Bail Amendment (Serious Personal Violence and Electronic Monitoring) Bill 2024

Explanatory note

This explanatory note relates to this Bill as introduced into Parliament.

Overview of Bill

The object of this Bill is to amend the Bail Act 2013 to-

- (a) create a rebuttable presumption that bail conditions about electronic monitoring must be imposed if bail is granted for a serious personal violence offence alleged to have been committed—
 - (i) by an accused person who is at least 18 years of age, and
 - (ii) against a person with whom the accused person has, or has had, a domestic relationship, and
- (b) provide that a grant of bail contrary to the rebuttable presumption will be stayed for up to 3 business days if a police officer or Crown lawyer immediately informs the court or authorised justice making the bail decision that an authorised officer or the Director of Public Prosecutions has approved the making of an application about the bail in the Supreme Court, and
- (c) provide that a bail condition requiring the accused person be subject to electronic monitoring is a pre-release requirement for the purposes of the Bail Act 2013, and
- (d) prohibit registrars of the Local Court from hearing bail applications for serious personal violence offences.

Outline of provisions

Clause 1 sets out the name, also called the short title, of the proposed Act.

Clause 2 provides for the commencement of the proposed Act.

Schedule 1 Amendment of Bail Act 2013 No 26

Schedule 1[1] defines serious personal violence offence. Schedule 1[2] makes a consequential amendment.

Schedule 1[3] inserts proposed section 22D. Proposed section 22D(2) applies to a grant of bail for a serious personal violence offence alleged to have been committed by an accused person who is at least 18 years of age and against a person with whom the accused person has, or has had, a domestic relationship. In these circumstances, a bail authority must, unless satisfied sufficient reasons exist to justify otherwise, impose bail conditions requiring the accused person be subject to electronic monitoring and specifying places the accused person must not enter or remain in. The proposed provision does not prevent a bail authority from imposing the bail conditions in other circumstances.

Schedule 1[4] amends section 29 to provide that a requirement that an accused person be subject to electronic monitoring is a pre-release requirement that may be imposed by a bail authority.

Schedule 1[5] provides that a decision of a court or authorised justice to grant bail for a serious personal violence offence to which proposed section 22D(2) applies is stayed if—

- (a) the bail authority did not impose the bail conditions referred to in proposed section 22D(2), and
- (b) a bail decision for the offence has not previously been made by a court or authorised justice, other than a decision under section 54 to refuse bail if a bail application is not made, and
- (c) a police officer or Australian legal practitioner appearing on behalf of the Crown immediately informs the court or authorised justice that a detention application is to be made to the Supreme Court and gives the court or authorised justice a copy of the written approval of an authorised officer or the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a detention application to the Supreme Court if bail is granted without the conditions referred to in proposed section 22D(2).

Schedule 1[6] makes a consequential amendment.

Schedule 1[7] inserts proposed section 70A to provide that a registrar of the Local Court cannot hear a bail application for a serious personal violence offence.
