- (ii)

Statement (f1) attached to F 3—continued.

- (ii) That upon the passing of such Appropriation Act all payments made under the authority of this section shall be regarded and treated for all purposes as payments made out of the supply granted by such Act under the head or class of service appropriate thereto.

In reply to Question, "When was the Roads Vote of 1893, which was charged back, expended?"

Answer: Transferred in November, 1895—

Total transferred to 1893 Votes £117,411 4 1

The above transfer, before final action was taken, was submitted to the Auditor-General, who expressed his approval in the following terms:—

"I consider the 15th clause of the Act 58 Vic. No. 13 as practically a Vote for expenditure 1895, and the unexpended balance of the Vote for 1894 is likewise open for expenditure as for 1895. The intention being to expend the whole amount for Roads purposes, it is immaterial to what year's Vote it may now be charged, and quite immaterial to have a Statement of Accounts paid as out of 1895 money for the purpose of transfer, as such Statement at best can only be an arbitrary one, and must be taken on the authority of the Secretary for Public Works in lump sums as representing postponed expenditure of 1893 and 1894.—E. A. R., B. C., 4/11/95."

C 4.

[To Evidence of C. G. L. Boyce, Esq., Sub-Accountant, The Treasury.]

PAYMENTS for INTEREST, &c., made in the Financial Year 1895-6, charged back.

THE amounts for interest, &c., shown in the Public Accounts for 1895-6, as charged to Services of the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, included in the total sum of £650,285 18s. 8d., were for interest and claims accrued to 30th June, 1895, and provided for by Treasury Bills to cover Deficiency to 30th June, 1895, and previous years.

The reasons the first year of the new system carried only one moiety of such payments are as follows :—

1. All appropriations made prior to the passing of the Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895 did not lapse, and certain appropriations were retained to meet the payments under consideration.
2. By virtue of section 2 of the Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895, all appropriations made after the passing of that Act lapse on the 30th June in each year.
3. So that payments made on and after 1st July, 1895, for interest and other claims accrued to 30th June, 1895, preceding, were charged to retained Appropriations of 1895 and previous years, and interest accrued to 31st December, 1895, payable on 1st January, 1896, were charged to Appropriations of 1895-6, and interest for half-year accrued to 30th June, 1896, being payable on 1st July following, were charged to the year 1896-7 as Votes of 1895-6, had lapsed on the 30th of the preceding month.

Out of the sums included in the total of £650,285 18s. 8d., as for the items of 1895 half-year paid during 1895-6, there were only three which were claims due in one amount, and which were divided at the Treasury as between 1895 and 1895-6, viz. :—

Treasury Bills Redemption,
Railway Loan Redemption, and Naval Force Contribution.

To show that such was anticipated, the following extract from Estimates, as laid on the Table of the House, is given, viz. :—

	Estimated Half-year, 30th June, 1895.	Estimated Year, 1895-6.
Interest on Treasury Bills	£28,238	£28,236
Redemption of Treasury Bills	75,000	75,000
Reduction of Public Debt for Railways.....	37,500	37,500
Australian Naval Force Act.....	18,860	24,860

The rest of the items included in the total referred to are in the same category, being liabilities of the year 1895 which were provided for and covered by Treasury Bills.

Not liable for investment	2,833,814 5 6

may be classed under the following heads, viz. :—

1. Trust Funds Proper—i.e., Funds for which the Government is, by statutory obligation, trustee—as follows :—

	Invested.	Uninvested.
Assurance Fund, Real Property Act	£172,090 0 0	£4,448 18 9

Newcastle Borough Council Water Debentures, Loan Sinking Fund		3,788 2 1
	£5,334,938 13 2	£375,878 16 10

2. Departmental Working Accounts, i.e. :—

A. Stores Accounts.

B. Advances Accounts.

C. Accounts of sums deposited by private individuals to carry out certain works and duties not chargeable to votes of the Service.

The Store and Advance Accounts were opened by advances from votes, and are therefore strictly public moneys. These accounts amount to seventeen, with a large number of small subsidiary ones, with a total in cash of £435,204 12s. 3d., and in securities £41,333.

3. Treasury Accounts of moneys borrowed to assist the General Bank Account, of moneys borrowed or taken at the request of depositors—i.e., Municipal Council of Sydney Sinking Funds and Sydney University Bequest Trusts—upon which the Treasury, by arrangement, pay interest, and which are also used for purposes of the General Banking Account.

The whole in this class amounts to—in cash	£2,419,348 17 3
And invested	4,000 0 0

The Accounts comprised in the second and third classes might with advantage, as a question of book-keeping, and to prevent misunderstanding as to their character, be separated from those of the first class, and united under a general head to be called, say, "Special Deposits Account." It was in consequence of the absence of such an account that they have hitherto been included in the Trust Funds.

With regard to the Trust Funds proper, it may be observed that of the large aggregate balance at credit of these Funds, viz., £5,710,817 10s., the uninvested cash was on 30th June last only £375,878 16s. 10d., which was considered the margin of safety to be retained to meet daily operations on the Accounts.

Whenever the Cash Balance has risen above requirements investments in Government securities have always been made of the surplus amounts.

The Cash Balances of the foregoing Accounts are included in the Public Account, the only Account known or provided for in the Audit Act of 1898; and should it at any time be suggested that a separate bank account should be kept for the Trust Funds proper, legislation will be required for the purpose.

It may be mentioned that the accompanying analysis and remarks thereon do not include what are known as the Special Trust Accounts, which comprise the Redemption Funds and Supreme Court Accounts, for each of which there is a separate banking account and statutory provisions.

ASSURANCE FUND REAL PROPERTY ACT.

Balance at credit of the account	£176,538 18 9
--	---------------

This balance includes the following investments, viz. :—

N.S.W. Government Debentures issued under Act 39 Vic. No. 18—4 per cent.	58,600
Do Funded Stock, 56 Vic. No. 1—4 per cent.	42,490
Do do 58 do 14—3 do	30,000
Do do 60 do 32—3 do	25,000
Do Treasury Bills, 53 do 9—3 do	16,000
Total invested	172,090 0 0
Uninvested cash—to meet claims on the account	4,448 18 9

The whole of the Trust Funds, upon which the Government are, under statutory obligation, to pay interest, are invested in Government securities to the limit of safety—i.e., uninvested balance retained only sufficient to meet estimated claims.

The interest paid on recent investments, where not fixed by Statute, has been reduced where opportunity offered to 3 per cent. per annum.

The interest-bearing Trust Funds could not, I think, be placed on a better footing so far as the Treasury management is concerned, as may be observed from the accompanying analysis of the Trust Funds.

As supplied to the ex-Treasurer in July, 1899.

[To Evidence of the Hon. Henry Norman MacLaurin, M.L.C., LL.D., M.D.]

THE STATE OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS, 1ST JANUARY, 1895, TO 30TH JUNE, 1899.

DURING the last four years the people of New South Wales were led to believe that the finances of the Colony were in a flourishing condition. Mr. Reid had remodelled the system of dealing with the Public Accounts, and placed these on a sound cash basis; he had defrayed the liabilities left outstanding by the Dibbs Government; as provided by Statute, he had redeemed Treasury Bills by something like £600,000 in reduction of the deficiency in the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account; he had taken three-quarters of a million in Customs duties off the shoulders of the workers, and placed £450,000 in land and income taxes on the shoulders of those better able to bear the cost of government, thus relieving the people as a whole of £300,000 in taxation; he had reformed the Public Service, and effected economies in that direction to the extent of £300,000 annually; and in face of all this, and of the severe drought through which the Colony had passed, the financial position of the country was so satisfactory that he had been able to announce a succession of large surpluses, every one of which represented cash in the bank. It is true that the surpluses thus announced were not always confirmed by the Auditor-General to the amount claimed by the Government. And this for several reasons. Mr. Reid had made a division of the Public Accounts, so that part of the ordinary liabilities of the Colony should be defrayed from the proceeds of a new issue of Treasury Bills, and part from the current revenue received into the Treasury. It is claimed that for this proceeding Parliamentary authority was obtained under the Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895; and in virtue of this Act, the Auditor-General, while continuing to keep account of the transactions as a whole, divided the accounts into two, naming the first the "Old Deficiency Account," and the second the "New Account Current." It is the second of these accounts that has always been regarded with pride by Mr. Reid; in its operations he has taken a very great interest, because it is on these operations that he has based his claim to a series of surpluses. The first or "Old Deficiency Account" he has repudiated, because it was supposed to represent the iniquities of his predecessors. Still, that was no reason why it should not be used by him if it could be made useful; so, as there was, according to the Auditor-General, a sum of about £34,000 remaining at the credit of this account in 1896-7 after the Treasury Bills had been issued and all the liabilities met which could safely be charged to their proceeds, even under the extraordinary authority said to have been granted by Parliament, that balance of £34,000 has been used to magnify the "surplus" on the transactions of the "New Account Current." That is one of the reasons why Mr. Reid's "surplus" has not always agreed with the amount afterwards established by the Auditor-General. In the first place, it was not a surplus at all, but merely a ledger credit; and in the second place, the amount was not that stated by Mr. Reid in his various financial statements in Committee of Ways and Means, namely, £333,296 in June, 1896; £120,092 in June, 1897; and £135,109 in June, 1898; for not only did the last two amounts include the balance at the credit of the "Old Deficiency Account," but even then they did not represent the balances at 30th June, but larger sums obtained by taking into account advances recovered after the financial year closed, and, therefore, on the cash system of accounts, included in the revenue and receipts of the following year. As a matter of fact, if we follow the lead of the late Government in debiting the Suspense Accounts with large payments, and in this way relieve the current revenue, the actual ledger balance at the credit of the "New Account Current" for the periods mentioned was £300,535 in June, 1896; £84,831 in June, 1897; and £92,274 in June, 1898. Then Mr. Carruthers comes forward in the usual manner to proclaim another "surplus" of £147,702 in June, 1899, and in so doing he makes two explanations, which are highly instructive. This "surplus" is based on the credit balance of £135,109 stated by Mr. Reid to have been in existence in June, 1898, and therefore brought forward from that year, but as the sum of £135,109 so brought forward is very much larger than the amount at which the credit balance on 30th June, 1898, has been placed by the Auditor-General, he first explains that this official has wrongfully charged the "New Account Current" with a sum that ought to have been charged to the year 1895-6, which, as will presently be seen, is a very misleading statement to make, as the Auditor-General's action did not affect the Treasury balance in the slightest degree, the true explanation being that Mr. Carruthers increased his "surplus" in the usual way by bringing forward the ledger credit of the "Old Deficiency Account"—actually, the unexpended balance of the proceeds of the new issue of Treasury Bills, the £34,000 already referred to. Then Mr. Carruthers asked the question, "Where is this surplus?" and he replied that, with the exception of about £31,346 of advances to be recovered, it represented cash in the Bank; actually, there was a sum of £116,356 12s. 7d. lying in the Bank—there was no deception on the part of the Government. Here an important fact immediately becomes apparent—that even after swelling the credit balance at the end of the financial year by the amount at the credit of the "Old Deficiency Account," that balance was, on Mr. Carruthers' own showing, only £116,357 (actually, the correct figure obtained in this way was £116,523), and the sum of £147,702 was obtained by taking into account advances recovered, or to be recovered, during the present financial year of 1899-1900. And this proceeding was misleading, because it gave the people the impression that there was a credit balance of £147,702 existing at the 30th June, 1899, whereas there was nothing of the kind. Further, in regard to the statement that the smaller sum of £116,357 was in the Bank, either this assertion was a fact, or it was not a fact. There is no use mincing matters: it was not a fact. On the 30th June, 1899, the total amount of money in the various Banks, both in Sydney and London, and in the hands of the Receiver at the Treasury, was only £1,596,737. To Trust Funds there was due a total sum of £3,514,595. To the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund there was not a single penny; on the contrary, that account was indebted to Trust Funds to the extent of £703,140. To the credit of the General Loan Account there was a sum of £66,882; but £1,500,000 had been taken from Trust Funds for this account, so that it was in debt to the Trust Accounts to the extent of £1,433,118. Against this, there was a sum of £218,400 at credit for Advances to Settlers, representing borrowings from Trust Funds under a special Act. In short, all the money in the possession of the Colony represented Trust Funds, and even then £2,136,258 less than the cash balances of the Trust Funds. Not only that, but the General Loan Account was further indebted to the Curator of Intestate Estates for a sum of £50,000 borrowed with the sanction of the Probate Judge. Still further, the Trust Funds included a sum of £2,415,000 borrowed by the Government from the Savings Bank of New South Wales; so that all the money in the Banks and in the Treasury was £818,263 less than the amount owing to the Barrack-street institution alone. Yet the people are asked to believe that Mr. Reid placed the accounts of the Colony on a cash basis; and Mr. Carruthers gets up in the Legislative Assembly and makes the assertion that on the 30th June, 1899, he had a sum of £116,356 12s. 7d. at credit in the Bank, and that this amount was to be afterwards increased to a surplus of £147,702. This is an extraordinary state of affairs, and the people of New South Wales have a right to demand that they shall be told how it arose. That is the course I intend to pursue.

Now, in order to give the taxpayers a clear idea of the present condition of the finances of the Colony, it is necessary to enter into an explanation of the Public Accounts in some detail. The accounts may be said to be divided into three. First, there are the Trust Accounts, representing funds to be applied towards specific purposes, which only come into the hands of the Colonial Treasurer as a Trustee. Some of these moneys, it might be said, come from outside sources, such as the money borrowed from the Savings Bank of New South Wales and the deposits in the Government Savings Bank, and some from inside sources, such as the Sinking Funds formed for the redemption of short-dated loans. If there were in existence a body of Public Trustees, appointed for the purpose of dealing with these Funds, then the moneys would not be administered by the Colonial Treasurer; but, under present circumstances, he is enabled, when he runs short of revenue or of Loan Funds, to carry on affairs with the trust moneys, and even to point to a surplus in the Bank. Secondly, there is the General Loan Account, representing the transactions in connection with the money borrowed for the purpose of erecting permanent reproductive works, and occasionally used by Government for many purposes towards which, in the judgment of prudent people, only revenue should be applied; also, in connection with this account, a Treasurer has been known, when the loan moneys have run short, and it has been inconvenient to raise the question of placing sufficient loans, to borrow from the Trust Funds without authority in order to maintain the General Loan Account in credit and allow expenditure to go on. Thirdly, and lastly, there is the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, in which the Treasurer is debited with the ordinary revenue of the Colony, and credited with its ordinary expenditure. When Mr. Reid assumed office towards the close of 1894, the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account had been divided into two branches. In the first place, there was the ordinary Revenue Account of the country; and, secondly, there was a Special Suspense Account—the Post Office New Street Resumption Account—representing the net expenditure on the resumption of land in Martin-place. This expenditure had been removed from the ordinary account by the Dibbs Government, when it was determined determined to hold over the sale of the remaining blocks of land until a more favourable opportunity offered, because it was recognised that when the land should be sold the proceeds would go very far in the direction of wiping out the deficiency arising from the transactions in connection with the formation of the new Post Office Street. After Mr. Reid took office, he formed another Special Suspense Account of the transactions in connection with the Centennial Park, as there was a quantity of land there which it was intended to sell in order to make up the difference between the revenue and expenditure. Still, although it was decided by the Government of the day to deal with the special transactions in connection with these matters in the way described, the action thus taken had not the effect of removing the debit balances on the two series of transactions from the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account. The Auditor-General, as in duty bound to do, has still kept cognizance of the two accounts, and taken into consideration the debit balances thereon in arriving at the financial position of the Colony at any given date. Indeed, he cannot do otherwise; for although it may be convenient for the Government of the day to be relieved of a cash deficit of half a million without conversion into Treasury bills, yet they cannot get away from that deficit in their banking account, and there it has always stood, and is staring every one in the face at the present day. Further, even on the so-called cash basis, the London accounts have only been brought up to the 30th April in each year; and apart altogether from the Special Suspense Accounts, the credit on the Consolidated Revenue Fund has never actually existed, because for the last three years it has always been less than the London payments in May and June. What, therefore, can be thought of a Treasurer who tells the people that he has placed the accounts on a cash basis, and has a surplus in the Bank, when he is aware that, first, there is a permanent cash overdraft of over half a million of money on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, which wipes out any ledger credit which may be claimed to exist; and, secondly, that at the end of the financial year, with the London payments brought to account, there has never been even a ledger credit? That is the state of affairs at the present day, and that is the state of affairs which has existed throughout Mr. Reid's administration, while all the time he has been proclaiming that he had a surplus in the Bank. Certainly, there was money in the Bank, but it was not standing at the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, but at the credit of Trust Funds, and actually represented part of the sum owing to the Savings Bank of New South Wales. Of course, Mr. Reid was not responsible for some of these transactions; but he has largely added to the balance at the debit of the Special Suspense Accounts during his tenure of office, and has boasted that he had a cash credit balance, which was not correct. But while the facts I have recited strike at the very root of Mr. Reid's cash system of accounts, they are not the chief cause of his offending. It is in the ordinary revenue and expenditure of the country, apart from the transactions mentioned, that Mr. Reid has found his greatest opportunity. In order to indicate the exact position of affairs, it is necessary to explain that the revenue is set down under the four heads of taxation—Land Revenue, Receipts from Services Rendered (such as the Railways), and General Miscellaneous Receipts. These headings cover the ordinary revenue coming into the Treasury from outside sources—the only sources of actual income. But, in addition to these moneys, there are certain advances recovered and brought to account by every Treasurer when the liabilities in connection with which they have been made are properly charged; while, as an example of what may also be taken into revenue, it may be said that in 1895 and 1895-6 Mr. Reid thought it a fitting opportunity to transfer to the Consolidated Revenue Fund from the General Loan Account accrued interest and premiums on loans amounting to £366,436—a windfall such as no future Treasurer can hope to find—while a further sum of £25,117 from this source was carried direct to revenue. Against the revenue as thus set forth, there is placed the expenditure of the country, consisting of the expenses incurred in the administration of the great service with which the State has charged itself, such as the railways and tramways, and of the actual cost of governing the people, set down under the headings of Special Appropriations and Annual Appropriations, the latter again being distributed between the various Departments of the State owning a Ministerial head, to which have to be added advances made and to be subsequently recovered as explained. This is the constitution of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, the operations of which Mr. Reid claimed to have conducted so successfully as to secure an uninterrupted series of "surpluses," representing, according to his statements in Committee of Ways and Means, £333,296 in 1895-6, £120,092 in 1896-7, and £135,109 in 1897-8, but in reality, according to the Auditor-General, ledger credits of £300,535 in the year 1895-6, £84,831 in 1896-7, and £92,274 in 1897-8; and lastly, which have produced Mr. Carruthers' surplus of £147,702 in 1898-9, to which reference has been made. Before subjecting the processes by which these alleged surpluses were obtained to a strict scrutiny, there is one further point in connection with the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account which must be explained. That has reference to the Church and School lands, which under the new Act of 1897 were transferred to the control of the Minister for Lands, and the future income derived from their alienation or use ordered to be paid into the Consolidated Revenue Fund, to be treated as ordinary revenue of the Colony—another device to secure revenue in order to make provision for the stereotyped surplus. Prior to that date the revenue from these lands had been placed to the Public Instruction Endowment Account, which formed part of the Trust Funds; and under the new Act of 1897 the accumulated amount at the credit of this Fund, £202,500, although carried to the Consolidated Revenue Fund, could not be treated as ordinary receipts, but was to be kept separate in order to be applied solely to the purpose of the erection and maintenance of Public School Buildings. To that purpose it is being applied. The securities in which part of the Funds were invested are being converted into cash, and in June, 1898, the amount at credit was £154,568, of which £119,272 was represented by securities and £35,296 by cash; and in June, 1899, the total amount at credit was £78,126, all of which was represented by cash, the whole of the securities having been converted—£92,500 advanced to the Under Secretary for Public Instruction, and £8,615 transferred to the Consolidated Revenue Current Account—on the plea that this sum represented "surplus receipts" to 20th December, 1897, derived from Church and School Lands. It will, therefore, be understood that as the reduced credit of £78,126 was not treated as ordinary revenue it did not affect directly the balances of the ordinary operations on the Consolidated Revenue Fund; but as it represented so much cash in the Bank, the sum in question must be taken into consideration when dealing with the Bank balances. Accordingly the cash overdraft of £703,140 on the Consolidated Revenue Fund at 30th June, 1899, as already stated, actually represents £781,266, brought down to that amount by the credit of £78,126 for Public School buildings.

The first question to be put specifically by the people in connection with Mr. Reid's surpluses is this: Did they, or did they not, represent cash in the Bank, as was stated? To that question the information already given supplies the answer: They did not. First, because the London payments in May and June had not been brought to account in the financial year; and, secondly, because the cash overdraft on the Special Suspense Accounts was, in any case, larger than the credit claimed. But that simply proves that Mr. Reid's cash system of accounts was a delusion—it does not prove that he had not an excess of revenue over expenditure during his tenure of office. Had he such an excess of revenue? Let the Auditor-General answer this question down to June, 1893, and let the Treasury statements answer it for the following year. Mr. Reid assumed office in the latter part of 1894. At the end of that year, according to the Auditor-General (see page 149 of his latest Report), the deficiency on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account as a whole—that is, including the Special Suspense Accounts—was £2,735,511, while in June, 1898 (see page 151 of the same Report) the deficiency had increased to £2,898,713. That represented an increase of £163,202 in 3½ years. According to the Treasury statements, there was, including advances and the Suspense Accounts, an excess of expenditure last year of £8,816; so that if we accept this sum as correct (subject, of course, to after investigation by the Auditor-General), we have the deficiency on the 30th June, 1899, increased to £2,907,529. From this sum, however, we must deduct £150,000 for the Treasury bills redeemed during the year, bringing the amount down to £2,757,529. Therefore, during the 4½ years from December, 1894, to June, 1899, a sum of £22,018 was added to the accumulated deficiency. That is sufficiently startling in face of Mr. Reid's vaunted surpluses. But that is not all. By statute, the Government of the day is compelled to redeem annually from current revenue—as indicated above—Treasury bills to the amount of £150,000, in redemption of the deficiency on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account. Therefore, by the operation of statute, the deficiency of £2,735,511 existing at the end of 1894 ought to have been reduced by £675,000 in 4½ years, bringing the amount in June, 1899, down to £2,060,511. At this date, however, the actual deficiency was £2,757,529, so that a fresh deficit of £697,018 had been created since the 31st December, 1894—that is, provided £675,000 had been paid off. This, however, was not done. The Act says that the sum of £150,000 shall be appropriated in December of each year for redemption purposes, and as there were only four Decembers in the period under review, Mr. Reid redeemed Bills to the amount of £600,000. But bills to the amount of £600,000 he boasts that he has redeemed; therefore, at the least the new deficiency created, according to the actual balances, was £622,018, in addition to a failure to redeem £75,000 of these bills. Yet Mr. Reid tells the country that it has been paying its way, and that he has had a surplus every year. Surely the people have a right to know the circumstances under which this state of things has been made possible.

APPENDIX.

Dealing with the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account as a whole, including Suspense Accounts, I find that the actual revenue and expenditure, excluding advances and transfers, in the 4½ years under review, were :—

	Actual Revenue.	Actual Expenditure.	Excess of Expenditure.
1895 (6 months)	£4,533,452	£5,057,282	£523,830
1895-6	9,232,371	9,877,875	645,504
1896-7	9,287,903	9,474,217	186,314
1897-8	9,477,450	9,397,601	*79,849
1898-9	9,755,108	9,734,417	*20,691
Total	£42,286,284	£43,541,392	£1,255,108

* Excess of Revenue

These figures are based on an independent examination of the Public Accounts, and differ slightly from those of the Treasury. During the first six months of 1895 there was an excess of expenditure of £523,830; during the year 1895-6, an excess of expenditure of £645,504; during 1896-7, an excess of expenditure of £186,314; during 1897-8, an excess of revenue of £79,849; and during 1898-9, an excess of revenue of £20,691. In the whole period of 4½ years the revenue fell short of the expenditure by £1,255,108. But we have seen that the new deficiency created in that time was only £622,019, casting aside the £75,000 Treasury Bills which Mr. Reid did not redeem. Therefore, there is a difference of £633,090 to be accounted for before the revenue can balance the expenditure, and when that is done, Mr. Reid's surpluses have to be found. Part of the difference was made up by the advances recovered and brought to account, as given below. According to the Treasury, there was, apart from the Suspense Accounts, a cash debit balance on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account of £464,718 at the 31st December, 1894, while, according to the Auditor-General, the amount was £447,603. During the period under review this difference was adjusted, and the balances brought into harmony; but in order to avoid the introduction of a further disturbing element, and thus secure simplicity as far as possible, the advances have been adjusted here, the matter being an important one :—

	Net Advances Recovered.	Net Advances Made.
1895 (6 months)	£318,347
1895-6	50,310
1896-7	£27,612
1897-8	76,902
1898-9	29,507
Total	£234,636

Thus, the excess of expenditure is reduced from £1,255,108 to £1,020,472; and as there is a good deal to be said in favour of treating the advances recovered as revenue in this investigation, seeing that the corresponding liabilities are in part brought to account at the same time, the latter sum of £1,020,472 may be regarded as the Reid deficiency, with this important proviso—that this sum is obtained on the basis of the actual operations on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, and is still further increased by any operations not carried out or brought to account, such as the £75,000 already referred to, and another extraordinary case in which a charge of £150,000 on current revenue for redemption purposes was met from Trust Funds. But accepting, for the moment, the deficit of £1,020,470 established on the actual operations, this must be reconciled with the actual sum of £622,018 added to the deficiency. It is evident, of course, that Mr. Reid must have taken into revenue a sum of money which was not derived from one of the legitimate sources already described. This is what he actually did. He took into revenue the following sums of accrued interest and premiums on loans, about £366,436, representing direct transfers from the General Loan Account in 1895 and 1895-6 :—

	Accrued Interest and Premiums on Loans.
1895 (6 months)	£370,817
1895-6	22,067
1896-7	456
1897-8	5,114
1898-9	Nil
Total	398,454

In this way the deficiency, on the basis of the actual operations on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, was reduced from £1,020,472 to £622,018—the sum proved to exist by the ledger balances on the 30th June, 1899. The results may be brought together in this form, including in the deficiency the £150,000 taken from Trust Funds, which will be fully explained later on :—

(Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, 1st January, 1895, to 30th June, 1899.)

Actual Expenditure charged to Account	£43,541,392

Less Actual Revenue from proper sources	42,286,284
Excess of Expenditure in 4½ years	£1,405,108
Less Advances recovered in excess of Advances made (adjusted)	234,636

Deficiency, June, 1899	£2,757,529
New Deficiency, according to actual Balance	£622,018

Now, the people will ask how, in face of these figures, has Mr. Reid been enabled to show a succession of surpluses:—has it been due to the exclusion of the operations on the Special Suspense Accounts from the transactions of which the Treasurer took cognizance in establishing his balances? In part, yes; but only to a small extent. The additions to both Suspense

Suspense Accounts between the 31st December, 1894, and the 30th June, 1899, only represented a net expenditure of £177,472; therefore, there is left a sum of £444,546 by which the current revenue was further relieved. Consequently, a division of the ordinary liabilities of the Colony must have been made, and only part met from current revenue. Such a division was made—under cover of the Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895—on the plea that the course followed was necessary in order to place the accounts on a cash basis. Rightly, to get down to a cash basis it was only necessary to do one thing—to treat as revenue for a year all the moneys received within that year, and to treat as expenditure for a year all the moneys paid away in that year. For although the year in which the change was made would be burdened by liabilities in connection with business started in previous years, yet these liabilities would be counterbalanced by those carried forward to the following year. And this state of things would always continue, for it is plain that you cannot finish up all the State business transactions on the 30th June of each year. It was decided to make the change from the 1st July, 1895; and Mr. Reid, by the aid of his Parliamentary majority, obtained permission to make a further issue of Treasury Bills, not merely to take up the cash overdraft existing at the end of 1894, not merely to take up the cash overdraft existing at the end of his own half-year of 1895, but also to meet those ordinary liabilities in connection with business started prior to the 1st July, 1895, which, in the ordinary course of business, would come to be presented for payment after that date. This division of the ordinary liabilities of the Colony—liabilities which all previous Governments had to meet from current revenue—enabled Mr. Reid to begin the production of an unreal surplus. Part of the ordinary liabilities of the year 1895-6 were met from current revenue, and part charged to the proceeds of the new issue of Treasury Bills. The first series of transactions were treated under the "New Account Current"; the second under the "Old Deficiency Account." As Mr. Reid in this way only charged to revenue a portion of the ordinary liabilities of the Colony falling due in 1895-6, he was enabled at the end of that year to secure a nominal "surplus" of £300,535 on his "New Account Current," after further relieving that account by the expenditure which he charged to the Suspense Accounts. For that year, and the next two years, I take the balances on Mr. Reid's "New Account Current" as established by the Auditor-General, adding the amount deducted by that officer for the Suspense Accounts; and for the year 1898-9, I take the sum of £147,702 mentioned by Mr. Carruthers in his financial statement, and which I have already shown to be incorrect: then we have—

So-called surplus	£300,535, on 30th June, 1896 (Auditor-General.)
Reduced to	84,831, on 30th June, 1897 do
Increased to	92,274, on 30th June, 1898 do
Increased to	147,702, on 30th June, 1899 (Carruthers).

First of all, attention is directed to the fact that it has been claimed that every one of these balances was a "surplus," and that this represented cash in the Bank. As a matter of fact, the credit of £300,535 on the 30th June, 1896, obtained in the way described after charging part of the ordinary liabilities of the year to Treasury Bills, had been reduced to £84,831 on the 30th June, 1897; therefore, there was an actual deficit of £215,704 on the transactions of the year 1896-7, while Mr. Reid boasted that what remained of his former ledger credit represented another large surplus. In the following year the ledger credit on the "New Account Current" was increased to £92,274, a credit balance £7,443 on the operations charged to that account, while Mr. Reid again came forward and claimed the total existing ledger credit as a "surplus." Of course, the credits claimed by Mr. Reid were actually larger than these, because he took into account, in order to make up his balance, the unexpended proceeds of the Treasury Bills. This, however, may be clearly brought out in connection with Mr. Carruthers' "surplus" of £147,702. Even the combined ledger credit balances of the "New Account Current" and the "Old Deficiency Account" on the 30th June, 1899, were only £116,523, apart from the Suspense Accounts; therefore, we have to deduct from £147,702 the sum of £31,179, representing advances recovered and to be recovered after the close of the financial year; then, still further, we have to deduct £34,141, being the credit on the "Old Deficiency Account" on the 30th June, 1899, bringing the ledger credit on the Account Current at that date down to £82,382. So that the ledger balance at the credit of this account at the end of each of the last four years was:—

So-called surplus	£300,535 on 30th June, 1896 (Auditor-General.)
Reduced to	84,831 on 30th June, 1897 do
Increased to	92,274 on 30th June, 1898 do
Reduced to	82,382 on 30th June, 1899 (Calculated).

Well, one would think that this would have been sufficient for Mr. Reid. To obtain a credit balance of £300,535 on 30th June, 1896, in the way described, was no common feat, and as will be seen, it was subsequently of immense service in staving off an acknowledged deficit. But even the device of charging part of the ordinary liabilities falling due in 1895-6 to Treasury Bills was not sufficient to preserve the "surplus" from extinction; consequently, other means had to be resorted to. First of all, there is the redemption of £150,000 Treasury Bills annually in extinction of the deficiency on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, to which reference has already been made. We have seen that during the four and a half years Bills to the amount of £600,000 have been redeemed, so that nothing has been allowed for the first half year of 1895. This may be excusable, since the Act authorises the appropriation of £150,000 in each December towards redemption, and no December fell within the period of January-June, 1895. But here is an extraordinary fact. Of the £150,000 redeemed during 1895-6—that is to say, in December, 1895—the sum of £75,000 only was charged to the "New Account Current," and £75,000 was charged to the "Old Deficiency Account," or, in other words, to the proceeds of the new issue of Treasury Bills. So that, for the last four complete years, only £525,000 Treasury Bills have been redeemed from the current revenue instead of £600,000. Deducting the difference of £75,000 short charged from Mr. Reid's credit balance, we get these results:—

So-called surplus	£225,535, 30th June, 1896
Reduced to	9,831, 30th June, 1897
Increased to	17,274, 30th June, 1898
Reduced to	7,382, 30th June, 1899

Another of the transactions by which the "surplus" on the "New Account Current" was obtained was the charging back to the year 1893 of a sum of £153,514 expenditure on roads in 1895-6, thereby actually defraying this item from the New Treasury Bills, on the extraordinary plea that the previous Government had failed to maintain the roads in a state of proper repair. The unfairness of this proceeding is manifest from a comparison of the amounts spent on roads out of revenue during the four years 1891 to 1894 with the amount so expended during the four years from 30th June, 1895, to 30th June, 1899. In the first period the amount was £2,716,123; and in the second period, £2,309,509. But even this sum of £2,309,509, representing expenditure within the years 1895-99, was not all charged to current revenue; only £1,977,226, or an average of £494,306 per annum, was dealt with in the "New Account Current," the balance of £332,283 being charged to the "Old Deficiency Account." If we take the smaller sum of £153,514 spent in 1895-6, and charged back to Treasury Bills, and place it against Mr. Reid's Account—a very fair proceeding—then his credit balance becomes:—

So-called surplus	£72,021, 30th June, 1896.
Converted into a deficiency of	143,683, 30th June, 1897.
Reduced to deficiency of	136,240, 30th June, 1898.
Increased to a deficiency of	146,132, 30th June, 1899.

In the third place, there is the fact that the sand-shifting work given to the unemployed at the Centennial Park was not charged to current revenue, but to the Special Suspense Account, so that the burden was really passed on to the present Ministry. The sum spent in this manner and charged to the Centennial Park Account was about £25,000, which would affect the balance thus:—

So-called surplus	£47,021, 30th June, 1896.
Converted into a deficiency of	168,683, 30th June, 1897.
Reduced to a deficiency of	161,240, 30th June, 1898.
Increased to a deficiency of	171,132, 30th June, 1899.

And in the fourth place, there is a transaction in connection with the Railway Loan Resumption Fund which must be mentioned. Under the Railway Loan Act of 1867 (31 Vic. No. 11) a sum of one million pounds was borrowed for the completion of certain railway lines, the debentures bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent., and having a currency of 30 years. It was provided that for the first four years the sum of £50,000 should be appropriated for the payment of interest, and afterwards the sum of £70,000 annually towards (1) payment of interest; (2) reduction and final extinction of loan by payment of £20,000 as a Sinking Fund of 2 per cent. by annual drawings; (3) purchase of debentures. Afterwards, the Act 53 Vic. No. 23 (1889) authorised the issue of a loan for a large amount, including one million pounds for the reconstruction and improvement of railway rolling-stock and permanent way, and in order to recoup this amount from revenue a short Act, 53 Vic. No. 24, was passed at the same time, providing for the appropriation annually of a further sum

sum of £75,000, to be placed to a Sinking Fund to be used for the extinction of a million pounds of the public debt of the railways, the money to be applied from time to time in redemption of debentures as they might become due. For the first eight years after the loan of 1867 was issued, the full appropriation was used as provided by the Act; but from 1867 down to 1890 small balances, ranging from £267 to £5,135, were unused, and, of course, the revenue account got the advantage of these. In 1891 the payments became much less, dropping to £55,675; and during Mr. Reid's tenure of office only £15,670, instead of £70,000, was paid in 1895-6, and £38,235, instead of £70,000, in 1896-7, his "New Account Current" benefiting to the extent of £90,095 in those two years. Consequently, when the outstanding debentures matured at the 1st January, 1898, it was found that instead of the last annual appropriation of £70,000 being sufficient to meet all the liabilities, the total liability actually existing amounted to £206,700, of which £204,300 was paid in 1897-8, and £2,400 carried forward to 1898-9. But the sum of £204,300 was not provided out of current revenue, as should have been the case, the revenue having benefited to a very large extent by the short payments; instead, Mr. Reid took £150,000 standing at the credit of the Railway Loan Redemption Fund established under Acts 53 Vic. Nos. 23 and 24, and charged only the balance of £54,300 to the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account—£15,700 less than the ordinary annual appropriation of £70,000. And, as the Auditor-General says, this amount of £150,000 must be paid back to the Trust Funds from the Consolidated Revenue Fund in order to extinguish the second million, the redemption of which was provided for under the 1889 Act—one of the burdens passed on to the present Government. If we charge Mr. Reid's "New Account Current" with this sum of £150,000 taken from Trust Funds, we have:—

So-called surplus	£ 47,021, 30th June, 1896.
Converted into a deficiency of	168,683, 30th June, 1897.
Increased to a deficiency of	311,240, 30th June, 1898.
Increased to a deficiency of	321,182, 30th June, 1899.

Well, so much for Mr. Reid's "New Account Current" and his succession of "surpluses." The transactions which I have recited have been necessary in order to maintain those "surpluses" even after the issue of Treasury Bills to meet current liabilities. The amount of Bills thus issued was £1,174,700, but £150,000 were afterwards cancelled, leaving the net sum at £1,024,700. At the end of 1894 there was, according to the Auditor-General, whose figures differed slightly from those of the Treasury, a cash overdraft of £982,627 on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, or one of £447,603 if the Suspense Accounts be left out of consideration. Then, in the half-year of 1895, there were payments and advances made on account of that period and previous years amounting to £4,961,154, while the revenue and receipts in the six months January-June, 1895, including the transfer of accrued interest on loans from the General Loan Account, amounted to £5,259,419, reducing the amount of the cash overdraft on the operations, exclusive of suspense, to £149,342 according to the Auditor-General, at the 30th June, 1895. During the year 1895-6 the new issue of Treasury Bills was brought to account; yet, although Mr. Reid professed to establish the accounts on a cash basis, and to get down to the bank balances, he left a sum of between £500,000 and £600,000 remaining at the debit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund on the Suspense Accounts, and only converted into Treasury Bills the overdraft on ordinary operations of £149,342. That is to say, Mr. Reid issued Treasury Bills to the amount of £1,174,700, afterwards reduced to £1,024,700, to extinguish a cash overdraft of £149,342, the balance of £874,358 being intended to cover a deficiency of the future, as Mr. McMillan aptly stated when the course thus taken was proposed. Of this amount of £874,358 a sum of £33,988 was still unexpended at 30th June, 1898, according to the Auditor-General, and by recoveries in the following year this was probably £34,141 in June, 1899; this balance, however, has not been without its usefulness, for, as we have seen, it was found handy in magnifying the amount of the perennial surplus. That leaves a net sum of £840,217, which was expended in meeting the liabilities of 1894 and January-June, 1895, which ought to have been charged to the current revenue, including, of course, the advances recovered and taken to revenue; for it must not be forgotten that the cash overdraft existing at June, 1895, included a sum of advances which were afterwards recovered and brought to account, and in allowing these to be taken to credit of subsequent years provision is made for the establishment of the true cash system of accounts, namely, for all the moneys received within a year to constitute the revenue for that year, and all moneys paid away within a year, including business started in preceding years, to constitute the expenditure for that year.

Now, in connection with the "Old Deficiency Account" there is an important point to which attention must be directed. This is the fact that Mr. Reid did not make the change in the accounts at the end of 1894, but at June, 1895, so that he could meet liabilities of his own creation from Treasury Bills, and as a consequence of this action he has always protested against a comparison with the accounts at the end of 1894, preferring to deal with them from 1st July, 1895, after a great deal of mischief had been wrought. But, dealing with the Accounts at 30th June, 1895, it is found that the net payments from Treasury Bills since that date on account of the services of 1894 and previous years have been less than a quarter of a million, the great bulk of the proceeds from the Bills being applied towards the liquidation of the liabilities of the half-year of 1895. It is claimed in some quarters that only £153,000 was paid on account of this half-year, and that the balance was paid on account of 1894 and previous years; but this contention involves the supposition that a cash sum of nearly half a million was carried forward from 30th June, 1895, to the year 1895-6, to meet the liabilities of 1895 paid in that year, and that a corresponding amount of liabilities of 1894 and previous years, actually paid in 1895, was paid out of nothing. The operations on the proceeds of the Treasury Bills will be clearly seen in the following statement, which has been compiled from the Treasury returns; but it must be explained that the cash overdraft with which the operations open differs from the amount established at 31st December, 1894, by the Auditor-General, and already used in this investigation, while, according to that official, part of the later charges against the proceeds should be charged to current revenue. This accounts for the fact that the sum of £1,019,158 is shown to have been expended out of the net proceeds of £1,024,700, while the Auditor-General has a balance of about £34,000 left of the proceeds; the statement only being submitted to show the allocation of the proceeds, without admitting the accuracy of the Treasury contention:—

It is contended by the late Government that the course pursued in issuing Treasury Bills to meet all liabilities falling due after the 30th June, 1895, on account of business begun prior to that date, was the proper course to take in establishing the accounts on a cash basis, and it is denied that this action had the effect of relieving current revenue in 1895-6 and following years of a portion of the ordinary liabilities of the country. Fortunately, the question is one which can be decided by an examination of the facts of the case. It is true that when the previous lot of Treasury Bills were issued in aid of revenue the deficiency was made up by including all liabilities which would afterwards be presented for payment on account of the period dealt with. That was right and proper, because on the old system of accounts these liabilities would be charged back to the years included in the period for which the deficiency was established, and the succeeding years so relieved would be correspondingly burdened by the liabilities which would subsequently be charged back to them. But when the second deficiency was established by Mr. Reid, he included in the amount of the deficiency all the liabilities which would, in the ordinary course of business, be presented in the year 1895-6, and in this way largely relieved that year's revenue of a portion of the ordinary expenses of government, while at the same time he instituted a new system of keeping the public accounts which prevented the year 1895-6 from being charged with liabilities in connection with business started in that year, and falling due in 1896-7 and following years. The proper course to pursue, in view of the change to the cash basis system, was simply to issue Treasury Bills for the amount of the cash debit balance on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account at the 30th June, 1895, for although 1895-6 would be burdened by liabilities coming forward from previous years, yet it would be relieved by liabilities carried forward to 1896-7, and so on in each of the following years.

The only argument which can be advanced against this contention is, that it was possible, under the new system, to charge the year 1895-6 with its full expenditure; but if this argument were founded on fact, then the expenditure of the Colony charged to 1895-6 would be equal to the ordinary annual expenditure, unless it could be shown that certain economies had been permanently effected. On the other hand, if my contention is correct, then we might expect the following to happen:—(1) As the net liabilities defrayed from Treasury Bills in 1895-6 amounted to £845,506, then the expenditure charged to 1895-6 would be about £850,000 below the average annual expenditure; (2) in 1896-7 there would be very little expended from Treasury Bills, but as economies to the amount of £300,000 were effected by the Public Service Board, the expenditure charged to the year would be about £300,000 below the average, and as taxation was reduced by about the same amount, and the diminished expenditure of 1895-6 only produced a ledger surplus of £300,000, we might expect that most of that ledger surplus would be necessary for the year 1896-7; (3) in 1897-8 the expenditure would be normal, that is, the average of previous years, less the £300,000 savings in the Public Service, but as taxation was still reduced by £200,000, then we might expect all kinds of expedients to be resorted to in order to preserve the equilibrium between revenue and expenditure; (4) these expedients would be fairly successful at first, but in 1898-9 we might expect discovery, and a deficit actually foreshadowed by the Government for the following year.

Now, is this not what actually happened? Look at the expenditure, exclusive of Suspense Accounts, charged to each year since 1893:—

1893	£9,817,000
1894	9,695,000
1895 (six months).....	4,712,000
1895-6	8,899,000
1896-7	9,466,000
1897-8	9,398,000
1898-9	9,734,000

Then, the following results are established:—(1) The average expenditure charged to 1893 and 1894 was £9,756,000, and the expenditure charged to 1895-6 was £857,000 less than that average; (2) in 1896-7 the expenditure should be the average, less £300,000 represented by economies effected by the Public Service Board, that is, £9,456,000; it was actually £9,466,000; an expenditure of £8,899,000 having given a ledger surplus of £300,000 in 1895-6, an expenditure of £9,466,000 ought to produce a deficit of a quarter of a million—there was actually a deficit of £216,000; (3) the expenditure was normal in 1897-8, less the economies of £300,000, and we have seen the expedients which were resorted to; (4) the expenditure in 1898-9 now begins to approach the figure of 1893 and 1894, in consequence of the expansion of services, and the Government submits estimates foreshadowing a deficit; the true state of the Colony's finances cannot longer be concealed, as the advantages gained from the change in the system of accounts and the retrenchment knife of the Public Service Commissioners have all been reaped.

Before examining the bank balances, and showing the true financial position of the country, apart from the ledger balances which have been dealt with, reference must again be made to Mr. Carruthers' "surplus" of £147,702, in order to show that his explanation of the difference between the amount brought forward and the credit as given by the Auditor-General was altogether incorrect; and I may further be excused for again referring to the matter, for as the amount has been carried forward to meet liabilities in the current year, it becomes of great interest. The manner in which that "surplus" of £147,702 was obtained has already been indicated. The amount brought forward by Mr. Carruthers from 30th June, 1898, is £135,109, while the Auditor-General states that the credit on the "New Account Current" at that date was only £62,363. How is the difference accounted for? Mr. Carruthers is explicit on that point. He said in his Financial Statement that in 1897-8 the Auditor-General discovered that it was right to charge against the "New Account Current" a sum of £75,000 which should have been actually charged against 1895-6, being half of the £150,000 Treasury Bills redeemed in that year; that this sum of £75,000 had already been charged to Current Account by the Treasurer in 1895-6; and that it was, therefore, unfair on the part of the Auditor-General to come forward now and take away £75,000 from the Treasurer's "surplus"; and if you add £75,000 to the balance of £62,363 stated by the Auditor-General to be at the credit of the "New Account Current" on the 30th June, 1898, you practically get the "surplus" of £135,109 brought forward to the year 1898-9. Now, all this is very plausible, but it is not correct. The difference, as already shown, is to be accounted for in quite another direction. It is true that the Auditor-General transferred £75,000 from the "New Account Current," to the "Old Deficiency Account" in 1897-8 on account of the year 1895-6. I have set down above the balances at credit of the "New Account Current," as stated by the Auditor-General, at £300,535 on 30th June, 1896; £84,831 on 30th June, 1897; and £92,274 on 30th June, 1898. Of course, these are the amounts after we withdraw the Suspense Account transaction. The Auditor-General does not recognise the right of the Treasurer to place the expenditure at the Centennial Park and at Martin-place in Suspense; therefore, he takes this expenditure prior to 1st July, 1895, into consideration in striking the balance on the "Old Deficiency Account," and in striking the balance on the "New Account Current" he also takes cognizance of similar expenditure since 1st July, 1895. Excluding the Suspense Accounts, the balances of the Auditor-General on the "New Account Current" were as I have stated, and placing them alongside his balances on the "Old Deficiency Account," we get these results:—

	Ledger Credit on "Old Deficiency Account."	Ledger Credit on "New Account Current."
30th June, 1896.....	*£177,354	£300,535
30th June, 1897.....	33,664	84,831
30th June, 1898.....	33,988	92,274

* £150,000 Treasury Bills afterwards cancelled.

The amounts in the first column represent unexpended proceeds from the new issue of Treasury Bills. Now, it is the case that the balances as stated are only found after taking into consideration an adjustment made by the Auditor-General in 1897-8. At first they stood as follows in the statements of that official:—

	Ledger Credit on "Old Deficiency Account."	Ledger Credit on "New Account Current."
30th June, 1896.....	£102,354	£375,535
30th June, 1897 (Dr.)	41,336	159,831

In 1897-8 a sum of £75,000 was transferred by the Auditor-General from the New Account to the Old, and for this reason. As I have pointed out, Mr. Reid charged £75,000 of the £150,000 Treasury Bills redeemed in December, 1895, to the "Old Deficiency Account"—to the proceeds of Treasury Bills in fact—and only £75,000 to his "New Account Current.

Current" In some way or other in the Audit Office the whole sum of £150,000 was charged back to the "Old Deficiency Account," and in 1897 8 the re transfer of £75,000 was made, bringing the Audit Office figures into line with those of the Treasury. The charge had already been made on the New Account by the Treasurer, and the Auditor General's adjustment had not the effect of making a second charge on the new account; so that Mr Carruthers' explanation is entirely wrong. As a matter of fact, the difference is accounted for in this way. The Auditor General gave the Account Current a ledger credit balance of £62,363 on the 30th June, 1898. Adding to this the expenditure in connection with the Special Suspense Accounts since the 1st July, 1895, to the amount of £23,911, charged by the Auditor General but not by the Treasurer, we get a ledger credit of £92,274 to be brought forward to the year 1898 9. The "Surplus" actually brought forward was £135,109. What did this amount include? It included the unexpended balance of the proceeds of the new issue of Treasury Bills, £33,988, standing at the credit of the "Old Deficiency Account," according to the Auditor General. Together these sums make £126,262. The actual ledger credit balance of the Treasury at 30th June, 1898, as shown in the public accounts, was £122,211, which is brought up to the Auditor General's figure by adding a sum of £4,051, which was charged to the current account by Mr Reid instead of to suspense, and which was brought back to credit in 1898 9. The sum of £135,109 brought forward by Mr Carruthers did not represent the ledger credit at 30th June, 1898, at all, but the balance struck in Committee of Ways and Means by including advances recovered, or to be recovered, in 1898 9.

In this way Mr Carruthers brought forward a "surplus" of £135,109, which afforded a basis for the creation of another "surplus" of £147,702 to be carried forward to the current year, 1899-1900. That is the amount the Government are asked to regard as available to meet current liabilities. It includes a sum of £34,141 (adding to £33,988 at 30th June, 1898, £153 recovered and taken into revenue in 1898-9) which we cannot fairly use at all, if we follow the Auditor General, as it represents proceeds of Treasury Bills. And it further includes a sum of £31,179 which represents advances recovered or to be recovered after the financial year closed, and which, on the cash basis, are brought to account in the current year. That is to say, as previously explained, Mr Carruthers had not a ledger credit of £147,702 on 30th June, 1899, but one of £116,523, and this latter sum included £34,141 standing at the credit of the "Old Deficiency Account," leaving £82,382 as the balance at the credit of the Account Current. And this sum of £82,382, like the credit of £34,141 to the "Old Deficiency Account," is purely a Ledger Balance, and has no existence except in the books of the Treasury. As a matter of fact, here is the state of the Cash Accounts at 30th June, 1899. In addition to the debit shown, it is to be remembered that the General Loan Account owes £50,000 to the Curator of Intestate Estates, so that the Debit Balance of that Account was actually £1,483 118 —

It is difficult to find any surplus there, seeing that the total Credit Balance in the Banks in Sydney and London, and in hands of the Receiver at the Treasury, was £1,917,858 less than the amount which should be there on account of Trust Funds, not a penny of Revenue, not a penny of Loan moneys except the sum of £218,400 available for the purposes of advances to settlers. The actual state of the ledger balances at the 30th June, 1899, was —

Now, it will be seen these balances do not agree with the cash balances, and this is proof that, apart altogether from the Special Suspense Accounts, Mr Reid never got down to the cash basis claimed. As a matter of fact, as before explained, the accounts, as they are made up at the close of the financial year under the present system, only bring the London transactions down to the 30th April, and to arrive at the cash balances on the 30th June it is necessary to bring to account the transactions of May and June. This is not a condition of things for which Mr Reid is responsible—it has been in existence for a great many years, but it was certainly Mr Reid's boast that he had established the accounts on a cash basis and had a surplus in the bank, when actually the affairs of the Colony were only carried on because there was a sufficiently sufficiently large sum of Trust Funds in the bank to afford working balances for the Revenue and Loan Accounts. What would be the result if these Trust Funds were withdrawn to morrow and placed in the hands of a body of independent Commissioners is evident. Bringing the London transactions in May and June, 1899, to account, we have the following —

That was the state of affairs on the 30th June, 1899, when Mr Carruthers proclaimed that he had a surplus of £147,702, and said — "Now, Honorable Members may ask that very pertinent question which I have heard so frequently asked, 'Where is this surplus?' There is a cash balance to the credit of the fund in the banks of £116,356 12s 7d." At the date mentioned there was in reality a debit balance on the "New Account Current" of £118,939, being part of a debit balance of £703,140 on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, or £781,266 after taking away the sum standing at the credit of Church and School Lands, which ought to be strictly applied to the erection and maintenance of public school buildings. Not only that, but the debit balance on the General Loan Account was actually £1,483,118, in consequence of £50,000 having been borrowed from the Curator of Intestate Estates; and all the moneys in the banks and the Treasury were £1,917,858 less than the cash balances of the trust funds ought to have been, and £818,263 less than the amount owing to the Barrack street Savings Bank.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS.

(TWENTIETH ANNUAL REPORT.)

To the Honorable T. H. Hassall, M.P., Secretary for Lands.

Sir,

Department of Lands, Sydney, 31 July, 1900.

I have the honor to submit for your information the Twentieth Annual Report of business of the Department, being that for the year 1899.

During the year under review, fresh legislation of a new and important character was passed, the effect of which will, no doubt, be watched with special interest. For some time past the question of appraising the capital value of conditional purchases gradually developed into one which it was thought necessary seriously to face, and on the 29th December last an Act dealing with it came into operation. The Crown Lands Acts from 1861 downwards placed a statutory value of £1 per acre on all lands open to selection, the only departure from this standard having been made by the Act of 1884, in the direction of placing a higher price on lands deemed to have a higher value. No doubt the statutory price was unnecessarily rigid, it being quite obvious that all lands cannot possibly be of a uniform value. The Crown, while agreeing to break through its contract with those who claimed to have paid too much, could not, of course, repudiate its contract with those who paid too little; and, therefore, as no selectors will avail themselves of the provisions of the Act, except those who see a possibility, or probability, of a reduction of price, the expectation must be that the Revenue will in some degree suffer. Against this result has, of course, to be set the larger benefits calculated to flow from the fact of landholders being relieved of financial burdens admitted to have been in excess of what they should have been called upon to bear.

The Act in question restricts the privilege of appraisalment to those who are actually in residence on the land, in other words, to those whose livelihood is, presumably, derived from the land, and one cost of a reduction of price will be a new term of residence over and above, though in some cases possibly concurrent with, the term of residence required by the particular Act under which the land happened to have been taken up. Where the land has not passed out of the hands of the original selector, the new term of residence is dispensed with, the presumption being that he selected the land for his own use and benefit, and, such being the case, that he belongs to the class of selectors for whose benefit the Act was specially designed.

The value of the land will be determined by the Local Land Board on an unimproved basis, and taking its value at the date the appraisalment was applied for. The Crown and the Selector will have to face each other in open Court, but either party will have the right to appeal to the Land Appeal Court should dissatisfaction be felt with the Land Board's valuation. Should an alteration of price eventuate, the annual instalments will vary with the alteration, falling or rising according as the original price is reduced or increased, and this, in the case of a reduction of price, is where the Selector will obtain the immediate benefit.

So

So far as the Selector's debt is concerned, it will be represented by the difference between the value of the land as appraised and the sum paid off the original debt, such sum being ascertained as though there had been no alteration of the law.

The Act provides also for the appraisal of the capital values of conditional leases, thus settling the price at which leaseholders may convert their leases into purchases; gives the holders of homestead selections, settlement leases, and conditional leases an opportunity of having their rents re-determined should they desire to do so; and makes several convenient alterations of the law.

Not the least important change which the new Act has made in the law is that referring to conflicting applications. Hitherto, when two or more persons simultaneously applied for the same land, their right to the land was determined by ballot, and the result thus left to chance alone. The respective merits of applicants had to be left out of account altogether, and the chance of winning a block offered an irresistible temptation to land-gamblers, whose only object, if successful, was to extort from the bona-fide land-seeker a premium to withdraw in his favour; while, apart from this, where an applicant desired to obtain land, to the exclusion of someone who, perhaps, better deserved it, he found it convenient to multiply his chances by resorting to the vicious practice of engaging several applicants to represent him, the success of any one of whom meant, of course, his own individual success.

Under the new system the successful applicant is determined by the Land Board by a process of selection, and while this process need not involve more delay than the one it has superseded, its advantages will no doubt ultimately meet with proper appreciation. The speculative applicant will, as may be expected, be the keenest to see any defects in the new system, and although it is not claimed to be free from disadvantages, it has been noticed that none of those who decried it seem prepared with a sufficiently satisfactory substitute.

Before the law was altered an applicant had to visit the district in which the land applied for was situated at least twice—first to lodge his application in person with the Crown Lands Agent, and subsequently, (if successful at ballot) to attend, after perhaps a fairly long interval, a meeting of the Local Land Board. Under the present system the personal attendance of the applicant is necessary only once, as, although he has to appear before the Land Board for examination and to have his case disposed of, he is allowed to send his application to the Land Agent through the post.

No doubt the principal difficulty surrounding the present arrangement lies in the fact that, directly attractive land is made available, a disproportionate number of applicants compete for it. It has been suggested that the throwing open of land in large quantities will afford a remedy, but although it is recognised that it is convenient that the supply should equal the demand, each applicant cannot be made to apply for a different portion. The best block is certain therefore to attract the most applicants. If only one applicant applied for a particular block, no difficulty would exist, as there would be an absence of competition in the matter. On the other hand, if blocks were made available in various districts simultaneously, intending applicants would probably expect to be allowed to apply in several quarters at once, on the ground that it would be unfair that they should have only one chance among so many possibilities. If placed under no restriction, it might happen that one and the same person was the only applicant for several blocks in different places. He might, of course, be compelled to choose one of the blocks; but the difficulty would arise where for some of the blocks there were several applicants, and the Boards of different districts desired their attendance in different towns at much about the same time. One way of meeting such a difficulty might be by the Boards of different districts sitting in rotation, so that the work of one Board finished before that of another commenced. Possibly, the throwing open of lands, not at the same time, but at periods succeeding each other, will be found the most convenient, and least likely to produce confusion, particularly if the intervals are sufficiently long to allow of the disposal of applications in one district before the unsuccessful applicants for land in that district find it necessary to turn their attention to another. No doubt the matter would be simplified if it were considered sufficiently safe to accept or reject applicants on their own declarations, and without their personal attendance in the first instance, but some apprehension is felt that such an arrangement would be apt to be followed by uncertain results. The question whether an intending applicant, or an applicant who has successfully passed the Board, might obtain a certificate which would render his subsequent examination unnecessary, would deserve close attention if the law gave force to the certificate, or if one Land Board agreed to recognise the certificate of another; but at the same time it is quite conceivable that the usefulness of such a certificate might easily be destroyed by a radical change in the circumstances of the holder after he had obtained the certificate, and before he applied for the land, though of course he could be compelled to declare whether any such change of circumstances had occurred. The Department has been giving the matter careful consideration; but it has been thought that a passing reference to the difficulties might at least show that they are less susceptible of instant and easy solution than some persons evidently suppose them to be.

The Advances to Settlers' Act was also passed during the year 1899, with the object of making temporary advances to relieve settlers financially embarrassed owing to droughts and other causes. Some detailed information respecting the operation of the Act, and of the transactions which have already taken place under its provisions, will be found on pages 9 and 10.

On the 1st November, 1899, the administration of the Acts relating to public watering-places and artesian wells was transferred from the control of the Department of Mines and Agriculture to that of this Department, it being subsequently decided that the functions incidental to the construction and repair of works under the Acts in question should be exercised by the Secretary for Public Works, while the administration of the Acts should remain vested in the Ministerial control and direction of the Secretary for Lands.

LEGAL DECISIONS.

Harrington v. Minister for Lands.

Decision of Privy Council.

In this case the Privy Council held that lands set apart under sections 10 and 13 of the Act of 1895 are not open to additional conditional purchase before the expiration of sixty days from the date of revocation of a reserve from sale covering the same land.

The facts of the case are as follow:—By Gazette notice of the 9th January, 1897, certain lands were, under the provisions of the 10th and 13th sections of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, set apart for homestead selection. Prior to this date, viz., on the 4th July, 1896, these lands were, by notification in the Gazette, included in reserve from sale No. 24,376. This reserve was, on the 9th January, 1897, notified as revoked—the notification of the revocation containing an intimation that the lands were not to be sold until after the expiration of sixty days from the date of revocation. On the 11th February, 1897—that is, thirty-three days after date of revocation of reserve No. 24,376—Joseph Harrington, the holder of a conditional purchase adjoining this reserve, applied for the whole of the lands the subject of the notification of the 9th January, 1897, as an additional conditional purchase under section 11, Act of 1895. The Local Land Board, and on appeal the Land Appeal Court, disallowed the application, on the ground that it included land within reserve No. 24,376, and was made before the expiration of sixty days from the date of revocation of the reserve. The Land Appeal Court then stated a case for the Supreme Court at Harrington's instance. The question for determination was whether, under the circumstances set forth, Harrington was entitled, under section 11 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, to take up, as an additional conditional purchase or conditional lease, the lands set apart under section 10, notwithstanding that sixty days had not elapsed from the date of revocation of the reserve. The Supreme Court held that, under the circumstances set forth, the appellant, Joseph Harrington, was entitled to apply for the land.

The Minister for Lands thereupon appealed to the Privy Council, which reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court, and held that Harrington was not entitled under the circumstances to make an application for an additional conditional purchase. Their Lordships failed to see any contradiction between section 102, Act of 1884, and section 11, Act of 1895. They also held that section 102 applies to a conditional sale equally with an absolute sale. (N.S.W.L.R., xviii, p. 418; W.N., xiv, p. 87; and N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 253.)

Minister

Minister for Lands v. O'Shea.

In this case it was decided that the Land Appeal Court has no power, under Rule 39, after fourteen days have expired, to extend the time within which notice to state a case for the Supreme Court may be lodged.

This was a special case stated by the Land Appeal Court, the point for determination being whether, at the date of the respondent's application, the land applied for was open to conditional purchase.

The judgment of the Land Appeal Court was delivered on the 20th March, 1899. No notice requiring the Land Appeal Court to state a case for the Supreme Court was lodged within fourteen days, but on the 19th May an order was made by that Court extending the term for lodging the notice until the 2nd June. The notice was lodged within the extended time.

Respondent's Counsel took the preliminary objection that the appeal could not be heard because the notice requiring the Land Appeal Court to state a case had not been lodged within fourteen days, and the extension of time was not obtained within the fourteen days.

It was admitted that the appellant took no steps respecting the appeal within fourteen days after the decision of the Land Appeal Court, which is the time prescribed by Rule 39. After the lapse of fourteen days an application was made to the Land Appeal Court to extend the time for lodging the requisite notice. The extension was granted, and the notice was given within the extended time.

The Supreme Court held that they had no jurisdiction to entertain this appeal, inasmuch as the Land Appeal Court had no jurisdiction, after the lapse of fourteen days, to make an order extending the time within which a notice might be lodged. (W.N., XVI, p. 80.)

Wilson v. The Minister for Lands.

Mercadool Case.

From a departmental point of view this case is one of considerable importance; the principal questions for determination being as to the validity of a reference by the Minister, under section 20, of the same matter to two different Land Boards, and as to the power of a Land Board to sit outside its own district; also, whether the proceedings before the Land Board did or did not amount to a mistrial, and whether the Land Appeal Court could lawfully reject from the Board's finding irrelevant evidence, and after rejecting evidence alleged to have been wrongfully admitted, could lawfully decide the case on the evidence held to have been properly admitted.

As the Crown has taken steps to appeal to the Privy Council, further reference to the case will be postponed until after the Privy Council's judgment has been delivered. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 104.)

Marshall v. The Minister for Lands.

In this case it was decided that a conditional purchase originally made in good faith and not subsequently held in good faith is not liable to forfeiture after death of selector when held by devisee. Proper terms of reference to Board were indicated.

On the 31st October, 1895, Edwin Chambers applied for a conditional purchase of 500 acres and a conditional lease of 400 acres, situated on a run held by W. Patrick and H. C. Patrick. These applications were confirmed on the 15th July, 1896. On the 29th July, 1897, Chambers applied for an additional conditional purchase of 40 acres and an additional conditional lease of 120 acres. On the 2nd August, 1897, Chambers died, leaving a will, dated 29th December, 1896, whereby he devised his real and personal property to Mary Marshall, and appointed her brothers his executors. Probate was granted in due course; the land became vested in Mary Marshall, and on the 29th January, 1898, she was registered as the owner in the books of the Lands Department. On the 17th February, 1898, the applications for the additional conditional purchase and additional conditional lease were confirmed by the Land Board. On the 22nd March, 1898, the Minister directed a reference to the Land Board, under section 20, Act of 1884, as to whether the original conditional purchase was held or used otherwise than for the exclusive benefit of E. Chambers, or is now held otherwise than for the exclusive benefit of M. Marshall.

The

The inquiry was held on the 15th and 16th April, and on the 18th the Land Board found that the land had not been held exclusively for the benefit of Edwin Chambers, but for the benefit of H. and W. Patrick.

On the 6th July the Government informed Mary Marshall of their intention to forfeit, and she thereupon instituted a suit for a direction that the forfeiture was invalid, and for consequential relief.

The Chief Judge in Equity, in delivering judgment, pointed out that under the Act of 1884 the taking up of land in bad faith, and not really for an applicant's own benefit, rendered the land liable to forfeiture in the hands of the selector or any assign, with notice, but not so in the hands of a purchaser without notice; therefore, in the absence of any provision of the law for forfeiting land taken up in good faith, and subsequently agreed upon to be held for the benefit of another person, the facts, as found by the Land Board, did not constitute a valid ground for forfeiture, and plaintiff was entitled to relief, with costs.

The Judge held that the Minister's reference to the Board was defective, inasmuch as it did not include the question, "Was the application by E. Chambers made in good faith?" The finding was also incomplete, inasmuch as it did not contain a reply to the Minister's reference as to whether the conditional purchase was, at date of reference, held in good faith by Mary Marshall. He saw no objection, however, to a fresh reference to the Land Board of these particular questions. (N.S.W. L.R., xx, p. 122.)

In re Buckley.

The holder of a conditional purchase outside of but adjoining a special area in the Central Division is not entitled to take up land within such special area by way of conditional lease.

Buckley was the holder of a conditional purchase outside of but adjoining a special area which had been set apart for settlement lease. The said special area and conditional purchase were situated in the Central Division.

On the 13th January, 1898, Buckley applied for a conditional lease of 640 acres inside the said special area, but the application was disallowed by the Land Board at Gunnedah, which held that the land being within a special area was not available for conditional lease.

Buckley appealed to the Land Court, which dismissed the appeal, and from their decision he appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Chief Justice, in delivering the judgment of the Court dismissing the appeal, held that under section 24 of the Crown Lands Act of 1884, and section 18 of the Act of 1899, special areas can only be taken up by conditional purchase. He added that a decision in favour of the appellant would set at nought the whole policy of the Crown Lands Acts with regard to special areas, that policy being to limit the amount of land which an individual may take up in those areas which contain the richer lands of the Colony. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 125.)

Johnson v. The Minister for Lands.

Non-completion of contract for sale of certain land.

In December, 1853, certain Crown lands in the town of Albury were purchased at auction by one F. O. Roberts, of whose estate J. W. Johnson was administrator.

Johnson declared that the said Roberts had duly paid the purchase money as provided by the contract of sale, and had also tendered the necessary deed fees, but the deed of grant for the land had not been completed and issued, and the Government had refused to do so; consequently the plaintiff had not been able to obtain or claim the land. Plaintiff claimed £5,000 as compensation for his losses.

A plea was entered on behalf of the Minister that one of the conditions of the said contract of sale had not been fulfilled, namely, the payment of the balance of purchase money within one calendar month from the date of sale, 9th December, 1853.

In his replication the plaintiff admitted the non-fulfilment of this condition, but pleaded that the Government had waived the breach, and had subsequently accepted and received the said purchase money, and was therefore not entitled to aver non-performance of the conditions.

A demurrer was then entered on behalf of the Minister on the grounds that the reply was a departure from the declaration, inasmuch as the declaration alleged that all conditions had been fulfilled, and the reply admitted that one of such conditions had not been fulfilled, and that the Government could not legally renounce or waive the said breach, and, further, that the facts did not amount to an estoppel.

The Court held that the replication was bad on the ground of departure from the plea, and judgment was accordingly given for the Government. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 147.)

Minister for Lands v. Nestrom.

Lands proclaimed as a special area and subsequently set apart for homestead selection are not available except for homestead selection.

On 23rd April, 1898, certain lands forming part of the leasehold area of Hartwood holding, in the Deniliquin district, were declared to be a resumed area. On the same day, by a proclamation in the Government Gazette, the said lands were set apart as a special area under section 18 of the Crown Lands Act of 1889, and by the same proclamation it was notified that the lands were about to be made available for homestead selection. This notification was never revoked or modified.

On the 27th April, 1898, in pursuance of sections 10 and 13 of Crown Lands Act of 1895, the said lands were set apart as a homestead selection area, to be open for application on and after the 23rd June.

On 5th May, 1898, Nestrom applied for an original conditional purchase of 640 acres of the said land, and paid the deposit, &c., required by the notification setting the land apart as a special area. The Local Land Board disallowed the application, on the ground that the land was not available. Nestrom appealed to the Land Appeal Court, who reversed the decision of the Local Land Board, and held that the land was available.

The Minister then appealed to the Supreme Court. The Court held that, in view of the terms of section 10 of the Land Act of 1895, no matter how the land may have been classified before, if once included in a classification area it ceased to be available for any class of holding except those mentioned in the notification. It also appeared to the Court possible that the proclamation under the Act of 1895 might in effect be regarded as a revocation or modification of the proclamation under section 18, Act of 1889. The decision of the Land Appeal Court was therefore reversed. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 167.)

Minister for Lands v. Chick.

There is no power in connection with the proclamation of a special area within a population area to impose a condition debarring the holder of a conditional purchase outside the special area from making an additional conditional purchase within that special area.

By a proclamation of 6th May, 1898, certain lands within the population area of the town of Tenterfield were set apart as a special area under section 18, Act of 1889. By this proclamation it was declared, inter alia, that the land should be open to conditional purchase on 7th July, 1898, and that an additional conditional purchase should not be made within that special area, except in virtue of an original conditional purchase within such special area.

On 7th July, 1898, John F. Chick applied for part of the land comprised in the special area as an additional conditional purchase, but he was not the holder of an original conditional purchase within such special area.

On 23rd August, 1898, the Local Land Board disallowed Chick's application, having in view the condition aforesaid.

Chick then appealed to the Land Appeal Court from the Board's decision.

On 15th November, 1898, the Land Appeal Court heard the appeal, and, on the 29th November, delivered a decision thereon, sustaining the appeal, on the ground that the said condition was not a condition at all, but a prohibition or exclusion of certain classes of persons who would otherwise, under section 42, Act of 1884, have been competent to make additional conditional purchases within the said special area.

The Minister for Lands then required the Land Appeal Court to state a case for the decision of the Supreme Court as to whether, under section 18 of the Crown Lands Act of 1889, the Governor was empowered to impose such a condition.

After

After hearing argument, the Supreme Court answered the question submitted to them in the negative, holding that the words in section 18, Act of 1889—"subject to the fulfilment of such conditions as to residence, improvements, fencing, or otherwise as may be specified in the proclamation,"—apply to conditions which are capable of fulfilment of which the condition sought to be imposed in this particular case is not one. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 217).

Minister for Lands v. Watt and Gilchrist.

Existing improvements upon land at the date of its withdrawal from a pastoral lease in the Central Division, under section 3, Act of 1895, are Crown property.

By notification in the Gazette of the 10th June, 1896, the Governor, under section 3 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, withdrew certain lands from the pastoral holding of Genanagie, Central Division. In the said notification it was stated that such withdrawal was to take effect on the 14th October, 1896, from and after which date the land so withdrawn was to cease to be held under such pastoral lease, and to cease to form part of the leasehold area of the said pastoral holding.

During the term of the pastoral lease, and prior to the said withdrawal, certain improvements had been effected by the respondents in and upon the lands so withdrawn.

By a notification in the Gazette of 14th October, 1896, the said lands were set apart for homestead selection in pursuance of sections 10 and 13 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, to become available on the 3rd December, 1896.

A homestead selection was applied for by James Wilmott. This block contained improvements, and the Land Board, when they confirmed the application, found that, as the lands had been withdrawn under section 3 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, the improvements were the property of the pastoral lessees. The Minister then referred the case to the Land Appeal Court, under section 59 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, on the grounds that the rights and interests of the Crown were injuriously affected by the Land Board's decision, and that the Board had failed to discharge its duty according to law. The Land Appeal Court held that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the reference, inasmuch as there was no evidence before the Court in support of the Minister's allegations. The Minister then caused a case to be stated for the decision of the Supreme Court as to whether the Land Appeal Court was right in holding that they had no jurisdiction to entertain the said reference. The Supreme Court decided that the Land Appeal Court had the necessary jurisdiction (see 19 N.S.W.L.R., 258). When the reference came on for hearing, the Counsel for the Minister for Lands requested the Land Appeal Court to determine the question of ownership of the said improvements in favour of the Crown; or, if the evidence before the Board was insufficient, to remit the case to the Local Land Board for further evidence respecting the facts and circumstances under which the improvements were effected. The Land Appeal Court in delivering judgment, refused to remit the matter to the Local Land Board for the purpose stated, and affirmed the finding of the Local Land Board.

The Minister of Lands thereupon required the Land Appeal Court to state and submit a case to the Supreme Court, the question for decision being whether, upon the facts and under the circumstances hereinbefore set out, the Land Appeal Court was right in affirming the finding of the Local Land Board, and in holding that the improvements effected by the respondents on the lands so withdrawn as aforesaid from the pastoral lease of the pastoral holding of Genanagie, were the property of the said respondents and not the property of the Crown?

The Supreme Court held that, in the absence of any express provision for the granting of compensation for improvements on lands within the Central Division, withdrawn from pastoral lease under section 3 of the Act of 1895, the improvements became the property of the Crown. It was also held that section 78, Act of 1884, has no application to a withdrawal under section 3, Act of 1895; and further, that by the omission of tenant right as expressly conferred by a number of sections in the Act of 1895 it was clearly intended that ownership of the improvements should remain vested in the Crown. (N.S.W.L.R., xx, p. 229.)

Minister for Lands v. Dalgety & Co.

The granting of a preferential occupation license over an area withdrawn from pastoral lease under section 3, Act of 1895, has not the effect of divesting the Crown of its ownership of improvements within that area.

In this case, Dalgety & Co., the pastoral lessees of Burrawang holding, situate in the Central Division, made certain improvements on their holding in the year 1886, and during the currency of the lease. In June, 1895, the lessees obtained an extension of their lease for five years, under section 43 of the Crown Lands Act of 1889.

On the 6th November, 1897, a portion of the leasehold was withdrawn from the lease under section 3 of the Act of 1895, and the lessees obtained a preferential occupation license of the area so withdrawn.

In May, 1898, this land was set apart by notification in the Gazette for homestead selection, and on the 30th June following, one Walter Jackson obtained a homestead selection of part of the land withdrawn, which included improvements made by the lessees in the year 1886. Thereupon Dalgety & Co. claimed to be the owners of the improvements, and to be entitled to be paid their value by the incoming selector.

The Supreme Court having already decided (see preceding case, Minister for Lands v. Watt and Gilchrist) that any improvements on an area withdrawn under section 3 of the Act of 1895 from a pastoral lease situate in the Central Division, are Crown property, the only question for decision in this case was, whether the subsequent granting of a preferential occupation license of the withdrawn area gave the licensees any ownership in the improvements situated thereon.

The Court held that a preferential occupation license under section 4 of the Act of 1895 stands upon a totally different footing to an occupation license granted under section 81, Act of 1884, and that under section 4 of the Act of 1895 only those improvements made with the consent of the Crown, after the granting of the preferential occupation license, are the property of the licensees. (N.S.W.L.R., vol. xx, p. 242).

Dight v. Callachor.

The side of a reserved road cannot be a common boundary line within the meaning of sec. 141, Act of 1884.

This was a special case stated by the Land Appeal Court. Phillip Callachor is the holder of a conditional lease, George William Dight is the holder of an improvement lease, the west boundary of which coincides with the eastern boundary of Callachor's conditional lease, but a road 2 chains wide has been reserved along and within the western boundary of the improvement lease.

The Local Land Board having made an order that G. W. Dight should pay half the cost of the fence along the eastern boundary of Callachor's conditional lease, Dight appealed from such order to the Land Appeal Court, on the ground (inter alia) that he was not liable to pay any contribution towards the said fencing, as his improvement lease does not adjoin Callachor's conditional lease, being separated therefrom by a reserved road.

The Land Appeal Court having dismissed the appeal, and affirmed the order of the Local Land Board, the question submitted for decision by the Supreme Court was, whether the side of the reserved road can be a common boundary line within the meaning and for the purposes of section 141 of the Crown Lands Act of 1884.

The Supreme Court upheld the appeal, and answered the question in the negative. (W.N., xv., p. 315.)

Minister for Lands v. Baldwin.

Interpretation of the term "value of improvements," in Act 52 Vic. No. 7.

Charles Baldwin being the holder of an original conditional purchase applied for two additional conditional purchases, which were confirmed on 15th January, 1895. On the 8th November, 1898, the Local Land Board held an inquiry as to whether the conditions of improvements on the additional conditional purchases had been complied with. The Board found that the additional conditional purchases were not fenced, but improvements in lieu thereof had been made thereon, under 52 Vic. No. 7 section 2 and section 33 of the Act of 1895, and that the condition of improvements for the intermediate term of three years from date of confirmation had also been complied with—that is to say, the said improvements were of the value of at least 6s. per acre.

Certain

Certain of the improvements consisted of ringbarking and suckering, which cost 2s. per acre, and which the Board valued at 5s. per acre. Against this decision the Minister appealed, maintaining that the Land Board was in error in allowing 5s. an acre, and in finding the improvement conditions fulfilled. The Land Appeal Court having upheld the decision of the Land Board, the Minister appealed to the Supreme Court.

The question for determination was whether the value of the improvements is to be based on what they cost, or on what they are worth. The Court held that the view taken by the Land Appeal Court was correct, and dismissed the appeal. (N.S.W.L.R., vol. XVI, p. 24.)

NOTE.—The law has been amended by Act No. 38 of 1898, which provides that for the purposes of Act 52 Vic. No. 7, the appraised value of improvements shall in no case exceed the cost of making them.

Heffernan v. Cowled.

On the 23rd June, 1898, Heffernan lodged two applications for original conditional purchases, each application being for a separate block of land. Both applications were lodged at the same time, viz., 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

A large number of conflicting applications were tendered at the same time as those of the appellant, who was warned by the Crown Lands Agent that the two applications could only be received subject to approval, whereupon, and before any ballot was held, Heffernan withdrew one of his applications. In the ballot, Heffernan's application was drawn first and Cowled's second.

On the 24th October, 1898, the Local Land Board disallowed Heffernan's application, on the ground that it was one of two simultaneous applications for an original conditional purchase made by him, and confirmed Cowled's.

Against this decision Heffernan appealed to the Land Appeal Court, which upheld the decision of the Land Board. The Supreme Court sustained the appeal, as they held that Heffernan having withdrawn one of his applications before the ballot the remaining application was a valid one. The Court held that Reg. 81 had no bearing on the case. (N.S.W.L.R., vol. xx, p. 419.)

Attorney-General v. Ffrench and Thompson.

This was a suit in relation to 140 acres of Crown land situate at North Willoughby. The defendant, John Henry Oscar Ffrench, claimed that he was entitled to the land, and in assertion of his supposed claim caused notices to be posted on the land, claiming it as his property, and had warned the public from entering upon it, and had employed William Thompson to reside and work on the land. The Attorney-General charged the defendants with intruding upon the land of Her Majesty, encroaching upon Her rights, and bringing the title of Her Majesty to the land into doubt and question. The Attorney-General asked that the title of Her Majesty to the land might be declared and established; that the defendants might be ordered to deliver possession of the land to the Crown Lands Bailiff on behalf of Her Majesty; and that the defendants might be restrained by injunction from doing any act in assertion of the claim of Ffrench.

The defendant Ffrench traced his alleged title to the land, and represented that in or about the year 1807 William Gore entered into possession of the land with the intention of exercising dominion over it, and did thenceforward hold possession until his death in or about the year 1845. It was also pleaded that Governor Bourke granted the land to Annie Gore, wife of the late William Gore, and that such grant was still in full force and effect.

The Court held that there was no evidence of adverse possession for sixty years as against the Crown, and further declared the title to be vested in the Crown, granted an injunction, and directed defendants to deliver up possession. (Sydney Morning Herald, 16th February, 1899.)

ADVANCES TO SETTLERS BOARD.

The Advances to Settlers Act (assented to on the 4th of April, 1899) was framed to assist settlers in necessitous circumstances who were financially embarrassed owing to recent and existing droughts, and in pursuance of the provisions of the Act the Colonial Treasurer sold Inscribed Stock secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of this Colony to the amount of £220,050, bearing interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, with a currency of twenty years.

The administration of the Act is vested in a Board of three members appointed by the Governor.

Advances, which are limited in extent to £200, must be repaid with interest thereon at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum within specified periods not to exceed ten years, and provision is made by which in default of such repayment the amount may be recovered in any Court of competent jurisdiction, or freehold securities may be sold or otherwise disposed of, and in cases where securities consist of lands held under any Acts dealing with Crown lands (not being freehold) they may be forfeited, together with all moneys paid in respect thereof.

The transactions of the Board cover the period 19th April to 31st December, 1899, and the following is a summary of the work performed in the office during that period :—

The number of meetings held by the Board was sixty-two. The number of papers registered, exclusive of applications, was 8,144; the number of manuscript letters written was 3,333; and the number of notices, vouchers, acknowledgments, &c., issued was 18,021.

After some practical experience in the working of the Act, the Board, with the advice of the Crown Law Officers, found it necessary to recommend alterations and additions to the regulations, which resulted, on the 15th of December, in their repeal and the substitution of those now in force.

Advances were made, in the majority of cases, to settlers in the south-western districts of the Colony, and evidence is not wanting to show that a large measure of timely assistance has been given to many who have suffered severely from the effects of disastrous droughts.

It may be mentioned that payments due to the Crown were made to the Treasury at the request, and with the consent, of the applicants in nearly every instance.

INFORMATION BUREAU.

Judging from the volume of work transacted in this Branch of the Department during 1899 and preceding years, there is very little reason to doubt its usefulness and popularity; and it has, in fact, now become a recognised centre from which particulars can be readily obtained regarding all Crown lands which are available for settlement.

During

During the year replies have been sent to 1,835 letters, and, in addition, a large number of memoranda have been written to Crown Land Agents and others respecting matters arising in connection with the general work of the Branch.

The publication of two editions of the "Homestead Selection and Settlement Lease Pamphlet" has also been carried out during the year. This pamphlet contains full particulars of the various lands that have been thrown open, and that are still available for homestead selection and settlement lease. This publication is in considerable demand; and the public generally, both in this and the neighbouring Colonies, evidently appreciate the advantages it offers.

The Lands Department Weekly Gazette has now become a recognised factor in providing intending settlers with early information regarding Crown Lands that are being made available under the several tenures resulting from the operations of the present Land Laws.

Apart from its usefulness to the general public, the advantages to the Department are considerable, owing to the avoidance of all extraneous matter, while, at the same time, the Departmental notifications are retained in a concise and compact form.

The preparation of monthly advertisement-sheets and pamphlets has also been continued. These publications, which give particulars of areas notified each month in the Gazette as available for homestead selection, settlement lease, improvement lease, occupation license, auction sale, &c., afford a good medium for conveying to the public information respecting the latest movements in connection with Crown lands, and are exhibited at all Crown Lands, and District Survey offices, and also at the more important railway-stations, and post-offices.

Inquiry Branch.—The advantages which this Division of the Information Bureau offers to the general public are considerable, and questions of all descriptions relating to the general business of the Department are answered. Searches against conditional purchases and leases are carried out at the instance of solicitors, banks, private land agents, and financial companies, who wish to be assured that no forfeiture is impending, and that no other defects exist which might in any way be prejudicial to a title. Small fees are charged for supplying particulars of this kind, which realised in 1899 the sum of £368 9s. 3d., as compared with £346 9s. 6d. in 1898, and £358 8s. 6d. in 1897.

The inquiry papers lodged during the year were 5,180 in number, and for supplying answers to 1,830 of these, fees were charged as above mentioned. The balance of these inquiries, namely, 3,350, which had reference chiefly to matters then under Departmental consideration, were answered without charge. In addition, a large number of personal inquiries were answered verbally, and advice was given as to the various methods of procedure prescribed by the Crown Lands Acts.

The Map Sales Branch.—This Division of the Bureau has charge of the various lithographs published by the Department, such as those of counties, towns, parishes, &c., and issues the necessary supplies to Crown Land Agents, District Survey Offices, and other Departments. In addition to this, the sale of lithographs to the general public is also carried out, which involves, in many instances, explanations as to the information shown on these maps.

On 31st December, 1897, there were 182,217 lithographs in stock, the sale price being £15,671 3s. 6d. On 31st December, 1898, the stock had increased to 200,573, of which the value was £17,409 1s. 1d.; and on 31st December, 1899, a further increase has to be recorded, the lithographs on that date amounting to 215,285, the value being £19,146 18s. 8d.

During 1899, 49,416 lithographs were received into stock, and 34,704 issued. Of these latter, 21,046 were required for the Department's own purposes; 6,096 were issued to other Departments; 291 were given to Members of Parliament; 3,450 were cancelled, being obsolete; and 3,820 were sold, realising £322 10s. 5d. The various Crown Land Agents also disposed of 5,570 lithographs, bringing the total receipts from the sale of lithographs to £614 5s. 11d., as compared with £531 1s. 4d. in 1898.

The issue to Crown Land Agents for sale purposes of Crown Land Acts, pamphlets, and parchment forms used in connection with the transfer of conditional purchases is also undertaken by this Branch. The parchment forms sold by Crown Land Agents amounted to 7,786, realising £973 5s.; and 362 Crown Lands Acts and pamphlets were also disposed of, the receipts being £41 6s. 6d.

RABBIT BRANCH.

The continuance of the previous year's drought has proved a valuable auxiliary in the work of rabbit destruction in those parts of the Colony known as the "infested districts," the periodical reports furnished by the local Rabbit Inspectors showing that many of the occupiers of land were in consequence taking no steps to exterminate the pest.

Notwithstanding the decrease of rabbits in the "infested" districts, their progress eastward slowly but surely continues, so that it is merely a question of time as to when the whole of the Colony will be subject to its depredations.

During the past year the duty of destroying rabbits has been made compulsory within the boundaries of the late Milby Pastoral Holding, in the Land District of Condobolin, and the necessary action is now being taken to extend the operation of the compulsory clauses of the Act to the greater portion of the Sheep District of Young.

It has also been proposed to make the compulsory clauses operative in several other limited areas, but owing to local opposition it has not been considered expedient to carry these proposals into effect.

The authorised extension of the Mungindi-Namoi River barrier fence from its present terminus at Yarraldool to Wingadee and Narrabri has been delayed in consequence of the difficulty experienced (since overcome) by the promoters in obtaining the balance of the amount that is to be contributed by private individuals towards the cost of the whole line from Mungindi to Narrabri.

It is, however, anticipated that the necessary contributions will soon be available; and as a complete inspection of the most suitable route has been made, and its adoption recommended by the District Surveyor, there is every reason to expect that the barrier fence will be completed to Narrabri before the end of the year 1900.

It may be pointed out in this connection that the actual length of the rabbit-proof fencing ascertained by the Department to have been erected in the Colony is 22,856 miles, of which 1,157 miles were erected by the State, and the remainder by private individuals.

Six persons obtained licenses under the provisions of the 41st section of the Act to have live rabbits in their possession, details of which have been recorded in the subjoined Schedule:—

LABOUR SETTLEMENTS.

In-common with a large percentage of the rural population of the Colony, the members of the Labour Settlements at Bega and Wilberforce have not been exempt from the troubles incident to the protracted drought of the past few years, and complaints of the losses caused by the whole or partial failure of all kinds of crops have unfortunately been both frequent and general, and consequently there is little or no improvement to chronicle.

There has been no valuation of the improvements and live stock at the Wilberforce Settlement since the latter part of the year 1895, but it is estimated that their value is considerably in excess of the total amount advanced by the Crown to the Board of Control.

A recent appraisalment of the live stock and improvements at the Bega Labour Settlement made on behalf of the Department shows that the improvements upon the land and the live stock and working plant are valued at £2,296 1s. 3d. and £1,049 9s. respectively, as against the Board's total indebtedness of £2,246 6s. 1d.

ANIMALS INFECTIOUS DISEASES ACT.

The number of licenses issued under this Act during the year 1899 far exceeded that of any previous year.

This abnormal activity was due to the encroachments of tick or Texas fever in the neighbouring Colony of Queensland, and the desire of stockowners in New South Wales to render their cattle immune by inoculating them with the defibrinated blood of cattle which have been affected with that disease.

During the year ninety-five licenses, under the 6th and 7th sections of the Act, were granted.

Inoculation for tick is responsible for seventy-four of these, while of the remainder twelve were issued in connection with the vaccination of sheep against anthrax, and nine for purely experimental purposes.

From the reports furnished by Messrs. McGarvie Smith and Gunn, it is gathered that during the twelve months ended the 31st of December, 1899, the firm vaccinated 2,618 head of cattle and 1,063,191 sheep against anthrax, and that with the exception of a few lots, where two vaccinations were stipulated for at the time of contract, the whole of the stock operated upon received but one vaccination.

In this connection it may be mentioned that the Pasteur Anthrax Vaccine Laboratory of Australasia (Limited) has also been granted licenses to vaccinate sheep against anthrax; but, in the absence of any returns showing the number of sheep inoculated, it is impossible to form an opinion respecting the extent to which the pastoral industry has been benefited by the Laboratory's operations.

REVENUE.

The sums paid to the Treasury for the year (1st January to 31st December) aggregated £1,985,281, as against £2,002,415 for the year 1898.

A comparison of the amounts received during the years 1898 and 1899 is given in the appended statement, which also shows the increase or decrease under each head of revenue:—

" " Loan Votes	35,702	13	8

The expenditure for 1898 was £327,071 18s. 3d., or £14,065 2s. 3d. less than for the year under review.

It may be stated, however, that during the year 1899 a sum of £14,559 10s. 4d. was expended on the undermentioned services in connection with which there was no expenditure by this Department in 1898:—

Advances to Settlers' Board—
Contingent expenses	£1,510	8	6

			8,433	6	2
			12,338	15	8
Climatic Allowances to Officers	2,220	14	8
Total	£14,559	10	4

Were these amounts omitted from the accounts for the year 1899, the disbursements for that year would be slightly less than those for the year 1898.

The number of accounts registered was 10,820, an increase of 1,007 over the year 1898, and 23,457 separate payments were made by 8,235 cheques.

Schedule IV shows the salaries paid to the permanent and temporary staffs of officers during the year. Expenditure in this direction has necessarily been increased by the establishment of the Advances to Settlers' Board office (which has a staff of twenty clerks), by the transfer to this Department of fifty-five officers engaged in the administration of the Acts relating to Public Watering Places and Artesian Wells, and also by the payment of increments under the Public Service Board regulations to various officers throughout the Service.

During the year various changes have taken place in connection with the staff, caused in the following manner:—

Resignations	5
Retirements...	2
Dismissals	Nil.
Deaths	4
Transfers to other Departments	2
					— 13

The staff has, however, been augmented as indicated hereunder:—

New appointments (including temporary assistants)	45
Reappointments	9
Transferred from other Departments	61
			— 115

Schedule V is a statement showing the numerical strength of the staff, and the annual rate of the salaries as paid on the 31st December, 1898 and 1899, respectively. It is apparent that the expenditure, in respect of salaries, was on the 31st December, 1899, at the rate of £16,049 in excess of that at the end of 1898. The establishment of the office of the Advances to Settlers' Board and the transfer of the Public Watering Places Branch were mainly instrumental in causing this increase in expenditure. It must not, however, be understood that this sum (£16,049) was actually expended, inasmuch as savings were effected through delays in filling vacancies, and in consequence of the fact that all appointments made during the year did not necessarily take effect from the commencement of it.

Schedule VI indicates the amounts paid in connection with the various Local Land Board meetings during the year, and shows a slight increase on the expenditure of the previous year.

A comparison of the expenditure for the two years is given hereunder:—

	1898.	1899.
Chairmen and Clerks (travelling expenses and equipment)	£4,424 12 1	£4,562 15 8
Travelling expenses, Members	1,211 4 10	1,260 19 11

Fees, travelling expenses of Surveyors, Inspectors, and other witnesses	941 5 10	903 5 11
	£10,775 6 3	10,937 11 6

Schedule VII gives a comparative statement of the revenue and expenditure from 1886 to 1899. In thirteen years the percentage of expenditure to revenue has eased from 34 per cent. to 13·21 per cent., although there has, for the reasons already assigned, been an increase in 1899 of 41 per cent. over the year 1898.

The accounts of the Department were audited as usual by the Inspector of Public Accounts, whose report was of a satisfactory character.

LAND APPEAL COURT.

During the year 1899 the Court heard and disposed of 381 cases, comprising 229 appeals and 152 references. Of these cases, 349 were dealt with in Sydney and 32 in the country: The Court held sittings in Sydney on thirteen different occasions, and in the country as follows:—Dubbo, 2; Wagga Wagga, 2.

At the close of the year 1898, 8 cases remained with the Land Appeal Court for settlement of terms of special cases for the decision of the Supreme Court. Five of these were subsequently withdrawn, and the remaining three were dealt with by the Supreme Court, the ruling of the Land Appeal Court being confirmed in one instance and reversed in the other two.

During 1899 the Land Appeal Court was asked to state special cases for the decision of the Supreme Court on twelve occasions. Eight of these cases were sent to the Supreme Court, resulting in the Land Appeal Court's ruling being upheld in three instances and reversed in the other five. Of the remaining four asked to be stated, one was refused as no point of law was disclosed, and another application was dismissed on a technical objection, whilst two were still before the Land Appeal Court for settlement at the close of the year.

FOREST BRANCH.

On the 31st December, 1899, the total area of reserved forest land was 5,946,355 acres, most, if not all, of which is held under pastoral or other lease. These reserved lands are, for the sake of convenience, divided into three classes, A, B, and C. Within Classes A and B fixed license fees are charged, and in Class C royalty on the quantity of timber felled is charged in addition to the license fees. The areas reserved under each class are as follows:—

	acres.
Class A	2,824,320
Class B	157,743
Class C	2,964,292
Total	5,946,355

The total area of land reserved for forestry has been increased by 49,774 acres during the past year.

The classification of timber reserves, with a view to placing the more important of them on a permanent basis, is being proceeded with, and is in a fairly forward state as far as the principal inland districts are concerned. The reserves in the coastal districts will, however, require to be similarly dealt with.

The year's transactions show increased activity in the coastal timber trade, a slight advance in the prices of timber, and an increase in forest revenue. Export to European markets is gradually increasing, there being a large demand for first quality hardwoods, but few shippers avail themselves of the Government certificate as to name and quality of timber, the Department having only been asked to brand and certify some 666,000 superficial feet during the year. Intercolonial export is assuming large proportions, the New Zealand market alone absorbing from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 superficial feet—principally coastal ironbark—the most useful timber in the Colony's possession for public works and constructive purposes.

The question of Forest Conservation is one the importance and financial possibilities of which have certainly not been overlooked. Any suggestions made in connection with it point to a substantial increase of expenditure, the warrant for which which would, however, be evident enough if a sufficient increased revenue could be assured. This is the first point to be gained, and it is a very important one in the situation. At present the revenue from timber only about equals the cost of administration, and if additional expense were incurred to more effectively police timber lands, and if (in accordance with the ideas of some persons) enormous rent-producing areas were withdrawn from occupation with a view to natural or artificial reafforestation, the Crown should certainly expect something to at least balance its losses and expenses. Unfortunately, however, attempts to obtain higher rates from those engaged in the timber trade are very consistently and successfully resisted, and it is obvious that unless the Crown can succeed in obtaining a fair proportion of the timber-trader's profit, an enlarged Forest Establishment would result mainly in the Crown providing for and supporting a private industry at a serious loss to itself.

During the year many inquiries have been made by persons seeking investment of capital, with the object of working the less accessible forest tracts, particularly with a view to export of timber; but protection of interests, by securing some exclusive right to work forests thus opened, cannot be granted in the present state of the law.

In connection with the leasing of Crown lands under various tenures, conditions for the preservation of useful timbers have been carefully revised by this Branch, and in a large number of cases improvement conditions have been inserted.

Arrears of royalty due on timber lodged in depôts were considerably reduced during the year, the outstanding balance at the close thereof being £637, as against £3,191 at the end of the first quarter.

A pamphlet was issued during the year, inviting contributions of seeds of useful varieties of indigenous and exotic timber trees, and the quantity received in consequence from various sources has reduced the cost of procuring seed by one-half.

There were 215 prosecutions for offences, under which 168 convictions were secured, and penalties amounting to £165 19s. were inflicted, while the proceeds from sales of confiscated timber amounted to £421 10s. 10d.

Office work and records.—The number of papers registered in the Branch was 6,480, which, with 601 papers of other branches dealt with, makes a total of 7,081. The number of letters issued, exclusive of circulars and forms, was 2,500. The Forest Branch Library was increased during the year by the addition of 25 documents, comprising special articles on timber and its products, reports of other departments, &c., and by the purchase of 3 volumes of works on Forestry.

Forestry Museum.—The carpentry work at this establishment, preparation of specimens for exhibition and export, dressing of samples, &c., has kept the carpenter fully employed. Four hundred and fifty specimens of timber were distributed and certificates were issued in connection with 666,586 superficial feet of timber branded for export to Europe. These shipments comprised principally hardwoods for paving and flooring purposes, and small quantities of ornamental timbers for furniture manufacture.

Forest Improvement, Thinning, &c.—The class of work performed was thinning and cleaning up cypress pine forests (Callitris calcarata and verrucosa) in the Condobolin, Grenfell, Narrandera, and Mulwala districts. The total expenditure for the year was £6,305 10s. 1d., and details of the improvement effected are given in the following table:—

Planting.—In the proposed extension to Hogan's Brush plantation, 3½ acres, referred to in last report, 4,000 young cedars (Cedrela australis) were planted.

Five and a half acres of the site for Marram plantation, at Cook Park, were planted with marram grass roots, of which all but a few tufts are growing strongly. The usual planting of trees on Government parks, farms, and public lands under trust was continued, 22,739 trees being planted.

Gosford State Forest Nursery.—The staff at this establishment now consists of the foreman, one labourer, and four youths. The work of labelling seed-bearing stocks, after botanical examination, is being done gradually, 250 species having been identified and labelled during the year. The whole nursery is now in capital order, with a larger and healthier stock of useful timber and other plants than has been available for the past five years. After considerable trouble in collection and purchase from foreign countries the reserve seed supply has been increased so as to ensure the full propagation of requisite varieties.

The distribution of plants from this establishment during the 1898 season was as follows:—

Plantations, Farms, and Experimental Sites	10,656
Municipal Councils and Progress Associations	14,855
Public Parks and Recreation Reserves	3,771
Hospitals... ..	1,030
Cemeteries	3,215

Total	40,006

The cost of maintaining the State Nursery amounted to £459 16s., made up as follows:—Salaries and wages, £318 4s. 6d.; Incidental expenses, £141 11s. 6d.

Revenue and Expenditure.—Total revenue for the year amounted to £11,866 8s. 9d., as against £10,952 9s. 1d. for the preceding year. Excluding disbursements under Loan Votes, the total expenditure amounted to £5,322 18s. 6d., the difference between revenue and expenditure representing a surplus of £6,543 10s. 3d. The details of revenue and expenditure are as under:—

Prickly-pear

Prickly-pear Eradication.—Under the provisions of the Prickly-pear Act, during the year ending 31st December, 1899, tenders for leases were invited for 102 portions, embracing an area of 23,739 acres. Of these, 29 lots, totalling 6,155 acres, were let for terms varying from five to twenty-one years, realising an annual rental of £64 1s.

The total area of Crown lands held as leases under the Prickly-pear Act at the end of the year was 40,776 acres, yielding an annual rental of £537 19s., or, roughly, £8 8s. per section of 640 acres.

Eleven contracts for destroying the pear on travelling stock, camping, and water reserves, were let during the year. These contracts covered an area of about 3,000 acres, and were let at a cost of £443.

Settled Districts.—Several hundred notices to destroy prickly-pear were served on the owners or occupiers of private lands, with the result that the pear has been entirely eradicated in many places, while in many others satisfactory endeavours to exterminate it have been made.

Outlying Districts.—In these localities, particularly the north-western portion of the Colony, little progress has been made in pear destruction, the work, it is feared, being practically at a standstill and the pest rapidly spreading. Supervision is incomplete and the law difficult to enforce in these districts, the holdings therein being large.

Botanical Work.—The Botanical work of the Department is undertaken by the Government Botanist, and includes identification of species, naming trees, and seed-testing; he also affords technical information to foresters and officials on the botany of their respective districts.

During the year a large number of plants, forwarded by officials and correspondents, were identified, and a further review was made of the nomenclature of stocks at the Gosford Nursery. Reports and articles on the following subjects were furnished:—“The destruction or preservation of box timber (E. hemiphloia) when occurring in forests of Cypress Pine (Callitris)”; “Additional report on the use of Colonial Timbers for wine casks”; “A descriptive article and notes on Valonia Oak.”

Mr. Maiden, Government Botanist, made a special visit last year to the forests of the Grenfell district, and during that tour and other expeditions undertaken in wider fields of botanical research, collected much information on the subject of forestry.

AUCTION SALES.

Town Lands.—During the year 1,521 lots, comprising an aggregate area of 566 acres 0 roods $28\frac{1}{2}$ perches, were offered for sale, of which 417 lots, containing 167 acres 0 roods 10 perches, were sold, and the sum of £8,513 15s. (an average of £50 19s. $2\frac{3}{4}$ d. per acre) was realised. This is considerably in excess of last year's average.

Suburban Lands.—502 lots were offered, containing an area of 2,110 acres 1 rood 10 perches. 178 lots were sold, comprising 735 acres 2 roods $2\frac{1}{2}$ perches, and realising £6,350 3s., or an average of £8 12s. 8d. per acre.

Country Lands.—780 lots were offered, containing in all 52,472 acres 1 rood $13\frac{1}{2}$ perches. 399 lots were sold, comprising 37,855 1 rood $21\frac{3}{4}$ perches. The amount realised was £57,367 9s. 9d., or £1 10s. $3\frac{3}{4}$ d. per acre.

From Schedule XXXI it will be seen that the total number of lots offered for sale by auction during 1899, and comprising all classes of land, was 2,803, while the area so offered amounted to 55,148 acres 3 roods $12\frac{1}{2}$ perches.

The total number of lots sold was 994, comprising an area of 38,757 acres 3 roods $34\frac{1}{4}$ perches, and realising a total sum of £72,231 7s. 9d.

Transactions in connection with sales of this class in 1898 and 1899 are compared in the following Schedule :—

	Year.	No. of lots offered.	Area offered.			No. of lots sold.	Area sold.			Amount realised.			Average price per acre.
			a.	r.	p.		a.	r.	p.	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.

It will be seen that about 29 per cent. of town lands, 34 $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. of suburban lands, and 72 per cent. of country lands were sold out of the areas offered in 1899. The proportion of land sold to that offered was much greater than in the preceding year, the figures for which were 16 $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. for town, 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for suburban, and 28 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for country lands.

It is also shown by the above Schedule that the revenue derived from auction sales during 1899 was £72,231 7s. 9d., and it is noticeable that, although the quantity of land submitted to auction was far less than in 1898, the total amount realised was only about one-third less than in that year, when the amount realised was £101,637 3s. 8d. Particulars of areas offered and sold are given in Schedule XXXI.

AFTER AUCTION SELECTIONS.

The number of applications of this kind received last year was 893. Of these, 93 were either refused or withdrawn, while 796 applications, comprising 1,049 lots, were granted.

The aggregate area sold in this manner was 2,451 acres 2 roods 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ perches, the revenue realised therefrom being £18,520 16s. 8d. The average prices obtained per acre were as follow:—For town lands, £20 3s. 7d.; for suburban lands, £6 13s. 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; and for country lands within population areas, £4 14s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Additional particulars with respect to these sales will be found in Schedule XXXII.

FORFEITURE OF AUCTION PURCHASES.

During the year 151 lots, comprising an aggregate area of 194 acres 3 roods 22 perches, were forfeited, together with deposits amounting to £818 7s. 3d. These forfeitures were incurred through non-payment of balances of purchase money within the prescribed time. For additional particulars, see Schedule XXXIII.

Whenever purchasers of Crown lands are entitled to the improvements existing thereon, the usual practice is to add the value of such improvements to the upset price of the land, and to remit it subsequently should the owner of the improvements become the purchaser. In accordance with this practice a sum of £627 18s. 10d. was refunded during the year, together with other payments made in excess, amounting to £106 13s.

HOMESTEAD SELECTIONS.

The demand for holdings of this class during the year under review was somewhat less than in the preceding one. Schedule XIX shows that 833 applications were received during the year ending 31st December, 1899, for a total area of 329,128 acres 1 rood 38 perches, as against 1,081 in the preceding year, for an area of 461,646 acres 2 roods 7 perches.

During

During the same period the Land Boards dealt with 874 applications, comprising 361,560 acres 2 roods 18 perches, of which 690 applications were confirmed for an area of 269,195 acres 0 roods 27 perches, and 184 were disallowed or withdrawn.

From Schedule XXII it will be seen that the number of Homestead Selections applied for up to the 31st December, 1899, exclusive of those disallowed, &c., prior to the 31st December, 1898, was 3,528, embracing an area of 1,366,356 acres 1 rood 15 perches. After deducting 307 disallowed, &c., during 1899, comprising an area of 125,142 acres 1 rood 39 perches, the number in existence at the close of the year (exclusive of conversions of Conditional Purchases, Conditional Leases, and Church and School Leases into Homestead Selections) was 3,221, containing an area of 1,241,213 acres 3 roods 16 perches.

From Schedule LXXXI it will be seen that 745 blocks, containing an aggregate area of 265,766 acres 2 roods 3 perches, were notified during the year as being set apart for Homestead Selection.

During the year, twelve applications were made to convert Conditional Purchases and Conditional Leases into Homestead Selections. These applications included 29 Conditional Purchases and 6 Conditional Leases, the area represented being 5,131 acres 3 roods 29 perches.

The total number of Conditional Purchases and Conditional Leases converted in this manner from the 1st June, 1895 (the date on which the Crown Lands Act of 1895 came into operation), to the 31st December, 1899, is 143 (under sixty-two applications), the area comprised being 28,253 acres 3 roods 30 perches. (Vide Schedule XXIV.)

One hundred and twenty-three selections, containing an area of 32,777 acres 0 roods 8 perches, were forfeited during the year on account of non-fulfilment of the prescribed conditions (vide Schedule XXI), and forfeiture was waived in 173 instances.

Information is given in Schedule XXIII respecting the notification and disposal of Homestead Selection areas since the passing of the Crown Lands Act of 1895. From the Schedule it will be seen that 5,300 blocks, containing 1,724,605 acres 0 roods 12 perches, had been set apart for Homestead Selection up to 31st December, 1899. As, however, 717 blocks, containing 232,079 acres 0 roods 39½ perches, did not become available during the year, the actual area made available for selection up to the end of the year was only 1,492,525 acres 3 roods 12½ perches, comprised within 4,583 blocks. Of this area, 3,175 blocks, comprising an area of 1,185,932 acres 3 roods 11 perches, were selected, or 79 per cent. of the area available. The capital value represented by the land selected is £1,626,137 18s. 4½d.

The table hereunder (compiled from Schedule XXIII) shows transactions in each of the Land Board Districts.

Particulars relating to the number of applications received during the year for land within special areas, and for ordinary lands, also respecting the number and area of Conditional Purchases applied for from 1862 up to the present time, are furnished in Schedules VIII and IX.

Of the applications made during the year, 694 were confirmed for an area of 133,804 acres 0 roods 21 $\frac{3}{4}$ perches, and 275 applications were disallowed.

Including the applications made prior to 1st January, 1899, the total number confirmed during the year was 1,184, for an area of 207,308 acres 2 roods and 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ perches, while 383 were disallowed. Further details are given in Schedule X.

There were 150,125 incomplete Conditional Purchases in existence at the end of the year, comprising an area of 20,212,507 acres 1 rood 26 $\frac{3}{4}$ perches, and the number of Conditional Purchases for which deeds of grant had been issued was 27,227, representing an area of 3,310,396 acres 2 roods 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ perches. (Vide Schedule XVIII.)

The number of Conditional Purchases forfeited in 1899 was 284, representing an area of 26,659 acres 2 roods and 32 perches, as against 356 Conditional Purchases, containing an area of 43,990 acres 1 rood and 36 $\frac{1}{2}$ perches in 1898.

It will be seen from Schedules XV and XVI that of the total forfeitures, 93 were due to non-fulfilment of the required conditions, and 191 to non-payment of balances, interest, or instalments of purchase money.

Under the provisions of the Crown Lands Act Amendment Act of 1891, forfeiture was conditionally waived in 115 instances, and absolutely waived in 85.

The appraisements under section 36 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895 of conditional purchases within special areas have been completed. Two thousand seven hundred and twenty-three applications, embracing an area of 597,011 acres 2 roods 17½ perches, were lodged. Excluding applications which were refused or withdrawn, the total area appraised was 579,794 acres 18½ perches.

The capital value of this area prior to appraisement was £1,157,494 3s. 1½d., the capital value as determined by appraisement is £817,967 4s. 6½d., thus showing a reduction of £339,526 18s. 7d. The annual instalments payable in respect of this area prior to appraisement amounted to £57,874 14s. 2d., whilst under the recently appraised values they would only amount to £40,898 7s. 2d., thus showing an annual loss of £16,976 7s.

The appended summary shows the transactions in each of the Land Board Districts :—

IMPROVEMENT PURCHASES.

Applications under section 46 of the Crown Lands Act of 1884 were more numerous in 1899 than in the previous year, and the average price realised was greater. The number received during 1899 was 199, of which 123 were approved and 33 were refused. The area alienated comprised 57 acres 2 roods 29 $\frac{1}{4}$ perches, representing 143 lots, and the price realised was £2,043 18s. 8d. In 1898 the applications received numbered 158. The area sold amounted to 54 acres 2 roods 22 perches, while the price realised was £1,612 18s. 9d. (Details will be found in Schedule XXXIV.)

SPECIAL PURCHASES.

Special-purchase applications are of the following kinds:—For rescission of water frontage reservations (section 63, Act of 1884); for permission to reclaim and purchase land (section 64, Act of 1884); for the purchase of small, isolated areas, &c. (section 66, Act of 1884); for permission to close and purchase unnecessary roads, and also for the granting of Crown lands in lieu of land resumed for roads (the Public Roads Act of 1897). It may, however, be pointed out that previously to the passing of the last-named Act, the two latter classes of "Special Purchases" were dealt with under section 67 of the Act of 1884, and section 42 of the Act of 1889, respectively.

The number of applications received during the year was 162, of which 11 were under section 63, Act of 1884; 20 were under section 64, Act of 1884; 14 under section 66, Act of 1884; and 117 under the Public Roads Act of 1897.

Under the last-named sections an area of 634 acres 0 roods 16 perches was alienated, the revenue realised being £12,135 10s. 7d. In the previous year the area alienated was 262 acres 2 roods 30 $\frac{1}{4}$ perches, the purchase money received being £2,965 16s. 4d.

Under section 42 of the Act of 1889, 10 cases were disposed of, the area dealt with being 57 acres 1 rood 35 perches.

Transactions under the above-named sections during 1899 are summarised hereunder, and further particulars are given in Schedule XXXV:—

SURRENDERS AND EXCHANGES.

The amount of business transacted under this heading compares favourably with that of last year. This is evidenced by the fact that 81 cases, representing an area of 203,378 acres 20 perches, were finally completed, and the surrenders accepted by the Governor-in-Council.

Further information on this subject will be found in Schedule XXXVI, from which it will be seen that 156 applications were received, 57 were refused or withdrawn, and 348 were outstanding at the end of the year. In the previous year, 127 applications were received, 78 were refused or withdrawn, and 330 were outstanding at the close of it.

The principal exchanges (as far as area is concerned) accepted by the Governor and Executive Council during the year were as follow:—Buttabone, 28,197 acres; Calga, 17,244 acres; Nyang, 13,234 acres; Collymongool, 11,691 acres; Tyreel, 8,314 acres; Gragin and Graman, 16,073 acres; Widgiewa, North Goonambil, 9,469 acres; and Boondarra, 10,455 acres.

With reference to the subsequent disposal of surrendered lands, it may be remarked that, if they are not within a leasehold area, the necessary steps are at once taken to have the areas made available for settlement, or if too limited in extent for this purpose, they are added to adjoining selections, in accordance with the provisions of the Crown Lands Acts.

DEEDS OF GRANT.

During the year 3,339 deeds were issued for an area of 480,431 acres 1 perch. A fair proportion of these deeds related to land alienated by way of exchange, and it has already been pointed out in previous reports, that the investigation of titles to land surrendered involves much work of an exceedingly difficult and complicated character. (See Schedule XXXVII.)

VOLUNTEER LAND ORDER APPLICATIONS.

Seven applications of this kind were received during the year for land in the Moree and Tamworth Land Districts respectively. Including these, and also the applications lodged prior to 1898 but not dealt with, the transactions during the year were as follow:—6 applications refused, 1 approved, and 2 (representing an area of 100 acres) finally dealt with.

SETTLEMENT LEASES.

The area notified during the year as available for settlement lease was 885,429 acres 3 roods 30 perches, included in 289 farms. (Vide Schedule LXXXII.)

During the year, 413 applications for settlement leases were received, comprising an area of 1,138,726 acres 2 roods, and representing an annual rental of £14,689 3s. 7d. The number of applications confirmed was 283, for an area of 632,368 acres 3 roods 20 perches, while 181 applications were disallowed, leaving 61 applications outstanding at the close of the year. (For further details, see Schedule LV.)

The total number of leases of this class executed since the passing of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, and current at the end of 1899, was 966, embracing an area of 2,635,955 acres, the annual rental payable thereon being £32,626 2s. 1d., or an average of 2 $\frac{97}{100}$ d. per acre.

The number of leases current at the end of the preceding year was 682, containing 1,858,367 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres. (See Schedule LVI.)

During the year an area of 8,831 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres, comprised in three leases, and returning a rental of £66 2s. 1d., were declared null and void; while eight leases, containing 23,956 acres, and upon which a rental of £217 10s. 5d. was payable, were forfeited. (Vide Schedule LVII.)

Seventy-four transfers were received during the year, which, with 11 outstanding at the end of the previous year, made a total of 85. Sixty-five of these were dealt with during the year under review, leaving 20 outstanding at the close of it.

Information is given in Schedule LVIII with respect to the notification and disposal of settlement lease areas since the passing of the Crown Lands Act of 1895. It will be seen therefrom that up to the 31st December, 1899, an area of 5,278,833 acres 0 roods 25 perches, comprising 1,725 farms, had been set apart for settlement lease. Of this area, however, only 1,402 farms, containing 4,139,332 acres 3 roods 25 perches, became available before the close of the year, and of these 1,083 farms, embracing 2,985,404 acres 3 roods 15 perches, had been selected, showing that 72 per cent. of the area available had been applied for. The capital value of the land selected was £2,997,745 12s. 10d., and the average rental per acre about 3d.

The following summary gives information derived from Schedule LVIII with respect to the transactions in each Land Board District:—

From Schedule LXX it will be seen that the number of leases lapsed during the year was 821, containing an area of 418,869 acres 3 roods, the rental derivable therefrom being £3,288 19s. 7d. 103 leases were cancelled, the area being 85,853 acres 2 roods, and the rental £481 3s. 2d.

2,237 applications were received, and 2,429 applications were disposed of, during the year; of the latter, 1,959 were granted and 470 were either disallowed or withdrawn. Some of the applications disposed of were lodged prior to 1899. The area leased in connection with the applications granted was 1,154,504 acres 3 roods 14 perches, representing an annual rental of £6,726 18s. 8d. (Vide Schedule LXVIII.)

The area offered for lease by auction or tender included 58,207 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres, of which 15,954 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres were sold, realising an annual rental of £398 15s 10d. (Schedule LXIX.)

CONDITIONAL LEASES.

1,245 applications were received in 1899 for an area of 446,158 acres 2 roods 30 perches.

From Schedule XXV, and the summary hereunder, which has been compiled from it, it will be seen that the number of applications lodged, and the area applied for last year, were greater than during the two preceding years; also, that there has been a proportionate increase in the rental derived :—

The rents recommended by the Land Board were approved by the Minister in 695 cases, and no references were made to the Land Appeal Court.

The names and numbers of the pastoral leases which expired during 1899 are given in Schedule XLVIII, and particulars respecting those which will expire in 1900 will be found in Schedule XLVII.

In order to meet the demand for land for closer settlement, 14,300 acres were withdrawn from pastoral lease during the year, under the provisions of section 3 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, the whole of this area was situated in the Central Division. (For further details, see Schedule XLIV.)

Certain unrenewed occupation licenses and preferential occupation licenses were reinstated last year. Of the former, 6 were situated in the Eastern Division, 7 in the Central, and 2 in the Western; while of the latter, 9 were situated in the Central, there being none in the other Divisions.

(Vide Schedule LIV.)

Applications for homestead leases were more numerous than in the preceding year. Fifty applications were received in 1898, and 61 in 1899.

The Table hereunder shows the number of applications received each year since 1885, together with the area applied for, and the amount received each year by way of deposit. Further details are given in Schedule LI:—

The number of these leases, which were current on 31st December, 1899, was 37, representing an area of 378,547 acres and a rental of £1,023 16s. 7d., but no new leases were granted during the year.

IMPROVEMENT LEASES.

These leases are either sold at auction or let by tender. The tenures under which they are held are of considerable length, and the rents are exceedingly moderate in proportion to the areas leased. They are, however, subject to stringent conditions with respect to the improvements to be effected by lessees.

During the year, 146 leases, comprising 973,304 acres, and yielding a rental of £2,510 0s. 8d., were sold at auction, while 36 leases, representing an area of 199,529 acres and a rental of £1,627 10s. 11d., were disposed of by tender. (Vide Schedule LIX, Part A.)

Schedule LIX, Part B, shows that on the 31st December, 1899, 544 leases were current, including an area of 4,626,632 acres 3 roods and 39 perches, and producing a rental of £10,498 6s. 10d., or an average of $\frac{54}{100}$ d. per acre; also, that 22 leases, containing 216,905 acres, were either forfeited or declared void during the year, the total rental involved being £401 6s. 7d.

SCRUB LEASES.

More applications for leases of this kind were received in 1899 than during the preceding year. Sixty-six applications were received in 1899 for an area of 585,989 acres, as against 47 applications and an area of 659,488 acres in 1898. Forty-seven applications, for an area of 1,585,060 acres, were outstanding on the 31st December, 1898, making a total of 113 applications to be dealt with during the year. One lease expired during the year, containing an area of 2,500 acres, but none were forfeited. Eighty-two leases were in force at the close of the year, embracing 1,231,889 acres, and returning an annual rental of £2,402 18s. 6d. (Vide Schedule LXIV.)

LEASES OF INFERIOR LANDS.

Only one lease was granted during the year, the area of which was 4,050 acres, and the rental £3 per annum. Fourteen leases were forfeited, their areas amounting to 70,650 acres and rentals to £63 14s. 6d., and 25 leases, representing an area of 311,980 acres, and an annual rental of £239 18s. 9d., were current at the end of the year. (Vide Schedule LXV.)

RESIDENTIAL LEASES.

One hundred and six applications were received in 1899, which, with 136 outstanding on 31st December, 1898, left a total of 242 leases to be dealt with for an aggregate area of 1,663 acres 1 rood 31 perches. Fifty applications were disallowed or withdrawn, while 74 were granted for an area of 1,183 acres 1 rood 26 perches, at a rental of £118 4s.

The leases current at the close of the year numbered 333, the area embraced by them amounting to 4,155 acres 3 roods 24 perches, and the rental payable in connection therewith being £520 9s. 10d. (Vide Schedule LXVI.)

SNOW LEASES.

From Schedule LXVII it will be seen that no leases of this description were granted during the year; and none were declared forfeited, while the number of these leases current on 31st December, 1899, was the same as at the end of the preceding year, viz., 19, containing an area of 89,767 acres, and yielding an annual rental of £782 19s. 7d.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS.

As pointed out in the Annual Report for the year 1898, under the provisions of the Church and School Lands Act of 1897 (assented to 2nd December, 1897), all the lands formerly known as the Church and School Lands became Crown lands vested in Her Majesty the Queen, free from all trusts and provisions affecting the same, but subject to the provisions of the Crown Lands Act of 1884, the Mining Act of 1874, and of any Acts amending them.

When the Church and School Lands Dedication Act (44 Vic. No. 19) came into force on the 20th June, 1880, the area of the Estate was estimated to be 271,740 acres. Of this area 30 acres 2 roods 28 perches was subsequently alienated, consequently when the Church and School Lands Act of 1897 (No. 20) came into operation on the 2nd December, 1897, the area of land which became vested in the Crown was 271,709 acres 1 rood 12 perches.

The subjoined schedule shows the areas leased and the tenures by which they were held under the Church and School Lands Dedication Act, at the date of the repeal of that Act by the Church and School Lands Act of 1897.

Though the Church and School Lands Act of 1897 provided for the conversion of leases into holdings under the Crown Lands Acts, it was optional with the lessees whether they took advantage of the provision, inasmuch as the Act further declared all leases granted or renewed under the Church and School Lands Dedication Act of 1880 before the 1st December, 1897, to be valid.

The appended statement will give a fair indication of the extent to which the lessees availed themselves of the provisions of the Church and School Lands Act of 1897. Applications to convert into holdings under the Crown Lands Acts embraced an area of 127,745½ acres, and leases aggregating 29,349¼ acres, were either surrendered or cancelled, thus increasing the acreage of the vacant land from 16,283 acres to 36,515¾ acres.

AREA of Leases Current on the 31st December, 1899; the area applied for to be converted; and the area of land which reverted to the Crown.

From Schedule LXXXVII it will be observed that the applications to convert into holdings under the Crown Lands Acts numbered 188, and embraced an area of 127,745 acres 1 rood 39 perches. Of these applications, 68, comprising an area of 60,910 acres 2 roods 37 perches, were dealt with during the year, leaving 101 applications still outstanding. The rental derived from the converted area amounted to £1,256 16s. 8d.

Part "A," Schedule LXXXIV, shows that 121 pastoral leases granted under the Church and School Lands Dedication Act of 1880, were current on the 31st December, 1899, comprising an area of 104,385 acres 2 roods 32 perches, and returning an annual rental of £1,491 0s. 4d.

Part "B," Schedule LXXXIV, shows that on the date abovenamed, 145 Agricultural Leases were current, embracing an area of 2,353 acres 1 rood 26 perches, and producing an annual rental of £334 4s. 1d.

The Church and Schools Lands having been vested in the Crown since 2nd December, 1897, all applications for Gold or Mineral Leases on the late Church and School Estate are now made under the Mining Act of 1874, consequently, there were no transactions for this Department to record.

Part "A," Schedule LXXXV, shows that 47 Gold Leases were current on the 31st December, 1899, comprising an area of 170 acres 1 rood 16 perches, and yielding a revenue of £171. During the year 1899, 28 Gold Leases were cancelled and 7 converted into Gold Leases under the Crown Lands Mining Acts.

Part "B," Schedule LXXXV, shows that 9 Mineral Leases were current, on 31st December, 1899, containing 552 acres, returning a rental of £140 1s. per annum; also, that during the year 1 lease was cancelled.

44 leases were granted by the late Church and School Lands Corporation, and the Church and School Lands Dedication Act of 1880, for periods ranging from sixty to ninety-nine years, most of which are situated within the City of Sydney. One fifty-years' lease in the Village of Blayney has been cancelled, and 6 applications have been received to convert a total area of 2 acres 1 rood 35 perches into Special Purchases. These applications have not yet been finally dealt with. For further particulars see Schedule LXXXVI.

Report of the Chief Surveyor to The Under Secretary for Lands.

Sir, Department of Lands, Survey Branch, Sydney, 31 January, 1900.

I do myself the honor of submitting for your information a report of the services performed in this branch of the Department during the year 1899.

Permanent field staff. The permanent field staff attached to the General Establishment and Trigonometrical Survey comprised 65 Officers, viz.:—13 District Surveyors, 36 Surveyors, 7 Assistant Surveyors, 6 Field Assistants, and 3 Piling Overseers.

Promotion. Mr. E. W. Ellis, Assistant Surveyor, was promoted to the position of Surveyor.

Resignation. Mr. A. E. Mackay resigned his position as a Surveyor.

Death. Mr. D. M. Maitland, who held the position of District Surveyor at Armidale, died on the 24th December. Mr. Maitland had been continuously employed in this Department for upwards of thirty years, and through his demise the Department loses the services of a very capable officer.

Appointments. A competitive examination of candidates for the position of Field Assistant in the Department was held under the direction of the Public Service Board, at which Messrs. E. A. Mackenzie and W. S. Dight were successful, and were appointed to vacancies on the establishment.

Contract surveyors. The surveyors licensed to survey Crown lands of this Colony numbered 616, of whom 141 were in salaried service of the Government, leaving 475 available for employment. Of that number, 79 were engaged on contract surveys for this Department, their total earnings amounting to £42,933.

Inspection of contract surveys. One hundred and fifty-nine reports of examinations of surveys by contract surveyors were received. In sixteen cases the surveys were reported as not being up to the standard required by the Departmental survey regulations.

Licenses under the Real Property Act. One hundred and twenty-four licenses under the 100th section of the Real Property Act were renewed during the year. In each case, before issue of the license, an application for renewal has to be considered by a Board consisting of the Registrar-General and the Chief Surveyor. Three new licenses were also issued. Except in two special cases, a fee of £1 ls. was received for each license.

Thirty-nine applications for certificate of title under the Real Property Act were referred to this Department by the Registrar-General for report as to objections, if any, on behalf of the Crown. After careful investigation and comparison with original plans and documents in this office, the Registrar-General was informed of the result in each case.

At request of the High Commissioner of the Federated Malay States, two surveyors have been selected for employment on trigonometrical survey, and have been sent by the Government of New South Wales to report themselves at Perak.

BOARD OF EXAMINERS FOR LICENSE TO SURVEY CROWN LANDS.

One Board meeting for examination of candidates for license to survey Crown lands in this Colony was held in September; the examination being simultaneous and in concert with the Boards in that behalf in the Colonies of Victoria, South Australia, and Western Australia. Of seven candidates presenting themselves, three only were successful, and were recommended to the Minister for appointment, viz., Hector Kenneth West Mackenzie, Henry Sheaffe, and Albert George Little.

TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY.

The Surveyor-in-Charge of Field Operations, Mr. J. Brooks, F.R.A.S., F.R.G.S., and Mr. F. J. Gregson, surveyor, have been engaged on this service; there have been three piling parties employed, one of them for ten months. The weather generally has been favourable for observing; and the work done comprises the determination of five first-class stations, and twelve second-class stations, besides completing one other second-class station. At three of the first-class stations there were astronomical observations. There have been 77 new stations formed, 11 stations restored, 29 reserves at trigonometrical stations measured, and 83 connection surveys. Mr. Brooks' report, being a review of the year's service, is attached hereto as an appendix.

TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY COMPUTING BRANCH.

Field books of angles at the following stations have been received, viz.:—Burra, Bothungra, Wheel-of-Fortune, Hanging Rock and Loka, observed at with 18-inch theodolite; and at Munyan, Wullwye, Hudson, Wambrook, Queengallery, Yaouk, Millbank, Lighthouse, Clear, Tennent, Coree, Blundell, Urayarra, Hartwood, Tumorra and Lampe, where the observations were made with 10-inch theodolites. Examination of these observations has been made, and the results of their reduction duly recorded in the abstract and bearing books. Calculation of the triangulation has been carried forward as the field work has advanced, and wherever practicable the final co-ordinate values have been calculated.

Computations of the triangulation over the counties of Wallace and Wellesley have been made, and similar calculations have been carried out for the counties of Cowley, Harden, and Clarendon; though, pending completion of the survey of these latter counties, the results must be considered only as provisional (and intended only to meet immediate demand for information as to the stations in these localities). Provisional positions have also been computed for a number of stations in counties adjacent to those named.

Notes of astronomical observations at Rock Lodge, Burra, Wheel-of-Fortune, Loka and Goombargana have been received, but owing to frequent demand for the services of the computers in connection with extraneous work, and the transfer of the junior computer, the reduction of these observations, though in a forward state, has not yet been completed. For the same reason, the comprehensive calculation of heights of the stations of the southern system, of the intention to undertake which mention was made in a previous report, has been again postponed, though it is expected to be in a position to carry this work out immediately.

A supplement to the register of main stations has been published during the year, and information has been collected with a view to the preparation of a further supplementary register.

The usual map illustrating the extent of the main triangulation will be found appended hereto.

All repairs to the large stock of surveying and astronomical instruments belonging to the Department have been made as occasion arose, and the stock is generally in serviceable condition.

It may be mentioned that, at request of the Queensland Government, the services of the Chief Computer were loaned to the Surveyor-General at Brisbane for three weeks.

Drafting

DRAFTING AND LITHOGRAPHIC BRANCHES.

The Chief Draftsman has prepared the following report of the services performed in the Drafting and Lithographic Branches:—

The amount of work done is about the same in volume as during the previous twelve months, and the year closed without any serious arrears of administrative business.

The demand for skilled draftsmen is increasing. Difficulty is found in filling vacancies, and in obtaining suitable men even for temporary service. The question of the strength of the Drafting Staff, and present methods of recruiting, was recently made the subject of a comprehensive report to the Under Secretary for Lands; it has arisen partly through the loss, during the year, of several experienced draftsmen by death and resignation.

The alterations and additions to the strong-room are approaching completion. It is hoped soon to have the whole of the original plans and standard maps gathered into this room, and so protected from loss or damage by fire or otherwise.

In the Lithographic Printing Branch the hours of labour have been increased to correspond with the Government Printing Office; the men now work from 8.30 a.m. to 1 p.m., and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Eventually a reduction of the staff will probably be effected in consequence of this arrangement.

The output of maps, while not sufficient to satisfy requirements, has been fairly well kept up. The work of the Compiling Branches has been very much interrupted for special services at headquarters and in the country offices.

The Staff of the Miscellaneous Compiling Branch has reverted to the compilation of country and town maps. The Parish Map Division, notwithstanding interruptions in service, has attained the average of past years in the number of new maps provided.

At the beginning of the year stock was taken of all original plans, and a new set of record books introduced.

CHARTING BRANCH.

With the exception of auction business, which shows a considerable falling off, the work of the branch during 1899 is about the same in volume as that of the previous year.

A greater area than usual was offered for auction during 1898, which accounts for the apparent falling off in 1899. 617 auction cases were disposed of, and an aggregate area of 81,831 acres scheduled for auction sale, against 1,437 cases dealt with, and 181,531 acres scheduled in 1898, and 658 cases and 65,379 acres in 1897.

The District Court district boundaries were gazetted, and a Colony map showing same, together with the Police, Petty Sessions, Licensing and Circuit Court Districts gazetted in 1898, was prepared and published. There has been a large demand for copies of this map from the different Government Departments.

A slight decrease is noticeable in the exchange work during the year, 1,273 cases having been dealt with, against 1,453 in 1898.

At the end of 1899, 391 of the Central Division Pastoral Leases had expired, and of these 314 have been finally dealt with for closer settlement (41 during 1899). Action is proceeding on the remaining cases and those which fall in during 1900 and 1901.

Schedules and reports were obtained from the District Surveyors, indicating the quality and capability of the lands comprised in the Central Division Leasehold Areas, falling in during 1899 and 1900. Summaries of the schedules and reports have been prepared.

3,470 plans and helios. were charted by contract, at an expense of £202 3s.

Four volumes of the Index to the Register of Reserves have been bound ready for use, and the remaining two have been type-written and will be bound at once. The completed index will be ready for use within the next two months.

The preparation of the new reserve books, and collecting the materials for these indices, were begun in 1891. The volumes now completed will be invaluable for reference purposes, and in connection with the compilation of maps.

The work of revision of plans for deed purposes again engaged the greater part of the time of two draftsmen; 2,779 plans, and 565 certified copies were examined and noted up, besides other work incidental thereto.

The Record Register of the branch shows the receipt of 10,756 registered papers, against 11,066 in 1898, made up as follows:—

	1898.	1899.
Alienation	4,348	3,828	520 decrease.
Miscellaneous	3,933	4,490	557 increase.
Conditional Sales	1,459	1,195	264 decrease.

Roads, &c.	38	50	12 increase.
	11,066	10,756	310 decrease.

Besides the above, 48 unregistered papers were received.

The work dealt with under the different headings during 1898 and 1899 is as follows:—

	1898.	1899.

COMPILING

COMPILING BRANCH.

Miscellaneous Division.—The parish work taken in hand by this branch has been completed, all the maps having been published and put into office use, with one exception, in which the map is awaiting completion of an exchange case.

Owing to demand for maps of several towns, the draftsmen who were employed upon parish map work are now dealing with the more important town maps; altogether there are 110 maps of this class requiring attention.

Under "Miscellaneous Work" it will be seen that a considerable number of maps and returns have been prepared for the Public Works Committee during the year, mostly in connection with projected railway lines.

The new Colony Map has been reduced by pantograph to the 16-mile scale for lithography; also, a new edition of the Postal Map has been prepared.

A new edition of small-scale Colony Map has been prepared and issued in a complete form, showing tanks, wells, bores, &c., &c.

Forty Parish Maps have been compiled and drawn.

The following County Maps have been charted up for new editions, viz., Denison, Phillip, King, Pottinger, Selwyn, Hardinge, Georgiana, Cowley, and standard County Maps of Cook, Northumberland, and Camden.

Compilations of the following County Maps were in hand 31st December, 1899, viz., Gowen, Monteagle, Drake, Jamison, Dampier, Gough, Clarendon, and Richmond.

Maps of the towns of Bowra, Germanton, and Warren, and of the villages of First Falls, Orara, Narromine, and Bexhill, have been compiled and drawn, and maps of the city of Grafton, and villages of Meadow Lee, Trangie, and Kingstone, were in hand on 31st December, 1899.

A map has been prepared from the surveyor's plan of the village of Springdale. Standard maps have been prepared for new editions of the towns of Condoulin, West Kempsey, Gunnedah, Bogabri, Cowra, Brewarrina, Narrandera, Gundagai, and Uralla, and villages of Mullumbimby, Jembaicumbene, Mundow, Mungindi, Appin, and Forster.

Fifty-two plans, representing 319 miles 19 chains of feature and connection surveys have been charted.

In addition to the above, a large amount of miscellaneous work has been done.

Parish Map Division.—In this Division there have been 234 new compilations made, and 121 standard maps charted up for new editions. In addition to these a large amount of special miscellaneous work has received attention.

The total number of maps issued during the year is 362, which is up to the average of previous years. 3,467 heliographs were prepared during the year.

LITHOGRAPHIC BRANCH.

During the past twelve months 392 plans of Crown lands open to settlement have been lithographed for free distribution to intending settlers.

A new and much-needed general map of the Colony, in four sheets, on 16-mile scale, being a reduction of the large map recently published, is now being lithographed.

A new edition, revised to date, of the Postal and Railway Map of New South Wales, in four sheets, has been prepared and printed.

The lithographic operations for the year, in detail, are as follows:—

Counties.

County maps show measured areas, roads, reserves, features, and all other information capable of delineation on a scale of 2 miles to an inch. They are usually photo-lithographed from compilations prepared at head office, and they are published at 5s. per copy.

Eleven county maps were printed during the year, comprising 1,919 copies, viz.:—

Ashburnham	Cowper	Hume	Pottinger
Camden	Denison	King	Taila
Cook	Goulburn	Narran

Towns.

Town maps show the general design, measured lands and names of purchasers or lessees thereof, reserves and dedications within town and suburban limits.

The maps are generally photo-lithographed from compilations prepared at head office, or from the surveyor's original plans, to the scale of 4 or 8 chains to an inch, and, with few exceptions, sold at 1s. per copy.

Sixteen town maps were printed during the year, comprising 1,800 copies, viz.:—

Appin	Forbes	Hill End	Narrandera
Attunga	Gallymont	Howlong	Narromine
Barraba	Giro	Mt. McDonald	Telerie (specimen)
Codrington	Gundagai	Mundow	West Kempsey

Parishes.

Parish maps are compiled to a scale of 20 chains to an inch for office use, and then, as a rule, photo-lithographed to a scale of 40 chains to an inch for publication and sale at 1s. per copy.

Four hundred and eight parishes were printed during the year, comprising 37,313 copies.

Auction Sale and Surveyors' Plans.

Fifty-one plans of land measured for auction were printed during the year, comprising 6,330 copies.

Miscellaneous.

The principal items embraced under this heading were as follows:—392 plans, illustrating areas thrown open for homestead selection, settlement lease, improvement lease or occupation license; 2 maps of New South Wales, showing respectively travelling stock routes and divisions for purposes of Crown Lands Acts; 2 maps of travelling stock routes, viz., Nyngan to Dandaloo, and River Darling to Dubbo; Land Board District of Sydney; Charts of George's River and Botany Bay, on 20 and 40 chains scales; Captain Cook's landing place, "Kurnell," Botany Bay; and 3 maps for annual report, Department of Lands, 1898.

Five hundred and twenty-three miscellaneous maps and plans were issued during the year, comprising 105,333 printed copies.

Other Departments.

Maps, plans and diagrams have been printed for the Departments of Chief Secretary, Works, Mines, Justice, and also for the Railway Commissioners, the following being worthy of mention:—The National Park; New South Wales and City of Sydney and environs, showing position of hospitals; New South Wales, showing mining districts and divisions, and illustrating also the distribution of copper ores; New South Wales, showing Police, Licensing, and District Court Districts, &c.; railway map of New South Wales; drawings of truss and low-level bridges, and military map for Easter encampment.

Thirty-five maps, plans, and diagrams were issued during the year, comprising 31,324 printed copies.

Official Forms.

Under this heading are comprised circulars, forms, decisions, and memoranda required for use, either at headquarters or in country offices, and which are generally lithographed in this branch, unless they can be more economically produced at the Government Printing Office.

Seventy-eight official forms were printed during the year, comprising 46,225 copies.

Contracts.

Contracts for lithograph work have also been completed to the amount of £97 12s.

ROADS BRANCH.

The Roads Branch inquiries into applications for survey and opening of roads through alienated land and Crown land held under lease, and deals with correspondence relating to roads and streets matters in general, e.g., complaints of obstruction of roads, objections to proposed roads, and claims to compensation. The plans of roads are examined, catalogued, and approved in the district offices, and then forwarded to this branch, where proceedings are taken under the Public Roads Act.

The Public Roads Act of 1897, which became law on 30th June, 1897, repealed previous Acts relating to the opening and closing of roads, the granting of compensation, &c., and since the date named all new cases which come within the scope of that Act have been begun and proceeded with under its provisions. Afterwards the roads are charted upon office plans and maps, and fully noted copies of the plans are furnished to the Department of Public Works and to the Registrar-General.

If terms as to compensation for opening of roads cannot be equitably arranged with the land owner, the matter is referred to the Land Board; and the Board's appraisal is then considered, and the compensation, whether in land or money, is, if unobjectionable, recommended for consideration of the Minister, and, after approval, action to grant or to add the compensating areas to incomplete purchases is taken in this branch.

Plans of streets surveyed for alignment on the applications of Municipal Councils are examined, catalogued, and approved in District Survey Offices, then forwarded to this branch, where the cases are prepared for submission to His Excellency the Governor for approval of the proposed alignments. The Public Roads Act of 1897 legalises the performance of alignment surveys by the Crown on application being made by Municipal Councils, the establishment of alignment under the Governor's authority, and gives power to alter the alignment of streets which have previously been aligned.

Applications for permission to erect public gates under Act 39 Victoria No. 10 are considered and dealt with. The powers of the Public Gates Act have been extended by the Public Roads Act of 1897.

Applications for purchase of unnecessary roads receive preliminary consideration, and descriptions are prepared for gazettal; subsequent action is taken in Alienation Branch. The Public Roads Act of 1897 repealed the 67th section of the Crown Lands Act of 1884, and since the 30th June, 1897, action to close and alienate unnecessary roads has been taken under the Public Roads Act.

During the year, 550 applications for survey of roads and streets were received and dealt with; also 342 surveyors' reports (exclusive of reports transmitting plans of surveys), 404 road plans showing 551 miles of road surveyed; 25 alignment plans, showing 95 streets as marked for alignment of carriage ways and footways; 71 applications for permission to erect 109 public gates; 188 applications for purchase of 320 unnecessary roads; and 418 objections and claims with regard to road and street surveys.

Information has been furnished for 4,174 letters in reply to communications and inquiries from members of the public with regard to roads and street matters. There were 8,974 papers registered during the year, which, together with 628 papers relating to roads registered in other branches, make a total of 9,602 papers received and dealt with. In 205 cases action has been taken to grant Crown land or unnecessary roads in compensation for land resumed under the Public Roads Act of 1897. The foregoing figures show an increase in the amount of work performed as compared with 1898.

OCCUPATION DRAFTING BRANCH.

An aggregate length of 33 miles 2 chains 48 links of pastoral holding boundaries was surveyed at a cost of £85 9s. 3d., a part of which, viz., £33 0s. 7d., was collected from the pastoral lessees; and a length of 5 miles 75 chains 42 links common to homestead lease boundaries was surveyed, on account of the cost of which the pastoral lessees contributed £5 18s. 10d.

The number of parish maps charted with pastoral holding boundaries shows an increase, the numbers being 450 and 475 for 1898 and 1899 respectively.

The areas and rents of 827 occupation licenses and pastoral leases were adjusted, consequent upon the reversions to and withdrawals from the areas.

A thorough investigation of the areas of 198 occupation licenses was found to be necessary.

85,200 acres were withdrawn from six leasehold areas in the Central Division under the provisions of section 3 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895.

Miscellaneous business in connection with 35 blocks as Improvement Leases, covering an area of 152,075 acres of the West Bogan country cleared by the Government for settlement purposes, has been carried out in this branch.

2,022 papers were recorded in the branch.

The attachment of three resumed areas to leasehold areas has been noted on office maps.

Ninety occupation licenses and lots have been prepared for sale by auction or tender.

Homestead, improvement, and other leases to the number of 657 have been noted or charted on office maps.

Four hundred and forty-two illustrative tracings and lithographs have been prepared.

Twelve hundred and forty-six oyster lease cases have been dealt with.

In addition to the above a considerable amount of miscellaneous work has been performed.

MISCELLANEOUS CONTRACT BRANCH.

There were 3,846 drawings prepared and issued from this branch—rather less than for the previous year. Of these 385 were maps of areas set apart for settlement, 200 for illustrations of proposals for the exchange of lands, 165 standard tracings of road plans, 359 diagrams on oyster leases.

Noting work of a general character, formerly done in the Deeds and other branches, has been transferred to this branch, and formed a considerable part of the business done in the branch during the year.

APPENDIX.

The Surveyor-in-charge of Field Operations, Trigonometrical Survey, to the Chief Surveyor,
No. 1900-11. forwarding Annual Report for the year 1899.

Sir, Trigonometrical Survey Camp, Lockhart, 10 January, 1900.

I have the honor to forward herewith a brief summary of work done in the field by the Trigonometrical Branch for the year 1899.

Bethunga, Wheel of Fortune, Hanging Rock, Loka and Goombargana trigonometrical stations were occupied with the 18-inch altazimuth, and 2,961 horizontal angles were measured.

Millbank and Lighthouse were observed from as second-class stations, using the 10-inch theodolite, 816 horizontal observations being measured.

Vertical observations were made at all of them, 703 observations being made.

Astronomical observations were made at Wheel-of-Fortune, Loka, and Goombargana, 264 stars were observed for azimuth, 340 stars for latitude, and 31 stars for time.

Magnetic observations were made at Wheel-of-Fortune, Lighthouse, Loka, and Goombargana trigonometrical stations.

On the whole the weather during the past year has, in the district where I was employed, been rather favourable for horizontal angle observations.

Mr. Surveyor F. J. Gregson, using a 10-inch theodolite, completed observations at Wullwe, which was partly done in the preceding quarter, and observed at Hudson's Peak, Wambrook, Queen-gallery, Yaouk, Townsend, Tennent, Coree, Hartwood, Tumorrana and Lampe trigonometrical stations.

He measured 3,439 horizontal observations, and 1,136 vertical observations, and also made magnetic observations at stations named.

Two stations (Blundell and Urayarra) were observed from eccentrically to strengthen the fixation of those stations.

He measured 7 reserves and 1 connection survey.

Mr. Piling Overseer J. Healy was employed in counties Clarendon, Bland, Bourke, and Cooper. Thirty-eight stations were piled, and some of them will be first-class stations, but this point cannot be decided until the scheme is further advanced.

He measured 12 reserves and 38 connection surveys.

Mr. Piling Overseer R. C. Gordon was employed in counties Goulburn and Selwyn, where he formed 24 stations, and also piled one station (Nest) selected by Mr. Surveyor Chard.

He measured 14 reserves and 24 connection surveys.

Mr. Gordon was employed in rougher country than either Mr. Healy or Mr. Richmond, hence the number of stations formed by him is smaller than it would have otherwise been.

Mr. Licensed Surveyor J. Richmond was appointed Piling Overseer on the 9th March.

He formed 15 new stations, and restored and repiled 11 stations. He has selected 9 other points which have yet to be piled and cleared. He also recleared Yarragundry and Peddles stations.

He measured 3 reserves and 21 connection surveys.

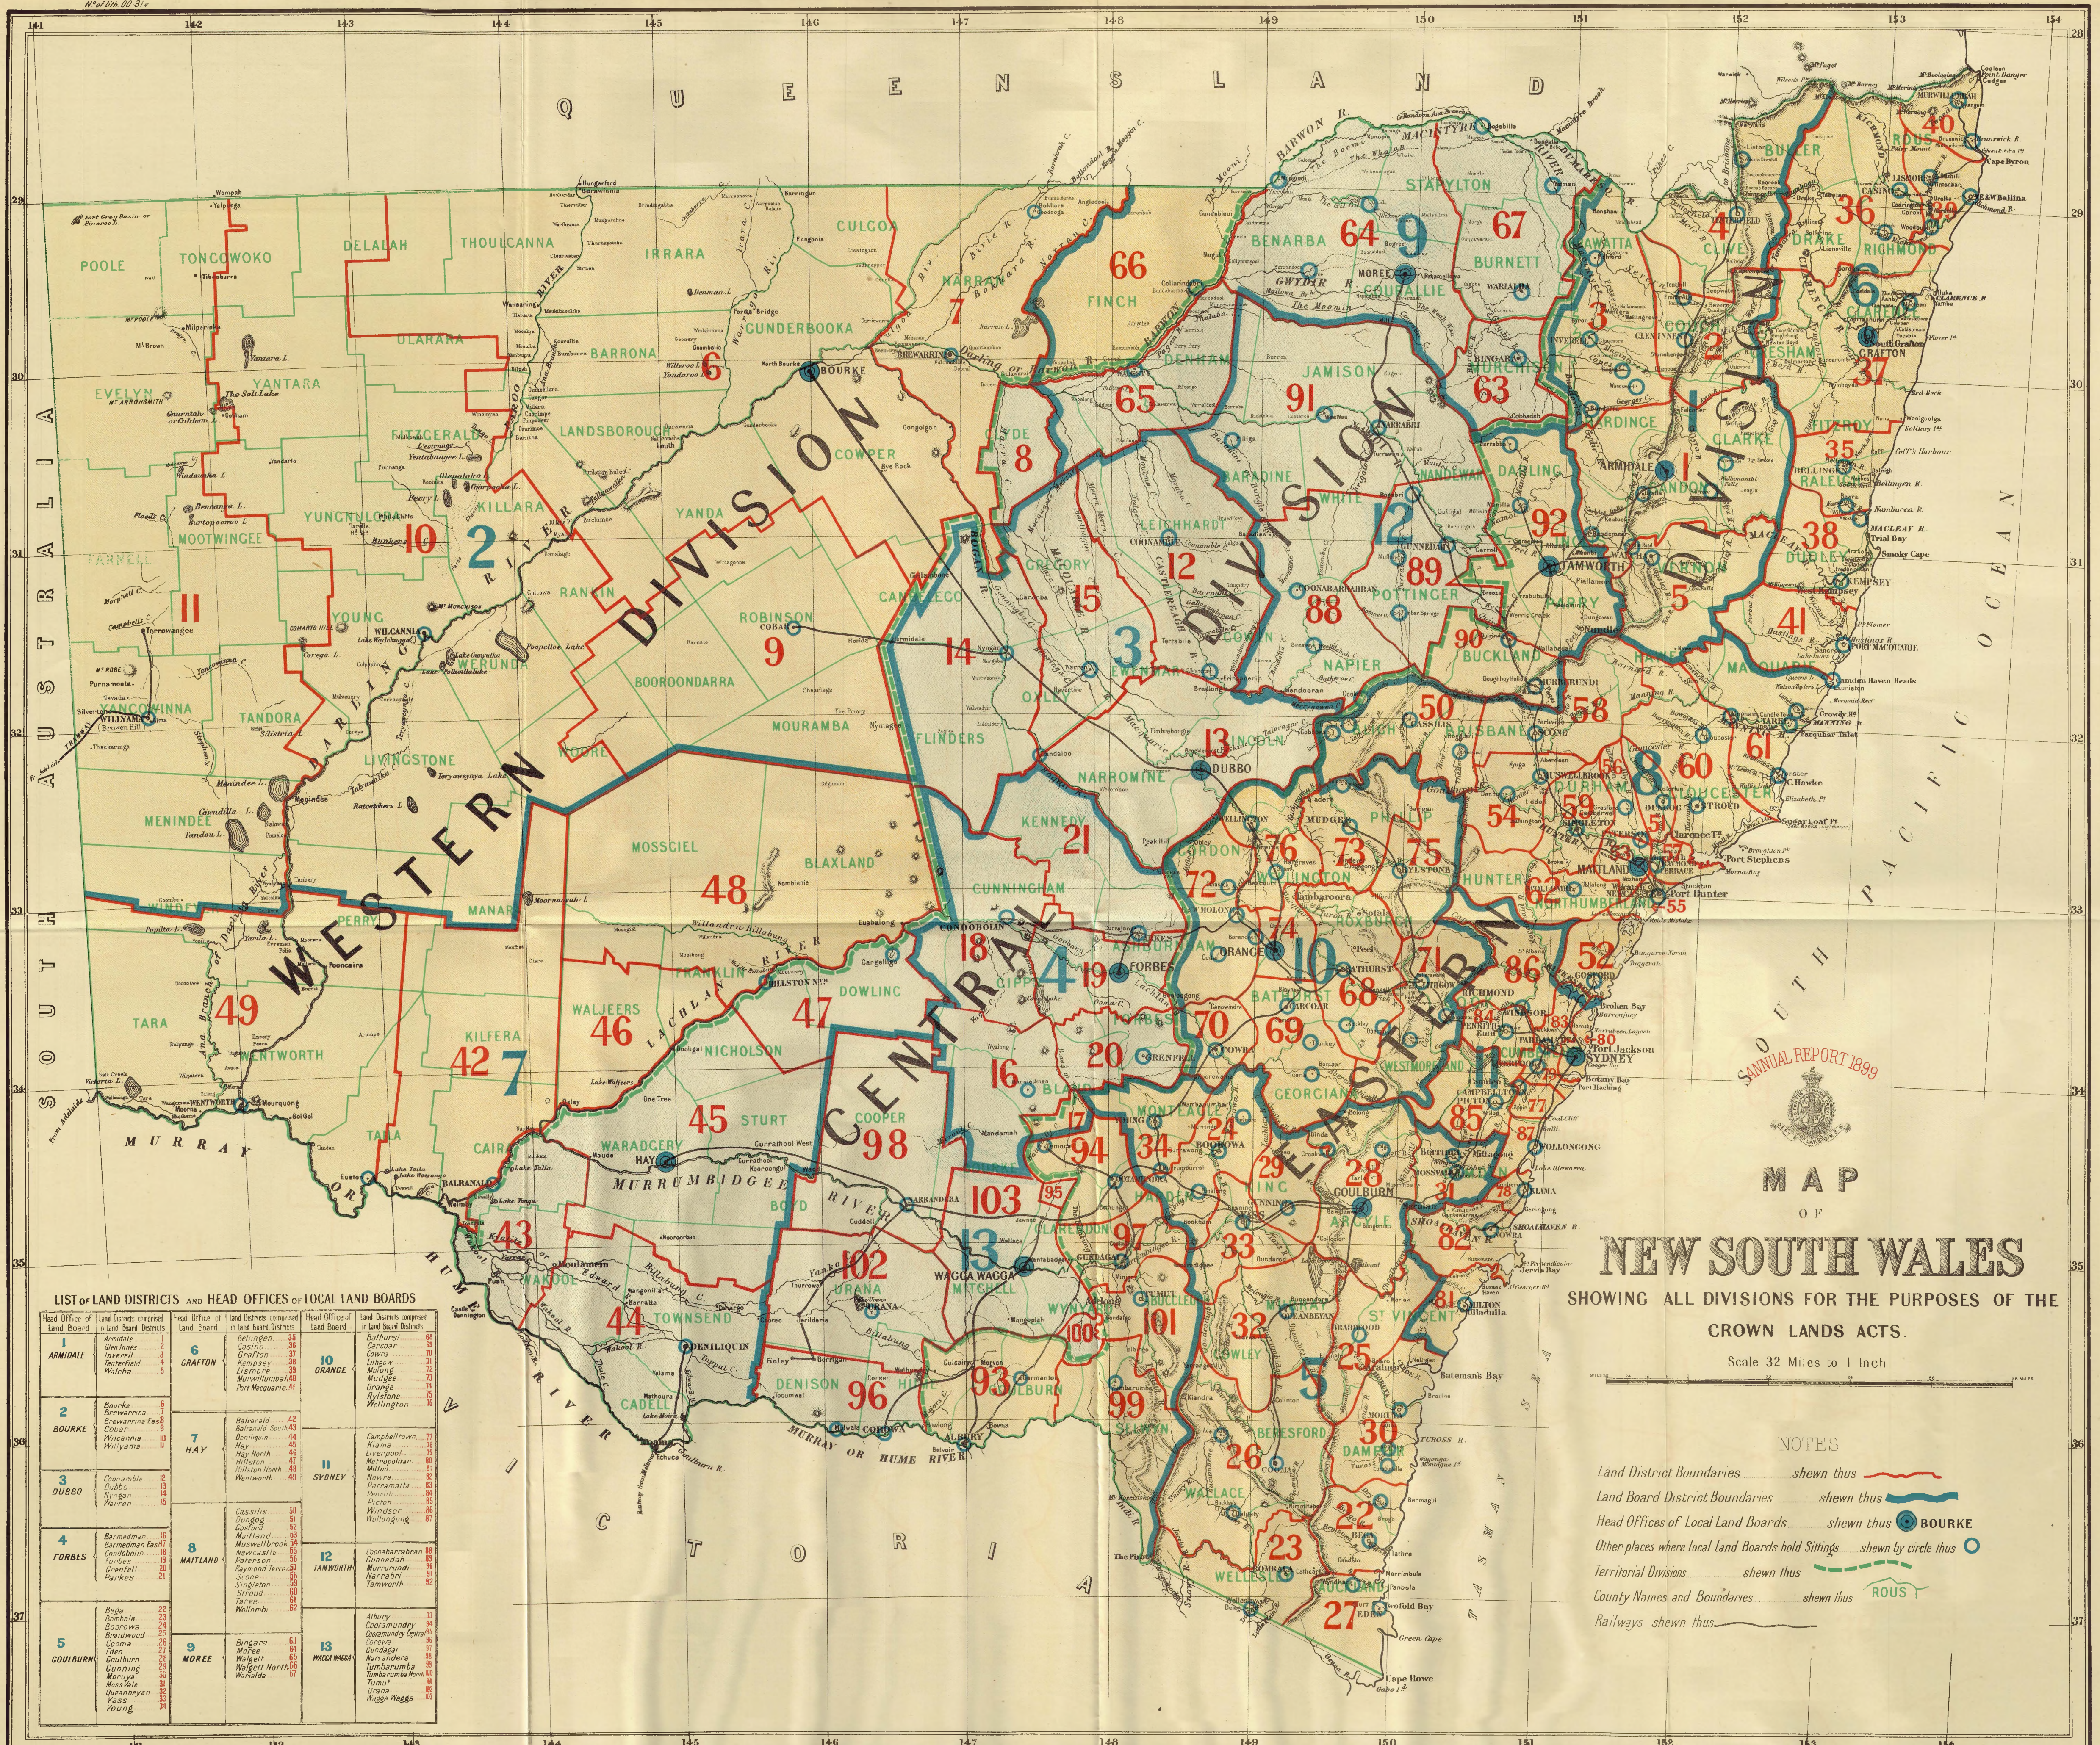

I have, &c.,

J. BROOKS,

The Chief Surveyor, Sydney.

Surveyor-in-charge of Field Operations, Trigonometrical Survey.

CONDITIONAL PURCHASE OF GEORGE HUMPHRIES COWLED.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on 3rd July, 1900, "to inquire into and report upon the claim of George Humphries Cowled for loss sustained by reason of the Supreme Court having reversed the decisions of the Land Appeal Court and the Local Land Board at Wagga Wagga, as to his right to an original conditional purchase,"—have agreed to the following Report.

Your Committee having examined the witnesses named in the List* (whose evidence will be found appended hereto), find:— See list, p. 4.

1. That on the 23rd June, 1898, Michael James Heffernan and George Humphries Cowled lodged applications to conditionally purchase the same land.
2. That simultaneously Heffernan lodged a conditional purchase application for other land, but was informed by the Land Agent that the lodgment of two applications would invalidate both, and thereupon Heffernan withdrew one, and the Land Agent proceeded to ballot.
3. That the ballot resulted in Heffernan drawing No. 1 and Cowled No. 2.
4. That subsequently the Local Land Board disallowed Heffernan's application, on the ground that it was one of two simultaneous applications for an original conditional purchase.
5. That the Local Land Board then proceeded to deal with Cowled's application, and confirmed the granting of the land to him.
6. That Heffernan then appealed to the Land Appeal Court against the disallowance of his conditional purchase and the confirmation of the land to Cowled.
7. That the Land Appeal Court dismissed Heffernan's appeal, and held that the fact of his having made two applications on the same day, simultaneously, invalidated both.
8. That Heffernan then had a case stated for the Supreme Court, who held that the decision of the Land Appeal Court was wrong, on the ground that when it was explained to Heffernan that the law did not admit of his lodging two applications simultaneously, he withdrew one, and stood only on the application which proved successful on the ballot.
9. That, in order to carry out the decision of the Supreme Court, the Land Appeal Court sent the case back to the Local Land Board, and ordered the Board to confirm Heffernan's application and disallow Cowled's.
10. That from the date of the confirmation of the land to Cowled by the Local Land Board until the decision of the Supreme Court, a period of one year, Cowled had effected considerable improvements on the land.
11. That in consequence of the Supreme Court having reversed the decisions of the Local Land Board and the Land Appeal Court, Cowled, besides losing the land and improvements, was cast in costs to the amount of £52 4s. 2d., whereas, had the land been originally confirmed to Heffernan, Cowled would have been enabled to obtain his deposit money, amounting to £138 15s., which was withheld for a period of one year and eight months, and on which no interest has been paid, and would also have been enabled to make a fresh application for land.

Your Committee consider that Cowled has a claim, and recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Government.

ON

CONDITIONAL PURCHASE OF GEORGE HUMPHRIES COWLED.

WEDNESDAY, 18 JULY, 1900.

Present:—

MR. AFFLECK,
MR. GORMLY,

MR. BARNES,
MR. NICHOLSON.

THOMAS FITZPATRICK, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

John Richard Yorke, Officer in charge of the Conditional Purchase Branch, Lands Department, sworn and examined:—

1. Chairman.] Do you know the circumstances connected with the case of George Humphries Cowled? Yes. I had a good deal to do with the case. In explaining the circumstances I may state that on the 23rd June, 1898, Michael James Heffernan lodged an application for a conditional purchase, and on the same day George Humphries Cowled made an application for the same land. Simultaneously with Heffernan lodging this application, he also lodged another conditional purchase application for other land. The Land Agent explained to him that the lodgment of two applications would invalidate his applications. Thereupon Heffernan withdrew one of them, and the Land Agent proceeded to ballot.

J. R. Yorke.
18 July, 1900.

2. Mr. Gormly.] Did Heffernan withdraw one of his applications before Cowled had lodged his application, or afterwards? The three applications were lodged simultaneously. There were a number of other applications; but only those of Heffernan and Cowled are under consideration at present. As I have stated, the Land Agent held a ballot, which resulted in Heffernan drawing No. 1, and Cowled No. 2. Subsequently the Local Land Board disallowed Heffernan's application on the ground that it was one of two simultaneous applications for an original conditional purchase, and that the law did not allow an applicant to make two original conditional purchase applications simultaneously.

3. Mr. Affleck.] That did away with Heffernan's claim altogether? Yes, so far as the Board was concerned. They then proceeded to deal with Cowled's application, and confirmed the conditional purchase to him. Heffernan then lodged an appeal to the Land Appeal Court against the disallowance of his conditional purchase; and against the confirmation of Cowled's conditional purchase. The reason of the appeal against the disallowance of his application was that the Board was wrong in holding that he was not entitled to tender two applications; also, that the Board was wrong in holding that the fact that he withdrew his second application before he had participated in any ballot did not distinguish his case from that of William versus Williams, and In re Sinclair; also, that the Board was wrong in holding that Regulation 81 was not ultra vires, and consequently void; also, that the Board was wrong in holding that the fact that he had withdrawn his only other application, and had only one application standing in his name when he participated in the first ballot of the day, did not cure his irregularity in lodging more than one application; and also that the Board was wrong in holding that the fact that the greater part of the land comprised in his other application tendered at the same time as that under consideration was not open to conditional purchase, did not take the case out of the operation of the said regulation. In connection with his second appeal, which was against the confirmation of Cowled's application, the grounds were: That the Board was wrong in confirming the said application, as his application, No. 21, of 1898, for the same land, lodged at the same time, having obtained priority by ballot, should have been confirmed in priority to the application made by Cowled; that the Local Land Board was wrong in holding that he was not entitled to tender two applications

J. R. Yorke. applications for original conditional purchases on the same day; also, that the Board was wrong in holding that the fact that he withdrew his second application before he had participated in any ballot did not distinguish the present case from that of William v. Williams and in re Sinclair. The remaining reasons are simply a repetition of those in connection with the first appeal. The Land Appeal Court dismissed Heffernan's appeal. They held that the fact of his having lodged two applications on the same day, simultaneously, invalidated both of them. Heffernan then gave notice, and had a case stated for the decision of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that the Land Appeal Court's decision was wrong. They held that the application made by Heffernan—the one which he succeeded in balloting for—was not invalidated by reason of his having made two applications on the same day, by reason of the fact that, before he went to ballot, and when it was pointed out to him that the law did not allow his lodging two applications, he withdrew it at once, and that he only stood on one application, which they upheld. Then the Land Appeal Court, to carry out the decision of the Supreme Court, sent the case back to the Local Land Board, and ordered the Board to confirm Heffernan's application, and disallow that of Cowled.

18 July, 1900.

4. Mr. Barnes.] And the Land Court knuckled down to the decision of the Supreme Court? Of course, they had to do so; but it was open to Cowled, if he had thought fit, to have taken the matter to the Privy Council. The Crown were not parties to the matter, inasmuch as it was an inter-party matter between Cowled and Heffernan.

5. Mr. Affleck.] I understand that the Local Land Board was authorised to confirm Heffernan's application? Yes; it had to give effect to the decision of the Supreme Court. The Land Appeal Court had to direct the Board to confirm Heffernan's application, and to disallow that of Cowled.

6. Chairman.] The Land Appeal Court was held in Wagga Wagga? Yes.

7. Mr. Affleck.] Have you any further evidence as to what took place after the Local Land Board gave notice to Heffernan that his application was sustained? No. Of course, the Local Land Board carried out the direction of the Land Appeal Court. The Local Land Board did as they were instructed. The papers disclose the fact that an application was made to the Department by Cowled to pay the Supreme Court costs.

8. That was after he lost the case in the Supreme Court? Yes. Of course, he had to pay the costs, and they amounted to £52 4s. 2d.

9. Chairman.] Was the Lands Department represented by counsel before the Land Appeal Court in Wagga Wagga when the land was further confirmed to Cowled? Yes. The appeal was made on the 1st March, 1899.

10. Mr. Affleck.] What took place before that Court? The Land Appeal Court dismissed Heffernan's appeal, and upheld the decision of the Board. Of course, Heffernan was quite within his rights in asking the Court to state a case for the decision of the Supreme Court, and he succeeded.

11. Mr. Nicholson.] Is not the Lands Department responsible for the actions of the various Land Boards throughout the Colony? I think not. They are independent Boards. The Department could not dictate to them as to what they should do. Of course, whilst the appeal was pending both to the Land Appeal Court and to the Supreme Court, Cowled was foolish to effect any improvements, because his title was not completed. When the Board confirms an application a co-balloter whose application is disallowed has twenty-eight days within which he can appeal to the Land Appeal Court. Heffernan took advantage of that. Consequently that suspended Cowled's title. After the Land Appeal Court upheld Cowled in his title there was a certain time—fourteen days—allowed within which notice could be given for a case to be stated to the Supreme Court. Heffernan gave the necessary notice. Therefore, Cowled's application or title was further suspended until the Supreme Court gave their decision. Therefore, if Cowled, upon his own responsibility, went on improving the land knowing that his title to it was not yet decided, it was his look-out, and not that of the Department.

12. Then as a matter of fact Cowled never had a clear title to the land? No.

George Humphries Cowled, storeman, sworn and examined:—

G. H. Cowled. 13. Chairman.] Will you give the Committee your version of your case, especially as regards the injury you have sustained? I understood, in the first place, when I applied for the land, that it was open for selection. I understood that Heffernan's application was invalid, and I applied for it—not to oppose Heffernan in any way, but to obtain the land if it were available.

18 July, 1900.

14. As a matter of fact, you put in your application? Yes.

15. When the Land Board confirmed the land to you, did you go upon it? Yes, straight away.

16. Did you commence improving it? Yes.

17. How long were you in possession before you got notice that Heffernan had appealed? About eighteen days.

18. Mr. Affleck.] When was the land confirmed to you? On the 24th October, 1898. Heffernan appealed against the decision of the Land Board, and the Appeal was heard on 1st March, 1899.

19. When was the notice of appeal given? On the 12th November, 1898.

20. Chairman.] Did you enter into any contracts for fencing? Yes; I let the contract of putting up the posts.

21. Was that during the eighteen days to which you have referred? Yes. I was putting the wire in when the first notice of appeal reached me.

22. Did you then go on with your improvements? I did not go on with them straight away. I had let the putting up of a mile of posts, and I finished the rest of the fencing myself, because a number of sheep were getting in.

23. When did the Land Appeal Court sit in Wagga Wagga? On the 1st March, 1899.

24. Did you attend? No.

25. The Land Appeal Court upheld the Local Land Board's decision, and reconfirmed the land to you? Yes.

26. Mr. Affleck.] Did you go on with your improvements after receiving notice to attend the Land Appeal Court? I did after the appeal was settled in my favour.

27. Did you go on with any improvements when you received notice that Heffernan had appealed? No; no more improvements than those for which I had let the contract.

28. What was the value of the improvements which you put upon the land between the selection on the 24th October and the receipt of the notice of appeal on the 12th November? The value of the improvements would not be much. I had let a contract. G. H. Cowled.
18 July, 1900.
29. Mr. Barnes.] Cannot you give us an idea of the value of the improvements which were put upon the land during that time? I had about 100 posts laid down.
30. Mr. Affleck.] Were they laid on the ground? Yes; and as near as I can guess about 200 were up. I also had the wire in some of the posts; but I could not say exactly how much.
31. Chairman.] The Land Appeal Court decided in your favour on the 1st March, 1899? That is so.
32. Then you went on with your improvements;—did you not put a fence around the 640 acres? I put up 2 miles of fencing.
33. Mr. Barnes.] Did you finish that before you heard that the matter was going to be taken to the Supreme Court? I could not say.
34. Mr. Affleck.] When did you become aware of the fact that Heffernan was going to take the case to the Supreme Court? On the 27th March.
35. That is, twenty-seven days after the decision of the Land Board was upheld? Yes.
36. Mr. Barnes.] What improvements did you carry out during those twenty-seven days? In the first place, I let the ringing.
37. Was the ringing completed? Yes.
38. Were the whole of your improvements carried out before the case was heard before the Supreme Court? Yes; but not before the notice of appeal was given. Improvements of the value of £97 were effected before the case went to the Supreme Court; but not before I became aware that it was going to the Supreme Court. Some of the improvements were, and some were not, effected before that time.
39. Mr. Gormly.] When was the case decided by the Supreme Court? On the 24th October, 1899.
40. Then you held the land for one year—from the 24th October, 1898, when it was confirmed to you by the Local Land Board, until the decision of the Supreme Court was given, exactly a year afterwards? Yes.
41. In other words, the land was held by you from the 24th October, 1898, until the 24th October, 1899? Yes.
42. And then you became aware of the decision of the Supreme Court? Yes.
43. Did you then abandon the land and give up possession? Yes.
44. After the conditional purchase was confirmed to you by the Land Appeal Court, had you made all your improvements? Yes.
45. What was the value of the improvements effected by you up to the time of the decision of the Supreme Court? £97 19s. 4d. I put in the following details:—

46. Mr. Affleck.] Up to what date was the £97 19s. 4d. for improvements expended? 24th October, 1899.
47. Are the whole of the improvements represented by that £97 19s. 4d. now upon the land? Yes.
48. Did you get any compensation for those improvements from Mr. Heffernan or anybody else? None whatever.
49. Then you have been put to a total loss of £97 19s. 4d., which you say has been put upon the land in improvements? Yes.
50. Mr. Barnes.] Have you received any money at all from the Government? None, with the exception of the refund of my deposit money, amounting to £138 15s.
51. Did the Government allow you any interest on that? No.
52. Chairman.] What period elapsed between the time you lodged that deposit and its refund to you? A year and eight or nine months—from 21st June, 1898, to 23rd February, 1900. 53.

G. H. Cowled. 53. And the decision of the Supreme Court was given on the 28th October, 1899? Yes.

18 July, 1900. 54. Mr. Gormly.] Did you make application before that time for a refund of the money? Yes; I made an application at the first sitting of the Land Board. I should like to read a letter from Mr. Heffernan, through his solicitors, to me, regarding my improvements. It is as follows:—

Re M. J. Heffernan's conditional purchase 98-21.

Dear Sir,

Wagga Wagga, 6 March, 1900.

Mr. Heffernan has requested us to place the following statement of the loss he has sustained, in consequence of the above-mentioned conditional purchase being disallowed, and yours confirmed, and of the appeal consequent upon the original decision of the Local Land Board:—

Loss of grass of 640 acres from date of application to date of decision of Supreme Court, 23rd June, 1898, to 24th October, 1899, at 2s. 6d. per acre per year, one year and four months, at £80 per year.....	£106 13 4
Interest on £138 15s. deposit and survey fee on second application from 24th October, 1898, to, say, 5th instant, at 6 per centum per annum	11 5 8
M. J. Heffernan's expenses to Wagga Wagga on original hearing, and also to make second application, at £1 per day	2 0 0
Our costs against Mr. Heffernan in connection with application and appeals	£76 8 6
Less amount received from you per Sheriff	54 13 7
	21 14 11
	£141 13 11

Against which is to be set the value of the improvements effected by you since the application was made, which Mr. Heffernan values as follows:—

One mile of six-wire fence	£18 0 0
One mile fencing, six-wires (five wires and one barbed wire)	19 0 0
160 acres of ringing at 7d.	4 13 4
	£41 13 4

So that you will see that even after making allowance for the improvements effected by you, Mr. Heffernan is, on the above figures, a loser to the extent of £100.

Yours, &c.,

HEATH & MITCHELMORE.

Mr. G. H. Cowled, Junee.

55. Mr. Affleck.] Do the figures which you have put in represent the estimated or actual cost of your improvements? My estimated cost. A number of articles are not mentioned in that list at all.

56. Some of the improvements in the list you have put in appear to be much higher than those mentioned in Mr. Heffernan's letter through his solicitors to you? Yes; but we are selling the wire now at £16 10s. a ton, and it takes a ton to go to a mile of fencing.

57. Mr. Gormly.] In the letter from Mr. Heffernan's solicitors appears the item: "Less amount received from you, per Sheriff, £54 13s. 7d.";—did you pay that amount to the Sheriff? Yes; that represents the Supreme Court costs.

58. Chairman.] I believe that, owing to the delay to which you were subjected, you lost many opportunities of taking up other land? Yes.

59. Did you also sustain loss through having your deposit money locked up for twenty months? Yes; I sustained a good deal of loss in consequence of that. I may state that when the land was reconfirmed to me I pulled down a fence and rebuilt it, and that cost me £10. I also held a sale, and sold a paddock for over £40 less than it really cost me.

60. You are referring now to land you held previously? Yes. I had originally 321 acres. It was all fenced, and when I received the notice to the effect that the land was re-confirmed to me, I asked Mr. Hammond, the landlord, to make it into 214 acres. I am now referring to rented land which I held as a tenant. That cost me £10 extra, really through the decision of the Land Appeal Court. Then, through holding the sale at the time at which it was held, I lost over £40. It was horrible weather, and the goods were sold at a much less price than that which they would fetch now. I have also missed the present season. I started cultivating when I was 19 years of age. Since that time—during four years—I have paid out of the Bank £2,250, and my account now stands at nil.

61. Mr. Gormly.] During the time you held possession of the land for which you applied, what profitable use did you make of it? I enclosed it and put about a dozen head of big stock—horses and cattle—upon it, and saved the grass.

62. Mr. Affleck.] What is the meaning of the item "J. Hancock's contract, £28 16s."? That is for grubbing.

63. Mr. Nicholson.] I understand that you received a letter from the Lands Department, dated 3rd May, 1899, notifying you that, pending the final determination of the appeal, any improvements you carried out would be at your own risk;—do you remember receiving that letter? Yes. It is as follows:—

Sir,

In reply to your letter of 25th ultimo, I have the honor to inform you that, pending the final determination of the appeal against the confirmation of your conditional purchase quoted in the margin, any improvements you may effect on this land will be entirely at your own risk.

I may add that the Department will give due consideration to the fact that during the period of the uncertainty of title improvements could not be carried out without risk, and any application for an extension of time to effect them will be dealt with on its merits.

I have, &c.,

WM. HOUSTON,

Under Secretary.

Wagga Wagga,
C.P. 98-22,
23 June, 1898,
640 acres.
G. H. Cowled.

Mr. George H. Cowled, Ivor, Junee Junction.

64. Did you effect any improvements after receiving that letter? Yes, I did.

65. I want you, if you can, to draw a distinction between the improvements effected prior to receiving that letter and those effected afterwards? After receiving that letter it seemed to be almost a certainty that I would get the land. I depended upon the Court. I would point out that that letter states that the Department would give consideration to the fact that during the period of the uncertainty of title improvements could not be carried out without risk.

66. Chairman.] Have you sustained much loss through the action of the Local Land Board confirming the land to you when it should not have done so? Yes. I have lost all I had; not exactly through that in particular, but that has helped my loss considerably.

67. If the Board had acted rightly at the outset, and had given the land to Heffernan, you would have been in a better position? Yes. I should have been able to take up other lands, and to have gone about my business.

ALFRED AUSTIN SAMPSON'S SETTLEMENT LEASE, GUNNEDAH.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on 3rd July, 1900, "to inquire into and report upon the matter of Alfred Austin Sampson's Settlement Lease, No. 96-21, Gunnedah, his appeals against the valuations of improvements on same, and all other proceedings in connection therewith,—and to whom was referred on the same date "the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Select Committee of Third Session of 1899," together with all papers referred thereto,—have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee having considered the evidence and papers referred, find,—

1. That the Lands Department, by notice in the Government Gazette, invited applications for a number of Settlement Lease farms on Wondoba Holding, in the Gunnedah District, such notice containing the usual particulars respecting each farm.
2. That in regard to one of the said farms (block 54) the capital value was fixed at £1 per acre, and the value of certain ringbarking improvements was stated to be (approximately) 9d. per acre, or a total sum of £108.
3. That Alfred Austin Sampson, fully relying upon the correctness of the statements contained in the Gazette notice, applied for and became the holder of the said block.
4. That subsequently the Local Land Board appraised the value of the said ringbarking at 1s. 4d. per acre, or a total sum of £191. In giving their decision, however, the Board said, "The evidence shows that the cost of ringbarking is considerably less than our valuation thereof, but we are bound in this matter to have due regard to section 51, Crown Lands Act, 1895, as "interpreted by the Land Appeal Court in the case of Barnes, &c."
5. That both the outgoing and the incoming tenants appealed against the Board's decision, and the appeals were heard together before the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth, when Counsel appeared for the Crown and strongly supported the contention of the outgoing tenants' Counsel that the said ringbarking improvements should be appraised at a considerably higher sum than the Board's valuation thereof. The contention of the outgoing tenants (supported by the Crown) was that the value of the ringbarking was the difference in the value of the land "between its green and its improved state," and that they were entitled to this full value. On the other hand, the selector contended that any enhanced value imparted to the land by the ringbarking improvement (due to the ordinary processes of nature and the inherent capabilities of the soil, &c.) was a land value, and belonged to the Crown; that it was included in the capital value, on which he was already charged full interest (rent); and that the value of the improvements to an incoming tenant could not be more than the cost at which he could effect such improvements for himself.
6. That the Land Appeal Court raised the valuation of the said ringbarking to 5s. per acre, or a total sum of £717, and refused to make their decision appealable, on the ground that there was no question of law involved.

7. That subsequently, after Sampson had been put to considerable trouble in insisting that there was a question of law (its interpretation) involved, the Land Appeal Court abandoned the position it had first taken up, and agreed to state a case for the Supreme Court.
8. That, at the suggestion of the Land Appeal Court, the case was allowed to stand over, pending a decision in the case Green v. Hargraves, and, meantime, the selector was ordered to give security for £330 to the outgoing tenants.
9. That the case of Green v. Hargraves not being proceeded with, the Land Appeal Court stated a case for the Supreme Court, in which the question submitted for decision was "whether the Land Appeal Court was right in taking into consideration any other element of value than the actual cost of effecting and maintaining such improvements."
10. That Sampson strongly objected to such statement of the case, which entirely missed the question at issue, and his Counsel urged the Land Appeal Court to state his (Sampson's) contention in his own words—as they appeared in Mr. Commissioner Freeman's notes, taken at the hearing at Tamworth. In this he was now supported by Counsel for the Crown, on the ground that the question at issue was as to the ownership of the increased value of the land arising through ringbarking, which value he contended "is caused largely by natural improvements of the soil, and is not a matter of private property."
11. That the Land Appeal Court refused to alter its statement of the case, which clearly amounted to a denial of justice, as it left Sampson with no alternative but to decline to go to the Supreme Court with a contention which he had never made, and which was not arguable.
12. That the question raised by Sampson was one of such supreme importance—affecting a great many settlers upon the lands of the Colony, and involving hundreds of thousands of pounds of Crown revenues—that Parliament could not allow it to remain in the state of uncertainty in which it was left by the Land Appeal Court, and an amendment of the law relating to the valuation of improvements to incoming tenants was made as a direct result of this case.
13. That the Lands Department, admitting that the Land Appeal Court's valuation had been made on a wrong basis, waived its claim to (what rightly belonged to the selector) all over 1s. per acre for such of the ringbarking as was the property of the Crown.
14. That this, though a considerable relief to Sampson, represented only a small part of the loss sustained by him in fighting the case (on behalf of selectors in general, and the Crown in particular), as, in addition to the enforced payment of 5s. per acre for such of the ringbarking as was the property of the outgoing tenants (£275), direct expenses of over £200, and loss of stock about £200, there were the far more serious losses consequent upon waste of time, and upon his being deprived of his capital—delaying fencing, conservation of water, and other improvements indispensable to the cultivation of the land and its profitable use. Almost invariably this would mean ruin; and in the present case must at least mean years of crippled effort.

In view of the foregoing facts, which may be summed up thus,—

- (a) A bona-fide selector suffered serious injury and loss, for which the Lands Department (primarily) and the Land Appeal Court were responsible;
- (b) This selector, by the action he took, undoubtedly rendered a great public service,— your Committee strongly recommend his case to the favourable consideration of the Government.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

ALFRED AUSTIN SAMPSON'S SETTLEMENT
LEASE, GUNNEDAH.

THURSDAY, 7 DECEMBER, 1899.

Present:—

MR. PHILLIPS,
MR. CRUICKSHANK,
MR. WHIDDON,

MR. SPENCE,
MR. SAWERS,
MR. GODWIN.

S. W. MOORE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Horatio Sampson called in, sworn, and examined:—

1. Chairman.] Where do you reside? At Curlewis.
2. You understand that this inquiry has reference to settlement lease No. 96-21, Gunnedah, taken up by Alfred Austin Sampson? Yes.
3. He was your son? Yes.
4. Have you been acting for him? Yes; I have been acting as his agent. I appeared for him at the Gunnedah Land Court.
5. Will you give a brief statement of the facts of the case? First of all, my son wrote to the Information Bureau of the Lands Department. That was in the year 1896. He wrote and asked for information as to the land open for settlement, and he received a reply containing the Gazette notice produced (See Appendix) and a plan of the settlement lease area No. 50, Central Division, land district of Gunnedah, within the leasehold area of Wondoobar holding, declared a resumed area. Subsequently I received a similar Gazette sheet from the Land Agent at Gunnedah. It shows several blocks open for settlement lease, one of which, portion No. 54, my son applied for. The nature and estimated value of the improvements were stated to be: fencing, £92; ringbarking, £108; tank, £75.
6. I suppose the capital value of the land was fixed at £1 an acre? Yes, and the annual rent at 1½ per cent. on that capital rate. I was frequently in consultation with my son in reference to the matter, and I am in a position to say that he applied for that settlement lease on the understanding that the improvements would be somewhere about what the Gazette notice stated them to be.
7. In due course the settlement lease came before the Land Board for confirmation, and for the appraisal of the value of the improvements? Yes.
8. Was that all at one time? Yes.
9. What happened then? I appeared for my son as his agent.
10. Was the outgoing tenant represented? Yes, by Mr. Creagh, of the firm of Ross and Creagh, solicitors.
11. Was the Crown represented? Yes, by the district surveyor as usual. I thought that Mr. Turner, licensed surveyor, in his evidence, was taking the land values which belonged to the Crown as improvements to which I objected. The Chairman then called my attention to the Land Appeal Court's decision in Barnes' case. We very strenuously opposed the argument of Mr. Creagh. We said that this was all land value belonging to the Crown, that it was taken into account in our rent, and that the value of improvements to an incoming tenant could not exceed the cost at which he could effect such improvements for himself. Mr. Turner stated in his evidence that in making his valuation of improvements he thought he was bound by the cost at present rates. The Board in their decision said,—“The evidence shows that the cost of the ringbarking is considerably less than our valuation thereof; but we are bound in this matter to have due regard to section 51, Crown Lands Act of 1895, as interpreted by the Land Appeal Court in the case of Barnes.”

12. And what did they determine the improvements at? They determined the value of the ringbarking improvements at 1s. 4d. per acre, which amounted to £191 6s. 8d. The area of the settlement lease was 3,534 acres, of which 2,870 acres contained the ringbarking improvements. Both the outgoing tenant and the incoming tenant were dissatisfied, the latter thinking the appraisements too much, and the former thinking it not enough. We should not have appealed, preferring to put up with it rather than go to law. But the other side appealed, and we were then advised to appeal, so as not to show acquiescence.

13. In due course the case came before the Land Appeal Court? Yes; sitting at Tamworth.

14. And you appeared again on behalf of your son? I did.

15. The outgoing tenants were represented by counsel? Yes, by Mr. Pike, instructed by Messrs. Ross and Creagh.

16. And the Crown was represented by a barrister? Yes, by Mr. Kent. Both sides had asked that the case should be heard in Sydney; it was, however, set down for hearing at Tamworth. When the case came on I appealed to the Court to adjourn the case to Sydney, so that I might have the assistance of counsel. The President asked me if there was a question of law involved. I said there was; but he said there was not, and refused to adjourn the case to Sydney.

MR. CRUICKSHANK.

S. W. MOORE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Horatio Sampson further examined:—

A. H.
Sampson.
12 Dec., 1899.

17. Chairman.] This case was heard at Tamworth? I should like to say before the case came on at Tamworth, after the Land Board sitting at Gunnedah, I was speaking to some gentleman in Tamworth, when Mr. Carruthers, who was then Minister for Lands, joined us, and asked if that was my son who had been beaten in the case before the Land Board at Gunnedah. I said I did not know about being beaten, but I thought we should have some trouble. He told me that we should have no trouble, that he intended to fight the matter in the public interest, as it was a question of great public importance. He said he knew the case thoroughly. The late Mr. Collins, M.P., Mr. Hyman, and Denis Wood were present at the time. Having this assurance of the Minister, we had no hesitation in spending the money on the land. When the appeal came on at Tamworth, I thought the counsel for the Crown was appearing on our behalf, and when he began to argue the other way I pulled his gown, and told him that Mr. Carruthers said he was going to fight the case for us. He simply replied, “Did he,” and went on with his argument. In our appeal we submitted two questions to the court, one of fact, and one of law. The basis of the valuation was a question of law. I urged as before the Land Board at Gunnedah that the increased value of the land reverted to the Crown, and was charged to us in our rent, and that the value of the improvements to the incoming tenant could not exceed the cost at which he could effect such improvements himself. I gave various illustrations.

18. Would you give us one of your illustrations? I referred to a place locally known as the Monkey, a sand belt about 2 miles wide, and, I think, about 100 miles in length, situated about 30 miles west of Coonamble. In that belt almost anywhere water can be obtained at from 7 to 10 feet deep. The adjacent country is good pastoral country; but waterless. I contended that if the outgoing tenant sank a well at a cost of £5 or £10, giving to the land an increased value of £100, he was not entitled to charge the incoming tenant that £100, that the increased value would revert to the Crown, and the Crown would charge rent accordingly on its full capital value at the date. I was arguing that this land value belonged to the Crown, when the President said, “But, Mr. Sampson, will not your argument cut against yourself at the expiration of your own lease.” I replied, “Certainly, we should have no more right to those land values than the present outgoing tenant has.” Mr. Kemp, the Crown Counsel, in reply to my argument, said, “Mr. Sampson’s argument will not do. He did not produce the axe; he did not make the axe. If a man by the judicious outlay of 6d. made the land worth 60s. he was entitled to that 60s. Mr. Pike, who appeared for the other side in reply to me, said “According to Mr. Sampson all those moneys go to the Crown which did nothing, not to the man who did all the work, and took all the risk in spending his money.”

19. What did the Crown Counsel contend that the ringbarking improvements were worth? Over £2,000.

20. Were they the self-same improvements as the Gazette notice stated to be worth £108? Yes; the same, and deteriorated. On their own evidence it would cost 4d. to remove the suckers.

21. What, in your opinion, would be a fair value of that ringbarking improvement at the date that your son took up the selection? I thought it was not an improvement to the land at all by reason of the great growth of suckers, and the enormous number of wallabies it had induced to come upon the land.

22. Still you were quite prepared to pay anything in reason? We thought that there should be 6d. for removing the suckers, and the original price being 9d., that would make the value 3d.

23. The Crown valuation in the Gazette notice is 9d.? Yes.

24. And rather than go to law you would willing have paid the 1s. 4d. that the Board fixed it at? Yes.

25. Mr. Cruickshank.] Were you fully under the impression that the unearned increment, or improved value in the land, was included in the upset price put on the land? Yes; the whole of it. I was clearly of opinion in taking the land that the capital value then fixed upon it included any enhanced value imparted to the land by the improvements already made through the ordinary processes of nature.

A. H.
Sampson.

12 Dec., 1899.

26. Chairman.] If the Crown did not value the land on that basis they would be making a present of the land value to the outgoing tenant? Exactly.

27. The contention of the other side was practically the same as that of the Crown? Yes. As the Court was rising, Mr. Pike said, "This Court has already decided that value is not cost," to which the President replied, "But this is something different, this is something new." The Court reserved its decision which it gave in Sydney on the 14th July, 1897. The Court sat at Tamworth on the 25th June, 1897. They gave the value of the ringbarking at 5s. per acre which amounted to £717. The value of the other improvements was left at the amount fixed by the Land Board. I was present and asked the Court to give reasons for their decision, so that we could appeal. They refused to make it appealable. Next I wrote a letter to the Daily Telegraph, which appears on page 16 of the printed papers. Then a deputation waited on the Minister in reference to it, and subsequently the adjournment of the House was moved by Mr. Moore to call attention to the administration of the Crown Land Act in regard to the valuation of improvements to incoming tenants. Mr. Carruthers advised us to abandon the place, to apply for a certificate of abandonment, and he would give us beforehand notice to take the land up again, as he said that the Land Appeal Court's decision in the case of Greene v Hargrave was clearly unassailable, and he thought ours was a similar case, that there was no question of law involved in our contention. Then I referred the matter to Mr. Wise, who said we should be very foolish to abandon the place, and told us not to apply for a certificate of abandonment, that the law made no provision for beforehand notices, and our title might be challenged. He also said that there was a supreme question of law involved in our contention. Mr. Wise advised us to make a formal application to the Land Appeal Court, to state a case for the Supreme Court, and he would appear for us. A formal application was made, and £20 was lodged, Mr. Newman, solicitor of Tamworth, instructing Mr. Wise, and the case was drawn by Mr. Wise himself, and submitted to the Court. When the case came on on the 22nd September, 1897, in answer to some remark of Mr. Wise, the Court said it had not given any reason for its decision. Mr. Wise replied that the Land Board said their decision was based upon section 51 of the Crown Land Act of 1895, as interpreted by the Land Appeal Court. This was a question of law, and he submitted that the Court would not deprive us of our right to get an interpretation from the Supreme Court itself. The President said, "You mean that there must necessarily have been reasons that would involve a question of law." Mr. Wise said, "Oh, that is admitted. The whole of the evidence shows the cost to have been 9d. an acre, and the difference between that and 5s. is so great, even if we add interest to the 9d., as to show that there must have been some other reason acting on the minds of the Court." The President said to Mr. Wise, "If we once admit this, if we once open the flood-gates in this way, I do not know where we shall stop." Counsel for the Crown, Mr. Hanbury Davies, supported Mr. Wise in his contention, and the Court said, "What does the Crown mean? When this case was previously before the Court, counsel for the Crown argued the opposite and succeeded." The Court then suggested that the case should stand over until the case of Greene v Hargrave was decided. But we had to give security to the outgoing tenant for the amount of the improvements as valued by the Court, although they were already secure under section 52 of the Act of 1895. Hargrave's case was not proceeded with. Then the case came on again on the 30th March, 1898; Mr. Wise again appeared to urge that a case ought to be stated for the Supreme Court. During the course of his argument as to the basis of the valuation, he said that we contended that the whole, not part of, the increased land values reverted to the Crown, and that it did not concern us at all what it cost the outgoing man, that the cost to us was the value to us. The President said, "The fair cost, Mr. Wise?" Mr. Wise said, "Yes, the fair cost." The Court finally agreed to state a case, and they did state a case, as in the printed papers, pages 20 and 21. A copy of the statement of the case was forwarded to me to which I replied by letter (page 19).

28. You have before you a copy of the printed papers? Yes.

29. On page 19 you see the enclosure for No. 24, Mr. Keeting's letter? Yes.

30. Which purported to be the Land Appeal Court's statement of the case for the Supreme Court? That is not the case as stated by the Land Appeal Court, but it will be found on pages 20 and 21.

31. If the Land Appeal Court had stated the case, as appeared in the enclosure to No. 24, which is what you contended, you certainly would have gone on to the Supreme Court? Yes.

32. Then your letter on page 19, No. 25, refers to the enclosures of No. 26, page 20? Yes.

33. And not to the enclosures of No. 24, on page 19? No.

34. Therefore, there has been a mistake on somebody's part in arranging these papers? Yes.

35. In consequence of the way in which the Land Appeal Court stated the case for the Supreme Court you declined to go any further with it? Certainly.

36. Why? Because they stated a case which was not in accordance with our contention. They missed the main point of our contention. We considered the matter unarguable as they put it. The Appeal Court put it that the question for the decision of the Supreme Court was whether, in determining the value of the improvements under sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, the Land Appeal Court was right in taking into consideration any other element of value than the actual cost of effecting and maintaining such improvements.

37. You had never argued that point at all? No. We said it did not matter to us whether they exceeded the actual cost or not, we were not concerned with it, and we could not argue the case as stated by the Land Appeal Court. The case should have been submitted in this way: that the Court had taken into consideration the increased value given to the land by reason of such improvements, and base their decision upon this principle, whereas the appellant contended that the additional value given to the land reverts to the Crown, and was, presumably, charged to the incoming tenant in his rent, and was not payable by the incoming to the outgoing tenant; and that the value of the improvements to an incoming tenant cannot be more than the price at which he could produce them for himself; that the case should have been stated in this way to the Supreme Court.

S. W. MOORE, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Horatio Sampson further examined:—

A. H.
Sampson.
13 Dec., 1899.

38. Chairman.] With reference to the evidence you gave yesterday in regard to the enclosures with No. 24 in the printed papers, purporting to be the Land Appeal Court's statement of the case to be submitted to the Supreme Court, I understand that you have looked into that since? I have.

39. And you find that it is really the statement of the case as prepared by Mr. Wise, not the statement prepared by the Land Appeal Court? Yes, by Mr. Wise, my counsel.

40. In other words, it is the statement of the case as you say it ought to have been put by the Land Appeal Court? Yes.

41. You stated that on receipt of the statement of the case as submitted by the Land Appeal Court, you replied as per letter on page 19 of the printed papers? Yes.

42. Did you receive any reply to your letter? Yes; it is to be found on page 22 of the printed papers (No. 30).

43. What did you do on receipt of that letter? I consulted Mr. Wise and Mr. Newman in reference to it, and on the 5th July, Mr. Wise appeared before the Land Appeal Court, and argued that the Court had stated the case in a way which he had never contended for, saying that he had always been instructed differently; that our contention had been all along that it did not matter to us what the actual cost was—whether the improvements were made by Kanaka labour at a penny an acre, or by expensive labour at an exorbitant price. He was supported in his contention by counsel for the Crown—Mr. Hanbury Davis. The President then said, "But you did not hear what Mr. Sampson said in Tamworth." Mr. Wise asked me if I had argued differently in Tamworth, and I said I certainly had not. The Court then produced their notes taken at Tamworth, and my own contention in my own words was found in Mr. Commissioner Freeman's notes underlined. They were handed down to the barristers' table. The Court then agreed to reconsider the matter. The next morning I attended the Court, not Mr. Wise, and the Court refused to alter the case as stated by them, saying that, though I must have mentioned it at Tamworth, I did not argue it; also that the evidence in the case showed that the actual cost was intended, and also that Mr. Wise's use of the word "cost" in the draft case meant actual cost. I now say that this was absolutely untrue. I spoke an hour and ten minutes at Tamworth arguing, as I gave evidence yesterday. In the evidence taken before the Land Board, as it appears in the printed papers, with the exception that Mr. Robey said that the books showed that the late Mr. John Gill had paid 1s. a yard for the tanks, there was no reference to actual cost in the whole of the evidence. Quite the reverse. Mr. Surveyor Turner, a witness for the Crown, says in his evidence (page 3), "Similar country could be ring-barked now for 9d. per acre. I should say it would cost about 4d. per acre to remove the suckers." On being recalled (page 7), he further said, "In fixing the value of the ringbarking I thought I was bound by the cost at present rates." With reference to Mr. Wise's use of the word "cost" in the draft case, Mr. Newman, my solicitor, and myself, being anxious about it, saw Mr. Wise here at Parliament House and pointed out the use of the word "cost." He pointed out to us that the Act said that the value to the incoming tenant was to be determined, not the value to the outgoing tenant, and that cost meant the cost to the incoming tenant; or, in other words, what it would cost the incoming tenant to effect the improvements for himself. Then I wrote to Mr. Chairman Freeman, of the Tamworth Land Board, a letter which appears in the printed papers (page 24, No. 38), asking him whether I argued before him at Gunnedah, and also before the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth, that the value of the improvements to the incoming tenant could not be more than the cost at which he could effect such improvements for himself. He acknowledged the receipt of my letter, saying that he had given the information to the Under Secretary for Lands. I made application to the Lands Department for a copy of Mr. Freeman's letter, which is on page 24 of the printed papers (No. 38). I felt assured that Mr. Freeman would answer my question, although it required some courage to do so in his position. That request for a copy of the letter was refused, but the letter itself is in the printed papers. In it he says, "From personal knowledge I am able to testify that Mr. A. H. Sampson did argue before the Local Land Board at Gunnedah, and before the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth, 'that the value of improvements to an incoming tenant could not be more than the cost at which he could affect such improvements for himself.' I will leave it to you whether Mr. Sampson is to have the information." We could not go on to the Supreme Court with the case as stated by the Land Appeal Court, because we should answer their question against ourselves, and I wrote to the Registrar, telling him that we would not ask him to send it on to the Prothonotary. The letter is on page 22 (No. 32). In that letter I said:—

As my contention from first to last was, as stated in my letter to you of 18th April last, and as similarly stated in the notes of Mr. Commissioner Freeman, taken at the hearing at Tamworth, I must decline to recede from my position or accept a contention which is not mine, and which I never made.

In view of the President's remarks that the evidence points to "actual cost" being the criterion of value, I have carefully re-read the whole of the evidence, and with the exception that Mr. Robey mentioned that the books showed that Mr. Gill had paid 1s. a yard for the tank, the whole of the evidence seems to me to point the other way—that is, in the words of Mr. Turner, a witness for the other side, to "cost at present rates."

Under these circumstances, as intimated to the Court by my counsel, Mr. Wise, I will not trouble you to send the case on to the Prothonotary.

I have, &c.,

A. H. SAMPSON.

Then the Crown wished me to go on with the case as stated by the Land Appeal Court. The letter in which they made that request is in the printed papers, page 23 (No. 36). I consulted Mr. Wise, and he said that there was no hope of doing anything in that way. I also wrote to Mr. Newman, my solicitor, in Tamworth, mentioning the case to him, and also letting him know that the Court said I had not argued it. He told me that nothing could be done in the way which I suggested—that the question put was one that we should answer against ourselves. Then he went on to say:—

Knowing your line of argument before the Land Court at Tamworth, I am surprised at the Court refusing to state the case in such a way as to embrace the question which you so clearly put before it. I note that the President said that, though you must have mentioned the point, you did not argue it. If you did not argue it, what did the Court consider was

was your object in mentioning it? I think it most unlikely that the other side would allow your notice of intention not to proceed to be revoked; "public grounds" would be nothing to them. You have no doubt raised a question of law of supreme importance to the Crown and the people; but the question which the Land Court pinned you down to is a very different one indeed, wanting altogether the element which made yours of such importance.

A. H.
Sampson.
13 Dec., 1899.

44. You then wrote to the Department? Yes; as per my letter No. 37 (page 23) of the printed papers. The next thing was that the Department wrote waiving their claim to all over 1s. per acre for such of the ringbarking as was the property of the Crown (page 26, No. 42). I replied by letter, which appears on page 26 (No. 44), to which I desire to call the Committee's special attention, as it is too lengthy to quote. I should like to call the Committee's attention to Mr. Pike's reports of Land Appeal Court Cases, volume 7, p. 125, in which my contention before the Land Appeal Court is reported. The following passages occur:—"Any improvement effected by the ringbarking should be in the capital value and go to the Crown. If the ringbarking has improved the land, the Crown has charged for it in the appraisal of the value of the land, and we should not be called upon to pay twice for the same improvements.

45. I understand that you have suffered considerable loss over this matter? Yes, we have. The loss that we have suffered is very hard to estimate.

WEDNESDAY, 20 DECEMBER, 1899.

MR. CRUICKSHANK.

S. W. MOORE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Alfred Horatio Sampson further examined:—

46. Chairman.] Can you give the Committee a statement as to the expense you were put to in fighting this case? Yes; the amount is £165.

47. You put down the direct expenses at £165? Yes, made up as follows:—Nine trips to Sydney, at £15; one trip to the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth, £5; solicitor's costs, £25. I should like to add that Mr. Newman, who was my solicitor, charged me very little more than his costs out of pocket, and Mr. Wise, my counsel, acted without fee or reward, as he viewed the case as one of great public importance. In addition to these expenses, I had to make numerous trips to Tamworth, of which I have lost all count, but the expenses of which must have been at least £50.

48. Can you give the Committee any statement as to the losses that you sustained outside the actual expenses that you were put to in fighting the case? Of course it is hard to make up the indirect losses. Owing to my son being unable to fence his ground all his grass was eaten, and he lost about twenty head of horses, one being a stallion 4 years old. Altogether the horses would be worth about £200.

49. Mr. Cruickshank.] Had your son sufficient capital to work the property when he applied for the land? Yes; he certainly had.

50. But by the action of the Government he was prevented from carrying on? When the Crown appeared and argued, as the lessees contended, this money had to be used in fighting instead of being spent on the land.

51. Had he sufficient capital to work the land when he took it up? Yes; he had sufficient capital, but he had to use it in fighting the case. He had to lock up £200 in the Savings Bank as security to the outgoing tenants for the improvements. As it was no use to him in that way he has paid it over to the outgoing tenants. He was losing 1 per cent. on it. Not only was he prevented from fencing the land, but also from conserving water, and from getting more land under cultivation. He could not conserve any water, and there is none on the land. He has to keep a man continually employed in watering the stock. That is another item of loss. That tank, which is valued at £75, is utterly useless—it will not hold water. I may also add that my own time has been almost entirely taken up with the case. For that also I cannot make any valuation.

52. Chairman.] Suppose that your son had been left as any ordinary selector might be, to his own resources, and had not you to stand by him and help him, what would have been his fate? He must inevitably have failed; he would have been ruined.

53. He would have been driven off the land? Undoubtedly.

54. Is it a fact that you yourself have been working on the selection with your son helping him to get the place in order? Yes; he got into such difficulties that I had to go and work on his selection.

55. You have really been helping him all through? Yes.

56. And but for that he would have been ruined? Yes; he must have been.

57. You have already stated that the Crown waived its claim to all but 1s. per acre for the ringbarking, which was its property? Yes.

58. What have you had to pay to the outgoing tenants for the ringbarking, which was their property? £275.

59. How much have you had to pay altogether for the ringbarking, which was stated by the Government to be worth £108? £363.

60. Are your son's troubles now at an end? No; he has been in great difficulty. He has not kept up his payments to the Crown, and he has received notice that his land is liable to forfeiture.

61. If there had been no trouble about the ringbarking improvements, do you inform the Committee that your son would have been able to carry on all right? Yes; he could have done so without difficulty. With reference to the £200 which was locked up by order of the Land Appeal Court, I should like to say that, owing to the action of the court, the money was locked up unnecessarily from the 22nd September, 1897, to 6th July, 1898. The Committee can see how useful that amount would have been to the struggling selector during that time. I should like to state to the Committee that we have made no mistake—we have made no false step. I asked Mr. Wise about it. I said, "Have we made any false step from start to finish?" and he said, "You have not."

62. You claim that in fighting this case you conferred a great benefit on the public? Yes. As a proof of that, the alteration of the law relating to the valuation of improvements to incoming tenants was the direct outcome of my case being brought before Parliament. When that alteration of the law was effected in 1898, Mr. Wise wrote to me giving me the credit of it.

63. Mr. Sawers.] Have you that letter? Yes.

64. Can you produce it? Yes; it is as follows:—

My dear Sampson,

I must congratulate you upon the success of your efforts to establish an important branch of the Land Law on a basis of right principle. Such an achievement, and that a private person should secure an alteration in the law of such far-reaching consequences, almost by his unaided efforts, is almost without parallel. You have the consolation of knowing that you have rendered a great service to the country, and generation after generation of settlers will remember your name with gratitude.

16 December, 1898.

Sincerely yours,
B. R. WISE.

S. W. MOORE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

John Richard Yorke sworn and examined:—

J. R. Yorke.
22 Dec., 1899.

65. Chairman.] What are you in the Lands Office? I am the officer in charge of the Conditional Purchase Branch.

66. Do you know this case of Sampson's settlement lease, Gunnedah? Yes.

67. Have you seen the evidence given by Mr. A. H. Sampson? Yes; I have seen a copy of the first part, and I heard the latter part of it given.

68. Will you say what you desire either in reference to the evidence given by Mr. Sampson or in regard to any other matter that you wish to put before the Committee in connection with this case? In answer to Question 17, Mr. Sampson referred to a conversation which he had with Mr. Carruthers at Tamworth. The Department has no record of any such promise having been made by Mr. Carruthers. With reference to Question 19, we have no record that Counsel for the Crown contended that the ringbarking improvements were worth over £2,000. Counsel for the Crown was not instructed to ask for any increase over and above what the Board had assessed the value of the ringbarking at.

69. Did Counsel for the Crown receive any instructions from the Department? Yes.

70. Would you state what those instructions were? All the instruction that was given to Counsel was that he should support the interests of the Crown as regards the valuation of the Crown's improvements, and his attention was invited to Licensed Surveyor Turner's evidence in regard thereto. That was simply as regards the Crown's improvements. Of course the other improvements belong to the lessee, and we had nothing whatever to do with them.

71. Mr. Sawers.] The Crown had no intention of pressing for any higher valuation than that assessed by the Board? No; we were quite satisfied with it.

72. Chairman.] What other matter do you want to refer to? In reply to Question 44, Mr. Sampson said, "Any improvements effected by ringbarking should be in the capital value and go to the Crown. If ringbarking has improved the land the Crown has charged for it in appraising the value of the land." That is a mere supposition. We do not admit that. We do not know that that has been done. There is nothing to show that the improved value is included in our gazetted capital value. From the evidence it would appear that it is not. It is an inference from the evidence. Part of the evidence given by our surveyor is that he visited the land, and that this land as it is improved now could be made fit for the plough at an expenditure of 15s. per acre, whereas, if that improvement had not taken place, it would have cost £2 an acre to clear the land in its green state. There is therefore a difference of £1 5s. Our capital value is only £1, so it would appear that it is not included in that capital value. It is merely an assumption, I take it, on the part of Mr. Sampson that it was included.

73. Are we to understand that the Lands Department in dealing with all such land as may have been improved by the outgoing tenant does not take into account the enhanced value of the land resulting from improvements? I could not say in regard to all cases, but our surveyor has recommended this capital value, and it does not appear that this extra improvement or value has been included in the capital value fixed; but, of course, the same may not apply to all land.

74. You appointed competent persons to value the land? Yes.

75. And the value placed upon it was its value at that date? Yes. Our papers do not disclose the method adopted by the surveyor when recommending capital values, and it does not follow that that improved value was included in the capital value that was gazetted. Of course Mr. Sampson says it is. I merely wish to point out that that is a pure supposition.

76. Mr. Cruickshank.] Don't you think from the fact that the improvement was assessed at this very high price by the Land Appeal Court, and that the low valuation by the surveyor shows that the surveyor must have placed a portion of the value of the improvements in the capital value of the land? From the surveyor's evidence it would appear that when he first reported on this case it was not from a recent inspection of the land, but in view of an inspection which he made some three years before. He says that since he made his report he had made a personal inspection, that was subsequently. He also says that if this land had been made available for selection at £1 per acre in its green state it would have been taken up readily. Our capital value was fixed at £1 an acre, but of course it is hard to say what method was adopted by the surveyor in getting at the capital value.

77. Chairman.] If the surveyor did not estimate the land at its full value, then who got the added value that was imparted to the land by the improvements? The purchaser would have to pay the value of the improvements, whatever it was determined at—the value to him.

78. Suppose the improvement of ringbarking enhanced the value of the land, who got that additional value;—you say the Crown did not get it? We do not admit that there is anything to show that that was included. It is merely an assumption on the part of Mr. Sampson; there is nothing in our papers to show in what way the surveyor arrived at that capital value.

79. Then your evidence amounts to this—that you are not in a position to say whether the Crown took that increased value into consideration and added it to the capital value of the land or not? No; but from the evidence it would not appear that they did not. J. R. Yorke.
22 Dec., 1899.

80. What is the next point? The surveyor said that the value of the land, in its present state, to the incoming tenant was about £1 per acre, assuming the unimproved value to be £1; that the value of the ringbarking, as distinguished from its cost, would be 15s. per acre; and that the land could be cleared for the plough for 15s. per acre, whereas in its green state it would cost £2 per acre. That is why it would appear that the improved value was not included in the gazetted value. Mr. Sampson said that it was included. He says the Crown has charged for it in appraising the value of the land, and that he should not be called upon to pay twice for the same improvements. It does not seem that he has, the capital value having been fixed at £1.

81. Mr. Cruickshank.] Has the final valuation been paid to the Crown by Sampson for these improvements? No; I do not think we have received any money or rent from Mr. Sampson yet.

82. The Crown valued the improvements at £226 4s., and the Appeal Court valued them at £550 14s. I want to know whether the Government have been paid the difference of £324 10s.? That has been reduced. We have consented to take only 1s., instead of 5s.

83. When the settlement leases were offered for sale, the Government attached a valuation to the improvements on its land, pending appraisal? Yes.

84. What would be considered a fair percentage either way as to any land? I could not say.

85. Mr. Sawers.] What is the margin of difference between the advertised value of the land and the subsequent appraisal? The Act does not provide for any margin. It says that the incoming tenant shall pay for the improvements at their appraised value, whatever it may be. In this case we notified that the values given in the Gazette had not been determined by appraisal. The values were simply approximate. We have no idea what might be the ultimate assessment of the values. For instance, in this very case the Land Board appraised the value at 1s. 4d., and it would have remained at that had it not been that Mr. Sampson and the lessee appealed.

86. The appraisal of 1s. 4d. was in excess of the idea of the Department originally? Yes.

87. That difference you consider a reasonable difference, I presume? Yes.

88. Would you not consider it unreasonable to raise it 400 or 500 per cent. afterwards—that is to say, from 1s. 4d. to 5s.? The Department evidently thought it was too high, or they would not have waived their right.

89. The Department by waiving their right, have practically indicated that they did think it is too much? Yes.

90. Mr. Spence.] I suppose the Department recognised that the basis of the valuation adopted by the Court was an unsound one, and made this reduction? Of course, the Department or the Crown cannot be responsible for an increased valuation made by the Land Appeal Court; neither can they be responsible for any cost that Mr. Sampson might be put to in fighting his case. They waived their claim to four-fifths of the amount which Mr. Sampson would have had to pay to the Crown.

91. Mr. Cruickshank.] The amount of the final appraisal (£322 19s. 5d.) made by the Appeal Court, will have to be paid by Mr. Sampson? The amount of the lessee's improvements, fixed by the Land Appeal Court, will have to be paid by Mr. Sampson, also the value of the Crown's improvements, minus four-fifths allowed for ringbarking, but waived by the Crown.

92. Chairman.] (Mr. Sawers): Do you wish to make any further observation? With reference to the evidence given by Mr. Sampson the other day, I mentioned that he said that the Crown had appealed in this case, I wish to say that the Crown did not appeal.

93. He has withdrawn that statement from his evidence;—is there anything else you wish to say? Mr. Sampson referred to the fact that, owing to the Land Appeal Court having directed that a sum of money should be paid into Court as security for costs, he lost the use of that money; but that was consequent upon Mr. Sampson asking to have a case stated for the Supreme Court. The Department could not be responsible for the loss which he sustained owing to that. Counsel for the lessees, Mr. Pike, asked that security should be given for the value of their improvements, and the usual order was made by the Land Appeal Court.

ALFRED AUSTIN SAMPSON'S SETTLEMENT
LEASE, GUNNEDAH.

Present:—

MR. SPENCE, | MR. SAWERS.

S. W. MOORE, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

John Thomas Keating, Registrar of the Land Appeal Court, sworn and examined:—

1. Chairman.] You have looked over the evidence given in this case? Yes.
2. I understand from a letter received from the President of the Land Appeal Court that you are here to give some evidence "to correct some inaccuracies, and to supply some information" which is not in the possession of the Committee. Will you please proceed in your own way? Unfortunately the President is laid up, and I did not have an opportunity to communicate with him. I have prepared a précis of the facts of the case which I have here, and which I can put in. I do not know exactly what direction your questions will take, but it seems to me that the point is largely as to the statement of the case for the Supreme Court.
3. Perhaps it would be well for you to read the précis of the case? This is the précis:—

Land Appeal Court. Nos. 4757, 4757a.

These two appeals were by consent heard together at Tamworth, on the 24th June, 1897. The subject of the appeals was the value of certain improvements on A. A. Sampson's settlement lease 96-21, Gunnedah. The first of the appeals was by the Trustees (Messrs. Robey and Gill) of Wondoobar Preferential Occupation License, on which were improvements claimed by them, and also improvements the property of the Crown. The other was by the settlement lessee (A. A. Sampson). The Board's valuation of such improvements was the subject of the cross appeals. When the appeals were called on, Mr. A. H. Sampson, the settlement lessee's father, who appeared as agent for his son, applied to have the case heard in Sydney; but as the case was on the list for Tamworth, and appeared to raise no other issue than a question of fact, viz., the value of certain improvements partly belonging to the Crown and partly to the trustees of the holding of Wondoobar Preferential Occupation License, and as there was no lack of practitioners in Tamworth competent to conduct such a case, whether a question of law were or were not involved; and further, as the Court has always considered itself bound to hear appeals, if possible, as near as possible to the district in which the subject of appeal is situated, the Court refused the application. The adjournment of the case to Sydney was also strongly opposed by appellants' (Robey and Gill) counsel.

The Board had valued the Crown improvements, consisting of a tank, fencing round the tank, wire fencing, and ringbarking, at £226 4s., and valued the licensee's improvements, consisting of fencing and ringbarking, at £121 6s. 1d., altogether £347 10s. 1d. The Court, after hearing counsel for the licensees, counsel for the Minister, and Mr. Sampson's agent, reserved its decision, and on the 14th of July following gave it at Sydney, sustaining the appeals only in so far as the value of the ringbarking in each case was concerned, but not disturbing the other appraisements made by the Board. The effect of the decision on the valuation of the ringbarking was to increase the appraisement of the Board from 1s. 4d. per acre to 5s.

Appellants' (Robey and Gill) counsel claimed that on the evidence the value of the licensee's ringbarking to an incoming tenant was not less than 15s., and might be as much as 25s. per acre.

Counsel for the Minister claimed that at least 15s. per acre was the value of the ringbarking belonging to the Crown.

The grounds of appeal in Sampson's appeal 4,757A were:—

1. That the Board were in error in deciding that the ringbarking, the tank, and the intersecting fence were improvements of value to the incoming tenant.
2. That even if the ringbarking, the tank, and the intersecting fence were improvements at all, then the Board's decision as to their value was far in excess of their real value.

In support of these grounds of appeal, appellant's (Alfred A. Sampson) agent, Mr. Sampson, admitted (according to the President's notes), that he wanted to test value to an incoming tenant, "not to shirk payment," but agreed that value must be cost, and the evidence of the witnesses called by Mr. Sampson at the hearing by the Board is evidence of actual cost of ringbarking, with the exception of that given by a kangaroo-shooter (Robert Elms), who stated that he would ringbark "similar country for about 9d. per acre." Mr. Sampson's argument before the Land Appeal Court was directed to

J. T. Keating. the position that the value of the improvements (both Crown's and licensee's) had already been taken into consideration by the Crown in fixing the capital value and the annual payments; that ringbarking was not necessarily an improvement, that if it were it was already charged for by the Crown. If Mr. Sampson at this hearing at Tamworth contended that the test of value was the "fair cost" or the cost at which the improvements might have been made by the incoming tenant himself, the President informs me that he has no recollection of his having argued it, and that had such an argument been addressed to the Court it could hardly have escaped his attention, and would have been mentioned in his note-book. Upon the point of law to which Mr. Sampson addressed himself, viz., that the value of improvements had passed into the capital value and annual payments, the Court did not feel itself called upon to express any opinion. When the Court delivered judgment on these two appeals in Sydney (14th July, 1897), Mr. A. A. Sampson, after the judgment had been given, asked the Court to make it appealable; or in other words, to give it in such a form as might permit of an appeal or of a case being stated to the Supreme Court. This the Court declined to do, considering the question of value before them at that time to be a question of fact and not of law.

16 Aug., 1900.

Notwithstanding this refusal the solicitor for the settlement lessee gave notice to the Land Appeal Court on 27th July, 1897, requiring it to state a case for the decision of the Supreme Court, and on the 3rd of August following submitted a draft case, in which, after setting forth the decision of the Land Appeal Court, he asked the Court to state the following question of law:—

"The said sum of 5s. per acre is far more than the cost of the said improvements; but the Court were of opinion that in estimating the value of improvements to an incoming tenant under Sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act in 1895, the Court might take into consideration the increased value given to the holding by reason of such improvement, and based their decision on this principle. The appellant contended that the additional value given to the land reverted to the Crown, and was presumably charged to the incoming tenant and was not payable by the incoming tenant to the outgoing tenant."

"The question for the determination of the Supreme Court is whether the Land Appeal Court was right in determining the value of improvements under Sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895 upon the principle above stated."

The case was set down for settlement at Sydney on 22nd September, 1897, Mr. Wise appearing for Mr. Sampson, Mr. Pike for the Trustees of Wondoobar (Robey and Gill), and Mr. Hanbury Davies for the Minister, when by consent of all parties it was arranged that the case should stand over (the time for stating a case for the Supreme Court to be extended from time to time as necessary by order of the Court) until the case of Greene v. Hargrave, No. 4,942, shall have been decided by the Land Appeal Court; or, in the event of either party requiring a case to be stated for the decision of the Supreme Court, until the decision of that Court; and Mr. Sampson undertook to give security for the payment of the amount found due by the Land Appeal Court to the outgoing tenant with interest at 5 per cent. per annum from date (22nd September, 1897), such sum and interest not to exceed £330. Security to be given within fourteen days from said date to the satisfaction of Mr. Ross (Solicitor), of Tamworth. The Land Appeal Court gave its decision in Greene v. Hargrave on 14th October, 1897, and although notice of appeal was given no appeal to the Supreme Court was ever made in that case, and had such an appeal been made, it could not have raised the question of law, which Mr. Sampson had asked the Land Appeal Court to state a case on, inasmuch as it was not contended or made a question of law in Greene v. Hargrave, either on behalf of the Homestead Selectors or the Crown, that the measure of value of an improvement was the cost at which the incoming tenant could himself get that improvement made for. However, after several postponements, Sampson's application to state a case was, after hearing Counsel, left with the Court for settlement on 30th March, 1898, and on the 16th April, 1898, a copy of the case, as proposed to be stated by the Court, was furnished to each of the parties. On 6th July, 1898, Sampson's Counsel sought to have the case stated as desired by Mr. Sampson, but the Court refused so to do, but was perfectly willing to state the case as in the amended draft, but this was not accepted by the intending appellant, and he subsequently withdrew the case. It will be seen, by reference to the decision of the Land Appeal Court, that it did not expressly rest its decision on any principle whatever.

4. Mr. Sampson has sworn that what he contended for was the fair cost or the cost at which an incoming tenant could effect the improvements for himself. The outgoing tenant may have erected the improvements most extravagantly, or he may have put on a lot of Kanakas and got them done cheaply. The incoming tenant has nothing to do with excessive cost or very low cost. The question is what could he himself effect the improvements for, and the evidence given before this Committee is to the effect that Sampson's contention all through was that the element or basis of valuation should be the cost at which the incoming tenant could effect the improvements for himself? I understand that. I have had many a talk with Mr. Sampson, and I understand that his argument is that he is entitled to pay for these improvements a fair cost—that is, what he could effect them for himself.

5. Did you understand that that was Mr. Sampson's contention all the time? I did not understand that that was his contention before the Court, because I cannot say that I heard him. I did not take any notes of Mr. Sampson's argument, and during a great part of the time I was out of the Court at Tamworth. I am only going by the President's note-book.

6. Then we understand that you yourself are not in a position to give any direct evidence as to what Mr. Sampson's contention was before the Court? No; certainly not.

7. You are taking what the President's notes indicate? With regard to that particular part. I can swear as to the rest of the facts.

8. That happens to be the main point? I am aware of that. I do not take notes of facts. If it is a question of law where it is necessary for me to be present I take notes; but the only notes I have in my book are as to appearances and the decision reserved.

9. Do we understand that this précis has the sanction of the President? Yes, he directed me to prepare it. In the précis I speak regarding my personal knowledge of the facts; but as regards this particular argument of Mr. Sampson's I am deducing that from the President's note-book.

10. It is stated in your précis that "Counsel for the Minister claimed that at least 15s. per acre was the value of the ringbarking belonging to the Crown." Can you state that from your own knowledge? No, I cannot. I heard Mr. Kemp claim a much higher amount than what the Board fixed, but I took no note of it. That note is taken from the President's notes.

11. You are aware that the Board's valuation of the ringbarking was considerably in excess of the Crown's original valuation as stated in the Government Gazette? I am aware of that; I know that it is considerably in excess.

12. The Crown's valuation was £108, the Board's £191, and the Land Appeal Court's valuation was £717? That is with regard to the ringbarking alone. I came into Court and heard that part of Mr. Sampson's argument where he contended that the value of the improvements was already considered in the appraisalment.

13. And included in the capital value of the land on which he was already charged rent? Yes, I remember that part of the argument.

14. It is also stated in your précis that "the evidence of the witnesses called by Mr. Sampson at the hearing by the Board is evidence of actual cost of ringbarking, with the exception of that given by a kangaroo-shooter, Robert Elms." Did you hear the evidence given? No; I took that from the evidence in the papers—the evidence that was given before the Board. Robert Elms, kangaroo-shooter, says he could do it for about 9d. an acre.

15. But you say that the evidence of Mr. Sampson's witnesses was evidence of the actual cost of ringbarking? That is from actual experience of what they have done; and this man said he could do it. I distinguish in that way. J. T. Keating.
16 Aug., 1900.

16. The point in your précis seems to be that Mr. Sampson's evidence was as to the actual cost of ringbarking, from which you might deduce that he was contending that the cost to the incoming tenant was the actual cost. That would be one deduction. Another would be that it was for the purpose of comparison in order to show what that country could be ringbarked for by an incoming tenant. However, that does not matter. I would like you to direct your attention to another statement in your précis. You say:—

If Mr. Sampson at this hearing, at Tamworth, contended that the test of value was the "fair cost," or the cost at which the improvements might have been made by the incoming tenant himself, the President informs me that he has no recollection of his having argued it, and that had such an argument been addressed to the Court it could hardly have escaped his attention, and would have been mentioned in his note-book.

Did not Mr. Commissioner Freeman at one of the sittings of the Court, I do not know where it was, produce his note-book? He did.

17. Do you remember what note he had in reference to that point? I cannot say from memory exactly what the note was, but I think it rather confirmed Mr. Sampson's contention.

18. Mr. Sampson, in his evidence, on page 4 of the printed evidence, said in answer to question 43:—

Mr. Wise asked me if I had argued differently in Tamworth, and I said I certainly had not. The Court then produced their notes taken at Tamworth, and my own contention, in my own words, was found in Mr. Commissioner Freeman's notes underlined. They were handed down to the barrister's table.

That is the evidence that Mr. Sampson has given before this Committee;—are you in a position to confirm or corroborate that statement, or to dispute it? I will not dispute it, because I have a personal recollection of the fact of that occurring, and I will go so far as to say that Mr. Freeman's note did confirm Mr. Sampson's contention, but I cannot say what the exact words of the note were. I wanted to get Mr. Freeman's book, but I could not find it. I know it was exhibited in Court, but I did not see it.

19. It is also stated in your précis that "upon the point of law to which Mr. Sampson addressed himself, viz., that the value of improvements had passed into the capital value and annual payments, the Court did not feel itself called upon to express any opinion.";—do we understand from that that what was claimed to be the question of law involved in this case was the question as to the improvements having passed into the capital value and annual payments? The Court did not consider that that was raised in the case. They never considered that point at all. Mr. Sampson certainly argued that, but the Court did not feel called upon to give an opinion, and they did not, because Mr. Sampson's is not the only case. They would have to consider that in every case, but it is presumed in such cases that the Crown in fixing the rental did not consider the improvements.

20. The Court presumed it did not? The Court presumed it did not. The Court always presumes it does not. I think there is a specific notice in the Gazette notice, throwing open the land for settlement, that the improvements on the land are subject to subsequent appraisalment.

21. But the question is, that the enhanced value that has been imparted to the land would be taken into account by the Crown at the time; that is, suppose the land originally occupied was only worth 10s. an acre, and that by the expenditure of a few shillings an acre it was made worth £1 an acre—then the Lands Department, in making the land available for settlement, would value it at £1 per acre—its full value at the date; if not, the Crown would be simply making a present to the outgoing tenants all over the country to the extent of hundreds of thousands of pounds, if not millions? But they did not do that in this case. I take it that they appraise the rental value of the land as unimproved, and charge the incoming tenant for the improvements. But the Court did not go into that. That contention was urged by Mr. Sampson, but the Court never considered it; otherwise they could not have charged the excess value they did charge.

22. It is obvious that the Land Appeal Court, in making such a large increase on the Board's valuation, must have taken into consideration some other element of value besides actual cost at which an incoming tenant could effect those improvements; they must have taken into consideration some value of the land itself, because an incoming tenant could surely effect those improvements for less than 5s. an acre—probably for 9d. an acre; therefore, the Land Court, in fixing that ringbarking amount at 5s. an acre, not only took into account the cost at which an incoming tenant could effect the improvements, but part of the value which was imparted to the land itself, and which Mr. Sampson contended had already been taken into account by the Department, and on which he was paying rental? But the Court never considers that that is taken into account by the Department. They have never gone into those questions. They have had thousands of cases of this kind.

23. It is admitted that this is the first case raised. The question involved, it appears to us, is a question of the interpretation of the law—that is, the basis of valuation? They never went into it.

24. That is what seems to us, as far as we have considered the case, their fault. It seems to us that they ought to have gone into it? I do not know what was in the minds of the Court, but I know that they simply gave a bare decision. I know that Mr. Sampson made an application that they should so word their decision that he might appeal, but the Court declined.

25. How comes it that the Court finally consented to state a case for the Supreme Court on the mere question of fact? They were anxious to give Mr. Sampson every opportunity. The case stood over pending the decision of the Court in the case of Hargrave and Greene. When that fell to the ground and did not go to the Supreme Court, an opportunity was given to Mr. Sampson to show the Court a point of law if he could. The Court would not adopt his draft case, and they drew up a case of their own, which did not suit Mr. Sampson. But the Court would never state a case for the Supreme Court on the mere question of fact, unless they were satisfied that there was a question of law involved. They would not allow an appellant to force them to state a case for the Supreme Court unless they were convinced that there was a question of law involved, because it is no part of their duty to send questions of fact to the Supreme Court, but questions of law; and they regarded this as a mere question of fact.

26. I do not want to press the point too far, but I take it that there is only one explanation, and that is that the Court failed to grasp the real significance of the case, and that, finding there was a question of law involved, they decided, though late in the day, to let it go to the Supreme Court?

Not

J. T. Keating. Not on that point. The Court was anxious to give Mr. Sampson an opportunity to show them that there was a question of law involved. This was the point that the Land Appeal Court thought was raised, and which they proposed to state :—

16 Aug., 1900.

The question for the determination of the Supreme Court is whether in determining the value of improvements under sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, the Land Appeal Court was right in taking into consideration any other element of value than the actual cost of effecting and maintaining such improvements.

Although the Court gave no reasons why they increased to 5s. an acre, it is obvious that they must have taken some element into consideration, although they did not say what that element was. The Court pointed out to Mr. Sampson that they regarded his case as absolutely hinging on a question of fact, as to whether the improvements were worth so much or so little to the incoming tenant. They were very anxious to give Mr. Sampson an opportunity to prove that there was an underlying question of law, but not in the way he put it, because the Court's contention all along has been that Mr. Sampson did not argue as he contends he did.

27. Notwithstanding Mr. Sampson's having raised this question in a way that has never been raised by anyone before, and that he argued it strongly before the Land Appeal Court, and that Mr. Wise argued it, and that Mr. Freeman's notes confirm all that, yet the Court did not seem to grasp the real point in stating a case for the Supreme Court? As regards the fair cost, you mean?

28. Quite so? There is one thing that discounts Mr. Sampson's argument and confirms the view which the Court took, and that is that in his draft case put before the Court he did not raise that question. It was only raised as an afterthought. In his draft case, after stating in the body of the case, "The said sum of 5s. per acre is far more than the cost of the said improvements, but the Court were of opinion that in estimating the value of improvements to an incoming tenant, under sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895, the Court might take into consideration the increased value given to the holding by reason of such improvements, and based their decision upon this principle," it was put in the following words :—

The question for the determination of the Supreme Court is whether the Land Appeal Court was right in determining the value of improvements under sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895 upon the principle above stated.

There is nothing said there about fair cost.

29. They say they had a right to take into consideration the value that was imparted to the holding? My argument is that when you bring a case before the Land Appeal Court, and want to have a case stated for the Supreme Court, you have to state your point of law. The point of law that Mr. Sampson contends he argued before the Tamworth Board was that he was only entitled as the incoming tenant to pay a fair cost of making the improvements, the cost at which he could effect them himself. He then gets an opportunity to state his case for the Court, but he does not put that point. He simply uses the word "cost." "Fair cost" was introduced apparently as an afterthought. Bearing in mind their arguments before the local Land Board, you would think that such a vital question would have been properly stated.

30. Mr. Sampson asked the Court to state the following question of law :—

The said sum of 5s. per acre is far more than the cost of the said improvements, but the Court were of opinion that in estimating the value of improvements to an incoming tenant under sections 24 and 25 of the Crown Lands Act of 1895 the Court might take into consideration the increased value given to the holding by reason of such improvements, and based their decision upon this principle.

Nothing of the kind was said by the Court, but they obviously must have based their decision on that principle or some such principle.

31. Did I understand you to say that the case of Greene v. Hargrave had no bearing on this case? No, I did not say that. In Greene v. Hargrave the decision was in the following words :—

The measure of value of such improvements should be estimated on the basis of the fair value to the incoming tenant less what increment might fairly be attributed to the inherent capabilities of the soil.

That is a different thing. You might expend about 5s. an acre on some land and make it worth £5 per acre. Part of that, I suppose, is due to the inherent capabilities of the soil. It becomes worth (say) £5 per acre to a man coming in. But you would not charge this man 5s. per acre for the land because it only cost 5s. You would charge him £5, and make some deduction for the inherent capabilities of the soil; and it is difficult to get at that. There are cases where a man might expend £1 per acre for clearing land, and in consequence the land would become worth £10 per acre.

32. It is stated in your précis that if there had been an appeal in the case of Greene v. Hargrave, it could not have raised the question of law that Mr. Sampson asked the Land Appeal Court to state a case on. Then what was the object of postponing this case pending a decision of Greene's case? It was done at the request of both parties; it was done by consent. I suppose in Greene's case at that particular time they did not know what issues would be raised before the Supreme Court. But, as it turns out in Greene's case, as reported, the decision was that "the measure of value of such improvements should be estimated on the basis of the fair value to the incoming tenant." If that point alone went to the Supreme Court I don't think it would settle the point raised by Mr. Sampson.

33. You state that—

Mr. Sampson undertook to give security for the payment of the amount found due by the Land Appeal Court to the outgoing tenant, with interest at 5 per cent.

You say he undertook to do that? That was the condition of the postponement.

34. Was he ordered to do it? It was by consent. I think it was an arrangement.

35. Mr. Sampson states in his evidence as follows :—

The Court then suggested that the case should stand over until the case of Green v. Hargrave was decided, but we had to give security to the outgoing tenant for the amount of the improvements as valued by the Court.

Is that so? I believe that he had to give security for something.

36. For £300? He had to give security, I think, for an amount not to exceed £330.

37. I suppose he really had no option, and that he was ordered to find security. As we understand from the evidence which Mr. Sampson has given before the Committee, that is one of the points he felt aggrieved about, that is, that in addition to their other troubles, they had to find security for something over £300 while fighting this case; and, as the matter is stated in your précis, it looks as if, without the slightest objection, and quite willingly on his part, he undertook to do this. I suppose, as a matter of fact, he had no alternative? I have only got it marked as a consent order. My memory is that there was an arrangement for the postponement of the case, but I think there was some dispute between the parties as to what the terms should be, and they conferred at the table. If that was forced on Mr. Sampson I think it was forced on him by the parties. It was done at Mr. Pike's instigation, I take take it. These things are very often settled at the barrister's table, and the Court agreed on certain terms. I suppose it was Mr. Pike who insisted on that, not the Crown. J. T. Keating.

38. You referred just now to Mr. Sampson's evidence as showing the "actual cost";—could you point out any evidence where that appears? Mr. Turner in his evidence says:— 16 Aug., 1900.

The ringbarking, or rather similar country, could be ringbarked now for 9d. per acre. I should say it would cost about 4d. per acre to remove the suckers. The ringbarking has improved the land very much, either for pastoral or agricultural purposes. I think the ringing in its present state has doubled the carrying capacity. The capacity is now about a sheep to 1½ acres.

And Mr. Hornery was asked the question, "What would you estimate the original cost of the ringbarking?" And he replied, "About 9d. per acre, and to ringbark it now, as the suckers are, 7d. per acre; and including cutting the pine, 3s. per acre."

39. That all goes to show what the incoming tenants could effect those improvements for? I grant that.

40. But can you give any evidence as to actual cost. You were referring just now to the distinction you draw between actual cost, fair cost, and cost? The Court did not value the improvements at what Mr. Sampson could effect them for.

41. But can you show where any of Mr. Sampson's witnesses have used the words "actual cost." You have used those words in the statement which you have put in to-day? There is the evidence of William Thompson, who was one of Mr. Sampson's witnesses. He says:—

I put down the cost of the ringbarking at 8d. or 9d. per acre. I have seen it quite recently. I should say it would cost 6d. per acre afresh.

That is actual cost.

42. The words "actual cost" are not used? What I mean by actual cost is what it would cost to ringbark the land, that is what it would cost the incoming tenant.

43. But where in the evidence does the word "actual" occur;—you have used it in your statement? The word "actual" is not used, I think. That is my inference from Mr. Sampson's evidence. The actual cost would be, I suppose, affected by the years you would have to wait while the timber was dying.

44. The original cost of ringbarking means the first cost, which would have to be followed up by the clearing of suckers, and so on. You stated that the evidence went to show the actual cost, and I take it that your reply now is that that was your inference? I did not take into consideration the subsequent suckering, and the waiting, and the waste of time—the time the land is lying idle while the timber is dying. If you give a man 9d. per acre, that is the actual cost of ringbarking. But I will now substitute the word "original" for "actual."

45. Is there any other evidence you would like to give? I think the whole difference between the Court and Mr. Sampson is about that point of law; that is, as to what his contention was. There is nothing very much else in the case.

Present:—

MR. GOODWIN,		MR. SPENCE,
MR. PHILLIPS,		MR. CRUICKSHANK.
S. W. MOORE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

William Freeman called in, sworn, and examined:—

46. Chairman.] You are Chairman of the Local Land Board at Tamworth, Mr. Freeman? I may say I am at present acting at Bourke. I am on leave of absence, which expires this month, but have been reappointed for another year to Bourke. I am Chairman of the Land Board District of Tamworth. W. Freeman. 23 Aug., 1900.

47. You know the case of Albert Austin Sampson's settlement lease at Gunnedah? Yes.

48. I believe you were Chairman of the Land Board at Tamworth which appraised the value of the improvements? It was the Gunnedah Land Board. Gunnedah is one of five districts in the Tamworth district.

49. Then you were Chairman of the Gunnedah Land Board which appraised the value of the improvements on the settlement lease? Yes.

50. Are you aware that there was an appeal from the Land Board's valuation? Yes.

51. Were you present when the appeal came before the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth? Yes; I was present in the Court.

52. Will you kindly state what Mr. Sampson's contention was before the Land Appeal Court? Before the Land Board and the Land Appeal Court, both, his contention was that improvements could not be of more value to the incoming tenant than the amount for which he could effect them himself. I may state that Mr. Sampson argued at length before the Land Board and the Land Appeal Court, and that was the gravamen of his argument.

53. Could there possibly be any doubt as to that, Mr. Freeman? I think not; at any rate I am quite clear on the subject.

54. You are quite clear as to what his contention was? Yes, quite clear.

55. Did he argue or contend in any way that the value of the improvements was the actual cost? I heard nothing of the kind either at Gunnedah, before the Land Board, or at Tamworth, before the Land Appeal Court.

56. Would you say his contention was that all the Court had to concern itself with was the cost at which the incoming tenant could effect the improvements for himself? Yes, that was Mr. Sampson's contention.

57. Did you pay particular attention to the argument, Mr. Freeman? Yes, I trust so; I did pay particular attention.

58. I am asking you now with reference to the argument before the Land Appeal Court at Tamworth, not of the hearing before the Land Board? Yes; I paid particular attention to the Land Appeal Court argument, because the matter was of such far-reaching importance.

59. Had the question been raised before as Mr. Sampson raised it? No, not, to the best of my memory, in the same way that Mr. Sampson raised it.

60. Do you remember Counsel for the Crown at the hearing of the appeal at Tamworth claiming that the value of the improvements was considerably more than the Land Board had appraised them at? Yes; he contended for something between 15s. and £1 per acre for the ringbarking, to the best of my memory.

The value of the improvements is payable in one sum within three months after the date of execution of the lease as notified in the Gazette, or at the option of the Settlement Lessee in three annual instalments with interest on such value at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. In the latter case, the first instalment would be due twelve months after the date of execution of the lease.

It is pointed out that the value of the improvements referred to in this schedule has not been appraised, and attention is invited to Regulations 154 and 272 to 280. It will be understood that—

Improvements which belong to the Crown will be appraised by the Land Board without any application for appraisal being made.

If the improvements do not belong to the Crown, and the Settlement Lessee desires to have their value appraised by the Board at the date when his application is being considered by the Board, he should give thirty days' notice to the Chairman in Form 8, or both the applicant and the owner of the improvements should appear before the Board and ask for an appraisal. A Settlement Lessee who desires an appraisal is, therefore, advised to send notice in Form 8 to the Chairman immediately he makes his application.

If an application is confirmed before the improvements are appraised, and an appraisal is desired by the Settlement Lessee, it will be necessary to send notice to the Chairman in Form 9, together with a deposit of £10.

The term of lease shall be twenty-eight years.

INQUIRY BY LAND BOARDS.

(MINUTE BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE WAGGA WAGGA LAND BOARD, RESPECTING THE APPLICATIONS FOR THE SANDY CREEK HOMESTEAD SELECTIONS.)

Printed under No. 6 Report from Printing Committee, 26 July, 1900.

Minute.

Sir,

Local Land Board Office, Wagga Wagga, 30 June, 1900.

In regard to the applications for the Sandy Creek Homestead Selections, my Board has now good experience of the working of the amended law as regards simultaneous applications. A very large number of persons (I estimate about 300) presented themselves before the Land Board at Wagga Wagga on 18th June, and here, I think, is the arrangement that needs alteration, viz., the Gazette notice bringing a great concourse of people together on one day. I may explain that my practice, ever since I have been holding Land Board meetings, has been to divide the work to be done into so much a day. Consequently, the persons who have to appear before the Board need only attend for a short time on one day, and there have not, I think in my whole experience, been more than one or two cases in a hundred where such persons have had to wait over one day. Had the same plan been followed in the present instance, there would not have existed a grievance, which is, no doubt, a real one. However, to meet this emergency, my Board, within a quarter of an hour, had so arranged the list of cases that immediately every one was free to go, except those whose cases could be dealt with the first day—informing the remainder of the particular day when they would be required. Furthermore, this was published in both the local newspapers. So that cause of discontent was at once removed.

As regards the working of the law itself, it must be expected that an immense amount of grumbling and groundless and absurd rumours of hardships will arise. Here there were 339 persons of whom seventeen only could get a block of land. That left 322 persons who possibly thought that they were very hardly or unjustly treated. Of course, many of them give circulation to all kinds of statements not favourable, it may be safely said, to the law, or to those carrying it out. Nevertheless, I think it a most excellent provision, if the desire be to place the best settlers on the land. It is a means whereby the professional selector and others who are using their privileges, not for legitimate settlement, but for the purpose of trafficking in the public estate, can be excluded. It is a scientific method, instead of the haphazard method of the ballot, which has been the means of giving land very frequently to less desirable persons, to the exclusion of those who would have settled thereon to the betterment of themselves and the community. To the present system I attribute the fine character, from a selecting point of view, of the persons who presented themselves for examination. I may here state that under no circumstances is any man asked to disclose his private affairs, if he desires not to do so, and I make a point of so informing the applicants.

No doubt the labour to the Board is immense; the personal examination of such a number of persons is a prodigious undertaking. Also the odium incurred is possibly considerable. All the same, my Board cheerfully undertakes the onerous duty, in the full assurance of being able to pick out the best men.

The hardship to the selecting public is really reduced to the least possible extent. In the first place, a 5d. stamp will carry their applications to the Land Agent; then on a given day they need only attend for a quarter of an hour or so. After that it is only the successful ones that need to attend the confirmation, if they desire to dispute the Crown's valuation of improvements. This last attendance is quite optional.

When it is considered that the Crown is supplying the means of making a permanent home on conditions extraordinarily profitable and easy, it is difficult to understand how any reasonable man can find fault—indeed no one who might be dealing with private persons and not with the Crown would think twenty times as much trouble any hardship for the advantages to be derived.

Since writing the foregoing, which I intended sending to you of my own accord, as soon as this sitting should have terminated, I have received your letter 00:3332 Minl. In reference to that I would say that very little reliance, as a general thing, is to be placed on newspaper paragraphs. They are mostly ex-parte statements, and generally derived from disappointed persons, who put their own colour on what they they say. Selectors are so accustomed to have their convenience and interests attended to that hardly anything will please them, and the very men who would uncomplainingly attend for days at a Supreme or District Court will grumble at half a day's attendance at a Land Board meeting, even though the result may be to give them a permanent settlement on the most advantageous terms.

In the present instance the only thing, as already explained, to which exception could reasonably have been taken was the Gazette notice bringing so many persons together on one day when only a few of them could be heard. The finding fault with the making public their financial position is not really a well-founded complaint. The proceedings of a Land Board must be conducted in open Court (Section 14, Subsection 1, C. L. Act of 1884). The Board cannot legally or in any way properly listen to confidential statements. But in selecting applicants the Board must have something to go upon—a suitable selector cannot be known by intimation. At the same time applicants are given to understand in the clearest possible terms that they need answer no question which they do not wish to answer. They are mostly represented by Agents, who elicit the evidence; the Board might now and then ask a question to make some matter clear; that is all. So it will be seen that the evidence taken is proffered—not extracted. The only thing that need be amended in the procedure is to leave me to do as I do in other cases, viz., to fix certain days for the hearing of as many applications as can be conveniently dealt with per day. This, of course, will necessitate the waiting until all simultaneous applications shall have been received. The personal attendance of applicants is absolutely necessary, and cannot be dispensed with. No one could judge of the merits of applicants without examining them, and, beyond that, the door would be opened to every kind of fraud if selectors were apportioned on correspondence.

Reverting to the Board's procedure in regard to these homestead selections.

Each day's cases were dealt with on the appointed day, thus keeping faith with the applicants, even though that meant sitting into gas-light, and sometimes up to 10:30 p.m. It took eight days to examine the homestead selectors, a day and a half to examine and deal with the C.P. claimants, and about three-quarters of a day to confirm and fix the value of improvements to the successful applicants. The whole procedure was a very great undertaking carried through without a hitch.

In conclusion, my Board desires me to suggest to you that the practice of allowing applicants to apply for all of the blocks is one that is open to very great objection, without any corresponding advantages, and is emphatically of opinion that the Regulation should be altered so as to admit of each person applying for one block only.

I have, &c,
F. W. WATT,
Chairman.
