Functions of Regulation Review Committee

The Regulation Review Committee was established under the Regulation Review Act 1987. A principal function of the Committee is to consider all regulations while they are subject to disallowance by Parliament. In examining a regulation the Committee is required to consider whether the special attention of Parliament should be drawn to it on any ground, including any of the following:

- (a) that the regulation trespasses unduly on personal rights and liberties;
- (b) that the regulation may have an adverse impact on the business community;
- (c) that the regulation may not have been within the general objects of the legislation under which it was made;
- (d) that the regulation may not accord with the spirit of the legislation under which it was made, even though it may have been legally made;
- (e) that the objective of the regulation could have been achieved by alternative and more effective means;
- (f) that the regulation duplicates, overlaps or conflicts with any other regulation or Act;
- (g) that the form or intention of the regulation calls for elucidation; or that any of the requirements of sections 4, 5 and 6 of the Subordinate Legislation Act 1989, or of the Guidelines and requirements in Schedules 1 and 2 to that Act, appear not to have been complied with, to the extent that they were applicable in relation to the regulation.

The Committee may, as a consequence of its examination of a regulation, make such reports and recommendations to each House of Parliament as it thinks desirable, including reports setting out its opinion that a regulation ought to be disallowed.

Chairman's Foreword

On Friday 10 November 2000 I chaired a meeting of the Chairs and Deputy Chairs of Australian Scrutiny of Primary and Delegated Legislation Committees at Parliament House in Melbourne.

The purpose of that meeting was to consider the terms of a draft national agreement and model Bill prepared by the Victorian Scrutiny of Acts and Regulations Committee with the intention of establishing a National Committee to scrutinise national scheme legislation.

National Scheme Legislation (NSL) is where Ministers of respective State and National Parliaments get together and agree upon a course of action. They then take that policy decision and bring it into legislation.

The National Scheme Legislation is prepared and is passed by:

- a) each Parliament; or
- b) one particular Parliament, and agreed upon and eventually legislated within other Parliaments;
- c) if the legislation is accepted in one Parliament and is automatically adopted in each other Parliament.

Often this legislation does not come before the Parliament in its full context and therefore Members do not see the Bill but only a synopsis or summary of the Bill. It is enacted by way of one piece of legislation which says that the entire Bill as enacted in (say for example) the State of South Australia, is to be adopted in its entirety as template legislation. In my opinion NSL sets a most dangerous precedent to restrict scrutiny, transparency and accountability of the Executive and bureaucracy.

NSL does not allow effective scrutiny of the legislation as agreed by the various Government Ministers. In fact it really is an agreement by the Ministers which ensures its passage through their respective Legislatures.

If NSL is paramount then you do not need Parliaments any more. One just has to get the Ministers at the executive level agreeing amongst themselves to legislate and then adopting that piece of legislation into another jurisdiction.

This is a real challenge in the 21st Century for Scrutiny of Legislation and Regulation Review Committees throughout Australia.

Over the last 10 to 15 years National Scheme Legislation is principally being used, in my opinion, as an unintentional abuse of power. What does it mean? It means by-passing Parliament.

It also means that in by-passing Parliament you do not get transparency and accountability of the legislative structures.

In order for New South Wales to participate in the National Scrutiny Committee, it will be necessary to extend the functions of the Regulation Review Committee to include the scrutiny of bills, or at the very least the scrutiny of National Scheme Bills.

The Bill will again be debated at the Chairs and Deputy Chairs' meeting in Hobart on Monday, 5 February, 2001

Scrutiny of National Schemes of Legislation

Since 1991 the need for effective scrutiny of national scheme legislation has been debated by Australian Scrutiny Committees. In 1996 the Committees tabled a Position Paper which set out options for achieving effective parliamentary scrutiny of this legislation, including the establishment of a National Committee comprised of the representatives of the Commonwealth and each State and Territory Scrutiny Committee.

A draft national agreement and model Bill has now been prepared by the Victorian Scrutiny of Acts and Regulations Committee with the intention of establishing a National Committee to scrutinise the legislation.

On Friday 10 November 2000 the meeting of the Chairs and Deputy Chairs of Australian Scrutiny of Primary and Delegated Legislation Committees met at Parliament House in Melbourne to consider the Bill and other relevant issues.

The meeting was attended by the following delegates:

The program for the meeting is set out in Appendix 1 to this report and the Bill is set out in Appendix 2. The clauses of the Bill amended in the debate at the meeting are underlined.

As debate on the Bill took up most of the available time, consideration of the Chairman's paper entitled "The Impact of National Scheme Legislation on Regulations, Regulatory Reform and Management", which is set out in Appendix 3, was adjourned to the next meeting.

In order for the New South Wales to participate in the National Committee it will be necessary to extend the functions of the Regulation Review Committee to include the scrutiny of bills, or at the very least the scrutiny of National Scheme Bills.

The Bill will again be debated at the Chairs and Deputy Chairs' meeting in Hobart on Monday, 5 February, 2001.

The Impact of National Scheme Legislation on Regulations,
Regulatory Reform and Management

Peter R. Nagle MP

The Impact of National Scheme Legislation on Regulations, Regulatory Reform and Management

Peter R. Nagle MP

In this paper I want to bring together a few threads from our last two conferences.

At our meeting in February, Greg Hogg outlined a case study on National Scheme Legislation involving the Australian Road Rules.

You may recall that the Australian Road Rules cover the basic requirements that drivers, motorcyclists, cyclists and pedestrians need to follow in using the road system. They were approved by the Australian Transport Council, the ATC which comprises Australia's nine Transport and Roads Ministers, they were published by the National Road Transport Commission, the NRTC of which I will say more later and were incorporated by reference into the law of New South Wales by the Road Transport (Safety and Traffic Management) (Road Rules) Regulation 1999.

In our case study we tabled the submission by our Chief Magistrate on the rules which expressed concerns about their effect on the discretion of the court, about the complexity of the legislation and about magistrates handling of disqualifications or suspensions of licences.

To bring you up to date , the Committee had two days of hearings in Orange on 15 and 16 May to get a view of the operation of the regulation in country areas and a further hearing in Parliament House on 23 June 2000. A further hearing is scheduled for later this month.

As the matter is still ongoing and we haven't yet reported to Parliament, I can't say too much about the evidence but the Roads and Traffic Authority has told us that the Attorney General had set up the "Nagle Inquiry" to address the Chief Magistrate's concerns.

The Police are concerned that instead of the one Traffic Act and the three regulations they had previously, they now have the Australian Road Rules, eight Acts and fourteen Regulations to interpret and have a great deal of difficulty in finding let alone understanding them. So much for National Scheme Legislation simplifying matters!

They said that one of the problems was that New South Wales had adopted the Australian Road Rules by reference while the other States had incorporated the text of the rules into their own Regulations. The result of our using this method of adoption was that none of the law was cross-referenced in New South Wales and we are told that lawyers are ringing the police to find out the related provisions on a particular subject matter.

I would like to seek confirmation from each of the delegations here as to how your jurisdiction incorporated the Road Rules into its legislation and whether similar problems have arisen.

I'd like now to consider a simple plain English question, one many motorists and their lawyers are asking and probably some of you are asking yourselves at this moment, "What are the Australian Road Rules?"

The same simple question is put by clause 5 of the New South Wales regulation, but look at the answer, and in particular the helpful note on the latest electronic version:

"5 What are the Australian Road Rules

In this Regulation, the Australian Road Rules means that part of the publication known as the Australian Road Rules, ISBN 0 7240 8874 1, published by the National Road Transport Commission on 19 October 1999 that comprises the road rules approved by the Australian Transport Council under the National Road Transport Commission Act 1991 of the Commonwealth on 29 January 1999 (together with the amendments to those rules approved by the Council on 30 June 1999 and 11 October 1999).

Note. Copies of the Australian Road Rules, as published by the National Road Transport Commission, are available from the New South Wales Government Information Service.

The latest version of the Rules is also available in electronic form on the Commission's Internet site at <http://www.nrtc.gov.au/>. However, care should be taken in consulting the latest electronic version on that site because its provisions may differ from the version of the Australian Road Rules referred to in this clause.”

Now what an absolutely useless note that is, and it annoys me that this National Road Transport Commission can have a site that doesn't show the variations from State to State in the adoption of the rules. What is its job if it is not to do that?

The NRTC is set up under the National Road Transport Commission Act 1991 between the States, Territories and the Commonwealth.

If you visit the NRTC's web site it says that the NRTC's aims for road transport are to: make it more innovative, efficient and safer; make transport regulation more consistent and effective; and reduce road transport's environmental impacts.

Has it achieved its second aim in the case of the Road Rules?

The site goes on to say that the NRTC is supposed to co-ordinate the introduction of the reforms on-the-ground by transport agencies and to monitor the results.

To do this it has a staff of over 30 and States and Territories contribute 65 per cent of its funding from their vehicle registration charges, and the Commonwealth Government provides 35 per cent.

But what does the motorist get in return for these charges if they want to know what the road law is in a particular case?

There is certainly no "one-stop shop" on the NRTC web page, indeed the regulation cautions against relying on it.

Motorists or their lawyers have first got to buy a hard copy of the Australian Road Rules as published by the NRTC, on 19 October 1999, then work out which part was approved by the Australian Transport Council on 29 January 1999, and which amendments to it were approved by the Council on 30 June 1999 and 11 October 1999.

Now that's before they get anywhere near the actual legislation, the eight Acts and fourteen Regulations that I mentioned earlier!

We often hear phrases such as "roads in chaos" being used by the media at peak traffic and holiday times, but shouldn't it now be applied to the roads legislation itself ?

I'd like to move on to our last meeting in Brisbane on 8 May where we resolved to investigate the possibility of modifying the categories of National Scheme Legislation in our 1996 position paper. We also resolved to request our respective Parliamentary Counsel to establish a register of National Scheme Legislation.

You may recall that at our last conference I tabled our Parliamentary Counsel's table of laws of other jurisdictions that are applied as laws of New South Wales.

I have appended the latest table of applied laws, in force as at 1 November 2000, to this paper.

Now you might think this is a good enough register as far as New South Wales is concerned. But if you have a look on page 157 you will see that the Road Transport (Safety and Traffic Management) (Road Rules) Regulation 1999 isn't listed and there is no other mention of the Road Rules - Why? Because the Road Rules are not a law of another jurisdiction.

They are made by the ATC exclusively for the purpose of adoption as part of our laws but are not themselves law.

I would think that of the eight legislative structures set out at annexure 1 at page 45 of our position paper of October 1996, this comes closest to Structure Eight, the "non-binding National Standards Model", but it could hardly be described as "non-binding" as there are national agreements under the National Road Transport Commission Act 1991 between the States, Territories and the Commonwealth to adopt the rules in the legislation of each State.

These agreements are in the following Schedules to the Act:

Schedule 1—Heavy Vehicles Agreement;
Schedule 1A—First Heavy Vehicles Amending Agreement;
Schedule 2—Light Vehicles Agreement;
Schedule 2A—First Light Vehicles Amending Agreement.

Indeed it was originally intended under the national agreements that a form of template legislation be adopted, with the ACT being the host legislature. This would bring it within our Structure Three.

I think if we are to revise our structures for national scheme legislation, it would be best to start with an analysis of the different types of national agreements governing its making.

I want to conclude with a point I made at our Darwin Conference. I don't think we ought to get bogged down in the detail of the type of National Committee we would like. After all the topic has been on the agenda since 1991.

I think if we start looking at some actual pieces of National Scheme legislation like the Road Rules at these meetings, we can get a better understanding of what we want and can start achieving some real reforms in the legislation itself.

Table of applied laws

Notes about this table

The purpose of this table is to identify laws of other jurisdictions that are applied as the laws of New South Wales.

The authority or enabling provisions for the application is provided, followed by the details of the original instrument and its current status.
