the contractors and to see that the supplies were promptly made? Yes; Mr. Robson.
230. Has not a change as regards the punctuality of supplies arisen since that time? Yes.
231. He was acting in a certain sense as a sort of despatch officer? He was.
232. He goes constantly to the Stores? Yes.
233. And from contractor to contractor? Yes; and where a contractor has failed to supply, the Stores have commissioned Mr. Robson to buy at their expense. We have lately had some brown material for female prisoners' winter clothing which was bought at the expense of the contractor.
234. He has acted greatly to the advantage of your establishment? Yes.
235. And he has also been working for other branches of the Prison Department? Yes, for the other gaols.

John Macintosh, Esq., M.P., was called in and examined:—

236. Chairman.] Your name, Mr. Macintosh? John Macintosh.
237. You are a Member of Parliament for East Sydney? Yes.
238. You are aware that the Board is sitting to inquire into the present contract system? Yes.
239. We thought it possible that from your experience you might be able to give us some suggestions as to any reform which may be needed in the system. I may state that one great difficulty with the contracts has been this,—that parties who have obtained the general contracts have after one or two years found out what things are likely to be wanted and what not, and to goods which are not likely to be wanted they have attached prices fictitiously low, while for articles in general demand they have charged a little higher than the ordinary price, but upon a computation of prices they have generally happened to be the lowest upon the whole. The Board wish to devise a remedy for this state of things, and have thought that you would be willing to give them the benefit of your experience? Will you allow me to see the ironmongery list?

240. Yes; this is it? In this schedule I see the article holloware mentioned, and I direct your attention to the fact that holloware is scattered over the schedule and occurs in different parts. For example, here are one hundred saucepans, tinned, with covers, from 1 pint to 10 quarts; I see also, kettles, tinned, per quart 15d., also kitchens, 10 gallons, at 15s. each. All these articles come under the general designation of holloware, and might be included in one line of the schedule—say “Holloware, Kenrick’s, or Clarke’s tinned,” as the case may be; and the quantity required might be defined by a money value—say to the amount of £200 or £500, or whatever is the extent of your requirements. I see also that brassfoundry is enumerated in different parts of your schedule, which I cannot describe as very intelligible. Brassfoundry also is a description of goods which might be included in one line—say “Brassfoundry assorted, Cartland’s or Harcourt’s,” and the quantity again might be defined by a money value which would be according to your requirements. I also see here files, bastard, various, 2s. each. A file is an article the value of which ranges from 4d. each up to about 3s. 6d. In the schedules there are about one dozen lines, all of which might be comprehended in one line—say “Files, assorted, Wing’s,” or other approved maker, with a column to indicate the money value of the extent of your requirements. The same with regard to Ewbank’s nails. A number of sizes are enumerated in your schedule, and other sorts in general use are not enumerated, but if a line were inserted in your schedules—“Ewbank’s nails, 1½-inch to 3-inch,” and “Ewbank’s spikes, 3½-inch to 6-inch,” the Government would be able to order any size of Ewbank’s manufacture, and would know exactly what they would have to pay for them. According to the schedule now before me, there are several sizes in general use not included, and the Government might, under its contract, be legally charged a very high price for them. The same with weighing-machines—Avery is a standard maker, and one line would comprehend all sizes of his machines complete down to scales. Avery has issued an illustrated book of his goods and his list price is attached to each. It is the same with the other manufacturers whom I have named. List prices are given for all their goods, and the list price for each article remains always the same. The list price does not fluctuate, but the discount fluctuates according to the value of the material or the price of labour in England. Take brassfoundry as an example of what I mean. It may at present be bought at about 40 per cent. discount off the list price, that is in the case of first-class manufacturers, and there has been very little variation in that discount for several years. The articles which the Government would probably require in brassfoundry could not possibly be enumerated in your schedule, but you could include everything in one line by saying “Brassfoundry assorted—Cortland’s or Harcourt’s,” and a tenderer offering to supply the Government could state in a column beside that for their list price at what advance or discount he would supply the goods of these makers. It would be the same for every other description of article I have named, and where special articles are required such as are not kept in stock by ordinary merchants, say sheet copper above 12 lbs. per square foot, the quantity required might be named in a column in the margin; but for sheet copper from 1 lb. to 12 lbs. per square foot the estimated value of what was required might be written in the margin instead of the quantity of each particular weight per sheet. For tools of approved makers there is a book named the Sheffield list approved of by all the leading manufacturers in England as standard list prices. It is a general list for almost all the manufacturers of that class. I would suggest to the Board that the Government should obtain the services of an experienced ironmonger to make out a proper schedule, such as that which I have now briefly sketched; and that tenderers should then be required to state in a column to be left for that purpose the rates at which they would supply the different classes of articles for. If that were done I believe that every ironmonger in Sydney would tender to supply the Government, because they would then know what they were doing. Looking at your schedules in the light of my experience and knowledge of business, I do not believe they could know what they were doing, and I do not think that many of them would tender. If the schedule were made out on the principle that I suggest, and then shown to the ironmongers generally throughout the city with a view to their making further suggestions, I think it would be a great gain both to the Government and the trade, and there would be less cause of complaint than now exists. At the end of the schedule for articles in ordinary demand a miscellaneous list of special articles could be made up, the quantity of each special requirement being noted in the margin as now. Many of the leading tin-workers in Sydney have adopted a list of prices similar to that of English manufacturers, which I believe is general in the trade, and instead of enumerating each article in the schedule, the schedule might only contain “Tinware—assorted as per trade list,” with a column for the money value denoting the extent of your requirements. The Government could issue a requisition for a dozen different articles at once, and know exactly what they would have to pay for them beforehand, because they would be embraced in the trade price list.

241. Then I understand that the advantage of your proposition is this: That if instead of probable quantities the requirements of the Government were stated in money values, and if instead of a long schedule of imperfect details, reference were made to the price list of known English manufacturers, the great probability is that we should have a larger number of tenderers, and from the best houses in the trade? Yes.

242. And if the Board understand you rightly, in the case of tenders comprehending a number of these leading items based on these standard trade lists, you would recommend that as a general rule the lowest tender should be taken on each different line? Yes, on each line. I feel assured that the contracts might be divided among five or six houses with advantage to the Government. Some ironmongers have specialities which they can supply on lower terms than their neighbours, and by accepting the lowest tender for each line, the Government would get the benefit of this.

243. Captain Hixson.] Under the plan that you propose, do you think it possible that the Government could get every article which they required in contract? Yes, because the makers I have named are approved of generally in the Colony, and their goods are dealt in here more largely than those of other makers. I would strongly recommend that the Government should get the list made up by a person who has experience in the trade. Take the article of tin plates. I notice that the charcoal or coke is not mentioned in the schedule. There is a very great difference in their value; but under your schedule a contractor might supply you with either charcoal or coke tin plates just as he pleased. Another article I have seen in some of the schedules is axle pulleys, which vary in value according to size, from 4s. 6d. to 14s. per dozen, and each sort might be called best. I have seen that other articles are thus vaguely referred to; whereas, if you adopted the manufacturer’s list as the basis of your schedule, the quality of an article would be precisely indicated by the price.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPT. HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Edmund Fosbery, Esq., was called in and examined:—

244. Chairman.] What is your name? Edmund Fosbery.

245. You are Inspector General of Police? Yes.

246. You are aware that one of the objects of the Board is to endeavour to reform any shortcomings which may exist in the present tender system, and also to ascertain from the examination of the heads of departments how the contracts have been worked in reference to the delivery of the supplies contracted for? Yes.

247. We should be glad of any information or suggestions you can give us? I have had considerable experience of Government supplies during the last twenty-seven years; and difficulty in the way of obtaining suitable stores has always been experienced more or less. Some contractors have given satisfaction, and others have occasioned extreme difficulty both by delays in supply and by supplying articles not suitable for the Service. There is obviously a general tendency on the part of contractors to supply articles which have a shade of difference on the side of inferiority to the sealed patterns. Discrepancies occur which it would be almost impossible for uninitiated persons to consider clear enough to enable them to reject supplies. The contracts being only for one year, difficulties have been experienced where the supplies are very large and where the contractors have not been able to go sufficiently into the business on hand to make it worth their while to have sufficient stocks to meet requirements. And further, tenderers who may be a shade lower in price have not got at their command sufficient means to enable them to carry out large contracts satisfactorily. The result has been that supplies have frequently had to be received and taken into use when we could not conscientiously say they were the kind of thing most suited for the Service, and in accordance with the samples. For example, with regard to police clothing, which I suppose costs £9,000 a year, there is difficulty in obtaining the most serviceable kind of material, and in ensuring something like a military fit. That is a matter of extreme difficulty even to the contractor. The contractor having imported certain supplies, and there being nothing else in the market similar, we have been repeatedly driven to clothe the men in material which has neither been suitable nor serviceable. The remedy that suggests itself to my mind would be for the Government to satisfy itself of the sufficiency of the contractor to carry out his tender, and then, if practicable, to give him a contract extending over such a period as would enable him to keep sufficient stock for all requirements. In addition to this, I think a still more material point would be to have some skilled expert who would be able to say authoritatively where any of the supplies fell short of the samples and specifications. I also think that the sample or pattern room should be most carefully examined from time to time, with the view of the Government being assured that the most suitable and economical articles were being contracted for, and that the samples were such as could be readily compared with the supplies. I would increase these samples from time to time, showing all improvements desirable, and would extend them to almost every article that was in reasonably common demand, and excluding those which, for reasons of economy, the Government thought were not necessary for the Public Service, it being a primary understanding that of their kind the articles drawn by the Government were to be the very best procurable.

248. Would not your suggestion rather interfere with the practice of accepting the lowest tender? I foresee this difficulty, but it appears to me that the Government should not be expected to take any other course than that adopted by ordinary business firms,—that is, that the Government should not accept a tender from a man who they had reason to suppose would not do justice to his contract. But I consider that by the more exacting method of receiving supplies from the contractors the Government would be in a position to compel a better observance of the conditions of the contract than hitherto; for I am convinced that a very serious loss is entailed upon the Public Service by receiving supplies not adapted to requirements. Considerable difficulty, for example, has always been experienced in getting suitable saddlery. A cheap saddle, ill-made, will not only frequently ruin a valuable horse, but it will in a very short time require the expenditure upon it of more than its original value to put it in serviceable repair. The necessity is not so much to have a highly-finished article as to get serviceable material honestly made up by a skilled workman. We frequently have to pay £2 to repair a saddle which originally may have cost only £4 10s., and we are driven into this expenditure because a constable in an isolated position must either have his saddle repaired or fail to do his duty. I would further refer to the article of boots, of which upwards of 2,000 pairs are supplied annually to the police. These boots are the subject of constant and repeated complaints. The men are frequently sent to distant stations, where they are unable to replace their boots except at a very high price, the riding-boots being of a description not usually kept in stock at country stores. The regulation boots frequently become unfit for service after short wear, and some of the men have told me that they have had to pay three times the contract price out of their own pockets to replace the boots, and they have said that they would have preferred that no boots had been served out to them at all. Again, the foot-police have more wear for their boots than any other persons in the community, and many men are incapacitated from duty from the constant strain on their feet in walking. This they have naturally attributed to the misshapen boots they have been expected to wear. The article required is of a very inexpensive description, but it should be thoroughly serviceable of its kind. Although some contractors have done credit to themselves, others have failed, and I would suggest that the plan which has now been adopted for some years should be followed as a matter of course—that a pair of each description of boots should be taken at random from the first bulk supply, three months before it was necessary to use them, and that such selected samples should be taken into wear by some trustworthy constable to test them. The difficulty is enhanced in this and other matters by the fact that the time specified in the contract for the delivery of the goods is not observed. We go on, as it were, living from hand to mouth, getting a few articles in an emergency instead of having the complete supply by the date stipulated. You will see the inconvenience of this departure from the contract time, if you will remember that a body of police has sometimes to be equipped on an emergency, a thing which frequently happens, and it is not possible to clothe them in consequence of the non-delivery of the articles which should have been in store. Every suit of uniform has to be inspected by the tailor to the Force, as many of the men's figures cannot be easily fitted,—delay in these matters becomes more serious. It is understood that the supply of clothing should be delivered in the month of May, but it is seldom possible to complete the issue of clothing to the Force for four or five months afterwards, while the appearance of the men is frequently anything but what it should be.

249. May I ask what action is taken by you in the case of non-supply by contractors at the proper time? The police storekeeper endeavours to obtain the supplies by his own individual application to the contractor; but if that fails, as frequently happens, we can only secure what we require by application to the Treasury.

250. How do you deal with your requisitions? We endeavour to deal with our requisitions for country requirements annually, but in consequence of unforeseen requirements, such as the formation of new stations and special parties of police being detailed for certain districts, we cannot at all times avoid sending in requisitions at irregular periods. For example, on a recent requisition for supplies at Windsor Police Gaol, it was objected that the demand should have been made at the proper period. The necessity arose from the Comptroller General of Prisons being obliged to relieve one of his larger gaols by sending a large detachment of prisoners to Windsor Gaol. In reference to the non-supply of contract articles at the time specified, the difficulty is sometimes greater from causes which would not be readily apparent. Blankets are required in large quantities when the winter is about to set in, and their non-delivery would frequently leave prisoners in lock-ups and police gaols in very cold weather without any covering at all.

251. Do you think that your suggestion as to taking contracts for more than one year and from approved contractors could be applied to the whole Public Service? No; it would certainly be unnecessary in regard to articles kept in common stock by storekeepers in the city. Stationery, ordinary ironmongery, and linen-drapery, for example, can be had in the market at any time.

252. For supplies of that kind you think that the usual annual contracts might be taken? Certainly.

253. Mr. Maclean.] You have a special store for your department? We have.

254. And you obtain most of your supplies from the contractors in bulk, and reissue them? Yes.

255. So that you have not had any case where you have found difficulty in getting small requisitions made on the general Government Stores? No.

256. You are drawing your stock for every day use from your own stores? Yes.

257. You have not had difficulty in obtaining supplies from the Government Stores? We have had very great difficulty at times in obtaining bulk supplies for reissue. I think, perhaps, it would be desirable that I should give you a brief statement as to the operation of the police store. The police store is inexpensively managed by a sergeant of police who is storekeeper, and there is a tailor's shop, the labour required being fortunately available from the recruits under instruction, who do the cleaning and the packing. We have I suppose 400 stations and establishments to be supplied. Many of them can be reached directly as favourable opportunities may serve; and advantage is frequently taken of return prisoners' escorts and police travelling on duty to carry with them supplies and stores for different station use. It would be utterly impossible to so regulate the demand that a fixed annual issue would be sufficient for many of the articles in use—such as prisoners' blankets, urine tubs, and other things—are frequently destroyed by violent and lunatic prisoners, and it is necessary that they should be promptly replaced. Advantage is also taken of police coming to Sydney to fit them with their uniform and to entrust them with stores to take back to their stations free of cost for carriage. This system I consider is the only possible one to meet the wants of the department. The stock is not very heavy; the books, as far as I have inspected them, are carefully kept; the Treasury regulations as regards stock-taking are scrupulously observed; and the cost of management is reduced to a minimum. A small stock of general stores constantly in demand is also kept at each of the district head stations, under the control of the Superintendent of Police, who issues the same as opportunity offers to the destinations within reach.

258. Mr. Maclean.] I think you said you had difficulty sometimes in obtaining the bulk supplies for your store from the General Store? Yes.

259. Did that arise from the contractors not having the articles on hand? I can only say, generally, that there has been every disposition at the Government Stores to meet our requirements promptly, and I believe the delay in obtaining the supplies has been occasioned by the contractors' default.

260. Has that default in any degree arisen from the contractors not having had sufficient time to make their importations after they were aware that their contract was accepted? I have always thought that sufficient time was given. Possibly it may be an advantage to contractors and the Service that longer time should be given.

261. Have you not heard that they make that their excuse? No; but they may have done so.

262. Captain Hinson.] I think you stated it as your opinion that it would be a good thing that the Government should only employ approved contractors; and if I understand you correctly, people sometimes have obtained contracts who had not the means to carry them out properly. Would it be possible for the Government to tell beforehand whether a man could really perform the conditions of the contract or not? I think that in a great many cases inquiry would establish the fact whether or not a particular tenderer would be likely to carry out the contract satisfactorily.

263. Do you not think that very strong grounds would have to be shown before the Government would be able to set aside the tender of a man who professed to be able to carry out the contract? The grounds should be very strong, but after he had had a trial and failed, there should be no hesitation in considering him ineligible for future contracts.

264. If he had failed to carry out his contract satisfactorily he should not be employed a second time? Certainly not.

265. Do you think that the practice of taking the lowest tender should be departed from in exceptional cases? I think that the practice should be to take the lowest tender, but I do not think that should be the invariable rule.

266. Do you think that the suggestion which you have made, in reference to putting pressure on contractors, would have a tendency to prevent ineligible men from offering to tender? I certainly do; I should look more to the advantage of a very exacting oversight than I should to the selection of the tenderer.

267. Do you think an expert, such as you have suggested in your particular case, would satisfy the wants of all the Government contracts? No; I think it is impossible that one man should be acquainted with all trades.

268. You would think it desirable that there should be a man in each particular line? There should be some man with a good manufacturing knowledge of general stores; and I think that in cases of difficulty there should be special surveys.

269. Mr. Maclean.] A man who has been a foreman of a first-class general store would do? I think so. I think that in all cases where very large supplies of one article were obtained that it would be very desirable to have a special survey.

270. By persons of technical knowledge? Yes; if the Government buy £10,000 worth of blankets they ought to be assured, in making so large a purchase, that they got value for their money.

E. Fosbery,
Esq.
2 July, 1879.

F. N. Manning, Esq., M.D., was called in and examined:—

271. Chairman.] Your name, Dr. Manning? Frederic Norton Manning.

272. And your official title? I am Inspector of the Insane, and the Medical Superintendent of the Hospital for the Insane at Gladsville.

F. N.
Manning,
Esq., M.D.
2 July 1879.

273. You have then the control over several large establishments which require considerable supplies from the contractors to the Government during the year? Yes.

274. Would you state approximately what you believe to be the annual value of your supplies? About £15,000 under the general contracts, that is, of course, excluding articles under the provision contracts.

275. You are aware that the Board is now inquiring into the general system of tendering, with a view to introduce beneficial improvements, and also into the mode, whether satisfactory or otherwise, in which the contractors have carried out their contracts, that is in the way of making early and suitable supplies to the public departments? Yes.

276. Would you give us the benefit of your experience of the working of the General Stores contracts? The first matter which occurs to me is the fact that the schedules are not accurately prepared, that the probable quantities are not accurately stated. The description of the article required, and especially so as regards the width of articles in the linen drapery schedule, is seldom given, while a very large number of articles which are not required are asked for in the schedules. The question as to probable quantities seems to me an important one, because it is almost impossible for contractors in the first instance, that is persons who tender for contracts the first time, to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion, and experienced contractors therefore have the advantage of them. The question of the width of the material to be supplied is also important. If an article is merely described as serge or linen, and no width is stated, the contractor may send you a width three inches narrower than that which you expect to get, and the Government loses to the extent of the difference in value between the two widths.

277. Do I understand that you would avoid stating probable quantities altogether, or that you would merely regulate them on a better basis? I would have them regulated on a better basis, on the basis of last year's supply, together with such information as the heads of departments might be able to give you as to their probable requirements. In view of the opening of a new establishment, I should know that certain articles would be required in large quantities for the next year, and it would therefore be important that you should frame your estimate of probable quantities on such prospective requirements as are known to the Heads of the different departments as well as upon the supplies of last year.

278. Do you not think that the present system under which contractors are compelled to supply to any extent required is satisfactory? I think that the system which has been only recently introduced is an improvement upon the old system, but still I think that persons tendering for contracts should have some guide as to what the requirements of the Service will be. The old system under which we were obliged to pay extra for all articles supplied in excess of probable quantities was a very bad one, because under it we paid through the nose over and over again.

279. You would arrive at the probable quantities as nearly as you possibly could? Yes, but I would have it distinctly understood that the contractors would be required to supply over those quantities if necessary.

280. I understand, then, that instead of the present system, a preferable arrangement would be to take the actual quantities supplied during the preceding year, and supplement them in accordance with the recommendations of the officers concerned? Yes. Then with reference to the samples, I may say that the samples at present in the store-room are old and defective; and, it appears to me, not in sufficiently safe keeping. I think they ought to be kept under lock and key by the head of the Stores Department. Samples are now frequently removed and lost; and when they are forwarded to the Prisons' Department, or handed over to contractors temporarily, the record as regards where they have gone is not sufficiently accurate. They are lost in that way. It appears to me that the question of samples is a very important one, and that every article of which a sample can be secured should be secured, and at hand. I have found that where samples have been lodged I have been better served than in cases where no samples have been lodged. I think that the samples should be looked over every year and renewed or modified. I think also that it may be desirable that certain material issued to certain departments should have a particular thread run through them, something like the Navy thread. That is done in the case of sheeting supplied to some of the asylums and public institutions at Melbourne. The introduction of this plan would be of great use as a check upon speculation in some cases. I think the present arrangement a bad one by which the Stores Department insists, in some instances, on articles not in contract being supplied by the contractors. I cannot get orders given to me on any but contractors. The contractors go to the Superintendent of Stores and make it a matter of complaint if preference is not given to them. Two instances of what I refer to occur to my mind at this moment. I required some brushes, and I ascertained that Mr. Cohen, the contractor, had none of the kind I wanted, and I then asked Mr. Brennand to give me an order on some one else. He preferred giving it to me on Mr. Cohen, as he was the contractor; Mr. Cohen charged 7s. 6d. for the article, but on my remonstrance he charged 6s. 6d. I went the next day and bought brushes exactly like them at Mr. Sandy's for 4s., and I could have gone there originally and bought them at that price. These articles were not in contract, and upon articles not in contract, as it appears to me, the contractors make a very large profit. The second case was one in which some marcella could have been bought at Prince Ogg & Co.'s for 1s. 10d., and we had to pay Mr. Nicholson, who had the contract, 2s. 9d. for it. The marcella was not in contract, but it was part of the attendants' clothing, which he insisted it was his right to supply. When he found that Mr. Brennand was going to order it somewhere else, he said that it was part of his contract. Another matter which occurs to me is, as regards the quickness of supply. I find, sometimes, that we are kept waiting a very long time for stores from the contractors, and at my suggestion a clause was inserted in the conditions of contract respecting some of the schedules that

F. N.
Manning,
Esq., M.D.

that if the articles were not supplied within one month they might be obtained elsewhere, but it was found practically inoperative. It has never been worked, although it is in the contract for attendants' clothing. It would be possible to have fixed times within which different descriptions of articles should be delivered, say a week for linendrapery, ironmongery, and all minor articles, and a longer time for articles which have to be made up, such as clothing. When delay arises in furnishing supplies, I write to the Superintendent of Stores who, I believe, communicates with the contractors, but in many instances it does not seem to further the delivery. I think a fine for non-delivery would do good in the case of manufactured articles, or articles not immediately procurable; but in other cases I would follow the Melbourne practice, which is to require that the goods shall be delivered within forty-eight hours, and if they are not then delivered, to follow it up with a notice of twenty-four hours, and then purchase at the contractors' risk. The following are special features in the Melbourne conditions of tendering which I would recommend for adoption here:—"Conditions of Contract for General Stores:—1. The Government will not be bound to issue orders upon the contractors for all the articles enumerated in the schedules, but only for such articles, and such quantities of those articles, as the Government may order from time to time; neither will the Government be bound to take from the contractors any larger supply of any of the articles than may be shown upon the orders which have been issued during the year, nor will they be bound to take any of the articles enumerated in the schedules for which orders have not been issued. Should the Government require a larger supply of any article than the quantity stated in the schedules, the contractor will be bound to supply the same at contract rate. 2. The supplies are to be according to sample, and of the particular manufacture indicated in the schedule of tenders. In the case of different makers' goods the contractor will be required to supply the kind ordered. In other cases the supplies are to be the best quality of their several kinds or manufacture. A preference will, however, be given to goods of Victorian manufacture, provided the quality is equal to the particular manufacture indicated in the schedule. 6. Orders must receive prompt execution; and in the event of the goods not being delivered within forty-eight hours after the contractor shall have received the order, or within such other time as the order may specify for delivery, it will be competent for the officers named in condition 5, or the head of the department to whom the goods are to be supplied, on giving the contractor twenty-four hours' notice, to purchase the supplies at the contractor's risk, and the extra expense incurred over and above the contract price (if any) will be deducted from the contractor's account." To go back to the preparation of the schedules, I would recommend the adoption of the Melbourne practice, that where manufacturers have a speciality for particular articles, the name should be put against the articles in the schedules, and the delivery of those articles insisted on. To all places within 6 miles of Melbourne the contractors deliver direct, but all supplies for places beyond that distance are delivered at the Stores. An Inspector examines the articles at the different establishments, and accepts or rejects them there. He inspects goods delivered at the Stores immediately. He does not go to the contractor's to inspect them, because it was thought that that would be a plan which would open the door to abuses.

281. To what extent have you found the quality of goods satisfactory? The quality is often very unsatisfactory, and great difficulties have arisen, especially in the up-country establishments, in returning the articles. Articles have been returned from Cooma, and the cost of the carriage backwards and forwards has been as much as the articles were worth. There is not, and there never has been, any satisfactory examination at the Stores by comparison with the samples there. For some time past I have had articles sent to me direct, and I have had a small sample-box at the hospital and examined the things by my own officers; but this is a mode of procedure which could not be adopted in the up-country establishments, and I am doubtful as regards its advisability in an establishment near Sydney. I should prefer that all the articles should be examined in the first place at the Stores, and by the Store samples.

282. Mr. Maclean.] In carrying out that system, could the invoice of the goods be marked at the Stores, and the goods then carted straight on to the establishment by the contractor? Undoubtedly; the contractor might still deliver if the invoice were marked approved.

283. Captain Hixson.] What is the practice in Melbourne in regard to the delivery of stores? The practice is for the contractor, at his own cost, to deliver to all establishments within 6 miles of Melbourne, and the articles are examined at the establishment by the Inspector of Stores. For the country establishments the stores are all delivered at the Melbourne Gaol as a central dépôt, where, after they have been inspected, they are packed by the prisoners and sent to their destinations.

284. Do you think that a good system? I think it has some advantages, but I should prefer that the Inspector examine everything at the Stores first, and so hold him responsible at once.

285. Would not that necessitate double delivery and much more cartage? It would for the town establishments, but I think that would be compensated for by the rapid way in which the articles would be put into use. If they were delivered at the establishments, and you had to wait for the visit of the inspector, a delay of some days might take place before he could come to you.

286. You would not recommend that the Melbourne system as a whole should be established here? No, not as a whole.

287. Have you known delays to occur in the delivery of goods from the fact that contracts are given to persons who really do not deal in the goods they contract to supply? Not to my knowledge.

288. Chairman.] If I understand you rightly, you would prefer a system under which for many purposes of convenience, and more especially for examination by a competent inspector—goods whether intended for town or country establishments should be delivered at some central place where they could be compared with the samples, and from which they could then be distributed as rapidly as possible? I think so. It would only require a good examining officer and two or three packers. In connection with the subject of delay, I wish to point out that there is great delay in ordering articles not in contract.

289. There is a regulation, I believe, that articles not in contract are not to be ordered without some special approval? Yes—and requisitions are sometimes placed on one side and are not dealt with for months. I know of several instances of the kind. I placed a requisition for warm clothing for the Asylum at Cooma on the 21st of January, and the goods were not ordered until the end of May, and then only when I went and looked up the matter personally.

290. Mr. Maclean.] Not ordered? The requisition wanted some special approval. It had not gone on. The paper had never left the Stores office; when I looked up the requisition I found that they had ordered the things which were in contract and had put the others on one side. Some marcella and felt hats asked for on January the 2nd were not supplied on June the 25th for the same reason. It was not until I went up to Cooma and inquired why the men were not more warmly clad that I found the goods had not been supplied. The officer in charge said that he was expecting them every day, but when I came down to Sydney I found that they had not even been ordered. Another point for consideration is the large quantity of articles which are kept in stock in the Stores Department, and are taken over from the contractors. I think it works badly. There appears to me to be a large quantity of articles kept in stock at the Stores Department, and I would instance stationery and clothing. The clothing deteriorates, and when it is issued some time afterwards, the establishment receiving it does not get the value which has been paid for it.

Cooma

F. N.
Manning,
Esq., M.D.
2 July, 1879.

291. Are you aware that in the year 1876 nearly £2,000 worth of goods of this kind were taken over from a contractor on the ground that he had provided to the full extent of the probable quantities stated in the schedule, and that the departments concerned had taken but a very slight percentage thereof? I am aware of it, and that is another argument for seeing that the probable quantities are more carefully looked into.

292. Have not the probable quantities in the schedules from year to year been furnished by yourself and other officers,—heads of departments? I have occasionally been asked for probable quantities, but seldom for anything except linendrapery, and I have reason to believe that for this article I have in some years been the only one asked, and that the quantities generally have been largely exceeded.

293. Exceeded in the supply? Yes.

294. Mr. Maclean.] The quantity rendered by you? Yes. I have been asked for the probable quantity of linendrapery which would be required, and my estimate for the establishments under my control has been accepted as the probable quantity for the whole Public Service. I had a great deal of difficulty about some shirting. I asked for 3,000 yards, and the Prisons Department, as far as I know, had not asked for any; but immediately the contract was out, the Gaols sent in a requisition which absorbed it all. I had not a bit of it, and I had to pay the increased cost on the quantity in excess of the probable quantity for the whole of that year's supplies. It has been very rarely that I have been asked.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPT. HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. James Robson was called in and examined:—

295. Chairman.] What is your name? James Robson.

296. What is your position? I am Overseer of Stores at Darlinghurst Gaol.

297. Have you long held that position? Three years and three or four months.

298. And it is part of your duty, I presume, to receive the supplies from the contractors for the use of the establishment? Yes.

299. For Darlinghurst Gaol only, or for other gaols? In a measure, I superintend the supplies for other gaols as well. I superintend for Darlinghurst, and I receive the stores for other gaols, in some instances.

300. Mr. Maclean.] The first point upon which the Board desire information is whether you have found difficulties in obtaining supplies promptly? A very great deal of difficulty when I first took charge of the stores at Darlinghurst Gaol.

301. Was an arrangement subsequently made with the Prisons and Stores Departments that you should deal directly with contractors, to take orders to them, to expedite the delivery of supplies? There was such an arrangement.

302. How long ago is it since it was made? About nine months ago.

303. Chairman.] Will you state, please, the exact nature of the arrangement? The arrangement was that requisitions for supplies to the different gaols were sent through the Comptroller-General of Prisons to the Stores. The order forms were sent from the Department of Stores, having received the approval of the Treasury, direct to the contractors? There was a very great delay in the supply of goods, and we did not know where the fault lay—whether it was in the Stores Department or whether it was at the hands of the contractors. An arrangement was then made to send those orders to me instead of to the contractors.

304. You mean that when Mr. Brennand got the requisition approved, he sent the orders through you to the contractor? Yes, I took those orders, and so I knew exactly when the contractors got them. If there were any complaints from country gaols about the non-supply of articles, I went to the contractor instead of to the Stores, because I knew that he had got the order. By this means I found that there was a much more prompt supply than under the previous arrangement.

305. This action on your part had reference to the supply to country gaols? Yes.

306. How did you act in reference to the supplies for your own establishment? I got the orders for Darlinghurst as well, and I act on the same principle. If the contractors do not supply in good time I hunt them up.

307. Mr. Maclean.] You find a great improvement under this arrangement? Very great.

308. Do you still find any difficulty in obtaining supplies with that promptitude necessary for the efficiency of the establishment? A little.

309. What is the nature of the difficulty? As an example, I may state that Messrs. Dunlop & Co., who are the contractors for the supply of book-binding materials, have not yet completed the supply of some things which were ordered on the 6th of January last. I have called twice as well as written and sent, and still I have not got the supplies. They have not got the quality of the material which we require, which is the very best mill-boards, and other persons who have that material on hand will not give to Dunlop & Co. because they have the Government contract.

310. Chairman.] How is it that the condition which empowers you to purchase at the contractor's risk has not been carried out? Because the contractor keeps supplying a little just to keep us going. He puts us off for a very long time, and then he supplies just a little to keep us quiet. We are very much inconvenienced in making books for gaols in the country, and when we press Dunlop very hard he supplies us

Mr.
J. Robson.

J. Robson.

- with a little more. There have been complaints from Braidwood about Dunlop not supplying promptly. At Braidwood Gaol they do private work which we do not do in Darlinghurst Gaol.
311. Mr. Maclean.] Have you ever been authorized to purchase at the contractor's risk by Mr. Brennan? I have got open orders from Mr. Brennan, that is, orders not headed. He does not state where I am to go on account of the contractor complying with his order.
312. That is purchasing at the contractor's risk? Yes.
313. Are there many cases such as that of Dunlop's, which you have described just now? There have not been very many lately.
314. These articles were in Dunlop's contract? They were.
315. Have you found many articles not in contract? Yes, many articles.
316. Have you not taken orders to contractors for many articles not included in their contracts? Not very many for articles which are not in contract at all, but articles ordered have been obtained not at contract prices, because of the exhaustion of the probable quantities.
317. Were these necessarily obtained from the contractor? Yes, on the order that I got from the Stores. The orders were left with the contractor, and he supplied the goods.
318. Captain Hixson.] Were you at liberty to go elsewhere, or were you obliged to get the articles from the contractor? I was obliged to go to the contractor, the order being given upon him. I had nothing to do with the price.
319. Mr. Maclean.] But you have had instances where you have gone round yourself and bought the goods at the lowest market rates? There have been instances where the orders from the Superintendent of Stores have been for goods which were in contract; but the contractors had not got them, and I therefore obtained them elsewhere.
320. Then the bulk of the goods not in contract, or the contract for which is exceeded, was obtained from the contractors? The bulk of the goods.
321. Is that the custom? That is the custom.
322. Captain Hixson.] Referring to your intercourse with contractors, what reason do they give you as the cause of their delay in complying with the wants of the Government? Their not having timely notice of the articles required.
323. How could this timely notice be given? By having the schedule properly prepared when it is first put into the hands of the contractor, so that it will show the probable quantity required.
324. Are you satisfied with the manner in which these probable quantities have generally been prepared? No, not as far as I am concerned.
325. You think an improvement could be effected in this respect? Yes.
326. What would you propose? That the schedule should be sent round to the different Government establishments to which the goods will have to be supplied, for revision.
327. Do not these schedules come to you? No, not the whole of them.
328. You do not think that proper attention has been paid to eliciting this information from the departments requiring the stocks? Speaking for the general Gaol Service throughout the Colony, it has not.
329. Chairman.] I think you have said that you have been about three years in your present position. During that period have you never been applied to by Mr. Brennan to revise the schedules? Never the linen drapery schedule, and that is just the principal thing. The other schedules have not been sent to me regularly.
330. Are you aware that the linen drapery schedule was forwarded to Dr. Manning? I was told that as Dr. Manning had the greatest demand upon the linen drapery schedule it was referred to him.
331. Mr. Maclean.] In those cases where the contractor has supplied beyond the contract, was the supply at the contract price, or at a new price of his own? I cannot say.
332. Can you suggest of your own accord any process by which the promptness of the supply can be expedited? I do not know of any other than that of giving the contractors timely notice.
333. I am speaking of getting the supplies after the order is given? I have not to complain of that now. An officer employed for the purpose of getting supplies promptly delivered would probably be beneficial.
334. Chairman.] Supposing our arrangements were altered in this way,—that all general stores or supplies ordered from contractors were delivered in the first instance into the Government Stores, inspected there, and the responsibility of rapid delivery be cast upon the Superintendent,—would not that be a better plan than the present system? Supplies for places at a distance must necessarily be dealt with in that way, but for places in Sydney it is much better that the supplies should be direct from the contractors. Take the supply of leather, for instance. Tebbatt will supply it to Darlinghurst Gaol, and if the weight is correct, it is accepted; but if it goes to the Stores Department and lies there in their dry stores it loses weight, and by the time it is sent to its destination, Parramatta perhaps, it has lost 50lbs. in weight in a large consignment.
335. But the purpose of the new proposition is specially to avoid delay, and under no circumstances is it proposed that the goods should lie there; it is intended that the goods should be inspected there and immediately delivered? There would be less delay if the contractor sent the goods direct to Darlinghurst Gaol, than if he sent them first to the Stores. If he sent them to the Stores it would very likely be necessary that an officer from the Gaol would have to go down there and inspect them, so that under that plan many days might be lost.
336. Mr. Maclean.] Suppose the contractor sends you an article to Darlinghurst Gaol that you do not approve of, what steps do you take? We send it back to the contractor at once. The contractor can if he likes refer to the Stores.
337. But as a rule he takes it back? Yes. Very often an article is of inferior quality which we are obliged to return, and we have in such cases had them exchanged by the contractors for articles of superior quality.
338. Chairman.] As regards Darlinghurst Gaol, you think that the present arrangement which implies receiving supplies direct from the contractor would best meet the wants of your department? Yes.
339. Mr. Maclean.] As a rule, is the quality of the general stores supplied to Darlinghurst Gaol up to sample or standard? Yes, generally.
340. Have there been important instances where it has not been? No important instances.
341. Was there not a question raised one year about the quality of the grey cloth which was supplied? There was one lot which we received which was very bad, but as there was no other in the country we were obliged to take it. In one instance Mr. Brennan had to send to Melbourne for a supply to meet pressing and important wants, and to pay a very high price. The contract I think was 5s. 6d., but it could not be purchased here as there was none in the market. He had to pay 6s. 4½d. per yard for it in Melbourne, besides something for Customs duty.
and

Mr. J. Robson.
3 July, 1879

342. Mr. Maclean.] Was the probable quantity in the contract exceeded? I think it was not in contract at all.

343. Captain Hixson.] Have you known articles rejected and sent back to Sydney from a long distance because they were not up to sample? Yes.

344. You think that if an Inspector of Stores were appointed to examine goods delivered in Sydney for country service, evils of that sort would be prevented? If he had in his possession samples of everything to be supplied, there would be no alternative in the country but to receive them; but such an officer should be very careful how he passed the goods—he ought to have samples of everything for his guidance, and it would be necessary that he should be very careful that the contractor did not supply any articles of inferior quality.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPT. HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Dr. F. N. Manning was called in and further examined:—

345. Chairman.] Are there any other matters upon which you desire to give your opinion? Yes, there are several matters. I would prefer to take up some minor points before going into the question of the new Store Regulations. In the first instance, no credit is given to the institutions for the amount realized by the sale of old stores. I have written on several occasions to ask for this, but have never been able to obtain it. It is a minor matter undoubtedly, but I think the officers in charge of institutions should be able to ascertain exactly their cost, and the amount realized by the sale of old stores is a set off against the cost of the institution which should be known to them. Another point I wish to bring under the notice of the Board, and especially as it has turned up in evidence previously given is, that it does not seem desirable that the exact quantities asked for should be insisted on in all cases, but I think the Stores Department should have some liberty to allow goods to be supplied to the extent of ten per cent. over or under the requisition, as the case may be. I will illustrate what I mean by referring to a late requisition. I asked for 50 yards of a given material, and I got 28. When I requested a further supply, I found that the contractors were not allowed to supply to the extent of another piece, because that would be over the requisition, and they declined to cut the piece to supply the exact quantity, because that would leave a remnant on their hands which would be unsaleable. The goods were made in pieces of 28 yards each, and I was therefore under-supplied to the extent of nearly half my requisition. If there had been some liberty allowed to the head of the Stores Department in regard to supplying, I could have got very much nearer my requirements. Now, if you will allow me, I will sketch briefly the plan which I would advise as regards the future amendment of the Stores Department. In the first place, I think that instead of a general store vote, the votes for stores might be placed under the head of each department; that for example, the Lunacy, the Gaols, and the Police, Departments might have upon their general votes a vote for stores. I would recommend that the requisitions should be forwarded for approval to the Ministerial head of the department, and on approval, that copies should be sent to the Stores Department; that the head of the Stores Department on these requisitions should make out the orders, specifying the time within which these orders were to be complied with; that the goods should be sent to the Stores Department and examined and forwarded with advice notes to the institutions for which they are intended; that the accounts should be sent in duplicate, and that the officer in charge of the institution should be responsible for certifying to their correctness both as regards the quantities and the prices. In this way the clerical staff of the Stores Department might be very largely reduced, and no large amount of extra labour would be placed upon the staff of the different establishments, since in every establishment in which there is any regard for expenditure, the accounts are now examined, not only as regards quantities, but also as regards prices. I make this suggestion partly from the fact of an alteration which has been adopted with regard to the supply of medicines to the Lunacy Department. The vote for medicines has always been on the estimates of the department itself, and not on the general store estimates; and lately, at my suggestion, the accounts have been passed irrespective of the Stores Department altogether. Requisitions have been forwarded to the contractors, and the whole business of the Stores Department has been the packing of the goods and seeing that they were safely delivered at the department. I find that the system works decidedly better as regards the speed with which the articles are supplied, and that I have less trouble as regards the accounts.

Dr. F. N. Manning.
9 July, 1879.

346. Are you aware that many years ago this system was tried and abandoned? No, I am not aware of it. I may add that the present method adopted at the Stores Department appears to me to be somewhat cumbersome. Four or five separate papers are sent with every package of goods. There is first an advice; then a letter informing you of the despatch of the goods; next a list of the articles, and next an invoice. This must involve a very large amount of clerical labour, and I do not see that it gives any advantages over the system of making the contractors supply the invoices in duplicate, and sending on the goods with an advice note from the Stores. In the next place the instructions to the heads of departments appear to have been framed rather from an accountant's point of view than a practical one. It is impossible for the head of a department, with numerous other duties to perform, to approve of the requisitions of his subordinates for each individual article issued from the Stores; and the returns quarterly and monthly which are asked for involve an immense amount of labour without, as far as I am able to see, any practical result. The officer in charge of the stores at the different establishments is the officer who is charged with the preparation of these returns, and if there is any peculation or any malversation of stores he is the officer who is likely, from his position, to be implicated, and by a little cooking of the accounts he might ward off inquiry. I would suggest suggest that an officer from the Stores Department should pay periodical visits to the different public institutions and look over the store books. Such inspection of the stores themselves as might seem to him desirable would furnish a much more satisfactory check upon the issues than can be furnished by any officer of the establishment itself. The only other question I have to go into is the price of gaol articles which, as it appears to me at present, are in excess of the market value. They are in excess not only of the contract prices, but also in excess of the prices for similar articles made in the Melbourne gaols. I object to pay a larger price because it increases the cost of the establishment under my control for the benefit of the Gaol Department. It is a process of robbing Peter to pay Paul, which is an innocuous process as far as the general government is concerned, but which is not fair as between individual departments. Take as a single instance the present price of boots from the Gaol Department, which is 7s. 3d. per pair, while the contract price is 4s. 6d. Not very long ago, in the failure of the gaols to supply some boots, I got some contract boots at 4s. 6d.

Dr. F. N.

347. Captain Hixson.] How did they wear? They wear better than the gaol boots. I would advise also that there should be samples given for the articles made in the gaols. A sample should be supplied from the department, and the goods should make up to that. The articles made in the gaols at present, with the exception of the matting, which is excellent, are not equal in my opinion to the articles which can be obtained from the contractors. The gaol brushware is especially bad, and will not wear one-half the time that the brushware obtained by contract will.

348. Do you happen to know the price of stores per head of the patients in your establishment? I could give it to you accurately for the last ten years, but I have not the figures with me.

349. Do you remember about the cost? I cannot tell you now. It appears in the returns of the different establishments.

350. Mr. Maclean.] You have quoted boots at 7s. 3d.? Yes.

351. You are not aware that the price has been reduced to 6s. 9d.? I have not yet seen any notice of the reduction.

352. Can you tell me what the price of the Melbourne gaol boots is? I cannot. I have written to Melbourne for their new store list. I have the old store list with me. I was told that they were preparing a new store list, and that they would send me two copies as soon as it was issued.

353. Chairman.] Are you satisfied with the present mode of calling for tenders for provisions in bulk instead of by the ration system? Yes; I prefer it for the institutions under my charge. It seems advisable in different establishments to ask for the articles in different sections, separating the meat from the flour and the bread; but in other establishments it has been found better to issue tenders for the whole of the provisions required. Wherever practicable samples of all articles which are not specially perishable are kept, both at the Stores Department and at the establishment receiving the supplies; and this system has been found to act thoroughly well.

354. Mr. Maclean.] Where disputes arise in regard to the quality of the articles supplied, have you found the present Board system answer? No; decidedly not.

355. Could you give us any suggestion on that point? The difficulty has been to find anyone to act on a Board; and of late years the contractor has almost invariably replaced the articles upon the remonstrance of the officer in charge.

356. Would you suggest any new condition in lieu of these Boards? I think that the condition which already exists that the officer in charge may upon being responsible to the Treasury reject the articles at the time and place of delivery is sufficient.

357. That has reference to perishable articles alone? Yes; but there can be little dispute in regard to goods of which there is a sample. It is very easy by comparison to say whether the goods are equal to sample or not. There was great difficulty when the conditions simply stated that the articles must be the best of their several kinds, for there was no arriving at the meaning of the word best.

358. Are you not aware that contractors inclined to be troublesome have frequently insisted on having a Board? Yes; and I am aware that the department has often got the worst of it.

359. Do you see any use in keeping up the right of a contractor to demand a Board? I do not; and I know that in towns like Parramatta, where the contracts are divided, you could scarcely get a man to sit upon a Board who was not a near neighbour or friend of the contractor.

360. In point of fact disputes referred to Boards are almost sure to be decided against the Government? Yes.

361. With respect to cases where the quality of articles is disputed, where any large supply is delivered at the stores, clothing for example, do you think there should be a special Board of Survey, or would you recommend any other course? In the matters of clothing and blankets, I think it is desirable that there should be a special Board of Survey.

362. But you would not give the contractor a voice in the selection of that Board? Decidedly not. Boards of Survey in the Navy are always composed of the officers. I would finally add that in any complaint I may seem to have made, I think that it is the system of the Stores Department which has been to blame, and not the officers. I have always found Mr. Brennan most courteous, and, on my personal application, he has not only done his best to remedy any faults which may have occurred, but very often he has done a great deal to remedy the shortcomings of my own department. If anything which I have said may seem to reflect upon Mr. Brennan personally, I am very anxious to correct this impression.

THURSDAY, 10 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPT. HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Sidney Cohen, Esq., was called in and examined:—

S. Cohen, Esq. 363. Chairman.] Your name, Mr. Cohen? Sidney Cohen.

364. You are aware, Mr. Cohen, that the present Board is sitting to inquire into our contract system, with a view to introduce improvements if we find them necessary, and, as you have been a very old contractor for for Government supplies, the Board desire to obtain the benefit of any suggestions which your experience might give? Yes. S. Cohen, Esq.

10 July, 1879.

365. Are you prepared to give us any information on the subject? I shall be very glad to give you every information. I may say that since I was a boy I have been working Government contracts. I was for ten or twelve years with Mr. John Keep, where I had the sole management of this part of his business, and since I have been in business on my own account I have been a successful tenderer, not only to the Treasury, but to the Colonial Architect's Department, the Railway Department, and the Harbours and Rivers Departments.

366. The principal difficulty appears to the Board to be in the preparation of the schedules, both as regards probable quantities and the description of the articles required. Could you give us any suggestion as to the preparation of the schedule? My idea would be this—that you should have a complete set of samples. I am speaking of ironmongery and ship-chandlery. I think you should have a sample of everything you require, and that the goods should be tendered for by them. If I had the making of the schedules I should leave out the probable quantities altogether; I do not think they are requisite, and they only mislead the public. Neither Mr. Brennand nor anybody else in the Stores Department can give the probable quantities with any accuracy, because the quantities required differ so much from year to year.

367. You do not think that the omission of the probable quantities would prevent persons from tendering? I do not think it would. If you had a complete set of samples and every one saw what they were, they would not care whether they supplied you with a dozen or half-a-dozen of each article. A wrong impression has got abroad about tendering, but there is no question about it but that the present mode of tendering is best for the Government, who are great gainers by the system. I could name dozens of instances where we have things in at low prices which we are called on over and over again to supply. Take for example nun-buoys. The Government have for a long time been using oil drums, and have not required nun-buoys; and, not expecting that they would be called for, we put them down at a low figure. But to show you how our judgment was out, I may say that Captain Hixson has called upon me to supply dozens of them. That is a case where the Government benefits by the present system.

368. What are the Board to understand by the term "present system"? I mean the present system of accepting the lowest tender in a computation of prices.

369. Does not this admit of what appears to be a vicious principle—namely, the putting in of articles at what I may term fictitious or unnaturally low prices? Whatever plan you adopt, you will never be able to prevent that. You cannot take away the experience I have gained during the last seventeen or eighteen years, enabling me to judge of the wants of the Government. As regards the ship-chandlery and ironmongery, I believe I know considerably more about the wants of the Government than the heads of the departments themselves, or than any Government officer connected with the business. I attend to the business myself, and everything goes out through my own hands. There is only one way to prevent ridiculously low prices, and that is by getting out a schedule and accepting tenders line for line. That would cost the Government twice as much as the present system, and it would prevent low prices for a time; but what you gained in price you would lose in the multiplication of packages, freights, and general expenses, which would be increased one hundred per cent. Suppose you got half-a-dozen augurs from me, planes from Mr. John Keep, rope from Lassetter & Co., paint from somebody else, and so on, this distribution of the tenders would add to the freight upon supplies. Under the present system, all these things are obtained from one contractor, put into one package, and sent off together.

370. Do you not think that an improvement might be made in the schedule, by stating the articles at greater length and with more detail? I think you could get over the difficulty by putting the plain article without the maker's name or anything else, and make the contractor supply up to sample. But you must have a proper sample room, and not a cupboard such as they have at the Stores, where you can never find anything when it is wanted. Many of the samples at the Stores have been there for years, and are now quite out of date. If you had samples, and I got an open order to supply to sample, there would be no difficulty. I may say that about £30 would cover the expense of providing all the samples of ironmongery and ship-chandlery you would require. If you have a complete set of samples you can supply to sample, and the sample can be referred to.

371. It has been suggested to the Board as a preferable mode of dealing with tenders to adopt this plan: instead of having a schedule in detail, that we should take leading lines; for example, holloware, which would include a great many articles now in the schedule, that we should name the goods of an approved British maker, and ask for tenders upon that line, so much per cent. above or below the standard manufacturers' prices for the year,—and that we should adopt that plan in the case of all other manufactures where there are standard makers and prices. Do you think that plan would answer? I am positive there is no one in town who could make out a schedule of that description; I could not do it myself.

372. Do you think that if the Government made out a schedule of prices of ironmongery or ship-chandlery, specifying each article in detail, the contractors would tender at a percentage above or below, as in the case of the Railway, Colonial Architect's, and Harbours and Rivers Departments? I think it is a fair way of tendering; there is nothing objectionable in it, provided you can get a proper schedule made out; but, as I have said before, I think the plan most advantageous to the Government is for the Government to have a complete set of samples and to require contractors to supply to sample.

373. Do I understand that in the case where a sample should be provided for each article you would do without a schedule? No; you would have to have your schedule made out, and it would have to correspond with the samples. I would put in the schedule, say for example, American axes, and I would have a sample of the axes you would require kept at the Stores; and the same with spades and every other article—I would have a sample of the spade or shovel, or whatever else it was that you required.

374. Mr. Maclean.] Then if you were to supply an article by a different maker from that of the sample, would not a question at once arise as to the comparison? I would name the maker.

375. Suppose the article hung up in the sample room was by one maker and the article supplied by another? The contractor should be required to supply the same maker's goods. I would say that the Government should in their schedule name the best makers of every article. I believe Civil Servants think that the contractors push off on to the Government any rubbish, whereas they get the very best of everything.

376. You would supply goods by the same maker as the sample? Yes; if a Foster's spade were hung up we would supply to that.

377. Chairman.] You think that the plan of determining tenders by a computation of prices is the best on the whole? I think it is the best for the Government, but not for the contractor. 378.

- S. Cohen, Esq. 378. Mr. Maclean.] If the plan of accepting tenders line by line were adopted, do you think there would be a large number of separate contracts? I think there would.
- 10 July, 1879. 379. Do you think that the adoption of that plan would prevent the very various and incongruous prices now obtaining? It would lead to a great many tenders and a great many contractors, but you would find that they would fall off year by year, for the simple reason that the contractors would be called upon to supply so few articles in each line in the course of the year that it would not be worth their while to tender again, and the contracts would fall back into the present system.
380. Chairman.] Will you give us some illustration in support of your view? Yes, take the line of hammers for instance. There are six different sorts named in the contract price list. I might get the contract for the blacksmiths' hammers, Keep might get it for the sledge hammers, and Lassetter for the claw hammers. I might perhaps get two or three of the others. Suppose that Keep got only the one line in the whole of that tender, he might not be called upon to supply a single article in the course of the year, and he would say that it would be no use his going in for the contract again. We have experience enough to keep things lowest which are most in demand, which run into money, and we should therefore pretty well beat other contractors. We should therefore continue to supply the bulk of the goods, and there would be so few of the other articles wanted that you would find that eventually other contractors would fall off one by one.
381. Could not the schedule be so far amended as to confine it to the articles actually in use by the Government? The schedule has been cut down year after year. The schedule is no doubt capable of great improvement. Year after year Mr. Brennand or the proper officer has been cutting out of the schedule many articles, but they are still being supplied in quantities; I may say that from fifteen to twenty per cent. of the goods supplied are out of contract through the schedule being cut down. The Government has nothing to lose by making the schedule as complete as possible, but everything to gain.
382. Mr. Maclean.] The Government has nothing to lose by that? No. If, for instance, we put in fenders at 4s. which cost seven or eight, and you call for a lot of them, we should be obliged to supply them.
383. Chairman.] That is a risk which you run? Yes, but the Government get the benefit of it. If you call for tenders at a schedule price, according to percentage, my experience would come in more there than it does in this system of computation of prices; because, to get the tender, there are things off which I can take a long discount.
384. Mr. Maclean.] Everything depends upon the preparation of the schedule? Yes; and I am convinced that supplying to sample and accepting the lowest tender on the computation of prices is best for the Government.
385. Capt. Hixson.] We have been told that many tradesmen have declined to tender because the schedules are prepared as we see them now. Do you think that that is the case? I do not think so.
386. Mr. Maclean.] The schedule is said to be unintelligible to business men? I cannot see anything in the schedule which is unintelligible.
387. Capt. Hixson.] You think that your long experience in regard to particular lines would give you an advantage however the tender might be prepared? Yes, as against other tenderers, with the exception of Mr. John Keep.
388. You have not gained this experience from visiting the Stores? I do not go down to the Stores, unless it is to look up an account. They cannot tell me anything.
389. Chairman.] You have had experience of the system of tendering by percentages on or off a schedule of prices? Yes, and with respect to its advantage over the computation system, I know lines in the Railway Department's contracts which are taken on the percentage system which are 100 per cent. over their proper price, and others which are 50 or 60 per cent. under their proper market price. I could point out dozens of them; but they are of no consequence, because they want so few of them.
390. Are there contracts where a few leading lines govern the whole tender? Yes, there are about half-a-dozen lines which govern the tender. I am against the tender system, because it is neither fair to the Government nor the contractor. In the schedule of percentage of prices you can lose or make heavily.
391. Mr. Maclean.] You think it is more speculative for both sides? Considerably more. With this computation system the competition has been so close that sometimes there has not been £5 difference in £6,000 or £7,000 worth of goods tendered for.
392. In the tenders, but not in the result of the contracts? Yes; and in the result of the contracts in the same way. We are allowed at the Board at the Railway Department. There is only Mr. John Keep and myself who go in for the ironmongery contract—the others will not tender for it. Year after year it has been the same.
393. Because they do not know the quantities? They know everything there.
394. Captain Hixson.] Why is the competition confined to you and Mr. Keep? The Government have not restricted it, but other ironmongers will not go in for it.
395. Do you know why? Because they say we take the contracts too low, and that it is no use tendering against us. I may mention one result of tendering at schedule prices. I have got a contract with cement in it. The Government this year will want, for the steam cranes at Newcastle, about 4,000 barrels, and about 5,000 for Shellharbour, altogether there will be about 10,000 or 11,000 casks of cement wanted this year. That line is put in among a lot of other things the supply of which will not amount to £300. Of course we throw over all the other things, and in tendering we calculate at what we can do the cement for alone.
396. And give the Government the rest? Yes; we almost give the Government the rest.
397. Chairman.] The only check required is that when you put things in at a low price, the Government should insist upon your supplying them? You do insist upon our supplying them to a very large extent.
398. Do I understand that as contractors for the Government you are obliged to keep stocks of goods which are not in demand in the open market? Yes, very heavy stocks.
399. Mr. Maclean.] Persons who are in the habit of constantly supplying the Government keep stocks in hand of goods which they know are likely to be required? Yes; lots of gaol requirements for example. All the gaol tables and tressels are imported now—you never see one of these barrack tables anywhere else; and the same with handcuffs and leg-irons.
400. Chairman.] Then this would give the Board a general idea of what you think is desirable—that the present system of giving the contract to the lowest tenderer by computation of prices should be continued; that.

that probable quantities should not be stated ; that samples properly displayed should be kept of every article in the schedule up to which standard supplies should be made ; and that the schedules should be enlarged and more carefully prepared ? Yes, that I think meets the case. I may also state that the Superintendent of Stores has for years past been striking out of each successive year's schedule the articles tendered for at ridiculously low prices in previous years, in order to prevent contractors quoting fictitious prices on goods which they think will not be wanted ; but the result of this arrangement has been to exclude a number of articles from the contract which have to be bought at higher prices, because they are not in contract.

10 July, 1879.

401. Mr. Maclean.] And as a matter of custom the contractor for the main supplies also supplies the articles not in contract ? Mr. Brennand sends round his man to inquire the prices of the articles required ; but if the regular contractor is the lowest, I believe it is the rule to order from him.

402. Under the present system of schedules what proportion of goods in your department have been out of contract ? I should say they would average ten per cent.

403. Capt. Hixson.] You mean the cost—not the article ? I mean the aggregate value.

404. Mr. Maclean.] Complaints have been made of the inconvenience caused by the delay in supplying goods ordered. You supply the Sydney establishments by orders from the Stores direct, do you not ? Yes.

405. How long would an order lie in your establishment before it was attended to ? It would be attended to immediately. The goods would always be out in two or three days, unless in the case of some special article which had to be made. There has been a delay about some horn spoons required for the Parramatta Lunatic Asylum, because they happened to be shut out of one vessel. Tenders for the supplies of any particular year ought to be called for in June of the year before, so as to give the contractor time to import such articles as he may not have on hand. Last year the tenders were not got out until December, and the consequence was that the stock of horn spoons ordered for the supply of that year, and left over, was not enough to meet the demands which were made under the tenders for this year. The Asylum had to wait, because there were no horn spoons in the market ; but the goods were supplied two months ago. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the articles ordered are supplied at once.

406. Is that the case in regard to the country establishments also ? Yes.

407. Their supplies you send to the Stores ? Yes.

408. Is there any delay at the Stores ? I think not. Adams sends them off at once.

409. You cannot suggest any improvement in that respect ? I do not know whether there is any delay in dealing with the requisitions before they come to us.

410. What you get is an order to supply ? Yes.

411. And there is no delay with you ? None.

412. And there need be none ? Not the slightest. If we were to allow the orders to accumulate, we should get into an awful mess. If I had thought that you were going to ask me that question, I could have brought you up bundles of receipts to show that goods have been delivered at once. There might be an isolated case of delay, but it would be an exception.

John Keep, Esq., was called in and examined :—

413. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Keep ? John.

414. You have been a large contractor for Government supplies for several years ? Yes.

J. Keep, Esq.
10 July, 1879.

415. Chiefly in ironmongery ? Yes ; and oils, colours, and ship-chandlery.

416. The object of the Board is to inquire into the present system of tendering, with a view to ascertain if any improvement can be made upon the present system ; and, as you have been a contractor for a long time, the Board would be glad to receive any suggestions you can make ? I consider that the present system of tendering at the Stores is susceptible of great improvement.

417. Do you mean the present system of awarding contracts on a computation of prices ? I mean that you do not get the best tenders from these schedules. Although you give the contract to the lowest tenderer, you do not get the most advantageous tenders for the Government.

418. Will you be good enough to say what you think a preferable mode of tendering ? The best mode of tendering, I consider, is that which is adopted by the Railway Department and the Harbours and Rivers Department. After considerable experience they have found out the best plan that can be adopted—that is, the schedule by percentage. I have here the schedule with prices as prepared by those departments, on which tenders are invited at a percentage above or below the price named. I think this the best method, always supposing that the schedules are properly made out. It was not properly made out the first year or two. It was only on representations showing the irregularities of it that we got the schedule perfect, and as it is now it is about as perfect as it can be.

419. The present schedule of the departments referred to was improved after conference with the leading houses in the trade ? Yes, with the contractors. The departments sent round to the leading houses. I made a schedule up for them, and I think Mr. Cohen and one or two others did the same. I suppose the departments hit the happy mean as nearly as they could. There will always be inequalities in any system, but this schedule is as fair as it can be.

420. Are the probable quantities stated ? No ; they are not at all necessary.

421. Is the lowest line of each article taken in deciding upon the tender ? No ; the schedule is taken as a whole, and the tender is made up by one stroke of the pen—so much per cent. on or off the schedule prices—5 per cent. on or 20 per cent. off as the case may be. The schedule has been very much simplified by inserting, wherever possible, certain trade lists. Take for instance, gas-pipes. There is a certain list which is always the same, unless some radical change takes place. You see that in this schedule gas-pipes and fittings are represented in a line, whereas they formerly occupied columns. The same remark applies to water-pipes and fittings. Forty-five per cent. off the trade list is the wholesale price, and the tenderer may take 5 per cent. off the schedule or put 5 per cent. on.

422. Mr. Maclean.] These schedules are prepared on trade price lists ? Wherever it is possible. There are only about a dozen lines which can be done in that way.

423. Capt. Hixson.] Could you call for tenders on the basis of English trade lists ? No, you could not possibly do it, except in about half-a-dozen instances.

- J. Keep, Esq. 424. You must have the schedule prepared for the Service? Yes. I believe there was some letter from a London contractor calling attention to this, and I think he referred to holloware, but he lost sight of the freight and shipping charges.
- 10 July, 1879. 425. Chairman.] You sustain no inconvenience as a contractor from the want of probable quantities being stated? No, we do not want them at all. A contractor is supposed to have the stock, and if he has not got it he must buy it.
426. Under this system of percentage over or under schedule prices could we escape the fictitiously low prices which embarrass the present tenders? Certainly.
427. Is there any possibility of articles not in use being put in at low prices, while articles required are put in at high prices? No; the Government state their own price, and we tender at so much above or below. I do not think any tenderer dare put in at low prices such as you suppose. According to the schedule of contract prices it is a mere shot whether the goods are wanted or not; and I could show you one or two lines showing the absurdity of the system. Take for example these nun-buoys. They cost 52s., but they are down in the contract prices at 12s., and they were contracted for at that low rate because it was supposed that they would not be wanted. Fifty different articles could be mentioned in the same way—one penny for things which cost a pound. If they are wanted, and delivery is insisted upon, the contractor is sold; but if you get a schedule properly made out, as you can do from some of the leading ironmongers, that sort of tendering would not be possible.
428. Could it be made up in Sydney? Yes, I would make one up, subject to any alteration which the Government might choose to make in it.
429. If, in the system you propose, the tender were accepted on the whole by percentage, there could not be any possible manipulation of prices? No.
430. But, if accepted line for line, the contractor could manipulate the tender? Yes; but no one would tender line by line.
431. You say that no one would take a contract line by line on the percentage system? No.
432. Do you think they would upon the old system? I think not; and I do not think, if they did, that it would work well for the Government. It is worth while to tender on the whole schedule, and to keep a stock for it, but not for one or two lines, and the result would be that the Government would not get the goods when they wanted them.
433. Do you think that under the system which has hitherto obtained, where the prices have been speculative, that it has not worked both ways—sometimes to the advantage of the Government, and sometimes to that of the contractor? If I had had the ordering and receiving of the goods, I know very well they would not have gone into contract a second year at the same prices.
434. But the system has not been so much against the Government as people suppose? No, I do not think it has, as a matter of fact; it is more the absurdity of the thing.
435. The effect has been to give an experienced tenderer a great advantage over an inexperienced one? Yes; under the present system Mr. Cohen and myself would have a wonderful advantage over anybody else.
436. Mr. Maclean.] With regard to the question of samples, do you think that the Government would derive much benefit from extending and making very much more complete their samples? It is no use. I would specify the best article that can be supplied.
437. Would you mention the maker's name? No, it would be better not.
438. Why not? Because a maker whose name is good one year may supply a very much worse article the next.
439. You think that to require the best of its kind would be the best system? Yes; but then you must have some one receiving the goods who knows what a really good article is.
440. Captain Hixson.] Unless there is a sample for reference, would there not in all probability be disputes between the Government officers and the contractor? No, because the officer would simply say "I won't have it." The officers would say "That article won't suit us," and they are not bound to give any reason for rejecting the article. Any complaint which the contractor has to make must be to the Head of the Department, whose decision is final, and it is perfectly right that it should be so.
441. Mr. Maclean.] In ironmongery you do not think that samples or makers' names would be of the slightest use? No, and I am certain that if you had the samples they would not be used. Every year the contractor used to sign the samples at the Stores, and they were never looked at.
442. Was that because the goods were sent to the establishment? No, they were always sent to the Stores.
443. Capt Hixson.] The samples were looked at in former years? I do not think so. There could be no harm in your having samples. I would very much rather you had samples as far as I am concerned, but I think it is fairest to all parties that the contractor should have to supply the best article, and that he should be compelled to supply it. There used to be a number of makers' names given, but the practice has been given up. It was tried and found not to answer.
444. Mr. Maclean.] Can you give the Board any suggestions to expedite the delivery of supplies to Government establishments, or can you say whether under your observation there has been delay which might be avoided? There have been great delays.
445. Can you explain why? I can simply speak of one or two cases which have come under my own observation during the last few months. I sent my account in in the ordinary way and could not get it paid, because the account had never been sent back to the department. Upon inquiry it was found that the goods had been sent to the department and had never been asked for.
446. You are speaking of delays in transit? Yes.
447. And how is it as to delays in delivery? There are none as far as I am aware. If there are delays in Sydney it is the fault of the Storekeeper.
448. By good despatch arrangements there need be no delay at the Stores? No, not as a rule.
449. Captain Hixson.] When there have been delays in contractors delivering goods, how have they arisen? Often, I suppose—to refer to a familiar article—because it has been a 5-cwt. weighing-machine case. It has probably not been convenient to supply an article worth £5 for 5s., and by delaying the delivery the matter has been forgotten or delivery not insisted on.
450. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think there has been a delay when it has not been convenient to the contractor to supply? Yes.
451. Captain Hixson.] And from contractors not having the goods they undertake to supply? That delay would only be a short one, and it can be obviated by buying the goods at the contractor's risk if he does not supply

- supply within a reasonable time. An article may be run out of stock in the Colony, but as a rule that is not the case. The delay arises from not seeing that the orders are executed. J. Keep, Esq.
10 July, 1879.
452. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that the omission of the probable quantities would leave new contractors very much in the dark as to the requirements of the Government? No; because they can always get the information from the different departments. In a schedule of this kind I do not think it is possible to state the probable quantities exactly, unless it is for oil, where you use thousands of gallons. In a few lines the Railway Department does accept tenders for specific quantities.
453. Captain Hixson.] That is a positive quantity—not a probable one? Yes.
454. Mr. Maclean.] Would it not be impossible for a person proposing to tender to obtain his information from the Stores or the different departments, because there are so many things wanted which could not be given except by some authority? The probable quantities given up to the present time have not been in any way correct; and they sometimes lead to great disadvantage, as for instance in the case of kerosene oil, where the probable quantities for the year were required during the first quarter of the year, and for the supply of all the rest of the year there was no contract.
455. The Government do not now bind themselves to probable quantities? No.
456. In certain cases the probable quantities may be an advantage? In half-a-dozen, perhaps, they may be.
457. Captain Hixson.] Suppose the probable quantities were omitted altogether, would there be any disinclination to tender? I think not.
458. Mr. Maclean.] Under the present system, do the probable quantities do any harm? No; but if probable quantities are given they should be correctly given, and they would then be an advantage.
459. Captain Hixson.] From your experience, as an old contractor, do you think it possible for the Government to give probable quantities? No; it is a most difficult thing. The demands of the Government are not regular, but are guided by circumstances. It is only in a dozen lines in our trade that probable quantities could be given.
460. Mr. Maclean.] You would give them for some goods and not for others? For some few things. You might make out the probable quantities of oil required for the light-houses, and for one or two lines; but you cannot give the probable quantities of paint oil, and it is not at all necessary that you should.
461. Then you would insert the probable quantities in the case of articles for which a good approximate estimate of requirements could be formed? Yes, and leave the others out. I would rather be without them—I never take any notice of them.
462. Captain Hixson.] Your experience as a contractor in these particular lines would place you at an advantage as compared with a tenderer who had no such experience? Not now I think. Any new contractor would find no difficulty in ascertaining what has been, and from that inferring what will be.
463. Do you know how the Corporation of Sydney call for tenders? They call for prices in particular lines, and they pick them out.
464. Do you supply the Corporation? Yes.
465. Do you find any inconvenience from their mode of tendering? They require such a small number of items that it does not make any difference. Nearly all the steam-boat services are coming into the percentage system of tendering.
466. Do the A. S. N. Company adopt it? I do not know that they issue tenders. The Gas Company and the Hunter River Company adopt it.
467. You are in favour of the percentage system? Yes, as being the fairest for all parties, but the schedule must be fairly made out. If the schedule is fairly made out upon the wholesale prices it matters very little if they are high or low as long as they are uniform, because the contractor will make that right. If you name a very high price the contractor will take 20 per cent. off, and if you name a very low one he will put (say) 5 per cent. on.
468. Mr. Maclean.] Is there any difficulty in keeping accounts under that system? I cannot conceive of any difficulty.
469. It has been suggested that money values should be stated to represent probable quantities? I do not think that would answer. In the case of an article like teal oil, which has to be imported expressly for the Government Service, you want to know how many gallons to import from China.
470. Captain Hixson.] A previous witness has strongly advocated the present system of preparing the schedules, and he has mentioned that it would answer well, provided there was a sample room where each particular article might be seen. You do not agree with that? I do not think that is so good as the system of tendering per schedule so much on or off.

MONDAY, 14 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR,

| HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.,

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Lewis Moore, Esq., was called in and examined:—

471. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Moore? Lewis.
472. I think you represent one of our oldest and longest-established ironmongery firms? Yes, Holdsworth, Macpherson, & Co.
473. Have you had any experience of contracts with the Government of late years? Not of late years.
474. The object of the Board is to inquire into the best means of obtaining supplies for the Public Service with a view to improve the present system of tendering, and we should be glad to receive any suggestions you can make with that object? I may tell you that under the present system a schedule of articles supposed to be required is made up and printed, with a column for the prices in blank. These prices are filled in by the tenderers, and those who have had long experience of Government contracts appear to be able, by putting down low prices for articles which they think will not be required and high prices for articles which they think will be required, to obtain the contracts, which are based on a computation of the whole of the prices? Yes, I see that from the contract price list for 1879.

L. Moore,

14 July, 1879.

L. Moore,

475. Two modes of dealing with these contracts have been suggested to the Board, which I should like your opinion upon. One of these is to name in the schedule the prices of a few leading lines, such as holloware, and to call for tenders at a percentage above or below the English wholesale price of that article, as shown in the published standard trade lists. Another suggestion which has been made is that we should follow the plan which has been adopted in some other of the Public Departments, namely, that we should have a schedule to which the wholesale prices are attached and agreed to as such by the leading houses in the trade, and then to invite tenders above or below those rates? There are a few articles for which standard or list prices, subject to discount, may be quoted, but as a general rule that system of tendering would not apply. For instance, you have here adzes and augers for which no makers' names are given. There are a dozen makers, each having their own price lists.

476. Then would you state what you think of the other proposal,—that of having a schedule with an approximate list of prices? That would be better. That was the plan upon which tendering was done many years ago—we used to tender so much on or off the list.

477. Do you think it a desirable thing to include the probable quantities in these schedules? I think so.

478. Mr. Maclean.] That is, without binding the Government to their probable quantities? Of course. If the Government required a large quantity of an article, it would operate as an inducement to the tenderer to name a low price. Under that system people would not tender for nails at 1s. 9d. which are worth £1, and nails would not be tendered for at £4 4s. a thousand which were worth 1s. 9d.

479. Chairman.] Looking through the list of prices for 1879, which you hold in your hand, do you see many fictitious prices? Yes, there are many absurdly high, and others absurdly low.

480. Do you think that if the percentage system were adopted the Government would obtain more tenders? I think so.

481. Do you think that there is any advantage to be gained by giving tenders for two years instead of one? No, I do not think so.

482. In framing the schedule of prices or approximate prices, I suppose it would be desirable to consult the leading houses in the trade? Yes.

483. Do you think there would be any objection on their part to giving that information? I do not think there would.

484. Mr. Maclean.] I think you said you would not bind the Government to accept the probable quantities which they might name? Yes. If the tender were called for in an open form the contractor would take the risk, the Government giving him the best information they could.

485. With a carefully prepared schedule, you would be willing to accept the risk? Yes.

486. The remedy for the incongruity of prices observable in the present contracts would be in a carefully prepared schedule? Yes, or you might call a tender for all the things you required and accept the lowest line by line. That is how we do when we call for tenders.

487. Chairman.] In tendering by schedule based upon admitted prices at a percentage above or below, the whole contract would have to be accepted or rejected? Yes.

488. Can you inform the Board as to any particular case where the lowest line could be accepted in the tender? Suppose you had half-a-dozen or more persons tendering, you would have to go through the lines very carefully and pick out the lowest tender in each line.

489. That would apply to our present system? Yes.

490. Mr. Maclean.] Would not the Government be embarrassed by a large number of possible contractors by the line per line system—in having to deal with six contractors instead of one? If you had a number of them tendering at the same price it would be awkward. We act upon that system, and give the preference where and how we like, but you could not do that.

491. You would not advocate describing articles by the makers' names? There are some standard articles by particular makers, which might be selected in that way.

492. Chairman.] On the whole, what mode of tendering do you think preferable? I think, upon the whole, that the schedule system is the best.

493. Mr. Maclean.] A percentage above or below a fixed charge? Yes.

494. Chairman.] On the question of samples, do you think it is desirable, where samples can be obtained, that we should have them as standards of reference? I think so.

495. Then the nature of the tender would be for certain articles up to sample at a percentage over or under the schedule price? Yes.

496. Mr. Maclean.] Suppose the sample obtained by the Government is from some prominent maker, and the supply of the article by that maker is not available, would that not lead to difficulty and disputation? If the contractor says he cannot supply the article, it is open to the Government to buy it elsewhere at the contractor's risk.

497. We require now that an article shall be the best of its kind? That is rather vague as a definition.

498. Chairman.] You think it better to go by names? Yes, we have some goods which the makers describe as best best.

Richard Reilly, Esq., was called in and examined:—

R. Reilly,
Esq.
14 July, 1879.

499. Chairman.] Your Christian name? Richard.

500. You have been engaged for a long time in the ironmongery business? I have.

501. Formerly in partnership with Mr. Cohen? Yes.

502. And during that time you had considerable experience in Government contracts? Yes.

503. The object of the Board is to inquire into the present state of the contract system with a view to devise beneficial changes, and we should be glad of any suggestion you can give us in the way of information? Yes; I think the system is susceptible of improvement.

504. Does not the present system tend to incongruous prices, and a computation really not reliable? My experience while a contractor showed me very plainly that the present ironmongers' schedule was a mistake from beginning to end. I may say that I very much approve of the Railway system. Their schedule is about the most correct—that is in the system upon which it is based.

505. Would you be good enough to explain what that system is? In that schedule the prices are fixed at what we call fair trade prices; and the tenderer then has the option of tendering at an advance, discount, or at the net price, as he sees it practicable to do.

506. For the schedule as a whole? For the schedule as a whole, and there is no difficulty about doing that.
507. How are the prices arranged or agreed upon in the Railway schedule? I suppose they were arranged by the Storekeeper. I think Mr. Read was the Storekeeper at the time the new system was adopted.
508. I presume the prices were fixed after consultation with the leading houses in the trade? Yes, that would be the only way to get the schedule correct.
509. The schedule contains standard prices? Yes; by that means the contract schedule cannot be manipulated as this one can be.
510. Will you look at this schedule which is the basis of the present system, and point out how it can be manipulated? The schedule is open to manipulation from the circumstance that the prices against probable quantities are left to be filled in by the tenderer. Take the first line for instance—No. 1 or 2 best warranted. That article is not properly defined. The maker's name should be given. The next line—Augers,  $\frac{3}{8}$  to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Augers vary in price from 1s. 6d. to 8s. If the sizes were given the price should be put to each size. Axes, American, Collins's, 600 are required. You can have three or four Collins's axes if you like, and you can get men in America to make axes and put Collins's name on them. If the axe required were described as S. Collins & Co's the contractor could not get away from that. Then there is the article of files—Files, bastard, various. That description will not do. You must give the trade list of files, which will embrace all the different kinds. The price of files varies according to the size and make, and ranges from 6d. to 6s. perhaps. Then there is—Frying-pans, round, from 7 to 9, tinned iron—average price to be stated. That won't do. Suppose the Storekeeper sends up to the contractor an order to supply a particular establishment a certain number of No. 8 frying-pans. The contractor might say No. 8 is not in the list, and he will not supply them. Then we come to the article of hinges. In cast-iron butt hinges we have a list price. Most of the goods in the ironmongery trade are regulated by list prices, which never vary, except perhaps once in twenty years. If the market price for iron and labour advances very much it may be necessary to alter the list, but that cannot be done without causing an enormous amount of trouble. The file list was altered about fifteen or twenty years ago, and it put us to a great deal of annoyance here, for some sharp ironmongers have the file list at their fingers' ends. That and the prices of black and galvanized tubing were the only two things altered in all that time. I do not think the holloware list was altered in all that time. This schedule is very defective, inasmuch as it says any hinges, brass butt, medium, average price to be stated. That is very vague. If the various sorts were given and the prices put opposite the sizes there could be no difficulty, or reference could be made to list prices, and you would never have any dispute with the contractor. The same will apply to wire nails, patent nails, screws, holloware, and all those articles where there is a list price.
511. Mr. Maclean.] Then you look upon the main remedy to be applied in the entire reconstruction of the schedules? Decidedly.
512. Accurate and proper descriptions of the articles being placed in the schedules? Yes. There are some articles at the end of this list which used to attract my notice; and those are barrack furniture, which used to be put down at a nominal price, the tenderer knowing that the articles would not be required.
513. You think our system of schedules invites these absurd prices? No doubt about it. If the schedule were properly made out, it would occupy a much larger space than this.
514. Would you use makers' names largely in the new schedule? In the description of many articles, I would use them.
515. Would you select them? Yes, particularly in the case of tools.
516. You could not use them in all cases? No. I think it would be necessary to give three or four makers' names.
517. Alternate names? Yes. It is very likely we shall have a great many foreign-made tools imported, and they are often very inferior to English or American. The foreign-made files are nothing like as good as the Sheffield or Wolverhampton files.
518. Chairman.] As regards the probable quantities, do you think it desirable to place these in the new schedule? It is quite right to give the contractor an idea of what you would be likely to require, because he would know better how to adapt his prices to the tender.
519. Should the Government be required to take up to the full value of the probable quantities? Certainly not.
520. It would be a matter of speculation for the contractor? Yes.
521. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that probable requirements are better stated by an enumeration of the quantity—or by a statement of the money value? By enumerating the quantity.
522. Chairman.] Do you think it advisable to have standard samples of the articles? I think it is very necessary to have a sample room, and to keep as nearly as possible a sample of every description of article required. In the olden times the advertisements for tenders always stated that samples of the articles required could be seen at the Commissariat Stores.
523. Mr. Maclean.] Are there any other supplies which the Government obtain to which your evidence applies as well as to the ironmongery? Yes, to the ship-chandlery, oils and colours, brushware and saddlery.
524. It would not touch soft goods? No. I have looked over the schedule of drapery goods, and it appeared to me to be a very simple one, the articles required being generally of a low class—goods suitable for asylums and gaols.
525. You think that the schedules are sufficient? The schedules are very fair.
526. Chairman.] One mode of tendering which has been suggested was that, avoiding details in the schedules, we should name half-a-dozen leading lines and refer to the different manufacturers' trade lists, and that we should then call for tenders at percentages on or off those lists? That could be done in the improved schedule of which I have quoted an example in that of the Railway Department.
527. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that the Government have suffered substantial disadvantage from the present system of supplies? As a whole, it has to a certain extent been disadvantageous to the Government.
528. The thing was speculative on both sides? Quite so.
529. Chairman.] Can you give the Board any information with reference to oils and colours, and ship-chandlery? The schedule for oils and colours wants a great deal of alteration, and also the schedule for ship-chandlery and brushware.
530. Do you think there would be a larger number of tenderers if more intelligible schedules were prepared? I do,

R. Reilly,
Esq.

TUESDAY,

TUESDAY, 16 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

John Pope, Esq., was called in and examined:—

J. Pope, Esq. 531. Chairman.] Your name, Mr. Pope? John.

16 July, 1879. 532. You are a partner in the house of Farmer &amp; Co.? Yes.

533. I think you have had from time to time contracts with the Government? We have.

534. I may state that the object of the Board is to inquire into the present system of managing the Government tendering, with a view to effect any possible improvement, and we should be glad to receive from you any suggestion which you can give us in that direction. Perhaps you will state in the first instance the various contracts you have had from the Government? We have had contracts for linendrapery, for blankets for the aborigines, clothing for the Volunteers, clothing, dowlahs, &amp;c., for the public institutions.

535. You are aware that under the present system tenders are called for on schedules containing probable quantities, with a blank column in which the tenderer states the prices at which he proposes to supply the articles required, and that upon a computation of the whole of the prices the tender is determined? Yes.

536. You are also perhaps aware that much dissatisfaction exists from the circumstance that in the tenders determined in this way fictitious prices, or prices known to be ridiculously low, are attached to some of the articles? I am.

537. You are also aware that in many cases the probable quantities are stated very much in excess of the demand, and that large supplies of particular lines are often left on the tenderers' hands. With this knowledge of the facts, will you suggest to the Board any means by which this linendrapery schedule can be improved? I consider that two great defects of the system are the imperfect probable quantities, and the want of such definite details in the schedule as would make it intelligible to any firm desirous of tendering. Take for example the first line in the linendrapery schedule of the contract for 1878-9 now before me. I notice here a probable quantity of 100 yards of red or green baize, at 6d. per yard, "any width." The sample article would cost any manufacturer 15d. to produce baize 36 inches wide, of the description indicated by the sample, but it is competent for the Government to claim to be supplied with baize 72 inches wide instead of 36 inches; and the manufacturer's price of that would be at least 4s. We never imported a yard of it for the Government when we had the contract, and we were never called upon to supply any of it. This is an article seldom if ever called for, and that accounts for it being put down here at the absurdly low price of 6d., which as I have said is much under the manufacturing cost.

538. Mr. Maclean.] And the low price helps out the computation in the general schedule? Yes. Another line which I notice in this schedule is blue and white cotton check, the probable quantity of which stated to be required is 500 yards, and the tenderer contracts to supply it at 2d. per yard. The next line is 500 yards of the same material for dusters, the contract for which is accepted at 7d. It is the sevenpenny article which will be required, while the twopenny article will never be called for. The material could not be produced for less than 4d. I may also call your attention to this line, where there are 200 dozen of Brook's 200-yd. reels of cotton contracted for at 2s. 2d. per dozen. The retail price of this article to-day is 1s. 6d. per dozen; but then there is Brook's 100-yd. reels of cotton tendered for at 2d. per dozen, which are worth 1s. per dozen. You never want the 100-yd. reels, hence they are put down at 2d. They follow each other in the schedule, but the twopenny article is never called for.

539. Would the Government necessarily ask for the 200-yd. reels? You would ask for Brook's cotton, and the contractor would send you the 200-yd. reels. Then I notice here that 500 yards of diaper are said to be required, and that it is contracted for at 4d. a yard. We paid the manufacturer 14d. a yard for ours, and when we had the contract our tender for it was at 16d.; but there was never any call for any of it. The yard wide sample was a good honest sample, and to tender for it at 4d. a yard is simply ridiculous. Then there are 250 yards of damask for table-cloths, put down at 1s. per yard. The contractor is supposed to supply 63-inch damask at 1s. per yard when it costs the manufacturer 1s. 8d. or 1s. 9d. to make it; but the fact is that you never call for any of it. I think that the discrepancy between girls' straw hats at 2s. and women's at 1s. may be noticed, because girls take quite as large hats as women. No doubt the articles supplied would be sent in as girls' hats at 2s., rather than as women's hats at 1s. Coming to the hosiery part of the schedule, I see that there are 400 pairs of children's grey cotton stockings put down at 1d. per pair, but the brown stockings for the same children, which cost the manufacturer precisely the same money to make, are tendered for at 8d. Of course the brown are supplied.

540. With whom does it rest to supply grey or brown—would not the order describe which was wanted? You know those blue cotton stockings called grey in the trade, and the brown are the unbleached. The discrepancy in the price is simply a farce, as you may see from the manufacturer's list.

541. Would the order be for stockings generally, or would it name the description of stocking wanted? I have not seen the grey here. If grey were ordered and could not be supplied, the other sort would be accepted. This system of double prices enables a contractor to name one price and supply at another.

542. Suppose the Stores Department had called on the contractor to supply? He could not do it. These are lines which are known never to be called for, and therefore a tenderer can put them down at any price, and they reduce his grand total and make it sure that he will get the contract.

543. By previous experience contractors know that these articles will not be called for? Yes. I notice that 200 colonial tweed jumpers are tendered for here at 13s. each, and I am prepared to say that they can be supplied at 6s. 6d., and it would pay any one well to supply them at that rate. That line comes to £135, but it would pay any one well to supply them at half the price. I would undertake to supply them at 78s. per dozen. The articles known to be wanted carry the exorbitant price. Another line where the charge is exorbitant is this 1,400 yards of blue woollen serge at 2s. 6d. per yard. That comes to £175. I consider that that line should have been done at 1s. 10d. per yard, thereby saving one-third of £175. Here is another line, 75 lambswool undershirts at 1s. The sample is worth 5s. These articles are known never to be wanted, but for the cotton shirts, of which 300 are required, the price is 2s. 6d.

544. Captain Hixson.] What are the cotton shirts worth? 22s. 6d. or 22s. a dozen. Then there are 300 yards of ticklenberg, 36 inches wide, at 6d. per yard. The sample cost the manufacturers in Dundee 9½d. per yard. Here is another line, 500 cheviot tweed waistcoats at 6d. These would cost 7s. 6d. to produce, and yet 500 are put down at 6d., while the colonial tweed waistcoats are put down at 6s. If waistcoats were ordered, those which would be supplied would be the colonial tweed at 6s., not the others at 6d.

J. Pope, Esq.

545. If the Government were to order the particular article mentioned, would not the contractor be bound to supply it; but you suppose the order is so general in its character that the contractor can supply what he thinks proper? Yes; and this manipulation of prices brings out the low general total which is exhibited. I have seen worse schedules than this. I have seen sewing silk tendered for and accepted at 1s. per lb., when the article would cost 22s. or 24s. per lb.

546. It would appear then as if this article had been expunged by the Government, after they had observed the fictitious price at which it was tendered for? I merely notice the absence of silk in this schedule, the price of which in a former contract was notably at variance with its proper value. I pass on to the blanket schedule, which I see shows an excessive rate for this year's contract.

547. Mr. Maclean.] Do you see any great discrepancy in price? I see the excessive price of 7s. 10½d., the fair value of the sample in this market being 6s. 8d., which on 13,000 pairs would make £750 against the Government as compared with a contract in which they were charged a fair price. That is not a probable quantity, but a downright definite order is given.

548. Do you see any other discrepancy of price in the blanket list? Yes; blue and red blankets are both quoted at a price far under their value. The red are 5s. 6d. and the blue 6s. per pair; but the tender for the blankets for the aborigines is at so much each. You are paying 2s. 9d. for a scarlet blanket and 7s. 10½d. for a white one—the one quantity being estimated at 150, and the other definitely fixed at 13,000. I think the blankets for Government should be supplied at a rate not exceeding 20 per cent. on the manufacturer's price, and the cost of baling. This would bring the cost of blankets weighing 4lbs. 9½oz. up to about 6s. 8d.

549. Chairman.] Could the tender be practically managed in this way: we should obtain a fully detailed schedule with agreed known prices for all the articles, accompanied by samples, and then require that the tenderer should put in at a percentage above or below these rates? I think that would lead to too much complication. It would be far better for the Government to ascertain what goods are not usually kept in stock by the trade here and which the Government alone require, and then for all goods which are usually kept in the trade and which, as a rule, importing merchants have in abundance at all seasons of the year, samples might be obtained, a requisition made out, and a comparison of prices made at the time when you positively want the articles.

550. That does away with the system of annual tenders altogether? Except for such things as the Government alone require—except in the case of some special descriptions of goods, which would have to be imported particularly for them. These aboriginal blankets are one of the lines you must have a tender for every year.

MONDAY, 21 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR,

HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

John Pope, Esq., was called in and further examined:—

551. Chairman.] Reverting to your examination when you were last here, I may ask you whether it would not be better in the case of general supplies to have a detailed schedule with approved prices, calling upon the tenderer to offer at so much per cent. above or below, leaving special articles to be tendered for separately? In the matter of blankets, the system of percentage tendering would be an excellent one, and it would also apply to many leading lines under the head of linendrapery—such as stout unbleached sheeting, winsey for women's dresses, serges, osnaburgs, linens, and all classes of clothing made from colonial tweeds, and I consider that the Government ought to purchase no other tweeds than those made in the Colony. Colonial tweeds are now made in a sufficient range of qualities to suit every demand the Government may have. I take these items because they are those of which you require large quantities, and upon which you mostly pay excessive prices.

J. Pope, Esq.
21 July, 1879.

552. Mr. Maclean.] Then in the schedules you would separate the articles of large supply from those of small supply? I would.

553. Do you see any objection to applying the percentage system to the articles of which only a small supply would be required? I do not. I think it would be possible for three mercantile gentlemen to confer together and give you a fair price to insert in the schedules—that is, either the manufacturer's price or the price of the goods, including all the charges upon them until they are laid down in Sydney.

554. Chairman.] Is there anything else in the linendrapery schedule which you desire to refer to? Yes; I should like you to notice the item of linen for hospital and barrack sheets, which is tendered for at 7d. per yard, whereas the article if supplied to sample would cost the manufacturer 1s. 9d. to produce it. In lieu of that being supplied, sheets 9 × 6 made of cotton, and which are tendered for at 2s. each, are usually supplied. Linen again for women's shifts is tendered for at 6d., but is never demanded. If that article were supplied according to sample, the cost of it to the manufacturer would be 1s. 4d.

555. What do you say is supplied? Cotton, calico. The book which I am quoting from is the book of contract prices for the year 1876, but there may be some difference in the contract rates for 1878. The article of damask in the 1876 schedule was tendered for 2½ yards wide at 1s. per yard, and strange to say the unbleached is 9d. per yard more than the bleached, instead of being quoted ten per cent. less, which, as a rule, is the relative value. This is another instance of an article being scheduled at a very low price when it is not likely to be asked for. In this schedule the article of silk occurs. Silk, white, black, and coloured is inserted at 1s. per lb.; black and coloured twist is also put down at 1s. per lb. The value of silk and twist at this day would be at least 30s. per lb. I desire to say that what proved to us to be a satisfactory

J. Pope, Esq. satisfactory tender as regards the quantities ordered and supplied was that for clothing for the attendants in the institutions for the insane, supplied by my firm to the Gladesville Asylum in 1876. The quantities put down in the schedule were ordered, and our importations based upon the schedule exactly coincided with the quantities demanded.

21 July, 1879.

556. Chairman.] With respect to the probable quantities, do you consider that under our new system of having them computed more accurately, the Government should be obliged to take the exact quantity ordered, or do you think that the tenderer should run a reasonable margin of risk? I think that whenever the Government give quantities they should take those quantities. It may be that the Government do not require them for the year for which the tender has been accepted, but may want them for the following year: but whether the Government want them or not, it is not fair to a contractor who has imported goods expressly to meet the Government requirements and then to have them thrown back upon his hands. The Government ought in such cases to dispose of them by auction, or warehouse their surplus stock as other people have to do.

557. Then I presume you would be of opinion that it would be better to have a two years' tender to enable the contractor to use up his surplus stock? I think two years would be better than one, because it would enable a contractor to work off any surplus quantity arising from over-importation in the first year, during the currency of the second year's tender. I think the Government ought to take up to the probable quantity stated to be required. That would be a fair thing on both sides. I speak from some experience on the matter.

558. Would it be expedient as part of any new system to have approved samples of all the articles required? Certainly.

559. And to require that the supplies delivered should be in accordance with the sample? Yes; or as near as the experts whom I presume you will appoint may consider reasonable and fairly up to standard. It would be necessary to leave a small margin, for manufacturers vary in quality in even what may be called standard articles, from year to year.

560. Do you think that with such an improved system as has been suggested we should have more competition for contracts? I do, undoubtedly.

561. Mr. Maclean.] Do you not perceive that, if both sides were bound by the probable quantities, in the event of the Government not having correctly estimated their probable requirements they might be thrown upon the open market for the supplies—suppose for example, the Government have in their demands exceeded the probable quantities, and the contractor to say that having supplies to the extent of the probable quantities he would supply no more except at his own price. You say that you would compel the Government to take up to the probable quantities: would you restrict the contractor in supplying the additional quantity, to supply it at the same price? I think it would be a fair way to call upon the contractor to supply, and to leave the price to be adjusted by your experts if you have them, that is provided that the prices for extra supplies should not be greatly at variance with the contract rates. I think it would be well to provide in any new contracts that, in the event of any disagreement between the Government and the contractor in regard to the price of extra supplies, experts should be appointed by either side, and their decision should be final.

562. Do you think that such extra supplies could be more conveniently obtained from the contractor than by sending round the town for them? In that case I think I would give the order to the contractor.

563. Whose price should be subject to examination under special arrangements? Yes; I would suggest that where quantities are given, if you want to secure the Government against loss, it would be well to make the heads of the departments in some measure responsible for the quantities they give as quantities likely to be wanted. You might make an arrangement of this kind—that should the Government require a supply of ten per cent. over and above probable quantities, the extra supply should be made by the contractor at the contract prices.

564. Chairman.] And similarly I suppose you would provide that, if the Government took up to within 10 per cent. of the articles named in the schedule of probable quantities, there should be no claim by the contractor by reason of the full quantity not having been ordered? No, I do not say that. My view is that the heads of the departments should be made responsible for the estimates they give.

C. K. Moore, Esq., was called in and examined:—

C. K. Moore, Esq. 565. Chairman.] What is your Christian name, Mr. Moore? Charles Kelso.

566. You are a member of the firm of Moore, Henderson, and Bowcher? Yes.

567. You have been contractors to the Government for a good many years? Sixteen.

568. In what lines chiefly? Drapery and clothing, which included blankets until the last four or five years, when they were made a separate contract.

569. The object which the Board has in view is to devise some means of improving the present system of contracts; and we have thought that, from the fact of your having had considerable experience as a Government contractor, you may be able to give the Board some suggestions which will be valuable. As to the present mode of tendering by which the contract is determined on a computation of prices, is that, in your opinion, the best plan that can be adopted? I do not think the Government would be benefited by adopting any other system. I have thought the matter over, and I have come to the conclusion that it is the fairest both for the Government and the contractors. As far as we are concerned, we have not, for the last twelve or fourteen years, been guided by your schedule of probable quantities, because we keep an accurate account of all goods which we have supplied to each department, and that enables us to form a very accurate opinion of exactly what your requirements will be. We indent continually for the supplies which we know you will require, and we do not depend upon your schedule.

570. Mr. Maclean.] You get your tender computed on the Government Schedule? Yes; but we have acted very differently from other contractors, for we have always kept about one-third of the next year's supplies on hand, so that we have always been in a position to supply beyond our contract. We were unsuccessful for two years. Prince, Ogg, & Co., had the contract for one year and Farmer & Co. for another. They imported exactly on the basis of your schedule. When you make out your list it is printed by the Government Printer, from returns sent to the Stores Department from heads of departments. Mr. Brennand, I believe, writes to them for their probable quantities, and upon the information which he receives, he compiles compiles his schedule. But we found that the departments were not to be relied upon from year to year. For example, for three years past the quantity of brown serge ordered from me has not been above 400 yards, the amount stated in the schedule. One year it was only 50 yards. This year we have been asked to supply 6,100 yards more than the probable quantity. I imported the 400 yards, the quantity said to be required, for three successive years, but a good deal of it was left on my hands, and so I put it down in my tender at a 1s. a yard. It was getting a little touched at the edges with dust, and was likely to be damaged by moth from remaining over so long, and I therefore put it down at 1s. or at about half what it cost in England. Because it thus became so cheap, the overseer of trades in Darlinghurst Gaol immediately makes a demand for a large amount, so as to make his clothing so much the cheaper.

571. May it not have been that the demand for clothing of this description arose in other institutions, and that the Stores Department simply required the overseer of trades to make the material up? I know that you do make clothing in the Gaol for the Orphan Schools and a great many other institutions.

572. You think that it was on account of its cheapness that the serge was chosen? Yes, certainly.

573. Does not that show that there is a sort of speculative relationship existing between the Government and the contractor? Of course a less quantity of some other material will be taken.

574. It shows a sort of speculative relationship? They go round to all the retailers, and if there is anything cut particularly fine they run upon that for a larger quantity.

575. Who do? The heads of the departments of all the institutions.

576. Chairman.] Then I understand that you would not recommend any alteration in the present mode of tendering? I do not think I could suggest an alteration which would be of advantage to the Government.

577. Do you think that an alteration of this kind could be made to advantage—that a schedule should be prepared giving in greater detail all the articles, and that known prices should be fixed to each article, say, after consultation with the leading men in the trade, and that persons should then be asked to tender at a percentage above or below the schedule prices? I do not think so.

578. Will you please say why? Because there is such a fluctuation in the value of the goods. I think it would be a very round about way of getting to the point.

579. Would not that fluctuation be met by the percentage named by the tenderer being put higher or lower as the case might be? You see there are so many different classes of goods, some manufactured in one country and some in another. I do not think it has worked well for the Railway Department, and I have had a contract with them for several years.

580. Mr. Maclean.] You do not think that a schedule could be prepared which would be sufficiently accurate? I do not think so; but I might suggest that a more perfect set of samples should be furnished by the Government.

581. Chairman.] But do you not see an imperfection in the present system from the fact that very low prices are put down against certain articles, which affect the general computation? Not in our business—I have noticed it in others.

582. Mr. Maclean.] The thing cannot be done in your business? I do not see how it can be done in the linendrapery contract.

583. Chairman.] With respect to the probable quantities, supposing these to be carefully prepared, do you think that the contractor should be prepared to run some risk,—that, for example, the Government should not be obliged to take the whole of the probable quantities, unless they actually required them? In the case of all goods which are unfit for any other purpose than for the Government Service, I think the Government ought to order a specified quantity to be supplied and take the whole of them, and that the contractor should be required to supply at least twenty per cent. more if demanded; but in the case of all articles of general consumption by the public as well as the Government, I think the contractor should be compelled to supply whatever the Government may demand, more or less, according to the schedule.

584. More or less, at contract price? Yes.

585. In the case of general goods, where the Government do not take up to the probable quantities, they should not be compelled to order them? I think we should have no claim on them to order.

586. Perhaps you will mention some of the special lines of which you think the Government should take the whole? Blankets—ordnance and for the aborigines; clothing for the various forces or establishments, the general police, water police, Government boatmen, Marine Board, attendants' clothing, Permanent Military and Defence Forces, and some others which do not occur to me at this moment.

587. Mr. Maclean.] Material as well as clothing, I suppose? Since Mr. Thomson has re-organized the Stores Department, garments have been called for instead of material. My remark applies to clothing.

588. Chairman.] I think you mentioned something about samples. Are you of opinion that in the linendrapery contract the Government should provide a sample of every article required, and that these samples should be made the standards of comparison in judging of the supplies? The Stores have got them at present, but they are not complete. Many articles may not be required this year or the next which will be demanded the year afterwards. I think it would be well for the Government to have a complete set of samples. An article is sometimes demanded which is not in contract, of which there are no samples, and there is a great deal of delay in obtaining the supply. The heads of departments have to go to the Treasury for approval, and two or three days may be lost in that way. The article is required at once, and if it were in contract it could be ordered and obtained at once. The amount involved may not be more than two or three pounds, but the delay is important.

589. I think you have had the linendrapery contract for two years? We hold it to the end of 1880.

590. Do you think a two years' contract is better than one? Decidedly. Three years is the usual term at home.

591. What is gained by a two years' contract over a contract for one year? The contracts are not usually decided until the first half of the year has gone by, and there is no time to prepare for the supplies required at the beginning of the year. A two years' contract would put a new contractor in a better position; for if he ordered too much of any article the first year, he would know how to manage better the second. I would take a contract for three years considerably cheaper than I would one for one year, and I believe that under such a contract I should be able to give the Government more satisfaction.

592. In a contract for two or three years, the probability is that you will be able to so manage as to prevent any surplus stock accumulating on hand at the end of the contract? Yes.

- C. K. Moore, Esq.
21 July, 1879.
593. Mr. Maclean.] And you would be able to make more fixed arrangements on the other side? Yes—better arrangements with the makers of the goods.
594. You do not recommend any departure from the plan of the present schedules? I do not.
595. I think you have said that it would be difficult to make a sufficiently accurate schedule for the percentage system? My own impression is that it would be more likely to lead to bad arrangements than to anything else.
596. Could not articles be as comprehensively described where the tender was to be by percentage as they could in a schedule, where the tender was to be based upon a computation of prices? How would you find out the cost?
597. It could be found out by advising with persons who are versed in such matters; and the cost set down in the schedule according to the percentage system would not seem to be so material, because the percentage above or below schedule price would equalize it? In the present system you know better what you are tendering for. It would suit me better to tender on the percentage system.
598. But a schedule could be prepared for either system? Not so well as to give the price for each article. The only other person than myself who would be capable of giving you the information would be Mr. Woodward, of the firm of David Jones & Co., who has gone home.
599. Chairman.] Looking at our printed list of prices, do you not notice in this tender that many articles are put down at a price below their value? No; it is a fair honest tender. I can supply any line there at the price stated.
600. Mr. Maclean.] That is in the 1878 contract. Yes; and I do not think you will find much difference if you take the lists for the last five or six, or even ten years. The prices may be a shade lower now because the goods have been getting cheaper. With reference to this book, I think a great wrong is done to contractors by publishing it.
601. Why? I think there are many persons who, when tenders are called for, take these lists and tender upon them. They have nothing to lose, and they think they can get the goods at the same houses which we import them from; they have no idea of the articles required by the Government—they are not in the trade, and they have never seen the samples for which they tender, and they take contracts much below the proper prices.
602. Has that, to your knowledge, ever been done? Yes, frequently.
603. Chairman.] With reference to the schedules. Do you think that the present schedules may be more accurately prepared than they are at present? I do. They ought to comprise every article, with a statement of the quantities which are likely to be required supplied, as nearly as possible, by the heads of the departments who will have to order the goods.
604. And special descriptions of the articles should be inserted? Yes.

TUESDAY, 29 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

The Hon. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE Hon. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Robert Sands, Esq., was called in and examined:—

- R. Sands, Esq.
29 July, 1879.
605. Chairman.] Your christian name, Mr. Sands? Robert.
606. You have for some years past been a contractor for the Public Service? For five years.
607. For stationery and articles of that character? Yes; for stationery, bookbinding materials, printing materials, artists' materials, and hand-made and machine writing papers.
608. You are probably aware that this Board is sitting for the purpose of improving the present system of Government contracts? I believe so.
609. Knowing your experience, we should be glad to have any suggestions from you. I think your contracts differ from others in some respects, inasmuch as you have nothing to do with probable quantities? Probable quantities are stated in the schedules upon which we tender, but they are really specific quantities. The Government say they will take so much in half-yearly supplies, and this is a guide to us in importing. In the paper contract the Government do not bind themselves to take any quantity.
610. But in the case of the stationery contract the probable quantities are really specific quantities? Yes.
611. Delivered half-yearly? Yes; and the Government can take as much more as they require at the same price.
612. Do you consider that the schedule attached to the stationery contract is an intelligible one? I consider the schedule which I have just tendered upon is as good a schedule as can be made up.
613. These schedules are according to the present system of contracts, that is, you attach a price to each article contained in the schedule, and upon the computation of the whole the tender is determined? Yes.
614. How does it happen that in your tenders you attach prices to some articles which appear to be disproportionately low—prices which have the appearance of being fictitious? I suppose that arises from the knowledge and experience we have gained, and we conclude that the departments are not likely to want particular articles.
615. So that upon your knowledge of the probable requirements of the Service you feel yourselves justified in attaching these low prices? Yes; we are content to take the risk.
616. Do you think that it would be a preferable system to have fixed prices, and then to tender so much above or so much below, that is, of course, assuming that these fixed prices were the standard wholesale prices attached to each article by agreement among the leading persons in the trade: with such a schedule of standard prices, tenders at a percentage on or off those prices would get rid of the anomaly of insufficient prices in particular articles? I have never considered how such a system would work.

617. Perhaps you will turn it over in your mind, and tell the Board what you think of it? Assuming that the probable quantities represent, as at present, the minimum quantity to be taken by the Government, and that the schedule were properly prepared? I think perhaps it would be the best plan for the Government to ask for tenders at a discount off, or an advance upon—standard prices named in the schedule. R. Sands,
Esq.
29 July, 1879.
618. Do you think that it would be advisable to tender according to sample—that is to say, would you recommend that the Government should have samples of all the articles tendered for? By all means.
619. Are there samples now? Yes.
620. Have you had the contracts for printing or writing paper? I have had them for hand-made and writing papers, unfortunately—never for printing papers.
621. These are distinguished from the stationery contract? Yes.
622. Would the same rule apply with regard to them? I think so.
623. Captain Hixson.] Why do you say “unfortunately”? Because I had a contract for about £1,600 worth of hand-made and writing papers, and the Government only called for £800, or about £850, leaving the balance on my hands.
624. Chairman.] That would show that the probable quantities were not estimated with accuracy? In that particular case, I believe, the paper was not wanted, but I am not able to say whether or not the Government could have helped it. The same thing applies for another contract I have now for artists’ materials. The quantities given to me last year were a perfect farce.
625. Were those the quantities which were supplied from the Surveyor General’s Department? They were.
626. Mr. Maclean.] Can you explain how it happens that in the stationery contract a minimum specified quantity has been fixed, and not in other contracts? I do not know the reason of it—it was fixed before I had the contract.
627. In stating the probable quantities, are you of opinion that the Government would benefit by being bound to take up to the quantity named? Yes; for this reason,—they would get more people to tender for a certain than for an uncertain quantity.
628. Would you compel the contractor to supply some percentage above the probable quantities, if the Government required? That could be arranged as a clause in the contract.
629. Chairman.] Are you dissatisfied with the present condition of the contract which obliges you to deliver any quantity which may be demanded over and above the probable quantity stated? No; I am very well satisfied with it as far as the stationery contract is concerned.
630. Mr. Maclean.] You are satisfied that the Government take the minimum quantity? Yes.
631. And it is in the stationery contract that there is a minimum specified quantity? Yes.
632. Captain Hixson.] Do you think it would be beneficial to the Government to call for contracts for more than one year, say for two or three years? Yes; I think it would be advantageous to the Government decidedly.
633. Do you think that contractors would be more ready to serve the Government on those conditions? Yes; it would give the contractor something larger to handle. When you have the contract for one year, and know that you may lose it the next, you make your arrangements accordingly.
634. Have you to make special arrangements? We have to have special men to look after the contract, and to have a special system of accounts.
635. Mr. Maclean.] You would prefer a two or three years’ contract? I would decidedly.
636. Chairman.] On the whole, comparing the present system with the percentage system, previously alluded to, you think it might be advantageously changed as far as the public are concerned? I do not know that the Government would get their goods any cheaper—in fact I do not think they would, but it appears to me to be a more reasonable way of doing the business.
637. Captain Hixson.] You think that by the adoption of that plan the Government would get more people to tender? No, I do not think they would in my line of business.

W. P. Dunlop, Esq., was called in and examined:—

638. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Dunlop? William Philip.
639. You are a partner in the firm of Edwards, Dunlop, & Co.? Yes. W.P. Dunlop,
Esq.
29 July, 1879.
640. Your firm have been contractors to the Government for some years? For the last five years.
641. What has been the nature of your contracts with the Government? Paper, printing materials, book-binding materials, and, on one occasion, stationery.
642. Mr. Maclean.] The object of the Board is to ascertain whether we can improve our present plan of inviting tenders? Yes.
643. Can you offer us any suggestions in that direction? I can. Perhaps I had better state to you how I would manage the business myself if I had it wholly within my control.
644. Do so, if you please? I have here all the schedules relating to the contracts in our trade; the schedules for stationery, printing materials, printing papers, writing papers, bookbinding materials, surveyors’ and architects’ materials—six divisions in all. Up to this time these have been issued from January to July. If I were going to deal with these contracts, I should issue these schedules all together, binding them into one pamphlet. I should divide them into series, sectioning them off as A, B, C, and so on. It would be necessary that the schedules should be gone over by some one in the trade. First of all you have the paper contract, which I may tell you is the paper used by the Government Printer; but I would not confine the paper contract to printing paper, but would include in it all the paper required. You have here a printing paper schedule which is correct enough, but in the stationery contract there is a large quantity of writing, blotting, and brown paper, but, as I have said, I would have all the paper tendered for together.
645. That is to say, you would have each article of its own kind in its own series? Exactly so; and perhaps some one in the trade might be able to arrange the schedule better than it could be done in the Printing Office. In this other schedule I notice that drawing paper is placed under the head of surveyors’ and architects’ materials, but I would include it with all the other paper in one section. I would suggest that it would be better if you called for all these tenders in January of each year, and require that they should be in not later than the 15th of January. You could then take a week to revise the tenders, and still be able to give the successful tenderer notice about the 22nd of the month. That would allow the contractor the rest of the month in which to get his orders written up so as to catch the mail leaving for England about about the beginning of February. You ought to arrange to have the goods delivered by October, and that would allow nine months for the proper execution of the order, and for getting the goods brought out here. I would have it also arranged that the contractor should send you notice when the goods arrived in the harbour, in execution of his contract of the preceding January; and then I suggest that arrangements should be made by the Government to take delivery of the cases or bales into their own stores direct from the ship's side. After the Government had received the goods, say the first, second, third, or fourth week in October, they could send a notice to the contractor that on such and such a day the contractor should attend with his invoices at the Stores, and see his cases opened and the goods examined by the Government Storekeeper and another gentleman appointed by the Government; and if it were found that the goods were equal to the original samples, I would have the invoices certified to, and payment made at once.

646. Do you think that the Government would get better terms if they paid at once? I do not think so. Competition is so keen that nothing would be gained by that. This arrangement that I propose is based on the assumption that the Government in calling for tenders shall name given quantities, which quantities must be taken by them. The contractor, knowing that he must make delivery of everything in his tender, would be compelled to quote proper prices, as so one of the existing grievances would be got over. I refer to the practice of tendering for certain articles at a price below their proper value. Against that it may be said that it makes no provision for a case in which the Government may run short. My suggestion proceeds on the idea that the Government should transact their business on the same principles as a merchant, and that the Stores at the Circular Quay should be managed like a merchant's stores, taking and delivering goods inwards and outwards. If proper statistics could be kept of the various articles required, a very close estimate could be formed of the quantity required for the ensuing year; and in the case of the Government having an overplus they could call for a decreased quantity in the next year's tenders.

647. You think that fixed quantities could be computed satisfactorily upon the basis of carefully prepared statistics? Yes.

648. And that persons would more readily tender for fixed than they would for probable quantities? Much more so, owing to the fact that the Government require so many articles peculiar to themselves.

649. Supposing the Government wanted a larger supply than that contracted for, you would not allow them to demand it? No, I would throw the onus of the deficiency upon the clerk who kept a record of the quantity used.

650. Captain Hixson.] Is it possible for the Government to estimate their requirements exactly? They ought to be able to do so within 10 per cent.

651. Mr. Maclean.] Would you not then allow a margin of 10 per cent.? I would allow no margin whatever; I would state the quantity to be delivered, and any deviation from that should become a matter of equitable arrangement. A specific quantity must be named and taken delivery of if you want the contract satisfactorily carried out. It is quite true that by the plan I suggest to you of passing all these goods through a Board as it were, and taking delivery of them, your clerk could not hit the exact quantities you would be likely to require unless he went through all the back requisitions and examined the goods which he would have ranged up in the Stores. For the first year or two the Government might be at a disadvantage until the system got into proper work; but suppose that in the middle of the year you ran short of certain articles, you could call for supplementary tenders, and so get the advantage of the competition of the market. In that way you would still get your goods at the very lowest prices, providing they were to be found in the market.

652. There might be many little items overdrawn no one of which would be worth calling for tenders for, and yet, taken as a whole, they would amount to a good deal? The amount might not be over £2 or £3, but if you adopt the principle of tendering you must carry it out; but in the course of a couple of years you would get the system well organized, and if you had a man who knew the trade, you would find that the quantity named in the schedule would be pretty close upon the year's supply. I import paper and stationery according to the statistics which I keep myself.

653. Captain Hixson.] Would not the Government require very large store accommodation to carry out such a system as that? You would require a place properly shelved and laid out; but I do not suppose that a small matter like that would be allowed to stand in the way by the Government.

654. Would not the Government be taking upon themselves all the business of importing merchants? By no means. As contractors we have no right to know your customers. You send us an order from a particular gaol or department to execute; but I think that the delivery in small parcels to different establishments is going beyond the functions of the contractor, whose contract should be considered fulfilled when delivered at the Government Stores.

655. Mr. Maclean.] You contract to supply an article which the Government wants? True, but your system makes us not only contractors but delivering agents.

656. Captain Hixson.] Is it not the custom everywhere for the contractor to deliver the goods as required? True, but no one holds a contract to deliver in such small quantities as the Government may order. I think that when we get an order, we, as contractors, really have no business to know whether it is for this gaol or that, or where the goods are to go. We ought to get an order from the Stores Department—Please deliver certain goods—and then the Stores Department ought to see to delivering them out to their proper destination. As the business is now conducted, you make out a requisition for one dozen of a certain article to be delivered to such a gaol—two reams of paper to the Printing Office. There must be something wrong in a system of conducting business under which you cannot order all the goods you require on one sheet, and without letting the contractor know where the order is going to.

657. Then you would pass everything through the Stores? Quite so. I take it that that would be the most correct and satisfactory plan, and that it would be far better than the present practice of sending out a lot of small orders at every hour of the day. It would enable you to make a great reduction in clerical labour.

658. You would concentrate the distribution upon the Government Stores? Yes.

659. Under the present system of tendering, the rates of the articles are filled up in the schedules, and you are aware that there are many anomalous prices? Quite so.

660. It has been suggested that it would be a simpler course to have a well prepared schedule of standard rates, and that all the tenders should be by percentage above or below that? I do not think that would answer.

661. Mr. Maclean.] Will you say why you think it would not answer? You would require some one in the trade to determine the then market value of the goods, and 5 or 10 per cent. difference would make a profit or loss.

662. But suppose the Government made an error in their prices which would be nominal, it would not affect the result of the tender, because the tenderer would put in at above or below the price named? You mean that the tenderer should offer at an advance or a discount upon the prices you specify?
663. Exactly. Would not that avoid these anomalous lines of prices which seem to confuse the public mind, and look very unbusiness like indeed? —
664. Captain Hixson.] The idea is that the Government should call in business men to help them to prepare the schedule? I think I see this difficulty,—that each line would be subject to be taken out of the contract.
665. Mr. Maclean.] No, the contract would be taken upon the schedule as a whole, upon a computation of quantities, the prices being only standard prices. The contractor, for instance, would say, at the top of the schedule, that he would take the contract of the whole at a certain percentage above or below the prices named in the schedule? Possibly you might find that would work, but I cannot at a glance, as far as our trade is concerned, see much difficulty, except that different people have different ideas of the cost of importing.
666. Each tenderer would use his own commercial knowledge? But I am referring to your determination of the price. You may put an article down as worth £20, whereas it may be worth £24.
667. Captain Hixson.] And is it not equally possible that you may have an article scheduled at £20 which is not worth more than £16? Yes.
668. Mr. Maclean.] It would throw upon the contractor the work of computing the schedule as a whole instead of the Government having to compute it? Here is a very large line of 3,500 reams in the printing paper contract, and all the articles which follow it could be made at pretty much the same price per lb., but because this first item is so large it can be made and supplied cheaper than the others. The Government will have to take their paper at per lb., and if you tendered you would have to put some at an advance and some below the rate named by the Government.
669. Suppose you took it line by line and computed the whole upon the quantities? Then you would throw the extension of the whole upon the contractor?
670. Yes; and trust to competition to keep the prices right? That is to say, the tenderer ought to name some equalizing percentage upon the computation of the whole.
671. It would leave the calculation to the tenderers? I do not see that this method would get over the discrepancies in prices which exist under the present system of tendering.
672. If we had fixed quantities would there be any difficulty in this percentage system? No.
673. But if probable quantities were retained, the contractors will be able to make their calculations in regard to quantities as they do at present? Yes.
674. Captain Hixson.] Would not the Government get their supplies at a more reasonable rate under the percentage system? You would not get them any cheaper than you do at present.
675. Mr. Maclean.] But you would be paying a more consistent price for each article? You would not eradicate the difficulty of low prices in the slightest, and that, as I understand, is what you are aiming at. The only way to prevent excessively low prices on certain lines is to have fixed minimum quantities.
676. What minimum rate would you fix; how much more than the quantity named would you arrange that the contractor could be called upon to supply? I do not think any at all—not an item above what you specified. If you want four tons instead of three, you should order four tons; and if you made a mistake in the quantity ordered one year you could rectify it the next.
677. Captain Hixson.] With a percentage system based upon probable quantities, the contractors would be in the same position as they are under the existing system? Yes; and the same practice would be continued, only in another form.
678. Mr. Maclean.] If you have fixed quantities the thing is imperative? Yes, they decide the question altogether.
679. Do you not think that your plan would involve the employment of a large staff at the Government Stores? Not at all. It would involve two clerks to each department.
680. Captain Hixson.] Would not your plan almost tend to the Government importing altogether? That does not follow.
681. It appears to me that you would saddle the Government with all the trouble and responsibility connected with the goods which you ordered to make a profit on? No, I think not. The only trouble it would give the Government would be that instead of having to employ so much clerical labour in making out and checking every little invoice, the Government would do the whole business, as far as the contractor was concerned, on one requisition and on one invoice.
682. It would save trouble in sending out orders? It must do so.
683. Mr. Maclean.] You would make the Government pay for everything at the very outset of the contract? That is easily remedied. Suppose you make the delivery by half-yearly or quarterly shipments. You could have half the supply delivered in October or November and the other half in May or June. We will suppose you get at the Stores a miscellaneous order from any department. It might be for thirty or forty different articles. Under the system that I would adopt, all that you would have to do would be to go into your stationery department and select three or four of the lines which might be wanted from there, and so on with the drapery, ironmongery, oilmen's stores, until you got the order complete. The goods would all be sent down into the packing-room, where they could be checked, and the whole requisition could be satisfied at once. Under your present system you have to make out a dozen different orders, and each item has to be dealt with separately, and your clerical labour is multiplied all round. Because you organize a staff for the distribution of your goods it does not follow that you are going to import them yourselves. The requirements of the Government are assuming such dimensions that I think you will find that you will have to have all your various goods under one roof, so that the orders of the departments may be properly and promptly attended to—so that the Government may see that they get goods of the same value as those which they give contracts for. Your business will have to be attended to in the same way as that of any ordinary merchant. I believe that similar business is so done in the Stationery Office in London.
684. Can you say whether your recommendation would apply to clothing, blankets, and the like? I take it that my remarks are of general application. And the system would enable you to check everything, and to see that you got your proper values.
685. Would not the Stores have to be an enormous building to hold all the supplies? I do not know as to that.

W.P. Dunlop,
Esq.

686. Do you think that samples should be preserved and carefully arranged in a large sample room? I think it very necessary; but I also think that the samples ought to be renewed from year to year.
687. And that the articles should be strictly judged by the samples? Exactly.
688. Do you think there would be any advantage in having contracts for a longer period than one year, either to the Government or the contractors? Not under the system which I propose; but under the present system I think it would be an improvement to have a contract for two years, because your probable quantity arrangement must and does leave the contractor with an overplus, and he has no method of working that off unless he gets hold of the contract again.
689. Then you conclude that fixed quantities cure everything? I do.
690. Would your fixed-quantity plan be upset if the Government reserved to themselves the right of a margin for excessive supply; that is to say, although you would object to that, your plan would still work? I should hesitate very much to support a margin of that kind. The plan I propose is as fair to the Government as it is to the contractor; and if the Government want concessions in one direction they must be prepared to make them in another; therefore, no deviations should be made from fixed quantities.

WEDNESDAY, 30 JULY, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Thomas Richards, Esq., was called in and examined:—

- T. Richards, Esq.
30 July, 1879.
691. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Richards? Thomas.
692. I think you hold the office of Government Printer? I do.
693. And you have for many years been a member of the Tender Board? Yes.
694. During which time you have acquired some considerable knowledge of the working of the tender system I believe. The Board desire to ascertain if any improvements can be made in the present system, and they would be glad if you would in the first instance give them any information you may possess on that point? Yes. With regard to the constitution of the Tender Board, I am decidedly of opinion that a permanent Board, which would secure the regular attendance of members when contracts were dealt with, would be preferable to the present system; but I do not think that as a rule it would be desirable to call in experts. I think it would be possible to get a Board quite competent to deal with all matters of contract with the Government. It would not I think be necessary to summon every member of the Board on every occasion, but arrangements ought to be made which would secure the attendance of those members of the Board whose business would lead them to have a good knowledge of the particular things to be dealt with on particular occasions.
695. Do you not think it would occasionally be advisable to obtain the assistance of experts? I think the Board should have the power to call in experts whenever they thought that course to be desirable.
696. Would you consider it desirable that the Board should consist, as at present, of the heads of departments concerned in the tenders, or would you recommend the introduction of any outside element? Of heads of departments only.
697. But they should be permanently appointed? Be permanently appointed, and they should, I think, be paid a fee for each sitting.
698. I think you have had much experience in relation to the paper supplied to the Government? Paper and material ordinarily used in the printing business.
699. Do you know of any objection to the existing schedules, or could you suggest any improvement? I think the schedules are very well devised at present, but I think it would be better to have fixed rather than probable quantities.
700. I think that you are aware that under the existing system the contractors are bound to supply beyond the probable quantities to any extent required by the Government? That would appear to be one of the conditions of contract, but it is not always observed.
701. You would then prefer that definite quantities should be named in the schedules—quantities which the contractor would be bound to supply and the Government be obliged to take? Yes.
702. In that case the probable quantities would require to be very carefully calculated? Not necessarily so. In some cases it is impossible to make accurate calculations. In regard to printing paper, it would not be possible to foresee what the requirements of the year for which the contract was made would be. For example, during last year it could not have been foreseen that so many large Commissions would have been appointed this year—the Lands Commission, the Boards to inquire into the condition of the Abattoirs, into the food supplies to public institutions, into the Stores Department, and the Commission into the Land Titles Department. These all lead to a very large consumption of printing paper, the demand for which could not have been accurately estimated.
703. In the case of particular lines, where the fixed quantities might have been supplied and exhausted, what would you do? Call for fresh tenders in the usual way.
704. Mr. Maclean.] In the case of these supplementary tenders, I suppose you refer to articles which could be readily procured in the colonial markets? I think the market should be tried in all cases.
705. How would it be if you accepted a tender for a fixed quantity, and that were to be exhausted under such circumstances as you have mentioned, and no more of the article were to be found available in the colonial market? That certainly would be awkward; but I do not suppose that tendering for fixed quantities would make any difference.
706. Under the present system the contractor would be bound to make some provision for going beyond the fixed quantity, seeing that he has to supply up to the demands of the Government? I have always understood that that the contractor would be so bound; but in many cases they have objected to supply beyond the probable quantities, and as a matter of fact they have not supplied up to the demands of the Government. T. Richards, Esq.

 707. Perhaps you are aware that of late a regulation has been framed to compel them to do so? The regulation may have a compulsory meaning, but it will not compel a contractor to supply the goods if the goods are not procurable. 30 July, 1879.

708. So that it comes to the same thing? It comes to the same thing.

709. Would not the contractor provide a greater margin if he knew he might be called on to supply? It is very difficult to frame regulations to compel a contractor to do a thing which upon investigation would not appear to be quite equitable. With regard to accepting tenders for fixed instead of probable quantities, it is quite possible that if you started the system this year you would find at the end of it that you had obtained more goods than the Government required, and in fact I think it would be a prudent arrangement under which you would have more; but in arranging for the next year's contract you would know what stock you had on hand, and would be able to reduce your quantities accordingly. In regard to many articles, particularly those which come under my own notice, it would be desirable to have some stock on hand, so that you should not be left entirely dependent on the contractor, or the market.

710. Your surplus arising from the fixed quantity being in excess of the requirements could be considered when you made out your calculations for the next tender? Yes.

711. Captain Hicson.] Are most of the articles which you require in your line of business readily procurable in the colonial market? The greater proportion of them. There are certain specialities which it would not be desirable to seek to obtain in the local market. Paper for printing postage stamps, railway tickets, and paper for debentures, for example. In these matters it is necessary that whatever the cost of the goods may be they should always be of the best, should always be of the same quality, and should always be obtained from the same maker. Delarue and Waterlow are the principal houses for railway tickets. The machines we have work Delarue's tickets; but if we were to procure a supply from Waterlow the probability is that we should not be able to work them.

712. How are they obtained now? The Treasury imports them direct, through the Agent General, from the makers. There are other things of a special character which it would not be possible to obtain by tender. In the matter of type, for instance, about which there has been a good deal of controversy. The Minister very properly objects to purchasing supplies without tender, but in the case of type, when we once have a fount from a particular maker we must always go to the foundry which supplied it, should additional quantities be required, because one founder's type will not work with another's. It would be absurd to call for tenders for type from one particular foundry, seeing that there could be no competition. It would be as advantageous to purchase upon proper terms as it would be to call for tenders in regard to some things, and the contract system does not always lead to the Government obtaining the best article, or the best terms. When in England I paid some attention to the question of the contract system there. A Select Committee of the House of Commons had been inquiring into the subject, and they laid down three systems, each of which would be applicable under certain circumstances. One was that of private purchase; another, the plan of inviting a certain number of well-known houses, supposed to be the best in the particular trade; and the third that of open tender. But they laid it down as a rule that it would be necessary to repose confidence in the officer whose discretion had to be exercised, and to trust to him to do the best he could for the public interest. They considered that it would be better to do that than to adhere rigidly to the rule of open competition.

713. Chairman.] I think you have already said that you consider the schedules for printing papers, writing papers, and other matters are very well prepared? I think they are very well constructed, and the articles are properly subdivided under their various heads, so as to ensure the widest competition.

714. Do you consider it better to retain the present mode of determining the tenders by computation, which admits of the tenderer fixing his price to each line, or would you prefer the other mode of having the schedule filled up with agreed prices, and then requiring the tenderer to offer at a percentage above or below? I would prefer that the tenderer should be left to state his own price in every case.

715. But do not anomalies of this kind occur in the existing system,—that prices fictitiously low are put in for articles not called for, and high prices are stated for things known to be required? I think that would be entirely cured by the substitution of fixed for probable quantities. After a short time you would be able to determine almost precisely what your requirements would be; and by having some stock always in hand you could in about two years frame your schedules of quantities for most articles with comparative accuracy. There will, of course, be some exceptions, such as that which I have mentioned in regard to printing paper.

716. If I understand you rightly, it amounts to this,—that as the schedules will be as nearly as possible perfect, and the quantities named will be such as the contractor will be bound to supply and the Government be bound to take, should any tenderer put in fictitiously low prices, he would do so at his own great loss? Under a system of fixed prices a contractor would not have the opportunity of fossicking out—if I may be allowed the expression—what is likely to be required and what not; he would know that everything named in the schedule would be taken, and if he puts a price down which is ridiculously low he will do so at his own risk.

717. You would not recommend any change in the system of determining tenders by a computation of prices? No. I may mention that my idea with regard to fixed quantities would lead to the necessity of storing the goods. I have a very strong objection to that part of the present system under which the contractors supply in detail. The routine is inconvenient. For instance, I make a requisition on the Stores Department, which probably has to be submitted to the Treasury for approval. The order is then given to the contractor, who fails to supply the goods, and in the meantime I do not know exactly where my requisition is, I do not know the cause of the delay; and mine being a manufacturing department, the delay is all the more inconvenient in its effects upon other departments which depend upon it for the supply of some particular thing which may be necessary to carry on the business. If the quantities were fixed and supplied to the Stores Department I should be able to obtain what I require very much more readily. I should always be able to know what stock was in hand, what to rely upon, and be able to project any work I had to do with greater certainty and greater ease. I think it is a great objection to the present system that it leads to the subordinates in the departments being brought too much into contact with the contractors; and it would be well if that could be obviated. Supplying goods in small quantities also leads to a great deal of clerical labour, also labour in the inspection required, and in entering the goods in detail. Say we use 500 reams of paper paper in course of three months. It is supplied at five different times, and on the occasion of each delivery a careful inspection has to be made, the goods reported upon, and entries made in all the books, and there are so many more accounts which have to be dealt with in the Stores Department. If the whole of the supply could be delivered at once much clerical and other labour would be saved.

T. Richards,

718. Mr. Maclean.] The adoption of your recommendation would involve a large increase to the storage accommodation? As the business of the Government increased it would probably be necessary to provide larger storage accommodation—that I think would be inevitable.

719. In the case of a large contract, would you take delivery of all the goods at once, or would you spread it over the year? I find great inconvenience in the way in which goods are delivered now. Say I want 1,000 reams of paper for a certain work. The contractor having under the present system to deliver in detail makes his arrangements for importing piecemeal; that does not suit us—we would rather have all the goods at once, instead of getting delivery of them from the contractor in small parcels. All the goods should be delivered at the Government Stores; but I think it would be desirable, if I had the accommodation—which I have not—to draw largely from the Stores of such goods as we use most. It would save labour if that could be done.

720. Do you think it would be an advantage if the principal Government establishments had storage rooms, and could draw their supplies somewhat in advance of their requirements? Speaking for my own department, I should regard that as a great advantage. Sometimes it takes us three or four times as long to get the goods necessary to do a certain work as it does to do the work itself. That of course must be wrong. The Printing Department is one which necessarily has to do work very rapidly, and there should be no obstacle in the way of its obtaining the material required.

721. Chairman.] In calling for tenders I presume you would require that they should be according to sample, or would you in every case have a sample up to which parties must tender? I think it would be better to have samples when possible; but I would not bind myself to say that that should be an absolute rule. There might be cases in which the tenderers should be asked to furnish their own samples; but as a general rule I consider the best plan to adopt is to have fixed samples.

722. Do you think the Government would gain in the cost of articles by giving a tender for two or three years instead of one? In many respects I certainly think they would. In the case of paper, it would be very desirable to have a contract for a longer period than one year. I think you would gain in price, and you would gain in uniformity. The Session of Parliament, for instance, extends from one year into another. We have to produce volumes at the end of each Session, and to work on papers supplied under different contracts. In that way it has happened that we have motley-looking books—paper of one tone at the beginning and paper of a different tone at the end. Uniformity in the tone, texture, and size of paper is a matter of great importance in producing good printing. But I do not think that contracts longer than for one year would be very desirable for all things. Your permanent Board would consider that question, and arrive at a conclusion as to the articles which it might be best to obtain under a yearly contract, and those under a contract for a longer period. I do not think it would be desirable to have tenders for stationery for a longer period than one year.

723. But you do, in regard to paper? Yes, because uniformity is of so much importance. With regard to stationery, some improvement is made every year, and labour-saving appliances are brought into play to reduce the cost; but paper, I think, has got to about its lowest.

724. Mr. Maclean.] An error in the fixed quantity calculated for a three years' contract would be much larger than in the case of one year? In taking a contract for three years I would not ask to have the whole supply delivered at once, but it would be a contract for three years, delivering at the rate of so much per annum.

725. You seemed to rely upon the calculations being rectified as you went on, but if the contract were for three years the error would be proportionately increased? No, I think it would be reduced.

726. Because we could get a better average? Yes; but at the same time there must be a very careful arrangement at the Stores, so that no goods should become buried; and things should be so systematized that the officer would be able to tell at a moment's notice what stock he had in hand in every line.

727. You would in fact send to the Stores instead of going all round the town? Yes; I think the officers of the Government should have nothing whatever to do with the contractors—they should have only the Stores Department to deal with in obtaining supplies.

728. Under the present system one requisition might have to be divided into a good many orders upon different contractors before all the goods asked for could be supplied, but under your recommendation the supply of all the articles would be made straight from the Stores as one transaction? Yes.

729. Captain Hixson.] You have told us that when you were in England you devoted some attention to the system under which the Imperial Government call for tenders? Yes.

730. Do they call for tenders for a great variety of articles, or only for articles in great consumption. Complaints have been made here because articles are not in contract, and it has been stated as a grievance that the Government have to pay higher prices in consequence? They call for articles in general consumption the demand for which is known to be very large, and which are known to be always wanted. They store, inspect, examine, and issue such goods; but for goods not in ordinary demand they select the houses they consider most likely to supply them well, and they send circulars round to ascertain their terms. In many cases the officer in charge of a department has it in his discretion to purchase.

731. They call for tenders for only a limited number of articles? I should rather say that the number of articles for which they do not call tenders is limited. They tender for everything they possibly can with advantage.

732. But they recognize the fact that in certain cases they must have some officer whom they can trust to purchase what is required? Quite so; and the Select Committee of the House of Commons, in the Report which they brought up, quite indorsed that view.

733. Chairman.] Do I infer from what you have said that in their system they do not necessarily accept the lowest tender? I cannot say as to that exactly. It is the rule to accept the lowest tender, but there is not an absolutely rigid adherence to the system of public tender. They sometimes find it convenient or desirable to send round to houses which they know will serve them well, and thus obtain, in a sort of selected way, a select field of tender.

George Murray, Esq., was called in and examined :—

G. Murray,
Esq.

734. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Murray? George.

735. You are a partner in the firm of Williams & Murray? Yes—paper manufacturers, Collingwood, 30 July, 1879. Liverpool.

736. The object of the Board is to consider the best system of public tendering, with a view to devise any improvements possible, and we should be glad to hear any information you can give us on the subject? Yes.

737. I think your tender has been chiefly for printing papers? For printing papers.

738. I think you have been a successful tenderer? Only once out of five times.

739. You are aware that the present system of tendering is one in which the tender is determined by a computation of prices? Yes.

740. One fault which has been found with this system by many persons is, that particular lines have been tendered for at what appeared to be fictitiously low prices, while other lines are tendered for at higher prices? Yes, and it is well known to be an unfair system.

741. Will you tell the Board how we can avoid that difficulty? I think the Treasurer's last decision giving to the Government the right to accept any single line of a tender was a very good one. As regards myself, if an article which can be produced in the Colony were separated from an article which had to be imported it would be a great advantage to the colonial manufacturer. It would be an advantage in this way,—in that smaller capitalists would be able to tender probably successfully when they would not be able to tender for a contract of double the amount nearly of imported goods, the least portion of the goods to be supplied being made in the Colony. I may explain it to you in this way :—In order to secure a contract for £8,000 worth of goods made in the Colony, the last tender which I sent in was for £15,000 worth of goods, the remainder being imported goods. I requested the Treasurer to separate them, and his remark was that it would look too much like protection. My reply was that I had always been able to gain employment for myself and those connected with me, nearly 115 hands, but that I considered it was a national loss, not an individual loss, that £8,000 should leave the Colony for goods which could be made equally well in the Colony. There is another contract to which I would just call your attention. I allude to a special contract made in May, 1879. Tenders for 19½ tons of paper were advertised for on the 19th of May; notices were sent out on the 20th of May; the tenders were opened on the 22nd of May; and I was told that the 19½ tons of paper might be required to be delivered next day. The tender was for a size of paper which no importer holds any stock of, unless he is given to understand by parties that it will be taken when imported. I lost that contract, although I could have made the paper faster than it could possibly have been used. My tender was at 26/10 blue wove, and the price the contract was given at was, as far as I am informed, 35/.—It was for 350 reams of blue wove and 500 reams quadruple yellow wove 48 lbs. that the tender was advertised. So that the loss to the Government would be £142 8s. 4d. on that lot.

742. Was a sample of this paper exhibited? No.

743. Did you exhibit a sample of the paper you proposed to make? The paper on which my tender was written was named as my sample, but it was not of my own manufacture, as no paper-maker can make a single sheet for a sample.

744. In calling for tenders, do you think it would be better to retain the present system, by which the tenderer writes in his own price against the articles, or would it be better to have a schedule of standard prices and allow the contractor to tender at a percentage above or below? I should think a fair price would be the average price of the last six years. At the present time the trade at Home seems to be ruined. There are many failures in Lancashire, and the manufacturers in Scotland, as well as England, are hard pressed, therefore present prices could not be taken as standard prices. At Home men get 18s. a week; but here I could not offer any of my men less than 8s. a day. I have received the silver medal for my paper from Queensland. I supply the Adelaide Advertiser, three papers in Melbourne, and seven papers in New Zealand. I can refer you to Mr. Fairfax for my quality. We produce reels three miles and a half long. Mr. Samuel Bennett was a very shrewd man, and he said—"I will support you as long as you supply the quality you make. I will pay you a little more for your paper rather than send Home." He carried that out, and his successors are following in his footsteps.

745. Is the Evening News printed on your paper? Not all the Evening News; part of the Town and Country is.

746. Do you prefer the schedule as it is with probable quantities and the power of fixing your own rates or prices, or would you prefer a schedule with fixed prices printed in against the articles, leaving it to the tenderer to say that he would tender at a percentage above or below those prices? I prefer the present system, but with fixed quantities.

747. Mr. Maclean.] As to articles which we manufactured here and those which are imported, do you think that in calling for tenders it would be an advantage to describe each separately, and let the Government choose between the two at the prices offered—let the Government have an alternate choice as between the colonially manufactured and the imported article: do you think that that would be a serviceable mode of dealing with the matter? I think so. The paper trade might come to me and ask me what I would make them such and such paper for in the event of their contracting with the Government, and I would tell them. I want to make the paper in the Colony only.

748. You think then that it would be advisable to have two lines in the schedule—one for colonial made paper and the other for imported? Precisely. If you ask for blue wove made in the Colony I am the only one who makes it; but that would be a protection I do not ask for.

749. But you think it would be a good thing that the Government should have the alternate choice? Yes.

750. If you can make an article cheaper and better than that which is imported there is no reason why the Government should not take it? We can make it as cheap and as good. What you propose would be a very good thing to do, but it would look like protection.

751. Captain Hixson.] What kinds of paper could you manufacture in competition with the imported article? Blue wove and yellow wove of all sizes.

TUESDAY, 12 AUGUST, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Thomas Richards, Esq., was called in and further examined:—

T. Richards,
12 Aug., 1879.

752. Chairman.] I wish to point out to you that, in the examination of Mr. G. Murray, on the 30th July last, he made the following statement, in regard to which the Board think it is well that we should have your explanation: "There is another contract to which I will just call your attention—I allude to a special contract made in May, 1879. Tenders for 19½ tons of paper were advertised for on the 19th of May. Notices were sent out on the 20th of May, the tenders were opened on the 22nd of May, and I was told that the 19½ tons of paper might be required to be delivered the next day. The tender was for a size of paper which no importer holds any stock of unless he is given to understand by parties that it will be taken when imported. I lost that contract, although I could have made the paper faster than it could possibly have been used. My tender was at 26s. 10d. blue wove, and the price the contract was given at was, as far as I am informed, 35s. It was for 350 reams of blue wove and 500 reams quadruple yellow wove, 48 lbs. that the tender was advertised, so that the loss to the Government would be £142 8s. 4d. on that lot." That is Mr. Murray's statement, and the Board will be glad to hear any information from you on the subject? The necessity for an immediate supply of these contract papers—yellow wove and quadruple blue wove—arose from circumstances quite beyond my control. On 24th March, and again on 5th April I made an urgent request that tenders should be called for them. I see that the tender notice was dated the 14th of May, that tenders were opened on the 22nd of May for 500 reams of quadruple yellow wove and 350 reams of quadruple blue wove. There were two special conditions named in the tender. One was that the paper was required immediately; and the other, that the tenderer should submit samples. There were four tenders in all sent in, namely, by Edwards, Dunlop, & Co., D. Nichol, G. Murray, and by Gordon & Gotch. Mr. Murray tendered for both items—the yellow wove at 22s., and the blue at 26s. 10d.—but he submitted no samples of the quality of the paper he was prepared to deliver. His tender therefore was informal, and it was rejected on that ground.

753. Mr. Maclean.] Was his tender for the full requirements of the notice? Yes.

754. Equally with the others? Yes, to be delivered in a fortnight.

755. Chairman.] Did the notice inviting the tenders say that the goods were to be delivered in a fortnight? No, Mr. Murray said that he was prepared to deliver in a fortnight. The notice said that the paper would be required immediately. We were urgently in want of it.

756. Mr. Maclean.] I think Mr. Murray has stated in his evidence that he could deliver the paper faster than you could use it? Yes, but we should have to wait a fortnight before he made any delivery at all.

757. And you could not have waited so long? We could not wait at all.

758. Chairman.] When you say that there was no sample, is it not the fact that Mr. Murray desired that the paper on which his tender was written should be accepted as his sample? Yes, as his sample for the blue wove; but he furnished no sample whatever for the yellow wove. The tender included both items, and had to be dealt with as a whole.

759. Captain Hixson.] From your experience, do you think that Mr. Murray could have produced a paper equal to that on which he wrote his tender? I am perfectly certain that he could not.

760. Chairman.] You have had some experience of paper manufactured by Mr. Murray? Yes, a very large experience. On one occasion I induced the Government to give the Liverpool Company a test order for 1,000 reams.

761. What kind? Yellow wove. Before the transaction was ended we purchased 1,600 reams. The supply was very unsatisfactory indeed.

762. Do you mean as to quality or times of delivery? I mean as to quality—it was quite unsuited for our printing.

763. You had no reliance on the capability of Mr. Murray to produce paper equal to the alleged sample? I am perfectly certain that he could not do it with his present appliances. Mr. Murray had the contract for the whole supply of blue and yellow wove one year, and the supply was equally unsatisfactory as in the test order to which I have referred.

764. So that as a member of the Tender Board you would require a sample actually made by Mr. Murray, upon which he would propose to tender? Yes; after the experience I have had of paper from the Liverpool mills, I should object to accepting tenders which were not based upon samples actually made at those mills. I have seen paper-making establishments in England, and also the mills at Liverpool, and I am satisfied that the capacity of the Liverpool mills does not go beyond the production of a quality of paper suitable for newspaper printing, even if it is good enough for that. The Government should never place themselves at the mercy of a single mill situated on the banks of a river liable to be flooded, and also liable to be brought to a standstill by the want of skilled workmen; for in a Colony like this, where there is only one manufactory, skilled labour cannot be had every day. If you once shut out the imported papers, you place yourself at the mercy of this particular mill.

765. You think then that Mr. Murray has no ground for complaint in this particular case? Not the slightest.

766. What was the average price of the paper supplied under Messrs. Edwards, Dunlop, & Co.'s contract? Thirty shillings and tenpence.

767. Will you state the quantity supplied in tons? 16 tons 19 cwt. nearly. With regard to the Liverpool Paper Company, I have been urged by several Governments to do all I could to encourage them, and I have myself been very desirous to encourage native industries, which has led me to get them the test order to which I have referred but which was not satisfactorily executed. I have several times since endeavoured to get them test orders, and I have also urged Mr. Murray to put his paper into warehouse, so that we may be able to judge of it on its merits without running the risk of not being supplied according to sample. It is not too much to ask of Mr. Murray, while a doubt remains of his ability to manufacture, that he should produce samples and have a supply in his warehouse.

768. What you would require is that Mr. Murray should make his paper so that you might be in a position to judge of its quality? Quite so. Unless that is done we are likely to find ourselves in this fix,—that after we have given an order we shall be compelled to take delivery of an inferior quality of paper at the price charged. In my previous evidence I alluded to some notes which I had taken in respect of the system of tendering which obtains in England, and I should be glad to hand them in for your consideration.

Vide Appendix A.)

Davidson Nichol, Esq., was called in and examined:—

D. Nichol,
Esq.

12 Aug., 1879.

769. Chairman.] What is your name? Davidson Nichol.
770. And I think you represent in Sydney the firm of Cowan & Co.? Yes, Cowan & Co. of Edinburgh.
771. The object of the Board is to inquire into our present system of tendering, with a view to make improvements where practicable; and the Board would be very glad if you would give them the benefit of any suggestions in regard to these matters in which you have been concerned as a tenderer? You may be aware that the main objection which I have to the present system of tendering is that it throws conditions which are utterly impossible of performance on the shoulders of the contractor. When I say impossible, what I mean is this, it is impossible that the paper can be supplied as it is now wanted, at what I should call a fair price, to the Government. If you make the contractors run heavy risks, and lay them under unusual obligations, they can only comply by making a corresponding increase in the price which they charge to you.
772. I think your remarks apply to the new condition introduced into the terms of the contract, under which, differently from former contracts, the contractor is bound to supply at once not only up to the probable quantity, but an almost indefinite quantity, if demanded, at the price stated? Yes; and that of an article which is not kept in stock in the Colony and which is not manufactured in the Colony, and for which the demand upon the contractor is made at the instant. It is well enough known to you that I contracted some time ago for about two or three thousand reams of paper, which I supplied. It so happened that at the mills they made a few hundred reams too much, which they sent on to me, as the paper was of a peculiar description. The Government ordered that from me, and 400 reams in addition, which it was impossible that I could supply. The Government had obtained 260 reams more than the quantity named in the contract, but I was ordered to produce the 400 reams in addition, or the Government would otherwise send out and purchase such paper as they found suitable. That I submit was no fair contract at all; and if contractors are to be loaded by such conditions as these, it is evident that there must be a corresponding loading of the price. I see nothing to prevent the Government from framing their contracts as any merchant would for a specific quantity of goods to be delivered and paid for at a specific time. In that case manufacturers and other parties could make their calculations and frame their tender on the lowest terms.
773. Then you would not allow of any extension over the specific quantity named in the contract? I will give you an illustration. I think it was for four years that I held the whole of the Government contracts for paper, stationery, and surveyors' materials. There was one line of paper which was in the first contract for, I think, fifty reams of loan paper, but I am not quite sure as to the quantity. None of that was taken. The same item and quantity appeared in the contract for the next year, and none of that was taken, but I had to get it, because I could not tell that because it had not been used during the first six months it would not be demanded during the second. That contract left me with 150 reams of that paper, and when I dropped the stationery contract—excuse me for saying so disgusted with it, I had £450 worth of that paper standing on my shelves, and with the exception of ten reams which the Government took, not one ream of it has been sold to this day. Instead of a medium loan paper they went in to use a double foolscap loan paper.
774. Is that one instance out of several, or is it the only instance? That is one out of several. When I dropped the stationery contract I had upwards of £4,000 worth of goods standing on my shelves which I had ordered under my contracts with the Government, and which they ought to have taken, but which they did not take.
775. Mr. Maclean.] Unsaleable goods? The goods are saleable, but slowly. It was a heavy expense to be put to and quite an unnecessary one.
776. Chairman.] You have a most decided objection to the new condition which obliges the contractor to supply the probable quantity named and also any additional quantity which may be required? My objection is so strong that I will not tender to the Government, nor to any man, under such a condition as that. You take my bond to deliver you a thousand reams of a certain paper and I deliver it. You demand a thousand more, and I am perfectly willing to deliver that or any other extra quantity required, provided you give me time to get the goods, but if you give me a peremptory requisition to deliver it at once when I have not got it, and an intimation that unless I do deliver it the Government will purchase such papers as they please as a substitute and charge me with the difference in price, I say that is unbusiness-like and ought not to be done. I will give you an illustration of how that will work by telling you of what occurred shortly. I made a contract with the Government, which I am still under, to deliver a certain quantity of what is known in the trade as azure laid super-royal. I forget the exact quantity, but I think it was about 300 reams. It is a paper not usually supplied. The Government took 20 reams more than the contract quantity, and then they sent in a requisition for another 70 reams. That was for a special description of paper which no man is likely to have in the Colony. Super-royal was to be had at a much higher price, and then came a threat on the part of the Government that they would purchase this at my risk, involving me in a loss of about £2 per ream. No contractor could make proper contracts in a case of that kind with the certainty of loss staring him in the face.
777. This you give as an illustration of the new condition of things? Yes.
778. Implying in fact a want of mutuality in the contract? There is not a bit of mutuality in the contract—not a vestige of it.
779. Could you make any suggestions as to the improvement of the system? It seems to me that the class of paper which the Government uses might be brought within very narrow limits. You have one paper which perhaps you use for half a dozen different things, and another which you may use for half a dozen other different purposes; but by a very little care and management you might reduce the kinds of paper you want, and in that way you would have the supply more under your control. And then if you had it so reduced, the Government ought to contract for specific quantities of those papers, taking delivery of them when they came to hand, and store them themselves. The Government can store them at much less expense than any private person. In making the calculations upon which I should base my tender now, I should have to add so much for the interest of the money invested, if you take credit, and so much for the storage of the goods if I have to store them; for that reason, therefore, you would under the plan I suggest get your paper for rather less than at present, because tenderers would offer at lower terms. You ought to have a Storekeeper to keep stock of your papers, and when the Printer saw that his stock was within six or nine months of his consumption, you ought to call for tenders to keep the stock up, in the same way as I am or any other merchant is obliged to do. If you ask contractors to keep stock for you, and run the risk of paper being used or not used, you put yourselves out of the category of parties who are likely to get a suitable tender. At all events, whether the Government store their paper or not, they ought to issue contracts for specific quantities.

D. Nichol,
12 Aug., 1879.

780. How would you do when the supply came to an end? I would call for tenders; but I think it ought to be the duty of the Printer, or whoever was in charge, to prevent that. Having some idea of the work coming upon him, he should be able to replace his paper before the supply gives out.

781. Then you think that the leading feature should be a re-preparation of the schedule? Yes.

782. Reducing the variety of paper and endeavouring to get a few articles into general use? Yes; I think that might be done.

783. Do you think it would be desirable to insert in the schedules prices agreed upon after reference to the trade, and then to call for tenders at a percentage above or below those prices? I do not know that that would answer your purpose so well. I do not think it would, because sometimes certain classes of paper rise and fall in price, and, considering the extent of your schedule, I think you would get a fair tender by asking the tenderers to fix their own prices. But there is one thing which I think ought to be done. Samples should be sent in with every tender, and the gentlemen at the Board could then judge much better than they can now from a book of samples which they profess to follow, and very often do not at all. You could see whether the articles offered you were of a good quality or not.

784. The present plan I think is for the Government to produce their own samples? Yes; but there are always little things cropping up. There was in the schedule a double foolscap paper which was not in the sample book. I sent down to the Stores Department for a sample of this 28 lbs. double foolscap. They sent me up a sample of printing paper which I ordered, and printing paper came out. Now, when it reaches Mr. Richards he tells me that that was not the article they wanted at all—they wanted a superfine writing paper. Little things of that kind occur and produce annoyance.

785. So then you think that it is far better to let each tenderer produce his own samples with his tender? Yes; you could then judge better. I should like to say a word about the adulteration of paper. Of late years the manufacture of paper has been adulterated by the use of lime, clay, barites, wood chips, and other substances. Paper so adulterated is liable to decay, and it is estimated that writing upon it is liable to decay in a period of less than twenty years. About twenty years ago the attention of the public was called by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in London to the serious results likely to flow from the adulteration of paper, by the decay of documents written or printed thereon, and quite recently Professor Reveaux has drawn attention in a lecture at Leipzig to the paper employed in public offices. He states that it consists almost entirely of wood, and that in the course of ten or fifteen years we may anticipate the destruction from natural causes of the most important official records written upon such paper. The Government could protect itself by requiring an analysis of each sample of paper, and they would very soon find out where the adulterated paper came from.

786. Captain Hixson.] How long a notice would you require to enable you to land a quantity of paper in Sydney under contract for the Government? I have landed paper for the Government in seventy days by telegram and steamer, but that of course is an expensive method of importing.

787. In the ordinary course of your business what time would you require? If you had to write, I do not think you could safely calculate upon much less than eight months. It may be got out in six months, but six months would be too short a notice to give for miscellaneous orders. If you want your paper at a suitable price it must be made; you cannot go to a stationer in London and purchase it—it must be made for you, and come out at first cost.

788. Mr. Maclean.] Would there be any advantage in having a contract for a longer period than twelve months, say for two or three years? I do not think so—in fact I refused to contract for two years the other day. Papers are very low at the present moment—I have never known them so low in my life.

789. Then it would not do at the present time? No.

790. But if paper were at a higher price you would not object? If papers were at a fair average price I should be glad to contract for a longer period than a year; but I do not think the Government would gain anything by it; and they might find themselves compelled to take stuff they did not absolutely want. I think it is better for the Government that a break should occur, and what I have recommended is exactly what the British Government are doing—they do not issue any regular yearly contracts, but they issue contracts as they require the goods to keep up their supply. They always get from one to four thousand reams at a time.

791. But they are closer to their supplies than we are? Yes, but the goods have always to be manufactured for them; and you have only to arrange to keep up your stocks for the extra time it takes to import.

Henry Ward, Esq., was called in and examined:—

H. Ward,
Esq.
12 Aug., 1879.

792. Chairman.] Your Christian name, Mr. Ward? Henry.

793. You represent the firm of Gordon & Gotch? I do.

794. Who have been tenderers for supplies of paper to the Government for many years past? I think for ten or twelve years.

795. The object of the Board sitting to inquire into the present system of tendering is to devise any improvements which can be made? My impression has always been that an annual contract as far as our business is concerned is too short, and that the contract should be for at least two or three years. In regard to any article of colonial produce or manufacture an annual contract would be ample, but in the case of printing papers and materials we have to send to England for them. Say that a certain quantity of paper is required. The Government may draw it all out by March or April, or some time early in the year, and there is no time to get a further supply before our contract expires. A two or three years contract would enable the contractor to judge of the demands which would be likely to be made upon him. I may mention one line of the contract for printing papers this year—cartridge paper. The probable quantity specified was 30 reams, but up to the present time we have supplied 57 reams, but fortunately we have got the contract for next year. In the early part of the year, I saw that the demand was becoming great, and I took the precaution to telegraph home for a further supply, and therefore we have part of next year's supply here in readiness, and we shall perhaps have to re-import owing to the probable quantity not having been correctly stated.

796. With reference to the probable quantity, are you not bound to supply any further quantities in addition? Yes. The demand in a great many instances is very much in excess of the estimated probable requirements, while in other instances hardly any is drawn. In printing materials there are two lines of shooting-sticks, one brass bound and the other plain. The Government Printing Office never use any of the plain plain shooting-sticks, although they are still kept in the schedule, and by the retention of them in the schedule the opportunity is given to a dishonest tenderer to manipulate his tender so as to be the lowest in the computation. I do not think the schedule of probable quantities is made up with sufficient accuracy. My own impression is that the Government Printer is asked as to what his requirements will be, and in that the whole contract is based, other departments who also draw a large quantity not being applied to. The Government Printer requires 30 reams of cartridge paper, but I have also supplied the Post Office with 20 reams, and it is very likely that the Post Office were never asked as to their requirements. I suppose I have supplied twenty different departments and branches with small portions of this particular line.

H. Ward,
Esq.
12 Aug., 1879.

797. You think that the schedules require careful revision? Yes.

798. Have you any objection to the present provisions by which you are obliged to supply any quantity over the probable quantity? In a twelve months' contract I think it is unfair, for the reason that it does not give the contractor time to turn round. The Government as a rule uses heavier paper than mercantile houses, and therefore any stock left on hand is so much loss to the contractor, who has to wait until he gets the chance of another contract.

799. Then you think that a two or three years' contract would do away with your objection? Yes. With a three years' contract the contractor would be able to form an average of the Government requirements. Where the demand is so fluctuating it may be fair to give the tenderer under a three years' contract a guarantee that the Government will take some small proportion over and above the probable quantity at the end of the contract, but if the contractor very greatly overstocked himself at the end of three years it would be his own fault.

800. You mean supplies over and above the probable quantities? Yes; say the probable quantity was thirty reams for three years, the Government might guarantee that at the end of three years they would take five reams in addition, as an inducement for the contractor to always have stock on hand to meet any unusual demand of the Government Printer, while at the same time it would help to insure him against loss. Referring again to this cartridge paper, the contract price for the present year was 28s., and I have had to pay Cowan & Co., Edwards, Dunlop, & Co., and John Sands as much as 38s. and 40s. to keep the Government supplied until I could get it out, and that upon the bulk of the extra supply leaves me a considerable loser. It goes to show that an annual contract is not sufficient where there is a fluctuating demand.

801. For goods required to be imported, you would recommend a more carefully prepared schedule in the sense that full quantities should be stated; and that a contract for a longer term than one year should be made? Yes.

802. Are you favourable to having fixed prices arranged after consultation with the trade being printed in the schedule, and requesting tenders at a percentage above or below that? I prefer the present system which leaves every tenderer to name his own price.

803. Are we not under that system sometimes led into this difficulty,—that prices fictitiously low are given, and that the contract is given to the tenderer whose prices are nominally the lowest, but upon the goods which will have to be supplied not the lowest? That can only be avoided by greater care in the preparation of the schedules. Take the item of chases in the Government Printer's schedule. We have been in the habit of having them made in the Colony, partly to encourage colonial industry, and partly because the Government require that their chases shall all be of the same inside measurement, and that we cannot always depend upon getting if we order from England. We would rather supply that line at cost price than stand the risk of importing goods which may be thrown upon our hands. If the contract was at a percentage, we might price the whole at such a rate, taking a fair average supply, that if the Government demanded an exceedingly large quantity of these chases, we should be left considerably at a loss, or we should at all events make no profit on the contract. The last year I had the printing material contract I think the probable quantity of quadruple foolscap chases was stated at 30 or 40 pairs, and I believe I supplied 150 or 200 pairs.

804. Captain Hixson.] With your experience as a Government contractor, do you think it is possible to estimate the probable quantities to a nicety? No; the demand is so fluctuating. The Legislative Assembly may order a certain paper to be printed which will absorb 100 reams more paper than the Government Printer could have expected.

805. Still you think that an improvement might be made? Yes.

806. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that if the schedules were revised with great care in the way you have indicated, that that would do away with a good deal of the difference between the probable quantities and the actual quantities? I think it would.

807. It has been recommended that we should call for tenders for fixed quantities? I had two methods in view; either that you should give a three years' contract, or that you should call for fixed quantities. But I think that a three years' contract would be the better of the two. Fixed quantities would involve a careful observation of the stock, and at present that is thrown upon the contractor. By giving two or three years' contracts you would save yourselves all the trouble and throw it upon the contractor to be prepared with your supply.

808. You do not think that contracts for fixed quantities would be made at lower rates? From my knowledge of the prices of goods at home, I do not think they could be.

809. Chairman.] Have you any knowledge of the paper manufactured in the Colony? No, not further than as regards samples which I have had in my hands.

810. Do you consider these equal to imported papers? No, certainly not.

811. Captain Hixson.] Have you ever purchased from the colonial manufacturers? We do not now. Our Melbourne branch has done so in several instances to supply orders where they have been short of English.

812. Why do you not purchase the colonial made paper? Because we endeavour to keep a stock of English, which is much superior in quality and pleases our customers better. It is not from any prejudice against the colonial production, but simply on the ground of quality—we find the English paper so much better.

WEDNESDAY, 13 AUGUST, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

W. M. Alderson, Esq., J.P., was called in and examined:—

W. M.
Alderson,
Esq., J.P.
13 Aug., 1879.813. Chairman.] What is your Christian name? William Madison.

814. I think you are the senior partner in the firm of Alderson &amp; Sons? Yes.

815. And you have been a Government contractor for many years? About thirty years.

816. Principally, I believe, in leather and grindery, boots and shoes, saddles and harness, mail bags, mill bands, hose, and articles of that description? Yes.

817. The object of the Board is to devise, if possible, some mode of tendering which shall be an improvement on the present system; and as you have been a very old contractor, the Board have thought that you will probably be in a position to give them some information which will assist them in the object which they have in view? I shall be very glad to give you any information in my power.

818. Mr. Maclean.] The Board have under consideration the present form of the schedules, under which a tenderer fills up the blanks by writing in the prices opposite to each article named in the schedule, and the whole is made up by computation? Yes.

819. It has been brought before us that in many cases very anomalous prices have been charged,—that the prices named for some articles which the tenderer has thought will not be required are much below their value, while for articles which it is probable will be in most demand prices above the fair value are charged, the object of the lower prices being to gain the contract which is decided upon a computation of the whole tender? That has been done.

820. To remedy this evil, two courses have been suggested; one that instead of probable quantities fixed quantities shall be named in the schedules, which the Government will be bound to take and the contractor bound to supply; and the other is that instead of having a blank column for the prices to be named by the contractor, the Government should by consulting with the trade ascertain the fair value of the articles, and print that in as the standard price in the tender schedules, and that then the tenderer should be required to say at what percentage over or under the schedule price he would be prepared to supply the articles. We should like to have your opinion in regard to each of those suggestions? With regard to the schedules I am opposed to the percentage system. That is the way they manage their railway contracts, and I believe there is the same amount of dodging in regard to their contracts as there has been under the other system. When you ask tenders by percentage, the contractors get to know what is most likely to be wanted, and what is wanted they put down at a high figure and what is not wanted at a low figure.

821. The percentage to which we refer is not a percentage line by line of the schedule but a percentage in the aggregate, that is to say a percentage applicable to every article named in the schedule? ———

822. Captain Hixson.] We should endeavour first of all to ascertain what was the fair price for the articles according to the ordinary market rates, and we should print those prices in the schedule as the standard prices, calling upon the tenderer to offer at an advance or a discount as he pleased? I understand you.823. Mr. Maclean.] And the tenderer's percentage would apply not merely to one item but to all? If we knew that there were articles in the schedule which were not likely to be wanted we should calculate them at a very low rate.824. Captain Hixson.] Under the present system some articles are offered for at absurdly low rates, and there is an impression that if we adopt the percentage system there will not be the same opportunities for manipulation as there is under the present system? Perhaps not; it may be better than the present system. My idea is that all articles which are hardly ever wanted ought to be struck out of the schedule entirely, and these are the articles which you see put in at a mere nominal price. The present schedules want revising, and certain articles ought to be struck out. If the Government want any article which is not in the schedule they can always get it by paying the fair market value either from the contractor or some one else in the same line of business. In the grindery contract, a few years past, two eccentric machines were wanted for the Darlinghurst Gaol, and because of that they have been put in the schedule ever since. They cost from £25 to £30 each, but some of the contractors have tendered for them I think as low as from £3 to £5 because they knew they would not be wanted. An honest contractor who believed the articles were wanted puts them down in his tender at their proper value, and when the amounts come to be added up, it is found that he loses the contract because of that. I am very glad to see that for this year these eccentric machines have been struck out. We have not had the contract for leather for some years past now. We are not so venturesome as some contractors are. The contractors have been making a very handsome profit on the leathers, but then if they were called upon to supply other articles they would lose money on them. I believe, however, that the Government have been insisting on some of these low priced articles being supplied. But the leather is the principal item in the contract, and I think the successful tenderer was a halfpenny or a penny per lb. more than I was, and yet I lost the contract.

825. Boots and shoes have I think been tendered for cheap and leather dear? The leather has not been so very dear, but it is the article most in demand, and upon which the profit would be made. In the grindery contract they calculated that there were many things named in the schedule which would not be wanted, and the effect practically was that both the Government and ourselves were sacrificed by the method of arranging the tender. I therefore maintain that articles which are not likely to be wanted or to be seldom wanted ought to be struck out altogether.

826. Do you think that a carefully prepared schedule, based upon actual requirements, will obviate all the anomalies to which we have referred, without changing into the percentage system? I think so. Every manufacturer ought to calculate each article separately.

827. Would it be an advantage to the Government to give contracts in your branch of business for a longer period than one year—say for a period of two or three years? I believe that is the practice in England. They pick out a certain number of manufacturers in a particular line of business, and ask them to tender, and I believe the contracts are for three years.

828. When you had the grindery contract, did you have to import specially to enable you to supply? I formerly took a very active interest in the question of contracts, much more so than of late years. When Sir John Young was here, we held a public meeting of working men and employers, and I formed one of the deputation who waited upon the Government to ask that tenders might be called nine months before the contractor was called upon to supply the goods. The department have been carrying that plan out, although lately they have been running more into the year. The object of that arrangement was to give the contractors an opportunity of manufacturing or importing part or whole. We cannot make everything here yet.

W. M.
Alderson,
Esq., J.P.
13 Aug., 1879.

829. Are the boots and shoes imported? No, we make them all.

830. Captain Hixson.] Every part of them? Yes, except just the hemp and one or two other minor things.

831. Do you make the pegs here? No; all the leather is made out of the raw material.

832. Are not the uppers imported to some extent? Not by us—we make all our own; and I think most other manufacturers do so too now. We import a great deal of calf, French leather, of which there is a good deal required in the boot-making.

833. That is a finer leather than you can manufacture here? It is supposed to be a better leather than we can make; generally it is a better leather; we cannot come up to the French yet.

834. Mr. Maclean.] I suppose you make the police boots, napoleon boots of that? Yes.

835. There would be no advantage in extending the contract for boots and shoes for more than one year? No; when we asked for the nine months' notice, it was in the interest of the contractors generally.

836. I refer to the extension of the duration of the contract from one year to two or three? I should be favourable to three years if I got the contract at a good price. I have lost a great deal of money in Government contracts in my time. During the gold discovery I was supplying blucher boots at 6s. and 7s. which cost me 14s., and I thought the Government might have made some consideration; but the very next year I lost the contract in a matter of £13.

837. Do you think that fixed quantities would lead to lower prices in the tenders than probable quantities? I do not think that that would have any effect in our business, because we make nearly everything which the Government wants.

838. And most of your products go to the general public quite as much as to the Government? They do.

839. But there are some articles imported for the Government alone? Yes.

840. Would it not be desirable to have fixed quantities for those? It would not make a great deal of difference. When the Police used to use the military trees, then the quantities ought to have been fixed. When Mr. Fosbery became Inspector-General he made a change, and a very good change it was, but it was a bad thing for me because I had a great lot of them on hand.

841. I was asking whether, in regard to things imported expressly for the Government, it would not be better? I do not think it would make much difference. Perhaps it would be well that I should tell you that Mr. Fosbery came to me to make new samples of the saddlery for the Police. He showed me bits and stirrup irons which had been sent down the country which bent and broke like wire, and the leather the same. Men galloping through the bush might almost lose their lives by an accident happening in consequence of this bad material; and Mr. Fosbery made his mind up that there should be first-rate bits and stirrup irons. As I told him at the time, when I go in to make samples for the Government I never get the contract, because I am required to make such good samples. The tenders were sent in when Mr. Stuart was Treasurer, and I tendered for them at 3s. 6d., which was the lowest they could be made equal to sample for. Another contractor had been supplying them the year before at 1s., and for that year he tendered to supply them at 9d. The man had two good bondsmen, and he guaranteed to supply according to sample.

842. The samples were in the Stores? Yes.

843. Then the successful tenderer must have made his profit on something else? I have told the Government many a time that they ought to alter the system, unless they want the most unscrupulous to get the contract. I have had to make calculations in the same direction, but I am not so bold as others. I should like the schedules and the system so altered that every man would have to keep to his bargain honestly and fairly.

844. Would you have samples kept and very carefully arranged? They are all sent down to the Stores and sealed, but my son tells me that several of the samples were gone, and that inferior samples were there. We knew the samples which we made, but they were not there. They had to send to the barracks to get some. The samples ought to be under lock and key, and to be taken very great care of.

845. Captain Hixson.] They should never be allowed to remove them from the sample room? No. When I used to get the contracts formerly, I used to put my initials on the seals; so that if there was any dispute the sample could be brought out with my initials upon it.

846. Mr. Maclean.] You initialled the seal when your tender was accepted? Yes; and I think that ought always to be done; I do not believe they do it now.

847. Do you think it is a satisfactory arrangement to decide whether supplies are equal to sample? That rests entirely with the gentlemen who are on the Board.

848. Captain Hixson.] When you have been a contractor have you found that you were kept up to the mark? My orders to my people were that if there were any fault found with a thing they should take it back. If it can be shown that anything is not up to the mark we take it back at once. We cannot be answerable for every workman, but if anything were to be objected to, we should supply something else in its place.

849. Do you think a proper vigilance is exercised by the officers of the Government in seeing that the supplies are up to sample? That is a point I do not care to speak about, because unsuccessful tenderers are naturally suspicious. There is one thing with regard to those bits. It is very difficult to tell the quality of them unless a man is well up in the trade, for an iron bit may be made to look as well as a steel bit. The Government ought to see that the article supplied is up to sample. There is a difficulty, because none but an adept can determine it.

850. Mr. Maclean.] You think that more technical information is needed in passing the supplies? Yes, in fine articles such as that.

851. The police could not tell until the bit broke? No. Mr. Fosbery was very anxious to get the best article. I have been told by the heads of departments that they never obtained more satisfaction than when we held the contracts, because we were always willing to meet them fairly. I have had goods returned, certainly, but I have always thought that the departments were more particular with us than they were with anybody else, else, because they could get better supplied by us than others. There are some articles in the schedule which have not been wanted for ten or fifteen years. I have heard that some contractors when they have been asked to supply goods put down in the contract at a low price say that they have to send home for them, and they keep on humbugging the Government until the year is out.

852. Do you think it is desirable that the contractors should supply direct to the departments requiring the goods, or that they should pass all their goods direct through the Stores where they would be tested by the samples? It facilitates business very much with the Police Department to send the goods direct to their store. The only benefit that I can see in it is that it saves the extra labour.

853. Then the goods could not be compared with the samples? Yes, they keep samples there. I think the legitimate way would be to send them down to the Stores.

854. Captain Hixson.] It would be immaterial to you which practice was adopted? Quite so. At one time I had to make all the napoleon boots and to keep them in our factory until Captain McLerie and Mr. Fosbery came to inspect them. I used to protest against that, because I thought the Government ought to take the goods as they were manufactured and accept or reject each lot as it was sent.

855. Mr. Maclean.] You would have them examine each supply? Yes, it would be easier for the manufacturer and better for the Government to take delivery of each lot as they were requisitioned for. That plan was given up, and I think they have a very good system now as regards the delivery of goods.

856. A great quantity of your goods is delivered at the Public Stores? No, at the Government Stores now.

857. Have you had to supply much out of contract? Very little.

858. The articles enumerated in the schedules have mostly covered your supplies? Generally they have. Some years ago when anything was wanted which was not in contract they used to send round to three or four of the principal people and get their prices, so that they could not be imposed upon.

859. That was a good plan if properly followed? Yes, it was a check on the contractor, and prevented the Government from being charged too much.

A. J. Lewington, Esq., was called in and examined:—

A. J.
Lewington,
Esq.
13 Aug., 1879.

860. Captain Hixson.] What is your name, Mr. Lewington? Alfred James Lewington.

861. You represent the firm of Mitchell & Co., ship chandlers? Yes.

862. You are aware that this Board has been appointed to report upon with a view to improve the present system of Government contracts? I have understood so.

863. You have, I think, frequently been the successful tenderer to the Government for the supply of ship chandlery? Yes, some years ago.

864. Not latterly? Not latterly.

865. How is that—have you not tendered? I have not been able to cut low enough, I suppose.

866. Do you think that the present system of calling for tenders can be improved? I think it can be improved upon; I do not consider that it is a good system.

867. In what way do you think it can be improved? My idea is that it would be better for the Government to have a schedule of fixed prices, which the Government should put forward as standard prices, and upon which the tenderers should be invited to tender, at par, or at a percentage under or over, as the case may be.

868. Mr. Maclean.] That is for the whole? For the whole. The system has been in use in the Harbours and Rivers Department, and also in the Railway Department, for some time.

869. Capt. Hixson.] Why do you think that system would be better than the system which has been in use at the Government Stores? Because it appears to me that persons who have had the contracts for a number of years put down ridiculously low prices for those things which they know are not likely to be wanted—that in fact by that means they work the contract.

870. That is to say, they make use of their experience to the disadvantage of the Government? I think so. It is quite clear to me that if they had to supply the goods at the contract prices in all cases they must lose heavily, and therefore I conclude they must have means of making it up in some other way.

871. Do you think there would be any difficulty in framing the standard list of prices in the way you represent? I do not think there would be any difficulty—it is a very simple matter.

872. Is there any other suggestion which you can make? If the Government prepare a list of standard prices, I would suggest that they should submit that list to one or two experts who are well acquainted with values; and I could point out some absurd prices in the standard values even of the Harbours and Rivers Department schedule. The practice of cutting down the things which are not supposed to be wanted has grown to such an extent that it seems to have led the Government Stores to drop them out of the schedules as not wanted; but this gives the contractor a splendid opportunity to charge higher prices for such goods as are not in contract. Take the item of blocks for example. There used to be a very long list of them; but not being much called for a time the price was put down very low, and finally they have been dropped out of the schedule altogether.

873. Mr. Maclean.] Under the percentage system would it not be possible for the contractor to cast his eye over the whole schedule, to say I believe a lot of these things will not be wanted, and to base the calculation of his tender upon that opinion? That might be possible, but the Government would have this security, that they would know it would not be possible for the contractor to overcharge them much for any particular item.

874. If the schedule could be accurately prepared, it would not matter much whether the percentage or blank system were followed? Perhaps not.

875. If you called for fixed quantities and prepared your schedules with great care? Perhaps not. At the present time there are a great many things not in contract for which high prices can be charged.

876. Do you think it would be an advantage to call for fixed quantities? I do not attach so much importance to the quantities as I do to having the schedule properly prepared and the articles properly described.

877. Captain Hixson.] As a rule I suppose the articles required in your line can be secured in the Colony? Yes.

878. Mr. Maclean.] Would you have the articles technically described? Yes.

879. By the names current in the trade? Yes; but I would not make it prohibitory that you should call for a particular maker's goods—say a certain make, or goods equal to that,

880. Would you lay great stress upon the preservation of samples? I do not think that that matters much in our particular line of business.

881. Captain Hixson.] Is there any other suggestion which you can offer to the Board? No, I do not think I could suggest anything more than I have done. Fixed standard prices are always the fairest.

882. Mr. Maclean.] Have you had much experience of that system of tendering? Yes, with the Railway Department.

883. And you thought it more satisfactory? Yes, much more so.

884. You knew better what you were doing? Yes. The different lines of trade should be kept separate in calling for tenders. The Harbours and Rivers Department mix up ship chandlery with ironmongery.

885. You think that the different branches should be carefully separated? Yes. The Stores schedules do not strike me as objectionable in that respect, but there are a great many things which the Government use which are not in those schedules at all.

886. When had you a contract with the Stores Department? More than four or five years ago.

887. If the Government wanted anything which was not in contract, I suppose they used to send round? Yes. I think you would find the percentage system worth a trial—it would ensure that you got your goods at fair prices; many of these are simply ridiculous.

888. Captain Hixson.] Would it be of any benefit to the Government if they called for tenders for a longer period than twelve months? As far as ship chandlery is concerned, I do not think so. There is nothing which cannot be got readily or which requires that any great notice should be given. If the contract is given in June, the contractor ought to be in a position to supply in January. Tenders should be decided six months before the goods have to be delivered.

889. Mr. Maclean.] Because the contractor would have to import? Yes.

890. And six months would do for that? Yes.

891. Captain Hixson.] In your experience have you found that many things were called for which were not in contract? Yes, but nothing very expensive.

892. It would be immaterial whether you delivered the goods at the Government Stores or not? It appears to me that the Government Stores is the proper dépôt at which the contractor should deliver his goods. In the Railway Department they have two contracts, one in which the goods are delivered at Sydney and the other at Newcastle. There is a less percentage taken off in the Newcastle contract than there is in the Sydney contract, to cover the cost of freight.

893. In the event of goods being rejected? Freight back should be charged to the contractor.

894. Mr. Maclean.] Does the percentage system make any extra trouble in keeping the accounts? None whatever.

895. You look upon the present Store contracts as a speculative affair? Yes; if the contractor were compelled to supply goods in many of the lines at the prices named he would lose heavily.

Joseph Barling, Esq., was called in and examined:—

896. Mr. Maclean.] Your name, Mr. Barling? Joseph.

897. You are an officer in the Department of Harbours and Rivers? Yes; I am chief clerk and accountant there.

898. The object of the Board is to devise some improved system of making the Government contracts; and it has been recommended that for the present system of calling for tenders with blank spaces in which the tenderer writes his own price, we should adopt the percentage system, which we understand obtains in the Department of Harbours and Rivers? Yes.

899. It does so obtain? It does.

900. Will you give us such information as you can as to the working of that system, more particularly as compared with the system in use at the Stores Department? Speaking from memory, we introduced the percentage system five or six years ago. Before that we had the system of schedules, in which there were blank spaces for the tenderer to insert his prices, but we did not put in probable quantities. We never did that; and also we never gave the tenderers any information as to the probable quantities we thought we should require, for the simple reason that we could not ourselves form a correct estimate of the quantities we might need. As an illustration of the difficulty to which I refer, I may mention our contract for cement. After that contract has been signed, Parliament may order a work to be carried out which may cause an additional demand for several thousands of casks of cement more than we could have anticipated. In regard to many other articles the same principle would obtain in a less or greater degree. About five or six years ago we adopted the plan of fixing a schedule of rates, and leaving the tenderers to offer to supply at par or at a percentage above or below the rates named in the schedule, and we have found that plan work exceedingly well. We give no probable quantities in this case either. We revise our schedules every year, and we endeavour as nearly as possible to give the correct market prices. Of course the market price in some things is fluctuating and problematical, but as a general rule we can hit it pretty well.

901. Captain Hixson.] But suppose you did not get the exact market price, your system would not be faulty? Yes; that would be the case, because if we put one article down at a rate above or below the fair market price, a general percentage upon the whole schedule could not be given, or it would be wrong.

902. Mr. Maclean.] It could be given by calculation? If you had the quantities given that would rectify it. As far as the prices are concerned it is of the highest importance that the rates should be relatively right. It does not matter if the schedule prices are above or below the market prices so long as they are consistent, that is to say uniformly above or uniformly below those prices, because the percentage has to be fixed upon the whole. It is exceedingly important that the schedule should be properly made out every year, and when that is done I do not see how any system of roguery, so far as the prices are concerned, can take place.

903. Do you not think that the omission of any information in regard to probable quantities must put new tenderers at a great disadvantage? I have no doubt to a certain extent it does so, but this is simply a risk which, in some shape or other, is incidental to all contracts. Still, at the same time experience, as in the case of old contractors, will of necessity put its possessor advantageously with regard to new ones; and I do not see how you can introduce any system by which the value of experience will be rendered nugatory. It could not be an advantage if we could give the probable quantities accurately, but it is almost impossible for us to do that.

904. Have your tenderers or contractors ever made it a matter of complaint or a grievance that there is no such information for their guidance? I do not remember that they have.

905. The plan of naming fixed quantities has been very strongly recommended to the Board? I dare say that would be very convenient to the contractor, but we could not give it with any accuracy as far as our department is concerned.

906. Captain Hixson.] I suppose the articles which you require can generally be had in the market? Generally.

907. They have not to be specially imported for the Government? No.

908. Mr. Maclean.] Do you obtain your supplies through the Stores? No; we requisition direct for them on our contractors. Here are the forms of requisition for stores from the masters of the dredges or other officers to the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, which has to be approved by him, and this is the form of order we send to the contractor, retaining a duplicate of it in the office.

909. Have you a central store? Yes, at the Fitzroy Dock; but then the stores sent there are merely for use in the works carried out there.

910. You make that your dépôt? In certain cases only.

911. Do you find that it gives rise to any delay? No, there would be delay if we were to adopt any other form.

912. You mostly carry out repairs at the dock? Yes, that is our principal work at the dock. As far as private vessels or ships of war are concerned we merely dock them—we do not repair them.

913. If the schedules were carefully prepared and fixed quantities were named, it would not matter whether the tender was decided by computation or by the percentage rate? I do not think it would. In either case it would be easy to determine who was the lowest tenderer.

914. Still you think that the percentage system is better? Far better than the Stores system.

915. Captain Hixson.] As the result of your not naming any quantities in your schedule, have you ever found that the contractor has not been able to supply when called upon for the articles? Now and then, but nothing very serious.

916. Mr. Maclean.] Do you generally find that the same persons contract? Yes; Keep, Cohen, Cary, Drysdale and Roberts, and Mort, I think are the principal.

917. I suppose they know what you require pretty nearly as well as you do yourselves? Well, I suppose they do. These are the principal contractors. I do not think that any small contractors could take up our contracts.

918. Captain Hixson.] Do you ever have any complaints from the out-stations that the contractors do not comply promptly with your requisitions? Sometimes, but I do not think it is of very serious import.

919. Mr. Maclean.] Do you sometimes find that stores which you may require have been omitted from your schedule? Occasionally.

920. How do you do in such a case? We purchase at the cheapest rate we can in the open market.

921. You do not call upon the contractor to furnish it? No; we get it where we can buy the cheapest. We have an officer in our branch part of whose special business it is to look after that. We know pretty well the values from the prices in the office, and the check clerk, who has had long experience, would see at once if there were anything wrong.

922. He might buy from the contractor? Yes, if he finds it best to do so, but the contractor has no claim to supply—no such claim is recognized in any way. The system which we have adopted, and which I believe the Railway Department and the Colonial Architect's Department adopted before we did, would, in my opinion, be very much improved if a Board were to sit once a year for the purpose of revising the schedules for the whole service.

923. All the schedules? Yes; you must still have separate contracts for the departments. In the Railway I suppose that would be essential. I think such a Board would give the Government the benefit of the experience of a large number of officers; and the great importance of having the schedules correctly and uniformly prepared would be secured. I think the members of such a Board ought to have the power to call in experts conversant with particular trades. By their help I think an almost faultless schedule could be prepared. As it is now, the Government may be giving different prices for the same articles, which seems an absurdity, and which the system I have ventured to recommend would I think obviate.

924. Would you have that done yearly? I think it ought to be done yearly. The rise and fall in prices are not uniform, and it is of the greatest importance that the schedule prices should be kept uniform.

925. Captain Hixson.] Suppose the schedule not to be in conformity with market prices, would that make the system faulty? I think it would, because you could not have a general percentage then—that would upset the whole thing.

926. Would not the contractor be competent to deal with a badly prepared schedule? He could not do it, unless he could forecast the requirements of the Government.

927. But it would not interfere with the principle of the system? I think it would very materially interfere with it. If we put one article down at the market price, another above the market price, and another below it, how can a general percentage applicable to all three be given. The incidence of such a percentage must be wrong, and the contractor could not possibly rectify it unless he knew the quantities.

928. Mr. Maclean.] If the quantities were fixed it would be immaterial? Yes.

929. The percentage system stands better without probable or fixed quantities? Yes.

930. In regard to articles which have to be specially imported, a special schedule could be made up for them and the quantities be fixed? That would depend upon whether the Storekeeper could forecast what the requirements could be. In our department that would be impossible. Our schedules are of a general character, and I do not think you could take a single article and say how much of it you would require. A dredge might break down, for instance, and upset all your calculations. It is the practice in England, I believe, for the masters to make a fixed list, similar to what we are doing, and then the percentage is given above or below. The Sheffield price list is generally about 42 per cent. above the net value, and sometimes that list stands for twenty or thirty years without alteration; but it is essential to the success of our plan that the schedule should be revised every year. The Sheffield list is of a fixed definite character, but ours ranges over every marketable commodity almost.

931. Do you divide your schedules? Yes, we have schedules for ironmongery, ship-chandlery, plate, bar iron, steel, &c., oils and paints, engineers' stores, building materials, and castings. By dividing up our contracts in that way, it gives a better chance to a large number of contractors. The Engineer-in-Chief has been very particular on this point, so as to give every one a fair chance.

932. When you do not give the probable quantities, would you give the intending tenderer every information? We should be very careful indeed in telling our requirements. We make it a practice not to give information; otherwise, as in the case of the cement, we might mislead a contractor, and if we came to demand 1,000 barrels in a rising market, instead of a hundred, anything we may have told the contractor would tell against us.

J. Barling,
Esq.
13 Aug., 1879.

933. If the quantities could be positively fixed it would be an advantage? To the contractor, no doubt.

934. And lead to your getting lower tenders? It might have that effect, but, as I have before explained, in the event of our exceeding the given probable quantities, a precisely opposite result would very likely ensue. I may mention that we divide our tenders up between Sydney and the Hunter River. At Sydney the contractors deliver to the dredges, or at the Fitzroy Dock. The goods for Hunter River delivery are tendered for at a little higher rate of per-centage; for all other parts of the Colony we pay the freight.

935. Say to the Clarence River? Yes.

936. Captain Hixson.] The contractor ships them for you? Yes, and he attaches the shipping notes to the vouchers, and adds on the freight.

937. Can you tell us in round numbers the total cost of your stores? I have not made it up.

938. Would it be £10,000 or £15,000 do you think? Quite that, I think.

THURSDAY, 14 AUGUST, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

Major Baynes was called in and examined:—

939. Mr. Maclean.] Your name, if you please? Thomas Baynes.

940. You are a Major in the Permanent Force? Major on the Staff of the Permanent Force.

941. You have had something to do with provisioning of the Forces here? Yes.

942. And you are generally a member of the Tender Board? Yes.

943. With regard to the supplies for the Force, have you generally been satisfied with the present system of obtaining tenders for provisions? Yes, with some exceptions.

944. Could you suggest any better mode of inviting tenders? No, I do not think so.

945. You think the system works well as it is? Yes.

946. You take your provisions in kind with a price to each article? Yes.

947. Captain Hixson.] Do you think that mode preferable to calling for tenders in rations? I have not considered the subject. There is a delay sometimes at present, and occasionally owing to bad weather the men at the South Head have had to wait till 9 o'clock to get their bread and meat for breakfast.

948. That is an irregularity in detail rather than any fault in the system? Yes.

949. Mr. Maclean.] I suppose your ration for each man is made up of the various articles included in the general list? Yes.

950. Would it be an improvement to take the supplies in the form of rations? I think we are satisfied with it as it stands. I have no reason to complain personally, and I have heard no complaints. Rations have occasionally been bad, and when that has been the case we have condemned them and purchased others at the contractor's expense. I think if the bread, meat, and groceries were tendered for in separate contracts it might be better; that used to be the practice some years ago.

951. Then you would have three contractors to deal with instead of one? Yes.

952. Did you find that act better? I think the men were better supplied all round. We have had no fault to find with the way in which Mr. Kidman has latterly been supplying under his contracts.

953. Captain Hixson.] Do you think that the present system of obtaining supplies for the troops is surrounded with sufficient power to enable you to force the contractor to supply satisfactorily? Yes, because if the supplies are bad we can reject them, purchase others, and charge the contractor with the cost.

954. Do you think that the Government get the best terms under the existing system—that the troops are fed as cheaply as can be reasonably expected consistently with a proper supply? Yes, the contractor is getting a fair market price, but nothing beyond that. I do not know how he can supply tea and coffee for the price he does.

955. What are his prices? 3½d. a lb. for beef and mutton, and 1s. 3d. for the best tea. We insist on having the best tea, and send it back repeatedly.

956. The only anomaly in the contract to your mind is the cheap rate at which the contractor supplies the tea? Yes. He gets a fair price for everything else. Perhaps he makes one thing pay for the other.

957. Do you remember how many people tendered for the contract? I think only Mr. Kidman. I believe there were one or two other tenders, but that they were informal.

958. How many men do you feed at present? About 300 rations a day.

959. Mr. Maclean.] Would you see any difficulty in putting your supplies into rations, that is to say, so much bread, so much beef, so much salt, and so on, to count as a ration, leaving the extras to be dealt with separately? We could do that. There is butter and bacon down in the contract, which they get for breakfast.

960. Captain Hixson.] You would, in that case, call for tenders for so many rations, instead of for the articles in detail? Then the contractor would have to supply daily. The married people receive their allowance of tea and sugar weekly, and their bread and meat every second day.

961. Mr. Maclean.] Is there any reason why that system should be followed, if the ration system were cheaper—if more advantageous contracts could be obtained under it? The hospital must be considered.

962. The hospital is dealt with separately in other Government establishments. Could not the married people's rations be issued daily as well as the others? It is such a small amount; it would take a couple of men nearly all day to weigh the rations out.

963. What proportion of your men are married? Twelve per cent.

Major
Baynes.
14 Aug., 1879.

Major
Baynes.

14 Aug., 1879.

964. The married people and the hospital requirements might be dealt with separately, that is under the schedule, while the rest were dealt with as rations? The single men receive their ration daily.
965. If the Government wish to bring the supplies into the form of tenders for rations that could be done? Yes.
966. Could you give us any information about the clothing contract? The clothing is tendered for annually, but the plan adopted does not give the tradesmen a fair chance, and half the year is gone before we can get the goods made up. Tenders ought to be called for at an earlier date, and the contract ought to be for two or three years.
967. How long before the clothing has to be delivered should tenders be called? The clothing should be delivered and fitted ready to be worn by the men on the 1st of May. I suppose it takes six months to send home for the things. The tender should be accepted six months at least before the supply is required.
968. You have suffered inconvenience from the delay? Yes, under every contractor. I believe it is not the fault of the contractors, for we know that they have to send home for the things required.
969. Captain Hixson.] You have a certain number of uniforms ordered from the contractor, and you take them into your barrack store? Yes.
970. You fit them? No, they are fitted by the contractor. When the officer in command of each battery is satisfied with the uniforms we pay for them and not before.
971. The contractor measures each individual man? Yes. It would be a better plan if the clothing were got out from Europe ready made.
972. Would you get it cheaper? Yes; but then we should want a master tailor in constant pay. He would have to be a sergeant and be clothed, rationed, and paid at the rate of 4s. 6d. a day.
973. With the small number of men you have that would not be worth while? No. The present system does not work very badly, and would be a very good one if the contractor had a longer time allowed in which to get out the material. The contractor who got the order for the clothing for the Volunteers sent home for so many thousand yards of serge, and although it was all made at the same place, there were no two pieces of the same shade—when they were shrunk they came out a different shade from the pattern altogether.
974. Mr. Maclean.] Do you get your clothing through the Government Stores? No; Moore, Henderson, & Bowcher have the contract for it, and we give orders upon them. We get the clothing roll from the officer commanding each battery, and it is paid for under the military vote.
975. But the contract is called for from the Treasury? Yes; when it is notified that a tender has been accepted, we send on the clothing rolls to the contractor, each man's size and measurement being on the roll. When the clothing is delivered to the batteries, a tailor is sent to mark out the alterations required. More notice is wanted before the contractor has to supply.
976. Captain Hixson.] Who are the contractors? Moore, Henderson, & Bowcher for the Volunteers, and a man named Nicholson for the Permanent Force.
977. Mr. Maclean.] I suppose you supply Volunteers with rations when they are in the field? Yes; that comes out of a special vote, and we make a private contract for it.
978. If you are inconvenienced, it is from the fact of the contractor not having the material in the country? Yes.
979. If it is available it is supplied promptly? Yes; we have had no complaints of any consequence.

FRIDAY, 5 SEPTEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR, | CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,
HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR IN THE CHAIR.

James Kidman, Esq., was called in and examined:—

J. Kidman,
Esq.

5 Sept., 1879.

980. Chairman.] What is your name? James Kidman.
981. You are a large contractor for supplies to the Public Service? Yes.
982. The object of the Board is to ascertain whether any improvement can be made upon the existing method of contracting, and the Board will be very glad to take any suggestions you may be able to offer? Yes.
983. Mr. Maclean.] Your contracts are chiefly for provisions, are they not? Yes.
984. And you have had the provision contracts for some years, have you not? Yes.
985. With a view to improve the present system of tendering, we have invited different contractors to attend here, and as you are the principal provision contractor we have thought it well to ask you if you can give us any suggestions which will be advantageous to the Government? Yes.
986. Do you think the present system of calling for tenders as well devised as it can be? I do not know of any suggestion which I can offer.
987. Perhaps you are aware that remarks have been made publicly and in Parliament about the very anomalous prices of different articles which appear in your contracts? Yes.
988. Very different prices for the same article in different contracts which you have made for the same year? Yes, I have read of it in the Herald.
989. One of the witnesses examined before the Board has directed our attention to the fact that in your contract for Darlinghurst Gaol you have put lime-juice down at 6d. per gallon, while for Biloela you have put it down at 1d., and for Gladesville and Callan Park at 1s. Can you inform the Board as to how you came to tender at those different prices for the same article? I am only too happy to supply any article at the prices named in my tender.
990. The difference in the price of the same article gives the impression that things are in a very confused state? Whatever the price my tender is accepted at I am prepared to supply the article.
991. Do you regard your tender more as a whole than in reference to particular items? Decidedly.

992. Attention has been called to the circumstance that fresh beef, salt beef, and salt pork are supplied to Darlinghurst Gaol at  $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb., and that for Biloela fresh beef is  $4\frac{1}{2}$ d., salt beef 1d., salt pork 1d., and fresh mutton  $4\frac{1}{2}$ d. Can you explain how it is that you can supply fresh meat to Darlinghurst at  $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb.—you require  $4\frac{1}{2}$ d. for it when you supply it to Biloela? I have an advantage in supplying goods to Darlinghurst Gaol because my place is so near to it.
993. That would not enable you to supply beef at  $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb.? I will supply whatever is ordered at that rate.
994. You are doing it, but we want to know how it is that you can do it? ———
995. We have been recommended to place the Sydney establishments all under one contract? You could not very well have an establishment like Biloela brought under the same contract as Darlinghurst Gaol.
996. The suggestion is, that all establishments in the metropolitan district should be included in one tender? Yes.
997. Do you see any objection to that? No.
998. Referring to the smallness of your charge for beef supplied to Darlinghurst Gaol, might it be that your contract is really governed by the number of rations you supply, and that only a small quantity of beef is required for the hospital there? I supply all the Sydney establishments at the same price, at  $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb.
999. But you do not supply the troops for that? They do not come under that contract.
1000. You do not supply Biloela for that? It does not come under the same contract.
1001. Is this small price for beef attributable to the circumstance that your chief supply to Darlinghurst Gaol is in the form of rations? It is because of the large quantity of goods consumed under that contract. I supply all the immigrants with meat at  $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and the Lunatic Receiving House, and also the "Vernon." I supply them, but I may tell you I lose a great deal by it.
1002. In your contract for Darlinghurst Gaol you get 5d. per ration, which includes meat, bread, and everything else? I do not think it is so much as that.
1003. Your principal supply of meat would be in that form? The immigrants often take quite as much as they do in Darlinghurst Gaol.
1004. But that supply is only temporary? For the last year or two there has been a constant stream of immigrants coming in.
1005. It has been proposed that in future all supplies required for the Government shall be tendered for upon a schedule in which the Government names what is thought to be the fair market rate in the schedule, and the contractor then tenders at a percentage above or below that. That has been proposed in place of the present system, wherein the tenderer fills up the blank in the schedules by naming the prices against each article at which he is prepared to supply. How do you think that would work? It would be quite immaterial to me so far as tendering is concerned, but I should think the present plan would be better for the Government than the percentage system.
1006. In what way? Because the prices of groceries, and especially of meat, bread, meal, &c., fluctuate so much.
1007. In either system the tenderer makes his calculation and takes his risk? I do not see that it would make much difference.
1008. You would as willingly tender in one way as the other? Decidedly; in fact, if anything, I would prefer that the Government should state the market price.
1009. And you would supply at  $2\frac{1}{2}$  discount say, or 5 per cent. premium on the price stated, as the case might be? Yes, as far as the total contract was concerned; that would make no actual difference in my calculations.
1010. And you think if all the metropolitan establishments were put under one head it would be an advantage? I do not think it would work satisfactorily—I am confident it would not. Take the Permanent Military Force for example. If they thought they were supplied under the same conditions as the penal establishments they would be dissatisfied with everything the contractors sent them.
1011. Then you think that the plan of calling for separate tenders would be better left as it is? As far as the provision contracts are concerned, decidedly I do. It is only five or six years since the Permanent Military Force were under the Darlinghurst Gaol contract, and they were always dissatisfied.
1012. You would as soon supply by rations as per lb.? Yes; it would make no difference. Whatever is ordered I am willing to supply; and I never object to supply any articles at the prices I have named, no matter what I lose by it. I have sometimes had to supply articles at 2s. 6d. which may have cost me pounds.
1013. Why did you put the article in at that unsuitable price? Simply because I take the contract as a whole.
1014. You know that it is computed as a whole? I do not know how it is computed; I rely on my own calculations.
1015. You are satisfied with your own calculations? Quite so.

L. I. Brennand, Esq., was called in and further examined:—

1016. Mr. Maclean.] We have had several changes suggested in our mode of calling for contracts, on part of which you have given evidence. It has been proposed that fixed quantities should be substituted for probable quantities, and that no quantities should be stated at all. Do you think that a schedule could be prepared which would include all articles which are peculiar to the Government Service, articles which have to be imported expressly for the Government, and which the Government do not use,—articles, for instance, such as clothing for uniforms? Certainly it would.

1017. Having prepared such a schedule, how do you think it would answer to make contracts for fixed quantities of those articles so arranged that if the Government received more than they wanted in one year they could reduce their orders for the next: do you think that would be a good plan? Certainly I do.

1018. And as to other articles, do you still think it would be desirable to retain probable quantities or not? The insertion of the probable quantities is merely for the information of new contractors. If you do not give that information they would fancy that some favouritism was shown.

1019. If probable quantities were named, would you have it distinctly stated that they were put in merely for information, and in no way binding? Yes.

L. I.
Brennand
Esq.
5 Sept., 1879.

L. I.
Brennand,
Esq.
5 Sept., 1879.

1020. Why should there be probable quantities named for things which can be obtained in the local market at any time? With the exception of the ironmongery and one or two other contracts, most of the goods which are required can be obtained in the local market.

1021. If the Government requirements were classified, articles required specially for the Government being placed on a separate schedule, would there be any necessity to name probable quantities in regard to the rest of the supplies which are obtainable in the local market? No, I think not, because we could send out and buy them at any time.

1022. In accepting contracts for articles which have to be imported, do you think that sufficient time has been allowed to the contractor for their importation? The contractors generally have about six months, and I think that is quite sufficient time.

1023. Would there be any difficulty in extending the time to nine months? Not the slightest.

1024. Do you approve of the present system in appointing special Boards of not allowing the contractor to be represented in cases of dispute? The contractors I should fancy should be in attendance, but not present.

1025. I am speaking of their being represented by arbitrators on Boards of Survey? My impression is that the officers of the Government principally interested should decide the matter.

1026. That the contractor should not be represented? No.

1027. But you would allow him the right to make representations on the matter? Yes. The officers of the Government appointed to such Boards have always at command the information necessary to enable them to deal with disputed questions.

1028. It has been recommended that a much more elaborate system of samples should be kept and locked up in charge of the Superintendent of Stores? The samples are now under my own lock and key.

1029. Witnesses have represented that there has not been so complete a set of samples as there might be, and that great improvement might be made in that direction. One witness has said, "The samples at present in the store-room are old and defective, and it appears to me not in sufficiently safe-keeping. I think they ought to be kept under lock and key by the head of the department. Samples are now frequently removed and lost, and when they are forwarded to the Prisons Department, or handed over to contractors temporarily, the record as regards where they have gone is not sufficiently accurate. They are lost in that way. It appears to me that the question of samples is a very important one, and that every article of which a sample can be secured should be secured and at hand. I have found that where samples have been lodged I have been better served than where no samples have been lodged. I think that the samples should be looked over every year, and renewed or modified. I think also that it may be desirable that certain material issued to certain departments should have a particular thread run through them, something like the Navy thread." You have heard me read Dr. Manning's evidence on the question of samples—have you any remark to make upon it? I wish to say that I have taken the greatest care to keep the samples under lock and key, and I cannot remember any case where samples have been allowed to be issued from the Stores Department to a contractor. Dr. Manning requested me two or three years ago to give him duplicate samples, and I now forward all supplies for the service of the department under him, trusting to his department to make the comparison of the supplies with those samples.

1030. Do I understand you to say that there are samples in his possession for all the articles required by him? Yes.

1031. Do you think that the arrangements with regard to samples are quite sufficient? I do.

1032. It has been proposed that samples shall be hung up and laid out on shelves, that there shall be a separate room and a very complete collection of samples. Do you think that any improvement can be made on the present system of samples? I do not think so. The samples selected are initialled by the contractors.

1033. That is the case now? Yes, and has been so for years.

1034. We have been informed that that system has been discontinued? No. We have a ticket put upon each garment or article, and the contractor initials it.

1035. It has been suggested that there should be a double seal, one initialled by the contractor, and the other a Treasury seal, so as to obviate the possibility of any suspicion that the sample can be changed? It would be just as well to prevent any possible suspicion.

1036. Captain Hixson.] Have you ever known a case where goods have been thrown back upon a contractor's hands because they were not up to sample, and a case where the plea of the contractor was that the sample had been changed in the interval between the signing of the contract and the date of supply? Most decidedly not.

1037. Mr. Maclean.] What do you say to the proposal to have goods marked with a particular thread, as in the case of Navy sheeting? I think that it would be a very good thing indeed; and that the samples of articles such as rope and canvas should be first approved by the President of the Marine Board before tenders are called for them.

1038. And you think it desirable that such a distinctive mark should be introduced wherever the proposal is applicable? Yes, decidedly.

1039. Dr. Manning in his evidence before the Board says, "I think the present arrangement a bad one by which the Stores Department insists in some instances of articles not in contract being supplied by the contractors. I cannot get orders given to me on any but contractors. The contractors go to the Superintendent of Stores and make it a matter of complaint if preference is not given to them. Two instances of what I refer to occur to my mind at this moment. I required some brushes, and I ascertained that Mr. Cohen, the contractor, had none of the kind I wanted, and I then asked Mr. Brennand to give me an order on some one else. He preferred giving it to me on Mr. Cohen, as he was the contractor. Mr. Cohen wanted to charge 7s. 6d. for the article, but on my remonstrance he charged 6s. I went the next day and bought brushes exactly like them at Mr. Sandy's for 4s., and I could have gone there originally and bought them at that price. These articles were not in contract, and upon articles not in contract, as it appears to me, the contractors make a very large profit." Have you any remark to make upon that portion of the evidence? In regard to articles not in contract required for any department of the Public Service I have been always most anxious to allow officers requiring them to make their purchases at the most reasonable rates.

1040. Captain Hixson.] Do you not impose any conditions upon them, such as that they are to get the goods from the contractor in that line of business if they can? Not at all.

1041. Mr. Maclean.] You say that you do not require articles to be obtained from the contractor? Yes.

1042. You must be aware that there is a general impression that the contractor is the right person to whom to go? If the contractor will supply the goods at the same rate as they can be bought for elsewhere we give the order on the contractor.

1043. Captain Hixson.] As a matter of convenience the contractor is often chosen? Yes; but I have over and over again given Mr. Betts, an officer in Dr. Manning's department, orders to get goods from Prince, Ogg, & Co., or anywhere else he liked.

1044. Dr. Manning says—"The second case was one in which some marcella, which could have been bought at Prince, Ogg's for 1s. 10d., and we had to pay Mr. Nicholson, who had the contract, 2s. 9d. for it. The marcella was not in contract, but it was part of the attendants' clothing, which he insisted it was his right to supply. When he found that Mr. Brennand was going to order it somewhere else he said that it was part of his contract?" Dr. Manning is wrong there. It was ordered at Prince, Ogg's.

1045. Captain Hixson.] Do you find that contractors claim the right to supply articles not in contract? They think that all orders for their class of goods ought to be given to them; but at the same time they have no right to charge more than a fair price for them.

1046. Mr. Maclean.] Have you given all the evidence you can with reference to a better mode of dispatching goods? I have nothing more to add upon that point.

1047. And you have given all the evidence you can about the preparation of the schedules and the arrangements for keeping samples? Yes.

1048. It has been strongly recommended to the Board that the Stores should be made a depôt for the receipt and dispatch of goods to the public departments, and that no supplies whatever should be made direct to those departments by the contractors. It has been suggested that contracts should be given for the supply of fixed quantities, and that delivery of the goods should be made in bulk half-yearly or quarterly, as might be found most convenient; that you should receive all these goods into the Stores, and that when a miscellaneous requisition comes to you, instead of sending round orders to the contractors you should simply go to the different departments of your own Stores, select the goods required, and so satisfy the requisition without reference to the contractors. Do you think there would be any difficulty in working out that system? There would be no difficulty whatever, and I think that the check upon the character of the supplies by the contractors would be more perfect than it is at present.

1049. That is in regard to quality? Yes; by having an officer down at the Stores to compare the goods received with the samples.

1050. Would your present Stores afford room for this to be done? They would.

1051. Would it entail much more work upon your present staff? No.

1052. Captain Hixson.] Under the proposed system orders upon the contractors would be dispensed with, and the supplies would have to be received at the Stores in bulk? All the supplies for the country come into the Stores at the present time, and the supplies for the town are comparatively small.

1053. It would be necessary that provision should be made for the reception at the Stores for supplies in large quantities, and the requisitions from the departments would have to be met by your drawing from the goods you had in stock? Now the whole of the country supplies come into the Stores, and what we issue for the town is as nothing at all.

1054. You would have to store a year's supply at the same time? There is plenty of store room. I could manage that well enough.

1055. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that method of doing the business would be an improvement? I think that all the supplies should come into the Stores. I would not give an order for the full supply.

1056. What has been recommended to us is that the contractor should deliver his goods at the Stores four times a year? Perhaps before I answer further you will give me a little time for consideration, and allow me to send in my answer to you in writing.

1057. Captain Hixson.] Under the proposed system of making the store a depôt, would you require more assistance than at present? I do not think so.

1058. Mr. Maclean.] And you think you would have sufficient storage room? I think so. We are going to have a large shed put up in the yard.

1059. And you think that it would not involve the necessity of your getting further assistance? No, not beyond what I already have; but perhaps you will allow me to consider this question also, and to send you in my answer in writing.

1060. If the plan now referred to were adopted, exception would have to be made of such articles as are liable to deteriorate by storage. Would you make any exceptions, say in regard to cloth for example? It would not be well to receive perishable articles, such as clothing for the prisons, which I issue to the several gaolers with the request that they will pay particular attention to the preservation of the goods.

1061. Captain Hixson.] And would recommend that articles should be kept in stock which are very seldom required, weighing-machines for example? I would prefer not to have such articles in the store.

1062. Mr. Maclean.] Do you think that the system of making the Store a depôt would be more applicable to articles which have to be obtained specially for the Government, and which would be included in a particular schedule, than to general supplies? Yes, so long as they were not perishable.

1063. It would be more applicable to them than to the whole bulk of the supplies? I think so.

1064. Perhaps you will look over this printed paper (Appendix A) showing the system which obtains in England, and furnish any information you desire in regard to it? Yes. I will do so in writing. (See Appendix B).

WEDNESDAY, 22 OCTOBER, 1879.

Present:—

THE HON. GEOFFREY EAGAR,

CAPTAIN HIXSON, R.N.,

HAROLD MACLEAN, Esq.

The Chairman brought up the Draft Report on matters relating to the second and concluding part of the inquiry. It was adopted, and the Chairman was desired to forward it, with the Minutes of Evidence, to the Hon. the Colonial Treasurer.

The Board then adjourned sine die.

INQUIRY INTO THE GOVERNMENT STORES DEPARTMENT.

APPENDIX.

(Extracted from Report of the House of Commons on Public Departments (Purchases, &c.), dated 3rd July, 1874.)

THE suggestion has been offered to concentrate the entire direction and arrangement of the contracts and purchases for the various public departments in the hands of one officer. To this proposal there are many grave objections, and, in the opinion of the Committee, all the practical advantages to be gained from such a concentration would follow if the heads of the several purchasing departments were to consult more frequently with each other. Evidence has been given that a partial consultation is not unfrequent, but it is informal and irregular. The Committee are of opinion that if the chief purchasing officers were to meet at stated intervals—say, at least twice a year—under the authority of the Treasury, all danger of different Government departments competing against each other in the same market would be obviated, and all the advantages of co-operation insured.

The Committee are further of opinion that all the stores and supplies required for a particular department should be purchased, as far as is practicable and convenient, through one officer; that such officer should be in direct and immediate communication with the financial authority who represents the department in the House of Commons. The changes which have been made in this direction at the Admiralty within the last few years meet with the approval of the Committee, and, from the evidence submitted, appear to have given satisfaction to the department, while they have conduced both to efficiency and economy.

The modes of purchase acted upon by the chief officers of the several departments may be thus classified:—

- BY OPEN TENDER—
- BY LIMITED TENDER—
- BY BROKER—
- BY PRIVATE PURCHASE.

The evidence laid before the Committee makes it clear to them that it would be unwise to restrict the purchasing officer of a department to any one of these modes to the exclusion of the others. In all cases where the circumstances will admit of it, public tender is the best and safest mode of buying, but the Committee are not prepared to recommend any restriction upon the discretion of the heads of the purchasing departments. To enable them to buy with the fullest advantage they must, within certain limits, be left untrammelled, and so enabled to make their purchases in conformity with the recognized commercial rules and customs which obtain in the particular market which they may enter.

The paramount importance of obtaining supplies for Her Majesty's Government, of good and uniform quality in certain cases, may render the purchasing of them by limited tender—that is to say, by competition between certain competent firms—the best and most convenient form. This is more especially so where the articles required are of a special character. So long as admission to this list of contractors may be readily obtained by firms qualified to compete (and every facility and encouragement should be given to such firms to place themselves on the list), your Committee are of opinion that no exception can be taken to the system.

The practice of purchasing privately does not prevail to any great extent in any department. The purchasing officers appear to be aware of the danger of indulging in it when it is not necessary; but to prohibit it absolutely, under all circumstances, your Committee would deem to be unwise.

Your Committee, therefore, are prepared to recommend that the heads of the various purchasing departments should be allowed to exercise considerable discretion in respect to buying. Their responsibility should, at the same time, be made clear and explicit, and this, your Committee conceive, would be best attained by requiring that each department should take and re-value their stock annually, and submit an abstract, with the Estimates, to the House of Commons.

The Committee further recommend the following suggestions, in respect to purchasing by contract, to the consideration of the officers in each department charged with this duty:—

- First. All patterns should, as far as practicable, be assimilated to the manufactured goods of the same class current in the market.
- Second. The terms and conditions of a contract, and of the schedules attached, should be brief and explicit, and in all cases such contracts should contain a provision giving either buyer or seller the option of arbitration. The imposition of penalties and fines, other than by buying in default, should be discouraged.

B.

The Superintendent of Stores to The President Store Board, Treasury.

9 September, 1879.

Sir,

I have carefully perused the enclosed document which was handed to me by the Board on Friday last, and beg now, in compliance with the request of the Board, to offer what few remarks I have to make upon it.

With reference to the first paragraph I quite agree with its tenor, to allow one officer the entire direction and arrangement of the contracts and purchases uncontrolled would be highly objectionable. In the first place it would put into his hands too great a power, and in the second place it would lead, not necessarily but naturally, to suspicion on the part of disappointed tenderers of unfair dealings. It is of course very desirable that this should be avoided if possible. It is stated that a consultation should be held frequently between the Heads of the purchasing Departments. The spirit of this this suggestion is carried out under our present system. In inviting any tender the heads of the various Departments requiring the principal portion of the goods included in the schedule are consulted, and any alteration that may be considered advantageous both as to probable quantities or designation of the articles adopted. I think I have explained this in my evidence.

With reference to Clause No. 2 I do not think the suggestion advisable. If orders are to be given by more than one officer, articles may be demanded which are not in accordance with samples, and there would be the possibility of the Government paying for goods which were not equal to the "sealed sample." The present practice of delivering all Town Services direct to the Departments is objectionable. I am of opinion they should all be received at the "Stores," a proper examination and comparison with samples by a Board be made and then distributed. Officers who now receive cannot possibly know whether the proper articles have been delivered, and there is room for fraud.

Clause No. 3.—The safest manner of procuring the principal supplies is unquestionably by "public tender." Of course there are some small lines involving an expenditure of a few pounds, say £3 or £4, that it would be absurd to call public tenders for.

Clause No. 4.—My remarks upon Clause No. 3, I think, explain my views upon this.

Clause No. 5.—There can be no objection to this form of tendering for articles not exceeding an expenditure of (say) £10 to £20. In fact in this Department such a system already exists. A printed form is furnished to the principal houses, and tenders requested. They are placed in schedule and the lowest offer accepted.

Clause 6.—The practice of purchasing privately does not prevail with reference to this Department, as every endeavour is made to procure goods by either of the two modes referred to above.

Clause 7.—I might state that every year the stock is taken, since the Chief Inspector of Accounts instituted the new regulations, and a revalue of goods made. With respect to the two concluding suggestions, I can only say that they meet with my approval, and have hitherto been most carefully carried out. The imposition of fines should be, as stated, discouraged.

I have, &c.,

L. I. BRENNAND,

Superintendent of Stores.

Memorandum by The Secretary for Lands for The Under Secretary.

I WISH Mr. Oliver to make a thorough inspection of all the books, official documents, &c., in the Pre-lease Branch, and as I am under the impression that there is a great deal of unnecessary delay in getting through the business of that branch, more especially in the issue of pre-leases, I shall be glad if Mr. Oliver will please give his attention to that part of the duties appertaining thereto.

I incline to the opinion that the system of book-keeping, or the manner in which accounts and records are kept of the payments made as rent for auction and pre-leases is very defective in this particular, viz., that the clerks cannot readily tell any person having business at the Pre-lease Branch, and who may make inquiry how much he may owe as rent, or when his lease terminates. I also think that the work performed by the clerical and survey portion of that branch is not conducted with such uniformity and harmony as to produce prompt results.

Mr. Oliver will be good enough to report to me when he has completed his inspection of this branch. J.H., 23 September, 1879.

Mr. Oliver, 24th September. Register, and send to Mr. Brown.—C.O., 26 September, 1879.

No. 2.

Report by Mr. Inspector Oliver.

The Pre-emptive Lease Branch.

Sir,

Department of Lands, Sydney, 31 October, 1879.

In obedience to the direction of the Minister for Lands, I have duly inspected the books and official documents in the Pre-emptive Lease Branch of this department, and beg to make the following report:—

The arrears of work consist of refunds to be authorized and the adjustment of matters of rental with the Audit Office.

I must observe with reference to the refunds, which I directed to be dealt with without further loss of time, that the delay appears to me unpardonable, many simple cases dating so far back as May last, and only requiring printed forms to be filled up, remaining unacted upon. It would seem that the Audit Office queries have resulted from the inefficient checking of the vouchers furnished by the Land Agents and indefinite and unreliable notations in the lease registers.

With regard to the books, I have to state that they are unsuitable for the purpose intended, and I am only surprised that far greater confusion than at present exists has not arisen from such an irregular system of keeping accounts. The books formerly used in the different Land Offices throughout the Colony were somewhat similar until about two years ago, when I, being convinced of their unsuitability, compiled the books now in use. From experience I am aware that these books have met all requirements, and I do not consider that anything further is necessary for the Pre-emptive Lease Branch. The introduction of a similar form of books, divided into districts, will have a twofold advantage, i.e., they will be suitable for the purpose required, and be in perfect agreement with those kept by the local agents. To the proposed books there should be a general index, which should also be an index of transfers, so that any lease may be found without the slightest trouble, and not as at present, the labour and delay of searching for it, page by page.

Two other books are required, viz., a Refund Book and a Suspense Account Book—the former for the purpose of recording all sums refunded, and the latter all those placed in Suspense Account, showing how they are ultimately disposed of.

The Lease Application Register requires improvement so as to provide columns for the purpose of showing the amount of rent deposited with the application, and care should be always taken to indicate in the remark column of the Lease Register the amount, if any, to the credit of the applicant at the time the lease is notified, in order that it may be applied in part payment of the ensuing year's rent, or refunded if necessary.

Against the record of each application should be noted the result of it, whether refused or granted, and in case of the latter, the folio of the Lease Register quoted. The Lease Application Register should be divided into districts, and the numbers placed upon the applications by the land agents adhered to and retained as the number of the lease, if granted. An objection might be raised to this proposition upon the ground that an application bearing a recent number may be gazetted before one bearing a prior number, but this should not be; the priority of application should ensure priority of notification, and if this were made an unalterable rule of the department it would be of great benefit, and prevent influence being brought to bear to get special cases through, to the disadvantage and delay of others. At present, confusion frequently arises, owing to the departmental and land agents' numbers not agreeing, which would not be the case if they were made identical. Of course it might be argued that both the departmental and land agents' numbers could be used, but I consider it unnecessary, and therefore recommend the course proposed. The fact that all the applications will not be complied with does not affect the proposition, as although at present the lease numbers are complete, when notified, they are very shortly afterwards incomplete, so far as the actual lease is concerned, in consequence of cancellations, and from other causes.

I am of opinion that the question of leases which are not renewed requires consideration, with a view to a notice of the fact being published in the Government Gazette, and when thought desirable, the leases offered at auction. Should this be done, greater promptitude in paying the rents would be ensured, and where the non-renewal of the lease is intentional it will give others an opportunity of obtaining leases

I now observe that provision is made for this being done.—C.O.

This is a matter which certainly requires special attention, and the course recommended in this paragraph should be at once adopted.—W.W.S.

leases where perhaps they would not otherwise apply. There is another point not unworthy of consideration in connection with this matter, which is the number of reductions of rent for pastoral holdings made by the Occupation Branch in consequence of pre-emptive leased lands.

No doubt this land is held under pre-emptive lease at the time the re-appraisal of the run takes place; but what guarantee has the department that the pre-emptive leases which formed the chief basis of the re-appraisal are not immediately afterwards allowed to lapse, and consequently the land reverts to the run rent free.

Not only do I consider that leases which are permitted to lapse should be notified in the Government Gazette, and when deemed advisable offered at auction, but that some arrangement should be arrived at with the Occupation Office to guard against a loss of revenue in the manner pointed out.

The matter of bringing the Lease Branches of Lands and Survey again in close proximity having been decided upon, a separate paper, I need not here refer to the proposed change at any length, beyond stating that the room to which the public are to have access should be fitted with a counter, and the different officers so placed in the rooms to be occupied to insure their working to advantage and with convenience.

I would recommend the transfer of the pre-emptive lease record clerk, records, and registers, to the Pre-emptive Lease branch, with a view to obviate the delay and inconvenience of continual references to the record room at head quarters for information which really ought to be obtainable in the branch. I do not think that any opposition whatever could be offered to this proposal, which it appears to me speaks for itself. It would only require the head of the record room to send the letters, &c., after their being opened to the officer in charge of the Lease Branch.

In separate memoranda I have dealt with the question of the suggested transfer of the lease books to the Treasury, the proposed defining of all leases, and have made a representation as to the abolition of the present system of provisionally gazetted leases, and it now remains for me to remark upon the general management of the branch, and to suggest that which I conceive to be necessary for placing it in a satisfactory position and keeping it so.

It is with regret that I have to state that so far as I have been able to determine from personal observation and inquiry, Mr. Brown, although having been employed in the Pre-emptive Lease Branch for a number of years, and necessarily having acquired a good knowledge of the general work of the branch, has not proved himself prolific in ideas for the improvement of the system upon which the lease business has been conducted. He is deficient in routine, and now lacks that mental and physical power indispensable in the head of a branch of such importance as that over which he presides.

Believing that I am perfectly correct in my conclusions, I am compelled to recommend that for the future the business of the Lease branch should be conducted under close supervision.

At the present moment there is a large amount of work in this branch in connection with the posting of reports of payments of lease rents as well as some hundreds of Audit Office queries to be disposed of. It is absolutely necessary that both should be worked off with the least possible delay, taking precedence as mentioned, for the reason that the posting of payments will in many instances materially assist in the disposal of the queries. With this view, I beg to suggest that Messrs. Salway and Harris be employed after the usual office hours to perform these duties, in addition to giving as much attention thereto during the regular office hours as possible, and I beg to urge that my suggestion be approved of as a necessary primary step towards extricating the branch from its present position. After the posting of the payments and the disposal of the queries there will be the new books and index

The necessity for "close supervision," alluded to here and in the concluding paragraph of this report, point again to the desirability—on many occasions brought by me under the notice of Ministers—of appointing a "chief clerk." It is really impossible, considering the extent and nature of my duties, and the incessant demands on my time and attention, for me to exercise that personal and minute supervision of the different branches in all the matters of detail with which they have to deal, which are without doubt required in such a large and scattered department as this is.—W.W.S., 20 Nov.

to prepare, which will probably be required to be attended to after office hours, being special and unforeseen work, and such as cannot be said to come within the current work of the branch. However, as the preparation of the books and index might possibly be attended to during office hours, after the disposal of the postings and Audit Office queries, I consider no positive direction on this head necessary at present, so long as care is taken that the preparation of them is not unduly delayed.

The duties of each officer of the branch should be definitely defined, and not as at present, each officer entrusted with all classes of work, including writing his own letters, pressing them, despatching them, &c.

While making this statement I do not wish to convey the impression that a change of duties is not desirable occasionally, so as to give the officers an insight into the general business of the branch; yet these changes should not be capricious nor daily.

The head of the branch should, after all papers are registered, direct the action to be taken, and who is to take it, of course observing the general distribution of duties, or submit the cases as may be necessary. He should be sure to see that the record clerk notes each paper to the officer to whom it is sent, no matter whether in or out of the branch, its return to the head of the branch, or transfer to any other officer being also noted. This arrangement is necessary for the expeditious finding of papers when required, and to prevent their being lost.

It should be the duty of one officer to write all letters, and if this work were found to be insufficient to fully employ his time any miscellaneous matters he could attend to should be entrusted to him. Two officers should attend to the lease books and all matters appertaining thereto, including examining and certifying to the correctness of refund vouchers, and examining and noting reports of payment of rent. The lease application register and index, and the preparation of notifications for the Government Gazette, should form the chief duties of another officer. Filling up printed forms, such as refund vouchers, approvals of leases, &c., should be entrusted to two officers, who should also assist in any other duties of a like nature. Pressing and despatching all letters and printed forms should be assigned to a junior officer, who could also be employed in looking up papers if necessary. Between the hours of 11 o'clock and 3 an officer will be required to attend to the public at the counter, and in cases where information cannot be immediately supplied a memo. should be obtained of what is required, and steps taken to procure it as early as possible, a time being fixed for the person seeking it to call again. Some further arrangements will be necessary in the event of the provisional notification of leases being abolished; but

This is also a matter calling for immediate attention.

The abuse herein suggested as likely to occur may not exist to any extent, but it is one which could be prevented by the mode of procedure here suggested.—W.W.S.

See decision on paper 79-5,780, Ministerial.—W.W.S., 20 Nov.

This will no doubt be a great advantage.—W.W.S., 20 Nov.

the foregoing is a general outline of what is necessary. Other minor duties could be distributed as the amount of work falling upon each officer will permit.

In conclusion, I beg to observe that my scheme of reorganization may be rendered nugatory by the manner in which it is carried out, and that in this case, as with other branches of the department, strict supervision is necessary.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES OLIVER,

Inspector.

The Under Secretary for Lands.

I confess that I was not quite prepared to receive a report so entirely condemnatory of the system and mode in which the Lease Branch business has been conducted. As the whole report, however, shows that Mr. Oliver has made a most rigid investigation into all matters connected with the branch, and has taken some trouble in carrying out the duty entrusted to him by the Minister for Lands, I see no other course open to me than to recommend the different alterations proposed and the suggestions contained in the report for the approval of the Minister. If approved, Mr. Oliver, perhaps, should undertake the duty of seeing that the different changes should be promptly initiated and thoroughly carried out.—W.W.S., 20 Nov. I have made one or two marginal notes on matters which appeared to call for comment.—W.W.S., 20 Nov.

No. 3.

Minute by Mr. C. A. Brown to The Secretary for Lands.

BEFORE alluding to the matter more particularly under consideration, I would beg in a few words to draw attention to the fact that Mr. Stephen was in charge of the Lease Branch from the beginning of the year 1867 to the middle of 1870. During this period he frequently referred to me for assistance whenever he got into difficulties, and I as frequently rendered him that assistance, and extricated him from those difficulties, ultimately leading to my taking charge of the Lease Branch, which at that time was in a most indescribable state of confusion and arrears.

It is very apparent that Mr. Oliver takes a great deal more credit to himself than he is at all entitled to. His report may be regarded as a wordy, flimsy, piece of self-aggrandisement, and his total incapacity either to form a judgment with respect to the condition of the Lease Branch, or as to the introduction of any reforms for the future, is clearly evident. This is beyond doubt, from what he has written in that report, as well as from the action which he took during my absence in several cases, and his general mode of procedure while in the Lease Branch.

*See enclosure C.

To show Mr. Oliver's want of loyalty to the service in which he is employed, I enclose a case* in which his friend Mr. Duguid, with whom he is known to be on terms of intimacy, in fact, inseparable, was interested. The action denoted by Mr. Oliver evidently partakes of a piece of favoritism.

I have a very strong impression that there is an understanding between Mr. Stephen and Mr. Oliver, almost amounting to a conspiracy with respect to myself, and this by men whose incapacity with regard to the performance of duties heretofore devolving upon them I am prepared to prove in the clearest manner.

With regard to the insulting remarks towards the close of Mr. Oliver's report, it is merely another phase of his unscrupulous and bare-faced effrontery.

The course which Mr. Oliver has pursued in connection with myself and my branch would be highly discreditable to any honorable man, and if tolerated would ultimately lead to a spirit of insubordination, and a thorough disorganization of the Public Service.

I could desire nothing more than to have an opportunity of meeting Mr. Stephen or Mr. Oliver, or both, before two or three or more impartial persons, for as to Mr. Stephen no Minister ever thought of consulting him in regard to lease matters, and I am convinced had either Mr. Fitzpatrick or Mr. Moriarty remained Under Secretary, such a man as Mr. Oliver would never have been permitted to enter the Lease Branch. C.A.B., 22/11/79.

I regret that Mr. Brown should have written such an ill-advised memo. as the above, which is I think the most insulting and uncalled-for minute I have ever seen addressed by any officer to the head of his department. I shall not descend to take any notice of the statements with regard to myself, but I must submit that unless Mr. Brown immediately withdraws his minute and makes a full apology for his conduct in writing it, he should be suspended, and I believe that I am taking an exceptionally lenient course in proposing any condition whatever.—W.W.S., 24 Nov., '79.

Approved; and Mr. Brown should also be informed that Mr. Oliver was instructed by me to inspect and report on the management of the Pre-lease Branch, not from any representations made by that gentleman or by Mr. Stephen, but because from my own personal knowledge I was aware that the business of that branch had been for years conducted in a careless unmethodical manner, also that in my opinion the system of book-keeping was so defective that it reflected extreme discredit upon the officer responsible for its long-continuance, viz., Mr. Brown, and that the public, who required to transact business in the Pre-lease Branch, have for years remarked the want of proper discipline and subordination manifested amongst the officers employed there; in fact, that the officer in charge of that branch appeared deficient in possessing the qualifications which would inspire proper respect from his subordinates as well as prompt attention to his instructions.—J.H., 24/11/79.

Mr. Brown,—To be returned with your reply during the morning.—W.W.S., 11:30 a.m. For whatever remarks may be considered unofficial and unwarrantable I beg leave to withdraw. At the same time I respectfully apply for a thorough investigation, and I am prepared to show that the faults in the branch, which I have over and over again pointed out, are not due to me.—C.A.B., 24/11/79.

Mr. Brown's memo. is not a compliance with the Minister's decision, viz., that he should withdraw the minute altogether, which is from beginning to end is a tissue of insult and misrepresentation, and make an apology in writing for his conduct. I shall not, as a matter of justice to myself, as well as in the interests interests of departmental discipline and subordination, be satisfied with anything short of what is above indicated. When such withdrawal and apology have been made it will be time for the Minister to decide whether any further investigation, as asked for by Mr. Brown, is to be held.—W.W.S., 24 Nov., 1879.

I wish in the first place to be informed whether the minute written by Mr. C. Brown, dated 22/11/79, was penned during office hours, when he is expected to be employed in fulfilling his ordinary duties as clerk in charge of the Pre-lease Branch, or was it written after office hours? I wish Mr. Brown to state in writing whether it is his intention to withdraw the minute to which the Under Secretary has, in my opinion, very properly taken exception, which reflects extreme discredit on the writer, and cannot be tolerated?—J.H., 24/11/79. Mr. Brown.

I beg most respectfully to state that my minute of 22nd instant was written after the usual office hours, and as I feel certain that I have only acted conscientiously I beg to state that I cannot in honor make any further retraction.—C.A.B., 24/11/79.

Having now afforded Mr. Brown every opportunity of withdrawing his minute, and as he has been allowed more latitude than would be accorded, I think, under similar circumstances, in other departments, and he has declined to accept the alternative held out to him, I am compelled to recommend that he be now suspended, when he will have every opportunity of making any explanation he may desire.—W.W.S., 24/11/79.

Approved.—J.H., 24/11/79. Mr. Brown, 25/11/79. Observed.—C.A.B., 25/11/79.

No. 4.

Minute Paper for The Executive Council.

Subject: Suspension of Mr. Charles Brown, Clerk in charge of the Pre-emptive lease Branch of this Department.

Department of Lands, Sydney, 28 November, 1879.

I HAVE to bring under the notice of His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council the misconduct of Mr. Charles Brown, clerk in charge of the Lease Branch of the Department of Lands.

On the 23rd September last I directed Mr. Oliver, Inspector of Land Offices, to investigate and report upon the state of the business at the above branch, having for some time past felt satisfied from my own personal knowledge and observation that it was being conducted by Mr. Brown in a loose and very unsystematic manner.

On the 31st October Mr. Oliver sent in his *report (herewith enclosed), in which he fully confirmed *Sec. No. 2 the impression I had derived, and suggested various alterations and improvements in the working of the branch. He also referred to Mr. Brown's want of the necessary qualifications for controlling and administering the business of the branch without close supervision.

The Under Secretary for Lands felt it to be his duty, after perusal of the report, to submit for my approval the various recommendations and alterations made by Mr. Oliver, and I gave my approval accordingly.

The report, and my decision thereon were then duly forwarded to Mr. Brown for his information, upon which he returned the papers, with the enclosed *minute, of date the 22nd instant, addressed direct *Sec. No. 3 to the Minister for Lands, but which I declined to accept except in the usual way, through the Under Secretary, to whom it was then transmitted by him.

Mr. Brown in his minute not only makes grave insinuations against Mr. Oliver but reflects upon the Under Secretary directly in terms so offensive and so opposed to all recognised rules of subordination in the service that some decisive action was inevitable.

Upon the recommendation of the Under Secretary I allowed Mr. Brown in the first instance an opportunity of withdrawing the offensive memorandum which he had written, and making an apology. As, however, he has declined to accept the alternative held out to him (as will be seen by memoranda enclosed) I consider that I have no other course open but to recommend his suspension from office, and that he be called upon to show cause why he should not be dismissed from the Public Service for insubordination in writing a minute reflecting in such unwarrantable and insulting terms on the head of his department.

JAMES HOSKINS.

His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council.

The Executive Council advise, as recommended by the Honorable the Secretary for Lands, that Mr. Charles A. Brown, clerk in charge of Lease Branch, Department of Lands, be suspended from official duty, and called upon to show cause why he should not be dismissed the Public Service for insubordination as herein fully set forth.—ALEX. #### The Clerk of the Executive Council to Mr. C. Brown.

Sir,

Executive Council Office, Sydney, 3 December, 1879.

I am directed to inform you that His Excellency the Governor, under the advice of the Executive Council, has approved of your suspension from official duty in consequence of insubordination, as fully set forth in a minute paper submitted to the Council by the Honorable the Secretary for Lands, a copy of which I now forward to you.

I am to request that you will furnish me within seven (7) days from this date with such explanation of your conduct as you may desire to offer, and to show cause why you should not be dismissed the Public Service.

No. 6.

Mr. C. A. Brown to The Clerk of The Executive Council.

Sir,

Sydney, 8 December, 1879.

See No. 5.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3rd instant, informing me that His Excellency the Governor, under the advice of the Executive Council, had approved of my suspension from official duty, in consequence of insubordination, and requesting that I would furnish you with such explanation of my conduct as I might desire to offer, and to show cause why I should not be dismissed the Public Service.

In reply, I beg leave respectfully to remark that in compliance with the directions of the Minister for Lands I did substantially withdraw or intend to withdraw everything of an insulting or offensive character contained in my memorandum of the 22nd ultimo by the following phraseology, namely, "If I have stated anything unofficial or unwarrantable, I beg leave to withdraw the words."

I did not withdraw certain allegations of facts which were not wantonly or voluntarily brought forward by me, only advanced after judgment had been passed upon me, when it was quite clear there was not the slightest intention of allowing me to say anything in my defence, and solely as the basis for an enquiry at which I would not be excluded, and could disprove the charges made against me, and by the results of which I was prepared to stand or fall without complaint.

I most gratefully tender my heartfelt thanks to the Executive Council, whatever the ultimate result of their deliberations in my case may be, that they did not proceed to deal summarily with me, however well grounded the charge of insubordination might appear, without previously according me an opportunity of exculpating myself.

I therefore freely admit that I did use language against the Under Secretary highly offensive, which I do not now wish to justify, and most sincerely regret having used, whatever the provocation might have been, language however which I would never have uttered, and which would have been contrary to the habit of a life of undeviating obedience to the will of my superiors, if the opportunity which has been afforded to me by the Executive Council of defending myself had not been utterly and positively denied me,—language too which was wrung from me in the bitterness and disappointment of finding that, notwithstanding irreproachable antecedents and unsullied reputation, notwithstanding the high and responsible duties with which I have been entrusted for years, in times too of the greatest difficulty, and contrary to the spirit and practice of the Civil Service,—all the principles of equity, courtesy, and even common humanity were suspended in my case, because I was tried without being allowed to be present at the enquiry, and condemned without being permitted to say one word in my own defence.

While then I appeal to the justice and magnanimity of the Executive Council to consider the aggravating circumstances under which I used this language, and the grievous wrong that was done me, I most earnestly and honestly assure them that when I used it I did not deem it insubordinate, but that under the circumstances it was only a justifiable vindication of my own character when no other resource was left me, as when Mr. Oliver's report with its astounding and incredible allegations and assumptions of mental and physical incapacity was forwarded to me, with the decisions of my superiors on it, it was sent to me not as a document that I was to reply to but simply as an announcement "for my information" that I was in fact officially dead, and consequently my character and prospects both in and out of the Service completely blighted.

I beg to bring under the notice of the Executive Council that I have been for a period of seventeen years in the Department of Lands; that I have been employed on important duties in its various branches, and I invariably gave the greatest satisfaction to my superior officers, so much so that whenever the Lease Branch relapsed, not into a state of ordinary arrear but of absolute and almost irremediable confusion, I was deputed to put it into order.

I rendered this service on no less than five different occasions, and was ultimately placed in charge of the branch. I was thus associated with it in all its difficulties, and when these difficulties were at their worst and I only allowed merely nominal assistance, I gave up the leisure hours of ten years of my life, without reward or desire of reward, rather than allow the business of the branch to drift beyond my control, and worked until late at night and in early morning, in the hope of some day securing an adequate staff, which I have only been able to obtain during the last six months, the result of which is that the Lease Branch is now in good working order, and everything has been done that could be done to bring it into a thorough state of efficiency, notwithstanding that there has been a large additional influx of work consequent upon the accession of ten extra draftsmen to the staff of the Lease Branch of the Survey Office, during the last seven months.

I unhesitatingly affirm that in the management of my branch I largely gained the esteem of the public, the approbation and high appreciation of various Ministers under whom I have served, and have even been made the subject of public eulogy.

In conclusion, I confidently hope that the Executive Council will be pleased to take all the circumstances into their earnest and dispassionate consideration, and deal with my case as their best and highest wisdom may suggest.

I have, &amp;c.,

CHAS. A. BROWN.

To the Secretary for Lands.—A.L., 9/12/79. Laid before the Executive Council on the 9th December, 1879. The Under Secretary for Lands, B.C., 9/12/79. The Under Secretary for any remarks he may think proper to make on this minute or explanation.—J.H., 10/12/79. As the particular charge on which Mr. Brown was suspended is one of insubordination in writing a minute of an insulting nature to the head of his department, the only remarks I desire to make, or that I think it necessary to make at present, are with respect to the question actually at issue. Mr. Brown now admits that "he did use language against the Under Secretary highly offensive," that it was unjustifiable, and that he "most sincerely regrets having used it." So far therefore as I am concerned I shall be glad if, in view of Mr. Brown's long service in this department, the Minister will see fit to accept the apology now offered, and to authorize the removal of Mr. Brown's suspension.—W.W.S., 10 December.

As Mr. Brown has admitted in his written explanation that the language he used in his memo. of 22/11/79, towards the Under Secretary, "was highly offensive, which he does not wish to justify, and most sincerely regrets having used," I am not disposed, taking into consideration Mr. Brown's length of service service as an officer of the Department of Lands, to recommend the Executive Council to dispense with his services, but having in view the fact that the misconduct of which Mr. Brown has been guilty, would, if lightly passed over, be calculated to have a bad effect upon the minds of the junior officers of this department, by weakening proper respect for authority and thereby countenancing a spirit of insubordination, I recommend that Mr. Brown should be reprimanded, and warned that if on any future occasion he should exhibit a similar spirit of insubordination, and want of proper deference to superior officers, that the Executive Council will be recommended to dispense with his services. I further wish to place on record that in my opinion it will be advisable, with a view to improve the management of the Pre-emptive Lease Branch to remove Mr. Brown to another branch of this department, provision being at the same time made for a qualified officer being placed in charge of that branch.—J.H., 13/12/79.

No. 7.

Memo. by Mr. Inspector Oliver to The Under Secretary for Lands.

HAVING been permitted by the Secretary for Lands to peruse the papers relative to Mr. Brown's suspension, I beg to refer to the matter so far as it concerns myself.

Mr. Brown was suspended for writing a minute reflecting in unwarrantable and insulting terms on the head of his department, and while desiring to fully acknowledge the seriousness of this act of insubordination, as compared with anything he may have written of me, I feel compelled to draw attention to his remarks concerning myself. He characterizes my report as a wordy flimsy piece of self aggrandisement, that my incapacity is apparent, that I have been guilty of disloyalty to the department, and favouritism, that I am a party to a conspiracy, that I have been guilty of barefaced effrontery and dishonourable conduct, and finally refers to me in the concluding paragraph of his memo. thus:—"Such a man as Mr. Oliver would never have been permitted to enter the Lease Branch."

All that I have quoted and much more is stated in a memo. in which Mr. Brown had he chosen, and had there been any ground for doing so, could have defended himself against the allegations contained in my report; but instead of doing so, he confines himself to a challenge to Mr. Stephen and myself to a personal controversy, and to gross and uncalled for abuse, without the most remote foundation for a single statement.

My report is a simple representation of the state of the Lease Branch, and a recommendation as to its future management, both of which I was required to make by direction of the Secretary for Lands. Certainly I gave my opinion as to Mr. Brown's capability for the position of officer in charge of the Lease Branch, and if I required anything in support of it I have it in the memo. now in question.

Mr. Brown's right to write of me officially as he has done, I leave in the hands of the Secretary for Lands; privately I treat (and I trust I may be pardoned for saying so in this memo.) his insulting remarks with contempt.

In conclusion I beg to reiterate every word of my report.

CHARLES OLIVER,
Inspector of Land Offices,

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Department of Lands, Sydney, 15 December, 1879.

WITH reference to the suspension from office of Mr. Charles A. Brown, clerk in charge of the Lease Branch of the Department of Lands, for insubordinate conduct, I now beg to submit to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council a letter which has been received from that officer in reply to that addressed to him by the Clerk of the Executive Council, calling upon him to show cause why he should not be dismissed from the Public Service. See No. 6.

Mr. Brown having admitted the serious nature of the offence committed by him, and having also expressed his sincere regret for the same (in the terms which I have quoted in my minute of the 13th instant, endorsed on the papers), I do not feel disposed, taking into consideration Mr. Brown's length of service in the Lands Department, to recommend the Executive Council to dispense with his services.

At the same time, having in view the fact that the misconduct of which Mr. Brown has been guilty, would, if lightly passed over, be calculated to have a bad effect upon the minds of the junior officers of this department, by weakening proper respect for authority, and thereby countenancing a spirit of insubordination, I recommend that he be reprimanded and warned that if on any future occasion he should exhibit a similar spirit of insubordination and want of proper deference to his superior officer, the Executive Council will be recommended to dismiss him from the Public Service.

I further wish to place on record my opinion that it will be advisable, with a view to the better management of the Pre-emptive Lease Branch, that Mr. Brown should be transferred to another branch of the Department of Lands, provision being of course made for placing a qualified officer in charge of the Pre. Lease Branch.

Minutes on No. 8.

Referring to the proceedings on the 2nd instant, when the Council advised that Mr. Charles A. I am also to convey to you a reprimand, and to inform you that should your conduct at any future time form the subject of report your dismissal from the service will be the result.

Mr. C. A. Brown to The Under Secretary for Lands.

Sir, Department of Lands, Sydney, 22 December, 1879.

Having received an intimation from the Clerk of the Executive Council that His Excellency the Governor, under the advice of the Council, had approved of my suspension being removed, I have the honor to report myself, and await your instructions.

With regard to the correspondence in my case, and the allegations of neglect, mismanagement, mental and physical incapacity, and want of control over my subordinates, I am constrained, in vindication of my character and conduct, to deny that there are any grounds whatever to justify these charges.

I therefore most respectfully ask to be informed if my condemnation by the Minister for Lands is to be placed on record in this department without my being allowed an opportunity of defending myself at an inquiry before competent authorities, by whom I should not be excluded. I would remark that until such opportunity is accorded me I am simply condemned on mere ex parte statements, and that on such statements any preconceived opinions may be readily confirmed, and any views of a case however unfounded firmly established.

Memorandum by The Secretary for Lands.

MR. BROWN was suspended for using insulting language in a memorandum addressed to me, but the objectionable language was applied to the Under Secretary, his superior officer, who complained (and, I think, very justly), of Mr. Brown's conduct; and as that officer declined to withdraw the memorandum, when every opportunity was afforded him to do so, there was no other course left open to me than to direct his suspension.

Mr. Brown's suspension has been removed, and he has been allowed to resume duty as a clerk in this department; and in my opinion he has been treated with great leniency, having regard to the serious infraction of discipline and want of subordination which he evinced in his written communications on the subject to this department.

Mr. Brown asks if his condemnation by the Minister for Lands is to be placed on record in this department without being allowed an opportunity of defending himself. I think I need scarcely remark that Mr. Brown, after his suspension, made a very tardy admission that his conduct towards the Under Secretary was indefensible, and further expressed his regret for the language he used; and it was in consequence of Mr. Brown's retraction of the offensive terms he had used towards the Under Secretary, coupled with the expression of his regret at having been betrayed into the use of language he could not justify, together with the length of service as an officer of this department, which induced me to recommend the Executive Council to withdraw his suspension. As I am decidedly of opinion that an immediate reorganisation of the Pre-emptive Lease Branch is required, and that a different system of book-keeping should be introduced there without delay, and further, as I do not consider it advisable in the public interest to intrust Mr. Brown with the introduction of such alterations in the administrative management of the Pre-Lease Branch, as I consider it advisable to make, and further as it appears to me that in future the relations between the Under Secretary and Mr. Brown, if he remained in charge of the Pre-Lease Branch, would not be of so cordial a nature as would promote the efficient and satisfactory working of that branch, having regard to the public interest I have considered it advisable to remove Mr. Brown to the Conditional Sales Division of this department, where he will be under the immediate supervision of the Chief Commissioner (Mr. Moriarty), and that Mr. Wilson, from the Conditional Sales Branch, shall in future have charge of the Pre-Lease Branch.

Minute by The Secretary for Lands.

Department of Lands, Sydney, 9th October, 1879.

Memorandum for Mr. Oliver, now engaged in an inspection of the Pre-lease Branch.

It has hitherto been the practice of the Pre-lease Branch to describe or place pre-leases in two different classes, viz., defined and undefined pre-leases, defined pre-leases being leases exceeding 320 acres in area, the boundaries of which have been shown approximately on county and parish maps, while on the other hand undefined pre-leases have not been charted even approximately on maps or plans. Hence a great deal of confusion and frequently ill-feeling has been caused through persons holding or occupying adjacent Crown land, in virtue of the different classes of pre-leases.

I have spoken to Mr. Hall, the draftsman engaged in the Pre-lease Branch upon the subject (and I wish Mr. Oliver to confer with that gentleman upon the subject matter of this minute), who concurs with me in the opinion that there would not be any difficulty in the way of merging pre-leases under 320 acres, and pre-leases exceeding that area, into one category or class, so that the boundaries of pre-leases of any area could be approximately defined; thus the anomaly which at the present time exists of having two classes of pre-leases—"defined" and "undefined"—would terminate.

I also suggested that, with the view to prevent any misunderstanding, the holders of all pre-leases should be officially notified that the boundaries of their pre-leases are only approximately correct. This intimation should be made to protect the Government, who could not be expected to measure and accurately define the boundaries of pre-leases, which are liable to be conditionally purchased on any land office day.

I wish Mr. Oliver would please give his attention to this matter.

J.H.

Minute by Mr. Oliver.

Proposition to approximately chart all pre-emptive leases, irrespective of area.

Memo: I have considered this matter, and consulted with Mr. Hall upon it. There is no doubt that an immense advantage, both to the public and the department would be derived from all pre-emptive leases being approximately charted. I feel assured that it would obviate many difficulties in the department, and innumerable disappointments to the public. The bulk of the work in connection with the proposition, if carried out, will fall upon the Survey Office, but I believe that the Lease Branch there will, in a few weeks, be in a position to commence to approximately define the whole of the pre-leases in the colony, more especially as I am informed that new maps will shortly have to be compiled, and existing uncertainties and discrepancies investigated, some of which will necessitate the position of many of the undefined leases being approximately fixed.

Should the present distinction of defined and undefined leases be abolished it will materially reduce the land agent's work, and simplify it. *At present they have to use six forms of vouchers in reporting payments, whereas two would suffice, unless the Audit Office should urge the continuance of the distinction between leases granted under the Act of 1861 and those granted under the Act of 1875.

I would suggest that the Surveyor General be referred to on the subject, and at the same time point out that the matter, upon other grounds, occurred to me some considerable time ago. See *memo. herewith. *See following minute by Mr. Oliver.

CHARLES OLIVER,

Inspector, 31 October, 1879.

The Under Secretary.

Minute by Mr. Oliver.

Pre-emptive Leases.

WHEN recently preparing pre-emptive lease books for the land agents, I was very much impressed with the necessity for the existing division of pre-leases being discontinued, as it complicates the work of this department, the Audit Office, and very considerably that of the land offices. There must be many claims to lease under the old regulations still outstanding, and consequently another reason for altering the system has suggested itself to me, and that is the great advantage possessed by applicants under the present regulations over those claiming leases under the late regulations. In the event of an application for a lease made before the proclamation of the existing regulations remaining over, on a report of non-residence on conditional purchase, non-receipt of plan of purchased land, or any other cause, the applicant is very likely to lose the land, in consequence of its being leased to another who has a right of lease, and who made his application under the present regulations. Even if this was not the result the applicant whose lease has been provisionally gazetted, at once takes possession of the land, and yet another may have applied for it years before, and simply did not get it because his claim was not promptly settled by this department. Again, a reserve may be proclaimed while an application under the old regulations is in abeyance; whereas leases under the present regulations are provisionally notified almost immediately after the application is received.

There are at present three classes of pre-leases, viz., "pre-emptive leases," which class includes all pre-leases applied for under the present regulations, "defined pre-emptive leases," being those leases applied for under the old regulations, containing an area of 640 acres or more, and "undefined pre-emptive leases," embracing those applied for under the old regulations of an area of less than 640 acres.

At present the land agents have to report the payments of pre-lease rents on no less than six (6) different forms, whereas two would suffice for all purposes of leases now being granted.

There are other reasons which could be advanced for the immediate discontinuance of the present system, but as the matter comes within my province only as one connected with land offices, I merely now ask that it may be considered at an early date.

The only difficulty in the way of converting the old applications into applications under the present regulations is, that regulation 4, part 2, requires the applications to be lodged, with rent, with the land agent of the district within which the land sought to be leased is situated; but there are many ways of meeting it, and a very simple one would be to apprise the applicants that their applications will be converted into applications under the present regulations, on payment of the required rent to the land agents. The applications could be forwarded to the land agents for the purpose of the receipt of the rent being endorsed thereon, and the particulars of the land applied for being recorded in the local offices; a time might be specified within which the payments should be made, and if the applicants failed to pay the amounts within the period their applications could be cancelled.

I am sure all persons desiring to obtain their leases would at once comply with any reasonable request made by this department in furtherance of that object.

The Under Secretary for Lands.

CHARLES OLIVER,
13 October, 1877.

Before any decision is arrived at in the important alterations herein referred to, the Surveyor General should be invited to report whether there will be any great difficulty in carrying them out, so far as the Lease Branch of his office is concerned.—W.W.S., 14 Nov. Approved.—J.H., 19/11/79. Surveyor General, 20 Nov.

No. 2.

Memo. by Mr. Oliver.

Provisional notification of Pre-emptive Leases.

I DESIRE to draw attention to the present system of provisional notification of pre-emptive leases, with a view to its being modified. Applications are at present notified as provisionally approved without any investigation except as to the holding in right of which they are made, and consequently leases are notified which upon investigation are found never to have had any existence, there not having been any available land.

The system no doubt in the first instance worked with fair success, but now that lease matters, owing to the daily increasing number of leases, are becoming more complicated, and there being less land available for lease, the effect of the present notification is to purport to give applicants a title which the Government is not in a position in very many cases to confer; in fact, frequently persons commit acts of trespass on the faith of the Gazette notice, which, although only provisional, is generally accepted as being a compliance with the applications specified therein. I would suggest that before notification the applications be examined in the Survey Office. In cases where the leases are taken in virtue of land which has been surveyed there will be no difficulty whatever, and where applied for in right of unsurveyed land a copy of the conditional purchase application may be forwarded to the Survey Office with each lease application, which would enable that office to state with sufficient accuracy, for the purposes of notification, whether the land sought to be leased is available. In these cases a final examination, if thought necessary, could be made after the survey of the holdings in right of which the applications are made.

Even with this system I do not say that mistakes will not occur, but they will certainly be reduced to a minimum, and leases will not be gazetted without there being the slightest possibility of applicants ever getting any land to represent them; and certainly free-selectors and others will not take possession of other people's property under a colorable authority from this department, and in some instances an action for trespass is thrust upon them. So far as I can ascertain at least 25 per cent. of the applications provisionally gazetted have been, upon investigation, cancelled.

The delay in notifying applications will be compensated for by general accuracy of notification after examination. I estimate that the examination could be done by one good draftsman, and I am very certain that the benefit to be derived from his labours will fully justify an expenditure for salary.

The foregoing proposition equally concerns the Survey Office as well as this department, and therefore I would invite the co-operation of the Surveyor General.

The Under Secretary.

CHARLES OLIVER, Inspector,
31/10/79.

I wish to state that the system of only provisionally notifying approval of pre-emptive leases which obtained after the passing of the "Crown Lands Amendment Act of 1875" was, from the first, almost opposed by me as objectionable and tending to mislead the selectors, as well as cause unnecessary annoyance to those whose lands were encroached upon by the selectors and others in virtue of the leases so provisionally approved. The objections to the system have become so apparent—as more particularly explained by this report—that I consider that the provisional notification of leases should be abolished without delay. There is no reason now why the applications should not be promptly dealt with, and definitely approved or rejected as the case may be. I may state that I have consulted with the Surveyor General and other officers having to deal with the lease business, and that they concur with the above view. I have also ascertained that, in 99 per cent. almost of lease applications, regulation 5 (annual leases) is a nullity, and cannot possibly be carried out—i.e., as to the boundaries of lands leased under pre-emptive right. This is a matter which can be rectified in the preparation of the new regulations which may have to be prepared shortly.—W.W.S., 18 Nov.

I prefer, before giving any decision on this recommendation of the Under Secretary for Lands and the Inspector of Lands Offices, that this paper should be submitted to the Surveyor General, for his report.—J.H., 19/11/79. Surveyor General.—W.W.S., 20/11/79.

Memo. by the Chief Draftsman to The Surveyor General.

Lease Branch.—Defined and undefined leases.

In consideration of the enclosed minutes I am clearly of opinion that it would be to the advantage of the office and the public that both defined and undefined leases be charted on the office maps.

At

At present only leases of 640 acres and upwards are charted; other leases of less than 640 acres are only indicated by a dot in colour on the charted measurement, in virtue of which the lease has been Gazetted.

With regard to the examination of applications to lease prior to Gazetting those made for lands measured it can be shown without doubt if the application is objectionable or unobjectionable, but with regard to applications in virtue of conditional purchases unmeasured, from a description of the conditional purchase it is not easy to definitely report, but at all events in a very large number of cases I think that a report could be given with some degree of certainty, and eventually in parish maps being more generally in use throughout the office than at present, and a distribution of the gentlemen now dealing with conditional purchase work under Mr. Rutter among the charting branches, and those gentlemen charting in pencil on such maps all conditional purchase applications as is done in Messrs. Watt's and Houston's branches, and noting conditional purchase numbers before sending forward for measurement, the work of reporting on leases will be facilitated, and a greater degree of certainty will result.

With regard to charting undefined leases, which may have been Gazetted, and applications as may be made from this date, it will be first necessary to correct the existing lease maps, and renew such lease maps as are at present in a dilapidated state through age and constant use. The action of renewing maps has been taken as far as possible, and parish maps substituted for 2 mile to the inch county maps, and it appears to me that the better course to be adopted respecting charting undefined leases will be, on issue of a complete set of parish maps of a county, that the Lease Branch (Lands) on application by Messrs. Gall and Hall, furnish schedules of leases, whether defined or undefined, in existence to date in that particular county or districts included in that county (for in some cases a county is included in one land district, but there are counties which include portions of not less than five land districts), and this method carried on throughout the Colony, thereby the leases will gradually be charted; and on leases being once shown on the maps such maps might be kept correctly charted by Lands Lease Branch, forwarding to Lease Branch (Survey) from time to time a statement of leases unrenewed.

The present staff of the Lease Branch at this office will, I think, be found sufficient to deal with all the work referred to.

26 November, 1879.

J. W. ELLIS.

No. 4.

Minute by The Surveyor General to The Under Secretary for Lands.

THE reform suggested by Mr. Oliver is one of those which will follow directly on the production of parish or large scale maps and territorial division. I can adopt it in all cases where we have prepared parish maps, also in cases where the counties have been compiled on a scale of 1 inch to the mile, and it would apply to about 17 per cent. of the populated parts of the Colony. The Lease Branch of this office is becoming more and more efficient, and if I am not held responsible for errors arising out of the uncertainty of conditional purchasers' descriptions, I could undertake at once to report with sufficient certainty for practical purposes which lease applications could be accepted; some would have to remain in abeyance, or be Gazetted as doubtful, and a large number definitely refused. Although it is not possible to deal with exactness, the advantage would be so great in comparison with the probable disadvantage arising through errors that I think this course should be adopted throughout without waiting for large scale maps.

To carry out the measure I should require to be furnished from Lands, in each case of application to lease, with a statement as to whether the land is measured or not; if measured with the record number of surveyor's plan; if unmeasured with the conditional purchase description of original, and any additional conditional purchases that may have been made. In addition to this, all renewals should be notified to me as early as possible after the occurrence, in order that my maps may be noted.

Although Mr. Ellis thinks otherwise, I scarcely expect to work the new system without additional assistance; but when territorial division and parish maps are in operation a considerable saving will be effected.

Surveyor General's Office, Sydney, 28th November, 1879.

P. F. ADAMS.

Minutes on No. 4.

It would have been more convenient if each of the questions referred to the Surveyor General had formed the subject of a special report. However, as in the main he concurs with the desirability of adopting the two recommendations referred for his report, i.e., (1) the charting of all pre-leases, irrespectively of their area, and (2) the abolition of the present system of provisionally notifying pre-leases,—I would now suggest that steps be taken at once for giving effect to those recommendations as far as possible. This department will of course render every assistance practicable; but I hardly think the proposal that Lands should furnish the record number of surveyors' plans, and say whether the land is measured or not, &c., is one which can well be adopted, as particulars of that nature are never supplied by this department, but by the draftsmen of the Survey office.—W. W. S., 20 Dec.

I concur with the views of the Under Secretary in this matter, as while I consider it in the highest degree desirable that pre-leases should be charted irrespectively of their area, and that the present system of provisionally Gazetting pre-leases should be discontinued, I do not see that the clerical portion of the Pre-lease Branch can so readily give the record number of plans, and state whether portions have been measured, as the draftsmen of the Survey office can; however, the alteration suggested in the minute of the Surveyor General should be made with as little delay as possible; and I rely upon the clerical portion of the Pre-lease Branch co-operating with the Survey Branch to bring the new system into operation as soon as possible.—J. H., 22/12/79.

The Surveyor General, for information.—W. W. S., 23 Dec., '79. Please return as soon as practicable.

I am only asking information from Lands officers, which is to be found in their books; and that they should, in sending me the applications to lease, give me full particulars, and avoid the necessity for my sending draftsmen to the Lands' books to obtain it.—P. F. A., 2 Jan. The Under Secretary for Lands.

All information that can be given from the Lands' books will be afforded.—C. O., 10/1/80. Seen. Let it be carefully attended to.—W. W. S., 17/1/80.

APPENDIX B.

No. 1.

Memorandum by Mr. C. A. Brown.

THE desirability of making an alteration in regard to the management of the lease rent accounts has for a long time been the subject of consideration. The inconvenience to the public and this department in consequence of the accounts being kept in this office cannot be overstated. It must be apparent that no system of accounts can be satisfactorily worked when all matters in connection with them are not under the control of the same office. The books are kept in this department, the money is received at the Treasury, and the Land Agent's vouchers are lodged in the office of the Auditor General, an arrangement that must be a source of difficulty in the management of the accounts.

Numerous payments of rent I am sure from some cause that cannot be easily accounted for, are never reported to this department, and the mistakes made by various Land Agents are so numerous, and of such a nature that a reference to their vouchers is rendered absolutely necessary, although oftentimes quite impracticable because those documents are recorded in the Audit Office, and cannot be obtained.

The correspondence in connection with these accounts has assumed such proportions that it frequently interferes most materially with the work of the branch, and the principal portion is carried on by the Audit Office through this department with the Land Agents and the public, a course it must be obvious that can only lead to an unnecessary multiplicity of work which ought to be avoided, and this particular duty could be more satisfactorily attended to solely by the Audit Office.

It is a serious matter of complaint on the part of the public that they have to apply to this department for particulars of their leases before their rent will be accepted at the Treasury, and an idea may be formed of the labour involved in the preparation of these credit-slips and the waste of time incurred when the amount of work represented by the accompanying documents is considered, all of which would be avoided if other arrangements were made.

This branch only requires to know what payments have not been made, not those that have been made, and as books and vouchers are in the Audit Office it would be very easy to apply to that department on a printed form for information regarding the non-renewal of a lease at any time it might be required.

I would strongly recommend that the branch be placed on the same footing as the Conditional Sales Branch with respect to the registers, that is to say, that a record should only be kept here of the leases issued and the first payments of rent, all matters in connection with the renewal rents being attended to by the Treasury or Audit Office as they might arrange. The result will be that an immense amount of work will be rendered unnecessary, the staff of this branch can be diminished, and the management of accounts will be more satisfactorily attended to, as existing impediments will be removed.

C.A.B., 9/7/79.

Minutes on No. 1.

*This, I may say, was done at my suggestion, when I was in charge of the Conditional Sales Branch.—W.W.S., 15 July.

I would submit that this matter is one deserving of favourable consideration. It has often occurred to me that the keeping of the lease accounts by the Department of Lands is quite unnecessary as well as inconvenient. The removal of the account business from this department will materially facilitate the transaction of the lease business papers, and will moreover put an end to the intermissible queries and correspondence caused under the present system between this department and the Audit Office. There is no reason whatever why the renewals of lease rents should be kept in the books of this department, any more than in the case of conditional purchases, as pointed out in the last paragraph of this minute. It is quite sufficient to register particulars of all leases and first payments, and leaving the renewals to be attended to by the Treasury or Audit Office, as may be arranged. I trust that this arrangement may meet with the concurrence of the Minister (as far as this department is concerned), and reference might then be made to the Treasury Department for their views in the matter.—W.W.S., 16 July.

It occurs to me that the suggestions of the Under Secretary are worthy of favorable consideration but it would be advisable in the first instance to refer this memo. to the Treasury and the Audit Department for their opinions and report on the same.—J.H., 17/7/79.

Memorandum by Draftsmen Gall and Hall to The Chief Draftsman.

Lease Branch, 21 July, 1879.

REGARDING the proposal of Mr. C. Brown to transfer the lease rent registers now in his branch to the Treasury, we beg to offer the following remarks:—

The effect of the proposal will be to delay final action in pre-lease cases for a considerable time.

At the present time, when we wish to obtain information as to renewals of leases to deal with cases under consideration, we do so personally, and the length of time thus expended is reduced to a minimum, and thus enabling final action in any case under consideration to be taken at once; but if Mr. Brown's proposal is carried out all cases in dealing with which enquiry has to be made regarding previously Gazetted leases will have to be forwarded in the ordinary course, and then queries forwarded to the Treasury from Lands as to the renewal of such leases.

With regard to auction sale measurements which are found to be situated within pre-leases, if the course proposed is carried out it will delay for a considerable time the offering of the land at auction.

We beg further to point out that when enquiries are made regarding leases even under the present system with the branches so far apart inconvenience is felt which will be increased to a manifold extent if the proposal is carried out.

A. GALL.
W. H. HALL.

Referred

Referred for the consideration of the Under Secretary for Lands. I am certain that any departure from the present system must cause delay in every case where it is necessary to enquire whether renewal of the lease has taken place or not. At present we (by permission) inspect the Lands rent book and the question is answered at once.—P.F.A., 23 July, 1879. The Under Secretary for Lands.

This matter may perhaps await reply to reference made to the Treasury as to the desirability of carrying out the suggestions proposed.

As I understand the question at present I see no reason why information as to the renewal of leases should not be obtained by the Lease Branch at once, and direct from the Treasury, if the books are kept there, just as promptly as by the Survey Office, from this Department, especially as the branches of Lands and Survey are (as pointed out by the Surveyor General) so far apart.—W.W.S., 31 July.

Approved.—J.H., 1/8/79. The Surveyor General.

Re-submitted, as I am anxious to call Mr. Hoskins' attention to certain loss of time if the work is transferred to the Treasury. Although I am not in a position to say whether he could avoid the change, I am prepared to make a sacrifice, otherwise to obtain the advantage of direct communication between the two branches in Lands and Survey. I am not aware of any objection on the part of officers of Lands, who have heretofore worked harmoniously with my officers of the Lease Branch.—P.F.A. B.C., 6 August, 1879. I am directed herewith to transmit for your consideration the accompanying copy of a See No. 1. #### Memorandum by Mr. Inspector Oliver.

I HAVE given the matter of the proposed transfer of the pre-emptive lease accounts to the Treasury careful consideration, and have failed to discover that any advantage would be derived therefrom. It would not do away with the necessity for keeping books in the Lease Branch, and would simply amount to the keeping of two sets of books for the one purpose, and thrust upon the Treasury a very considerable amount of additional work without a sufficient corresponding advantage.

No doubt inconvenience to the public and this department has been consequent upon the lease accounts; not, however, because they are kept in this department, but for the reason that they have never been properly kept, and the result is almost inextricable confusion.

If anything like suitable books had been opened, and the rent accounts kept in a business-like way, there would have been no difficulties.

Mr. Brown states that he is sure numerous payments of rent have been made, and never reported. It may be the case, and if it can easily be proved; but I am inclined to think that it is not that the payments have not been reported but that when reported they have not been noted in the lease books.

The fact of the vouchers being ultimately deposited in the Audit Office is of no consequence, provided they are accurately checked and duly posted before being sent on to that office. Had these vouchers always been carefully examined before being forwarded to the Audit Office, instead of transferring any errors that may have occurred therein to the lease books, the immense number of queries which now form a very large item in the work of the Lease Branch would have been avoided.

I do not consider that there would be one single complaint from the public against having to apply to the Lease Branch for credit slips if that branch was in a position to give prompt and accurate information. Moreover, the small proportion of rents paid in Sydney as compared with those received by the Land Agents, renders the consideration of the matter of credit slips of very slight moment.

If the Lease Branch were in a position to hand over the work proposed to be transferred in a satisfactory manner, some argument might, although I doubt it, be adduced in favour of the proposition; but at present I must confess that it appears to me very like trying to get rid of the lease rent accounts which the department has to the present time proved itself unable to keep, leaving the Treasury to unravel all difficulties and confusion resulting from the loose and inefficient manner in which the work has been performed.

In conclusion, I have to state that considerable delay in the Survey Office would result if the proposed transfer is made.

CHARLES OLIVER, Inspector, 31/10/79.

I am still inclined to the view that if the lease accounts could be taken over by the Treasury without inconvenience, it would be better that the Lands Department should be relieved of them. Under the circumstances represented, however, in this report by Mr. Oliver, after careful investigation I would recommend that the lease books continue to be kept by the Lease Branch, new books being prepared in the form proposed in Mr. Oliver's separate report on the branch. In the matter, however, of these accounts, and in fact all others connected with the Lease Branch, promptitude will be the essential element for success, and must be insisted upon.—W.W.S., 18 Nov.

I am quite of opinion that all the accounts in respect to the payment of rent for auction and pre-leases should be kept in the Lease Branch; but what is most required is a good system of book-keeping, by which any person making inquiries at the Lease Branch can readily ascertain the amount of rent he has to pay, indeed the accounts kept at the Lease Branch should be considered as a check on those kept at the Treasury in respect to the rent of auction and pre-leases.—J.H., 20/11/79.

I find on enquiry that no accounts are kept at the Treasury of pre-lease business; nevertheless, my opinion remains unaltered as to the propriety of keeping correct accounts in the Pre-Lease Branch to check the accounts of the local Land Agents.—J.H., 20/11/79.

Mr. Brown,—For information. To be returned after perusal.—W.W.S., 20 Nov.

As I understand that the Minister does not desire me to report in this matter I merely write the word "Seen."—C.A.B., 21/11/79.

APPENDIX C.

Memorandum by Mr. Inspector Oliver.

Since detached.

WITHIN is the case in connection with which Mr. Brown charges me with want of loyalty to the department and favoritism. The particulars of the matter are as follows:—Messrs. Duguid & Co. applied on behalf of Mr. John Laverty for a refund of the rent paid upon a pre-lease, which had been embraced in another pre-lease granted to Laverty. The facts being as stated I wrote a memo. upon the 20th October in the following terms:—"The better course under the circumstances will be to grant the above request." However, upon looking at the papers again I saw that Laverty was not entitled to a refund of quite the whole of the rent paid, and I therefore did not submit my memo. for approval, intending to amend it. Mr. Brown returned to duty the day following the date upon which I wrote the memo. above quoted, and I conclude found the paper amongst others requiring action, and upon the 27th October submitted the case to the Under Secretary, with a recommendation that the rent paid, less that for the first year, be refunded.

Had I, as Mr. Brown wishes to make it appear, refunded the whole sum Laverty would have received £1 more than the Government could be compelled to refund, after having improperly allowed him to pay a double rental for the land for nine years.

This is the alleged case of want of loyalty to the department, and favoritism shown to an intimate friend. C.O., 15/12/79.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

INSPECTOR GENERAL OF THE INSANE.

(REPORT FOR 1879.)

Presented to Parliament pursuant to Act 42 Vic., No. 7, sec. 73.

The Inspector General of the Insane to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, Lunacy Department, Inspector General's Office, Gladesville, 1 March, 1880.

In accordance with the provisions of the 73rd section of the Lunacy Statute, I have the honor to transmit for your information the accompanying Report on the state and condition of the Hospitals, Licensed House, and Reception House for the Insane, and also of the Observation Ward of H. M. Gaol Darlinghurst, for the year ending December 31st, 1879.

Reports from the Medical Superintendents of the Hospitals at Gladesville, Parramatta, and Callan Park are appended.

I have, &amp;c.,

F. NORTON MANNING,
Inspector General.

On December 31st, 1878, the number of insane persons under official cognizance was 1,916, and of these 1,783 were on the books of the Hospitals for the Insane, and 133 were in the Licensed House at Cook's River.

On December 31st, 1879, 1,878 patients were on the books of the Hospitals for the Insane, and 133 in the licensed house for the Insane at Cook's River, making a total of 2,011 registered patients, and an increase during the year of 95.

The following return shows the number and distribution of the patients:—

One male and one female patient from Gladesville, and one female patient from Parramatta, were absent on trial under the provisions of section 82 of the Lunacy Statute at the close of the year, but were still retained on the register of the Hospitals.

Compared with the numbers on 31st December, 1878, there was an increase of 31 patients at Gladesville, 2 at Parramatta, 63 at Callan Park, and 12 at Newcastle, whilst there was a decrease of 3 at Cooma. The number at Cook's River remained the same.

The following return shows the annual increase in the number of registered patients from the year 1864:—

The proportion of insane persons to population in Scotland on December 31st, 1878, was 1 in 392 or 2.55 per thousand, and in Ireland on December 31st, 1877, 1 in 285 or 3.51 per thousand.

It will be seen that the proportion of insane to population in New South Wales is not greater than in Great Britain and Ireland, and that it has not increased during the last 5 years, being at the close of 1879 rather less than it was at the close of 1875.

The following tables (1 to 5) show the admissions, discharges, and deaths, together with the causes of death, the length of residence, and the ages of the patients admitted, discharged, and died in the Hospitals for the Insane during the year 1879. Similar tables for the Licensed House for the Insane at Cook's River are given in a subsequent part of the report. The ages and native countries of all the patients under care in the Institutions for the Insane during the year are shown in tables 6 and 7.

Admissions.

The number of admissions and re-admissions to the Hospitals for the Insane during the year was 369 males and 66 females, or a total of 435, being slightly in excess of the admissions for 1878. The number of patients transferred was 110, 98 males and 12 females, giving with admissions and re-admissions a total of 545 for the year, and making with the number in hospital on December 31st, 1878, a total of 2,328—1,553 males and 775 females—under care and treatment during the year. At the Licensed House, Cook's River, 4 patients were admitted for the first time, 1 was re-admitted, 4 were transferred, and 133 remained from 1878, making a total of 142 under care during the year. It thus appears that the total admissions to all the Institutions was 440, the number transferred was 114, and the total number under care, 2,470, of whom 1,561 were males and 909 females.

The number of admissions (including re-admissions) in proportion to the population of the Colony is of interest in reference to the question of the increase of insanity. It will be seen from the following return, showing the ratio of admissions to the population of the Colony from 1863 to 1879 inclusive, that the rate of admissions for the latter year is not above the average for the previous eight years in proportion to the population.

The proportion for Victoria for 1878, as shown in the report of Inspector of Asylums for that Colony, was one in every 1,324 persons, and the Report of the English Commissioners in Lunacy for 1878 shows one admission for every 1,845 persons of the general population.

In table 5 the ages of the patients admitted during the year are given, and it will be seen that out of a total of 545 admissions, re-admissions, and transfers, 101 or 18.5 per cent. were over 50, and 33 over 60 years of age. The number of aged persons admitted is steadily increasing and a similar increase has been noted in the Institutions in Victoria.*

Total number under Care.

The number under care during the year in the Hospitals for the Insane was 2,328, and in the Licensed House 142, a total of 2,470, and in tables 6 and 7 some interesting particulars as to these are given. From table 6 it appears that 170 of those under care were under 20, and 281 were over 60 years of age. Table 7 shows that of the total number 601 were natives of New South Wales, 34 of other British Colonies, 667 of England, 140 of Scotland, 768 of Ireland, 13 of France, 64 of Germany, 74 of China, and 109 of other countries.

The native born are therefore as yet in a very decided minority, and there is a very large proportion of foreigners, including, besides French and Germans, natives of most European countries, a few Asiatics, and some South Sea Islanders. There were two Australian Aborigines during the year, but none remained at its close. Several have been admitted during the last few years, but as a rule they soon die in confinement,—the younger ones from phthisis, the older ones from melancholic exhaustion.

The number of Chinese inmates during the year was large, and no less than 64 remained at its close. The number at the close of 1878 was 58, and has been slowly but steadily increasing for some years.

From a report prepared with great care by the Inspector General of Police, it appears that towards the close of 1878, the number of Chinese in the Colony was 9,616, and though from an estimate of the Registrar General there seems to have been some increase since that date, the total at the close of 1879 cannot be more than 10,000, and there is therefore 1 insane Chinaman for every 156 of the Chinese population, a proportion more than twice as great as obtains among the population generally.

On the establishment of the Temporary Hospital for the Insane at Cooma a proposal was made to set this apart entirely for Chinese patients. There is reason to think that these patients could be fed and cared, for at a cheaper rate to the Colony, and with greater comfort to themselves, in a separate Institution or in separate wards, than when scattered throughout the different hospitals, where their presence is no doubt in some instances an annoyance to the other inmates; but so many difficulties presented themselves that the idea was abandoned. The majority of the Chinese patients admitted during the last six or seven years had been for some years resident in New South Wales, and belonged to the disappointed, improvident, and unsuccessful classes.

Discharges.

The number of persons discharged recovered from the Hospitals for the Insane was 170, and those discharged relieved numbered 50, the former giving a percentage of 39.08, and the latter of 11.26 on the admissions, so that a total of 50.34 per cent. have been so far benefited by Hospital treatment as to be able to to resume their duties in the world, or to live under the care of friends. In addition to these numbers, 32 persons have during the year been discharged recovered from the Reception House whilst awaiting transfer to Hospital.

The recoveries, even without counting those which occurred in the Reception House, compare not unfavourably with the number in English Asylums, which was 39·94 in the year 1878, whilst the average for the last ten years was 38·84. The Establishments for Idiots are excluded from the English returns, and included in those for New South Wales, which, as the patients are of a very incurable class, they serve to render less favourable.

The proportion of recoveries has varied considerably in the different Hospitals. At Cooma, owing to exceptional causes, it was 300 per cent., at Gladesville 42·03, at Parramatta 34·43 in the Free, and 26·31 in the Criminal, Division, at Callan Park 6·25, whilst at Newcastle there were no recoveries, but 66·66 per cent. were discharged relieved.

The transfers during the year numbered 110. The larger number were from Gladesville to fill some of the new wards at Callan Park, and from one division of the Hospital at Parramatta to the other; 23 imbecile patients were transferred from the other Institutions to Newcastle.

Deaths.

The deaths that occurred during the year in Hospitals numbered 117, a per-centage of 6·47 on the average number resident, and of 5·02 on the total number under care. These proportions compare favourably with those in English Asylums, which it appears from the Report of the English Commissioners in Lunacy were 10·00 for 1878, and an average of 10·17 for the last 10 years on the daily average number resident, and 7·70 for 1878, and an average of 7·76 for the last 10 years on the total number under care.

The per-centage varied somewhat at the different Institutions, being lowest at Cooma (1·66 per cent.) among comparatively young and healthy patients, and highest at Gladesville (7·17 per cent.), where many of the patients suffered from acute forms of insanity.

The causes of death are shown in table 3. Cerebral diseases were responsible for 53 deaths, thoracic diseases for 26, abdominal diseases for 17, 4 died from cancer, 12 from general debility and old age, 1 each from erysipelas, typhoid fever, gangrene, and tetanus, and 1 from suicide.

Number remaining and Accommodation.

The number remaining on the books of the Hospitals for the Insane in December 31st was 1878 of whom 3 were absent on trial, whilst 133 patients, 125 of whom were maintained by the Government, were in the licensed house at Cook's River. The accommodation at the same date in the Hospitals, reckoning one patient in each single room, 600 cubic feet for each patient in ordinary wards, and 1,000 cubic feet in the wards for the sick (the standard fixed by the English Commissioners in Lunacy as the lowest compatible with health and which cannot be safely lowered in this Colony) was for 1,615, so that the number in excess of the accommodation was 263. As will be seen from the following return all the institutions, except Callan Park, and the male side of the criminal division at Parramatta, were overcrowded, but the pressure was greatest in the female wards of the hospitals at Gladesville and Parramatta. In these the overcrowding is now so extreme, 555 patients being crowded into a space sufficient only for 373, that it is prejudicial to both the mental and physical health of the inmates, and I have no hesitation in saying has acted directly in preventing the recovery of patients in whose cases there was every hope on admission, and so has assisted to swell the number of incurable cases.

Total number in excess of accommodation .....				42	221	263

Whilst reporting on the existing accommodation it is necessary I should point out that a large portion of this is of a temporary and unsatisfactory character.

The old mansion and the new weatherboard buildings at Callan Park which now afford room for 148 patients must be removed when the new hospital is built, since they would interfere with its arrangements and are on a site required for some of the out-buildings. Three large dormitories at Gladesville, built of wood and iron, which would properly accommodate 79 patients and in which 100 now sleep, were erected as temporary buildings ten years ago and are now much eaten with white ant, and should be removed; whilst the whole of the buildings for women at Parramatta, which afford space for 123, and in which 209 patients are now crammed, are so old, so gloomy, and so irredeemably bad in every respect, that their continued occupation is a cruelty to the patients and their complete removal at the earliest possible time an absolute necessity.

Contracts have been taken at Gladesville and Parramatta for buildings which will accommodate the patients now placed in the old and unsuitable buildings mentioned above, and those at Parramatta will provide also space for the surplus number of female patients. The buildings at Gladesville are progressing satisfactorily; but those at Parramatta are now, though two-thirds complete, at a standstill, owing to the absence of authority to proceed with kitchen, laundry, tanks, fencing, and other accessories, without which it is impossible to thoroughly complete the building or to occupy any part of them.

I beg most strongly to recommend that the outlay necessary may be authorized, and that the completion of the works urged forward with all possible speed, so as to put an end to the grievous overcrowding which now exists.

Although

Although the new buildings at Gladesville and Parramatta will provide for the number now in excess of the existing accommodation, it should be borne in mind that there are 125 Government patients in the Licensed House at Cook's River, and that no arrangements have been made to meet the annual increment of patients, which during the last three years has averaged ninety a year (and which, with a population increasing at the rate of 40,000 a year, is not likely to be less in this and succeeding years), except the new hospital at Callan Park, the contract time for the completion of which is three years and a half, and which is not likely to be furnished and ready for occupation under a period of four years. It should I think be distinctly pointed out that it will be all but impossible, and certainly most inadvisable, to occupy a part of this building with insane patients until the whole is complete and the workmen away from it. In four years, at the present rate of increase, there will be an accumulation of 360 patients; and it now becomes my duty to suggest that provision should be made for these as they accumulate, it being remembered that there will be at least 90 by the close of the year 1880.

I cannot advise temporary buildings for this purpose, for experience has shown that this is a most unsatisfactory and wasteful method of providing for insane patients. In a former report I stated that such buildings "are far from cheap originally, last at best for only a short time, and from their insecurity and defects always involve a disproportionately large yearly outlay in the extra staff found necessary to attend on the patients." Every additional year's experience has served to emphasise my opinion.

Callan Park will probably be erected as rapidly as any substantial stone structure could be, and considering the present high rate of wages and the enormous price of the tender accepted for this work, I shrink from recommending the erection of any substantial building. Experience gained at Parramatta and the Licensed House at Cook's River has proved that weatherboard buildings, with brick single rooms and offices, can be erected at a comparatively cheap rate and within a short period, and that such buildings serve admirably for insane patients and will last for a considerable time. I would advise either that buildings of this kind should be erected on a new and carefully selected site specially adapted for idiot children, which would leave the Newcastle Hospital vacant for demented and epileptic patients, as recommended in a subsequent part of this report; or that one of the hospitals for the insane in or near up-country towns, which were first recommended by the late Dr. Campbell, and which I have advocated in various reports, should be commenced, the buildings being constructed for the most part of weatherboard, and so arranged that they can be added to as occasion requires.

Sites for District Hospitals for the Insane.

In the year 1877 I became aware accidentally that 120 acres of land near Maitland had been reserved for "the purposes of a lunatic asylum and industrial school"; and after examining and reporting by letter dated February 26th, 1877, on this site, which I did not consider to be well suited for hospital purposes, I suggested that inquiries should be made if reserves for like purposes existed in other districts; and a report furnished showing the acreage and situation of Government land which was suitable and could be set apart for hospital purposes. A circular letter was issued from the Survey Office on this subject on November 23rd, 1877, and in response thereto reports, more or less elaborate, with plans have been furnished from the Goulburn, Hunter River, Monaro, and Clarence River districts, and forwarded to me. From the remaining districts I have not received any reports notwithstanding the great lapse of time which has occurred, but tracings showing the Government land near two towns, Bathurst and Orange, in the western districts, have been sent to me.

So far as I have yet learned no land, except the piece near Maitland, had been reserved for hospital purposes prior to the date of my inquiries.

With regard to three out of the four districts from which reports were received I have been able to make inquiries and to follow them by recommendations, which in the case of two of them have been adopted, but I have not yet found time and opportunity to visit the Hunter River and Northern District, and without a personal inspection I am unable to offer any recommendation.

In the case of the Goulburn District a very elaborate report was furnished by the District Surveyor on the Government lands at and near Goulburn, Yass, and other towns, and after full inquiries I was convinced that Goulburn was the most suitable position in this district. I examined with some care the Government reserves near Goulburn, Mr. Twynam, the District Surveyor, kindly accompanying me, and affording me every information, and found none of them suitable for the purpose. Late in the past year 300 acres of land near Goulburn, with a large frontage to the River Wollondilly, and very close to the railway line, were purchased by auction at a very moderate price for hospital purposes.

In the Monaro District, on a review of the report of the District Surveyor, I recommended 200 acres of land beautifully situated at Bega, which were reserved from sale by notice in the Government Gazette, dated July 28th, 1879, and in the Clarence River District a recommendation has been made which does not yet appear to have been acted upon.

Patients admitted from shipboard, &c.

The influx of strangers into the Institutions for the Insane still continues, and in eight cases which have been brought directly under my notice the patients were brought either from the ship in which they arrived in the Colony, or were found by the police in an insane condition a day or two after arrival. In only one of these cases was any payment made towards maintenance. One patient was a French Communist, holding a ticket-of-leave from New Caledonia, but prohibited from going to France. A similar case was admitted in 1878. One was a black fireman from a foreign steamer, and in another case, on which I forwarded to you a special report in November last, an aged and demented man was deliberately sent away from a neighbouring Colony by his friends who paid his passage money.

The Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and the Blind is responsible for attracting at least one case of imbecility to the Colony during the year. By means of travelling collectors and advertisements children are drawn to this Institution from the neighbouring Colonies, and it is clear that some steps should be taken to ensure the return of these if they prove, as a certain proportion are sure to do, incapable of receiving instruction, and of feeble intellect.

If the Government were to hold the Directors of this Institution liable for the maintenance of these cases they would no doubt make some provision for the return of the children to their homes.

Persons

Persons with symptoms of Insanity under treatment in Prisons.

I have for some time been aware that a large number of persons were treated for symptoms of insanity in the prisons of the Colony, and that only the more intractable of these cases found their way to the Hospitals for the Insane, and with a view of ascertaining (1st) the number of such cases treated, and (2nd) the length of time which these persons were detained in prison, the Comptroller General has at my request caused a return for the year 1878 to be prepared, and has promised a similar return for 1879.

From the return for 1878 it appears that no less than 283 persons were under treatment for symptoms of insanity in the prisons of the Colony (excluding Darlinghurst) during that year, that of this number only 123 were sent to Hospitals for the Insane, that 143 recovered, 5 died, and 12 remained at the close of the year.

The length of time these persons were detained in prison, even after being certified as insane, through want of escort and other causes, was in some cases very excessive. In numerous instances it was upwards of a month and in a few cases extended to five or six. A remedy for a state of things so unsatisfactory and so calculated to produce incurable insanity is provided in section 50 of the New Lunacy Act, which sets forth that "no insane person shall be detained in any reception house, hospital, or gaol, beyond a period of fourteen days, unless the medical officer thereof shall certify in writing that such person is not in a fit state to be removed therefrom or would be benefited by remaining therein," but the fact remains that there is no place in the country districts, except the prisons, where persons certified to be suffering from insanity can be taken care of and treated whilst waiting removal or travelling to hospital.

The 48th section of the Lunacy Act provides that "the Governor in Council may by notification in the Government Gazette declare wards of any public hospital, which may be set apart for such purpose by the Committee or the persons in whose hands shall be vested the management of such hospital, to be wards for the temporary reception of persons certified to be insane, and thereupon the Colonial Secretary shall make regulations for the dietary treatment and inspection of patients in such wards." I beg to recommend that steps be taken to induce the Committees of Public Hospitals to build or set apart wards under this section. It will not be difficult to furnish to them plans of the accommodation considered suitable, and a maintenance rate to be paid by the Government who now bear the cost of the maintenance in the prisons could be arranged so as to reimburse the Committees. This plan would doubtless be less costly than the establishment of separate reception houses under section 45 of the Act, in up-country towns, and there can be little doubt that the quieter patients, and women especially, would find a much more comfortable and suitable resting place in these wards than in prison, whilst it would still be optional to the Justices to send cases in which the symptoms are exceptionally violent to the safe keeping of the gaol.

The new statute to consolidate and amend the law relating to the insane, known as the "Lunacy Act of 1878," came into operation on March 1st, 1879. Most of the officers necessary for carrying out its provisions were not formally appointed till September 1st, and some difficulties and delays have therefore been felt in getting its machinery into working action. I am able to report that the first six parts of the Act, which relate to the admission, transfer, and discharge of patients, and to the regulation and inspection of hospitals, reception houses, and licensed houses, have worked exceedingly well, and though I am of opinion that the Act might in some minor points be amended with advantage, I consider that a more extended experience of its working is necessary before making any recommendation on the subject.

The Act was at first very imperfectly understood by the Justices charged with action under its provisions, and even at the present time a more careful study of it, and especially of Part I, is only too evidently necessary.

Under the old statute it was a common practise, especially in distant country places, for Justices before whom an insane patient was brought to call on him to enter into recognizances to keep the peace or to be imprisoned in default for five or even six months as a wandering lunatic, a vagrant, or for being discovered under circumstances denoting a purpose of committing some offence against the law, and to leave to the keeper of the prison to take action as regards the insanity either in the course of or at the expiry of this sentence. This most objectionable course, despite the clear provisions of sections 4, 5, 6, and 15, of the statute, and of two circular letters calling attention to these provisions, is still occasionally taken to the manifest disadvantage of the patient, and in complete antagonism to the humane provisions and intentions of the Act. In the absence of the one medical practitioner required for preliminary action it would be preferable to remand the case for a short time, or if on passing on the unfortunate patient to a place where medical assistance can be obtained it is necessary as a technical point to sentence him, this sentence should surely be for the shortest possible period.

The number of patients dealt with in this manner is certainly much fewer than it was; and I trust that before the close of another year the humane provisions of the Act will be taken advantage of in all cases. In one case two Justices took the extraordinary course of receiving certificates from two unqualified medical practitioners, but the patient was not admitted until other certificates and a fresh order had been obtained.

When the Act first came into operation the certificates furnished by some medical practitioners, who under the old Act had been used to a simple expression of opinion as to the existence of the malady, unsupported by any reasons whatever, were extremely meagre and unconvincing; but all such defective certificates have been amended under the provisions of section 13 of the Act, and the certificates now furnished are, as a rule, full and satisfactory, and in only the most occasional instances other than sufficient. In the only case in which any doubt as to the insanity of the patient on admission was felt by the Medical Superintendent, a special inquiry was held, and a report forwarded to you.

Some of the minor provisions of the Act, such as the absence of patients on trial (section 82) have only been acted on in a tentative manner, and the out-door relief sanctioned in section 89 has not yet been granted in any case, owing to the absence of any fund available for the purpose, until a special vote is granted by Parliament.

No action was taken under the 7th and 8th sections of the Act relating to the property of patients until a very late period of the year, but returns from the office of the Master in Lunacy show that already the sum obtained for maintenance of the patients is greater than during any former year, and property which was undergoing waste is now under proper care, and made available for the maintenance of the patient, and the benefit of the Government. There appears to be every probability that the payments for maintenance will in future years amount to not less than £5,000 a year.

Cost

Cost of Maintenance.

The collections from all sources have amounted to £2,985 5s. 11d., £505 2s. 3d. in excess of the collections for 1878, and are larger than any former year. The details of these collections are shown in the following table:—

The total expenditure in Hospitals for the Insane was £59,701 5s. 1d.

The average cost for maintenance in the Hospitals for the Insane has been 12s. 8½d. a week for each patient, or (deducting the sums received for maintenance, &c.) 12s. 1d. a week. At Gladesville (deducting collections) it was 11s. 2d.; at Parramatta, 11s. 2½d.; at Callan Park, £1 2s. 11½d.; at Newcastle, 12s. 8½d.; and at Cooma, £1 2s. 2d. The expenditure at the Reception House for the Insane amounted to £1,042 5s. 1d., and the expenditure on behalf of Government patients maintained under contract in the Licensed House for the Insane to £7,322 10s.

The following tables give particulars as to the expenditure in the Hospitals:—

The difference in cost at the hospitals is accounted for partly by the difference in the contract cost of provisions which as shown in the following table is more than twice as large at Cooma as at Parramatta, and partly by the number of patients which always materially affects the maintenance rate, small institutions, such as those at Cooma and Callan Park, costing much more per head than comparatively comparatively large establishments. In the case of Callan Park the cost is very much greater than it is likely to be in any subsequent year, owing to its being necessary to engage the staff before the new patients were received so as to make preparation for them and to lay in a complete stock of clothing, bedding, and other stores for the new wards:—

When establishments are once in working order the annual maintenance rate varies but little, and, as shown in the following return, the cost in all the establishments is decreasing, the cost for 1879 comparing favourably with that in former years:—

The average maintenance rate for the 1,808 patients in Hospitals during 1879, amounting to 12s. 1d. after deducting collections, compares not unfavourably with the cost in other colonies.

In Victoria, the cost in 1878, collections being deducted, was 13s. 4½d. a week; in New Zealand, 12s. 8¾d. a week; and in Ontario, Canada, 10s. 5¾d.

The average weekly cost in fifty-eight English County and Borough Asylums in 1878 was 9s. 10¾d., and in sixteen Lunatic Hospitals £1 6s. 7¼d. a week.

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, GLADESVILLE.

The number of patients in this Institution on December 31, 1878, was 656—334 males and 322 females. The admissions for the first time numbered 267—163 males and 104 females. The re-admissions were 65—40 males and 25 females; and one male was transferred from Cook's River, making a total under care of 989—538 males and 451 females. Of these, 140—88 males and 52 females—were discharged recovered; 38—12 males and 26 females—were discharged relieved; 86—74 males and 12 females—were transferred, and 48—34 males and 14 females—died. The number remaining on the books of the Hospital on December 31, 1879, was 677—330 males and 347 females; and of these 1 male and 1 female were absent on trial. The average number resident was 669—338 males and 331 females.

The recoveries give a per-centage of 42·63, and the patients discharged relieved a per-centage of 11·41, making together 54·04 on the admissions, whilst the deaths give a per-centage of 7·17 on the average number resident.

Notwithstanding

Notwithstanding the transfer of 86 patients to other institutions for the insane, mainly to the Hospital at Callan Park, the number on December 31st, 1879, was in excess of that on the same date in 1878 by 13, of whom 9 were females.

Of the total number of deaths 28 were due to cerebral, 9 to thoracic, and 5 to abdominal disease, 3 to general debility and old age, 1 to erysipelas, 1 to cancer, and 1 to suicide.

The statistics of the Institution are set forth in the tables appended to the report of the Medical Superintendent. (See Appendix A.)

The hospital was under my personal superintendence until September 1st, when Mr. Thomas Morgan Joseph took charge as Medical Superintendent.

The official visitors, Alfred Roberts, Esquire, H. G. Alleyne, Esquire, M.D., and William Owen, Esquire, Barrister-at-law, appointed under the old Lunacy Act, were continued in office under the new Statute, and have visited the Institution frequently. Since March 1st, these visits of inspection have been made in accordance with section 78 of the Lunacy Act and entries have after each visit been made in the Inspector's Book and copies forwarded to you. I have seen all these entries and do not find that they contain anything on which special remark from me is necessary. With the exception of several references to the overcrowding of the wards, especially in the female division, the entries are expressive of satisfaction with the condition of the Hospital.

I visited the Institution for the purpose of inspection on September 30th, October 2nd, 11th, 28th, 30th, and 31st, November 17th and 22nd, and December 11th, 15th, and 31st, and as the Inspector General's offices have been temporarily fixed at Gladesville I have besides had abundant opportunity of watching the work of the Institution, and of consultation with the Medical Superintendent. The following are copies of entries made in the Inspectors Book at visits of inspection:—

October 28th.—I have this day visited this hospital and seen all the patients in the female division; these now number 341, and the overcrowding in this division of the Institution is becoming most serious. I found the whole female division in its usual condition of cleanliness and order, and only one patient made a complaint, which was of rough treatment whilst dressing this morning. On inquiry, it appeared that she had been very excited and the strength of several nurses was necessary to place her in a single room. I did not consider the complaint was well grounded. No patient was in seclusion and two only in restraint; both these were very destructive, and I consider the camisole necessary in both. The Medical Journal shows that the amount of seclusion and restraint are both small, especially when the number of acute cases is considered. This Journal records an attack of a very dangerous character on the Medical Superintendent with a piece of iron skirting; this attack presents the unusual feature of something like combination between two patients; and there is little doubt that the actual perpetrator was prompted thereto by another patient—a man of thoroughly bad character. I have recommended that this iron skirting, which gets loose with time, rust, and white ant in the floor, should be first carefully examined as to its security throughout, and then gradually replaced by means of wood or cement. The admission and discharge registers are carefully kept and written up to date, and I have in accordance with the Act examined the papers sent with patients on admission since the last visit of the official visitors and checked them with the admission register, finding all correct. I have destroyed all the patients' letters which the medical Superintendent has seen reason to withhold since my last inspection of these documents. I have examined the case books. The commencement of all the new cases are carefully entered to date, but the entries of the progress of the cases have not been made with the regularity or frequency which is desirable. I think some definite arrangement should be adopted and adhered to pending the issue by the Colonial Secretary of approved regulations on this subject.

October 30th and 31st.—I have visited the whole of the wards in the male division, as well as the recreation yards, out-buildings, artisans' shops, stores, kitchen, laundry, &c. I saw the whole of the male patients, except those at work in the garden and grounds, and these I have seen repeatedly during the last month. Nos. 1, 4, and 5 wards were in excellent order and the patients quiet, tidy, and clean. In No. 3 ward the patients were restless and turbulent, and in this, as also in No. 2, they did not appear quite so tidy as usual. The number of sick is unusually small; but six patients were confined to their rooms,—two owing to extremely severe recurrent attacks of insanity, two from acute insanity after admission, and two for prolonged attacks of excitement in the course of general paralysis. One Chinaman complained of injury to his arm which on examination showed no sign even of bruising. In the stores I have to-day and on several occasions examined the bread, beer, meat, cheese, and other articles, and found all thoroughly good. Some turnips, which were being prepared for dinner, were found to be hard and tasteless, and their rejection was at once ordered by the Superintendent. The number of patients employed in the kitchen and in the tailors' shops is less than usual, and the number in the wood-yard is also small, but this latter is partly accounted for by the transfer of industrious patients to Callan Park.

November 17th.—I have this day visited this Institution, and passed through all the wards both in the male and female divisions, seeing all the patients except those employed in the laundry, garden, grounds, and workshops. No patient was in seclusion, and two only—one man and one woman—in restraint; both were in camisoles for extreme restlessness and destructive habits, and as both would without it denude themselves of all clothing and be of necessity confined to their rooms, I think the camisole necessary and preferable to constant seclusion. The number of patients suffering from bodily ailments necessitating their confinement to bed is small. I heard no complaints except one, and that was of insufficient food; the patient looked stout and healthy, and is reported as persistently idle, so that it is not probable that more food is necessary in his case.

December 11th.—I have yesterday and to-day inspected the female division of this Institution, the kitchen, laundry, stores, artisans' shops, stables, and outbuildings, leaving the whole of the male division for subsequent inspection at an early date. I saw all the female patients and such of the male patients who were employed in the kitchen, stores, shops, &c., and I examined the Admission and Discharge Registers, and the Medical Journal. I saw also the whole of the papers received with patients on admission since the date of my last official visit, and I looked over with some care all the patients' letters detained by the Superintendent, and ordered their destruction, considering their detention reasonable and right.

December 15th.—I have this day passed through the wards in the male division of this Institution, and have seen all the patients; I found no patient in restraint, and one only in seclusion. Three patients were confined to their rooms owing to acute mental illness, accompanied by symptoms which rendered such a course necessary. The number sick is very small, and the case of punctured wound of the chest progressed most satisfactorily. I heard no complaints beyond those of detention, and such as were obviously due to delusions. The rooms occupied by the patients were clean and in order. I have also taken the opportunity of seeing and speaking to all the patients employed in the garden and grounds, the number of whom appears to be somewhat smaller than usual.

The following casualties have occurred during the year, and were all duly entered in the Medical Journal:—

January 6th.—M.B. sustained fracture of the right arm. She was held by two nurses during an attack of violence, and in a sudden jump the arm was broken; the evidence of the nurses implicated, and of others, and also of the patient herself, was conclusive on the point that no violence was employed, and I considered the accident to be largely due to the state of the patient's health, and to fragility of the bones caused thereby; she was suffering from severe purpura, due to sleeping in overcrowded rooms, and her constitution was debilitated by gin-drinking. The case, which eventually terminated well, was most troublesome, owing to bruising and sloughing caused by the least pressure of the splints and bandages, which it was necessary to change daily throughout the treatment of the case.

January

January 22nd.—M.B., aged 76, sustained fracture of the neck of the thigh-bone. The patient, a meddlesome old woman, slapped another patient, and she was pushed, and fell, the fall causing the fracture. The accident occurred before any nurse could interfere, and no blame was attributable to anyone.

January 27th.—A.W. sustained fracture of the ulna. He suddenly engaged in a fight with another patient, and fell. On the attendant raising him he complained of pain in his arm, and the small bone was found to be fractured. In this case it appeared to have been impossible for the attendants to interfere, owing to the sudden nature of the quarrel.

November 20th.—J.D. inflicted a wound in his chest with a pair of tailor's scissors with suicidal intent. The wound which was at first serious healed without difficulty. On full and special inquiry I did not consider that any blame attached to any member of the staff.

December 30th.—W.L. committed suicide by hanging. In this case I attended the inquiry held by the Coroner, and afterwards held a special inquiry on points bearing on the discipline and management of the Institution. A special report was forwarded to you.

Care has been taken during the year to provide amusement for the patients, and the cricket-ground, bowling-green, ball-court, and skittle-alley have been the means of constant recreation. The dances and concerts have been continued, and a dramatic corps formed by the officers, attendants, and patients has given several successful entertainments. Divine Service has been conducted by the Chaplains twice on every Sunday, and the congregations have invariably been large and attentive. The harmonium has been played at both services by ladies living in the neighbourhood, who have, in addition to this kindness, held meetings of the patients and attendants for choir practice on one evening in each week.

On an examination of the daily reports I find that on December 31st 136 males and 139 females were actively employed, that 11 males and 7 females had wet and 3 males and 5 females had dirty beds at night, and that 96 males and 89 females attended Divine Service on the last Sunday in the year. I think the number attending Divine Service smaller than it should be.

The condition of overcrowding reached in the female division is highly prejudicial to the patients. At the close of the year 331 patients were sleeping in a space which would only properly accommodate 250, with a result as regards their mental and physical health which might be anticipated. An institution so overcrowded can only be managed with great difficulty, and there is constant danger of accident and of epidemic disease.

During the whole of the year two detached blocks of buildings with a central kitchen and offices, a gate-lodge, and quarters for the chief attendant have been in course of erection at some distance from the main buildings of the Hospital. These buildings, which will be complete in about eight months, will accommodate about 150 patients and their attendants, and were planned to receive the male patients now accommodated in temporary dormitories, and overcrowding the day and dining rooms. The completion of these will afford a much needed relief to the male division of the Institution.

No additional accommodation has been provided during the year, and the work done by the Colonial Architect's Department (with the exception of the completion of the new residence for the Medical Superintendent) has consisted in minor repairs to existing buildings.

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, PARRAMATTA.

The number of patients (free and convict) in this institution on December, 1878, was 575 males and 207 females—total, 782. 40 males and 20 females were admitted for the first time, 1 female was readmitted, and 19 males and 1 female were transferred from other hospitals, making the total number under care during the year, 863, of whom 634 were males and 229 females.

Of this number 15 males and 6 females recovered, 1 male and 1 female were discharged relieved, 13 males and 4 females were removed not improved, and 42 males and 10 females died, the total number discharged and died being 92, 71 males and 21 females. The number on the books of the hospital at the close of the year was 771 (563 males and 208 females), and of these 1 (female) was absent on trial. The average daily number resident was 770.

The patients discharged recovered form a per-centage of 34.42 and those discharged relieved of 3.27 on the admissions; the deaths give a per-centage 6.75 on the average number resident. The causes of death and the statistics of the hospital are set forth in the tables appended. The number of convict patients at the close of the year was 24—19 males and 5 females. They are aged, quiet, and inoffensive, are scattered through the wards with the other patients, and their status is known only to the officers in charge of the records of the hospital. They are paid for by the Imperial Government at the rate of £25 7s. 3d. each per annum.

No serious accident has happened during the year, and it has not been found necessary to hold a single Coroner's inquest.

The official visitors to the institution under the old Act, Alfred Roberts, Esq., H. G. Alleyne, Esq., M.D., and William Owen, Esq., Barrister-at-law are, as at Gladesville, continued in office under the new Act, and have visited the hospital under the provisions of section 78 of this Act, reporting to you after each visit, and recording the results of their inspection in the Inspector's book at the hospital.

On July 4th the visitor's made some suggestions as to laying-out and turfing the yards, and on July 25th recommended the removal of some old bedsteads and the substitution for them of new iron ones.

On both these points their recommendations had been anticipated, new bedsteads having been ordered from England and arrangements made for gradually turfing and planting the yards. On October 28th the visitors reported that "the main building (female division) is more repulsive than ever, the small associated rooms at the end are painfully overcrowded (the beds being within a few inches of each other), and lately four or five patients have been placed in a mere loft at the top of the stairs among the roof-beams. We beg to express our opinion that this place is quite unfit for any patient, and beg to recommend that they should be removed at once." I cordially agree with the official visitors that this den in the roof is quite unfit as a dormitory for any human being, but its use was a painful necessity due to the great overcrowding. At present the buildings set apart for females in all the institutions for the insane are overcrowded, and there is no place to which the patients can be removed from Parramatta.

In a special report, forwarded to you in November 1878, and in several letters and personal interviews since that date I have pointed out the deplorable condition of the female division of this Institution, where 208 patients were at the close of the year confined in a space sufficient only for 123 at the most, and in buildings so old and so prison-like as to be depressing even to a casual visitor—so dark that even in the brightest day it is never more than twilight, and so close that braziers and fires are kept constantly burning to assist ventilation. The condition of these patients is now the more to be regretted since new buildings which would accommodate all with comfort have been erected on the vineyard property at Parramatta, and are now standing unoccupied because authority has not been granted for the erection of the kitchen, laundry, tanks, fences, and other accessories without which they cannot be used. The buildings have cost about £18,000. They are of weatherboard and brick, and will when complete afford accommodation for 350 female patients and their attendants. The various improvements which have been made in this Institution during the year are set forth in the report of the Medical Superintendent forwarded herewith. (See Appendix B.) I paid visits of inspection to this hospital on September 20th and 29th, October 1st, 3rd, 17th, and 22nd, and November 25th; and I have on various other occasions visited the Institution to see the progress of additional buildings and alterations, to consult with the Medical Superintendent as to the management of the Institution and for other purposes.

The following are copies of the entries in the Inspector's book at recent visits :—

October 17th.—I visited this Institution and examined a number of the patients with a view to discharge, signing certificates in the cases of three women and four men. On a prior occasion I examined a number of the more demented and aged patients with a view to their discharge to one of the Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute. After a mature consideration of their cases, and after consultation with the Medical Superintendent, who has talked over the matter with the chief attendant, and with the attendant in charge, I have reluctantly come to the conclusion not to discharge any. Some, owing to peculiarities, and others, owing to feebleness, require care, which would not be accorded to them in the Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute as at present constituted, and though all are harmless they would no doubt be regarded as a great trouble, and would not do well in the asylums indicated. I met Mr. Coles, of the Colonial Architect's Department, by appointment, and explained to him the requirements as to accommodation for Church service and the alterations suggested in the large dining-room of the new building, and accompanied him to the dam to which he ordered temporary repairs, and also to the new buildings for women, at which various matters of detail were considered and arranged. I also pointed out the necessity for additional seats in the weatherboard division for men.

I visited the farm with the Assistant Superintendent and found that some improvements had taken place in its cultivation, that the fences are in process of repair, and that the place altogether is more tidy. I fixed on a site for the new gardener's cottage, and suggested to the Superintendent that steps should be taken to arrange with the trustees of the park for the repair of the fencing dividing the park from the hospital reserve.

November 25th.—I have this day visited this Institution and examined the books required to be kept by the statute. The admission and discharge registers for both the free and criminal divisions are correctly kept, as is also the medical journal for the criminal division. I do not, however, consider the mode of keeping the medical journal for the free division as quite satisfactory, and have explained to the Assistant Medical Officer some particulars of the changes which seem desirable. I consider that the reasons for restraint and seclusion are not given with sufficient clearness, and that the word "protection," which is extremely indefinite, should be disused. As I have before mentioned I think the number at least of patients in the small seclusion yards daily should be entered among the general observations. I examined and destroyed all the letters written by patients and detained by the Medical Superintendent since the date of my last visit, and I also examined some of the case-books. The recent cases are duly entered, and the notes concerning them are made with sufficient frequency, but in the majority of the old cases there is no note since July last, and the prescriptions are not entered. I have on a prior occasion (September 29th) made an entry on this subject, and I would now note that I consider this matter one of importance and demanding immediate attention. No difficulty is experienced in keeping the case books at Gladesville, although the number of patients on the books during the year is largely in excess of that at Parramatta. It appears to me to be the duty of the Assistant Medical Officer to make the entries with regard to patients, and the entry of prescriptions might be left to the dispenser under the Assistant Medical Officer's supervision. I examined the bread which appeared fairly good though somewhat under baked, and I also saw the tea, sugar, rice, cheese, port wine, and other provisions, and found them equal to sample.

I passed through the criminal division, all the wards for men in the main hospital, and the female division, and saw all the patients except such as were employed in the woodyard and grounds.

The female division was in its usual order. Two patients were in seclusion in the rooms, and four were in the small separate yards. The wire netting on the windows of the old day shed is torn and untidy, and as it is clearly unnecessary and prevents the windows being cleaned, I think it should be removed by the carpenter from the whole of the windows. The same official might also with advantage carry out repairs to the roofs of the closets in the separate yards.

In the criminal division the patients were quiet and, with one or two exceptions, more tidy in dress than usual. Two of them (G.E. and V.S.) appear to persistently denude themselves, and I think a temporary trial of restraint might be useful. The former, who is reported to be a most violent and dirty patient, was in one of the separate yards. I notice that in the whole of the single rooms, as well as the corridors, in this division the skirting is made of iron, fastened to the floor by means of screws. I consider this to be peculiarly dangerous, as the wooden floor rots, and the screws are then easily withdrawn, and the iron can then be removed in lengths to form very handy and most dangerous weapons. I gather that this skirting has been so used at Parramatta on more than one occasion, and it is not long since the medical superintendent at Gladesville nearly lost his life by being struck by a piece of this kind of skirting. At Gladesville it has been removed, and I recommend that the same course should be followed at Parramatta. The removal might be carried out through the Colonial Architect's department, and then cement skirtings might be supplied. This division of the hospital is very dreary, owing to the yards being unplanted, and I very strongly recommend that steps be at once taken to trench, remove the stones, and manure and plant at least one of these yards. This would furnish occupation to some of the patients, who cannot, for fear of escape, be employed elsewhere, and one yard being done at a time all such patients as would misuse the tools or destroy the work in progress might be kept for the time in the other. The whole work might be carried out under directions of the chief attendant according to some plan previously decided on. In the green and other yards for male patients there was but little excitement or noise. One patient was in seclusion, owing to being extremely noisy at the medical round, and I think a similar course might with advantage be pursued in the case of another man who utters a series of the most piercing shrieks. I saw on this and on several former occasions a patient (J.C.) who refuses to leave his bed, and spends all his time huddled in the bed clothes. As the man is in excellent condition I think some steps might be taken, under medical direction, to induce him to conform to the ordinary rules of the Institution. The number of patients was 613 males and 213 females, total 826; and of these, as appears from the matron's and chief attendant's reports, 48 females and 190 males are employed in some useful work.

January 8th.—I have this day visited this hospital and passed through the whole of the buildings occupied by female patients, finding them as clean as their old, sombre, and in some parts dilapidated condition will admit of. I saw all the female patients except one (R.S., employed in the matron's room). Spoke to almost all, and marked off each name by my list, which had been corrected to date. Their general appearance was indicative of good health, and some of the older patients looked surprisingly well, especially considering their long confinement; one only was in bed from temporary sickness. A child recently admitted with a semi-imbecile girl is about to be sent to the Benevolent Asylum.

The dress of the patients was sufficiently tidy, and their general appearance showed attention and care. Ten were wearing strong dresses, but the Matron complained that the material of these was not sufficiently strong for the more destructive, and I strongly advise that a supply of strong canvas dresses should be obtained from the Gaol, and supplied to such as persistently destroy clothing. The present material will serve for those who are simply untidy or only destructive occasionally. I found one patient in a single room, owing to denuding herself and exposing her head to the sun, and five were in the small seclusion yards. One of these (M.J.) and another patient (C.W.) were in muffs, for reasons which

HOSPITAL FOR THE CRIMINAL INSANE, PARRAMATTA.

This Hospital consists of two yards with buildings, &c., adjoining and forming part of the Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta, and is managed in conjunction with that Institution. It is set apart entirely for male patients, and the females of the criminal class are placed in the ordinary wards of the main hospital.

The number of criminal patients on 31st December, 1878, was 44—40 males and 4 females; the patients admitted for the first time were 16 males and 3 females, and 12 males were transferred, making a total of 75—68 males and 7 females—under care. The cases transferred were prisoners awaiting trial, and found insane on arraignment, who had previously been placed on the books of the free division. During the year 5 male patients recovered, 3 (male) were discharged relieved on expiry of sentence, and 6 males and 1 female were transferred to the free division; 3 males died.

The inmates remaining in the hospital on 31st December, 1879, was 51 males and 6 females, total 57; or without reckoning 12 cases transferred a decrease of 1 on the total number. The average number resident was 53. The patients discharged recovered show a per-centage of 26·31, and those relieved of 15·78, on the admissions, whilst the deaths give a per-centage of 5·66 on the average number resident.

The following is the classification of the patients in this Institution on 31st December, 1879:—

The buildings in this Institution are very unfit for the purpose to which they are applied and seem to have been constructed solely with a view of keeping the inmates safely, without any idea of their recovery from their malady. They are kept in a clean and tidy condition, and efforts are being made to make the corridors more cheerful by painting and colouring them, and to relieve the monotony of the yards by turfing and planting trees, shrubs, and flowers.

The following tables give the statistics of the Institution for the year :—

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, CALLAN PARK.

This was constituted a separate Institution by proclamation in the Government Gazette on August 1st, 1878, having prior to that date been managed as a branch of the Gladesville Hospital. On December 31st, 1878, it contained 44 patients.

During the year 16 patients were admitted direct and 54 were transferred from Gladesville, making a total of 114 under care; of these 1 recovered, 2 were discharged relieved, 3 were transferred to other hospitals, and 1 died, leaving 107 under care at the close of the year.

I gave up immediate charge of the Institution to Mr. Richard Battersly Scholes, formerly the assistant medical officer at the Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta, on September 1st, and I append his report on the Institution, showing the movement of the patients during the year. (See Appendix C.)

I paid official visits of inspection on September 21st, October 18th, November 20th, and December 16th, and I visited the hospital for special purposes on several other occasions, and on one was present at Divine service, at which there was a large and attentive congregation of patients, together with the officers and attendants.

No accidents except such as were of a very trivial character have occurred. One patient escaped, but was returned to the Hospital after a short absence.

The following is a copy of my entry in the Inspector's book at my last visit during the year:—

I have this day visited this Institution and seen all the patients except 4—J.S., J.B., F.L., and H.J.—of whom two were temporarily employed at the entrance gates, and the other two escaped my observation when in the wards.

The number on the books is 105, but one (H.B.) escaped on the 13th instant and has not yet been recaptured. The circumstances attending this man's escape have not yet been fully investigated, but it appears that blame attaches to the attendant in charge of the working party. The Medical Superintendent has promised a searching inquiry. The patients seemed as a rule in good health (some have decidedly improved physically since transfer from Gladesville), and were quiet and free from complaints. I saw the papers received with all admitted since my last visit and found them correct. One patient (an African) appears to have come direct from the steamer in which he arrived in Sydney. I examined the statutory books, which were correctly kept, and saw and destroyed all letters written by patients and detained by the Medical Superintendent since my last visit, considering that there was sufficient reason for not sending all of them. No patient was in seclusion or restraint, and only one was in bed owing to epileptic excitement. The rooms occupied by patients and also the outbuildings were clean and in good order. A large amount of out-door work is being done, and considerable progress has been made in laying out the new yards. The number of the patients actively employed is 42, a fair proportion of the inmates. The religious services are held regularly by the chaplains on Sundays and are made more attractive by a good harmonium which has been recently purchased. The number of patients attending Divine service is 61. Many matters of detail yet require attention, and there is still a large amount of work to be done in the grounds and within the Institution. There is abundant evidence that the management is thoroughly careful and satisfactory.

Temporary buildings to accommodate 92 patients have been erected at this Institution during the year, and were ready for occupation late in August. They have been arranged as far as possible with a view of making the material serviceable in the erection of farm buildings, &c., in connection with the new Hospital when it becomes necessary to remove the present structures.

After five or six years delay, and after advertising and re-advertising for tenders for the work, a contract was taken at the close of the year for the construction of the new Metropolitan Hospital for the Insane on the site purchased for the purpose at Callan Park. The plan adopted is, with some modifications, that of the new Asylum for the county of Kent at Chatham. The style of the building is without unnecessary ornament, and the cubic space per bed is exactly the English standard. The cost, however, will be considerably more than double the English rate per bed, as will be seen from the following letter from the architects of the Chatham Asylum, and this is due, as I understand, entirely to the cost of labour and material in this Colony in comparison with the cost in England.

Messrs. Giles and Gough, in a letter addressed to me on September 1st, 1875, in answer to inquiries as to the cost of Chatham, write as follows:—"The new Kent County Asylum is designed for 1,200 patients as regards administration, &c., but the actual accommodation as now completed is 900, it being intended to make extension as required by adding further blocks. There are 180 single rooms to the 900 patients. The total cost of Asylum has been £140,000, which includes farm-buildings, gas-works and apparatus, wells and pumps, engines and boilers, baths and heating apparatus, a detached house and stable for chaplain, a detached house for engineer, a lodge and entrance gate and walls, 9 detached cottages for gardeners, labourers, &c., airing-court, walls, sunk fences, and laying out grounds, formation of roads, and the removal of a large amount of earth, caused by the slope of the ground on which the building is placed, and which was in itself a costly item."

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, NEWCASTLE.

On 31st December, 1878, the number of inmates was 121 males and 76 females, a total of 197. The admissions numbered 29, 17 being males and 12 females, and of these 6 were admitted direct, 19 were transferred from Gladesville, and 4 from Parramatta. The whole number admitted, except 3 of those transferred from Parramatta, were suffering from congenital mental deficiency and from mental weakness arising from epilepsy or other disease, or from injury occurring in early life. In none of the cases admitted could complete recovery be expected. Three males and 1 female were discharged during the year to the care of friends, so far improved as to be free from objectionable habits, and useful, and 1 male was discharged unimproved. Ten males and two females died, together making a per-centage of 6 deaths on the average number resident. This per-centage, when the very feeble physical condition of a large number of the inmates is considered, is certainly small, and speaks well for the care and attention bestowed on them.

On 31st December, 1879, the number of inmates was 124 males and 85 females, a total of 209, and an increase of 12 during the year.

The appended tables gives the main statistics of the Institution for the year. From table 25 it will be seen that 1 death was due to typhoid fever. I was at the Institution during the patient's illness, and very carefully examined into the question, but was unable to ascertain any sufficient cause within the Institution itself, the drains of which were in good order, and the closets free from offensive smell.

At the close of the year 23 of the patients were under 10, and 106 under 20, years of age, whilst, with few exceptions, all were children in intellect. Fifty-four of the total number (26 males and 28 females) suffered from epileptic fits.

During the year the general health of the patients has been good, but the Institution has never been completely free from ophthalmia which has occurred for the most part in a mild form, but has been exceedingly troublesome. By the close of the year however it all but disappeared and no fresh case has since occurred. Two accidents have occurred: A female patient sustained fracture of the collar-bone through being pushed by another patient whilst coming downstairs, and a boy had his knee-cap fractured by the slamming of the entrance door of which he was temporarily in charge. Both cases did well, and in neither did I consider that blame attached to any member of the staff.

Religious services have for a long time past been held once a week, but usually on a week day. The chaplains most readily adopted my suggestion made early in the year, that these should be held on Sunday, and about sixty males and forty females now attend Divine service, which is held regularly on Sunday in a room set apart for the purpose. Many of the children have very sweet voices, and trained by members of Mr. Cane's family and the nurses, sing very nicely.

The Institution was throughout the year, and at its close, much overcrowded. The dormitory accommodation is for 163 patients only, so that the Institution now contains forty-three more patients than it will properly accommodate. Towards the close of the year the house within the Hospital grounds, and occupied by the late Police Magistrate, was handed over to this department, and as soon as a number of very necessary repairs are executed, it will be set apart as a residence for the Superintendent, and the rooms in the main building, now occupied by Mr. Cane, will be given up to female patients.

Very considerable improvements and alterations have been carried out during the year: A new kitchen, scullery, and offices have been erected and fitted with a most compact and well-arranged steam-cooking apparatus, manufactured by Messrs. Benham and Son, of Wigmore-street, London. A large airing-shed has been placed in the recreation ground, and a new bath-room and lavatory in the male division.

Early in the year a night-nurse was appointed, and her attention to the patients during the night has been very useful in checking faulty habits.

I have nothing new to report as to the general management of the Institution. Up to the present time, owing to want of space, class-rooms, and appliances, and also means for the classification of the inmates, no attempt has been made at such systematic teaching as is carried out at Institutions set apart for the feeble-minded in Great Britain and America. The efforts of the staff are directed to the physical needs of the patients, the induction of habits of cleanliness and order, and to the employment of those among them who are more intelligent in such avocations as their strength will allow.

I have in former reports, and especially in one forwarded to you early in 1878, advocated the establishment of a new Institution specially for feeble-minded children, in which the systematic mental and physical training which has been found so useful in developing both the minds and bodies of these poor folk could be properly carried out. The grounds at Newcastle are so limited in extent that the out-door exercise and the occupation which are necessary for the health and development of children, and especially of children of this class, cannot be obtained whilst their physical peculiarities render it almost impossible, and certainly undesirable, for the larger number of them to take exercise beyond the Hospital boundaries.

The building at Newcastle would serve admirably for the reception of aged and demented patients and epileptics of mature age, a class not capable of out-door occupation, and needing but little out-door exercise.

I visited the Hospital on March 17th, April 29th, September 23rd and 24th, and November 27th and 28th, and on each occasion closely inspected the Institution and saw all the patients.

The following is a copy of the entry made in the Inspector's book on the occasion of my last visit:—

I have spent the whole of two days at this Institution in a general survey of its working and in holding an inquiry as to the conduct of some of the nurses.

On September 22nd the number of patients was—males, 122; females, 80; total, 202. Since this date 2 males and 7 females have been admitted—1 male and 7 females from Gladesville and Parramatta, and 1 male direct. 2 males have been discharged to the care of friends, and 1 male and 1 female have died.

The number in hospital at my visit was—121 males; 86 females; total, 207. I saw all the patients except two boys (T. and M.), employed with the out-door attendant, and temporarily away from the building. I examined each patient separately, having in view both the mental and general health, and I was especially careful to examine those recently admitted. The general health appears good. Two patients were in bed in the female division from chronic disease, and seven in the male from various ailments. One of these was suffering from typhoid fever, a disease for which on inquiry I could discover no local cause, the Institution being remarkably free from all offensive smell. There were three cases of ringworm which required special attention, and I regret to find that the terrible scourge ophthalmia, which has so long existed in the Institution, has not yet been stamped out. Three or four girls, and the same number of boys, were suffering from it in an acute stage, and a number showed signs that they had only recently recovered from an attack. In no case, however, has it led to blindness or conjunctival destruction. On inquiring I found that sufficient care was not taken to wash these patients quite apart from the others, and that an objectionable practice of washing two or three patients in the same water obtains in the female division. This is partly due to defective lavatory accommodation, and partly to the existing lavatory being inconveniently placed. I at once took steps to have a doorway out, so as to furnish easier access to the the lavatory, directed an additional supply of basins, and issued special directions to the Superintendent with regard to the ophthalmia cases. The whole of the patients were quiet in demeanour, clean in person, fairly tidy in dress, and appeared cheerful and contented. The dormitories and day-rooms were thoroughly clean and in order, and the female division bore its usual appearance of homely comfort. The male division showed some improvement in this direction, and the hospital for the sick, in which various alterations have been carried out is decidedly more comfortable. The kitchen and laundry, and some of the out-buildings, were not so clean as is desirable, and the arrangements as to these departments require attention. The new kitchen apparatus works admirably. The tea and coffee boilers are specially good, and there is now every convenience which can be desired for carrying out the full dietary scheme planned some time ago, but which has been partly in abeyance owing to the defects in the kitchen arrangements. I saw the stores, and examined the bread, meat, potatoes, sugar, tea, cheese, rice, and other articles, and found all satisfactory except the sugar, which was not equal to the store sample, and the return of which I directed. The Superintendent reports favourably of the provisions received from the three contractors now supplying the Institution. I saw the female patients at dinner, which was served in the most orderly manner, and before which grace was nicely sung by the children, Miss Cane accompanying them on the harmonium.

I examined and signed the statutory books which are correctly kept, and I saw all the case books which are written up to a recent date.

The medical journal shows that seclusion is only very rarely resorted to, and that the two patients who were in muffs at the time of my visit are the only two who have been in restraint for a long period. In both of these cases, owing to very faulty habits in one case, and to a habit of picking the face, so as to make very severe sores in the other, I considered the muffs necessary.

The daily reports are properly kept, and show that 17 males and 24 females are actively and usefully employed. I consider this number too small, and think that every exertion should be made to induce the patients to occupy themselves. The dietary sheets showed that the amount of extras and stimulants used is small and judiciously distributed. The present ward staff consists of 1 attendant or nurse to every 13 male, and 1 nurse to every 17 female, patients. In the event of the admission of more female patients an extra nurse will be required.

I saw the Clerk of Works belonging to the Colonial Architect's Department with reference to various minor requisitions and works in progress, and urged as speedy a completion of these as possible.

An inquiry into the conduct of some of the nurses occupied me for some hours, and disclosed a painful want of agreement, and some evils which call for a prompt remedy. This will form the subject of a special report addressed to the Colonial Secretary.

On the whole, though there is still much to be desired, the institution is progressing in usefulness, and the general management is careful.

TEMPORARY HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, COOMA.

This small Institution has accommodated an average number of 60 patients during the year, and the number on December 31st was 57, all males.

The statistics of the Institution for the year, set forth in the tables which are appended, are extremely favourable and will probably be used by those who advocate small instead of moderate sized institutions for the care and treatment of the insane as an argument on their side, but in reality they require explanation to place them in their true light and illustrate in an admirable manner the fallacies which beset statistics when the numbers operated on are small. The recoveries give a per-centage on the admissions of 300 per cent., whilst the death rate on the average number resident has been only 1.66. The first per-centage is due to the fact that the admissions numbered 1 only, being exceptionally small, whilst the low death rate which has existed ever since the Institution was formed is due to the selection of patients sent to Cooma on its first establishment, all of whom were comparatively young and free from physical ailments, and also to the fine bracing climate.

I visited the Institution on the 1st and 2nd June and on the 8th and 9th November, and on each occasion found it in excellent order. The following is a copy of the entry made in the Inspector's book at my last visit:—

I have yesterday and to-day inspected this Institution, and after an examination of the whole of the rooms occupied by patients as well as the kitchen, laundry, offices, and stores, I saw all the patients—60 in number—speaking to each one and giving each an opportunity of making complaints to me. I heard no complaints except such as were manifestly due to delusion, and with the exception of a desire for discharge expressed by several they appeared contented. Their general health was good; no one was in bed, and in one only was there evidence of serious physical disease. This was E.M., who is suffering from pulmonary and laryngeal phthisis. They were all comfortably and neatly clad, their general appearance was tidy, and there was a complete absence of noise and excitement. The number actively employed—27—indicates a considerable general improvement in mental condition. The hospital itself is exceedingly clean and in good order throughout; the front garden is nicely kept; the kitchen garden is productive and in good cultivation, and some flower borders, recently made within the walls, are a great improvement. I examined the statutory books, which are correctly kept, and also the case books, which are in accordance with the directions issued by the Colonial Secretary. The medical journal shows that the amount of seclusion is small, and that there was only one instance of restraint during the year. This patient was in muffs at the time of my visit owing to extreme restlessness and very destructive habits. The departmental records and the clothing, provision, and other accounts were in good order. In accordance with section 183 of the Lunacy Act I examined and destroyed all letters written by patients and detained by the Superintendent.

The Superintendent reports favourably of the supplies furnished by the contractor for provisions, and the bread, meat, potatoes, flour, sugar, and all other articles received and in stock on the day of my visit I examined and found thoroughly good. I saw the patients at dinner, which consisted of Irish stew, properly cooked and served with due order. I would, however, advise supplying each patient with a drinking cup and water at dinner, which is not at present done.

The Medical Officer visits the Institution regularly and with sufficient frequency, each visit being recorded in the official visiting book.

The chaplains hold Divine service on Sunday mornings, and visit at other times if requested.

The amusements of the patients must always be difficult in such a small institution, but some of them go out frequently for a walk, and advantage is taken of concerts and other entertainments in the town to send a few. The library is in fair request, and the supply of newspapers good. I have suggested to the Superintendent the purchase of an additional supply of books for the library, and the exchange of some of those which have been well read with Callan Park or some other institution.

I specially examined three patients with a view to their discharge, and signed the necessary order in the case of one of these. Some of the stores recently supplied, and apparently of prison manufacture, are of very inferior quality, but the cost of carriage is too great to permit of their return, and it is clear that the Store Department should be requested not to send such inferior articles in future.

The underground tank so long in progress is now complete, and full of water, a reserve of 26,000 gallons being thus assured, and all danger of a failure of water supply, which occasioned so much trouble and anxiety during the last summer, averted.

The new cottage for the chief attendant is nearly complete, and some minor requisitions have received attention, but one for additional dining tables, much needed, and another for a small blacksmith's shop, are as yet unattended to.

The main drains of the Institution, which for many months has monopolised the labour of the patients, and which has been cut through a large amount of solid rock at a great depth is now nearly complete, and the patients are now all employed in gardening or in the necessary work of the Institution.

The plan of the building required by the 77th section of the Lunacy Act to be hung in some conspicuous place has not yet been supplied. The whole appearance of the patients and of the building indicates that the Institution is under careful management, and reflects credit on the responsible officers.

LICENSED HOUSE FOR THE INSANE, COOK'S RIVER.

I visited this Institution for the first time under the provisions of the "Lunacy Act of 1878" on September 18th, 1879, when in accordance with the requirements of the Act I saw the license which was granted under the Act for three years from May 1st, 1879.

At this date there had been no official visitation or inspection of this Institution for some months. The official visitors under the old Act ceased to visit when the new Act came into operation, and visitors under the new Act have not yet been appointed.

I very strongly recommend the appointment of official visitors to this Institution in accordance with section 78 of the Lunacy Statute believing that as a matter of justice to the patients and also to the licensee official visitation cannot be too frequent, and that it should be made by official visitors as representing the public as well as by the Inspector General on behalf of the Government.

Throughout the year there have been 125 female patients in this Institution paid for by the Government, and vacancies caused by death or discharge have been filled up by the transfer of patients from Gladesville, a preference having always been given to those whose relatives or friends reside in the neighbourhood of Cook's River, so as to save them trouble and expense in visiting.

These patients are maintained under a contract with the Government, which terminates January 1st, 1883.

The number of private patients has varied from time to time, and at the close of the year there were six males and three females. The tables appended show the statistics of the Institution for the year. I visited the Institution on November 21st and December 22nd, as well as on the date above mentioned, and on each occasion I inspected the whole of the Institution (Dr. Agassiz, the Deputy Medical Superintendent, accompanying me through the wards), and saw all the patients. I examined all "orders" and "requests" with the medical certificates for the admission of patients, the admission and discharge registers, and the Medical Journal, which are kept in accordance with the Statute, and also the case books, which are kept in the form and manner directed by the Colonial Secretary under section 39 of the Lunacy Act.

I made inquiries as to the number of attendants, nurses, and servants, the arrangements for Divine service and for amusement, the dietary, and the general arrangements for the care and comfort of the patients. During one visit I saw the patients at dinner, which was served with order and cleanliness, and at which the food was well cooked, of excellent quality, ample, and, indeed, unstinted in supply.

The patients at my visits were free from complaints, their general health was satisfactory, and the clothing of the Government patients cleaner and better than at some of my visits paid specially under your instructions to see these patients.

From the Medical Journal it appears that seclusion is not resorted to except in special cases and for reasons which appear sufficient, and that mechanical restraint has not been employed since this book has been kept.

The Superintendent has shown a commendable readiness in carrying out any improvements suggested to him, and the high per-centage of recoveries and low death rate may be taken as evidence of the care bestowed on the treatment and comfort of the patients.

THE OBSERVATION WARD, H. M. GAOL, DARLINGHURST.

This ward, which has for some years been used under the prison departmental arrangements for prisoners exhibiting symptoms of insanity, and for persons remanded from the Sydney Police Courts for medical treatment, owing to symptoms of alcoholism, or transient insanity, was by notification in the Government Gazette, dated May 16th, 1879, set apart under the Lunacy Act of 1878, and in the terms of section 67 thereof, "for the detention of any prisoner who may be supposed to be insane, or who from mental imbecility may be supposed to be unfit for penal discipline in order that he may be there placed under observation, until it be certified by two medical practitioners, one of whom shall be either the Inspector General, or the Superintendent, or Medical Officer of an hospital for the insane, that he is of sound mind, or is insane, and a fit subject for detention in an hospital for the criminal insane."

This arrangement was made so as to defeat malingering on the part of prisoners, of which there have been in past years some prolonged and successful examples, and to discriminate as far as possible the measure of responsibility, and therefore the fitness for discipline in those difficult cases which stand on the borderlands of wickedness and insanity, by bringing the prisoners under the special observation of the Medical Officer at Darlinghurst Gaol, in circumstances and with surroundings calculated to facilitate diagnosis, and by calling to his assistance the special experience of a medical officer of the Lunacy Department to examine the prisoners, and to sign one of the certificates necessary for discharge or removal to an hospital for the insane.

The Inspector General is by section 70 of the Lunacy Act directed to visit and inspect the wards set apart under section 67 of the Act, and immediately the Act came into operation I placed myself in communication with the Comptroller General of Prisons, with a view to carry out the necessary arrangements. On March 25th I visited the ward, which consists of the corridor and twelve cells of No. 2 Wing of the gaol, with the visiting surgeon, and suggested certain minor alterations for carrying out which the necessary authority has since been granted.

The ward is in many respects ill arranged for the purpose and differs very much from the ward set apart for a similar purpose in connection with the English prison at Millbank. It is however perhaps as suitable as any other part of Darlinghurst Gaol, and the alterations which have been authorised will greatly facilitate the close observation of the inmates.

In the event of any additions being made to the accommodation for prisoners in Darlinghurst, I would strongly advise the erection of a specially designed building as an observation ward, and the resumption of the present corridor and cells for ordinary prison purposes.

Since

Since appointment to the office of Inspector General I have paid two official visits of inspection to the ward on October 9th and December 19th, and I have visited it at other times to see individual prisoners.

A general register was prepared immediately the ward was gazetted, and the following return, furnished at my request by the Comptroller General of Prisons, shows the number of patients received and discharged from May 16th to December 31st, 1879 :—

Although this ward is set apart for prisoners of doubtful sanity who are undergoing sentence, it has been found convenient as a departmental arrangement and in default of other accommodation to admit also persons found to be insane whilst awaiting trial or on arraignment, those acquitted on the ground of insanity and awaiting medical certificates necessary for their admission into an hospital for the insane, certain epileptics, and also the large number of cases of delirium tremens and doubtful sanity which the magistrates sitting in the Sydney Police Courts see fit to remand for temporary medical treatment or further evidence. Of these latter cases no less than 90 were admitted in the eight months and a half after the observation ward was proclaimed and the register kept.

A very large proportion of these cases were discharged as sane at the Police Court on their return thither; the remainder, after one or more remands, showed undoubted symptoms of insanity and were forwarded in the usual course to hospital.

The association of these persons with prisoners undergoing sentence is in some respects objectionable, and there is little doubt but that they would be more comfortable and the treatment necessary for them could be more easily and scientifically carried out at the Reception House for the Insane, in which with the recent additions and with less pressure on its space due to the more rapid admission to hospitals for the insane under the provisions of the new Lunacy Act, they could be accommodated. I hesitate however to recommend such a change in the law as would admit of their remand to this Institution, because I am not sure that the future welfare of these persons would not thereby be imperilled. The Reception House is directly associated with insanity, and unhappily a residence therein would in many cases, owing to a morbid public feeling, do much more to stand in the way of a man's future livelihood or advancement than a residence in the neighbouring establishment, into which persons are admitted for debt and for very many minor offences. I have in many cases and at various times during the past ten years questioned intelligent persons, who have for delirium tremens or passing mental excitement been remanded to Darlinghurst Gaol for medical treatment, and in almost every instance they have after recovery stated that they would rather be sent to Darlinghurst Gaol than to the Reception House, simply because they dreaded the suspicion of insanity attaching to them and militating against their future prospects. These form by far the majority, and the minority, who really prove to be insane and to need subsequent hospital treatment are at all events well cared for and are under the same medical officer as they would be at the Reception House.

On the occasion of my official visits I examined the registers and report books and made inquiries as to the dietary, the general supervision, and the care and treatment of the inmates. The general management and care of the patients appears to be satisfactory, the registers and report books are accurately kept and the return shows that the ward is serving a useful and important purpose.

APPENDIX A.

Sir,

Hospital for the Insane, Gladesville, 28 February, 1880.

I have the honor to forward for your information a report upon this hospital for the year 1879, and to furnish in an Appendix the usual statistical tables.

On 31st December, 1878, the number of patients in hospital was 334 males, 322 females, making a total of 656.

The admissions during the year 1879 were 204 males, 129 females, making a total of 333; of these 163 males and 104 females were admitted for the first time, and 41 males and 25 females had been previously under care in this institution.

The total number of patients under care during the year was 989, of these 538 were males and 451 females. The average number resident was 338 males and 331 females, making a total of 669. The number discharged during the year was 312. 88 males and 26 females were relieved, and 74 males and 12 females were not improved.

The number of deaths, 34 males and 14 females, with the discharges, make up a total of 312.

The number of patients remaining in hospital on 31st December, 1879, was 677, of whom 330 were males and 347 were females.

These statistics are given in a tabular form in the Appendix table 1. The number of admissions for each year since 1870 is given in the following table:—

Year.	No. of admissions.	Year.	No. of admissions.
1870 .....	197	1875 .....	337
1871 .....	277	1876 .....	340
1872 .....	268	1877 .....	433
1873 .....	296	1878 .....	400
1874 .....	312	1879 .....	333

The decrease in the number of admissions may be accounted for from the fact that all patients from the Western District have been admitted into the Hospital for the Insane at Parramatta, from the 1st March of this year; and that all male patients forwarded from the Water Police Court, Sydney, have been sent to the Hospital for the Insane at Callan Park since the 1st of September.

Of the cases admitted, 65 were suffering from the various forms of dementia, 142 from simple or delusional mania, 99 from melancholia, 16 from general paralysis, 1 from general insanity, and 12 were idiotic or imbecile.

As seen in table 10, the assigned cause of the malady was in 15 cases mental anxiety, in 26 cases hereditary and congenital mischief, in 38 cases intemperance, in 20 cases sunstroke, in 20 cases the cause was connected with the puerperal state, and in 127 cases there was no cause given in the papers sent with them.

The number of patients readmitted during the year was 41 males and 25 females, making a total of 66. Of these 14 had been discharged to the care of friends while still of unsound mind, 2 had been discharged from the Hospital for the Insane at Parramatta, and 2 were retransferred from the Hospital for the Insane at Callan Park. The average length of absence from hospital in the cases readmitted was three years two months and one day. The longest period of absence was eighteen years ten months and eighteen days, and the shortest was nine days—the patient having been removed on bond to the care of his friends.

The number of patients discharged recovered is 140, giving a per-centage on the admissions of 42·03, a per-centage which will compare favourably with that of the asylums in Great Britain and America.

The number of patients discharged relieved was 38, giving a per-centage of 11·41 on the number of admissions; and the number of patients discharged not improved 86, giving a per-centage of 25·82.

The total number of deaths was 48, giving a per-centage of deaths on the average numbers resident 7·17.

Eight male patients temporarily escaped from the hospital, but were quickly recaptured and brought back—two by the police, and the remainder by the staff of the hospital.

One case of suicide by hanging, which was specially reported to you, occurred, and was the subject of a Coroner's inquest. The jury returning a verdict of suicide while insane, and exonerated all members of the staff from blame.

There were three cases of accident during the year, one of which occurred to an elderly woman, who fell down and fractured the neck of the femur; and two cases of fractured arm occurred to violent and turbulent patients. No blame, however was attached to any members of the staff.

It is somewhat curious to remark that since the Lunacy Act of 1879 came into operation out of 268 patients 126 were certified for by one medical gentleman, and 62 by another, and these two jointly certified for 60 patients.

During the year the usual fortnightly dances have been regularly carried out with occasional magic lantern, dramatic, and other entertainments. Cricket, rounders, hand-ball, bowls, and other out-door games have been enjoyed almost daily.

The Albion Band, conducted by Mr. Devlin, has, through the instrumentality of Mr. Kingston, given several very enjoyable afternoon entertainments; and thanks are due to the several ladies and gentlemen who have so kindly assisted to amuse the patients during the year.

*One of these men serving also a Colonial sentence is counted twice, appearing in each classification.

The total number of patients under care was 917.

The number of patients of all classes discharged recovered was 26, or at the rate of 29.21 per cent. upon first admissions.

The admissions of all classes were 89.

The death rate was 5.99 per cent. upon all under care, or 5.46 per cent. upon the average daily numbers resident. Nine (9) old residents died, having been maintained in the Hospitals for the Insane during the following periods:—

1 .....	35 years	1 .....	19 years

1 .....	24 "	1 .....	13 "

One Imperial female convict had been insane for 35 years, and died after a long life of uninterrupted good bodily health, at the advanced age of 80.

Of

Of the 55 patients who died, the average age was 50, and the average duration of their residence was 8½ years.

The oldest patient dying was 86 and the youngest 31.

I am gratified in being able to report that during the year no patient escaped, and that no death arose from accident, violence, or suicide. Neither did any death demand the attendance of the Coroner.

With so large a number of patients of all classes under care this happy immunity from casualties speaks favourably of the vigilance and attention bestowed by those charged with their immediate personal safety.

The operation of the new Lunacy Act of 1878 commenced in March, since which date this hospital has received a steady influx of patients labouring under acute insanity. Under the Act of 1878 this hospital, in its free divisions, has, for the first time for some years, been recognized and employed as a receptacle for the cure of the insane by the admission and treatment of patients in the early stages of their malady. For the ten or twelve previous years chronic cases only were admitted.

The only cases of acute insanity were furnished by the gaols to the criminal division of this hospital. Now, to the great comfort and convenience of those who have borne long journeys from distant portions of the western district, they have not to travel beyond Parramatta.

The operation of the new Act greatly facilitates the initiatory process of dealing with the insane, and the feelings of friends and relatives are now spared much of the pain that was formerly inseparable from the criminal aspect and public exposure of the patient and those interested in him.

Some of the patients admitted were brought from distant parts of this colony, necessitating long journeys by coach and rail. Notwithstanding the long journeys and the troublesome dispositions of many thus conveyed, I have much pleasure in stating that in no instance has a patient reached me with any evidence of personal injury or ill-usage. All have arrived in good bodily condition, free from scars or bruises, thus testifying to the care and consideration they had received at the hands of the police charged with their escort.

This is the more commendable as insane patients are frequently most difficult to manage, and more especially by those unused to such a duty.

One case occurred which should, I think, be recorded, as it suggests the desirability of providing suitable accommodation for the reception of certain urgent cases of insanity at hospitals nearer to the scene of their occurrence.

A young married woman living with her husband on a station was confined of her first child in the hut in which they lived. Having been grossly neglected by a drunken midwife who attended upon her, she in a few days became alarmingly ill and the subject of puerperal mania.

Medical aid was only to be obtained from some distance, so that this unfortunate woman had to be removed from her bed and subjected to a tedious journey by coach and rail that occupied, with detentions at various gaols, about six days.

At the end of that time she reached this hospital in a condition of great danger, prostrated in mind and body by a serious illness, aggravated by the fatigue and excitement consequent upon such a journey in her then state of health. She had been treated everywhere upon the route with the utmost care and humanity, but was left entirely to the charge of a male escort. In future female attendants should be employed to accompany such a patient.

Passing through the towns of Forbes and Orange, wherein are good public hospitals subsidized by Government aid, so urgent a case as this, under the 48th section of the Lunacy Act (if in operation), should have been at once received and placed under treatment in either. Competent medical men reside in most of the older townships, and are fully able to deal with such forms of mental disease.

Fortunately a good recovery took place in this instance after about four months residence, although such great risks to safety had been added to her illness. There can be no doubt that such urgent cases as this should be placed under care and treatment at the earliest possible moment in the nearest public hospital wherein wards for their reception should be set apart. The risks of delay and the fatigue and excitement of a long journey should not be allowed to increase the dangers already existing.

With the advice and recommendation of the Inspector General of the Insane, many alterations and improvements in the condition of the buildings and the general management of the institution have taken place.

In the weatherboard division, which is occupied by about 260 of the most quiet and docile of the male patients, the recreation ground has been broken up and made level with the object of creating a good ground for cricket and other games calculated to amuse the patients.

The large shed standing formerly in the centre of the ground has been removed and placed much nearer to the main building, so that the patients may be more readily controlled and brought under observation. An abundance of seats has been added, and the shed fenced off with a neat railing, so that the patients, whilst close at home, can amuse themselves and be well protected from sun and rain.

New ventilators of an improved construction have been placed in the roof of the weatherboard building, whereby the heavy rains are excluded and plenty of fresh air admitted into the dormitories.

The dietary scale has been changed by substituting one of more variety for that formerly in use.

Though considerable progress has been made with the new female division, it is yet far from completion or the prospect of early occupation.

In the whole lunacy department, fraught with many pressing requirements, I can imagine nothing at the present moment more urgently required than improved accommodation for the female patients of this hospital.

For years this accommodation has been notoriously bad and insufficient and far behind that afforded by any kindred institution. It is now overcrowded, and under the demands of the new Lunacy Act may become more so. As the reception of more female patients is absolutely impossible and impolitic, this grave reproach upon an institution should be at once removed by insisting upon energetic steps being taken to complete the structures so much needed.

The water supply is obtained from the old source by means of steam power. No steps have been taken to ensure its filtration or even conservation. Owing to the use of steam power the supply of water is abundant throughout the establishment both day and night.

A dam to be used as a causeway common to the use of this Hospital and Roman Catholic Orphanage is much required. This is as urgently needed for a roadway to the farms on the opposite banks of the river, as it is for the important purpose of saving and preserving the water for the use of the institutions.

The existing dam or road is washed away at every flood or heavy rain, when all communication except by circuitous routes is cut off with the opposite shore. Although the cost of such a work would be large, the growing importance of this and the neighbouring asylum demands some permanent means of reaching their respective properties, and of conserving the water supply.

Money is continually being spent in repairs which are carried away by the first flood, and a recurrence of all the old inconvenience takes place.

The necessity for supplying some means to extinguish fire still exists. All I have written upon this subject in years past may be repeated to day. In an establishment crowded with nearly 900 insane persons and their attendants, with wooden buildings covering several acres of ground, no single appliance is to be found for use in the extinction of fire.

The steam-laundry has now been in full working order for many months, and gives every satisfaction, by the increased facilities it affords for undertaking the immense wash of a large institution, and by supplying an abundance of clean clothing to every patient.

The comfort of the female attendants has been increased by the completion of a good day room wherein to take their meals and occupy themselves on the termination of their daily duties.

The engagement of a painter as artisan attendant has been the means of effecting some extensive and pleasing alterations in the general appearance of the wards, &c. In the new wing of the main building occupied entirely by male patients the whole of the single rooms have been painted, as well as the long corridors into which they open. By the selection and contrasting of suitable colors an agreeable effect has been produced, relieving the eye from the dull monotonous contemplation of distempered or white-washed walls.

Under the direction of this tradesman some useful and excellent work has been completed and has afforded pleasant occupation to many patients who must otherwise have remained idle.

During the present year I hope to see many of the now cheerless wards put on a brighter aspect under the labors of this artisan and his assistants.

A great deal has been accomplished in endeavouring to render more cheerful and pleasant the recreation yards in which the different classes of patients pass their days. The green yard, occupied at all times by the most orderly class of patients, has been thoroughly renovated. The beds have been freshly laid out, and more space for walking about allowed.

Recent

Recent labour has so much improved it that with the addition of a well stocked aviary of rural appearance, little can be desired. This yard with its birds, fountain, and gold fish, is as nice a place of retirement and recreation as could be looked for; it could however be rendered still more pleasant if the high and gloomy wall that now forms its outer boundary were to be reduced by some feet, so that those who have to pass their lives behind it may obtain some glimpse of the world that surrounds them.

The hospital yard has been thoroughly dug up and large squares laid down in grass. Posts and chains have been fixed to mark the boundaries of the pathways, and the whole yard looks cheerful and homely and is nicely kept.

Other yards are now in process of breaking up and laying out. The work necessarily makes but slow progress, as so large a portion has to be done by patients, assisted by the attendants; and the labour of the patients is at all times precarious and uncertain.

The attendance at the religious services held on Sundays by the Chaplains has been fairly good but not so large as might have been expected from so large a resident population.

Improvements are about to be made in the room set apart for religious worship, and good furniture and appurtenances have been supplied.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the regular and diligent attendance observed by each of the Chaplains, and to their unvarying kindness and attention to the sick and dying requiring their ministrations. The patients have been entertained with a liberal amount of amusements of the usual character, as concerts, theatricals, balls, &c., &c. I regret to say that many of the amateur dramatic societies appear to have retired from the list of those to whom we were formerly indebted for many excellent entertainments.

The farm and orchards are carefully cultivated, and yield a fair return of fruit and vegetables for the use of the establishment.

The gardens and approaches are all well kept and neatly preserved.

The number of male patients variously employed has been large. These are chiefly engaged about the farm, garden, orchard, and wood-yard.

The female patients capable of employment have been engaged in the various indoor and domestic services to which they are accustomed. In the needle-room but few women can be employed, owing to its small size and general inconvenience, nevertheless a good deal of valuable work has been accomplished.

The average number of patients daily employed throughout the year was 185 males and 45 females.

The only addition to the official staff has been an assistant clerk, whose services were much needed.

A change in the medical staff has occurred by the promotion of Dr. R. B. Scholes, late Assistant Medical Officer, to the office of Medical Superintendent of Callan Park. Dr. J. A. Beattie was appointed to succeed Dr. Scholes. This gentleman had previously done duty for a short time at Gladenville, and came furnished with professional recommendations of a high character.

It affords me sincere pleasure in being able to state that in Dr. Scholes I found an able, diligent, and zealous colleague, devoted to the best interests of the institution and the welfare of the patients. By his good services in this establishment he merited the promotion he has recently received.

In closing my observations upon the labor of the past year, I feel called upon to express my thanks to the officers and subordinates, attendants, and nurses for the efficient manner in which they have discharged their several duties. I have received from all that cordial assistance and steady co-operation which facilitate the labor and lessen the anxieties that necessarily surround the management of so large an institution.

The female division has been well conducted, and the Matron in her management and discipline has been as successful as in former years, notwithstanding the many disadvantages under which her division labors.

I have, &c.,

APPENDIX C.

Sir, Hospital for the Insane, Callan Park, 30 January, 1880.

I have the honor to submit for your information a report on this hospital for the year 1879.

The number of patients remaining in hospital on December 31st, 1878, was 44.

The number admitted in 1879 was 70, viz. :-
Admitted for the first time	16.
Transferred from other hospitals	54.

The number discharged was 6, viz. :-
Recovered	1.
Relieved	2.
Transferred to other hospitals	3.

The number of deaths was only 1.
The number remaining in hospital on December 31st, 1879, was 107.
The total number of patients under care was 114.

The general health of the patients was excellent, the only death that occurred during the year having been caused by epilepsy.

Up to September 12, 1879, the number of patients was 44, only the old buildings having been occupied, but the opening of the new temporary buildings gave increased accommodation, part of which was soon utilized by the transfer of 48 patients from Gladesville. These, together with one from Parramatta Hospital, and sixteen admitted for the first time from the Water Police Court, Sydney, made up the numbers to 114; thus in less than four months 65 patients were admitted.

The new buildings were first occupied in September, having been previously cleaned and arranged, and the yards levelled, laid out, and planted by the attendants and patients. The yards are now green and cheerful looking.

A large proportion of the patients have been daily occupied in the improvement of the grounds, and during the year a new orchard of about 5½ acres has been thoroughly drained, planted with fruit trees, and partly trenched.

A new garden by the waterside is in course of formation, and will, in time, take the place of the present one, as the soil is better and the site more suitable.

The general appearance of the grounds has been much improved by the removal of all old stumps and dead timber, and the trees removed have supplied all the fuel required in the Institution.

The farm-yard and garden have supplied enough fresh vegetables, milk, and eggs for the hospital use, and a good stack of hay for winter fodder has been grown.

The carpenter, since his appointment has been occupied in executing repairs, and preparing minor fittings, and has also with the assistance of the patients nearly completed a large workshop for himself, together with store-rooms, hearse-house, cart-shed, and smithy.

The water supply has been increased by the laying on of the pipes from Sydney, but owing to insufficient pressure it flows only during the night. The large underground tanks can thus be filled, and a full supply for ordinary purposes obtained, but in case of fire this would be quite insufficient.

The gas has been introduced, and is a very great convenience.

A new library has been formed, and will conduce greatly to the comfort and happiness of the patients, as the choice of books is varied and comprises the works of many of the best authors.

The Church service has been rendered more effective by the introduction of music, and the new organ is a decided inducement to the patients to attend, and to interest themselves in the singing and the service generally.

The Church of England Chaplain has held service every Sunday instead of every other Sunday as before; and the Roman Catholic Chaplain has continued to hold a fortnightly service as usual.

The want of a cemetery and hearse are much felt as the undertaker's fees are very large.

A cemetery on the hospital estate has been planned, but it has not yet been fenced in and arranged. The requisition for a hearse was forwarded some months ago and is not yet complied with.

The amusements have been carried on under some disadvantages. The chief recreations have been cricket and trips by water every week in the steam launch. The patients have also attended the fortnightly dances held at Gladesville Hospital. The new cricket ground is in fair order, and friendly games have been played against the inmates of kindred institutions and several of the local clubs.

I hope during the coming year to be able to accommodate in the large dining-room the members of any dramatic clubs who may be kind enough to favor the patients with a performance.

I have to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the following donations :-

- Mr. John Keep, an emu, and a packet of illustrated papers.
- Mr. F. W. R. Burkitt, a kangaroo.
- Mr. Coles, a pony, and illustrated papers.
- Mr. M'Culloch, flowers, and illustrated papers.

I have to thank the officers of the institution for their ready and efficient assistance since I took charge of the hospital, and I must also acknowledge the services of the staff of attendants, who have taken much interest in all the improvements, and in the furnishing, laying out, and planting of the new wards.

I have, &c.,

Medical Superintendent.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, Citizens of Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH :—

That your Petitioners learn with much apprehension and regret that it is proposed to reconstruct the Sydney Infirmary and Dispensary on the former site in Macquarie-street, and with a view to its use as a general hospital.

Your Petitioners desire humbly to express their very great objections to this intention on the following grounds :—

First. That the situation could be more appropriately utilised as a site for State buildings.

Secondly. That your Petitioners are convinced by the experience of the past that the existence of a general hospital in the centre of the city is a source of danger to the surrounding population, and unfavourable to the rapid restoration of its sick inmates to health.

Thirdly. That there exist in the city more suitable sites for an hospital of moderate size than the present one in Macquarie-street.

Your Petitioners being solicitous that the new hospital should procure for the sick and wounded the greatest attainable benefits, with the least risk and disadvantage to the healthy, humbly pray your honorable House to reconsider the questions of its site, character, and size, and afford such facilities as in your wisdom will be best calculated to secure the proper objects of the institution, and the reservation of the land in Macquarie-street for purposes more in harmony with its surroundings, and conducive to the public interests.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

The Hospital Accommodation of Sydney.—Petition from Medical Practitioners.
To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned duly qualified Medical Practitioners in Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

That your Petitioners view with much concern the intention to reconstruct the Sydney Infirmary and Dispensary on a large scale on the old site in Macquarie-street, feeling fully convinced that such reconstruction would be in direct violation of now established rules of medical science, and if carried out could not fail to ultimately lead to much regrettable loss of life. In the opinion of your Petitioners the City Hospital should be restricted in its accommodation to one hundred beds, and be devoted more particularly to the immediate treatment of cases of accident and very acute disease. Your Petitioners believe that a "Casualty Hospital," with well organised "out-patient departments," working in harmony with the large suburban general hospital, and ultimately a convalescent institution, situate a short distance in the country, would well meet the indications of science, and the requirements of the population. Your Petitioners humbly address your honorable House on this important subject from a sense of duty arising from their special experience and professional knowledge, and earnestly pray that the premises may be taken into careful consideration.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

PUBLIC CHARITIES.

(REPORT OF INSPECTOR OF.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 30 Vic. No. 19, sec. 4.

The Inspector of Public Charities to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir,

Office, Inspector of Public Charities, 25 March, 1880.

I have the honor to lay before you my fourth Annual Report on the several Charitable Institutions of the Colony which come within my inspection, in order that the same, in terms of the Act 30 Vic. No. 19, may be laid before the Legislature.

I take at the same time the opportunity to state that the dates at which much of the information is gathered, especially the statistical portion, renders it impossible to submit the Report at an earlier period of the year. This evil will, however, be remedied in the future by adopting a uniform system of returns for Country Hospitals and Schools of Arts.

I have no desire to report either in form or substance the general remarks I have made in previous reports as to the present unsatisfactory position of the charities of the Colony, but another year's experience confirms me in the opinions already expressed, opinions which I believe to be in harmony with those entertained by recognized authorities on charitable administration.

Notwithstanding the general prosperity of the Colony the sum annually voted for our Charitable Institutions is rapidly increasing, and on financial as well as on social grounds the increase deserves the strictest scrutiny.

The system in force has grown up gradually, yet designedly, and does not recommend itself as being the one the most efficient or economical that we might adopt. The admixture of private charity with public charity, of private with official management, is not favourable either to philanthropic action or Governmental control and interests.

In the case of the subsidized charities the Government acts through corporations which are only semi-public, though mainly sustained by public funds, and which to a very limited extent only are under Government control. These corporations are apt to generate corporate interests, not necessarily public interests.

Government in its educational scheme has wisely determined to spend no money on buildings where the land is not vested in the Crown; it is worthy of consideration whether the same principle ought not to be applied to the Public Charities so that all the public money spent on charitable structures might go to form a public property.

It is one thing for the Government to pay money for an annual, it may be a temporary service, and quite another to vote money for permanent buildings, the title to which will vest in corporations.

The present system of operating through independent charitable corporations leaves the Government without any effective means of scrutiny over the use that is made of these institutions; the improvident, the self-indulgent, or the profligate find too easy access into them, or they send thither their families, and so evade their social responsibilities at the public cost. The institutions themselves grow inert, and cease to receive or deserve a thorough public sympathy and support, nor do they keep pace with advancing times.

Thus our wealthy Benevolent Society is scarcely more than the Government Almoner. It fosters no affiliated Societies as the Charities Organisation Society, the Societies for Reclaiming and Assisting Fallen Women, the Infant's Home Society, all working in directions similar to what might have been its own sphere of duties, while its Lying-in-hospital, maintained at Government cost, fails to attract into it any number of respectable married women.

In like manner the Infirmary is remiss in that it has not provided a female* surgical ward uncontaminated by the presence of persons whose admission is regarded as a grievance by respectable women, and who should be treated in a Female Lock Hospital. Nor has it acted on its own recommendations to the Government, and availed itself of the Government promise to favourably consider the voting of a subsidy in aid of the formation of a Lock Hospital under the superintendence of the Infirmary and Prince Alfred Hospital.

Government charges itself with the support of many persons not reasonably chargeable upon it, and in so doing augments an evil likely to sap public character and spread the taint of dependence broadcast among us. Rather should its aim be to show its appreciation of provident habits by marking with its approval those who practice such social virtues. Life insurance is a very good practical test, and when admitting into the Public Service were preference given to applicants (otherwise suitable) who were assured the custom would become more general among all classes of the community, and perhaps tend to the formation of other habits equally requiring self control. I remarked on this in my last year's report and am rejoiced to see similar views are held in at least two of our adjacent Colonies. The Governments of

Victoria

* For uterine cases.

Victoria and New Zealand have notified that all their servants shall be policy-holders. In England a movement is on foot tending to increase facilities for investing small sums in Government securities. I would suggest the idea as worthy of being imitated in this Colony, both on social and political grounds.

A more thorough scrutiny is urgently needed as regards admissions at the Government cost into our Charitable Institutions. The general public, and especially those too good-natured persons who lend the weight of their recommendations to almost every applicant, can scarcely be aware of the extent to which imposition is carried on. In a vast majority of the cases any knowledge of the actual facts is very limited, and the Government possesses no machinery for instituting further inquiry. It therefore passes the applicant on to one of the Charities, simply endorsing the "recommendation."

In the case of a subsidized charity this recommendation on being exhibited at once assumes the character of a "Colonial Secretary's order" and being a guarantee for payment of charges, the holder passes in without further question as to his means, &c. That the interests of the Government and of the charity are here opposed to each other is evident; the former intends merely to assist those in urgent need or who cannot assist themselves; the aim of the Society is to extend its operations if possible at Government cost.

The avidity with which these "Colonial Secretary's orders" are sought for and availed of by persons not really entitled to them augurs ill for our public morality or a continuance of that feeling of independence (in the right meaning of the word) which at one time was so valued as a mark of respectability.

Some definite course of action would I venture to suggest be advisable in the numerous instances where children are received into the Benevolent or Randwick Asylums at the public expense while the father or mother is serving a penal sentence. Unless the parent sud sponte applies afterwards for their discharge the children are allowed to become permanently burdens on the public revenue, even in cases where the parents may be quite able to maintain or contribute towards maintenance. In exceptional cases I am aware it would be inadvisable to make over the children to their parents, but this fact alone should not release all parental obligations.

Pending the time when a thorough and systematic reform of the Government and subsidised Charities and the Acts relating to them can be made, I respectfully suggest benefits would result were the suggestions of the Royal Commission carried out by making the duties of the Inspector more extended, as is done in the neighbouring Colonies, constituting him under the Colonial Secretary a point of reference and responsible to the Government in seeing that its intentions are carried out.

Such course would not only conduce to greater celerity in affording relief, combined with more efficiency and economy, but might tend perhaps to relieve at times the Government itself of a certain pressure always undesirable and occasionally extremely difficult to resist.

During the course of the past year two new Societies commenced operations—the Ladies' Society for Boarding-out Children and the Sick Children's Hospital; the former received a subsidy of £200 and the latter £1,000. Their reports, relating chiefly to matters within present year, are appended only to this report, but do not really come within its limits.

In concluding these remarks I beg to draw special attention to what is being done in the Technical College—a department of the Sydney School of Arts; and also to the need of speedy action to render the Prince Alfred Hospital available for use by completing its sewage connections.

I have, &c.,

HUGH ROBISON,

GOVERNMENT ASYLUMS FOR INFIRM AND DESTITUTE.

THE Government Asylums for Infirm and Destitute continue to deserve the high character they have for some years won for themselves, as exhibiting a happy combination of a sufficient relief, and good and kindly care of their inmates—with a strict attention to economical expenditure.

For the last two years the demands made upon these Institutions have considerably increased, partly no doubt from the fact that the extension of our railways has made them more accessible, but also in some measure owing to our country hospitals having improved their system by confining their operations as far as possible within hospital practice, and forwarding chronic forms of disease and cases of senile decay to the Government Asylums.

Though thus called on to perform a larger service it is satisfactory to bear in mind not only that the actual maintenance cost in these central asylums is less than in the country hospitals but that the returns for last year compare favourably with those of 1878. Thus 1878 maintenance cost	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	£14	1	8	per head.

1879	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	13	18	0	"

The lessened sum does not represent inferiority of relief given, but is owing to the more favourable rates at which contracts were taken for the supplies.

I desire to take this opportunity of mentioning that little trouble was given during the past year in enforcing adherence to the contracts, as regards the quality of the goods.

When visiting these Asylums I have at all times been satisfied with the thorough cleanliness, good order, and attention to details shown by their administrative staff.

The inmates, especially the sick and infirm, are well cared for; their bedding, &c., is kept scrupulously clean; their food is well cooked and sufficient; and in the hospital wards a liberal and varied dietary is maintained, together with such medical comforts as the medical officer sees fit to order.

The daily routine duties, as heretofore, are all well performed by the inmates themselves, on a system of small gratuities for service. Not only does this plan recommend itself on the score of economy, but it provides employment of a light character to a large number of the inmates, who thus are enabled to feel that though accepting the Government bounty they are giving it back in some measure a quid pro quo.

The principal changes last year it will be seen have taken place in the Asylum styled the Erysipelas Hospital, and Macquarie-street Asylum, Parramatta.

Called into existence on a sudden emergency towards the end of the year 1875, this Institution has been gradually extended, till now it ranks second only to the Liverpool Asylum in importance. Its accommodation has been considerably increased and a larger share of work assigned to it. The nature of the

the

HYDE PARK ASYLUM.

I DESIRE very respectfully to repeat my observations of 1878 and previous years in regard to this Institution.

It still continues to be the only Asylum for Destitute and Infirm Females—and is very overcrowded. This evil is aggravated by the high surrounding walls and very limited space for exercise; also by the fact that the Immigration Offices and Barracks for immigrant single women occupy a considerable space in the building which is altogether too small for the double purpose to which it is applied.

I believe it to be largely due to the extreme vigilance and scrupulous attention to cleanliness of those who are in charge that evil consequences from such overcrowding and want of space have not already manifested themselves. Under such circumstances any proper separation or classification of the inmates is wholly impossible.

Revolting forms of disease cannot be withdrawn from the general observation without depriving those who labour under them of needful air and exercise, the more sensitive feel it a grievance that they are unavoidably forced into constant and close contact with other females, possibly of disreputable antecedents and of coarse habits and speech. It will be remembered that within this Institution are to be found many women of most irreproachable character who once occupied highly respectable positions, and who are now destitute through no fault of their own.

Throughout the whole of last year considerable inconvenience was felt from the dilapidated condition of the buildings and from leakages in the roof. Since 1880 these matters have been attended to, corrugated iron having been placed over the shingles.

A lavatory has been built, and a portion of the yard behind the kitchen fronting the dining-hall verandah laid with cement.

Better arrangements have been made to insure perfect action in regard to the cleansing of the closets, but complaints still exist that the refuse heap is not removed so frequently as it should be from the yard. This is a matter of considerable importance and demands prompt attention.

For statistics see table.

LIVERPOOL ASYLUM.

THIS Institution remains, as regards its position and the character of its buildings, pre-eminently our model Asylum. Nor do I think it possible to improve to any appreciable extent the efficiency of the management or the economy of administration. I venture to suggest, however, that in future when repairs or improvements of a simple character are required that the means available within the Asylum should as far as possible be utilised. Expedition and a saving of cost would, I believe, be gained, for there can at all times be found a considerable number of inmates who are skilled mechanics, and whose labour might be usefully employed at very low cost to Government.

Last year I referred in my report to the necessity which had long existed for a better water supply. The roofs and guttering were there in readiness, but storage was wanting. Within the present year (1880) the work of excavating and building a large underground cistern has been promised. The work is to be executed by contract, and furnishes a case in point; had bricks and cement been provided the money cost for labour if done by the inmates would have been small.

Sundry improvements and repairs in progress at the beginning of 1879 have since been duly completed. The more important are a new covered way connecting the main Hospital pavilion with the large kitchen, re-roofing the dining-hall, a new wood-shed, and fitting up the new Hospital kitchen. This last addition is spoken of as a very great comfort, as it enables the invalid cooking to be carried on at same time, and apart from that for the general table. The flour-store erected last year has already been proved to be too small. I understand the Manager was not consulted as to its dimensions. The new hearse-house has also required to be enlarged. To prevent like errors in the future I beg to suggest that the Manager be always referred to, and so made responsible.

As heretofore, to this Asylum are generally sent all pulmonary cases, also those who are bedridden and cripples. Its Hospital wards usually contain 200 to 250 patients; the remainder of the inmates consists of old men of active habits and in good health.

For statistics see table.

GEORGE-STREET ASYLUM, PARRAMATTA.

THERE was very little noteworthy in connection with this Institution during the past year. A few minor repairs and improvements have been effected; the covered way leading to the kitchen has been paved, as also the shed in which the blind inmates take their meals in fine weather; a boiler formerly in the laundry is removed to the head of the yard, and now supplies hot water for cleansing and scrubbing purposes, which formerly had to be carried a considerable distance.

For a time a well-meant but perhaps misdirected effort threatened to involve this Asylum in the mutual antagonisms which unhappily exist between some of the sections of our religious community. I allude to the subject here only as instancing the necessity for discountenancing within the sick wards of an institution where are found persons professing to hold many varieties of religious thought, services other than those known as "private bedside services."

On the 31st December Mr. Dennis died after a short illness. He had been master of the Asylum for 17 years.

The water supply and storage for this Institution are very deficient.

For statistics see table.

ERYSIPELAS HOSPITAL AND MACQUARIE-STREET ASYLUM, PARRAMATTA.

THE extensive range of Government buildings situate in Macquarie-street, Parramatta, once the Convict Hospital and Stores, after remaining unoccupied till they had become ruinous, were placed in 1876 in the hands of the Manager of Government Asylums.

The central portion, or old Hospital, with the residence for the Manager and the offices, on either side, were hastily repaired and fitted up to form an Erysipelas Hospital. The new Institution founded abundant occupation for a time, doing good service in subduing the prevalence of erysipelas, which disease four years ago threatened to become an element of serious danger to the community of Sydney.

Additional asylum accommodation being much required about this time, the two Wings detached from the central Hospital, and extending the whole depth of the enclosure, were gradually re-roofed and re-fitted. This work, in large measure, was done under the immediate supervision of the Manager of Government Asylums, and at very small cost, the inmates themselves assisting. In this manner the entire accommodation for a first class asylum, capable of receiving 250 inmates, has been gained, as also convenient separate wards for cancer, ulcers, and skin diseases.

For the last two years the two lower wards to right of main entrance of the Hospital have been found sufficient for the erysipelas cases. The female ward has a separate entrance and kitchen, and is under the immediate observation of and close to the residence of the matron. The upper portion of the Hospital has been occupied by general medical cases.

There is outside the Hospital, with separate entrance, a well ventilated ward, wherein are placed cases whose habit or disease is of a specially offensive nature. Also beyond the walls of the Institution, and having a garden intervening, is the lately added cottage for fever and infectious cases. The operations of the Asylum, it will be seen, are not only extensive (250 inmates) but its purposes very multifarious. Great praise is due to the matron for her admirable method, and the care and zeal she has shown in seconding the efforts of the Manager. The most recent improvements are detailed as under.

The kitchen enlarged and covered with iron, a new laundry and lavatory fitted up at lower end of range of side buildings (west side), boilers set for supplying bath-room and laundry, a large shed, iron-roofed and paved, erected in the yard, all the ward space fitted up and utilized, tailors' and carpenters' shops erected, also a store for straw, and a large tank (second), made and fitted with piping, so that all the water from the roofs can now be stored. Preceding are statistics of the Institution.

Class II.—Government Asylums for the Young.

PROTESTANT ORPHAN SCHOOL, PARRAMATTA.

THE average numbers for the year 1879 have been 241 as against 252 during 1878.

The admirable cleanliness and good order throughout the Institution deserve my most favourable testimony, given the more readily that I can at the same time bear witness to the accord and pleasantly confidential relations subsisting between the children and the officers in whose charge they are placed.

During the year a slight outbreak of chicken-pox took place, but was easily treated. A few of the children admitted from the Benevolent Asylum; and who while inmates of that Institution had suffered from purulent ophthalmia, continued to have weak eyes and give cause for anxiety, as well on their own account as from the fear lest the disease might pass into the general mass of the children. Happily the remedial and precautionary measures adopted have proved effectual.

The average yearly cost has been reduced from £17 4s. 11½d. to £15 14s. 1½d., exclusive of Colonial Architect's Department for buildings and repairs. I would again point out the heavy cost for lighting. This item in 1877, when kerosene and candles were used, was at the rate of 1s. 8d. per head, it has now risen to 7s. 9d. per head. Reform is evidently here necessary. I think also fuel and forage items admit of reduction, also the heading incidental expenses. In making any comparison between the cost of the two orphan asylums the difference in the numbers of the children in either institution must be considered in the calculation, but the corresponding items should approach very nearly excepting that for supervision.

Subjoined are tables setting forth charges and estimates of cost for 1879.

ROMAN CATHOLIC ORPHAN SCHOOL, PARRAMATTA.

AMID many disheartening difficulties, from its too limited accommodation, this Institution has been very successfully managed during the past year.

I observe, notwithstanding my previous representations of its overcrowded condition, that the number of the children in the Institution each year continues to grow larger:—In 1877, 322 children; in 1878, 340 children; in 1879, 344 children were reported.

The work of providing extra accommodation is at last about to be commenced; but it will be necessary to keep in mind that to maintain even the present children of the asylum under proper hygienic conditions additional accommodation for 100 beds should be provided.

On former occasions I have alluded to the very discreditable condition of the kitchens, laundry, and servants' accommodation, and trust improvements and extensions will be made to them also.

Notwithstanding these very serious drawbacks the health of the children continues exceptionally good.

Neither ophthalmia nor other form of epidemic disease manifested their presence in the Institution last year, and the total admissions into the Infirmary have been very few.

Three deaths occurred, all of children who had been ailing at time of their admission.

For their large share in bringing about such favourable results the officers of the Institution are entitled to much credit. On occasion of my visits I have been satisfied with the order and cleanliness maintained throughout the Institution, and always pleased at the cordial relations subsisting between the management and their charges. I notice the cost per head has been further reduced, and now reaches only £12 15s., exclusive of charges of Colonial Architect's department and medical officers' salary, both insignificant items for the year. This Orphanage is the most economically managed of our juvenile institutions.

In two directions I venture to suggest scrutiny is necessary:—

1. It will be still some time before any additional accommodation can be available, and as we may assume there are 60 to 100 children too many now in the Orphanage, every endeavour should be made to stay further admissions, and make discharges from the Institution for a time.

2. I observe the number of children apprenticed bears no reasonable proportion to those returned to friends. The contrast between the action here and at the other Orphan School is marked, and the only explanation I can arrive at is that some of the admissions might have been avoided in the first instance. The rule of apprenticing the children is a good one, inasmuch as it tends to check improper applications, and ought to be strictly adhered to.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

THE NAUTICAL SCHOOL-SHIP "VERNON."

TILL a very recent period the "Vernon" might have been looked upon merely as a costly experiment which had given back the smallest results for a continuous heavy outlay. Under the present more energetic management, however, the school-ship has been doing much valuable service, and might be made the means of rendering still larger benefits were the objects for which the Institution was founded and the methods pursued on board better understood by the public. It is very desirable that magistrates should disassociate the school-ship from all ideas of a prison reformatory, and keep in mind that the Industrial Schools as they exist in New South Wales are refuges and homes, and not places of punishment. Parents who exhibit little solicitude in general for the real well-being of their sons often entertain a horror of the "Vernon," and, owing to a mistaken sympathy between the Bench and the parent, few committals are made, and many lads lose the best opportunity ever offered of being made into useful members of society.

To such persons as will take the trouble to visit the ship a more correct view of the real position occupied by the "Vernon" as a means of social improvement will at once present itself. They will understand she is a school, and not in any sense a prison-ship; that only such sufficient authority and restraint is exercised on board as serves to maintain obedience and discipline; that privileges and rewards always immediately follow good conduct; and that a constant and friendly supervision is kept up, calculated not only to win the boys' confidence at the time, but which seemingly many of them desire shall be continued to them after they enter the world.

Magisterial

Magisterial Benches might therefore give a far wider reading to the Industrial Schools Act than has been customary, without laying themselves open to imputations of harshness in dealing with neglected or refractory boys. It would have been well for many of such had its clauses already been carried out with greater vigour; possibly our forthcoming Education Act will conduce to this end.

The Superintendent, Captain Neitenstein, in his report, after dwelling on the many instances where reformed character and good conduct have followed a detention on the "Vernon," passes on to speak of the cases of failure, and traces them in general to committals for only short periods. He says little permanent impression can be produced under two years. In few words, his opinion is that short committals do little good, and are a waste of the Government money, the boy on his discharge at once returning to old associates and habits.

To lessen this danger as far as possible could not certain discretionary powers under sanction of the Government be given the Superintendent, so that where the home influences surrounding the boy are known to be pernicious, he might recommend a second committal, during which the boy might be apprenticed and yet remain under Government control.

Last year fifty-six boys were apprenticed from the school; fourteen of these went to sea. Captain Neitenstein complains that the opportunities for placing his boys on vessels owned in this colony are too limited; also, that his rules sometimes oblige him to send a boy who really wishes to become a sailor to inland service, because the time for his discharge has arrived while no suitable vessel has been found. A certain elasticity in interpreting the rule might, I think, be allowed—the boy himself signifying his consent; were this done, a larger proportion of discharges to ships would be made. I have at all times been much pleased with the thorough cleanliness and order of the school-ship; the evident attention and care bestowed on the boys, some of whom are of very tender age; their cheerful and happy appearance; and the spirit and alacrity they display in executing orders, showing they enjoy their work and take a pride in it. Such habits and discipline, if continued a reasonable length of time, cannot fail to bring forth most valuable results in their after life.

This is the largest sum ever recovered in any one year, and represents much time and labour. Many failures, could they also be shown here, might also be set down. An amended Industrial Act would aid in producing a very much larger sum.

FEMALE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS, BILOELA.

EXCEPTING that its numbers have increased, there has happily been little noteworthy during the past year in connection with the Female Industrial School. The Matron describes the general conduct of the children as good, and that very little trouble has been given her by the elder girls.

Two, however, absconded, and of these only one was subsequently recovered.

Eight girls apprenticed from the Institution were re-committed, their indentures being cancelled in consequence of misconduct. Mrs. Walker expresses herself as having but small hope of ultimate reformation in the case of big girls sent from the streets, or of those whose detention has been for a limited period only. They generally return to former habits and associates. The younger children do much better, and frequently grow up steady and respectable members of society.

The general health of the school has been admirable. Two deaths occurred, both of delicate girls who had previously suffered from whooping-cough, and seemed unable to shake off its after effects.

Eighteen boys, under seven years of age, are included in the Female Industrial School. As they attain a suitable age they will be sent on board the "Vernon." Some difficulty was experienced in finding separate sleeping accommodation for them. Since the removal of the Female Reformatory to Watson's Bay the boys have been put into the new wooden dormitory attached to the late Reformatory, in charge of two girls, selected for good conduct. They are locked in at night, and have no responsible officer sleeping within the same enclosure. In case of fire the results might be serious.

The progress made in school studies is reported by the teacher as ranging between "moderate and fair," and the conduct as "very fair."

The Revd. George Brown, C.E., and the Revd. Father Dillon, R.C., clergymen, have held regular and frequent services. The children have been visited by lady preachers, Sisters of Charity; a lady from Balmain also devotes one afternoon in each week to the religious instruction of the Protestant children.

Nothing has been done in the way of extensions or improvements to buildings during 1879. The average cost per head has been reduced, and amounts to £21 5s. 10½d., on average number for year 104.

SUBSIDISED INSTITUTIONS.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN'S ASYLUM, RANDWICK.

In previous reports I have endeavoured to point out the many improvements which during the last three years have been made in the Randwick Society's Asylum, as well in matters of detail, cleanliness, and order as in the care bestowed upon the children.

In doing this however I have not hesitated to add my conviction that the relations subsisting between the Government and the Society were unsatisfactory in the interests of the former, while the Society placed itself at disadvantage by continuing a system not the most favourable to the ultimate well-being of the children, nor the one most likely to bring credit on its promoters. An instance of this last consequent has lately occurred, the more to be regretted because I fear the public did not wait till it could receive a full knowledge of the facts before arriving at and giving expression to its conclusions, and by so doing has lost the lesson the circumstances were calculated to convey.

It will be remembered certain charges were brought last October against the management, stating that the children had been treated with cruelty. The Board of Directors thereupon invited evidence and instituted a lengthened inquiry. At the same time the Government ordered full investigation to be made, and report furnished to it by its Inspector.

In

In carrying out these instructions I expressed an opinion that but few of the charges had been substantiated, while nearly all lost much of their value from the evident animus which coloured and distorted the facts, but that after making due allowance for exaggeration, I believed a sufficient residuum of evidence remained unchallenged to prove considerable reform was necessary in the management of the Institution.

For the post midnight birchings and subsequent locking up in bath-rooms, with insufficient bedding of certain boys who had played truant on 21 October, also for the punishments on the wooden block or vaulting-horse in the play-yard, I held the Superintendent gravely responsible, although it is fair to add he was nearly literally carrying out his instructions, but I proceeded further to state that the evidence pointed to evils of still more serious character, and that the children were frequently punished with raps, cuffing, and evening caning, by officers and attendants unknown to and without the authority of the Superintendent.

To effect reforms in the above and other matters equally important I suggested—

1st.—That the Government should entirely change its relations with the Society (vide Return of admissions by Society and Government for the past two years, also balance sheet and abstract herewith).

2nd.—That the present constitution of the Society did not represent all the interests concerned, and was in consequence liable to frequent disturbance, and should therefore be modified.

3rd.—That the treatment of the children is defective, and requires to be made far less mechanical. This can only be done by making the arrangements accord as nearly as possible with the system known as the family system.

Those of the children who have been Asylum reared having had only very limited opportunities for observation, and no inducements for the exercise of mental effort, grow up apathetic and almost ignorant of every social requirement or virtue. On the other hand such as enter the Asylum after living in the streets are possessed of a large fund of evil experiences and have their faculties abnormally excited; they find the dull routine of their new mode of life insupportably monotonous, and failing to comprehend that any common interests can exist between their guardians and themselves, they frequently expend their surplus energy in a continued antagonism to authority. No effort as yet appears to have been thought necessary to remove either the apathy or the antagonism from these very opposite classes of mind; varied occupations and active amusements will do something in this direction, but the chief want is the absence of home influence and interests, and till such are supplied in some measure at least, Asylum life must always remain a comparative failure, and the desire to abscond will ever be making itself apparent among the more actively disposed of the boys.

In making its report to the Directors on the late charges, after censuring the male attendant the Sub-Committee "recommended a more homely treatment of the children to the Superintendent," but neglected to point out how he was to institute such a radical change unless under the orders and directions of the House Committee, who practically retain in their own hands the entire direction of the Institution even to the minutest details. The sub-committee cannot mean that the Superintendent is to relax discipline; to do so would be ruinous. The character of the buildings, and the already large expenditure, constitute formidable difficulties in carrying out the desired changes so as to secure segregation or division of the mass of the children, and it must become the study of the Society how to effect this at the smallest cost.

The sanitary condition of the Institution demands the closer attention of the Society and of the Government, for although the general health of the children has been fair, ophthalmia throughout the whole of 1878 and 1879, and even to the present time, has given occasion for serious anxiety. (Vide table of cases herewith.) The total cases of this disease treated in the hospital last year reached the large number of 541; 172 cases occurred between 1 January and 31 March of present year. Of these it is true only a few were of a malignant type, but ophthalmia is so infectious and so disastrous in its effects, especially to children who have to depend on their own exertions for their future support, that no effort should be spared in the endeavour to eradicate it. It has been said the susceptibility of Asylum children to contract this disease may be regarded as nature's protest against massing children together who do not possess a separate home life.

Formerly

Formerly the Society's admissions as compared with those under Colonial Secretary's order were as 2 to 1. From 1874 to 1877, both years inclusive, they were as 1 to 1; but for the last two years the Society has admitted only 58 children, and the Government 277, or 1 to 4½. Hence the rapid accumulations of the Society at the Government expense.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY ASYLUM.

The objects of this Society, as declared in their own published programme, are described as follows:—

- 1st. To relieve the poor, the destitute, and the aged, by assistance in the form of money and provisions.
- 2nd. As a receiving-house for homeless and deserted children, and for children awaiting removal to other asylums.
- 3rd. As a receiving-house for sickly mothers with infants, who cannot be admitted into other hospitals, or who may be suffering from the diseases of women.
- 4th. To provide a lying-in hospital.
- 5th. As a training school for nurses and midwives.

Towards No. 1 Government contributes on the £1 to £1 system to an annual amount of £500, but does not receive back from the Society any unexpended balance. This, I venture to suggest, should be insisted on.

Towards Nos. 2, 3, and 4, Government pays the entire cost of maintenance at following rates:—

	Rates per quarter.
1. Women in lying-in hospital ... ..	7 0 0
2. Women with children ... ..	6 10 0
3. Children ... ..	3 10 0

The first and second of these I think admit of being reduced.

Object No. 5 appears to have been lost sight of, and might be revived with advantage by the Society.

The following details describe the operations during the year 1879:—

Department No. 1.—Styld Out-door Relief.

£774 6s. 8d. was expended, which shows that £112 16s. 8d. should have been credited to the Government as unexpended balance of its moiety.

The Society devotes much attention to this department, and conducts it so as to minimise applications, and yet affords a kindly relief. 359 applications were made to it, of which 48 were rejected after examination. £672 10s. 3d. was given in provisions, and £101 16s. in money for rent.

Department No. 2.—The In-door Relief.

On 31 December there were in the institution 90 women and 191 children.

The general health of the inmates has been fair, but yet the death rate was high.

I am well pleased with the good and kindly care the children receive in this institution, and bear willing record to the unremitting attention bestowed on them by the medical officer, the matron, and her staff of assistants.

The two schools, Catholic and Protestant, which really seemed rather pro formâ than as of any real use, have been discontinued, and drafts of the children to Randwick or the Orphanage are made more frequently. The old practice of storing up children in the Asylum, which should be considered and maintained strictly as a receiving-house only, was most objectionable.

The mortality rate has been higher than usual owing to the prevalence of various diseases within the institution. Some of these, as more or less must always be the case, were imported with the admissions.

Ophthalmia as an epidemic has been overcome, but to a certain extent is still a constant cause of anxiety. Five children who lost their sight while in the Asylum in 1878, during the outbreak of purulent ophthalmia, have been discharged to the Institution for Blind Children, Newtown Road.

Department No. 3.—Sickly Women, &c.—The Society has recently occupied itself with introducing increased facilities for treating the diseases incidental to women. Such effort reflects much credit on its originators, and will conduce to most valuable results.

Department No. 4.—Lying-in Hospital.—45 married women and 158 single were accouched in the hospital. Total, 203.

Nationalities—	28 natives of England.
	4     "     Scotland.
	27   "     Ireland.
	134   "    Australia.
	10     "     other countries.

The formation of a committee of ladies to supervise the admissions is a step which must commend itself to the public. Also the offer of the Society to provide legal assistance to women who say they have been deserted by their husbands, and in affiliation cases. I regret to add very little dependence can be laid on the statements of the women, after admission they frequently do not desire to obtain convictions.

The

The Society have it in contemplation to devote a portion of their reserve capital towards the erection of new buildings, a portion of which will include a Lying-in Hospital. They have made applications to Government for aid in carrying out their project, and also to be informed if they are at liberty to demolish the present structure and rebuild on the site. The report of the Railway Commission will in effect determine this question, which meanwhile must remain in abeyance. When the time arrives for the Government to consider the Society's request for money aid, I venture to recommend that it be proposed to the Society so to shape their arrangements in the future Lying-in Hospital as to encourage into it respectable married women, to whom an institution of this kind might be made a special boon if the charges are moderate.

The subscriptions received by the Society during the past year amounted only to £501 8s. 8d., and their legacies to £43 0s. 4d., yet they are in the to be envied position of having carried £1,784 4s. 2d. to swell their reserve (which now amounts to £28,594 9s. 8d.), and a cash balance of £191 16s. 4d. for the year.

This Society appears to miss a golden opportunity of winning public esteem inasmuch as it neglects to draw under its fostering care some of our minor private charities—as the Children's Home, the Sick Children's Hospital, the charities for reclaiming and succouring fallen women, also by placing itself in intimate relations with the Charities Organization Society. The Inspectors of the two Societies must often be passing over the same ground, and yet afford no assistance to each other.

SYDNEY INFIRMARY.

HAVING during the year 1878, with the permission of Government, razed the buildings and removed the materials of the old Infirmary, the Society were compelled to suspend operations in the construction of their new Hospital for twelve months, pending certain decisions of the Legislature.

The delay has not however been without its advantages inasmuch as it afforded opportunity for reconsidering plans and perfecting details of arrangement in the new hospital. The character of the future institution has also been definitely determined on and is to be that of a small general hospital with accommodation for 200 patients. We are promised that its architectural features shall be worthy of the splendid site, and that its wards shall contain every appliance which forethought and the most advanced experience can suggest.

The general working of the Sydney Infirmary throughout 1879 will be seen by a reference to subjoined statistical detail. Of course there has been much pressure at times in consequence of insufficient accommodation, and many applicants have been refused admittance. This has been specially the case in regard to the lock wards, both male and female. Venereal diseases are it may be supposed on the increase in Sydney, and require more accommodation and attention than heretofore. It is indeed inadvisable to treat females for this complaint in a general hospital. The Government a year ago signified its willingness to consider favourably any suggestions made to it relative to the opening of a Female Lock Hospital, under the auspices of the Sydney Infirmary and P. A. Hospital, and it therefore rests with those institutions to inaugurate action which should not be delayed.

One of the most noticeable features in the year's operations has been the important position assumed by the New Ward opened for the treatment of ophthalmia. Not only have patients been attracted to it from long distances within the Colony, but many from Queensland and elsewhere have sought the relief it affords.

I much regret in the public interests that the suggestions embodied in my report of last year, pages 15 and 16, so far as they relate to this Institution, did not lead to any practical results. They carried the recommendations and approval of medical authorities possessed of extensive knowledge of the condition of our industrious classes, and who were therefore likely to arrive at just conclusions. I respectfully refer again to them, hoping they may still find acceptance. In a new country like this, where labour is always in demand, and commands good returns, there cannot be any valid reason for so large a portion of the population becoming dependent on the Government as an immediate consequent of illness. Colonial hospitals might be made the best as well as the cheapest places in which to treat sickness, but they need not degenerate into a form of poor-houses, although they admit the really destitute to share in the advantages they offer to the general public.

Statistics.

Admissions:—1st January to 31st December, 1879; 2,539, of these medical, 1,408; surgical, 1,131.

The largest number of admissions in October, 244; the smallest number in June, 176.

Besides above there were 2,365 accident and emergency cases treated by the resident Medical Staff, but not admitted into the wards.

The deaths numbered 325; of these 99 patients died within 48 hours of admission; others were admitted in a hopelessly diseased or maimed condition.

The number of patients remaining on 31st December, 1879, was 195. Average number of beds occupied, 207.

The number of cases treated by the District Surgeons connected with the Dispensary amounted to 7,041; of these 821 were visited in their own homes.

Nursing Staff.—There are at present 25 nurses, including head-nurses, ward nurses, and probationer, the whole under the superintendence of Miss Osburn. During 1879, 5 trained nurses left, 1 to become matron of Mudgee Hospital, 1 to sick children's hospital, Glebe Point, 2 to private nursing, 1 married.

It is much to be desired that enlarged action were secured in this department. Were trained nurses only employed in our country hospitals expectation of promotion might induce a great number of women to present themselves for instructions.

PRINCE ALFRED HOSPITAL, CAMPERDOWN.

THE following statement exhibits the condition of the various portions of this Institution completed or in progress, also Treasurer's Balance Sheet to 31 December, 1879, at which date £21,000 remained to credit of the building fund, less debit balance of £369 19s.

1. Pavilions—

The two pavilions known as C and D on the general block plan are all but completed, the baths and closets and a few minor details being the only item unfinished.

These pavilions contain each two large wards of 32 beds each, and one smaller ward of 16 beds, besides two private wards of one bed each.

In all the two pavilions contain 164 beds.

Each pavilion also contains ward-kitchens, 3; sisters' rooms, 3; bath-rooms, 6; W.C.'s and bed-rooms for nurses and servants, 4.

Fireproof construction has been adopted for the floors.

2. Kitchen, Offices, and General Baths—

The central block, containing the general baths and the kitchen offices, may be said to be completed, as far as its construction is concerned. Its fittings, as baths, steam boilers, cooking apparatus, and the like have yet to be supplied.

This building comprises two large rooms for general baths (males and females), kitchen, two sculleries, servant's dining-hall, larder and bread store, general store, separate stores for beer, meat, vegetables, ice, &c., carpenters' shop, engine-room, boiler-house, and coal-bunkers.

3. Corridors—

Corridors, or covered ways of communication, have also been erected to connect the two pavilions and the kitchen buildings. The roof of these is so constructed as to form a gallery of communication for the upper stories of pavilions.

4. Laundry—

This building is completed and ready to receive the machinery. It comprises receiving-room, wash-house, foul linen wash-house, ironing and mangling room, drying-room, engine-house, boiler-house, tool-shed, and coal-bunkers.

5. Mortuary—

The walls of the mortuary are completed, and the roof is now in process of erection. It contains dead-house, inquest-room, laboratory, and pathological room or lecture hall. The completion of this building is only a matter of a few weeks.

In addition to the permanent buildings above described a temporary cottage has been erected to give quarters for the care-taker in charge of the premises, and an office and store for the Clerk of Works.

A large amount of work has also been done in the fencing of the premises, the trenching and enclosure of plantations, the filling in and levelling of grounds, the planting of trees and shrubs, and the subsoil drainage of the grounds.

The arrangements for baths and closets cannot be completed until provision is made for conveying away the sewage of the establishment. Looking to the advanced state of the buildings it may be said that the question as to the time of opening the hospital depends in a great measure on the completion of the drainage.

The

The line of sewage has been carefully surveyed by the works department, and so soon as the necessary funds are voted the work will be proceeded with.

I have experienced much trouble and many delays in compiling the accompanying table of income and expenditure of our Country Hospitals.

Many of the secretaries and almost all the treasurers hold honorary appointments. To present time no recognized system of account has been recommended by the Government, and many of those which have been forwarded to me are very unsatisfactory in form, while some have been inaccurate.

A vicious custom prevails of representing subscriptions and donations in gross, and then charging expenses incurred in obtaining them among the hospital expenses. The object is evident, viz., to swell unfairly the income derived from the public, and by so doing make a heavier demand upon the Government.

For the purpose of securing reliable statistics of the diseases prevalent in each district, uniform tables of the diseases treated in these Hospitals should be kept and forwarded to Government.

Were the Inspector of Charities empowered to call for proper returns and accounts and control in some measure the operations of those distant institutions his office could be made of far greater service than heretofore, and the tone of the hospitals themselves improved.

INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB AND THE BLIND.

It is unfortunate for the purposes of my report that this institution commences its financial year from the 30th September. I venture to suggest that all subsidised charities should adopt a uniform system by beginning their accounts and records on the 1st January.

Although annoyed for a time by certain hostile criticisms which were brought before the public in a form calculated to shake confidence in its management, and consequently to injure this institution, the directors appear well satisfied with the success which has attended their efforts in the past year. The charges above alluded to received at the time my very careful attention, but after a close examination of the circumstances I became satisfied they affected only very remotely the welfare of the children in the institution, but rather hinged on the dismissal of two of the sub-officers, who, on being called upon to resign, had refused to do so.

The

The new buildings, towards which a special vote was made in 1878, are now completed.

The original idea appears to have been somewhat expanded, and they now include, as well as a hospital, a new dining-hall and workshops.

The cost of these additions to the institution amounts to £3,500. Of this £1,000 was given by Government, £1,000 is from subscriptions, £850 from the building fund; £750, the balance, remains owing; total, £3,500.

The health of the children has been remarkably good, as is testified by the fact that there was no need of a hospital report. The accompanying statistics exhibit the operations of the Society during 1879. The discharges, indeed, reduced the numbers to what they had been in January previous, but during the interval throughout the year the numbers of the children had risen higher than in any previous year. The overhead cost of maintenance has been consequently reduced.

Among the admissions were several children sent from Queensland on usual terms of payment, and guarantee that they return there on leaving the institution.

Also five children were admitted from the Benevolent Asylum (at the Government charge) where, during the outbreak of that disease in 1877 and 1878, they had lost their sight from the ravages of ophthalmia.

SCHOOLS OF ARTS AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

TILL a very recent period our Mechanics' Institutes and Schools of Art throughout the colony may be regarded as having lapsed merely into places of recreation rather than as retaining their original character of public instructors.

The desultory attempts made in some of them to convey information by lectures and classes met with such faint response from the public that in a large majority of cases they had to be abandoned.

That their reading-rooms have survived and been well maintained is in itself a cause for gratulation the habits therein engendered may become further developed, till knowledge is sought for by all classes of the community, as the surest means of success in the keen competitions of life.

In this view the inauguration of Technological Working Men's College in connection with the Sydney Mechanics' School of Arts is an important event in our educational history.

The success which attended its opening has been considerable, and it is to be hoped will be sustained. The proposal to affiliate the College with the University should tend to secure such result. A more elementary and therefore tangible direction may be given to its teaching, while its certificates and honors, as bearing the attestation of the University, will carry a recognizable value beyond the colony.

It is safe to predict that technical education and the study of applied sciences must assume a much more important position in the future than has heretofore been the case among us, and therefore that the Government, either directly or by subsidies, will accept a share of the burden of providing the necessary facilities for carrying out the system. A comprehensive scheme on an acknowledged base will have to be adopted, probably such as the one at South Kensington, in connection with the Science and Art Department.

Such plan could be made to include as many of our country Schools of Arts as care to co-operate and are alive to the advantages to be gained. They might thus secure participation in scholarships, have aid afforded them in collecting objects for Museums (natural or scientific), and find correspondents for discussing the value of local products.

Chemistry, elementary geology, and some knowledge of mechanics and mechanical appliances, have come to be such integral portions of a successful farmer's education, that we may predict very intimate relations in the future between the new Institution and our Agricultural Society. Government could aid both by the opening up of experimental farms. What Queensland and South Australia have already done has been seen at our Exhibition, and offers an example worthy of our imitation. We possess exceptionally abundant materials for wealth in this colony, could we better recognise them or know how to turn them to account.

SYDNEY MECHANICS SCHOOL OF ARTS AND TECHNICAL COLLEGE.

SCHOOL OF ARTS.

VERY active effort has been made for some time to extend the working and usefulness of this Society. The Library, Reading Room, and Public Hall, have each been enlarged and improved, and offer admirable accommodation. The list of membership is increased, and the Treasurer lately exhibited a financial statement which is considered satisfactory. At the same time the larger duties assumed will involve the Society in a very considerable increase of expenditure, and have already obliged it to appeal for assistance to the Government. Its condition is, however, a very healthy one, and the objects it has in view such as should enlist in its behalf both Government and public sympathy.

The following memo. explains the self-sustaining character of the society under ordinary conditions.

Library.—According to the last stock-taking the number of volumes in the Library was 19,125. During the year it was used by 2,562 members, to whom 67,845 volumes were issued. The books constitute a good collection of works of reference, standard literature, travels, science, and fiction.

TECHNICAL COLLEGE.

THE idea of establishing a Technical College in connection with the Sydney Mechanics School of Arts dates from the year 1873, but lack of funds prevented action being taken.

In 1877 the Government co-operation was secured, towards fitting up and erecting suitable class-rooms, chemical laboratory, and lecture theatre, and also towards defraying the expenses of engaging lecturers and other means of imparting scientific instruction. The Society devoted £614 14s. 5d. of its funds to supplying new apparatus, fittings, furniture, &c. The International Exhibition affording an exceptionally favourable opportunity for securing valuable specimens, both of raw material and manufactured specimens for illustration, the Society again appealed to Government for aid to extent of £1,500.

Several manufacturers and exhibitors have shown kindly interest in the new Institution, and have promised assistance to the College collection by donations, both of raw material and finished specimens. Valuable purchases have also been made of mechanical models, such as were exhibited by Schroder, of Darmstadt, which are similar to those in use in the technical colleges of Germany; also of plaster and wooden models from the "Workmen's School" at Wertemberg, for illustrating the principles and practice of decorative design; also a set of anatomical models from Hamburg. The Society also secured a very fine trinopticon or triple lantern from the British Court of the Exhibition, used by lecturers in illustrating their diagrams.

Since

Since the opening of the College 475 students have attended the classes as enumerated below:—

Arrangements have now been made for the necessary matriculation and other examinations for conferring on students the degree of Associate after three years attendance at lectures. It is believed that the course of studies prescribed in the Calendar for 1880 will ensure the enrolment of a large number of students.

The following new classes have been, or will be, formed during 1880, viz.:—Navigation, Physiology, German, Italian, Geology, Mineralogy, Mining, Botany, Materia Medica, Electricity as applied to Telegraphy, Woollorting, Geography, Cookery, Domestic Economy, and Hygeian.

A course of weekly science lectures was delivered during the winter months of the year 1879, to which the public were admitted free of charge, and attended by audiences in several instances amounting to 500 or 600 persons.

Altogether the position is a very encouraging one; and as the Institution becomes better known, and is fed from our primary schools and other sources, its usefulness will be more and more perceived throughout every section of the community.

CITY NIGHT REFUGE AND SOUP KITCHEN.

THIS Institution, as it is not one of the usually subsidized charities, will appear in my reports only at unfrequent intervals.

As connected with the vote of £1,000 made by the Legislature in 1878 I have now to mention that the Society has succeeded in purchasing for a sum of £4,060 the premises they have long occupied. The area of land is considerably over half-an-acre, and is eminently suitable by position for the purpose to which it is devoted.

£2,000 of the purchase money remains on mortgage at 6 per cent., but can be reduced from time to time. In recommending themselves to the sympathy of the public the Society is anxious it should be understood their action is regulated so as in no way to tend to create the class it designs to benefit, and adduces in proof that there is no increase in the numbers of the applicants. A better argument in its favor lies in the fact that its free registry office has provided 300 situations during last year, and that 2,000 persons applied, and received relief, showing its benefits were not thrown away on a few pensioners only. Of course from the drunken and irregular habits of many of the persons so provided for the engagements have been of short duration, but for this the Society is not answerable, excepting that it should visit with some disability the offender should he return to the Refuge without being able to give a satisfactory reason. On the other hand it is right to state many employers have expressed themselves as well satisfied with men from this Institution, and lasting relations between employer and employed have resulted under the Society's auspices.

The applicants for dinners number on an average 100 per diem. No breakfast or supper is given, but all who seek admission have the option of shelter for the night, those who have passed the ordeal of a bath having a preference. Bathing and fumigation of clothing is insisted on once a week. On Saturday night the numbers who sleep on the premises is lowest, and on Sunday night the highest during the week. A religious service is held on Sunday evenings, and on Wednesday the Institution is visited by the City Missionaries. Ladies also offer sympathy and advice to such as seem disposed to listen.

SUPPLEMENTARY.

LADIES SOCIETY FOR BOARDING-OUT STATE CHILDREN.

THE advisability of introducing a more natural system than has hitherto prevailed in the Colony in dealing with destitute or homeless children having been pointed out by the Royal Commission in its second report, 1874, and having also recommended itself by the success which in Great Britain and several of the adjacent Colonies has attended the plan of placing out children in selected homes, under careful supervision, led last year to the formation of a Society, styled the "Ladies Society for Boarding-out Children."

In answer to its application the Legislature voted in 1879 a small sum (£200) to the Society, with which late in the year it commenced operations.

Its general objects may be shortly stated to be,—

1. To provide for destitute children the best and most useful form of relief, and at the lowest cost to the Government.

2. To surround the children in its care by family ties and influences of more than average character, and which will be likely to remain with them in after life.

3. To remove them from all pauper associations.

To present time eleven children have been received by the Society through the Benevolent Asylum.

Of these two are permanently adopted, and the State is thus relieved of their maintenance. Before making them over the Society satisfied itself by a rigid inquiry as to the character, occupation, and position of the applicants. Six of the children are being paid for wholly or in part by their friends, and three are maintained from the vote. These children, with two exceptions, are all in the country.

Before any district is considered as being within the sphere of the Society's operations a local supervising committee to report on applications and visit the children has to be appointed. Each proposing foster parent has to give proof of character, state number and ages, &c., of family, specify sleeping accommodation offered, and distance of his residence from school, and church or chapel. Regular reports are required from the local committees. Material aid is expected from schoolmasters, they will be invited in addition to the usual school report to remark on the child's general health and condition, &c., &c., to the local committee or visitor. In recommending its action to the Government the Society claims for its system the under mentioned advantages :—

To the State.

I. Lessened expenditure, the maintenance of each child being only £13 per annum.

II. Simpler machinery, fewer Institutions as Receiving-houses being required.

To the Children.

I. Physically.—Improvement in health owing to pure air, greater variety of food, and lessened risk of contagious diseases, as ophthalmia, found to be terribly prevalent wherever children in large numbers are brought together.

II. Morally.—The character strengthened, self-reliance, and self-control, being allowed opportunities of being exercised.

III. The receptive faculty is increased by the enlarged field of observation presented to the child.

IV. Family ties.—Experience proves that in a large number of instances the relations between the child and its foster parent have been continued after the child has entered the world.

V. They do not grow up as a distinct pauper class, with a feeling of isolation uncaring and uncared for.

VI. They gradually acquire a practical knowledge of domestic and out-door work.

To Society.

I. In reducing the pauper class by enabling these children the better to fulfil their part in life.

II. By cutting off one of the sources of supply to our criminal classes, especially among women.

It is stated that large numbers of girls go astray on exchanging institution life for the unrestricted freedom they experience under apprenticeship, a freedom for which they have not been prepared by their previous training or habits.

SICK CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL, GLEBE.

THE date at which this Institution opened carries it outside this Report, but the Treasurer's Balance Sheet representing operations within 1879 I have introduced it.

Some philanthropic ladies and gentlemen who consider that sick children should not be treated in a general hospital, and who were not satisfied with the provision made for children suffering from acute forms of disease at the Benevolent Lady's Asylum and Infirmary, started the project of founding in Sydney a Sick Children's Hospital similar in purpose to what exists in some of our neighbouring Colonies.

The co-operation of the Government being secured on the £1 to £1 principle, an active canvas for subscriptions took place with most encouraging results (vide statement herewith); suitable premises were then secured at the Glebe, and on the 1st January last the Hospital was opened.

It is intended the Institution shall be devoted to the reception of children of both sexes between the ages of 18 months and twelve years, irrespective of creed, who shall be suffering from disease or accident. As soon as practicable the Institution will provide an out-door department, where children whose parents cannot obtain medical treatment for them elsewhere may take them for advice and medicine. When the parent or guardian is able to pay wholly or in part for such advice, &c., he will be called upon to do so, but no application on behalf of any sick child will be refused. And no Government or subscribers' orders will be required.

It is not contemplated to receive infectious or contagious forms of disease when admitting, but should such arise afterwards within the Hospital, proper isolating wards are provided, situate at some distance from the main buildings.

Seven cases have been admitted to present time.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

GOVERNMENT ASYLUMS FOR THE INFIRM AND DESTITUTE.

(REPORT FROM MANAGER RELATIVE TO EXPENDITURE FOR 1878.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 12 November, 1879.

The Manager of the Government Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute to The Under Secretary, Colonial Secretary's Department.

Sir,

Sydney, 6 November, 1879.

I have the honor to transmit, for the information of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, returns of the expenditure of the Government Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute and of the Erysipelas Hospital for the year 1878, with a comparative return of the expenditure of the Asylums at Sydney, Parramatta, and Liverpool for the sixteen years 1863 to 1878 inclusive, and to request that, as has been customary, they may with this Report be laid before Parliament.

2. The Asylums have been conducted during the past year under the same rules and regulations as have proved so effective while the institutions were under the control of the late Board of Management.

3. The enlargement of the Macquarie-street Asylum at Parramatta, rendering it capable of accommodating two hundred and fifty inmates, has prevented the necessity for overcrowding the Asylums at Hyde Park, Parramatta, and Liverpool, and the comfort and healthy condition of the inmates have been thereby secured.

4. The Asylums in their present form are capable of accommodating 1,550 inmates, who are apportioned as follows:—

Hyde Park Asylum ... ..	270 women
Parramatta " ... ..	250 men
Liverpool " ... ..	760 "
Macquarie-street Asylum ... ..	270 "
Total ... ..	1,550

5. The returns show that during the year 1878 the large number of 1,382 inmates were sheltered in the four Asylums, and during the winter months the daily average number of inmates reached a total of 1,560.

6. This increase in the number is very large, and may, in my opinion, be attributed to the influx of large numbers of infirm and destitute persons who are allowed to land from the neighbouring Colonies; 2nd, to the absence of any law to compel the younger portion of the population to maintain their aged relatives (many old men and women are forced into the Government Institutions who have near relations quite able to support them); and 3rd, to the increasing facilities for transferring paupers from the outlying country districts to the central institutions.

7. The necessity for passing an Act similar to that in force in Victoria, by which "lunatic, idiotic, deaf, dumb, blind, or infirm persons arriving by ship, who are likely to become a charge on the public, are prohibited from landing at any port, unless under bond to Her Majesty for the repayment of expenses which shall or may be incurred within the space of five years for the maintenance or support of such persons" (vide "The Passengers, Harbours, and Navigation Statute of 1865, section 36"), has been repeatedly urged by the late Board of Management; and though it is difficult to give any accurate report of the number of paupers who have been landed in the Colony and who, after a short stay in Sydney, have been admitted either to the gaols or to the Government Asylums, the cases which have come under my notice have been sufficiently numerous to strengthen my belief as to the pressing need for the above enactment to prevent the importation of paupers, except under proper restrictions, from the neighbouring Colonies.

8. It may be urged that the old people who have rich relations should be refused admission, so as to force their friends to maintain them, but humanity forbids the infliction of a positive hardship on the old man or woman who is turned on the street by a hard-hearted relative; and so the Asylums are largely imposed upon by persons who cannot be touched by the law.

9. The frequency of the applications for the admission of paupers from the out-lying parts of the Colony has directed my attention to the desirableness of opening institutions in some of the principal inland towns—such as Yass, Goulburn, Bathurst, and Armidale—for the reception and treatment of paupers who, if afforded temporary shelter and relief, would, in very many cases, resume their occupations or return to their friends or former employers in a part of their country familiar to them, instead of being transferred to the central Asylums, to become, against their will, permanent inmates of the Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute. Many inmates after a few weeks' treatment in the Government Asylums apply to be returned to the districts they were brought from; and although this may in some degree be attributed to restlessness, yet I am persuaded that if the Country Asylums were established the expenditure for the support of paupers would be largely reduced.

10. The facilities afforded by the extensions of the railway for constant inspection of the proposed branch Asylums are so great that I cannot think there would be much danger of mismanagement.

11. These returns would have presented a marked difference to those of former years if the Macquarie-street Asylum (better known as the Erysipelas Hospital) had not been rendered capable of relieving the Asylums of the increasing demands for room; and, unless the admissions and discharges to and from that institution are considered, a comparison with those of former years must be imperfect. The number of paupers seeking the shelter of the Government Asylums has been considerably augmented during the past year. Including the admissions to the Macquarie-street Asylum, 2,057 persons were admitted during 1878, while 1,591 only were admitted in 1877.

12. The total expenditure for the maintenance of the above 1,256 paupers for the past year has amounted to £18,859 12s. 5d., showing an average expense per head of £15 0s. 3½d., or 8s. 4d. more per head than for the previous year, while it is lower by 14s. 5d. than for the year 1876. The expense per head at the Parramatta Asylum for rations and food was higher by the sum of 13s. 3½d. than at the Liverpool Asylum; but the comparison is hardly a fair one, because while the scale of rations is the same at the two institutions, the contracts are held at different prices, and therefore the Master at the Parramatta Asylum cannot fairly be held responsible for the increased rate per head. Under the head of clothing too, the expenditure at the Liverpool Asylum is smaller per head by £1 3s. 2d. This difference appears to indicate some degree of carelessness in the management of the clothing on the part of the officers of the Parramatta Asylum, but the principal cause is, I am convinced, the saving effected at the Liverpool Asylum in making the inmates' clothing, whereby a superior well-fitting article is supplied than can be procured from a contractor.

13. It may be noticed that the averages at the Parramatta are higher under all the headings than at the Liverpool Asylum, and the total expense per head for the past year reaches the sum of £2 13s. 3d. more at Parramatta than at Liverpool. A comparison of the expenditure of the two institutions for the ten years 1869 to 1878 shows that the average expense per head at the Liverpool Asylum was £12 15s. 9½d., while at Parramatta it was £14 9s. 7½d., or £1 13s. 10½d. higher at the Parramatta than at the Liverpool Asylum. This serious difference in the cost of management of the inmates of the Parramatta Asylum, which has now extended over some years, bears out the opinion so often expressed by the late Board of Management, that the Parramatta Asylum was, from its position and general arrangements, very unsuitable for the shelter of the 270 pauper inmates.

14. The health of the inmates has been much as usual; no infectious or contagious diseases have broken out, and the deaths, though as many as in former years, have been caused by the diseases natural to old age—the Asylums, particularly those at Liverpool and Macquarie-street, have received large numbers of invalids who ought properly to have been received into or retained in the Sydney Infirmary, and been treated by the Honorary Medical Staff of that institution. No inconvenience, however, has arisen from the admission to the Asylums of cases thought too dangerous for the Infirmary, and when it is considered that cases of fever, leprosy, erysipelas, and other infectious diseases have been admitted, tended to, and in many cases cured, it must be acknowledged that the arrangements for isolation are complete and satisfactory.

15. The Erysipelas Hospital, which was established in the latter end of the year 1875, has been of great service in relieving Sydney of a large number of cases of infectious disease. During the past year fifty patients suffering from erysipelas were admitted; of these only two died, and the remainder were discharged quite convalescent. The disease appears quite controllable when taken in its early stages, and it would be well if all cases of erysipelas within reach of the Hospital were sent there, where proper treatment and isolation are to be obtained, instead of being cared for in private houses, where medical men who attend them are liable to carry the infection to other invalids. I have never refused an application for the admission of a case of erysipelas, and I am confident that the sanitary condition of the city and the suburbs has been largely influenced by the removal of so much infectious disease.

The expenditure for the maintenance of the patients has been high compared with the Asylums, but the peculiar treatment required for the proper care of the disease has rendered it necessary to provide additional food, medicine, and medical comforts, which are ordered specially by the Surgeon.

I have, &c.,

FREDERIC KING,

NEW SOUTH WALES.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN'S ASYLUM.

(BY-LAWS.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 20 Vict. No. 19, sec. 4.

BY-LAWS OF THE SOCIETY FOR THE RELIEF OF DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

I.—OBJECT.

1. The object of the Society is the protection, support, industrial training, and the moral and religious instruction of children deserted or left destitute by dissolute and abandoned parents, or from other causes neglected, or in a state of great privation, and without adequate means of support.

2. Under the foregoing description of destitute children admissible into the Institution shall be included only—

1st—Children abandoned by their parents, or left without friends and protection.

2nd—Children whose parents may, from the profligate habits, or conviction for crime of both or either, be unable to support, or unfit to educate them, and who shall surrender them to the Society.

3rd—Children who, being within either of the above classes, shall, by virtue of any law then in force, be compulsorily placed in the Institution.

4th—Children of any of the above classes, received by order of the Government, and for whose support provision shall be made by the Legislature.

3. Children admissible into the Protestant or Roman Catholic Orphan Schools shall not be eligible for reception into this Institution.

4. In every case the House Committee, constituted in manner hereafter mentioned, shall determine the amount (if any) to be paid for the support of the children coming within the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes, and the security (if any) to be taken for its payment.

5. Children coming within the 3rd and 4th classes shall be paid for according to an estimate to be prepared by the House Committee, of the average cost of each child for the time being.

6. No child shall be admitted into the Institution unless certified by one of its medical officers, or in the case of children from the country by some duly qualified medical practitioner, to be free from any contagious, infectious, or cutaneous disease.

7. No child shall be admitted of an age younger than four years or older than ten years, unless in case of peculiar emergency, to be decided by the House Committee.

8. No child shall be admitted into the Institution, or allowed to leave, or be dismissed from it, unless by order of the House Committee.

9. So soon as any child shall have attained the age of twelve years the House Committee shall take the necessary steps to have such child apprenticed according to law, or otherwise suitably provided for. No child shall be apprenticed within the city of Sydney, unless for some special reason which may appear sufficient to the House Committee.

II.—MEMBERS.

10. Every subscriber of one pound per annum shall be a Member of the Society.

11. Every donor of fifty pounds in one payment shall be a Life Member.

12. Every donor of one hundred pounds in one payment shall be a Life Governor.

13. Any minister of religion who shall raise for the Society the sum of fifty pounds in one or more collections shall be a Life Member.

14. Every Director who shall have been a Member of the House Committee for a period of ten years shall be a Life Governor.

III.—OFFICERS AND BOARD OF MANAGEMENT.

15. His Excellency the Governor shall be invited to accept the office of Patron of the Society.

16. There shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, and a Treasurer; all of whom shall be elected at the Annual General Meeting.

17. The general management of the Institution shall be vested in a Board of Directors, consisting of the President, the Vice-Presidents, the Treasurer, all Life Directors, and twelve members to be elected Directors, in manner hereinafter mentioned. The Government may in each year nominate four additional Directors, whose term of office, however, shall expire at the first Annual General Meeting after their appointment.

IV.—MEETINGS OF THE SOCIETY.

18. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be holden in each year, in the month of January, or as soon after as the Board of Directors may deem advisable. Notice of such meeting shall be given in one or more of the public newspapers, at least ten days before the time appointed for holding the same.

19. The name of every candidate for the office of Director other than the Government Directors, together with the names of his proposer and seconder, and also his consent in writing, shall be given to the Secretary of the Institution, at or before the Annual General Meeting in each year (otherwise his candidature shall be informal). Retiring Directors shall hold office until the instalment of their successors.

20. At the Annual General Meeting to be held in 1881 the twelve elected Directors then in office shall retire, and thereupon twelve members shall be elected as Directors, all the retiring twelve being eligible for re-election.

21. At the Annual General Meeting to be held in 1882, and at each subsequent Annual General Meeting, four Directors shall retire according to the plan laid down in the following rule, and thereupon four Directors shall be elected to fill the vacant seats.

22. At the Annual General Meeting in 1882 the retiring Directors shall be, if there be a ballot on the election in 1881, those four of the above elected twelve who received the least number of votes at their election; or, if there be no ballot, those four of the twelve whom the Board shall ballot out. At the Annual General Meeting in 1883 the retiring Directors shall be, if there be a ballot on the election in 1881, those four of the remaining eight who received the least number of votes at their election; or if there be no ballot, those four of the eight whom the Board shall ballot out. Thereafter at every subsequent annual general meeting the retiring Directors shall be those four who have been longest in the Directory since the time of their last election.

23. If there shall be no more candidates for the office of Director than there are vacancies to be filled, the candidates shall be elected; but if more candidates shall be nominated than there are vacancies, the election of Directors shall be determined by ballot, to be held on a day and at a place to be fixed by the Directors, and the Annual General Meeting shall be adjourned to that date to receive the report upon the ballot.

24. The Board of Directors of the preceding year shall appoint a Committee of five or more Directors (not being candidates) from amongst their number to superintend the ballot, who shall elect their own Chairman, and have power to make all necessary regulations for conducting the same; three of such Directors shall be constantly present during its progress, and at least four of such Directors shall be present at its close as scrutineers to ascertain the result; and in the event of there being an equality of votes for two or more members, the Chairman of the aforesaid Balloting Committee shall at once determine by lot the names of such member or members who shall have the priority. The hours of voting shall be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

25. In every case the retiring Directors shall be eligible for re-election, but no member shall be qualified to be nominated for the office of Director, or shall act as a Director, whose subscription of membership has not been paid on or before 31st December of the year preceding that in which such election shall occur; and in the case of any new subscriber being nominated, such new subscriber shall not be eligible for election unless he shall have paid his contribution for the current year to the Society on or before the 30th September preceding. All votes shall be tendered by the intending voters personally, and no proxies shall be permitted; and should objection be made to any vote, the question shall be referred to the Directors present having charge of the ballot, and the decision of a majority of them shall be final.

26. Life Directors, Life Governors, Life Members, and Subscribers shall be entitled to vote for the election by ballot of the Honorary Office-bearers and Directors of the Society, in the manner following, namely:—A contributor of £1 per annum shall have one vote, a contributor of £2 per annum shall have two votes, a contributor of £5 per annum shall have three votes; Life Directors, Life Governors, and Life Members shall have three votes: Provided nevertheless that no new subscriber shall be entitled to vote in any election by ballot as aforesaid who has not been a contributor for at least three months preceding the election then about to take place, but old subscribers shall be permitted to vote upon payment of their subscriptions at or before the time of any election. Life Directors, Life Governors, and Life Members shall be at once entitled to every privilege.

Any vacancy in the Board shall be provisionally filled by the Board of Directors at any monthly meeting, notice being given at the previous Board Meeting of the name of the member intended to be proposed to fill such vacancy. Such locum tenens shall only hold office so long as the Director whose place he occupies could have held office.

27. A Special General Meeting of the Society for the transaction of any particular business may at any time be called by the Board of Directors, or on a requisition being addressed to the Secretary by not less than twenty members, and notice thereof, and the matter to be considered, shall be given in like manner and for a similar period as in the case of the Annual General Meeting.

28. At every Annual General Meeting, or Special General Meeting, not less than fifteen members shall be required to form a quorum.

29. At the Annual General Meeting the report of the Directors and the audited accounts of the Treasurer for the past year shall be presented, and such other business transacted as may be brought before the meeting by the Board of Directors.

30. If, at the time appointed for any Annual or Special General Meeting, a sufficient number of members to form a quorum be not present, the Chairman, by his own authority, or on the motion of any member, may adjourn such meeting to some future convenient day.

V.—DUTIES OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS AND THE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

31. The Board shall meet once a month for the transaction of business, at such time and place as they may appoint; and five of them shall be a quorum. The Secretary, on occasions of emergency, or when requested by five members of the Board, shall be empowered to call Special Meetings—the nature of the business to be specified in the notice.

32. The Board shall, at its first meeting after each Annual General Meeting of the Society, nominate from among the members thereof a House Committee, who shall be elected by a ballot then to be taken (if there shall be more nominations than are required), and the Board shall have power to make the requisite requisite arrangements for conducting the proceedings of such election; the Committee so elected shall consist of seven members, exclusive of the Treasurer, who, ex-officio, shall be a member of the House Committee—three to be a quorum. The duties of the House Committee shall be as follows:—

- 1st—To meet once a week, or oftener if they deem necessary, on such a day or days, and at such hour as they may from time to time appoint; there to inspect and manage the domestic affairs of the Institution.
  - 2nd—To receive and decide upon all applications for the admission, the apprenticing, and the discharge of children.
  - 3rd—To hire and discharge servants.
  - 4th—To give instruction to the Superintendent on all points connected with the duties of his office.
  - 5th—To receive and decide upon tenders for supplies, and to order the necessary purchase of utensils, clothing, furniture, articles of food, fuel, &c., where no tenders are required, and to inspect the monthly bills.
  - 6th—To submit to the Board the monthly accounts, as well as to lay before it the minutes of their proceedings during the preceding month.
33. The Board shall give instructions to the House Committee upon any of the matters committed to their management.
34. The Board will make such By-laws for the management of the Institution, and for the admission of children, as circumstances may render necessary.
35. The Board shall have the power of appointing and dismissing the Superintendent, Medical Officers, Matron, and Secretary, the appointment and dismissal of all other officers and servants being vested in the House Committee.
36. The House Committee shall continue in office until the election of their successors; but in case of any vacancy or vacancies, and until the next election of members as hereinbefore provided, such vacancy or vacancies shall be provisionally filled up by the Board of Directors at any monthly meeting, notice being given at the previous Board meeting of the name of the member or members intended to be proposed to fill such vacancy or vacancies.

VI.—THE TREASURER.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly appointed on the 19th November, 1879,—“with power to send for persons and papers to inquire into and report upon the management of the Randwick Asylum for Destitute Children, and also to consider the expediency of adopting the system of boarding-out destitute children,” and to whom leave was granted, on the 28th November, 1879, “to make visits of inspection to, and to hold inquiries at, that Institution,”—have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee have held twelve meetings and examined the witnesses named in the List,* and they have paid a visit of inspection to the Asylum.

* See List,

2. The particular occurrence which led to the appointment of this enquiry by your Honorable House, the alleged ill-treatment of a number of runaway children in October last, has received careful investigation, and the principal officers of the Institution and others who had a personal knowledge of the transaction have been examined by your Committee. While it must be admitted that when the boys were brought back to the Asylum in the middle of the night by the police, there was a want of tender consideration for the faults of childhood and too much rigour in their punishment, your Committee, nevertheless, feel justified in reporting that a careful examination of all the circumstances materially softens the harsh features of the case as first presented to the public. The misconduct of the boys in absconding was unquestionably serious, and could not be lightly passed over without danger to the discipline of the Asylum. It was aggravated by the stubborn refusal of all to give any information as to who had misled them in running away. The personal chastisement inflicted upon them was indiscriminate and severe; but cannot be characterised as cruel. The rooms in which they were confined until the following day were not uncomfortable, and though the boys were inexcusably left without bed clothing, they cannot have suffered from cold during the few hours of their confinement in the latter part of October.

3. There does not appear to be any ground whatever for the suspicion that the children ran away on account of insufficiency of food or of cruel treatment of any kind; or that they acted from any motive other than a wild boyish desire under vicious guidance to escape from restraint.

4. Your Committee have much satisfaction in reporting to your Honorable House that the management of the Asylum as it appeared on the occasion of their visit is deserving of commendation. The officers on the whole are persons of experience, active in the performance of their duties, and alive to their obligations. The food is wholesome, abundant, and properly prepared. The dormitories are cleanly and neatly kept, and not overcrowded. In the schoolrooms the course of instruction is the same as that of the Public Schools, and is carried out by trained teachers. With regard to the condition and general behaviour of the children, your Committee failed to notice in their faces that depression or downcast appearance which is spoken of in the evidence of one influential witness. They appeared to be little inferior in the evidences of cheerfulness and contentment to other children in poor circumstances.

5. Your Committee are of opinion however that the Government should be empowered by law to exercise a more active supervision over the Institution, and that the authority of the Government habitually exercised would tend to sustain public confidence in its management.

6. The second branch of your Committee's enquiry as to the expediency of trying the "Boarding-out" system for the care and training of destitute children has not led to the accumulation of much information of practical value. The consideration which your Committee have been able to bestow upon the subject, and the evidence of some of the witnesses examined, have led to the conclusion that the system is deserving of a trial, limited at first and extended only as experience may justify its extension, and kept under the continuous observation of benevolent persons.

7. A child trained as a member of a well-ordered household, taught by careful hands to perform the hundred small offices of daily life, and having avenues opened to it for forming ties of affection as it grows in usefulness, will be more likely than another child from the barrack-like modes of life in a great institution, to carry with it in mature years the recollections, associations, and sympathies which do so much in restraining the passions and giving play to the higher qualities of the mind and heart. The personal habits slowly formed under family influences, where vicious irregularities are in a reasonable degree absent, will strengthen the moral elements of character in the trials of after life, and in the majority of cases some substitute for parental guardianship will be found, though it will necessarily be of unequal value and authority.

8. A few ladies have already inaugurated the Boarding-out system on a limited scale, and their experience, so far as their labours have extended, is encouraging. It appears to your Committee that the movement thus set on foot, and which is only of a tentative character, might be taken advantage of as the nucleus of a more fully-organized effort to give practical effect to the system. A small sum of money has been appropriated in aid of the benevolent work of these ladies, and the question seems to arise whether a measure should not be introduced at an early date to give to their proceedings the necessary authority of law.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

RANDWICK ASYLUM.

TUESDAY, 2 DECEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

MR. BURNS,	MR. CAMERON,
MR. J. DAVIES,	MR. GARRETT,
MR. GREENWOOD,	MR. McELHONE,

SIR HENRY PARKES.

SIR HENRY PARKES IN THE CHAIR.

The Reverend Canon Alfred Hewlett Stephen, examined:—

1. Chairman.] You have been for some years connected with the Randwick Asylum? I was one of its founders, and have been connected with it from the beginning.
2. When was that? I think in the year 1852.
3. And you have been a director during all through that period? I have been a director all the time.
4. You are the President now? I am now the President.
5. Have you of late frequently visited the institution? I have not visited the asylum above five or six times for the last six years in consequence of having had a severe attack of illness, from which I have not yet recovered, and which rendered necessary a voyage to England some six years ago. Since my return I have not been able to take any active interest in the management of the institution.
6. Then you do not, of your own personal knowledge, know much about the practice observed in the treatment of the children there? No, not now.
7. Do you attend the meetings of the directors pretty regularly? I attend the meetings of the directors, but for the reason I have given, I think I have been able to attend only about once in three months on an average lately.
8. Have you at different times directed your attention to the management of children in destitute circumstances in public asylums? Yes. I have had very much experience during the last thirty years in Sydney, during which time I have been a clergyman here, and have also been connected with the Benevolent Asylum as a director. For the time I have specified I have acted as a director, and for many years as secretary to the Destitute Children's Asylum. As a clergyman in a poor district, having much to do with the very poor, my attention has been very much directed to the subject, and I have taken a great deal of interest in it.
9. Have you studied the subject, and observed the working of similar institutions in other countries? Yes. I think I may say I have. When I was in England about six years since, and also when visiting Tasmania and other colonies, I have tried to get what information I could upon the subject.
10. What system should you call that observed at Randwick? I think the name which has been applied to it lately is a very appropriate one—the barrack system.
11. What guarantee does that afford for the protection of the children from ill-usage. How would ill-usage discover itself supposing no accident discovered it? I think under our system it is very difficult where there is ill-usage to discover it unless by accident.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.

2 Dec., 1879.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.
2 Dec., 1879.

12. Do you mean to convey by that answer that the children might be ill-used for some time without the public, or even the directors, knowing much about it? I do not know that it has been, but I think it might be; for I think in a large barrack system like that, what I call a proper supervision is not easy, and the children might be kept in such a state of terror as to be afraid to mention it if there were any ill-usage. I can speak feelingly upon that point, as I was in a school myself where looking back some forty years I can say I was cruelly treated. There was such a system of terrorism there that the cruelty was borne for four or five years, and it was only discovered accidentally, through the kind interference of a clergyman, and the master lost his pupils. Therefore I think what happened to me in a small establishment would be very likely to happen in a larger establishment.

13. Coming to matters of detail, what is the organisation of the Randwick Asylum—I understand there is a gentleman who is called the superintendent; what persons are there who are under him? There is a matron and there are sub-matrons, and there are attendants, both male and female, under the immediate direction and control of the superintendent.

14. Is the superintendent supposed to visit all the dormitories and mess-rooms once a day? Yes, he ought to do so, and is expected to do so.

15. Is there any subdivision of the children into classes or messes, under the absolute control of the attendants or sub-matrons? Yes.

16. Would you kindly explain the system as carried out at the Randwick Asylum? I have not that personal experience of the system that would enable me to go into detail, but I know there are divisions and subdivisions of the children, and these are subject to the control of certain officers who are responsible for their management to the superintendent. But I should mention that it struck me as a very weak point in the management of Randwick when there was an inquiry some two or three years ago into some charges of cruelty brought against a man named Sprowle. When the report was brought up by the sub-committee appointed to inquire into that matter, I made a recommendation to the effect that the children should be divided into classes of twelve or fifteen, and that there should be a boy or girl placed over each of these—on the monitorial system—who should be held responsible for the behaviour of those under him. It would have been a modification of the mess system on board a man-of-war. These older boys and girls should be expected to exercise an influence upon the other children, to be as elder brothers or elder sisters to them. I cannot exactly remember the details of the system suggested, but I have always felt that the number of children placed under the charge of the matron or sub-matrons was too great to permit of a knowledge being formed of the individual temper, character, disposition, and peculiar temptations of each child, which is essentially necessary for the proper management and government of young children.

17. Were your suggestions to any extent adopted? They were not adopted.

18. Is the superintendent—of whom I presume you have considerable knowledge—in your judgment a humane considerate man? For the reasons I have already stated, my very bad health, I have been prevented taking any active part, or being personally conversant with the conduct of the asylum, and I am not therefore to state of my own personal knowledge; but I may state that when he was elected—and the election was by ballot—I voted against him, and for another gentleman, because I was told that his fault was that he would be too soft and considerate for the position. Therefore I was surprised that these accusations were brought against him.

19. How is the business of the Board of Directors transacted—simply in public meeting? The Board of Directors meets once a month—the first week in every month, generally in the Board-room of the Sydney Infirmary. For a considerable time the reporters were invited to attend, but more lately they have not attended. Whether they have been invited or not I cannot say. These meetings are open to all—to the whole body of life directors, so that practically if these took an interest in the proceedings, and attended, it would be a public meeting.

20. Do the directors take an active interest in the institution, outside the meetings of the Board and the transaction of the Board business, by visiting the asylum, going among the children, making inquiries of them, and so on? I think not; the practical business and management of the institution is confined to the house committee, which is really a sub-committee of the larger body of Board of Directors. It is the house committee that really has the management and control.

21. What are supposed to be the functions of the house committee? They meet once a week at the institution, and have the whole control of the internal economy of the institution; they are in fact the managers.

22. Have you had your attention called to the circumstance of twenty-five children, I think, absconding from the institution in October? Yes; about a month ago I received a letter from a gentleman in Sydney—one of the directors—saying that such had occurred, and that there was a charge of cruel flagellation in consequence. He begged I would make a point of going to the first Board meeting in relation to the matter, and to see that it was duly inquired into. I happened to be suffering from illness myself at the time, but I felt the matter to be of so much importance to the institution, as compromising its character, and to a certain extent that of myself and fellow-directors, that I attended accordingly. At that meeting the matter was brought under the notice of the Board by Mr. Holterman, who was a director, and a special sub-committee was appointed to inquire into the whole matter. When that sub-committee was appointed I thought, for the present, we had done all we could.

23. You are not a member of that committee? I am not a member either of that or of the house committee. When I was secretary I was also member of the house committee.

24. Will you be kind enough to state any facts that have come under your knowledge relative to the running away of these children, or of their treatment upon their return? I know nothing of it, except what came out in the discussion upon Mr. Holterman's resolution.

25. Can you say whether you feel satisfied with the general management of the institution? I am not satisfied, and have not been for a long time, but without reference to the conduct of the business by the house committee, I know that the gentlemen on that committee give a great deal of their time and attention to the performance of their duties; but I do not like the system, and have not for a considerable time past. As one of the founders, and the first secretary, I had a great deal to do with the establishment of the institution, and it has greatly disappointed my expectations. Sometimes, indeed, I think I made a great mistake in having had anything to do with it at all. My own idea in helping to start it was that it would be beneficial as an auxiliary to a reformatory. I had seen something of the kind in operation in England, where as an under-graduate in Cambridge I had a friend who had taken an active interest in the reclamation of boys from vicious courses. Coming from England, I was fired with a similar zeal, or, I hope, by the higher motive of a real interest in these poor children rambling about our back streets—the waifs and strays of our city—and I felt that this would be anticipatory of a reformatory or some such institution as the “Vernon.” In that way I thought we might do much to check crime, and prevent children growing up to fill Darlington, or to become a charge upon the revenue as paupers. But at a very early period of its history the institution was changed, and practically became a boarding-school for the children of dissolute or idle parents, who were glad of such an institution upon which to shift the burden of their own responsibility.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.
2 Dec., 1879.

26. Have you followed many of the children after they have left the institution, and are you in a position to state, from your experience, how they have succeeded in life? As far as my knowledge goes—of course I have not been able to follow them to any large extent—I think upon the whole the establishment of the institution has been a success. I think a larger proportion of the children who have been apprenticed from the institution have turned out well than ill. They come to see me occasionally, and sometimes come to my house, and I have been gratified to find many of them presenting an appearance of respectability, well to do, and with money in the Savings' Bank. I have also seen the other side of the picture. But I think I am justified in saying that the greater number have turned out well.

27. Mr. Garrett.] Have you given any attention to the system which has been discussed lately, called the “boarding-out” system? Yes, I have thought about it, and made inquiries respecting it. When in Melbourne I had the opportunity of consulting a clergyman who had taken considerable interest in the boarding-out system.

28. As far as you have been able to inform yourself in regard to it, are you of opinion that it is a system which could be profitably put in the place of that existing? You will not be able to do away with the present system altogether; but I think the boarding-out system might be adopted to some extent. At all events it is worth trying the experiment. There are many young children of from three to six years of age who are brought to our institution, and the conclusion I have arrived at is that for such children the boarding-out system would be a blessing under proper supervision; but there are other children who come to Randwick—where they are received to the ages of eleven—who are very dirty, disorderly, and bad. For this latter class the Randwick Asylum, or some analogous institution, must be maintained, but on better principles—less on the barrack system—with closer supervision and as little corporeal punishment as possible; although I think it is not possible to do without it altogether.

29. Is there anything in the constitution that governs Randwick Asylum that would prevent the adoption of such a system? I think not. I do not know of anything in the Act of incorporation, or in the original constitution of the society to prevent it. The only objection to it is the expense, which would be very heavy; for I am satisfied that the adoption of such a system would render necessary a considerable degree of supervision over the children. In Sydney or its vicinity you may obtain such supervision gratuitously, as there are many good Christian and benevolent ladies of different denominations, who would be very useful for that purpose; but, in addition to this, the boarding-out system would require some expenditure in the way of securing efficient supervision.

30. Could the funds you have received and which have accumulated for the Randwick Asylum be devoted to that purpose? I do not see why it should not. I am speaking under correction, and upon the spur of the moment. I do not see why the directors should not have the power to place out the children in that way if they think fit.

31. You have some doubt whether the machinery is at present available for such a system? The difficulty appears to me to be in the inspection of the children by visitors going from house to house. The supervision by ladies, to which I have referred, would be good to a certain extent, but it could not be depended upon, because pressing household and other duties might interfere. I know several ladies who take the greatest interest in the Benevolent Asylum, and who give up a great deal of time in visiting the unfortunate women who go to that institution to be confined; but it often happens when the time comes round for their visit, household duties and other circumstances call them away, and they are unable to give more than an irregular attendance.

32. Then you think if this system were adopted we should have to rely upon official supervision? Certainly, I think so to a great extent. Still I think the boarding-out system would be so great an improvement upon any other for the younger children that whatever the expense it would be worth trying.

33. Notwithstanding that opinion you think an institution of the character of Randwick Asylum would have to be retained for the elder boys and girls? Yes, and a portion of it, or some other separate institution, should be of a reformatory character.

34. Something between this asylum and Biloela? Yes, something between. With reference to the question of flogging, I may mention that I have been reading a book only to day, by a very well known authority on such matters, Mr. Haweis, and he says that the magistrates in England are almost to a man of opinion that the flogging of adults tends to degrade them, but that judicious flogging for youths under conditions that would render cruelty or hasty punishment impossible, would be and has been found the best for boys; and Mr. Row, the governor of the gaol at Plymouth, says that the moderate flagellation of boys with the birch has been found the most efficacious substitute for imprisonment. He is a great authority on what is called the humanitarian side of the question, which is the side on which I would place myself.

35. You are of opinion then that it is not possible to conduct an asylum such as Randwick without the use of the birch? I think it is impossible, but I do not advocate cruel flagellation or punishment until after full inquiry and a certain time has elapsed between the offence and the flogging. I have with me a letter which I received from a gentleman, who was for some years in the service of the Indian Government, with reference to a school for children of the Indian Army, numbering often upwards of a hundred. He says:—“The dread of punishment was found to have a deterring effect, in addition to preventing children being struck and knocked about, or ill-used at the impulse of the moment and under excited feelings. A large book called the Black Book had recorded in it every crime deserving punishment, with the accuser and witnesses' names. At noon on Saturday this book was placed on a table in front of the assembled school, the superintendent, doctor, master, and teachers being present. Each case was examined before a jury of twelve boys, called indiscriminately from the whole number; and then the Black Book was taken to an adjoining room, and this jury passed sentence in each case. The number of stripes seldom exceeded a dozen, and was inflicted by one of the ushers or a boy selected, with a small cat-of-nine-tails for the big boys and a rattan for the small ones, the culprit being hoisted on the back of some big hulk who did not object to be the 'horse.' Such as kicked had their legs held. No other punishment was allowed, and this formidable system, with the fear of punishment before the culprit, was found to answer admirably. In smaller schools the master was only allowed to punish, and had to record the same."

36. Do you know anything of the system under which punishment has been accorded at Randwick? I do not think there is any system; I think it has been left very largely to the superintendent's own discretion, but he is obliged to record the punishment.

37. Mr. Davies.] He received instruction from the house committee to give the punishment.

38. Mr. Garrett.] What is your own impression? My own impression is as I have stated, but Mr. Davies, being on the house committee, knows better than I; therefore I must withdraw what I have said.

39. Would you recommend any such system as that of which you have just read? I think you must to some extent retain corporeal punishment, but I do not think it wise to flog upon the spur of the moment. I have already given the opinion of authorities in England, that flogging is necessary for boys in certain circumstances, but I think it should be very judiciously administered, and under limitations that would make cruelty impossible—such as those mentioned in the letter I have read, which I may state is from Dr. Hogg, a retired Indian officer.

40. Is that Dr. Hogg the attendant surgeon at the asylum? He is not the attendant surgeon, but is on the committee.

41. With reference to Sprowle's case, which you mentioned—was that a charge of cruelty against Sprowle? Yes; and he was sentenced to four or six months' imprisonment.

42. Did not some circumstances come to light afterwards, which altered the view of the case? Some circumstances came to light afterwards which led to the belief that the man had been very much misrepresented; that he had been the victim of misstatements, if not of perjury.

43. Was that case based upon the evidence of any servants of the institution? Partly of the servants, but chiefly of the children themselves.

44. Do you think the evidence of the children themselves, with reference to these things, is to be relied upon? From the little experience I have had I think they are not trustworthy upon the whole, for I have known them to make a statement one day, or one hour, and to deny it the next. I should be loth to depend upon the unsupported testimony of children, unless I was well acquainted with them. And that is one of the mistakes of the large barrack system, that the matrons or attendants can have very little knowledge of the individual character of each child, and therefore cannot know who are likely to be truthful witnesses.

45. During your connection with the institution have you had any instances of persons who have been discharged coming to you afterwards with tales as to its management? I should not listen to them if I did. I think it a very un-English way of making charges.

46. You would look upon such statements with suspicion? Yes; they might be truthful, but I should look upon them with suspicion. I should say to any such persons, if they were to come to me, "If you have any complaint to make give it in writing, and I will take charge of it, and will lay it before the house committee." I may say that only to-day a person came to me with some statement in reference to Randwick Asylum, and my reply was: "Send it in writing to me before to-morrow morning, and I will lay it before the committee."

47. With regard to the election of Mr. Thomas, were there many candidates for the office? I think there were between 30 and 40 applications. These were reduced to six, then to three; and then Mr. Thomas was chosen.

48. Were there any of the gentlemen who had taken an interest in the management of the institution—any of the house committee who were candidates? Not any.

49. What was Mr. Thomas before he was appointed to this office? He was Church of England school-master at Ryde, and previously at Pennant Hills.

50. Therefore he must have had some opportunity of obtaining a knowledge of the ways and habits of children? Yes; but it is not possible for any man to obtain a knowledge of the habits or peculiarities of 600 or 700 children, and that is my reason for suggesting the cutting them up into small classes or messes.

51. What is the age of the oldest boys or girls there? The boys are, I think, retained until thirteen or fourteen.

52. Do you think you would obtain a sufficient number of boys of that age to carry out the monitorial system? I think so. I do not know whether I have read, or whether I have "evolved it from my inner consciousness," that on board a man-of-war the men are divided into so many messes, each of which takes it in turn to be responsible for the proper feeding and conduct of the rest, and I think some such system might be adopted in the asylum.

53. How are the children fed? So far as I have had an opportunity of seeing, I believe they are well fed.

54. I mean as to division into messes—have they not a system of messes? They have, I think, no system of messes, but they have these large divisions which are under the charge of separate officers. They sit in a large hall, under the immediate supervision and eye of the servants of the institution, who are immediately over them.

55. They are not divided into messes? No, the fault is that there is too great a distance between those in charge and the children themselves. If you had what I may term middle men or women, or boys or girls, it would be an improvement.

56. Mr. Cameron.] Did I understand you to say that the mode of managing the institution had been altered soon after its starting? The original constitution of the institution was, as I understood it, for the purpose of taking off the streets of Sydney those waifs and strays, those children who grow up to be criminals and larrikins, something anticipatory of a reformatory, such as the "Vernon." That was my reason for taking an interest in its establishment, but when the rules came to be drawn up, some months after that leading idea was lost sight of entirely, and the institution became practically a large boarding-school, in many instances for dissolute and drunken people, who wished to get rid of their parental responsibility, although, no doubt a fair proportion are the children of people of good character, who from loss of health health or misfortune, have been reduced in circumstances and become unable to support them. Still the institution has been largely abused.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.

57. With reference to the system of boarding-out children, I suppose there would be a difference between putting out children in a thickly-populated country like England and a sparsely-peopled country like this? Yes, and that is my reason for saying that a proper system of supervision would involve a large expense.

2 Dec., 1879.

58. Consequently, you would advise that the boarding-out system should be confined to a limited area? Supposing it were confined to Sydney and its suburbs in the first instance.

59. Has not the absconding of boys occurred pretty frequently of late years? I have known this difficulty only during the last seven or eight years. At first everything went on as smoothly as marriage-bells. I do not know for what reason, but for the last six or eight years there has been a great alteration for the worse.

60. So far as you know, is there no cause to which you can attribute this? I know of no cause.

61. Have you any opinion upon it? I have not been able to form an opinion satisfactory to myself. All boys of a certain age have a love of freedom; they are like birds in a cage and wish to be free. I should be myself the same under similar circumstances. I think they may not run away from mere love of mischief, but from a desire to roam and to see what is outside.

62. Are not the boys sometimes taken out of the building? Yes, they go out for walks, but always under supervision.

63. Generally what is the character of the children in the institution—do they differ materially from children out of doors? I have been disappointed in this respect. Instead of looking happy as the children in a similar institution in Tasmania did, they have a down look, more like frightened hounds than happy children. Even that was the case when I went to the institution constantly, and when I knew from my own observation that they were kindly treated.

64. Mr. Davies.] On the occasion you have referred to, when Mr. Holterman communicated with you? Mr. Holterman did not communicate with me. I was asked by a gentleman to attend the meeting because Mr. Holterman was going to bring certain matters under the notice of the Board. The gentleman was Mr. Foster Wise, the Vice-President, who in consequence of illness was unable to go himself.

65. Did you, on that day, go through the institution yourself? No, I did not.

66. You did not make a personal inspection? I did not. I was unable to do so, as I am unable, owing to a nervous affection, to walk about. I have not yet visited the Exhibition, although most desirous to do so. I mention this to show that as President of the Institution I have not shown want of feeling or interest in it, especially under existing circumstances, when reports have been circulated which cast a stigma upon it, and upon myself as President. Had I been able to walk I should have more frequently visited the institution, and made myself personally acquainted with the facts. I am seriously thinking of resigning my position of President at the end of the year for this reason: I think anyone who has the honor of being President or Vice-President should be prepared to bear his share of the responsibility and management, and if I find I cannot do so it is only consistent with my idea of right to resign.

67. Are you aware of the constitution of the house committee? Yes.

68. Do you know the number of gentlemen who constitute it? I think seven or eight.

69. Five? With the treasurer and secretary.

70. Are you aware that of that committee two gentlemen are appointed as weekly visitors? Yes.

71. Are you aware that those gentlemen perform that duty? I believe they do. I have already said I believe the house committee perform their duty in a manner which is highly satisfactory.

72. Do you believe that the cruel punishments alleged to have been inflicted at Randwick could have taken place without these gentlemen, who went throughout the institution every week, being apprised of it? I think it is quite possible.

73. Why do you think so? Because I know what children are, and how frightened they are of those in authority, and although the house committee might go through the building every week there is a backwardness and timidity in children which would prevent their making a complaint. I wish to be understood that I am not saying any act of cruelty has been committed.

74. You have not been present when the house committee or any portion of them have been paying their visit there? No; neither the President nor Vice-President are members of the house committee, and I know that the late Honorable George Allen felt hurt that, being the President of the Asylum, he was excluded from the committee.

WEDNESDAY, 3 DECEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

MR. BURNS,
MR. CAMERON,
MR. J. DAVIES,

MR. DILLON,
MR. GREENWOOD,
MR. HURLEY (Hartley).

SIR HENRY PARKES IN THE CHAIR.

The Rev. Canon Alfred H. Stephen further examined:—

75. Mr. Davies.] Have you any idea of the number of children who have passed through the institution since its first establishment? There must have been several thousands.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.

76. Have you any idea of the number who have been apprenticed? I suppose of boys and girls there must have been at least a thousand.

3 Dec., 1879.

77. Have you any knowledge of how the majority of those children have turned out? I mentioned yesterday that as far as my knowledge went a very fair proportion had turned out well.

78. You are aware that it has been the practice for many years past to give gratuities to those who have been apprenticed and who have given satisfaction to their employers, and have produced letters to that effect to the directors? Yes, I am aware.

79. You are aware that a large sum of money has been paid away in that way in the shape of gratuities? I am.

80. That would be a practical proof of the large number of children who have given satisfaction? That would be a very satisfactory proof.

81.

- Rev. Canon Stephen.
3 Dec., 1879.
81. Have you at any time during your long connection with the institution had cause to complain that the children have received harsh treatment at the hands of the officials? Not from my own knowledge; from hearsay I have.
82. Some few years back you were a very constant attendant at the institution, in addition to being a member of the house committee and of the Board? Up to within the last seven years I suppose I visited the institution more frequently than any other person.
83. During that time was there anything in the shape of harsh treatment as far as you knew? The only case I recollect was a charge brought against Mr. May, the late superintendent, for allowing the ill-treatment of children. There were some masons working at the building at the time and I think it originated with them. There was an inquiry made by the Board and the charges were not substantiated. That is the only case I remember.
84. Are you aware that it is the duty of the subordinate officers to report in writing to the superintendent any marks or bruises that may be observed upon the bodies of the children? I am aware that it is the rule to report, but I am not aware that it is to be reported in writing.
85. Do you know that it is also the duty of the medical officer to make a weekly inspection of the children, and to report any marks of violence upon the children? I infer that from what I have heard at the Board meetings, and also that he did so when he observed any marks which he was led to suppose were caused by violence.
86. Do you remember observing, in any of his reports that have been read to the Board, that the doctor has reported that marks of violence upon children had been caused by accident or when playing? I do not remember any.
87. Do you know Dr. Nott's writing? I think I do—I have seen it on several cases.
88. Do you know that it is the practice of the medical officer to report upon the condition of the children weekly? I believe it is; that is to say, I have inferred that from what I have heard when I have been present at the Board meetings.
89. Do you know the character of the examination that the children undergo? Yes. When the children are stripped for bathing it is seen if they have any marks upon them, and if these are seen they are reported, and an inquiry is made as to the cause.
90. Of late years, in consequence of ill-health, you have not been able to give the attention to the institution which you did formerly? No; I have very seldom been able to visit the asylum.
91. You are aware that there is a visiting committee of ladies, including Lady Hay? There was such a committee, and I believe there is still nominally such a committee, but I am not aware that they hold any meetings.
92. Have you not seen the report of last year? No.
93. There are some forty lady visitors, are there not? I am not aware of my own knowledge.
94. Do you not know that Lady Hay frequently visits the institution? Yes.
95. And Mrs. Pottie? I believe Mrs. Pottie does—I know Lady Hay does.
96. Do you think it is possible the alleged cruelties could have taken place in the institution when ladies such as Lady Hay, Mrs. Pottie, and others were in the habit of frequently visiting it, without coming under their observation? I think so—I do not say it has been so, as I am not going to anticipate the report; but from what I know of children, and as I stated yesterday, from what I know of my own ill-treatment when a child at school, ill-treatment may have been committed upon the children, and the ladies visiting the institution have not been told of it.
97. Lady Hay is a frequent visitor, and goes among the children? Unless she went among the children and particularly asked them I do not think it likely they would come up to her and complain of their treatment.
98. Is it not usual for visitors like Lady Hay to ask the children whether they are treated kindly, whether they get all they require, and so on? Very probably it is, but you could not depend upon the answers given under such circumstances. For instance, some years ago, when complaints were made respecting the Infirmary, and when any of the directors or other persons went to inquire of the patients the answers they received was that everything was all right. There is a degree of unwillingness in the children's minds to make complaints—a dread of what may be the consequences if they report anything that may have occurred. Of course you may have had a different experience of children, but as I stated yesterday, in reference to my own case, I do not think you can conclude that children are not subjected to ill-treatment because they do not mention it.
99. I wish to elicit from you whether you have any knowledge that any such harsh treatment was practised? As far as my knowledge goes, and as far as I have been able to learn from those parents who have called upon me, I should not say that ill-treatment has been the rule. I have had complaints from the parents that their children have been ill, and that they have not been allowed to visit them, that they have been without shoes, and other complaints which have been capable of explanation, and which, in many instances, have been explained, but not of ill-treatment. I cannot charge my memory with any such complaint.
100. You have had complaints where children have been suffering from ophthalmia or other diseases, which of course the institution could not be answerable for? Certainly not.
101. You have paid visits to the Catherine Hayes Hospital frequently? Not lately.
102. Every provision is made there, so far as you know, for the proper treatment of the children? Yes; I am very much pleased with the arrangements of the present house committee, and I give them great credit for the improvements they have made in the ménage of the institution.
103. The alterations in the general arrangement and management of the institution have been very great, have they not? I think there have been many decided improvements. I think everything has been done that could be done by the committee to ensure the success of the institution. When I spoke yesterday of the failure of the institution I did not in any way ascribe it to the management of the directors, or of those who took a prominent part in the conduct of its business. I think they have done their best. My disappointment arises from other causes over which the managing body or house committee have no control.
104. You are aware that a large number of children are annually drafted from the Benevolent Asylum to Randwick by order of the Government? Yes.
105. Are not most of those children the children of criminals or of persons of dissolute habits? A very large proportion are.
- 106.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.

3 Dec., 1879.

106. Of persons steeped in crime? Yes; there are, however, exceptions.

107. You are aware that there are several children in the institution who are great cause of anxiety and trouble to the management? I have heard reports of boys having attempted to set fire to the institution. It has been officially reported to the Board. Some of them are very troublesome.

108. Has it come under your observation that boys of that sort have led away a number of other boys, and have induced them to abscond? They would necessarily have that influence. I know that even in my own Sunday-school two or three bad boys will have a serious influence upon the others; and in such an institution as this the evil influence would be likely to be still greater.

109. You think it necessary to have a sort of middle institution to receive boys of this character? Yes; as I said yesterday, a reformatory is one of the great wants of Sydney. I think a great deal of trouble would have been saved to the institution, and perhaps this inquiry would have been unnecessary, if some of these boys had been removed to the "Vernon", or a similar establishment.

110. You think the management would have been more simple, easy, and effectual, if boys of that class were removed from the school? It is of no use to persist in flogging boys of this class; it would be better that they should be sent to some place of a reformatory character.

111. Do you think it is possible to maintain anything like order or discipline if children are not punished for absconding or misbehaving themselves? It is impossible to control children without punishment of some kind.

112. Have children made any complaints to you within the last twelve months as to punishments received from teachers in the Public school? No.

113. Chairman.] When you speak of removing children to a reformatory do you bear in mind that a reformatory, as the term is understood in England, is a prison—a juvenile prison? It need not necessarily be so.

114. All reformatories have been such; they are only for the purpose of separating children who have been convicted of crime from adult criminals; and you would hardly recommend that a poor destitute child who had committed no offence should be treated as a criminal? I do not mean a reformatory in that sense of the word, certainly, but some institution where such children could be looked after more closely—where their individual character could be studied, and they could be subjected to a direct treatment of a reformatory character. I certainly did not intend such a reformatory as you describe, or that the children should have the stigma of prisoners attached to them.

115. Then what I understand is that you think the more refractory children should be removed to some place where they would be kept together? Where they could be kept from the better disposed, as we know that "evil communications corrupt," not only "good," but any "manners."

116. Does it not occur to you that putting all these refractory children together would have a bad effect upon them, and would be opposed to the principles upon which all human society is constituted? It is not necessary to put them all together.

117. Mr. Burns.] I think I understood you to state yesterday that your objections to the establishment at Randwick of the barrack system had reference to the want of a thorough system of inspection? Yes, the number of children is altogether too large. I think it is of great consequence in such an institution that the character of each individual child should be known, and that is almost impossible under the present system. I may mention that I have in connection with my own church a very large Sunday-school, where there are nearly 900 children, and it happened the other day that for the sake of the good order of the school and of the other children I had to expel a big boy who was disobedient and refractory. He had a home to go to, but in the case of the children at Randwick, if any of them were to be expelled they would have no homes to go to, and it is therefore necessary that the State should provide for them some reformatory or similar institution.

118. Do you think the system carried out at Randwick could be so modified as to meet the objection you have mentioned, and that there might be a thorough knowledge of the children by the head of the institution? I think the asylum would be very materially improved if some system could be adopted by which a more intimate knowledge of the children could be obtained; and this, I think, would in some degree be effected by the division of the children into messes as I suggested yesterday. At the same time I should like, as far as the younger children are concerned, to see the boarding-out system tried. No doubt the expense would be very considerable, and there would be difficulties, such as are not found to exist in England and other places; still I think it desirable that the system should have a trial. For the elder children such an institution as Randwick would have to be retained.

119. Have you any plan of your own you would like to suggest to the Committee? I have no plan that I could give out of my head at the moment; but I suggested a plan which was given in the report of the committee appointed by the Board two or three years ago—at the time of the investigation into the case of Sprowle. The plan suggested was that the children should be divided into messes, over each of which should be placed one who should be regarded as an elder brother or elder sister—a kind of middleman between the children and the teachers or officers in charge.

120. Something of the monitorial system? Very much of the monitorial system. I was told yesterday by Mr. Davies that that recommendation was carried out, and that there were apprentices who are, in fact, monitors; but I think there is too great a distance between the children and the apprentices, who are generally much older than themselves.

121. You think without some such system it is quite possible for children to be ill-treated without its being known to the committee or to the Board? I think the supervision of the children would be very much improved. There must be something very wrong when you go for years to see children, and always observe, as I stated yesterday, a down-cast look upon their faces. I met Mr. Justice Dowling yesterday who has for years taken a deep interest in the institution, and he quite confirmed what I had said that the original object of the institution was not what it had become, but that it was to take the waifs and strays off our streets, and to prevent their growing up larrikins and criminals and becoming a charge upon the revenue in various ways. He also agreed with me about the look of the children, but said he thinks that it is attributable to the site and the sea air, which affects their eyes. The children at the Parramatta Orphan School look very much more happy.

122. Do you not think that the cast-down appearance to which you refer arises from the want of home influences and a closer attention? No doubt; but the plan I have suggested, and of which I have read somewhere—but where I cannot remember—as having been pursued in some institutions on the Continent, would have the effect of making them feel more at home.

Rev. Canon
Stephen.
3 Dec., 1879.

123. Chairman.] Have you any knowledge of the American refuge system? No.
124. In which the children are formed into family groups? That is just my idea—family groups. If an estate could be obtained up the country upon which a number of small houses could be erected the children might thus be collected into family groups. It may appear theoretical or utopian merely, but it struck me some years ago as desirable that some such plan should be adopted, and I proposed it to the Board, and it was thought worthy of consideration, and embodied in their report.
125. Mr. Cameron.] Is it not known by the name of the cottage system? I think Sir Henry's designation of "family groups" expresses more accurately the idea.
126. Mr. Burns.] Your objection is to children being aggregated together in large masses? I think they are in too large a number.
127. Mr. Dillon.] With regard to these charges of cruelty—you have been a member of the committee of management for some years? Until lately—the last six or seven years—I was secretary for many years.
128. For the last six or seven years you have not been able to take any active part in the management? No.
129. Then you really cannot give us any evidence as to the charges of cruelty made during the last six or seven years? No.
130. There is a house surgeon is there not? Yes.
131. One of his duties is to inspect the children? Yes.
132. How often? I believe once a week.
133. You said that they were stripped when they bathed;—how often do they bathe—only once a week? They used to bathe oftener than that.
134. Does the doctor or surgeon send in his report to the committee of management? To the house committee.
135. How often do they meet? Once a week.
136. Is that the only way in which they could become aware of any cruelty? Unless reported by the children.
137. Is there any encouragement given to them to report cruelty or to make any other complaints to the superior officers? Not that I am aware.
138. So that the knowledge of any such cases could come only through the doctor? Or through the nurses, attendants, or superintendent. I know that marks upon the children have been reported, and that upon inquiry in some cases it has been found that these have been accidentally received.
139. Who, besides the surgeon, has the opportunity of seeing the marks upon the children? The superintendent.
140. The superintendent has been accused, has he not, of inflicting these marks himself? Yes.
141. You know nothing of what has occurred in the building during the last six or seven years? Except what I have heard when I have attended meetings of the Board of Directors, but I know nothing of what has happened with reference to this question.
142. Mr. Greenwood.] You say that you have often been struck with the cast-down look of the children at Randwick? Yes.
143. Do you remember when you were first struck with this appearance, recently or during the earlier period of your connection with the institution? I have always been struck with it.
144. You have paid some visits during the last seven years to this asylum? Yes.
145. Have you noticed any difference in their appearance in that respect recently, from what you had been accustomed to see formerly? No, I think not.
146. You have always all along been impressed with their cast-down look;—to use your own expression they have looked like "frightened hounds"? That has been not only my own impression but that of friends who have visited the institution.
147. Chairman.] Do you really apply that expression to all the children? The great majority struck me as having a down look.
148. Mr. Greenwood.] Has it struck you that there has been any difference in that respect between the younger and older children? No. I always felt disappointment as one of the founders of the institution. It stood in strong contrast in this respect with a similar institution which I visited at Hobart Town a few years ago. It was started by Mr. Kennedy. The number there was small, but it was more like a family group. I was very much struck with the appearance of the children—they looked pleased and happy, and seemed able to give an intelligent answer to any question, and not to be frightened when spoken to.
149. You are aware that there was no provision at Randwick for the instruction of children in the ordinary school curriculum until recently? Not in a very satisfactory manner.
150. Was there any real school at Randwick? Yes; they had a paid schoolmaster.
151. What number of children was there in average attendance prior to the Council of Education taking the school? I know a very large proportion—I should say two-thirds. I am speaking from recollection. It is difficult to go back a number of years, and to speak positively on such a matter.
152. Are you aware that before the Council of Education was asked to take charge of the instruction of the children a large number of the children were unable to read and write? They attended school, but a certain portion of them were employed also upon the grounds. They were attending the school, but they had opportunity for being in school only half the time.
153. From what ages would that be? From eleven upwards.
154. Under eleven what was done with the children? Under eleven to four or five they were at school. There was a schoolmaster and a schoolmistress.
155. Did the schoolmaster and mistress hold any certificate of competency from anybody who could determine the question? Yes. Mr. George had what was tantamount to a certificate, and would have been employed by the body which was superseded by the present Council of Education.
156. The mistress? I am not so certain about her.
157. Had they any assistant? Yes, on my recommendation a female assistant was appointed who had been infant schoolmistress in my own Denominational School at Redfern.
158. Was there any examination as to the children's education from results? Yes.
159. Was any report made? Yes.

160. Where are the reports to be found? They will be found in some of the old reports of the institution. I may state, also, that for two or three years they were paid examiners to visit the school. One of these was Mr. Saunders, now a retired schoolmaster; another gentleman was associated with him, whose name I forget. They were sent out by the Board to examine them, and received two guineas each for their trouble. Rev. Canon
Stephen.
3 Dec., 1879.

161. Have you ever visited the Orphanages at Parramatta? I never have.

162. From your own personal observation you cannot say anything as to any difference of appearance between the children in the Parramatta Orphanages and those at Randwick Asylum? I cannot say from my own personal knowledge; but I have heard, and believe from what I have seen of apprentices from the Parramatta Orphan School, that they have been much better trained.

163. Are you aware as to the proportion of children sent to Randwick from the Benevolent Asylum at Pitt-street, and of those from the general population? I should think at least two-thirds of the former.

164. At what ages, speaking again in general terms, are they drafted from the Benevolent Asylum to Randwick? From the age of four, up to eight, nine, and ten; most of them between the ages of four and six.

165. So far as you are aware, two-thirds of the number of children annually received at Randwick are from the Benevolent Asylum, and are between the ages of four and nine? I think so; in fact I am almost certain.

166. Do you find, so far as your means of observing extend, any difference between the character and disposition of this two-thirds from the Benevolent Asylum in Pitt-street and of those of the one-third from the general public? My impression is that those received from the general public are a better class of children.

167. Do you find that payments are made by the parents of children received from the general public, and that nothing is received from those who come from the Benevolent Asylum, excepting what is paid by the Government? Yes.

168. Have you any means of tracing the parentage of the children you receive from the general public? Yes; the names of the father and mother, what they are, where they live, and other particulars are necessarily required before an order can be obtained for their admission.

169. Upon what grounds, so far as you know, do the directors receive such children as destitute? Upon inquiry, and upon the recommendations of clergymen and magistrates. The house committee also closely examine the applicants, and it is due to the present committee to state that they are much more careful whom they admit than was the practice formerly. They used to be more lax and good-natured, and it is not now so easy a matter to get children, as I found in a case which I recommended myself, and which somewhat to my annoyance was rejected.

170. How can you regard children as destitute who have their father and mother living? Take this case: A father becomes a drunkard, dissolute and unable to support his children, or the mother suffers from ill-health and is unable to earn a living for her family.

171. In such cases would you not consider that the Randwick Asylum was performing a function similar to some extent to what Parish Unions are performing in England? I have had very little experience of Parish Unions. I was a clergyman in England for only a few weeks, but as far as I know I should think the Benevolent Asylum was more analogous, as that receives women in their confinements, and gives outdoor relief.

172. Have you had any means of ascertaining the character of the parents of the children received into the Benevolent Asylum? In their cases the characters are generally worse. Many of the children who are brought there have been found wandering about the streets deserted by their parents; or have been taken directly away from the influence of dissolute parents. I should say, from the knowledge I have of the two institutions, that a lower class of children go to Randwick Asylum through the Benevolent Asylum than what I should call the ordinary channels, by application to the committee.

173. What proportion of the children drafted from the Benevolent Asylum to Randwick is born in the former asylum—so far as you can ascertain? A very small proportion.

174. At what ages, speaking in general terms, are children received into the asylum from the general public? From sucking babes up to eight, nine, or ten.

175. Do you receive them over eleven? Not generally.

176. You cannot receive them into Randwick Asylum after what age? They are received up to ten, but I think they are exceptional cases.

177. You think flogging for adults is degrading? My authority upon that subject is the Rev. Mr. Haweis, a clergyman of the Broad Church, who has written a book which I think deserves to be generally known, called "Current Coin." It is a book in the form of a series of propositions on crime, on pauperism, and cognate subjects; and he says the magistrates in England, almost to a man, are against the punishment of adults by flagellation; but under certain circumstances, and combined with other treatment, it is the best punishment for youths.

178. What age would you fix as the distinction between adult and youth? An adult when past sixteen. He says that Mr. Row, and I am using his words "the veteran Governor of the gaol in Plymouth," and I infer from what he says that Mr. Row is regarded as a man of the greatest experience—"has found, combined with other treatment, that judicious flogging with the birch rod is more efficacious than any other punishment for juvenile offenders."

179. Then you would flog up to sixteen? I am not telling you what I would do; I would never flog if I could help it. I have brought up two sons to man's estate and can scarcely remember having struck them, beyond a slap on the head. I am simply giving you the experience of those who have studied the question, and their opinion that flogging is in certain cases necessary and efficacious. I know some people who object so strongly to the flogging of boys in school who flog their own children most unmercifully.

180. Chairman.] When you spoke of the Orphan Schools at Parramatta did you refer to both? My knowledge is confined to the Protestant only.

181. The superintendent, Mr. Thomas, wishes me to put this question, whether you are aware that the children in the Orphan School at Parramatta are of a different class from those at Randwick; I presume a better class? Yes, that is a very important consideration, which had escaped me. In very many instances the children in that institution are there not for the crime or sin of their parents but from misfortune from the loss of their parents. I have myself recommended the orphans of several highly respectable people.

- Rev. Canon Stephen.
3 Dec., 1879.
182. Is it not the fact that there are at Randwick the children of persons who have held very good positions in this Colony? Yes, but the number is very small.
183. I think I have known cases? I have known some cases during the twenty years I have been connected with the institution, but the number has been very small; for instance, in one case the father had been an architect in Sydney.
184. The superintendent also wishes me to put this question: How many times have you visited the institution during the term of office of the present superintendent—say the last three years—and whether you went among the children when you visited it? For the reasons I mentioned yesterday I have been prevented from visiting the institution—I think at the outside I have not been there more than six times. It may seem egotistical that I should say so much of myself, but I wish to impress upon the Committee that if, as President of the Asylum, I have not visited it so often as was desirable, it has been attributable to my illness, and has really been my misfortune and not my fault. I have been unable to bear the fatigue of walking, and this inability has prevented my yet visiting the Exhibition though I have much desired to see it.
185. Mr. Davies.] Have you visited the school at the asylum since it has been under the Council of Education? No, I have not.
186. You do not know anything about the improvement in the discipline or education of the children? I have heard, and was delighted to hear, that the Council of Education had taken the school under its wing.
187. Have you heard that there is a great improvement in the discipline and in the teaching? Yes; I have not only heard it, but I wished for years to have the school handed over to the Council of Education.
188. Have you known, when some of the house committee have gone round the building, as many as a hundred of the children flock round them? I used to be struck at the way in which they would flock round the clergyman when he visited them. I have not had the pleasure of being in your society when you have gone round, but I know that in the case of the late Mr. Raphael, who, with all his peculiarities, was a benevolent and philanthropical man, when he visited the asylum the children were glad to flock round him; but I do not think they would have told him, unless they had been asked, of any ill-treatment they might have received.
189. You would not see down-cast children—children with depressed countenances—do that? They did it with me, with Dean Sheridan, and Mr. Raphael, notwithstanding. I do not mean in any way to impute the cause to the superintendent or to the management. I merely mention it as the impression made upon my mind, and not only upon mine but upon that of visitors from other Colonies.
190. Have you seen the report from the Inspector to the Council of Education? Yes; I get the reports of the Council of Education every year.
191. Did you pay any attention to the part that refers to the Randwick Asylum? Yes.
192. Is it not satisfactory? Yes, I think so.

David Arthur Thomas, Esq., examined:—

- D. A. Thomas, Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.
193. Chairman.] You hold some office in the Randwick Institution for Destitute Children? I am superintendent.
194. When were you appointed? In October, 1876.
195. You were appointed by election, I believe? By election.
196. What is the salary attached to the office? £400 per annum.
197. Was it £400 when you first took office? Yes.
198. There has been no alteration? No alteration.
199. Have you residence also? Yes.
200. Anything else? Nothing whatever.
201. Have you rations? None whatever.
202. Firing? Not the smallest particle.
203. Salary and residence? Salary and residence.
204. Are your duties defined by regulation, order, decision, or resolution of the Board of Directors? Only as stated in the by-laws of the society.
205. What is the definition of your duties? If you will permit me I will read them:—"VII.—The Superintendent.—38. The immediate control and management of the institution, and of the Catherine Hayes' Hospital, is vested in the superintendent. He will be responsible for the safe keeping of all property belonging to the institution. He will also be responsible for the full and effective discharge of all duties by the various paid officers connected with these establishments, except the chaplains and the medical officers. He will be guided from time to time by such instructions as he may receive from the Board of directors or from the house committee."
206. What is the next grade of office under you;—what is it called? I hold that the matron is the next under me. There may be some difference of opinion upon that point, whether the secretary is not, but my opinion is that the matron is my next subordinate officer.
207. Does the word "matron" designate the person who next to you has the supervision of the whole establishment? Yes.
208. Are the duties of the secretary confined to those of secretary, or has he any administrative duties to perform over and above those of that office? Lately, during the absence of the superintendent, he takes charge of the institution, but I may state that it would be more in the way of clerical duties than in that of supervision.
209. Does he fill the superintendent's place when the superintendent is absent? Yes.
210. Under the matron what other officers are employed? The next in grade to her in the main building would be the two sub-matrons, and combined with these officers are those of religious instructresses—that is to say, the Protestant religious instructress is also sub-matron.
211. Is there a person employed as sub-matron and also as religious instructress to the Roman Catholic children? Yes.
212. Under these are there other matrons? No; other attendants.
213. How many attendants are there? At present one to each division. The boys are divided into senior divisions, of which there are three; and the girls are also divided into senior divisions, of which there are three.

214. The attendants are all women? All; that would be six for the boys or rather I should say five, as the duty of the sixth is to attend to the dining-room, but she sleeps in the dormitory at night.
215. These attendants have charge of the children, subject to the immediate supervision of the sub-matrons and your general supervision? Yes, and the matron's.
216. What are the duties of the attendants, day and night—describe the round of duties for the twenty-four hours, day and night? The first bell rings at half-past 5, to get up; at 6 they should be up and dressed, and take the children to the bath; there they are washed and cleaned and got ready for breakfast; they then attend in the breakfast-room, where the children take that meal; after that the children are again taken to the bath-room.
217. When does the religious instructress make her appearance? After breakfast she makes her appearance in that capacity, but before that she has to be up at the same hour as the attendants and see that they are at their duties. The children kneel at their bedside and say their prayers, but silently.
218. When do her functions come into operation as religious instructress? After breakfast.
219. In what form? The religious instructresses hear the children say their prayers aloud.
220. Then the attendants resume their duties? They go a second time to the bath-room to see that the children wash their faces and hands, and get ready for school; they then go to the dormitories with a proportion of the girls to put their dormitories in order; this and all the other necessary work should be done before 11 o'clock; generally it is over by 10 o'clock, or half an hour later.
221. When does the school hour commence? At present at 10 o'clock; that is only a late arrangement.
222. Who gives the instruction in the school? Teachers under the Council of Education.
223. They make their appearance at 10? At about a quarter to 10.
224. What have the attendants to do during school hours? From about 9 o'clock they muster the children in squads for inspection by myself and the matron; we see whether they are clean and tidy in appearance.
225. When the children have assembled for instruction what do the attendants do? They go into the dormitories, repair the childrens' dresses, and perform other kinds of work.
226. They absent themselves from the children while they are in charge of the teachers? Yes, and are employed in various duties, such as mending the clothes of the children.
227. When do the children come out of school? At half-past 12.
228. What is done then? It is then the dinner-hour.
229. How long does the dinner-hour last? About half an hour, until 1 o'clock.
230. What is done then? They are taken to the bath-room again under the supervision of the attendants and are got ready for afternoon school at half-past 1.
231. How long does that last? From half-past 1 to 4.
232. When the children come out of school is there any farther religious ceremony? Not till after tea.
233. What do the children do when they come out of school? They go to play until half-past 4 in winter, and a quarter to 5 in summer, when it is the hour for tea.
234. When do the religious instructresses again appear? After tea they assemble the children in the two dining-halls; one dining-hall is used by the boys and the other by the girls. The Protestant instructress has her children in one hall, and the Roman Catholic hers in the other.
235. Are clergymen ever present at these times? No; the Roman Catholic clergyman generally comes twice a week, on Tuesday and Friday, at 10 o'clock.
236. After religious service what takes place? They are released to the playground; a portion of them attend to the dormitories, to getting the beds ready, and then they go out to play.
237. At what hour do they retire for the night? At half-past 6 they proceed to the dormitories.
238. They are unlocked at what hour? At 6.
239. Where do the attendants sleep? Those who are with the girls sleep in their dormitory, but the boys' attendants sleep in a small compartment boarded off from the dormitory and open at the upper part.
240. Where they have means of observation over the dormitory, or can readily gain access to it? Yes; the partition is only about 8 feet high.
241. Is there on Sundays any material alteration from the round of duties you have described? On Sunday we have religious instruction in the morning from 9 to 10; the Roman Catholic clergyman comes in the afternoon, but the Roman Catholic children go to instruction from 9 to 10, and then the religious instructress takes from a *hundred to a hundred and twenty to the Waverley church, and the Protestant religious instructress takes about the same number to St. Jude's, at Randwick.
242. Have the children a holiday on Saturday, or anything to mark the day? Yes; after the domestic duties are completed they are taken to the recreation ground of the institution, and they are also on other afternoons from 5 to 6.
243. Will you kindly inform the Committee what duties you perform during these twenty-four hours we have gone over;—do you go through the dormitories? I have been on duty from half-past 4 in the morning until 11 at night when I first went there, and during that time I was fully employed.
244. What I should like to gather is how you discharge your duties as superintendent;—when do you leave your office—what is your ordinary round of duties? Lately I have been rather ill, but up to the last month or two I have generally been over at 6 o'clock when the doors have been opened—have gone through the grounds, the play-yard, to see how the boys behaved themselves when they came out. I have gone into the bath-room to see them when washing, to see that the women attended to them properly—to the combing of their hair and matters of that kind. Then I have attended in the breakfast-room to see that the food was sufficient and properly cooked. After that was over I generally went to my own breakfast about 8, and returned again about a quarter to 9, and remained with them till the inspection took place, which was about a quarter past 9. I then went round the whole of them, taking the infants first, and saw, as far as it was possible to do in so short a time, that every child was clean and tidy, and fit to go to school. I paid particular attention to the state of the children's eyes, and if I observed what appeared to me to be signs of ophthalmia, I set the child aside; and if upon further examination it appeared to be necessary, sent him to the hospital. From the close of the inspection to, say, 11 o'clock, I attended to correspondence and other matters in my office, and at 11 I went through

D. A. Thomas,
Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.

* NOTE (on revision):—I intended to convey that about 120 attended both places of worship; formerly upwards of 100 attended each, but upon the Protestant chaplain intimating that there was not accommodation for so many a less number was sent.

D. A. Thomas, Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.

through the institution with the matron, visited the kitchen, dining-room, and dormitories, to see that everything was clean and in order. I then went through the Catherine Hayes Hospital in the same manner. At half-past 12 I visited the dining-room to see that the children had the proper quantity of food, and that it was properly cooked—often tasting it myself to ascertain; also to see that the table utensils were clean, and that the children used their knives and forks. These may appear to be minor matters, but they were matters which I felt it to be my duty to attend to properly, and they all occupied time.

245. Do many persons pay visits of inspection to the institution? Do you mean as casual visitors?

246. Yes? A goodly number.

247. What average number daily? On Sundays none come; upon others, perhaps half-a-dozen or more.

248. What would be the average per week? I would not say, because I do not go through the institution with strangers.

249. When strangers visit the institution do you go through with them, or some one else? It would depend upon how I was engaged.

250. And to some extent, I suppose, upon who the visitors were? Yes, to some extent. If I were ever so busy, and the visitors were of a class which demanded my presence, I would leave off whatever I was engaged upon to attend them. In ordinary cases I would send the matron.

251. I would like to ascertain in what way, if a child felt himself aggrieved by the treatment he received from an attendant, he could appeal for redress—to whom would the children appeal in the ordinary course? They would not make much of appealing to anyone; they would appeal to a stranger or to me.

252. There must be occasions when the children feel that they have cause of complaint; in such cases do they appeal to the matron? They would appeal to the matron and to myself. The girls would go to the matron.

253. There would be no difficulty in appealing to you? There would be no difficulty in appealing to me directly at any time, without the intervention of any other person.

254. You will notice that I have said nothing about food. I would prefer leaving that to a subsequent examination. I would like to ask you what position you held before you were chosen superintendent of this institution? I was schoolmaster for seventeen years at Pennant Hills.

255. Were you ever at Wollongong? Never.

256. There has been some statement made that a teacher of your name committed undue flogging upon some children at Wollongong;—you have been confounded with that person? I never had a school at Wollongong. I was for seventeen years at Pennant Hills, and between three and four years at Ryde.

257. Would you have the kindness to state to the Committee what knowledge you had of the management of an institution of the character of the Randwick Asylum before you were chosen by the directors to fill the office of superintendent? I had no experience beyond what I had gained from reading and observation in travelling. I had visited institutions of that kind, but had no practical knowledge of their working when I took charge.

258. What I wish to learn is, whether you had paid such attention to the subject as might be considered to have been a study of the treatment of destitute children? I had not had many opportunities of acquiring a knowledge of it, but I had thought much upon it.

259. But you must be aware that there are many eminent institutions in the mother country as well as in other parts of the world devoted to children of this class? Yes.

260. You must also be aware that a number of books have been published upon the subject, lectures and addresses delivered, and speeches made? Yes.

261. Had the subject ever been brought under your notice by means of this kind? Yes, and I had taken an interest in the destitute children at Randwick before I was appointed to this office.

262. Do you recollect a day in October—I think the 17th—when some children who had run away from the institution were brought back about midnight? Yes, I think it was on the 20th.

263. Do you recollect at what time these children ran away—at what time in the day? It was reported to me that they had left the school teachers after they had been handed over to them by the male attendant.

264. How many of them? I think the number stated to me was about forty.

265. Were they brought back the same day? The same night. Some of them came back of their own accord, and some twenty-three were brought back by the police.

266. Did any of the children, whether those who came back of their own accord or those who were brought back by the police, explain that they went for a swim, or anything of that kind? They said they had been to the bush, and had gone for a swim.

267. Those that came back voluntarily did they receive any chastisement? No.

268. Surely they were told it was wrong to go away? Yes, but I understood you to mean corporeal punishment.

269. I should call keeping without food chastisement? They were not kept without food, but they were admonished.

270. Did you admonish them? Yes.

271. At what time were the other children brought back to the place? I believe it was half-past 11 at night. I did not see them until about ten minutes or a quarter to 12.

272. I think it best that you should explain what took place on that night in your own way? About half-past 11 the night watchman came and rang my bell. I got up, and he told me the police had brought back twenty-three boys. I then went and dressed myself and went over to the asylum, which is only a short distance from my house. I found the boys standing in the hall. I took them from the night-watchman into the Board-room. I at first spoke to them collectively, but could get no answer from them.

273. What was the subject on which you spoke to them collectively? I wished to know what induced them to go away—to leave the school—and who were the ringleaders. I could not get any reply from them that was satisfactory, so I took them each separately, and told them, as they knew indeed, that the house committee had ordered that absconders should receive a dozen across the bare breech; I said unless they told me who was the ringleader they should receive the punishment awarded by the house committee, and at once. They would not do so, although I took them separately, and tried by all means to induce them.

274. The boys would not say who was their ringleader? No.

275. They preferred to take the dozen? Yes; and I gave them each a dozen. I told them to take their trousers down.

276. Was that in the Board-room? Yes, in the Board-room; and I gave them a dozen across the breech, not at all hard.
277. What was the instrument with which you flogged them? A couple of quince twigs, loose.
278. Twigs? Slight twigs.
279. How many twigs? Two.
280. Two bound together? They were not bound together at the time, but they were afterwards collected and made into a birch.
281. What took place after they had received chastisement? It was then about a quarter to 3 in the morning.
282. You were not flogging them till a quarter to 3 in the morning? No; but it occupied some time to question twenty-three boys separately, even putting but a few questions to each. After this was over I told the night-watchman to call the acting matron—as the matron was away upon a fortnight's leave of absence—to give the boys into her charge, and to take them up to the bath-rooms adjoining the infant's dormitories, where they were to be kept until morning.
283. Were they confined there? Yes.
284. All in one room? No, in three rooms. One, who was a very bad boy, and who I believe to have been the ringleader, was placed in a room by himself. Of the rest, thirteen were placed in one bath-room and nine in another.
285. Had they any bedding? No, I believe not, although the Protestant sub-matron led me to understand, when the Inspector of Charities put the question, that they had.
286. It was stated to the Inspector of Charities that they had bedding, but it was admitted afterwards that they had not? Yes. That person admitted afterwards, that although I had given directions that the boys should be given into her charge, as she was acting matron, that she did not leave her room.
287. Did they have any food that night? None from the institution, but they all stated that they had had food outside.
288. Did they state where they had obtained food? They had it out of doors. I did not ask them where.
289. Mr. Cameron.] Is that rule which you read during your examination by the Chairman the only rule by which your conduct is bound in the management of the institution? The only one that I am aware of.
290. Is there any particular rule laid down as to your power with respect to flogging boys? There is a resolution of the house committee in the books, authorizing me to chastise boys to the extent of twelve strokes across the breech.
291. That number has never been exceeded by you? No.
292. Have any complaints reached you of any of your subordinates having exceeded that number? Not that I can recollect.
293. Have you ever heard of the boys having been beaten across the feet or backs of their hands? I never heard of it prior to this. I heard it stated in evidence given before a sub-committee appointed by the Board to inquire into the matter.
294. Something, I believe, has been said about boys having been laid upon a horse to be beaten;—what sort of instrument is this horse? It is a block of wood like the trunk of a tree, and somewhere about 8 or 9 feet long, and stands upon four legs. It is what would be called a vaulting-horse.
295. The boys are held upon this horse while they are being beaten? Yes. It has been used only three times since I have been there.
296. Did you ever see anything of this sort used at any school of which you have had any experience, before you went to the Randwick Asylum? I never saw an instrument of the kind before—if I may call it an instrument.
297. Was that placed there by the order of the house committee or Board of directors? It was there before I was appointed to the institution. The object of using it was that all the boys might be gathered round and see the punishment inflicted—boys who ran away, and would be brought back with their sleeves torn and their clothes destroyed, and boots lost. It was to make examples of such boys, and to show that such conduct would not be tolerated.
298. From your experience of children during the twenty years you have been a schoolmaster at Pennant Hills and at Ryde, is it your opinion that the children at Randwick are different in their nature and character from the children of parents out of doors? I must say that the majority of them are different from any other children I have come across.
299. In what respects? As to their vicious propensities.
300. What sort of rooms are these bath-rooms where these boys were confined—are they floored with wood? Floored with wood.
301. How long were they in the bath-room, from the time of their being placed there until they were released? I should say about three and a quarter hours.
302. Have complaints ever been made to you, or to members of the committee, about the boys or inmates of the institution stealing about the locality round about Randwick? It was very common when I first went there.
303. Have complaints been made to you during your term of office? Yes.
304. Frequently? When I first went there, for the first three or four months; and again lately, during the last four or five weeks, since corporeal punishments have been abolished or suspended, pending the decision of this matter.
305. I suppose the personal chastisement of the girls is entrusted solely to the matron? Yes.
306. What is the instrument used in flogging them—the birch or cane? They would be caned on the hand, but I never heard of any one being birched.
307. Have you known boys punished for refusing to eat their breakfast during your term of office? They have been punished by being made to eat it for dinner, or to go without.
308. What have they for breakfast? On two days in the week—Tuesdays and Fridays—they have porridge.
309. What sort of porridge? The best Scotch oatmeal.
310. Does the medical officer of the institution report to the house committee every week the state of the children? Yes.
311. Would he be likely to see if their bodies bore marks of chastisement? Certainly.
312. Are the boys stripped before him? Yes, they are stripped naked for his inspection, which takes place on Friday or Monday, as he shall wish.
313. What has been the nature of his reports to the house committee—has he at any time reported that the children

D. A. Thomas,
Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.

D. A. Thomas, children have received undue chastisement? Once I believe he reported that several boys bore marks of severe chastisement.

Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.

314. Are you and the doctor not good friends? We were until lately, and as far as I am concerned I am still as good friends as ever; but I do not think he has the feeling towards me I could desire.

315. Mr. Davies.] What are the sizes of the bath-rooms in which the boys were confined after they were chastised and handed over to the sub-matron? About  $12 \times 12$  and  $12 \times 14$ .

316. Chairman.] When the children returned on the night referred to, did they look submissive, tired, or insolent? They did not look submissive, timid, or tired; on the contrary.

317. What do you mean by the contrary? They looked rather too sprightly and defiant.

318. None of them complained of fatigue or hunger? None at all.

319. Mr. Davies.] Do you know how the boys were distributed in those two rooms? There were nine in one and thirteen in the other, and one boy by himself in another room.

320. When you gave instructions that the children should be handed over to the sub-matron, was it your intention that they should have bedding? Yes, their punishment had been administered to them, and I had no wish to increase it, or to do anything indicative of further severity.

321. Did you make any inquiry of the sub-matron, how it was that she had not provided them with bedding? She said she did not get up at all; that she considered as these dormitories were in the other sub-matron's field of labour—the Roman Catholic sub-matron being in the infant's dormitory—it was her duty to take charge of them, and she gave them over to her.

322. Was the reason assigned for the children not being put into the dormitory when they came back, that when they returned after absconding they were often in a filthy condition? Yes, to the best of my recollection it was. It is the rule when children are brought back that they shall not return to their regular sleeping places until they have been to the bath. For instance—if any boys were to be brought from the city at 6 o'clock in the evening, before they would be placed in the dormitories they would be required to go into the bath.

323. The punishment you inflicted upon the boys in the Board-room was with a couple of quince sticks? With a couple of quince sticks.

324. That was in conformity with the instructions given to you by the house committee? Yes, verbally, as far as the use of the birch was concerned. If I had been left to my own discretion I should have preferred the cane.

325. You had direct instructions to use the birch? Yes, I understood that to be the wish of some members of the committee, as being the better instrument of chastisement.

326. Were the children punished all together, or were they separately punished. Were they all present in the Board-room? Yes.

327. Was there any great noise? No, indeed there was not. Scarcely any of them made any noise at all.

328. Was the punishment at all severe? No, it was not.

329. Was it more severe than would be given in a Public school? No, decidedly not.

330. Do children in Public schools receive punishment as severe as that you gave these boys? I should say so. They strike them across the hands, and I should have some hesitation in caning them so severely myself as I have seen children caned in the school—I do not mean by the present teachers.

331. Have not the children complained of having been severely beaten at school by the teachers? Yes.

332. Have the attendants complained to you that the children had been severely beaten by the master? Yes, and I have reported the matter to the house committee. If I observe the slightest mark upon any of the children I report it.

333. Have these reports also been made to the Board? Yes, and the matter has been inquired into, and in some cases the teachers have been admonished, and have been told that it would be better not to beat the children in that way.

334. When children abscond is it generally when they are in the charge of the sub-matron or attendants, or when they are in charge of the school teachers? Very seldom when they are in the hands of the matron or sub-matrons, but when they are in the hands of the school teachers. They ask to go into the yard for necessary purposes, and then make their escape.

335. Upon their return, or being brought back to the school, when you ask the cause of their absconding, what do they generally reply? They frequently say it is because they have been beaten at school. I cannot, of course, say of my own knowledge that they have been, and I think, honestly speaking, that the teachers at the present time do not beat them at all severely. I know, from what the teachers have told me, that they have a great deal to put up with, and I should scarcely be surprised if they used more than ordinary punishment, when they have defied the teachers to touch them. This has been more especially the case on days when the committee have met. If they received the slightest slap they would yell and scream to attract attention.

336. The schools have been handed over to the Council of Education during your term of office? They have.

337. Has there been a marked change for the better in the education and discipline of the children since that change? Very marked improvement.

338. Are the children cheerful during the time they are in the school? Quite as intelligent and as cheerful as in other Public schools.

339. And as a school do you think it would bear favourable comparison with other schools? Yes.

340. Chairman.] The children do not appear to you like "frightened hounds"? They do not. I will say, however, that three years ago there was very much of the expression which Canon Stephen remarked upon.

341. From your own experience as a teacher, before you became superintendent of this institution would you say that the children at this school at the present time would bear a favourable comparison with the children in Public schools? Of the same age.

342. Mr. Davies.] Have they made great progress in education? Yes.

343. Far more than formerly? Yes.

344. During your time have great reforms been brought about by the house committee? Yes, very great.

345. Have as many children absconded from the school during the last two years and a-half as formerly? No; in fact during two years only one boy left the institution.

346. As a matter of indulgence to the children you let them go with the attendants to the sea to bathe? Yes; they go to Coogee early in the morning with the attendants to bathe. For that purpose the attendants come about half-an-hour earlier than usual.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE RANDWICK ASYLUM.

347. You told the house committee that your object in suggesting this to the Committee was to give the children more confidence in themselves—more self-reliance? Yes, I have been desirous of doing so.
348. Have the children complained to you of having received harsh treatment at the hands of any of the attendants? No, they have not.
349. Has the medical officer, who has been connected with the institution some years, complained to you that the children have borne marks of violence or of severe treatment? No, he has not.
350. Is it customary for him to report to the house committee weekly, after he has made his inspection, as to the state of the whole of the children in the institution? Yes.
351. What has been the nature of those reports during the three years you have been in the institution? Until the last three or four weeks he has always reported favourably. If in a few solitary instances marks or bruises have been found upon them, when the matter has been inquired into it has been found that they got them in school as a rule.
352. Is it the practice to make a searching inquiry if any complaint is made as to the children having marks upon them? Yes, it is made by myself first, and upon my report it is inquired into by the house committee who have the children brought in and examined.
353. Is it the practice of the matron and sub-matrons to report such matters in their diary? Yes.
354. Are their diaries submitted to the house committee? Yes.
355. Do you embody their reports in your journal? Yes.
356. And the whole of the circumstances are read at the monthly Board meeting? Yes; the whole of the cases are read by me before the committee, not before the Board.
357. Every member of that Board would have the knowledge of the business transacted during the month? Yes.
358. Will you tell us the practice of the house committee;—do they simply attend the meetings and transact the ordinary business? No; they go round the building, observe the appearance of the children, mingle with them, and speak to some of them.
359. Have you seen the children run away from the directors or from the house committee? Quite the contrary; they seem to have great confidence in them.
360. Have they shown any dread or fear of them? I have never seen any.
361. Have there been any complaints made to you of the food provided for the children? No, none. I do not remember any complaint of that kind.
362. The children;—do they appear to be healthy and well cared for? Yes, I think so; I think their bodies present a very fine appearance when they are undressed.
363. What number of apprentices have you at the institution—girls? Twenty-nine at the present time.
364. Has each of these girls charge of a section of the children? They scarcely have charge of them; each section has a female attendant, and this attendant is allowed two apprentice girls to assist her in the work of the dormitory.
365. Do you find that the apprentices have greater influence on the children than the attendants? Yes, there are many instances of this, but in one particularly, where one of the apprentice girls can do more with the children either for good or for evil than half-a-dozen women, I believe.
366. Is that the case to a large extent with the apprentice girls? Yes.
367. Chairman.] Is that influence exercised for good as a rule? For good as a rule.
368. Mr. Davies.] Have you any apprentice boys? Yes.
369. What duties do they perform? They are apprenticed to the institution to work in the kitchen, and when we baked bread last year we employed some of them in that way, also in cutting up meat and other kitchen duties; some of them are employed in cleaning the boys' bath-room, some in the garden, and some in milking the cows.
370. Do you find some boys are able to exercise a large power for evil over other boys? Yes.
371. Can you name any particular instances in which particular boys have influenced a large number of boys to abscond, to destroy their clothes, and the property of the institution? Yes, one boy especially, named ———. He is only 10 years of age, but he can exercise a great influence upon a large number of other children—children older than himself. There is also another boy, named ———, who exercises a very large influence for evil at times, but I am told that by bribery he can be induced to adopt another course, and to exercise his influence for good.
372. Chairman.] What do you mean by bribing? If the attendant—the male attendant—will give him a penny, twopence, or threepence, for taking charge.
373. Then he exercises his influence for good? Yes.
374. I hardly comprehend you. Will you kindly explain in what way? His services may be bought; but if he takes a dislike to a male attendant he can exercise an influence to cause a great deal of trouble.
375. Mr. Davies.] Have the house committee taken some action with reference to the removal of one of these boys from the institution? Yes; I believe they wrote to the Government asking that he might be removed to the "Vernon."
376. Do you remember the reason that induced them to take that step? His conduct was so bad that he was inducing other boys to behave improperly.
377. Do you remember his attempting to destroy the property of the institution? Yes, he attempted to set fire to the institution, and this was not the first time.
378. Was this the boy ———? Yes.
379. Was this during your time? Yes.
380. How long ago? About three months.
381. What had he done before that? He drowned a boy by pushing him into a waterhole. The boy was really drowned.
382. You have had a great deal of trouble with this boy? Yes, from the very first.
383. Was he one of the boys who absconded on the 20th? Yes, he was one of them.
384. Do you regard him as the ringleader? I do.
385. Do you believe he exercised an influence over the other boys to induce them to leave the school? I do.
386. When the boys were brought back by the police, where did you find him; did he plant himself? While the boys were standing in the hall he got into a kind of cupboard underneath the stairs to hide himself—he and another boy. When the boys were brought into the Board-room there were only twenty-one, and upon searching these two were found concealed under the stairs.

- D. A. Thomas, Esq.
3 Dec., 1879.
387. He is a great source of trouble to you and to the management of the institution? Yes, he and two other boys.
388. You have frequently had occasion to report his conduct to the house committee? Yes.
389. The house committee authorized you to inflict this punishment upon these boys? Yes, twelve strokes across the breech.
390. That was the punishment inflicted on the night of the 20th? Yes, that was the punishment authorized by the house committee.
391. I gather from your evidence that the boys who returned of their own accord were simply admonished? Yes.
392. If these boys had returned of their own accord would you have punished them? I do not think I should; but they were brought back by the police.
393. Did any of the boys who were punished abscond on the day following? I do not think they did.
394. After the boys had absconded what steps did you take to get the assistance of the police to bring them back? I sent telegrams to various stations stating that so many boys had absconded from the institution, and asking them to endeavour to recover them.
395. Did you make any personal search for them? Yes, in fact I was out about the grounds of the institution and different places that night until half-past 10 o'clock searching for them.
396. Did you yourself find any of the boys who had absconded? Not that night.
397. Did you bring any back the next night? No, a few nights previously, I think; but I cannot speak positively from memory, as they have so often been away during the last few weeks.
398. I am speaking of these forty who went away; some came back besides these twenty-three? Yes.
399. Seventeen came back? Yes, seventeen or more. I think there were more than forty who went away.

FRIDAY, 5 DECEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

MR. BURNS,	MR. GARRETT,
MR. CAMERON,	MR. McELHONE,
MR. J. DAVIES.

SIR HENRY PARKES IN THE CHAIR.

David Arthur Thomas, Esq., further examined:—

- D. A. Thomas, Esq.
5 Dec., 1879.
400. Mr. Burns.] Do you think that the supervision of the children could be made more complete than it is at the present time under your management at Randwick? Within the building or without?
401. Generally? I may state that since I have been there I have endeavoured to keep down what may be termed the expenses of the establishment, and have employed as few persons as possible.
402. You heard what the President of the Society, Canon Stephen, suggested as to the monitorial system;—do you think that system might be adopted with advantage at Randwick? I hardly think it could be adopted with so much advantage as would appear theoretically.
403. Mr. Davies.] Is it your desire to call a number of witnesses, both of those who have been employed in the asylum and who have been dismissed, and of those who are still retained there? It is my desire that they be called—that is, in anticipation of others being called who perhaps are inimical to me.
404. Do you remember a man of the name of Chappell being employed in the institution as engine-driver? Yes.
405. Had you occasion at any time to complain of his conduct? Yes, I had several times. I was very much dissatisfied with him.
406. Did you report his conduct to the house committee? I did; I was forced to do so at last. I gave him every opportunity to amend before I did so.
407. What was the result of the complaints you made? The final result was that he was dismissed summarily.
408. What was the cause of your last complaint?
[The Chairman objected to the line of examination pursued.
The Committee-room was cleared.
Committee deliberated.
The witness was again called in.]
409. Mr. Davies.] What is the number of attendants and officers in the institution, including those in the Catherine Hayes' Hospital? There are thirty-two,* including myself and the matron, and excluding the doctor.
410. How many apprentices in addition to that? There are twenty-nine female apprentices, and at the present moment six boys.
411. What is the gross number? Sixty-seven—thirty-five apprentices and thirty-two adults.
412. Of that number how many are there whose time is devoted to the children who have the control and supervision of the children? Twenty-three adults, including myself and the twenty-nine apprentice girls.
413. It is their special duty to see after the children? Yes, their duties are connected with the supervision of the children, including the main building and the hospital.
414. The children after being bathed and washed have their breakfast and are sent to school, are they not? Yes, all the children within the building, except the apprentices.
415. Including the infants? Including the infants. What we call the babies are in school only a portion of the time; they are taken to the recreation ground in charge of the attendants.
416. What is the weekly cost for salaries, including the whole of the staff? Weekly amount of salaries and wages paid to all permanently engaged officers and servants, including medical officer and chaplains, is sixty-one pounds (£61).
417. How are the various articles for the consumption of the institution supplied? For the most part by tender and contract, except the drapery and a few articles of ironmongery. 418.

* Revised:—Including medical officer, secretary, chaplains (2), engineer, seamstresses (3), laundresses (2), cooks (2), collector, carpenter, farm overseer, and farm labourers (3)—there are thirty-nine altogether.

D. A. Thomas,
Esq.
5 Dec., 1879.

418. How is the drapery supplied? By the purchasing committee.
 419. Do they purchase in town? The greatest portion is sent from England.
 420. They indent their own supplies? Yes.
 421. You have in addition to a religious instructress for the Protestant and Roman Catholic children also clergymen of each of those communions, have you not? Yes, both of the Roman Catholic and Protestant persuasions.
 422. Are the children taken by the attendants to their respective churches? Yes, the senior divisions.
 423. Every Sunday? Every Sunday. Last Sunday the Roman Catholic children did not proceed to Waverley as usual, but there was a cause.
 424. What was the cause? They were interfered with by some of the larrikin element at Waverley, whose remarks were of such a nature as to demoralize the children, and to cause insubordination. It gave much trouble to the sub-matron.
 425. Who is the sub-matron? Miss M'Donall. She declined to take them again.
 426. Chairman.] The larrikins did you say? The larrikin element at Waverley interfered with the children.
 427. Mr. Davies.] In what way? By passing coarse remarks as they went along the street.
 428. In the absence of being taken to church what religious instruction do they receive? The Roman Catholic sub-matron gives them an hour's religious instruction on Sunday morning before taking them to Waverley, and the Roman Catholic chaplain or priest comes to the institution in the afternoon from 3 to 4.
 429. What salaries do the Roman Catholic and Protestant chaplains receive? Either £40 or £50. I think £40.
 430. Has the present Roman Catholic clergyman, or has any of his predecessors made any complaint to you of the children having been cruelly treated? No. I never heard any complaints from the Rev. J. M. Garavel or Rev. J. P. Hanrahan.
 431. Has the Rev. Mr. Wilson, the Church of England clergyman, made any complaints in reference to the treatment received by the children? About three years ago he spoke about the undesirability of having what were called cells in the basement story. I cannot exactly recollect what he said at the time, but shortly after the house committee decided on removing the cells. Those cells were square compartments made of wood, about 5 feet by 7, with a door to each.
 432. Was any bedding supplied to these cells? The children were never kept there at night, so far as I am aware. They were used only in day-time.
 433. Were the children confined in the cells for bad behaviour during your time? I think there were some boys when I first went there, boys who it seemed to be impossible to keep on the premises without punishment, who were put there for a few hours a day.
 434. It was a sort of solitary confinement? Yes.
 435. Was there plenty of ventilation? Plenty of ventilation.
 436. Light? Yes, there were four apertures to this place, but I really cannot recollect whether the light was admitted to these particular cells as they were termed.
 437. How long is it since they were abolished? I should say nearly three years, if not quite.
 438. Just after you went to the institution? Yes.
 439. Had they been used prior to your going? I have always been led to believe so. I believe they had been frequently used.
 440. Do you think that is the kind of treatment likely to subdue the stubborn? They were very much afraid of it; indeed it was the only punishment they seemed to care about. They did not mind being caned, but they did not like being deprived of their play.
 441. Have you heard complaints from the residents in the neighbourhood of the asylum during the last three years in reference to the behaviour of the children? I regret to say I have.
 442. What has been the nature of the complaints? Going into their gardens, maiming fowls, and stealing eggs of their fowls and ducks.
 443. Have you taken any steps to punish children who have been guilty of such conduct? Since last Monday I have taken steps to do so, only by calling them together and advising them for their own good, by showing the effect it would have upon the public mind, and the trouble they were causing the attendants and every one connected with the institution. They promised to behave better, but I am sorry to say they have not kept their promise. Hand-slapping or corporeal punishment has more influence upon them than anything else.
 444. From your long experience as a certified Denominational School teacher, and from the experience you have acquired at Randwick, what do you think is the best mode of punishment for children who are ill-behaved and obstinate? My experience among the children at Randwick makes me regard them as of a different class from those with whom I had previously had to do; and I think deprivation from play has a greater effect upon them than corporeal punishment.
 445. The withholding indulgences from them? Yes.
 446. Do you think it possible to manage an institution like that without using some kind of corporeal punishment? I think it is impossible.
 447. Have you acquired any knowledge as to the management of such institutions, apart from your experience at Randwick, either from reading or from visiting similar institutions when in England or elsewhere? I have visited other institutions, but I think I have learned more from coming in contact with others who have had experience in such matters. From these I have gathered ideas which have been more valuable than I could have gained from reading any number of books.
 448. Chairman.] When were you in England? In 1855.

Simeon Henry Pearce, Esq., J.P., examined:—

449. Chairman.] You are a magistrate of the colony? I am.
 450. And you have resided in Randwick or in its neighbourhood for a number of years? For the last thirty-two years.
 451. Mr. Burns.] You are, I suppose, the oldest inhabitant? Yes.
 452. Chairman.] You have been a director of the Asylum for Destitute Children at Randwick for some time? For the last three and twenty years. 453.

S. H. Pearce,
Esq., J.P.
5 Dec., 1879.

- S. H. Pearce, Esq., J.P.
5 Dec., 1879.
453. Were you one of the original directors? Not one of the first, but I have been connected with the institution as a subscriber, I believe, ever since it was established.
454. Are you what is called a life director? I am.
455. A life director is made in consequence of what? In consequence of subscribing a certain amount of money, or of having performed valuable services for the benefit of the society.
456. You are a director at the present time? Yes.
457. Do you regularly attend the meetings of the directors? I do; I might say also that I am honorary Treasurer and a Vice-President of the institution.
458. Do you visit the institution frequently at other times than those fixed for the meeting of directors? Yes, sometimes twice a day.
459. Do you go among the children at those times? I do not on every occasion. On some occasions I do, and very often.
460. Do you spend any time on these visits when you are going among the children? Sometimes.
461. What I wish to get at is whether your visit is a rapid or a leisurely one? We have two visitors who are appointed to visit the institution every week, and I am one of them, in my turn.
462. I want to know specially of your own visits? Sometimes I go there three or four times per week, sometimes five or six, on business connected with the institution. I often go in to see the children when they are at breakfast or dinner.
463. Do you ever go among them in a leisurely and communicative way, and speak to them in a familiar way? Yes, I go in and out among them when they are in the play-ground, at their meals, or in school, and speak freely to them.
464. What is the impression you have derived from your long connection with the institution as to the general treatment of the children? My opinion is that the treatment of the children by the officers has been of the most kindly nature—that is considering the class of children with whom they have to deal.
465. Have you ever known cases of unkindness or of alleged unkindness? By the officers?
466. By anybody? No cases have come under my notice of unkindness—that is of cruelty.
467. Have you heard accusations of cruelty brought against the officers or attendants? Yes, many times we have been called upon to inquire into such charges.
468. Have the children made complaints to you at any time? No.
469. You never had any occasion to inquire into complaints made by the children themselves? No.
470. How did the complaints arise when you have made inquiries? They have generally arisen from persons outside, who have given information to others who have communicated to me. The Rev. Mr. Wilson has on various occasions communicated matters he has heard in connection with the institution.
471. Can you recollect one instance which you can state in detail? I cannot recollect the date, but I know in one case Mr. Wilson stated to me that some of the children had been ill-treated belonging to the cook porter. I believe I reported the matter—in fact, I am almost satisfied I did—for the house committee inquired into it, and sent one of the members of the committee, Mr. Harris, to examine these boys; and he took the doctor with him to examine these boys who were said to have been beaten so cruelly by Mr. Thomas.
472. What was the result? The result was that there was no cruel treatment at all. I forget what was the minute of the house committee upon the subject, but it was satisfactory. The record will be found in the minute-book.
473. Was this three months, six months, or a year ago? That must have been, I think, about twelve months ago; that was, in May, 1878.
474. Have you had frequent opportunities of observing the present superintendent's mode of discharging his duties? Yes.
475. What is the impression Mr. Thomas's conduct has given you? The impression made by his conduct has been not only that he is a good disciplinarian, but that he is possessed of a large share of administrative ability and suitableness for the position in which he is placed. The only fault I have to find with Mr. Thomas is, that I think he is a little imperious, and that he sees too many things—little faults of the officers.
476. What do you mean by the superintendent being imperious? That is his manner. He is a strict disciplinarian, and seems a little imperious.
477. That is in relation to the officers of the institution? In relation to the officers.
478. Is not that a good thing in itself? It is, perhaps, under the circumstances.
479. You think he might be a little imperious, but he is a little too much so? That is from my standpoint. If it were me I should not see so many things as he does. I should not take so much notice of little things as he does.
480. You might see too few? Just so.
481. Are you quite satisfied with the general management; I should gather that you are? Perfectly satisfied with his general management.
482. Do you recollect anything about the running away of twenty-three children in the month of October? Yes, it was reported to the house committee that a large number of children had run away from the institution, and that they had been examined and punished.
483. Were you present? Yes.
484. You are a member of the house committee? Yes, and always have been.
485. Did the house committee, on that report being made to them, take any steps to ascertain what had been done, or abide by the report? I forget what steps were taken, but it was all recorded by Mr. Thomas in his journal, and read.
486. You did not see the children yourselves? We did not.
487. You simply heard the report read, and knew that it was recorded? Yes, as all such cases are.
488. What did the house committee do? I forget what the house committee did.*
489. Surely you can remember a case of this kind? There are so many things crop up at Randwick I cannot say what takes place in some cases. The business sometimes is enormous, and I have much to do taking surrenders, &c., &c.

* ADDED (on revision):—I am often writing and attending to other matters at those meetings.

490. Surely you know whether the committee were satisfied or not? Yes, they were fully satisfied.
491. Mr. Davies.] You are the treasurer of the institution? Yes.
492. Are you a frequent visitor at the institution? Yes.
493. During your frequent visits have you at any time seen the children suffering from violence? I never did.
494. During your visits at the institution do you mingle with the children? I do.
495. Do you go into the play-grounds, into the schools and dormitories? Yes, I go into all those places, and into the lower play-grounds upon some occasions.
496. Have you had any complaints from the children of having been severely beaten? No, except as I have stated.
497. You have been asked by the Chairman if you remember these forty boys absconding from the institution? Yes.
498. Have you a recollection of some twenty-three of these boys having been brought back by the police? Yes, according to the report I have. I did not see them.
499. Did you make any inquiry into it next day? No; I did not hear of it until the next day.
500. When you heard of it did you make any inquiry into it? Mr. Thomas brought the matter before the house committee on Wednesday.
501. Has Mr. Thomas instructions to punish children when they destroy their clothing, are disobedient, or abscond? Yes; the punishment is something similar to that inflicted on board the "Vernon."
502. What is the nature of the punishment? The punishment for these very incorrigible boys is to have twelve strokes of a birch upon the breech—on the naked breech.
503. Have you ever seen the children suffer from very severe punishment? I have not.
504. Is it possible to carry on the government of such an institution as Randwick without corporeal punishment? I think it is quite impossible.
505. Have the house committee ever permitted anything like cruel punishment to be inflicted upon the children? No, certainly not; they have authorised Mr. Thomas to give fatherly correction to the children—such as he would give to his own.
506. Do you know the nature of this punishment? I do not know the number of cuts he has given, except upon this occasion; I know the maximum number is twelve.
507. What were these blows to be inflicted with? A birch made of twigs.
508. Have you seen that birch? I have.
509. Do you think it an instrument which ought not to be used? No; I think it is not so severe as what they use on board the "Vernon"—the strap; and there they are authorised to give twenty on the naked breech.
510. Has there been any improvement in the management of the institution under the present superintendent? A very great improvement. The servants and attendants before his time did almost as they liked: so much so that I believe they partly killed Mr. May by their conduct.
511. Mr. McElhone.] Who killed him—the children? The servants and children; all together, I think, hastened his death.
512. Mr. Davies.] Have so many children absconded during the time of the present as during the time of the late superintendent? During Mr. May's time a great many absconded. I do not think so many have left since as before.
513. Do you think the children who are drafted from the Benevolent Asylum are equal in their behaviour to those who are put into the institution by their parents? The admission of these batches of children from the Benevolent Asylum has been the great mistake that has been made in the management of the institution. I attribute to the admission of these children from the Benevolent Asylum, in a great measure, the demoralised state of the institution. About every two months we get a draft of these children, and they come in fresh from crime pretty well of all descriptions and contaminate many of the children in the institution. No order can be maintained where they are, and no discipline can be carried out without the aid of punishment.
514. Do you attribute the cause of so much trouble in the institution to the drafting from time to time of children from the Benevolent Asylum? Yes; I believe it to be the chief cause of the great demoralisation of the institution.
515. You have some boys at Randwick who are a great source of trouble to the management? Yes.
516. Do you know their names? ——— and ——— are two; there are a lot of them whose names I forget.
517. Do they exercise a great influence over the other boys? They do; it is there as elsewhere, "one scabby sheep infects the flock."
518. Have the house committee taken any action to get rid of these boys? We do all we can. As soon as they are old enough we try to send them off as apprentices, but we cannot do this before they are twelve years of age.
519. What steps do the committee take to get rid of these boys who are leaders of the 'absconders'? We can take no steps until the boys are of an age to be apprenticed. We have applied to the Colonial Secretary to get one or two boys on board the "Vernon," but I believe there are legal difficulties in the way.
520. Chairman.] You never took one of these bad boys yourself? No; I never would.
521. Would you take this boy ——— yourself? Not if you would give me a hundred a year to do so.
522. Mr. Davies.] What would you suggest as a means of getting rid of these children of the criminal class—who have been brought up in the haunts of crime? It is a difficult matter to recommend any plan for their reformation. They ought to be placed by themselves and not among the children of respectable parents, for the reason I have stated, that the latter are almost sure to be contaminated by them, more or less.
523. Mr. McElhone.] Do you think the children of respectable parents go there at all? Yes, there are children of many respectable people who go there; parents who have been reduced by misfortune, and whose children are as respectably behaved as any one could desire.
524. Mr. Davies.] You find children placed there through the misfortunes or loss of their parents, or who in consequence of the vicious self-indulgence of the father cannot be supported by the remaining parent, and are therefore placed in the institution, and you find them very different in their behaviour from those children who are drafted from the Benevolent Asylum? Very different—the majority of them. There are some bad ones even of those who are placed there by their parents, and there are some good children come from the Benevolent Asylum.

S. H. Pearce,
Esq., J.P.
Dec., 1879.

S. H. Pearce, Esq., J.P.
5 Dec., 1879.

525. The boys whom you have spoken of as ringleaders, who held the officers at defiance, were they drafted from the Benevolent Asylum? Most of them. During my experience we have found them the children of vicious, bad characters, who have been trained in all sorts of vice, such as thieving, lying, using bad words, putting their hands up the girls' clothes when they have been going upstairs, and every other description of vice.

526. Has there been an improvement in the general management of the institution, and especially in discipline among the children, since the Council of Education have taken charge of the schools? I think they have been as well behaved during that time as at any other time, because the teachers of the Public school keep them in order. Under the rules they are allowed to cane them, and I as Secretary of the Local Board have told them to do so, not severely, but to give them cuts across the hands. I have told them to do so whether that was right or wrong, for I am sure they cannot teach them without it.

527. Have you visited other Public schools? I have.

528. Do you think the children at the school at Randwick would bear a favourable comparison with those in other Public schools? As far as teaching is concerned.

529. And as to their behaviour in school? I cannot say that. I do not think they behave so well as in other schools, for the reasons I have already stated.

530. Do they appear to be cheerful and happy in school? They appear to be cheerful and happy as far as I have seen. They come round me when I go into the yard or play-ground—shake hands and talk to me. Sometimes I play with them, ask them who they are, and so on.

531. Almost all the children in the school know you I suppose? I cannot say that, but almost all.

532. Do they appear to you to have the downcast look some people have described them as having? They do not to me, they may to other people; but as I have said they generally flock round me and seem cheerful.

533. I suppose nearly all the children in Randwick know you? Yes.

534. The management during the last year or two has been improved in your opinion? I am sure it has.

535. There has been more care bestowed upon the children? Every care has been taken of the children both by the officers and by the committee. Formerly the officers were allowed to do almost as they liked—the children were on many occasions neglected, their food was improperly cooked, and they did not receive the treatment they should have done; that was during the latter portion of Mr. May's life-time, during his illness. Mr. May was too easy with them, and they did what they liked with him; he had no positive control over them during the latter part of his management. The present superintendent has been perhaps a little too imperious and has seen too much of their faults and reported them, but he has improved the discipline of the institution very much.

536. What you mean to convey is that he has shewn more anxiety about the children than his predecessor? Yes; and the management of the institution generally. There has been better order, better discipline. Indeed I have never seen in any institution I have visited of a similar character, whether in any of the Colonies or in England, better management. I would venture to stake my reputation that there are not to be found in any of them three better officers than our superintendent, secretary, and matron.

537. During your long connection with the institution have you ever known it to be better managed than it is at the present time? No. The house committee have had great difficulties to contend with, and the officers too, arising from the antagonism of some of the directors, and from the curious tempers of some of the officers, their disagreements with one another, the insubordination of the children—all these various things have almost driven the committee out of their senses; but the greatest difficulty has arisen from the antagonism of some of the directors with the action of the others.

538. Are they a large number? I cannot say they are, but rather than things should go on as they have done I would resign all connection with the institution. Indeed that is what I intend to do; I would not stay there to undergo what I have done for the last few years for any consideration; as for the superintendent's position I would not take it for £2,000 a year.

539. Mr. McElhone.] How long is it since you first became interested in the management of the institution as a director? From about 1856—twenty-three years and upwards.

540. For a good many years after the institution was first started the directors worked together very amicably, did they not? Some did and some did not.

541. As a rule did they not? Some little differences arose as to religious matters, but with reference to other things they did.

542. The children as a rule were well looked after in those days? They were until about five years ago.

543. Is it not the fact that during the last four or five years particularly there has been a good deal of quarrelling and ill-feeling among the directors? I am sorry to say it is.

544. Have you noticed whether there has been a large amount of sectarian quarrelling between priests and parsons as directors? I think about five or six years ago there was particularly, and about that time when I gave evidence before a Select Committee appointed to inquire into the matter I recommended that parsons and priests should be left off the Board altogether—that they should not be eligible for election.

545. Do you not think that the quarrels between parsons, priests, and directors have been the cause of the downfall of the institution in the eyes of the public? I have no doubt those differences have had a great effect upon the public mind.

546. Has it not had the effect of preventing a good many respectable men from coming forward as directors, because they did not wish to be mixed up in these sectarian squabbles? I cannot say that, because they would have had to have been elected. For instance, the late President, Sir Edward Deas-Thomson, never resigned his position.

547. He did not take much part in the business for some years before he died? He did not, but he came on particular occasions, when his attendance was needed and when he was not too ill.

548. During the last few years have there not been some of the directors who had been always quarrelling? Ever since the election of Mr. Thomas there has been more antagonism with reference to sectarian matters than I have known for some time before.

549. This, in your opinion, has tended to demoralize the management of the institution? No doubt, and I believe many statements have been made by officers inside to those outside which has tended to promote it.

550. Have you any objection to state the names of those directors who have caused these unpleasantnesses? I would not like to state the names of any directors, either for or against the members of the Board to which I belong. Those who read what I have stated will be able to fit the cap without a doubt.

551. You say there have been a great many of these sectarian squabbles going on lately? Not lately, S. H. Pearce, Esq., J.P. not with reference to sectarian matters; I believe there has been very little of that lately.
552. But rather lately? During the last two or three years there have been little things which have cropped up about various matters. 5 Dec., 1879.
553. How long is it since, by arrangement with the Government, you took these children from the Benevolent Asylum? I think just after the institution was built at Randwick; I cannot remember the time.
554. You say this has tended to demoralize the whole of the children at Randwick, on account of the bad character of those brought from the Benevolent Asylum? Yes, but we had very few in former days.
555. Have you ever protested to the Government against the receipt of these children;—have you, that is the directors or manager, pointed out the danger incurred to the rest of the children? We thought we should be able to keep them in proper order, and to train them so after a time. We have tried every remedy we could think of, and have adopted rules which were suggested to us by a knowledge of other institutions of a similar kind both in the Colonies and in Europe, but we have never made a complaint to Government about it, because we were parties to the transaction.
556. You have lived close to the institution for many years? Yes.
557. You knew the late manager, Mr. May, intimately? Yes.
558. As a matter of fact, was not the asylum very much demoralised during the last few years of Mr. May's management? I would not like to cast a reflection upon his memory, but it was not satisfactory.
559. Did you ever hear that Mr. May was in the habit of drinking a great deal latterly? I can only say that I never saw him the worse for liquor in my life.
560. Were you satisfied with Mr. May's manner for two or three years before he died? I cannot say that I was satisfied.
561. Did not the asylum become very much disorganised? Yes, during his illness.
562. Have you not seen the children there with a sort of stolid, stupid look? No doubt some of them have such an appearance, but if we consider whose children many of them are it is not surprising; when many of them are from the very lowest orders of society, and filled with disease as most of them unquestionably are, it cannot but be expected that they will look dejected and in a bad way.
563. Have you ever had occasion to find fault with Mr. Thomas, or have you heard complaints of his ill-usage of the children or of his allowing them to be flogged cruelly? From hearsay only, as I have already stated.
564. Did you ever examine the children when complaints of this kind have been made? I have many times done so.
565. Have you found marks of ill-treatment upon them? Not what I would call ill-treatment.
566. Where have you seen these marks? Across the breech or shoulders; I have seen strokes from a cane but nothing that I would call ill-treatment.
567. Have you had your attention called to Mr. Thomas flogging them across the bare feet? I never heard such a thing stated until it was mentioned in the evidence given before the Select Committee.
568. Would it have been possible that these children could have been mal-treated in that way and put out of the sight of yourself and doctor until they had recovered? I do not think it possible, because I think no one would ever act so cruelly. If I thought Mr. Thomas had been guilty of such cruelty I would at once have moved for his dismissal.
569. Did you hear the evidence given by different persons—by Chappell and Mrs. Ebury? I did.
570. Did you read the report in the Herald? I did, and it was a most one-sided statement. It was very unfair and very wrong for any person to give an ex parte statement.
571. Did you think it possible these persons could fabricate such a story without any foundation? I believe that nine-tenths of the evidence given on that occasion against Mr. Thomas was untrue, and I can arrive at no other conclusion, as I believe our evidence will show.
572. Do you remember twenty odd boys, who had run away, being brought before Mr. Thomas and being punished;—is that true? So far as it is reported.
573. Has not Mr. Thomas admitted it? Yes he has reported it to the house committee.
574. Do you think it right for the manager of an institution of that sort to punish boys at the dead of night, instead of keeping them until the next day? I would not have done it myself. I would have waited until the next morning. I asked Mr. Thomas about that myself, and he said the constable brought them in a van, that he sent for them into the Board-room and examined them, and then punished them one by one.
575. Chairman.] You said just now that nine-tenths of the evidence against Mr. Thomas was untrue? No. I say according to my belief it was untrue.
576. As you have made that statement it might be understood to refer to evidence given before this Committee;—you do not refer to that? No. I refer to the evidence given before the "Select Committee" appointed by the Board of Directors to inquire into this matter and partly published in the newspapers referred to.
577. When you were speaking of batches of bad children coming from the Benevolent Asylum being the chief cause of the difficulty of the good management of the Randwick Asylum, did you mean to say that the children taken into the Benevolent Asylum are in an exceptional way bad children? Not all of them, but the majority of them I believe are.
578. How do you derive that knowledge? I derive that knowledge not only from what I see in the police courts of children of prisoners being sent to the Benevolent Asylum, but of what I know respecting children being taken from the haunts of vice in the lowest parts of the city—children who have been neglected or deserted by their dissolute parents—children who are the offspring of abandoned parents and who have been schooled in vice are sent to the Benevolent Asylum, and are thence sent on to us. No doubt there are some good children who come to us from that institution, as there are good and bad from other sources.
579. Either in a question put to you by Mr. Davies, or in some answer given by you, some of the children who come to you from the Benevolent Asylum were spoken of as being children of the criminal classes. What do you mean by that? What is generally understood by children of the criminal classes is the children of convicted persons. Is that what you mean? I do in many instances.
580. Do you mean to convey to the Committee that the mass of the children who go to the Benevolent Asylum

- S. H. Pearce, Esq., J.P.
5 Dec., 1879.
- Asylum are children of the convicted class? No. I say there are many good ones, but the bad ones contaminate the others. Many of them are the children of parents who have been sent to gaol.
581. Is not an institution like Randwick Asylum established for the purpose of dealing with children who have the misfortune of bad parents or bad training? It is not intended for good children. It was never intended that we should take all the children of the criminal classes. Our rules show that it was intended we should take children who have been abandoned or neglected, but it was never intended we should take those children from the Benevolent Asylum so far as I know.
582. What is to become of these unfortunate children? That is the question for consideration. I think they should be separated from the others.
583. Could not in an asylum such as Randwick, considering its great extent, its commodiousness, and the large sums of money that have been expended upon it, a system of management be devised which should provide for the proper classification of the children there? If the wards were distinct from the others they might be classified, as in the gaols; but it is absolutely necessary, if you wish to correct the morals of those children, that they should be put in separate wards, where they can have no communication with each other.
584. Within your experience are there no bad children who come into the institution casually, irrespective of those who come from the Benevolent Asylum? No doubt there are, but what I mean is that these drafts which come in from the Benevolent Asylum come with all the vices of their life in the city fresh in their memory, and they corrupt the other children among whom they mix and associate.
585. Is not the object of your institution to take such children and reform them? Yes, if we could do it.
586. If you—having the largest premises, the most extensive grounds, and the best means of treatment—cannot do it how can it be done? I do not believe if they had angels to manage them no good could be done to some of them. What I would recommend is that when any boy proves incorrigible, and incapable of being taught or reformed, he should be taken away from those premises immediately, and put into an institution something like the "Vernon."
587. As you have had such a long acquaintance with the asylum, and have taken such an active interest in its welfare, you must have become acquainted with the after life of many of the children who have left the institution? I have with a great number of them.
588. What has been your experience; have the majority done well? No, I am sorry to say the majority have not done well. The majority, I am satisfied, who have passed through the institution during the 23 years I have been connected with it—and I believe I have been a member of the house committee every year during that period; and that no one has attended more frequently—the majority have turned out indifferently.
589. Do you allude to girls and boys both? More girls have turned out good than boys, but the majority have turned out indifferent.
590. Have you known any cases of boys having got into trouble afterwards? Yes, a number have been very troublesome to the house committee. We have received complaints from the masters and mistresses to whom they have been apprenticed of very bad conduct.
591. How many boys have been apprenticed out of the institution during the last year, and how many girls? From 1856 until the end of 1878—apprenticed, 683 boys, 565 girls; restored to parents, 1,292; died in the 27 years, 195; remaining in the institution, 335 boys, 324 girls.
592. That is since you first became connected with the institution? Yes, since I became a director.
593. Do you say to the Committee that, so far as your experience has gone, the greater part of these have turned out indifferently after their apprenticeship? The greater part.
594. Are you aware that that is very condemnatory of the management of the institution, as compared with other establishments of a similar character? That I cannot say, but I do not think so, considering the class to which the children here belong.
595. But the institutions to which I refer are for this very class of persons—they are not for the children of good parents—they are for the children of unnatural parents—those who ignore or neglect their natural offspring. Are you aware that from many institutions of this kind, in different parts of the world, the number who turn out satisfactorily is 90 per cent. of the whole? I am not aware of it.
596. If then the majority of the children who leave your asylum turn out ill, it must be very condemnatory of the management? That is my opinion, nevertheless.
597. How many do you suppose you have been able to trace since they have left the institution? A great number. I judge from the police reports and from other sources.
598. Have you known any of the girls to become respectable wives? Yes, and a great number of boys to become respectable members of society. We give a gratuity of £4 to any boy or girl who, after having served his or her term of apprenticeship, can bring a certificate from the master or mistress of good character, and sometimes they have in addition as much as £20, which has been accumulating to their credit in the Savings' Bank.
599. In many similar large institutions in America a system of calling the children by numbers instead of by names is adopted, so that in the event of their after success in life they are lost sight of, as they cannot be traced by their names when they go forth into the world? No doubt that is a very good plan, and it was adopted by us for a considerable time; but there was an outcry raised that we were numbering the children like cattle, and the plan was discontinued. What I have stated I know from my acquaintance with family matters, from other directors, and from what is cropping up from time to time. Complaints are constantly made of the conduct of the apprentices, both boys and girls.
600. Mr. McElhone.] Is it the fact that many of these children, after they leave the institution, are very untruthful—both boys and girls? That is the general complaint—their untruthfulness, their laziness, and other matters.
601. I am now speaking of the girls as well as of the boys. Do you have a number of complaints from the persons who take them, who regret having taken them, and consider them a nuisance? Yes; we try to relieve them, but find it difficult, because other persons are unwilling to receive boys or girls who have bad characters from previous masters or mistresses.
602. Have you ever been to the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum at Parramatta? Yes, I have.
603. Do you not think the children there look happier and more contented than those at Randwick? I went there only once, but when I was there the children looked pleasant and contented.
604. They seemed to love their teachers, and there was more the appearance of a family and of a home than at Randwick? I did not see anything to the contrary at the Protestant Orphan School. 605.

605. Mr. Garrett.] What means or system do you adopt to follow out the history of children after they leave the asylum? When they are apprenticed we write to the clergyman of the religion to which they belong—whether Roman Catholic or Protestant—in the district, requesting them to take charge of them. There is in this book of rules a printed statement, a copy of which is given to each of the children, showing what they are to receive from their employers, and telling them if they get into any trouble or disgrace to apply to us; and I may mention that in one case I went up to Wallsend with reference to a case of alleged cruelty and immorality on the part of a master. We also wrote to the Inspector of Police or Police-Magistrate in the district, requesting them to investigate any case of alleged hardship. From these various persons we receive intelligence of the children; also by their letters.
606. After the apprenticeship is over have you to rely upon the voluntary communications from those who have left you for any information respecting them? Yes; they get about £25 sometimes when their apprenticeship is over, and to receive this they sometimes come to the institution, when they are examined by the house committee, and are advised what to do with their money, and how to act in the future. They are also asked to communicate with us, and are told that we shall always be glad to advise them, and to act as their friend, and to hear that they are going on well. There are a number of letters in the last report which are not only well written but which show that the institution has done great good to them.
607. Then your remark about the children having turned out indifferently is confined to their conduct during their apprenticeship? Yes.
608. That they were badly behaved to their masters or mistresses? Yes.
609. You did not mean to imply that they resorted afterwards to immoral and criminal means of living? In some cases they do; but I referred to their indifferent behaviour. We hear more bad than good accounts from their masters and mistresses.
610. When you use the words “indifferent” or “bad” you mean indifferent or bad as servants? Yes. Some are untruthful, some disobedient, some will not do anything—are impudent to their masters and mistresses, and some actually fight them.
611. Mr. McElhone.] I suppose you hear more about the bad than the good? Yes. Sometimes it is the fault of the employers.
612. People never complain of good children? No, but they sometimes write letters, speaking in terms of approval of those who have been apprenticed to them.
613. Mr. Garrett.] Is there anything like a large proportion of the children who have been apprenticed from the asylum brought before the courts for criminal offences? Not a large proportion.
614. They are rare exceptions? Yes; because when complaints are made against apprentices we desire the magistrates not to determine them without communicating with us.
615. Are the cases few in number? Yes; because we do all we can to prevent the cases being brought into court, by providing other masters for the children where it is possible to do so. I believe a good number of the cases of complaint are attributable to the bad temper of masters and mistresses, and to the bad treatment the apprentices receive from some of them.
616. Did you ever give any attention to what is called the “boarding-out” system? I have heard of it, both in England and Melbourne, and I believe in Adelaide it has been carried out with good results. The great difficulty is to get proper persons to take the children.
617. Do you think, having regard to the circumstances of the people in this colony generally, as compared with those of the people in England, you, as the trustee of these children, would be willing to trust them into the hands of those who ordinarily would be willing to take them? That is the difficulty in the way. The people who are willing to take them are not the kind of people whom we would trust them with, and the people to whom we would give them are in too comfortable circumstances to desire to take them.
618. They are persons who would not be likely to submit to surveillance? Just so; and if this system were carried out such surveillance would be essentially necessary.
619. Mr. Davies.] Is it part of the collector’s duty to visit the children who are apprenticed in different parts of the country? Yes, that is one of his most important duties. He is appointed not only to collect money for the institution but to visit and report upon the state of the children in the district visited by him.
620. He does that and reports? Yes.
621. Does he visit all the apprentices? Yes, in the various districts.
622. And that is the means the Committee take to look after the children after they are apprenticed? Yes.

WEDNESDAY, 10 DECEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

MR. BURNS,
MR. J. DAVIES,

MR. GARRETT,
MR. GREENWOOD.

SIR HENRY PARKES IN THE CHAIR.

Miss Marian Fairburn examined:—

623. Chairman.] You hold some office in the Asylum for Destitute Children at Randwick? I am the matron.
624. Will you be so good as to describe the office? I have the supervision of the institution under the direction of the superintendent.
625. How long have you held that office? Three years.
626. How far does your supervision extend—what is your round of duties for any single day? I have the direction of the domestic affairs; I see that the meals are properly prepared, inspect the children before they attend school, and supervise the needlework and laundry work.
627. Who are the officers of the institution directly under you? All the female officers and servants, the sub-matrons, attendants, and seamstresses.
628. Which of the officers is next in rank to yourself? The Protestant sub-matron.
629. Does the Protestant sub-matron take precedence of the Roman Catholic sub-matron? Yes.

Miss M.
Fairburn.
10 Dec., 1879.

Miss M.
Fairburn.
10 Dec., 1879.

630. How is that? The Protestant sub-matron represents me in my absence, the Roman Catholic sub-matron has charge of the infants.
631. Have the two sub-matrons been long in the institution? One, the Protestant sub-matron, has been there, I think, two years; the Roman Catholic sub-matron has been there six months.
632. Where did they come from to you? They came from Sydney.
633. From what occupation? I believe the Protestant sub-matron held some office in the Benevolent Asylum.
634. Had you held any similar office before your appointment as matron? I have been ten years in public institutions; I was assistant-matron at the Maitland Hospital before I received my present appointment.
635. Were you appointed from the Maitland Hospital? Yes.
636. How long were you there? Nearly two years; prior to that I had been four years in the Sydney Infirmary, where I was trained.
637. You were a trained nurse? I was a trained nurse in the Sydney Infirmary.
638. Then you went from the Sydney Infirmary to the Maitland Hospital, and from the Maitland Hospital to Randwick Asylum? Yes.
639. What is the general mode of punishment when children misbehave themselves in Randwick Asylum? We have various modes of punishment.
640. What is any one of them? According to the offence of which the child is guilty.
641. Any one of them—for any offence? For the girls, if it were for anything trifling I would put them on one side, or deprive them of any little indulgence such as wearing beads. If they had beads I would take them from them. That would be for a slight offence.
642. For untruthfulness? If I found a child were untruthful I would speak to her about untruthfulness, and if I afterwards saw she was trying to overcome that habit I would show her that I trusted her—that I believed her.
643. For an act of cruelty from one to another? I would punish by giving a few strokes of a cane.
644. Filth? I would punish for that also.
645. By personal chastisement? By personal chastisement.
646. Are the children ever punished by having rejected food served up to them a second time? No, never.
647. You know of no instance where a child who has refused his food at breakfast has been compelled to eat the same at dinner? Not unless it has been prepared in some different way so that the child could eat it. For instance, if a child refused to eat rice at dinner it would be given rice with milk at tea.
648. Do you recollect some day about the 20th of October, when a number of children who had run away from the asylum were brought back by the police late at night? I was absent from the institution on that day.
649. You know nothing about that event from your personal knowledge? I know some children were absent, but I was not there to know what took place.
650. Do the directors of the institution frequently go among the children, examine as to the provision made for them, the cleanliness of the dormitories, and so forth? Yes, they frequently visit the institution.
651. At other times than the days when the Board meetings are held? Yes.
652. Do strangers often visit the asylum? Yes.
653. On these occasions do you take the visitors freely among the children, into the dormitories, the dining-room, kitchen? Yes, we show them everything.
654. Do visitors generally enter their names in the Visitors' Book? Yes, always.
655. Do they often make remarks? Yes.
656. What is the tenor of their observations;—is it generally satisfactory as to the state of the institution? Yes. The book is to be seen.
657. Is that what they generally write? Yes, they generally write "satisfactorily."
658. Have you had your attention at any time drawn to the management of similar institutions in other countries? I have read about similar institutions in other countries.
659. Have you read much on that subject? Yes.
660. In books or in newspapers? Both books and newspapers.
661. Do you recollect any particular instances you have read? I have read of Muller's establishment, and have met gentlemen who have visited there.
662. Do you think the system established at Randwick is a good one? Yes, I think it is.
663. In what respect? In every respect—I think it is a good one.
664. Has it, in your judgment, the effect of training the children so as to fit them for the every-day pursuits they will have to follow afterwards? Yes, I think it has.
665. Will you kindly state to the Committee the reasons upon which you base that opinion? It makes the children self-reliant and able to take their own part. I have frequently found that it teaches them habits of industry which I think they would not acquire in other places.
666. In cases of sickness at Randwick what aid do the children receive; have they any special nursing provided? Yes, they are sent to the Catherine Hayes Hospital at once, and they have trained nurses to take care of them.
667. Nurses trained where? One now in the institution was trained at the Sydney Infirmary and other hospitals.
668. Is the medical attendance, in your judgment, good? I would rather not say, as I am not in the hospital.
669. Did you hear anything about the return of these children in October? Yes, I read about it next day in the newspapers.
670. Did you not hear anything in the institution? Yes, I heard when I returned that they had been brought back.
671. What did you hear? Simply that they had been returned to the institution.
672. Did you not hear that they had been punished? I read that, and asked no questions about it.
673. No one told you about it? No.
674. You never heard from any officer of the institution, or from the superintendent? I heard that the children had been returned.

Miss M.
Fairbairn.
10 Dec., 1879.

675. You heard nothing about the punishment? No.
676. Did you see the children? I saw the children a few days afterwards.
677. How many days after? Eight days after.
678. When you saw the children were there any marks upon them? There were no marks upon them.
679. Had you an opportunity of seeing them? I made it my business to see them.
680. Do children frequently run away from the asylum? No, they are not in the habit of running away. They had not absconded for some time previously.
681. How long before this last case of absconding was it that children deserted the asylum, three months, six months? There have been very few cases for the last three years.
682. Were there any of the children who were particularly bad, refractory, and intractable? Some are very intractable and they lead the others.
683. Girls as well as boys? The girls are not so refractory as some of the boys.
684. Are there any boys who are conspicuous for this insubordinate behaviour? Yes, several of them.
685. Are they very mischievous? They are very mischievous and troublesome.
686. What are the names of these boys? ——— is one, ——— is another, and there are several others.
687. Will you explain to us in what way this mischievous conduct shows itself? In destroying the property of the institution, and in destroying their own clothing.
688. Is their language bad? Their language is very bad indeed.
689. Have they been frequently chastised for this misconduct? They have been chastised for it.
690. Has that no effect upon them? Yes, it has occasionally.
691. In what way does this boy of whom we have heard before from other witnesses manifest his ill-disposition? He is troublesome in every way.
692. Could you not point out some one way? When he was first brought under my notice it was for drowning a boy in a waterhole.
693. Was the boy actually drowned? Yes.
694. What was done in that case? An inquest was held.
695. What was the result? I do not know. I was not present at the inquest myself.
696. How was he brought under your notice then? I heard that a boy was drowned and that he was the boy who had been the cause.
697. Where was it? In a waterhole.
698. How far from the institution? Two or three hundred yards; I am not sure of the distance.
699. What did you see? I saw that the boy was drowned.
700. What did you hear? That ——— had thrown him in.
701. Who told you? The people who were at the place; the attendants and people who were there.
702. Why did ——— throw this boy into the water? I do not know.
703. Did nothing come of all this; was not ——— punished in any way? The superintendent will be able to tell you that; I was not at the inquest, and it was so long ago.
704. How long was that ago? Three years ago.
705. What is the age of ——— now? Ten years old or so.
706. Was he then only a child of eight when he drowned this boy? Yes.
707. Was he in no way punished by the authorities, or by the superintendent of this place? I do not know, the superintendent could tell you.
708. He could hardly have been punished without your knowledge, could he? It is so long ago I cannot recollect. I recollect his drowning the boy and that there was an inquest held.
709. Is he as badly behaved now as he was then? Yes.
710. How does his ill-disposition display itself now—in what particular forms? He is mischievous and dishonest.
711. He has not drowned any more boys, has he? No he has not.
712. Mr. Garrett.] When the children are at their meals are they divided into smaller numbers, or do they take them promiscuously together? They dine in one dining-room, fourteen at each table.
713. At each table is there an attendant in charge, or do the elder children supervise the others? There is an attendant to so many tables.
714. Is that classification into messes carried out both in school and in the dormitories? In the dormitories.
715. Do the same twelve or fourteen who dine at one table sleep in one room? Yes.
716. The particular children who form that number are more constantly brought into contact with each other than with the general number? Yes.
717. What sort of employment have the children during the day independently of the school? The boys in the grounds, the girls in domestic duties, washing, sewing, and cleaning.
718. Then this grouping together is carried out in eating, in working together, and in sleeping? Yes.
719. Is it kept up in working together and in school? When they are at work they are kept together as much as possible, that is if they agree; if they disagree we separate them.
720. Do you make any effort to find out whether there is any similarity of character or disposition among the children before you group them together.
721. With regard to food, are the children all put down to the same food, irrespectively of their different ages? We make an alteration in the diet of infants occasionally.
722. What is the age of the youngest you have there? Four years.
723. With regard to the children who come to you from the Benevolent Asylum, do you notice any difference in their character and behaviour from those of the children who are picked up in the city promiscuously, and brought to the Asylum? Yes, a very great difference.
724. In what respect do you notice the difference? The children who are brought in are very dirty in their habits and very badly behaved—those brought in from the town.
725. Do you mean the children brought in from the town, picked up by the police, are more dirty in their habits and worse behaved than the children who come from the Benevolent Asylum, or vive versa? They are all dirty in their habits and troublesome when they are brought in.
726. Do you notice any difference between those brought in from the general resources from which the asylum is supplied, and the children brought in from the Benevolent Asylum? Many brought in from other places are much worse than those brought from the Benevolent Asylum.

Miss M.
Fairbairn.
16 Dec., 1879.

727. Chairman.] Do I understand that as a rule the children from the Benevolent Asylum are the better behaved? In some cases.
728. Mr. Garrett.] Is there such a difference as to make a distinction discernible by yourself? Yes.
729. At what age do you send the girls out? At twelve years old.
730. Do they ever go out to any but simple domestic service? I believe only to domestic service.
731. They are never apprenticed to any business? I have nothing to do with the apprenticing of the children.
732. You have no knowledge of them after they leave the school? Only through the letters sent to me by the children.
733. Do you receive many letters? Yes, from the girls.
734. Addressed to yourself? Yes.
735. Are these letters generally of a character gratifying to yourself? Very.
736. Some of the children are doing very well? Yes, and seem to be very happy.
737. Can you give the Committee any idea of the proportion of children who turn out well as compared with those who do not? I have heard of very few cases that have turned out badly.
738. You think, from your experience, that the larger proportion has turned out well? I think so.
739. Have you ever seen any of the children suffering from what you would consider too severe punishment? No. I have never seen cases of that kind.
740. Have you ever seen them bruised about the body so as to lead you to suppose their punishment had been too severe? No.
741. Have you ever seen them cut or bruised about the feet? No; I never knew an instance where a child had been struck upon the feet—I never saw a case of it.
742. Do the children all wear shoes? Yes.
743. With regard to this lad who was drowned, how old was he? Between four and five.
744. He was younger than ——? Yes, he was younger than the boy who drowned him.
745. You do not know any of the circumstances preceding the drowning of that boy? No.
746. You do not know what it arose from? No.
747. You told the Chairman that you had read a good deal upon the subject of the management of this class of institutions;—have you read anything about the boarding-out system? Yes, I have read a great deal about it.
748. You have been some time in this colony, have you not? Yes.
749. Have you been much in the interior of the country? Only in Maitland.
750. Do you think the boarding-out system could be favourably introduced and carried out in this country? Not among the class of people I have seen in the country and coming from the country.
751. Do you think any number of ladies having homes of their own would take charge of these children and subject themselves to visits of inspection while the children were under their care? I think very few would care to have their homes inspected.
752. Mr. Burns.] Do you maintain very free intercourse with the children yourself? Yes, I am constantly with them.
753. Both with the attendants and singly? Yes.
754. Do you ever notice any objection on their part in making known their complaints? No, I always encourage them to tell everything that takes place with regard to their treatment.
755. Do you think they regard their attendants with confidence and affection? If I thought they did not I would have any attendant who was an object of dislike removed from the children over whom she was placed.
756. You have observed no hesitation on their part in making complaints of ill-treatment either from each other or from the attendants? No; they come to me at once if they are ill-treated.
757. Mr. Greenwood.] You say that the boys work on the ground when not at school? Some of them.
758. Is there any distinction as to age whether they shall work or not? When they are fit for apprenticeship.
759. What age is that? Twelve years.
760. Then they do not work at all under that age? They make themselves useful, many of them.
761. When they are over twelve there is some regular work for them? Yes, until they are apprenticed from the institution.
762. Are there many who remain over twelve years of age? No, unless they are apprenticed to the institution.
763. What proportion will that be so far as you are aware? We have now six boys apprenticed to the institution.
764. Do you apprentice all to the institution who are left after twelve years of age? No; they are kept till required as apprentices.
765. But there is no regular work done either by the girls or boys while they are attending school under twelve? Only the ordinary employment of the institution.
766. That employment for the boys consists of what? Sweeping and cleaning.
767. Not working in the grounds? Working in the garden.
768. For the girls? They work in the institution at sewing, cleaning, and washing.
769. In reply to Mr. Garrett you said there was a marked difference between the habits of children received from the Benevolent Asylum and of those received from other sources? There is a difference in their conduct when they come from that institution.
770. Do you think they are better behaved when they come from the Benevolent Asylum? In some cases they are better behaved, in others they are not.
771. Still speaking as a general rule from your own experience what should you say? I still say the same, they are not all well behaved—they require a great amount of trouble when they come in from any part from the absence of cleanly habits.
772. At what age do you get them from the Benevolent Asylum? From four years.
773. And at what age from the streets and other sources? At various ages up to eight or nine.
774. Do you find the children who have come from the Benevolent Asylum have received any education at all? Many of them are too young to have received any.
775. And those who have come from the streets of Sydney and from private sources, have they received any education? Some of them can read a little, others are quite ignorant.
776. Do you remember how many children are now under articles—apprenticed out—girls for instance? Apprenticed from the Asylum under articles of indenture—boys, 275; girls, 204; total, 479. 777.

Miss M.
Fairbairn.
10 Dec., 1879.

777. You have letters occasionally from these? I frequently receive letters from the girls.
778. Are they inspected at all in their homes by anybody? I believe so, by officers of the institution.
779. Do you ever receive any reports from these inspectors? I do not receive any reports, they come to the superintendent and committee.
780. Have you any means of knowing whether the ladies in whose homes these girls are apprenticed have any objection to such inspection? I have not heard so.
781. Mr. Davies.] How long have you been in the institution? Three years.
782. During the time you have been matron in the institution have you at any time seen the superintendent or any officer of the institution inflict undue punishment? I never have.
783. The children are all bathed every day? Some of them are bathed every day, not all of them.
784. Is a medical inspection made weekly? Yes.
785. Are the children stripped? The boys and infants are.
786. If there were any marks of undue punishment they would of course be visible to the medical officer and to yourself? Yes.
787. Have the children a cheerful appearance? A very cheerful and happy appearance.
788. Do they flock around you when you go among them? Yes.
789. And the superintendent also? And the superintendent.
790. They do not look like "frightened hounds"? No.
791. Do you think that a proper expression to apply to the appearance of the children at Randwick? Not at all.
792. Do you think the children in the school will bear a favourable comparison with those of other schools? Yes.
793. Do you think the children look cheerful, happy, and well cared for? ———
794. Is their education well attended to in the school? I believe so.
795. Have you seen a great improvement in their education since the schools have been taken by the Council of Education? I believe there has been a great improvement.
796. Is there also an improvement in their discipline, in their manners and habits? Yes.
797. After the children have been bathed, have had their breakfasts, and attended to the usual religious exercises, are they handed over to the teachers? We try to get them half an hour's recreation after prayers and before they are handed over to the teachers. They are inspected at half-past 9.
798. Those children who are handed over to the Public School teachers are out of your custody during what hours? From 10 to half-past 12, and from half-past 1 to 4.
799. During the hour that intervenes who has charge of them? The attendants and myself, and they are inspected by me.
800. Do they wash? Yes, and prepare again for school.
801. After they leave school in the afternoon you and your subordinates take charge of them again? Yes.
802. When the children absconded on the 20th of October were they in your charge or in charge of the teachers? I believe they were in charge of the teachers; as I have stated, I was absent at the time.
803. You frequently observe, I presume, boys going into school with their boots and clothing properly arranged? Yes.
804. And later in the day find them without their boots? Yes.
805. Who have been to a waterhole swimming and have left their boots behind them? Yes.
806. Have you any reason to believe that the superintendent at any time has been unkind to the children? No, he has never been unkind to the children.
807. What is his general conduct towards the children? Exceedingly kind.
808. And towards the officers and attendants? He has been very good to the officers and attendants also.
809. Chairman.] You said, in answer to a question from Mr. Garrett, that the children who had been apprenticed from the institution—the girls—frequently wrote to you? Yes.
810. Have you had any opportunity of making the acquaintance of any of these young women after they have served their term of apprenticeship, so as to learn their after condition? I have not been in the institution long enough to have them after they have served their apprenticeship.
811. Have you fallen in with any of them while they have been under service? No.
812. Then you know nothing of them excepting through their written communications? No.
813. Have you had any knowledge of the boys after they have been apprenticed? Yes, I hear of them through their sisters and brothers, to whom they write.
814. Have the boys generally, as far as you can judge, turned out pretty well? I think they turn out very well.
815. I should gather from your evidence that you do not see any objection to so large a number of children being trained together under one roof? I see no objection if the institution is properly managed.
816. It is alleged that the training of children under this—what is called barrack—system does not fit them for the actual conditions of life into which they must fall afterwards? I am aware of that, but I think that is a mistake.
817. Then as you think that view of the case is a mistake I assume that as a matter of principle you think the best mode of training destitute children is that adopted at Randwick? If the children are properly managed I see no objection to a large institution like Randwick.
818. Could you give the committee any of the reasons that have conducted you to this conclusion in respect to a comparison of the two systems? I think, as I said before, this system makes the children more self-reliant, and more useful. They have many ways of making themselves useful there that they would not have in other places.
819. Have you ever heard that boys—the children of parents in a good condition of life—generally turn out better who have passed through a great Public School than those who have had a more private education? I think they get on as well as any others.
820. Mr. Garrett.] Have you had an opportunity of going over the Asylum for orphan children at Parramatta? I have been through the Protestant Orphan School at Parramatta.
821. Do you think the children at the Asylum at Randwick present as favourable features as those of the Protestant Orphan School at Parramatta? The children at the Protestant Orphan School at Parramatta are of a more respectable class, and that would account for the difference.
822. Chairman.] How is that? They are the orphans of respectable parents.

Miss M.
Fairbairn.
10 Dec., 1879.

823. Mr. Garrett.] You suppose that being the children of parents who had died and left them orphans and destitute, but who had previously been of good character, would account for the difference between these children and those at Randwick, many of whom had been taken off the streets—had been deserted by their parents, who had been persons of bad character? Yes.
824. Chairman.] You are aware that many of the children at the Parramatta Orphan School have one parent living? Yes.
825. Mr. Garrett.] You have spoken of the children's school-hours terminating at 4 o'clock;—what do they do from that time until they go to bed? The elder children go to bed at half-past 7, and the younger at half-past 6.
826. What do they do in the meantime—from 4 until then? They have tea, and then play in the recreation ground and amuse themselves in various ways until it is time to go to bed.
827. You have spoken of the children bathing in the waterholes. Are there any unprotected waterholes upon the ground? Not upon the ground.
828. What means are taken to keep the children within the ground? The recreation ground is enclosed and they have an attendant with them to mind them.
829. Mr. Davies.] You are aware that during the term of apprenticeship the children are constantly visited by officers of the institution—the collectors? Yes, I believe so.
830. And the officer makes his report from time to time to the committee? Yes.
831. As to the treatment the apprentices receive, and as to their behaviour to their masters or mistresses? Yes.
832. That kind of care is exercised over the apprentice during the term of apprenticeship? Yes.
833. You have stated that the generality of the boys and girls have turned out well? Yes, a great many have.
834. The annual reports show that gratuities have been given to a large number for many years past? Yes.
835. I think nearly forty received gratuities last year? Yes, I think so.
836. This gratuity is given simply as a reward for good conduct? Yes.
837. And to obtain it a letter must be procured from the employer, stating that the apprentice has given satisfaction to him? Yes.
838. Chairman.] It has been given in evidence by a gentleman who has been long and intimately connected with the institution that the children there seemed to have a down look, unlike that of children in other institutions of a similar character? That is not the case—the children are very bright and happy looking.
839. You do not see any difference between them and children of a similar class out of the institution? They look much better and happier than many children I have seen outside.
840. You do not agree with those who describe the children as having a dull look, as if under a species of terrorism? They are not under any terror; if they were they would shew it; but they are sprightly and lively as children ordinarily are.
841. If you heard them described as having the appearance of whipped hounds would you resent? I would, because it would not be true.
842. As an officer of the institution would you not resent it as an indirect reflection upon your own character? If I thought they had the appearance of whipped hounds I would not say they had not for the purpose of screening the institution, but they have not that appearance.
843. As an officer of the institution you would resent it as an unjust reflection upon the institution? Yes, I would.
844. Are you quite comfortable in the situation you hold? Yes.
845. And are quite satisfied with the nature of the duties you have to perform? Yes.
846. Mr. Greenwood.] Do visitors come to the institution frequently? Yes.
847. Do you see them? Yes.
848. Do you give them the visitors' book to sign? Yes.
849. Do they frequently make remarks as to the appearance of the children? Yes; and visitors have frequently remarked the bright and happy appearance of the children.
850. There is no entry that you are aware of that speaks of the unhappy or restless appearance of the children? Not since I have been in the institution—quite the contrary.

FRIDAY, 12 DECEMBER, 1879.

Present:—

MR. J. DAVIES, | MR. GREENWOOD,
MR. McELHONE.

THE HONORABLE SIR HENRY PARKES, K.C.M.G., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Cane, Esq., J.P., called in and examined:—

A. Cane, Esq.,
J.P.
12 Dec., 1879.

851. Chairman.] You are a Magistrate, I believe? I am.
852. Are you a director of the Asylum at Randwick? I am.
853. How long have you been so? Four years next January.
854. During the time you have been a director have you taken an active part in the management of the institution? Yes.
855. Will you be good enough to explain what you mean by an active part? I attend the meetings of the Board regularly, and I go there on days when the Board does not meet; and when I was on the house committee I always attended when it met.
856. Have you made yourself familiar with the operations of the institution—with its management and the arrangements made? Yes, I think I have.
857. Do you know any of the children personally? Yes, many of them; but not so many as I did last year when I was on the house committee.
858. Do you know any of the children so well that if you met them in the street or away from the institution you would recognize them? Yes, I have been stopped by them many times in the street.

859. Have you heard anything about a number of the children having run away from the institution in October, some of whom returned, and the remainder were brought back by the police late at night? Yes.

860. Will you be good enough to state what you know—and I would suggest, as the most impartial way of giving your evidence, that you should state when you became acquainted with it, and how, and follow it up link by link? I think on the 25th, or somewhere at the end of October, I received a letter stating that many of the children had run away, and that they had been severely beaten and ill-used. I made it my business to go to the writer of the letter at once, whom I had not seen for months. He told me that he believed all that he had written was true.

A. Cane, Esq.,
J.P.
12 Dec., 1879.

861. Had you not better give the substance of what he had written? I think I did, Sir Henry—that the children had been ill-used. I told him that if it were so he should go to the proper quarter to complain—to an authority higher than the Board of Directors; he said he had been to the Government—to the Colonial Secretary's office; and I told him I thought he had done his duty. That is about all that took place there. Returning from his residence I was accosted in the street by a very respectable young woman, whom I never saw to my knowledge before. She asked me the residence of Mr. Pearce, one of the directors, and then said she had left the institution. I told her where Mr. Pearce lived. She then said to me, "I have seen you before, sir." I said, "Where?" She replied, "At the circus, with the children." She asked me if I was a director. I said, "Yes." I said to her, "How long is it since you have left?" She said, "Only a few days." I then said, "Had any of the children run away from the institution about the time you were leaving?" She said, "Yes." I said, "Is it true these children were beaten? I have heard they were." She said, "Yes; perfectly true." I said, "Are you willing to come to the Colonial Secretary and state what you know?" She replied, "Yes; but," she said, "I should like to put it down in writing." I asked her where she lived and she told me. I went to see her, and took her statement down in writing, with the intention of coming to the Colonial Secretary's Office. On the following morning I went with her to Mr. Hill's, one of the directors of the Randwick Asylum. I asked her to make her statement to him; she did so. I told him what I thought of doing. He said he thought it would be advisable to see one of the directors, and go up to the institution as directors, and see whether it was true. I asked him to go with me. He said he had some meeting to attend—a church meeting—but recommended Mr. Holtermann. I was pleased, because Mr. Holtermann had been away from New South Wales and knew nothing at all of the proceedings of the past few years, and I thought he would be very impartial—I use the word 'very.' Mr. Holtermann immediately consented to come out with me. We went; arrived there, I think, about 3 o'clock; went into the boys' school first, and saw Mr. Dunlop, the teacher. I asked him whether it was true that many of the boys had run away. He said, "Yes, perfectly true; and I am not surprised," said he, "the boys do run away." Mr. Holtermann was present. Mr. Holtermann asked him the reasons for their running away, and he said the boys had been kept in the lavatories day after day; those were the words—day after day;—and they were not allowed much play—very little play; and he was not surprised that they did run away. He thought that a little exercise in the institution and out of it, say for a swim, would do them good, and make them better boys in every sense of the word, and able to do their duties better. The boys did not like being so strictly confined. Mr. Holtermann asked him to show him one or two or three of the boys who had run away, and Mr. Dunlop called a boy out—I think his name was ——. Mr. Holtermann asked him why he ran away; he said he was never allowed out, and they were beaten; he said they did not like it—too much of it. Of course we asked the permission of the schoolmaster, and said we would not interfere at all with the school. He then said, "There is another boy there—one of my best boys." The boy told the same story precisely. Mr. Holtermann asked if they had been beaten; he said, "Yes." "How had they been beaten?" "On the horse." "What with?" "Quince sticks." We asked if he had ever seen the boys beaten; he said, "Yes, ever so many times"—or "several times." I do not remember whether we asked any other boys in the school. There might have been another; I do not just at this moment remember. We then went into the girls' school, and I must say I saw that the girls—the children—did not look as well as they did some time previously; months previously. I was disappointed—very. Then we went into the kitchen and scullery, which I was very much displeased with, exceedingly so. The scullery was exceedingly untidy—very untidy; I never saw it worse.

862. Can you describe the untidiness? Yes, I can; it was dirty. It had been cleaned up for the day, because it was after the dinner-hour. They dine about half-past 12, and as this was about half-past 3 it should have been much cleaner and tidier in every way.

863. You have not described the untidiness? It was untidy from the dirt that had not been cleaned up, from the washing of the vegetables, and other things that there were there; the wash-tubs were dirty. It was untidy; I can say no more.

864. Mr. McElhone.] It looked dirty? Very dirty; I was surprised at its condition. We then went into the laundry; the girls were there doing their work, as they usually would do; the same girls had been there for some time—very good girls; I make no mistake about it. We then went into the engineer's room; M'Donald, I think, is the engineer's name. We spoke to him, and asked him if it was true the boys had been beaten, or had he seen any boys beaten; he said he had not seen any boys beaten, but he knew they were. He was reticent—did not care to give much information. I said, "Where were they beaten?" "On the horse." "Where is that?" "In the play-ground." I did not know what it meant, although I had seen it very many times.

[Witness requested to withdraw. Committee deliberated as to proposed adjournment. Witness recalled.]

865. Chairman.] Will you go on? Two boys (brothers) I spoke to; I had known them for three years; good boys—first-rate working boys—apprentices to the engineer; and they told me that the boys had been severely beaten on the horse; they had seen them beaten. They complained of many things.* Of course I did not go to hear complaints about the institution; I went to hear about the punishment. I believe every word these boys said, because they had ever been truthful to my knowledge; I knew the boys well. We then went to see the horse, without attracting any notice or saying where we were going. We saw it. We then went into a room at the back of the dining-hall, and I never saw it so untidy, excepting when it was used as the shoemaker's shop—when the shoes used to be made there. It was most untidy. I asked one of the children to go for the chief attendant, Goble. I forgot to mention that as we came from the laundry I saw Goble, the chief attendant; I said to him, "Are you the chief attendant?" He said,

* NOTE (on revision):—Especially the want of books for reading.

A. Cane, Esq., said, "Yes." I said, "How are the boys getting on?" He said, "Very well, sir." "Have you beaten them lately?" "Yes, I have; I have beaten them over the horse." I said, "Is that it in the yard?" He said, "Yes." As he was then attending to the children I then went into this room that I was just speaking about. He took down the boys, I think to the playground, or somewhere, and I went into this room. There was another room at the side—locked. I asked one of the children to go for the man who kept the key; he went; Goble came. Mr. Holtermann said, "I wish to see that room." He refused to open it.

J.P.

866. Mr. McElhone.] Who—Goble? Yes. I told him, "You will have to open it; as directors we wish to see over the institution, and as this is part of it we will see it." He then said he would prefer our going to Mr. Thomas and asking his permission to open the room. I told him I should do nothing of the kind. Mr. Holtermann asked him then to open the door. He did so. That room was worse than the other; it was very untidy. Mr. Holtermann said, "I hope the Commissioners will not come out to see the institution when we have places so dirty as this"; I said I trusted they would not until this place was cleaned up.

867. Chairman.] When you used the word "untidy" with reference to the state of these rooms, you must see that it makes no distinction between one room and another. Could you not give us a description of what is meant by the word—could you not describe in what the untidiness consisted? Well, the whole of the room was dirty and untidy; the whitewash was dirty—it was all dirty—it had an air of untidiness; there was nothing clean about it; there were lots of dirty things—pieces of wood, pieces of paper, old bottles, many things of that kind, in the first room; in the other room it was just as untidy—many things lying about which ought not to be about. There was a cupboard in the room. I asked the man to open it; he said he did not like to do so. I said, "You must." He opened it, and there I saw the quince sticks which have been spoken of. He said, "These are what I beat the boys with." I said, "I should not like to be beaten with that." Mr. Holtermann said he would not. I asked, "Do you beat the boys on the buttocks or on the hands?" He said, "I put them over the horse—those are my orders."

868. What were the quince-sticks like? I should think the bottom of each quince-stick was as thick as that (taking up a lead pencil); they were about 18 inches long, and they tapered off like that (taking up a quill); but then you know there are knots upon them. There were nine or ten of these quince-sticks tied together.

869. Do we understand that there were nine separate quince switches, the thick ends of which were the size of a lead pencil, tied together to form a rod? No, not to form a rod.

870. A birch? Yes, a birch.

871. And this was the instrument used in flogging the boys? The man Goble said so. He said, "That is what I beat them with on the horse."

872. How many of these birches were there? I think there must have been eight or nine; we counted them, but I could not swear to the exact number; I do not believe there were less than eight, but I think there were more; I am nearly sure there were more than eight.

873. The cupboard was nearly full of them then? No, I never said so.

874. I asked you how many birches there were—your answer clearly relates to the number of twigs that formed one birch? There was one birch formed of eight or nine twigs.

875. There was only one of these instruments? Only one.

876. Will you go on? He shut the door; then I went out. He said, "I punish the boys according to orders—those are my orders;" I think those were the exact words. We then went into the dining-hall; we tasted the tea; the tea was very good—sweetened and sugared properly. Then we saw Miss Macdonald; I put the question to her, "How are the children getting on?" She said, "Not so well now, Mr. Cane." I asked, "Why not?" She replied, "Because they are not as they used to be." I said, "Why?" She said, "So many of them have been beaten; I hope the directors will inquire into matters." I said, "Have you seen them beaten?" She said, "Yes; many times." I said, "I regretted it; I wished we could do without so much beating, and thought it was unnecessary, but," I said, "when children do not do what they should do it is necessary to punish them. You know, Miss Macdonald, what my feelings are in this matter, I should certainly punish them, but not so severely as they seem to have been punished." Mr. Holtermann was standing by at the time. I spoke to several of the children—little ones. Then we left the dining-hall, and I saw the sub-matron—the Protestant sub-matron—Mrs. Reid, and as I have known her for some time, I asked how she was getting on. She said, "Very well, excepting that the children had been beaten." I then asked to see another attendant, named Ebury. Why I asked to see her was because I had heard she had seen the children beaten, and some were in her division. She told me she had seen them beaten—unmercifully beaten for little children. I asked her to be careful what she said. She said, "What I say is true; they have been very severely beaten, and I have spoken about it; it is the talk of all the attendants in the institution." I asked her whether she had seen them beaten on the horse, and, if I remember rightly, she did not say she had seen them beaten on the horse, but she said she had seen the boys after they had been beaten, and they were severely bruised. I said, "How are they beaten?" She told me they were beaten with a birch made of quince sticks—that they were beaten by Goble, the chief attendant. I asked her whether they were beaten in any other way. She said, "With a cane." She appeared, both to Mr. Holtermann and myself not to be complaining of anything connected with the institution; she merely answered what she was asked; she volunteered some statements, and said she did not like to see her children beaten. I think we left the institution then.

877. You did not see any of the children that had been beaten? Yes; I saw this boy ———; I think he had been beaten.

878. Do you not know whether he had or not? At all events I will speak positively in this way, that the first boy whom Mr. Dunlop called out was one of the boys that had been beaten.

879. You did not ask in what manner he had been beaten? I did not. I should be very careful in doing that before the children. If they know that these inquiries are being made why of course it makes them forget themselves, and therefore we thought we had done our duty in going out and making ourselves acquainted with these things. I called upon Mr. Hills the following morning and told him what we had done. He said he thought we had done perfectly right. He asked me what I was going to do. I said as the Board were to meet on the following Wednesday we would bring it before them.

880. Did you take that course? Yes.

881. What was the result? The result was that they appointed a sub-committee.

J. W. Smart, The next communication came to me through the post. It is as follows:—

Esq., J.P.
16 Dec., 1879.

Mr. Smart,—
Sir,

Randwick Asylum, October 25, 1879.

I have the honor to inform you as to how and why the boys of this asylum run away. It is because they are badly ill-treated. I will give you some information of what has been done:—On Monday you found a score of boys on Moore Park, which were brought back the same evening by a constable, who handed them over to the superintendent, Mr. Thomas, and when the constable had gone he sent them into his office, and made them take down their trousers, and he beat them on the bare breech with six and seven canes together, and he cut them very badly about the legs and feet also, and I have known their feet and hands to be blistered through beating. And there are fourteen boys in the cells who are fed on dry bread and water, and made sleep on three beds, and all the other boys are kept like prisoners; they are kept in the bath-room all day, and are only let out to get their meals, which is very little and not much good, and to go to school; except the fourteen that are kept in the cells they are never let out, and I dare say there are from twenty to thirty boys badly marked; they are laid across the horse in the playground while the other boys are made stand around to witness the punishments, and sometimes they are laid flat on the floor, and four other boys are made to hold him down, and if they let his legs or any part of where they are holding him go they get it themselves, and sometimes the boys are made hold their own brothers, and when they do get beat it is with a bundle of quince rods, or six or seven canes securely put together, and I think this is enough to make any boys run away from their home.

When Mr. Thomas had beat the boys on Monday evening he first beat them on the bare breech, and after that did not satisfy him, so he beat them all around again on the feet and hands, and some of them were badly blistered; and he made them sleep on the floor in the bath-room with neither anything over or under them; they are also treated very badly by the male attendant, Mr. Goble, who is from morning till night flogging them.

Yours, &c.,

The name to this is torn off.

900. There was a name to it? There was.

901. You do not choose to give up that name? I do not.

902. You believe there is such a person as the professed writer? I know it as a fact. A morning or two after I received that letter a very respectable man called at my house, and said the coachman of Mr. Bowden was staying at Randwick one night, when he saw Mr. Thomas—of course I cannot vouch for the truth of this, I can only repeat his statement—he saw Mr. Thomas striking a boy so cruelly that he took off his coat, and told Mr. Thomas if he did not leave off he would knock him down. Upon hearing this I sent a telegram to Senior-sergeant Bremner at the Police Station, Parramatta, of which this is a copy:—“Will you send me the name of Mr. Bowden’s coachman, who lives in Church-street—a tall man, who was in Sydney on or about the 15th October?” This is the reply I received:—

Memo.

Parramatta, 12 November, 1879.

In re Mr. Bowden’s coachman.

THE widow of the late Mr. Thomas Bowden resides at Newlands, near the Parramatta Protestant Orphan School. Her coachman’s name is William Smith. He is about 27 years of age, 5 feet 11 inches high, medium build, fair hair, whiskers and moustache, fair complexion. Mr. Bowden was in Sydney in October, and had his carriage and coachman with him; and it is said Mr. Bowden stayed near Randwick. There is no other person named Bowden in Parramatta who employs a coachman.

Your obt. servt.,

J. BREMNER.

J. W. Smart, Esq.

In my telegram I had said nothing about Randwick.

903. Do you identify the person who called upon you as Mr. Bowden’s coachman? Yes. I am told as a matter of fact that Mrs. Bowden stayed at Mr. Thomas’s about that night.*

904. I am not quite sure in what way you identify this telegram and letter in reply? The person who called at my house made a statement that Mr. Bowden’s coachman was at Randwick, and I inquired whether Mr. Bowden’s coachman was in Sydney about that date.

905. What did Mr. Bowden’s coachman do? The party informed me that he saw, as I said before, Mr. Thomas cruelly beating a boy, and he took his part.

906. You were informed that the coachman saw Mr. Thomas cruelly beating a boy, and that he took that boy out of his hands? Yes.

907. And to ascertain whether the coachman was in Sydney at the time named you telegraphed to the police sergeant at Parramatta? Yes.

908. Mr. Greenwood.] Who was your informant? I could not tell you, as so many people come to me.

909. Did you see the coachman afterwards? No, I did not; I did not see the coachman at all.

910. How did you find out that this information was reliable? I could not do so; I could only ascertain whether the person was there at the time stated.

911. Chairman.] Do many persons call at your house to make complaints of the asylum at Randwick? There have been a good many during the last seven years—a good many people have come to me to complain, some from Waverley, others from Redfern, and others from Paddington. I live at Moore Park, and it is almost the first house you come to coming from Randwick.

912. Have any of the boys called at your place before? No, but they have been brought by people who have picked them up; I think altogether between thirty and forty have been brought there at different times. The last batch were brought back to me from the Park by people who lived on the other side, in Cleveland-street.

913. You have at different times heard various persons say that the boys were not well treated? Yes.

914. Did you ever take steps to ascertain whether these statements were true or not? I have spoken to some of the directors. I went at one time in company with Mr. Harrison, who drove me there. He asked to see the institution, but some demur was made by the man at the gate.

915. How long ago was that? Three years and a half or four years. Some of the boys who were brought to our house were in a filthy state, creeping with lice.

916. Do you recollect how long they had been away from the asylum? No, I do not; I know they stopped in my house; Mrs. Smart gave them beds. They could not have been away very long, or the police would have had some notification of their having left the asylum.

917. Did they give you an impression that the children inside the institution were filthy in a similar way? They did.

918. Not that they had picked up the vermin after they had left the asylum? No, the vermin were sticking to their skin, and I know that after they left, the servant and Mrs. Smart’s niece were both lousy from them.

919. Mr. May was then superintendent? Mr. May was ill at that time.

920.

NOTE (on revision):—Mr. Bowden’s coachman did not call upon me; it was a strange man.

920. You have not frequently visited the institution? I have been there only five times. I have never been over the institution. Whenever I have been there I have gone for some object, and have been kept in the room half-an-hour or more before I could see the person I have desired to see. J. W. Smart,
Esq., J.P.
16 Dec., 1879.
921. Have you in the course of your experience known any who have been inmates of this institution after they had been apprenticed to private persons? I know Mr. McElhone had one.
922. Girl? A girl.
923. How did she behave? I never heard any complaints against her during her apprenticeship. She was a very good girl I believe, but I have not had much opportunity of judging of those in the country.
924. But you have not heard any complaints in this one instance? No, I have heard Mrs. McElhone say she was a very good girl.
925. Mr. Dillon.] You were not at home on the night the boys came to your house? No.
926. You did not see them? I did not.
927. You say that they have been frequently brought to your house? Yes, they are found playing with children in the park, and when it is discovered who they are they are brought to my house.
928. Has that been recently? Not for the last three years and a half.
929. When were the last children you had there? On the 21st October.
930. And before that you had not had any for three years and a half? No.
931. Was that during Mr. Thomas' time? No, not during his time.
932. So that you cannot say anything as to the condition of the children during that time? No, but the 'bus man told me that he asked the children why they were leaving the institution, and they said they had been out all day swimming, and that they were afraid to go back to the asylum.
933. You did not see this coachman? No. I simply heard this statement respecting him, and I wished to satisfy myself, and therefore telegraphed to Parramatta.
934. Chairman.] Mr. Thomas, who is present, requests me to ask you whether you and Mrs. Smart, on the occasion when you went to see the three boys, were invited to inspect the asylum by Mr. Thomas? Yes.
935. Did you inspect it at that time? I declined, as at that time Mrs. Smart was an invalid and unable to go through it.
936. How were you received on that occasion by Mr. Thomas; were you received cordially by him? We were shown into a room, and Mr. Coulter left us sitting there.
937. Was there any disposition shown to withhold any information from you? No. We applied for no information beyond asking for these boys. No conversation took place beyond that.*
938. Did you see the boys? Yes.
939. What was your object of going to see the boys—had you any interest in them? Not at all; but Sub-inspector Waters had been called upon to report where these boys were found, and he reported that they were all found in Moore Park.
940. You are speaking of October last? I am speaking of October last. He reported that they were all found on Moore Park, and I went to the institution for the purpose of ascertaining what had become of the boys who had been at my house, and to identify them.
941. You notice that in the resolution, the substance of which I read to you, this Committee is instructed to inquire into the expediency of establishing the boarding-out system;—has your attention been directed to that subject? Very often.
942. I presume in the discharge of your duty as Magistrate you frequently sit upon the Bench? Very frequently.
943. And in that capacity have you occasion to deal with the cases of juvenile thieves and destitute children? I have frequently.
944. Has your attention been directed to the best method of treating either of the two classes I have mentioned—juvenile thieves or children who are simply in a state of destitution? The greater number of cases are those of destitute children, and this is the class for which provision is needed. In the matter of juvenile thieves they generally have parents who pay the fines imposed and take their children away with them.
945. What would you suggest as the most expedient system for this class? From my experience in former years as a director of the Benevolent Asylum I have a great objection to children being herded together, and I think the boarding-out system could be adopted for these children. Hundreds of people would be willing to take these children.
946. Have you any practical knowledge of the population of the country districts? Yes; I have travelled through a great many of them.
947. Do you think there are many families here, respectable, though poor, people, who would be willing to take these children under the boarding-out system? Yes; there are a great many in the Liverpool Plains District who would take these children. There is a large settled population of free selectors there who would be very glad to get them.
948. It is said that the success of the boarding-out systems in other parts of the world depends mainly upon two conditions being rigidly enforced: One is being certain of the good character of the person with whom the child is boarded out, and afterwards maintaining systematic visitation? Yes; and I therefore think the district I have named would be favorable, because in the neighborhood of Muswellbrook and Murrurundi the free selectors are near each other, and could easily be placed under police supervision.
949. What is contemplated is a committee of benevolently disposed persons who would supervise these children. Do you think there are ladies in the middling ranks of life who would devote themselves to that work? Yes; I think they could be found in Muswellbrook, Murrurundi, and Cassilis.
950. Take Murrurundi, for example;—do you think families there would take children, and that ladies could be found who would give up a portion of their time to look after these children? I am nearly positive they would be glad to do so, as it would be something to amuse them.
951. Women with families of children have generally plenty to amuse them? A good many people in Murrurundi, I believe, would be willing to take these children and to undertake the supervision.
952. Have you read many of the reports of the boarding-out system in Victoria? Only those which have appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald.

* ADDED (on revision):—I asked Mr. Thomas to see the cells, and he, appealing to Goble, said they have been done away with these two years.

- J. W. Smart,
Mag., J.P.
16 Dec., 1879.
953. You say you have been a director of the Benevolent Asylum? Yes.
954. Are you a director now? No.
955. When did you cease to be a director? When the number was altered from 30 to 12—the year before last.
956. You have not been a director during the last year? No.
957. A large number of children are drafted from the Benevolent Asylum to Randwick? Yes; I think the majority of the children at Randwick are from the Benevolent Asylum.
958. Are you able to state the character of the children who are drafted to Randwick at different times. Are they children of ill-conducted parents for the most part, or children whose parents have been simply unfortunate? Certainly the greater part of those who go from the police courts are the children of drunken and dissipated parents. Perhaps the father is in gaol for some crime, and the mother is unable to maintain them; but as a rule those who come through the Chief Secretary are of a different class—where the father has deserted the mother, where the father, through misfortune, is unable for a time to support them, or where the mother is in the Infirmary and unable to attend to them.
959. As far as you can form a judgment, always bearing in mind that you have not been a director of the Randwick, and that you have been a director of the Benevolent Asylum, are the children in the two institutions drawn from the same classes of society chiefly? That I cannot say. We have a great many illegitimate children admitted into the Benevolent Asylum, and they all go to Randwick.
960. They are admitted as infants? A great many are. Many of these children come to the Benevolent Asylum at George-street in consequence of having been deserted by the women in whose charge they have been left by their mothers. These children are left on the hands of women to whom the mothers pay so much a week for a time, and the payment ceasing, the women clear off and leave the children, who are then brought to the Benevolent Asylum.
961. Should you think that the children who are drafted off from the Benevolent Asylum to the Randwick institution are, as a rule, of a worse class than those sent to Randwick from other sources? No; I should say not.
962. Is there any limit to the ages of the children drafted from the Benevolent Asylum to Randwick? No; a committee is appointed both from Randwick and from the Benevolent Asylum, and these pick out some seventy, eighty, or ninety from five or six to nine or ten years of age, all who are healthy, to be drafted to Randwick. The sickly are left behind. There is generally a great rush to the Benevolent Asylum by the mothers before this drafting, in order that they may have their children out for a few days before they are sent to Randwick.
963. Mr. Greenwood.] How long have you been acquainted with the Randwick institution? Ten years.
964. From what sources have you gathered your information as to the management of Randwick? From talking to different directors and people who have been in service at Randwick.
965. Not from personal observation? Not from personal observation, with the exception of seeing from time to time the state the boys were in.
966. Have you ever been over the institution at Randwick? Never.
967. How many times have you visited Randwick during the ten years to which you refer? Five times altogether. That is actually to go inside the gate.
968. Have you noticed any difference between the present discipline at Randwick and the discipline which formerly prevailed? I have never had an opportunity of seeing the discipline, for I have never been beyond the waiting-room, except when I went to an annual meeting.
969. How was it these boys came to you on the 21st October? They did not come to me, they were brought.
970. By whom were they brought? Mrs. Smart informed me that they were brought by between twenty and thirty people. It was a moonlight night, and these boys were found in Moore Park, and brought to my house.
971. Why should they come to you with these boys who had run away from the Randwick Asylum? Simply because I was a Magistrate and well known in the neighbourhood.
972. Are there not other Magistrates living there who are well known? There are other Magistrates living there; I do not know whether they are well known.
973. Mr. Roseby? He lives at Paddington, half-a-mile away.
974. Are there not other Magistrates living close by? I believe there are.
975. Why should they come to you rather than to other Magistrates? I do not know; but everybody about Surry Hills comes to my house. They come to me to sign pawn-tickets, declarations, and on all sorts of business.
976. Chairman.] I suppose they come to you from having taken an active part in public matters as a Magistrate? Yes, and from being a large property holder in the neighbourhood. Mr. Davies, Mr. Alderson, Mr. Booth, who are each of them magistrates, send people to me for advice.
977. Mr. Greenwood.] Mr. John Davies? Yes, people often come to me for orders for the Infirmary, and upon a number of other matters.
978. You sit on the Bench at one of the Police Courts? Yes.
979. At which? At both.
980. At the Water Police Court? Yes, and at the Central also.
981. How often? On an average of twice a week at each Court.
982. When these boys were brought to your house did you know anybody that brought them? No, I was not at home; I did not see them.
983. What was done to them? They were handed over to the police about half-past 9.
984. What did the police do with them? That is more than I can tell.
985. They took them away? Yes.
986. You do not know where they took them away? I have no idea.
987. Chairman.] You believe they were taken to the asylum? Yes.
988. Mr. Greenwood.] Did you take any steps to find out what became of them? I went to the Police Station on that night.
989. At what time were they brought to your house? They were there about twelve minutes, and left about half-past 9. They were brought to the Police Station by a constable named Graham about 25 minutes to 10.
990. At what time did you go to the Police Station? About 10 minutes or  $\frac{1}{4}$  past 10.
- 991.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE RANDWICK ASYLUM.

J. W. Smart,
Esq., J.P.
16 Dec., 1879.

991. About half-an-hour after the children left your house? About an hour.
992. Why did you go to the Police Station? The 'bus-man told me he had met about twenty-one boys, and when Mrs. Smart said that only three had come to my house I was anxious to know whether the other boys had been taken up.
993. Which Police Station did you go to? No. 3, at Darlinghurst.
994. Close to Darlinghurst Gaol? Yes.
995. Did you learn what had become of them? Yes, that they had been taken back to the asylum.
996. When did you go to the asylum? Two or three days after.
997. You did not go next morning? No, I had no occasion to go next morning.
998. Who went with you to the asylum? Mrs. Smart and our servant girl.
999. When was that? Three or four days after—I think it was on the Thursday following the Monday on which the boys had come to our house.
1000. When you went out there whom did you ask for? I asked for the superintendent.
1001. Mr. Thomas? Yes.
1002. Did you see Mr. Thomas? Yes.
1003. What did you say to him? Only Mrs. Smart spoke first. I afterwards said, "Some boys were taken from my house by the police. Would you kindly let me see the boys who were brought back by them, in order that they may be identified, as Mr. Waters has reported that no boys were taken from our house?"
1004. Did Mr. Waters report that? Yes.
1005. And you say a policeman did take them from your house? Yes.
1006. And from your house he took them to No. 3 station? Yes; one policeman brought in nine or ten, I am not sure which. However, two of them brought in eighteen from Moore Park, and three were taken from my house.
1007. How do you know they were taken from Moore Park? I heard that at the Police Station.
1008. From whom? From the police.
1009. When you went to the Randwick Asylum two or three days after this, you knew that these three boys who had run away with the other eighteen, had been taken first to No. 3 Police Station, and then back to Randwick Asylum? Yes.
1010. And Mrs. Smart knew the same? I do not know what she knew; that I cannot say.
1011. Did not you say that she asked the question? What question?
1012. About the boys who ran away? About these three boys.
1013. Was your question confined to these three boys? Yes.
1014. Did you ask Mr. Thomas if these boys who had run away had been taken back by the police? I asked to see the three boys who were at my house on the night of the 21st.
1015. You had told Mr. Thomas that three boys had been at your house? I asked Mr. Thomas if he had any objections to my seeing the three boys, as Mr. Waters had reported that no boys had been taken from my house.
1016. Did you tell Mr. Thomas that three boys had been at your house? I cannot remember that.
1017. How could you ask him, if you did not tell him, that there had been three boys at your house? I asked Mr. Thomas to let me see three boys who had run away from the asylum, and as the boys came out I said to the girl, "You pick out the boys who were in the kitchen and had bread-and-butter on the night referred to." She went to one and said, "That is one," then to another, "That is another," and then to the third. I then went to the boys and said, "Are you the boys who were at my house?" and they said, "Yes."
1018. What took place then after you had picked them out? We came away.
1019. Did you say nothing to Mr. Thomas? Nothing about the asylum.
1020. What took you to Randwick to identify these boys? The reason I have already stated—that Mr. Waters had reported that the boys had not been to my place, and my impression was that they might have gone somewhere else.
1021. Who is Mr. Waters? Sub-Inspector George Waters.
1022. Did you try to find out why these boys had run away? No.
1023. Do you know why they had run away? I know only what the 'bus-man told me that they were afraid to go back because they had been sitting in the waterholes all day.
1024. Can you tell the Committee your opinion as to why there should be this running away from Randwick? I cannot give any reason why they should run away, any more than I can give a reason why any one should commit an offence.
1025. Have you ever seen any chastisement at Randwick? I have never been there.
1026. Have you ever seen this horse about which they speak? I have not.
1027. Have you ever seen these instruments of punishment said to be used? I have not; I have never seen beyond the waiting-room, except when going with Mr. Thomas.
1028. Have you ever been to the Orphan institutions at Parramatta—either Protestant or Roman Catholic? Never.
1029. Therefore you do not know from your own personal knowledge that there is any difference between the discipline of these two institutions and that of this institution at Randwick? I know nothing about it.
1030. On the few occasions when you have been at Randwick, have you ever been struck with the appearance of the children? I have never seen the children there—I have seen them only as they have been walking to and from church.
1031. Upon what grounds have you reason to think that the boarding-out principle is preferable to that upon which this institution is founded? I have never held with a number of children who have had the run of the streets, who have come from the lowest slums, from brothels, and who are familiar with the lowest vices and immorality of the city, being herded together. If such children are brought to an institution where there are a number of others, they teach the younger all the badness they have themselves learned, and it goes through the school like an epidemic.
1032. But the Randwick boys learn all this wickedness before they go there? Clearly.
1033. That cannot apply to those who are brought in from the Benevolent Asylum? Yes it does, for many of these boys from the Benevolent Asylum are taken off the streets at nine or ten years of age, and they may not be at the Benevolent Asylum a week before they are drafted off to Randwick. 1034.

J. W. Smart,
Esq., J.P.

16 Dec., 1879.

1034. When boys of the class you speak of are taken off the streets at nine or ten years of age, what would you do with them? The boys I speak of are most of them thieves, or the companions of thieves, and I would send them to a reformatory.
1035. Not without some evidence of their former associations? No clearly not; that could easily be obtained through the police.
1036. Those who have no vicious associations, what would you do with them? I would board them out where they could be brought under home influences, and where kindness and care could be shown towards them, such as could not be secured in large institutions.
1037. In town or country? In the country.
1038. Up to what age would you have them boarded out under State supervision? Anything under the age of ten.
1039. At what age would you let the indentures run out? Not less than eighteen.
1040. Would you give them wages? I should be inclined to give them wages sufficient to accumulate, so that when they were out of their time they might start themselves somewhere.
1041. Chairman.] There is a difference between apprenticing out and boarding out? Yes; in the one case the children are paid for; in the other the people who have apprentices pay for them.
1042. Mr. Greenwood.] Do you think the Colony could make provision for a thousand children in this way? Yes, I am sure of it.
1043. Distributed throughout the whole Colony? Distributed throughout the whole Colony; that is, in the settled districts.
1044. Under State supervision? Under State supervision.
1045. Mr. Dillon.] There is, I believe, no reformatory at the present time? I believe one is nearly finished at South Head.
1046. Up to the present time there has been no place to which children convicted of offences could be sent? No.
1047. Where have they been sent hitherto? For criminal offences they have been sent to gaol.
1048. Is there any provision in our gaols for keeping them apart from hardened criminals? No.
1049. Has not that been a standing complaint in our Courts of Justice? Yes; and it has been a constant complaint by the Magistrates. For this reason boys are not committed to prison for various offences, but are let off upon payment of small fines.
1050. You say you have been four or five times to Randwick, and I think you said something about an indisposition being shown to give you information about the institution? Yes.
1051. Have you ever asked to be shown over the institution? No.
1052. Have you ever asked for information you did not get? No.
1053. Chairman.] In connection with this last answer Mr. Thomas desires me to put this question, whether on the occasion of the visit of yourself and Mrs. Smart you asked to see a girl named Toohey? Mrs. Smart did.
1054. She was produced at once? Yes.
1055. There was no hesitation about it? No.
1056. Mrs. Smart had an opportunity of seeing her? Yes; Mrs. Smart had taken an interest in this little girl, and it was through her she was sent to the asylum.
1057. This little girl made no complaint? No; I think Mrs. Smart asked Mr. Thomas if he had any objection to her giving the child a few shillings, and he said "No."
1058. On that occasion from the little intercourse you had with the child had you the impression that she was unhappy? No; she looked comfortable and happy. She was nicely dressed in a clean apron and cotton frock, and in fact looked more like the daughter of a respectable working man than the inmate of a charitable asylum.
1059. Mr. Thomas also wishes me to ask you whether the last of the three boys was not brought forward by the superintendent's order—one of the other boys having suggested his name? He was in the yard and we were standing on the green plot. One of the boys said something and Mr. Thomas called out to Goble. Goble came with a stick in his hand, and one of the boys called out his name and he came running in.
1060. Did you or Mrs. Smart on that occasion see any marks of punishment upon either of the three boys alluded to? No we did not ask or make any inquiry; all we were anxious to know was whether the boys who had been in our house were in the asylum and to identify them.
1061. When you were speaking about boarding-out, I suppose it never occurred to you that if the system were tried it must be for all the children? No; I meant only that it should be tried with a few.
1062. If it were to be extended to a hundred children do you think a hundred families could be found who would be willing to take them? Yes; I have no doubt of it.
1063. Within such distances as to secure proper inspection? Yes; I dare say a great number of children have been adopted by respectable people from the Benevolent Asylum, both illegitimate and legitimate; I dare say twenty-five or thirty.
1064. Can you state roughly the average number of juvenile offenders under the age of sixteen who are brought before the Sydney Benches for petty thefts and other offences against the law? I dare say on the average sixty or seventy during the year.
1065. Does that include both sexes? Yes. This has been a heavy year on account of the large number of cases for pigeon-stealing.
1066. How do the Bench usually deal with these cases? In some cases where the parents are very respectable we have the option under the Juvenile Offenders' Act to impose a fine, or to bind the parents under certain penalties to become sureties for the good behaviour of their children. We can fine as high as £3 or give six months. In some cases time is allowed for payment, but in most instances the money is paid in the course of the day.
1067. You used the words the children of very respectable parents. Is it the fact that frequently the sons and daughters of such persons when quite young come before the Bench? Not very frequently; but recently we had the sons of a Magistrate brought up for stealing articles from the Exhibition; they were punished. There was no owner for one article stolen.
1068. How were they punished? By a fine which the parents paid, and took the children away.
1069. In these cases were the children in custody any time? Yes; they were locked up.

Rev.
J. Jefferis.
17 Dec., 1879.

were boarded-out, and I may say that the general impression in South Australia has undoubtedly been that the boarding-out system is a thorough success from every point of view. It has saved the Government a great yearly charge, and it has tended—as I think, and as is almost unanimously believed—to train the children in a much more effective manner.

1095. Have you a fair knowledge of the character of the population outside Adelaide during your residence in South Australia? I think I had.

1096. Your duties were confined to Adelaide? My special duties were confined to Adelaide, but I was constantly in the habit of visiting the country districts for purposes connected with my own office.

1097. Have you visited the country districts of this country much or at all? Not very much.

1098. Is it not the fact that the population in the neighbourhood of Adelaide consists very much of small farm households? It is.

1099. Of persons who have small homesteads, who live by cultivating the land, who have small farms, gardens, or who grow the vine and make wine? Yes.

1100. Do you think that is the case to a greater extent in South Australia than here? Far greater.

1101. Would not that state of things in South Australia favour the system of boarding-out? I think it would.

1102. To that extent you think South Australia is more favourable to the system than New South Wales? I do think that is the case.

1103. What I want to ascertain is, if you have the knowledge, what conditions are made with the foster parents—the persons with whom the children are boarded are called “foster parents” I believe—and what provision is made on behalf of the children for seeing that these conditions are carried out? I have, I think, looked well to the working of the system. There is a financial bargain between the Government and the foster parents; at least this bargain was made at the commencement, during the first year—but the success was such that after the first year there was no necessity for payment whatever. The applications were so numerous that the Boarding-out Committee for a year or two had only to select from the number of applicants who were eager to take the children for adoption, or for the term of years that was arranged for by the Government.

1104. These strangers do not adopt the children in the first instance do they in any case? No, they do not.

1105. In the first instance there is a boarding-out in all cases? Yes, but for many years past no money has been paid for boarding-out.

1106. You are quite sure of that? Yes. There have been special cases where payment has been made. If a child is abnormally ugly, or abnormally wicked—as will be the case where a considerable number of children are taken from the lowest stratum of society—there is great difficulty in getting rid of such a child, and they can get rid of it only in the last resort by payment.

1107. What is the condition for seeing that the foster parent fulfils his obligation to the child of whom he has taken charge? The chairman of the Destitute Board in South Australia was able, as I fear no one holding a similar position here would be able, to see himself to the visitation; that is to say, once a year he made a point of visiting every district in the country, and obtaining such general and such definite information as was possible concerning all the children within the given district. But, in addition to that, local visitors were appointed in all the various districts of the colony in which the children were boarded. These visitors being in direct connection and affiliation with the central Boarding-out Committee, which was an unpaid voluntary working committee in Adelaide itself. Those who were appointed on this committee—most of them were ladies; indeed I am not sure that they were not all ladies—and were invested with powers to visit the houses at which the children were boarded; they had the power of examining the children, of inspecting their clothes, and of obtaining a variety of detailed evidence in regard to the general life and conduct of the children, of the treatment they were receiving at the hands of their foster parents. The evidence that they obtained by this means was embodied in a report which was furnished four times in the year to the Central Committee, and by this means, both by the action of the chairman of the Destitute Board, who was, we will say, chief visitor, and the action of these local visitors in every part of the colony, the most complete system of supervision was exercised over the entire number.

1108. Have you yourself been able to watch the course of any of those children who have been boarded-out? Yes; I have seen the course of some, not very many, who have been boarded-out in the country districts.

1109. What was your impression of it? My impression was decidedly favourable.

1110. That they were doing well? That they were doing well.

1111. That they were being taken proper care of? That they were being taken proper care of. Indeed I think the facts will come out very strongly in this. I am not quite sure of the number, but I think that in three or four years, taking the average of the whole of the reports that were sent in by the local visitors, 88 per cent. were endorsed as good; 11 per cent. were sent in as fairly good—or words to that effect; and only 1 per cent. out of the whole number was endorsed as bad.

1112. Do you recollect any case in which complaints of ill-usage or cruelty were made of children who had been boarded-out? There were during all the years I have had knowledge of the system one or two cases, but they were extremely few.

1113. You do not remember, I suppose, whether in those cases an investigation took place, and if so, what was the result? I do not remember distinctly, but my impression is that in every case it was simply, so far as could be ascertained, the result of incompatibility between the foster parents and the children, and the removal of the child elsewhere was the issue.

1114. Have you any knowledge of the management of the institution at Randwick? Only such knowledge as is to be obtained by a somewhat careful perusal of the public reports connected with it.

1115. Have you never visited it? I have visited it only once.

1116. Did you go all over it on that occasion? Yes.

1117. Did you speak to the children? I spoke to the children.

1118. How long ago was that? About eighteen months.

1119. What impression did you form from that visit? The impression I formed was that as an institution it was kept fairly, that all the requirements of it, as an institution, were attended to. I could find no fault with it in regard to cleanliness, order, and discipline.

1120. Did the children give you any idea, either one way or other, as to whether they were comfortable? I did not examine them.

1121. Was there anything in their appearance that struck you? It happened on the day I was there that one of our bitter westerly winds was blowing, and a number of the children were suffering from chilblains; many could not wear their boots and were hobbling about when brought out for inspection in a most painful way. The whole aspect of the institution affected me very painfully, not in the way of my being able to find fault in the way the institution was managed as an institution, but because I had a profound conviction that the system is utterly abnormal, and is attended with the gravest ill results in regard to the future welfare of the children.

1122. That is to say you, from reflection, reading, and thinking, have brought yourself into a position of opposition to the barrack system? Yes; and you could not expect me to divest myself of these impressions. I had nothing to find fault with in the management of the institution, so far as I saw. My objection is to the system.

1123. Did you see the food on that occasion? No.

1124. Did you see any of the children in school? No, they were out in the playground when I was there.

1125. Mr. Garrett.] Do the persons who have these children in Adelaide submit willingly to this system of visitation and inquiry as to the mode in which they conduct themselves towards the children, or as to the discharge of their duty towards them? There was a little difficulty at first, but I think that difficulty was more on the side of the visitor than of the visited. But after a year it was found to establish a pleasant intercourse between the visitors and the homes visited.

1126. Did the visitor belong to the same class of society as that to which the visited belonged? No, they were chosen as far as possible from the upper class.

1127. Did the lower class, who had charge of the children, seem to take kindly to the inquiries of those above them? I do not remember any instance of unwillingness occurring in relation to that. I think it is very likely, arguing from human nature as it is, that occasionally there would be. So far as my general impression of the working of the system is concerned, I think no special difficulty was experienced.

1128. What was the general age of the children who were put out? I think from about six to ten was the general age. Where adoption was selected, as was the case often, younger children were selected.

1129. In the case of children from six to ten, were they expected to do any work for the persons to whom they were entrusted? No, they were expected to go to school just the same as other children. They were expected to do no more work than children would be expected to do in ordinary family life.

1130. Was that one of the obligations of the trust? Do you mean one of the arrangements made?

1131. Was one of the arrangements that the children should not be put to work? Yes, decidedly.

1132. Then their duty to them would be simply to nurture and educate them? To care for them—education was undertaken by the Government.

1133. Then the persons who took the children would have to send the children to a Government school? To the public school, if there were a school within 2 miles. If the school were beyond that radius they were to make the best arrangements that possibly could be for their education.

1134. You have travelled a good deal in this colony since you have been here, have you not? Not a very great deal.

1135. What parts of the country have you been in? I came from Melbourne overland through the Colony, but of course one has not much opportunity in such a journey to form many impressions beyond such as relate to the general scenery, the capability and cultivation of the land, and the external surroundings of the people. My other travelling has been simply in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, Mount Victoria, Orange, and Bathurst, and within a radius of between 20 and 30 miles round Sydney.

1136. Chairman.] Have you been to Camden? No.

1137. To Kiama? No.

1138. To Wollongong? No.

1139. Mr. Garrett.] You have not then had much opportunity of noticing the class of persons who live on their own farms here? Very little.

1140. Has the little you have seen led you to the conclusion that they are similar to those of the same class in South Australia? No; the houses on farms in the neighbourhood of Adelaide have about them the evidence of much greater settlement.

1141. More domestic comfort? More domestic comfort.

1142. Do you think our population is of a more scattered character than it is in the country parts of South Australia, and that this would militate against the adoption of this system? I think that the circumstances would not prove so favourable here as in South Australia, but that is no reason why the thing should not succeed.

1143. With an efficient system of supervision? With an efficient system of supervision;—that is a very great necessity. There are two things absolutely required, and together must be a sine qua non with regard to the boarding-out system:—The utmost care in the selection of the foster parents; and second, as perfect as possible system of supervision.

1144. Have you any knowledge of the cost to the Government in South Australia of this system? As I have already said, at first a sum of 5s. a week was given for each child, but after the first year the demand was so great that none were paid for, excluding the very exceptional instances to which I have referred, and I think during the past five years on an average not more than thirty were paid for out of the total number.

1145. What was the total number? At present I calculate that about 300 children are boarded-out, and between 300 and 400 have passed the age of sixteen, after which age they are beyond the operation of the boarding-out system.

1146. From your knowledge as to the condition and conduct of those children who have passed out of the care of this system, are you of opinion that they are distinguishable in any way from children who have been brought up in ordinary families? I do not think they are—they are pretty much as others.

1147. Is there any portion of the machinery adopted to follow them into after-life? No, I think not; that was the want of the system in South Australia. In the event of the system being adopted here I should like to see care taken for them up to the age of 18 or 19. This I think especially necessary in the case of girls.

1148. That is as to the persons to whom they should go? I think there should be an interest shown in their general welfare beyond the age of sixteen.

1149. Have you visited either of the Orphan Schools at Parramatta? I have not.

1150.

Rev.
J. Jefferis.
17 Dec., 1879.

1150. Chairman.] I omitted to ask whether you are not acquainted with some ladies who are trying the boarding-out system on a limited scale here? I am—my wife is one of them.

1151. Do you know what they are doing? There is a committee of four or five at present working. I am not quite sure of the number of children they have already boarded-out.

1152. They have placed some out? They have.

1153. How many—ten or a dozen? Not so many; I think six or seven. They have all come to my own house first.

1154. Are the committee meetings held at your house? No, they have been held in town.

1155. You do not know then whether the ladies take an interest in the work they have set their hands to—whether they visit the children? I do know they take an interest in it.

1156. Do they visit the persons who have taken charge of children? It is too early for an efficient organization to have been formed; but no child has been sent to any part of the country without visitors having been selected in that part of the country—ladies of position—clergymen's wives chiefly.

1157. Do you know any of the places to which these children have been sent? Two were sent yesterday somewhere near Goulburn. The foster parents were to meet the children at Goulburn, where arrangements were made for their visitation.

1158. Mr. Burns.] Have you any knowledge of the cost to the State of the boarding-out system in South Australia? The cost per head is a mere nominal cost now, because hardly anything is paid for the children. There would be about thirty out of say 300. That would be only about one-tenth that would be paid for. 5s. a week is the sum allowed per each child.

1159. How long had the system been in operation in South Australia before you left there? It had been in operation five years.

1160. I presume your main objection to the system at Randwick is the absence of home influence? The absence of home influence.

1161. Too much of the barrack system? Perhaps the term "barrack system" is a little too harsh, for I think it has served well in the interests of the community in England in the absence of something better. But my own profound conviction is, and it has been gaining increased strength from my experience of life, that it is only by bringing them into contact with family life we can expect rightly to influence the children of the State.

1162. Did the children at Randwick present to you the appearance of being contented? No, not contented; they had a cowed look—an abject submission to authority. It was altogether painful.

1163. Did you go among the children alone, or was an attendant with you? I was alone with them; I went to their play-ground and chatted with them.

1164. Was there an appearance of individual care about the children? I think there is, and there is with almost all children brought up under similar conditions.

1165. Otherwise I think you said they seemed to be well cared for? They seemed to be well cared for, as far as I could judge.

1166. You could see no reason for dissatisfaction with the management at Randwick? No, I could see none.

1167. Chairman.] Mr. Thomas, the Superintendent of the Institution for Destitute Children, is now present; he has permission to be present to hear the evidence and to put any question he may desire, through the Chairman. He wishes me to ask you whether Mrs. Jefferis and another lady did not visit the institution at night on one occasion? I think they did, and saw the children put to bed; they went upon purpose.

1168. You were not with the ladies then? No.

1169. Do you recollect whether Mrs. Jefferis—and the other lady, if she came into your company afterwards—expressed any opinion as to what they saw upon that occasion? I am not quite sure about the opinion expressed. I know that my wife said it was a sad and piteous sight to see 150 or 200 children all sleeping together in one room without what she deemed the necessary personal love and oversight of some one who cared for and loved them individually.

1170. Did she express any opinion as to the appearance of the beds and other appliances for the children's comfort? So far as I remember they were perfectly satisfied with them.

1171. I should gather from what you say that Mrs. Jefferis's opinion had reference to the system rather than to the individual attention to particular children? Undoubtedly.

1172. Is there anything farther you would wish to state to the Committee? I do not know that there is anything special, beyond my own opinion, and I may not have another opportunity of stating it in regard to the philanthropic efforts of the Colony generally on behalf of destitute children; but I think that it would be wise to make some attempt in the direction of a cottage-home system, in the event of the boarding-out system not answering all expectations. That is to say, instead of a large institution, such as Randwick, we should endeavour to have separate homes under efficient supervision scattered over the city and over various parts of the country, in which a certain number of children—not more than ten or twelve in each home—should be brought up, boys and girls together, under as nearly as possible the conditions of an average home. That system has been carried out in Scotland to some extent, and I think it is the truest to nature and to Providence that we have, or that we could have.

1173. Have you been in England during the last twenty years? I was home about ten years ago.

1174. Did you see any public institution for children at that time? Yes, I specially paid a visit to George Muller's institution at Bristol.

1175. That is at Clifton, is it not? No, at Ashley Down. Bristol is my native place, so that I was quite familiar with Muller's institution.

1176. Can you describe briefly what you saw there? I do not know that there is any special description for it, excepting that the 2,000 children who are being brought up there were divided into sections.

1177. Were they in groups? They made an effort so far as was compatible with the institution idea to divide the children into sections, with a view to get a little family life among them. One teacher would have charge of twenty or thirty children; these were located together, and cared for in some degree separately.

1178. Did you see any other institution? I visited the Blind Asylum in Bristol. I do not remember any other just now.

1179. Did you ever hear or read of the Red Hill Reformatory in Essex? I have heard of it, but I do not know much about it.

1180. That is a reformatory proper to which convicted children are sent? Quite so.

1181.

1181. Though a reformatory where children are sentenced to certain periods of imprisonment, they are kept in groups in farm-houses, perhaps half-a-mile apart;—they are enclosed in no walls, and are in just the same state of life as if they were free, excepting in having a vigilant overseer. Instead of being crowded together there is a large tract of land set apart for them, upon which there are farm-houses with all the out-buildings and other surroundings of ordinary farms? It is much after the German system, which was initiated by Emanuel Wickern.

Rev.
J. Jefferis.
17 Dec., 1879.

1182. Does this represent your notion as to the best mode of dealing with refractory children? With refractory children?

1183. All children are refractory—more or less—especially coming from the class which chiefly supply them? No, it would not answer to my idea, for I think centering upon every separate home there are a thousand influences converging, many which would be wanting under the system you refer to. My thought is that the children should be brought into contact with life as it is; just as the children of ordinary homes, so that meeting the ordinary temptations and trials which belong to human life, when they arrive at the age of voluntary action, they are fitted to cope with them. Now, the system you refer to at Red Hill is the same as that adopted at the celebrated Rau Haus, or Rough House Institution of Emanuel Wickern, which has had a marvellous success in Germany, and wrought incalculable good. My wife is now in correspondence with a German lady who is one of the teachers at Emanuel Wickern's, so that she knows well the working of the institution, and I think it has wrought incalculable good. Still I do not think it the most perfect system; I think his limit is ten or twelve, and their cottage homes are together upon the estate, and for certain purposes they all meet together in concert for school and worship. That is exceedingly good, but the difference between that and the cottage home system, which my wife advocates, is that in the other you do not get any of the influences resulting from common life affecting the history of these children, save as it filters through the institution itself, and affects each separate part. If you have a dozen girls or a dozen boys growing up together, they may have a sort of home, but it is an artificial home. If you have children of different ages, and of both sexes, growing up under the vigilant care of a father and mother, you have a condition of things wholly different from the other.

Police Constable John Joseph Lees, examined:—

1184. Chairman.] You are a constable in the Police Force? Yes.
1185. How long have you been in the Police Force? About five months.
1186. Were you on duty in October last near Moore Park? Yes.
1187. Did you become acquainted with any children who had run away from the Randwick Asylum? Yes.
1188. How did you become acquainted with the fact that they had run away from the asylum? As I was going along Dowling-street, near Moore Park, I saw a lot of boys together, and thought they were larrikins; they were in the shade of a lamp, about half-past 8. As I came close to them a little boy ran up to me and said a lot of boys had run away from Randwick Asylum. As soon as they saw me they scattered about, and some of them got where there were a lot of loose stones to hide. I called to them to come to me, but they did not come. I then got five of them up in a corner, and I got them to call the others. Three others then came up, and a couple of boys stopped two more. Then I got these together and took them to the station.
1189. How many did you get together? Eleven altogether. I took ten the first time and one after.
1190. You took them to the station? Yes.
1191. What station? No. 3, at Darlinghurst.
1192. Did the boys say anything to you? No, they did not say anything to me. I asked them what did they run away for, and they said they were afraid of getting beat.
1193. Will you state to the Committee all that the boys said to you as well as you recollect? That is all they said to me, because there was a great crowd of 40 or 50 boys and people, so that I had a job to keep them together, and I could not question them.
1194. Were they questioned when they got to the station? Not by me.
1195. Nor in your presence? Nor in my presence.
1196. Did you take them away from the station? No.
1197. You went back to your duty? I went back to my duty.
1198. Mr. Hurley.] Have you ever before taken any boys who have run away from the asylum? No.
1199. Nor since? No.

Constable J.
Lees.
17 Dec., 1879.

Police Constable Frederick Sherring examined:—

1200. Chairman.] You are a constable in the Police Force of Sydney? Yes.
1201. Do you hold any grade? Nothing but first-class constable.
1202. Were you on duty anywhere near Moore Park in October last? Yes, in Cleveland-street, just off from Moore Park—off Bourke-street.
1203. Did you hear about that time of some children having run away from Randwick Asylum? Yes.
1204. Do you recollect the day? I think it was the 20th.
1205. At what hour of the twenty-four? Between 8 and 9 in the evening.
1206. How did you come to hear of it? A man who is in Harrison's 'bus yard told me that as he was passing by Baptist's Garden a girl told him she had seen some boys about who had run away from Randwick Asylum. I went back and found five of them, whom I took to the station.
1207. To what station? No. 3 Station, Darlinghurst. On the way to the station I asked them what made them run away from the school; they said they had been birched. I asked them for why. They said they had been down the garden to bathe, or they had been somewhere to bathe. And as we were going, I took one of the boys by the hand—he was a little boy—and he complained of his hand being sore. He showed it to me, and I saw he had a mark across the wrist.
1208. Did they speak freely to you? Yes.
1209. Can you state the substance of all they said? I said to the boys, "What made you run away from school?" and they said they had been in the ground to bathe, and had been birched, and were afraid to go home again. I went to the station, where I found Mr. Waters, who told me there were several others

- who had left the school. I went back to Albion-street, and I found three other bigger boys; they were together, and I called after them. They were going in the direction towards Bourke-street, crossing over to Botany-street. I called after them, and when I got up to them I said, "You are from Randwick School?" They said, "Yes." I said, "Come with me." They did not complain of being beat, but one of the boys spoke about going to the Exhibition.
1210. What did you say to them? I asked what made them run away. One of the big boys said he would like to go and see the Exhibition. They did not complain of being ill-used. I think there were two missing when I took these back to the station, but afterwards they were all sent home—that night I believe.
1211. Did any of the boys give you to understand that they were frequently beaten, or did they only refer to the one occasion? They did not—only on this occasion.
1212. Did they appear at all afraid of going back—did they seem concerned about going back? Yes, they were frightened of going back—these were the five little ones. The one that had a mark across his wrist was a little fellow.
1213. He appeared to be under apprehension of being beaten again? Yes; he said they would be severely beaten when they got back. Some woman stopped them in Bourke-street. She said she had two boys in Randwick Asylum, and she thought one of her boys was among them, but he was not. That was when I was taking them to the station in Bourke-street.
1214. The only marks you noticed on any one of them was on the little boy? Yes; that was through my taking him by the hand leading him to the station. He said it hurt his wrist, for it was very painful, and then he showed me the mark.
1215. You left them at the station and went back to your duty? I did.
1216. Mr. Hurley.] How many boys were in the station altogether after you took back the three? I think about eighteen.
1217. With respect to the mark on the little boy, had the skin been broken? No.
1218. Was it freshly done? Yes; it was about the size of a pencil.
1219. Did he say who had done it? No.
1220. Did they say anything about their treatment by the teachers? No; they said they had been birched for going to this place.
1221. Did they make any complaint about their meals or their treatment? No.
1222. Chairman.] Did they appear to you to be well fed and well cared for? They did not appear very well cared for, I think, some of them.
1223. In what way? They looked shabby—a good many were without boots, and some had no caps on. Whether they had lost them or not I could not say.
1224. Did you ask them how it was they had no boots or caps? I think I made some remark about that, and they said they had left them in escaping from school.
1225. Mr. Hurley.] In your district do you not frequently meet with children similar to them in their appearance? Yes.
1226. Do you not see these children going about without boots and shoes, and without any coverings on their heads? Yes.
1227. So that it would be natural to them to go about in that state? Yes; but that would be in the street near their homes, but these were at a distance from their place.
1228. Might they have left them or thrown them away? Yes.
1229. Chairman.] Did they say in any distinct way why they had run away? Because they had been birched for going into this pond to bathe.
1230. You do not know whether they said anything about food? No.
1231. Whether they had had any food? No.
1232. Did they complain of hunger? I think they said they had had no dinner—that they came out of school between 1 and 2 o'clock.

Police Constable William Charles Graham, examined:—

- Constable W. Graham.
17 Dec., 1879.
1233. Chairman.] You are a constable in the Police Force? Yes.
1234. How long have you been in the Police Force? About two years and a half, or better.
1235. Have you been stationed in Sydney all that time? Partly.
1236. Where were you stationed in October last? I was on duty at Moore Park from 7 in the evening till 3 in the morning.
1237. Do you remember hearing anything about any children from the Destitute Children's Asylum at Randwick? Yes; I observed a number of youngsters about Mr. Smart's place, by Moore Park.
1238. When you first heard of these children they were at Mr. Smart's place? Yes; some other lads at Surry Hills had caught them and taken them to Mr. Smart's place and I found them in his kitchen.
1239. Did anyone send for you? No; when I saw these lads I found that they had taken the children and left them at Mr. Smart's till some policeman came for them.
1240. Did you see Mr. Smart? No; he was not in; Mrs. Smart was.
1241. What did she say? That some boys had brought them and left them there.
1242. Did she say you could go in and see them? Yes.
1243. Where did you find them? In the kitchen.
1244. How many? Three.
1245. Boys or girls? Boys.
1246. About what ages? From 8 to 12.
1247. What did you say to these boys? I asked what they had run away for, and they said they had been beat, or something to that effect, in the Asylum.
1248. Did they appear to be at all frightened to go back? No; not much. They appeared to be hungry and Mrs. Smart gave them some bread which they were eating; some of them had their boots off and I think they were afraid to go back, because they had no boots. They said they had lost them in the bush.
1249. What did you do? I took them and left them at No. 3 Station.
1250. Did you leave them there? Yes.
1251. And went back to your duty? Yes.
1252. During the time the boys were in your care did they make any observations to you about anything? No more than I have said.

1253. Were they quite silent all the way you went from Mr. Smart's house to No. 3 Station? Yes.
1254. Did they cry? No, they were naturally quiet.
1255. When you got to the station did you find other boys there? Yes; eighteen or nineteen.
1256. Do you know who took the boys back to the station? I could not say, but I think some young hand from the depôt. We have some sent round when there is anything special wanted to be done, and I think one was sent up with a dray; I cannot say where he is now.
1257. With regard to the three boys that you found at Mr. Smart's house and took back to No. 3 Station, did they appear as if they had been well cared for; did they appear in good condition and decently clothed? They did indeed; all their appearance was that they were hungry. I gave them some bread at the station, and they ate it.
1258. You never heard the man who took them back to the asylum say anything about them? No.
1259. He is out of the service, I believe? I do not know.
1260. Mr. Burns.] When you saw the boys they were afraid to go back to the asylum solely on account of losing their boots? Yes, I think so; they said they had lost them in the bush.
1261. None of them made any reference to having been ill-treated in the asylum? No.
1262. There was no fear of going back, except on account of losing their boots? Not at all; they were quiet and orderly children.
1263. At what time did Mrs. Smart give them bread? About half-past 9, I think.
1264. Do you know how long they were at the station before they were taken to the asylum? About a quarter of an hour, or from that to half an hour.
1265. So that they would reach the asylum—at about what time, so far as you know? About 11 o'clock.
1266. And they had this food about 9? Yes.
1267. Mr. Garrett.] Did the other children who had been at the station before have anything to eat while there? Yes, there is generally bread at the station, which is left there by Mr. Kidman for any persons who may be brought in, and this is often left. I gave them all some of this bread when they were all together.
1268. Mr. Burns.] Then they had plenty to eat that night? Yes.
1269. Chairman.] You say you have been in the Force about two years and a half? Yes.
1270. Have you frequently been on duty in Moore Park, and in that direction? No, this is the first month I have been on it.
1271. Did you ever meet any children from Randwick before, or have you met with any since? No.
1272. This is the only case where you have had any knowledge of them? Yes.
1273. Did you see anything in this large number of children in Station No. 3—these twenty-one—that distinguished them vitally from other children of the same class? No, nothing that I could see, only that they were all sleepy. A good part of them were asleep when I went in, but when I got the bread they all started up and began to eat.

THURSDAY, 22 JANUARY, 1880.

Present:—

MR. BURNS, | MR. CAMERON,
MR. J. DAVIES.

SIR HENRY PARKES, K.C.M.G., IN THE CHAIR.

The Committee having met in the Committee-room, proceeded thence to the Asylum at Randwick, accompanied by the Clerk of Committees and shorthand-writer.

At the Asylum they were received by the Superintendent, Mr. D. A. Thomas, and matron, Miss M. Fairbairn, by whom they were accompanied in their visitation and inspection of the several portions of the establishment.

The first place visited was the senior boys' school. Here, in answer to questions from the Chairman,

Mr. Edwin Knight stated that he was appointed by the Council of Education as assistant teacher; received his payment from that Board, and had no fees; had previously held a similar appointment at Wollongong; was of opinion that the average capacity of boys in that school was below that of boys of similar age in ordinary schools; some of them were very good boys, who were making satisfactory progress; thought they were competent to answer questions on the first principles of grammar and geography.

Mr. Robert Dunlop was the head master of the school; appointed by the Council of Education, from whom his salary was derived; in addition to salary, had an allowance in lieu of fees; before taking charge of this school—where he had been two years—had been master of the Public School at Jamberoo for five years, and had been fourteen years altogether in the service of the Council of Education; found the boys here a little harder to manage than those of whom he had previously had experience, but thought their average capacity very little, if anything inferior; if the progress made here were not so great as in other schools, he attributed it to the fact that the boys had not home lessons.

After a short examination in grammar, and a reading lesson in the several classes, the Committee proceeded to the girls' school.

Miss Armstrong, the teacher, stated that her previous experience was derived as a pupil teacher at Fort and Cleveland Streets schools; she did not think the girls under her charge were equal in average capacity to the girls she had known in other schools; the greater part could not be relied upon; she supposed from the behaviour of some that they were the children of respectable parents, but had no knowledge of their previous histories; could only judge from their conduct in school.

Leaving the main building the Committee next proceeded to the playground, a large enclosure, paved with asphalt, and surrounded by galvanized iron fencing, about 7 feet high. In the centre of the ground is a spacious covered shed, beneath which a number of infants of both sexes were playing, under the care of an attendant. The Committee next visited the store-room, examined bread, flour, sugar, and other provisions; thence to the upper division of the infants' school.

Miss Nolan, teacher, stated, that there were two divisions of infants of which this was the first; she had previously been a teacher at Fort-street for two months, and at Paddington nine months; in neither of those schools had she had charge of infants, but was of opinion that the infants in the Randwick School

School were of equal average intelligence with those in other schools; had never observed that the children here had a cowed or downcast look, or at all bore the appearance of beaten hounds.

After hearing the children sing and examined in mental arithmetic, the Committee passed to the lower division of the infant school. In reply to questions from the Chairman, Miss Fay, the teacher, said the children in this division were generally between four and five years of age, although some were still younger; she did not think a greater number were kept from school here on account of sickness than in other schools.

The Committee then proceeded to inspect the Catherine Hayes Hospital, where there were 113 inmates, 61 of whom were suffering from ophthalmia, 43 boys and 18 girls. The children were at dinner. Thence through the fever, where there were no patients, to the convalescent ward (girls), where there were 18 patients, the boys' convalescent, 22 patients; then through the dining-halls—boys and girls—the dormitories, bath-rooms, kitchen, laundry, and finally saw the children at dinner.

The Committee then adjourned to the Board-room, when the following witnesses were examined:—

David Arthur Thomas, Esquire, examined:—

- D. A. Thomas, Esq.
22 Jan., 1880.
1274. Chairman.] Would you be good enough to say whether you had any knowledge that the Committee would visit the institution? I was told the Committee intended to visit it.
1275. On this particular day? Certainly not, but that it was intended to pay it a visit.
1276. You have known that ever since you were last before the Committee? Yes.
1277. But you knew nothing about the intended visit of the Committee to-day until the Committee arrived? Nothing whatever.
1278. You were present with the Committee when they were in the dining-rooms to-day? Yes.
1279. When the food was being prepared for the dinner of the children? Yes.
1280. I think the food for both boys and girls consisted of soup, meat, vegetables of two kinds, and bread? Yes.
1281. There appeared to be a sufficient supply of food, and of good quality? Yes.
1282. Was that similar to the daily supply, both in quantity and quality? It was just the daily regular supply.
1283. I suppose it is varied sometimes? Yes, baked meat instead of boiled.
1284. When baked meat is served out, is there any kind of pudding given with it? Yes, there is baked meat on Sundays and Fridays. On Sundays they have pudding, and on Fridays the Catholic children have plain pudding with treacle, because they do not eat meat on Fridays.
1285. Is the bread always as good in the institution as it is to-day? Yes.
1286. Who supplies the bread? Mr. Holmes, of King-street.
1287. Have you never had occasion to complain of it? I had occasion once to complain to the contractor, Mr. Spring, of the quality of the bread. It was then forty-eight hours old, and he said it was not fair then to complain, as it was good when he sent it in.
1288. Who supplies the butcher's meat? Uhde and Company.
1289. Is that generally good? Yes, it is generally good, but I have had occasions to reject it.
1290. If there is any real cause for objection is it sent back? Yes; and some in its stead is obtained from another butcher, as was the case yesterday morning.
1291. At the contractor's expense? Yes.
1292. Is the meat generally as good as it is to-day? Yes.
1293. What is the food supplied for the children's breakfast? The elder children get bread and dripping, sometimes bread and treacle; on Tuesday's and Friday's Pemell's patent meal made into porridge.
1294. Quite a sufficiency of it? Yes.
1295. The children do not complain of not having sufficient? No indeed.
1296. Do the children frequently leave a portion of their food? Sometimes, not frequently.
1297. What food is supplied for the last meal in the day? Bread and treacle or bread and dripping, except on Monday, when it is rice and sugar or rice and treacle.
1298. There are some twigs lying on the table;—are those the identical twigs that were used on the occasion when the boys ran away on the 24th October? Yes, the very same.
1299. They are now dry and hard? Yes; but they were then green and supple.
1300. How many of those twigs were used in giving strokes to the children? Two.
1301. Two tied together? No, two held together. I think in one case, if my memory serves me rightly, there were three. Will the Committee allow me to make an observation respecting the evidence given by Mr. Smart. That gentleman stated that he had been informed that William Smith, Mrs. Bowden's coachman, had seen me beating a boy and had interfered. I have here an affidavit from William Smith altogether denying the statement. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix A.)
1302. Who receives the food from the cook? The boys take it in vessels to the dining-room.
1303. Is there any person in the capacity of porter about the premises? No, only the boys who are apprenticed to the institution. They do all the work of that kind.

Mr. Thomas West examined:—

- Mr. T. West.
22 Jan., 1880.
1304. Chairman.] You have charge of the stores here? Yes.
1305. How long have you been here in charge? Since the 17th of March last.
1306. What are your duties? To issue stores, and to keep an account of the reception of all goods that come into the asylum—clothing, food, and stores of all descriptions.
1307. You receive the stores? Yes.
1308. Have you a book in which you enter the receipt of the goods? Yes, an invoice book.
1309. You also issue the stores to the institution? Yes.
1310. Do you issue them according to a scale? Yes, according to a dietary scale.
1311. Do you enter every quantity that is issued, without respect to the parties to whom it is issued? Yes.
1312. Are the goods generally of good quality? Very good.
1313. Is the sugar good? Yes; in fact that was one of the orders I received from the directors generally when I was engaged; that part of my duty would be to object to anything that came into the store that was not of first-rate quality.
- 1314.

Mr. T. West.

22 Jan., 1880.

1314. Is the tea good? Yes.
 1315. Is the flour good? Yes.
 1316. Is the rice good? Yes.
 1317. The sago? Yes.
 1318. The whole of the stores you think of very fine quality? Yes. I have samples of everything in the store, if the Committee would like to see them.
 1319. You would not receive them except they were of a satisfactory character? No.
 1320. Do you ever have occasion to object to items? Yes. I objected no later than yesterday of the meat to the Superintendent.
 1321. Who is the contractor for the grocery? Mr. James Kidman.
 1322. I understand you to say that upon the whole the goods supplied are of fair quality, and if they are not you object? Yes, but that is seldom.
 1323. What check is there upon the books? The Superintendent examines them every Tuesday morning.
 1324. Do the directors, or any one on the behalf of the directors? Yes, the house committee occasionally look over the books.
 1325. Do you live in the institution? No.
 1326. Where do you live? In the Glebe, Sydney.
 1327. Mr. Burns.] I think you have had a large experience as a purveyor? I have been 40 years connected with such matters.
 1328. You were engaged in the service of the A.S.N. Company? Yes, for 17 years.
 1329. Mr. Davies.] Are the goods supplied to you here of as good quality as those which were supplied to you when you were in the Company's service? Yes; if I were buying for a ship to-morrow I could not obtain better stores.
 1330. Mr. Burns.] Generally the goods you receive here are of a fair quality? Very good. I have not had the slightest cause to object to anything.
 1331. Chairman.] I assume that your duties do not go beyond the store? No.
 1332. Even your observations do not extend beyond the store? No.

---

Mr. Joseph Coulter, examined:—

1333. Chairman.] How long have you been in the service of this institution? Eight years and a half.
 1334. What office did you hold in the first instance? Clerk, when I first came here.
 1335. Are you in the same position now? No.
 1336. What change took place, and when? After a service of eighteen months I was appointed to the position of collector.
 1337. How long did you fill that position? Three years.
 1338. After then? I was then appointed assistant superintendent.
 1339. How long did you act in that capacity? Fifteen months.
 1340. Where you ever storekeeper? Yes; when I was clerk I discharged the duties of storekeeper.
 1341. During the time you have been here has it ever been your particular duty to see the character of the food supplied to the children? Yes, when I was clerk and storekeeper, and also when I was assistant superintendent.
 1342. Have you any means of judging of the character of the food at the present time? No.
 1343. Will you have the goodness to tell the Committee what was the character of the food as a rule when you had an opportunity of seeing it? When I received the goods from the contractors I compared them with the samples. I had also the opportunity of tasting the food when it was prepared by the cook for the children.
 1344. Has there ever been during your connection with the institution a time when complaints were made by the children of the character of the food? I do not remember any.
 1345. Has there ever been any complaint of the quantity supplied? No.
 1346. You have never known any complaint, either from the children or from others, as to the quantity or quality of the food supplied to the children? Never.
 1347. Have you had any opportunity of judging of the treatment of the children—that is, as to the manner in which they are chastised when they behave badly? Yes, when acting-superintendent after the death of Mr. May, and also during my engagement as assistant-superintendent with Mr. Thomas, I had opportunities.
 1348. What is your opinion in that respect; do you think when the children have misbehaved they have been chastised in a humane and considerate manner or not? I think the punishments inflicted, of which I have taken notice, have not been unduly severe; there has been no cruelty.
 1349. You cannot say that you have seen any cases of what you would call cruelty? None whatever—I never did.

Mr.
J. Coulter.

Miss Marian Fairbairn examined:—

1350. Chairman.] You were present, I believe, when we passed through the dining-rooms just now? Yes.
 1351. You saw the food on the tables? Yes.
 1352. Is that a fair sample of the food supplied every day? Yes.
 1353. Is there always as much in quantity? Yes.
 1354. And it is always as good as it is to-day? Yes, it has always been the same.
 1355. Since you have been here as matron, has there ever been any complaint of the quantity or quality of the food? There has never been a complaint.
 1356. What is the food supplied for the girls' breakfast? Bread and treacle and tea.
 1357. The same as to the boys? Yes; and rice twice a week, the same as to the boys.
 1358. They always have quite sufficient? Yes, they always have enough.
 1359. Do they ever leave portions of their food? At times they leave some; if they have not enough more is given.
 1360. If a child asks for more it is generally given? It is given always.

Miss M.
Fairbairn.

22 Jan., 1880.

- Miss M. Fairbairn. 1361. If any portion of the rations—say butcher's meat—were sent back, would you hear of it in some way? Yes.
- 22 Jan., 1880. 1362. Would it come under your notice officially? No.
1363. Is there occasion to object to the quality of the meat often? If the meat is objected to it is returned.
1364. Was the meat objected to yesterday? Yes.
1365. Does that occur often? No, it does not.
1366. Have you known any case of the bread being objected to? No; on one occasion I objected to the bread.
1367. Not lately? Not lately.
1368. In your judgment, is the bread ordinarily as good as it is to-day? It is always as good as it is to-day.

TUESDAY, 29 JUNE, 1880.

Present:—

JOHN FITZGERALD BURNS, Esq.,

JOHN HURLEY (HARTLEY), Esq.

THE HON. SIR HENRY PARKES, K.C.M.G., IN THE CHAIR.

Andrew Garran, Esq., LL.D., examined:—

A. Garran,
Esq., LL.D.
29 June, 1880.

1369. Chairman.] This Committee, Dr. Garran, has been appointed to inquire into the management of the Randwick Asylum, and also as to the expediency of trying the boarding-out system of destitute children. The Committee would be glad to learn whether you have given any attention to the Asylum and its management? I have not given any special attention to the Asylum itself. I have given more attention to the system of boarding-out.
1370. I suppose you have formed some opinion as to the advisability of massing a large number of children in one asylum, as distinguished from the boarding-out system. You are aware that the massing of many hundreds of children in an asylum is known as the barrack system. Perhaps that does not correctly describe it, but that is certainly the plan at Randwick. I think there is something like 800 children there—from six to eight hundred? My first impression was in favour of the asylum system, which is one we naturally drift into with a large number of children; but although the boarding-out system is a little more trouble it is more effectual.
1371. The objections urged against the asylum system—that is having a large number of children trained by the same rules and in the same grooves, as it were—the objections are that they are trained to modes of life quite dissimilar to those they must fall into when they leave the asylum—quite dissimilar to family life? I think the objection is a good one.
1372. You have been invited here more with a view to the second branch of our inquiry—that of the expediency of boarding-out some of our destitute children. You are aware that the boarding-out has been tried here under the superintendence of a few ladies? I am quite aware of it, because Mrs. Garran is one of the originators. It was originated in our house.
1373. Have you any knowledge of what has been done in that way? I can tell you. I have the facts with me. The Committee consists of Lady Allen, Mrs. Jefferis, Mrs. Garran (hon. treasurer), Mrs. Windeyer, Miss Stuart (hon. secretary), and Dr. Renwick. They meet once a fortnight at the office of the Inspector of Charities, who has kindly placed his office at their disposal for their meetings.
1374. I think you said that the movement originated in your house? It did so.
1375. Perhaps you would briefly state how? I have been interested in the system for some years past, having been in communication with some friends of mine in South Australia who send me their reports, and I made some inquiries about it when I was in South Australia. I was introduced to Mr. Read, the Boarding-out Superintendent.
1376. How long ago is it since you visited Adelaide? Two or three years ago. Mr. Read has since communicated with me. He is very anxious to come here. Mr. Clarke, the Secretary of the South Australian Boarding-out Society, and Miss Spence, have frequent communications with me on the subject. I think about two years ago Mrs. Windeyer endeavoured to start a society of this kind, and Mrs. Garran promised to be a member of the committee, and so did Lady Robinson. During the middle of last year circumstances connected with Randwick occupied a good deal of public attention, and Mrs. Jefferis commenced a correspondence in the papers. It was thought a desirable opportunity to make a little beginning, and Mrs. Windeyer, Mrs. Jefferis, and Mrs. Garran resolved to make a beginning at once. They have got some other ladies to join them since, and that is the origin of the movement.
1377. What did they do in the first place with regard to obtaining the children? They were in some difficulty in the first place, not being in connection with any of the institutions, and their movement was not likely to be patronised. They placed themselves in communication with the Inspector of Charities. Their first step—a little mistake on their part—was to intercept some children that were going to be put into the Benevolent Asylum, and as at that time there were great difficulties in getting any child out, they took the liberty of boarding-out these children, which I think was a little mistake on their part. They now, when they get an application, apply to the Benevolent Asylum for a suitable child, and send it up the country, having first secured that a lady visitor shall be within easy reach.
1378. Can you tell the Committee what became of those children who were first boarded-out by those ladies—how are they faring? Very well indeed.
1379. Are they with the persons who first took them? Yes.
1380. Have the ladies reason to believe that the relations between the persons who took them and the children are satisfactory? Highly satisfactory. The clergyman's wife in the neighbourhood is the visitor. Two of the foster-parents have visited Mrs. Garran.
1381. Do you call the persons who take the child the foster-parents? Yes.
1382. I think the name is used in another sense—where they absolutely adopt the children? That is the term used in South Australia: it is a convenient phrase.
1383. Well, how many have you boarded-out altogether? Since commencing operations, at the end of last year, twenty-one children.

A. Garran,
Esq., LL.D.
29 June, 1880.

1384. And are they satisfied with the arrangement in every case? Entirely satisfied.
1385. All doing well? All doing well. Of these, fifteen have been taken direct from the Benevolent Asylum; the other six are paid for in part by their parents. During the next few days the Society expects to send out six more from the Benevolent Asylum.
1386. Where are those children? Eight children are boarded-out in the District of Windellama, near Bungonia; two with Mr. Brooks, storekeeper (Protestant); two with Mrs. Cartwright, postmistress (Protestant); two with Mr. Croker, farmer and grazier (Protestant); and two with Mr. Goodchild, farmer and grazier (Protestant). The lady visitor for all these families is Mrs. Anderson, wife of the Church of England clergyman at Tarago. In the district of Menangle there are three children boarded out—one with Mr. Wood, farmer (Protestant); and two with Mr. Hourn, farmer (Protestant); the lady visitor is Mrs. Onslow. In the district of Tarago, near Bungonia, there are three children—one with Mr. Mallows, labourer (Protestant); and two with Mr. Boreham, farmer (Protestant); lady visitor, Mrs. Anderson, wife of the Church of England clergyman at Tarago. In the district of Bowral there is one child boarded-out, with Mrs. Wilson, dressmaker (Protestant); lady visitor, Mrs. Howard, wife of the Church of England clergyman at Bowral. In the district of Goulburn there are two children placed with Mr. Guest, bootmaker, Ifield, near Goulburn; lady visitor, Mrs. Richard Conolly. In the district of Newtown there is one child (Protestant), placed in Mrs. Jefferis's Cottage Home—no payment is made for her. In the district of Darlington there is one child, placed with Mrs. Reilly, laundress (Roman Catholic); lady visitor, temporarily, Mrs. Jefferis. In the district of Waterloo there are two children boarded out with Mr. McArthur (Protestant); lady visitor, Mrs. Kimberley, wife of the Congregational Minister, Waterloo. All these children, with the exception of one, are paid for at the rate of 5s. per week. One, being under three years of age, has 7s. a week paid for it. The original cost of the outfit for each child is £2 13s.
1387. Does the payment increase or decrease—does it vary in any way? No, it remains the same until they become of age to be of service, when they receive wages, and the pay stops.
1388. What is supposed to be about that age? At thirteen.
1389. What has been the ages of the children that have been boarded-out? From one to eleven years of age.
1390. Do you know whether those children are male or female? Both male and female.
1391. There is no special preference? No. These cases have all turned up by accident. The Committee have never advertised in any way.
1392. Have you had your attention turned to the system as carried out in Scotland and England? I only know what I have read of it in reports, and a book by Mrs. Senior.
1393. There are several books published on the boarding-out system—you have read some of them? Yes.
1394. It has been in existence in Scotland? Very satisfactorily I believe.
1395. You know most of what they have been doing in South Australia? I have paid some attention to them, and I have read the reports from other Colonies also. When the Inspector of Public Charities in Hobart Town was here some time ago I had a long conversation with him. They have no Ladies' Committee, but they employ mostly the stipendiary magistrate as visitor. They place the children mostly in towns. I have his last report.
1396. Can you tell me whether in South Australia the system is purely voluntary? The expenses of the Ladies' Committee are paid by voluntary contributions.
1397. Does the Legislature vote any money? It comes out of the destitute vote: it is in the position I should like to see it in here.
1398. I suppose you can inform the Committee to what extent the system has grown in South Australia, as to the numbers boarded-out, and the success that has attended individual cases? In 1878, 292 children under the age of sixteen were boarded out; 177 of these were under the Boarding-out Society, the remaining 115 being too distant, or for reasons exempt from supervision. 111 children, mostly very young, remained in the Industrial School, Magill, which is used as a receiving-house for destitute children. Of 195 children of whom reports have been received during the year, only eighteen were paid for at 5s. a week; ninety-seven were taken without subsidy, either permanently or for a term of years, and some were receiving wages. In the following June, 1879, the number of boarded-out children had increased, but not the relative proportion of paid for children. It is mentioned in a late South Australian report that in America to a very large extent the children are not paid for. Miss Schuyler, who is actively engaged in the work, expresses an opinion that in a young and prosperous community nearly all destitute children can be absorbed without expense.
1399. You are aware no doubt, as you are acquainted with Mrs. Clarke, that the system has been tried under favourable auspices in South Australia. The population there seems to be very suitable for the experiment, and the officials have been of a character that would take a delight in what they were doing. Miss Clarke, as you must be aware from her connection with the Rowland Hill family, is imbued with a philanthropic spirit, as was her brother the late John Howard Clarke. The whole family were given to that sort of work? The whole family, and the Government take up the work. Mr. Read threw himself thoroughly into the work, and it has been a success from the start.
1400. You must be aware also that objections were raised here that our population is not suited for the successful trying of the boarding-out system, that we are not so homely and domesticated, generally speaking, as they are in South Australia? I have always felt that that objection would not hold water if it was examined into. I was always sure there were enough people here to take all the children. I think the great service the ladies have rendered is that they have broken down that objection by practice; and they have not advertised at all.
1401. Have you made yourself acquainted personally with the character of our rural population? Only within the settled country—Bathurst, Goulburn, Bowral, and so on.
1402. You have been about a good deal in those districts? Yes. There is a sufficient quantity of our population to take all these children.
1403. That is, well-conducted families in humble life, where the mother, from a love of children, and a desire to be useful, would readily take the children and treat them as her own? Quite sufficient, and we have made no attempt yet to find out the extent of our resources by advertising. These applications have turned up of themselves. The public at large do not know that there is such a thing.
1404. I suppose you frequently see these ladies? Constantly.

- A. Garran, Esq., LL.D.
29 June, 1880.
1405. Are they quite as anxious now in the matter as at first? Quite as anxious. I think they ought to be placed in direct communication with some Government officer. It seems to me they are in a false position.
1406. Of course if it is tried on any extensive scale that must be done. Can you inform the Committee of any person who could give evidence derived from practical knowledge of this subject? Not derived from a practical knowledge; not in this Colony.
1407. Mr. Burns.] Do you think that the plan adopted by these benevolent ladies in Sydney could be carried out on a large scale under the direction of the Government? I think so.
1408. And with equal success? I think so. It seems essential to its success on a large scale that there should be an officer specially deputed for this purpose.
1409. They have no legal recognition to enable them to make contracts between the parties who take the children and the children? None whatever.
1410. The whole thing is voluntary? Yes.
1411. How long has it been in existence? It was commenced about the end of last year.
1412. Is it not possible that difficulties will arise from the want of legal authority? I think that they may; and it is because I am anxious to deal with those difficulties if they arise that I desire to see a Government officer appointed, because these are as much State children as those in the asylums, and the State should have its control over them through some State officer. I may say that the children in the Benevolent Asylum are extremely anxious to get put out when the ladies go to select. A life in the country is so much more natural to children.
1413. The great drawback to the Randwick Asylum is the want of home influence? The want of family life. The utmost care on the part of the directors of the institution cannot supply the thing that is essentially wanted.
1414. Would you not still want an asylum like the Randwick Asylum? You must have a Government asylum as a receiving-house, and it would retain those who are not fit to be put out from various causes. It does not follow that you should keep more than is absolutely necessary. If you could plant them in family life I should give the preference to family life.
1415. But the probabilities are that there would be many children that you could not put out? There must be some. Even in Adelaide there are 111—some too young; there are some in the asylums that are quite blind, and some blind in one eye.
1416. Others perhaps suffering from chronic disease? We have had a difficulty in finding a home for one that is lame.
1417. Mr. Hurley.] What asylum do you say they are anxious to get out of? The Benevolent Asylum.
1418. And do you take it that they are not properly dealt with there? No, but they greatly prefer family life.
1419. Are not children generally fond of change? That might be the reason, but I think it is a deeper reason.
1420. Mr. Burns.] Do they find many persons anxious to take the children? They have not found it necessary to advertise for them. If the Government wish to place out all the children the course would be to advertise.
1421. What ages are the children? From one to eleven years.
1422. Chairman.] You are aware that a sum of £400 has been voted for this purpose? I am aware.
1423. Mr. Burns.] They must come to the years of discretion? People will take babies.
1424. Do you not see some danger attending this farming-out system? Unless carefully inspected there is danger no doubt.
1425. Chairman.] This thing is quite distinct from what is understood in England as baby-farming.
1426. Mr. Hurley.] Is this identical with the institution at Ashfield? No connection whatever.
1427. Chairman.] Mr. Jefferis resided for a considerable time in South Australia? Yes, ten or fifteen years.
1428. I see he gave evidence before this Committee, and I observe he gave it as his opinion that the population here was not nearly so suitable as the population of South Australia? Taken as a whole I do not say it is, but I think there is quite a sufficiency of suitable families for all the children you will have to deal with. I have here the last report from Victoria, in an article in the Argus. There are 455 children now boarded-out there.
1429. Do you think our population is of a more scattered character than that of South Australia, and that that would militate against the adoption of this system? I think the circumstances would not prove so favourable here as in South Australia; but that is no reason why the thing should not succeed.
1430. Is it not a peculiar feature of this boarding-out system, among its practical results, that it omits to meet the cases of deformed children, or children of bad constitutions, or children of bad habits. Do they not naturally select the best children? No doubt.
1431. That is, by far the greater majority of those who would be willing to take forlorn children into their homes would take strong healthy children and children of apparently good disposition? They would prefer them. The bulk of the children in the Destitute Asylum are deserted children.
1432. But still the disposition of a child makes itself manifest very early? In some children. But the children of destitute families are not necessarily depraved children.
1433. I am not supposing that. But with regard to children with moral defects, and apparently bad disposition—which some children have—and again, as to physical deformity, or incurable weakness of constitution, would people be willing to have those children? In some cases I think they would.
1434. In my experience I have found very few who would not object to any source of continuous trouble? It is quite possible that a residuum of children would be left upon the State.
1435. That would be a most deplorable case? But that furnishes no reason why you should not adopt the boarding-out system.
1436. I only wish to arrive at what would be the practical result? I think that would be the effect.
1437. Of course if the adoption of this system put the better class of children in a better way of doing in after life, that would be a good thing in itself? That is a gain to the State, as well as to the children.
1438. What I should like to collect from you is what would be the result of the system according to your judgment—how would it operate until it throws the children out into society? I think it would give them the best training for going into society afterwards. They would have been cultivated in their youth to family life, and they would not have that absence of domestic feeling necessary for their physical, mental, mental, and moral training. They could not be worse for it, and in all probability they would be much better.

1439. The chances might be worse if they fell into bad hands, in a remote place, where they would be removed from efficient visitation. They might be subject to continuous hardships, which they would not be in the Asylum? But the general plan is always to have them within the reach of inspection.

1440. I think I heard you read from the report that there were a certain number out of the reach of inspection? In South Australia.

1441. And in this country I think necessarily some children would be placed where inspection would be impossible. Would persons undertake to visit them? The visitors are expected to furnish their reports. They are called upon to fill in forms which are supplied to them.

1442. Mr. Burns.] Children brought up in families have a better chance in after-life than those who remain so long in the Asylum? I think they would.

1443. Of course the system could not be so well carried out in this country where the population is so scattered? You must recollect how far our railways have reached, and the immense area through which they go. The settled district of South Australia is only small compared with this Colony. It is all within 100 miles of the capital.

1444. It would take a large staff of inspectors? It is done by the ladies voluntarily.

1445. But in those remote districts, unless you got some district inspectors, it could not be done from the central office? No, you must trust to the voluntry inspection of the ladies and gentlemen in the district.

1446. Chairman.] I gather from your evidence that you are altogether in favour of it on a larger scale in this Colony? I am entirely so. What I desire to see is a Government officer appointed, with adequate powers.

1447. Do you think Mrs. Jefferis could give us any information? She is now in Adelaide, and will not be back for a fortnight.

A. Garran,
Esq., LL.D.

THURSDAY, 1 JULY, 1880.

Present:—

MR. BURNS, | MR. DILLON,
MR. HURLEY (HARTLEY.)

THE HON. SIR HENRY PARKES, K.C.M.G., IN THE CHAIR.

Harold Maclean, Esq., called in and examined:—

1448. Chairman.] You hold the office of Comptroller General of Prisons, I think? Yes.

1449. What office did you hold prior to your present office? I held the joint offices of Sheriff and Inspector of Prisons.

1450. When did you enter upon the duties of that office first? In August, 1864.

1451. I believe the Reformatory Schools were under your control? They were.

1452. In dealing with the Reformatory Schools, and in your course of observation upon the more juvenile part of the prison population, your attention must have been directed more or less to the care and management of destitute children? Yes; I was led to give more attention to the subject in consequence of having been chairman of a Commission that was appointed to inquire into the condition of the Randwick Asylum some years ago.

1453. When was that? I can hardly fix the date; but I think it was about four years ago.

1454. You are aware that persons who have given much time and study to the subject of the management of destitute children are divided into two large classes—those who are in favour of the Asylum system, and those who are opposed to it,—those who contend that for the sake of economy and efficient management helpless children are best cared for in a large, well organized asylum, and those who, on the other hand, contend that that means of rearing and training them unfits them for the ordinary duties of life, and that it would be better if the children were trained under some system more in accord with family relations and family conditions? Yes, I am aware of that, and of the arguments used by the two classes.

1455. Have you thought of the subject sufficiently to enable you to state the relative merits of the two systems? I have formed the opinion that the domestic or family system is the most effective for the purposes in view, when it can be successfully carried out. I have come to the conclusion that perhaps the best way would be to work the two systems together, making the Asylum system the basis, and from that drafting the children into the domestic system. When I thought of the subject at the time the Commission I refer to was sitting inquiring into the management of the Randwick Asylum, I could not, nor could my colleagues on that Commission, see the way clear to recommend to the Government an immediate departure from the Asylum system.

1456. You are aware, no doubt, that the family system has of late taken the form which is expressed by the term "boarding-out"? Yes.

1457. And that that term is in no way connected with, but is directly opposed to, the system of farming-out children? I am aware of that; it is the boarding-out or domestic system that I refer to.

1458. You are aware, perhaps, that in some parts of the United Kingdom, in Scotland for example, the boarding-out system has proved a great success? I was not aware that it was in any special degree successful in Scotland, but I have heard that the system has been successful in some countries, and I have been told that it has proved successful in Victoria.

1459. Have you had your attention directed to its operation in South Australia? No.

1460. In South Australia, according to the reports of what has been done there—statements made in newspapers, and some evidence given even before this Committee—the community appears well suited for trying the experiment of boarding-out destitute children; there are in that Colony a larger number of old farmers whose habits are very domestic, and family life is more like that in an old settled country than it is in some of the newer colonies; and it has been argued by some that whereas the population of South Australia is remarkably well suited for a successful experiment of boarding-out children, the population of this Colony is not nearly so well suited for it. Can you give the Committee any information on that part of the subject? I can believe there is something in the difference drawn between the two communities. I think that in this community there would be more trouble in establishing a boarding-out system than there would be in the comparatively quiet-living community of South Australia. But I think the system could be as readily adopted here as in Victoria, where it is alleged to be a success.

1461. Have you any matured views as to the expediency of trying the system here? I have not thought much about the matter, except on the occasion I speak of, when a Commission was dealing with the management of the Randwick institution. It hardly comes within the reformatory question, which more officially concerned me.

1462. I am fully aware that it in no way comes within the management of reformatories? What I mean to say is that my attention has not been called to the question except from the circumstance of my having been engaged in the Randwick inquiry.

1463. What were the features of the Randwick Asylum which struck you most whilst you were conducting that inquiry? What struck me most were the defects then existing in the management of the institution, which chiefly arose from the unsatisfactory working of the board of directors as at that time constituted, and from the very defective building arrangements, which, however, have since been greatly remedied.

1464. But that hardly affects the question as to whether children are best cared for in large associations or in small groups. What did you think about the manner in which the children were domiciled, fed, clothed, and trained—all that must have come more or less under your notice? On the whole the Commission was of opinion that the children were well cared for, and that the objects of the arrangements were good; but the management had fallen into ill condition from the reasons I gave, and also from the failing health of the then superintendent.

1465. You must of necessity have thought a good deal on the condition of human beings in a state of confinement, all the prisoners and the children in the reformatory schools being under you; and following that train of thought, will you state to the Committee your impressions as to the effect upon a child being put into association with 600 other children, reared in a large barrack-like place, quite unlike any home of a poor or middle-class family, taking its meals in large classes, playing in large classes, marched to school and marched out even to the playground, constantly under superintendence, and all its movements regulated with great precision and uniformity, which hardly admits of any word being spoken to it except of an official tone and shape—have you ever thought what must be the experience of a child when released from that state of existence, if it has known no other, and contrasted it with what it would be if the child had been placed with a small family and brought up to domestic life? I have always thought it most difficult to train up a child to ordinary domestic life in that way. But it came under my notice at the time we were making inquiry that there were satisfactory reports from a very large number of children who had gone out from the Randwick Asylum. Of course very much depends upon the adaptiveness of the child and its disposition. There can be no question that the domestic way of bringing children up is far better than the asylum system. The asylum can only be looked upon as a necessary convenience for gathering children together. I do not see why they should not be sent from the asylum at the earliest possible periods to a domestic life.

1466. Are you aware that a few ladies are trying, in a small way, the boarding-out system? I have heard of it.

1467. You know nothing about it? No.

1468. But I gather, from what you said just now, that you think it would be well to try the system side by side with the present asylum system? It is my idea to feed the boarding-out system from the asylum.

1469. Will you explain more in detail what you mean? I mean that the children from the asylum should be available for being placed out under the boarding-out system, as soon as arrangements can be made to take them. I would use the asylum as a kind of depot for them.

1470. You are aware that the principle of this boarding-out system is that a child shall be given over to some family who will receive a small payment per week until the child can work, and then the child is to receive wages? Yes.

1471. It is understood that those who take the child are to treat it as their own, and that a system of inspection is to be kept up to see that the conditions are carried out? I am aware of that.

1472. You are aware that in some cases families take children without payment, and finally adopt them? Yes.

1473. Do you think there would be any difficulty in finding families to carry out a system of boarding-out—we should not only require a sufficient number of families, but also in different localities, where the children were placed, a sufficient number of ladies to carry out the system of visitation, which is absolutely necessary? I think families could be found if the organization you indicate is satisfactorily formed. There would be, I think, a sufficient number of families found to carry out the system.

1474. Have you any practical knowledge of the number of children left destitute at an early age in this community,—is it disproportionately large as compared with other communities? No, I have not had my attention drawn to the subject.

1475. Mr. Hurley.] Have you had any experience in working similar institutions in other parts of the world? No.

1476. You have not visited any? I have visited reformatory and industrial schools, but they hardly come within the category of such institutions as you refer to.

1477. Does the "Vernon" come within your official cognizance? No.

Edmund Fosbery, Esq., Inspector General of Police, called in and examined:—

E. Fosbery,
Esq.
1 July, 1880.

1478. Chairman.] How long have you held the office of Inspector-General of Police? Nearly six years.

1479. How long have you been connected with the police force of this country? Eighteen years and a half.

1480. You frequently acted as Inspector General, I believe, before you were appointed to the office, during the absence or illness of the late Captain McLerie? I did.

1481. In the discharge of your duties, and the extent to which you are brought into communication with the public, you must have had many opportunities of observing whether we have a large number of children forsaken, or in some manner left destitute in early life? I have observed a very large number.

1482. Did you hold any office in Victoria previous to coming to this Colony? I was attached to the Victorian Police Force in various positions for ten years.

E. Fosbery,
Esq.
1 July, 1880.

1483. Have you formed any opinion as to whether we have more or fewer, or about the same proportion, of children left destitute compared with Victoria? We have a very great many more children left unprotected here than they had in Victoria when I was there. Their institutions were then in a very early stage.

1484. We are now alluding to children of a tender age? I understand.

1485. Have you had your attention directed at all to the different systems of management adopted in this Colony for children of this class? I have observed it generally; I cannot profess any intimate knowledge of the subject. Before going further I think I ought to say that the reason I consider there were so few children thrown upon the public charity in Victoria, was because there was little or no accommodation for their reception. The very fact of institutions being open for the reception of children tends to increase the number thrown upon them for admission. I think the facility with which children are now got into the institutions here tends greatly to increase the number seeking admission.

1486. Do you mean to convey to the Committee that parents will foist their children upon the Government because of the facilities they have of getting them into institutions, and that otherwise they would take care of the children themselves? Most certainly.

1487. To any great extent? To a very great extent.

1488. Do you think that feeling prevails with parents who can provide for their children? I am satisfied it does. I think they often argue in this way: that their children will be better cared for and reared in some public institution than they will be if they remain at home. That feeling induces quarrels between husbands and wives, and consequent separations and desertions.

1489. Could you explain to the Committee any of the reasons that have conducted you to that conclusion? My reasons are based not only upon my general impression of the matter but also by a large number of individual cases that have come under my notice.

1490. Do any of those cases occur to your mind now? Not individual cases. In many cases papers are forwarded from the Colonial Secretary's Office to the Police for inquiry; and I have found many instances where fathers who have thrown off their responsibilities in regard to their children have been in good circumstances, and they have been induced to throw off those responsibilities because of the inducements held out by our benevolent or charitable institutions.

1491. I think possibly there is some little confusion as to the class of children you have in your mind. You perhaps have in your mind rather vicious children than merely destitute and neglected children. The papers, for example, to which you allude as being referred from the Colonial Secretary's office, nearly always relate to children in the Industrial School. The child is taken to an industrial school because it has taken to a vicious course, or has been found in the company of reputed thieves or prostitutes, or some other perfectly unfriendly condition attended by vicious surroundings; and the class of children the Committee is talking about now are helpless children who are either absolutely orphans or have parents who cannot assist them in any way? In regard to the last class of cases you mention, the cases of children are often referred to me whose admission into a benevolent asylum is desirable on account of their unprotected deserted condition.

1492. Have you had your attention directed at all to the large class of persons who advocate the taking care of these children—one part of whom support the large asylum system, and the other part supporting the grouping of children in small families, as it were—the boarding-out system? Yes, I have considered the question and given evidence on it before a Commission that sat some time ago.

1493. Will you be kind enough to inform the Committee in your own way what you think of the two branches of the subject? I think beyond all doubt that if people could be found whose characters would bear close investigation, whose domestic arrangements could be kept under some close observation, and who were willing to take these children, that the boarding-out system cannot be followed too largely. But in boarding-out children I think the utmost care should be taken not only to supervise them, but also beforehand to test very closely the character and circumstances of the parties who take them.

1494. I infer from the answer you have just given that your opinion is that in principle the boarding-out system is by far the best? Certainly.

1495. Will you explain the reasons why you think so? When the children of our large institutions are first thrown upon the world the change in their circumstances of life are so great—their not having been accustomed to domestic life before—that they are placed at a great disadvantage; and I think if they were reared and trained under what may be termed parental control, and to domestic life, they would be far more likely to grow up useful members of the community.

1496. Has your attention ever been directed to the management of the children in the Benevolent and Randwick Asylums? Not sufficiently to enable me to give an opinion worth having.

1497. Your opinion is a general one as to the inexpediency of massing children together? Certainly.

1498. In other words, you think that a girl who is trained up with 200 or 300 others in an asylum, where the conditions of life resemble those of barracks, would not be likely to make such a good wife or mother as if she had been trained in a family? I think she would be much better trained in a family. The discipline of an asylum is carried out to such a barrack-like extent that a girl trained under it is at a great loss when first thrown upon society.

1499. Your knowledge of our population must be so large now, that your opinion must be of considerable value as to whether we have in our country districts a sufficient number of families to try the boarding-out system? I think there is a sufficient number of families to try and test it. But I doubt whether there are sufficient to meet all the requirements of our destitute children.

1500. Other witnesses who have been examined before the Committee have been of opinion that it would be best to try the boarding-out system without disturbing the present arrangements in the asylums? That is my opinion also.

1501. Mr. Hurley.] You are under the impression that the parents of children thrown upon the State are in many instances lost to all parental affection? Most decidedly; in a great many cases I believe that is the reason children are thrown upon the State.

1502. The persons who abandon their children are persons who see in the distance a better home for them in the institutions now existing in our midst? They think their children will be better provided for. My opinion is that the domestic quarrels in many families are induced by that feeling, and lead to the breaking up of homes; in cases where misfortune stands in the way of a family gaining a sufficient livelihood, the husband and wife agree to separate, leaving their children to be taken care of by the State. A great many members of the Police Force, who have a knowledge of such cases, would bear out what I say.

- E. Fosbery,
Esq.
1 July, 1880.
1503. You think these institutions induce persons to forsake their children? Most decidedly.
1504. Chairman.] There must be a limit to the number of that class of persons? They are very numerous, I am sorry to say.
1505. Mr. Burns.] Have your observations reference more especially to the criminal classes? No; there are many parents, not of the criminal class, who are glad to relieve themselves of their responsibilities in regard to their children.
1506. Chairman.] You do not deny, by anything you have said, that there is a number of children left absolutely destitute, either through their having lost their parents, or through the total poverty of their parents, or the inability of the parents to protect them? I do not deny that there is a large number; but at the same time there is a large number of children thrown upon the State through the fault of their parents; in many instances drunkenness on the part of the parents is the cause of it.
1507. If we were to sum up your evidence on that point in this way—that the larger number of children who go into our benevolent asylums go there through the indifference of parents as to their welfare—should we be rightly summing it up? If you add to their indifference their criminal propensities, their drunkenness and depravity. It is not only the neglect of parents I speak of but their criminal and intemperate habits.
1508. In other words, your evidence on that point amounts to this—that providing asylums or safe homes for children encourages parents of vicious habits to get rid of their responsibilities towards their children? Most decidedly.
1509. You do not wish to qualify that evidence? Not in the least; the facility with which children can be thrown upon the State creates a feeling in the minds of parents that there will not be so much harm in neglecting them, and that after all they will be well cared for by the State.
1510. That is based upon your experience and upon reports of the officers under you? Yes.
1511. I gather from what you have said that you have no hesitation in stating your opinion that it would be well to try this boarding-out system? I think it would be most desirable to do so. I have always been in favour of it, providing proper precautions and restrictions are used. I think inquiry respecting those who are to take the children, prior to their taking them, is not sufficient; but an oversight of the children should be continued after they have been boarded-out.
1512. That is one essential part of the system, that there must be some person of reputation and acknowledged position in society to visit the children, and keep up a communication between the authorities and families with whom the children are placed. Do you think there would be a sufficient number of persons of that description found? To test the system, I think there would be. One point I think should be borne in mind, and that is the indisposition on the part of respectable families to take children from our Benevolent Asylums. People who take such children find extreme difficulty in getting rid of them when they feel disposed to do so. The difficulty of getting rid of a charge they have once imposed upon themselves is a drawback.
1513. In thinking over this subject has it ever occurred to you that the boarding-out system would naturally select all the healthier and better disposed children. For instance, no family would take a child naturally deprived or afflicted with some loathsome disease, or a child naturally vicious—so that the system would of necessity select all the better children, leaving as the residuum the vicious and incapable in the asylums? On the other hand it must be borne in mind that the selection would depend upon the officers of the institution, and they would not be averse to getting rid of a bad child.
1514. But families would be averse to taking such children, and would be glad to get rid of them? They would not perhaps find it so easy to get rid of them.

APPENDIX.

[To the evidence of D. A. Thomas, Esq., 22 January, 1880.]

(A.)

I, WILLIAM SMITH, of Newlands, near Parramatta, in the Colony of New South Wales, groom, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:—

That I never at any time stated that whilst on a visit with the late Mr. T. K. Bowden, at the residence of Mr. D. A. Thomas, of Randwick, I saw Mr. Thomas punishing a boy belonging to the Randwick Institution, and that I prevented him, the report to that effect being utterly false and without foundation; and as a matter of fact I never at any time saw Mr. Thomas punishing any of the boys belonging to the Asylum, nor did I see any other officer or attendant do so during the fortnight I resided there. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales to substitute declarations in lieu thereof and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths and affidavits."

Declared at Parramatta, this fifth day of January, in the year }
one thousand eight hundred and eighty, before me,—

WILLIAM SMITH.

(REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDED 30 JUNE, 1879.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Superintendent N.S.S. "Vernon" to The Under Secretary, Colonial Secretary's Department.

Sir,

N.S.S. "Vernon," 17 July, 1879.

I have the honor to submit, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, the annual report of this institution for the year ended 30th June, 1879. Report for past twelve months.

The health of the boys has again been most satisfactory, scarcely any sickness of importance having occurred. The few cases that have arisen have been principally confined to new comers, who usually, through constant neglect, habits of uncleanness, and exposure of nights to the inclemency of the weather, come on board in an emaciated and sickly condition, and are frequently afflicted with one or other of the numerous forms of skin disease. The regular habits on board, with the bodily exercise enforced by the system of drilling, added to the effective treatment of the visiting surgeon, soon work a change in their condition, both physically and morally. At the present time we enjoy a clean bill of health, and this, with 112 boys recruited from the class I have before referred to, must be gratifying. State of health.

During the year, when the weather permitted on Sundays, the well-behaved boys were landed and marched to their respective places of worship in Balmain, under the charge of their officers—the Protestants to St. Mary's, Church of England, and the Roman Catholics to St. Augustine's, at the whole of which churches sittings have been placed at our disposal by the respective ministers. When, however, through the inclemency of the weather, we were prevented from landing, the Church of England service was read by myself to the Protestants. Landing for Church.

Table 12 contains a record of the number of visits paid by the clergymen and Sunday-school teachers to the vessel, and it will be noticed that a marked improvement has taken place in this particular since my report of last year, the visits having increased 100 per cent. The Rev. Mr. Tress now attends every Tuesday, and some ladies and gentlemen, members of his congregation, every Sunday, for the instruction of the Protestant lads, while the Roman Catholic portion of the inmates are attended every Thursday by the Rev. G. F. Dillon. Visits of clergymen and Sunday-school teachers.

Too much praise cannot be given to these ladies and gentlemen for their benevolent exertions; a healthy feeling is created among the boys, and they are rendered much more amenable to discipline in noticing the interest taken in their behaviour by the religious instructors who regularly come on board, and to whom I now beg to offer my thanks for their kindness.

Table 13 gives a general view of their educational attainments. The school is conducted on the half-time principle, and the teacher holds a certificate under the Council of Education, whose inspectors visit and report upon the institution at regular intervals. It must be borne in mind that most of the children enter this school entirely ignorant of the most simple rudiments of education, and a glance at the table will show the very backward state on admission. The teacher does the best for those under him, but under the peculiar disadvantages it is difficult to accomplish all that could be wished for; still the boys have been orderly and attentive in school and made fair progress. A copy of the schoolmaster's report is appended. Educational attainments.

The system of drilling initiated on board last year has proved successful in its results; the increased smartness and improved bearing of the crew bear testimony to the value of this form of instruction, which has been based as far as practicable on the system obtaining in the training ships of the mother country. The exercises taught comprise gun, musketry, cutlass, and company drills, reefing, furling, bending and making sail, manning yards, splicing, knotting, and all the other duties appertaining to the profession of a seaman; and nautical men will appreciate the smartness displayed by these little boys when they learn that we have loosed, shifted, bent, and made sail under 12 minutes. As we are not permitted to send boys in vessels, except those owned in New South Wales, it is somewhat difficult to find berths at sea for all who wish to go, and many therefore are apprenticed in various parts of the colony as general servants, farmers, &c.; but for the short time they remain in the institution (in the majority of cases only twelve months) a better course of training could hardly be adopted, as it gives them a cheerful intelligent appearance and improves their physique, conducing to that desirable result the mens sana in corpore sano. Drilling.

Table 1 will show the admissions and discharges throughout the year. The number of fresh com-mittals only number 61, and of these 8 were under the age of six years, who have been sent to the Benevolent Asylum and the Industrial School for Girls, Biloela, leaving 53 fresh admissions—11 less than last year. Admissions and discharges.

Did

Number of boys in New South Wales should be sent here.

Did this reduction in the number sent here result from a proportionate reduction in the number of boys who run about the streets in a neglected and wild condition, the colony would have cause for congratulation; unfortunately the reverse is the case. At no time has the increase in the number of dirty, unfortunate children, running about ragged and barefooted, and whom it would only be wise to the community as well as a charity to the boys to place in this institution, been more apparent, and yet they are suffered to wander about—consorting with all kinds of bad characters, stealing whenever they get a chance, and annoying and pestering respectable persons. Hundreds of boys within the last few years have been brought up to the two City Police Courts, charged with different offences—such as stealing, tossing, throwing stones, &c., the natural result of associating with bad characters, and who should have been sent here before being permitted to fall into habits of vice. The Commissioners appointed to inquire into the working of the various charitable institutions some few years ago had forcibly brought under their notice the great number of neglected and destitute children who ought to have been sent here, and, in the course of the evidence taken by them, elicited the opinions of several competent authorities on this subject, that the reasons were—that the Industrial Schools Act was not sufficiently stringent in its provisions, and, secondly, that certain of the magistrates had a dislike to sending children here, in consequence of their mistaking the nature of the institution and regarding the ship as a prison. Thus Captain M'Lerie (late Inspector General of Police) says there is a laxity on the part of the Bench, a desire to let boys have another chance when they are brought up before them—that is to say, another chance of going to the bad—and that excuses are too readily accepted as genuine. The present Inspector General, Mr. Fosbery, held the same views, and thought “the operation of the law should take a wider scope, and includes more neglected children than it does now, as a pretence of selling oranges, matches, about the streets enables a child to evade the Act, and the consequence is that numbers of neglected children are wandering about Sydney. The Act should be interpreted in its broadest sense, and all neglected children taken charge of. At first the Act had a marked good effect; but parents seeing that magistrates would not send children to the school unless under the strict letter of the law, ceased to care for the law.” His opinion is that if there were 990 children on the “Vernon” there would still be children to be dealt with.

Captain M'Lerie.

Mr. Fosbery.

Another witness examined on this subject gives it as his opinion, based upon personal experience, that many magistrates seemed to think that, instead of its being an attempt to reclaim the children, the sending them to the industrial school was an attempt at punishment, and the parents holding the same view made all manner of excuses for the children, inducing the magistrates to let them off, when, if they had been sent to the “Vernon” when they first went wrong, there would have been a greater chance of reforming them.

Excuses too readily accepted.

The opinion of the Commission is as follows:—“We are of opinion that the Industrial Schools Act should be amended by more clearly defining the circumstances under which children may be dealt with under its provisions. The object of the Legislature was evidently to rescue children from a life of vagrancy and neglect. As the Act stands at present, any sort of frivolous pretence of an occupation ostensibly carried on by a child is made an excuse for an evasion of the law, and too often accepted by magistrates, who, apparently forgetful that the object of the Act is the reformation and not the punishment of the child, shrink from putting it in force, as if desirous of avoiding the imputation of harshness and severity. If the Act were amended by providing, as in the English Act, that the selling or offering anything for sale in the street should be simply regarded as a pretext and a cloak for begging, the law could not thus be defeated by well-meant but erroneous decisions upon it. In consequence of the mistaken view of their duty, taken by some magistrates, witnesses most competent to form an opinion inform us that the Industrial Schools Act, though for some time most beneficial in its operation, has in a large degree ceased to be effective for good. When first enforced, parents became alive to the necessity of looking after their children, kept them better clad, and made, at all events (says Mr. Fosbery) an outward show of caring for them, to prevent their being seized by the police. These good effects have unfortunately disappeared since negligent and bad parents have come to learn that magistrates play into their hands, by refusing to send children to an industrial school unless they feel themselves compelled on the strictest interpretation of the letter of the law. The mere following of street occupations by a child who ought to be at school should of itself bring it within the provisions of the law, instead of being accepted as an excuse for its evasion. What is sometimes spoken of in such cases as giving the child another chance simply means, in nine cases out of ten, another chance of getting into mischief and falling into crime. Whatever doubts there may be in the minds of some as to the policy of introducing a compulsory system of education, there surely can be none as to the propriety of rescuing from their fate those who prima facie by their occupation are entering upon the career of paupers and vagrants, perhaps to end in criminality still more expensive and injurious to the country.”

The Act at present in force in this colony provides that—Every child whose “age in the opinion of the person apprehending or ordering the apprehension, as hereinafter mentioned, shall not exceed sixteen years, who shall be found lodging, living, residing, or wandering about in company with reputed thieves, or with persons who have no lawful visible means of support, or with common prostitutes, whether such reputed thieves, persons, or prostitutes, be the parents or guardians of such child or not, or who shall have no visible lawful means of support, or who shall have no fixed place of abode, or who shall be found begging about any street, highway, court, passage, or other public place, or who shall be found habitually wandering or loitering about the streets, highways, or public places, in no ostensible lawful occupation, or who shall be found sleeping in the open air, may be apprehended by any constable, or peace officer, or by any other person, and taken before any two Justices of the Peace, to be dealt with as hereinafter is directed.”

The Industrial Schools Act in force in the United Kingdom is of a somewhat more stringent nature; the principal schools afloat are the “Cumberland,” situated at Garelock, containing 390 boys; the “Endeavour,” with 149 inmates; the “Formidable,” moored at Bristol, 315 boys; the “Gibraltar,” at Belfast, contains 250 boys; the “Havannah,” at Cardiff, 100 lads; the “Mars,” on the Tay, 305 boys; the “Southampton,” at Hull, 220 boys; and the “Wellesley,” on the Tyne, 278 inmates;—and boys are sent to these establishments under the Industrial Schools Act of 1866; 29 and 30 Vict., cap. 118, sec. 14, is as follows:—

The English and Scotch Industrial Schools Act.

“(1.) That is found begging or receiving alms whether actually or under the pretext of selling or offering for sale or being in any street or public place for the purpose of so begging or receiving alms.

“(2.)

"(2.) That is found wandering and not having any home or settled place of abode, or proper guardianship or visible means of subsistence.

"(3.) That is found destitute, either being an orphan, or having a surviving parent who is undergoing penal servitude or imprisonment.

"(4.) That frequents the company of reputed thieves."

The justice or magistrate before whom a child is brought as coming within one of these descriptions, if satisfied on inquiry of the fact may order him to be sent to a certified industrial school.

Section 15 of the same Act deals with another class who are eligible for admission into these schools: "Where a child apparently under the age of twelve years is charged before two justices or a magistrate with an offence punishable by imprisonment or a less punishment, but has not been in England convicted of felony, or in Scotland of theft, and the child ought, in the opinion of the justices or a magistrate (regard being had to his age and to the circumstances of the case) to be dealt with under this Act, the justices or magistrate may order him to be sent to a certified industrial school."

The principal points of difference between the English Act and that of this Colony will at once be perceived, and if that now in force here were to be amended so as to include within its scope children coming under the description mentioned in the Act I have above quoted, much good would result both to the children themselves and the public at large.

A perusal of table 5 will show particulars relating to parentage of boys who have entered the institution during the past twelve months; and table 6 gives the police courts from which they have been sent.

It will be observed that only the small number of twenty-eight has been received from the two Sydney Police Courts—fifteen from the Central Police, and thirteen from the Water Police, and this notwithstanding the fact, sufficiently obvious to every one acquainted with the metropolis, that the streets are infested with ragged, neglected boys, having no one to care much about what becomes of them, and who are rapidly merging into the "larrikin" form, and proving a source of danger and annoyance to the community. In the sister Colony of Victoria a more vigorous effort seems to have been made to put the law into force, and to rescue these young children from a life of crime. By the help of reports kindly furnished me by the Victorian authorities I am enabled to give a comparative statement of the total admissions into industrial schools of the two Colonies for two years—Victoria, 1,083, of which Melbourne contributed 461. New South Wales for the same period under 250, of which Sydney is credited with a little over 100.

Table 8 gives the number of boys apprenticed for the year—nineteen having gone for sailors, four as farmers, twenty-seven for general work, one to station work, and one as a baker; none have gone to any of the trades taught on board, and it does not seem at all probable that any master tradesman will take them, judging from the tenor of replies received to my applications.

Table 11 shows the number apprenticed since the inauguration in 1867, and particulars of their conduct, as far as can be ascertained with the insufficient means of supervision at command. 532 have been apprenticed out, of which number 465 are either out of their time or are reported by their masters as behaving satisfactorily. This per-centage compares favourably with statistics of a like nature of kindred institutions. 30 have been reported upon unfavourably, or have run away from their service; and of 32 no reports have been received. It is not altogether the fault of the boys in many instances where an unfavourable character has been given. Many persons, deserving in other respects, are not capable of managing children, and others, although coming well recommended, prove themselves unfit to be entrusted with their care. Several instances have occurred of boys coming to me at the expiration of their term of apprenticeship and complaining that their masters have refused to pay them their wages—the accumulation in some cases of five and six years; and it is only by threatening them with an appeal to the law that I have been enabled to get the boys their due. I had to mention similar instances in my report of last year, and think now as then, that it would act beneficially were an inspector to be appointed, whose duty it should be to make visits to the children apprenticed out from the various charitable institutions, and inquire into the relations existing between employer and apprentice. At present the only attempt at supervision is by sending a circular occasionally, which cannot be considered completely satisfactory. Were such an officer appointed it would ensure the children receiving fair play, and prevent so many cases of desertion, &c.

The Dublin Society has an inspector to visit each apprentice twice per annum, and to keep up occasional intercourse by letter; and in the report of Mr. Greig, Inspector of the Poor for Edinburgh, we are informed that a similar official has been appointed whose sole duty it is to supervise these children after leaving the institutions. This same matter was freely ventilated before the Charities Commission of this Colony, and many witnesses of experience in the matter, among them the Misses Hill, who perhaps have devoted as much time to the whole question of neglected children as any one else, all advocate the necessity of supervision after leaving the schools. The Commissioners thus ably put it in their report, page 57:—"Whatever reforms may be effected in our reformatory, industrial, and other schools for the orphaned and destitute, we feel convinced that their machinery for restoring the children to the ranks of honest labour, and securing their welfare in after life, will be far from complete if some provision is not made for their supervision after they have left our institutions. The evidence of all experienced in reformatory work strongly urges the necessity of such after supervision."

From the many reports of masters of lads I quote extracts from a few which will give an idea of the success attained by the ship's training.

Mr. John Willis, of the Singleton Argus, writes:—"I have much pleasure in speaking as highly as ever of the conduct of my apprentice, who is a sharp, intelligent, and very obedient lad and promises to become a first-rate tradesman. He will have much cause for thankfulness that he was rescued from the streets, and placed in the way of earning a respectable livelihood through the instrumentality of the 'Vernon.'"

The Rev. Mr. Tress (C.E.), of Balmain, reports as follows:—"I beg to state that D.G. has been exceedingly well conducted since he has been with me, and has in every way given satisfaction."

The Rev. G. F. Dillon (R.C.) of Balmain, reports:—"His conduct is all that I could possibly desire. He is well disciplined, very clean and neat in his habits, and harder working of his class than any boy I ever saw before, and is moreover truthful and strictly honest. I now trust him with my banking transactions. As he is one of the children for which you are entirely responsible, I can safely say he does your training every credit, and his case confirms me in the belief that the longer lads are left with you the better for themselves and their future welfare."

The

- Conduct of F.G. The Rev. Mr. Sheppard (C.E.), of Berrima, writes :—" F. has conducted himself to my satisfaction. He is a sharp and willing lad—so every one thinks—with the making of a good man in him. I shall be glad to send you, if you desire it, a monthly report of his behaviour."
- Conduct of F.P. The Rev. Mr. Pain (C.E.), of Cobbitty, writes :—" I have much pleasure in saying that my apprentice has conducted himself very well indeed."
- Conduct of F.H. Mr. James Dundas, of Robertson, thus cheerfully writes :—" I have much pleasure in being able to give you a most favourable account of my apprentice; he is willing and obedient, and I have also found him honest and trustworthy."
- Conduct of W.R. Mr. James Cook reports :—" My apprentice is a good boy, and doing very well. I can assure you I would not wish for a better boy."
- Conduct of T.L. Mr. J. Staggs, of Burrawang, thus writes of a boy who served his apprenticeship with him, and is now working for himself :—" I beg to inform you that he has behaved himself well, and is now living in this district in respect."
- Conduct of T.O'D. and H.S. Mr. Nicholson, J.P., of Maitland, reports :—" I have the honor to inform you that my apprentices T.O'D. and H.S. still continue to give me every satisfaction."
- Conduct of G.A. Mr. Geo. Hill, J.P., of Sydney, reports :—" He has given me every satisfaction during his apprenticeship. I have always put his wages in the Savings' Bank at interest, and when he retires from my service in June, 1879, he will have over £50 to his credit."
- Conduct of J.C. Mr. M. Fitzhardinge writes :—" My apprentice has conducted himself very well indeed since he has been with me; he is very obedient and has been a most useful respectful boy."
- Conduct of A.P. Mr. C. D. Fenwick, of Europambela, thus speaks of his apprentice after having him 6 years :—" He has conducted himself in a satisfactory manner; in all probability after his time expires he will engage on the station; he is a very useful boy in every way."
- Conduct of W.A. Mr. P. Mulry, of Menangle :—" He is getting to be a good and useful boy, and during the time he has been with me he has conducted himself to my satisfaction."
- Conduct of I.P. Mr. Geo. Stratford, of West Maitland, says :—" I have much pleasure in informing you that the boy's conduct up to the present time is very good."
- Conduct of W.L. whose term of apprenticeship has now expired. Mr. D. McKinnon reports :—" I am much pleased to tell you that his conduct has given me every satisfaction. As you are aware his time is now up, but he has no inclination for leaving, so I will keep him on at an advance in his wages. His mother wants him to go to Sydney but he won't go."
- Conduct of J.C. Mr. W. C. Browne, M.P., reports :—" I beg to inform you that my apprentice has during the term of his apprenticeship conducted himself to the utmost of my satisfaction, and will I am satisfied become a very useful member of society."
- Conduct of H.S. Hon. Mr. Lackey, M.P. :—" I am well pleased with the lad I had from the 'Vernon.' He has grown very much, conducts himself very well, dresses very respectably. I have allowed him £20 per annum during the last 18 months, and I believe he will make a useful man."
- Conduct of W.B. Mr. P. Fagan, of Sussex-street, reports :—" I am happy to be able to report most favorably of my apprentice. He has conducted himself to my entire satisfaction."
- Conduct of A.C. Mr. J. Wolfe, of Maitland, writes :—" I have much pleasure in stating that my apprentice conducts himself very well during the time he has been with me."
- Revenue collected. I have quoted these reports as I consider they prove practically the good done on the ship, and I have numbers of other letters on board, written to me from masters within the last few weeks, in a similar strain. Table 14 shows the revenue collected during the year.
- Greater sum enforced from relatives than any preceding year. The yacht "Iris" had some repairs executed for which a sum of £5 was paid, and contributions from parents realised £173 6s. 6d., a large increase upon any preceding year. It is a matter of considerable difficulty to force these people to pay, and only a sense of public duty has enabled me to put up with the many annoyances and loss of time to which I have been subjected in compelling them to contribute. When it is ascertained that persons having children here are in a position to pay, letters are written requesting them to do so. As a rule no notice is taken of this. Informations are then laid against them by myself before a Magistrate; evidence has to be collected, in which I am materially assisted by the police; summonses issued and the case is heard; perhaps an order is made for the payment of from 2s. to 7s. 6d. per week. This order is in a large number of instances wholly disregarded, as these people fully understand the difficulty there is in enforcing payment. Further proceedings are then taken for disobeying an order of Court, but unless the same magistrates attend to hear the case who made the order, perhaps some months back, the case is quashed.
- Example of mode of compelling payment. It will be thus seen that a large amount of time is wasted to no purpose. Many cases similar in detail to the above example have lately occurred. In one instance a man, who I am informed is in comfortable circumstances, receiving over £4 per week, has a step-son on board; I naturally thought this was a fit case for a summons to be issued. An information was laid and the magistrates who heard the case evidently took the same view as they adjudged him to pay 7s. 6d. per week; this, however, he neglected to do, and for the reasons I have before stated, when proceedings were commenced to enforce payment, the case was thrown out. He now owes upwards of £10. The defect of the law for the recovery of these payments was seen as long back as 1873, when a resolution was passed by the Charities Commission that the Act should more effectually provide for the recovery of payments to be made by parents for the support of their children when placed in an industrial school. In their Report they thus sum up the matter :—" Though our Act provides for the payment by parents of the maintenance of their children in industrial schools, the provisions for the recovery of these contributions are defective and require amendment, making them more stringent and effective. In Victoria a list of defaulting parents is regularly published in the Gazette, and has a beneficial effect in promoting regularity of payment, and we think the same course might be adopted here with advantage."
- Time wasted to no purpose. Table 15 gives the amount expended during the past twelve months, and it will be seen that a very great diminution in the cost per head has taken place.
- Recommendation of Charities Commission.

This includes painting and ordinary repairs, and after deducting the revenue collected, such as payments made by parents, the net cost per head is £26 16s. 9d., a reduction of over £9 from last year. This sum would have been still further reduced had more boys been sent here, as little further increase to the present staff would have been needed to look after the vessel's complement of 260. However, taking the different surroundings into consideration, the increased charge for clothing, &c., on the prices paid in the mother country, we do not compare very unfavourably with kindred institutions in this respect:—

"Vernon," New South Wales, 115 boys ... ..	£26 0 0	Comparative cost per head "Vernon" and Home Societies.
"Cornwall," England, 238 boys ... ..	23 5 0
"Endeavour," England, 150 boys ... ..	24 0 0
"Warspite," England, 200 boys ... ..	26 17 0

Some other ships cost much less, notably the "Exmouth," one of the most excellently managed of its class, which costs a fraction under £20, but then it has 430 boys on board. The pecuniary cost is, however, a very insignificant matter, as compared to the great gain to the State by the conversion into respectable members of society of boys, who, if left to themselves would most probably go from bad to worse, and eventually become habitués of our gaols, costing the country hundreds of pounds during a life-long career of crime.

Good should not be estimated by cost of maintenance for inmate.

The Government Inspector of certified Reformatories and Industrial Schools in England says that there has been a reduction of 26 per cent. in two years in the number of juvenile offenders committed to prison, and the reason of this is obvious. What the prison, with its shut-up cells, its high walls, fails to accomplish, these schools have, by other and more kindly means, effected. Firmness with kindness has inspired confidence, and the lads have been led to respect those whose simple desire is to make them happier and better men. That the boys do entertain feelings of gratitude is sufficiently apparent from the kindly bright tone prevailing the numerous letters received by myself and officers from boys long since passed out of the ship; and it will not perhaps be out of place if I quote one or two which I have recently received out of a large number, all of the same nature:—

Dear Sir,

It is with great pleasure that I take up my pen to write to you, but it is not through my forgetting you, for I am constantly thinking of you. Dear Sir, I enclose a portrait for yourself, if you can put it in your album, and I will also send you one of my own when I have it taken. I hope to be in Sydney when the great Exhibition is on, and I shall then come to see you. I have written two letters to you lately, but not having received any answer to them I suppose you could not have got them; please remember me to all my friends on board, and especially to Mr. Plummer and Mr. Gorman, and tell them that I will write to them soon. I should very much like to see the ship again, as it must be very much altered, and I hope you will have some very good music by the time I get there, as I have heard that you have got a brass band on board now.

Dear Sir,

I received your most kind and long expected letter a short time ago, and was glad to hear from you. I wrote you a letter about six months ago, but did not receive any answer; I should like to know whether you got it or not. I express my thanks to you very much for sending me to such a nice and comfortable home; I like it very well; my work is as simple as A B C; there are plenty of Vernon boys up here—Marlow, Derry, Manson, Bethel, Smith, rose, Sempkin, Macarthur, George Cook, and many others. I should like you to write a little often. I hope you will write soon. I have no more to say at present.

Over two years from the ship.

I remain, &c.,

My dear Sir,

I now take the pleasure of writing to you hoping to find you quite well, as I'm happy to say I am all right myself at present. We have had a nice rain after the dry season, which makes everything nice and fresh. And how his Mr. Gorman and Mr. Kemp and all my shipmates at present. Answer this letter as soon as you can. I like my master very well; he is very kind to me; I could not wish to have a better master than him. I do not think I have any more to say at present.

My dear Captain,

I write you these few lines, hoping to find you in good health, as I am myself, and I hop all the men are in good health, and if you see M'Gelery, would you tell him that I would like to see him; and tell Brown to write to me and I will write to him, or anybody that will write to me; and I am getting on with any work, and I like my place. And if you will ask Mr. Mason the address he put on the letter he sent me, he will tell you. And I hop the boys that have gone to see will like it. And I like balmain, and the first holdiday I will try to come and spend the day with you. And thanks to Hinason for the nice letter he sent to me. This is all that I have got to say at present.

My dear Sir,

I write you these few lines, hoping to find you in good health, as it leaves me at present. I like my place very well. I have got plenty of clothing. You was very kind to me when I was on Board. I have got a very nice master. He said that he will do some good for me when I have done my time. I have plenty of ridding, and I have a nice horse to ride. I have not got much work to do—only to look after the cows and sheep. I am learning to drive bullocks. The men said that I am getting on very well with my driving. We are getting on with a corn-shed at present. Remend me to all the Boyes. I have got no more to say at present.

I received your kind and welcome letter, and was glad to hear from you. I am all right. I am as comfortable as if I were at home, and do not think I have any more to say at present. I remain your dearest friend,—P.M. And my master and I will be down at the Exhibition with the beatiful entires, and will come on board to see you all. I hope all the Vernon boys are all well, espeley you. Answer this letter as soon as possible.

My dear Friend,

I just take the pleasure of writing to you, hoping to find you as well as this leaves me at present. I hope that Willie is getting on well. I hope that you have no trouble with him. You was very good to me time I was on board. I like my master well. He is very good to me. I did learn a lot time I was on board of ship. I am getting learnt to read and write. I get lessons every night. I go to church twice, and Sund.-school every Sunday. I have no more news this time.

Another point I would wish to allude to is the evil occurring in the majority of cases from the discharge of boys to their "friends." Very few of them do well, being again thrown among their old vicious associates. The good effected on board is speedily undone, and the boys relapse into their old evil ways. People, meaning well no doubt, are often induced to sign petitions for the release of children, in the greater number of instances knowing nothing of the merits of the case, for they would hardly do so were they aware of the absolute injury caused by the boy's release. The Rev. Sydney Turner, who is a recognized recognized authority on matters connected with industrial schools in England, says: "Undoubtedly, to send a boy back to his bad relatives, and place him among the same depraving influences as have already corrupted him, must be to risk, if not to insure, the undoing of whatever good has been done, and to waste the money spent upon the process." The authorities of a large school situated in Church-lane, Limehouse, England, containing between 400 and 500 children, say in their report: "It is a melancholy fact that too often such parents are their children's worst enemies, and the guardians have acted wisely in recognizing it, and in diminishing to the utmost any opportunity for the exercise of their evil influence." Only a short time back I received intelligence that three boys, discharged to the care of their relatives, within a few days of each other were, and are now, undergoing imprisonment in Maitland Gaol for larceny. These lads, if apprenticed at a distance from their old haunts, would probably have been now earning an honest livelihood. I think that when children are sent here they should not be allowed to be discharged to their parents who have already proved themselves incompetent to look after them. In many instances the boy released has, in a very short space of time, again been charged with crime, which he would not have had the chance nor the inclination to commit if allowed to pass the ordinary time on board and be apprenticed in the usual way. As a nursery for seamen the ship has practically proved her utility. During the twelve months nineteen have gone to sea, and many more who wished to would have gone had they been eligible. The age at which boys who have been twelve months on board have to be apprenticed from here (twelve years) is much too young for a sailor's life, and no ship-owner or captain will take them at that age. It follows that many lads who wish to go to sea have, for this reason, to be apprenticed up the country. At home lads are kept in the "Warspite" and other training-ships from 18 months to 2 years, and must not be under 15. The Secretary of the Marine Society, in writing to me on the subject, says:—"I quite agree with you that the age is much too young"; and other gentlemen connected with training ships at home hold the same view inter alia.

Captain Bouchier, R.N., in command of the "Exmouth," where there are over 400 boys, writes to me: "I am puzzled to know how you can manage with boys so young; we do not consider them trained under 18 months." His boys do not go to sea under 15. Considering this, the number (19) we have sent in 12 months must be looked upon as a good total; of these one boy is now on a voyage to London. What his employer thinks of him can be best seen from the following letter:—

Sir,

In answer to your inquiry I cannot do better than refer you to Captain Jackson's report, which I now beg to enclose. I gladly add my testimony to what Captain Jackson says regarding V—, as I have had frequent opportunities of speaking to and encouraging the lad, and have every reason to think that his future career at sea will reflect credit on his training on board the "Vernon."

Macquarie-place, Sydney.

I have, &c.,
F. H. DANGAR."

The captain of the ship writes:—"I take pleasure in informing you he is all that I could wish, having found him an honest, industrious boy.—Yours &c., JOHN JACKSON."

The idea occurred to me that much good would result to every one concerned, and a satisfactory outlet found for such lads who were imbued with a nautical spirit, and were old enough, if arrangements could be effected whereby the Australian Steam Navigation Company could take them. Accordingly I communicated, in February last, with Captain Trouton, and that gentleman very kindly offered to try the experiment. In his letter, dated 3rd March last, he puts the matter thus:—"The subject of your communication has for a long time had my favourable opinion. I have been, however, prevented from committing myself to your proposal for the consideration that our wharfs are unfortunately in such close proximity to the streets of the city as to afford favourable opportunities for the lads to frequent their old haunts, and resume former acquaintances. I am however disposed to give the subject a trial, and will therefore call upon you at an early date to make arrangements accordingly. I think by placing them in vessels that do not remain at our wharfs a very great length of time I may overcome the difficulties I have hitherto anticipated."

Three boys were accordingly, under the sanction of the Government, apprenticed, and I am glad to say that the trial has been attended with the happiest results; the success attained can be best appreciated from a perusal of the following letter received by me last week, and which I venture to give at length:—

A.S.N. Co., Sydney, 7 July, 1879.

Sir,

In reply to your inquiry of the 1st instant as to the conduct of the three lads you apprenticed to this Company as seamen, it gives me extreme pleasure to write, that the reports I have received from their respective commanders are highly favourable; their conduct without exception is praiseworthy, they are diligent, respectful, and obedient; they appear to like their profession, and I am glad to observe a mutual attachment growing up between officer and boy, and a care for the latter's comforts and welfare by the former. As you are aware that I have had some diffidence in receiving these lads to serve in our fleet, owing to the facilities afforded them, during the frequent visits of our ships to this port, to rejoin their former companions on the streets, I think it right to inform you that my anxieties on this head are entirely dissipated; a close watch upon their habits has only shown that the greater liberty now at their command has not been so abused. This has proved a great source of satisfaction to me, for such apprehension alone has hitherto prevented me applying to you for boys. I still hold, however, to the impression that I cannot afford them the complete nautical education they would get in a sailing craft making long voyages, and which every young seaman should have. I have, however, pointed out this want to their officers and directed them to meet the difficulty as much as possible. I am so much encouraged by the first experiment that I will have no hesitation in receiving three more lads from you when you are prepared to part with them. I cannot close this hastily written note without complimenting you on the efficient manner in which you have turned out the three boys in question, and I feel assured their conduct in the future will continue to do credit to you and the officers of the training-ship "Vernon."

Faithfully yours,

FRED. H. TROUTON, Manager.

Fred. W. Neitenstein, Esq., Commander of the Training-ship "Vernon."

It will be seen by the above letter that Capt. Trouton has taken considerable interest as well as trouble in the matter, and I now beg to express my acknowledgments to him for his thoughtful care and kindness. It will be seen that this gentleman is strongly of the opinion that a complete nautical education can be only obtained through the medium of a sailing vessel, and this is with that of other nautical men my own opinion. If a small tender were attached to the "Vernon," as is the case with other training vessels, we could turn out boys from this ship equal if not superior to half the persons who now call themselves seamen. The training-ship "Cumberland," at Helensburgh, has a 40-ton cutter, and is about to have a small schooner; and the "Exmouth," has a brigantine which cruises about the Thames, as far as the Mouse Light-ship, the crew consisting of thirty boys, who are continually being changed so as to give all the lads a turn. Most of the other vessels have similar craft attached to them, making short cruises and and so imparting a knowledge of practical seamanship. The vessel at Auckland, New Zealand, is also about to have a vessel attached to it. I would strongly advocate the necessity of a small schooner, about 50 tons, being attached to this ship; she should be fitted with topsail and top-gallant-yard, and the boys would thus be enabled to acquire a thorough knowledge of seamanship, such as keeping careful watch by night when at anchor, mooring and unmooring, loosing, making and furling sails under easy and difficult conditions, steering by the wind and by the compass, a thorough knowledge of conning terms, heaving to and picking up boats, heaving the log, taking soundings when under-way, catting and fishing anchors, laying yards for reefing, practical teaching of the "rule of the road at sea," and working ship under the most varied conditions, and the thousand and one other matters which a boy learning to be a sailor can only acquire when under-way. All persons are more or less apt to learn through the eye rather than the ear, and whatever is seen in fact makes a far deeper impression than anything that is merely read or heard, and with boys this is peculiarly the case.

I have very great pleasure in being able to state that a marked increase of interest in this institution has been lately manifested by the public, and the ship has been largely visited, the visitors in every instance appearing pleased with the arrangements on board.

A regatta was held on the 17th May for the purpose of obtaining funds sufficient to purchase brass instruments to form a band among the boys. The citizens entered cordially into the matter, and a most unqualified success in every particular ensued, the result being the improved morale evident among the boys, by witnessing the good feeling and sympathy entertained towards them by the people, and a lasting memento in the shape of a splendid set of brass instruments. Where all exerted themselves so well it would be invidious to single out any for particular praise. An extra meed of thanks must however be awarded to John Gardyne, Esq., with whom the idea of the regatta originated; to him, as well as the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly assisted, on behalf of my youngsters and myself and officers, I beg to offer my best thanks. I must also beg to gratefully acknowledge contributions in books, fruit, &c., from Mrs. Darvall, Sir Henry Parkes, K.C.M.G., Mr. J. Gardyne, proprietors of Illustrated Sydney News, Mr. Tornaghi, Mr. R. V. Gale, Messrs. Starkey, Mr. Hicks, of Sydney Punch, Mr. Hurley (Hartley), Mr. Shepherd, M.P., &c.

In conclusion, I must acknowledge with thanks the assistance afforded me by my officers, and I would venture to affirm that the hopes I entertained last year of the success likely to be obtained from the new system of training have been amply realised, and that the vast amount of good effected by this institution is sufficiently obvious from the facts I have had the honor to submit in the foregoing report.

I have, &c.,

FREDK. W. NEITENSTEIN.

The Schoolmaster to The Superintendent, N.S.S. "Vernon."

Sir,

N.S.S. "Vernon," 30 June, 1879.

I have the honor to report that since making my last annual report no alteration has taken place in the school arrangements, the half-time system being that still employed, and the results are fairly satisfactory, as will be seen from the subjoined table.

The Inspector of Schools for the Sydney District held his annual examination of the boys in February last, and reported to the Council of Education as to their proficiency in the various subjects taught—reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar, and geography. He also suggested that an advantage to the school would accrue from procuring the school materials from the Council of Education, instead of from the Government contractor, as was formerly done.

Permission to do this has been obtained from the Colonial Secretary, and a requisition forwarded to the Sydney Inspector accordingly.

The boys, as a rule, present a healthy appearance, and a laudable desire to learn is manifested by many of them, which, I think, is a very good proof that the efforts which have been made for their benefit on the "Vernon" have not been lost upon them.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. C. PLUMMER,

Schoolmaster.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

NAUTICAL SCHOOL SHIP "VERNON."

(REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDED 30 JUNE, 1880.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Superintendent N.S.S. "Vernon" to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

N.S.S. "Vernon," 1 July, 1880.

I have the honor to submit, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, the Annual Report of this Institution for the year ended 30th June, 1880. Report for twelve months.

The health of the boys still continues to be all that could be desired, few cases of sickness having occurred, and these generally of the most trifling character. Health.

Illness is almost wholly confined to new comers, who are sent on board in many instances suffering from ophthalmia, skin diseases, want of nourishment, vermin, &c.; but the healthy, active life they are forced to lead on the ship soon effects a beneficial change in their condition. During the past twelve months, although the daily average number of boys on board has been considerably higher than in any preceding year, the illness has been much less, the total number of cases of all kinds being twenty-eight. Boys sent on board in neglected, verminous condition. Total number of cases during year only twenty-eight.

On Sundays the lads have marched to their respective places of worship in Balmain, and in each week during the year religious instruction has been conducted on board by the Revd. Mr. Tress (C.E.) and the Revd. Messrs. Dillon and Ludovic (R.C.), while a number of ladies and gentlemen, members of St. Mary's Church, in Balmain, regularly conduct a Sunday school on the ship. Religious instruction.

A special meed of praise is due to the religious instructors who regularly visit the ship, often at great inconvenience and discomfort to themselves, for their disinterested exertions on behalf of our boys, who are grateful for the interest taken in them. Thanks due to teachers.

The usual routine of drilling, schooling, &c., initiated in 1878, has been observed during the year, and with good results, as evinced by the orderly bearing and improved condition of the boys, physically and morally. This keeps them fully occupied during working hours, while their recreation has been amply provided for by frequent fishing excursions, boating expeditions to various parts of the harbour, attending regattas, &c., and a number of amusements on board, including a well-stocked library, chess, draughts, &c. Deprivation of these enjoyments forms the most frequent punishment for breaches of discipline, and is much more effectual in promoting good order than any other method that could be employed. It will be seen that the cost per head is between two and three shillings higher than last year, but this includes the cost of necessary repairs, &c., which will not be again needed for some time. Notwithstanding this, a most substantial reduction has been made in the expenditure for the past two years over former periods of similar duration, while the efficiency of the Institution has not suffered. Usual routine observed.

Cost per head for 12 months, ending 30th June, 1874, was £35 19 0
 " " " " " 1875 " 41 0 0

Recreation.
System of punishment.
Cost per head.
Reduction of £12 10s. per head since 1875.

This represents the whole cost of painting, &c., and is reduced to the net cost per head of £27 13s., by deducting contributions made by relatives towards the lads' support of £116 9s.—contributions made up of small sums ranging from 1s. 6d. and upwards weekly, and which are only paid grudgingly and after much persuasion has been exercised. The time and trouble occupied in endeavouring to get these people to pay—frequently without success—was fully illustrated in my report of last year, and it is obvious that some simpler method should be legally authorized of making these persons, many of whom are in good positions, take a fair share of the cost of maintaining their neglected offspring. Great difficulty experienced in obtaining contributions from relatives.

A communication sent to me on the 25th ultimo, from the Inspector of Industrial and Reformatory Schools in Victoria, shows that the same difficulty in enforcing payment from parents is experienced in that Colony; and I now quote from Mr. Neal's report for 1879, just published, as the alteration he suggests in the Victorian law would meet our requirements if adopted here:—"The comparatively small returns obtained from parents is a matter that has always been the cause of thought and anxiety to the head of this department, and so far back as the 15th June, 1875, a suggestion was made to the Government to adopt a plan calculated to ensure better results. It is to be regretted, I think, that that suggestion was not adopted. The apparent inadequacy of the payments springs of course from one or two causes, viz., either inability of the parents to contribute, or inefficiency of the means adopted to enforce payment, Recommendation of the Inspector of Industrial Schools in Victoria.

payment. So far as the first reason operates, the community is, no doubt, willing to bear the extra burden. The extent to which the second cause influences the result may be gathered from the accompanying figures:—

Number of parents under order to contribute	...	...	...	...	...	476
Number who made payments during the year	...	...	...	...	...	183

Now, in the first place, I conceive that instead of the law requiring that parents be summoned to enable a Bench of Magistrates to decide that they shall be liable for maintenance, they should be responsible de facto from the date of their childrens committal to the schools, and the aid of Magistrates should only have to be invoked when parents neglect to meet this liability. The object of this will be manifest when I say that weeks sometimes elapse before an order can be obtained, and of course the delay in putting the law in motion in many cases enables parents to escape altogether."

The demand for apprentices is very great, and much above our ability to supply. At the present we have over 200 applications undealt with, and fresh ones daily coming to hand. As the number of boys who become eligible to leave averages about 50 or 60 yearly, it is obvious that we shall be quite unable to comply with the greater portion of these applications.

Table 13 shows particulars relating to the parentage of boys who have been received on board during the year, and table 14 gives the Police Courts from which they have been sent. The total number is 84, and this number includes boys sent here through the Police Court from other institutions where they have proved utterly unmanageable.

From boys who have left the ship I continue to get most pleasing letters, thus affording a proof that the lads are not unmindful of their friends on the "Vernon," nor ungrateful for the care bestowed upon them when on board. I give here a few extracts from among a number of letters I have lately received, which may prove interesting, as showing the good feeling existing between officers and boys:—

My dear friend,

I received your kind and welcome letter, and was glad to hear from you, and I suppose all my shipmates have gone away. My Master told me to tell you that if you have two or three day to spare would you mind coming up for a day or two. I will go to the station with the buggy to meet you as soon as the train comes in, and when you are going away I will drive you Back to the train. write and let me know when you are coming up.

P.S. kind wishes to all.

Yours truly,
P. M.

Singleton, 6th June, 1880.

Dear sir,

I received your welcome letter this morning, and am quite pleased to think that although I had seemingly forgotten you, you still remember me. I am sure I do not know what to plead in extenuation of my fault in not writing to you before, as I cannot say that I was too busy (for although we have been busy at times since I last wrote to you, yet we have not been so busy but that I might have written a few lines to let you know how I have been getting on). Although I have not written I have not forgotten you, and still cherish in my memory the thoughts of when I was on the ship, although it is more than five years ago.

It was only yesterday that I was thinking of writing to you, and when I received your letter I thought, "How good it is of the Captain to think of me still"; so I started at once to write. You state in your letter that you trust I am not "going wholly to sever my connection with my friends on the ship." Well I trust not; far from it, for I will take an interest in the "Vernon" as long as I live. How could I think of forgetting it when it is through being there that has made what I am. I am very glad that Mr. Willis has given me such a good character, as that is far above all I could tell you; but I can tell you this much, that if every boy that is on the ship could get such a good master no one would have cause to regret it. Never since I have been with him have I had any quarrel, and that is what all the boys who have left the ship cannot say. Mr. Willis is not too strict, as some masters are. Some will make you stop in every night, and that is just what makes them more eager to go. I know one person who told me he would never be let out, and he said that if his master would let him out he would never be found in bad company, and would always be home by nine o'clock. His master was afraid of his getting in bad company—that is what he told me. I have just over four months to serve, and when my time is up I will have to leave Singleton. (I explained my reasons for so doing when I was on board about eight months ago.) I am sorry to leave Mr. Willis, but circumstances have arisen which have rendered it imperative for me to do so. However, I will always carry with me a lively recollection of the services Mr. Willis has rendered to me during my stay with him. I am still making progress with my trade, in conjunction with one of the workmen here, who is teaching me all he can; and by the time I leave here I hope to know a good deal. Kindly remember me to all on board the ship.

I remain, &c.,
E. R.

My dear friend,

Castlereagh, Nepean River, June 18th, 1880.

I now take great pleasure in answering your letter that my master gave me, and very glad to let you know how I am coming on at my place. I am farming most of my time, and helping to clear the bush ground and looking after cattle and horses, and such like. I like my place very well, and my master is very good to me, and I hope I may always have as good a place. I get letters from my brothers John and James up the country. I expect a good many of my shipmates are left the vessel before this. I must now conclude with sincerely good wishes to all my friends and shipmates that are on board,

P.S.—When my time is up no doubt I will be coming on board to look at the old ship.

I remain, &c.,
H. G.

To Captan F. W. N.

Dear sir,

Having received a letter from you to-day, I beg to inform you that I am quite well and doing well, hoping all my comrades are quite well. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cook have behaved very kindly to me during my services to them. I have wanted for nothing since the time I have been here. I should have wrote to you before, only I thought by Mrs. Cook writing to you and letting you know how I was behaving would be quite sufficient. Dear sir, I have nothing much to say, only that I am quite comfortable and want for nothing. Hoping you will pardon me for my short letter, with kind Remembrance to all my comrades,

I remain, &c.,
W. R.

The admissions during the past twelve months have been more numerous than in any like period previously, as will be seen by glancing at Table 1.

Many of these boys should have been sent here long ago, when it would have been an easier task to reclaim them; but a well-meaning, although doubtful policy, seems to have been pursued by the magistracy of giving them "another chance," when the police—no doubt having on their part first accorded them plenty of "chances"—have apprehended them.

This is not fair to the institution or to the boys themselves—it is simply a waste of valuable time, as the lads but rarely take advantage of the chance, and find their way here in the end, when necessarily our hopes of success are not so great as they would have been had the lads been sent here on first being taken into custody.

To illustrate this, I would instance, from among others, the cases of two boys received here during the last seven months. J. B. was first apprehended under the Industrial Schools Act and discharged with a caution; a few days after this he was locked up for stealing, and on three subsequent occasions for similar offences; and finally, on a sixth apprehension, he was sent here.

Admissions more numerous than in any preceding year. Time wasted in not sending vagrant boys here when first apprehended. Magistrates unduly lenient.

Case of J. B., who was six times apprehended prior to being sent here. Now at 9-10 years.

Another boy, after being seen frequently about the streets of a night, was charged under the Act and released, but not long afterwards was apprehended for stealing money from a till, and on another occasion for stealing two watches; subsequently he was sent here for wandering about in company with reputed thieves.

Each of these lads is only ten years of age, and will, I have every reason to believe, turn out respectable members of society; still it is apparent that a mistake was committed in not sooner rescuing them from the streets.

Fortunately they are very young, and their early impressions of an evil life may be easily eradicated during the two years they remain here, prior to being apprenticed at a distance from old haunts and associates; but in the cases of older boys—youths of nearly sixteen, who in all probability have been for years pursuing a bad course—the short term they stay on board (rarely longer than twelve months when over eleven years of age) is not sufficiently long to effect reformation in every instance.

From the foregoing it will be seen that there is reasonable excuse to offer if some of the "Vernon" boys have not turned out as well as could be desired; still, from the large number that has been borne on the books since the Institution was inaugurated—over 900—of whom 764 have left the ship (590 apprenticed, 174 discharged to relatives), the percentage of failures is very small.

The reports that have reached me from masters of boys within the past few weeks are highly satisfactory; and as a practical proof of the good results achieved I beg to give extracts from among a large number of letters now in my possession.

The Hon. John Lackey, M.P., thus writes of a boy who is now out of his apprenticeship:—"I desire to say in reply to your note that H. S—, who was apprenticed to me from the 'Vernon,' has served his time, and is now in the Railway Department at Darling Harbour, where he is doing very well. He has every prospect of making progress, and I believe since he has been there he has given those over him satisfaction. He has grown an active and strong young man, and is now in receipt of 7s. per day."

The Rev. G. F. Dillon, of Balmain:—"I am happy to inform you that the boy Robert P— remains all that I stated of him in my last letter, is daily improving, and in every sense a credit to you, and an illustration of what your discipline can do for a boy when subjected to it for such a period as my boy was."

Mr. J. R. Fairfax writes:—"Sydney Morning Herald Office,—Dear sir,—In reply to your printed note inquiring how the apprentice from the 'Vernon' is conducting himself, I have the pleasure to inform you that he is going on very satisfactorily."

Of a lad now out of his time, Mr. Willis, of the Singleton Argus, has just written me as follows:—"I have only to repeat the former favourable reports I have from time to time given respecting E. R—. His general conduct is such as to leave no ground for complaint. I could not wish for a better apprentice, and would be glad to take three or four more like him. You could hardly wish for a better example of the benefits of your praiseworthy institution."

Of another boy, who served his time with Mr. W. C. Browne, M.P., that gentleman writes:—"You will be glad to learn what progress in life one of my old apprentices from the 'Vernon' is making. M. C— has got on so well by indefatigable industry since his term of apprenticeship expired with me that he has now become a road contractor under the Government, and I learn has given great satisfaction. I enclose for your information a telegram recently sent to him concerning one of his contracts."

Another boy, out of his time, is thus spoken of by his master, Mr. D. McKinnon:—"I have much pleasure in informing you that my apprentice has given me great satisfaction, and he is still with me."

Mr. John K. Mackay, of Dungog, who has had several of our lads, thus reports to me of two of his apprentices, whose terms of service have expired:—"I beg to inform you that my apprentices have turned out well, especially G—n, whose time expires in a few months. S—'s time expired some some months back, but is still employed on one of my stations on the Barwon. G—n wants to go to Sydney next month, if he does I will make him call on you. Mr. Cobb, my partner, has two very good boys, J.F. especially; O.T. is also as good as the ordinary run of lads; they mostly turn out well in the country, if kept to work and well treated. Mr. Cobb wishes me to get him another, and I would like one also, if you have them to spare. A reply will oblige."

Mr. John Staggs writes concerning T.L., lately his apprentice, now out of his time:—"Also I beg to inform you, according to request, concerning my former apprentice T.L., he served his full time, and he has become a first-class working man; he is very often working for me; in fact he makes my place his home any time he is out of employ."

Mr. P. Fagan, J.P., thus reports of W.B., now out of his time:—"My apprentice W.B., whose term of apprenticeship expired in January last, conducted himself during the whole time in the most satisfactory manner. He is now in my service."

Mr. J. McDougall says:—"I am pleased to say that the boy apprenticed to me has behaved well since he has been in my employ, and I am well pleased with him."

Mr. A. Nivison, of Ohio, reports:—"The boy C.M. is conducting himself very satisfactorily, and has done so since I got him."

Mr. J. L. Ruthven, J.P., of Gowrie, thus writes of two lads:—"In reply to your letter of the 14th instant, requesting me to report how my apprentices G.F. and S.S. have conducted themselves, I am glad to be able to say the conduct of both has been very good."

Mr. John Swann, of Lemon Grove, who has for some years been most successful with a number of our boys, reports:—"I am pleased to be able to inform you that my apprentices from the ship 'Vernon' are in good health, and conducting themselves to my satisfaction."

Mr. A. Gibson, of Dingo Creek:—"In reply, I beg to say that his conduct has been good since in my employ."

Mr. Mulry writes:—"W.H. has conducted himself in a most satisfactory manner during the time he has been with me. I have always found him industrious and strictly honest, in fact all that could be desired. With many thanks to you and Father Dillon for getting me such a good boy."

Mr. J. Carter reports:—"My apprentice J.S. has conducted himself very well since he has been with me."

Mr. J. M. Dalyell, of Raymond Terrace:—"My apprentice has conducted himself well hitherto, and I may say that I am very well satisfied with him in nearly every respect."

Mr. L. H. L. Evans, of Rose Bay, reports:—"The boy apprenticed to me from the 'Vernon' has behaved himself very well, and I have every reason to believe is perfectly satisfied with his place. I allow him

Of a lad now out of his time of apprenticeship, Mr. A. Cobb, of Giro, reports:—"I beg to say that J. F.'s time was up at the end of last month, February, but is still working on with me at weekly wages. He has conducted himself very well while serving his time."

Boys apprenticed as sailors during year all doing well.

During the twelve months nine boys have been apprenticed as seamen, all of whom have been favourably reported upon. Many more would have gone to sea had it been possible to procure suitable vessels for them, but, for the same reason detailed in my report of last year, I have been unable to gratify their desire. Within the next few months several healthy, strong lads, of fifteen or sixteen years of age, who wish to be sailors, will become eligible to leave the ship, and their general disposition, added to the training they have received on board, would render them extremely useful to any shipowner who would give them a trial, while the boys themselves would have a profession congenial to their tastes, and more likely to prove of ultimate benefit to them than any other occupation to which they are likely to be apprenticed from this Institution.

Several boys, soon available who wish to go to sea.

Sea the best profession for these lads.

More supervision on a ship than on shore.

On board a ship constant supervision over these lads is exercised which does not seem so possible on farms and stations, and this materially assists in promoting well doing. Several boys have been apprenticed up the country, and have been returned, indentures cancelled, with bad characters, who have then been sent away as sailors, and these are now all doing well. One, apprenticed to a gentleman at Maitland in 1874, was continually complained of, and was returned here in 1878. From a letter received last month from his present employer, with whom he has been two years, a well-known shipowner in Sydney, it will be seen that the boy's conduct is all that could be desired. Captain P. thus writes of this lad and of another boy from the "Vernon":—"I have much pleasure in giving my two apprentices J. C. and J. T. first-class characters; they are both good boys, honest and obedient, and I am sure they will both make good seamen, which speaks well for the training they received under your charge on board the 'Vernon.'"

Boys who have failed at farming doing well as sailors.

Report of Captain PUNCH.

Of the boys apprenticed to the Australian Steam Navigation Company as sailors the report is as follows:—

Report of Captain Trouton, Manager of the A.S.N. Company, upon the conduct of boys apprenticed to the Company as sailors from the "Vernon."

I HAVE to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, and am directed by the Manager to inform you in reply that the conduct of G. and K., apprentices from the "Vernon," serving on board the Company's steamers "City of Adelaide" and "Leichhardt," has been highly satisfactory, and when opportunity offers the Manager will be glad to take more of the boys for the Company's vessels.

Recommendations made last year.

These letters and a perusal of Table 3, which gives the number of boys apprenticed from the "Vernon" and particulars of their conduct, are the best proofs that can be given of the value of the training of this Institution; and taking into consideration the previous history of the boys, the parental neglect of which so many have been the victims, and the short time they remain under our treatment on board, I think it will be admitted that the objects for which the ship was established have been fairly accomplished.

In conclusion, I would beg to refer you to my report of last year as to certain recommendations I ventured then to make, and which I am of the opinion would, if adopted, prove of benefit to the Institution. The staff of officers remains as before with but little alteration, and I am indebted to them for the assistance they have zealously rendered during the year.

I have, &c.,

FREDERICK W. NEITENSTEIN.

The Schoolmaster to The Superintendent, N.S.S. "Vernon."

Sir,

N.S.S. "Vernon," 30 June, 1880.

I have the honor to report that during the past year the school has been conducted as formerly, on the half-time system, and the results have been fairly satisfactory. During the year the number of admissions has been unusually large. Most of these were boys who could neither read nor write—many of them not even knowing the letters of the alphabet. Those of the age of twelve years will be eligible for apprenticeship after being on board twelve months. It is evident, therefore, that in so short a time it is impossible for these boys to show much proficiency even in reading and writing.

In their conduct, morals, and general appearance, however, very great improvement is noticeable; and, as a rule, by the time the boys leave the ship they are respectful and obedient, and manifest a desire to gain the good opinion of their teacher.

Of their studies, reading seems to be the one in which the boys take a special delight, displaying great interest in the fables and narratives contained in their lesson books, many of which they may often be heard repeating about the deck after school hours.

Next to reading, the subject of geography is the most attractive to them, and they evince considerable retentiveness of memory with respect to the names of foreign places of interest.

Arithmetic and grammar being subjects of a more abstract nature, and requiring more mental effort, the boys do not show so much aptitude for them.

At the last examination the order and discipline of the school were marked by the Inspector as good.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. C. PLUMMER,
Schoolmaster.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

PRISONS.

(REPORT FOR 1878.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Comptroller General of Prisons to The Colonial Secretary.

Department of Prisons, N.S.W., Comptroller General's Office,
Sydney, 6 October, 1879.

Sir,

I have the honor to furnish my Report upon the prisons for the year 1878, accompanied by the usual statistical information.

The entries and discharges for 1878 numbered 14,872 and 14,424 as compared with 14,278 and 12,929 for 1877.

The labour return (table B) exhibits a utilization in the prisons, where it has been found practicable under great difficulties to organize labour arrangements of prison labour, to the value of £38,631 14s. 8d. It is right to point out that according to the custom in like cases this amount includes £9,388 5s., the value of labour for the internal purposes of the prisons. This labour is valued according to the description of work in which a prisoner is engaged at a daily estimate of 1s. 10d. The cost of material for prison labour has been £15,732 9s. 2d., so the net value of the labour derived from prisoners' labour has been £22,399 5s. 6d. This labour has been chiefly expended upon work for the Public departments, including the prisons, such as building alterations and extensions, production of clothing, boots and shoes, barrows, furniture, and other articles, it being aimed at to avoid, where the alternative exists, coming into competition before the general public with trades and occupations pursued outside. Some articles of prison manufacture are however sold to the public, such as mats and matting from Darlinghurst Gaol, to the value of £4,116. It may be well to explain further that the value of articles of prison manufacture supplied to the Public departments is calculated upon a schedule of prices prepared for the purpose.

The prisons classed as "labour prisons," from which alone I make labour returns, that is those in which any conveniences for labour are provided, are, Sydney, Parramatta, Berrima, Maitland, Bathurst, Goulburn, Mudgee, and Young.

The difficulty almost invariably mentioned in prison reports of other countries of procuring suitable work for prisoners is still more felt in this Colony by reason of the widely scattered position of the prisons, and the difficulty from that cause of overtaking the building requirements of workshops, &c. Furthermore, from the necessary distribution, 239 of the sentenced prisoners returned are necessarily kept in country gaols where there is no possibility of obtaining work, other than for internal operations of the gaols.

Endeavours have constantly been made to procure work for local purposes, such as road-metal breaking within country prisons, and road or other outside work. But the difficulties have been so great by reason of expense of carting material, or of guards for outside parties, that these endeavours have been attended with but indifferent success. Nevertheless some such work has been done, and considerable embellishment of country towns, as Maitland, Bathurst, and Goulburn has been attained by prison labour in trenching and planting ornamental grounds in reserves, and around Court-houses, police, and other public buildings. I notice a suggestion in the report of the Inspector General of Victoria that the Government should induce the Municipal bodies in the country districts to endeavour to provide work for local prisoners, and I commend the suggestion to the attention of this Government.

The hospital returns show a larger number of cases treated both in and outside the hospitals, and of deaths, being respectively 909, 10,193, and 43, as compared with 700, 9,379, and 29, for 1877. These figures are only partly accounted for by the increased number of prisoners, and as the general health of the prisoners has been good I am at a loss further to account for the difference.

The education return shows the number attending the schools, and who have passed through them during the year, to be 569, of whom 239 were quite uneducated on admission. Of the number of those who received such education in the prisons under a previous sentence, or previous sentences, there is no sufficient record, but I will arrange for such record to be kept in future.

The return of re-convictions, which is an important item in prison statistics, shows, it is to be regretted, a material increase in crime; thus of the 1st class, being for the gravest offences, the reconvictions of the first time are 27, for the second time 10, and for the third or more 27, as compared with 19, 12, and 30 for 1877. In the 2nd class 107, 51, and 66, as compared with 96, 83, and 91. In the 3rd class 34, 17, and 38, as compared with 20, 7, and 22; and in the class of drunkards and petty offenders 1,366, 1,150, and 2,178, as compared with 511, 169, and 1,057.

It will be observed that while as a whole the return exhibits unfavorable results, the great difference is to be found in the class of drunkards and petty offenders convicted in the metropolis, which shows a total increase of 2,996. These facts are suggestive of serious inferences. They are not to be explained by leniency of treatment within the prisons, which will be understood when it is stated that the ration for such prisoners consists of  $\frac{3}{4}$  lbs. bread,  $\frac{3}{4}$  lbs. meal,  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb. meat (on Sundays and Wednesdays),  $\frac{3}{4}$  lbs. vegetables,  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. salt,  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. soap,  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. rice (on Sundays and Wednesdays), showing only  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. meat in the week. Neither by non-enforcement of labor, because all of such class who are not physically unfit by reason of shattered constitutions (of whom, however, the majority is composed) are compelled to work. The repression of this class of offences, as I have previously pointed out, can only be effected by legislation. The magistrates now can merely allot the specified punishment for the offence. In most cases this means imprisonment for a few days, more or less. The offender returns again and again to the prison, frequently at very short intervals. He or she is in a condition shattered by dissipation, and the prison just serves as a means of recruiting, when the offender is liberated and resumes the former practices. The magistrates should be empowered to deal in a different way with these petty offenders. There should be sanctioned by the law the power of passing materially longer sentences on a cumulative basis, not for the offence itself but in proportion to the frequency of its repetition. The offender would then cease to regard the prison as a place in which to recruit.

The total number of prisoners on the 31st December, 1878, was 1,801, as compared with 1,542 at the end of 1877, while the population had advanced from 662,212 to 693,743. I regret to say the numbers continue to increase, considerably straining the means of accommodation. At the same time, however, it may be remarked that in 1867, the year that brought in the present regulations, the number was 1,899 to a population of 447,620.

The number of prisoners who have passed through probationary separate treatment as being under sentences of 5 years and upwards, and of 3 years and upwards, have been respectively 45 and 63, as compared with 47 and 59 for 1877. These figures further demonstrate that it is not in the graver offences that the increase has accrued.

Extensions of building accommodation and improvement have continued to progress satisfactorily at Darlinghurst and Parramatta Gaols. The new gaols at Young and Armidale have been completed, and make a valuable addition to the means of accommodation. Arrangements have been made for the extensive and much needed improvements to the gaol at Albury, and at Hay and Wentworth, the works of which are now in progress.

The public works prison being built at Trial Bay, with a view to the construction of a breakwater by prison labour, has not, by reason of unforeseen difficulties, made the progress that was anticipated. Although the first wing and hall have been nearly completed, the prison cannot be occupied until the stockade and out-buildings are erected. It will therefore be yet a considerable period of time before the prison will be brought into use.

It is to be regretted that the increase of prisoners has rendered still less successful than before the efforts that have been made to overtake in building accommodation the requirements of the service, thus retarding the attainment of the object which stands first in prison administration, of extending the separate treatment system through all classes of prisoners in its various modifications.

The alterations in the building at the South Head, purchased for a girls' reformatory, were not completed during last year, consequently the institution remained at Biloela, where indeed it still is. The alterations, however, have now been completed, and the building is only awaiting inside fittings and furniture to be ready for the reception of its projected inmates. No site has during the year (nor even to this date) been chosen for a boys' reformatory, although the subject has been under the consideration of the Government. It is very desirable that such an institution should be established.

Parliament has been furnished with the report of a Royal Commission of Inquiry appointed in consequence of allegations of mal-treatment of prisoners in Berrima Gaol. The report of the Commission makes it clear how little reliance is to be placed upon representations of the character upon which these allegations were founded.

The conduct of the prisoners, although their minds were considerably disturbed by a belief of outside sympathy, engendered by the Berrima Gaol Inquiry, has on the whole been satisfactory.

The officers have continued to carry out their duties in the generally satisfactory and efficient manner of former years. But I have been compelled to bring again under notice the large number who by reason of age or infirmity have passed their periods of efficiency, and for retiring whom there is no provision, thus seriously impairing the efficiency of the service, and causing the Government to pay for services that cannot in fact be rendered.

The department has also suffered from an unprecedented anomaly in the rates of salary, which has been the cause of well-founded discontent on the part of the officers prejudiced thereby. One class of officers, consisting of warders of the various grades, overseers, messengers, and others, were allotted an increased rate of pay to meet enhanced rates of charges for house-rent and necessaries of life, while the officers in the higher or differing conditions, such as gaolers and clerks, and who come more under the head of Civil servants, were denied any advance. The effect has been to bring in some cases the subordinate in point of remuneration nearly up to his immediate superior, and to destroy the necessary line of demarcation for the several grades. This has naturally been keenly felt by the officers in question, who already were relatively underpaid as compared with the general staff. I earnestly hope that this state of things will be remedied in the next session of Parliament.

Having in my report for 1877 taken occasion to revert to the aims and objects of the prison administration at some length, and to explain the then existing arrangements, I do not think it needful now to re-enter upon the subjects.

I have, &c.,

HAROLD MACLEAN,
Comptroller General.

PRISON LABOUR, MUDGEE.

(PETITION FROM RESIDENTS OF MUDGEE.)

---

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 7 April, 1880.

---

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Residents of Mudgee, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

That for some time past the various branches of trade, namely, saddlery, carpentering, wood-cutting, painting, boot-making, and book-binding have been carried on in the gaol at Mudgee, competing with the tradesmen outside, below the ruling prices.

That your Petitioners protest against the State prisons of the Colony being converted into factories, competing and injuriously affecting the various trades and the labouring classes.

That the criminal offenders against the laws of the Colony spring from the people in general, and it is an act of injustice to saddle the cost of punishing crime on any particular class or section of the people, as it is the practice at present.

And your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales will take such steps to at once check the gaols of the Colony from competing with free labour.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

VACCINATION.

(REPORT FOR 1879.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Sydney, 8 July, 1880.

I do myself the honor herewith to enclose the annual returns of vaccinations performed during the year 1879 by the Government Vaccinators in the country districts, by the Superintendent of the Vaccine Institution in Sydney, and by other vaccinators in Sydney and the suburbs.

Table A includes returns from the country districts, and shows that 1,227 children under one year of age, 2,192 children from one to five years of age, and 1,501 children from five to ten years of age were successfully vaccinated in the country districts.

Table B gives the number of successful vaccinations in Sydney and the suburbs, as follows:—222 under one year of age, 328 of from one to five years of age, and 99 of from five to ten years of age; making a total of successful vaccinations during the year throughout the whole of the Colony of 5,569—a considerable increase over the number given in the returns for the year 1878, but less by 11,312 than the returns of the year 1877, the year of the alarm occasioned by cases of small-pox having occurred in Sydney.

I have, &amp;c.,

H. G. ALLEYNE,

Medical Adviser.

VITAL STATISTICS.

THE REGISTRAR GENERAL TO THE HONORABLE THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,

TRANSMITTING ABSTRACTS OF

MARRIAGES, BIRTHS, AND DEATHS,

FOR THE YEAR 1878:

WITH PREFATORY REPORT.

Sir,

Registrar General's Department, Sydney, May 26, 1879.

The report which I now have the honor to submit embraces all the usual details regarding the Marriages, Births, and Deaths registered in the Colony during the year 1878. The various tables in this Report, with those in the Appendix, have been compiled from the Returns of 121 District Registrars.

The population of the Colony on 31st December, 1878, is estimated at 693,743 persons. The increase Population. on the previous year amounts to 31,531 persons, or 4.76 per cent. The estimated number of males is 385,678 and of females 308,065. We find then that there were 77,613 more males than females, which gives 556 males and 444 females to 1,000 of population, the former being 112 in every 1,000 in excess of the latter, and 2 per 1,000 over the figures of the previous year. The increase of population for each half-year is found to be as follows:—

HALF-YEAR ending 30th June, 1878.

Births .....	12,127	Deaths .....	5,971
Arrivals by sea .....	19,918	Departures by sea .....	12,970
Total .....	32,045	Total .....	18,941

The net increase at the close of the first six months of the year being 13,104, the births exceeding the deaths by 6,156, and the arrivals were 6,948 over the departures.

HALF-YEAR ending 31st December, 1878.

Births .....	13,201	Deaths .....	4,792
Arrivals by sea .....	19,961	Departures by sea .....	9,943
Total .....	33,162	Total .....	14,735

These figures show a net increase in the second half of the year of 18,427.

The

The births being 8,400 in excess of the deaths, and arrivals, 10,018 over the departures.

Marriages,
births,
deaths.

The number of marriages celebrated in the Colony during the year 1878 amounted to 5,317, being 323 in excess of those for the previous year. There were 25,328 births registered in the year, showing an increase of 1,477 on the preceding year. The number of deaths recorded was 10,763 as against 9,869 in the previous year, which shows an increase of 894.

Marriages.

Taking the estimated population at the middle of the year, we find that the marriage rate of this Colony is 7·87 per 1,000, which shows a slight increase on the previous year, and also on the average of the previous nine years. There were 1,418 marriages celebrated in the City of Sydney, which is an increase of 75 on the preceding year. The rate per 1,000 is 13·89, as against 13·81 for the previous year, and 14·67 is the average of the previous nine years. The number of marriages celebrated in the Suburbs was 632, showing an increase of 56 on the previous year; the rate is found to be 7·81 per 1,000, which is 0·60 in advance of the previous year, and 2·56 over the average of the previous nine years; the marriage rate of this year is in excess of any one year in the decade. In the Country Districts there were 3,267 marriages, which exceed the previous years returns by 172. The rate per 1,000 is 6·63, as against 6·58 in 1877. Compared with the previous nine years average there is a very slight increase. More than 84 per cent. of the marriages were celebrated by the four principal denominations, viz., Church of England, 39·46; Roman Catholic, 18·98; Presbyterian, 15·44; and Wesleyan, 10·46. Marriages by Registrars nearly approach 6 per cent., leaving 10 per cent. to be divided between the remaining denominations. Table B, which now follows, gives a decennial return of the number of marriages celebrated by each denomination and by Registrars; and there is also a marriage table of increase and decrease.

INFANTILE MORTALITY.

The table of infantile mortality shows that out of the total number of deaths for the year (10,763), 4,884 were those of children under 5 years of age, which makes the percentage of these deaths to be 45'37 of the total number of deaths. With the exception of the year 1875 this is the highest percentage of any year in the decade. It is 1'86 per cent. over the figures of the previous year, and also 2'52 per cent. in excess of the average of the previous nine years. In the City infantile mortality is found to be 44'00 per cent. of total deaths, which is an increase of 3'15 per cent. on the previous year, but a decrease of 0'32 on the figures of the previous nine years average. The percentage of deaths under 5 years, to total deaths in the Suburbs, is 55'72, being higher than the preceding year, and the average of the previous nine years by 0'99 and 0'91 respectively. As compared with the total number of deaths in the country, those under 5 years of age are found to be 43'32 per cent., which is higher than the figures of any one year in the decade, and 1'25 per cent. over the previous year, and also 1'59 in excess of the previous nine years average.

Comparing the deaths of children under 5 years of age with the total deaths in each ward of the City it will be seen that Phillip Ward heads the list with a percentage of 64.16; then Denison stands at 56.42; Cook, 55.45; Brisbane, 52.38; Macquarie, 51.65; Gipps, 43.30; Fitzroy, 39.02; and Bourke, 9.05. In this last-named ward is situate the Infirmary and Hyde Park Asylum, in which there were 302 and 54 deaths respectively—no doubt composed chiefly of adults. Deducting these, we find the infantile mortality to be 46.50.

The percentage of infantile deaths to total number of deaths in the suburbs is as follows:—
 Waterloo, 67·20 ; Balmain, 64·35 ; Concord, 59·16 ; Redfern, 59·00 ; Paddington, 53·38 ; Newtown, 51·36 ;
 Glebe, 50·31 ; St. Leonards, 49·57 ; St. George, 41·13.

We now come to the particular diseases which have contributed to the deaths of the colony during the year 1878. From the decennial table we find that zymotic diseases form 25·61 per cent. of the number of deaths, and of this class the order known as miasmatic absorbs 22·66 per cent. Zymotic diseases as 2·34 per cent. in excess of those for the previous year, and also 3·04 per cent. of the average of the previous nine years. Class II—Constitutional—produced 11·80 per cent. of deaths ; tubercular diseases predominating. Here we find the percentage is 1·45 lower than the previous year, and also 0·57 under the average of the previous nine years. Under the third-class—local diseases—the percentage is 37·37, to which the orders known as nervous and respiratory contributed 13·26 and 10·03 respectively. The percentage of this class is about the same as that for the previous year, but 1·17 per cent. lower than the preceding nine years average.

Developmental diseases comprise 17·36 per cent. of total deaths. This proportion is slightly lower than that for the previous year and nine years.

The last table (L) in this Report shows the average number of deaths registered in Sydney in each month of the year for the last ten years. Also the mean temperature, the mean height of barometer, and mean amount of ozone. The mean quantity of rain, and the average number of days on which rain fell, will also be found. The four warmest months of the year are December, January, February, and March; the mean temperature ranging from 71·8 to 69·4. The months of December and January head the list with the highest rate of mortality. February, March, April, and May are the months which have supplied the greatest rainfall, the number of inches being 6·87, 5·98, 5·75, and 8·10 respectively.

MARRIAGES.

Marriages:

The total number of marriages celebrated in the Colony during the year 1879 was 5,391, which gives a ratio of 7.57 per 1,000 of estimated population. This shows a decrease on the figures of the previous year, and also on the average of the previous nine years. Out of the total number of marriages registered it will be seen that 26.28 per cent. were celebrated in Sydney, 13.90 per cent. in the suburbs, and 59.82 per cent. in the country districts. The number of marriages celebrated in Sydney is 1,417, which gives a rate of 13.17 per 1,000 of estimated population. This is a little lower than the previous year, and 1.14 under the figures of the previous nine years average. Suburban marriages numbered 749, which gives a rate of 8.78 per 1,000 of population. Here we find an advance of 0.97 on the preceding year, and of 5.51 on the average of the previous nine years. In the Country Districts there were 3,225 marriages. The rate per 1,000 is 6.21, being a slight decrease on the rate for the previous year, and also on that for the previous nine years average.

INFANTILE MORTALITY.

From the total deaths of the year (10,200) we find that 4,369 or 42·83 per cent. were registered as those of children under five years of age. This percentage is lower than the figures for the previous year by 2·54 per cent., and is also slightly under the average percentage of the previous nine years. In the City these deaths formed 39·67 per cent. of the total deaths. These figures are lower than for any one Sydney. year in the decade, and are also 4·20 under the average of the previous nine years. It will be seen that the rate of infantile mortality is lower in Sydney than in the Suburbs or Country Districts. This is to be accounted for by the fact that about one-fifth of the deaths in Sydney occurred in Hospitals and Asylums and were for the most part the deaths of adults. The infantile mortality of the Suburbs forms 54·73 per cent. of the total deaths (1,648). This rate is lower by 0·99 than that of the previous year, but a little in excess of the average of the previous nine years. The Country Districts show an infantile mortality of 40·85 per cent. to total deaths. This percentage is 2·47 under that of the preceding year, but 0·78 higher than the average of the previous nine years.

The following table gives the percentages of the various diseases which have proved fatal during the year 1879 and nine previous years. As far as the year under review is concerned, we find 20.63 per cent. of deaths under the head of Zymotic Diseases, the greater part of which include Scarlatina, Measles, Diphtheria, Dysentery, Fevers, &c. These diseases are 5 per cent. lower than the figures of the previous year, and 1.07 per cent. lower than the previous nine years average.

Deaths from Constitutional Diseases, consisting of Gout, Dropsy, Cancer, Scrofula, Phthisis, &c., show a percentage of 13.37 to total deaths. Here we see an increase of 1.57 in the percentage of the previous year, and also of 0.93 on the average of the previous nine years.

Local Diseases form 39.81 per cent. of total deaths. Under this head are Apoplexy, Paralysis, Insanity, Convulsions, Aneurism, Pneumonia, Asthma, Pleurisy, Gastritis, Peritonitis, &c. These diseases are 2.44 per cent. in excess of those for the previous year, and 1.39 per cent. higher than the average of the previous nine years.

Developmental Diseases, comprising Cyanosis, Teething, Childbirth, Old Age, Atrophy, &c., show that the percentage of deaths from these causes amounted to 17.67 of total deaths. These figures are about the same as for the previous year, and also for the average of the nine years preceding.
