135. When a party is brought to the station accused of having committed a felony or misdemeanor, the inspector or other officer on duty to whom the complaint is made, is only to ascertain from the person preferring it that the act charged constitutes a felony or misdemeanor (as the case may be), and that there is reasonable ground for preferring the complaint against the party accused. Such inquiry is only to be made of the person who prefers the complaint (who does so on his own responsibility), and not to be made of any other persons, although they may be cognisant of the facts, and in a subsequent stage of the proceedings before the Magistrate may be fit to be heard as witnesses. For this purpose, their names and addresses, if they are in attendance at the station-house, should be entered on the charge sheet. On no account will the inspector or other officer on duty at the station suffer any statement in the nature of a confession to be extracted from the person brought there on a charge of felony, either by the constable concerned in the case or by any other person. Should any private individuals attempt such a course at the station they will be immediately turned out, and the circumstance reported in the occurrence sheet of that or the following day. If a complainant, after having given a person into custody on a criminal charge, should refuse to sign it in the charge sheet—supposing the charge to have been made in the first instance to any constable, the constable shall, if he have seen the offence committed, enter and sign the charge himself; and the complainant may be summoned before the Magistrate to substantiate the charge. The inspector is for this purpose always to ascertain the name and address of the party complaining, previously to his making any inquiry of him. If the constable is himself unable to establish the charge, and the complainant refuses to support it and sign the charge sheet, the party accused is not to be detained.

136. If the complaint in the first instance is not made by a third person, but by a constable on his own responsibility, the charge is to be received, and entered on the charge sheet, and submitted to the Magistrate; but if it should turn out, upon the statement of the constable, that in point of fact there are not reasonable grounds for suspecting that the offence has been committed by the party, then the party must be discharged.

137. All charges refused by the inspector or officer on duty are to be entered on the refused charge sheet, and the reasons stated for each being refused. These sheets are to be sent in weekly, to be examined by the Metropolitan Superintendent.

138. Each charge which is received is to be entered upon the charge sheet at the time, and the facts stated under each head, and signed according to the form. When a charge has been entered in the charge sheet at the station against a party, and it subsequently appears that the name is an assumed one, the name as originally given will not be altered in the sheet, but the real name, if discovered, will be inserted in another part of it, and the circumstance explained to the Magistrate.

139. When the charge has been received and entered on the charge sheet, the parties charged are to be detained in custody at the station-house until they can be taken before a Magistrate for examination, unless in cases in which bail may be taken.

140. The inspector or other officer in charge of the station-house may admit to bail, under the provisions of 4 Wm. IV., No. 7, section 7, persons charged with any petty misdemeanor, or any offence for which they are liable to be summarily convicted by a Magistrate, or with having carelessly (not maliciously) done any hurt or damage, who are, without the warrant of a Magistrate, in custody during the time when the Police Courts are shut; taking, if he shall deem it prudent, the recognizance of any such persons, with or without sureties, conditioned as hereinafter mentioned.

141. And every recognizance so taken is to be without fee or reward, and conditioned for the appearance of the person thereby bound at the Central Police Office, at the next sitting of the Magistrates there; and the time and place of appearance is to be specified in the recognizance, and the name, residence, and occupation of the party, and his surety or sureties (if any), entering into such recognizance, together with the condition thereof, and the sum thereby acknowledged, are to be entered in a book kept for that purpose at each station-house; and every such recognizance is to be returned to the Magistrate present at the time and place when and where the party is bound to appear. (4th William IV., No. 7, sect. 7.)

142. Persons charged with drunkenness only, when they become sober, may be admitted to bail as in other cases.

143. If any property, taken from persons apprehended, or in any way in the possession of the police, be brought to the station, or under the control of the inspector, he will immediately make an entry of the same in the "property book," and state it shortly in his report to the Superintendent; the several articles of property should be marked at the time they are received, so that they can be afterwards certainly known to be the same; they should be taken by the inspector himself from the party bringing them, and not allowed to be out of his sight until marked in the manner directed; they should then be locked up by the inspector in a place kept for that purpose, and of which he alone has the key; no part of any property taken from a person apprehended is to be returned to the prisoner until the decision of the Magistrates on the case is known; this is not, however, to prevent any small sum to procure necessary refreshment, during confinement, being given to the party when the charge against him does not relate to the money; but such refreshment, whether at the expense of the party or of the police, must not include spirits, wine, or beer (which are not to be admitted into the cells), but only tea or coffee, with such eatables as are usually given in those cases.

144. When a burglary or felony of a serious description is committed within the division, the information is to be forwarded immediately to every division in the manner provided by the routes, and in the mode settled by the orders on the subject. The last division on each route receiving the information will notify, on their occurrence sheet of the morning, the hour at which they received the information, and the division they received it from. The inspector on duty at each station is responsible for the immediate communication of all such information of cases occurring within his own division, and for forwarding the information received from any other division.

145. In making reports of burglaries, robberies, &c., the particulars are to be inserted in the following order, viz. :—

- 1.—The hour.
- 2.—Name and address of proprietor or occupier.
- 3.—The circumstance and manner.
- 4.—The several articles of property stolen, set down in succession, allowing a line for each article, and affixing a number from "1" upwards.
- 5.—Estimated value of the property stolen.
- 6.—Remarks in explanation.
- 7.—The sergeant on duty, and the constable on the beat.
- 8.—The hour when the information was forwarded, and by whom.
- 9.—What police officer or constable engaged in tracing.

146. In all cases of violent or sudden death, or casualties, where a Coroner's inquest should be held upon the body, the inspector will give information to the Coroner, and report upon the occurrence sheet that he has done so.

147. The inspector will, in every case of sudden death in the streets, &c., in all cases of persons found drowned, where the parties are not known, or any clue likely to lead to their being identified, as well as in all cases of children being lost or found within their respective divisions, cause a description to be put up, in the most conspicuous place outside the station-house door, in order that the utmost publicity may be immediately given to the circumstance.

148. He must attend at the Court of the Magistrates, to substantiate any charge, if necessary, or upon any other duty there as he may be required.

149. One or more of the inspectors will attend in rotation, as directed in the orders at the time, during the Session at the (Supreme) Criminal Court, and at the Courts of Quarter Sessions within the Metropolitan District, to see that all the police there as witnesses are regular in their attendance, properly dressed, &c. He is to notice the mode in which each gives his evidence, and his general demeanor in the conduct of the case. He will report any circumstances that ought to be brought under the notice of the Inspector General.

150. In the event of a fire taking place the senior inspector present will, until the arrival of the Metropolitan Superintendent or Chief Inspector, take upon himself the entire direction of the police, and act in conformity with the instructions for that purpose already given for the latter officer.

SERGEANT.

151. He will reside, within the division, in the place appointed; he is to obey all orders given him by his superior officers; he is expected to set the best example to the constables of alacrity and skill in the discharge of their duty.

152. Each sergeant has under him ——— constables, and he will be held responsible for their general conduct and good order; he is to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the character, capacity, and general conduct of each. He will note every case of misconduct or fault committed by the constables under him, and report the circumstances to his inspector, or other superior officer, at the earliest opportunity.

153. The sergeant for duty will arrive at the division station before the hour fixed by his orders, form his party into ranks and inspect them, taking care that every man is perfectly sober, and correct in his dress and appointments.

154. He will read and explain to the constables the orders, if any have been given out that day; he will enter in a book the hour when the party goes on duty, and the name of each constable, together with the number of the beat which the constable is to take charge of; he will then report to the inspector and receive his orders.

155. He marches with his men, and sees every constable placed on duty, and that those previously on duty are properly relieved and inspected according to the orders; having done done so, he will repair to the spot fixed on for making his first report to the inspector. This report should include any irregularity or disorderly conduct in the constable relieved, as well as any other particular that ought to be noticed.

156. He is constantly to patrol the division, or that part of it under his immediate charge, and enforce the performance of duty by the constables. If, at any time, he finds a constable absent from his duty on the beat, he will have him replaced as quickly as possible, sending for another from the reserve at the station, or from the men off duty, but this last only in case of necessity. He should immediately ascertain the cause of the constable's absence, and report it to the inspector; in case of any felony or disturbance, he will send for such assistance as may be necessary, either to the division station, or to the residence of the men off duty; but not to the latter, except in cases of urgent necessity.

157. He is not to enter any public-house, except in the immediate execution of his duty; but he may procure moderate and necessary refreshment, with the least possible delay, at a public-house, not entering the house; and he may give any constable, under his orders, similar permission, being present with him at the time he gets such refreshment.

158. He will give all assistance in his power to persons applying to him; he will know, from his general duties as a constable, in what way he is to interfere, either in arresting people, entering houses, or taking property from suspected persons.

159. He will notice hired carriages and other vehicles at night, which appear, under any circumstances, calculated to excite suspicion.

160. He will pay particular attention to all public-houses, places of entertainment, &c., and be prepared to state, when required, whether they appear to be kept in a correct, orderly, and reputable manner; he will notice and report any which are kept open at hours contrary to law.

161. If he observes in the streets, &c., anything likely to produce damage or public inconvenience, or anything irregular or offensive, he is to report it to his inspector, taking such immediate steps at the time as may be necessary.

162. He is to notice and receive reports also from the men as to the state of the gas lamps, whether any are dirty or extinguished, and report the same to his inspector. In case the sergeant be absent from illness, or any other cause, his place is to be supplied by one of the men of his party, who shall be named by the Metropolitan Superintendent or chief inspector for that purpose.

163. In case of fire, in the absence of superior officers, he will act according to the instructions already given for their guidance, taking immediate steps to acquaint them, and give notice to the division station.

164. While he is exact in the performance of his duty, he will, at the same time, be civil and attentive to every person, and render every information and assistance in his power when required.

CONSTABLE.

165. Every constable in the force may hope to rise, by activity, intelligence, and good conduct, to the superior stations. He must make it his study to recommend himself to notice by a diligent discharge of his duties, and strict obedience to the commands of his superiors, bearing in mind that he who has been accustomed to submit to discipline, and himself to support it, will be considered best qualified to command.

166. He will reside, where ordered, within the division. He will devote the whole of his time and abilities to the service. He is at all times to appear neat in his person, and correctly dressed in the established uniform. His demeanor must always be respectful towards his official superiors, and towards all gentlemen and magistrates, and he must be civil and obliging to all classes. He will immediately give his name, number, and the letter of his division, when demanded.

167. When he has to go on duty he will take care to be at the division station, or other appointed place, if not before, precisely at the prescribed hour. He is to assemble with the others of his party, and, after inspection by the sergeant, and receiving any orders that may be necessary, he is marched by the sergeant, or proceeds to his beat.

168. Every constable must readily and punctually obey the orders and instructions of the sergeants and inspectors. If they appear to him either unlawful or improper, he may complain to the Inspector General, who will pay due attention to him; but a refusal to perform the commands of his superiors, or any negligence in doing so, will not be suffered.

169. When on his beat, he will be held responsible for the security of life and property within it, and for the preservation of the peace and general good order during the time he is on duty.

170. He should clearly understand what powers are given to him by law for the efficient execution of his duties.

171. For this purpose he is recommended to read carefully the instructions given to him respecting the general duties of a constable.

172. It is indispensably necessary that he should make himself perfectly acquainted with all the parts of his beat, with the streets, thoroughfares, courts, and houses.

173. He will be expected to possess such a knowledge of the inhabitants of each house, as will enable him to recognise their persons. He will thus prevent mistakes, and be enabled to render assistance to the inhabitants when called for.

174. He should see every part of his beat in the time allotted; and this he will be expected to do regularly, so that any person requiring assistance, by remaining in the same spot for that length of time, may be able to meet a constable. This regularity of moving through his beat, shall not, however, prevent his remaining at any particular place, if his presence there be necessary, to observe the conduct of any suspected person, or for any other good reason.

175. When he takes any one into custody, he will, if possible, before he leaves his beat, give notice to some other constable who can supply his place, whilst he is taking the party to the division station, and he will return again to his duty as soon as possible; or he may, when not himself required as a witness on the charge, deliver over his prisoner to the sergeant or other constable, and immediately return to his beat.

176. It will be generally most desirable that he should accompany the party to the station, in order to substantiate the charge; and when he takes property from any one, he shall not suffer it to be out of his sight until he delivers it to the proper officer at the station, and receives from him a proper receipt for the same.

177. All property found by him, or delivered to him as found, he will immediately report and hand over to the inspector or other officer on duty, to be entered in the occurrence book:—This applies to every description of property coming into the constable's possession.

178. He will take charge of insane persons or children found wandering in the streets and unable to give an account of their residences, and bring them to the nearest police station; information is to be immediately given of the fact in the neighborhood and division where the party is found, who, if not claimed before the following morning, is to be brought before the Magistrates at the Central Police Office.

179. He is not to quit his beat during his tour of duty, unless under the circumstances already mentioned, or others which may make it necessary; he is not however to refuse to give his assistance for the protection of persons or property near his own beat, if called for in any case requiring immediate attention, but he is always to return as soon as possible to his own beat; he shall not enter any house except in the execution of his duty; he will pay particular attention to all public-houses and houses of public resort in which low company assemble, reporting the hours at which each is closed, and whether they appear to be kept in an orderly and correct manner.

180. On no pretence shall he enter such houses, except in the immediate execution of his duty. A publican is himself subject to fine for allowing a constable when on duty to remain in his house.

181. He may procure moderate and necessary refreshment, at a public-house, with the least possible delay, not entering the house, and having the permission of his sergeant, who is to be present with him at the time.

182. No liquor, or refreshment of any sort, shall be taken from a publican without paying for it at the time.

183. He is not to go into public-houses at night to order the landlord to close his house, nor is he to interfere in any other manner with the management or regulation of the house. If public-houses are disorderly, notice is to be given to the sergeant, who will report the case to the proper authorities.

184. If, during the tour of his duty, he observes in the street anything likely to produce danger or public inconvenience, or anything which seems to him irregular and offensive, he must report it to the sergeant.

185. While on duty he must not enter into conversation with any one, except on matters relating to his duty. He is not to stop or talk with other constables when he meets them at the limits of his beat, but merely exchange a word and proceed on his duty.

186. He must be particularly cautious not to interfere idly or unnecessarily; when required to act he will do so with decision and boldness; on all occasions he may expect to receive the fullest support in the proper exercise of his authority.

187. He must remember that there is no qualification more indispensable to a police officer than a perfect command of temper; never suffering himself to be moved in the slightest degree by any language or threats that may be used; if he does his duty in a quiet and determined manner such conduct will probably induce well-disposed by-standers to assist him, should he require it. A constable must not use his staff because the party in his custody is violent in his behaviour or language; nor use any language towards parties in his custody calculated to provoke or offend them; such conduct excites resistance in the party, and a hostile feeling amongst the persons present towards the constable.

188. In cases where a distress is made for non-payment of rent, or any other cause, or disputes arise between the parties, the police constable shall not give assistance to either, or interfere between them on any pretence whatsoever; he is not to enter the house or the premises, unless it is necessary to prevent an immediate breach of the peace, or quell a disturbance that has actually arisen; and he is on such occasions merely to take offenders into custody, as he is authorised by law to do in similar cases.

189. In case of a fire taking place, the constable at the spot should alarm the inmates of the house, and those living in the immediate neighborhood, and should then proceed direct to the station-house with his report, warning all constables whom he may pass that they need not leave their beat unless required to do so.

190. For his exertions, on these and any extraordinary occasions, the Inspector General may recommend him to the Government for a reward; but on no pretence shall he receive a gratuity from any person for anything relating to his duty, without the express permission of the Inspector General, who will allow gratuities to be received on all proper occasions upon the circumstances being reported to him.

191. A gratuity offered at the time by a party to whom special services are rendered upon any sudden emergency, may be taken, subject to the decision of the Inspector General as to its being retained, or returned to the party giving it; in such a case, the name and address of the party giving the gratuity is to be procured, and the sum given handed over as soon as possible to the inspector of the division, who will enter the amount and all particulars in the occurrence sheet (getting the constable's signature to the entry). A report of the circumstances will be laid before the Inspector General for his decision.

192. In case of the absence of any constable from duty on account of sickness, on a certificate of the proper medical officer that such constable is unfit for duty (which certificate he is required to obtain and forward to the station-house), he will be subject to a deduction from his pay of one shilling for every day's absence; the inspector will take an account of such absence, and transmit a report of it to the office every pay-day.

193. When the constable's illness arises, in the opinion of the medical attendant, from wounds or injuries received in the execution of his duty, the sums stopped will be repaid to the constable when he returns to his duty.

194. No constable is to be returned sick until the surgeon reports that he is so. When entitled to exemption from the regulated stoppage, by special order of the Inspector General, or when the sickness is caused by injury received in the execution of his duty, the remark "exempted," or "hurt on duty," is to be placed against the constable's name.

195. When appearing as a witness in a Court of Justice the constable is to give his evidence calmly and explicitly, and in a perfectly distinct and audible tone, so that the Court and Jury, or the Magistrate (as the case may be), may easily hear him; he will confine himself strictly to the case before the Court, and not refer to any former conviction against the prisoner, unless called upon by the Judge or Magistrate; whilst giving his evidence he is to stand in an upright attitude, and invariably to maintain a respectful manner. He is not to use low or cant language when speaking of the occupation of any person.

196. To prevent the possibility of escape of a prisoner in custody, the constable, whether the circumstances of the case make it fit to handcuff the prisoner or otherwise, is actually to hold him.

197. On other points of discipline and duty the constables will be guided by general orders, issued, from time to time, as circumstances require.

POLICE INQUIRIES.

198. Members of the force offending against the law will be tried before the ordinary tribunals of the Colony. All offences against the subject which can be legally investigated by the Magistrates, must be brought before Courts of Petty Sessions—the inspectors of the several divisions, or a non-commissioned officer of the patrol, attending all inquiries into charges affecting the conduct of their men; but all offences against discipline, all breaches of the rules and regulations of the establishment, and all charges affecting the character and credit of the force, but not cognizable by the ordinary tribunals, will be investigated by the Inspector General or Metropolitan Superintendent, in whose discretion it will in each case rest, to take evidence on oath, and to have it committed to writing, or not. The decision arrived at and the punishment (if any) awarded, being in every case recorded with the offence charged.

CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS.

199. Any member of the force who shall be guilty of disobedience of the lawful commands of his superior; or who shall strike or offer to strike his superior; or who shall behave with contempt towards his superior; or who shall be guilty of any oppressive or tyrannical conduct towards an inferior; or who shall directly or indirectly receive any bribe or gratuity; or who shall embezzle or misapply any public moneys, arms, ammunition, clothing, appointments, or stores; or who shall take and convert to his own use any of the necessaries belonging to his comrades; or who shall wear any badge or party emblem; or who shall make use of any mutinous words, or be guilty of any mutinous or insubordinate conduct; or who shall knowingly make any false return or statement, or sign any false certificate or be privy thereto, or who shall make any alteration or erasure (for the purpose of fraud or deceit) in any public document; or who shall make any false entry in any official book or return; or who shall wilfully omit to make an entry therein, as to the performance of any duty, matter, or thing, which ought to be so entered; or who shall by any concealment or wilful omission attempt to evade the true spirit and meaning of the orders and regulations of the force; or who shall refuse or omit to make a true and faithful return of all fines received by him, or to which he may be entitled, upon any convictions in which he shall have been a prosecutor or witness; or who shall be convicted of any offence by a Court of Justice; or who shall incur and refuse to pay any lawful debt; or who shall be guilty of gambling or drunkenness; or who shall misapply any money or goods levied under any warrant or taken from any prisoner; or who shall give notice or otherwise cause to be intimated, either directly or indirectly, to any person against whom there shall be a warrant or order, notice thereof, with a view to the evasion of such warrant or order; or who shall divulge any matter which it may be his duty to keep secret; or who knowing where any offender shall be residing or concealed, shall not immediately inform his superior of the same; or shall not take due and prompt measures for the arrest of such person; or who shall wilfully, or through negligence, allow any prisoner to escape; or who shall use any cruel, harsh, or unnecessary violence towards any prisoner or other person; or who shall leave any post on which he shall have been placed as a sentry, or other duty; or who shall absent himself from his district, division, or quarters, without leave; or who shall be guilty of any prevarication, before any Court or upon any inquiry; or who shall behave in any scandalous or infamous manner, or shall be guilty of any disgraceful conduct; or who shall, when on duty, be seen in any public-house, when not necessarily there; or who, being necessarily there, shall drink any fermented or spirituous liquor whatever; or who shall, when off duty, frequent public-houses; or any member of the force who shall be guilty of any profane or immoral conduct; or who shall violate any existing order or regulation, or any order or regulation hereafter to be made, shall be dismissed the service, or shall suffer suspension, suspension, loss of rank, fine, forfeiture of past service or additional pay, or such other punishment as the Inspector General shall award, besides any punishment he may be liable to by law.

200. Constables neglecting to obey the lawful orders, warrants, and commands of a Magistrate are liable to a penalty of five pounds.

201. Any constable who shall be dismissed, or who shall cease to hold and exercise his office, who shall not within one week give up his arms, clothing, &c., is liable to three months imprisonment and hard labor.

202. Any constable who shall resign his office, or withdraw, or absent himself from the duties thereof, without express permission in writing from the Inspector General, or before the expiration of three months from the date of his notice of intention to resign or withdraw, is liable to a penalty of ten pounds, or three months imprisonment in default of payment.

203. All disorders and neglects which any constable may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and discipline, though not specified in the foregoing cases, may be punished by order of the Inspector General, by change of station, by fine, or by forfeiture of gratuity, or share of gratuity, which may at any time be coming to him.

204. Men of the force, when committed to prison or suspended, will be struck off pay from the day of their being so committed or suspended, and will not receive any pay during the period of their imprisonment or suspension; and if found guilty and dismissed from the force for the crime for which they were committed or suspended, will not be entitled to pay for any part of the time they may be in confinement or under suspension; but if acquitted of the charge, and not dismissed from the force in consequence of the evidence which shall have appeared, they will be entitled to pay for the time they were imprisoned or suspended.

ESCORTS.

205. Escorts form a very important part of the duty of the police. Strict impartiality must be observed in keeping the roster for this duty, and every means that experience, method, regularity, and systematic co-operation can devise, must be brought to bear upon it, in order to render it as light as the necessities of the service will allow.

206. The first consideration, and that which must never be lost sight of by escorts, is the security of the prisoners or commodities placed in their charge: to this all else must be secondary and subordinate. The first point, therefore, to be looked to by the police when employed on this duty, is that the prisoners or property they are to escort are delivered to them with due precautions for safe custody, and this they are to state in the receipt they give on taking them over.

207. The authority that, in the first instance, delivers to any escort prisoners or property, is that to prescribe, and is responsible for, the nature and degree of personal restraint to be imposed on prisoners, and the description of boxes or packages containing, and the fastenings securing, property, and neither should be deviated from, or in any way altered by the escort, or successive escorts, in whose charge they are placed, unless under circumstances of such necessity as will fully justify the act. In all cases of the kind the escort, or constable in charge of the escort, making the alteration, will report clearly and at length upon the matter.

208. Having thus received their charge, properly secured, it will be their duty, and consequently their responsibility, to guard against that state of security being diminished or impaired; for this purpose they will frequently and closely inspect the handcuffs, chains, &c., placed on the prisoners, and the fastenings of the doors, windows, &c., of any place of confinement: in like manner, as regards property, they will inspect the locks, seals, or other means by which the boxes or packages are secured. Neither by day nor night must their charge be separate from, or lost sight of by, an escort.

209. Under existing circumstances, it becomes at times necessary for escorts to stop during the night at public-houses; this, however, must never be done when it can possibly be avoided. When escorts are compelled to stop at public-houses, they are not to drink, nor to allow the prisoners in their charge to drink, any fermented or spirituous liquor whatever; they are to place prisoners or property in the most secure and private room obtainable, and are to adopt all proper and necessary precautions against escape or abstraction.

210. Escorts with prisoners or property in charge are not to call or halt at public-houses during the day; the necessary provisions and refreshments they can procure at, and convey with them from, the place they have stopped at the preceding night.

211. On the march they are not to allow their prisoners to separate or straggle, and, therefore, the rate of marching must be regulated according to the powers of the prisoners.* Neither acquaintances of the prisoners nor other persons are to be allowed to mix with, or accompany, the prisoners and escort.

212. The arms of an escort are invariably to be loaded; they must be kept from wet as much as possible, and always in a state for instant use. After rain they must be examined, and if the powder in the nipples appears in the least damp, the charge must be drawn, the arms thoroughly cleaned, dried, and reloaded. It must, however, be clearly understood, and constantly borne in mind, that nothing short of absolute and inevitable necessity, can justify the police in firing upon prisoners endeavoring to escape, or upon other parties attempting a rescue.

* A law has been enacted, providing for the punishment of refractory prisoners, able, but refusing to proceed on foot to their destination.

213. Unless under the orders of a medical man or a Magistrate, the provisions furnished to prisoners under escort must be confined to the regulated allowance. When extras are allowed by a medical man or Magistrate, at the expense of the prisoner, the money to procure such must be delivered, with written instructions, to the constable in charge (his receipt being duly taken), who is to render a full and faithful account of his disbursements, certified by the prisoner, and accompanied by vouchers; if relieved, he is to hand over to the constable in charge of the relieving escort the balance in his hands, taking his receipt; he and those succeeding following the course prescribed for the first.

214. As prisoners are not, on any account, to be left in possession of money when under escort, any belonging to them, and not required for their use as mentioned in the preceding paragraph, is to be made up into separate sealed packages, marked with the name of the prisoner and the amount, and these separate parcels (with a list) to be enclosed in a strong sealed cover; a memorandum is to be delivered with this sealed parcel to the constable in charge (his acknowledgment and signature being taken to a duplicate retained): this memorandum and the sealed parcel he is to hand, with the seal unbroken, to the person into whose charge he delivers the prisoners, taking his receipt therefor.

215. In every case the person delivering to an escort prisoners or property, is to give with them a document duly signed, stating the number or kind delivered, retaining a duplicate signed by the constable in charge, who is to hand over to the relieving escort, or to the person to whom he gives over his charge, the original document, getting in return an acknowledgment that he duly delivered the prisoners or property therein set forth.

216. Generally speaking, it is not advisable to employ mounted men to escort prisoners on foot, and doing so is to be as much as possible avoided.

217. Escorts, after having handed over their charge are, except under special circumstances, on their return route to act as day patrols.

INSTRUCTIONS.

218. It is intended here to state such parts of the law relating to the office of a constable as may be sufficient for the general instruction of the police force.

219. Each individual will bear in mind the importance of making himself perfectly acquainted with this subject; it is necessary to enable him, with a due regard to his own safety, to act efficiently for the protection of the public.

220. The powers of a constable, as will appear hereafter, are, when properly understood and duly executed, amply sufficient for the purpose. He is regarded as the legitimate peace officer of his district, and both by the common law, and many Acts of Parliament and Council, he is invested with considerable powers, and has imposed on him the discharge of many important duties.

221. He is, in many cases, authorised and required, in the execution of his office, to arrest a party charged with or suspected to be guilty of some offence,—to enter a house in pursuit of an offender,—to quiet an affray,—to search for stolen goods,—to take possession of goods suspected to have been stolen.

222. It therefore becomes necessary that the constable should inform himself in what cases he ought so to interfere, and what legal powers he possesses to effect the object in case he meets with resistance. To assist the police constables in the discharge of their duties, the following observations are prepared for their attentive perusal.

223. I shall begin by shewing for what offences of more ordinary occurrence a party may be taken into custody. With this object offences may be divided into felonies and misdemeanors.

224. Murder, rape, housebreaking, robbery, larceny, picking pockets, receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen, assaulting with intent to rob, wounding, &c., with intent to do murder or some grievous bodily harm, setting fire to any house or other buildings, are some of the principal felonies, besides a great many more too numerous to be inserted here.

225. Smaller offences, such as common assaults, affrays, and riots, and various kinds of fraud, with numerous other offences, are called misdemeanors.

226. As it is more important to prevent and punish the commission of great crimes than of the lesser offences, the constable has a greater power in cases of felonies than in those of mere misdemeanors.

227. But the first duty of a constable is always to prevent the commission of a crime.

228. I shall therefore now shew what power he has to arrest, without warrant from a Magistrate, a party whom, from his situation and character, the law judges to be likely to commit some felony, and persons found in the commission charged with or suspected of certain offences.

229. The constable may thus arrest one whom he has just cause to suspect to be about to commit a felony. Thus, when a drunken person or a man in a violent passion threatens the life of another, the constable should interfere and arrest.

230. So he may apprehend every person having in his or her possession any picklock, key, crow, jack, bit, or other implement, with intent feloniously to break into any dwelling-house, warehouse, coach-house, stable, or out-building, or being armed with any gun, pistol, hanger, cutlass, bludgeon, or other offensive weapon, or having upon him or her any instrument with intent to commit any felonious act; every person found in or upon any dwelling-house, warehouse, coach-house, stable, or out-house, or in any enclosed yard, garden or area, or found in or on board any vessel, when lying in any place within this Colony, for any unlawful purpose; every suspected person, or reputed thief, frequenting any river, canal, or navigable stream, dock, or basin, or any quay, wharf, or warehouse near or adjoining thereto, or any street, highway, or avenue leading thereto, or any place of public resort, or any avenue leading thereto, or any street, highway, or place adjacent, with intent to commit felony.

231. If any party threaten another with immediate personal violence, or offer to strike, the constable should interfere, and prevent a breach of the peace; if one draw a weapon upon another attempting to strike, the constable should take him into custody; if persons are merely quarrelling or insulting each other, the constable has in general no right to take them into custody, but should be ready to prevent a breach of the peace.

232. In cases where an actual offence has not been consummated, the constable must judge from the situation and behaviour of the party what his intention is. In some cases no doubt can exist; as when the party is a notorious thief, or acting with those who are thieves, or when the party is seen to try people's pockets in a crowd, or to attempt to break into a house, or to endeavor to carry off any property secretly from another. The constable must not act hastily, in case the intention is not clear, but content himself with watching closely the suspected party, that he may discover his design.

233. The constable must arrest any one whom he sees in the act of committing a felony, or any one whom another positively charges with having committed a felony, or whom another suspects of having committed a felony, if the suspicion appear to the constable to be well founded; but in the last case the constable should in general require the person so suspecting to go with him.

234. Though no charge be made, yet, if the constable suspect a person to have committed a felony he should arrest him, and, if he have reasonable grounds for his suspicion, he will be justified, even though it should afterwards appear that no felony was in fact committed. But the constable must be cautious in thus acting upon his own suspicions.

235. Generally, if the arrest was made discreetly and fairly, in pursuit of an offender, and not from any private malice or ill-will, the constable need not doubt that the law will protect him.

236. If after sun-set, and before sun-rising, the constable shall see any one carrying a bundle, or goods which he suspects were stolen, he should stop and examine the person and may detain him; but here also he should judge from circumstances (such as the appearance and manner of the party, his account of himself, and the like) whether he really has stolen goods in his possession, before he actually takes him into custody.

237. The constable, when justified in making an arrest, must use every exertion to effect it, and the law gives him abundant power for the purpose. If the felon or party accused of felony fly, he may be immediately followed, wherever he goes, and, if he takes refuge in a house, the constable may break open the doors, if necessary, to get in, first stating who he is and his business. But the breaking open outer doors is so dangerous a proceeding that the constable never should resort to it except in extreme cases, and when an immediate arrest is necessary.

238. There are some cases in which a constable may and ought to break into a house, although no felony has been committed, when the necessity of the case will not admit of delay, as when persons are fighting furiously in a house, or when a house has been entered by others with a felonious intent, and a felony will probably be committed unless the constable interfere, and there is no other means of entering. Except in such cases, it is better in general that the constable should wait until he has a warrant from a Magistrate for the purpose.

239. If a constable finds his exertions insufficient to effect the arrest, he ought to require all persons present to assist him, and they are bound to do so.

240. If a prisoner, on whatever charge lawfully taken, should escape, he may be re-taken; and, in immediate pursuit, the constable may follow him into any place or any house; and, if the escaped prisoner take refuge in a house, the doors may be broken open after demand of admission, and after notification by the constable of his office and object in coming.

241. In cases of actual breaches of the peace, as riots, affrays, assaults, and the like, committed within the view of the constable, he should immediately interfere (first giving public notice of his office if he be not already known), separate the combatants, and prevent others from joining in the affray. If the riot, &c., be of a serious nature, or if the offenders do not immediately desist, he should take them into custody, securing also the principal instigators of the tumult, and do every thing in his power to restore quiet.

242. He may arrest any one assaulting or opposing him in the execution of his duty.

243. If a person forcibly enter the house of another, the constable may, at the request of the owner, turn him out directly; if he entered peaceably, and the owner request the constable to turn him out, the constable should first request him to go out, and unless he do so he should turn him out; in either case using no more force than is necessary for that purpose.

244. When the offence has not yet been committed, but when a breach of the peace is likely to take place, as when persons are openly preparing to fight, the constable should take the parties concerned into custody; if they fly into a house, or are making preparations to fight within the house, the constable should enter the house to prevent them, and likewise take the parties into custody; and should the doors be closed, he may break them open, if admission is refused, after giving notice of his office and his object in entering.

245. A constable has power to apprehend and carry immediately, or as soon as possible, before a Justice of the Peace, any person whom he may find wilfully damaging any public building, wall, parapet, sluice, bridge, road, street, sewer, watercourse, or other public property; also any person who in his view commits any malicious injury to private property; and and he should take charge of any person given into his custody who may have been arrested by the owner of the property damaged, or by his servant, or any person authorised by him.

246. A constable, in cases of assault which have not been committed in his presence, or within his view, is not authorised without a warrant to arrest or assist in arresting the party charged, nor is he to receive a person so charged into his custody, unless the party has been arrested by some other constable who saw the assault committed.

247. After the arrest the constable is, in all cases, to treat a prisoner properly, and impose only such restraint upon him as may be necessary for his safe custody.

248. It is always proper to take the prisoner, as soon as convenient, before a Magistrate, who will dispose of the case. At night, he is to be taken to the police station, or, in cases of necessity, to the nearest place of safety. When the prisoner is brought to the Justice, he still remains in custody of the constable until his discharge or committal, or until he receives the orders of the Justice.

249. The constable is bound to follow the directions contained in a warrant, and to execute it with secrecy and despatch. The power given to him for the purpose of arresting has been already shewn. If the warrant cannot be executed immediately, it should be executed as soon as possible afterwards.

250. The constable must execute the warrant himself, or, when he calls in assistance, must be actually present. Upon all occasions he ought to state his authority, if it be not generally known, and should shew his warrant, when required to do so; but he should never part with the possession of the warrant, as it may be wanted afterwards for his own justification.

251. As it frequently happens that the warrant is in the hands of one constable, whilst another constable having information of such warrant may find the accused person, or a person whom he has good ground to suppose to be such person, the latter ought to make the arrest; and if it be provable that a warrant had been issued, although it was not in his hands, he will be justified in his act, and will be entitled to the protection of the law. In such case, he should communicate to the prisoner his information respecting the warrant.

252. The constable may enter a house to search for stolen goods, having received a search warrant from a Magistrate for that purpose. He should, when it is possible so to do, execute it in the day time. If he finds the goods mentioned he is to take them to a Magistrate; and, when the warrant so directs, he must take the person also in whose possession they are found. To avoid mistakes, the owner ought to attend at the search to identify the goods; but this is not indispensably necessary in all cases.

253. In the following cases constables are empowered to arrest without warrant, but they are to be specially careful not to do so upon light grounds:—Every common prostitute, wandering in any street or public highway, or being in any place of public resort, who shall behave in a riotous or indecent manner; every habitual drunkard, having been thrice convicted of drunkenness within the preceding twelve months, who in any street or public highway, or being in any place of public resort, shall behave in a riotous or indecent manner; every person wandering abroad, or placing himself or herself in any public place to beg or gather alms, or causing, or procuring, or encouraging any child or children so to do; all persons gathering alms under false pretence of loss by fire or other casualty; all persons imposing, or endeavoring to impose, upon any charitable institution or private individual, by any false or fraudulent representation; every person wilfully exposing to view, in any public place, or who shall expose or cause to be exposed to public view, in the window or other part of any shop or other building situate in any public place, any obscene book, picture, or other indecent exhibition or representation; every person wilfully and obscenely exposing his or her person in any street or road, or in the view thereof, or in any place of public resort; every person playing or betting at any unlawful game; every person playing or betting in any street or other open and public place, at or with any table or instrument of gaming, at any game or pretended game of chance; any person who shall sing any obscene song or ballad, or write or draw any indecent or obscene word, figure, or representation, or use any profane, indecent, or obscene language, in any public place, or within the view or hearing of any person passing therein; any person who shall use any threatening, abusive, or insulting words or behaviour, in any public place, with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned; every person who shall cruelly beat, ill-treat, over-drive, abuse, or torture, or cause or procure to be cruelly beaten, ill-treated, over-driven, abused, or tortured, any animal.

254. In all these cases not only are constables empowered to arrest without a Magistrate's warrant, but on fair and sufficient grounds it is their duty so to do; and they are also bound to receive into their custody any person found committing any of these offences who, having been apprehended by another, is delivered to them. And any refusal or wilful neglect to take such offender into their custody, or to take or convey him or her before some Justice of the Peace, will be a neglect of duty, and will render them liable to the penalty attached to such neglect.

255. In Sydney a constable may, without a Magistrate's warrant, apprehend any person whom he shall find drunk in the streets or public places at any hour, and all loose, idle, drunken, or disorderly persons whom he shall find between sunset and eight a.m., lying or loitering in any street or other place, and not giving a satisfactory account of themselves; and persons bathing near to or within view of any place of public resort, between six a.m., and eight p.m.; persons hauling or drawing upon any of the streets or public places any timber, stone, or other thing, otherwise than upon wheeled carriages, or suffering the same to drag or trail upon such street or public place, to the injury thereof, or to hang over any part of any such carriage, so as to occupy or obstruct the street beyond the breadth of the said carriage; persons driving or causing to be driven any cart or other carriage with any night-soil or ammoniacal liquor therein through any street or public place, between five a.m., and ten p. m., or who shall fill any cart or other carriage so as to turn over, or cast any night-soil, ammoniacal liquor, slop, mire, or channel dirt or filth upon any street or public place; persons emptying or beginning to empty any privy, or taking away night-soil, within the streets or public places, or coming with carts or carriages for that purpose, except between ten p. m., and five a. m.; persons who shall put any night-soil in or near any street or public place; persons wantonly or maliciously breaking or injuring any lamp or lamp-post, or extinguishing any lamp set up for public convenience; persons throwing or causing to be thrown any dead animal into any part of Sydney Cove or Darling Harbor, or leaving or causing the same to be left upon the shores thereof, or who shall throw or cause to be thrown any dead animal into any street or other public place, or into any stream flowing through, by, or along any such street or other public place, or leave or cause the same to be left upon the shores thereof; and the driver of any dray, cart, &c. (except a light cart, with one horse, driven with reins), who shall ride upon it or upon the shafts thereof in any street or public place, and the driver of any carriage whatsoever who shall wilfully be at such a distance, or in such a situation, whilst it shall be passing upon such street or public place, that he cannot have the direction and government of the horse or horses, or cattle drawing the same, or who when meeting any other carriage shall not keep his carriage, cart, dray, &c., on the left or near side of the road; and any person who shall, in any manner, wilfully prevent any other person from passing him or her, or any carriage under his or her care, upon such street or public place, or who shall, by negligence or misbehaviour, prevent, hinder or interrupt the free passage of any carriage or person so in or upon the same; and any seaman or mariner who shall be in any public-house, or any street or public place, at any time after the hour of nine o'clock at night, and before sunrise in the morning, unless such seaman or mariner shall produce a written pass from the master or other person in charge of the ship or vessel to which he shall belong, or a discharge from the master of the ship or vessel to which he last belonged.

256. By a special enactment relating to the Domain, called Hyde Park, in Sydney, constables are authorized to apprehend and convey before some Justice of the Peace, any person who shall maliciously or wantonly destroy or injure, or endeavor to destroy or injure, any of the fences, or any other wood or iron work, of or in that Domain, or any tree or shrub therein growing, or shall offend against decency, or conduct himself in a riotous, turbulent, or disorderly manner, in any part of that Domain, or shall obstruct any overseer, park-keeper, or workman therein in the performance of his duty.

257. As a general rule, in all cases in which constables act without a Magistrate's warrant, they should notify that they are constables, and that they arrest in the Queen's name.

RULES and Regulations for the Distribution and Appropriation of the Superannuation and Police Reward Funds.

1.—All claims for pensions, rewards, or gratuities from these funds are to be submitted to a Board, which will sit on the first Monday (or other convenient day) in each month.

2.—The Board to consist of the Auditor General, the Inspector General of Police, and the Superintendent of Police for the Metropolitan District.

3.—All claims are to be duly supported by such certificates, vouchers, and testimonials as the Board may require, and dealt with each on its own merits, which will guide the Board in the amount of pension, reward, or gratuity they may decide on recommending in their report to His Excellency the Governor General.

4.—The maximum of pension and that of gratuity to members of the constabulary duly certified to be unfit for service, is fixed respectively by the scale laid down in the 19th and 20th sections of the Act, 16 Vict., No. 33, and can in no case be exceeded.

5.—Claims from widows and families of deceased members of the force, duly supported by certificates of marriage, and birth, and by such other vouchers and testimonials as the Board may require, are to be considered and dealt with as stated in Rule 3, but the amount of pension or gratuity is in no case to exceed the maximum fixed by the scale in sections 19 and 20 of the Act.

6.—No widow to be regarded as having any claim to pension or gratuity unless married more than twelve months previous to her husband's decease, except in cases of death having been caused by injury or accident when on duty.

7.—Women of good character only to be entitled to any gratuity.

8.—Children being eligible for admission into the Orphan Schools, no gratuity is to be paid to them; but the Board is to examine into the particulars of each case, and where there are grounds for doing so, to recommend that the children be admitted into these Institutions.

Rules applying to Constabulary Pensioners.

1.—All constabulary pensioners, on first taking up their residence in any locality, are to make themselves personally known to the chief or district constable of the police district in which it lies, and are to notify it to the Inspector General of Police, acting in like manner on any change of residence.

2.—Constabulary pensioners are not, without leave previously obtained from His Excellency the Governor General, through the Inspector General of Police, to leave the Colony; any breach of this or the preceding Rule will render pensioners liable to forfeit, at the pleasure of His Excellency the Governor General, the whole or any part of the pensions allowed them.

3.—Constabulary pensions will be payable monthly, on receipt of the proper vouchers, into such Banks in Sydney, and to the credit there of such persons as the pensioners may direct them to be paid to, by a printed form of Authority to the Inspector General of Police, duly filled up and signed.

4.—Pensioners resident in Sydney or in the Sydney Police District, must have their vouchers signed by the Superintendent of Police for the Metropolitan District, and will be paid by that Officer monthly.

5.—Pensioners resident in other districts must have their vouchers (duly filled up) presented by the chief or district constable of the district to the Bench of Magistrates in Petty Sessions, for the purpose of being declared to and subscribed by the pensioners before a Magistrate, by whom they will be certified.

6.—No charge of any kind, except that for the necessary postage stamp, is to be made against pensioners for the presenting, declaring, certifying, or forwarding the vouchers, which are, when perfected, to be transmitted by the Clerks of Petty Sessions, to the Inspector General of Police, monthly.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 1.]

Office of the Inspector General of Police,
Sydney, 18 March, 1853.

THE following Rules, Regulations, &c., for the Mounted Patrols, having been approved by His Excellency the Governor General, are to be strictly observed.

W. C. MAYNE,
Inspector General of Police.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE following instructions are published for the information and guidance of the mounted patrols.

2. It is impossible to give precise directions for the execution of every duty which the force may be required to perform, or to anticipate every difficulty which its members may have to encounter, as from the nature of the service, its duties must vary, and consequently the mode of execution must vary with them, and be directed by the circumstances of each particular case: each and every member of the force should therefore endeavor to become acquainted with the nature of every duty which he may be called on to execute, and by individual zeal, energy, discretion and intelligence, make every effort to supply the unavoidable deficiency of general instructions.

3. The officers and men of the patrols will, however, be held strictly responsible for the execution and observance of all orders and regulations, from which they are not to deviate, except when the circumstances of the case may require, and thereby justify their so doing doing. And they will be held equally accountable for their own acts and orders in such cases as may not or cannot be provided for by these instructions.

4. In the performance of their duty they are distinctly to understand that their efforts should be principally directed to the prevention of crime, which will tend far more effectually towards the security of person and property than the punishment of those who have violated the laws;—and the very best evidence that can be given of their efficiency is the absence of crime in their districts.

5. The Inspector General is particularly desirous in the outset to impress on every member of the force, from the highest to the lowest, how very incumbent it is on them to act in the discharge of their various duties with the utmost forbearance, mildness, urbanity, and perfect civility towards all classes; and that upon no occasion or under any provocation should they so far forget themselves as to permit their feelings to get the better of their discretion, and conduct themselves rudely or harshly in the performance of their respective offices: for nothing will serve more to create a kindly feeling and cause the force to be looked up to and respected than a mild, conciliatory, moral, and decorous line of conduct, and a general readiness on the part of all classes to render kindness or assistance to every member of the community;—whilst an opposite course and bearing can only engender an angry and hostile feeling towards the members of the force, and consequently bring the establishment into disrepute. A police force can only obtain complete success with the general support of the community. The efficiency of the action of any such force must depend upon the extent of its information, and it is deprived of the most extensive and valuable portion of the available information when it loses the confidence, forfeits the respect, or fails to engage the good feelings of the community in which it acts.

6. Both officers and men are studiously to observe a strict impartiality and neutrality in political matters, and in questions exciting partisanship.

7. The members of the force are placed in a totally different position from that which they occupied as private individuals. They become peace officers, and are in an entirely new situation: they are, by law, entrusted with certain powers which they must exercise with great caution and prudence, and it is most essential that they keep under complete control their private feelings. It is totally inconsistent with the situation in which the law and their office place them that they enter into altercations or squabbles of any kind;—if wantonly assaulted they have a legal power to arrest the assailant, or, if that be imprudent or impossible at the time, to take proceedings against him afterwards. Altercation or squabbling are altogether inadmissible in a peace officer—he can avoid them, and must do so. There must be two parties in an altercation, and nothing can justify a constable in being one of them or joining one of them. On all occasions in which men of the force are placed under circumstances tending to create feelings of irritation, they should maintain the utmost self-possession, self-control, and calmness.

8. Every member of the establishment should bear constantly in mind how essential it is to cultivate a proper regard for the honor and respectability of the force, and should be governed by the principle, that the more they can raise those above or below them in public estimation, the more they elevate their own official position, and with it the general character of the establishment.

9. As none but zealous and efficient officers and men can be retained in the service, it will become the imperative duty of the Inspector General to remove from it any member of the force who may be guilty of any neglect or omission of duty, or disobedience of any order or regulation. On the other hand, it will afford him pleasure to promote and reward those who are in every respect active, attentive, and zealous in the performance of the respective duties of the service.

DISCIPLINE.

10. Discipline, which implies authority and its proper exercise on the one hand, and respect and obedience on the other, is essential to the practical direction, action, and efficiency of any force.

11. As authority necessarily becomes divided, gradations of rank must be established, the holders of each of which, while exercising command over subordinates, must pay respect to superiors; this principle holds throughout, until we reach that grade whose simple duty is proper respect to all in command, and prompt and unvarying obedience to their orders.

12. A responsibility for the full discharge of his own peculiar duties at all times attaches to every member of a disciplined force, it is necessary that each should know, as precisely as it is possible to define them, what those duties are, in order to ensure a correct and cheerful discharge of them: but further, as the responsibility attaching to a superior may at any time devolve on the next in rank, it is essential that the members of each grade shall be acquainted with the duties that circumstances may call on them to discharge, in order to guard against injury to the public service.

13. Every subordinate, whether non-commissioned officer or trooper, is to receive the lawful commands of his superior with deference and respect, and to execute them to the best of his power; and every superior, in his turn, is to give his orders in the language of moderation and of regard to the feelings of the individuals under his command.

14. The obedience and respect which are here required must be observed throughout the force generally, and not be understood in any partial or confined sense; real discipline, as has been already observed, implies obedience and respect wherever it is due on one hand, and on the other a just but energetic use of command and responsibility.

15. Every non-commissioned officer and trooper must understand that it is an invariable rule in discipline that in the absence of a superior the whole of the duty or charge which was entrusted to that superior devolves upon the next in rank, so that the chain of responsibility may continue unbroken.

CANDIDATES.

CANDIDATES.

16. All applications for admission into the mounted patrol are to be made to the Inspector General or to the Superintendents.

QUALIFICATIONS.

17. The following qualifications are indispensable :—
 1st. To be under 40 years of age.
 2nd. To read and write.
 3rd. To be free from any bodily complaint, of a strong constitution, and generally suitable and intelligent, according to the judgment of the medical officer by whom the candidate will be examined.

CONDITIONS.

18. The conditions of admission into the force are stated here, that no reason for complaint may exist upon their being enforced. It is to be understood at the same time that the power is reserved to the Inspector General, subject to the approbation of His Excellency the Governor General, to alter or annul any of these conditions, and also to make such new rules as may be found expedient :—

- 1.—Each non-commissioned officer and trooper shall devote his whole time to the service; he must not carry on any trade or calling; nor can his wife be allowed to keep a shop.
- 2.—He shall serve and reside wherever he is ordered.
- 3.—He is to appear in his uniform at all times, unless when leave is given him to wear plain clothes.
- 4.—He shall promptly obey all lawful orders which he may receive from the persons placed in authority over him.
- 5.—He shall conform himself to all the regulations which may be made from time to time, for the good of the service.
- 6.—Such debts, owing by him, as the Inspector General shall direct to be paid, shall be paid by him forthwith.
- 7.—He shall not, upon any occasion, or under any pretence whatsoever, take money or any gratuity from any person without the express permission of the Inspector General.
- 8.—A deduction of one shilling per diem will be made from his pay from the date on which he is certified by the medical officer of the police sick and unfit for duty (except in certain cases), until again certified by him fit for duty.
- 9.—He shall not resign, withdraw, or absent himself from his duties unless allowed to do so, in writing, by the Inspector General, or unless he shall have given to the Inspector General three months previous notice.
- 10.—If he resign, withdraw, or absent himself without such leave, or before the expiration of such notice, he is liable to payment of a penalty of ten pounds, or, in default, to imprisonment with hard labor for three months.
- 11.—Each non-commissioned officer and trooper is liable to immediate dismissal for unfitness, negligence, or misconduct, independently of any other punishment to which he may, by law, be subject.
- 12.—A certificate of good conduct in the service will not be given by the Inspector General under the following circumstances :—
  1. If the party shall have been dismissed the service.
  2. If he shall have been frequently guilty of misconduct or negligence, although of a light nature.
  3. If he shall have been guilty of any misconduct or neglect of a serious nature.
  4. If he shall have served less than twelve months in the patrol.
  5. If the certificate shall not be applied for within six months after the party has left the service.
- 13.—If he be dismissed the force, the whole of his pay then due, or unpaid, is forfeited.
- 14.—Every non-commissioned officer and trooper dismissed from the force, or who shall resign his situation, shall, before he quits the service, deliver up every article of dress and appointments which have been supplied to him: if any of such articles or appointments have been, in the opinion of the Inspector General, improperly used or damaged, a deduction from any pay due to the party shall be made, sufficient to make good the damage, or supply a new article.
15. A non-commissioned officer or trooper guilty of any neglect or violation of duty, is liable to a penalty of five pounds, besides such other punishment as the Inspector General may award.

GENERAL DUTY.

19. The officers and non-commissioned officers in charge of the mounted patrols will make themselves, as soon as possible, acquainted with all the bush roads and pathways in their respective districts and vicinities, so as to enable them to take every advantage of any information they may receive as to the route or hiding places of bushrangers or other offenders, (and the troopers will be required to have the same knowledge.) They will give directions to stop all suspicious persons on the roads, or in the bush, and question them, but they must be cautious and exercise due discretion in doing so; they will cause any suspected house to be visited or watched, if information has been laid.

20. They will be careful to see the men's arms and ammunition placed where they can lay their hands on them at night, for attack or defence, and where they cannot be seized upon by improper characters.

21. On the report of armed bushrangers or robberies in the neighborhood, the road patrol will immediately move out, without waiting for orders, reporting to the Superintendent and head quarters direct, and sending intelligence to adjacent police stations, so as to enable the other parties and police in the vicinity to act in conjunction with them.

22. On the capture of armed bushrangers or other offenders by the patrol, an immediate report will be made to the Superintendent and to head quarters, with any information respecting the capture that may come within their knowledge.

23. All misconduct or irregularities committed by non-commissioned officers and troopers, at or near any station, although by men of different stations, will be immediately reported to the Superintendent and to head quarters.

24. All gallantry and activity displayed by the non-commissioned officers and troopers in the apprehension of bushrangers, &c., will be recorded, and as far as circumstances admit, rewarded.

25. The greatest care is to be observed in the preservation of men's arms, caps, and ammunition, and as much injury is done to the locks by taking them to pieces, it is directed that this shall be done as seldom as possible, and always under the superintendence of a non-commissioned officer.

26. Any non-commissioned officer or trooper contracting debts will be liable to dismissal or other punishment.

27. Non-commissioned officers and troopers are prohibited from keeping stock, or engaging in traffic of any kind.

28. The men will be fully armed on all duties when mounted.

29. The men at out-stations, when in quarters, will invariably parade on Sundays in full dress (with swords), and when practicable attend Divine service.

30. A compliance with this order will be entered in the monthly return of duties.

31. When in quarters there will be a daily parade of horses, and non-commissioned officers will take advantage of those men who have been drilled to instruct their detachments in riding, as well as the carbine, pistol, and sword exercises, on foot and horseback.

32. All orders are to be regularly filed according to date, so as to be easily referred to.

33. The mounted patrol will at all times afford the Magistrates and the police a ready assistance in the execution of their duty; but it is to be distinctly understood that, except in cases of urgent necessity, they are not to be employed in serving summonses, or in performing the duties of ordinary constables.

34. When escorts or orderlies are furnished by the mounted patrol, they will always, when practicable, be relieved at the nearest stations.

35. Whenever the mounted patrol are sent from one station to another they will invariably have the hour on which they commence their march marked on the letter or despatch; if necessary, the rate of travelling will be mentioned, otherwise it will not exceed six miles an hour; and when they are out more than a day or two, or are going to any station, they will have a route or pass, shewing the time to which they and their horses have been rationed.

36. In case of any soldier of the mounted patrol being unfit to perform his duty, from vice or intemperance, or from his horse having a sore back, or being lame from neglect or want of attention on his part, one-half his pay will be stopped during that period; and if repeated, he will be dismissed from the corps.

37. Any trooper, losing his horse, arms, or appointments, will be charged with the full value of the same, in addition to any punishment that may be awarded.

38. It is directed that no goats, pigs, or any thing of a dirty nature shall be kept about the barracks or stables of the mounted patrol. The officers and non-commissioned officers will be held responsible for the cleanliness and regularity of everything under their charge.

39. The men are to keep their own arms and appointments in passing from one division to another, the numbers of which are to correspond.

40. Every man is to have in his possession a currycomb, brush, mane-comb, and sponge, which are to be produced at all inspections of necessities.

41. Whenever officers or non-commissioned officers shall find it requisite to suspend men and report them to head quarters, they will invariably accompany their reports by depositions of the witnesses (signed by them), and also the defence of the prisoner. By this means, the Inspector General will be enabled to award a suitable punishment, or else judge if it be advisable to bring the man before a court of police inquiry.

42. Whenever men die, or become non-effective, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the station will immediately take charge of the spare horses, arms, and appointments, and preserve them in the best order.

43. Non-commissioned officers commanding stations will be held responsible for inspecting and immediately reporting any irregularity they may observe in men and horses arriving at their posts.

44. The men of the mounted patrol are forbidden to appear in the streets, unless dressed strictly according to order; and at all times they are expected to be smart and clean.

45. Non-commissioned officers and men from the out-stations coming to Sydney are always to appear dressed according to order.

46. When men mounted have occasion to pay a compliment, they are to do so by sitting at attention, and looking at the person to be saluted, in a steady and respectful manner.

47. On foot, the men salute in the usual manner.

48. The men of the mounted patrol are not to be employed as servants. When not interfering with duty, the officers are permitted to employ a trooper as groom, but it is to be understood that this man is always to be armed and appointed, and ready for any service that may be required. He is not on any account to be dressed in livery, or to be employed in any way unconnected with the officer's duties.

49. The strictest uniformity is to be observed in the dress of the men, and no alteration is to be allowed in the prescribed pattern, or number of buttons.

50. The men are always to have in possession a pair of Wellington boots, to be worn on occasions of dress.

51. The caps for immediate use are to be kept in the cap pouch; the remainder are to be carefully put up, as a magazine, in the cartridge box.

52. Every non-commissioned officer and trooper shall have a horse, suitable to his weight, told off to him, and for which he will be held in all respects responsible. The man is not to be deprived of his horse, except for misconduct, nor is he on any account, except on urgent necessity, to be changed, without previous reference to head quarters.

53. The greatest attention is to be paid to the grooming of the horses in all situations, and to their neat and clean appearance. The Inspector General expects that the horses of the mounted patrol will always be distinguished by the creditable and soldierlike manner in which they are turned out.

54. The officers are to be most minute in their inspections of the horses; and in every case of neglect to report forthwith to head quarters, in order that the trooper may be punished.

55. Any trooper galloping or ill-using his horse, or having him in bad condition through neglect, will be fined and dismissed; and on a repetition of the offence, dismissed.

56. The duties of stables, the watering and feeding of the horses, are to be attended to at stated hours.

57. When there are secure paddocks the horses are to be kept in them, while off duty, as much as possible, weather permitting; but they are to be daily brought into the stables, and regularly fed, watered, and cleaned.

58. Horses are never to be driven to the paddock, or to water; they are always to be regularly paraded and marched off.

59. The utmost care must be taken to guard against sore backs, which are in no way so readily caused as by removing the saddle, when the back is heated, without adopting the proper precaution of washing with plenty of cold water the part covered by the saddle, instantly on removing; this avoids delay in relieving the horse from the weight, and allows him more time to rest and feed; on halting, or arriving at the end of a march, this precaution is invariably to be adopted.

60. Non-commissioned officers and troopers will be held responsible that their saddles are kept in good repair and fit the horses, so as not to injure their backs.

61. No troop horse is, on any pretence, to be put in harness, or employed to draw a cart.

62. The greatest attention is to be paid to the shoeing of horses at out-stations. Numerous horses are rendered lame and unserviceable from bad shoeing and the ignorance of farriers.

63. When horses are absent from their stations more than three days, forage (except for some special reason) is not to be drawn for them, but it is to be allowed to fall to the credit of the public.

64. The Superintendents of the road patrol will visit each of their stations at least once in each month.

65. The Inspector General calls upon the officers for an active and zealous discharge of their duties, for upon their exertions and example mainly depends the efficiency of the force. The duties of the Superintendents of the road patrol are never ending; their presence is required everywhere, and it is solely by their intelligence, unceasing vigilance, and watchful superintendence of the men, that that protection can be afforded to the country which the public have a right to expect; this can in no way be more effectually carried out than by the constant personal supervision of their different stations, and more than ordinary care in visiting and patrolling localities infested by robbers and bushrangers.

66. A defaulters' book will be kept by the officers, in which will be entered every crime committed by the men, with the date and punishment awarded. On the 1st of each quarter an extract from the defaulters' book will be sent to head quarters for the purpose of being registered.

67. When any man has been incapable of duty for a considerable time from sickness, a special report will be made, in order to his being brought to head quarters for medical treatment, or eventually removed from the force.

68. The particular attention of officers and non-commissioned officers is directed to the different returns required to be furnished to head quarters; if those returns are not carefully prepared, it is impossible for the Inspector General to arrive at a correct knowledge of the state of the mounted patrol, as well as of the stores, ammunition, equipments, and supplies required.

69. All returns and reports are to be made as full as possible, so as to afford every information.

70. In the monthly return of duties performed, the number of men on duty each day—the place gone to—the number of miles travelled—the number of hours on the march—as well as the nature of the duty on which employed, and by whose order, are to be entered;—and any occurrence of an extraordinary nature.

71. The expenses of the corps must be kept within the narrowest limits consistent with efficiency. No expense, except of the most trivial nature, or under circumstances of emergency to justify it, is to be incurred without previous application to, and authority from, head quarters; and in making requisitions the probable amount is to be stated, as well as the work required to be performed.

72. It is expected that the fences of the paddocks, as well as the barracks, will, in a great measure, be kept in order by the men themselves.

73. All contingent accounts must be furnished to head quarters, at latest, on the 20th of the month succeeding the quarter.

74. The pay abstracts of the road patrol are to be sent to head quarters as soon as possible after the last day of each month, in order that the pay may be made available to the men, as early as possible.

75. Should any circumstance prevent a compliance with this order, a report of the cause is to be made to head quarters.

76. On the 1st of each month the Superintendent of the road patrol will send to head quarters a "diary," kept by himself, according to Form No. 4, stating where he has been each day during the preceding month; the duties performed; occurrences; and any steps taken in consequence: detailing what stations he has visited during the month; the state of each; the condition of the horses, and if any of them are lame, or otherwise inefficient; the state of the arms, ammunition, appointments, clothing, and necessaries; the general conduct and discipline of the men, if they appear to have been attentive to their duties, and careful of their horses; if the forage is of good quality, and if there appears to have been any waste or misapplication of it.

77. Officers, except on duty, will not quit their districts without leave of absence.

78. Applications for leave of absence are to be made in time to allow an answer to be returned to them before the leave requested shall commence.

79. The Government horses are to be kept strictly for the use of the troopers.

80. Whenever a fire or disturbance takes place in Sydney, an immediate report will be made to the Inspector General; in the meantime the men will hasten to their barracks, saddle their horses, accoutre, and proceed as directed by their immediate officer.

81. When horses are taken to the forge, the men are always to accompany them, and pay attention to the manner of paring the hoof, shaping the shoe, and driving the nails, in order that they may acquire some degree of knowledge of the proper mode of shoeing, and be able, on an emergency, to put on a cast shoe without risk of laming.

82. The sergeants of the patrols are required to conduct themselves so as to merit the respect of every individual of the force; they must be particularly correct in their personal appearance and dress, as well as in their conduct; zealous and attentive in the performance of their duties, unremittingly watch over the conduct, dress, and carriage of the subordinate non-commissioned officers and troopers; they will be responsible for the drill and instruction of the men,—for strict obedience being paid to the regulations—for the regularity and correctness of the stores and forage,—for the proper care of the horses, and will be required to have a knowledge of all concerning them; and they will diligently assist their respective officers in their duties. The sergeant of the Sydney mounted patrol will report to the Metropolitan Superintendent, every morning at nine o'clock, the presence of the men, and his having visited the troop stables.

83. When horses are out on duty at night, the orderly non-commissioned officer will be held responsible that the horses are properly cleaned and made up before the men go to bed.

84. The several non-commissioned officers in charge will be held responsible that a fortnight's supply of forage is always in store, and if the contractor fails, to report the circumstance. They will be responsible that no forage of an inferior quality is received; and they are expressly forbidden entering into any dealings whatever for or on behalf of the contractor.

85. No forage is to be received in Sydney until inspected by the Metropolitan Superintendent, or a report made to him.

86. The non-commissioned officer on duty at Sydney barracks will see the horses paraded for watering, three times a-day, before feeding; he will take care that horses coming off duty are not taken to water for some time, and until perfectly cool.

87. All saddlery repairs must be inspected both before they go to, and after they come from, the saddler's shop, in order to ascertain that the charge is fair and reasonable.

88. The following certificate will be entered monthly on the back of the officers diary:—

I certify that I have strictly obeyed the regulations of the force, and enforced a due observance of them by all under my command.

89. The following returns will be sent to head quarters immediately after the 1st of the month or quarter.

- (1.) Monthly return:—(Form No. 1.)
- (2.) Quarterly roll and distribution of men and horses:—(Form No. 2.)
- (3.) Quarterly return of defaulters:—(Form No. 3.)
- (4.) Officer's monthly diary:—(Form No. 4.)
- (5.) Annual return of arms, stores, &c.:—(Form No. 5.)

FORMS OF ROUTES.

Form of route for horses:—(Form No. 6.)

Form of route for troopers:—(Form No. 7.)

90. The following will be the different orders of parade for the mounted patrol:—

SUPERANNUATION ALLOWANCE AND GRATUITIES ON LEAVING THE SERVICE.

91. The following are the conditions of superannuation, and the gratuities in certain cases, provided by the Act, 16 Victoria, No. 33, sections 19 and 20 :—

“XIX. The conditions and proportions of such allowance, remuneration, or superannuation shall be as follows, that is to say: where any person applying for the same shall be under sixty years of age, it shall not be lawful to grant any such allowance, compensation, remuneration, or superannuation, unless as hereinafter provided, or upon certificate from some legally qualified medical practitioner, duly appointed in that behalf by the Governor, that such person is incapable, from infirmity of mind or body, to discharge the duties of his office, in which case, if he shall have served with diligence and fidelity for fifteen years, and less than twenty years, it shall be lawful to grant to him, by way of superannuation, an annual sum not exceeding one-half of the salary of his office; if above twenty years and less than twenty-five years, any sum not exceeding two-thirds of such salary; if above twenty-five years and less than thirty years, any such sum not exceeding three-fourths of such salary; and if above thirty years, any such sum not exceeding the whole of such salary; and if such person shall be above sixty years of age, and he shall have served fifteen years and less than twenty years, it shall be lawful, although there shall be no certificate of incapacity from infirmity or injury of body or mind, to grant him by way of superannuation, any annual sum not exceeding one-half of the salary of his office; if he shall have served twenty years and less than twenty-five years, any sum not exceeding two-thirds of such salary; if he shall have served twenty-five years and less than thirty years, any sum not exceeding three-fourths of such salary; and if he shall have served thirty years or upwards, any sum not exceeding the whole of such salary; and if any member of the force shall be disabled by any wound or injury received in the actual execution of the duty of his office, it shall be lawful to grant to him such yearly allowance or remuneration as may in the opinion of the Governor be proportioned to the nature of the injury received, without reference to the length of his service; provided that such allowance or remuneration shall in no case exceed the whole of such salary; and that in calculating the period for which any such person has served, the time he may have served in the police of this Colony previously to the passing of this Act shall be reckoned.

“XX. It shall be lawful for the Governor to order that a gratuity not exceeding one month's pay for each year's service shall be paid to any officer or other member of the police force who shall be duly certified to be unfit for service, and to have served with diligence and fidelity for any number of years not exceeding ten; and a further gratuity of two months' pay for each year he shall have served exceeding ten years, and not exceeding fifteen years.”

92. The case of each member leaving the force and entitled to pension or gratuity is submitted to a Board, who report on the particular merits, and, subject to the provisions of the Act, recommend to his Excellency the Governor General the amount to be awarded.

93. A deduction of two per cent. is made from all pay for the superannuation fund, according to the provisions of the law.

POLICE INQUIRIES.

94. Members of the force offending against the law will be tried before the ordinary tribunals of the Colony. All offences against the subject, which can be legally investigated by the Magistrates, must be brought before Courts of Petty Sessions, a non-commissioned officer of the patrol attending all inquiries into charges affecting the conduct of the men: but all offences against discipline, all breaches of the rules and regulations of the establishment, and all charges affecting the character and credit of the force, but not cognizable by the ordinary tribunals, will be investigated by the Inspector General or the officers of the patrol, in whose discretion it will, in each case, rest, to take evidence on oath, and to have it committed to writing, or not. The decision arrived at and the punishment (if any) awarded, being in every case recorded with the offence charged.

CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS.

95. Any member of the force who shall be guilty of disobedience of the lawful commands of his superior, or who shall strike or offer to strike his superior, or who shall behave with contempt towards his superior, or who shall be guilty of any oppressive or tyrannical conduct towards an inferior, or who shall directly or indirectly receive any bribe or gratuity, or who shall embezzle or misapply any public moneys, arms, ammunition, clothing, appointments, or stores, or who shall take and convert to his own own use any of the necessities belonging to his comrades, or who shall wear any badge or party emblem, or who shall make use of any mutinous words, or be guilty of any mutinous or insubordinate conduct, or who shall knowingly make any false return or statement, or sign any false certificate or be privy thereto, or who shall make any alteration or erasure (for the purpose of fraud or deceit) in any public document, or who shall make any false entry in any official book or return, or who shall wilfully omit to make an entry therein, as to the performance of any duty, matter, or thing which ought to be so entered, or who shall by any concealment or wilful omission attempt to evade the true spirit and meaning of the orders and regulations of the force, or who shall refuse or omit to make a true and faithful return of all fines received by him, or to which he may be entitled, upon any convictions in which he shall have been a prosecutor or witness, or who shall be convicted of any offence by a Court of Justice, or who shall incur and refuse to pay any lawful debt, or who shall be guilty of gambling or drunkenness, or who shall misapply any money or goods levied under any warrant or taken from any prisoner, or who shall give notice, or otherwise cause to be intimated, either directly or indirectly, to any person against whom there shall be a warrant or order, notice thereof, with a view to the evasion of such warrant or order, or who shall divulge any matter which it may be his duty to keep secret, or who, knowing where any offender shall be residing or concealed shall not immediately inform his superior of the same, or shall not take due and prompt measures for the arrest of such person, or who shall wilfully or through negligence allow any prisoner to escape, or who shall use any cruel, harsh, or unnecessary violence towards any prisoner or other person, or who shall leave any post on which he shall have been placed as a sentry or other duty, or who shall absent himself from his district, division, or quarters without leave, or who shall be guilty of any prevarication before any court or upon any inquiry, or who shall behave in any scandalous or infamous manner, or shall be guilty of any disgraceful conduct, or who shall, when on duty, be seen in any public-house when not necessarily there, or who, being necessarily there, shall drink any fermented or spirituous liquor whatever, or who shall, when off duty, frequent public-houses, or any member of the force who shall be guilty of any profane or immoral conduct, or who shall violate any existing order or regulation, or any order or regulation hereafter to be made, shall be dismissed the service, or shall suffer suspension, loss of rank, fine, forfeiture of past services, or additional pay, or such other punishment as the Inspector General shall award, besides any punishment he may be liable to by law.

96. Constables* neglecting to obey the lawful orders, warrants, and commands of a Magistrate are liable to a penalty of five pounds.

97. Any constable who shall be dismissed, or who shall cease to hold and exercise his office, who shall not within one week give up his arms, clothing, &c., is liable to three months' imprisonment and hard labor.

98. Any constable who shall resign his office, or withdraw, or absent himself from the duties thereof, without express permission in writing from the Inspector General, or before the expiration of three months from the date of his notice of intention to resign or withdraw, is liable to a penalty of ten pounds, or three months' imprisonment in default of payment.

99. All disorders and neglects which any constable may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and discipline, though not specified in the foregoing cases, may be punished by order of the Inspector General, by change of station, by fine, or by forfeiture of gratuity or share of gratuity which may at any time be coming to him.

100. Men of the force when committed to prison or suspended, will be struck off pay from the day of their being so committed or suspended, and will not receive any pay during the period of their imprisonment or suspension; and if found guilty and dismissed from the force for the crime for which they were committed or suspended, will not be entitled to pay for any part of the time they may be in confinement or under suspension; but if acquitted of the charge and not dismissed from the force in consequence of the evidence which shall have appeared, they will be entitled to pay for the time they were imprisoned or suspended.

ESCORTS.

101. Escorts form a very important part of the duty of the police. Strict impartiality must be observed in keeping the roster for this duty, and every means that experience, method, regularity, and systematic co-operation can devise, must be brought to bear upon it, in order to render it as light as the necessities of the service will allow.

102. The first consideration, and that which must never be lost sight of by escorts, is the security of the prisoners or commodities placed in their charge: to this all else must be secondary and subordinate. The first point, therefore, to be looked to by the police when employed on this duty, is that the prisoners or property they are to escort are delivered to them with due precautions for safe custody, and this they are to state in the receipt they give on taking them over.

103. The authority that, in the first instance, delivers to any escort prisoners or property, is that to prescribe, and is responsible for, the nature and degree of personal restraint to be imposed on prisoners, and the description of boxes or packages containing, and the fastenings securing, property, and neither should be deviated from, or in any way altered, by the escort, or successive escorts, in whose charge they are placed, unless under circumstances of such necessity as will fully justify the act. In all cases of the kind the escort, or constable in charge of the escort, making the alteration, will report clearly and at length upon the matter.

104. Having thus received their charge, properly secured, it will be their duty, and consequently their responsibility, to guard against that state of security being diminished or impaired; for this purpose they will frequently and closely inspect the handcuffs, chains, &c., placed on the prisoners, and the fastenings of the doors, windows, &c., of any place of confinement: in like manner, as regards property, they will inspect the locks, seals, or other means by which the boxes or packages are secured. Neither by day nor night must their charge be separate from, or lost sight of by an escort.

105. Under existing circumstances, it becomes at times necessary for escorts to stop during the night at public-houses; this, however, must never be done when it can possibly be avoided. When escorts are compelled to stop at public-houses, they are not to drink, nor to allow the prisoners in their charge to drink any fermented or spirituous liquor whatever: they are to place the prisoners or property in the most secure and private room obtainable, and are to adopt all proper and necessary precautions against escape or abstraction.

106. Escorts with prisoners or property in charge are not to call or halt at public-houses during the day; the necessary provisions and refreshments they can procure at, and convey with them from, the place they have stopped at the preceding night.

107. On the march they are not to allow their prisoners to separate or straggle, and, therefore, the rate of marching must be regulated according to the powers of the prisoners.* Neither acquaintances of the prisoners nor other persons are to be allowed to mix with, or accompany, the prisoners and escort.

108. The arms of an escort are invariably to be loaded; they must be kept from wet as much as possible, and always in a state for instant use. After rain they must be examined, and if the powder in the nipples appears in the least damp, the charge must be drawn, the arms thoroughly cleaned, dried, and reloaded. It must, however, be clearly understood, and constantly borne in mind, that nothing short of absolute and inevitable necessity can justify the police in firing upon prisoners endeavoring to escape, or upon other parties attempting a rescue.

109. Unless under the orders of a medical man or a Magistrate, the provisions furnished to prisoners under escort must be confined to the regulated allowance. When extras are allowed by a medical man or Magistrate, at the expense of the prisoner, the money, to procure such, must be delivered, with written instructions, to the constable in charge (his receipt being duly taken), who is to render a full and faithful account of his disbursements, certified by the prisoner, and accompanied by vouchers; if relieved, he is to hand over to the constable in charge of the relieving escort the balance in his hands, taking his receipt; he and those succeeding following the course prescribed for the first.

110. As prisoners are not, on any account, to be left in possession of money when under escort, any belonging to them, and not required for their use, as mentioned in the preceding paragraph, is to be made up into separate sealed packages, marked with the name of the prisoner, and the amount, and these separate parcels (with a list) to be enclosed in a strong sealed cover; a memorandum is to be delivered with this sealed parcel to the constable in charge (his acknowledgment and signature being taken to a duplicate retained): this memorandum and the sealed parcel he is to hand, with the seal unbroken, to the person into whose charge he delivers the prisoners, taking his receipt therefor.

111. In every case the person delivering to an escort prisoners or property, is to give with them a document duly signed, stating the number or kind delivered, retaining a duplicate signed by the constable in charge, who is to hand over to the relieving escort, or to the person to whom he gives over his charge, the original document, getting in return an acknowledgment that he duly delivered the prisoners or property therein set forth.

112. Generally speaking, it is not advisable to employ mounted men to escort prisoners on foot, and doing so is to be as much as possible avoided.

113. Escorts, after having handed over their charge are, except under special circumstances, on their return route to act as day patrols.

* A law has been enacted, providing for the punishment of refractory prisoners, able, but refusing to proceed on foot to their destination.

No. 2.

THE TOWN CLERK to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Town Clerk's Office,
Sydney, 20 February, 1860.*

SIR,

In compliance with the request contained in your letter of the 30th ultimo, I have the honor, by direction of the Right Worshipful the Mayor, to transmit herewith copies of the Omnibus and Hackney Carriage By-Laws, and the Carters and Drivers Act, now in force in this city.

I have, &amp;c.,

THE HONORABLE
THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

CHAS. H. WOOLCOTT,
Town Clerk.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 2.]

OMNIBUS AND HACKNEY CARRIAGE BY-LAWS.

WHEREAS it is necessary that provision should be made for licensing and regulating omnibuses, cars, hackney carriages, and cabs, and the owners, drivers, and conductors thereof, plying for hire within the City of Sydney, and within the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof: Preamble

It is hereby ordered by the Municipal Council for the said City, appointed under the Act 20 Victoria, No. 36, by virtue of the powers and authority in them in this behalf vested by the said Act, that on the nineteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, the following by-laws shall take effect, and they are hereby established to commence on that day accordingly, and all previous existing by-laws on the subject of omnibuses and hackney carriages so plying shall from that day be, and the same are hereby, abrogated.

I. No vehicle shall ply for hire within the said City, or within the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof, until and unless the same be duly licensed in the manner hereinafter described. No vehicle to ply without a license

II. Before any license for plying a vehicle, or to drive or conduct the same shall be granted, the party requiring such license shall obtain from the Town Clerk, free of charge, a requisition in the form of the schedule hereunto annexed marked A, or to the like effect, and shall duly fill up and sign the same and deliver it to the Town Clerk; and in the case of drivers and conductors shall obtain a certificate from two respectable citizens, to the effect that the applicant is of good character and competent to act as such driver or conductor, as the case may be. Form of requisition.

III. No license shall be granted in respect of any vehicle, which, in the opinion of the Mayor and any two Aldermen, shall be unsafe or in bad repair, or otherwise unfit for the accommodation or conveyance of passengers therein, nor until and unless the number of such vehicle be painted thereon, on a plate or plates affixed thereon, outside on the panel of each door of such vehicle, or in such other place or places, and in such manner as the Mayor and any two Aldermen may direct. No license to be granted for vehicle in bad condition, &c.

IV. Licenses for proprietors, drivers, or conductors of vehicles shall be in the form contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked B, or to the like effect. Form of license.

V. Every license granted under these by-laws shall be under the common seal of the Municipal Council, and signed by the Mayor and any one of the Aldermen, and countersigned by the Town Clerk, and shall be in force from the date of such license until the thirty-first day of December next ensuing: and no such license shall include more than one vehicle. Provided that where the licensed vehicle shall be under repair, if the proprietor shall so desire, he may be permitted to substitute another for a period to be thereby specified by indorsement on the license, signed by the Mayor, and countersigned as aforesaid. License to continue in force to December 31st.

VI. For every such license there shall be paid to the City Treasurer annually for the benefit of the City Fund, the several rates set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked C. Fee for License.

VII. No license shall be granted to any person to drive any vehicle unless he shall be twenty-one years of age, nor to act as conductor unless he shall be sixteen years of age. Age of driver or conductor.

VIII. Every conductor licensed under these by-laws shall whilst conducting be compelled to wear a badge (to be furnished to the proprietor of the omnibus or car, free of charge, at the time of the issue of the proprietor's license) and an uniform dress, of such description and in such manner as the Mayor and any two Aldermen may direct. Conductor to wear a badge and uniform.

IX. All licenses shall be made out by the Town Clerk or his assistants, and numbered in such order as he may think fit. License how made out.

X. No proprietor shall be at liberty to part with or lend his license, nor to part with his licensed vehicle to any person, without the knowledge and approval of the Mayor, and the registry of the name of the purchaser in the books of the Town Clerk, and on the license granted for such vehicle; and any proprietor who shall part with his vehicle without such approval and registry, shall be deemed the proprietor thereof, and subject as such to all the provisions of this by-law as fully as if no change of ownership had taken place; and the purchaser purchaser of such vehicle who shall allow the same to be used or to ply for hire without such approval and registry, shall be subject to the same penalty as is imposed by this by-law on a person for plying without a license.

Who shall be deemed owner.

XI. The person or persons in whose name or names a license shall appear to have been obtained, shall be deemed the owner of the vehicle in respect of which the same shall have been taken out.

Proprietors liable for conduct of conductors.

XII. Every proprietor of a licensed omnibus or car shall be held responsible for the good conduct of the conductor or conductors employed by him, and shall be liable for all the penalties which such conductor or conductors may incur under these by-laws.

Change of residence to be indorsed on license

XIII. Whenever any person, named as the proprietor or one of the proprietors of a licensed vehicle, shall change his or her place of abode, he or she shall, within two days next after any such change, give notice thereof in writing, signed by him or her, to the Town Clerk, specifying his or her new place of abode, and the same shall be duly indorsed upon the license granted to such proprietor.

License may be revoked or suspended.

XIV. The license of the proprietor, driver, or conductor of any vehicle may be revoked or suspended by the Mayor, as he shall deem right (after three days' notice in writing given to such proprietor, driver, or conductor, to shew cause why the same should not be revoked or suspended, and opportunity thereupon given to shew such cause), in case either the proprietor, driver or conductor shall have been convicted before any justice of two offences against these by-laws, committed within the period of eight months next preceeding: and a certificate from the chief clerk of any police court in Sydney shall be deemed conclusive evidence of such convictions having taken place.

Driver or conductor not to part with license, proprietor not to employ unlicensed driver or conductor.

XV. No driver or conductor of a licensed vehicle shall lend or part with his license, nor shall the proprietor of any such vehicle employ any unlicensed person as the driver or conductor thereof.

Carriages to be inspected, and if unfit for use may be suspended.

XVI. The Mayor and any two Aldermen shall, as often as they may deem it necessary, cause an inspection to be made of all or of any licensed vehicle, and of the harness, and horse or horses used in drawing the same; and if any such vehicle, horse or horses, or harness, shall at any time be found by them unfit for public use, notice in writing in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule annexed, marked E, shall be given to the proprietor of such vehicle; and if after such notice he shall use or let to hire such vehicle, or suffer the same to be used or let, until the same or the harness, or horse or horses, used in drawing the same as the case may require, shall be in a fit condition for public use, the Mayor may suspend for such time as he may deem proper the license of such vehicle.

How number to be painted on vehicle.

XVII. The number of licenses granted for every omnibus or car in figures not less than four inches in height, and for every hackney carriage or cab in figures not less than two inches in height, and of proportionate breadth—white, upon a ground of black—shall be painted outside on the panel of the door or doors of such vehicles, or on such other part or parts thereof, or on a plate or plates affixed thereon, as the Mayor may direct, and such numbers shall be kept legible and undefaced, during all the time such vehicles shall ply or be used for hire.

Number of carriage and table of fares to be affixed inside carriage.

XVIII. The number of the license of every hackney carriage or cab, on a card or plate six inches by three, printed or painted in clear legible figures, and the table of fares fixed by the Municipal Council shall be affixed at the upper part of the front panel, or in such other place inside of such carriage as the Mayor may direct, and such card or plate shall be kept so affixed, and legible, and undefaced, during all the time the carriage shall ply or be used for hire.

Table of fares which may be varied from time to time.

XIX. No proprietor or driver of any licensed hackney carriage or cab shall demand, receive, or take, more than the several fares set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked D: Provided that the sums so set forth may be varied from time to time by a resolution of the Municipal Council, as occasion may seem to them to require, and notice of such alteration shall be published in the Government Gazette, and in one or more of the daily newspapers.

Half-fare back in certain cases.

XX. Half-fare shall be allowed back to the place from which the carriage was engaged, whenever it shall have been taken from a distance greater than one mile from the corporate limits of the city.

Additional fare after 10 p.m. and before 5 a.m.

XXI. For so much of every drive and distance as may be performed by any licensed carriage after ten o'clock at night and before five o'clock in the morning, an addition to the ordinary fare of one-half shall be paid.

Fare to include fifty pounds of luggage.

XXII. The rates of fare established or to be established under these by-laws shall be inclusive of all charges for luggage under fifty pounds weight.

Fare for detention.

XXIII. If the driver of any carriage hired by distance be kept waiting in the course of the drive or journey above fifteen minutes, except when detained by the hirer for the purpose of returning, as hereinafter provided, he shall receive for every fifteen minutes detention, after the first fifteen minutes, if it be a cab eight-pence, and if a carriage, one shilling.

Fare for sending for but not employing carriage.

XXIV. Any person calling or sending for a carriage, and not further employing the same, shall pay as follows:—For a carriage, one shilling, for a cab, nine-pence, or the fare from the stand or the place from where the carriage or cab was engaged, at the driver's option; and if the person calling the carriage shall detain the same more than five minutes, he shall further pay for any time that the carriage may be detained not exceeding a quarter of an hour, if a carriage nine-pence, if a cab sixpence, and for any time not exceeding a second quarter of an hour, if a carriage nine-pence, and if a cab six-pence, and for any further time in the same proportion.

Distance how computed.

XXV. The distance shall be computed from the stand or place where the carriage was hired, and not from the stand where such carriage may usually ply.

XXVI.

XXVI. So far as concerns fares in these by-laws, any vehicle of whatever form or construction, for which a hackney carriage license has been taken out, if drawn upon four wheels, shall be deemed a hackney carriage, and if drawn upon two wheels, a cab.

What shall be deemed a carriage, what a cab.

XXVII. No proprietor or driver of any licensed hackney carriage or cab, having agreed to take any fare at any time or from any place, shall delay, neglect, or refuse to do so.

No owner or driver shall refuse to take a fare.

XXVIII. Any person having hired a licensed hackney carriage, and not paying the legal fare when demanded, shall on conviction before any Justice forfeit and pay to the owner or driver of such carriage such fare together with such further sum for damages, costs, and expenses for loss of time or otherwise, as the said Justice shall in his discretion think proper.

Penalty for refusing to pay legal fare.

XXIX. Every proprietor or driver of a hackney carriage or cab standing or plying for hire at any public stand appointed by the Municipal Council, shall be deemed disengaged, and be bound accordingly to take immediately any fare, notwithstanding any pre-engagement.

Any carriage standing for hire shall be deemed to be disengaged.

XXX. No omnibus or car shall ply for hire within the said city, or within the prescribed distance therefrom, unless the number of the license of such vehicle, and the number of persons such vehicle is licensed to carry, in words at length in the following form, that is to say—"Licensed to carry inside and outside," together with the names of the particular stands from and to which such omnibus or car plies, be painted on such conspicuous place or places on the outside of such omnibus or car as may be directed by the Mayor and any two Aldermen, in legible letters, white upon a ground of black, at least two inches in length and of proportionate breadth, nor unless the said words be printed on a card or plate six inches by three, in clear, legible letters, and such card or plate be affixed on the upper part of the front panel, or in such other place as the Mayor and any two Aldermen may direct inside of each vehicle; and no driver or conductor of any such omnibus or car shall carry in or by such omnibus or car a greater number of persons than the number so painted and printed thereon, nor ply from or to any other stands than those so as aforesaid printed on such vehicle; nor shall such driver or conductor permit or suffer any person, except the conductor, to be on the footsteps at the back of such omnibus: Provided that when any omnibus shall be altered the same shall be immediately brought for inspection to the Town Hall, and any required alteration in the number of passengers shall be made by indorsement on the license, signed by the Mayor and any two Aldermen, and countersigned by the Town Clerk.

Number of passengers to be carried by omnibus to be painted thereon.

Omnibus being altered, to be brought for inspection.

XXXI. The owner or driver of any licensed vehicle shall not permit the same to stand or ply for hire except at or from an appointed stand.

Not to ply except from public stand.

XXXII. The first omnibus or car that arrives at any public stand shall be the first to start therefrom, and the others in due rotation in the order in which they arrive at the stand.

Starting of omnibuses.

XXXIII. Each omnibus or car that starts from one of its stands must complete its journey to its other stand in reasonable time, without turning round or leaving the proper line of road from one stand to the other.

Completion of journey.

XXXIV. No driver or conductor of any omnibus or car whilst standing at its proper stand, nor on Sundays whilst in any part of the city, or the suburbs thereof, shall endeavor to attract notice by shouting, ringing of bells, blowing of horns, or other noise: Provided that the driver or conductor of any omnibus duly licensed by the Commissioner for Railways (and none other) shall be permitted the use of a whistle whilst such omnibus shall be performing its journey to and from the railway terminus.

Not to attract notice of passengers by whilst on stand nor on Sundays.

XXXV. Railway omnibuses shall be permitted to leave their appointed stands for their journeys to the railway terminus without waiting the lapse of ten minutes between the starting of two omnibuses, the first on the stand leading, and the others following in due succession.

Railway omnibuses to follow each other without waiting.

XXXVI. No omnibus or car proprietor, driver, or conductor, shall demand or recover from any passenger a larger fare than is shewn in large immovable figures on some conspicuous place both outside and inside the omnibus or car as the fare for which such omnibus or car plies.

No demand to be made for larger fare than is shewn in figures inside and outside omnibus.

XXXVII. Any person having taken his seat in an omnibus or car, and not paying the fare when demanded at the termination of his ride, shall on conviction before any Justice forfeit and pay to the owner or driver of such omnibus or car, such amount of over damages, costs, and expenses for loss of time or otherwise, as the said Justice shall in his discretion think proper.

Penalty for refusing to pay.

XXXVIII. The places specified in schedules F and G hereto annexed are hereby respectively appointed public stands for licensed vehicles: Provided that the Municipal Council may from time to time as they shall see fit, by resolution, alter the situations and number of the said stands, and shall publish the same in the New South Wales Government Gazette, and one or more of the daily newspapers.

Public stands.

XXXIX. At every fourth vehicle on every stand, there shall be left a space of at least eight feet for passengers to pass through.

Space of eight feet to be left at every fourth vehicle.

XL. Every vehicle on its arrival at any such public stand, shall be drawn to the end of and be the last of the rank of any vehicles that may be then on such stand, and at every such public stand all vehicles shall be arranged only in single rank.

Order of driving up.

XLI. There shall be an interval of at least ten minutes between the starting of every two omnibuses plying from any stand to the same place, except on the railway stands; and if, after the expiration of ten minutes from the starting of the previous one, the one next in succession occupying the first place in the line, be not prepared to start, it shall be drawn to the last place on such stand, and so on with each succeeding omnibus in their order, to make way for the one which is then prepared to start.

Vehicle not to loiter in the street, nor refuse to give way to another vehicle.

No injury to be done to persons or property.

Driver must keep on or near side of road.

Not to stand longer in street than necessary.

To be placed at side where fare is taken up or set down.

Pace.

Passing each other.

No driver shall carry except to Police Office any violent or noisy persons, &c.

Vehicle and harness to be kept in good order.

Smoking not allowed.

Driver to be in constant attendance.

When lights to be used.

Not to carry more passengers than carriage can conveniently accommodate.

Muzzle and nose-bags to be used.

Property left in vehicle to be handed to owner, or taken to Town Hall.

If not claimed within 14 days how to be disposed of.

Copy of by-laws to be produced upon being asked for.

XLII. No driver of any vehicle shall suffer the same to stand or loiter in any street, or alongside of any other vehicle, nor refuse to give way if he conveniently can to any other vehicle, nor obstruct the driver of any other vehicle in taking up or setting down any person, or wilfully, wrongfully, or forcibly prevent, or endeavor to prevent the driver of any other vehicle from taking a fare.

XLIII. No driver or conductor shall, whilst driving, loading, unloading, or attending any vehicle, or whilst on any public stand, wilfully or negligently do, or cause or suffer to be done, any damage to the person or property of any one, or be guilty of any breach of the peace, misconduct, or misbehaviour, nor make use of any obscene, blasphemous, threatening, abusive, or insulting language, sign, or gesticulation.

XLIV. Every driver of any vehicle shall keep the same on the left or near side of the road, except in case of actual necessity or other sufficient reason for deviation, and shall permit any other vehicle to pass his carriage having a right so to do.

XLV. No driver shall, except whilst standing on his appointed stand, permit his vehicle, with or without horses, to stand in any part of the city longer than may be necessary for loading or unloading, or for taking up or putting down passengers, nor shall cause any obstruction in any part of the city.

XLVI. Every driver, whilst engaged in taking up or putting down any passenger, shall, during such taking up or setting down, place his vehicle as near as conveniently may be to that side of the street, and at a right line with the curb stone, at which the taking up or setting down is required.

XLVII. No vehicle shall be driven through any part of the city, or of the suburbs thereof, at a walking pace, nor at a pace faster than that of a trot.

XLVIII. No omnibus shall pass any other omnibus in the city or suburbs thereof, proceeding in the same direction, if the latter be proceeding on its journey at a pace faster than a walk.

XLIX. No driver or conductor shall carry or knowingly permit to be carried, in any licensed vehicle, except to some police-office or watch-house, any coffin, or deceased human body, or any person in a state of intoxication, or so violently or noisily conducting himself or herself, or otherwise so misbehaving as to occasion any annoyance, or as to disturb the public peace.

L. The proprietor of every licensed vehicle shall at all times, when plying or employed for hire, have the same in good order, with the harness perfect and in good condition, and the glasses and frames of such vehicle whole, and the leathers attached to the frames of sufficient length, and the inside clean and in good repair, and the whole ready and sufficient for duty, with the driver, conductor, and horses competent to perform the trip from stand to stand in due and reasonable time.

LI. No driver or conductor shall smoke any pipe or cigar whilst driving or conducting any licensed vehicle engaged on any fare, nor shall any passenger smoke inside or on any vehicle without the permission of the driver, or against the wish of any other passenger.

LII. The driver or conductor of every vehicle shall be constantly attendant upon the same when standing upon its appointed stand, or whilst plying or engaged for hire, nor shall the driver be at such a distance from his horses as to prevent his having control of the same.

LIII. Every licensed vehicle plying or engaged after sunset shall, except on clear moonlight nights, be provided with lights on either side and keep the same lighted while so plying for hire.

LIV. No driver of any licensed hackney carriage shall be compelled to carry more passengers than his carriage can conveniently accommodate.

LV. The driver of every licensed vehicle shall place a muzzle upon the head of any vicious horse whilst on the stand, and whilst feeding his horses shall use nose-bags to contain the forage, and shall not remove his horses' blinkers during the time of feeding.

LVI. In every case of property being left in any vehicle by the person who used the same, such property shall be delivered up to such person, or shall, within eighteen hours, be taken in the state in which it was found to the Town Hall, and there deposited with the Town Clerk.

LVII. Any property left in any licensed vehicle at any time, and not claimed within fourteen days next afterwards, shall be advertised in one or more of the public journals of the city, and if not claimed within three calendar months after such advertisement, such property shall be disposed of by public auction, and the proceeds, after paying all expenses and such reward to the driver or conductor as the Mayor shall determine, shall be given to such public institution for charitable purposes within the city as he may direct. And if the property shall be claimed by the owner within the said period of three months, the Mayor shall cause the same to be delivered to him on his paying any expenses incurred, and making such satisfaction to the driver or conductor bringing the same as he may think reasonable.

LVIII. The owner of every licensed vehicle at the time of obtaining the license for the same, and every driver of any such vehicle at the time of registering his license, shall, without any charge, have a printed copy of these by-laws delivered to him certified by the signature of the Town Clerk, and having the name of the owner or driver to whom the same is so delivered and the number of the license written distinctly thereupon; and such owners and drivers respectively, shall at all times have such copy, or some other copy of these by-laws, ready to produce, and shall upon request produce the same for perusal to any person having hired such vehicle; and every driver and conductor shall at all times when plying for hire have with him his license, and shall upon demand produce the same to any such person, or to the Inspector of Licensed Vehicles, or to any Justice of the Peace, or Inspector of Police requiring to inspect the same.

LIX. Every owner, driver, or conductor of a vehicle, and every vehicle, shall be deemed to be licensed if a document signed by such owner, driver, or conductor, purporting to be a copy of such license be produced by the Inspector for the time being, and it shall not be necessary to call upon the party prosecuted to produce the original license to enable the prosecutor to give secondary evidence, and every person or persons, and any vehicle shall be deemed to be unlicensed unless it appears on the production of the license register by the Inspector that a license has been duly issued. Proof of license.

LX. Such person or persons as may from time to time be in that behalf appointed by the Municipal Council, shall be the inspector or inspectors during the pleasure of the Municipal Council of all licensed vehicles plying for hire within the city, or the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof; and such inspector or inspectors shall from time to time examine all such vehicles, and shall at all times see that, as far as possible, these by-laws are duly observed. Inspector may be appointed.

LXI. No owner, driver, or conductor of any such vehicle, or any other person, shall obstruct any such inspector in the execution of his said duties. No one shall obstruct him in the discharge of his duties.

LXII. For every offence against the provisions of these by-laws, the offender shall be liable to, and shall pay a penalty not exceeding ten pounds, nor less than ten shillings, to be recovered in a summary way before any justice, as by law is or shall be provided. Penalties for offending against these by-laws.

LXIII. No vehicle which shall be let to hire by special agreement only, or only when bespoken at the stable or residence of its owner, and which shall never publicly take its place on any stand, or ply for hire off the premises of its owner, shall be deemed a licensed vehicle within the meaning of these by-laws; nor shall the owner, driver, or conductor of such vehicle be subject to their provisions in any respect whatever. These by-laws not to apply to vehicles hired from premises of owners, and which never ply from public stands.

LXIV. Wherever the word "vehicle" shall be used in these by-laws, the same shall be understood to apply to either an omnibus, a car, hackney carriage, or cab; and an omnibus shall be meant to be a vehicle upon four wheels drawn by two or more horses, and a car a vehicle upon two wheels, for which omnibus licenses have been taken out; and a hackney carriage shall mean a vehicle upon four wheels, drawn by two or more horses; and a cab a vehicle upon two wheels, for which hackney carriage licenses have been taken out. Interpretation of "vehicle," &c.

CARTERS' AND DRIVERS' ACT.—1854.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the laws relating to carters and drivers, and the proprietors and owners of vehicles, within the limits of the City of Sydney, and to license and regulate such persons as may ply for hire therein or within the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof, and other persons driving vehicles within the limits of the said city and the Sydney Hamlets: Be it enacted by His Excellency the Governor of New South Wales, with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council thereof, as follows:—

I. The following sections and parts of sections of the Act of Council, passed in the fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, and numbered seven, intituled "An Act for regulating the police in the town and port of Sydney, and for removing and preventing nuisance and obstructions therein," namely, so much of the fortieth section of the said Act as applies to the driver of any waggon, wain, cart or dray of any kind, who shall ride upon any such carriage, in any street or public place as aforesaid, not having some person on foot to guide the same (such light carts as are drawn by one horse and driven or guided by reins only excepted), the fifty-fourth, fifty-fifth, fifty-sixth, and so much of the sixtieth, sixty-first, and sixty-third sections of the said recited Act, as applies in any way to licensed carters, or the duties of Justices, either in or out of Sessions, with reference thereto; and so much of the thirty-second clause of the Act of Council, made and passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of Her present Majesty Queen Victoria, and numbered twenty-five, intituled, "An Act to extend to the Sydney Hamlets, certain of the provisions of the Sydney Police Act," as relate to the driving of any waggon, wain, cart or dray of any kind, shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

II. The word "vehicle" in this Act shall include every wain, waggon, cart, or dray plying for hire, drawn by one or more horses or other animals.

III. No vehicle shall ply for hire within the said City of Sydney, or within the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof, until and unless the same be duly licensed by the Commissioners for the said city, appointed under the Act of Council made and passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of Her present Majesty Queen Victoria, and numbered thirty-three, intituled, "An Act to dissolve the Corporation of the City of Sydney, and for the appointment of Commissioners in lieu thereof for a limited period."

IV. Before any license for keeping such vehicle shall be granted, a requisition for the same shall be made at the offices of the Commissioners by the proprietor or one of the proprietors of the vehicle, and signed by him, in the form contained in the Schedule hereunto annexed, marked A, or to the like effect.

V. No license shall be granted in respect of any vehicle, to any person, either as proprietor or driver, unless he shall be of good name, fame, and character, nor in respect of any vehicle which in the opinion of the Commissioners shall be unsafe or in bad repair, or otherwise

4 Wm. IV., No. 7

So much of section 40 as applies to drivers of waggons, &amp;c., and

Sections 54, 55, 56, and so much of 60, 61, and 63, as applies to licensed carters, and duties of Justices in reference thereto, and so much of section 32 of 17th Vict., No. 25, as relates to driving waggons, &amp;c., repealed.

Definition of word "vehicle."

No vehicle to ply without license.

XIV. No proprietor shall be at liberty to part with or lend his or her license, nor to part with his or her licensed vehicle to any person without the knowledge and approval of the Commissioners, and the registry of the name of the purchaser in the books of the Secretary, and on the license granted for such vehicle; and any proprietor who shall part with his or her vehicle without such approval and registry, shall still be deemed the proprietor of such vehicle, and subject as such to all the provisions of this Act, as fully as if no change of ownership had taken place, and the purchaser of such vehicle, who shall allow the same to be used or to ply for hire without such approval and registry, shall be subject to the same penalty as is imposed by this Act on a person plying without a license.

Proprietor shall not part with license, nor licensed vehicle without the approval of the Commissioners.

XV. Whenever the proprietor of any licensed vehicle shall employ or permit any licensed person to act as driver thereof, such proprietor shall require to be delivered to him, and shall retain in his possession the license of such driver during such time as he shall act or be employed as such: and in all cases of complaint affecting such licensed driver, where the proprietor shall be summoned to attend before a Justice, or be lawfully required to produce the driver, he shall produce the license of such driver, and if any driver complained of shall be adjudged guilty of the offence alleged against him, it shall be lawful for the Justice to make an indorsement upon the license of such driver, stating the nature of the offence and the amount of penalty inflicted.

Proprietor's to produce driver's license when called on.

XVI. When any driver shall leave the service of the proprietor, by whom he has been employed, and shall not have been guilty of misconduct in such service, punishable under this Act, such proprietor shall forthwith return to such driver the license belonging to him.

When driver leaves service of proprietor license to be returned.

XVII. No driver of a licensed vehicle shall lend or part with his license, nor shall the proprietor of any such vehicle employ an unlicensed person as the driver thereof.

Driver not to part with license. Proprietor not to employ unlicensed driver.

XVIII. The Commissioners shall, as often as they may deem it necessary, cause an inspection to be made of all licensed vehicles, and of the harness; and if any such vehicle, or harness, shall at any time be found unfit for public use, the Commissioners may cause notice, in writing, in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule annexed, marked E, to be given to the proprietor of such vehicle; and if after such notice he or she shall use or let to hire such vehicle, or suffer the same to be used, or let, until the same, or the harness, as the case may require, shall be in a fit condition for public use, the Commissioners may suspend, for such time as they may deem proper, the license of such vehicle.

Vehicles to be inspected, and if unfit for use may be suspended.

XIX. The number of the license granted for every such vehicle, in figures not less than two inches in height, and of proportionate breadth, white upon a ground of black, shall be painted on such part or parts of the said vehicle, or on a plate or plates affixed thereon, as the Commissioners may direct; and such number shall be kept legible and undefaced during all the time such vehicle shall ply or be used for hire.

How number to be painted on vehicle.

XX. No proprietor or driver of any licensed vehicle shall demand, receive, or take more than the several fares or amounts for hiring to be fixed and determined by the said Commissioners, by any By-laws to be made under and in pursuance of the provisions of this Act:

Provided

Provided that the sums so set forth may be varied from time to time, by a resolution of the Commissioners, as occasion may seem to them to require, and notice of such alteration shall be published in the Government Gazette, the production of which shall be deemed prima facie evidence thereof.

XXI. Any person calling or sending for any licensed vehicle, and not further employing the same, shall pay the sum of two shillings, or the fare or hire from the stand, or from the place where the vehicle was engaged, at the driver's option; and if the person calling the vehicle shall detain the same, he shall further pay, for any time that the vehicle may be detained not exceeding a quarter of an hour, the sum of one shilling, and for any time not exceeding a second quarter of an hour the sum of sixpence, and for any further time in the same proportion.

Fare for sending for but not employing vehicle.

XXII. The distance shall be computed from the stand or place where the vehicle was hired.

Distance how computed.

XXIII. No proprietor or driver of any licensed vehicle, having agreed to take any fare or hiring at any time or from any place, shall delay, neglect, or refuse to do so.

No owner or driver shall refuse to take a fare.

XXIV. Any person having hired a vehicle, and not paying the legal fare when demanded, shall, on conviction before any Justice or Commissioner, forfeit and pay to the owner or driver of such vehicle, double the amount of the said fare or hiring, together with such damages, costs, and expenses for loss of time or otherwise, as the said Justice or Commissioner shall, in his discretion, think proper.

Penalty for refusing to pay legal fare.

XXV. The Commissioners shall have power to appoint stands for the vehicles referred to in this Act, and from time to time, as they shall see fit, by resolution, to alter the situations and number of the said stands, and the publication of the same in the New South Wales Government Gazette shall be sufficient evidence thereof.

Public stands.

XXVI. At every fourth vehicle on any stand there shall be left a space of at least eight feet for passengers to pass through.

At every fourth vehicle, space of eight feet to be left.

XXVII. Licensed vehicles shall take their stations on the stand in the order of their arrival, and when any vehicle shall be called or driven off any stand, the vehicle immediately behind shall draw up to the place vacated, and any other vehicle behind in the like order.

XXVIII. Every proprietor or driver of a licensed vehicle standing or plying for hire at any public stand appointed by the Commissioners, shall be deemed disengaged, and be bound accordingly to take immediately any fare or hiring notwithstanding any pre-engagement.

Any vehicle standing for hire shall be deemed to be disengaged.

XXIX. No driver of any licensed vehicle shall suffer the same to stand for hire across any street or alongside of any other vehicle, nor refuse to give way, if he conveniently can to any other vehicle, nor obstruct the driver of any other vehicle in loading or unloading any goods or merchandize, nor wilfully, wrongfully, or forcibly prevent, or endeavor to prevent, the driver of any vehicle from taking a fare or hiring.

Vehicle not to stand across any street or alongside another vehicle, or to obstruct another driver from taking a fare.

XXX. No driver shall at any time whilst driving, loading, unloading, or attending any vehicle, wilfully or negligently do, or cause or suffer to be done, any damage to the person or property of any one, or be guilty of any breach of the peace, misconduct, or misbehaviour whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned in any respect in such employment.

No injury to be done by driver to persons or property.

XXXI. Every person having the care or conduct of any vehicle shall keep the same on the left or near side of the road, except in case of actual necessity or other sufficient reason for deviation, and shall permit any person or other vehicle to pass his vehicle having a right so to do.

Driver must keep on near side of road.

XXXII. No driver shall permit his vehicle, with or without horses, to stand in any part of the City longer than may be necessary for loading or unloading, except while standing for hire in some lawful place for that purpose or waiting for the return of the hirer.

Vehicle not to stand longer than necessary.

XXXIII. Every driver whilst engaged in loading or unloading his vehicle, shall place the same as near as conveniently may be, to that side of the street at which the loading or unloading is required.

Vehicle to be placed at side where fare is loaded or unloaded.

XXXIV. No driver shall, while having the care of any vehicle, use any obscene or blasphemous language, or any threatening, abusive, or insulting words, or become drunk whilst in charge thereof.

No obscene or blasphemous language to be used by driver.

XXXV. The proprietor of every licensed vehicle shall at all times, when plying or employed for hire, have the same in good order, with the harness perfect and in good condition, and the whole ready and sufficient for duty, with the driver and horses, or horse, competent to perform any drive or distance in due time that may be reasonably required.

Vehicle and harness to be kept in good order.

XXXVI. No licensed owner or driver, or any other person having the care and charge of any vehicle as hereinbefore described, whether licensed or otherwise, and drawn by one horse or other animal only, shall ride on such vehicle unless he shall be provided with reins to guide such one horse or other animal, and provided that the animal drawing the same shall not be allowed to proceed out of a walking pace, and no licensed owner or driver or any other person having the care and charge of any vehicle whether licensed or otherwise and drawn by two or more horses shall ride on such vehicle within the limits of the City of Sydney and the Sydney Hamlets.

No person to ride on vehicle without reins.

XXXVII. Any person committing any offence against the provisions of the previous section may be apprehended by any constable or police officer, and conveyed before a Justice of the Peace to be dealt with according to law.

Persons offending against provisions of previous section may be apprehended.

XXXVIII. The driver of every vehicle shall be constantly attendant on the same when plying for hire on any public stand or engaged for hire.

Powers given by 11 Vict., No. 21, to Sydney City Council, as to hackney carriages, hereby given to Sydney Commissioners.

Commissioners may make rules, &c., for regulating persons, vehicles, and horses licensed under this Act.

and may enforce the same by penalties.

Commissioners to hear and decide complaints.

XXXIX. The driver of every licensed vehicle shall place a muzzle upon the head of any vicious horse whilst on the stand waiting for hire.

XL. Every driver who shall feed his horses whilst on the stand waiting for hire, shall use nose-bags to contain the forage, and shall not remove his horses' winkers during the time of feeding.

XLI. In every case of goods or merchandize being left in any licensed vehicle or with the driver thereof by the person who hired the same, such property shall be delivered up to such person, or shall within eighteen hours be taken in the state in which it was found to the Commissioners' Office and there deposited.

XLII. Any property left in or upon any licensed vehicle at any time, and not claimed within fourteen days next afterwards, shall be advertised in one or more of the public journals of the City; and if not claimed within twelve calendar months after such advertisement, such property or goods shall be disposed of by public auction, and the proceeds after paying all expenses, and such reward to the driver as the Commissioners shall determine, shall be given to such public institution for charitable purposes within the City as they may direct: And if the property shall be claimed by the owner within the said period of twelve months, the Commissioners shall cause the same to be delivered to him on his paying any expenses incurred, and making such satisfaction to the driver bringing the same as they may think reasonable.

XLIII. Such person or persons as may from time to time, be in that behalf appointed by the Commissioners, shall be the Inspector or Inspectors, during the pleasure of the Commissioners, of all vehicles licensed under this Act, plying for hire within the City, or the distance of eight miles from the corporate limits thereof; and such Inspector or Inspectors shall, from time to time, examine all such vehicles, and shall at all times see that, as far as possible, this Act, and all and every the By-laws to be made in pursuance hereof, are duly observed.

XLIV. No owner or driver of any such vehicle, or any other person, shall obstruct any such Inspector in the execution of his said duties.

XLV. For every offence against any of the provisions of this Act, or any By-laws which may be made in pursuance of the provisions thereof, the offender shall be liable to and shall pay a penalty not exceeding Ten Pounds nor less than Ten Shillings, to be recovered in a summary way, before any Justice or Commissioner as by law or this Act is or shall be provided.

XLVI. It is hereby declared and enacted, that all and every the powers and privileges given to and conferred on the Council of the City of Sydney by the Act of the Governor and Legislative Council, made and passed in the eleventh year of the reign of Her present Majesty Queen Victoria, and numbered twenty-one, for the licensing and regulating hackney carriages within the City of Sydney, and its vicinity, and the conduct of the owners and drivers thereof, are hereby given to and conferred on the Commissioners for the City of Sydney; and all by-laws now or hereafter to be made in pursuance of the said Act shall be valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

XLVII. It shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners from time to time, and at all times, to make such general rules, orders, and by-laws for the better ordering and regulating of all and singular the persons, vehicles, and horses required to be licensed under this Act, as in the judgment of the said Commissioners may be required for public propriety, safety, accommodation, or convenience; and from time to time to alter, vary, amend, or repeal all or any of such rules, orders, and by-laws; provided that such rules, orders, and by-laws, when so made or altered, shall not be repugnant to the provisions of this Act: And it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners to fix and ordain therein such reasonable penalties and forfeitures as to them may seem fit for all offences against any breaches of such rules, orders, and by-laws, such penalties and forfeitures not to exceed Ten Pounds for every one offence, and to subject offenders against same to imprisonment in the common gaol or house of correction for the breach of any such rule, order, or by-law, there to be kept for any time not exceeding thirty days: And it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners, in their discretion, to make void or suspend the license or licenses of every offender who shall be convicted of any two offences against this Act or the said by-laws, unless the party before whom such conviction shall be had, against such offender shall, at the time of such conviction, state in writing on his license that such punishment as he has adjudged against such offender shall be "without prejudice to his license:" Provided always that such new rules, orders, and by-laws and every alteration, amendment, or repeal of the same, shall be approved of by the Governor of the said Colony: and that after such rules, orders, and by-laws, or any alterations, amendment or repeal of the same shall have been so made and approved of, the same shall be published in the New South Wales Government Gazette; and all such rules, orders and by-laws, and every alteration, amendment and repeal of the same, when approved of as aforesaid, shall be good and valid, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if the same were particularly mentioned, expressed, and enacted in this present Act.

XLVIII. The Commissioners for the said City, or any one of them, shall be, and are hereby authorised and empowered to hear and determine, in a summary way, at such place or office as they may at the time use or occupy, all offences or supposed offences against this Act, or the last recited Act, made and passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of Her present Majesty Queen Victoria, and numbered twenty-one, or the by-laws now made, or hereafter to be made, in pursuance of the provisions of the said Acts, and to make such order or adjudication as to them shall seem meet, and such order or adjudication shall have the same force and effect, and be as final and conclusive as though the same had been made by any any Justice or Justices of the said Colony, and shall be enforced in like manner and in pursuance of the provisions of the law in force for regulating proceedings before Justices of the Peace in a summary way; and any person convicted of any offence against the said Acts or any by-law now or hereafter to be made in pursuance hereof shall have the same right to apply for a writ of prohibition as though the complaint had been heard and determined by any Justice or Justices, and all such proceedings before the said Commissioners shall be held in a place open to the public at the time.

XLIX. In citing this Act or the last recited Act in any Act of Council, or in any instrument, document, or proceeding, it shall be sufficient to use the expressions, "The 'Carters' and Drivers' Act of 1854," "The Hackney Carriage Act of 1847," and in any process for enforcing the remedies or penalties given or imposed by this Act, or the Hackney Carriage Act of 1847, or any by-law now made or hereafter to be made in pursuance of the provisions thereof, it shall be sufficient, without specifying more particularly the cause of complaint or offence, to refer by number according to the copies of the Act printed by the Government Printer, to the section or sections under which the proceeding is taken, or to the by-law and the number of the sections thereof as published in the New South Wales Government Gazette.

How this Act,
21, may be cited.

No. 1.

W. FORSTER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

SIR,

Having just received a communication, dated August 3, and signed by twenty-eight persons representing themselves, and who, I have no doubt, are residents at or near Mielago, in the District of Queanbeyan, complaining of the unprotected state of the locality in question, which, in the words of my correspondents, has been "long left without any protection whatever, although being on the mail road leading from Queanbeyan to Cooma, and distant from each place thirty miles," and requesting that steps may be taken to provide for the deficiency complained of; I do myself the honor to bring the matter under your notice, and respectfully to recommend that a sufficient sum may be placed on the Estimates to meet the necessities of the case, which I believe to have been not in the least exaggerated by my correspondents, who further state, as an additional reason for their request, that "the crime of cattle stealing, which keeps daily increasing in this portion of the district as well as other places, requires looking after." I have the honor also to suggest, that the frequent mail robberies which have recently occurred in the interior of the Colony render it advisable not to leave so large an extent of the Main Southern Road to the important district of Maneroo without police.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM FORSTER.

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

The Inspector General of Police.

C. C.

B.C., 20 Aug.

A recommendation of the same nature as this was made by the Queanbeyan Bench, but as the Chief Secretary in re-casting the Estimates of 1860, with a view to reducing the Police Expenditure, has taken off two ordinary constables from the existing strength of the Queanbeyan Police, no increase can be entertained.

Colonial Secretary's Office,

Sydney, 2 September, 1859.

GENTLEMEN,

In transmitting herewith a copy of a letter from Mr. Forster, M. P., relative to the unprotected state of Mielago in your district, I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to inquire whether you cannot station a constable at that place.

2. I am desired at the same time to acquaint you, that, in preparing the Estimates for the next year, with a view to the reduction of the police expenditure, a reduction of two ordinary constables will be made in the strength of your Police Establishment.

I have, &c.,

8 September, 1859.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of 2nd instant, inquiring whether we cannot station a constable at Mielago, and conveying a communication from Mr. Forster, M. P., relative to the unprotected state of that part of this district,—

We do ourselves the honor to state, for your information, we do not feel justified in detaching one of four constables stationed at Queanbeyan on the duty adverted to, that number being no more than commensurate with the demands of the town, and the performance of the duties pertaining to the Police Office and chief lock-up, as we took occasion to intimate in our letter of 29 July to the Inspector General of Police. We may observe that, by same opportunity, we took leave to recommend that addition be made to the force for the ensuing year, to the extent of one district and one ordinary constable at Mielago, and one district constable at Bungendore.

SIR,

With reference to previous correspondence on the same subject, I have to acquaint you that a communication has been received from the Admiralty, reporting that Captain Loring, Commanding Her Majesty's Ship "Iris," has been appointed a Commodore of the Second Class, and that the Australian Station has been made a separate Naval Command, independent of the Commanders-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Ships in the East Indies and China.

It is further stated, that in addition to the ships noted in the margin, and which are mentioned by Captain Loring as numerically sufficient for the service which they have to perform, the Lords Commissioners have attached the "Pelorus," a Screw Corvette of 21 guns, to the Australian Station.

(DESPATCH RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 24 January, 1860.

(No. 35.)

Downing-street,
10 November, 1859.

SIR,

I have much pleasure in informing you, that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have been pleased, at my recommendation, to place at the disposal of the Secretary of State, annually, some nominations to Naval Cadetships, in favor of candidates recommended to the Secretary of State for this purpose by the Governors of the principal Australian Colonies. The number of such nominations which can be conceded is necessarily very limited, but it will enable me to present to you, in each year, one nomination, to be made in favor of any candidate who may appear to you fully eligible for introduction into Her Majesty's Naval Service.

The enclosed extract of the letter from the Admiralty will place you in possession of some particulars about admission and subsequent training, and you will perceive that further regulations will be hereafter supplied.

I have, &c.,
NEWCASTLE.

GOVERNOR SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.,
&c.,      &c.,      &c.,

*EXTRACT of a Letter from Mr. Romaine to Mr. Merivale, dated Admiralty, 15
October, 1859.*

"The candidates will be allowed to undergo a preliminary examination (conducted strictly in accordance with the regulations) on board the senior officer's ship on the station; but in the event of their being found qualified, it will still be necessary that they should be sent to this country, to be entered on board the Training Ship at Portsmouth where they will be subject to the same regulations as all other cadets.

"I am further to acquaint you, that the age for admission is about to be altered, and the regulations, generally, are now undergoing revision, but my Lords will supply you with copies, so soon as they shall have been finally decided upon."

NEW SOUTH WALES.

NAVAL CADETSHIPS IN THE COLONY.

(FURTHER DESPATCH, ENCLOSING NEW REGULATIONS.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Downing-street,

1 January, 1860.

SIR,

I transmit to you, herewith, copies of new regulations which have been issued by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty affecting candidates for Naval Cadetships. These regulations will come into operation on 1st April next.

I have, &amp;c.,

NEWCASTLE.

[Enclosure.]

NAVAL CADETS.

THE following Regulations will come into operation in regard to persons nominated to Naval Cadetships on or after the 1st of April, 1860.

I. No person will be nominated to a Cadetship in the Royal Navy who shall be under 12 or above 14 years of age at the time of his first Examination.*

II. Every Candidate, on obtaining a nomination, will be required to pass an Examination at the Royal Naval College at Portsmouth, within three months of nomination. In the special cases of nominations granted to the sons of natives of Her Majesty's Colonies, a Candidate will be allowed to pass a preliminary examination on board the Flag or Senior Officer's Ship on the Station; but such examination must be passed in strict accordance with these regulations; and should the Candidate be found qualified, it will still be necessary that he should be sent to England to be entered on board a Training Ship, where he will be subject to the same regulations as other Cadets.

III. The Candidate must produce a Certificate of Birth, or declaration thereof made before a Magistrate.

IV. The Candidate must be in good health and fit for the Service, that is, free from impediment of speech, defect of vision, rupture, or other physical inefficiency.

Candidates will be required—

1. To write English correctly from dictation, and in a legible hand.
2. To read, translate, and parse an easy passage from Latin or from some Foreign Living Language.

N.B.—The aid of a Dictionary will be allowed for these Translations.

And to have a satisfactory knowledge of—

3. The leading facts of Scripture and English history.
4. Modern geography, in so far as relates to a knowledge of the principal countries, capitals, mountains, and rivers. To be able to point out the position of a place on a Map when its latitude and longitude is given.
5. Arithmetic, including proportion, and a fair knowledge of vulgar and decimal fractions.
6. A knowledge of the definitions and axioms of the first book of Euclid.

As drawing will prove a most useful qualification for Naval Officers, it is recommended that Candidates for the Service should be instructed therein.

V.

* These Examinations will take place on the first Wednesdays in the months of March, June, September, and December.

V. If the Candidate be found unqualified at his first examination, he will be allowed a second trial at the next Quarterly Examination. Should he not pass this second Examination he will be finally rejected.

VI. If the Candidate succeeds in passing the required Examination, he will be at once appointed to a Training Ship for the purpose of instruction, rigging of ships, seamanship, the use of nautical instruments, &c.

List of instruments and books which each Cadet will be required to have on entry:—

Sextant.

Case of mathematical instruments, containing a good protractor.

Spy-glass.

French grammar and a dictionary containing sea terms.

A book on navigation.

Euclid's elements.

Book of geography. (Sullivan's 2s. Ed.)

Book on use of mathematical and nautical instruments.

A book on the steam-engine.

Colenso's arithmetic and algebra.

Jean's Trigonometry.

Boyd's Naval Cadet's Manual.

The Ship's Library will contain books of instruction.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 15 December, 1859.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE SYDNEY MINT to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 9 August, 1854.

SIR,

Adverting to your verbal instructions of the 13th ultimo, authorising me to commence the erection of the Mint Buildings, I have the honor to state that, as it is desirable that the operations of the work should be pursued with vigour, and every effort made to complete the buildings as early as possible, it is very necessary that the whole of the offices and premises lately occupied by the Military Staff should be given over to this Department, and arrangements made for the future office accommodation of the Military officers and persons now occupying a portion of these premises.

2. I therefore beg to bring the same under your notice, and would feel obliged by your giving directions accordingly.

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 15th September last, No. 297, respecting the appropriation of the premises in Macquarie-street for Mint purposes, and instructing me to procure the necessary accommodation for the Staff Officers;—

2. I do myself the honor to state, that after making every inquiry, and repeatedly advertising, it has been found impossible to obtain suitable premises for the offices in question. It has been proposed, therefore, with the concurrence of the Brigade Major, to rent a residence for him, and to appropriate the building in Bent-street, now occupied by him as quarters, for the offices of the Military Staff.

3. A house at Potts' Point, recently vacated by Colonel Gibbes, has been offered, and is approved by Captain Jenner. It is stated in the enclosed letter that the proprietor is putting it into good repair, and when the works specified are completed I consider it will be

SIR,

With reference to my letter of the 28th September last, I am now directed by His Excellency the Governor General to inform you, that an arrangement proposed by the Colonial Architect had been sanctioned for converting the present Brigade Major's Quarters into Staff Offices, and for providing a residence for that officer at Potts' Point.

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 9th instant, stating that His Excellency the Governor General had sanctioned the arrangement proposed by the Colonial Architect, for converting the present Brigade Major's Quarters into Staff Offices, and for providing a residence for that officer at Potts' Point, I do myself the honor, by direction of the Colonel Commanding the Troops, to state, that before that officer vacates his present house it is very desirable that it should be understood that at any future time the Major of Brigade shall, if dissatisfied with the description of quarters selected for him, or at the rate of lodging allowance voted by Government in lieu of quarters, have the option of resuming possession of the premises in Bent-street.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, stating, by direction of the Colonel Commanding the Troops, that before the Brigade Major vacates his present residence for the house provided for him at Potts' Point it is desirable that it should be understood that at any future time the Major of Brigade shall, if dissatisfied with the description of quarters selected for him, or with the rate of lodging allowance voted by the Legislative Council in lieu of quarters, have the option of resuming possession of the premises in Bent-street.

2. Having laid your communication before the Governor General, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Colonel Commanding, that this is a very different application from that which His Excellency understood you proposed to make, namely, that in the event of the Legislative Council refusing at any future period to provide a quarter for the Brigade Major equal to the one to be vacated by him, and to be appropriated as Military Staff Offices instead of those given up to the Mint, the Brigade Major should be allowed to resume his present quarters in Bent-street, Staff Offices being provided elsewhere; to which latter arrangement His Excellency has no objection.

SIR,

In reply to your letter of the 31st ultimo, requesting that the Secretary for Land and Public Works may be informed of the grounds on which a private residence has been provided at the public cost for the Brigade Major, I am directed to state that the Staff Offices in Macquarie-street being, it appears, required for the Mint, an arrangement was made in 1854 by which the building occupied as the Brigade Major's Quarters in Bent-street was given up for Staff Offices, on a residence being provided for the Major of Brigade. This will be further explained by the enclosed papers and memorandum referring to them, dated 28th August, 1855, which I am directed to transmit for the information of Mr. Secretary Hay.

I would further beg to call your attention to a letter on the subject from the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, dated 22nd November, 1854, by which you will perceive it is provided "that in the event of the Legislative Council refusing at any future period to provide quarters for the Brigade Major equal to the one to be vacated by him, and to be appropriated as Military Staff Offices, instead of those given up to the Mint, the Brigade Major should be allowed to resume his present quarters in Bent-street, Staff Offices being provided elsewhere."

In reply, I am desired to inform you that, before applying to Parliament for a lodging allowance for you, the Government wishes to have a certificate that you cannot be provided with quarters in the Victoria Barracks; the Legislative Assembly having recently intimated that a lodging allowance should not be charged while accommodation could be had there. The Imperial Government having expressed an intention of handing over all Military Buildings to the Colony, the Colonial Legislature claims the right to decide upon their appropriation, so far as it can be carried out without setting aside Military Regulations.

2. The Executive Council, to whom your communication has been referred, having deliberated upon the subject in question, still adhered to the opinion communicated to you in my letter of the 25th January last, that the appropriation of the building in Bent-street as a residence would be likely to lead to inconvenience in making those general arrangements that will become necessary on the transfer of the above, with other buildings, from the Home to the Colonial Government; but while in this respect the Council were unable to recommend a compliance with the desire of the Colonel Commanding, and while, in the face of a direct vote of the Legislative Assembly, they were not prepared to recommend that any payments should be made on account of lodging allowance to you, they were of opinion that the matter was one which might, with propriety, be submitted to Parliament, for re-consideration; and they advised that the Legislative Assembly be again invited to make the necessary provision in a Supplementary Estimate for the year.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd ultimo, enclosing correspondence on the subject of lodging allowance in lieu of quarters to the Major of Brigade at Sydney, as the Colonial Government had made no such provision in the Estimates for the present year, and submitting that that officer should receive lodging allowance, at the rate of £200 per annum, from the 10th December, 1858.

In reply, I beg to inform you that the Major General Commanding is pleased to approve of the above arrangement; and that the amount be paid from the Military Chest, pending the re-consideration of the question by the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

No. 1.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

(No. 6.)

Downing-street,

11 March, 1858.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge your Despatch No. 127, of the 14th August, 1856, forwarding copy of proceedings of yourself and Council, with reference to the general question of the Defence of the Town and Harbour of Sydney. In the same Despatch you lay before Her Majesty's Government certain proposals as to the manner in which the pay and maintenance of the Troops required for their defence should be henceforth provided.

2. I find that Her Majesty's former advisers had given to those proposals their fullest attention; and the delay in answering your Despatch has arisen only out of the importance and extent of the subject, involving as it does the general principles which must regulate the military relations between the United Kingdom and the Colonies under free institutions.

3. Her Majesty's Government assume, on the authority of your experience, that your observations respecting the obstacles which at present oppose the formation of a Militia Force for the defence of the Colony are well founded. This being the case, the principle laid down by Lord Grey, in his Despatch to Sir Charles Fitz Roy of the 21st November, 1848, appears to them the sound one. The force to be maintained by this Country in the Australian Colonies should be that which may be reasonably required for defence against possible aggression; and (to adopt Lord Grey's words) "if a greater amount of force is required, the local Legislature should make provision for the pay and allowances of an additional number of Her Majesty's regular Army"; that is to say, the Imperial Government is prepared to execute the duty allotted to it of serving distant possessions against foreign enemies; while if troops are required by any Colony beyond the amount necessary for this purpose, they will readily assist to the best of their ability in furnishing those troops, if they can be spared, and provided the Colony will pay for them.

4. Your proposal is that the pay and allowances of the troops should be halved between the Mother Country and the Colony. This proposal, taken as a method whereby the principle above stated may be carried in a broad and general way into execution, has the great merit of simplicity, and being calculated to dispense with minute changes of plan, and to obviate disputes; but it would seem difficult to adopt this rule unless your own further proposal were incorporated with it—that the Colony should possess, through the vote of its Legislature, the responsibility of determining the amount of force which should be maintained in it, whether in peace or in war. Her Majesty's Government do not, as at present advised, see in what manner this suggestion could be adopted, without compromising that independent action of the central authority of the Empire. The Executive in this country having full information as to its available force, and as to the different calls on that force in the various portions of the Empire, can alone be in a position to decide what force is required, and what force can be spared, for purposes of defence against foreign aggression, in each particular point. If every Colony were to assert a voice in this matter, as in your proposal it would have to do, I do not see in what manner the general defensive arrangements of the Empire could be conducted.

5. Her Majesty's former advisers, therefore, came to the opinion (from which, so far as I have yet been able to consider the subject, I see no reason to dissent), that, for the present, it was better not to alter the existing system, whatever might be the temporary inconveniences which the necessity of varying arrangements, from time to time, might lead. Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that this country should continue to maintain the force at present maintained by it in Sydney, namely,—the four companies of Infantry. They have no objection to the Colony's retaining, at present, the additional two companies of Infantry and the one of Artillery, if the Colony is prepared to pay for them, as hitherto. They count on the liberality of the Colony for continuance of those extra allowances to all the eight* companies to which the comparative dearness of the Colony has given rise, and concerning which, indeed, no question is raised in your Despatch.

6. Further, they concur in your view, that the expense of the construction and maintenance of Military works and building should be defrayed by the Colony, and consequently, that the buildings, such as barracks, stores, magazines, &c., should be transferred to the Colonial Government. The Officer in command of the Forces will be placed in communication with yourself, in order to the execution of this portion of the arrangement.

7. With regard to that portion of your Despatch which relates to the Naval Defences of the Colony, I cannot do better than communicate to you a letter addressed to this Department by order of the Lords of the Admiralty, in January, 1857, in which the whole subject is fully discussed. Her Majesty's Government are prepared, generally, to adopt the views of their Lordships, and hope that you may be able, with the advice of your Council, to arrive at some practical conclusion, which may be in accordance with these views.

I have, &c.,

GOVERNOR

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.,
&c., &c., &c.

STANLEY.

[Enclosure in No. 1.]

THE SECRETARY TO THE ADMIRALTY to MR. MERIVALE.

Admiralty, 24 January, 1857.

Sir,

Having laid before my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty your letter of the 23rd ultimo, enclosing a Despatch from Sir William Denison, on the subject of the naval and military defence of New South Wales, and the portion of the expense thereof to be borne by that Colony, I am commanded by their Lordships to acquaint you, for the information of Mr. Secretary Labouchere, that they are glad to have received this Despatch in extenso, because although a considerable portion of it refers only to military matters, that portion of the subject is very important in its bearings upon the general question; and although Sir William Denison's Despatch relates to New South Wales only, the question of the service to be performed by Her Majesty's naval and military forces for colonial defences and colonial purposes generally, is in fact raised by this Despatch.

It is not the province of this department to enter into the question as regards the principle, as to whether any or what part of the expense for defence against an enemy is to be borne by the Mother Country and the Colonies respectively; and my Lords will therefore abstain from any comment on Sir William Denison's Despatch, and proceed to the consideration of the question only so far as regards the naval service, on the assumption that a certain portion of expense is to be borne by the Colonies, both for their own internal purposes, and for their exterior defence. They wish, however, to preface their observations by one remark, which will more particularly apply to the naval defence of our colonies, though it is applicable to other questions connected with service by sea, namely, that it is impossible to treat separately each colony of a group, without reference to the other Colonies in the immediate neighbourhood. The same observation may be made as regards military operations by land, but in a very much less degree; an attack by an enemy's force may be so made, as to require the co-operation of the troops in different Colonies in order to resist it, but in general the land defence must be purely local by garrisons, or a body of men covering and and protecting the town or points assailed. This is not the case as regards the service at sea, and there is therefore a difficulty in apportioning the expense of naval defence, which hardly exists as to the land defences of our Colonies. My Lords wished to call Mr. Labouchere's attention to this point at the commencement of their observations, as many questions are more or less affected by this consideration.

They now proceed to questions of 1st "communication," that is to say, the transmission of letters, troops, or stores, which services are usually performed by a Government.

As regards the former, the Mails of this country are, with only one or two (and those temporary) exceptions, performed by private persons under contract, and the latter services are also generally executed by the vessels of private owners, manned and navigated by them; sometimes the whole vessel is so hired, sometimes both men and stores are sent in vessels carrying other freight, under arrangements between the Government and the owners.

My Lords see no reason why similar services in the Colonies should not be provided for in a similar manner by the Colonial Governments; vessels were recently taken up at Halifax to move troops, and in such a case as sending a detachment from one part of a colony to another, my Lords see no reason why the same course should not be pursued.

If the Colony thinks it more advantageous to have a Colonial vessel belonging to the Government, to be employed for these purposes, my Lords see no reason against it. Mr. Labouchere will of course observe, that if this service extends beyond the limits of any one Colony, e. g., between Sydney and Hobart Town, the concurrence of two or more Colonies or Governments is necessary, if it is not to be done in such cases by this Country.

At present a sum of money is taken in the transport vote for intercolonial communication, which, however, includes that between different parts of the same Colony.

2. Local defence. By local defence my Lords intend to confine themselves to the mere defence of the coast and harbour of a colony, by means of vessels only calculated for such service, and in fact only to be employed in case of an attack on the coast, such as floating batteries, small gun boats, and similar vessels.

My Lords are of opinion that such vessels should be Colonial vessels to be manned by crews organized as a Colonial Militia would be. The men might in fact never be required actually to serve; it would be absurd therefore to keep them on board these vessels. They would reside on shore, be occasionally drilled in the use of guns and arms, and be called out when wanted, as sea fencibles; or as my Lords propose, to organize the Naval Coast Volunteers in this Country. The same force also might be trained and employed to man coast batteries.

It is obvious that such a force could not be furnished from this Country.

The only provision which it appears necessary to make as regards them, is, that in the case of one of Her Majesty's Ships being present when any attack is made calling for the services of such a force, it should, in order to ensure unity of action, be placed for the time under the command of the Senior Officer of Her Majesty's Ships, who is on the spot.

As regards this description of service each Colony is independent of any other.

3. General defence. In considering the question of defence, my Lords have confined the local defence of the Colonies within the very narrow limits of the preceding observations, because they believe it to be perfectly impossible as regards Naval defence to assign to anything beyond such measures as have already been indicated, a mere local character.

During the recent war considerable uneasiness was felt and expressed by the ports on the eastern side of Scotland, and also on the north-eastern parts of England, at the absence of all ships of war from their neighbourhood, and yet it must be obvious that far more efficient protection was afforded to them by confining the Russian vessels of war to their own ports, or by occupying the Sound and the Belts, through which, during such occupation, no Russian vessel could pass, than by the same force being scattered from Peterhead to Yarmouth.

In like manner, great alarm was felt and great complaints were made in India, at the absence of any naval force in their Seas, but, in truth, the defence of India was more effectually carried by the British force being in the neighbourhood of the Russian force, and ports in Tartary and Kamschatka, than if they had been in the Bay of Bengal; whilst the safety of the Australian Colonies, of our other Eastern Possessions, and of our trade generally was secured at the same time and by the same course.

My Lords are aware that the cases above quoted are to some extent exceptional, but they have referred to them as being of recent occurrence, and as strong instances in which local defence was most effectually attained by a course of proceeding which was complained of by the parties on the spot, and with the appearance, if the question was not well considered, of no regard being paid to them; if, further, the question be confined within the narrower limits of the defence of the Australian Colonies alone, it would be obvious to Mr. Labouchere, on even the slightest consideration, that it cannot be provided for as regards each Colony separately, but must at the same time be provided for them all. Vessels, which if stationed separately at each Colony for its protection, would fall an easy prey to an enemy's force attacking them in succession, would, if united, form a squadron capable of adequately defending the whole from any probable amount of force which could be brought to that part of the Globe.

How and where the Naval force shall be employed for the protection of these Colonies, must depend upon circumstances, and must be left to the unfettered discretion of the Naval Commanders.

In the late war, the ships were most effective for this purpose on the coast of Tartary. In another war the force may probably have to be stationed elsewhere, but that which is quite clear, is that it cannot be so ill applied, as if attached to each Colony so as to impede its being withdrawn from that particular spot and sent elsewhere, and employed in such way as the Admiral

Admiral or Senior Officer may think most advisable for the purpose of meeting the enemy in the most advantageous manner. It is perfectly impossible to localise Naval defence. At the time of Lord Nelson's well-known pursuit of Admiral Villeneuve the protection of the Coasts of England might have been as effectually secured by an action in the West Indies, as by Sir Robert Calder's action in the Bay of Biscay, or the subsequent battle of Trafalgar.

My Lords consider the foregoing considerations decisive against any Colonial Marine for the purposes of defence now under discussion.

It is impossible to suppose that each Colony would not wish to retain its own vessels in its own immediate neighbourhood, and would not object to their being sent away for the defence of any other Colony; such a feeling is so natural that it must be expected to exist on the part of the Colonies and Colonial Governments, and to disregard it would obviously cause great complaints and discontent on their part. At the same time it is clearly indispensable that such an armed force should act with and under the command of the Queen's Naval Commander, in order to insure an united and efficient force in case of need, and it is impossible not to see how much his operations might be thwarted and even defeated by such a feeling.

There are other considerations into which my Lords think it unnecessary to enter relating to the discipline and management of a Colonial Force. The Indian Navy is an example of such a force on a larger scale, with greater advantages in many ways than can belong to what would necessarily be a smaller service in any of our Colonies. Several vessels of this force acted under the orders of the Admiral Commanding-in-Chief in the Chinese War, and rendered efficient service, but it was obvious to the Naval Officers that there were defects in its organization, and that in any joint operations with Her Majesty's ships, without great care, serious difficulty might easily have arisen between the two services.

The experience then acquired should act rather as a warning against the creation of such a force, than as an example to be followed in circumstances less favorable to the prospects of success.

There are also other reasons against a local force, more applicable, perhaps, to other Colonial Possessions than to the Australian Colonies. For instance, nothing contributes so much to the health of the ships employed in the West Indies as their being sent, from time to time, to the northern parts of the North American Station, being replaced by ships from thence.

A West Indian Colonial force would, necessarily, always serve in the West Indies, without the possibility of such a change, and must suffer materially in health in consequence.

My Lords are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the Naval defence of all the Colonial Possessions of Her Majesty, beyond the mere local defence adverted to in the earlier part of this letter, must be provided for by the Queen's Navy, under the uncontrolled orders of the Queen's Naval Commanders, and that this is the only effectual mode of attaining that end.

It does not appear to my Lords that this conclusion materially affects the question of any contribution from the Colonies towards the expense of maintaining such a force; but certainly, according to their views, if such a contribution is made, it ought to be divided amongst adjacent or neighbouring Colonies, in some fair proportion to their importance or their resources. It is not for my Lords to determine such questions, but they conceive that, if Her Majesty's Government determined that the principle of such contribution is to be adopted, some such arrangement as the following might be advantageously made as regards the Australian Colonies, including, of course, New Zealand; premising that the numbers and figures are taken merely for the sake of illustration.

Let it be assumed that in ordinary times there should be kept such a force in Australian waters as would number about 1,000 men, and cost £100,000 per annum. The particular vessels would be changed, as suited the general convenience of the Station; there might sometimes be more, sometimes less force in that part of it, but on the average that force should be at or near one or other of the Australian Colonies.

Those Colonies amongst them, all of whom would derive protection from such a force, ought to contribute one-third, or one-half, or two-thirds, or any other proportion of the above sum as may be determined upon.

If, in the event of war, the force in the neighbourhood is doubled, so should the contributions.

This increase of contribution not to be required if the increased force on their coast was merely temporary, caused by the presence of an enemy, because ships ought to be and would be withdrawn from other parts of the Station to meet the enemy wherever he might shew himself, just as they might be withdrawn from the Australian waters for a similar purpose; but if the force permanently stationed in their neighbourhood were increased, then it would only be fair that they should contribute a larger sum.

There remains one more question, viz.:—as to several descriptions of service which are often required by Colonial Governors from officers commanding ships of war.

In cases of real emergency, there is no service of any kind which the Navy is not ready to render; such has always been the case, and will, my Lords are confident, always be the case with officers of Her Majesty's Navy, but in some recent instances demands have been made which seemed to my Lords not properly to fall within the scope of Naval service.

In the state of almost independence to which many of our Colonies are approaching it is only reasonable that they should assume part, at least, of the burthens which are incident to all Government, and it is not reasonable that the Mother Country should be charged with the maintenance of vessels to perform ordinary duties of a purely Colonial character.

If, however, the Colonies contribute towards the expense of maintaining a force on their coasts, and thus, without additional charge to this Country, render it possible to keep a larger number of vessels in the neighbourhood, it may be reasonable that a greater latitude should be given to the demands for service on the part of the Colonies.

My

My Lords have thought it advisable to state their views thus fully for the information of Mr. Labouchere, in order that he might be aware of the grounds on which my Lords have come to their conclusions.

These conclusions are in fact two:—

1. That for Colonial or Inter-Colonial communication, and for the mere local defence of the coasts, vessels to be hired or provided by the Colony and a Colonial force are the best.
2. That for all purposes of general defence of one or more Colonies, a Naval force of the Queen's Navy, under the sole control of the Commanders of Her Majesty's Navy is indispensable.

How far the Colonies shall be called upon to contribute towards the maintenance of such part of that force as is, under ordinary circumstances, kept in the neighbourhood of adjacent Colonies, and in what proportions it is for Her Majesty's Government to determine.

I am, &c.,

R. OSBORNE.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

IN laying before the Council the Despatch from the Secretary of State in reply to mine of 14 August, 1856, in which I forwarded a copy of the proceedings of the Executive Council of 23 July, 1856, with relation to the defences of the Colony, it is desirable that I should refer to the principles affirmed by the Executive on that occasion, and which formed the basis of my Despatch. These principles may be stated as follows:—

1st.—The joint and equal liability of the Colony and the Mother Country to contribute to the expense of the Military and Naval Force required to protect the Colony from aggression from without, but the sole liability of the Colony to defray any extra expense arising out of circumstances peculiar to the Colony itself.

2nd.—The power of determining the maximum number of troops and vessels of war to be employed annually in the defence of the Colony, to be vested in the local Government and Legislature.

3rd.—The sole liability of the Colony to erect and maintain all necessary buildings, as barracks, stores, &c., for both Army and Navy; also such forts, batteries, and other works of defence as may be thought necessary, the understanding being that the property in all existing buildings should be vested in the Colony.

The Secretary of State, while admitting the simplicity and convenience of the first principle, and its tendency to obviate disputes, is not prepared to carry it into effect, as by taking it in connection with the second principle, which vests the power of determining the strength of the force to be employed in the Legislature of the Colony, the independent action of the central authority of the Empire would be impaired.

I cannot however but think that his Lordship must have misunderstood the meaning of the expression in my Despatch when I said—"the local Government should have, as in point of fact it must have, through the vote of the Legislature, the responsibility of determining the amount of the Military force to be maintained, either in peace or war, for the defence of the Colony." I never imagined that the Local Legislature should be vested with the power of determining arbitrarily the strength of the force to be employed, but merely that it necessarily would have the power of determining the maximum expense which it was willing to incur; the whole responsibility of deciding as to the number of troops to be sent, within the limits of the maximum, would belong to the Imperial Government.

Taking this view of the subject, his Lordship is disposed to abide by the existing arrangements—to maintain at the expense of the Imperial Government four companies of infantry at Sydney, leaving the Colony to pay for the company of artillery, and for any additional force which it may require. I may observe, however, that the inconvenience of the existing arrangement, which confers upon the force paid by the Colony the character of a local corps, has been shewn very lately in the case of the artillery, which has been detained here, contrary to the wishes of the military authorities, in deference to the opinion of the Legislative Assembly.

Should it ever be considered absolutely necessary on the part of the military authorities to move this company from Sydney, grounds will be afforded for complaint on the part part of the Colony, which would not exist were the principle of joint liability on the part of the Colony and the Mother Country affirmed.

It will be for the Council to consider carefully the subject of the defence of the Harbour and City of Sydney, and to decide whether any steps should be taken to supplement the force of four companies, the expense of which is to be borne by the Imperial Government, either by applying for an additional military force, or by organising a local militia, or encouraging volunteers to embody themselves. In my opinion, the cost of an effective militia would be excessive, and the issue of arms and clothing to an ineffective body would be a sheer waste of money. I am still of opinion that the local police of the City of Sydney might be made effective at a comparatively moderate cost, and that a body of 300 men might then be added to the strength of the military body; these might be supplemented by volunteers, some of whom might be drilled as artillery and some as rifles—could an arrangement of this kind be carried out, any increase of the military force, at present at all events, might be unnecessary.

The Secretary of State accedes to the proposition that all the existing military buildings, &c., should be transferred to the Colony—subject, of course, to the understanding that proper accommodation is to be provided for the troops and room for the stores, &c., for military and naval purposes; under these circumstances, it would appear to be needless to introduce the Bill transferring the Ordnance property to the Secretary of War.

With reference to the assistance required from the Navy, the Secretary of State has forwarded a memorandum from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, in which the whole question of the naval defence of the Colonies is dealt with upon a far more extended scale than was contemplated by me. My Despatch had reference simply to the defence of Port Jackson, and for this special object it was considered necessary to have a Steam Gun Boat—a scheme was submitted by which while the vessel was furnished and kept in repair by the Imperial Government, as the forts, and barracks, and stores are by the Colonial Government, the cost of wages and provisions should be shared equally between the Mother Country and the Colony.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty object to this portion of the scheme. and propose that the Gun Boat should be built, maintained, armed, and manned by the Colony; to such a scheme there are very many objections. In the first place, the whole cost of the naval defence of the Harbour, and of protecting British capital and interests would be thrown upon the Colony; in the second place, the expense of such a vessel would be enormous, looking to the rate of wages prevailing here; in the third place, the means of maintaining proper discipline on board such a vessel would be altogether wanting. The remarks made by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty with reference to the Indian marine are sufficient to shew the nature of the difficulties which are felt even in India, and such difficulties would be enhanced ten fold in Australia—the experiment has been tried in Victoria, and, I believe, most unsuccessfully.

With regard to the general naval defence of the Colonies, coupled as it is with the protection of trade, the principles laid down by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are quite correct—such defence would be best provided for by the presence of an effective squadron acting on the offensive; but I am not aware that it was ever contemplated that a vessel other than a gun boat should be permanently stationed in this or in any other Colony, or that such a vessel should not be at the disposal of the Senior Naval Officer; the main principle contended for in my Despatch is that a local force, whether naval or military, must be inefficient, and it was for that reason that I wished the whole of the force to assume an Imperial character. The Secretary of State expresses a hope that I may be able, with the advice of my Council, to arrive at some practical conclusion, which may be in accordance with the views propounded by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, but as these views do not assume any very definite form, it is difficult to arrive at any practical conclusion with regard to them.

Under the first head, transmission of letters, troops, and stores, the Colony does already make its own arrangements; if it be necessary to move troops from one part of the Colony to another, the expense would, under the present arrangement, be borne by the Colony or the Mother Country, according as the troops moved were paid exclusively by the Mother Country or the Colony; according to the scheme suggested by me, the expense would be borne in equal proportions by the Mother Country and the Colony.

With regard to local defences, I have already given my reason why I believe the plan proposed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty would be expensive and inefficient.

With regard to the general naval defence of the Colonies, I quite agree with the Lords Commissioners, that it must be provided for by the Queen's Navy, under the uncontrolled order of the Queen's Naval Commander. But it appears to me that the question of the contribution from the Colonies towards the expense of maintaining the necessary Naval Force, is materially effected by such an admission; it is for instance impossible, by their Lordships own shewing, to arrive at any conclusion as to the position to be occupied by a fleet for the defence of any given Colony, and it may be, indeed it certainly would be the case in these seas, that a squadron, which might act efficiently for the defence of Australia and its commerce, would, at the same time, protect New Zealand, the Mauritius, and very probably also the Indian and China Trade. How would it be possible then to allot to each of these Countries their definite share of the expense? I confess I do not see my way to any practical solution of the question.

W. DENISON.

No. 3.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

THE Despatch which I have now brought under the consideration of the Council, with the enclosed letter from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty opens up two distinct questions, namely, that of the defence of the Colony from external aggression by a force acting within the Colony itself, and that of the prevention of such attacks by the action of a force altogether external to the Colony. It will simplify the consideration of those subjects if I treat of them separately; for although there is no question that if the second could be effectively carried out, the first might be altogether disregarded; yet, as this cannot be, it behoves us to discuss both, to ascertain the relation they bear to each other, and to decide upon the character of the system which under present circumstances will be most appropriate for the Colony, that is, which will give an adequate amount of protection at the least expense.

In former Minutes, the subject of the local defence of Port Jackson was fully discussed, and a scheme submitted, which embraced the erection of certain works—their proper armament—the character and amount of the military force which would be adequate to their defence—and the amount of naval assistance which would be required to make this defence thoroughly effective, by affording to the troops employed sufficient notice of the approach of the enemy. A suggestion was also made as to the mode in which the military force should be organized, and as to the proportion in which the expense of the whole scheme of defence should be divided between the Mother Country and the Colony. The whole of these papers were submitted to the Legislature on the 20th November, 1856, with a recommendation that certain additions should be made to the amount appropriated towards the construction of certain works of defence; and the attention of the Legislature was specially called to the principle upon which the expense of maintaining the naval and military force was proposed to be divided between the Mother Country and the Colony.

The Legislature voted the necessary sums for the continuation of the works of defence, but no other action was taken in the matter; and the subject having been referred by me to the Secretary of State, the Despatch now before the Council is a reply to that reference. Lord Stanley in this communication adopts the principle enumerated by Lord Grey, that the force to be maintained by the Mother Country in the Australian Colonies should be that which may reasonably be required for defence against possible aggression. If a greater force is required, the local Legislature should make provision for the pay and allowances of an additional number of Her Majesty's regular forces. This I may observe is on the supposition that an efficient military force of militia could not, under the present circumstances of the Colony, be properly organized and made effective, a supposition which I believe to be perfectly correct. His Lordship admits that the principle adopted by the Executive Council in July 1856, relative to the division of the expense of maintaining the military and naval force required for the defence of the Colony, has the great merit of simplicity, and of being calculated to dispense with minute changes of plan, and to obviate disputes; but under a misconception, I believe, of the expression used in my Despatch, "that the Government of the Colony should have, as in point of fact it must have through the vote of the Legislature, the responsibility of determining the amount of force which ought to be maintained," his Lordship observes, that Her Majesty's Government do not see in what manner this suggestion could be adopted, without compromising the independent action of the central authorities of the Empire. All, however, that I intended by the expression before quoted, was that the Legislature would necessarily determine the maximum amount of the force for the payment of which it would provide funds. I never of course contemplated the exercise of a power of demanding the establishment, and maintenance of a specific number of troops within the Colony; and I cannot but hope that, should the Council and the Legislature affirm the principle before laid down, Her Majesty's Government will not persevere in their objection.

Executive

The only other point alluded to in the Despatch, to which it is necessary to draw the attention of the Council, is that in which Lord Stanley says, that Her Majesty's Government is prepared to adopt generally the views contained in the letter of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and expresses a hope that I may be able, with the advice of my Council, to arrive at some practical conclusion in accordance with those views.

It appears to me that, with regard to the local defences, their Lordships have discussed the subject upon general principles, without reference at all to the local and peculiar circumstances of the Colony. They observe that the vessels employed for the defence of the coast should be Colonial vessels, manned by crews organized as a Colonial militia; that the men would reside on shore, be occasionally drilled in the use of guns and arms, and be called out when wanted. Their Lordships also observe, that the same force might be employed to man coast batteries. In making these remarks, however, their Lordships have altogether overlooked the fact, that the whole scheme of defence of Sydney is based upon the supposition that such a militia could not be organized, so far as to be effective. In fact in time of war with any naval power, the men intended to work the guns in the batteries must be in a constant state of readiness, that is, they must be always embodied. It would be too late to call them out when the enemy came in sight. In the same way as the single gun-boat required is, as was shewn in my former Minutes, intended to supply the men for a couple of boats to row guard at the mouth of the Harbour, and to support these boats by her fire, while she would at the same time give notice to the troops in the batteries to prepare for action. It is evident that the crew must be permanently attached to the vessel, must live on board, and be subject to the strict discipline of a man-of-war. It is hopeless to expect that such discipline could be maintained on board of a Colonial vessel, and I trust therefore that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty may be induced to re-consider this portion of the subject; and as the Colony proposes to take upon itself the cost of maintaining all the batteries, barrack, and military buildings, while the troops which are stationed here are under the entire control of the Officer appointed by Her Majesty, and are subject to the provisions of the Mutiny Act; so the Admiralty will provide and maintain the single gun-boat which is required, placing it under the command of an officer of the Navy, and subjecting the men to the strict rules of naval discipline, without which it is evident that the expense of maintaining the vessel would be thrown away. Should their Lordships assent to this, the Colony would, in accordance with the principle before stated, pay one-half of the cost of maintaining the vessel.

I now come to the question submitted under the third head of the letter of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, namely, the "general defence" of the Colonies. By this their Lordships mean that system of protection which is extended to the Colonies by the action of the fleets and squadrons of Her Majesty's Navy upon the naval force of the enemy, either by blockading them in their harbours, or by attacking them wherever they may be encountered.

The views enunciated by their Lordships I believe to be perfectly correct. I am convinced that the system of awaiting attack near the coast which it is an object to defend, is sure to lead to reverses and defeat; that the system of offensive action is in every way the most most effective mode of securing either a Colony or the Mother Country from attack. From this, however, it would follow that, if the Colonies are to be asked to contribute towards the expense of such general defence, the rates of the contributions must be determined according to some general principle applicable to all; for the fleet which by its offensive action shut up the Russian Naval Force in the River Amoor, or at Petropaulowski, was contributing to the security of the Australian Colonies, New Zealand, and, indeed, to all the Colonies in the Pacific. It also protected the British trade with India, China, and South America. I cannot, therefore, see how it would be possible to arrive at any determination of the proportion in which the expense of maintaining this fleet could possibly be shared between the different parties interested.

I may observe also with reference to the question raised by their Lordships, "how far the Colonies shall be called upon to contribute towards the maintenance of such part of the naval force as is, under ordinary circumstances, kept in the neighbourhood of adjacent Colonies;" that as the Imperial Government, were the Colonies to form a State or States separate from the Mother Country, would have to maintain a much larger force than at present for the protection of British interests, as is shewn by the fact of the large force maintained on the coasts of North and South America, it would seem to be inadvisable to require the Colonies to contribute towards the expense of a force over which they can exercise no control, and which is in fact very much lessened by the very circumstance that the squadron is cruising on the coast of a Colony, and not upon that of an independent State or States.

The point raised by their Lordships relative to the conveyance of troops and stores, would seem to me to be merged in that of the local defence. If the Mother Country is to contribute towards that defence in any proportion, it would of course share, in that proportion, in all the expense of maintaining and moving troops. I cannot, I confess, see any ground for placing the cost of conveying troops upon a different footing from that of their maintenance in a proper state of efficiency for action. It would be, I think, desirable that the whole subject should be brought under the consideration of the Legislature, either by the appointment of a Committee of the Legislative Assembly, or by the submission of certain specific resolutions for adoption, which will exhibit clearly the views of the Government and Legislature with relation to the different questions raised in the Despatch of the Secretary of State.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

THE Despatch opens up a very wide question, namely, the relative obligations of the Parent State and its Colonies, so far as the defence of the latter against external aggression is concerned.

This subject was mooted by me in a Despatch No. 127, dated 14 August, 1856; in which, while submitting a special scheme for the defence of New South Wales, I attempted to lay down the general principles upon which the Mother Country and the Colonies should contribute towards the expense which the adoption of any such scheme would necessarily occasion. The Secretary of State, in a Despatch No. 6, dated 11 March, 1858, while admitting in general terms the advantages which would result from the adoption of a general principle, stated that Her Majesty's Government were not prepared to carry it so far as regarded the pay of the troops was concerned. In the same Despatch was enclosed an elaborate Minute from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, in which, after alluding to a specific proposition of mine with relation to the defence of Sydney Harbour, their Lordships discuss the general principles upon which the Naval Defence of the Colonies should be conducted, and allude to the possibility that the Colonies may be called upon to pay a portion of the cost of such Naval Defence.

I believe that the general principles laid down by their Lordships are perfectly correct, and that the Naval Defence of these Colonies, or more generally, of any country, would be far more effectively provided for by a squadron cruising in the track of the enemy, or blockading them in their harbours, than were the defending force to confine itself to purely defensive operations in the immediate vicinity of the coast of the country to be protected. There are, in the case of these Colonies, two very palpable objections to the latter course; one of which is based upon military, and the other upon political considerations.

It is contrary to all sound principle to concentrate a force, which has to defend a long line of coast, at any point of that coast, as a successful attack might be made upon some undefended point long before the covering force could make its way to the scene of action; for instance,—were Sydney to be the head quarters of the force, Melbourne or Hobart Town might be attacked, and the shipping or town destroyed, long before vessels from Sydney could run down to their assistance. The same remark would apply, were Melbourne to be the head quarters. Three or four days would be required for the squadron to work up either to Sydney or Hobart Town; and unless the local defences of these places were in a condition to resist an attack from such a force as might reasonably be expected to proceed against them, the benefit which would be derived from the presence of an Australian squadron would be but trifling.

The political objection to which I have alluded is based upon the conviction that jealousies would be created between the different Colonies, were any preference shewn for one as the principal head quarters of the squadron.

It may be inferred from what I have said above on the subject of the military objection which exists to a system of naval defence confined to the Australian waters, that although the presence of such a squadron would do much to keep foes at a distance, and to secure our trade, both foreign and coasting, it would yet be ineffectual to secure the Colonies from attack and from serious injury, unless proper preparations were made to enable each Colony to defend itself by the erection of batteries and the maintenance of the troops necessary to man them.

This has been done, to a great extent, at Sydney; some few additional arrangements are required to perfect the works, and the presence of a steam gun-boat would be essential to the internal defence of the Harbour in time of war. Much too has been done at Hobart Town, where, before I left Tasmania, four batteries were completed and armed, the guns from which bore upon the anchorage in front of the town,—and though some additions might be made to these, and a fifth battery constructed near the site of the old Government House, yet even with the existing batteries, properly armed and manned, it would be difficult for a vessel or vessels to take up a position to bring any effective fire upon the town, without being subjected to severe loss and damage.

I differ then from the gentlemen who have addressed to Sir Henry Young the letter enclosed in the accompanying Despatch; in that I do not lay so great a stress as they do upon the presence of a sufficient force in these seas, to justify the Government in making this an Admiral's command. I am, however, of opinion, that the force in these waters, at present, is not in any way adequate to the duty which it is called upon to perform. There is, as yet, but one vessel of 20 guns, the "Iris," (the "Herald," a surveying vessel, being employed upon special service,) for the whole of the Australian Station, which includes the whole of the Australian Colonies, New Zealand, and the Islands in the Pacific Ocean. This vessel is at present employed to the northward in visiting the New Hebrides and Woodlark Islands, the Captain having received instructions to punish the savages of the latter island for murdering the crew of a wrecked vessel. He will be occupied on this duty for between four and five months. I have received intimation that a brig,—the "Sappho,"—has been ordered to this station, and that a steamer,—the "Cordelia,"—is also expected to arrive here. Ample employment, however, will be found for both of these vessels in the South Seas and New Zealand, where the relations of the Government with the natives require to be maintained by the constant presence of a ship of war, so that the single corvette will still be the only vessel in the Australian waters, a force evidently inadequate to comply with the demands for support and assistance, to which a trade, of an extent almost unequalled in any group of Colonies, is sure to give rise.

I have not, as yet, alluded to the assertion made in the letter addressed to Sir Henry Young,—“that the Australian Colonies are not indisposed to take upon themselves a just share of liability for their own defence and the maintenance of British supremacy.” That this is the case I do not entertain any doubt, but, as I said before, the discussion of such a subject opens up a very wide question,—no less than the relative obligations of the Parent State and the Colonies with relation to the defence of the latter. I have considered this part of the subject so far as the defence of a particular Colony is concerned, in my Despatch, No. 127, dated 14th August, 1856, and I see no reason to alter the opinion I therein expressed, that the principle which has been adopted with regard to cost of the mail service, (in which the joint interest of the Colony and the Mother Country is admitted) should regulate the contribution of the Mother Country and the Colony, towards the expense of the force which it may be necessary to maintain, to secure the Colonies from external aggression.

This, however, had reference only to the cost of the troops required to man the different batteries and such gun boats, or any naval force of a specially local character, as it might be necessary to maintain. I did not enter upon the question of general naval defence of the Colonies, as I was not in a position to do so at the time; and I only now proceed to discuss the subject as being brought specifically before me,—first by the letter of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and second by the Despatch and Enclosure from the Governor of Tasmania. It is evident, from what the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty allege themselves, that the naval defence of a Colony or a group of Colonies, is best provided for by such a general disposition of the vessels at the command of the Government as may enable them to act offensively against the enemy:—that, for instance, it would be safer to blockade a French force either at the Isle of Bourbon or in the Port de France, in New Caledonia, than to wait until it suited the Officer in Command at these points to sally forth to attack us. But in such a case, the naval defence of these Colonies is coupled up with that of all the other Colonies in this part of the World,—with that of India, the Cape of Good Hope, the Mauritius, New Zealand, &c.; and it would be difficult, if not impossible, to arrive at any satisfactory determination of the proportion of the expense payable by each, except upon some general principle applicable to all. The mere fact, that on account of their local advantages, the inhabitants of Australia are able to contribute towards the expense of this external system of defence, ought not, in my opinion, to be considered any reason for establishing a difference between them and their neighbours. Until, therefore, some general principle can be arranged equally applicable to all Colonies, I should not be disposed to recognise the justice of a claim that the Governments of these Colonies should contribute towards the expenses of the squadron maintained in these seas, for the purpose, during peace, of watching generally over the operations of the trading portion of the community; and, in time of war, of affording protection to the commerce of Australia. And I am the more inclined to take this view from the fact that a very large proportion of the foreign trade of these Colonies is carried on with English capital in English ships, the Colonial capital being principally engaged in the coasting trade and other occupations of local interest.

THE GOVERNOR OF TASMANIA to THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

*Tasmania,

Hobart Town, 8 July, 1858.*

SIR,

At the request of my Responsible Advisers, I have the honor of enclosing a copy of my Despatch to the Right Honorable the Secretary of State, and of a letter from them addressed to me, on the defence of this Island, and of the Australian Colonies in time of war.

I have, &c.,

GOVERNOR GENERAL,
Sydney.

Tasmania,
Government House,
Hobart Town, 5 July, 1858.

My Lord,

I have the honor to submit to your Lordship's consideration, that however general and well-grounded is the opinion in Great Britain and in Australia, that the strength of Her Majesty's Naval Forces in every quarter of the Globe is a material and important element of the safety of each Dependency of the Crown, it would be very politic and satisfactory that the National Flag should be seen more frequently than has heretofore been customary on the coasts and in the ports of Tasmania. The useful moral effect of such a display would seem at present to be attainable, with sufficient frequency, only by an increase to the squadron in the Australian Seas. The visits of a man-of-war to Hobart Town in the last five years have been as follows:—

15th May, 1853—"Calliope," 26 guns.
27th March, 1854—"Electra," 14 guns.
14th May, 1854—"Fantome," 12 guns.
4th May, 1855—"Fantome," 12 guns.
13th March, 1856—"Juno," 26 guns

I have the honor to enclose copy of a representation which has been sent to me to-day by my Responsible Advisers, forcibly representing that no measures for an effectual defence of this City are capable of being made without the aid of a British Naval Force, and that the presence of such a force is indispensable to the security of the Colony against war.

I have also to request for Tasmania, as I did for South Australia when in office there, before the last war, that a supply of arms of the most approved and latest construction should be sent to Hobart Town as soon as possible, and that this supply should include, at least, 1,000 Enfield Rifles, with the necessary ammunition and equipments. At the instance of my Ministry, I send copies of this Despatch, and of their letter to me, to the Governors of the adjacent Colonies for such concurrence as they may desire to express in the suggestion from Tasmania, that the Australian Command at Sea should be made an Admiral's Station.

I have, &amp;c.,

H. E. F. YOUNG.

The Right Honorable
Lord Stanley,
&c., &c., &c.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 5.]

Sir,

We have had under our consideration for some time the necessity of a combined representation from the different Colonies of Australia to the Imperial Government, setting forth that the period has now arrived at which it is imperatively necessary that measures should be taken for their protection in the event of war between the Mother Country and any other Power.

The commerce of these Colonies, as your Excellency is already aware, is scarcely second to that of any of the Dependencies of the British Crown. It is one in which almost exclusively British capital and industry are invested; and the character of a considerable element in it, gold, is peculiarly liable to attract the hostile designs of an enemy.

The Australian Colonies are not, we believe, indisposed to take upon themselves a just share of liability for their own defence, and the maintenance of British supremacy; but they are so recent in their origin, their signal advance in population and in wealth has taken place within so brief a period, and their interests have been pursued hitherto so much apart from, and independently of, each other—no occasion in fact having arisen for their co-operation in a great and common object—that it would, we feel, be wholly misjudged, were the Imperial Government to leave them to themselves in the exigency for which we wish adequate provision to be duly and promptly made. In fact we are persuaded that without the guidance and the fostering aid of the Mother Country, no measures calculated for a serious emergency will, or can be made by these Colonies.

We would, therefore, most earnestly beg of your Excellency, to urge upon the Imperial Government to make the Australian Colonies an Admiral's Station, and that a Naval Squadron be maintained on it at least equal to that of any other Power in these seas. We need not advert to the Naval armaments maintained in the Pacific by other Powers for the defence of their Possessions, which are far less valuable and expensive than those of Great Britain.

The City of Hobart Town is so situated as to be incapable of any effectual defence, otherwise than by a Naval Force. The approach to it by Storm Bay and the River Derwent is unimpeded by any difficulties of navigation, and the breadth of the river is such as to render resistance by fortifications, and more particularly such fortifications as the revenues of this Colony would suffice to provide, quite hopeless. In the presence, then, of a Naval force, is the only security of the City, and thereby of the Colony. But we would, nevertheless, respectfully advise Your Excellency to apply to the Imperial Government for a thousand Enfield Rifles, with the necessary ammunition and equipments.

More

More mature deliberation and professional experience may indicate the advisability, at a future period, of steps being taken by the different Colonies of Australia, which do not at present suggest themselves; but, meantime, we should feel that we exposed ourselves to a charge of dereliction in a duty, the seriousness of which may be made but too apparent, we know not how soon, were we to wait supinely for some overt occasion before we sought to propitiate the care and consideration which the magnitude and the defenceless situation of these Colonies both demand.

We feel also that by opening this question with the British Government, and with the neighbouring Colonies, an important step will have been made towards its final and satisfactory settlement.

We would respectfully advise that your Excellency address the Secretary of State on this subject by the first Mail, and that copies of your Despatch and of this letter accompany the communication which we have recommended, to the Governors of the other Australian Colonies, should your Excellency see fit to comply with the course we have advised.

We have, &c.,

No. 6.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council with respect to the Defence of the Australian Colonies.

Minute No. 58-31. Dated 2 August, 1858.

PRESENT:—

His Excellency The Governor General.
The Honorable The Vice-President of the Council.
The Honorable The Secretary for Lands and Public Works.
The Honorable The Attorney General.
The Honorable The Colonial Treasurer.

His Excellency the Governor General lays before the Council a Despatch from Sir Henry Young, Governor of Tasmania, enclosing, at the request of his Responsible Advisers, a copy of a Despatch which he has recently transmitted to the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and also a copy of a letter addressed to him by those gentlemen on the subject of the defence of Tasmania, and the Australian Colonies generally, in time of war.

2. In this Despatch, which is based on the letter of his Advisers, Sir Henry Young strongly urges upon the Secretary of State the necessity for making the Australian Colonies an Admiral's Station, and for maintaining in these seas a Naval Squadron equal, at least, to that maintained therein by any other Power; and the object of the present reference to this Government is to invite the Colony to strengthen that representation by a similar expression of opinion.

3. Sir Henry Young's Despatch, and the letter of his Ministers, also open up other questions connected with the defence of the Australian Colonies; but these His Excellency the Governor General is not, at present, prepared to submit for the consideration of the Council, and only now desires their advice as to the propriety of adopting, and acting upon, the specific suggestion of the Tasmanian Government.

4. The Council are not disposed to lay so great a stress as, it would appear, Sir Henry Young and his advisers do, upon the presence in these seas of a sufficient force to justify the adoption of the step advocated by them, and are not, therefore, prepared to recommend that any representation should be addressed to Her Majesty's Government on behalf of this Colony, urging the necessity for making the Australian Colonies an Admiral's Station. They are, however, of opinion, that the naval force at present stationed in these Colonies, consisting, as it does, of only two available vessels, is not in any way adequate to the protection, either in peace or war, of British and Colonial interests, and they recommend that His Excellency should bring this expression of opinion under the notice of Her Majesty's Government, and urge the expediency of strengthening that force.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER,
Clerk of the Council.

No. 7.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(No. 156.)

*Government House,
Sydney, 26 October, 1858.*

SIR,

I received some months ago a Despatch from Lord Stanley, No. 6, dated 11 March, 1858, in reply to one of mine, No. 127, dated 14 August, 1856, on the subject of the defence of Sydney Harbour.

The questions raised in this Despatch, and especially those to which reference is made in the letters addressed by the Secretary of the Admiralty to Mr. Merivale, are of two kinds; the first has reference to the special defence of this Colony, and of this, as it will be brought specially under the consideration of the Legislature, at an early period, I will postpone the consideration until I can inform you of the result of such consideration. The second has reference to more general questions, classified under the heads of communications and general defence, and I will now proceed to state the views entertained by myself and the Members of my Executive Council with relation to these.

Under the former their Lordships include the conveyance of Mails, to which it is unnecessary for me to allude, as in the case of the Australian Colonies this is the subject of a special contract.

With regard, however, to the conveyance of troops and stores, the proposition of their Lordships, that the transport of troops from one Colony to another, and from one part of a Colony to another part of the same Colony, should be provided for at the expense of the Colony or Colonies concerned, opens up the general question,—“by whom are the troops, “required for the defence of the Colonies, to be paid?”

If by the Colony, then of course all the expenses contingent upon their movements to and fro, whether to the Colony from England, or from another Colony, or within the limits of the Colony itself, must be defrayed from Colonial funds.

If, however, any share of the responsibility of defending a Colony is to rest with the Mother Country, as is admitted in Lord Stanley's Despatch, then there does not appear to be any reason why the former should be charged with the whole expense of the transport of troops.

The principle suggested by me in former Despatches, that the expense of the movement and maintenance of the troops required for the defence of the Colony should be shared equally between the Mother Country and the Colony, appears to me to be one which would meet every difficulty and obviate every chance of disagreement between the Colony and the Mother Country.

The subject of the “general defence” of these Colonies has been brought under the notice of the Government of New South Wales, in a special manner, by Sir Henry Young, who has forwarded to me copies of a Despatch addressed to the Secretary of State, covering a Minute addressed to him by his advisers on this subject.

The substance of this was a recommendation that the Australian Colonies should be made the head quarters of a squadron under the command of an Admiral. I forward, herewith, an extract from the proceedings of my Executive Council with relation to this proposal, which will give you an outline of the views entertained by myself and my Council on this particular question; and I will avail myself of this opportunity of stating my view of the more general question submitted to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

This appears to me to come under two separate heads. The first may be said to be a professional question, namely—what is the best mode of employing a given naval force for the defence of a particular portion of the Empire?

The second, which bears upon the question of the relationship between the Mother Country and the Colony, may be stated thus:—Ought not some share in the cost of maintaining a naval force for the “general defence” to be defrayed by the Colonies interested?

The answer to the professional question is most correctly given in the letter of the Secretary of the Admiralty. There cannot be any doubt that the defence of any country against attacks by sea is best provided for by offensive movements against the fleets or harbours of the enemy. This very fact, however, would seem to render impracticable any attempt to come to an understanding with an individual Colony as to the relative amount of the benefits conferred by a particular squadron upon itself, other adjacent Colonies, and the Mother Country. Take the instances adduced by their Lordships.—There can be no doubt that the Naval defence of these Colonies was best provided for during the war with Russia by the fleet on the Coast of Tartary; but then this fleet, as is shewn by their Lordships, secured India from aggression, and protected the trade of England with China and the countries generally which are washed by the Pacific Ocean. How would it be possible to measure the relative amount of the benefit conferred upon India, the Australian Colonies, New Zealand, Mauritius, &c., by the action of this fleet; and how would it be possible to distinguish in the protection given to the trade of the Colonies the amount of interest for which the Mother Country ought to contribute?

A practical solution of the question may, perhaps, be arrived at by a consideration of the objects which the Government proposes to itself in sending vessels of war to different parts of the world. For instance, there is one squadron on the East and another on the West Coast of South America. The motives for maintaining those squadrons are, probably, partly political, but they have reference also to the security of trade. In the security thus afforded, however, all nations partake; and it would be as impossible to define the amount of benefit which any individual Colony would derive from the presence of these ships-of-war, as it would be to measure that conferred upon any other trading community. Then, again, with relation to the Australian Colonies, a small naval force will be sufficient to protect all interests so long as these remain part and parcel of the Empire. But were a separation to take place, it would be found necessary for the security of British interests to maintain a much larger force than is now required. Would it then be fair or right to ask the Colonies to contribute towards an expense which their very position as Colonies renders comparatively light? In truth, however, this question is only a portion of one of a much more general character, and until a satisfactory definition can be given of the obligations imposed by the relations which exist between a Colony and the Parent State, it would in my opinion, and in that of my advisers, be unadvisable to press upon the Governments of these Colonies any partial proposition of the kind alluded to in the letter of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, as such a course would only tend to elicit debate, and would afford no assistance towards the solution of the general problem.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council with respect to the Defences of the Colony of New South Wales.

Extract from Minute No. 59-27. Dated 11 July, 1859.

PRESENT:—

His Excellency The Governor General,
The Honorable The Vice-President of the Council,
The Honorable The Secretary for Lands and Public Works,
The Honorable The Attorney General,
The Honorable The Colonial Treasurer.

ADVERTING to the proceedings on the 2nd August, 1858, and on previous dates, with respect to the defence of the Colony of New South Wales, in the event of foreign aggression, His Excellency the Governor General invites the attention of the Council to the intelligence received by the last Mail from England of war having broken out on the Continent of Europe, and consults them as to the propriety of taking early measures, with the view of guarding against the danger of predatory attack to which, in the progress of events, and from causes not now foreseen, the Colony, and more particularly the City of Sydney, may become exposed.

2. The Council are fully alive to the duty that devolves upon the Government of making timely provision, even when the probability of danger is remote, for the protection of of the Colony against the attacks of an enemy, and they propose that the fuller consideration of the subject, which has already, with reference to previous Minutes of His Excellency the Governor General, occupied their serious attention, should be resumed at an early period. At present they deem it advisable that advantage should be taken of the opportunity that will be afforded by the departure of the Mail steamer during the present week, of ordering from England a supply of rifles for the purpose of arming any Volunteer, Militia, or other forces, that it may eventually become expedient to raise.

3. They therefore advise that an order be despatched for a supply of two thousand rifles, of the latest and most approved construction, and proved in the customary manner for the use of Her Majesty's regular Troops, with all necessary accoutrements, to be forwarded to the Colony with the utmost expedition.

4. The Council further advise that the necessary instructions be forwarded to the Oriental Bank, in London, to pay for the arms in question, on account of the Colony, at a cost not exceeding £10,000.

A. ORPEN MORIARTY,
Clerk of the Council.

*Government House,

SIR,

I have the honor to inclose herewith a letter addressed to Major General Hay, School of Musketry, Hythe, requesting him to procure for the Government of this Colony 2,000 stand of the most approved rifles, for the purpose of arming any military force which the Colony may think it advisable to raise.

I am sensible that I have no right to call upon General Hay for advice and assistance in this matter; would you therefore submit this application to the War Department, and obtain the permission of His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief, for General Hay to act for us in this matter.

I have, &c.,

[Enclosure in the foregoing.]

*Government House,
Sydney, 13 August, 1859.*

Sir,

The Government of New South Wales is anxious to obtain the very best weapon which modern science has devised, for arming the military force which it may have to organize.

I know no person in England whose opinion on this important subject can have so great a weight as your own; and I am induced therefore to apply to you both for advice and assistance. Will you therefore kindly decide for me, among the many conflicting weapons which have been presented to you for trial, which is the most efficient. My own feeling at present is in favor of Whitworth's rifle; but I leave the decision entirely in your hands. Will you also take upon yourself to order, for the service of this Colony, 2,000 stand of the most approved weapons, with all the necessary accoutrements, of the simplest and most desirable description? It would probably be as well that we should have a certain quantity of ammunition made up—say 50 rounds per gun, with the necessary means of manufacturing more when required.

Should you kindly accede to my request that you would act for me in this matter, a notification to the Manager of the Oriental Bank in London, to that effect, will place at your disposal a sum of £12,000; and should this not be sufficient to cover the cost of the rifles, &c., any further amount which may be required will be transmitted without delay.

With many apologies for the trouble I am asking you to take,—

Major General Hay,
&c., &c., &c.

I remain, &c.,
W. DENISON.

The rifles, when procured, may be transferred to the Agent of the Colony, whose name and direction will be notified to you by the next Mail.

Extract from Minute, No. 59-28. Dated 18 July, 1859.

PRESENT :—

His Excellency the Governor General.
The Honorable the Vice-President of the Council.
The Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works.
The Honorable the Attorney General.
The Honorable the Colonial Treasurer.

THE Council having met pursuant to summons, His Excellency the Governor General, referring to the proceedings on the 28th ultimo and 11th instant, consults them as to whether, under the altered aspect of affairs arising from the intelligence from Europe received by the last Mail, it would not be advisable to take measures for retaining in this Colony the additional companies of the 12th regiment whom it is otherwise the intention of the Military authorities, consequent on the decision arrived at by the Council on the date first mentioned, to despatch during the present week to their original destination in Tasmania.

2. It is understood that a contract has already been entered into for the conveyance of these troops, but that the contract may be cancelled at a cost of about £150; and from communications which have already taken place with Colonel Percival, C.B., and the Major General commanding the Forces, it appears that the Military authorities, though willing that the additional force should remain in Sydney, are not prepared to take the responsibility of directing their retention here at the expense of the Imperial Treasury, until the local Parliament (whom it has been proposed to invite to make the necessary provision for the increased expenditure) should have met and considered the subject.

3. The Council, after a very full deliberation, determine to adhere to the advice tendered by them on the 28th ultimo. While they cannot fail to perceive and admit, that in the present unsettled state of public affairs in Europe, contingencies may arise to render it desirable that the services of additional troops should be promptly available in connection with local objects of precaution or defence, they do not consider that, under present circumstances, any such emergency exists as to justify them in advising that the Government should incur a further large expenditure for military purposes without the sanction of Parliament, now so soon expected to be in Session.

A. ORPEN MORIARTY,

Clerk of the Council.

No. 11.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

(No. 39.)

Downing-street,
5 May, 1859.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch, No. 156, of the 26th of October last, with its enclosures, in continuation of the discussion as to the naval and military defences of New South Wales and of the other Australian Colonies, and further explaining the views which were entertained on this subject, so far as it had then been considered by yourself and your Executive Council.

Having referred those papers to the Secretary for War and the Admiralty, I transmit, for your information, copies of the answers from both that department as well as the War Office. The former of these two letters does not call for any comment; the latter announces the measures which it has been decided to adopt for considerably strengthening the naval force on the Australian Station; and intimates the probable separation, under the command of an officer having the rank of Commodore, of the squadron in the Australian Seas from that under the East India and China Station. It further states the arrangement which the Board of Admiralty are prepared to adopt with reference to the transport of troops.

troops. By that arrangement, it is proposed that the charge of the conveyance of troops from England to the Colonies, and of their removal from one Colony to another should be defrayed by the Imperial Government, on the general understanding that the removal of troops by sea from one part of a Colony to another should be at the cost of the Colony.

This division of the expenses is in itself very favorable to the interests of the Colonies, but it should always be borne in mind, that, although such is the general arrangement, peculiar circumstances may arise which would necessitate the immediate transport of troops from one Colony to another, in order to check internal discord, as in the instance of the Ballarat riots in Victoria, or for other purely local purposes, in which cases, it will be only just and reasonable, that the cost of removing troops should be paid by the Colony so requiring their presence.

It must further be understood, that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government shortly to appoint a Committee for the purpose of reporting on the whole question of Military expenditure in the Colonies, and that any existing arrangements may be liable to modification on the recommendation of that Committee.

I have, &c.,

CARNARVON,

(in the absence of Sir E. B. Lytton.)

GOVERNOR

SIR W. DENISON, K.C.B.,

[Enclosure 1 No. 11.]

War Office, 19 February, 1859.

Sir,

I have laid before the Secretary of State for War your letter of the 8th instant, transmitting copies of a Despatch, and its enclosures, from the Governor of New South Wales, and requesting to be furnished, for Sir E. B. Lytton's information, with any suggestions which may occur to Major-General Peel on the several points adverted therein.

I am, in reply, to request that you will observe to Sir E. Lytton, that Major-General Peel wishes that the question raised by the Governor, with which this department is more directly concerned (the amount of force to be maintained in New South Wales, and the extent to which the Colony should contribute towards the cost thereof) is to be brought under the consideration of the Colonial Legislature; and he feels it to be unnecessary, therefore, in the meantime to enter further upon that subject. The other question discussed relates to the amount of naval assistance to be afforded, and whether the Australian Colonies should be constituted an Admiral's station. General Peel presumes that Sir E. B. Lytton will communicate with the department of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty on this portion of Sir William Denison's Despatch.

I am to add, that General Peel is not aware of any communication from this department in which the general question is raised, as to the extent to which the Colony should contribute towards the expenses of the transport from one station to another, within the Australian command, of troops and stores; and can only infer, from the reference made to it in Sir William Denison's Despatch, that it is adverted to in the correspondence which has passed between the Admiralty and the Colonial Office.

Admiralty, 18 March, 1859.

Sir,

Having laid before My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty your letter of the 8th February last, with its enclosures from the Governor of New South Wales, relative to the general question of the naval and military defences of that Colony, I am commanded by their Lordships to state, for the information of Secretary Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, that they see no reason to depart from the general views expressed in the letter addressed to you from this department on the 24th January, 1857.

As regards the questions of local defence and the amount of naval force required to be stationed for the general protection of the trade of the Australian Colonies, and of Tasmania and New Zealand, My Lords deem it probable that the amount of force maintained in the seas adjacent to the Colonies will, in future, require to be larger than at former periods, and two additional Ships of War have recently been ordered to proceed from China to join the Senior Officer at present commanding the ships stationed for that service.

My Lords have also had under consideration the expediency of a complete separation of the squadron in the Australian seas from that under the command of the Flag Officer on the East Indian and China station; but they are of opinion that an officer with the rank of Commodore will be sufficient for all general purposes at present.

It

It does not appear to their Lordships to be more incumbent upon this department, or more necessary than at the date of the former Admiralty letter, namely, January, 1857, that they should enter particularly into the questions affecting the conveyance of the Mails, or the transport of troops and stores to the Colonies in general; but as regards the principles by which the cost of such services should be regulated, My Lords may be permitted to observe, that the cost of the conveyance of troops from England to the territories of the East India Company was defrayed, and freight was provided, to the latest period, by that Company.

The conveyance of troops, however, from England to the Colonies, and their removal from one Colony to another, might, perhaps, be reasonably defrayed by the Imperial Government, on the general understanding that the removal of troops, by sea, from one part of a Colony to another, should be at the cost of the Colony.

The cost of naval force for the general protection of the trade of the Colonies should be defrayed by the Imperial Government under all circumstances.

In all cases, however, in which special demands for assistance might be made by the Colonies, under circumstances not evidently resulting from external aggression, or from attacks of aboriginal tribes upon the frontiers, or within the Colonies, the cost of freight and of the maintenance of additional troops should be chargeable on the Colonial Government; but in no case should additional charges be imposed upon the Colony on account of the increase of naval force, except where special allowances may be necessary from peculiar local causes.

With these remarks my Lords would wish only, once more, to refer to their Despatch of 24th January, 1857.

I am, &c.,

H. CORRY.

No. 12.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

On the Organization of the Military Force required for the defence of the Australian Colonies.

IN former Minutes I have gone fully into the question on the defence of Port Jackson, and in these I have alluded to the character and strength of the military force which it will be necessary to maintain, in order to render the batteries which have been constructed available for the protection of the City. My object on the present occasion is to bring before the Council the data upon which an opinion may be formed as to the organization by which this military force may be made most effective and most economical.

Before, however, I enter upon this subject, it is necessary that I should bring clearly before you the relative liabilities of the Mother Country and the Colonies, so far as regards the defence of the latter.

It is, I am aware, not unusual to insist upon the obligation of the Mother Country to take upon herself the defence of Her Colonies, upon the assumption that the relation between the two is that of parent and children. This analogy, however, could only hold good in the infancy of a Colony. So soon as the child is capable of action the relation between the parent and it is one of mutuality; the parent is bound to aid in the defence of the child, but the child is under still more stringent obligations to assist the parent in every way.

Analogies such as these afford, however, no safe ground upon which to establish complicated systems of political relationship. The tie that binds together the parent and child is but very faintly imaged in that which connects the Parent State and the Colony; and it would be hopeless to depend upon such a mere cobweb as this when the interests of the two parties had ceased to be identical.

A more cogent argument upon which to base the obligation of the Mother Country to take upon herself the charge of defending her Colonies, may be found in the acknowledged fact, that in most instances the risk to the Colonies arises from some difference between the Parent State and a foreign power, with reference to matters in which the Colony has little or no direct interest. It must not, however, be forgotten that it is owing entirely to its connection with a Parent State whose power is sufficient to make itself respected, that a Colony, especially when it has extensive commercial transactions with foreign countries, escapes from the risks which beset the weak in their dealings with the strong. Questions as to the jurisdiction of the Courts of the Colony over foreigners, which are now referred to the Home Government, and form the subject matter of negotiation between England and other countries would, would, were there no such referee at hand, be settled summarily by a demand on the part of the foreign power for redress—a demand enforced by threats which a small state would be unable to withstand; instances of this are too frequent to require to be quoted. Though, then, the Colony runs some risks from its connection with the Mother Country, it escapes many others.

On the other hand the liability on the part of the Mother Country to contribute towards the defence of the Colonies is not unrequited. To a Country like England, whose mercantile transactions extend throughout the world, it is of enormous importance to have in every sea, ports and harbours to resort to where its merchants are welcomed as friends and relatives. If this be an advantage in time of peace it is enhanced tenfold in time of war.

The importance attached by the French to the possession of such friendly harbours is evidenced by the efforts which they are now making to establish themselves in New Caledonia and other of the islands in these seas. These positions are looked upon not so much as Colonies, where a surplus population may find comfort and the means of accumulating wealth, but as military outposts, upon which fleets or detached vessels may fall back when either pressed by a superior force, or in want of repair, or of provisions and stores.

There are thus advantages to both parties in the ties which connect the Colonies with the Mother Country, but I should deprecate most strongly any attempt to balance those which accrue to the one party against those enjoyed by the other; in fact it would be impossible to do so, and the attempt would only lead to disappointment, and would introduce feelings which should never exist between friends and relatives.

The Mother Country has thus an interest in the defence of a Colony:—when this is in its infancy exposed to danger, whether from within or without,—aid is freely given; the military and naval force is employed without stint; and a heavy expenditure, the weight of which falls upon the people of England, is incurred without complaint or demur. When, however, the Colony increases in strength and wealth, a call is naturally made upon it to furnish a portion of the means required for defence against either external or internal enemies. This appeal is replied to in some Colonies by the organization of a militia, in which service, under certain circumstances, is compulsory upon the whole population,—the Mother country maintaining at the same time a regular force of sufficient strength to serve as a reserve upon which the militia might form, and by which it would be most effectually supported.

The Colonies, however, in which the establishment of a militia, or of some analagous military force, is most readily responded to, are those in which the necessity of some organized system of defence, either against an internal enemy as at the Cape, or against a hostile force from without as in Canada, is ever present to the minds of the community. Each individual in those Colonies feels that he has a direct interest in promoting the efficiency of the militia, and he willingly sacrifices so much of his time as may be required, in order to perfect himself in those exercises which are necessary to enable him to do his duty as a soldier.

In other Colonies where, from local circumstances, the chance of attack by any sufficient hostile force is but small, or where, if made by an efficient force, the damage from such an attack would be of a local instead of a general character, the organization of a militia would not commend itself to the public mind as a matter of urgency; the danger would be too remote to operate in any way in inducing individuals to sacrifice their time in military exercises; and a militia, if created by law, would be a force upon which no dependence could be placed.

It appears to me that this would be the case in the Australian Colonies generally. There are no enemies at hand of whom they have any reason to be afraid. Those by whom they may, under certain circumstances, expect to be attacked, have it only in their power to damage certain points upon the coast, and could never, in any way, come in contact with the inhabitants of the interior. Then again, in these Colonies the wages of labor are very high, and the sacrifice made by a man who devotes a certain number of days in the course of the year, to military training, is far greater than in other Colonies, where wages are lower.

Should the Government think fit to remunerate the militia man for the loss of time expended in drill, the cost to the Treasury would be excessive when compared with the results produced.

Service

Service then in the militia in these Colonies would be either onerous to the individual or burdensome to the State, and it would, therefore, be advisable to provide, if possible, some efficient substitute for a force of this kind. This, it appears to me, might be easily arranged by an engagement on the part of the Colony, to defray a proportion of the cost of the regular troops, which would be required for its defence; and this proportion might fairly be estimated, as in the case of the Postal contract, at one-half of the pay and allowances of the whole military force required. The Colony would then, as it does now, provide the accommodation required for the troops; it would also erect and maintain all the fortifications which it might be deemed advisable to construct, while the Imperial Government would organize the troops; subject them to a well-established system of discipline; place them under its own Military law; and maintain the whole force in an efficient state.

Arrangements such as these, however, should not, when once entered into, be lightly abrogated. Troops must not be asked for by the Colonies under the pressure of a fear of invasion, and then sent away when this fear has ceased: neither on the other hand is it desirable that troops, detached for special Colonial service, should be moved to other parts of the world, without the consent of the Governments of the Colonies.

It appears to me that all difficulties connected with such an arrangement would be met by the establishment of a local regiment as in Canada, Ceylon, the Cape, and elsewhere. This regiment, when once organized, might be recruited in the Colony, and its strength might be increased or diminished, according to the state of the political relations of the Empire, without any difficulty, either by adding to or diminishing the number of men in each company, or by increasing or reducing the number of companies. An arrangement such as this might be made to embrace the whole of the Australian Colonies. A regiment of Australian rifles consisting of two battalions, would furnish a force which, when supplemented with a few companies of artillery, would be sufficient for the defence of all the Australian Colonies; for when the railroads now in contemplation are completed, facilities will be afforded for concentrating a very large proportion of the force either at Melbourne or Sydney, as may be required, and the means of moving men from Melbourne to Tasmania or elsewhere, are always in readiness.

The estimates appended to this Minute will give a correct idea of the cost of a single battalion of such a regiment, and of the expense of a militia force of the same strength.

From these it would appear that the actual cost of a battalion of 8 companies of 80 men, including the existing Colonial allowance to officers and men, would be £38,925 per annum. The Imperial Government would pay £14,291, leaving in round numbers £24,500 to be provided by the Colony.

The cost of an equivalent body of militia, that is a body of equal strength, would in time of peace be, perhaps, in a small degree inferior to that of a regular regiment; but in time of war, when it would be necessary to keep a force permanently embodied, the expense of the militia would mount up rapidly, and could not, I think, be estimated at less than double that of the regiment of the line.

Looking then, in the first place, to the necessity which exists for the maintenance of a military force, in order to secure the City from the risk of seeing the batteries raised for its defence used for its destruction, and in the second place to the advantage which would be gained, both as regards the efficiency of the force and the cost to the Colony, by the substitution of regular troops for militia, I should strongly recommend that an application be made to the Imperial Government, requesting that a regiment should be embodied for local service in New South Wales, or—should the other Colonies approve—in Australia generally, under such limitations and conditions as have been sketched in this Minute, but which will of course require to be elaborated and perfected by the military authorities here and in England.

W. DENISON.

To this must be added the interest of money expended in providing Barrack accommodation and lodging money for Officers. This is included in the Estimate for the Regiment—at least a sum of £1,400 is taken for lodging allowance. In the Estimate the Officers' pay is put at lower rate than they are now receiving; it would, probably, have to be increased to the extent of £2,000 per annum.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

In a Despatch received by the last Mail, the Secretary of State drew my attention to the fact that war had broken out in Europe, and that great anxiety must exist as to the general peace of the world; it was also stated that, without exciting unnecessary alarm, it would be desirable that the Government should be prepared with any precautions requisite for the safety of the Colony. In the wisdom of the course indicated I most fully concur, and I propose to draw the attention of the Members of the Executive Council to the precautions which it may be advisable for the Government to adopt, and to the amount of the expenditure for which application will have to be made to the Legislature.

Before, however, I attempt to discuss the steps which it may be desirable to take to place the Colony in a proper state of defence, it will be necessary to consider carefully and dispassionately the nature of the danger against which we have to provide; and with reference to this, I do not think that I can give my opinion more clearly or more definitely than I have done in a former Minute of mine on the defence of Sydney, dated 10 February, 1855; I there said—"It is evident that, in order to decide upon the character of a defensive system, we must first get a clear idea of the nature of the attacking force, and of the various modes in which its operations can possibly be conducted. What then are the various descriptions of hostile force which may be directed against the City of Sydney? These are—

- " 1st. A fleet, having on board a body of troops, whose number and equipment would be such as to warrant an attempt to land and carry on operations against the City, either in conjunction with the fleet or independently, the ultimate object being to take possession of the City and the Colony, and to hold the same either temporarily or permanently.
- " 2nd. A number of heavy frigates, without troops on board, whose object would be to carry off or destroy the shipping in the harbour, and to lay the City under contribution.
- " 3rd. A few frigates or privateers, whose object would be the same as that last mentioned.

" With regard to the probability of an attack by a fleet having troops on board in number sufficient to enable them to act independently, we may at once dismiss it from our thoughts. I am not aware of any nation which would venture to move a body of troops to such a distance from its resources for the purpose of attacking Colonies peopled with Englishmen, having a population of upwards of half a million, and supported by the whole strength of the British Empire; and, indeed, were such an attack possible or even probable, the works which have been suggested would offer no guarantee against it, or, indeed, be of the least service in enabling us to resist it; we have, therefore, only to discuss the mode of resisting attacks from the sea."

These opinions have in no respect been altered or modified. I am still of opinion that there is no nation in the world which would venture to disembark such a force on the shores of Australia as would be competent to attack a City containing from 60 to 80,000 inhabitants, and having at its disposal an organized military force, small it may be in number, yet sufficient to act as a nucleus round which the irregular force, which such an attack would bring into action, would form. It may perhaps, however, be as well that I should go a little more at length into the reasons which have induced me to form this opinion, as I am aware that some persons, both here and in Victoria, are disposed to believe that such a system of attack is not only possible but probable.

What force would be requisite for the attack of a town containing from 60 to 80,000 inhabitants disposed to defend themselves?

What material must such a force have at its disposal?

It would, it appears to me, be the extreme of rashness, were a less force than 5,000 men to be landed for such a purpose, and these should be accompanied with a proper proportion of artillery, a most essential element in the attack of a town, and for this purpose from 20 or 30 guns would be required.

Is it then probable that any Nation would incur the risk and expense of sending out such a force to these seas, upon the very uncertain contingency that it would, in the first place, place, succeed in running the gauntlet through the different squadrons cruising at various points between England and Australia, and in the second, of finding the Colonies, on its arrival, so entirely unprepared for resistance, or so willing to submit, as to induce them to yield without a struggle?

I think such a contingency is one against which it would be unnecessary to take any immediate precaution; it is so remote that I, though feeling deeply the responsibility which is imposed upon me as Governor, of neglecting no precaution which may conduce to the security of the inhabitants of New South Wales, should not feel justified in recommending the Legislature to provide against it, as the steps which it would be necessary to take for that purpose would involve a heavy annual outlay. The only danger then against which provision should be made is that of an attack by a naval force, and to the precautions which it will be desirable to take, looking to the possibility of such an attack, without reference to its probability, I will now address myself. I must, in the first place, call your attention to the preparations which have been already made to provide against this contingency.

In the first place works have been erected at various points which command the Harbour and the anchorage near the town. At the extremity of the Domain a battery for 8 guns has been erected, 2 of these have already been mounted, and the remainder are in readiness and might be placed in battery in a few days. Fort Denison is completed and armed; it mounts 15 guns and has barrack accommodation for 58 men; a detachment of Artillery is quartered in this Fort. Fort Kirribili is completed; 5 guns are mounted and barrack accommodation for — men is provided. Dawes Battery is complete; 20 guns are mounted there; a barrack for 100 men has been constructed at the rear of the Fort and part of a company of Artillery is quartered there. Fort Macquarie has at present 18 guns mounted; of these, however, only 11 may be considered as serviceable, and these are of a lighter calibre than it would be desirable to retain in such an important position.

There are then 59 guns mounted or in readiness to be mounted in positions where they would be very effective for the defence of the Harbour and the Town.

The first point to be determined will be the advisability of erecting any works in addition to those above mentioned.

It appears to me that a work is wanted at Garden Island for the purpose of looking into the Bay in the rear, only a portion of which is seen from Fort Denison. This work should be made capable of defence against men landing on the Island, that is,—it should be a closed work with a scarp of from 30 to 40 feet in height; it should be armed with from 3 to 4 guns of heavy calibre and long range, such as those which have lately been invented by Sir W. G. Armstrong, for besides looking into the Bay before mentioned, it will also look well up the channel, between the Sow and Pig's and Bradley's Head.

It would also be desirable to complete Fort Macquarie by finishing the flank which was at one time begun on the east face, so as to carry five heavy guns; by inclosing the space in rear of the Fort, so as to secure it from being taken by a rush; by raising the two Towers at the east and west angles, so as to protect the guns in the faces of the works from enfilade; and by making embrasures in the parapets of the battery to protect the guns, which are now, on account of their small height above the water, very much exposed to the fire from an enemy's vessel. Heavier guns should be mounted on the north and east faces, and in the Tower, while the present 24-pounders might be placed on the west face looking up the Harbour. When these works are completed there will be 73 guns in battery, of which 67 will be in positions most effective for the defence of the Town, and of these 62 will bear upon vessels entering the Harbour.

As far, then, as material is concerned, I do not think that more is at present required for the defence of the Town. Batteries upon the Middle and South Heads, and on the Sow and Pigs, would, it is true, add very much to the security of the Harbour; but the expense of erecting these, and of maintaining the force required to man the guns, would be so great as to be out of all proportion to the risk against which they are intended to guard.

The next question for consideration is, as to the means at the disposal of the Government to make the guns effective.

At present the military force in Sydney consists of — companies of the 12th regiment, mustering about 370 men; one company of artillery, numbering 105 effective; a detachment of engineers, consisting of 28 men; altogether about 500 men. Now on reference reference to a former Minute of mine, dated in April, 1855, I find that I estimated the minimum force which would then be required at 1,000 men, of whom 600 were to be infantry of the line, and 400 artillery. This number was required to work the guns, most, if not all of which, would be in action at once; and at the same time to afford the necessary amount of support against an attack, should men be landed from the enemy's vessels, some of the works, especially that at Mrs. Macquarie's Chair, being open batteries, it is now proposed to make an addition of 8 or 9 guns to those already mounted; a proportionate addition must therefore be made to the military force. About 1,100 men then would be required for the proper defence of the Town.

In my former Minute I stated that it would be desirable, that of the force required 600 should be trained and effective infantry, and I expressed an opinion that it would be desirable to obtain from the Imperial Government the services of a regiment of the line. I still adhere to this opinion. The perfect organization and discipline of the men will make them much more effective than any force which it would be possible, under existing circumstances, to embody in the Colony. An irregular force, consisting of volunteer companies of riflemen, would be very useful as skirmishers, should any attempt be made to land and move into the country. A few companies might also be useful in the defence of the Harbour should attempts be made to land; but under heavy fire from shipping; and when the fate of the city may depend upon prompt obedience to order and steady discipline, a trained force cannot be dispensed with. I should suggest, then, that application be made to the Government, to increase the force at Sydney to the extent mentioned; of the remaining 500 men, 130 consist of trained men—artillery and engineers, and therefore the force which it will be necessary to raise will consist of 370 or say 400 men, all of whom should be trained as artillerymen.

In my former Minute, I suggested that inducements should be held out to the police of the town to serve as artillerymen. These men are to a certain extent trained; they are amenable to discipline; and from this circumstance will probably be more effective than volunteers. Arrangements might be made without any difficulty for their instruction; their efficiency as police and as artillerymen would be very much enhanced were they quartered in barracks.

If 200 police could be trained, the force required to supplement these and the artillery would not exceed 200 men; these might consist of volunteers,—3 companies, of 80 men, would provide a sufficient force for working the guns in all the Batteries. It would be desirable to hold out some special inducements to those who volunteer for a service, which may cause them to be placed in positions of no ordinary danger; in return, some established routine of training should be demanded from them.

It would be as well, in addition to the artillery, to encourage the formation of a few companies of riflemen. The amount of this encouragement may be a matter for consideration. Arms and accoutrements would be provided and perhaps uniform; the number however for which these should be provided might be limited to, say, 300.

Having now brought the subject clearly before the Council and stated my own opinion, I would suggest that, before action be taken upon any suggestions which have been made, a reference should be made to the officer in command of the troops, with a request that he would consider carefully the general question of the defence of the Port and City of Sydney; and state for the information of the Government, the amount and character of the force which he would consider sufficient for their protection under the various contingencies to which a war may give rise.

I should wish Colonel Perceval to be furnished with a copy of this and the former Minutes on the defences of Sydney.

It would also be desirable that the Commodore should be requested to consider the same subject, with reference to the co-operation which it will be possible for the naval force under his command to afford in case of an attack, calling his attention to that portion of my Minute, of 14th April, as has reference to that branch of the subject.

It would also be desirable that Commodore Loring should be requested to afford the Government the benefit of his advice upon the general question of the Defence of the Harbour and Town against a naval force, as his knowledge and experience may enable him to make most valuable suggestions.

W. DENISON.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council, with respect to the defences of the City and Port of Sydney.

Extract from Minute No. 59-29. Dated 25 July, 1859.

PRESENT:—

His Excellency The Governor General.
 The Honorable The Vice-President of the Council.
 The Honorable The Secretary for Lands and Public Works.
 The Honorable The Attorney General.
 The Honorable The Colonial Treasurer.

UPON the invitation of His Excellency the Governor General, the Council resume the consideration of the subjects connected with the defences of the City and Port of Sydney, to which their attention has already been directed, as mentioned in the proceedings on the 11th instant, and previous dates.

2. His Excellency thereupon lays before the Council a Minute, in which he informs them that in a Despatch received by the last Mail, the Secretary of State drew his attention to the fact that War had broken out in Europe, and that great anxiety must exist as to the general peace of the world; and stated that without exciting unnecessary alarm, it would be desirable that the Government should be prepared with any precautions requisite for the safety of the Colony. His Excellency intimates his full concurrence in the wisdom of the course indicated, and proceeds, at considerable length to draw the attention of the Council to the precautions, which it may be advisable for the Government to adopt, and to the amount of the expenditure, for which application will have to be made to the Legislature.

3. It is unnecessary here to recapitulate the subjects embraced in His Excellency's Minute, and the several suggestions embodied therein, the importance of which is such as to call for a more mature consideration than the Council have at present had the opportunity of devoting to them, and with respect to which it is not his wish that the Council should at the present stage arrive at a decision. His Excellency now more particularly consults the Council as to the propriety of a reference being made without loss of time to the officer in command of the troops, with a request that he would consider carefully the general question of the defence of the Port and City of Sydney; and state for the information of the Government, the amount and character of the force which he would consider sufficient for their protection, under the various contingencies to which a war may give rise.

4. The Council express their entire concurrence in the propriety of the proposed reference to the officer commanding the troops, and taking advantage of a further suggestion of His Excellency, they advise that he should refer direct to Colonel Perceval, C.B., and forward for that officer's information copies of His Excellency's present, and former Minutes on the defences of Sydney.

5. The Council further coincide in the opinion stated in the concluding portion of the Minute now before them, that it would be desirable that the Commodore of the Station should be requested to consider the same subject with reference to the co-operation which it will be possible for the naval force under his command to afford in case of an attack, and that his knowledge and experience may enable him to make most valuable suggestions. They therefore express a request that His Excellency should also place himself in communication with Commodore Loring, calling his attention, as proposed to that portion of His Excellency's Minute of the 14th April, 1855, which has reference to this branch of the subject; and requesting him to afford the Government the benefit of his advice upon the general question of the defence of the harbor and town against a naval force.

A. ORPEN MORIARTY,
 Clerk of the Council.

No. 15.

MINUTE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

I LAY before the Council the Reports which I have received from Commodore Loring and Col. Perceval on the Defence of the City and Harbour of Sydney. Col. Perceval includes two separate reports on the same subject from Col. Barney, R.E., and Major Nasmyth.

The following remarks will, perhaps, enable the Council to form an opinion as to the extent to which it will be desirable to adopt the recommendations contained in these different documents.

The subject divides itself into two parts—

1st. The works required for the defence of the harbour.

2nd. The mode of organizing a military force sufficient to maintain these works against attack, and to make them available for the defence of the harbour and city.

Commodore Loring and Col. Barney deal with the first of these two subjects.

Col. Perceval and Major Nasmyth refer entirely to the second.

The relative advantages of ships and batteries are very correctly stated by Commodore Loring. It is a well understood rule that a ship which can lie within 300 or 400 yards of a battery, in still water, will generally silence it; the ship has the advantage of greater concentration and rapidity of fire, and the battery to which she can oppose her broadside within the distance stated will probably soon have to cease firing. If, however, there are several batteries, and these are so arranged that when a vessel is broadside on to one she is stern on to another, which can thus rake her fore and aft, this advantage ceases; for the chances are, that before she could silence one battery there would hardly be a gun left on her decks from the fire of the raking battery. The suggestions as to the construction of embrasures, and as to other details contained in Commodore Loring's letter, are very valuable, and it would be desirable that attention should be paid to them.

With reference to the defence of the harbour by the existing batteries, Commodore Loring is of opinion, that though these would inflict heavy damage upon an enemy, yet a squadron of six or seven vessels would be justified in running the gauntlet through them, and he thinks that this might be done successfully; in which case, though the vessels would be much damaged, the town would be at their mercy. He is, therefore, in favour of supplementing these by works which would prevent the entrance of vessels; and, with this view, he recommends that the eastern entrance of the harbour should be permanently blocked up, by a sort of rough stone embankment, and that a boom should be prepared to shut up the western entrance, guns being mounted at various points about the Middle Head to bear upon vessels entering the harbour or trying to force the boom.

There are several considerations involved in this suggestion to which I wish to draw your attention; but I fully concur in the opinion expressed by Commodore Loring, that in case of an attack by a very superior force safety only could be secured by some such plan as proposed; that is, by preventing the entrance of this force into the harbour, or by detaining the vessels so long under the fire of forts as would be likely to cripple them, and render them less able to cope with the fire of the forts inside.

With regard to the details of the plan proposed, I should, as an engineer, hesitate to recommend the stoppage permanently of the eastern entrance, the consequence of which, when once executed, can with difficulty be foreseen, and which, if found to be injurious, are irremediable. The immediate effects would of course be to increase the velocity of the run of tide; and this, while it might aid in deepening the western channel, by bringing a greater scour on the silt at the bottom, would yet have an effect upon vessels beating in and out in light winds; it would also make the maintenance of a boom more difficult, bringing a greater strain upon the moorings, and giving greater velocity to the vessels attempting to break it. Then again, as the material for making the breakwater across the eastern entrance must be the soft friable sandstone in the immediate vicinity, the action of the sea upon this would gradually convert it into loose sand, which would eventually be swept by the eddies into various places, making shoals at points which now it would be difficult or impossible to foresee. I would rather, therefore, should it be decided to make an attempt to keep vessels out of the harbour, run a second boom across the eastern entrance, than attempt to block it up altogether.

With

With reference to the boom itself, the cost of constructing and maintaining it will not be trifling. The light wood which would be required to float it is not easily procured here, and when procured is by no means durable. Then again, I do not feel certain that it would be possible to construct a boom which is to be moveable readily, and which yet would be strong enough to resist the force and weight of a vessel coming against it at full speed, aided by the tide; or to moor it so securely as to be certain that it would retain its position. A boom too involves works to defend it. These works must be close enough to bring a heavy fire upon boats or vessels employed to cut the timber adrift, or to unshackle the chains which moor the boom; and I question whether this object could be obtained, without carrying out the original scheme of erecting a tower on the Sow and Pigs, as well as other works both on the South and Middle Heads.

It must not either be forgotten, that the presence of an impediment of this kind must be a great check to the trade of the port. To be of any use the boom must be closed at night, so that no vessels could go in or out of harbour between sunset and sunrise. This delay would be increased by the necessity of consulting the tide. In fact, there are very many questions in addition to that of the mere security to the harbour which must be taken into consideration before such a plan as this can be adopted.

With reference however to that very question of the security of the harbour—is the chance of injury to the town from an attack by so large a squadron as that mentioned by Commodore Loring so great as to make it worth while for the Colony to spend a large capital in such works as are suggested, and a large annual sum in maintaining the force necessary to defend them? In considering this question, it must not be forgotten that it is by no means probable that so large an enemy's force would be allowed to sail for these seas without being followed by at least an equal number of English vessels; and even were this not the case it is certain that were war to break out between England and any country in possession of a powerful navy—the number of vessels upon the Australian command would be speedily increased—and if these should not be capable of meeting the hostile force in the open sea, they would be found quite capable of resisting it when assisted by the batteries in the harbour. The view taken by Colonel Barney of the importance of works at the South and Middle Heads is unquestionably correct, but the same remark applies to this as to the suggestion of Commodore Loring, is the outlay warranted by the risk? Would it be wise to expend a large sum in order to provide against a possible, but very improbable contingency? With reference to the risk of this town being bombarded by a vessel or vessels lying in Chowder Bay I do not think that it is very great; in the first place, the distance to the nearest point of the town is very great, and it is hardly to be supposed that a vessel would be allowed to take up her position and lie at her ease there while the Colony was in possession of guns, which could in a few hours be brought to bear upon the vessel from a height which would bring a plunging fire upon her deck.

Having thus remarked upon the first of the topics brought under discussion, I will now allude to that part of the subject which has been treated by Colonel Perceval and Major Nasmyth, namely,—the strength and constitution of the military force which it would be desirable to organize.

I quite concur in the view taken by Colonel Perceval of the inexpediency of introducing a "volunteer" force into the calculation of the number of men actually required for working the guns and defending the batteries. The number stated in my former Minute and which is accepted by Colonel Perceval, namely,—1,100 men, should be composed of men thoroughly trained and disciplined, and I will proceed at once to consider the mode in which he proposes to raise this force which he estimates will in addition to the force of the regiment quartered here, to that of the artillery and sappers, and to the police which it was proposed to organize, amount to 220 men. This he proposes to create by embodying a local militia consisting of three companies of artillery of 80 men each—in addition, however, to these Colonel Perceval advises the formation of six companies of rifles of 50 men each, making a total of 540 men, the cost of which, according to the scheme laid down in his report, would amount to £15,297 per annum in time of peace, and to £40,000 per annum and upwards in time of war.

When, however, the Government has to apply to the Legislature to provide means for organizing so expensive a force, it becomes necessary to consider whether some other mode, as effective and more economical, might not be devised for raising and maintaining the requisite number of men. On considering this subject I retain the same opinion which I expressed to the Secretary of State in a Despatch No. 127, dated in August, 1856, that the interests of both the Colonies and the Mother Country would be better consulted were the military force in the Colonies to consist entirely of regular troops, than were efforts made to supplement a small regular force of infantry and artillery by militia and volunteers. Objections were made to the plan submitted by me on the occasion alluded to, but these objections were based upon a misconception of the meaning of an expression in my Despatch. I think it would not be difficult to prove to the Secretary of State the soundness of the principle by which the liability of the Mother Country and the Colonies to contribute to the defence of the latter in equal proportions is affirmed; or to convince the Legislature that such a mode of supporting the military establishment necessary for the defence of the Colony is at once the most effective and the most economical. It is not necessary, at present, to go further into the details of the schemes proposed by Colonel Perceval or Major Nasmyth, or to discuss the chances of attack by different descriptions of force; these will of course have to be carefully considered both in the Mother Country and the Colony, should the scheme of which I have given an outline be adopted; but it is unnecessary that I should go into the subject at present.

H.M.S. "Iris,"
Sydney, 31 July, 1859.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 26th, and the enclosures, relative to the defence of Sydney and its harbour from an attack by sea.

There can be no doubt but that a strong squadron is the true defence for any sea coast; but as men-of-war are costly articles, and as, in the event of war, it is possible that England might be too much occupied at home to be able to increase the naval force out here, it becomes necessary to consider how Sydney Harbour can be best defended by the means within reach.

A squadron sufficiently strong to attempt an attack on the place would be more than the present naval force in these seas could contend with. Against such a force the ships could only be considered as floating batteries, to be moored either outside the forts and out of the line of their fire, or abreast of Dawes' Battery to guard its northern flank. In the former case, it would be necessary to retain the whole ships' companies in order to repel any attempt on the part of the enemy to board. In the latter, where the guns only have to be looked to, one-half, or certainly one-third, of the seamen could be spared to assist in the batteries on shore.

Sufficient advantages should be offered to the merchant seamen in port to induce them to attend daily at the batteries for two or three hours drill, and this would insure their soon becoming able assistants to the trained artillerymen.

At present there is no vessel under my command that is suitable to act as a "Look-out Vessel," according to your suggestion at page 12 of the printed report.

The most formidable description of defence that can be opposed to shipping is that which is so placed that it cannot be approached within a short range, and which is also so skilfully scattered and disguised that it does not present a conspicuous target to be fired at.

The most favorable circumstance in which an attacking ship can be placed is when she can rapidly take up a position (and it must be remembered that all future warfare will be carried on by swift steamers) in smooth water, and within a short distance of a conspicuous battery.

In this case the rapidity of her fire, arising from circumstances which can seldom be attained on shore, and also the concentration of her whole broadside on some few embrasures, gives her a very great advantage over the usual form of land battery.

Under almost any other circumstances, but more particularly if she is in a sea way and is boomed off to a long range by shoals or other impediments, she is under great disadvantage.

Being

Being constantly more or less in motion, many of her shot will miss the mark, more especially if that mark is skilfully colored and disguised by grass or bushes, or by any means that shall make it difficult to distinguish it from surrounding objects.

I understand that recent experiment has shewn that four inch wrought iron (which proved so effectual in the floating batteries at the bombardment of Kinbourne against 75 cwt. 32 ps. at 700 yards) is not sufficient to resist a heavier calibre at a shorter range. But this is no reason why it should be altogether discarded. It is the best resisting power that has been hitherto brought into notice, and I would recommend that it should be employed; and that when embrasures are required, they should be reversed with the pivot of the gun under, or very slightly in the rear of, the muzzle.

The batteries now erected are quite sufficient to protect this place from an attack from one or two frigates or privateers, as specified in the 3rd description of attack to be guarded against.

The transport of troops and material of war from any distant country to New South Wales for hostile purposes is all but impossible.

But a squadron of ships might come even from Europe and arrive in perfectly efficient order, and then it only becomes a question of how many ships could be spared by the enemy for this purpose.

No doubt the number and position of the batteries, and their peculiarities would be well known to the enemy, and it is scarcely to be supposed that he would send an inadequate force. If they came in sufficient force, I have no doubt but that they could enter, and run the gauntlet, and overpower the batteries.

The very advantages which make Sydney so excellent a harbour for mercantile purposes and the protection of shipping, namely, the smoothness and uniform depth of its waters close up to the shores, are very great disadvantages as regards its defence against shipping. The smoothness of the water gives to the ship's gun the same accuracy of aim that is attainable from a shore gun. The depth of the water enables the ship to approach so close to the batteries that her whole broadside can be brought to bear on a few guns only.

Again, steam power and the very great speed which has now been attained by ships of war (10, 11, and even 12 knots being not uncommon), has altogether changed the nature of the defences required against shipping from what they were only a few years ago. In attacking Sydney a ship need not expose herself until she is close up to Bradley's Head. From thence to the flank of Dawes' battery can be run in 10 minutes, and in the same space of time each one of the other batteries may be similarly flanked and unable to assist its neighbours.

Unpleasant and dangerous as this "running the gauntlet" may be, there are yet plenty of gallant men of all nations who would attempt it. And I think that, although the ships would be hit hard, yet the chances are in favor of their being able to pick up their berths in efficient fighting condition.

If there are six good batteries in Sydney Harbour, I think that seven proportionately good ships would be warranted in entering and attacking them.

If the people of New South Wales and the inhabitants of Sydney are content with this limited means of defence, the batteries, as at present, are quite sufficient to repulse any enemy that is likely to be brought against them on the first outbreak of war. A further erection of batteries inside the harbour would entail more expense, and the necessity of more artillerymen to man the guns, without definitively ensuring sufficient protection; and it must be borne in mind that, under any circumstances of attack, alike whether the enemy be defeated or not, much damage must be done to both public and private property if he be permitted to come into the harbour and open fire.

But cannot the natural defences of the harbour be turned to account to prevent his entrance? The shoal at its entrance, the three cliffy heads which form that entrance, and the heavy swell and sea which always exist there, are very great local advantages.

The batteries, as formerly proposed, would scarcely be sufficient to stop swift steamers, and again a boom would not be sufficient if undefended. But the two combined would be a very serious impediment to the present class of ships.

The

The harbour's mouth, from the point outside Camp Cove to George's Head, is 1,700 yards across. One half of this, or even much more, could be partially stopped up with stone, and this without causing any very material alteration in the practical navigation of the entrance beyond an increase of the strength of the tide-stream.

Strong booms composed of chain cable, floated by light wood, could be prepared and kept on a convenient part of the beach during time of peace, and ready for service in time of war, to be hauled over to George's Head or Obelisk Point at night, or if suspicious vessels were in the offing.

The best of guns should be mounted at the Heads in such positions as would enable them to bear on the enemy's ships whilst entering the Heads, and when stopped by the boom. And it would be very preferable that these guns should be detached, and masked in every practicable manner, and not too close to their work.

It is possible that an enemy might attempt to land and storm these guns.

It is not very easy to man and arm boats under fire and in a sea way; but, in order to guard against this contingency, it would be advisable to erect strong towers in the rear (somewhat similar to the one on Fort Denison) for the guns' crews to retreat to. These forts, being well retired, and at considerable elevation, could scarcely receive much injury from the fire of the shipping, and being placed in commanding positions could pour down grape and canister, and rifle balls, on the storming party.

If it be determined to expend more money in the erection of batteries inside the harbour, I would recommend that retired positions should be chosen, where a long range could be brought to bear on the ships with comparative impunity. It is to the advantage of the ship to get close to her work, and vice versa.

*Victoria Barracks,
3 August, 1859.*

WITH reference to the Minutes of His Excellency the Governor General on the defences of the Colony—communicated to me by his direction with the request that I should consult with Colonel Barney, and Captain Lovell, Commanding Royal Artillery, and after carefully considering the general question of defence for the Port and City of Sydney, that I would communicate with the Government the amount and character of the force which would be sufficient for this purpose in the event of an European war, in which England might be engaged—I have the honor to report that having consulted with the Officers above named, I requested them to furnish separately, in writing, their views on the several matters submitted as the best means of giving the Local Government the information required, in as far as these Officers were individually concerned.

I have also called on Major Nasmyth for a report, directing his attention especially to the possibility of a combined attack by land and sea, as from his late experience in European warfare I considered that he could best furnish the information which would enable the Government to judge as to the probability of an attack of this nature being carried out on this port, in the event of hostilities.

These several reports are herewith forwarded, and the remarks which they severally contain deserve due consideration.

Having myself but slightly studied the subject of fortification I do not consider that my opinion could bear any weight with regard to the position or nature of the batteries to be employed for the defence of the port. I shall, therefore, only offer a few observations on the number and description of troops that will be required for the defences as now proposed. With respect to numbers, I concur in the estimate made by the Governor, that 1100 men trained as—would be sufficient to defend the port against a small naval force.

450 Infantry,

The manner in which the Governor proposes that this force should be constituted, in as far as the regular troops and police are concerned, I also fully concur in; but as I consider that this force is calculated at the lowest number that it would be prudent to attempt the defence, I cannot concur in the expediency of introducing volunteers into the calculation.

Taking, therefore, for granted that the regular force of the garrison will be provided as recommended by the Governor, and that the police are also made available for duty, there would still be 220 men required.

This number, I conceive, would be best provided by embodying a local militia force either by ballot or by voluntary enlistment; and I should recommend that this body of men should be trained as artillerymen, for which purpose the corps should consist of three companies of 80 men each.

The militia is a truly constitutional force, and although in times of peace the expense may be felt to be burdensome, yet as it engenders that spirit by which alone the efforts of a free people can be directed to the defence of their country and institutions, its true value must be at once perceived, especially when war threatens.

Although a corps of the strength above stated would be sufficient for the defence of Sydney under the circumstances which we are now considering, yet for the reasons stated I would strongly recommend to the Government of this Colony that a militia rifle corps, to consist of six companies of fifty men each, should be also embodied.

The Colony being thus provided with local corps of artillery and rifles, they could be rapidly augmented as occasion required, and it would, in a measure, make it in times of danger independent of the Imperial troops, should the necessities of England ever require that such be withdrawn.

These militia corps, if embodied, should be perfectly drilled, by selecting artificers, such as carpenters, masons, and smiths, for the artillery; this might be accomplished in from four to six months, by devoting four hours a-day to drill. The riflemen would require about the same period, and the same hours daily to make them effective. When this body was drilled, they should be assembled twice a-week for practice and drill instruction, and any man on these occasions being found to have lost efficiency to be required to assemble daily until again reported effective. By these arrangements it will be perceived that only four hours a day would be required at the most from these men for regimental purposes, allowing besides this two hours for coming from their homes and returning to them; after being dismissed, they would still have a considerable portion of the day to devote to their usual occupations.

These rules being known and promulgated, together with any others that may be found expedient, I am of opinion that there would be no difficulty in procuring the number of men required if a small amount of pay was given throughout the year. I do not think that this could be established under the following—

Artillerymen.....	9d.
Riflemen .....	6d.

The officers and non-commissioned officers of these corps would require a regular professional education, and as they might have to devote the greater portion of their time to their regimental duties, they should receive liberal allowances.

The expense of these militia corps for the number stated might be roughly estimated as under—

9 Captains and Adjutants.....	10s. per diem.....	£1,662
18 Subalterns .....	5s. „ .....	3,325
36 Non-Commissioned Officers ...	2s. 6d. „ .....	3,325
240 Artillery.....	9d. „ .....	3,235
300 Rifle .....	6d. „ .....	2,700
Clothing per annum, being furnished biennially .....		1,000
		£15,297

The clothing to be provided by the Government, and to be required to last two years; it should be worn only when on duty, on Sundays, and holidays.

No other expense to be incurred by the Government, except when called out against the enemy, when the pay of all ranks should be doubled for the officers and non-commissioned officers, and for the men to be four times the amount, and rations provided for the men and their families.

A liberal scale of pension should be established in case of the men being wounded when in action, and, if killed, a compassionate allowance granted to the widow and children.

Should corps such as I have now suggested be established, it would give a sufficient force to man and cover the batteries, as proposed in the Governor's Minute, without the aid of the police.

I will now refer to the possibility of a combined attack by land and sea. This, I consider not only possible, but in the event of this port being attacked, I am of opinion that this would be the mode adopted by the enemy. From the general nature of the country, I do not think that artillery would be landed by the enemy, but that a strong body of riflemen would be thrown on shore in one or more places, for the purpose of taking the batteries or the harbour in reverse. The present force (or rather that suggested) is a body of 450 riflemen for their protection; this, I think, should be augmented therefore in the following manner—

A mounted battery or, if possible, two should be organised; this I think could be effected by the present mounted police force with very little extra expense to the Colony.

A volunteer mounted rifle corps, armed with double barrelled breech-loading rifles, consisting of four troops, of 25 men each,—100 men.

A volunteer rifle corps, consisting of ten companies, of 50 men each,—500 men.

These volunteers to be armed and clothed by Government, and when called out against the enemy, to receive pay the same as the militia.

The corps being organised to the extent named, could be rapidly augmented to double the number, if required.

The effect therefore of an organization to the extent named, would be to deter any enemy attacking this place without an organized force of, at least, double the number, and thereby diminishing the probability of an attack at all.

There are several other matters to be considered with respect to the defences, as concerns the ordnance and other stores to be provided, but these will be best considered by duly constituted Boards, when the extent to which preparation is to be made is finally settled.

However great the expense may be, I feel that I am only advocating the best interests of the Colony in recommending the permanent organization of a local force, and that such organization is absolutely necessary, if any defence is intended; I would cite, that such is the opinion of all the best commanders, both naval and military, and this is so strongly urged in the words of Dr. Arnold, that, I trust, I may be pardoned in here quoting them:—

“One of the most certain of all lessons of military history, although some writers have neglected it, and some have even disputed it, is the superiority of discipline to enthusiasm. Much mischief has been done by an ignorance or disbelief of this truth; and if ever the French had landed in this Country in the early part of the late war, we might have been taught it by bitter experience.”

MEMO. for Information of Colonel Perceval, C.B., commanding the Garrison, on the subject of the Defences of Port Jackson.

I take it for granted that the repairs and additions to the works of defence, as suggested by His Excellency the Governor General, will be immediately carried into effect, and the works properly armed and supplied with ammunition, &c.; this done, sufficient protection to the City of Sydney will be afforded against any attack by a naval force entering the port, for the purpose of laying the city under contribution, and for which purpose only I apprehend that any attack will be made. It must, of course, be understood, that a military force will be raised sufficient to man the batteries, leaving a body of men to be disposed of as necessity may seem to require.

The foregoing observations apply to a direct attack upon the works of defence, but I may observe that in all probability no such risk would be run, as the object of enforcing contributions, contributions, in my opinion, may be attained without any risk whatever, and without approaching the batteries.

On reference to Captain Denham's chart of Port Jackson it will be observed that in absence of any defences or obstructions at the entrance of the port, one or more frigates may, without difficulty, or even coming within sight of the proposed advanced work on Garden Island, take up a position immediately to the eastward of Bradley's Head, and under cover of that Head shell the city, from which it is distant only 3,500 yards; a few shells being thus projected would probably be followed by a flag of truce, requiring a large sum of money, or the alternative of bombardment, and there can be but little doubt that the money would be forthwith raised, and without further risk than that to be expected from field guns and rifles, which no doubt would be immediately moved to the scene of action; it is probable, however, that the intended mischief would be done previous to the field guns being placed in a position to open fire.

In this view of the case a question arises as to the necessity for works at the entrance of the Port; it has always been admitted that works of defence are necessary, both on South Head and Middle Head, in addition to the existing batteries, which only form a portion of the general system of works required for the protection and security of the port and city; indeed, plans of such works have been submitted, approved, and partially carried into effect, and perhaps the great objection to their completion arose from a deficiency of military strength to admit of their being properly garrisoned.

The site at Middle Head appears to me to be the most important; it not only immediately commands the approach by sea but also the entrance to and anchorage in the Sound and Middle Harbour, where vessels may, at present, ride at anchor in perfect safety, ready to intercept any ships entering the port; the site is also most favorable, from its character—solid rock—admitting of a secure work, with ditch of sufficient depth to render it safe against escalade. Such a work would answer as a keep for the protection of batteries in its vicinity, on lower and more efficient levels, for the protection of any impediments by which it may be considered necessary to obstruct the channel; however, a work of the required strength could not be constructed without a large expenditure, both of money and time, and possibly, would not, even if immediately commenced, be ready to meet any threatened emergency.

Under these circumstances, and in reference to the possible early visit of an enemy, it would seem prudent, or even a matter of necessity, that measures be adopted for closing up the channel; at all events the means for so doing should be in such a state of preparation as to admit of its being done immediately on a signal being made of enemy's ships in sight. This matter, as well as the precaution of keeping a proper look-out, by boats or otherwise, will not, I am satisfied, escape the observation of the Commodore in command of the Naval Forces in these seas, and who will, no doubt, should he deem it advisable, make application for any additional force he may consider necessary to enable him to meet, successfully, an enemy's squadron, especially detached to this hemisphere.

The next point for consideration is the strength of military necessary for manning the batteries, leaving a sufficient force to act in any manner which circumstances might render necessary. I believe it to be clearly understood that the number of men required for the batteries amounts to the full strength of the garrison; it therefore becomes necessary that every man should be made capable of working the guns and acting with the men of the royal artillery, and thus no force will be left to meet any unforeseen contingencies. It is perhaps desirable that 1,000 men should be raised and drilled, and armed with the best rifles, and further, that a body of seaman (volunteers) be raised for the purpose of acting against shipping.

Referring to the ordnance field brigades it would seem advisable that measures be adopted to admit of the guns being manned and taken into the field at such points as may be found necessary; for this purpose horses as well as men will be required.

The last observation I have to make refers to a supply of heavy ordnance as well as platforms and carriages and other stores; I am led to understand that the officer in command of the detachment of royal artillery has been instructed to supply a list of such guns, &c., as he may consider necessary, but I may be permitted to observe that there is a great deficiency of ordnance, &c., in the country, in fact, entirely insufficient to meet any casualty which would undoubtedly occur in case of an attack on the batteries.

No. 19.

*Brigade Office,
Sydney, 3 August, 1859.*

AFTER the perusal of Sir W. Denison's Minute, it is with no little diffidence that I venture to submit my opinion as to the most probable mode of attack which would be adopted by an enemy attacking the Town and Harbour of Sydney, and as to the most efficacious means of baffling him, as His Excellency has expressed his opinion that the contingency, which appears to me as feasible, is very improbable.

With reference to the method by which an enemy would attack, the undermentioned appear to me the most likely to be adopted, viz. :—

1st. Simply a naval attack.

2ndly. An attack by a land and sea force combined.

With reference to the scheme first stated, it occurs to me that when the additional batteries proposed to be erected by His Excellency are completed and armed, with those now in existence, there will be sufficient to deter an enemy from attempting to force his way past them and the boom that is proposed to be thrown across from the Sow and Pigs shoal to the North Shore. However, the present batteries might be improved by having the barracks bomb-proof for the men, and the magazines rendered water-proof.

Materials, such as sand-bags, gabions, fascines, as well as field guns, and ammunition, &c., &c., might be kept in readiness to be transported to the points where it may be subsequently found expedient to erect temporary batteries. With this view a field battery and small train ought to be organized without delay, as such an establishment could not be rendered efficient without the men and horses being drilled and broken in to their work. The same remark applies to the artillery generally, which force alone should consist of not less than 1,000 men. To make the police force so far available for this purpose would, no doubt, place a very eligible body of men, all of whom are to a certain degree disciplined, at the disposal of the officer commanding, but at the same time their municipal duties would be neglected, or indifferently performed by special constables; I would, therefore, suggest that artillery, in common with the cavalry and infantry which I propose to raise, should be supplied by means of the ballot, making every male inhabitant, with certain exceptions, between the ages of 24 and 40 liable to serve.

With regard to the second contingency—of a combined land and sea attack.

Doubtless it would be a very serious undertaking for any Nation, however enterprising, to send out from Europe an adequate force to levy contributions, which, with a little privateering, would be all that would be attempted on such an out of the way place as Sydney; and the mere knowledge of a strong force being in readiness here would have a very great moral effect in deterring an enemy from entertaining the idea. As far as the transport of the attacking force and its material is concerned I conceive it perfectly feasible. During the last war several of the French frigates transported (without interfering with their own efficiency) as many as 1,200 men, (some of the line of battle ships from 1,000 to 1,500) and, allowing for the difference of the length of the voyage, we may conclude that 800 infantry might be taken in each of that Nation's steam frigates, and accompanied with tenders for the conveyance of provisions, &c., might be capable of landing an expedition in an efficient state.

Artillery against an open Town like Sydney, and for the purposes of such an expedition, would not be requisite now that the rifle has been proved to be so formidable; and there can be no question that 2,000 disciplined and resolute men (who could be brought out in three frigates armed as they are now) would, by being landed on many portions of the coast which are quite practicable, not only take the whole of the batteries now existing in the rear, thereby facilitating the entry of his navy, but would be in a position to dictate terms to the Town.

With a view of meeting this contingency, I would suggest, on the principle I have already proposed, augmenting the present force to 1,000 artillery men, 500 mounted rifles, and 2000 dismounted,—total, 3,500 men.

(REPORT ON SELECTION OF ARMS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF N. S. W., BY MAJOR-GENERAL HAY.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

MAJOR-GENERAL HAY to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

School of Musketry, Hythe, 25 November, 1859.

Sir,

I have had the honor to receive from the War Office your letter of the 13th August last. In reply I beg to assure you that, while I feel highly honored by the confidence you repose in my judgment in the selection of arms for the Government of New South Wales, I am fully sensible of the responsibility such confidence entails. I have gladly undertaken the commission entrusted to me, and have executed it to the best of my ability. As, however, in your letter, you have requested me to obtain the very best weapon which modern science has devised, and, as I have selected the long Enfield rifle pattern, 1853, I feel it right to explain why I have chosen this weapon, the Whitworth rifle being very superior.

1stly. Her Majesty's Government has not recognised for muskets any other bore than .577 inch. The Whitworth rifle (although using the same charge as the Enfield,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  drams powder, and 530 grains lead) is .45 inch; great difficulty would, therefore, be experienced in procuring, at all times, ammunition—in fact, if required in large quantities, it would entail the expense of establishing a laboratory for its manufacture—the efficiency, I may say the actual utility, of all descriptions of rifles being regulated entirely by the nicest adaptation of the ammunition to the rifle, which has already been too clearly proved by the frequent failure of the Enfield rifle both in the Crimea and more recently in India.

2ndly. Mr. Whitworth not having as yet organized his manufactory for rifles on a sufficiently large scale, considerable delay in the supply of 2,000 rifles would be inevitable, which, in the present unsettled state of affairs on the Continent, might prove embarrassing.

3rdly. The first cost of the Whitworth rifle would be considerably more than that of the Enfield, owing principally to the superior material used in the manufacture of the barrel, and the incomplete arrangements at present existing for manufacturing in large numbers. From the above reasons, but above all, feeling that to recommend a weapon not having the full support of Her Majesty's Government would entail a considerable present outlay, and, possibly, future inconvenience, I have, although fully impressed with the superiority of a rifle of smaller bore than that now in the Service, hesitated to select such rifle, and have adopted the safer course, under all the circumstances of the case, in recommending the regulation long rifle with bayonet. I have given the preference to the long rifle over the short one with sword of same bore and rifling—

1stly. Because I consider it more efficient.

2ndly. Because it is considerably cheaper.

3rdly. Because, being less difficult to manufacture, it is not only more easily supplied but less difficult to "view," rendering the supply of 2,000 stand more to be depended on in regard to perfection and uniformity of manufacture.

In conclusion, I trust that the result of my efforts to carry out your views may prove that I am not undeserving the confidence with which you have honored me. I shall at all times have much pleasure in furnishing you with all the information in my power, bearing on the subject of the rifle or rifle shooting, for the full development of which I feel deeply interested.

I remain, &c.,

CHARLES HAY,

Major-General.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, APPOINTED TO REPORT ON AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION.

YOUR Committee have to report that, having considered the subject of the Federation of the Australian Colonies, as remitted to them by your Honorable House, and having conferred with the Select Committee of the House of Assembly appointed for the same purpose, they now submit the resolutions arrived at by the Committees in conference, and adopted by themselves.

10th November, 1857.*

Resolutions of the Select Committees of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, met in conference to consider the subject of the Federation of the Australian Colonies.

RESOLVED:—

1. That although, under existing circumstances, the formation of a Federal Legislature would, in the opinion of the Committees, be premature, there are, nevertheless, so many topics in which the Colonies have a common interest, and in which uniform legislation would be desirable, that the Committees consider it expedient to adopt some measures to secure these objects; and, in addition to the topics referred to in the correspondence transmitted by the

the Secretary of State for the Colonies to His Excellency the Governor, and laid upon the Table of both Houses on the 23rd of September, 1857, the following have occurred to the Committees as fitting subjects for consideration, viz.:—Patents and Copyrights, Law of Insolvency, Professional Qualifications, Uniform time of Meeting of Parliaments.

2. With a view to the more general discussion of these various subjects, and of others in which the Colonies are mutually interested, the Committees recommend, in conformity with the suggestion originating with the Legislature of Victoria, that three Delegates be appointed—one by the Legislative Council, and two by the House of Assembly—to meet Delegates to be appointed by the other Colonies, at such places as may be agreed upon. The expenses of such meeting to be borne by each of the Colonies interested, in proper proportions.

3. The Committees, moreover, recommend that the Delegates appointed should not be authorised to bind the Legislature of this Colony to adopt any decision or resolution which the united Conference may come to; but that their mission should be, simply, to discuss such matters as may be brought before the Conference, and to report the result of such discussion to the Legislature.

Sir,

The House of Assembly having this day resolved, "That the Report of the Select Committee on Federation, and the names of the Delegates appointed by this House, be forwarded to His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief for his information,"—

I have the honor to enclose herewith, for the information of your Excellency, copy of the Report of the Select Committee appointed by the House of Assembly on the 16th October, 1857, "to inquire into and report on the subject of Federation of the Australian Colonies." Parliamentary Paper, No. 188.

I have also the honor to inform your Excellency that, on 23rd December last, the Honorable R. D. Hanson, and R. R. Torrens, Esq., were elected by the House of Assembly "as Delegates to meet Delegates to be appointed by the other Australian Colonies, in accordance with the Report of the Federation Committee."

SIR,

9 Sept., 1857.

In accordance with a resolution of the Legislative Assembly of this Colony, I have the honor to transmit herewith a Progress Report of a Select Committee of that House upon the Federal Union of the Australian Colonies, together with the Report of a former Committee, therein alluded to, and I am to request that you will move His Excellency the Governor General to bring the subject before the Legislature of New South Wales, with a view to obtain its sanction to the proposed conference of Delegates from each of the Australian Colonies.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 2.]

VICTORIA.

PROGRESS REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE UPON FEDERAL UNION.

THE question remitted to your Committee for consideration admits in their opinion of but one solution. Any plan of Federal action, likely to command the sympathy and confidence of the entire Colonies must originate in a manner which will place it beyond suspicion of local influence. And they concur with the Committee of 1857 in believing that this object will be best attained by entrusting, in the first instance, the construction of such a plan to a Conference of Delegates selected and empowered for this duty by the Colonial Legislatures.

With this view they recommend that the negotiations formerly held on the subject with New South Wales, South Australia, and Tasmania, be renewed. The two latter Colonies, when the project of a Conference was first proposed, promptly acceded to it; and, though an objection originated with New South Wales which retarded any joint action, they have reason to believe that it was of a temporary nature, and has disappeared before the urgency with which the question is invested, by the necessity of a united defence of the territory of Australia in case of war.

Your Committee recommend that the renewal of these negotiations be entrusted to the Chief Secretary, and that the Report of the Federal Committee of 1857 (adopted by the Assembly on the 11th of September, and by the Council on the 17th of November, in that year) be transmitted with the present Report to the Governments of the other Colonies, as containing the necessary details of the arrangement in which they are invited to concur.

VICTORIA.

REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE UPON FEDERAL UNION OF THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

THE necessity of a Federal Union of the Australian Colonies for legislative purposes, and the best means of accomplishing such an union if necessary, having been referred to the present Committee, they have given these questions of national polity the prolonged and deliberate consideration which their importance demanded.

On the ultimate necessity of a Federal Union, there is but one opinion. Your Committee are unanimous in believing that the interest and honor of these growing States would be promoted by the establishment of a system of mutual action and co-operation among them. Their interest suffers, and must continue to suffer, while competing tariffs, naturalization laws, and land systems, rival schemes of immigration, and of ocean postage, a clumsy and inefficient method of communicating with each other, and with the Home Government on public business, and a distant and expensive system of judicial appeal exist; and the honor and importance which constitute so essential an element of national prosperity, and the absence of which invites aggression from foreign enemies, cannot perhaps in this generation belong to any single Colony of the Southern Group; but may, and we are persuaded would, be speedily attained by an Australian Federation representing the entire.

Neighboring States of the second order inevitably become confederates or enemies. By becoming confederates so early in their career, the Australian Colonies would, we believe, immensely economise their strength and resources. They would substitute a common national interest for local and conflicting interests, and waste no more time in barren rivalry. They would enhance the national credit, and attain much earlier the power of undertaking works of serious cost and importance. They would not only save time and money, but attain increased vigor and accuracy, by treating the larger questions of public policy at one time and place; and in an Assembly, which it may be presumed, would consist of the wisest and most experienced statesmen of the Colonial Legislatures, they would set up a safeguard against violence or disorder—holding it in check by the common sense and common force of the Federation. They would possess the power of more promptly calling new States into existence throughout their immense territory, as the spread of population required it, and of enabling each of the existing States to apply itself, without conflict or jealousy, to the special industry which its position and resources render most profitable.

The time for accomplishing such a Federation is naturally a point upon which there are a variety of opinions; but we are unanimous in believing that it is not too soon to invite a mutual understanding on this subject throughout the Colonies. Most of us conceive that the time for union is come. It is now more than eight years since the Privy Council reported to Her Majesty that "the want of some such general authority for the Australian Colonies began to be seriously felt." At present, a Federal Assembly would not only have the control of a larger territory than any of the Great Powers possess in Europe; but of a population exceeding that of several of the smaller Sovereign States, and of a revenue which equals or exceeds the revenue of the Kingdoms of Belgium, Sweden and Norway, Hanover, Holland, Naples, Hungary, Turkey, Bavaria, Saxony, or Greece. Some of the most renowned Federations in history had less population or wealth, and certainly possessed infinitely inferior agencies of Government than belong to an age of telegraphs and railways.

On the best means of originating such an union we are unanimous. No single Colony ought to take exclusive possession of a subject of such national importance, or venture to dictate the programme of union to the rest. The delicate and important questions connected with the precise functions and authority of the Federal Assembly, which present themselves on the threshold of the inquiry, can be solved only by a Conference of Delegates from the respective Colonies. The course we recommend, therefore, is, that such a Conference should be immediately invited. To it will properly belong the duty of determining whether the plan of union to be submitted to the people shall propose merely a Consultative Council, authorised to frame propositions for the sanction of the State Legislatures, or a Federal Executive and Assembly, with supreme power on national and inter-colonial questions; or some compromise between these extremes. And to it also must be referred minor questions such as the following, which press for a decision:—

If a Consultative Council be adopted—can it act without the aid of ministers charged to submit measures for its consideration? Is it desirable to constitute it a court of impeachment for the Colonies? Shall its deliberations be restricted to certain specified questions; and if so, to what questions?

If the plan embrace a Federal Legislature and Executive—is the Legislature to consist of one or two branches? Must an absolute majority of its members, or the representatives of a certain number of States concur, to make its decisions law? Are its laws to take effect directly on the entire population of Australia, or only after the assent of their respective States? Are they to be administered by the existing Colonial Judiciatures, or by Federal Courts? If its orders are violated by any State of the Federation how are they to be enforced? Shall it possess the power of taxation, or only of assessment on the respective States?

In either case—where shall the Federal body sit; or shall it be rotatory? If the latter—shall the Governor of the State where it sits for the time being exercise the royal prerogative on its bills, or must they be sent to the Governor General or senior Governor?

These, and similar questions, must be determined before a coherent scheme of federation can be framed; but we do not feel at liberty to offer any opinion upon any of them.

In order to invite a Conference of the Colonies it is necessary to make some specific propositions, and we, therefore, recommend:—

1. That the Legislatures of New South Wales, South Australia, and Tasmania, be requested to select three Delegates each, two of whom might be members of Assembly, and one a member of Council, to meet three Delegates from this Colony.
2. That these delegates assembled in Conference be empowered to frame a plan of Federation, to be afterwards submitted, for approval, either to the Colonial Legislatures, or directly to the people, or to both, as may be determined; and to receive such further legislative sanction as may appear necessary.
3. That the expenditure incident to the Conference shall be borne by the respective Colonies, in whatever proportions may be fixed by the Conference itself.
4. That the Conference shall hold its meetings in whatever place the majority of the Delegates may determine; their decisions being interchanged in writing within a month of their elections being completed.

If your Honorable House think fit to adopt these recommendations, it will be necessary to present an address to His Excellency the Governor, praying that he may communicate with the Governors of the other Colonies named, requesting them to submit the proposal to their respective Legislatures for consideration.

And we would further recommend that this Report be communicated by Message to the other House, inviting their concurrence in the selection of Delegates for Victoria, in case the project is accepted by the other Colonies.

In conclusion, your Committee are fully convinced that a negotiation demanding so much caution and forbearance, so much foresight and experience, must originate in the mutual action of the Colonies, and cannot safely be relegated even to the Imperial Legislature.

PROPOSED ANNEXATION OF A PORTION OF NEW SOUTH WALES TO SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

(DESPATCH RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 28 February, 1860.

W. DENISON,

Message No. 28.

The Governor General lays before the Legislative Assembly a copy of a Despatch, with which he has been honored by the Secretary of State, bringing under notice the delay which has taken place in communicating to the Imperial Government the opinion of the Legislature of New South Wales, as to the proposed transfer of a small portion of Territory lying between South Australia and Western Australia to the former Colony.

It would appear from the report of the Law Officers accompanying this Despatch, that by the 46th Clause of the Act of the Legislature of New South Wales, 17 Vict., cap. 41, full power was reserved to Her Majesty to detach from New South Wales the portion of Territory in question.

The Secretary of State however is naturally desirous of acting in the matter with the full concurrence of the Government and the Legislature of New South Wales, and the Governor General trusts that he may be enabled to report that no objection exists on the part of the Legislative Assembly to the proposal to place this Territory, which is now subject to no law, under the control of the Government of South Australia.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge your Despatch, No. 189, of the 4th of December last, addressed to Sir E. B. Lytton, in which you inform him that you proposed consulting the Legislature on the subject of the proposed separation from New South Wales and transfer to South Australia, of the portion of Territory lying between the Western boundary of South Australia and the Eastern frontier line of Western Australia.

I have hitherto waited for the result of your promised consultation with the Legislature; but I must remind you that this is a question of practical importance to South Australia, although of none, as far as I can perceive, to the Colony under your Government, and that the decision has been long delayed.

I

I annex copy of an Opinion which I have received from the Law Advisers, according to which you will perceive that the Crown has full power to affect the proposed change.

I am still, however, anxious to take no definitive step without previous communication from yourself.

[Enclosure in preceding Despatch.]

Lincoln's Inn,
September 28, 1859.

My Lord Duke,

We were honored with your Grace's commands, signified in Mr. Merivale's letter of the 10th September instant, in which he stated that he was directed by your Grace to bring under our consideration the following questions, viz. :—

In the early settlement of Australia the Commission of the Governor of New South Wales extended from the eastern coast westward to boundaries so fixed from time to time, as to include any possible extension of the Colony in that direction; and by a Commission which was issued to the Governor of New South Wales in the year 1830, the western boundary of that Colony was fixed at the 129th degree of east longitude. Under the authority of the Act of the Imperial Parliament, 10 Geo. 4, cap. 22, the Colony of Western Australia was established, and by the Commission of the Governor of Western Australia, which was issued in the year 1831, the eastern boundary of that Colony was made identical with the western boundary of New South Wales, viz., the 129th degree of east longitude.

And that, in the year 1834, an Act was passed—4 and 5 Wm. 4, cap. 95—"to empower His Majesty to erect South Australia into a British province or provinces, for the colonization and government thereof;" that under that Act it was provided that it should be lawful for His Majesty, with the advice of his Privy Council, to erect within that part of Australia situated between the meridians of the 132nd and 141st degrees of east longitude, and between the Southern Ocean and the 26th degree of south latitude, and to establish one or more provinces, and to fix the respective boundaries of such provinces within the limits so indicated, and filling the whole area, the present Colony of South Australia was established. That the consequence of such limitations of the boundaries of the several Colonies was, to leave between the respective boundaries of Western Australia and Southern Australia—that is, between the 129th and 132nd degrees of east longitude and south of the line 26 degrees, north latitude—a portion of territory still considered to form a portion of New South Wales, although, from its geographical position, far beyond the influence of the social institutions of that Colony; that that tract was, as yet, uninhabited, but the progress of pastoral occupation, advancing from the neighbouring Colony of South Australia, began to require the use of it.

That when the Bill passed the Legislature of New South Wales, which now forms the Schedule of the Act, 18 and 19 Victoria, chapter 54, intituled, "An Act to enable Her Majesty to assent to a Bill, as amended, of the Legislature of New South Wales, to confer a Constitution on New South Wales, and to grant a Civil List to Her Majesty," the 46th section which defined the boundaries of the Colony, contained the following reservation :— "Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent Her Majesty from altering the boundary of the Colony of New South Wales, nor from detaching from the said Colony that portion of the same which lies between the western boundary of South Australia and the 129th degree of east longitude, reckoning from the said meridian of Greenwich."

Mr. Merivale was pleased to say that it would appear, therefore, that the power to detach that portion of New South Wales was legally vested in the Crown by the above Act; and also, that by the recent Letters Patent erecting Moreton Bay into a Colony, by the name of Queensland, the boundary between New South Wales and Queensland was specially defined, and to the definition our attention was now particularly directed.

Mr. Merivale also asked—"Is the territory above described bounded by Western Australia to the west, by Southern Australia to the east, and by the line 26th degree south latitude to the north, now part of New South Wales, or is it part of Queensland?"

"If it is still part of New South Wales, can the Crown exercise the power reserved to it by the Act 18 and 19 Victoria, cap. 54, without making any provision as to the public debt contracted by the Colony of New South Wales, both prior and subsequent to the passing of that Act?"

On this subject Mr. Merivale was pleased to refer us to a former opinion of the Law Officers on the question of the division of the debt between New South Wales and Moreton Bay, and to call our attention to the circumstance, that the power to detach this territory was not only confirmed to the Crown by Act of Parliament, but that the Act was founded on the voluntary proceeding of the Legislature of New South Wales, which itself incurred the debt, and which conferred (so far as its authority went) this power on the Crown.

In

In obedience to your Grace's commands we have perused the statement and documents submitted to us, and have the honor to report—

That with respect to the first question, we think that the territory in question is part of New South Wales and not of Queensland. But we are apprehensive that we may not rightly understand the case, as we cannot see how any difficulty could have arisen on the subject, inasmuch as it appears to be clearly stated in the Letters Patent creating Queensland that the 141st meridian of east longitude shall be its western boundary, which leaves eight or nine degrees of longitude between such western boundary and the eastern boundary of the territory in question.

With respect to the second question, we think that by force and effect of the proviso contained in the 46th section of the Local Act (Scheduled to the Act of the 18th and 19th Victoria) it is competent to the Crown to exercise its prerogative right of altering the boundaries of the Colony of New South Wales to the extent at least of detaching that portion of it, which lies between the western boundary of South Australia and the 129th degree of east longitude, without making any provision as to the public debt contracted by the Colony of New South Wales, either prior or subsequent to the passing of the local Act.

The express words of the proviso make the present case different from that reported on by the Law Officers in October, 1856.

We have, &c.,

(CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE SYDNEY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 18 October, 1859.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce,—

SHEWETH:—

That the attention of your Petitioners has lately been specially called to the state of the Customs Laws of this Colony, and from a mature consideration thereof your Petitioners are of opinion that those laws are founded upon principles unjust in themselves, unnecessarily severe, and calculated to inflict enormous injustice upon innocent parties.

That the code at present in force in this Colony is the same in substance as that formerly in force in the Mother Country, but which has long since been ameliorated by the equitable principles adopted by the authorities there, and which code was upwards of six years ago abolished by act of Parliament, and the previous equitable practice made obligatory by law.

That a continuance of the antiquated and unjust system now in force and acted upon here is calculated to be most injurious to the commercial interests and general welfare of the community at large, and it is, therefore, in the opinion of your Petitioners, highly desirable that the general principles of the present imperial code should be forthwith introduced into this Colony.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the premises into consideration, and pass a measure in reference to the Customs Laws of the Colony in accordance with the principles of the code now in force in the United Kingdom.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."
(PETITION RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 18 October, 1859.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, Bankers, Merchants, Tradesmen, and others,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That the attention of your Petitioners having been called to the circumstances connected with a Seizure of Opium on board the American ship "Kate Hooper," on the 17th of June last, by the Customs authorities of this Port, and the confiscation and sale of the same, they are of opinion that Captain Johnson and the owners of the Opium have been treated with undue severity, and that a punishment has been inflicted which is altogether in excess of what was due to the offence with which Captain Johnson stands charged.

That it is unjust that the innocent owners of the Opium should be punished by the confiscation of their property, for an omission on the part of Captain Johnson to report it to the Customs authorities here, inasmuch as the owners had no control whatever over his actions.

That the infliction of a very moderate fine upon Captain Johnson would have answered the ends of justice.

That a Select Committee of the Chamber of Commerce having carefully investigated the circumstances connected with the case, report that they have not found any ground for suspecting an intention on the part either of Captain Johnson, shippers or consignees of the Opium, to commit any breach of the Customs Regulations; copy of which Report your Petitioners beg leave to append.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the premises into consideration; and if the facts are found to be in accordance with the above-named Report, that your Honorable House will afford such redress in the matter as to your Honorable House may seem meet.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."

(PETITION OF CERTAIN CHINESE MERCHANTS OF VICTORIA.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 3 February, 1860.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of Lei Long, Lei Ting, A Son, and A Pou, merchants, trading in Melbourne, in the Colony of Victoria, under the style or firm of Tong Sang,—

SHEWETH:—

That, by a certain vessel named the "Kate Hooper," the master of whom was Edward Perry Johnson, bound from Hong Kong to Sydney and Melbourne, certain merchants resident at Hong Kong shipped a quantity of Opium to the order of your Petitioners, and for which proper bills of lading were duly signed by the master of the said vessel, such Opium to be delivered in Melbourne.

That there is within the Colony of New South Wales a law requiring all articles subject to an import duty to be entered in the manifest of the ships importing such articles.

That there is an import duty on Opium imported into New South Wales.

That there is a rule or ordinance that, on the arrival of any vessel into the Port of Sydney, the master shall be furnished with the rules and regulations in force in such port, and a receipt taken from the master in proof of their delivery.

That this rule or ordinance was evidently made with the view to prevent masters of vessels arriving from foreign parts innocently or unwittingly committing any breach of the Port or Customs Regulations, and in these regulations is inserted the law requiring articles upon which an import duty is payable to be inserted in the ship's manifest.

That, upon the arrival of the said ship, "Kate Hooper," in the Port of Sydney, no copy of the rules and regulations of such port was delivered to the master of that vessel, and the said master was therefore in ignorance of the existence of the law requiring articles upon which an import duty is payable to be entered in the ship's manifest, and, arriving from a distant port at which no such law is in operation, the said master did not insert in the ship's manifest the Opium he was conveying to Melbourne in the "Kate Hooper."

That the Opium was, on account of the omission above stated, seized by the Customs authorities and sold, as your Petitioners are informed, for about fifteen hundred pounds, a price much under its real value.

That the master of the "Kate Hooper," and others interested in mercantile pursuits resident in Sydney, petitioned the Government of New South Wales against this what they deemed harsh and unprecedented proceeding, but without success, no redress having been afforded.

That it is not your Petitioners' province to question the equity or policy of any law your Honorable House may see fit to pass, but we will simply call attention to the fact that in no civilized country is it usual to punish unintentional infringements of the law, more especially when the punishment falls directly on those not cognizant of, and utterly unable to prevent, any such infringement, instead of on the person who committed the error.

That the whole circumstances clearly shew that the master of the "Kate Hooper" had not any intention to defraud the Revenue or commit a breach of the Customs Regulations, for no concealment was used, and the Opium was openly exposed in the cabin of the vessel, when, had any concealment been deemed necessary, it could have been most easily effected, in consequence of the smallness of bulk occupied by this valuable article of commerce.

That, on the arrival of the "Kate Hooper" in the Port of Melbourne, your Petitioners demanded from the master the delivery of the Opium in the terms of the bills of lading, which, of course, he was unable to comply with.

That legal proceedings for the recovery of the value of the Opium were then taken in the Supreme Court of Victoria, and from the inability of such master to satisfy the claim, and it being supposed that he was about to leave the Colony, resulted in his imprisonment, from which, however, he was released, under the operation of the Insolvent Laws of Victoria.

That your Petitioners then took proceedings in the Supreme Court, under the Foreign Attachment Act, against the owners of the vessel, and obtained an order from the Court to attach certain articles and stores, the goods of the said owners, then being on board the said "Kate Hooper," the said order directing the master of that vessel to deliver into a store in such order described within eight days from the date thereof the goods and articles so attached.

That, in the interval between the service of the order of the Court and the time limited for the delivery of the goods and articles therein set forth, the vessel, "Kate Hooper," clandestinely, and without any clearance from the Customs, left the Port of Melbourne, without having obeyed the order of the Court, and has not since been heard of.

That, according to the register of the said "Kate Hooper," I. A. Hooper appears as the sole owner of that vessel.

That I. A. Hooper resides at Baltimore, in the United States of America, and is, therefore, without the jurisdiction of the Australian Colonies, and so far as your Petitioners can ascertain, has neither goods nor responsible agents in Victoria, and your Petitioners are therefore left without remedy.

That your Petitioners, having thus taken every means within their power to recover from the master and owner of the "Kate Hooper" the value of the Opium seized and sold in Sydney in manner herein set forth, and not having even by implication participated or encouraged, but rather punished and pursued, the actual wrong-doer, trust that their case is one calling for relief from the Legislature of New South Wales.

Your Petitioners, therefore, respectfully pray, that your Honorable House will take the matter of this Petition into your earnest consideration, and inquire into the facts stated, and grant such relief as your Honorable House may deem fit.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."

(PETITION OF LEI AFOO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 24 April, 1860.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Lei Afoo, of Sun Wooi, near Canton, in China, at present in Sydney, a passenger on board the "Oithona," from Hongkong to Melbourne, Merchant,—

SH EWETH:—

1. Early in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine your Petitioner purchased at Hongkong aforesaid, through the house of his agents there—Tong Sang—a quantity of Opium and other Merchandise, for shipment to Melbourne in the "Kate Hooper."

2. Having furnished the necessary funds for the purpose to such his agents, your Petitioner returned to his residence at Sun Wooi, a distance of about two hundred miles from Hongkong.

3. After Petitioner's departure from Hongkong aforesaid, five boxes of such Opium were, with other merchandise of Petitioner, shipped by his said agents—Tong Sang—in such vessel, the "Kate Hooper," to Melbourne, for sale there on Petitioner's account, the residue of Petitioner's purchase of such Opium being afterwards shipped at Hongkong aforesaid, in another vessel for Melbourne, also consigned to the house of Tong Sang there, on Petitioner's account.

4. Your Petitioner heard no more of the matter until he received at Sun Wooi aforesaid information of the seizure, by the Government at Sydney, of the Opium so shipped to Melbourne, on Petitioner's account, in the "Kate Hooper," for an alleged infraction of the Customs or Harbor Regulations.

5. Your Petitioner has arrived in the Colony from China aforesaid, for the purpose mainly of seeking redress, is innocent of, and has not been party or privy to, any alleged infringement of the Customs or Harbor Regulations, or of any alleged attempt to defraud Her Majesty's Government, and throughout the transaction in which the seizure arose has acted honestly and in good faith.

6. Your Petitioner is the one on whom the loss occasioned by such seizure falls, the consequences of which have been very serious to him.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays your Honorable House to take the premises into consideration, and to inquire into and afford redress to your Petitioner, in respect of his said grievances; and your Petitioner prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to cause justice to be done and relief afforded in the premises.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly appointed on the 13th April last "to take into consideration the various Petitions presented to this House, relative to the Seizure of certain Opium on board the Ship "Kate Hooper," and to inquire into and report upon the matter thereof, with power to send for persons and papers,"—have agreed to the following Report:—

To enable them to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion on the subject of their inquiry your Committee have taken the evidence of various witnesses, including all those proposed on the part of the Collector of Customs in support of his decision. They have also examined the various papers laid before them by the Government, and those produced by the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, as well as other correspondence and documents connected with the shipment of the opium, and with the legal proceedings taken by the consignees against the master of the ship and the ship herself.

It appears that on the 15th day of June, 1859, the American ship "Kate Hooper" arrived in Port Jackson for the purpose of landing her Chinese passengers and a few articles of cargo, the chief portion of her cargo being destined for the Port of Melbourne. She was boarded by one of the Tide Surveyors, Mr. Collier, who placed a Tide Waiter, Mr. Wright, in charge. On the 17th, by arrangement with Mr. Collier, Mr. M'Koy, another of the Tide Surveyors, went on board to examine the ship's stores. In the meantime the captain had made his report at the Custom House. While Mr. M'Koy was on board, two boxes containing opium were removed from one of the state rooms and placed in the principal cabin, in order to get at a case of pictures for the landing of which his permission had just been sought. On Mr. M'Koy's observing these, he directed his attention to the state room, where he found eight more boxes of opium. The whole ten he immediately seized. On further investigation, twenty-two small packages (tins) of opium were discovered in the cabin of one of the passengers; with respect to these twenty-two tins, it appears in evidence that they were the remaining portion of a quantity which had been in use by some of the passengers during the voyage, and as no question has been raised as to their seizure they they may be dismissed from further consideration. As regards the ten boxes, the master admitted his responsibility at once, and, on Mr. M'Koy pointing out as the ground of the seizure their omission from the manifest, produced the bills of lading, endeavoured to explain the cause of the omission, and craved leave to amend his report. Mr. M'Koy, however, did not feel it to be consistent with his duties to do otherwise than lodge the opium in the Queen's Warehouse and report the matter to the Collector of Customs. The application to amend was therefore directed to that officer, and was supported by the American Consul, and accompanied by various statements and affidavits. The Collector did not think it right to comply with the application.

In the meantime no attempt seems to have been made to find out who were the real consignees or owners of the opium, or to give to them an opportunity of shewing the absence of any design to smuggle on their part, or of any complicity in such design between them and the master of the ship. Of the bills of lading produced, that of 3 of the 10 boxes of opium was in favor of Tong Sang, and that of the other 7 boxes and 4 boxes of merchandize in favor of Lei Leong. Now, Tong Sang appears to be a well-known firm in Melbourne and Hong Kong, consisting of various partners, neither of whom individually bears that name, but of whom Lei Leong appears to be one. It appears to be customary for individual Chinese to trade in connection with various partners, each partnership being distinguished by a different shop name, as it is called by the witness Leau Appa. Of this character, Tong Sang seems in reality to be, although by mistake, occasionally assumed as the name of individual members of the firm. There seems to be reason to believe that a passenger on board the "Kate Hooper" who carried with him duplicates of the bills of lading was no other than Lei Leong of the firm of Tong Sang. If so, however, he was unquestionably destitute of all knowledge of the English language, and in Sydney found himself totally helpless, unable to protect his interests, or to place anyone else in a position to do so. This passenger, whether the identical Lei Leong or not, forwarded by post the bills of lading to Melbourne, to be handed to Tong Sang there. The firm of Tong Sang in Melbourne has a connexion with Messrs. Foxton, Jones, and Co., of that city, through whom all their Custom House and other business requiring a familiarity with the English language and customs is transacted. Upon receipt of these bills of lading, Foxton, Jones, and Co., immediately opened a correspondence on behalf of the consignees, and through their Sydney agents, Messrs. Herring, Harper, and Co., with the Government of this Colony; it does not however appear that any facilities were afforded to them for shewing the innocence of their principals.

The result of the whole was, that the seizure was confirmed and the goods sold.

On the arrival of the ship in Melbourne the master refused to deliver the cargo consigned to Tong Sang and Lei Leong, except as the freight was paid, and was, of course, unable to deliver the ten cases of opium for which that firm held the bills of lading, either in the name of the firm or in that of the individual partner, Lei Leong. In consequence, legal

legal proceedings were resorted to, which resulted in a verdict against Captain Johnson, who thereupon took the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Then it was found practicable to proceed against the ship in the Vice-Admiralty Court, but the consequences of that suit the master contrived to evade by taking the ship surreptitiously to sea. After thus at great expense availing themselves of every remedy they had in law, the consignees petitioned your Honorable House.

This summary may serve to elucidate the following statement of the conclusions at which your Committee have arrived, and of the considerations which have influenced them.

The Customs Act 9 Vict., No. 15, makes all goods liable to duties and not duly reported subject to forfeiture; but your Committee cannot believe that the power thus given was ever intended to be exercised except where it should appear upon inquiry that there was good ground for believing that the failure to report was connected with a design to defraud the revenue. The failure to make a full and true report lies entirely with the master. The shippers and consignees of goods can by no means guard against it; neither have they any voice in his nomination, nor control over his actions. They have simply a recourse against him, often doubtful, and likely, as in this case, to be ineffectual. It was on these grounds probably that in British ports the power itself has been given up in the recent amendment of the Customs Laws. The responsibility of the master is enforced by fine should he be unable to give a satisfactory explanation of the omission; but with respect to the goods, a power of detention only is provided, to be followed, no doubt, by forfeiture in case it should be proved that such omission is part of an attempt to smuggle. The old law, which was precisely the same in this respect as that now in force in the Colony, enabled the authorities to reach cases where there was every reason short of legal proof to believe that the omission to report was of that character. And your Committee consider that it would be unjustifiable to enforce the forfeiture against the owners under any other circumstances.

Were the circumstances in this case such as to indicate an intention of defrauding the revenue? The Collector of Customs was undoubtedly impressed with the notion that the whole was a concerted scheme, which had been defeated by the activity of his officers. Still, his letter to the Treasury of 20th June, reporting the facts of the case and his decision, conveys but very imperfectly the grounds for such an impression. Indeed he appears, both from that letter and from his evidence, to have believed that with respect to the confirmation of the seizure he did all which was incumbent upon him when he satisfied himself that the law had been broken, and to have received any explanation offered only with a view to the question whether further proceedings ought to be taken or not.

It has, however, been represented, in support of his decision—1st. That there was an attempt to conceal the opium: 2nd.—That it was marked in an imperfect and unusual way: 3rd.—That the conduct of Captain Johnson at the time of the seizure was such as to indicate a consciousness consciousness of guilt; and 4th.—That the irregularities attending the shipment of the opium—its absence from the freight list, and the separation of the bills of lading from those of the rest of the cargo—shewed a fraudulent design from the beginning.

As to the first of these allegations, your Committee do not see, in the evidence, anything to shew concealment, beyond the mere neglect of the master to report. The state room, where the opium was stowed, was often left open, and indeed did not admit of being securely fastened, owing to the lock being out of repair. The adjoining state room was assigned to the officer in charge, and he slept there nightly. Some of the boxes of opium were removed openly to the public cabin while the Tide Surveyor was on board, and it was then that Mr. M'Koy first saw and recognized these boxes as containing opium.

2nd. As to the marking of the boxes, although some of the evidence is contradictory, it seems to your Committee clear that most, if not all, of the boxes were marked by the same sort of label which has been exhibited to your Committee. It is very peculiar and formal in its appearance, and seems to be a sort of export certificate indicating the regular payment of certain dues at Hong Kong. Near the centre of this label are the words "Prepared Opium," in distinct type. It may be matter of doubt whether a portion was not marked by large letters painted on the boxes; but even the labels your Committee consider to have been sufficiently distinctive to prevent that character of suspicion sought to be attached on this ground

3rd. Your Committee fail to recognize anything in the master's behaviour that would shew in him the consciousness of any guilt greater than an amount of neglect which might expose him and his owners to very serious inconvenience.

4th. With respect to the irregularity attending the original shipment, on which the Collector appears very much to rely, it appears that the "Kate Hooper" was chartered by a Chinese merchant, and that Russell and Co., a very respectable house in Canton, were the agents of the ship. By them the freight list was made up from the bills of lading in their possession at the time, and delivered to the master along with those bills of lading sealed up on the 22nd of April. The bill of lading of the 7 boxes of opium, and 4 boxes of silks consigned to Lei Leong, is dated 23rd April; as also that of a box of samples consigned to Messrs. Towns and Co., of Sydney. These, therefore, could not be included in a sealed packet dated 22nd April, nor would the items probably be found in a freight list made up and delivered on the same day. But the bill of lading of 3 boxes of opium in favor of Tong Sang bears date the 21st of April, and might, therefore, be expected to be in the sealed packet, which it is not, nor is the item in the freight list. The shipping order for that quantity is dated 28th April; for the 4 boxes of merchandize, and 5 boxes of opium from Lei Leong, on the 21st; and for the remaining 2 boxes from Lei Leong on the 22nd. They are signed in the same way as all the other shipping orders accompanying the bills of lading in the sealed packet; packet; and are accompanied by counterpart receipts of even date, made out in the same handwriting, and with the signature of the mate attached. In each case the orders and receipts and bills of lading purport to be for cabin freight.

Apart from the memorandum in the cargo-book, which bears that these goods were actually received on board on the 23rd, and which is rendered less authoritative than it otherwise would be by the slovenly way in which this record appears to have been kept throughout, there is little reason to disbelieve the statements of the captain, mate, and others, to the same effect, rendered extremely probable as they are by Russell and Co.'s letter, and by the testimony of various mercantile men. These last see nothing unusual in the fact of bills of lading and counterpart receipts bearing a date anterior to the actual shipment of the goods, or to the day on which the copies of the former seem to have been placed in the hands of the agents of the vessel. As to the allegation that on becoming aware of this additional shipment Russell and Co. were likely to have made out an amended freight-list, it appears to be sufficiently rebutted by the consideration that being cabin freight it was of no importance, as between the charterers and the owners, but at the utmost involved a very small additional commission to themselves.

Hong Kong is a free port, with no provision for carrying out the usual Customs Regulations in their integrity. An officer of the Government grants a clearance to ships leaving the port, but it appears that no manifest is presented to, or certified by him, and consequently with regard to such ships several of the provisions of our Customs Law cannot apply. Besides, it is known that not only there, but in the Eastern ports generally, shipments are conducted in an exceedingly loose way, so as to deprive the circumstances attending the shipment of this opium, upon which the Government has relied so much as an evidence of fraudulent intention, of all force whatever.

Your Committee, therefore, have come to these conclusions:—

- 1st. As regards the master, that he was guilty of a neglect of his duty. He did not take any care to make that full and true report of his cargo which he ought to have known was imperative in the port he was about to visit. His explanation amounts to this,—That having no proper manifest, he adopted the course not unusual of trusting to his freight list, forgetting, what he knew to be the fact, that it was imperfect. Your Committee cannot for a moment hold this to be a valid excuse. The very looseness in the mode of conducting shipments at Hong Kong should have put him more on his guard. Your Committee therefore consider that he ought to have been proceeded against for the penalty to which he had rendered himself liable, viz., a fine not exceeding £100, and recoverable before any two Justices of the Peace.

2nd. As regards the forfeiture and sale of the opium, your Committee conclude that they did not proceed upon any proper investigation, and ought not to have taken place. The seizure by the officer was no doubt warranted and proper; but the Collector appears to have taken a narrow view of his duty when he assumed that, in deciding upon its confirmation, he had only to inquire whether the law had been infringed. Your Committee would be loath to discourage an officer surrounded by so many difficulties, and who seems to be zealous in the performance of his duties, but these difficulties must be increased if the administration of a law necessarily giving very large powers is conducted as arbitrarily, and with as little judicial care, as it seems to have been in this instance. Your Committee are of opinion that a sufficient case was placed before the Executive Government to demand of it the institution of an impartial inquiry. The Government not having granted such an inquiry, your Committee feel justified in recommending that your Honorable House should take such steps as may appear necessary to make some amends for the injury sustained by the owners of the opium seized and sold. But the seizure and sale having been conducted in accordance with the law, the Government cannot be expected to do more than make restitution of the actual proceeds of the opium, under deduction of the amount of duty payable on its importation.

3rd. With respect to the question which may be supposed to arise, as to who are to be considered as the owners of the opium,—your Committee do not observe that there is any contest amongst those who have come before you. The Petitioner Afoo has referred to Tong Sang as his authorized representative; and Lei Leong has joined with his partners of the firm of Tong Sang, in obtaining judgment for the whole of the opium as described in the two several bills of lading.

4th. Your Committee are of opinion that the provisions relative to the due report of cargo should be assimilated to those now in force in Great Britain, and that some tribunal should be established by which, after due inquiry, such questions as the present may be decided, instead of their being left, as at present, to the mere discretion of the Collector. And they hope that these, with other amendments of the Customs Law of the Colony, long desired and long delayed, may engage the early attention of the Legislature.

JOHN HAY,
Chairman.

Mr. Broughton,	Mr. Forster,
Mr. A. Campbell,	Mr. Samuel,
Mr. Weekes.

It had been impracticable as yet to procure copies of the Evidence, even so far as the manuscript had been placed in the hands of the printer; whilst the transcribed Evidence of witnesses examined on the 1st instant, furnished only yesterday by the short-hand writer, was still under revision by the several witnesses, in the usual course.

Evidence corrected by witnesses upon revision—The Chairman submitted certain corrections and omissions proposed herein.

Mr. F. McKoy.—Corrections allowed; omission in Answer No. 518 disallowed; but note to be supplied indicating withdrawal, desired by witness.*

Mr. F. Spence.—Corrections allowed.

Mr. C. Wright.—Corrections allowed; alteration in Answer No. 611 to appear as a foot note to original.

Omission of certain Question and Answer between Nos. 686 and 687 of a private and irrelevant nature, allowed.

Committee directed summons to be issued for the attendance of J. N. Beit, Esq., as a witness for to-morrow, at Eleven o'clock.

WEDNESDAY, 16 MAY, 1860.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

None.

Mr. Beit was in attendance as a witness, but in the absence of the Chairman no Member proceeded to the Committee Room.

[By direction of Mr. Samuel, meeting convened and witness summoned for Friday next, at Eleven o'clock.]

FRIDAY, 18 MAY, 1860.

Mr. Parkes,
Mr. Samuel,
Mr. Weekes,

The Chairman laid before Committee a Draft Report.

Draft Report read.

Committee deliberated upon the several points in proposed Report.

Copies of Draft to be furnished to Members prior to Committee being next convened.

The Chairman sought the opinion of Committee in reference to selecting certain of the various Papers furnished by witnesses, for the purpose of appending the more important to Report when brought up.

Committee deliberated.

It was Resolved,—

“That from the several documents referred to, it will be unnecessary to form any appendix to proposed Report.”

[Adjourned to Tuesday next, at Eleven o'clock.]

TUESDAY,

TUESDAY, 29 MAY, 1860.

By direction of the Chairman, meeting called for this day postponed to Friday next, at Eleven o'clock.

FRIDAY, 1 JUNE, 1860.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."

TUESDAY, 24 APRIL, 1860.

Present:—

MR. HAY,
MR. WEEKES,
MR. PARKES,MR. SAMUEL,
MR. BROUGHTON,
MR. WILSON.

JOHN HAY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Henry Lane, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are Secretary to the Treasury, Mr. Lane? Yes.
2. You are aware that the case of the seizure of opium per "Kate Hooper" was brought before the Government some time ago? Yes.
3. The papers, I suppose, passed through your hands? Yes, these are they.
4. You have got the papers? Certified copies of them.
5. Certified copies of the papers? Yes, of letters received in the Treasury Department.
6. What are the papers you now hold? Letters received in the case of the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper."
7. Will you hand them in? Yes. (Witness handed in the documents.)
8. Are you cognizant of the facts connected with this case excepting so far as they are disclosed in these papers? Excepting so far as they are disclosed in these papers.
9. You are not? I am not.
10. By Mr. Weekes: All the original documents excepting the letters of which these are copies were returned to the parties? Yes.
11. The documents relating to the seizure, such as bills of lading and shipping notes, were returned to the parties? Yes.
12. You think you have copies of most of the documents sent in? Yes.
13. But you have not included them in this parcel? No.

24 April, 1860.

Henry Cherry, Esq., called in and examined:—

14. By the Chairman: You are Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce? Yes.
15. You are aware of the case of the seizure of opium, connected with the American ship "Kate Hooper," being brought before the Chamber for its consideration? Yes.
16. And you have in your possession the various documents which were placed before the Chamber to enable them to arrive at a correct judgment? Yes.
17. Have you brought those documents with you? Yes.
18. The various documents which were in the possession of the Chamber of Commerce? The documents on which the Chamber of Commerce drew up the report.
19. What are those documents? They consist of letters and the ship's manifest. First on the list are letters from the American Consul, at the time of the seizure of the opium, to the Government,

H. Cherry,
Esq.

24 April, 1860.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE TAKEN BEFORE THE SELECT COMMITTEE

- H. Cherry Esq.
21 April, 1860.
- Government, or to the Collector, and afterwards to the Government; then the bills of lading of the ship. There is also correspondence from the owners of the opium in Melbourne through their agents here, and a copy of the Chamber's Report.
20. You have no objection to produce them? No. That is the copy of the Chamber's Report (handed in). This is an opinion from Mr. Johnson, solicitor (handed in), which the Chamber took in reference to the case. The Chamber laid the case before Mr. Johnson.
21. Have we a copy of the case as submitted to Mr. Johnson? I rather think that was done in person by Mr. Williams, or some other member of the Chamber.
22. And you have not a copy of the case as submitted? No; Mr. Williams spoke to me, and I went with the captain to state his case to Mr. Johnson.
23. By Mr. Parkes: Was there any written statement of the case? Not to Mr. Johnson. The captain went in person, and I went with him. There was no written statement.
24. By the Chairman: There was no written statement? There was no written statement. These are copies of letters from Hong Kong. They are in Chinese, with translations made both in Melbourne and here by two Chinese interpreters. Leau Appa was the person here; I do not know the name of the person in Melbourne. The original documents are here, also the envelope (handed in).
25. What is the nature of those letters? They relate to the shipment of opium from Hong Kong to Melbourne; one came by the "Cyclone," and the other by the mail steamer. The letter forwarded by the "Cyclone" was in the hands of one of the passengers, and the other came through the post.
26. Do they contain advices of the shipment of all the opium seized? Yes, of the ten cases—not of the small packages—merely the ten cases we are treating about. I have also letters here from Messrs. Foxton, Jones, and Co., the English agents of the house in Melbourne.
27. By Mr. Weekes: What house? The Chinese house.
28. What house is that? Tong Sang and Lei Leong.
29. In partnership? At Hong Kong.
30. In both places? Yes; this letter is signed Tong Sang and it is addressed Messrs. Tong Sang and Lei Leong.
31. Carrying on business in both places as Tong Sang? And Lei Leong.
32. By Mr. Samuel: And Foxton, Jones, & Co., is an English name they have assumed? It is an English firm carrying on the business for the Chinese house in Melbourne. They have done so for the last three or four years.
33. By the Chairman: Who represents Foxton, Jones, & Co. in Sydney? Messrs. Herring, Harpur, & Co.
34. Do you think they would be enabled to give us some reliable information with regard to the character of the houses of Foxton, Jones, & Co., and Tong Sang, and the parties concerned in this opium? Yes, I am sure they would.
35. As agents of Messrs. Foxton, Jones, & Co., they will be likely to know those things? Yes; I am personally acquainted with Mr. Foxton, and have been for many years.
36. You are? Yes.
37. With Mr. Foxton? Yes.
38. Has he been in Melbourne for many years? I have known him since 1852 in Melbourne; in fact he was connected with me in business there for two or three years. I mean that I used to transact business with him.
39. Was he at that time acting as agent for Chinese? Not that I am aware of. I left Melbourne in 1855. If you will allow me to leave this book (produced) I will do so. It contains a copy of the letter to the Collector to which this is an answer (letter produced).
40. This is a letter from the Collector of Customs? I was instructed to apply to the Collector for information, previous to the adoption of the report, by the Chamber. The Collector said he could have thrown a different light upon the matter if he had been referred to, and the adoption of the report was postponed for a fortnight, and I was ordered to apply to the Collector for information. This is his answer (letter handed in)—and I can leave the book containing a copy of the letter I wrote to him applying for that information.
41. You will leave that book for the letter to be copied by the Committee? Yes.
42. By Mr. Weekes: Did the Chamber of Commerce investigate the matter? Thoroughly.
43. What witnesses did they examine? They examined no witnesses further than the papers and documents laid before them. There were no witnesses, with the exception that at a preliminary meeting (before the appointment of the Select Committee of the Chamber who reported upon the matter and who drew up that report) Captain Johnson was introduced by Mr. Williams, and made a statement; but subsequently to that no person was examined. It was simply on the documents that the committee drew up the report. Oh, I beg pardon, I should say that Mr. Herring was examined with reference to the papers from Melbourne.
44. Then the Committee examined Mr. Johnson, the commander, and Mr. Herring, the representative of the Melbourne firm? They did not examine Captain Johnson, they merely heard his statement. He made a verbal statement, but was not examined at the time he made that statement. I am not certain, but I do not think the Select Committee was appointed then. I think it was the General Committee that heard him, and they called a general meeting of members, from which a Select Committee was appointed to go through the documents and make a report.
45. They took no evidence from any of the Customs authorities? They took no evidence whatever, I may say, except Mr. Herring's, and that was in reference to these letters. It was through Mr. Herring that these letters were sent from Melbourne.
46. By the Chairman: They proceeded, then, in drawing up their report, upon the documents

- ments before them—upon Mr. Johnson's statement, verbal and written, and upon Mr. Herring's evidence, which was illustrative of the character of those documents, I suppose? Yes.
47. Then when we have those documents, we shall have all the documents the Chamber of Commerce had before them? All that the Chamber of Commerce had before them.
48. By Mr. Weekes: Then it was simply an ex parte examination? You can hardly say that there was any examination of witnesses at all. The investigation was solely from the documents.
49. And hearing the statement of the Captain of the "Kate Hooper"? They heard his statement, because they had to get some statement upon which to call for a Select Committee of the Chamber.
50. But they sought no information whatever bearing upon the question from the Customs authorities? Yes, they did.
51. You sought none? Yes, we did seek some, and here is the letter applying for the information.
52. Was that subsequent to the report? Previous to the report being adopted, on the suggestion of Mr. Alexander Campbell.
53. By Mr. Parkes: But it is not the practice of the Chamber of Commerce to take evidence in anything like a quasi-judicial manner, is it, on any question? It is not at all usual, except in arbitration cases. The Chamber have no power.
54. But in the ordinary course of their business they do not take evidence, do they? No.
55. What you did in this case was to receive a statement of the grounds of grievance? Yes.
56. You took it up, in fact, as a one-sided affair: you took the grievance side, believing the statement to be founded on facts? Yes.
57. And you trusted to other bodies to inquire as to how far it was a valid grievance? Yes. When Mr. Johnston and his agents could get no redress from the Government, the Chamber appealed. (Letter and answer read and handed in.)
58. By the Chairman: Then the Committee came to a conclusion, and reported upon the documents which were before them? Solely.
59. Have you got a list of those documents? I have. (List handed in.) I think this is a correct list of the documents.
60. These are the documents handed to Mr. Johnson for examination: are these the same documents that were before the Committee, and upon which they came to a conclusion? Yes.
61. I see mentioned here first the ship's cargo book: have you got that? Yes. (Handed to Chairman.)
62. The ship's freight list? Yes.
63. Bills of lading and book? Yes.
64. Two bills of lading loose, and three mate's receipts; three orders, Russell and Co., and account current? Yes.
65. True copy of cash memorandum? Yes.
66. Then there is a lot of loose letters? (Witness handed in letters from Herring, Harpur, and Co., and Foxton, Jones, and Co.) There is also a letter here which is an original. This is also from Herring, Harpur, and Co. These are Captain Johnson's loose letters and statement (these are the first documents we had before the Committee), and there is an affidavit from Mr. Herring. (All handed in.)
67. And Captain Johnson's memorial to the Chamber comes after that document? This is his statement to the Chamber.
68. Chief officer's, steward's, and seamen's affidavit, and Joseph Herring's affidavit? They are here.
69. Loose letters marked A to X consecutively? Those are the letters before the Government.
70. Captain Johnson's affidavit—have you produced that—that is next in order? This is Captain Johnson's affidavit.
71. It is attached to the letters? Yes.
72. A copy of the harbor regulations? Yes. (Handed in.)
73. Then are these all the papers that were before the Chamber? Yes, the entire.
74. And we have now the materials before us upon which —? You have the same material upon which the Chamber drew up its Report.
75. You have not received any documents since, have you? No.
76. All the papers produced by you were received previous to the Report? Yes.
77. By Mr. Weekes: Then, since the Report of the Chamber of Commerce, you have not received any documents throwing further light upon the subject? None whatever.

Joseph James Herring, Esq., called in and examined:—

78. By the Chairman: You are a member of the firm of —? Herring, Harpur, and Co. J. J. Herring, Esq.
79. What is the business of your firm in Sydney? Principally that of wine merchants and importers.
80. Are you the Sydney agents of Messrs. Foxton, Jones, and Co., of Melbourne? Yes. 24 April, 1860.
81. And as such, you would become cognizant of some of the circumstances connected with the seizure of opium on board the American ship "Kate Hooper"? Sometime in July, I received a power of attorney from Foxton, Jones, and Co., to act for them here, and to protect their interests. I put it into my pocket before I came. Here it is. (Power of attorney produced.)
82. Was that the first you had to do with the case? The first we had to do with the case, as far as my recollection serves me. It is now about twelve months ago. The first letter I wrote to them bears upon that.

- J. J. Herring Esq. 83. The power of attorney is dated the 13th July, 1859? My first communication is about the 18th July. I received intelligence first about the 8th July, and my first communication to Foxton, Jones, and Co., is dated on the 18th of the same month.
84. This power of attorney was sent to you for the purpose of enabling you to look after their interest in connection with this opium? Yes; but in the first instance, prior to that, I received a telegram from Foxton, Jones, and Co., requesting me to see that the "Kate Hooper" did not discharge here, or to let them know if she did so, and sailed away from the port—or if she transhipped her goods, that authority would have enabled me to act, in case of such a thing taking place.
85. Was that first communication written in consequence of their hearing of the seizure? In consequence of their hearing of the seizure.
86. Do you know anything of the owners of that opium—Tong Sang and Co.? Yes. I know Tong Sang very well. I have been frequently in Sang's company at Melbourne, both at the office of Foxton, Jones, and Co., and at their own office, in Little Bourke-street. They are considered highly respectable people.
87. What is the nature of the business of the firm? Importers.
88. Chinese importers? They sell up at the mines; they make consignments to the different mining cities. I suppose they have agents there.
89. Do you know anything of the partners of the house of Tong Sang? I know Tong Sang; I do not know the partners; I have seen them. Sang is the only one that speaks English. I could not get on with any of the rest.
90. Do you know the other partners individually? I merely know them by sight.
91. You do not know them to individualise them, and call them by their names? No.
92. Has Tong Sang constantly resided in Melbourne do you know? Always.
93. You do not know whether he has any other name? I do not.
94. Do you find the Chinese you have come in contact with always called by one name? I think so.
95. But you are aware that the house consists of several partners? I have since learned that the house consists of several partners.
96. And I think you said that you had seen those partners? I have seen Lei Leong, who I think is one.
97. Lei Leong? I should be sorry to swear that. I do not know their names very well. Tong Sang & Co. is the name of the firm in Melbourne.
98. Then, further than knowing Tong Sang and a general acquaintance with the character of the house, your knowledge of —? The individuals composing the firm, is small. Tong Sang is the only one.
99. Do you know what is the nature of Foxton, Jones, & Co.'s connection with the firm of Tong Sang? Foxton, Jones, & Co. are warehousemen, and when Tong Sang and several other Chinese houses have consignments in, or, sometimes, a whole cargo of goods, those goods are taken principally to Foxton, Jones, & Co.'s warehouse. They get all the bills of lading from Tong Sang & Co., and frequently they get advances from the banks and pay money to those houses while the goods are in their stores. I daresay they can store in their place three or four thousand tons of goods.
100. And they do, in point of fact, store the goods of those Chinese merchants? They do store their goods. They are essentially the Chinese house of Melbourne. Foxton, Jones, & Co. have that connection.
101. And their practice is to receive the bills of lading on account of Tong Sang & Co.? Yes, on account of Tong Sang & Co. They receive the bills of lading. They lighter the goods and cart them into the store. If Tong Sang wants advance on them he negotiates through them—the goods being there.
102. He negotiates the advances through Foxton, Jones, & Co.? Through Foxton, Jones, & Co.
103. In fact, they form a medium of communication between the Chinese houses and the banks? Yes, when required.
104. And do their English business? Yes, they do their importing business. By English business I understand that portion which requires a knowledge of our language and customs.
105. What steps did you take in consequence of receiving the power of attorney and the telegram following it? I called on Mr. Dawson, of the firm of Rodd & Dawson, and consulted with him, and then we went up to the Colonial Treasurer's.
106. Yes? In the interval the bills of lading had come into my hands from Melbourne. I do not recollect whether they came with that power of attorney or whether they came afterwards, but I think I took that power of attorney and the bill of lading to the Colonial Treasurer's at the same time, and laid them before him, with Mr. Dawson.
107. About what time was that? Well, it must have been soon after receiving that power of attorney. It must have been in the beginning of July or about the middle of July.
108. You had nothing to do with the representations which were made by Captain Johnson or on his behalf? Not at all.
109. You acted solely on account of the owners of the opium? Solely on account of the owners of the opium.
110. What was the result of your representations to the Government? Well, the result was that they were of no avail. I think two or three days afterwards the opium was sold. It was sold so quickly after the final decision of the Government was made known that we had no time to make any communication with our friends.
111. Do you know anything of the value of the opium? I have a letter here bearing upon that. This was written on the 4th August, and it says, "We observe that the opium has been sold considerably under its actual value. The market value of it here, duty paid, would have been £2,250." That was written at the time.

112. And that is from Messrs. Foxton, Jones, and Co.? That was sent from Foxton, Jones, J. J. Herring, Esq., and Co.; but when I was last in Melbourne I got the Chinese invoices, and I had Aou Lo, a Chinese interpreter, who speaks English as well as I do, to make translations of them. I then got a certificate from some of the first houses there as to the market value of this particular item at that period. I think those documents would be in the possession of Mr. Cherry. 24 April, 1860.

113. Do you recollect what was the market value, as you ascertained it in that way? I think it amounted nearly to this advice of Foxton, Jones, and Co.

114. What was the opium sold for? I forget; but I think about £1,200.

115. Did you take any proceedings against Captain Johnson, or had he sailed for Melbourne? He had sailed for Melbourne.

116. Before you had any opportunity? We found here that we were not able to do anything, and he was compelled to go to Melbourne to discharge his cargo. The whole of his cargo was for Melbourne, and Messrs. Foxton, Jones, & Co. took proceedings there; indeed, their legal proceedings there cost nearly £300 in addition to the loss.

117. Their legal proceedings against Captain Johnson cost nearly £300? Yes. I think Mr. Cherry will have the documents—the taxed bill of costs, and all the different proceedings in the Admiralty Court and elsewhere.

118. What was the result of those proceedings—did they obtain a verdict against Captain Johnson? Captain Johnson declared himself insolvent.

119. He became insolvent—well? They then tried to recover on the ship, but they found themselves, I believe, at a loss there, because in order to get at the ship they must get at the owners first. But at any rate, before the question could be settled the vessel left. The captain, we imagine, must have been hidden below. He was the party they could have seized. The ship went away in charge of the mate. They attempted to stop her at the heads, but she got away, and they have had to pocket their loss.

120. Did you know anything of any Chinese passenger on board the "Kate Hooper" who was in any way connected with this opium? I did not.

121. Do you know any one who carried a letter? I do not.

122. Do you know whether there was any one on board the ship who had any control over the opium as agent or owner? I think not. I am sure I do not know. I heard something about it from Mr. Weekes at the time; but the first and only time I heard of it was in the Colonial Treasurer's room.

123. Do you know whether there was a passenger on board the ship who carried letters to Tong Sang & Company? I do not know that there was, but I heard that there was. I heard it in Melbourne, and I think Foxton, Jones, & Co., tell me that in their communications. Those letters have been in Mr. Cherry's hands. I have been hunting for the documents since I received the summons to attend here, but I have been unable to find even the telegrams. So that I could not refresh my memory.

124. You do not know anything about this Chinese passenger then? No.

125. You do not know whether he went to Melbourne or remained in Sydney? I do not.

126. Here is a packet of letters which has been handed in by Mr. Cherry—perhaps you will tell us whether you know anything of these letters (Duplicate letters from Hong Kong)? I have seen them before.

127. Were these handed by you to the Chamber of Commerce? Yes.

128. And these are all from Foxton, Jones, & Co.? Yes, the original documents.

129. These, I suppose, are the letters to which you alluded? Yes, some of them.

130. Did you make an affidavit, Mr. Herring, connected with this case? I believe I did, but I almost forget.

131. Can you recognise that paper? Yes, that is my signature at any rate.

132. Perhaps you will be good enough to look over that document (Affidavit)? Yes, I should have had no hesitation in making that.

133. Well, there is no difficulty about ascertaining to whom the opium really belonged or to whom the proceeds were properly payable? No, not at all.

134. By Mr. Weekes: There was no difficulty? No.

135. To whom do you consider the proceeds were payable? To Tong Sang and Co. (Vide Note 1, Appendix.)

136. Were both the bills of lading for this opium consigned to Tong Sang—as you stated that they belonged to Tong Sang and Co.? One was sent by the mail.

137. Excuse me; I am now referring to the bills of lading themselves: were they both consigned—on the face of them—to Tong Sang or Tong Sang and Co.? That I cannot tell you: I think one was to Lei Leong.

138. Both? Well, I do not know whether I have seen both.

139. You stated that you had no doubt as to the ownership being proved? I said that I had no doubt, but of course there is a reservation. I have no doubt in my own mind as to who are the right owners.

140. I do not mean the two bills of one set; there were two different shipments? Oh, now I understand.

141. Were the bills of lading for both shipments of opium consigned to the same party? I do not know whether they were. One, I think, was a consignment and the other for the house.

142. Then from whence do you derive your information as to there being no doubt as to the ownership of the opium? I forget which parcel did belong to Tong Sang; the large one, I think—the 7 cases. The smaller one was a consignment to them on behalf of another party—the 3 boxes. I was under the impression that the whole 10 were Tong Sang's. You see it is so long ago that the details have gone from my mind. (Vide Note 2, Appendix.)

- J. J. Herring, Esq. 143. Then, in point of fact, you are informed that there is no doubt as to the ownership? Well, I have seen Tong Sang and had some conversation with him. He is the loser at any rate, at present. He has that short in his bank account.
- 24 April, 1860. 144. The paper you hold in your hand is for—how many cases of opium? Three boxes.
145. Shipped by whom in Hong Kong? By Tong Sang.
146. Shipped by them? Shipped by them.
147. And consigned to whom? Tong Sang; one house in China consigned to the sister house here.
148. And the other is for—? For seven boxes.
149. Who are they shipped by? Lei Leong, consigned to Lei Leong.
150. You said that the opium was sold so quickly that you had not time to correspond with your friends in Melbourne—Messrs. Foxton, Jones, and Co.? Yes.
151. Are you aware what time the seizure was made—do you recollect the date? I think it was some time in June.
152. Do you recollect when the sale was made? I do not.
153. Was it a month after that? No, not a month after the commencement of my correspondence with Foxton, Jones, and Co. It seems to have been a long time after the seizure before they were aware of it, or before I had any communication made to me. The 4th July seems to have been the date of their first advice.
154. Will you look at that letter (21st July, 1859)?—Do you remember if that is a copy of a letter sent by you to the Colonial Treasurer? Yes; I recollect that now.
155. What is the date of that letter? The 21st July.
156. Do you remember how long after the seizure that was? I should say it was about a fortnight, but I cannot recollect. I do not know what was the date of the seizure. I did not pay much attention at the time of the seizure, because I had no interest in the matter. It was not until after the seizure that I got this communication from Foxton, Jones, and Co. that I knew that they had any interest in the matter.
157. Then on reconsideration do you still say that there was not sufficient time afforded you to correspond with Melbourne on the subject before the sale? There might have been time for a letter and a reply, but on a subject of so much importance there was not time to get the necessary documentary evidence.
158. Did you ever make any application to the Government to postpone the sale, in order to enable you to receive such documents, or state that such documents were necessary to your case—do you remember making any application of that kind? I think I called with Mr. Dawson upon the Colonial Treasurer on that subject, and we had a conversation in reference to it, and he stated that the Government were very anxious to come to a just decision, or words to that effect.
159. Do you recollect the time? It would be shortly after that letter; I dare say within a week, perhaps.
160. The 21st July? Yes; it would be within a week of that letter. I know I called with Mr. Dawson upon the Colonial Treasurer, and upon Mr. Robertson also.
161. But there was ample time for all parties concerned to correspond, over and over again, with Melbourne, between the time of the seizure and the time of the sale? Well, there might have been. There was not after I became interested in the matter.
162. Do you mean that there was not time? Between the actual sale and the time of the seizure there was; but not between the forfeiture and the sale. When that was confirmed by the Government the sale was made very quickly. After the decision of the Government was made known (I would not say the seizure) very little time elapsed before the sale.
163. Do you know whether the captain said that the shipper and owner of this opium was a passenger aboard his ship? The owner! No, he never said that the owner was a passenger; I think not.
164. You are not aware that he did? I am not aware that he did; but he was careful in what he said to me, because my interest was antagonistic to his.
165. By the Chairman: There is a petition presented to the Assembly by a Chinese calling himself Afoo,—do you know anything of Afoo? Afoo was here when I was in Melbourne, and when I returned he had gone to Melbourne. I have a copy of that petition here now.
166. You have not seen him? I have not seen him.
167. You do not know precisely the connection of Afoo with Tong Sang? Nothing further than that petition sets forth.
168. Do you think the assertions of that petition are likely—that he is likely to be the owner? I know the respectability of the connections of Tong Sang and Kael Ming. Those are first rate houses, and I think, myself, I should place reliance upon it.
169. According to that Tong Sang appears to have been employed by Afoo? Yes, Afoo. I have heard since I came up—Mr. Harpur told me—that it was Afoo that suffered the loss, and he had come to look after the matter.
170. Tong Sang was only acting then as agent? Tong Sang appears to have been the agent.
171. For Afoo? For Afoo.
172. In the shipment of the opium? Yes. Afoo states himself, does he not, that it is his loss?
173. By Mr. Welles: Then Tong Sang & Co. in Hong Kong are not the owners? Tong Sang.
174. According to your own statement? According to the petition Afoo is the owner, seemingly.
175. By the Chairman: But they represent the owner? They represent the owner; they are owners as far as we are concerned.
176. By Mr. Welles: Because we got no further back just now than Tong Sang being the owner at Hong Kong—now we are getting another step, and it is Afoo? Very likely, it is not the slightest consequence which is looked upon as the owner.

177. By the Chairman: I suppose there might be a dozen interested in the opium coming through Tong Sang—three or four people very often conclude to make a joint shipment? J. J. Herring, Esq.

Yes.

178. And one person acts as agent? Yes, and ostensible owner. It does not alter the merits of the question. 24 April 1860.

179. You have not known Tong Sang to be accused of any smuggling transactions? Never. I think the firm is quite above anything of that sort.

180. Is that a characteristic of Chinamen generally? Well, I daresay when it is to their interest to be honest and honorable men they would not condescend to smuggle. They are some of them men of large property.

APPENDIX.

NOTE 1.—The designation of the house both in Hong Kong and Melbourne is not Tong Sang and Co., but Tong Sang.

NOTE 2.—This answer not by any means conveying my meaning, I beg to substitute the following:—From my knowledge of the bills of lading being in Tong Sang's possession, and one of them at least being in favor of that firm, and further that the whole of the opium was consigned to them in the usual way of business.

TUESDAY, 1 MAY, 1860.

Present:—

MR. SAMUEL,
MR. MORRIS,
MR. A. CAMPBELL,

MR. PARKES,
MR. BROUGHTON,
MR. WEEKES.

JOHN HAY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

J. H. Williams, Esq., called in and examined:—

181. By the Chairman: You are a merchant in Sydney, I believe? I am.

182. And you took some interest in the question as to the seizure of opium on board the American ship "Kate Hooper"? I did.

183. Some question arose as to the regularity of the shipping documents? Yes, there was a question. J. H. Williams, Esq.

184. As to the dates, I think, borne by the boat notes? And bills of lading.

185. And bills of lading? Yes, they did not correspond.

186. Do you recollect what was the particular discrepancy dwelt upon by the Customs authorities? I do not recollect now, but I have a copy of a letter I addressed to Messrs. Russell & Co. on the subject.

187. You wrote to Russell & Co., seeking an explanation? I wrote immediately after the case was closed by the Government—after the opium had been seized and sold—asking for such information as they could give me with reference to the particulars of the shipment. Shall I read this letter?

188. Perhaps you will be good enough to read it? (Vide Appendix A.)

189. What is the date of that letter? The 5th August, 1859. On this occasion, if I may be permitted, I will say that, from inquiry which I have recently made, I have no reason to suppose that the owner of the opium was on board the ship; or that Lei Leong was on board at all. I think you have a copy of the reply of Messrs. Russell and Co. to that letter.

190. Is this the letter received by you in reply? Yes. (Vide Appendix B.)

191. Did you at one time suppose that the owner of the opium was aboard the ship? Yes; but I arrived at the conclusion from what Captain Johnson himself said, and he gave as his reason—that the Collector of Customs told him—that on the seizure being made this man aboard the ship burst into tears and evidently was in great distress that the opium should have been seized. That, however, is quite consistent with the fact of his being simply in custody of the bill of lading, and not Lei Leong, or in any way interested in the opium at all. Because, from what we understand of the Chinese laws, if an act of fraud or speculation be committed by a Chinaman, not only himself but also his family are held responsible by the Government. Therefore, it is quite consistent with the fact that he should have burst into tears and still have had no interest whatever in the opium. I have a copy of a translation of a Chinese letter, of which I presume you have the original, dated Hong Kong, 14th April, 1859, in which it appears that instead of Lei Leong being the person to whom the bill of lading was intrusted it was Hung Fou, and that Lei Leong is a partner in the house of Tong Sang, and so far as I can understand is resident in China, and has never been here or in Melbourne. And the statement of Afoo, which I presume the Committee has before it, is quite consistent with the statements contained in this letter, that "three cases of opium are upon account of our own house, and seven cases on account of Lei Leong." Five cases of this opium were intrusted to Lei Leong, a partner of the house of Tong Sang, by Afoo, for shipment to Melbourne.

192. What is that letter? This is a copy of a translation of a letter from Tong Sang. I think it is Tong Sang.

1 May, 1860.

J. H.
Williams,
Esq.
1 May, 1860.

193. With reference to what you state just now, Mr. Williams, I see that the name here given of the passenger (in the bill of lading) to whom it had been intrusted was Hung Fou?

194. And your opinion is clearly that Lei Leong, the shipper of the opium, was not on board the vessel at all? Yes.

195. Notwithstanding the contrary impression of Captain Johnson at one time? Yes; but you will bear in mind how he arrived at the impression. He says he did not know the man was on board, and would not know him if he saw him in the street. We know that after these circumstances having been mentioned to him by the Collector he assumed it as being a fact, and I believe has admitted it in his correspondence. Such was the representation made to me by him all along. The way he arrived at the conclusion was by the remark made by the Collector in reference to the feeling he exhibited when the opium was seized.

196. By Mr. Weekes: But the feeling exhibited would not induce the captain to believe that his name was Lei Leong? Yes, he might do so. Lei Leong being the shipper of the opium is naturally believed to be the owner, and the feeling manifested was only such as he might believe would be exhibited by the owner of the opium. When you consider that the family of the man as well as himself are responsible for his honesty and faithfulness it is quite consistent—considering him not to be the owner—that he should manifest such feeling on the seizure being made.

197. By the Chairman: Is there anything to lead you to believe that Lei Leong, the shipper of the opium and a partner of the firm of Tong Sang, was a passenger aboard the ship? Nothing whatever. There was no other circumstance to lead Captain Johnson to believe it, so far as I am aware.

198. And nothing has transpired since, to your knowledge? Nothing that I am aware of. Everything that has transpired since has confirmed me in the opinion that he was not there. You see in my letter to Russell & Co. I express a doubt; but every circumstance that has since transpired has confirmed me in the opinion that he was not there.

199. It is alleged on the part of Captain Johnson that, although the mate's receipts bear date the 20th and 21st. April, these receipts, having been made out with the shipping orders, do not necessarily shew that the goods were actually received on board the ship at that date? Oh! but it is very plain to every man who has anything to do with shipping goods. If I am the agent of a ship, and you send me 100 bales of wool: twenty of them came into day, and the mate's receipt and shipping order are made out. But perhaps the whole hundred bales do not arrive on board until three or four days after. They have probably to be screwed or pressed. The mate does not look particularly to see that the date of the receipt corresponds with the date at which the goods are received on board the vessel. He simply looks to see whether he has got the goods according to mark and number; that is all he looks to. It is a thing of every day occurrence.

200. Then I am to understand that that is a thing of frequent occurrence? Yes.

201. By Mr. Weekes: Is it not rather peculiar to wool? No, I think not.

202. Is there not something peculiar about wool—that when it arrives on the wharf it is retained to be pressed before it is stowed away? Nothing whatever.

203. Is that the custom with other goods intended for shipment—do they not generally go on board at once? No; hides or any other merchandise shipped from this place would be liable to go on board in the same way; and opium would be liable particularly in China. No doubt the Tong Sang house advances to those shippers of opium as wool is advanced upon here, and when they get the documents, for instance, from Russell & Co., that the opium is placed under their charge, they may get their money. The one case seems to me to be analogous to the other. There, however, ships do not lay alongside a wharf, but in the stream.

204. In point of fact it appears that many of those shipments took place at different times for different portions of the goods included in the same shipping order? No; what I imagine is this: these goods are taken to Russell and Co's. "go downs" there as they are called. They come in different parcels, and as they come in the shipping order and mate's receipt are written out. It is evident that they have been written by the same hand and at the same time. These are all sent with the boat when a parcel of these goods is taken. For instance, if two or three cases of opium were to come in they would not send the boat with them specially, but wait until there is a cargo. Or, when they have all the opium that is to go on board they send the boat and take it, and the receipts go on board with it. I believe it is in evidence that the ship was actually under-way when this opium was taken on board.

205. By Mr. Weekes: You are aware that these cases of opium, and the freight on them, are omitted altogether from Russell & Co's. freight list? Yes.

206. The documents shew also that Russell and Co. were aware of this intended shipment? Of course they do.

207. Is it not rather improbable that a house knowing there was to be a shipment of goods, and having made out the shipping notes, would abstain from making some inquiry whether those goods had been shipped or not, in order to include them in their freight list, and also in the bill which they made out against the ship—on which they charge a commission? Well, they themselves reply to that question.

208. Say, for instance, in your illustration in the case of wool;—the agent of the ship having advice that 50 bales of wool have come down to the wharf, sends an order to receive the wool on board—would it not be the ordinary course that they should make some inquiry whether those 50 bales had gone on board at once, that it might be included and a commission charged? It would not be usual in a case of this sort, because if the captain gives up his cabin or any one of his cabins to freight he receives the benefit, and it is not usual for commission houses to charge on the captain's adventure one way or the other.

J. H.
Williams,
Esq.

1 May, 1860.

209. When you say the captain's adventure you mean cabin freight? Yes. This freight is distinguishable from a portion of the cabin freight. A portion of the cabin freight in this ship is under deck. That appears upon the freight list. But this opium is in the cabin occupied by the captain himself.

210. By the Chairman: This is his adventure? I cannot say that it was; but such is usually the case.

211. By Mr. Weekes: And you do not know that there is any distinction in this case? There is in this case.

212. One below and another above? Yes.

213. No other distinction than that? I cannot answer, because I do not know what arrangement may have been made.

214. But you are assuming a distinction of course between the one below and the other on deck? Not only that, but because one appears on the freight list, and also because the captain asserts that there was a distinction—he says so all along.

215. Can you understand such a distinction as that? I can, perfectly well.

216. Perhaps you will favor us with an explanation of the distinction. You say the cabin freight is the privilege of the captain—where then is the distinction between the freight below and the freight above, both being cabin freight? I do not say it was in this case. I say that such frequently is the case, and may have been the case in this instance. The cabin occupied by the captain and officers is considered to be his perquisite.

217. And cabin freight is included in Russell and Co's. freight list? Yes; but you may say that the cabin below is the ship's hold, for the purposes of cargo if not taking passengers. It was not used as a cabin at all on this voyage. It is appropriated as a cabin in cases of necessity.

218. Then I do not see that you give any grounds for this distinction? It is simply an opinion.

219. By the Chairman: The charterer does not appear to have had the privilege of putting goods in any portion of the cabins? No.

220. That was a privilege belonging either to the captain or the owners of the ship? It was stipulated in the charter party that the owners should have that privilege.

221. And you think—this opium being not in the cabins below, but in the captain's cabin above—that the agents (Messrs. Russell and Co.) might not have intended to charge a commission? No; and even if they had the commission probably would not have amounted to twenty shillings, and it would have been hardly worth their while to make up a second freight list for that. The commission on the freight of that opium, I presume, would not amount to twenty shillings.

222. And they might not think it worth their while to make up a supplementary freight list for the sake of this twenty shillings? They evidently did not know —

223. By Mr. Weekes: Evidently did not know that the opium was on board either? No.

224. They do not say so? They say that it frequently happens in passenger ships going to Australia and California. It is the usual thing for cabin freight to come on board at the last moment.

225. The shippers of the opium assert that the opium was all taken on board in one day? The captain and mate say so.

226. Now how can you account for the fact that the bills of lading for that parcel of opium, which all went on board on one day, bear two separate dates? From the simple fact that the bills are filled up with the shipping notes. They are two distinct ones. Lei Leong is the shipper of one parcel, and Tong Sang is the shipper of the other. From subsequent evidence it appears that the second shipment—7 cases of opium—was intrusted to Tong Sang's house by people residing in the country districts. They came to Hong Kong and shipped the opium at the last moment for Afoo, leaving the whole matter in Tong Sang's hands. That is how I account for two bills of lading; and, as the opium did not go aboard the ship until the day she sailed—until the ship was under-way—when the captain took the papers, I presume he signed the bill of lading at that time.

227. The order of Russell and Co., to receive the opium on board, was in one case dated the 20th? Yes.

228. And the bill of lading the 21st? Yes.

229. And they assert that it was only shipped on the 23rd? Yes.

230. How do you reconcile those three things? I do not see any inconsistency; there is nothing irreconcilable—nothing unusual. The same thing occurs in bills of lading frequently. If you are making a shipment you send the bills of lading to me, and you send one parcel to-day and another to-morrow, and so on. It is not usual for the captain to sign at once; he probably does not sign until he goes to sea.

231. Yes, but signing is a very different thing from dating? You may make out your bill of lading to be dated the day you send it to my office.

232. Is not this the natural course: first there is an order to receive the goods on board, and then when they are ascertained to be on board the bill of lading would be dated? I do not think so.

233. By the Chairman: The bills of lading are prepared at the same time as the shipping order? Yes; we frequently have bills of lading dated a month before the signature. The goods may be received on board—

234. It is so? Yes; it is a thing of every day occurrence here.

235. By Mr. Weekes: Is it not one of the greatest protections to the Customs of every port in the world that the entire cargo should be reported? Unquestionably the whole cargo ought to be reported; there is no doubt about that.

236. Is it not a thing well known, or ought it not to be well known to every captain that such is the case? Is it not the general practice? Every man is bound to know the law.

J. H.
Williams,
Esq.

1 May, 1860.

237. But is it not a thing so well known as to render it inexcusable in a captain of any experience to omit to do so? I do not know that it is. For instance, here is a captain on his first voyage: he would not be supposed to know so well as a man who had been long conversant with such matters.

238. Does a captain, generally speaking, take the berth without having gone through the regular gradations? No.

239. Is not his experience as chief mate——? No, they have nothing to do in American ships with the Custom House business.

240. But a man cannot go round the world and remain in that state of ignorance in which you are supposing American officers to be? I believe them to be as intelligent as most masters of ships. I am prepared to admit that in this case the captain was bound to know the law; but any man may commit an error.

241. Do you know any port where the omission to report leads to a confiscation of the goods not reported? In no port of the world, if it can be shewn that it was not designed.

242. Are you acquainted with the present Customs Act of England? Yes.

243. The 16th and 17th of Victoria? I think it is the same.

244. Have you the 164th section there? No, but I have the 107th section.

245. It is stated here that the master of every ship arriving in any of the British possessions in America or the Channel Islands, whether laden or in ballast, shall come directly and before bulk be broken, to the Custom House for the port or district where he arrives, and there make a report in writing to the proper officer of Customs in the same form and manner as hereinbefore provided on the arrival of any ship in the United Kingdom so far as the same may be applicable; and if any goods be unladen from any ship before such report be made, or if the master fail to make such report, or make an untrue report, or do not truly answer the questions demanded of him, he shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, and if any goods be not reported such goods shall be forfeited,—were you aware of that? No; I am aware that the practice is quite different—quite the reverse: that the goods are taken to the Queen's warehouse, and that, where it is specially shewn that there was no design to smuggle or defraud the revenue, the goods are given up and a fine is imposed.

246. Yes; that is, each case is judged on its merits—by its surrounding circumstances? Yes. The 107th section provides, that where an omission is made in the manifest it may be amended if the duty involved be under £20. (Witness read the clause to which he referred.)

247. You state in your letter to Russell & Co. that the captain was not aware that the shipper of the opium or any portion of it was a passenger on board? Yes; and I say afterwards that it is still very doubtful whether such a party came in the ship.

248. That is opposed to his statements to the Government? I explained to you how his statement to the Government arose—from his having been led to believe that he was on board by the Collector of Customs himself.

249. By the Collector? By the Collector relating to him the feeling manifested by the man on board when the opium was seized. The inference has arisen altogether from that. Captain Johnson adopted it, and in his correspondence admitted it to his own injury.

250. Then he stated the particular fact upon the authority of the Collector of Customs? Unquestionably.

251. That the emotion of the Chinaman made it out that he was Lei Leong? Yes, he adopted the view of the Collector.

252. By the Chairman: My impression from his letter was that he had discovered it in some way not known before? The only way he discovered it was in the way I have stated. There was a looseness in the correspondence in the first place, which tells very much against him; but, so far as Captain Johnson is concerned, he is beyond the reach of either benefit or harm by any action which may be taken in the matter,—it is the people who have innocently intrusted their property to him that will suffer.

254. In what way? Clandestinely.

255. With his ship? Yes.

256. By the Chairman: It was in consequence of proceedings taken by Tong Sang? Yes, in consequence of a subterfuge, it may be said, by which the ship was seized. They assumed, for the purpose of getting possession of the ship, that a portion of her sails and stores were purchased by the freight of this opium,—otherwise they could not attach the ship.

257. At whose instance? At the instance of Tong Sang,—which certainly does not look like collusion?

258. In the first instance they proceeded against Captain Johnson? Yes.

259. And he became insolvent? Yes.

260. And then his ship was seized? No, the ship was not seized, but they attached the sails and stores.

261. And ordered them to be sent ashore? Yes.

262. But they were not sent ashore? No.

263. By Mr. Weekes: Had this opium been landed here or on the coast, or at Melbourne, would there have been anything to shew in the ship's papers that there had been anything contraband landed? There would have been nothing to shew on the ship's papers, but there would have been something to shew in the hands of Tong Sang, who held the bills of lading for this opium.

264. But it is of such an important character—the insertion of all the cargo in the manifest (or what answers to the manifest)—that there is no way of tracing if any smuggling of this kind has been transacted, if omitted? But there was no manifest. There is no Customs there to give a manifest. It is simply a clearance; that the “Kate Hooper” had cleared out that day with a general cargo.

ON THE SEIZURE OF OPIUM PER "KATE HOOPER."

265. And the agents sealed up all the bills of lading they knew to be aboard? With the exception of those which were sent after his accounts were closed.
266. Which they did not know were on board? I cannot say. They were made as all shipments are made —.
267. That might be? Yes.

APPENDIX A.

Sydney, 5 August, 1859.

Messrs. Russell & Co., Hong Kong.
Gentlemen,

Captain Johnson, of the ship "Kate Hooper," having had ten cases of opium seized on board his ship, in consequence of his not having made an entry of them at the Custom House here on his arrival, and having appealed from the decision of the Collector to the Governor and Executive Council, and his appeal having been refused, and the opium condemned and sold, for, amongst other reasons, alleged inaccuracies in his statements; and it being our intention, on behalf of Captain Johnson, to appeal from the decision of the Government to the Legislative Assembly, it is important that we should be furnished with an affidavit from your firm, or rather some member of your firm, embracing all the particulars connected with the shipment of the opium in question.

It is assumed by the Government here, that the fact of this opium not appearing upon the ship's freight list, when it must have been known to you that it was in process of shipment, in connection with its non-entry here, is of itself prima facie evidence of an intention to smuggle. In reply, Captain Johnson says the opium was cabin freight, and that it was not shipped until after his accounts with you had been closed; both of which he alleges as reasons for its non-appearance on the freight list. The Government rejoins by saying, that other portions of the cabin freight are embraced in the freight list, and that the order from your house to receive at least one portion (three cases, we believe,) of it on board, and the mate's receipts of its having been received on board, were dated the day prior to his accounts being closed, viz., May* 20th, and that the bill of lading of that portion is dated 21st May, the day upon which his accounts with you were closed; while the orders and mate's receipts for seven cases are dated respectively 22nd and 23rd May, and the bill of lading for this parcel is also dated the 23rd May. These discrepancies they regard as an additional reason for inferring an intention to defraud the revenue.

In one of his letters to the Government, Captain Johnson says that you were the shippers of the opium, assigning the respectability of your house as a reason why an intention to defraud should not be suspected.

On inspection of the bills of lading, it turns out that two Chinamen were the shippers; and it is said, that the shipper and owner of seven cases is a passenger on board. Captain Johnson's statement, that you were the shippers is easily explained to merchants, from the fact of your being the only parties whom he knew in the matter. The Government, however, affect not to be able to understand how such a mis-statement can be reconciled with honest intentions. He further says, that he was not aware of the shipper and owner of any portion of the opium being a passenger on board, and it is still doubtful whether such a party came passenger in the ship. If the fact that he did not can be established, it would be a strong circumstance in Captain Johnson's favor.

We should be glad to receive all such particulars respecting the shipment, as you may think would be of service to a man in Captain Johnson's circumstances. Captain Johnson did not consign his ship to us, nor did he apply to us for advice until after the seizure had been made, and a considerable portion of the correspondence had taken place. There has, no doubt, been a looseness in conducting the case, which is unfavorable to him; but there has been nothing whatever to warrant even suspicion of an intention on his part to smuggle. On the contrary, all that he has done has been open and above board, and a very strong degree of sympathy is felt for him in this community.

After remaining here about six weeks, he sailed for Melbourne on the 31st ultimo, where he arrived yesterday; he has consigned himself to our house there. He will, without doubt, be obliged to give up his ship there in order that he may be on the spot to prosecute his claims before the Legislative Assembly.

If possible, we will enclose copy of Captain Johnson's appeal to the Government.

The whole question has been now referred by him to a Committee of the Chamber of Commerce for investigation and report upon the facts, preliminary to an appeal to the Legislature.

The Legislature will meet at the end of the present month, and it is therefore important that we should be early in possession of any facts to his advantage which it may be in your power to supply.

Respectfully yours,
WILKINSON, BROTHERS, & CO.

* I believe this should have been April instead of May.—J. H. W.

APPENDIX B.

Hong Kong, 8 November, 1859.

Messrs. Wilkinson, Brothers, and Co., Sydney.

Dear Sirs,

We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your valued favor of 5th August, giving to us full particulars of the unfortunate case of Captain Johnson, of the "Kate Hooper," of whose serious loss we learn with great regret.

While we are, of course, most anxious to do all in our power to aid him in this matter, we have to regret that we can produce little or nothing in the shape of evidence beyond what is already in your possession.

There can be no question but that the opium was regularly shipped—the different shipping orders, the mate's cargo book, and the bills of lading, all of which are with you, afford the best and clearest evidence of this fact. It is the same routine through which all cargo shipped hence, passes. Nothing is wanting to prove a strict uniformity to the custom in this respect, and all the cargo shipped by the "Kate Hooper" was shipped in the same way. These documents are, in fact, the only ones that could be produced to prove due regularity in the shipment of the opium, and we should think they would be amply sufficient in themselves to prove right intentions on the part of Captain Johnson, as any intention to smuggle implies an arrangement with that effect to the shipper, and in such case we could not suppose Captain Johnson so unwise as to sign a bill of lading which makes himself and the ship responsible in case of miscarriage.

At this lapse of time we cannot recal the circumstances attending the shipment of the opium, or explain why it does not appear on the freight list, but we have no doubt whatever that the bill of lading for it was signed after the ship's freight list had been made out and her accounts closed.

Such late shipments, as cabin freight, are not unusual in passenger-vessels going to Australia or California. The freight list is made out from the Captain's copies of the bills of lading, and any bill of

Williams,

of lading not signed when the freight list was made out would not be represented on that document. The fact that one bill of lading was dated 21st April, is no proof that it was signed on that day, and until it was duly signed the Captain's copy could not be in our possession. The freight list we have always understood is not a document required by any Custom House, and the omission to record any shipment therein is not therefore proof of any sort, either for or against the master of a vessel.

The only mistake that becomes apparent to us in this affair is that Captain Johnson must have made out his inward manifest from the freight list instead of his copies of the bills of lading, the mate's receipts, and the mate's cargo book. If he had taken these usual precautions in making out and checking his manifest this calamity would have been avoided.

We trust, therefore, that the appeal to the Legislative Assembly may be successful, and that Captain Johnson may be saved this heavy loss arising from so apparent a mistake.

We remain, &c.,
RUSSELL & CO.

Mr. Marshall Bayley called in and examined:—

Mr. M. Bayley. 268. By the Chairman: Are you a Custom House Agent Mr. Bayley? Yes.

269. And you were employed by the captain of the "Kate Hooper"? Yes, I was.

1 May, 1860. 270. For what purpose? To report his ship.

271. Was that done in the usual course? Yes; it was done in the usual way. The only thing it differed in was, that he brought me his manifest from Hong Kong as made by his agents instead of bringing me his bills of lading. It is customary with London ships, or all ships with long manifests, for the captain to bring his bills of lading. But at Hong Kong he received this manifest from Russell and Sturgess, his bills of lading being done up together, and he believed it to contain a correct account of his cargo. He was perfectly satisfied to report his ship upon these.

272. And did you make any representation to him upon the subject? No; I merely asked him whether this was a correct account of the cargo on board his ship, and he said it was.

273. That was in fact the freight list? Yes; the freight list. The way in which the opium was omitted was, no doubt, its being put on board as he was going down the harbor. It was shipped the very last thing, and all freight that went in the cabin—in fact the cabin was considered the perquisite of the captain. If he took passengers or freight in the cabin, according to his charter party it was to be his. This opium was put on board as he was under-way. A bill of lading accompanied the ship, but it was not done up with the others—could not have been, I suppose.

274. This is what you heard subsequently? Yes.

275. You were not informed of it at the time by the captain? No; it was after the seizure.

276. Did he apply to you when the seizure was made? Yes, he did. He requested me to make an application to amend the manifest in the usual way. I made the application, but the Collector refused it. He said the goods were already seized, and that he could not then allow the manifest to be amended. Now, with London ships, it has occurred to me more than once that vessels, on coming here, have received Geneva for instance, foreign spirits, on board, whilst they are coming down the pool, and then a cocket seldom accompanies the ship, and frequently the bills of lading of the goods so shipped are not done up with the captain's ordinary bills of lading, and they are omitted from his manifest when he reports inward. If such an accident occurs it is usual to allow the Custom House Agent to amend the manifest.

277. Do you know that to be done? It has been done in my case several times. It has not been done latterly—since the present Collector has been here; but it was done in Colonel Gibbes' time once or twice, when the tide-waiter on board has seen Geneva at hand on board the ship, but no entry, he has referred to his manifest; and, if he found that it was not contained in the manifest, he has sent word that this gin is in the ship, and that I had better amend the manifest for it.

278. You were not present when the opium was seized, I suppose? No, but I know all the particulars of it. There was no attempt at concealment whatever. The tide-surveyor was on board the ship at the time. The captain was breaking out this opium to get at a case of pictures he had to deliver in Sydney.

279. By Mr. Weekes: Were you on board? No.

280. You are speaking from hearsay? From hearsay.

281. By the Chairman: Do you know anything of a passenger who was said to have brought bills of lading of that opium? I heard that the representative of the opium was on board, but it turned out on inquiry that he was not.

282. That is the shipper? No, the person who was supposed to be the consignee of the opium.

283. The consignee? It was reported at first that the consignee was on board, but on subsequent inquiry it was found that he was not the consignee, nor the owner, but had a verbal message from the shipper either to look after it or —

284. Had he not bills of lading? He may have had bills of lading. It is very customary, I believe, for these Chinese merchants to intrust a person with the bill of lading, and to watch the conveyance.

285. Did you see this passenger? No, I did not. But, on inquiry being made of him, he disowned at once any proprietorship of the opium at all.

286. By Mr. Weekes: In your presence? No.

287. You heard so? Yes.

288. All that you have been now stating you have heard—it is mere hearsay? This portion of it—Yes, excepting what came immediately under my own notice.

289. By the Chairman: It has been stated on the part of the consignees of this opium and the captain, that the date of the receipt of the opium on board ship—the date of the mate's receipt receipt was not, in fact, the date upon which it was received; can you conceive how that <sup>Mr. M. Bayley.</sup> might take place? Only as an act of carelessness. I think that such a thing might occur. For instance, the mate might possibly make a mistake in the day of the month even, if he <sup>1</sup> May, 1860. were in a hurry.

290. But these receipts seem to have been sent down with the shipping orders—written out in the same handwriting. Is it within your experience that the mate would sign receipts thus made out, and sent down with the shipping orders, and bearing the same date, although the goods might not come on board until some days afterwards, without altering that date? Yes. I know, for instance, here, that the mate of a ship will give a receipt for wool without having the wool—without it coming on board, if he knows that it is coming to the ship. He might have signed these receipts before he received the opium in the same manner. They might have said, "We have so many cases of opium under-way, they will be here shortly; will you be good enough to sign the receipt?"—and he may have signed it in this way.

291. Supposing that forms of receipt were made out at the same time as the shipping orders in the same handwriting, and on the same day, would the mate alter, or is it probable that he would not alter, that date, although the goods were not actually received on board until some days after? I think it quite probable that the mate would sign the receipts without looking at the date at all. So long as he knew the number of packages to be correct I think that would be all he would care about. My experience of mates certainly is that they are not so particular as that. They seldom look at the dates of receipts.

292. Was it usual, before this took place, for the pilots to deliver copies of the harbor regulations to masters of vessels? In all cases; but at this time they could not. I believe there were no copies in existence.

293. You are informed that no copy had been delivered to Captain Johnson? Yes.

294. And you attribute it to the fact that they were out of print? Yes; I can easily understand the captain of a vessel like the "Kate Hooper," in the hurry attendant on arriving in port, omitting the opium in the way he did without any intention of smuggling. I am quite certain from what I saw of the captain before and since he came here, that it is just the very last thing that would have entered his head.

295. By Mr. Weekes: You say the vessel came in in a hurry: was she not originally destined for this port? Yes, and to go on to Melbourne.

296. She landed all her Chinese passengers here, or the greater part of them, did she not? No; she took away eighty.

297. Out of—? Five or six hundred.

298. When Captain Johnson came to you, did you not caution him to report the whole of his cargo, or say that it was necessary? Yes, the remark I made to him was this: "Does this contain the whole of the cargo in your vessel?" and he said, "Yes, I believe it does," but I do not think he thought the question at the time of such importance that he took time to consider. He said, "Yes, it does."

299. Is it not really an important thing that a cargo should be fully reported? Yes, it is a very important thing.

300. Is it not one of the greatest checks to a contraband trade—to smuggling, that a cargo should be thoroughly reported? Yes.

301. Therefore, so far as that is concerned, it was the omission of a most important and well-known duty? Yes, but still it was an accident that might have happened to any man in the hurry of his coming into port.

302. By the Chairman: It does occasionally happen? It does happen.

303. You have been allowed to amend? Frequently in cases of free goods. I do not think there is a ship that comes from London in which there is not an amendment required.

304. Free goods? Yes.

305. You said there were cases in reference to dutiable goods? In several cases I have been allowed to amend the manifest, but not from my own detection. They received advices from the officer on board that these goods were there without being manifested.

306. By Mr. Weekes: Do you know any instance of the report being allowed to be altered after the seizure of the goods? No.

307. There is a space of time allowed by law, I believe, during which a captain may amend his report, giving him time to collect his papers and refresh his memory—is there not a time allowed? Our regulation is that a captain may amend his manifest at any time, provided the goods are not seized. He has twenty-four hours to report his ship in, but there is no specified time for amendment.

308. By Mr. A. Campbell: Did the captain apply to you to amend his manifest afterwards? After the seizure.

309. What explanation did he give you why he did not put it into the manifest before? I have just explained that to the Chairman. This opium was put on board his vessel while the ship was under-way, after he had cleared, and the bill of lading was not done up with the ordinary bills of lading, nor was it contained in the freight list. The freight of the opium was to be his own perquisite, and consequently Russell and Sturgess did not care about the commission on that freight. They had nothing to do with the freight upon it.

310. But I understood that the opium was in the cabin? Yes, it was.

311. He must have known that opium was there—did he give you any information why he did not report it before—he had seen it almost every day since he left China? It never struck him that this opium in the cabin was not in his freight list.

312. By the Chairman: Was it in his own cabin? In his own cabin.

313. The cabin he was using? I am not quite certain about that. The opium was exposed to the view of anybody coming into the cabin, and marked opium outside distinctly.

314. By Mr. Weekes: In answer to the last question you stated that the opium was marked distinctly? Yes.

Mr. M. Bayley. 315. Have you seen those cases? No, I have not seen the cases.

316. Then how can you state that they were marked distinctly—can you state whether they were marked in letters an inch long, or half an inch long, or a quarter of an inch long? I am only stating that they were marked distinctly from the statement of others.

1 May, 1860.

317. Then you are not aware that what is said to be marked distinctly was in writing as small as ordinary print? No, I do not know what sort of letters it was in.

318. By Mr. A. Campbell: Are you aware that the captain has stated that he was not aware that it was necessary for him, as a shipmaster, to report the whole of his cargo coming into this port? He made this remark, that he did not know that it was necessary to report cargo intended for Melbourne.

319. He said so? Yes.

320. Have you ever known a shipmaster ignorant of that fact, that it is necessary to report his cargo in any port where there is a Custom House? Yes, I put the question to several captains after this occurred, and they all admitted that they did not know that it was necessary to report cargo intended for another port. They even said that had the case been theirs they should in all probability have omitted all the cargo intended for Melbourne.

321. The commanders of vessels trading between this and *England? Yes; one in particular—I forget the name of the vessel—that came from Hong Kong.

322. By Mr. Weekes: The "Cyclone"? I am not sure of the name of the vessel.

323. By the Chairman: Do you recollect the name of the captain? No.

324. Was he an American captain? Yes.

325. By Mr. A. Campbell: Do you know the value of this opium? The Chinaman said that when it reached Melbourne it would be worth some £3,000.

326. By Mr. Weekes: You said that the captain stated that he was not aware that it was necessary to report the Melbourne cargo? Yes.

327. Are you not aware that he did report his Melbourne cargo, or a portion of it, at this port? He did.

328. Is that consistent with his statement that he thought it unnecessary to do so? It happened in this way: he left the reporting of his ship to me, and gave me his freight list. He did not observe whether I reported his Melbourne cargo. The freight list was considered to contain everything.

329. The Sydney cargo was a trifling portion? Yes, a very small quantity was intended for Sydney.

330. By the Chairman: You were aware that it was necessary to report the Melbourne cargo? Yes, and for that reason I asked him whether that was all the cargo he had.

331. By Mr. A. Campbell: Then in point of fact it was Melbourne cargo chiefly? Yes.

332. By Mr. Weekes: You say that other captains took the same view. It must arise from—what?—ignorance? No, the custom of their own ports.

333. Do you mean to say that it is the custom of any port to permit a ship partly to report? I believe it is in America, from what these captains say.

334. By Mr. A. Campbell: Do you know any British port yourself? No.

335. Have you ever heard of any? No; your law is that they shall report everything in the ship.

336. By Mr. Weekes: Is it possible that the revenue can be protected if such a course were allowed? Well, there would be certainly more difficulty in detecting smuggling.

337. By Mr. A. Campbell: I should think it would be impossible? Well, it would. But Hong Kong is a free port. They allowed him to clear in the most careless manner, and I suppose he thought he might be equally careless when he arrived here.

338. By the Chairman: You, I suppose, do not mean to acquit him, at all events, of great carelessness? It appears carelessness, but I can very easily understand a man committing the error.

339. By Mr. A. Campbell: Do you mean to say that there is no Custom House at Hong Kong? None at all. There is a Port Office—I think they call it. The only clearance a vessel brings is a slip of paper with nothing more than the name of the ship, the tonnage, and the signature of the Port Master. Had the captain intended smuggling he had three days to perform any act of smuggling he might wish. He was three days in port before this opium was discovered, and had many opportunities of landing it had he wished to do so.

340. By Mr. Weekes: You suggest that only—you do not know whether he had opportunities? Of course.

341. It is possible he might not have had such an opportunity as he would like? No.

342. By the Chairman: In point of fact, you think he could have had no difficulty in landing the opium during the time he was in port? None.

343. By Mr. A. Campbell: He could have landed it? Yes; but of course it is only an opinion.

344. By Mr. Weekes: In reporting a cargo there is some formality attached to it is there not? Yes.

345. He not only states what is its general character, but has to make a deliberate affirmation, has he not, or declaration? Yes; he declares to the best of his knowledge that this is a correct account of the cargo on board.

346. And you think Captain Johnson made that declaration and statement to you that it was his whole cargo, forgetting that he had this opium on board? Yes, I think so.

Mr.

* NOTE (By witness upon revision).—This question, to the best of my recollection, was "between this and Hong Kong."

Mr. James Collier, called in and examined:—

347. By the Chairman: You are employed in the Customs Department? Yes.
 348. What is your position? Tide-surveyor.
 349. Do you know anything of the ship "Kate Hooper"—were you on board that ship when she was here in the course of last year? I was.
 350. When did you go on board? On the 15th June, I think it was she arrived.
 351. And did you go on board immediately she arrived in the harbor? Yes, before the anchor was dropped.
 352. Were you the first Customs officer who boarded the ship? I was.
 353. Do you know anything of the circumstances connected with the seizure of certain opium on board? I know that a certain quantity of opium was seized by one of my colleagues.
 354. When was that? On the 17th June.
 355. Two days after? Two days after her arrival.
 356. Two full days? Yes.
 357. Were you aboard the whole of the time? No; I was on board on the 16th, I went down to visit the officer who had been placed on board by me upon the arrival of the vessel.
 358. Were you on board at the time the opium was seized? No, I was not.
 359. You did not see this opium at all then? No; not until it was brought to the Custom House.
 360. And you are not aware of how the opium was stowed? No, only from the report that it was stowed in one of the cabins in the state room.
 361. By Mr. A. Campbell: But you did not see it? I did not see it.
 362. By the Chairman: You did not see anything to lead you to suppose that there was any intention to smuggle this opium, did you? No.
 363. Who was the tide-waiter on board? Mr. Claudius Wright.
 364. Are you aware, Mr. Collier, whether he was in the ship at the time the opium was seized? He was.
 365. Then, I believe, you have been summoned here by mistake instead of Mr. Wright? He is the officer who was on board the whole of the time; up to the 31st July he remained there. I placed him on board on the 15th.
 366. By Mr. A. Campbell: You always do so place an officer on board a ship when she comes in? Yes.
 367. By Mr. Weekes: You had been on board previously to the seizure? On the 15th and 16th.
 368. Did you examine the ship's stores? No; I went for the purpose of examining the stores—which is the usual practice—but the captain had got his cabin locked. I only saw the tea and sugar. He had cigars and tobacco and wine in his cabin. So I deferred the rummaging until the following day, and then Mr. McKoy went down for me to rummage the ship. I asked him to go down.
 369. You had been unable to complete the rummaging in consequence of the captain's cabin being locked? Yes.
 370. Was that the cabin where the opium was afterwards found? No; that was the cabin near to the officers' on the port side of the ship. The captain's cabin was on the starboard side.
 371. Do you know whether that cabin was locked? No.
 372. Did you examine it? The door was open.
 373. By the Chairman: You saw that the door was open? Yes.
 374. By Mr. Weekes: Then you did not attempt to rummage the ship? No.
 375. Then you were not prevented by the cabin being locked?—I understand you to say that it was in consequence of the cabin being locked that you did not complete the search? That contained the principal part of the stores.
 376. By the Chairman: The cabin which was locked? Yes.
 377. By Mr. Weekes: Then when you search a ship do you search all——? We do not expect to find the stores in the captain's cabin, but in the lazaret; but it appears that he had all his small stores in his private cabin. It is not the usual practice to have them in the cabin.
 378. By the Chairman: And finding this, you did not make the rummage at all? I did not go on with the rummage; I promised to be down on the following morning.
 379. By Mr. A. Campbell: You say that the door of the cabin containing the opium was open on the 16th? Yes, it was open, but I did not look into the cabin. I was sitting with my back to the cabin, writing the time in the tide-waiter's book.
 380. Do you know whether the opium was in there? No.
 381. Did you see it? No.
 382. That was on the 16th? Yes.
 383. And the following day you saw that the opium was in it? No.
 384. How do you know it was the same cabin? From the statement of the tide-waiter and Mr. McKoy.
 385. When you place an officer on board, what are his duties and responsibilities? To attend to any discharge; and, if no discharge takes place, to see that nothing is taken out without an entry being passed.
 386. And without his permission? Without his permission.
 387. And in fact he has no permission except an entry be passed? Except an entry is passed.
 388. Was it possible for this opium to be taken ashore without his knowledge? I should say not. He was sleeping in the next cabin to it. Therefore, it was impossible for the opium to be taken out without his knowing something about it.
 389. By Mr. Weekes: That would depend upon the soundness of his sleep? Well, he must sleep very sound indeed to——

Mr. J. Collier.

1 May, 1860.

Mr. J. Collier. 390. He is not expected to keep watch? No.

391. He turns in with the rest of the crew? Yes.

1 May, 1860. 392. By Mr. A. Campbell: You think that it was not possible to have taken the opium ashore between the 15th and 17th? I should say not.

393. By the Chairman: That depended upon the accident of the officer sleeping next to the cabin? Yes, he was a very good officer; we generally select one of the best we have.

394. By Mr. Weekes: That would depend upon his being a light sleeper—in case of the opium being taken up quietly and lowered over the side? I do not say it could not be done. It must be a very bold attempt to do it, with an officer close to.

395. By the Chairman: But supposing the officer had not been so close to the opium, which was just as likely; supposing the opium had been in another part of the ship, might it not have been very easily sent ashore without his knowledge? Yes.

396. By Mr. A. Campbell: Or, supposing he had been sleeping in any other part of the ship? Yes.

397. By the Chairman: Then the great security here against the captain landing this opium in the meantime arose from the fact of its having been arranged, or chanced, that Mr. Wright was sleeping in the cabin next to it—that is so, is it not? Yes.

398. By Mr. A. Campbell: Who discovered it first when the seizure was made? I was not there, and I only know from what I have heard.

399. You never saw anything of it? No; the tide-waiter would be able to tell you more.

400. By Mr. Weekes: Had you gone into that cabin and found the cases there you would have felt it your duty to have made the seizure? I should.

401. By Mr. A. Campbell: The law is that the cargo should be reported when it comes into this or any other British port? Yes.

402. Is it in your experience, I know it extends over a great number of years? Twenty years.

403. Have you ever seen, or have you frequently seen, instances of dutiable goods being omitted to be reported? Yes, it has happened frequently.

404. Either from an omission of the captain, or ignorance of the law,—which? From both.

405. Have you seen many captains ignorant of the state of the law in that case—that it is necessary to report? No, not very frequently; they generally understand the law pretty well.

406. When a ship comes in it is necessary that she should report everything on board, even to a dozen of wine or a bottle of brandy—cabin stores? It is so.

407. And is that always done? Yes.

408. Or, is it frequently omitted? It has been omitted very frequently, and seizures have been made.

409. And have you known the cargo often to be omitted? Yes; cargo has been omitted, but no seizure has taken place.

410. The captain is allowed to amend? Yes.

411. I suppose that, as a rule, if he applies for amendment to his manifest before any seizure is made it is, as a matter of course, allowed? It has been allowed.

412. As a matter of course? Yes.

413. Have you ever known a case in which a captain has been allowed to amend after a seizure, and the seizure given up? Yes.

414. You have known a case in which a seizure was made, and the goods afterwards given up? Yes; several times it happened with myself.

415. What power have you to give up a seizure when it is once made? The Collector has power; he decides. It rests with the Collector.

416. I am speaking of you? We do not give it up of ourselves.

417. You have no power? We have no power; the matter is referred to the Collector, and it is for him to decide upon it.

418. The Collector has the power of giving up the seizure? It has been so. The Collector has very frequently given up seizures after they have been made, and the captain has been allowed to amend.

419. You have known that to be the case? Frequently.

420. By Mr. Weekes: The present Collector? No. Colonel Gibbes frequently would award a fine to the officer, and the seizure would be given up—a fine of £2, or £5, or £10.

421. By Mr. A. Campbell: Do you know what power the Collector has of giving up a seizure by the Customs law—I suppose you are acquainted with it? The Collector has always exercised the power to do so—I suppose by referring to the Government.

422. By the Chairman: Is it usual for copies of the harbor regulations to be delivered to masters of ships entering the port? Copies of the regulations should be given to all masters entering the port.

423. By Mr. A. Campbell: Was a copy given in this case? We do not give it. It is the pilot's duty to issue the regulations.

424. By the Chairman: You have heard that it was not done in this case? Yes.

425. Do you know the reason? They were out of print.

426. Had they been so for any considerable length of time? Yes; I think for a month or six weeks; a month, I think—about a month. I know that for some time the ships were without regulations being issued to them.

427. By Mr. A. Campbell: Were you present at the sale of the opium, after the seizure? No, I did not go into the store.

428. By the Chairman: Did you see the opium? Yes.

429. You saw this particular opium? I saw a case opened prior to the sale.

430. Did you observe whether the cases were marked as opium? Yes, they were.

431. How were they marked? "T T Opium"—I think the mark was T T.
 432. How was "Opium" marked upon the cases—was it distinct? Yes, what I saw was.
 433. Was it in printed letters? In printed letters.
 434. What size? About an inch.
 435. By Mr. Weekes: The word "Opium"? Yes.
 436. You have no doubt about that, Mr. Collier? I have not the slightest doubt.
 437. By the Chairman: Then if it has been stated that there was no mark on those cases, shewing that they contained opium, larger than ordinary print, it would be untrue? The size of the letters was an inch—fully an inch.
 438. An inch? An inch—"Opium." I saw it on several cases while in the store.
 439. What was the character of these packages? They contained small tins weighing net about four ounces; I think they were six ounces gross.
 440. Then these were packed away in boxes? In boxes. 120 tins in each case, weighing 60 pounds net.
 441. Is opium generally packed in cases of any peculiar appearance—could you readily distinguish by their appearance these opium cases? Not unless they bore some mark. You would not distinguish them from cases of ginger. They are a similar case to ginger cases.
 442. By Mr. Weekes: Then if Mr. McKoy has stated that these cases were not marked distinctly he is in error? Well, I think so, because they were discovered from the mark on the cases—"Opium." Mr. McKoy must be in error, and I think he has stated wrong there. The cases, one or two of them, I think, were put upon the cabin table, and the attention of the officer was called to them by the mark "Opium." I am so certain that they were marked "Opium," because I saw them in the store, and in letters of one inch—fully an inch. The principal part of the cases come in that way.
 443. That is in the ordinary way? Yes; these are the same. They were marked, I am quite certain of that.
 444. Are you referring to all the cases now, or to a portion only? To a portion. I would not speak for all of them. I do not think they were all marked "Opium," but they were all marked "T. T." That was the mark of the shipper I suppose.
 445. Were they marked in Chinese characters as well? I think they were.
 446. Had you gone on board instead of Mr. McKoy it is probable that you would have been the seizing officer? I have no doubt of it, if my attention was drawn to it, as in this case, by the tide-waiter.

Mr. J. Collier.

1 May, 1860.

Francis McKoy, Esq., called in and examined:—

447. By the Chairman: You are in the Customs Department? I am.
 448. What is your position? Second tide-surveyor.
 449. Can you tell us what you know of the circumstances attending the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper"? I will shortly relate it. On the morning of the 17th June I boarded the "Kate Hooper." She was then laying between Garden Island and Bradley's Head.
 450. Had you any communication with Mr. Collier? Yes; I had communication with Mr. Collier before boarding her. She was Mr. Collier's ship. He was unable to see some stores in consequence of the captain being absent and having taken the keys on shore with him on the previous day. He requested me to go down and examine these stores, and I said I would do so in my rounds. I boarded the vessel. The captain was not on board, but he came off shortly afterwards. Between the captain's coming on board and the seizure, an application was made to me by some person—some shore person—to allow a box of pictures to be landed. I said "Certainly, when I have ascertained that they are pictures, and not obscene ones." They went to take this box of pictures from a cabin, or rather from what they called a state room of the cabin, and when they were in the act of so doing I saw a number of other boxes, and some that struck me as being opium boxes. As I had three day previously had some altercation on board another American ship about some opium (that made me particularly regard this as opium)—I told my coxswain, whom I had at hand, that I should have to make a seizure very shortly; and the captain in the meantime came into the cabin.
 451. That was the first you had seen of the captain? No; I saw him before and communicated to him the purpose for which I came off. However, we did not proceed to business immediately. The American Consul and the captain adjourned to a room to have some refreshment, where they invited me also to come. The mate and the shore-going man removed a couple of boxes out of the state room in order to get at the pictures, and those boxes were two of the opium boxes I subsequently seized.
 452. What did they do with them when they moved them? They moved them from the state room to either the table or the bench alongside of it.
 453. In the cabin? In the cabin. I said, "Captain, I see you have got some opium here, how is it that you have not reported it?" He said, "Not reported!" "No," I said. I pulled out the manifest. He said, "Allow me to see." He looked down it, and said, "The clerk must have made a mistake." He immediately went into his own cabin and brought out in his hand a bundle of papers. He said, "I have got the bills of lading." He also said, "I recollect now, it was shipped after I cleared, and I have got bills of lading for it." Then, again, he said, "It is cabin freight and ought not to be reported—at all events it is cargo for Melbourne." He made two or three excuses in that way. So I replied, "Well, as it is not reported, and as it is a very highly dutiable article, it becomes my duty to attach it;" and I did so.

F. McKoy,
Esq.

1 May, 1860.

F. M'Koy,
Esq.

1 May, 1860.

454. Had the captain come on board until the time application was made to you for permission to land these pictures? The captain had come on board.
455. Had you then spoken to him? I had.
456. But he was not with you at the time this application was made? No, the application was made by a boatman—I forget his name now. I think it was a boatman. He said he wanted to take those pictures ashore, and I said, "Certainly, provided they are not obscene, and I see the contents of the box."
457. Who removed the opium from the cabin? The bulk of it was moved by my crew.
458. In the first instance? This shore-going man and the mate of the vessel.
459. Were they removed before this application was made to you—the two boxes? They were not.
460. You did not, in the first instance, go into the cabin? I did so. Immediately on my boarding the vessel I went into the cabin.
461. You did not, in the first instance, go into the state-room? I did not.
462. You first saw the boxes of opium? I first saw the boxes of opium.
463. Which were removed by the mate to get at those pictures? Yes.
464. And it was on seeing those that you first discovered that the opium was in the state-room? On seeing those. There were a number of other boxes, as well as the opium, in the state-room.
465. But these boxes were removed after application had been made to you? Yes.
466. And placed upon the cabin table, or on the bench? Or on the bench.
467. While you were looking on? Yes; I was in and out of the cabin.
468. There was no attempt made to conceal those boxes? There was no attempt whatever on the part of the mate or the shoreman to conceal those boxes. In fact, I am not aware that they actually knew the contents of them, and had it not been for the circumstance that occurred three days previously, most probably I should have passed them myself.
469. These boxes had to be removed to get at the pictures? Yes.
470. As to the appearance of the boxes; were they marked in any way to say what they contained? No; I did not observe any mark on the boxes when on board the vessel.
471. Do you mean those two? On these boxes or any other, which would indicate to me that they contained opium. But on subsequently examining the boxes, by direction of the Collector of Customs, in the Queen's Warehouse, I discovered in small print —.
472. In small print? In small print, the words "Prepared Opium." Indeed I had prosecuted my search for sometime without success, and one of my boatmen I had then in the Queen's Warehouse —.
473. By Mr. Weekes: What were you searching for? We were searching for the marks.
474. By Mr. Parkes: "One of the boatmen," you were about to say? As I was about to leave I said, "The captain has certainly made a mis-statement here." One of the boatmen said, "I think there is a mark on that." I turned over several boxes, and at last I found on the ledge of one the words "Prepared Opium," with an array of Chinese characters.
475. Did you examine all the boxes? Yes; in a great many instances the labels were torn off.
476. And in no case did you see any more distinguishable mark? Decidedly not.
477. You did not see the letters "Opium" in characters an inch long? No.
478. You are positive? I am positive as I live, for I looked specially for it. Upon that point I brought the whole of my boat's crew to make the examination, so that my testimony can be supported by them.
479. Was there any other officer present when the seizure was made? There was a tide-waiter on board.
480. What is his name? Wright.
481. He was present, was he? At the time I made the seizure.
482. He had been on board the ship from the time of her arrival? Yes.
483. By Mr. Parkes: What was the object of your visit—to jerk the vessel? Not exactly. We could not jerk her, because she had part of her cargo for Melbourne on board. My object was just to examine her stores and see if they corresponded with the entries.
484. How often does a tide-surveyor visit a vessel while she is in port? Thirty or forty times, and oftener during her stay in port—sometimes at night.
485. Does any officer visit the vessel when she is going out? Sometimes vessels are visited. Either an officer is placed on board, or they are visited when they are taking a quantity of dutiable goods from bond or for drawback. We then place an officer on board to see that those goods are there, as far as can be ascertained. He quits the vessel at the Heads. This rule is invariable as regards vessels going to the South Sea Islands, or to places where there are no Custom Houses.
486. By the Chairman: Where was this state-room? It was about the centre of the cabin on the port side, or rather the right hand side as you go into the cabin.
487. By Mr. Parkes: Do you go into the cabin from the deck? From the deck.
488. By the Chairman: It was a poop —? They call it a raised deck, not a poop. It is a build peculiar to American vessels.
489. The state-room was not the one in which the captain slept—it was not the captain's cabin? The captain's cabin was behind these state-rooms, or rather between the state-rooms and the wheel, and was shut off from the cabin and state-rooms by a door, having also a door astern leading to the wheel.
490. Was the captain's cabin on the opposite side? No; he occupied the whole range immediately astern.
491. That was in the stern cabin? In the stern of the vessel.
492. And the state-room was on the port side? On the port side.

493. Did you observe when you went on board whether the door of that state-room was locked? No; I was not sure whether it was locked or not when I first went on board; but I ascertained subsequently that it could not have been, because I tried to lock it on going away, and I found that the key would not act.

494. Then it was not locked? It was not locked; but the door was closed to.

495. It was closed to when you visited the vessel—before it was opened to remove the pictures? Before it was opened to remove the pictures.

496. Do you know whether the tide-waiter—Mr. Wright—slept on board the vessel? I cannot answer you that question. I do not know of my own knowledge. I believe he slept in the cabin.

497. Do you know whether it was in the adjoining state-room to that in which the opium was? I cannot say for certain.

498. By Mr. Parkes: I think you said that the chief mate assisted this shore-going man to remove the boxes which were placed on the table in the cabin? Yes, the chief mate assisted him.

499. Was there anything peculiar in his manner? I did not observe anything peculiar in the chief mate's manner.

500. Did he seem to have any knowledge that that was a thing requiring to be concealed? He did not appear to me to have any knowledge of the kind. I may observe that all the opium I have seen, or nearly all with the exception of that on board the "Kate Hooper," has been distinctly marked in large letters on the lids of the boxes "Opium" or "Prepared Opium." A vessel which left Hong Kong about the same time as the "Kate Hooper" also brought to Sydney a number of boxes of opium, and the were marked in large characters "Opium" or "Prepared Opium" on the lids. A vessel called the "Oithona," which I boarded about three months ago, had a great number of boxes on board. In every case the boxes were marked "Opium" in large letters on the lid, in black paint.

501. By the Chairman: You afterwards found some opium in another part of the vessel, did you not? I found subsequently—I think on the same day—a quantity of opium in the cabin of a Chinese passenger.

502. How much? 20 tins, I think.

503. These tins were not in boxes, I suppose? Not in a box.

504. They would amount to about how much each? I believe that two go to the pound.

505. By Mr. Parkes: Was that in the same part of the vessel—below decks? No, on the raised deck, amidships. The deck-house I think they call it.

506. In the cabin of a Chinese passenger? Yes. I understand also that the Chinese passenger was the one to whom the opium or a part of the opium I had already seized belonged.

507. The same passenger? The same passenger.

508. Did you see that passenger? Yes.

509. To whom the 20 tins belonged? Yes; I will explain to you. I boarded the vessel in the afternoon again, and this person came on board. He went into the cabin very hurriedly and looked about. We were then in the act of examining another box which struck me as being an opium box, but I found that it contained closely packed Chinese clothing. This person came into the cabin, and the Chinese steward spoke to him; he appeared to be in a state of distraction; very shortly afterwards he left the cabin and returned to the shore in the same boat in which he came off. I asked who he was, and was told that he was the owner of some of the opium, or "the owner of the opium" I believe were the words.

510. By whom? By the Chinese steward. I think by the Chinese steward—I will not say for certain. I said, "Where is his cabin?" I then sent the boat's crew aft, and they overhauled his cabin and found 20 more tins. That was the circumstance which induced me to overhaul his cabin.

511. By Mr. Weekes: Then the Chinaman in whose cabin you found these 20 tins afterwards was stated to be the owner of the 10 cases of opium you had seized? Yes.

512. By the Chairman: By whom was it stated? I understood that he was stated to be the owner of the opium by the steward, I think.

513. But you are not quite sure? I certainly understood it from somebody.

514. Was it from the captain? No, it was not told to me by the captain—he was not on board on this occasion.

515. Was it from the mate? Well, I am not sure that it was not from the mate.

516. By Mr. Weekes: But if it was from somebody must it have been from either the mate or the steward—was that it? Either the mate or the steward.

517. You are sure it was one of the two? It was some person in the cabin. I cannot bring myself so closely—I looked upon it in this way, that it was immaterial to me to whom it belonged.

518. By the Chairman: You did not concern yourself much about this passenger? I did not concern myself much about him. I considered it my duty simply to go, to see, and to take. Veni, vidi, vici.

519. But if any one has said that these cases, or any of them, were marked "Opium" in letters an inch long that must have been what is inconsistent with the fact? He must have made a mistake.

520. But if he says he was sure? Oh, well, if he says he was sure, I am sure that they were not.

521. You are sure that none of them were marked in any other letters than small print? I went down for the special purpose of examining them. The Collector of Customs handed me a letter from the captain, in which a statement was made to the effect that the contents of the boxes were marked on them. I believed at the time that such was not the case.

F. M'Koy,
Esq.
1 May, 1860.

- F. McKoy, Esq. 522. Did anyone see those boxes beside your boatmen and yourself in your presence? Several persons.
- 1 May. 1860. 523. Do you know whether they were seen by Mr. Collier when they were in the Queen's store? I do not know. It is possible that they were, because just before the sale, at the time of taking the inventory, Mr. Collier could have had an opportunity of seeing them certainly.
524. You are quite certain that they had no mark indicating that they contained opium larger than small print? There is no part of the question I am so positive upon as that, from the simple fact that I went down to the Queen's warehouse for the especial purpose of seeing.
525. Not one of the ten cases? I certainly did not see it on one of the ten cases.
526. You examined them particularly? I examined them particularly.
527. And none of the ten cases could have had any mark? No; no mark of opium except in the way already described by me. They had, however, on the lid, in large painted letters, "keep this side up," a trade mark of two letters, and a number underneath. I brought several men to assist in examining for the opium mark.
528. Who? My boatmen—Flinn, McKellon, and a little man who has left since, of the name of Hall.
529. You did not ask anyone else? Well, it was a point so trifling that I only cared about satisfying myself.
530. By Mr. Weekes: But you went for the express purpose of searching for the mark? Yes.
531. And did you examine every case? Every case was examined by myself and men.
532. By the Chairman: You are not quite certain that every case was examined by yourself? I believe every case was.
533. Who took the inventory? Mr. Spence, a clerk in the Customs.

THURSDAY, 3 MAY, 1860.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,
MR. PARKES,

MR. BROUGHTON,
MR. FORSTER.

JOHN HAY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Francis Spence called in and examined:—

- Mr. F. Spence. 534. By the Chairman: You are an officer in the Customs Department? I am.
535. What rank do you hold? I am eighth clerk in the department.
- 2 May. 1860. 536. Do you recollect the circumstance of the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper"? Yes, perfectly well.
537. Had you anything to do with that seizure? Only in my official capacity as Customs auctioneer.
538. And what did you do in that capacity? I saw the cases after they were delivered into the Queen's store, where they were received as seized goods, and I was present whilst the weights were taken, and an estimate made of the amount of duty. I then divided them into lots, and sold them.
539. You were not on board at the time of the seizure? No, I was not.
540. And you first saw the opium after it was landed? Yes, when it was in the Queen's store.
541. Did you take an inventory of the packages? Not until they were prepared for sale, and then I took them in my official account sales, a list of which I now produce.
542. Did you take the brands or marks? No, we only numbered them in our own lists.
543. You did not take the brands you found on the cases? No, I only numbered them in lots, 1, 2, 3, 4, and so on; and by that I sold them.
544. Then was this opium sold in one lot? No, in several lots, as shewn in my book, which contains the particulars of prices realised.
545. I observe by your book that 22 tins of opium were sold in one lot? Yes; they were a loose lot, not contained in a package.
546. Was each case sold separately? Yes; each case, containing 120 tins, was sold by itself.
547. What description of case were they contained in? The cases were like the ordinary two dozen wine cases. They were plain deal cases about two feet by one foot.
548. Were they of ordinary deal, or were they of Chinese wood? I cannot say what wood they were made of; I did not examine them particularly. They appeared to be made of some white wood.
549. Did you notice any mark of them? Some of them were branded with a T in a diamond and T underneath.
550. Did you notice anything else? There was a white label on some of them, with Chinese characters on it.
551. Were the cases marked "Opium"? I do not remember having seen them so marked.
552. Can you say positively that they were not? No, I cannot. It is now some time ago since this occurred; and I did not take particular notice of the cases at the time, because I never never anticipated that there would be any question about them. To the best of my recollection, however, there was only an ordinary brand on them; they had this white label on them that I have described. The label had four columns of Chinese writing on it. Mr. F. Spence,

3 May, 1860.

553. And nothing else? I do not remember anything else.

554. Were they all branded the same? No; there were three or four different brands.

555. But you recollect none of them? No, only the one I have described.

556. Then you cannot say whether or not the word "Opium," or the words "Prepared Opium," was marked on the case? No, I cannot.

557. In your list you did not take the brands or marks of the cases? No, I did not. I never have done so. I followed the official form, and merely numbered the lots. This was my first sale after my appointment as Customs auctioneer, and I followed the ordinary form. Perhaps, however, it would have been better if I had taken the brands.

558. You were not instructed to take the brands or marks of the cases? I was not.

559. Were you left entirely to yourself in the arrangements you chose to make for the sale? No; there is a regular rule with regard to the selling. The goods are first marked; being numbered in lots for sale. Then the duty upon each lot is estimated, and then it is put up to auction at the amount of duty due on it. We only sell to realise the duty, and if it fetches that, that is all we care about.

560. With regard to taking the marks and brands, you say you received no instructions? None, particularly.

561. Supposing any claim should be hereafter made respecting any package of goods sold by you, how do you suppose it possible to identify it, when you do not take the brands or marks? It is very rarely that we have a case of this kind, where there are so many cases all so much alike.

562. But supposing there had been a hundred cases, all with different brands, as in this case there appears to have been three or four different brands, how do you think it would be possible for any one to establish his claim to the proceeds of the sale of his property? There is no doubt that a difficulty presents itself here; but I rather think the marks of the cases would be embodied in the seizing note.

563. Presuming that they are so given, how would it be possible to identify the particular cases of opium sold with those seized, so as at any future time to give the owners of the goods seized an opportunity of establishing their right to the proceeds of the sale? I doubt whether we could do so in that particular case. If we wanted to identify any particular case sold with the case seized we could only do so through Mr. Tange or Mr. Black, the purchasers of the cases.

564. Are you now the Customs auctioneer? I am.

565. And this you say was your first sale after taking that office? It was.

566. Had you been appointed Customs auctioneer long before this seizure took place? I was appointed just before it took place.

567. And the book you produce is the usual form of book for entering the sale of seized goods? Yes. It has been got up expressly for entering seizure sales.

568. The form was not got up for this particular sale? No, the form has been in existence for this long time, though not in this book. The forms were printed and have been in use for a long time, and as soon as I was appointed Customs auctioneer I had them put together in a book in this way.

569. Then you had this book made? Yes. The idea of the desirability of tracing any particular case never presented itself to me before; because, as far as we are concerned, we put the articles down in one lot, as goods seized, and no distinction is made.

570. But, supposing a large seizure to be made of various goods with different brands? In that case we should give the particular brands.

571. There is no column in this book for the brands or marks of cases? No, there is not. We sold the opium by the brands on the tins. I allude to the white label. On that was the owner's or manufacturer's mark, and when we shewed that to the Chinamen they all knew what the character and quality of the article was.

572. The bills of lading, however, would refer to the brands on the cases, and not to this trade mark? No doubt they would.

573. And there is no possibility from your book of sales to identify the cases corresponding with those contained in the various bills of lading? No. Now I know that the cases belonged to different owners I see that it would have been advisable to enter the marks or brands; but I did not know it at the time, and that was one reason why I took no notice of the brands.

574. You still use the same form of entry in your book? Yes.

575. Have many sales taken place since then? Yes, if you refer to the book you will find several.

576. By Mr. Parkes: I should infer from this book that the system of seizure was very strict? Yes it is.

577. I see here that a few bags of coffee were seized? Yes, the officer was obliged to do so. He found them in the vessel, and they were not on the ship's manifest; and if he had not seized them the tide-surveyor would have rendered himself liable to have been reported for neglecting his duty.

578. Where was it seized? This particular coffee was found on board of one of the mail steamers, where one of the ex-stewards had it on his own account. He left the vessel, and there was no one to claim it, so it was seized.

579. What is done on a seizure being made? As soon as they are seized the goods are all entered in a book kept for the purpose, and if in a month no claim is made they are sold for the duty.

- Mr. F. Spence. 580. By Mr. Broughton: Did you make any effort to discover if there were any marks on the cases beyond those white labels you have described? I certainly did not consider it to be my duty to do more than to ascertain what brands were on the tins, and to do this I ordered a case to be opened.
- 3 May, 1860. 581. By the Chairman: You consider that all you have to do is to sell the goods? Yes. The cases are placed in the Queen's store, and I am told to sell on a particular day. I get the best price I can for the goods, and that is all that I consider to be my duty.
582. You do not note down the brands or marks, or make any provision for the future identification of the goods? No.
583. The goods having been once condemned you do not consider it at all necessary to provide for their identification at any other time? I do not; but I must say that I think it will be better to do so in all future cases, as this case has shewn the present practice to be mischievous.
584. Do you think that if these cases had borne any known brand, or the mark of any mercantile firm of this city, that any note would have been taken of them? I do not think so, not more than has been done in this case. All the note that we take of goods is the number of the lot for me to sell them by.
585. If the coffee that was seized had been branded, would not the brand have been shewn in your book? No, we should not have taken notice of the brand.
586. How would you have entered it? As so many bags, representing such a weight.
587. Have you heard that there is a difference of opinion amongst those who saw those cases as to whether they carried on them a noticeable mark to shew that they contained opium? I heard some remark made at the Custom House yesterday that led me to infer that there was, but that is all.
588. Then you cannot say whether there is such a difference of opinion or not? I cannot.
589. Or give us any positive evidence as to whether the cases were distinctly marked "Opium" or not? No; I only know what was on one case—the one I opened—and that I have mentioned to the Committee.

Mr. Claudius Wright called in and examined:—

- Mr. C. Wright. 590. By the Chairman: You are an officer in the Customs Department? I am.
- 3 May, 1860. 591. What situation do you fill? That of extra tide-waiter.
592. But as an extra tide-waiter are you always employed? No; we take our turn with the permanent tide-waiters.
593. By Mr. Parkes: Will you state to the Committee the system by which you are employed? When it is my turn for duty, I am ordered to be in attendance to go on board. When a vessel comes in, the tide-surveyor takes me in his boat and puts me on board.
594. When do you go on board? So soon as the ship arrives.
595. What do you do then? I have orders to stop and examine everything, and not to let anything off the ship without a proper warrant.
596. And how long do you stop? I stop on board until the vessel is jerked by the tide-surveyor, when her cargo is out, and all her stores examined.
597. What does the tide-surveyor do? He goes and looks at the hold, and examines the stores that are left, to see if they agree with the captain's list. He examines the hold to see that no dutiable articles are concealed there.
598. Then he searches the ship throughout, and goes through the hold? Yes.
599. Who goes with him? Sometimes he goes by himself, sometimes I go with him, and sometimes his boatmen.
600. Then you are taken off when the cargo is out? Yes.
601. Are you allowed any leave of absence whilst you are in charge of a vessel? Yes; sometimes I apply for two hours leave when I have my linen to take ashore, or anything else I may require; because, having no person to go ashore for me, I am obliged to do so.
602. Is any person sent in your place whilst you are absent? Yes; another officer is always placed on duty in that case. But we never get leave of absence unless when we are alongside of another ship that has a Custom House officer on board, and then he takes charge of the two ships.
603. When did you board the "Kate Hooper"? On the 15th June.
604. How long after her arrival? Directly she arrived; she could hardly have got her anchor down when I went on board of her.
605. Did the captain appoint you any place to sleep in? The mate gave me a room adjoining the cabin.
606. Is that the cabin in which the opium was found? It was seized in the next cabin but one to mine.
607. Did you keep on board during the whole time she was discharging? Yes; but she did not discharge much of her cargo; she only landed 248 packages of tea, chests and half-chests.
608. Then it was when the tide-surveyor came on board to jerk the ship that the seizure was effected? No, it was when he came to examine the stores.
609. How long after you went on board? I was placed on board on the 15th, and the seizure was made on the 17th.
610. By the Chairman: Then you were on board all the time? Yes.
611. In the interval, between your boarding and leaving the ship, did you obtain any leave of absence? No. I did not leave the vessel from the time I was placed in charge until I left for good.*

* NOTE (by witness upon revision):—An error. I left the vessel by order of the tide-surveyor, and was relieved by another officer to sign the abstracts, on the 3rd of July, for five hours.

692. And you have nothing else beyond your half-guinea a day, when on board ship, to look Mr. C. Wright to? Yes; sometimes we get some export work.
693. What do you get for that? If we are employed from 9 till 12 o'clock we get 5s. 3d.; 3 May, 1860. and if for the whole day we get 10s. 6d.
694. This export work, I presume, is taking goods out of bond for exportation? Yes.
695. How do you conduct these exports? We see the drays loaded, and follow the goods till they are delivered or shipped.
696. But suppose you have to take goods out of Moore's Bond to go down to the Circular Quay to be shipped, and that these goods occupy six different drays, how do you manage to follow them? I start them all at once, and tell them to keep close together, and then I keep close to them.
697. You take them all in one train? Yes; but it is seldom that we have so many as six drays to look after at once. The most we have is three or four, and when they are started I order them to keep close together, and I keep in the centre of them. Sometimes a drayman will not keep his horse back, and then if he will not obey my orders, I call a policeman, if I see one, and direct him to stop the horse until I can come up.
698. The drays are all licensed now by the Custom House, and you have not this difficulty? No; I am speaking of the time previous to this arrangement.
699. How many extra tide-waiters are there? Twelve or thirteen.
700. And all have an equal chance of employment? Yes; we go on in turns.
701. And all are more or less subject to remain unemployed for five or six weeks? Yes.

FRIDAY, 4 MAY, 1860.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,
MR. BROUGHTON,
MR. WEEKES,

MR. SAMUEL,
MR. FORSTER,
MR. PARKES.

JOHN HAY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

William Augustine Duncan, Esq., called in and examined:—

702. By the Chairman: You are Collector of Customs? Yes.
703. And you have wished to be examined in reference to this inquiry into the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper"? Yes; I stated to the Treasurer that I should be glad to be examined if he thought my evidence of any use in the matter.
704. Perhaps you would wish, so far as you know them, to state the circumstances connected with the seizure in your own language? Well, I believe the correspondence will shew that.
705. The correspondence which has been laid before us? I suppose that the correspondence laid before the Committee will shew that. I may merely state that the tide-surveyor went on board the vessel and examined her stores in the usual way. He found these cases of opium, seized them, and reported the seizure to me. I requested that the opium should be brought to the Queen's warehouse. I asked some questions of the seizing officer about it—as to whether the cases were marked, and the circumstances in which he found them, and it appeared to me to be a very proper case for a seizure. The captain of the ship called very soon after and claimed the goods as being partly the property of a passenger on board, and partly the property of a firm in Melbourne. He stated, what rather surprised me, that they were marked in large letters "Opium" (the cases contained prepared opium); that rather surprised me, because the officer had stated to me that they were not marked "Opium" at all, I then had them examined in the Queen's warehouse, and they were reported to have the words "Prepared Opium" in very small printed letters—not at all in the way that opium cases are usually marked, but in small printed letters.
706. Something of the size of these letters "NEW SOUTH WALES" (at the head of Lei Afoo's printed petition)? That is about the size they were described to me, and I was informed that they were on the same piece of paper with some Chinese characters; that the Chinese characters were upon what might be called the lid of the box, and the English letters were turned down over the side.
707. And that that was the only mark upon any of the boxes? Oh, no; there was in very large letters "Keep this side up," and some initial letters which I do not recollect.
708. Who examined the boxes with a view to make this report? Mr. M'Koy, and the coxswain and crew of the boat. My instructions were for the boatmen to turn over every case very carefully, and to examine every case, and I have no doubt they did so.
709. In making that inquiry did it not strike you that it would be desirable on a point of so much importance to ask some one else than the officer immediately concerned in the forfeiture to report? If I had thought of the inquiries that have been taking place since I daresay I should have done so, but it did not occur to me at the time. I was in the position of judge in the matter. I had not then confirmed the seizure, and I thought it was better to have the seizing officer's evidence, which is always taken in these matters. If the claimant of the goods likes he can produce any other evidence he chooses. The seizing officer is something in the position of a prosecutor. He produces the best evidence he can to sustain the seizure, and the other party the best he can to prevent its being confirmed.

W.A. Duncan,
Esq.
4 May, 1860.

W.A. Duncan, Esq. 710. You say that you considered yourself in the position of a judge? Yes, to a certain extent, because it depended upon me whether the seizure was confirmed or not.

711. But, the proprietor of the goods not being, necessarily, present when the report was called for, do you not think it would have been desirable to have had a report from a disinterested person? Well, I understood that the proprietor of a considerable portion of the goods was present,—that is, that he was in the harbor—that the claimant of a portion was on board the ship.

712. You say that the captain in the first instance told you that part of the goods belonged to —? No; I think it was the seizing officer first, and the captain afterwards.

713. The seizing officer in the first instance? Yes; he told me that the Chinaman was in a great way about the seizure—almost jumping overboard from vexation.

714. Did you mention that to the captain? I did.

715. You mentioned that to the captain? I mentioned it to the captain, and the captain said he was the proprietor of a portion of the opium.

716. After your mentioning this? Yes.

717. The captain did not first report it to you? I am pretty sure it was the officer who reported it in the first instance.

718. Was any attempt made by you to ascertain who were the owners, or to whom the opium was consigned? No; we never do inquire into the ownership of goods seized. All we have to do with is the question, whether the law has been complied with or broken. The parties themselves who make the claim have to establish the ownership when it is necessary to do so. The goods were not reported in the vessel at all.

719. No; but you say you occupied the position of a judge in the matter,—what steps were taken, or what facilities were given to the captain? I had a number of interviews with the captain. I heard all he had to say, and was prepared to listen to any evidence he might adduce. I also heard what the officer had to say on behalf of the seizure, and it appeared to me a good case for seizure. In fact I never knew a case where I thought there was more clear evidence of an intention to smuggle.

720. You say that there was clear evidence of an intention to smuggle: will you just mention what it was? In the first place I ascertained from the Custom House agent who "entered in" the vessel that he had particularly cautioned the captain that he must report all his cargo carefully.

721. Was the captain present when you ascertained this? Yes, on two different occasions Mr. Bayley stated that, and the captain admitted it.

722. Yes, did Mr. Bayley? Mr. Bayley said he told the captain that we were now very strict in this port, and that he must be careful to report all his dutiable goods. He asked whether it was necessary to report goods for Melbourne as well as Sydney, and he said "decidedly so;" in fact all the Melbourne cargo was reported except the opium.

723. Did Mr. Bayley state that he told the captain expressly before he reported the vessel that it was necessary the goods for Melbourne should be included? He did so, and the captain admitted it. It was Mr. Bayley's duty as an agent to do so.

724. Mr. Bayley has not told the Committee that in his evidence? He certainly did say, in the presence of the captain, that he had cautioned him particularly as to reporting the whole of his cargo. The fact of his having reported the Melbourne cargo shews that he did that, if we admit the truth of the captain's statement that he did not think it was necessary to report the Melbourne cargo. The captain gave as a reason why the opium was not reported—that it was for Melbourne; but the fact of his having reported the Melbourne cargo shewed that he had got a caution about that. And then the unusual way in which the cases were marked appeared to me a suspicious circumstance, and also the continual change of shippers and consignees. I think, so far as I can make it out from the Chinese names, the shippers and consignees have been changed about half-a-dozen times in the course of the statements made to me from one time to another about it.

725. Do the bills of lading seem to be consistent? The captain in making his claim produced two bills, but those two bills were distinct from those relating to the other cargo of the ship. The bills of lading belonging to the general cargo were stitched up something like a bank cheque book and covered and dated the day before clearance; and the two bills belonging to the opium were pinned together separately. That certainly appeared to me to be another suspicious circumstance. The answer he made to that was that they were put on board after the vessel cleared; but on looking at the dates that appeared to be not the fact.

726. Was there not another bill of lading along with them? There were only two.

727. Some box of samples consigned to Towns & Co.? Only two bills of lading were exhibited to me, and they were pinned together; and I observed that one was dated the day before the date upon the cover upon the other bills of lading, and one the day after.

728. One the day after? I think so.

729. And this third bill of lading, to which you have alluded as not having been included in the sealed up packet of bills of lading, was not exhibited to you? It was not exhibited.

730. You never heard of that? I never heard of it before to the best of my recollection.

731. You say that the captain told you that these boxes were marked, in large letters, "Prepared Opium"? He told me that.

732. And the only evidence you had to shew that it was not so was the evidence of the seizing officer? And that of the coxswain and boat's crew. I saw the boxes afterwards in the Queen's Warehouse, but when I saw them it was after the Executive Council had confirmed the seizure.

733. Did you examine them yourself when you saw them? I did not turn them over and examine them closely, but I saw nothing upon them except a few Chinese characters; with the exception of those large letters mentioned, I saw no other English letters upon them.

734. You saw no English letters upon them? With the exception of "Keep this side up." W.A. Duncan,
Esq.
735. You did not examine them so closely as to see the marks of the label? I am quite positive that any person coming into the room and seeing them in the position in which I saw them cased up, would have never observed the word "Opium" upon them. 4 May, 1860.
736. Did you examine any of the other officers in reference to this seizure—the tide-surveyor for whom I believe Mr. McKoy was acting on that occasion—Mr. Collier? I think I had some conversation with Mr. Collier about the matter, but I have no distinct recollection of it. He was not present at the seizure, and could say but little about it.
737. Did you examine Mr. Wright, the tide-waiter? No, I did not.
738. Then, in point of fact, you did not hold any investigation into the circumstances at all? Oh, yes, I did.
739. But in a conversational way? It was not done in a strictly judicial way certainly. It never is done in that way. But I heard all the information that I thought could bear upon the question. I heard all the captain could adduce, and I heard what the seizing officer could adduce.
740. But not in a judicial way?—there is no record of what you call the evidence? The evidence given in cases of seizure never is taken down. I have never known an instance in which evidence has been taken down in the case of seizure. The Collector satisfies himself by the best evidence he can get, either that the law has been broken intentionally, or that it has not. If he thinks it a mere mistake, he gives up the seizure. If he thinks there is an intention to smuggle, he confirms it.
741. Then there is nothing afterwards to guide the Executive, supposing the decision of the Collector is appealed against—nothing to refer to—no record of the evidence or proceedings? Generally, as in this case, there is the correspondence between the claimant and the Collector. The present law does not contemplate appeals to the Executive, in case of seizures.
742. The whole thing is in the discretion of the Collector? Quite so. It is, according to the present law, entirely in the hands of the Collector. The legal mode of appeal is to the Courts, not to the Executive—9 Vic., No. 16, section 110, &c.
743. Do you not know that, in point of fact, the harbour regulations were not delivered to the captain by the pilot, according to law? The captain stated so.
744. Do you not know that they were out of print at that time? I believe they were at that time.
745. And had been for a month? I do not know. I recollect hearing at the time that they were out of print; but that belongs to the Pilots' Department. The Customs has nothing to do with it.
746. You do not consider yourself to have anything to do with it? We never had. The law requires the pilot, I believe, to hand a copy of the harbour regulations to the masters of ships when they arrive in this port; and I should have thought the omission in this case some excuse for Captain Johnson, except from the fact that came to my knowledge, that he had been particularly cautioned to report correctly. I have not the slightest doubt that was the case.
747. We have had a tide-waiter examined before us—an extra tide-waiter—do you think that system of employing extra tide-waiters, who are not in constant employment by the Customs, and who are apt to be out of work altogether for weeks at a time, is safe and beneficial? I think, as things existed formerly, it was most pernicious. When I took charge of the department there were thirty-six extra tide-waiters upon the list, and I think that never more than about fifteen, during the time these thirty-six were on the list, were engaged in ships at one time. The consequence was, that the rest were idle and starving, and open to any sort of tampering—which is very often attempted here. I think that system is most pernicious. However, I recommended to the present Colonial Treasurer that a number of them should be discharged, and I think we had seventeen discharged in one day; and I now never appoint any except they are absolutely wanted, so that they are now nearly as fully employed as the permanent officers.
748. But still they have no security? They have no security. They are liable to be dismissed at any moment, or to be for days without a ship.
749. And they are without any claim on the department at all? They get no pay except when they are on board.
750. And their services count for nothing? Except when they are actually on board. Then they get 10s. 6d. per day.
751. So that there is nothing in fact to attach them to the department, or to give them that tendency—which a secure provision might do—to do their duty, and withstand influences to which they are subject? They are certainly not in the position in which I should like to see officers who have such a charge as they have, for the duties of tide-waiters in this port are more responsible than those performed by similar officers in any other port in the world that I know of.
752. In point of fact, you consider the position a very responsible one? I do.
753. And if they are not faithful, and withstand temptation, the revenue might be plundered to a very great extent? Very much depends upon the character of the men; but we often find a man who is very poor, whose pay is exceedingly small, do his duty better than the rich, or the better paid officer.
754. No doubt that will frequently happen; but you consider that upon the faithfulness and vigilance of these men very much depends? Yes, very much.
755. Quite as much as upon officers who are more highly paid? No doubt of it.
756. By Mr. Weekes: You are now referring, Mr. Duncan, to the extra tide-waiters that you are compelled to take on? Yes.

- W.A. Duncan, Esq.
4 May, 1860.
757. But you have increased the number of permanent tide-waiters, have you not, in reforming the system? There were only four of them formerly; there are now twelve.
758. And those gentlemen have fixed salaries? They have a fixed salary of £100, and they get five shillings per day besides when they are actually employed.
759. Then the persons you alluded to, in answer to a question put by the Chairman, are those you are obliged to take on when a press of shipping arises? Exactly, and I never put any on the list, except I actually want them.
760. The placing of a larger number on the permanent staff has rendered the aid of those extra ones, I suppose, very trifling compared with former times? No doubt.
761. By Mr. Parkes: Are these permanent tide-waiters and extra tide-waiters employed in performing precisely the same kind of duties? Almost the same.
762. Is there any distinction? There is hardly any distinction, except this, that I instruct the tide-surveyors to keep the permanent men constantly on board on account of their being in the receipt of permanent pay; with that exception there is no distinction.
763. With regard to those extra men,—what are they paid? Ten shillings and sixpence per day.
764. By Mr. Morris: When employed? When employed; only when employed. It may be said that, in fact, they are now for the most part permanently employed.
765. By Mr. Parkes: An extra tide-waiter examined before this Committee stated, that he had added up his pay for the year, and that it amounted only to about £110? I think that is very probable.
766. Which would shew that he had been unemployed for a considerable time? Of course the fixed tide-waiters get the preference on account of their receiving pay whether they are employed or not. I consider it desirable to keep them constantly employed, because they are a certain burden upon the revenue. I daresay some of the extra tide-waiters may get little more than £100, as a few days may elapse between their being taken off one ship and boarded on another.
767. By the Chairman: Are these the two bills of lading that were shewn to you? Yes, I think they are the same.
768. They are dated the 21st and 23rd April, I think? Yes, these are the same.
769. You see the third bill of lading there—a box of samples? I do not think this was with them; at least I have no recollection of having seen it before.
770. You see this is dated the 23rd? Yes; the 23rd was the date of the port clearance from Hong Kong.
771. That package was not included in the manifest, I believe? I do not recollect ever having seen this before. I am pretty sure there were only two pinned together when Captain Johnson exhibited them to me.
772. That is the package of bills of lading which was shewn to you? Yes; it is just as I said. The package is dated the 22nd, and one of the bills of lading is dated the 21st; the other the 23rd, which was the date of the port clearance.
773. By Mr. Weekes: Do you think, Mr. Duncan, that if a case similar in all respects to this had occurred in England that it would have led to the forfeiture of the goods? I have not the slightest doubt about it.
774. You are aware that under certain circumstances the captain is allowed to amend his report? Yes, and we do so here. Almost every day I allow reports to be amended.
775. Is it not usual sometimes to impose a small fine where the captain makes a misreport? We never inflict the fine here.
776. Do you know whether it is the practice at home? In England they do; and I believe my predecessor inflicted the same fine here, but not finding anything in our law about it, I did not think proper to take upon myself the responsibility of enforcing it. In England they do inflict a small fine.
777. But not in cases similar to this? I am positive that in a case of this magnitude they would not allow the opium to be entered for duty.
778. Do you find many cases of attempted smuggling by vessels arriving from China? I do not think there has been a single Hong Kong vessel here since I have been in charge where some attempt has not been made to smuggle opium. On board the last ship, which is in the harbor now, we made two different seizures.
779. By the Chairman: How much did you seize? I do not remember the exact quantity.
780. By Mr. Morris: Were they small quantities? Yes, small quantities.
781. By Mr. Weekes: Was it anything like fifty or sixty tins? Hardly so much the last one, I think, but I could not say positively.*
782. By the Chairman: Something like the other parcel seized at this time—22 tins? Chiefly separate tins concealed by the Chinamen. In this case they had tins concealed behind some of the timbers in the hold of the vessel. The officer went on board to give them notice that all opium not delivered up and duty paid within a certain time would be seized. The time elapsed, and then a search was made, and the tins found concealed behind some of the timbers of the vessel. The officer, of course, brought them ashore.
783. Have any cases of opium been seized? I was going to say the next vessel, but at any rate another vessel, after the arrival of the “Kate Hooper,” I believe, “ran” five cases of opium.
784. By Mr. Weekes: Was that the “Golden State”? I think so, to the best of my recollection.
785. Do you remember whether there were some cases of opium duly reported, but that subsequently—the same day or within 24 hours—the captain requested permission to amend his his manifest and insert five other cases, which were only entered as merchandise? I think it was the "Golden State." At any rate, I know there was a vessel in which five cases were duly reported as opium and five cases reported as merchandise; and the captain afterwards came up and requested permission to amend his manifest and report five other cases of opium, which I allowed. W.A. Duncan,

Esq.
4 May, 1860.

786. Did the "Golden State" go on to Melbourne or stop here? I think she became leaky here, and that her cargo was transhipped to another vessel.

787. Were there five cases transhipped from the "Golden State" to a vessel bound to Melbourne—five cases of opium? Yes.

788. Were those five cases landed at Melbourne? They were not. At least the cases were.

789. And not the opium? No; they were lauded as Chinese pictures in Melbourne.

790. Then, what were exported from here as five cases of opium were landed in Melbourne as five cases of Chinese pictures? Yes.

791. What do you gather from that fact? There was a good deal of correspondence about it, which ended in nothing; but my impression is, that either in the hold of the importing ship or the exporting ship the cases were unpacked and pictures substituted, and the opium brought ashore and smuggled here.

792. Must it not have been the case, that either here or at Melbourne the opium was smuggled? I have no doubt about it. I believe it was done here.

793. Do you know whether the five cases on board the "Golden State," as originally reported, were similarly marked to those seized on board the "Kate Hooper?" To the best of my recollection the five cases originally reported—

794. The five originally reported as opium? Yes, in the first instance were marked, as opium usually is, in large letters; and the other five for which he amended the manifest were marked something like the opium on board the "Kate Hooper."

795. By the Chairman: How does your impression arise? It was reported to me at the time, and I am pretty sure of it. I daresay some of the officers could explain it better; but I have no doubt about it.

796. Do you remember whether Mr. M'Koy reported to you that those five cases for which the captain was allowed subsequently to amend his report, were marked similarly to those on board the "Kate Hooper?" He did.

797. Did he also report that the five cases entered openly as opium were marked distinctly in large characters "Opium?" In large letters, as opium is usually marked.

798. As far as your experience goes, is opium imported legitimately into this market marked in the legible manner described? I think it is usually marked in a very legible manner.

799. In distinct, large, characters—"Opium"? In large characters, "Opium." I cannot positively say that there are no exceptions to that; but so far as it has come under my notice I think that this is the usual practice.

800. Do you know whether Mr. Tange was the purchaser of this forfeited opium? I think he purchased about half of it.

801. Are you aware whether any subsequent examination has been made of those cases? I asked Mr. Tange himself how the cases were marked, and he stated that they were all marked with these small letters. There was a piece of paper with large Chinese characters, and at the bottom of the Chinese characters were the words "Prepared Opium." His statement corresponds exactly with that of Mr. M'Koy and the coxswain of the boat, whom I examined on the subject.

802. Did the "Golden State" arrive here after the seizure of the opium on board the "Kate Hooper?" Yes.

803. Have you any reason to believe that it was from a knowledge of that fact that the captain applied for leave to report the five cases he had omitted to report? I have no doubt it was from having heard that sharp proceedings had been taken here in former cases. Of course I only speak from conjecture, but I have no doubt about it.

804. Will you look at that petition—who does that purport to be from?—What Chinamen? Lei Afoo, or something of that kind.

805. Does he state there that he forwarded or shipped any certain number of cases of opium, or that he directed the shipment of any certain number of cases of opium? Yes; "five boxes of such opium were, with other merchandise of petitioner, shipped by his said agents—Tong Sang."

806. Five boxes? Yes.

807. Five boxes of opium were shipped for Lei Afoo by Tong Sang—will you examine the bills of lading of the forfeited opium and state if you ascertain from them that five boxes of opium were shipped by Tong Sang? The number five would not appear to have been shipped by any one according to this bill of lading.

808. How are they shipped in the various bills of lading? Shipped by Lei Leong, 7 boxes of prepared opium; shipped by Tong Sang, 3 boxes of prepared opium.

809. Then the bills of lading do not support the statement of the petition of Lei Afoo, that five boxes of opium were shipped by Tong Sang on his account on board the "Kate Hooper?" Nor does the petition support the statement of the captain himself that the quantities were in seven and three boxes respectively.

810. Then, in point of fact, so far as the bills of lading say, five cases of opium were not shipped by Tong Sang in the "Kate Hooper?" Not according to the bills of lading, certainly.

811. What was it that led to the statement of the captain that the owner was on board—I think you made a remark just now to the effect that it was in reply to some statements? I rather think it was the seizing officer that first reported the fact about one of the passengers claiming the opium, and being in a very excited state—that he was almost disposed to jump overboard.

W.A. Duncan, Esq. overboard from vexation. When the captain called upon me I mentioned this to him, and he said—"Yes, the owner of a portion of it is on board."

4 May, 1860.

812. The owner of a portion? That the owner of a portion of it was on board; and then he mentioned the name of two Chinamen in Melbourne to whom it was consigned. It was afterwards claimed by Foxton, Jones, & Co.,—different persons altogether from the Chinese consignees that Captain Johnson mentioned to me. It was this circumstance of so many shippers and consignees that threw so much suspicion upon the matter in my own mind. It seemed that there ought not to be so many owners of the same goods in a fair, straightforward transaction.

813. Then, as you state that the captain said that the owner of a portion of the opium was on board, he could not have arrived at that conclusion from the fact of the great excitement of the Chinaman on the forfeiture being made? I do not think he said anything about the excitement of the Chinaman—I think it was Mr. M'Koy.

814. It might be natural for him to conclude that he had an interest in the opium, from seeing his great excitement, but that would not lead him to believe that he was owner of a part only? Well, I do not know how he came to the knowledge. If he ascertained it at all, he must have ascertained it from the man himself, I presume.

815. I made this allusion, because preceding witnesses have stated that it must have been from the excitement of the Chinaman that he was taken to be the owner of the opium on board. Now the captain states that he was the owner of a portion. This shews that a direct communication to the captain of the fact had been made by some one? It would seem to follow, certainly; but I do not know what communication he had with the captain; I only know that he said the Chinaman was the owner of a portion of the goods.

816. By the Chairman: But Mr. M'Koy told you, that he judged from the excitement of the Chinamen that he was the owner of some of the opium? I think Mr. M'Koy stated that he claimed to be the owner of the opium.

817. Of what opium? Of the opium, or a portion of the opium, seized.

818. Of a portion of the cases? At this distance of time I could not state positively; but I think I understood from Mr. M'Koy, in the first instance, that he was the owner of the whole of the opium; but from a conversation I had with the captain afterwards, it appeared that he claimed only a portion of it. Mr. M'Koy said the Chinaman was very much excited, and that he said the opium was his, and he thought he was going to jump overboard.

819. Was any claim made to you previous to the sale, on the part of the owners, or purporting to be on the part of the owners of the opium? No, the claim was entirely made on the part of the captain. No one else appeared until the thing was out of my hands altogether.

820. Then was there any communication made to you from Herring, Harpur, and Co.? I think not. I think it was all through Captain Johnson, but the correspondence would shew. There may have been some other communications afterwards, but I do not recollect any. I know I had three or four interviews with Captain Johnson on the subject, and several letters passed between us.

821. You have spoken of a great many owners appearing to claim this opium? Yes; there were Russell and Co., and Foxton, Jones, and Co., and the captain himself, and Lei Leong, and then several other Chinamen, whose names I cannot recollect.

822. But did Russell and Co. make any claim? They made no claim to me; but the captain made one of his grounds of claim the respectability of the shippers, Russell and Co., of Hong Kong.

823. Have you seen any bills of lading addressed with any other name than Lei Leong and Tong Sang? No.

824. Have you heard of any? There were two Melbourne Chinamen's names mentioned by Captain Johnson to me, as being the owners of the opium or the consignees. Then I was surprised when Foxton, Jones, and Co., turned up as being the pretended consignees.

825. But would you be surprised at Foxton, Jones, and Co., claiming on the part of a Chinese house in Melbourne? But they did not do so, I think. I recollect seeing a letter in one of the Sydney papers —.

826. I think you must be mistaken? I may be. I may have forgotten some of the circumstances.

827. But Foxton, Jones, and Co., seem, from the documents before us, to have claimed solely as the agents of Tong Sang, and never on their own account? The captain claimed them as his own property afterwards.

828. How do you expect a claim to be made by a Chinese house carrying on business in the Colonies—would you not expect it to be made through some European agents? Well, I should think they would make their claim through their solicitor, or through another mercantile house. But my recollection certainly is that Foxton, Jones, and Co., claimed on their own account, as consignees. A letter appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald from them on the subject. I have that impression on my mind, because I know I was very much surprised at the time.

829. Would you be surprised if the name of Lei Leong was that of one of the partners of the house carrying on business in Melbourne under the name of Tong Sang?—would you have any cause for surprise in that? Oh! certainly, he might be a partner in any firm.

830. Would you be surprised if a house of Chinese merchants, consisting of four members in Melbourne, managed certain of their business which required intercourse with such gentlemen as yourself—who do not seem to be perfectly conversant with the names even of Chinese—through a European house? I should want an interpreter if I had to do business with Chinese.

831. Would you be surprised if a Chinese house in Melbourne, carrying on business to a considerable extent, found it convenient to carry on their Custom House business and other business business of that kind through a European agent? But my impression certainly is that they claimed it as being themselves the consignees. W.A. Duncan, Esq.

832. Foxton, Jones, & Co.? I have a strong impression of that kind; in whatever way it has got into my mind I do not know. However, I looked at all the general circumstances of the case, and I satisfied myself in the first place that the law had been broken. That was the chief thing for me. And taking all the circumstances together, it must have been intentional, I think. 4 May, 1860.

833. You have said that you believed that in England, in a case like this, the goods would have been forfeited just as they were here? I have no doubt of it.

834. Under what clause of the English Customs Act do you think this would have been done? The officers in England have the same power of seizure we have here. The only thing is this, that under the new English Customs Act they substitute a fine where proof is adduced that there was no intention to smuggle; but no such proof was adduced here.

835. But you say the English Customs officers have the same powers. That power is modified, I apprehend. The Custom House authorities do not proceed except in so far as they are authorized by the Acts of Parliament? The power to seize is derived from the Crown, regulated, of course, by Acts of Parliament. All difficult cases of that kind are referred, in the first instance to the Commissioners of Customs, and if there remains any doubt about any case it is referred to the Lords of the Treasury.

836. And there is an investigation? Always.

837. Something of a judicial character? One of the Commissioners of Customs sits, I think, twice a week, to hear all appeals from the Collectors of the different ports.

838. They take evidence, do they not? Yes.

839. And that is a matter of record? Yes.

840. It is not so here.—And if the Commissioners have any doubt about it, they refer it to the Lords of the Treasury? Yes.

841. Do you think they proceed according to the Customs Act? Yes.

842. Have you examined that Act to see under what clause a forfeiture would be created under similar circumstances in England to this forfeiture? * By a regulation of the Board of Customs, issued subsequently to the passing of the Act to which you allude—which is dated 1853, I think—they will only allow goods which have been introduced contrary to law to be entered for duty when the duty does not exceed £20. I conclude from this that, in cases where the duties exceed £20, the goods are forfeited. (Board's Orders L, p. 119.)

843. These are goods which there has been an attempt to land, are they not? Well, seizures are generally made, in England, when goods are attempted to be landed. They require them to be reported there, as here, however.

844. Under penalty? Under penalty.

845. Not under pain of forfeiture? I feel perfectly satisfied, from reading the regulations of the Board of Customs, and Hamel's Customs Laws, which are the only interpretations of the Act I have to go by, that a large quantity of highly dutiable goods such as these would not be admitted to duty on such an explanation as that which was offered here.

846. But you cannot refer us to the clauses of the Act under which that could be done legally? I know that the new Act is somewhat different from the old law in that respect, and from our law. (Vide Appendix A.)

847. You have said that no fine could be imposed upon the captain in this case under our law, did you not, in the former part of your evidence? I think not. I think there is nothing to give power to the Collector to inflict fines here. My predecessor did it; but I do not think myself authorized to do it, and do not do it.

848. But is there not a clause in force here, which makes the neglect to report any goods, subject the captain to a fine of £100? But you have the trouble of summoning the captain to appear before a bench of magistrates, and the loss would be ten times more than the value of the fine. I never do bring a case before the court here.

849. But is not such an investigation in England equally troublesome? That is made by the Customs at once, without going before the court. Here we should have to go before the court.

850. Every sort of investigation will be troublesome? I should think it no trouble to hold such an investigation here as there; but, if you have to file an information, and attend a court for a whole day—yourself and your officers being taken from their duty, it would be impossible to do anything of the kind.

851. By Mr. Samuel: You are aware that there have been investigations after seizures, and, I think, you have taken evidence upon oath? Not in cases of seizure, I think.

852. Do you recollect a case in reference to two cases of wine, and two cases of brandy—Captain Ferguson? Yes.

853. In that case, I think, you took evidence? I may have done so. I am not sure.†

854. By Mr. Weekes: Are you aware whether in any of the British Possessions the neglect to report goods leads to their forfeiture? I believe in all of them.

855. And the practice you are now pursuing is one consonant with the practice in British Possessions? I am quite sure it exists in the American Colonies. I believe it exists in all the Colonies, and I think it ought to exist.

856. You are aware that such is stated in the Customs Act; that such is the law in the British Possessions,—in America at all events? Yes.

APPENDIX

* NOTE (by witness upon revision):—By section 209 of the Imperial Customs Act the goods were seizable.

† NOTE (by witness upon revision):—I find, on reference, that it was done, in this case, at Mr. Samuel's request.

W.A. Duncan.
Esq.

APPENDIX A.

But, I believe, the opium would have been seized and condemned under the 209th section of the English Act, and the interpretation put on it by the English Law Officers, and by its commentator Hamel, p. 210. (Vide Board's Orders I, p. 366, for Attorney and Solicitor General's opinion that "actual landing need not be proved.")

4 May, 1860.

APPENDIX B.

By the Act 16 and 17 Vic., c. 107, s. 181, goods not reported are forfeited in the American Colonies. For Victoria, Vide the Act 21 Vic., No. 15, Sect. 42 and 145. For New Zealand, Vide the Act 21 and 22 Vic., No. 40, Sect. 42, 153, 157. The law of the United States, to which the "Kate Hooper" belonged, not only enacts forfeiture of goods not reported, but inflicts a penalty on the master equal to, and in some cases thrice, their value.—Sawyer's U. S. Shipmaster's Guide, pp. 38 and 39.

Mr. Henry Leau Appa called in and examined:—

Mr. Henry
Leau Appa.

4 May, 1860.

857. By the Chairman: What is your business, Mr. Appa? I am keeping a store here.
858. Were you here when the seizure of opium took place on board the ship "Kate Hooper" some months ago? Yes, Sir.
859. Were you in Sydney then? Yes.
860. Do you know any of the passengers on board that ship? Yes.
861. Did you know a Chinaman named Hung Fow or any name like that? Yes, Hung Fow.
862. By Mr. Forster: Is it a name, or does it only mean "merchant"? It is a name—a passenger's name.
863. By the Chairman: Was he the owner of any opium aboard that ship, do you know? No; I heard say that the opium was going to Melbourne.
864. But Hung Fow,—did not the opium on board that vessel belong to him? No.
865. There was a small lot of opium, twenty-two tins, I think? That belonged to Lei Chung.
866. The twenty-two tins? Twenty-one tins and a half; one belonged to one passenger for his own use.
867. Which? Lei Chung and his six mates used one. I recollect he told me he brought one case from Hong Kong, and used nineteen and a half, and left twenty-one and a half going to Melbourne.
868. Then Lei Chung had brought a case of opium from Hong Kong, and nineteen and a half tins had been used on board ship by the Chinese passengers? Yes; there were six passengers who brought the case for their own use and divided it.
869. And they had used nineteen tins and a half, and had twenty-one and a half left? Yes.
870. Which were seized? Yes.
871. Did Hung Fow carry any bills of lading? Yes; he carried a bill of lading going to Melbourne for Tong Sang, I remember.
872. What did he do with the bill of lading? He going to Melbourne for Tong Sang—give it to Tong Sang to pay the freight to captain.
873. Did he send that in a letter or take it on himself? Hung Fow carry it for Tong Sang. Tong Sang at Hong Kong send bill of lading by Hung Fow, a passenger by the "Kate Hooper," to give that bill of lading to Tong Sang, in Melbourne—Tong Sang to pay the freight and get the opium.
874. When the opium was seized, what did Hung Fow do then, do you know? Hung Fow, I think, sent the bill of lading to Melbourne.
875. By the post? Yes.
876. Where did Hung Fow go himself? In the same ship.
877. Afterwards? Yes, afterwards.
878. Where is he now, do you know? Hung Fow—I think he is going to China; I heard so.
879. Was he connected, do you know, with Tong Sang in business? No, he has nothing to do with Tong Sang; he only brought some cargo by the same ship, I believe.
880. Do you know any of the partners in Melbourne of the house of Tong Sang? Yes, I know them; I knew them at Melbourne before I came here.
881. Who is Tong Sang? Tong Sang is the shop's name in Hong Kong. There is the Hong Kong Tong Sang and the Melbourne Tong Sang carrying on business—the same company.
882. Tong Sang is not the name of one of the partners? No; that is the shop's name.
883. The name of the firm? Yes. In China some put names for their different shops. Four or five Chinese carry on business and put up one name.
884. Do you know Lei Leong? Yes. There are ten cases of opium; seven cases belong to Lei Leong and three belong to Tong Sang.
885. Seven cases, you believe, belong to Lei Leong himself? Yes. I understand that one of the merchants came to Sydney a little while ago; his name is Lei Afoo, I think. There seven cases for Lei Leong: five cases belonged to Lei Afoo; two cases belong to Lei Afoo's cousin, going to Melbourne; and three cases belong to Tong Sang, going to Melbourne.
886. Then, what do you suppose these seven cases consigned to Lei Leong were made up of? The seven cases —.
887. Yes; you say that five cases belong to Lei Afoo? In China, Lei Afoo gave the money to Lei Leong to send to Tong Sang's care for Lei Leong.
888. And five of these seven cases, you say, belonged to Lei Afoo,—at least he told you so? Yes.
889. And two cases belonged to his cousin in Melbourne? No, to his cousin in China. They all sign Tong Sang House.

890. Is Lei Leong in Melbourne? Lei Leong—I stranger to him. I do not know whether he is in Melbourne or not.
891. You do not know whether he is a partner in the house of Tong Sang? I believe he has got some little share in Tong Sang, but I am not quite sure in my saying.
892. Did you see the opium that was seized? After it was sold I saw it in Mr. Tange's office.
893. You did not see it before it was sold? No, I never saw it before.
894. When you saw it was it marked? Yes, I saw a mark. At the top they had got a piece of white paper with some letters that he did pay the Custom House duty at Hongkong. He put that paper on before he took the opium from Hong Kong.
895. Was it marked in English? I went into Tange's office and saw this. I not very particular looked; I only looked at the China letter. I believe there was English letter too, but I am not quite sure. Then afterwards I translate one letter from Hong Kong, to Melbourne Tong Sang—a Chinese letter.
896. A Chinese letter? Yes; Mr. Wills brought it to me. It is a letter from the Hong Kong Tong Sang, sent to the Melbourne Tong Sang, by the English mail.
897. Is that the letter (shown to witness)? Yes.
898. That is the letter you translated? Yes.
899. This is a correct translation of the letter? Yes.
900. Dated 1859—that is not correct, I suppose? Yes, I think that is the same letter I translated.

Mr. Henry
Leau Appa.

4 May, 1860.

Mr. Michael Flinn called in and examined:—

901. By the Chairman: Were you coxswain of Mr. M'Koy's boat at the time of the seizure of the opium on board the "Kate Hooper"? Yes.
902. You saw the boxes of opium which were seized? Yes.
903. Did you examine the ten cases carefully? Yes.
904. And how were they marked? There was no mark on them at all with the exception of T and CC—at least I could not describe—there was nothing to indicate the boxes containing opium.
905. Not on any of the boxes? There was one—written in small letters on one corner—"Prepared Opium"—very small indeed.
906. How large? It might be as large as "New South Wales," (at the head of petition) and it might be smaller; it was not larger.
907. And that was only upon one box? Only upon one box.
908. There was no mark on any of the other boxes indicating that they contained opium? There were some Chinese characters, which of course I cannot understand. There was no mark in English indicating that it was opium, but on one box out of the ten.
909. And the letters on that were not larger than those? ["NEW SOUTH WALES"]. They are not larger than those, I could swear.
910. I suppose you did not get any share of these forfeitures? I was entitled to nothing at all. There had been an alteration. All the boats had been turned over under the supervision of the harbor master; therefore I was entitled to nothing. Previously I was.
911. Did you get anything at all? Mr. M'Koy gave me something, but that was a private affair; he need not have given me anything except he chose.
912. By Mr. Weekes: Were the marks on the box itself or on the label? Under the label.
913. On paper or on wood? I could not say to that, Sir, but with the Chinese characters on the corner it was about three inches each way, and that would appear in each case as though it had been attempted to be torn off.
914. There was a label on each case—a label marked with Chinese characters? Yes.
915. And was the bottom part of that label torn off in several of the cases or all of them? On most of the cases the Chinese papers had been torn off.
916. The labels had been torn off? It appears as though it had been attempted to remove them from the cases.
917. And you are quite sure that on each of those cases there was no distinct mark—"Opium"? There was nothing to indicate that the cases contained opium.
918. By the Chairman: No mark at all?—I think you said—? I beg pardon, there was a mark T or CC, but nothing to indicate that the cases contained opium.
919. By Mr. Weekes: Did you make that observation on the cases at the time of seizure, or at a subsequent time, or both? Well, at the time Mr. M'Koy went into the cabin I was walking on the poop. (As coxswain, wherever the tide-surveyor goes I am supposed to go also.) He comes to me and says, "Flinn, I think there is some opium in the cabin." I went into the cabin, and the moment I saw the cases I said—"That is the description of a case that usually contains opium"—and I said, "I believe that case does contain opium."
920. You said that was the usual description of case that contained opium? Yes.
921. But you saw nothing to indicate that but your own knowledge of the cases? It was the usual description of case I have seen in my experience in the Customs used as opium cases.
922. After the seizure and landing of the opium were you directed to inspect the boxes with a view of seeing what marks were upon them? A day or two afterwards Mr. M'Koy called me into the Queen's Warehouse to see the cases. He also called the boatman.
923. Who was the boatman? William Mackellar.
924. Did you make an examination on that occasion? Yes.
925. Of all the boxes? Of all the boxes. They were piled up one on top of another.
926. And you took them off? I took them off myself.

- Mr. M. Flinn. 927. And you examined each one? One I did not see myself. Mr. McKoy said there is "Prepared Opium" on one of the boxes—which I have referred to.
- 4 May, 1860. 928. That is one you referred to previously? Yes.
929. Beyond that there was nothing to indicate that the cases contained opium? No.
930. Not the word "Opium" in small or large characters? With the exception of this one. When the Chinese affair was torn off you could see the mark in small letters—"Prepared Opium"—very small, Sir, indeed.
931. By Mr. Forster: That was an accidental discovery, was it not? Quite so, to my knowledge.
932. There was nothing at all that would lead you to suppose the information would have been given to Mr. McKoy if he had not found it out himself? Not to my knowledge. I was simply ordered to get the boat in readiness, and I did so, and proceeded to the "Kate Hooper" as she was lying between Garden Island and Bradley's Head.
933. And what was the impression produced on you by the conduct of the officers of the vessel when the discovery was made—did they seem astonished? No; but the captain seemed astounded at Mr. McKoy telling him it was not on the manifest.
934. Did the captain appear to be informed for the first time of the opium being on board? I could not say that. Mr. McKoy pulled the papers out of his pocket and said, "There is no mention of opium on your manifest, and I must seize it."
935. Was it concealed? It was in the side cabin.
936. Was it covered? There were a quantity of cases containing wearing apparel. When Mr. McKoy saw the case he called to me.
937. By the Chairman: It was on the cabin table when you went down, was it not? No.
938. It was not in the main cabin? In a side cabin on the port side.
939. Neither on the table nor on the floor? No; there was a waterman on board.
940. It was in the side cabin? In the side cabin.
941. And not in the main cabin? Not to my knowledge.
942. Not on the floor? No.
943. By Mr. Morris: Two cases? No; I did not see it.
944. By Mr. Forster: Was there none on the deck at the time, or in any other part of the ship? The ship had not a poop, but a raised deck.
945. By the Chairman: When Mr. McKoy took you down, he took you straightway into the side cabin? Into the side cabin.
946. By Mr. Forster: And there you saw the opium? Yes; it was placed underneath a case of Chinese wearing apparel.
947. By the Chairman: Did you see any pictures? Yes. A waterman was on board, to remove those pictures. I believe they were to go to Melbourne.
948. If Mr. McKoy told us that a certain portion of this opium was on the cabin table when he first saw it, would not that surprise you? When Mr. McKoy discovered the opium on board he said,—“Flinn, I believe there is opium on board”; and I said,—“I believe that case is opium.”
949. You came into the side cabin? Yes. I said,—“I believe, Sir, that case contains opium.” He says,—“Why?” I said,—“From my experience, I believe it does contain opium.”
950. Where was the case of pictures? In the same cabin.
951. It had not been moved? No; it had been —
952. The box of pictures? Yes.
953. It still was in that cabin? It was still in the cabin—no, it was removed out of the side cabin into the saloon.
954. Were you not aware that a portion of this opium was removed, in order to get at the pictures? I could not say to that.
955. That it was brought out of the side cabin for that purpose, and put on the table of the cabin? I did not see it removed from the side cabin to the saloon.
956. But there were, when you went down, no cases of opium in the principle cabin? None, to my knowledge.
957. By Mr. Forster: Then you saw the opium before it was removed? Yes.
958. By the Chairman: Before it had been removed at all? Yes.
959. By Mr. Samuel: You said that the captain appeared to be astounded that the opium was not in the manifest? Yes.
960. Do you know in what way he expressed his astonishment? Yes. He first said,—“It belongs to some Chinamen on board.” It was about—I could not say the time; I had no watch. In about a quarter of an hour afterwards he said,—“I do not wish to smuggle; but it is the property of some Chinamen in Melbourne.” That was counteracting his previous statement.
961. By Mr. Weekes: Then at the time of the seizure the captain said it was the property of a Chinaman on board? At the time of the seizure; and a quarter of an hour afterwards he said it belonged to some Chinese in Melbourne.
962. By Mr. Samuel: Did he produce the bills of lading then? He did; but previous to making that statement he had produced the bills of lading. Mr. McKoy said, “Well, Sir, I have to seize this because it is not in your manifest.”
963. He immediately produced his bills of lading? Mr. McKoy remarked that his bills of lading were of no use to him; it was not on his manifest, and he would have to abide by the rules and seize the opium.

TUESDAY, 8 MAY, 1860.

Present:—

MR. WEEKES,
MR. PARKES,MR. MORRIS,
MR. SAMUEL.

JOHN HAY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. A. Tange called in and examined:—

964. By the Chairman: What are you Mr. Tange? I am a merchant.

965. Residing in Sydney? Yes.

966. Did you purchase some of the opium sold after the seizure from the "Kate Hooper?" 8 May, 1860. Mr. A. Tange.

I bought a lot of five cases.

967. Did you see the whole of the cases sold? Yes, but did not look at every case.

968. With regard to the five cases you bought, did you examine them afterwards to see how they were marked? Yes, and to the best of my belief there was the merchant's mark on the top of one case, ST or TS, and on the other four TT. There was a label printed in red, black, and white, about six inches square; and I believe it is a similar label to those upon the cases of opium I imported myself; as it states that the fee has been paid in Hong Kong, and that the article is prepared opium. It is a nearly square label, with Chinese characters in the body of it, and at the bottom, in English letters, it states that the fee upon the prepared opium, amounting to 600 taels, has been paid. Labels similar to these seemed to have been torn or rubbed off one of the cases. I saw them on some of the cases. (Vide Appendix A.)

969. The labels were upon some of the cases, and might have been upon all? Yes.

970. Of what size do you think the label was—how many inches square? About six inches or eight inches.

971. Is this (a copy) about the size? They were rather larger than that.972. Do you see these letters (on a piece of a torn label)? Yes; part of the words "Prepared Opium" are still there. The portion of a label in question was torn from a case of opium belonging to me, now in Moore's bonded warehouse. It is not a portion of the opium that I bought out of the "Kate Hooper."

973. That seems to be part of a label, of which the rest has been torn off? Yes, and it is the same sort of a label as that upon the opium cases I import. It states that it is prepared opium, and that the fee of 600 taels has been paid.

974. The words "Prepared Opium" were, as far as you can remember, in letters about that size? Just the same; I think there is no difference whatever.

975. What house was that opium prepared by? By a very respectable merchant at Hong Kong, from whom I sometimes receive goods; his name is Wo Hang. I do not mean that Wo Hang prepared the opium, but that he was a large shipper of prepared opium, and I have had consignments of opium from him. I understand he is to be the great loser by this seizure of opium.

976. You had a good bargain with that opium? I am satisfied with that bargain; but some of it I sold to those who obtained more than I did by it. It was not sold at the extreme rate stated by Mr. Campbell.

977. What was the value of the opium? At that time it was about twenty-five per cent. above the price we gave; it afterwards rose, having become scarce, and the bargain was considered better on that account.

978. But irrespective of the rise in the price of opium, it was sold at twenty-five per cent. below the real value? Yes. After the price rose to the extreme point it would have been seventy-five per cent.

979. By Mr. Weekes: Was there any other mark on the cases than that I have described as being in small pica capitals—appearing to be portion of the words "Prepared Opium"? I believe not; I did not observe anything of the sort.980. By the Chairman: Nothing painted on the case? Not on these cases. I have seen it on some cases, but not on these.981. By Mr. Weekes: You have had your attention called to it by Mr. McKoy wishing to ascertain the kind of mark upon the cases? Yes; last week I was called up before the Collector.

982. Shortly after the purchase? I believe the cases were sent to Melbourne at that time.

983. You believe that the Chinaman you mention, Wo Hang, was a great loser by the transaction? I have heard so from the captain of a ship recently arrived from Hong Kong, the "Francis P. Sage." He said Wo Hang was a vast loser by the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper."

984. By the Chairman: Did Mr. McKoy apply to you shortly after the sale? I think it was he who came to my office a short time after I made the purchase.

985. That was shortly after the sale? Yes, it was a long time ago since he spoke to me. Mr. McKoy applied to me (as I have said in answer to a previous question) last week, to see the Collector—I believe that he was also the person who spoke to me shortly after the sale.

986. Did you tell him the same as you have told the Committee? I do not remember the conversation.

987. By Mr. Weekes: Is it within your recollection of his calling upon you that you said you did not observe the words upon the cases until he pointed them out? I do not know that.988. By the Chairman: Mr. McKoy was not the first person who drew your attention to the marks on the cases? I looked at the cases before they went to Melbourne. I heard something in town about them, and I looked at them well.

- Mr. A. Tange. 989. On the similar kind of boxes you have yourself imported from this house of Wo Hang there are similar labels? I have not yet seen those on board the ship, as she only came in to-day; but I am pretty certain they will have the same label upon them, that is to say, it will state it to be prepared opium, upon which the fee has been paid. (Vide Appendix A.)
- 8 May, 1860. 990. Do you deal much in opium? Yes, I have imported a good deal myself; I have about £4,000 worth in this vessel which has just arrived.
991. You are aware that a fee is paid for the export of opium? By this label I should think so.
992. By Mr. Weekes: When you say a fee is paid for the export of opium, you mean that it is paid to the Chinese Government? Yes; it has to be paid to the Mandarins I believe.

APPENDIX A.

NOTE (Answer 968):—

I did not mean to be understood that any of the cases had the appearance of having had a label rubbed or torn off.

Perhaps from the fact of my not expressing myself so fluently and correctly as an Englishman, taken in connection with the fact that more than one of the Committee addressed me at one time, I may in this or other instances during my examination have expressed myself somewhat confusedly.

NOTE (Answer 989):—

The cases of opium as the "Francis P. Sage" (alluded to), I have since seen, and find a portion of them marked in large letters on the top, "Prepared Opium," &c.; another portion I have not examined. I shall be happy to shew the entire shipment to the Committee, or any Member of it.

A. TANGE.

Mr John Black called in and examined:—

- Mr. J. Black. 993. By the Chairman: You are a Custom House Agent, I believe, Mr. Black? A Custom House and Commission Agent.
- 8 May, 1860. 994. Did you buy some opium seized by the Customs authorities on board the "Kate Hooper"? I purchased five cases. The document I now shew you is the debit note of the purchase, signed by Mr. Spence, the Customs auctioneer. The brands are one TS, and four TT.
995. Had these cases any other marks upon them besides these merchant marks? These cases, I believe, were marked "Prepared Opium."
996. Do you know how or in what shape that mark was upon them? The letters, I think, were about an inch long, and either painted or printed upon paper in the usual way, or by stamping the mark.
997. You are not sure which? I am not.
998. Were they all marked in the same way? I only saw a few of the cases that were sold, they were ordered to be removed to another warehouse.
999. Could these letters be anything else than "Prepared Opium"? They could be nothing else.
1000. What became of the opium you purchased? We sent it up the country.
1001. In the cases? I believe part of it was taken out and repacked by the Chinaman to whom we sold it.
1002. You do not know what became of the cases? I do not.
1003. None of them are in your possession? No; the party to whom we sold might have the cases in his possession.
1004. Did you notice any labels on the boxes? No; I do not recollect any labels being upon them; but to the best of my belief the words "Prepared Opium" were in pretty large letters.
1005. Much larger than these on the paper I now hand to you? Much larger than those.
1007. Then it was with a view to ascertain the mark that you closely examined some of the cases, and observed upon them the words "Prepared Opium"? The Custom House auctioneer exhibited some tins from one case, and this case was hid by the number of people bidding; but my clerk informed himself that it was taken out of one of these cases, and I then took no further interest in it but as a purchaser. My clerk saw more of the opium than I did.
1008. By the Chairman: Do you know whether he took any notice of the marks on the cases? I asked him yesterday if he did; and he said he had, like myself, seen the mark, but could not speak more positively of it than I could.
1009. By Mr. Weekes: Was it marked on the side "Prepared Opium"? Yes.
1010. You did not see the lid? It is my belief that it was on the side of that we purchased, which was branded Cum Keong Sang.
1011. The mark which you say was about an inch long was on the side, as the top was not to be seen? The top could not be seen.
1012. By the Chairman: And something like these words on on this label, "Loy Yuen"? That is not the same brand, but the letters were in about the same size.

Mr.

Mr. Mackellar called in and examined:—

Mr. Mackellar.

8 May, 1860.

1013. By the Chairman: You are one of the Custom House boatmen? Yes, Sir.
 1014. Do you recollect the seizure of opium on board the "Kate Hooper"? I do.
 1015. Do you recollect the appearance of the cases of opium which were seized? I believe they were about 18 inches long and about 15 inches broad.
 1016. Did you take notice of the particular marks upon them? I took notice of a T in diamond, with a T under it or over it, I am not sure which, on the side of the cases. There was a little strip of white paper with printing upon it, about six inches square, with some Chinese characters upon it, and some words hardly so large as pica capitals.
 1017. Those letters in capitals were nothing but the words "Prepared Opium"? Nothing else.
 1018. Were the Chinese figures upon the same paper? Yes; upon the lid.
 1019. There was a small strip of paper on the side? Yes.
 1020. Not upon all the cases? No. Mr. Hall, when giving up searching the cases, called out he found one. That was only on one case.
 1021. Were there any Chinese characters upon the paper? I could not say that; but to the best of my knowledge there were.
 1022. On the same piece of paper on which there were the words "Prepared Opium"? The words "Prepared Opium" were on a different piece of paper at the corner.
 1023. Were any of these pieces of paper torn? Where the English words were they were much torn, not where the Chinese characters were.
 1024. On this strip of paper? Yes; so that this one only could be made out.
 1025. Did you see any symptoms of its being torn off other cases? There were symptoms of its being rubbed or chafed off by the working of the ship when stored away with other cases upon them.
 1026. Did you examine the cases? As they came into the boat from the ship I did so as well as I could.
 1027. You saw the cases then, and by the top took them to be opium cases: was there any label upon them like the one you now see? Not to my knowledge; I did not see it.
 1028. You examined them particularly? Yes; and I am sure there was no such label as that upon them, for I examined them in the Queen's warehouse.
 1029. By Mr. Weekes: Were there any words other than the words "Prepared Opium" upon the strip of paper you speak of? No; none.
 1030. By the Chairman: It could not be a label like this upon which the words were? No; a small strip.
 1031. Was the print as large as that on this label, or the letters as large? No, I do not think they were.
 1032. Might it not have been that label pasted partly on the top and partly on the side? It was not; the English print was on the side, and the Chinese letters on the top.
 1033. By Mr. Morris: Were the Chinese characters on paper? I think so, but I will not say for certainty. They were smaller letters than either of these.
 1034. By Mr. Weekes: Were the words "Prepared Opium," which you say you saw, as large as that you see there? No; not so large.
 1035. By the Chairman: You are certain the words "Prepared Opium" were not on the paper on the top? I am.
 1036. There were nothing but Chinese characters there? Nothing but Chinese characters and black English letters, "This side up."
 1037. Are you entitled to any share in the proceeds of this seizure of opium? Well, I believe, in the way it is laid out in the Colony, I am not; but at Home, when among the crews in the channel, I have had shares of seizures. Mr. McKoy made us a present of a little, but I believe we were not entitled to it.
 1038. But by Mr. McKoy's goodwill? He made a present of a £10 note to each of the men.
 1039. By Mr. Parkes: How much did Mr. McKoy get, did you hear? I do not know.

Mr. A. Tange recalled, and further examined:—

1040. By the Chairman: Is the label on the case you see there like the label on the cases Mr. A. Tange. you purchased? I believe that is the same label, and you will find it on all opium cases.
 1041. You observed that on the cases? I believe that was just the label on the cases of 8 May, 1860. opium I purchased.
 1042. These labels generally have the same signature, "Tien Yuen, opium farmer" upon them? Yes.
 1043. Some are marked with black letters? Yes, and there is a stamp on the tins.
 1044. When the cases are marked with these black letters, are they marked in the middle, or in the corner? Sometimes in the middle, and sometimes on one side.
 1045. By Mr. Weekes: Is it customary to mark cases of opium on the front, instead of on the lid? The shipper will sometimes do so, to shew on looking at the cases that they contain opium, and make the mark in large black letters; but whether it is customary to do so, I cannot tell.
 1046. By the Chairman: Opium is sometimes so marked, but not always? No; I have three cases in my store now, which are not so marked.

Mr.

Mr. Hall called in and examined:—

- Mr. Hall. 1047. By the Chairman: You are one of the Customs boatmen? I was in the Customs boat, but I left it some time ago to go to the Snowy River Diggings.
- 8 May, 1860. 1048. You remember the seizure of opium from the "Kate Hooper"? Yes.
1049. You were one of the boatmen in Mr. M'Koy's boat? Yes.
1050. What do you recollect of the seizure? I recollect taking the opium on shore to the warehouse, and pointing out some small print to Mr. M'Koy; it was the words "Prepared Opium."
1051. Was it not upon all the cases? I do not know whether it was upon all of them; I saw it upon several cases. I did not think Mr. M'Koy had seen it, and I called him back to shew him the letters.
1052. Then it might have been upon all the cases for aught that you know? Yes.
1053. Do you see the words "Prepared Opium" there? Yes. That is about the size of the letters, and the Chinese figures were similar.
1054. Was it upon paper like that? Yes.
1055. Was it upon the lid of the box? I think it was upon the corner of the box.
1056. Was the whole label on the side of the box, or was one part turned over the edge? Part of it was turned over the edge or corner.
1057. Were the Chinese characters upon the side or upon the top? I think they were upon the top.
1058. Your impression is that the label was turned over the edge at the corner, with the lower portion on the side and the upper portion on the top? Yes.
1059. You saw that on several boxes, and it might have been on all? Yes; they did not all come through my hands.
1060. Did you see any other marks on the boxes besides TT and TS—such as "Prepared Opium," in large letters? None.
1061. Were you down in the cabin moving the opium? Yes.
1062. Where was the opium when you first saw it? In one of the state-rooms.
1063. All of it? Yes; there were some boxes on the top of it which we had also to move.
1064. Were there not some boxes in the cabin under the table when you first saw it? Not that I saw. There were some boxes of clothing on the top of the cases, which were moved off the top of those in the state-room.
1065. Who moved them? The other men; I was the last man that went to help.
1066. By Mr. Morris: Were all the English words on this label on the cases that you examined; that is, besides the words "Prepared Opium"? Well, I do not recollect whether they were or not, I only looked to the words "Prepared Opium," which I pointed out to Mr. M'Koy.
1067. These other words might have been there though you did not notice them? Yes.
1068. By Mr. Weekes: Until you found out these small letters in the words "Prepared Opium," it was your impression that it was not marked at all as opium? Yes.
1069. And that was your reason for calling Mr. M'Koy's attention to it? Yes.
1070. Are you prepared to say the cases were not marked with letters an inch in length with the words "Prepared Opium"? I do not remember seeing any mark in large letters.
1071. Did you examine the cases to see the marks? Yes.
1072. By Mr. Morris: Every case particularly? Not particularly.
1073. By Mr. Samuel: Did you not know then that they contained opium? We knew that before taking them on shore.
1074. What reason then had you for pointing out these marks? Because I did not think Mr. M'Koy saw them.
1075. By Mr. Parkes: Did you open the case? No.
1076. You knew their contents? Yes, of the boxes.
1077. Did you see the seizure? Yes.
1078. Is it usual to ascertain the contents of packages before seizure? I believe it is.
1079. Did you ever see goods seized on the mere appearance of the packages? No; I think I never did.
1080. Were you in the Customs service at Home? No.
1081. Did you profit by this seizure? Yes.
1082. To what extent? £10.
1083. Who gave you that? Mr. M'Koy.
1084. Did you receive it as a portion to which you were entitled or as a gratuity? I consider it as my portion.
1085. By Mr. Samuel: Did you consider yourself entitled to a portion of the seizure? I did consider so.
1086. By Mr. Weekes: Did you ascertain from any source what was the fair proportion to which you were entitled by law? No.
1087. You took it for granted this was right? Yes.
1088. By the Chairman: Do you know now to what you were entitled? No. I have been since told that I was not entitled to it, but from experience do not credit that.
1089. By Mr. Parkes: You say you were present when the packages were taken from the ship—were none of them opened? I believe not. We found about twenty-five tins in the cabin—that was opened.
1090. In another part of the ship? Yes.
1091. The boxes taken out of the cabin were not opened? No.
1092. They were seized merely upon the word of the officer on the ship? Yes.
1093. By the Chairman: You were not present, I think you say, when the seizure was made? I was the last man called up out of the boat; and when Mr. M'Koy found opium in the state-room, he called me up to move the things.

1094. Were you not aware that some of the boxes were removed from the state-room before Mr. M'Koy saw it at all? No.
1095. By Mr. Parkes: You came up as soon as the other men? Very nearly.
1096. By Mr. Samuel: Were you there when Mr. M'Koy first spoke to the captain about the seizure? No.
1097. How did you know they were opium cases? I have handled opium boxes in India and other parts, and can easily tell them.
1098. By Mr. Weekes: Are there not similar cases containing ginger, preserves, and other articles? Yes.
1099. By the Chairman: How could you tell these were opium cases then? By the weight.
1100. By Mr. Samuel: You did not handle them before you were satisfied that they were opium cases? No, Sir.
1101. Was it from the appearance, or the weight, that you came to the conclusion that the cases contained opium? Well, I handled several after Mr. M'Koy said they were opium, and I considered, from their weight, that there was opium in them.
1102. When they were first seized, were you quite clearly of opinion that they contained opium? Yes.
1103. From their appearance, or from handling them? From their appearance.
1104. By the Chairman: You first saw the marks when the cases were deposited in the Queen's warehouses, and then saw the label on them? Yes.
1105. You could not then have looked particularly for any mark, or you must have seen it. You could not have examined the boxes carefully without seeing a mark like that. Did you examine them, with a view to see if they were marked, before they went into the Queen's warehouses? No; but they are generally marked in large letters with the word "Opium."
1106. Were the boxes deposited one upon the other? Yes.
1107. Might there then not have been a mark in letters an inch long without your seeing it? When they were coming out of the ship we looked particularly for large letters, and they then went into the warehouse.
1108. Is a label quite as noticeable as a word in large letters? No.
1109. Would you overlook a label like that? Well, many kinds of boxes have a lot of Chinese figures on them.
1110. By Mr. Parkes: Did you board any other vessels having Chinese passengers? Yes.
1111. To look after opium? Yes.
1112. Did you find any? Yes, we took some before I left the boat. Mr. King brought it out of the ship; it must have been nearly a hundred weight.
1113. By Mr. Samuel: Do you recollect what remark Mr. M'Koy made about the words "Prepared Opium" being upon the cases? No; I know that he looked at the boxes.
1114. By Mr. Parkes: How long were you in the Customs, Mr. Hall? Altogether about two years and a-half in the boats; not in the Custom House boat particularly.
1115. Did you ever take any part in any seizure except this? No.
1116. By Mr. Weekes: Did you claim your share? No.
1117. By Mr. Parkes: Who gave it you? Mr. M'Koy.
1118. Did he tell you to keep a sharp look-out in future? Yes.
1119. By Mr. Morris: Did you get a share in any other seizure—or do you usually get a share? I was not concerned in the gold seizure; but it was given, but not to me, although not generally expected.

Mr. Hall.

8 May, 1860.

FRIDAY, 18 MAY, 1860.

Present:—

MR. FORSTER,
MR. HAY,
MR. PARKES,

MR. SAMUEL,
MR. WEEKES,
MR. WISDOM.

JOHN HAY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

John Nicholas Beit, Esq., called in and examined:—

1120. By the Chairman: You have requested to be examined with reference to the subject of this inquiry? I have some desire of being examined, because it is really a luxury to be able fully to support the Government in a case where they have been called to account.
1121. What information can you give us with regard to this matter? I think the information is upon the general practice and the law of the case, which appears to me to be of more importance to the Legislature than the simple facts which have been brought before the Committee.
1122. Then we may clear the way, I think, by ascertaining whether you can give us any information of your own knowledge with regard to the particular case which has been referred to the Committee? You mean the facts of the case?—I cannot.
1123. You are not cognisant of them? No; I know nothing whatever of them except what I have gathered from public report, and from hearing the evidence of witnesses before this Committee.
1124. Perhaps you will state, in your own words, what you know of the general Customs laws,

J. N. Beit,
Esq.

18 May, 1860.

J. N. Beit,
Esq.

laws, in so far as they support the decision of Government in this case? The great object of the Customs laws is, as the Committee are aware, not only to protect the revenue, but also to protect the fair trader, and for that purpose, one of the most important of the Customs laws is, that any vessel, arriving from any part of the world in any part of the British Dominions, should have a full and true account of all her cargo which she takes in; because she is not only liable in the port where she arrives, but she is liable to be searched as soon as she comes in British waters, which are three leagues from the coast; and if the account is not a true one, it cannot be ascertained whether she is light—which expression I suppose the Committee understands—which means, she has parted with some of her goods before arriving at the port of destination. This forms part of the Customs laws.

1125. Then that would be an account made up at the port of departure, and which she carried with her from the port of departure, otherwise it could not be of any use for the purpose you mention? Yes, exactly so; and I have heard in this Committee, witnesses—both mercantile and other—who have given you information, that in British free ports, there being no Custom House, this cannot be obtained. This is an absolute fallacy. It is erroneous information; because, where there is no Custom House in a free port, the Governor is supposed to execute these duties, for which purposes he appoints a public officer, generally designated a port officer.

1126. Do you know, in point of fact, whether that is the practice at Hong Kong? It is, certainly.

1127. You have heard the evidence of merchants trading with Hong Kong, and they have made the statement, that the fact is entirely to the contrary of that? I have heard it. I was present, and I was very much astonished that such answers should be given. That is one of the reasons why I rather wished to be examined.

1128. What is your knowledge of the practice relative to clearing at Hong Kong? There is a port officer, who will certify the clearing and the manifest. The difference is this,—where there is a Custom House established, the Custom House will not allow a ship to depart without a clearance; but in a free port, like Hong Kong, a ship may go without a clearing or manifest. The port officer has no power to detain a ship, or prevent its departure, but is there to certify if she goes to a British port. It is knowledge that is imparted to every British captain, and it must also be known to any foreign captain who avails himself of the new Navigation Laws, which allows him to trade intercolonially, that he must do so.

1129. You say "he must do so"—he must not do so? He must do so.

1130. He must obtain his clearance? He must obtain the signature of the port officer for that purpose.

1131. Under what penalty? No penalty.

1132. Why then do you say "he must do so"? Because at the port of arrival—

1133. Is he subject to any penalty for not obtaining that clearance? I do not know that there is any penalty.

1134. Why do you say he must do so? He may be subject to great difficulties if he does not. In this case, the matter would have been very simple if he had had his manifest certified by the port officer; he could not plead afterwards that it was after his departure, because his clearance would have been the last thing, he would have had his opium put on his manifest. But I was going on to state that the Navigation and Customs Laws, with respect to having a full and true account of the cargo, are so stringent, that even in those foreign parts where there is no diplomatic agent, the captain of a vessel departing from such a port must have his clearance, or at least his manifest, certified by a British merchant resident. The law requires from every vessel trading to British ports that she shall have some account by which it can be traced whether she has all the goods on board that she has taken in.

1135. That does not seem to apply in the present case, because the forfeiture here was on account, not of the absence of clearance at Hong Kong, but on account of the imperfect manifest delivered here. However perfect that manifest had been as to the goods on board, it could not have had any effect in enabling the officers to detect whether the ship had been lightened before she arrived in these waters? It is quite natural that this question should have arisen, in consequence of what I mentioned to you, if you refer to the law upon the subject, which I believe has been differently construed—it says the ship is to report, and the goods shall be forfeited, unless it can be shewn to the satisfaction of the Collector, or the Chief of the Customs, that it is only a mistake;—now, if the vessel had arrived with a manifest on board, upon which this opium was placed, but it had been merely omitted in the report, that would have been one of the few excuses which would have justified the Collector in passing it.

1136. Do you not think that would have made it more suspicious if it had been in his clearance and not in his manifest? There is no clearance—if it had been in his manifest.

1137. You say there ought to be a clearance? No doubt; the manifest is merely certified by the port officer.

1138. Supposing it might have been in one or the other, but that it had been omitted from the report here, would not that be rather a suspicious circumstance? On the contrary that would have been an extenuating circumstance.

1139. How so? I do not know whether you have the Customs laws here.

1140. By what laws are these matters regulated here? By British law.

1141. Do you not know the Colonial Customs Act under which the regulations are framed? I was not aware of that, and I do not think there was the power of passing such an Act.

1142. Do you not know the Customs regulations in force in this port? Yes.

1143. Do you know whether they refer to a Colonial Act? They possibly may, but the Act is only an adopting Act, with some alterations.

1144. It is a very elaborate Act to which those regulations now in force refer, and which is different in many respects from the English law? Mr. Weekes, you have it there,—is it not an adopting Act?

Mr. Weekes: No.

J. N. Beit,
Esq.

18 May, 1860.

1145. By the Chairman: Do you know, in point of fact, that the Act at present in force in this Colony was based upon the Act formerly in force in Great Britain? Yes.

1146. That is to say you suppose it was, but you were not aware that the Customs here were regulated by a particular Colonial Act? I never conceived it possible they could be; because the Customs themselves were under British authority. This Colony, before the Constitution Act, could have had no power to alter the Customs Act.

1147. It is an elaborate Act, 9th Victoria, No. 15, by which these matters have been regulated ever since its passing;—it was passed in the time of Sir George Gipps? I think you will find it refers to the Imperial Act; I know there must be an Act to adopt and adapt.

1148. This is not an Act adopting and adapting, however far it adopts—it is an independent piece of legislation? I do not know whether I heard in this Committee the Imperial Act quoted, wherein it says that the goods shall be forfeited unless it can be proved to the satisfaction of the Collector that no fraud was intended, or something to that effect. Have you got that clause?

Mr. Weekes: That is from the English Act of the 16th and 17th Victoria. I only brought that forward to shew that in some cases they adopted the same course in England that under our local Act the Customs have taken in that matter.

1149. By the Chairman: Is this the clause—the 164th clause, 16 and 17 Victoria, cap. 107—in which, with reference to any ship arriving in any of the British Possessions in America, or the Channel Islands, it is provided, that "If any goods be unladen from any ship before such report be made, or if the master fail to make such report, or make an untrue report, or do not truly answer the questions demanded of him, he shall forfeit the sum of £50, and if any goods be not reported, such goods shall be seized"? Yes, unless—

1150. No, that is all? As I understood Mr. Weekes, the same is in our law.

1151. By Mr. Weekes: This is in our law, 9th Victoria, No. 15, 9th section, "and that all goods liable to duty on importation not duly reported, or which being so liable, shall be unladen contrary hereto, shall be forfeited"? It is the same thing a little differently worded; I have always understood that is the law in all British Dominions.

1152. By the Chairman: Do you know whether it is the law in relation to ships arriving in Great Britain now? Yes.

1153. How do you know that? From the general practice. I have not been home the last ten years.

1154. Not since this Act, 16 and 17 Victoria, 107, became law? I have not been home since.

1155. That is the law by which Customs matters are now regulated in England? Yes.

1156. Can you say of your own knowledge whether, with regard to ships arriving in Great Britain, what has now been stated as the law relating to ships arriving in British America, the Channel Islands, and this Colony is the law relating to them? I have not the Act before me, but I have not the slightest doubt about it; it is interwoven with the policy of the Navigation Act, and, from what I heard of the late Act, I believe it to be, though simplified, more stringent. I think you will find if you have the Act before you, that upon these points it will be more stringent. Stringency is required on account of the Navigation Act, which allows foreign vessels to trade inter-colonially.

1157. Have you the knowledge of this Act to enable you to say whether it provides greater stringency or relaxes the rigid rules formerly in force? I cannot say, for I have not the Act; but I know, from the practice of Great Britain, that everything relating to the Customs is upon a more stringent and sound footing than before.

1158. If I were to tell you that this Act, in several particulars, relaxes the stringency of the former enactments, you could not possibly say, not knowing this Act, whether that was a correct statement or not? It would speak for itself. It might, apparently, to those persons who are not perhaps so intimately acquainted with the trade, appear to relax the stringency, when in point of fact it increases it.

1159. The 50th clause provides for the report of ships arriving in Great Britain before bulk is broken; the 51st goes on to say, "If such master shall wilfully fail to make such report according to the particulars herein before set forth, so far as the same are applicable to the same ship, cargo, and voyage, or if the particulars or any of them contained in such report be false, such master shall forfeit the sum of £100". Now perhaps Mr. Weekes, who is more conversant with the Act than myself, will point out some clause for the forfeiture of goods not reported in Great Britain—I have not been able to find it out? They would be forfeit; that makes the Act only more stringent and imposes a penalty beyond the seizure of the goods.

1160. By Mr. Weekes: I take this to be the mere penalty on the master, the goods are still liable under the general construction of the Act? Yes.

1161. This is for his neglect—he is personally liable? He is personally liable, there is no doubt of that; and the goods are subject to seizure also. However, if it is said, and it is clear from the Chairman's statement, that you have an Act in force here, it appears to me of very little use to refer to new Acts not adopted in this country. My own opinion is, that the Government—the Executive—have acted in this matter perfectly correct, with the only exception that they ought not to have submitted to this inquiry. I think it is an absolutely Executive matter, in which the Legislature has no power. You cannot make any ex post facto law; the seizure by the Officer of Customs is either legal or illegal. If he has made an illegal seizure, the officer himself who has made the seizure is liable; if the seizure is legal, I cannot see that the Legislature can interfere.

J. N. Beit,

1162. By the Chairman: But the Legislature has interfered? Yes, it has interfered so far as to make inquiry; but I think they have no proper power of interference.

1163. These are general reasonings that I think might come from anyone, and which we do not require evidence upon? I think, taking the matter as it has come before the Committee, it stands thus:—that all the symptoms by which a large amount of smuggling evidently has always been carried on in this Colony appear in this case. I can very well conceive that a captain may bring some goods and omit them in his manifest, and consequently also in his report; but then, at least, he should have the bills of lading properly attached to the others. Another thing is, a difference would have been made by the Customs if the goods had been under hatches—a very great difference. Here everything is combined which indicates that every precaution is taken which a smuggler would take. He takes the goods on board, does not manifest them, does not put them under hatches, but puts them on deck, where they are easy to be got at at sea. The Customs will naturally make a great difference whether goods are placed under hatches or not; but here the goods are taken in after the whole cargo has been completed, and are not put under hatches. This is the evidence you have,—the goods are not put upon the manifest,—they are not reported, and the bills of lading are kept separate from all the rest; so that if the vessel lands these goods before she gets in what is conceived to be her port of destination there is no trace left. A vessel in that case may take in any quantity of goods, and may go round the whole coast and smuggle; therefore it is for these purposes these laws are enacted, and I think the Executive would be extremely wanting in their duty if they were not to protect the free trader as well as the revenue, by not allowing these practices to be continued. I am not going to turn informer, but I can state that it has been done to a great extent.

1164. By Mr. Samuel: It is not imperative upon the port officer to certify to this manifest? It is if the captain asks him.

1165. It is not imperative upon the captain to ask it? No, but it is necessary for the captain's safety. The Chairman asked what was the penalty to which he was liable; he is liable when he comes into any British port to be boarded by any man-of-war, or any revenue officer, and if he has not a certified manifest on board, his vessel is liable to seizure.

1166. By Mr. Weekes: Have you been at Hong Kong? No.

1167. By the Chairman: Can you tell us of your own knowledge whether, in point of fact, the officer at Hong Kong does certify to any manifest? Decidedly so.

1168. Of your own knowledge such is the practice now? No shipowner that understands his business will allow his captain to depart without it.

1169. Is it the practice that the port officer signs the manifest? He signs the manifest if it is presented to him; that is the difference between a Custom House and a port officer.

1170. As there are such contradictions in the evidence, perhaps you will have the goodness to state how you come to know this? By my own practice.

1171. Have you been in the Hong Kong trade? Both in the Hong Kong and Singapore.

1172. Have you had vessels there? Yes.

1173. Within what time? Within the last seven years.

1174. How long is it since you had your last from Hong Kong? About six years.

1175. Then was the manifest signed by the port officer? Of course.

1176. But it is not of course? It was then; but it is not only in British ports, but in foreign ports, it is required.

1177. The clause quoted by Mr. Weekes speaks of the signing of the certificate of clearance of the ship, and not of the cargo? It is very true, it may not be there contained. It is difficult in such an examination as this to go through the voluminous clauses of the different Acts. It is sufficient for the merchant to know what he has to do, and of this I am clear, that no merchant would allow his ships to go to any British port without having his manifest signed by some authority. I think you will find this partly in the Navigation Laws—the Customs Laws are not sufficient for the purpose, you must take them in connection with the Navigation Laws; but this is certain, that any vessel may be boarded by a British man-of-war, or by a revenue officer, as soon as she comes within the waters three leagues from the shore; without this there would be no possibility of preventing smuggling—the most dangerous description of smuggling.

1178. By Mr. Weekes: By the omission of any portion of the cargo from the manifest, might not the captain of a ship be able to smuggle all round the world with impunity? It is for that purpose this law is enacted to prevent this.

1179. Is not the object of a correct report being insisted upon by the Customs in order that, where a vessel touches at different ports, at each port they may be able to detect the omission? Decidedly so; it is for this particular purpose of protecting the revenue and the free trader that the account of all the goods taken in at the port of loading should be manifested, that at the port of destination it may be possible to trace where and how the goods have been disposed of. On former occasions, when matters of Customs were before a Committee of the Legislature, perhaps Mr. Weekes will recollect, although at that time no particular matter of smuggling had been found out, I told the Committee then that the regulations were so lax that it was possible to smuggle largely, and that they required altering; and this was one of the modes of smuggling which I had no doubt, for I am not an informer, was then practised to a large extent, particularly by American vessels. The Legislature having now permitted foreign vessels to participate in inter-colonial trade, we must run great risk of smuggling unless these regulations are stringently upheld. If the Customs are honestly administered, and this particular law is carefully attended to, I contend that this country will have nothing to fear from smuggling.

1180. Supposing these goods had been shipped for a contraband object, as they were not inserted in the manifest, would there have been any means of tracing or of detecting the contraband transaction? Certainly not; and as I said before, I know nothing of this case beyond what has appeared before this Committee, and otherwise before the public; but I conceive that every precaution was taken that a smuggler would take to avoid detection. They are four in number:—the goods are not manifested; the bills of lading are not filed with the others; the goods are not under hatches; and they are not reported. If any of these four requirements had been complied with, it might have led to a mitigated view being taken of the matter by the heads of the Customs or of the Treasury, power being left, as I believe it is, to the Executive, to take such mitigated view; but where all these circumstances combine I think the Executive would have been entirely without excuse if they had allowed it to pass. There is not a single feature which might have been regarded as a mitigating circumstance.
1181. In point of fact, omitting to put goods in a manifest is smuggling made easy? That is for the purpose; but as I say it might by possibility have been a casual omission, if the goods had been otherwise shipped as usual, that is under hatches, and the bills of lading had been filed with the others.
1182. By Mr. Samuel: Supposing a vessel coming from a free port, as Hong Kong, had dutiable goods on board, and when she came here they were not on board, but were reported as short-shipped, would not that be an infringement of the law? Indeed it would be; the ship would be liable to seizure.
1183. In what way, because these articles were not in the manifest? Because they were not on board.
1184. Would she be liable to this port? Liable to any port; she is liable to be seized in the waters even if she does not make a port.
1185. By Mr. Parkes: Where do you find that in the law; in any British statute? Yes.
1186. By Mr. Samuel: I say a foreign ship coming from a free port has goods in her manifest, and when she arrives the captain says he has not got them, and never received them? That you do not know.
1187. Assuming we do not know, is she liable then? To seizure when she is found light; that you will find in British law.
1188. By Mr. Parkes: I do not think that you will find that in any statute? You will find that it is so with ships found light.

PENSIONS.(DESPATCHES RELATIVE TO THE PENSIONS OF COLONEL GIBBES, AND MESSRS. GARLING, NASH, AND

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

(No. 44.)

*Downing-street,
22 December, 1859.*

SIR,

I duly received your Despatches, No. 33, of the 10th of April, and No. 42, of the 12th May last, relating to the applications which had been made for retiring allowances by certain Officers of the Customs Department in New South Wales.

I forwarded those Despatches to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury for their consideration and that of the Commissioners of Customs, and I transmit for your information a copy of their Lordships' answer, enclosing the copy of a Report from the Commissioners of Customs. 3 Dec., 1859.

I have to call your attention to that part of the letter from the Treasury which refers to the allowance which the Colonial Government may think proper to award to Colonel Gibbes from Colonial funds for services rendered by him since the transference of the Customs Department to the Colony.

I have, &c.,

[Enclosure.]

*Treasury Chambers,
3 December, 1859.*

SIR,

With reference to your letters of 30th June and 17th August last, and the Despatches therewith transmitted from the Governor of New South Wales on the subject of the grant of retired allowances to certain officers belonging to the Customs Department in that Colony, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you, for the information of the Duke of Newcastle, that they have received with much regret the statement of the misconduct of an officer occupying so important a position as that of Collector of Customs at Sydney.

They have fully considered the case, and have arrived at the painful conclusion that, according to the strict interpretation of the Superannuation Acts, Colonel Gibbes has forfeited his claim to a retired allowance.

It appears, from the Report of the Commissioners of Customs, copy of which is herewith transmitted, that during his employment under the Imperial Government the Commissioners found it necessary to express their dissatisfaction at the irregular manner in which the various branches of the Customs had been carried on, arising from neglect of supervision on his part. July, 1859.

Colonel Gibbes had, however, continued in the public service for several years since that period, and had he retired at the time of the transfer of the Customs Establishment to the Colonial authorities in 1852 some allowance would probably have been granted to him.

The subsequent instances of negligence stated in the papers now before them render it impossible for their Lordships to recognise his services as having been performed with diligence or with strict fidelity to the obligations of his office, and without those qualifications the conditions of the Superannuation Act are not complied with.

Their Lordships are, however, unwilling to leave an officer of the advanced age and long services of Colonel Gibbes without any provision for his future support.

Considering that his integrity is unimpeached, and that it appears from the testimonial transmitted, that those under whom he has served entertain the highest respect for him, their Lordships are of opinion that they would be justified in exercising the discretion vested in them by the 9th section of the Act, and granting him, as a compassionate allowance, a pension at the rate of Four hundred pounds per annum in respect of his services to the Imperial Government.

So far as their Lordships are enabled to judge, it appears to them very doubtful whether his subsequent services to the Colonial Government have been such as to induce the Colonial authorities to make any addition to this pension. It will rest with them to consider whether the recent irregularities in the Customs Department have been attributable to culpable negligence on the part of Colonel Gibbes, or whether they have resulted in his case from the infirmities inseparable from his advanced age.

In any case, their Lordships are of opinion that such additional pension, if any, should not exceed One hundred pounds per annum.

Their Lordships will defer their decision upon the cases of the other three officers, until they shall have received the report of the Commissioners of Customs upon those of Mr. Nash and Mr. Bramwell, the particulars of which were transmitted with your letter of 17th August last.

[Sub-Enclosure.]

TO THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY.

YOUR Lordships having referred to us the annexed letter from Mr. Merivale, transmitting, by the desire of the Duke of Newcastle, a copy of a Despatch from the Governor of New South Wales, enclosing applications from certain officers belonging to the Customs Department in that Colony, viz. :—

Colonel J. G. N. Gibbes, Collector,
Mr. F. Garling, Landing-surveyor,
„ F. Bramwell, Landing-waiter,
„ D. Nash, Warehouse-keeper, praying to be allowed to retire from the Service with the usual amount of superannuation allowance, together with a full report of the circumstances which have led to the retirement of those officers from the public service,—Mr. Merivale at the same time stating, that His Grace would be glad to be informed of the decisions which your Lordships, after consulting with this Board, might arrive at on these applications, and that the enclosures which are wanting will be forwarded on receipt of the duplicate Despatch,—

We Report,—

That we have carefully considered the papers which have been transmitted from New South Wales respecting the fraud upon the Customs Revenue of that Colony, which has been effected by the non-shipment on board the “Louisa” of certain goods removed from a bonded warehouse for the alleged purpose of being exported by that vessel, but which had been taken into consumption without payment of duty, as well as the applications of the officers, whose services the Colonial authorities have deemed it necessary to discontinue, praying for superannuation allowances.

The evidence produced before the Board of Inquiry, by which the circumstances connected with the fraud were investigated, affords ample proof that the administration of the Customs Department at Sydney has been conducted with great laxity and want of system, and that the fraud could not have been perpetrated if a proper supervision and control had been exercised over the subordinate officers.

The Governor and Executive Council having, however, adopted measures for the re-organization of the Customs service, we refrain from offering any observations respecting the state of the department, and will confine our Report to the claims of the officers to be granted retiring allowances.

The Governor and Executive Council have required that the Collector and three other officers above-named should retire from the service, being of opinion that the administration of the affairs of the Customs could no longer properly be entrusted to men by whose negligence a state of things had been induced which had led to indifference on the part of the subordinate officers, and from this to a great loss of revenue to the Government; and in this opinion we have to express our full concurrence.

The Executive Council have, however, recorded their desire not to prejudice, by the removal of these officers from the department, any claims to pensions or retiring allowances which they might be entitled by the rules of the service to prefer, and adverting to the number of years they have been employed under the Imperial Government and the Colonial authorities, and to the fact that they do not appear to have been implicated in any fraudulent transaction, we beg to submit whether your Lordships may not be induced to assign to them them superannuation or compensation allowances, under the regulations of the Superannuation Act, having also to observe that at the period when their connection with the Imperial Government ceased, nothing had transpired which would have interfered with the grant of compensation allowances to them in like manner as to the officers of Customs in the West Indies and British North America, whose offices were abolished.

The particulars of the total periods of service of Colonel Gibbes, and of Mr. Garling, landing surveyor, and of their salaries under the Colonial Government, are contained in the statements (on the approved superannuation form) forwarded by the Governor of New South Wales. These statements will enable your Lordships to comply with the request of His Excellency that you would fix the total amount of allowance to be allotted to them; but these officers having been employed for several years under this Board, a portion of the allowances will be payable out of the revenues of the United Kingdom, under the provisions of your Lordships' Order of the 19th March, 1851, by which your Lordships informed us that, upon the retirement or superannuation of officers who had held appointments under this Board, and whose services were transferred to the Colonial Governments in New South Wales and certain other Colonies, provided such retirement took place with the testimonials and under the conditions required and enjoined by the Superannuation Act, such allowance as the said Act might warrant in respect of services anterior to the date of transfer and cessation of contribution to the Superannuation Fund would be accorded by your Lordships, and would be payable from this revenue; but that any grants of additional superannuation, or retired allowance in respect of services subsequent to the date of transfer of the establishment would depend upon the Colonial Governments.

With the view, therefore, to place your Lordships in possession of the particulars of the services and salaries of Colonel Gibbes and Mr. Garling, under the Imperial Government, we annex statements thereof in the usual form, in which the periods of their services have been limited to the date of the transfer of the Department to the Colonial authorities, and their salaries to the rates at which they were paid at the time of such transfers, having to refer to our Report of the 31st October, 1854, No. 1200, upon a former application of Colonel Gibbes to be placed on the Superannuation List, which he subsequently withdrew—to which we beg your Lordships' attention; and we will transmit similar statements to your Lordships in respect to the other two officers, Messrs. Bramwell and Nash, so soon as we have received the additional papers on their cases referred to in the letter of Mr. Merivale.

The manner in which Colonel Gibbes discharged the duties of Collector of Customs at Sydney, while he was under our immediate control and supervision was brought to the notice of your Lordships in our reports specified in the margin, in respect to the adjustment of numerous surcharges which had been raised on his accounts by Mr. Barnes, Collector of Customs at Van Diemen's Land, who was employed by this Board to investigate the state of the Customs Department at Sydney, in the year 1846, and in consequence of whose report we had found it necessary to express to Colonel Gibbes, the Collector, our dissatisfaction at the irregular manner in which the various branches of the Customs had been carried on, arising from neglect of supervision on his part, and to enjoin him to exercise an active control and superintendence over every part of the department for the future. Colonel Gibbes has, however, although not an efficient and diligent officer, performed his duties with fidelity, and he has never been charged with any offence.

Mr. Garling served with diligence and fidelity, whilst under our superintendence, and has never been charged with any offence.

As respects the claim of Colonel Gibbes to be considered an Imperial Officer on the ground that he continues to hold a Commission from this Board as Controller of Customs and Navigation Laws, we have to observe that similar commissions were issued under your Lordships' directions to the principal officers of the Colonial Customs in all of the British Possessions abroad upon the discontinuance of the Imperial Officers of Customs, but the services rendered under such commissions have been for the interest and accommodation of the traders and shipowners in the Colonies, and have never been recognised as entitling the holders thereof to remuneration from the Imperial Government, and we submit to your Lordships that Colonel Gibbes' claim should not be admitted.

Downing-street,

SIR,

With reference to my Despatch, No. 44, of the 22nd December last, informing you of the decision of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury in respect of the amount of pension to be assigned to Colonel Gibbes from the Imperial Treasury, on account of his services as Collector of Customs in New South Wales while acting under Her Majesty's Commissioner of Customs, I transmit, for your information and guidance, the copy of a further letter from that Department, which will apprise you of the rate of pension which their Lordships

Lordships are prepared to assign, from the same source, to Messrs. Garling, Nash, and Bramwell respectively, whose resignations in the local Customs Department were provisionally accepted by you at the same time with that of Colonel Gibbes.

I have, &c.,
NEWCASTLE.

[Enclosure.]

Treasury Chambers,
10 February, 1860.

Sir,

With reference to your letter of the 17th August last, upon the subject of the superannuation of certain officers of the Customs Establishment in New South Wales, I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you, for the information of the Duke of Newcastle, that they have had under their consideration the circumstances connected with the removal of Messrs. Garling, Nash, and Bramwell from the Colonial Customs Establishment above-mentioned. They would observe that it appears very doubtful whether, if that establishment had been under the control of Her Majesty's Government when the transactions occurred which resulted in the removal of these gentlemen, any retired allowances would have been granted to them.

Their Lordships having, however, communicated with the Commissioners of Customs in reference to their services in the Imperial Customs Establishment, prior to the 30th September, 1852, are informed that, while under the superintendence of that Board, they performed their duties with diligence and fidelity, and had not been charged with any offence.

Under these circumstances, their Lordships are of opinion that they would be justified in acknowledging their services to the above date, and in awarding to them compensation in respect of those services.

They will, therefore, signify to the Commissioners of Customs their approval of the payment of compensation allowances at the following rates, viz. :—

Mr. F. Garling, Landing-surveyor, &c. ...	£200 per annum.
Mr. D. Nash, Locker, &c. ....	£54 15s. 2d. per annum.
Mr. J. Bramwell, Tide-surveyor, &c. ....	£54 15s. 2d. per annum.

calculated upon their salaries and services up to the 30th September, 1852.

It will rest with the Colonial Legislature to consider, as in the case of Colonel Gibbes, whether any addition should be made to the allowances from the revenue of the Colony, in respect to the subsequent Colonial service.

In his Despatch of the 10th April, 1859, Sir William Denison, in requesting that their Lordships would decide the amount of the pensions to be granted to these officers, in reference to their combined Imperial and Colonial services, submits that this Board should fix the proportion properly chargeable to the Colony.

In reference to this point my Lords would observe, that the Superannuation Act requires the production of a certificate stating that the officer had performed his duty with diligence and fidelity, and they apprehend that no such certificate could properly be given in the case of any of these officers for their service subsequent to the transfer.

In the absence of such certificate they are unable to take the pensions into consideration, as requested by the Governor; but, at the same time, they do not wish to prejudice the claims of these officers in the event of the Colonial Legislature deeming it advisable to consider their claims for the Colonial service.

Their Lordships further observe that pensions have been "provisionally" awarded by the Governor to Colonel Gibbes and to the other gentlemen in respect to their Imperial service.

These provisional pensions considerably exceed the amounts which their Lordships have now sanctioned, and they request that the future payments may be adjusted in accordance with their present decision.

Directions will be given to the officer in charge of the Treasury Chest to issue the allowances which have been sanctioned to these four officers.

I am, &c.,

DISPUTES BETWEEN THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AND CUSTOMS' AGENTS AND OTHERS.

REPORT.

Sydney, 23rd March, 1860.

SIR,

Having, in compliance with your request of the 30th November last, inquired into the differences which have arisen between the Collector of Customs on the one hand and the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents, on the other, as detailed in correspondence forwarded to us, we have the honor to report as follows:—

The principal complaints of the Collector against the Custom House Agents are,—

1. That Mr. Metcalfe exercised an influence in the department not warranted by his position.

2. That the firm of Metcalfe and Co. submitted for the Collector's signature a blank clearance, to be afterwards filled up by them as they might choose.

3. That, previous to Mr. Duncan's appointment to the position of Collector, Mr. Powell, in the presence of two of the Long Room Clerks, used the following words, with reference to the new Collector:—"If any man comes here and attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will very soon walk him out":—and that he has done his very best to verify these words.

4. That Mr. Powell concealed from the knowledge of the Collector for about three weeks, and until called upon to refund the money, the fact of a short shipment of about 40 bags of sugar by the "Moa" for New Zealand, on which drawback had been allowed.

5. That Mr. Metcalfe indorsed on the warrant for the shipment of the sugar per "Moa," an amount greater by 40 or 43 bags than that actually shipped; such indorsement being a false one.

6. That the case of the "Moa" was by no means a solitary case of irregularity or attempt at fraud on the part of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, the latter having frequently indorsed warrants for drawback, and Mr. Duncan's correspondence with the Collectors of other Colonies, and the comparison of the drawbacks paid by Mr. Duncan, since he took office, with those paid by his predecessor, proving that during Mr. Duncan's administration the Sugar Company and their agents have been prevented from defrauding the public of many thousand pounds.

7. That Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell have been guilty of great irregularities in at least four different instances by passing over entries for drawback. In one case, having described ten tons of sugar entered for drawback as "refined," which on examination proved "bastards," making a difference of 1s. 8d. per cwt. in the amount of drawback.

8. That Mr. Powell offered the most persevering opposition to the orders of the Collector, to weigh everything shipped for drawback, and to obtain regular forms of declaration before granting drawbacks.

9. That Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell had, as agents for the Sugar Company, taken out of bond 231 tons of sugar, representing a duty of £1,155, and by a false representation to the Executive Council were enabled to obtain a remission of duty on sugar, thus abstracted, in one case amounting to £700, and in another to £1,350—the representation being that the sugar was weighed for duty, and that the deficiency had arisen from waste.

10. That on one occasion Mr. Powell entered for drawback six casks or hogsheads of sugar, whilst four only were shipped; also, that after the searcher had been made aware of the short shipment, Mr. Powell asked him to indorse on the warrant the shipment of six hogsheads.

11. That on another occasion, Mr. Powell attempted to tamper with one of the officers of the department, and to get from him a document belonging to the Collector's office.

12. That Mr. Powell's letter of the 9th August last, addressed to the manager of the Sugar Company, contains reflections on Mr. Duncan's honesty and impartiality, and is a "tissue of misrepresentations."

There has been no evidence produced to justify the first charge. The influence exercised by Mr. Metcalfe and his partner appears to have been due to their superior knowledge of Customs laws and business, and to the confidence reposed in them by the late Collector. It has been shewn that they have frequently been instrumental in protecting the revenue by correcting the mistakes of the officers of the Customs. The confidence of the head of the department, which they have thus deserved, has led in some instances to altercations between them and the junior officers, and to reference of the matter in dispute to the Collector. The majority of these cases appear to have been settled in favor of Messrs. Metcalfe and Co., and on that account there has arisen (for we can trace no other cause) a dread among some of the officers of the department of the power and influence of the Agents. The general evidence is strong in support of the conclusion that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell have, in the position of Custom House Agents, rendered great assistance in forwarding the public business, and protecting the revenue; that except in one instance, in which Mr. Powell was concerned, to which we shall presently allude, they have never attempted to set aside existing laws or practice, or to act against the decision of the head of the department.

The charge of submitting for signature a blank clearance, rests on the following evidence: In order to facilitate the clearance of Melbourne steamers, and to enable them to take in free goods, such as fruit and perishable articles, to the latest hour, the late Collector established the practice of taking the declaration of the captain of the vessel on the "contents outwards" or clearance to within a few hours before the vessel's departure, by which time all drawback or bonded goods had been entered in it, and the signature of the clearing clerk placed under the last entry. Free goods were permitted to be shipped after this, and to be added to the clearance below the signature of the clearing clerk, the officer at the wharf countersigning the completed documents.

The clearance submitted by Mr. Powell for the present Collector's signature appears to have been not a blank clearance, but one of this character. It was submitted according to a practice which had not been revoked. Mr. Duncan has since discontinued this practice and substituted another; but it does not appear that the one complained of was insecure, or that it afforded facilities for obtaining goods out of bond, or for shipping dutiable goods without the passing of the proper entries. We are, therefore, of opinion that, in continuing it, Mr. Powell was justified by the regulations of the late Collector.

The third charge,—that Mr. Powell made use of the following expression with reference to the Collector who might succeed Col. Gibbes,—“If any man comes here, and attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will very soon walk him out,”—has been substantially proved, though it appears that the expression was qualified at the time by the following:—“We know our duty, and if he does not know his we will not have him.” These expressions were made use of in an idle conversation which took place on the 29th March last, at Mr. Maddock's desk, in the presence of that gentleman and Mr. Mackenzie. The latter officer took down the conversation at the time, thinking it might help him against Mr. Powell, in the event of his attempting to turn Mr. Mackenzie out of his office. The memorandum of the conversation appears to have been preserved without action being taken on it until applied for by Mr. Duncan, and then to have been produced.

It

It is due to Mr. Powell to point out that this conversation took place some six weeks before Mr. Duncan's appointment as Collector, and before Col. Gibbs' successor had been named; also, that it contained no allusion to any particular person. It is also right to remark, that no evidence has been produced which would lead to the conclusion that Mr. Powell has endeavored to act in accordance with the threat conveyed in his remarks during the administration of the present Collector.

The charge of concealment from the knowledge of the Collector of a short shipment of sugar by the "Moa," on which drawback had been allowed, is not justified by the evidence, which shews that particulars of this transaction, sufficient to justify a refund of the drawback overpaid, were not received in Sydney until the arrival of the "Spray," on 24th June. The drawback was refunded on the 27th or 28th.

The charge of having falsely indorsed a drawback warrant is directly connected with the short shipment by the "Moa." It appears that Mr. Russell, who was the drawback officer employed in the shipment of the sugar per "Moa," received, according to the established practice, from the carter employed by the Sugar Company, a ticket of every load brought for shipment. Being employed that day at several places on drawback duty, he was not able to pay sufficient attention to satisfy himself of the quantities of sugar actually shipped, and ultimately, after inquiring at the Sugar Company's office, took the assurances of the mate and captain of the vessel that the whole of the sugar entered for shipment had been placed on board the vessel. He next informed Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, the agents of the Sugar Company, of these circumstances, and led these gentlemen to make further inquiry of the Sugar Company. The answer received was that the whole of the sugar had been shipped, that the Company had sent it down, and held receipts to shew that it had been shipped. After this Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell wrote, at Mr. Russell's request, on the back of the drawback warrant the quantity of sugar stated to have been shipped, which Mr. Russell subsequently copied in the form of a certificate, to which he attached his signature. It is on account of this act that the agents are charged with having made a false indorsement. The evidence bearing on this transaction clearly proves that Mr. Russell was in the habit of obtaining assistance in the manner described. He urges as the reason that he has been 20 years in the service, is bad in eyesight, is getting infirm; and has applied to retire on a pension. He has, however, on the testimony of the landing-surveyor Mr. Still, been entrusted with a far greater amount of duties than any one officer can perform, and has generally sought the assistance of Custom House Agents to check his own calculations.

The information thus conveyed can give no validity to the warrant until it has been supported by the signature of the officer who, in the case under consideration, sought it, and has no further effect than if conveyed on a separate slip, or obtained by reference to the agents' papers. Information of this character rendered by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, on several occasions, has been of benefit to the service, and though in the case of the "Moa" it has proved incorrect, we believe it was then furnished according to established practice, after due inquiry, and in good faith.

A portion of the sixth charge has been considered and disposed of in our conclusion on the fifth. As regards the remainder, viz., that resting on the testimony of the drawbacks paid by Mr. Duncan, since he took office, compared with those paid by his predecessor, it has been satisfactorily met by a return furnished by Mr. Powell and the Sugar Company, shewing that the falling off of drawback claims is, in a great measure, due to the establishment of a Sugar Refining Company at Melbourne, and the consequent diminution of shipments to that port.

The evidence in respect to the seventh charge is as follows:—It has been the practice of the Sugar Company to give notice to their agents, Messrs. Metcalfe and Company, of the quantity and quality of sugar intended to be shipped by a particular vessel. On this information the agents pass the entries. The shipment then commences under the care of a Customs officer, whose duty it is to certify to the quantity actually shipped on the back of the entry or shipping bill. After shipment, the Sugar Company send a second statement to their agents, viz., their account of the quantity and quality actually shipped, and on this amount, if found to agree with the shipping officer's account, the drawback is claimed, and finally finally paid. The export entry or shipping bill, has always been regarded as an approximate entry, and indeed must be so, for the reasons given in Mr. Forrest's evidence.

The drawback is not paid on the shipping bill, but on the debenture, which is prepared in the Custom House from the shipping officer's statement of the quantity and quality of sugar actually placed on board, which is declared to by the agents, and countersigned by the officer, as correct.

The Collector has produced evidence of Mr. Powell having, on two occasions, passed incorrect entries for sugar, one on the 4th October last for 23 tons and 2 cwt. of refined sugar by "Moa" for Auckland, the sugar actually shipped having been 11 tons bastards and 16 cwt. 5lbs. of refined sugar; the other on the 6th September for 15 tons of refined sugar by Tasmanian steamer for Hobart Town, the sugar shipped being 5 tons of refined and 10 tons of bastards. It appears, as regards the former, that the original entry was made out by the agents in error, the notice from the Sugar Company having been for 22 tons of bastards and 22 cwt. of refined sugar. Mr. Powell, however, was the first to correct the error, and by informing the shipping officer of the precise quantity shipped he protected the Revenue. In the second instance the error in the original entry was corrected in due course by the Customs officer who shipped the sugar. In both cases the drawback was paid on the correct amount after the agents and the officers had agreed.

The charge of irregularity, as referring to this class of cases, has not been established.

8th Charge.

There has been no evidence produced to support the eighth charge. It has been instanced by Mr. Duncan, in support of this, that the Sugar Company, in order to annoy the Collector and impede the public business, put sugar in "immense" casks, which the Customs officer had no means of weighing; that, on another occasion, an officer sent to the Sugar-house to weigh sugar was treated with ridicule. These instances, if proved, would not reflect on the Custom House Agents, unless connivance for the purpose between them and the Company were shewn. It has, however, been proved by documents of the Sugar Company laid before us, that casks of the size of that complained of had frequently been shipped previous to this, and that their dimensions were not extraordinary. The charge of incivility from the Sugar Company has not been made out, and there has not been any instance brought forward in which Mr. Powell offered opposition to the orders of the Collector, regarding the regular forms of declaration previous to the granting of drawbacks.

9th Charge.

The ninth charge, though preferred against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, has been accepted and defended by the Sugar Company as a charge against them, the Agents having acted throughout the transaction to which it refers under their instructions. Taking the imputations contained in it in the order in which the transactions occurred, it appears that, on the 23rd July, 1857, the Executive Council allowed to be written off the Customs books 260 tons of sugar less the amount overpaid on certain cargoes, being a portion of 10,371 tons belonging to the Sugar Company, imported by them in the two years ending December, 1854. This permission was granted on the representation of the Collector that the sugar had, according to law, been weighed in and out of bond. He having however previously twice stated that it had not been weighed out, Mr. Duncan argues that he had been induced to alter his first opinion through the false representations of Mr. Metcalfe; and in support of his argument states, that he had seen a letter from the agents to the late Collector, containing a statement that these sugars had been weighed out. The absence of this letter is however rendered unimportant by the testimony of Mr. Turner, the locker at the Sugar Bond during the period in question. This officer states positively that the whole of these sugars was delivered out by weight, thus supporting the statement imputed to Mr. Metcalfe, and confirming that which led to the decision of the Executive Council.

The second deficiency in point of time is that of 141 tons, which is stated to have occurred in cargoes imported by the Sugar Company from October, 1855, to February, 1856, on which they claimed an allowance for waste of 3 per cent., in accordance with an agreement which they allege was sanctioned by the late Collector, to the effect that 3 per cent. loss for the first 3 months should be the recognised allowance on all sugars. Such an agreement it was beyond the power of the Collector to make. It was, however, accepted by the Company, and acted on by them until March, 1859, when being called on to explain their deficiencies, attention was drawn to the illegality of the arrangement, and the decision of of the Treasury upon the claim was, that it should be allowed, but that in future the law should be observed.

The third deficiency, or that of 231 tons, is said to be on cargoes imported from April, 1856, to January, 1857. Of this quantity 198 tons are claimed to be written off under the agreement alluded to, and under the circumstances which led the Treasurer to allow the second claim. The remaining portion is as yet unaccounted for, but, as suggested by Mr. Ross, may possibly be adjusted after a comparison of accounts between the Customs and the Sugar Company. Considering the whole of the evidence bearing on this question, we are of opinion that nothing has been adduced to justify the charge brought by Mr. Duncan against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, or to reflect in any way on the integrity of the Sugar Company or their agents.

With reference to the tenth charge, it appears that on the 10th February, 1859, the 10th charge. Sugar Company sent for shipment 6 hhds. of loaf sugar, weighing 56 cwt. 8 lbs. net. They received the mate's receipt for this shipment, and entered it in their books accordingly. Two of these hogsheads were afterwards re-landed, and put into store. Mr. Powell, who acted in this matter, was at first led to believe, by seeing the receipt of the mate of the vessel, that the six hhds. had been shipped; but Russell, the shipping officer, was aware that two of the six had been deposited in store, and refused to sign for the shipment of more than four. Upon this, according to Mr. Russell's evidence, Mr. Powell said, "He would get Russell to sign for the whole six casks, because, if the other two had not been shipped, they would be sure to be so by the next vessel." Russell, however, refused to sign for the six, because he knew that only four had been shipped.

According to this evidence Mr. Powell has endeavored to obtain from the shipping officer a certificate which, he knew, would be incorrect. His object in doing so was, apparently, to hasten the despatch of the vessel, in which another Custom House Agent was concerned. There is no ground for supposing that he designed to defraud the revenue, as the two hogsheads short shipped were, on the 19th of the same month, put on board the "Monarch" for the same port. Though, however, the object for which Mr. Powell requested the signature of the Customs officer has been established to our satisfaction, it cannot, of course, be admitted as an excuse for his conduct. This charge has, therefore, been proved.

The charge against Mr. Powell of attempting to tamper with one of the officers of 11th charge. the department, and to obtain from him a document belonging to the Collector's office, rests upon the following evidence:—On the 21st of November last, Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, on behalf of the Sugar Company, addressed a letter to the Collector of Customs, informing him that, having on the arrival of the "Virginie" passed entries for the whole of her cargo of sugar according to the bags described in the manifest and by the bills of lading, they were, according to practice, proceeding to pack unsound bags into others more suitable, which would cause a slight excess of bags over the quantity reported, when the landing-waiter considered it necessary to amend the manifest. On this the Collector's decision was asked, and given that the manifest need not be amended.

Some days before the sitting of the Board of Inquiry, Mr. Powell sent one of his clerks to Mr. Kidd, the landing-waiter, into whose hands it had passed, for this document. The request was refused. Mr. Powell then applied, in person, to Mr. Kidd for a copy of the letter, and at the same time told Mr. Kidd that if he had any hesitation about giving it he would obtain an order from the Board for its production; this also was refused. Mr. Kidd states that the circumstance of Mr. Powell sending for the letter by a clerk, and his anxiety to obtain it, made him think there was something of more importance about it than he could see. If Mr. Powell had applied for it in person, Mr. Kidd would have thought nothing about it, but have handed it over to him at once; but Mr. Powell's sending for it soon after he had dispatched it to the Collector appeared strange. Mr. Powell, in meeting this charge, states that he desired a copy of the letter because the Collector had, in connection with it, made some very offensive remarks bearing on Mr. Powell; that he applied for the letter, or a copy of it, by one of his clerks, quite publicly and openly, in order to make such use of it as his friends might advise.

It does not appear from the evidence that Mr. Powell's application was irregular, or that he used any undue influence to obtain the letter he required. The charge of tampering is therefore unsupported by evidence.

As

12th charge.

As regards the last charge, viz:—That Mr. Powell's letter of the 9th August last, addressed to the manager of the Sugar Company, contains reflections on Mr. Duncan's honesty and impartiality, and is a "tissue of misrepresentations." It appears to us that Mr. Powell has, without sufficient grounds, stated that Mr. Duncan exhibited partiality in favor of Messrs. Robey and Co. in the shipment of their sugar by "Spray," and in favor of Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., who, on the 10th May, claimed drawback on 5 tons 8 cwt. of sugar shipped by the "Lady Denison." Mr. Duncan has justified his conduct in both cases. There is a further imputation in the same letter, that Mr. Duncan, in his public capacity, had taken a position hostile to the general claims of the Sugar Company and their agents, on account of an alleged interference of Sir Daniel Cooper in favor of the Company, of which he complained. It appears, however, that though Mr. Duncan deprecated the interference of Sir Daniel Cooper (of which, however, there is no evidence), he did not make use of any expression which could imply that he would on that account oppose the just claims of the Sugar Company.

The other statements in Mr. Powell's letter have been satisfactorily established or explained.

Mr. Powell, in reply to this charge, admits that he wrote his letter under feelings of great annoyance at the character of the reports which Mr. Duncan had made to the Treasurer. These reports bear date the 13th July and 4th August, 1859, and contain imputations of fraudulent intentions, which there is no evidence to justify, against Mr. Ross, the manager of the Sugar Company, and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, their agents.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Powell's conduct is, perhaps, in some measure pardonable.

Towns & Co.
Tea deficiencies.

In the correspondence that has been referred to us, Mr. Duncan brings a charge against Messrs. Towns and Co. of having abstracted, or allowed to be abstracted, from their bond, with the knowledge that duty had not been paid thereon, 747 packages of tea, mark—K 436. Allusion is also made to a further deficiency of 38 chests and 131 half chests, a portion of brand I 436, which was not found in bond when Mr. Still took stock in August 1857.

These teas were a portion of the cargo ex "Hirondelle," from Shanghai reported inwards on the 6th August, 1856. The greater part was bonded in Towns and Co.'s stores under two bond marks:—K 436 and I 436, and charged against the bond in the lockers book. Subsequently the locker of the bond, at that time Mr. Newton, in recording delivery for home consumption of a portion of lot I 436 placed it to the credit of K 436. On discovering his mistake, he erased this entry and made the remark on the margin of the leaf:—"Entered in error—should have been I 436."

The remark though intended to refer to the credit entry was taken by every subsequent locker to refer to the entries on both sides of the folio, and to imply that no such lot as K 436 was under bond. It has thus happened that Mr. Newton's successors have allowed all teas bearing the mark K 436 to be taken from store under the impression that the duties thereon had been already paid.

As regards the firm of Towns and Co., it is stated by Mr. Stuart, and there are other grounds for believing, that it was the practice of the Customs, in regard to bonded goods, to allow entries for home consumption to be passed in advance of immediate wants, on the understanding that the goods on which duty had been paid might remain in bond an unlimited period, and be removed at the pleasure of the merchants; also to permit goods bearing any bond mark to be issued in place of the particular lot, upon which the duty had been paid, provided that the merchant kept his payments of duty in advance of the deliveries. It also appears, under this arrangement, to have been left to the Customs officers to claim duty, the merchant keeping no accounts of duties paid on particular cargoes, looking to the locker's account as his check, and passing fresh entries when called on by the officers. Mr. Stuart has shewn that the tea in question was not removed from the bond in any clandestine manner, that, on the contrary, its delivery extended over a period of eight months. It was only when the Customs took stock for an overtime sale of goods that a balance against the firm was discovered, and as soon as claimed paid for.

Our

Our conclusion, from the evidence bearing on this matter, is, that the issue without payment of duty of the 747 packages of tea is to be attributed to the lax system regarding the issue of bonded goods which was then tolerated by the Customs, and not to any fraudulent intent on the part of Messrs. Towns & Co. This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that the firm had, previous to the storing of this tea, entered into a bond with the Customs for its safe custody, to the extent of double the amount of duty payable on it, and could, therefore, have no beneficial object in abstracting that which was charged against them in the Customs books, and for which they would some day have to render account. In respect to the deficiency, as reported by Mr. Still, of 32 chests and 131 half-chests, we are satisfied that Messrs. Towns & Co. delivered to purchasers, after the date of this stock-taking, sufficient tea of this particular mark to justify the assumption that it was in the bonded store at the time Mr. Still took stock, though it escaped his notice.

Connected with this charge is one against Mr. Garling of having altered the weights as originally fixed by the landing-waiter of teas imported by the "Hirondelle."

Our conclusion, from the evidence, is that Mr. Garling acted thus on just grounds. Mr. Stuart, of the firm of Towns & Co., to which the teas were consigned, has produced the invoice of the cargo, which shews that Mr. Kidd's estimate of the weights was above the invoice weights, and above the usual weights of chests of tea imported, to which those fixed by Mr. Garling closely approximated.

The question of certain drawbacks claimed by the Sugar Company for sugar shipped to New Zealand in July last, and disallowed by the Collector, has also, by Treasurer's minute on Mr. Grafton Ross's letter of 5th December, been referred for our opinion.

The evidence warrants the conclusion, that in 1852 the late Collector sanctioned certain regulations having reference especially to the weighing for drawback the refined sugars of the Sugar Company. These regulations were of the nature of those stated in Mr. Grafton Ross's letter of the 26th July, 1859, referred to us. Though they have been acted on for seven years in the department, they do not appear to have been placed on record, and were thus unknown to Mr. Duncan. Soon after the present Collector took office he gave verbal directions that all sugars for drawback should be weighed, so that the Government might be satisfied that the amounts claimed for drawback were correct. He communicated in this manner with Mr. Powell, agent for the Sugar Company, and general Custom House Agent. He did not refer especially to the privileges of the Sugar Company, as he was not aware of their having any. Mr. Powell, being thus led to believe that the new rule was intended to refer to the general business of drawbacks only, and not to the Company's in particular, did not communicate with the Sugar Company. On the 9th July, Mr. Duncan first put his order in writing.

The drawbacks which have been disallowed were claimed for sugar shipped in the "Kate Kearney," "Spray," and "Lord Worsley" previous to this date, the two former vessels having cleared on the 8th and the last on the 9th of July, and were refused on account of the Sugar Company having adhered to the practice previously sanctioned in their case, and having omitted to weigh the sugar in the presence of an officer previous to shipment.

Mr. Ross has put in a certificate, attached to proceedings, of the due landing of some of these sugars at the ports of destination, and has offered to obtain similar certificates in regard to the remainder, and has also shewn that no intentional opposition to the Collector's modified regulations was ever offered by the Company.

It appears to us there is sufficient evidence for concluding that, previous to the 9th July, the Custom House Agents and the Sugar Company were not aware of Mr. Duncan's desire to submit the Company's refined sugars to the same checks in regard to drawbacks as the sugars of other exporters; and, under the circumstances, we consider the drawbacks which have been refused for their sugars shipped in the "Lord Worsley," "Kate Kearney," and "Spray" should be allowed to the extent to which certificates have been, or shall be, hereafter produced of their safe deliveries at the ports of destination.

Having

Having stated in detail our conclusions on the main charges or complaints preferred by the Collector, we deem it right, in justice to those who have been accused by him, to submit the following remarks:—

There has been no evidence produced to reflect in the slightest degree on Mr. Metcalfe's integrity, capacity for business, or general demeanor, as a Custom House Agent.

Of Mr. Powell it has been proved, that he expressed himself in an hasty manner to some subordinates in the long room regarding the steps he was prepared to take against any future Collector mindful of the public interests; that he endeavored to obtain an incorrect certificate from the officer, Russell; and that, acting under a sense of provocation received, he has without sufficient cause accused the Collector of partiality in the discharge of his public duties. In other respects, Mr. Powell has been shewn to be an agent faithful in the discharge of his duties, zealous to protect the public interests, and desirous of conforming to established laws and regulations.

Mr. Ross and Mr. Stuart have satisfactorily defended the firms which they represent from the imputations cast upon them.

These several parties have just grounds to complain of the treatment they have received at the hands of the Collector. Many expressions used by him, which are scattered through the correspondence and evidence, and more especially many of those, in his letter to the Government, which bear on Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, and in his reply (pages 73 to 78) to the defence of the agents, are altogether unjustifiable. Whilst the Collector's ruling desire has without doubt been to reform a department which had become greatly disorganized, and to protect the public interests with the utmost vigilance, he appears repeatedly to have expressed opinions formed in haste reflecting on the integrity of others. Without knowledge of the practices existing in the Customs, under sanction of authority, at the time he took office, he has found fault with those who acted in conformity with them; and thus, having been led into altercations with the Sugar Company and their agents, he has, without consideration, charged them and others with disgraceful practices, of which he has failed to produce any evidence.

We have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servants,

E. W. WARD,

H. H. BROWNE,

JNO. M'LERIE.

declaration that they were short-shipped here. This led to inquiries from the shipping officer, and an examination of his papers, and I regret to say, the result is unsatisfactory as regards both; for he appears never to have examined the sugar, or counted the bags, or seen it weighed or shipped, but to have taken all his information from the Company's Agents, or their notes which accompany the drays. Further, these notes themselves shew a deficiency of 40 mats upon the quantity for which drawback was paid. The warrant (which, till the transaction was complete, should have never left Mr. Russell's hands) bears an indorsement of the alleged actual shipment, partly in Mr. Russell's handwriting, partly in that of Mr. Metcalfe, and partly in that of some person unknown. I enclose the warrant herewith, and I must add that I consider the conduct of Mr. Metcalfe, as a Custom House Agent, very reprehensible, and that of Mr. Russell indefensible. And I cannot but express my surprise, that on the return of the "Moa," no intimation of this short landing should have been made to me by the Company or their Agents, who must then at least, if not before, have become aware of the error.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

I have, &c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

I am not quite certain whether, from the grave nature of the charges contained herein against Mr. Russell, I ought not immediately to suspend that officer. He ought to be required forthwith to give such explanation as he may be able of the circumstances of this case, which exhibits, as far as I can gather, most culpable neglect.

From the statement of the Collector, I think it desirable that Mr. Metcalfe should also be called upon to report on the irregularity referred to.

[No. 2.]

*Custom House, Sydney,
4 July, 1859.*

Sir,

With reference to the Honorable Treasurer's Minute of the 29th ultimo, I have called on Mr. Russell and Mr. Metcalfe to report on their respective parts, in the transaction of the short shipment of sugar per "Moa," and I have now the honor to transmit their answers, together with my own remarks on the margin of each letter.

I purpose to place the charge of the drawbacks in other hands as Mr. Russell is clearly unfit for so important a duty. Mr. Weekes will be able to judge from the correspondence whether any further censure is necessary.

I have, &c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

To the Secretary to the Treasury.

The system must indeed have become lax that could lead so experienced an officer as Mr. Russell to conduct so important a duty as that of drawbacks, in a manner which might subject the Revenue to any amount of loss. As the Collector states that he is about to place in other hands the charge of drawbacks, any further proceeding with regard to Mr. Russell may not be necessary, but I regard the explanation offered by him to be very unsatisfactory. Shippers for drawback will, no doubt, be more particular in future.

E. C. W.

4 July, 1859.

Sydney, 2 July, 1859.

Sir,

In accordance with the request contained in your letter addressed to me of the 30th June, I beg to reply to your questions as follows:—

1.—Upon finding that the Sugar Company's entry was for forty bags in excess of the quantity for which I had Customs receipts, I applied to the chief officer of the "Moa" and was informed by him that the sugar was on board, but that he had mislaid the Customs ticket.

2.—As above stated, I was assured by the chief officer that the sugar was on board the "Moa;" this, together with the Sugar Company's assurance that they felt satisfied such was the case, and in fact that they had received payment from the owner of the vessel for the quantity now said to be short, as well as the captain's signature to the warrant, was the reason which induced me to pass the matter without causing further detention in the clearing of the ship.

3.—My reason for allowing Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. to indorse the quantity on the warrant was in order to expedite business, and because Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. had been in the habit of marking the quantities on the warrants in shipments made by the Sugar Company previously.

4.—With reference to the last question I have only to say that the Sugar Company, in giving notice of their intention to ship loaf sugar, cannot give the exact weight until the same is packed—immediately before shipment; they, therefore, give as near an estimate as possible, and anything short of the quantity appears in the shape of a short shipment—drawback on actual weight shipped only being claimed.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE N. RUSSELL.

The Collector of Customs.

COLLECTOR'S

COLLECTOR'S REMARKS.

- 1.—Mr. Russell should have seen the goods shipped and counted the bags; the cart notes are of no value without this.
- 2.—The shipping officer is not to take any man's assurance, but to have the testimony of his own eyes. The sugar certainly never was on board.
- 3.—I cannot conceive any act of an officer more absurd and irregular than to allow a shipper of goods to indorse the quantity, for drawback.
- 4.—This is no answer to the question. Why did Mr. Russell allow a person unknown (even to himself,) to write off the short shipment? After all, the "short shipment" written off in this case, for 7cwt. and 7lbs., was, by whomsoever written, not the real short shipment but a fictitious one, whatever the writer may have meant it to be.

W. A. D.

Sydney, 1 July, 1859.

Sir,

In reply to your letter of the 30th ultimo, calling upon me to explain that portion of the transaction of the shipment of sugar per "Moa," for drawback, for which I, as Agent to the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, am answerable—

1.—I beg to say that notice of the said shipment was given in the usual manner, and the entry was passed in the prescribed form.

2.—I was not aware that my indorsing the warrant with the quantity shipped for the drawback officer was a serious breach of the rules of the department, or I should not have done so; it was only done by me to assist the drawback officer, who is not an expert writer, in a manner in which I have for many years been in the habit of doing, when requested, and which I never before heard any objection to.

3.—I was not aware of the short shipment until yesterday and therefore could not have reported it to you.

I beg to assure you that I am, at all times, anxious to protect the Revenue, and to conduct the business confided to me in the most correct manner; and trusting that you will do me the justice to believe such to be the fact,—

I have, &c.,
M. METCALFE.

The Collector of Customs.

COLLECTOR'S REMARKS.

1.—Yes; but the entry was afterwards indorsed by Mr. Metcalfe himself, certifying the shipment of 40 bags more than the actual quantity.

2.—With such a practice as this, what is to prevent a dishonest merchant or agent (a Stewart or a Gibbes, for example) from receiving drawbacks upon any quantity of goods which may have never been shipped? I do not, of course, mean that Mr. Metcalfe would do anything of this kind; I only object to the practice.

3.—This may be, but Mr. Metcalfe's partner (Mr. Powell,) and the Sugar Company were aware of it, as Mr. Powell admitted, when first questioned by me on the subject.

Sir,

We are informed by Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, and Co., our Custom House Agents, that the sugar shipped by us for drawback in the steamship "Lord Worsley," was, by order of the Collector of Customs for the Port of Sydney, struck out of the manifest of that vessel at the time of the clearance, although the customary notice of the shipment had been given by us to the Customs.

We understand the reason assigned for this extraordinary step to be, that the sugar was not weighed by the drawback officer; but if such was the case, it was because the new verbal orders just issued by the Collector were of such a nature that we could not immediately comply with them.

The sugar was accompanied, as usual, by two cart notes, one addressed to the master of the ship, the other to the landing waiter, who could, had he thought fit, have ordered it to be weighed on the wharf (the proper place we submit) before being shipped.

How the master of the steamer could declare to the truth of his manifest after that sugar entry was erased we do not understand, but we deem it our duty to beg that you will inquire.

We further respectfully request that you will order that the drawback of this sugar be paid to us, and that you will cause such arrangements to be made for the future shipment of drawback goods, as, with due regard to the safety of the Revenue, may not be alike oppressive and annoying to a Company that contributes so large a proportion of the General Revenue of the Colony.

Custom House, Sydney,
13 July, 1859.

Sir,

I have read the letter of the Manager of the Colonial Sugar Company, addressed to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, complaining of my having caused certain sugar shipped in the "Lord Worsley" by the Company for drawback to be struck out of the manifest of that vessel, and I have the honor to report thereon, as follows:—

1. The sugar was struck out of the manifest by the clearing clerk, in the regular discharge of his duty; he having no certificate of the export officer for its shipment.

2. On the 6th instant an entry for 10 tons of sugar was passed for drawback; the export officer went to the clerk of the Company to inquire when they would be prepared to have it weighed and shipped; he at first got an indefinite answer, but called again, when the clerk told him "he did not know when the sugar would be ready, perhaps it was not yet made"; on proceeding to the vessel, however, on other business, he found that the shipment had been going on the whole morning without any examination.

3. On the 8th the Company made another entry of 3 tons for drawback by the same vessel; the notice of shipment was not received by the officer till the 9th, while the goods had actually been shipped on the 7th, of course without examination. Would I have been justified in allowing the drawback under such circumstances, more particularly after the recent case of the "Moa," in which the same Company and the same agents received drawback on at least 40 bags more than they had shipped, and were cognizant of the short shipment, if not from the first, at least from the 9th till the 24th June, without giving me any notice of it, or refunding the drawback; neither of which they did, even there, of their own motions?

4. What Mr. Ross calls my "new verbal orders," were fully discussed and explained to the clerk and agents of the Company. Nothing could have been easier than a compliance with them; they were simply that my officers should have the opportunity afforded them of ascertaining the quantity and weight of the sugar shipped for drawback, of which they had been hitherto in utter ignorance.

5. Mr. Ross says that "the sugar was accompanied as usual with two cart notes"—no doubt,—so was the sugar per "Moa," and yet it never got on board. But the truth is, the agents of the Company were perfectly aware that I would not take the weights from them, nor the quantities from their cart notes, and they had no right to expect me to do so. The imagination can place no limit to the extent of fraud that might, or rather must, follow such a drawback system as this.

The "oppressive and annoying" arrangements of which Mr. Ross complains are purely imaginary. If he will give me due notice of his intended shipments, and afford my officers the means of ascertaining the weight of the goods he shall find no difficulty in obtaining his drawback; but I will not allow him or his agents to force me to retain a system, from which, if the Revenue has not suffered enormously, it must be because the exporters have resisted a temptation such as never existed at any other Port.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

[No. 5.]

Colonial Sugar Refining Company
Offices, George-street, Sydney,
26 July, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, enclosing copy of a letter from the Collector of Customs to the Under Secretary of the Treasury, dated 13th July, reporting upon my letter, addressed to you on the 11th instant, with reference to certain sugars struck out of the manifest of the steamship "Lord Worsley," and, in compliance with your request, beg to submit the following further explanation on this subject.

2. A short statement of the nature of the regulations made by the late Collector for the recovery of drawbacks by this Company, and a true account of the circumstances that have induced the new Collector to terminate such arrangement, will be the easiest way of placing this matter before you in its true light.

3. As soon as the Act was passed in 1852, authorizing the granting of drawback on refined sugar, &c., manufactured in and exported from this Colony, the late Collector framed the following regulations—specially for this Company, which were considered as affording sufficient protection to the Revenue, and at the same time not oppressive to the Company.

The Collector ordered, as follows:—

1. That we should give to the Customs due notice of our intended shipments of refined sugar for drawback.
2. That each cart load of such sugars should be accompanied by a ticket addressed to the Custom House Officer on board the vessel, specifying the number of packages and net weight—(as per specimen annexed.)
3. That as the Company had a uniform size for their refined sugar packages and the net contents stamped thereon, he (the Collector) would not require such refined sugar to be reweighed before shipment, for as a further security he always had the liberty of inspecting the books of the Company to ascertain the weight actually charged to the purchasers.
4. This arrangement has been carried out with satisfaction to both parties for seven years, and during this period only two instances of mistake—caused each time by the blunders of a carter—have occurred, and in each case the amount of drawback over received was the insignificant sum of £5, or, in all, £10 sterling.

5. The second of these mistakes took place about two months since; 28 tons of bastard sugar left our Sugar House to be put on board the brig "Moa," bound for New Zealand, and drawback was claimed and received on this quantity; but only 27 tons were landed in Auckland, that is one ton short. I was informed of this fact a few days after the return of the "Moa" to this port, (about 8th June last,) and at once instituted inquiries. The warehouse clerk affirmed that the sugar left our stores,—the master of the vessel declared at the Customs that the whole quantity was on board,—the drawback officer received the same information from the mate, and further the owners of the "Moa"—also purchasers of the sugar—after satisfying themselves, I presume, of the correctness of our account, paid us for the same quantity and weight as that for which we claimed drawback. With these facts before me I could not be expected—without full inquiry—to refund to the Collector the amount of drawback,—especially as I had not then—nor have I yet been satisfied that the sugar was actually short-shipped. Sooner, however, than have any difference with the Collector in so trivial a matter, the £5 was refunded.

6. I have been specially explicit on this point as Mr. Duncan evidently lays great stress upon his assertion that we were for some time aware of the error without informing him of it, or of our own motion—repaying the drawback.

7. I hardly think it necessary to take any notice of the uncourteous tone—to use the mildest term—of the latter portion of Mr. Duncan's third paragraph. He knew perfectly well that exactly 40 bags (1 ton) were short landed in Auckland, and yet he must say—at least this quantity, and well aware also of the reasons above given that prevented me from communicating with him immediately after the "Moa's" return, he sees fit to add "and the Company was cognizant of the short shipment—if not from the first at least from the 9th to the 24th June—without giving me any notice, &c." This imputation and the reference in other portions of the letter to the magnitude of the fraud that in Mr. Duncan's imagination must follow the system of drawback specially instituted for this Company—are, I submit, quite uncalled for and rather reprehensible when applied to a Company composed of gentlemen of known integrity and high commercial standing, and which has paid during the last two years upwards of a quarter of a million sterling to the General Revenue of the Colony.

8. I, through the Agents of the Company, represented to the Collector all these facts relative to the case of the "Moa," and he expressed himself perfectly satisfied with our conduct in the matter, but he shortly after thought it is duty to cancel the old arrangement at a moment's notice, and ordered that all sugars for drawback should be reweighed before shipment. On the 6th instant we received a notice—through a drawback officer—that he must see such sugars weighed at the Sugar House. We objected to this on several grounds, and told the officer we should communicate with the Collector. The usual notice of an intended shipment of two tons of sugar per "Spray" had been sent to the Custom House some time previously, and at the very time the message was being delivered to us the goods had left the Sugar House, and were on the way to the vessel. It was then quite impossible for us to comply with the demand then for the first time made, and yet, notwithstanding the Collector is aware of these facts, he positively refuses to allow us the drawbacks.

9. On the 8th July, my shipping clerk—Mr. Stokes—waited upon the Collector and fully explained our grounds of objection to the sugar being weighed at the Sugar House, and shewed that it really was an unnecessary expense and inconvenience, both for the Government and the Company, for the whole of the sugar to be weighed,—that the weights were stamped upon packages of uniform size,—that an officer could not possibly attend to all our shipments,—and that we of course claimed drawback upon the weight charged the purchasers, who would soon complain if the weights were incorrect. Mr. Duncan in reply assured Mr. Stokes that he would cause a few bags of our sugar to be weighed, and, if correct, would assume that they were a fair average of the whole. Mr. Stokes further informed him that from the nature of our large export business it was quite impossible to give notice to the Customs of the exact time all shipments would be ready to go forward, on one day or the next, but that we always gave as long a notice as possible.

10. On the 6th July we gave notice of intended shipment per "Lord Worsley," and the drawback officer applied as to the time we could go to the Sugar House to see the sugar weighed, and he was informed that we did not know when it would be ready for shipment—"perhaps it was on its way then"—perhaps it would not be made for a day or so. The Collector does not mention the first part of this answer, which was most distinctly given in my presence; the sugar it appears was got ready sooner than I expected, and was shipped on the morning of the 7th, but the shipping clerk was not aware of the fact until he received the mate's receipts for the same. Mr. Duncan states, that the sugar in question was struck out of the manifest in the regular discharge of his duty; this of course means that he obeyed the Collectors orders to this effect. Mr. Duncan does not explain, however, how it was that he allowed his officer to accept the declaration of the Master of the "Lord Worsley" as correct, though he knew he had falsified it by striking out of his manifest dutiable goods which he was certain were on board.

11. On the 8th July, Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, & Co., made, as our agents, a formal written application to the Collector, to modify his regulations.

12. In the 5th paragraph, Mr. Duncan states that 3 tons of sugar were shipped by the Company on board the "Lord Worsley" on the day before we gave the notice for the same. This is quite incorrect; the notice was given by us at the Custom House during the morning of the 8th July, and if the officer did not receive it until the 9th, the fault was not ours. The sugar left our stores at between 2 and 3 P. M. on the 8th, as per accompanying certificate, and not on the 6th as stated by the Collector.

13. I have here only mentioned the refusal of drawback on our goods shipped per "Spray" and "Lord Worsley." Some sugars have also been exported per "Kate Kearney," and we are informed that upon these drawbacks will not be granted, for similar reasons, we presume, to those expressed in the letter now under reply.

14. I think I have stated sufficient to prove that the "oppressive and annoying" arrangements, mentioned in my last, and not purely imaginary, and to justify myself in bringing the case before your notice; my object in doing so, is respectfully to request you to instruct the Collector to pay over to us the drawback on the sugars shipped per steamship "Lord Worsley," and also per sailing vessels "Spray" and "Kate Kearney," and to order him, if not to revert to the former arrangement; to frame such new regulations as may duly protect the Revenue, and at the same time not be the cause of expense or inconvenience to this Company.

For the Collector.

The responsibility of taking such steps as may be considered necessary for the due protection of the Revenue, must obviously rest with the Collector, who will I have no doubt afford such accommodation to the mercantile community generally, as may not be inconsistent with this protection. If the dates in the within letter from the Sugar Company are correct, the parcel of sugar exported per "Spray" was on its road to that vessel at the time the intimation was first made to them of a change in the regulations. Provided that such was the case, I think the drawback on this parcel should be allowed, as having been shipped in ignorance.

E. C. W.
2 August, 1859.

The confusion of facts and dates in the correspondence renders it very difficult to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion, as related by Mr. Ross. I considered the circumstances of the shipment of sugar per "Spray," warranted me in deciding that the drawback should be allowed, and I had minuted to that effect; but the further report of the Collector, stating that long before the date of that shipment he had stated to the agents of the Company, and to their managing clerk, that the sugar shipped for drawback must be weighed in the presence of an officer, and that the case of the "Moa" had caused him to renew that notice, of which all parties were aware some days before the shipment in question, and that there was no real difference between the case of the "Spray," and that by "Lord Worsley," "Lord Ashley," and "Kate Kearney," would not, I conceive, justify me in interposing. It would appear that the change in the regulations was communicated by the Collector to the agents and officers of the Sugar Company, who must have neglected to have informed Mr. Ross.

*Custom House, Sydney,
4 August, 1859.*

Sir,

With reference to Mr. Ross's letter of the 26th ultimo (herewith), and the Honorable Treasurer's Minute thereon of the 2nd instant, I think it necessary, before paying the drawback on the sugar in question, to make a few remarks on Mr. Ross's statements.

1. As to the regulations under which the drawback system was conducted before my time, and which Mr. Ross wishes to have restored, I am bound to say that, coupled with the absence of the exporter's declaration, and the employment of a simpleton as the sole export officer, it does not appear to me possible to devise a scheme better calculated to facilitate extensive frauds without the possibility of detection. If, as Mr. Ross says, "only two instances of mistakes" have been discovered, this proves the difficulty of discovering them under such an unheard of arrangement,—not that no more mistakes have occurred. I have a strong belief, founded on the general irregularity of the Company's Custom House business, that many such mistakes have occurred; and I shall have shortly to draw the Honorable Treasurer's attention to some facts bearing on this subject. Indeed, under so loose a system, mistakes and even frauds must have occurred. There was not even the peril of a false declaration between any exporter and any amount of drawback he might venture to claim under the regulations of which Mr. Ross so highly approves.

2. With respect to the case of the "Moa," I still maintain that it was Mr. Ross's duty, as an honorable man, and his agents' duty, under their bond, immediately to inform me of the non-shipment of the sugar upon which they had the drawback. If he ridicules the small amount, I dwell upon the very great principle involved.

3. I shall not defend the "tone" of my letter from Mr. Ross's remarks, even by quoting the example he had previously set me; but when he finds fault with the expression, "at least this quantity," and says, I "know perfectly well that exactly 40 bags were short landed in Auckland," he makes a grave accusation which I rebut with the simple fact that the Collector at Auckland wrote me that 43 bags were short landed. I had also good reason to use the words "if not from the first"; but, of course, Mr. Ross is in error in assuming that I meant any inference that may be drawn from these irregularities to apply to any "gentlemen of known integrity" who may happen to be shareholders in the Company.

4. I now come to the dates upon which Mr. Weekes thinks the drawback may be allowed on the sugar by the "Spray." As given by Mr. Ross, however, these dates are extremely inaccurate. Long before the date of that shipment, I stated to the Agents of the Company, and to their managing clerk, that the sugar shipped for drawback must be weighed in the presence of an officer; difficulties were thrown in the way, but the case of the "Moa" caused me to renew my notice—of which all parties were aware some days before the shipment in question.

There is, therefore, no real difference between the cases of the sugar by the "Spray," and that by the "Lord Worsley," "Lord Ashley," and "Kate Kearney," to which Mr. Ross refers. If the drawback be paid on one, it will be claimed and should be paid on all; and a regulation which is already working well, without the slightest hindrance to trade, will be so far nullified, and my authority weakened.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

Having been informed by the chief officer of the S. S. "Lord Worsley," that the three tons of sugar referred to in the Export Warrant, No. 159, for drawback, was shipped on the 7th instant under these circumstances, the warrants are returned without execution.

DONALD MACPHERSON, L. W.

Sydney, 12 July, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to place before you the following particulars relative to shipment of sugar for drawback on the steamship "Lord Worsley":—

Immediately on receipt of notice for drawback, I called at the office of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, and requested them to appoint a time that I could see the sugar weighed previous to shipment.

In answer to my request, I was informed that they did not know what time it would be ready—perhaps in a day or two, or not till the end of the week.

I called again at the office and urged the necessity of my seeing the sugar weighed and shipped, in order to secure the drawback, and was told that they did not know when it would be ready—perhaps it was not made yet; they then referred me to Metcalfe and Co., who would give me the necessary information; on applying to Mr. Powell, he stated that he knew nothing about it; I then said, as I have called upon the Sugar Company so often about this, that they must notify me when ready to ship, as I had several other notices for drawback to complete—one of which being for tea on the same vessel; I discovered that the Colonial Sugar Refining Company had been sending down sugar the whole of the forenoon, without notifying me of the same.

Colonial Sugar Refining Company,
Offices, George-street, Sydney,
15 August, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 8th August, replying to my application for payment of drawback upon sugars exported per "Lord Worsley," "Spray," and "Kate Kearney." I note that you do not consider you are justified in interposing in the matter, and that, relying upon Mr. Duncan's statement, you are of opinion that the change in regulations was communicated to our agents, Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, and Co., "long before" the date of the "Spray's" shipment.

As containing a positive denial of this statement, I have the honor to enclose you a letter addressed to me by Mr. Powell (one of the firm of Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, and Co.), who also adverts to other circumstances bearing upon my application, the perusal of which will I trust induce you to reconsider the case.

As to one of the parcels of sugar upon which we are refused drawback, viz., that per "Lord Worsley," I have obtained a certificate from the Customs officer at Auckland, of the full number of packages having been duly landed at that port, which I beg to enclose. If it be objected that the weight is not specified, I can produce the books of the Company, shewing that the weight for which the consignee there actually paid is the same as that claimed for drawback.

I am daily expecting similar certificates for the sugars per "Spray" and "Kate Kearney."

With these documents (Mr. Powell's letter, and the certificate of Customs officer), I trust the Government will see the justice of sanctioning the payment of the drawback we claim upon these sugars, especially as it is now upon record that other persons under similar circumstances have found little or no difficulty in obtaining the drawback upon their goods.

I have in conclusion to express the regret of the Directors that this Company, almost the sole representative of manufacturing enterprise in the Colony, and contributing a fourth of its general revenue, should have been singled out by Mr. Duncan as deserving of the obstacles and annoyances he appears desirous of placing in its way, and this more particularly when he acknowledges himself actuated by motives such as those expressed during his conversation with Mr. Powell.

I have, &c.,

J. GRAFTON ROSS,
General Manager,
Colonial Sugar Refining Company.

The Honorable
The Colonial Treasurer.

Sydney, 9 August, 1859.

Sir,

I have carefully read Mr. Lane's letter to you, in reply to your communication with the Honorable the Treasurer in reference to the disputed drawback payments.

Mr. Duncan's statements must be wholly unfounded, and I fear that the obscurity of dates and circumstances are of his creation.

I assert most unhesitatingly that I had no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have Company's sugar weighed for drawback, except as I shall hereinafter shew.

A difficulty, which has been most ridiculously magnified, occurred in the "Moa's" shipment, in consequence of the carelessness of the Custom House officer. The Collector did not say that he intended reporting the matter to the Government, but expressed himself satisfied with my explanation and with the general correctness of the Company.

We on the 1st and 4th of July, entered for shipment on board the "Spray," twenty-two tons sugar, which was not weighed by the Customs either at the sugar-house or on the wharf, upon which drawback has been allowed. The new regulations commenced on the 6th July by another officer, with a further shipment on board the "Spray" of two tons sugar, upon which drawback is not allowed in consequence of his not having seen the same.

The officer might have seen the sugar at the ship—this he refused to do, his instructions from the Collector being to weigh at the sugar-house.

The impossibility of acting upon such instructions was demonstrated to the Collector by his own officer in my presence, and he three days after the commencement of the new practice (which has caused all the inconvenience of which you have complained) reverted to that which had been in force previously, and under which no difficulty has arisen except in the case of the "Moa," and one other case about three years since, involving errors to the amount of £10, which was repaid to the Customs immediately upon discovery.

"Long before" is a very indefinite and ambiguous term; I assert that I did not receive any such intimation at any time, except from Mr. Chapman, the newly-appointed officer, on the 6th July. I immediately sent him to your office, where he repeated that his instructions from the Collector required that the sugar should be weighed by him at the sugar-house.

There was no renewal of the practice of weighing sugar, simply because no sugar manufactured by the Company had been weighed previous to the error in the "Moa's" shipment, nor subsequently until the appointment of Mr. Chapman on the 6th.

All parties could not (as stated) have been aware of that which did not exist until the entry for the two tons on board the "Spray" on the 6th July, and I with confidence state that no difficulty would have arisen had the Collector allowed that which he allowed before and has since allowed.

Robey and Co.'s sugar, shipped by the "Spray," was not weighed either at the works or on the wharf, but the Collector allowed the drawback upon the bags as counted in the ship's hold, taking other bags to represent the weight. I suggested that the same course should be followed for the Sugar Company, which was objected to by the Landing Surveyor.

Again, on the 18th May, Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., claimed drawback upon 5 tons 8 cwt. sugar, which had been shipped fully a week before the entry was passed; and although no officer of Customs had weighed or seen the sugar Mr. Duncan authorised the allowance of the drawback, only deferring the payment until a certificate could be produced of the unloading.

I may terminate my remarks by informing you that three days since I had a conversation with Mr. Duncan in reference to the Sugar Company's drawbacks, and endeavoured to prove to him that no substantial ground existed for disallowing the drawback, and offered to procure certificates of the due landing of the sugar from the ports of discharge.

Mr. Duncan said he did not doubt the correctness of the whole transaction, and imputed no blame whatever to us as Agents, and that he very likely would have been inclined to allow the drawback had it not been for the impertinent character of Mr. Ross' letter, and the running about by Sir Daniel Cooper from Minister to Minister in a matter he did not understand.

23 July, 1859.

I hereby certify that the three hundred and forty-four mats sugar marked E, consigned to Ellis of this place, were duly landed, ex "Lord Worsley" steamer, Johnston, master, from Sydney, July 10th, 1859.

THOS. H. ELY,

Landing Surveyor.

[No. 8.]

Custom House, Sydney,

18 August, 1859.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a further letter from Mr. Ross to the Honorable Treasurer, on the subject of the disputed drawbacks on sugar, together with a letter from Mr. Powell, Custom House Agent to Mr. Ross, on the same subject, on which two documents I am requested to report.

1. This discussion is assuming a very disagreeable aspect. If the assertions of Mr. Powell in the latter production were true, the strong language of Mr. Ross would be more than justified, and I should deserve to be dismissed from the public service with ignominy, as having been guilty of falsehood and partiality. If, on the contrary, Mr. Powell's statements are a tissue of misrepresentation, he is, I submit, an unfit person to hold a license from this office. Before replying to Mr. Ross, therefore, I think it necessary to test the worth of the evidence on which his letter is founded.

2. Mr. Powell sets out by a general accusation of falsehood against me as regards "statements," "dates and circumstances." Descending to particulars he asserts, "most unhesitatingly," that before the 6th July he "had no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have the Company's sugar weighed for drawback." Could Mr. Weekes conceive that this is a mere quibble? Yet such is the fact. In a conversation, to which Mr. Powell afterwards refers, he admitted in the presence of Mr. Still and Mr. Llewellyn that "I had spoken to him on several previous occasions respecting the weighing for drawback, but that I did not specify the Company's sugar in particular!" Why should I? I never meant to make any distinction either for them or against them. (I append statements of Mr. Still's and Mr. Llewellyn's recollection of this conversation.)

3. I do not understand what Mr. Powell means by saying that the deficiency of the sugar per "Moa" has been "most ridiculously magnified." Nor is it correct that it occurred "in consequence of the carelessness of the officer," although he ought to have detected it. But how is it that the manager and agents of the Company strove hard to have this most careless officer retained at his post, and when that could not be, to prevent his dismissal from the service? That I ever expressed my satisfaction with Mr. Powell's part in this affair, is the direct reverse of the truth.

4. If the sugar entered on the 1st and 4th July was not weighed, it was contrary to the searcher's instructions, contrary to my belief, and that of the landing surveyor. But with such an officer as Mr. Russell it was easy for Mr. Powell to obtain any terms of shipment. On the 6th July that officer was replaced by Mr. Chapman, and the drawback on the entry of that day was refused, because the goods had been shipped without notice, and the officer was unable to ascertain either the quantity or weight. The statement of Mr. Powell that "the officer might have seen the sugar at the ship—this he refused to do," is, I am informed by that officer, and Mr. Still, untrue (see their letters annexed), as is Mr. Powell's assertion that he "suggested that the same course should be followed for the Sugar Company" that had been adopted in Messrs. Robey and Company's case. Mr. Still has no recollection of any such suggestion, and I am quite sure it was never made to me. In Messrs. Robey's case every bag was counted, and the weight ascertained with tolerable accuracy. Mr. Powell well knows that I would have been satisfied with similar evidence of the weight in the case of the Company's shipments; yet with this knowledge he has the hardihood to put the two cases in contrast as a proof of my partiality—partiality in favor of persons who are quite unknown to me!

5. Mr. Powell has repeatedly asserted that the proposal to weigh at the sugar-house emanated from me. It was with the view of meeting the convenience of the Company, and their alleged difficulty of weighing on the wharf, that I consented to this arrangement, which was never meant to be permanent. When, however, I found my officer laughed at by the clerks of the Company,—when he was told that “perhaps the sugar was not yet made”—they knowing at the time that it was actually shipped, of course all notion of weighing at the sugar-house was abandoned. When, however, Mr. Powell states that I “three days after ‘the commencement of the new practice reverted to that which had been in force previously,’” he asserts that which he knows to be utterly untrue. (Vide Mr. Still's letter, also Mr. Chapman's, appended.)

6. Mr. Powell says that, “Again, on the 18th May, Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, & Co., ‘claimed drawback on 5 tons 8 cwt. sugar, which had been shipped fully a week before the ‘entry was passed, and, although no officer of Customs had weighed or seen the sugar, Mr. ‘Duncan authorised the allowance of drawback, only deferring the payment until a certificate ‘could be produced of the unloading.’” Mr. Powell, however, omits to observe, that on that occasion I gave notice to the agents—himself among the number—that in no future case would I allow drawback, unless my officers were enabled to examine the goods. This occurred just eight days after I took charge of this office, and had Mr. Powell told the whole story, it would have explained in part what I meant when I used the relative expression ‘long before the 6th July,’ which he thinks so ambiguous. The Honorable Treasurer will bear in recollection, that before my time there was no evidence whatever of the true quantities shipped for drawback, and no declaration before the Collector as to the correctness of the transaction.

7. Mr. Powell's version of the conversation mentioned in his two last paragraphs is substantially contradicted by Mr. Still and Mr. Llewellyn, who were present. To their fair and honest statements I add my positive assertion that Mr. Powell did admit several conversations having taken place on the subject of weighing sugar for drawback before the 6th July (though not specially the Company's sugar); that I never expressed my satisfaction with his conduct as a Custom House Agent; that I never exonerated the manager of the Company from blame in opposing all my reforms, although I expressed much respect for some of the individual shareholders; and above all, that I never said that “I would have been ‘inclined to allow the drawback had it not been for the impertinent character of Mr. Ross's ‘letter, and the running about of Sir Daniel Cooper, &c.’” I had in fact decided not to allow the drawback before Mr. Ross's letter existed. (Vide notes of Mr. Still and Mr. Llewellyn, appended.)

8. Having thus disposed of Mr. Powell's facts, the argument of Mr. Ross founded on them of course falls to the ground. The charge of partiality is perfectly ridiculous, if not something worse. I never exchanged words, to my knowledge, with either Messrs. Robey and Co. or Gilchrist and Co. If these have found me desirous of affording them every facility they required, it is because they shewed a willingness to comply with the law, and my reasonable orders. If I have been firm with the Sugar Company, it is because their clerk and agents have set all my orders at utter defiance, fancying they had influence enough to cause them to be rescinded, in which I trust for the honor of the Government and the safety of the Revenue they will find themselves mistaken. To me it can be of no consequence whether these drawbacks are paid or withheld. I have given my opinion on that head honestly, as was my duty, and I consider the decision now out of my hands.

9. I cannot, however, conclude this letter, long as it is, without remarking on Mr. Ross's concluding paragraph. If it be Mr. Ross's meaning that because the Company he represents is about “the sole representation of manufacturing enterprise in the Colony”—that, therefore they ought to possess privileges at the Custom House denied to private merchants, then I totally dissent from the doctrine. I believe the age of bounties and protection has expired and ought never to be resuscitated. But, however this may be, the law makes no distinction between manufacturer and importer, and I make none. The “obstacles and annoyances” have all proceeded from the Company's servants and agents, not from me. I admit that my mode of administering the Custom Laws will interfere with the profits hitherto enjoyed by the Company, independently of what may be assumed as the probable results of their former drawback system. I would draw the Honorable Treasurer's attention to the practice they have been allowed to carry on of taking large quantities of sugar out of bond without weighing, or paying the full duty. I find that in the Auditor General's queries for the December Quarter of 1856 upwards of 260 tons of sugar representing about £1,350 of duty had been taken out of bond by the Company without payment of duty—that an application made to the Government, supported by an incorrect statement of facts for a remission of this large sum, and that the Executive Council, deceived as to the facts, allowed the deficiency to be written off.

10. Again, in the first quarter of the present year, a deficiency of 141 tons was discovered, representing duty to the amount of £700 and upwards, and was disposed of in a similar way.

11. In addition to these cases, which had already come under the notice of the Government, I have now to state that we have discovered deficiencies in the sugar belonging to the Company now appearing to be in bond to over 231 tons, representing duty which ought to be now in the Treasury, amounting to £1,155, and which upon the system hitherto enjoyed enjoyed by the Company would be lost to the Revenue in like manner:—doubly lost in fact, because on this very sugar which has never paid duty at all, drawback has been allowed long since. And Mr. Fancourt informs me that these 231 tons by no means included all the actual deficiencies.

12. I know, of course, what the agents of the Company have said about waste—the English allowance, and so forth; but I am prepared to prove, if necessary, that their representations on the subject are incorrect. These deficiencies all occurred before the appointment of Mr. Still. Up to that time no locker superintended the weighing out of the Company's sugar. Mr. Still had a locker appointed, and thus solved the problem of the alleged waste, which instead of three and four per cent. claimed by the Company and allowed, has never exceeded one-half per cent., while in several instances the sugar has actually increased in weight! Any further remark would be superfluous.

In conclusion, since the part of this letter referring to Mr. Powell was written, I have called upon the agent of Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., to whose drawback on the 18th of May he refers, to state what occurred on that occasion. Mr. Bayley's note herewith, entirely agrees with my own recollection of what took place, and demonstrates against Mr. Powell, that even so far back as the 18th May—eight days after I took charge, the new regulations respecting drawback, which Mr. Powell asserts "most unhesitatingly" were not issued till the 6th July, were actually initiated. Adding this to the other proofs I have adduced of his utter recklessness of truth and his gross disrespect to myself, as well as his habitual opposition to all my efforts to reform this establishment, I beg to request that the Honorable Treasurer will, in accordance with the 60th section of the Act, 9 Victoria, No. 15, obtain the concurrence of His Excellency the Governor General to my revocation of Mr. Powell's license. His partner, Mr. Metcalfe, appears to have no license, or at least, has not given bond as an agent according to law.

I have, &c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

Custom House, Sydney,
17 August, 1859.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your request that I will state if the extracts, as per margin, from a letter addressed by Mr. Powell, of the firm of Metcalfe and Co., accord with my recollection of a conversation in my presence between yourself and Mr. Powell, as well as with other circumstances connected with certain drawbacks claimed by the Sugar Company last month, I beg to remark as follows, namely:—

"I assert most unhesitatingly that I had "no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have
"the Company's sugar weighed for drawback
"(before 6th July.)"

Mr. Powell, on being reminded by you that you had spoken to him on several occasions respecting the weighing of drawbacks, admitted you had done so, but that you had not specifically mentioned the Sugar Company.

"Mr. Duncan said he did not doubt the "correctness of the whole transaction, and
"imputed no blame whatever to us as Agents."

I cannot recollect any allusion being made to the conduct of the Agents during the conversation.

"He very likely would have been inclined "to allow the drawback, had it not been for
"the impertinent letter of Mr. Ross, and the "running about of Sir Daniel Cooper, &c."

I did not understand your remarks in that light, because you exclaimed in reply to an observation from Mr. Powell, "What feeling can I have in the matter—several of the Company I know and respect—Sir Daniel Cooper is a personal friend, and his uncle in London has rendered me services," and other words were made use of to the same effect.

"The officer might have seen the sugar
"at the ship (the 'Spray')—this he refused
"to do."

I am given to understand by the officer in question that this was not the case.

"The impossibility of acting on such "instructions was demonstrated to the Collector in my presence, and he, three days "after the commencement of the new practice,
"reverted to that which had been in use previously."

The old practice has not been reverted to since the first order was issued on the subject.

"The landing-surveyor refused to allow "the bags to be counted in the hold, and the "quantity ascertained in that way, as the "Collector had allowed in the case of a parcel
"of Robey & Co's."

I have no recollection of any application being made to me in the matter at all. I am informed that the officer did proceed on board, but could not see the Company's bags. Messrs. Robey and Co's. the officer stated were stowed in the hold above them, and were in consequence examined.

Yours, &c.,

W. CATHCART STILL.

Custom House, Sydney,
17 August, 1859.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your letter of this day's date desiring me to give you my recollection of the tenor of a conversation between you and Mr. Powell, respecting the mode of shipping drawback goods, I will endeavor to do so as well as my memory serves me.

From your letter, it appears that Mr. Powell says:—

"1st. I assert, most unhesitatingly, that I had no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have the Company's sugar weighed for drawback, namely, before the 6th July.

"2nd. Mr. Duncan said he did not doubt the correctness of the whole transaction, and imputed no blame whatever to us as agents.

"3rd. Mr. Powell adds, that you said that you would very likely have been inclined to allow the drawback, had it not been for the impertinent character of Mr. Ross' letter, and the running about of Sir D. Cooper from Minister to Minister in a matter he did not understand."

My statement is:—

1st. I distinctly understood Mr. Powell to admit that he had had several conversations with you respecting the system you desired to carry out in the mode of shipping drawback goods.

2nd. What I understood was, that you did not doubt the integrity of the Sugar Company, but I do not recollect your approving of the transaction at all; and, as regards the conduct of Mr. Powell, I have heard you over and over again complain of his apparent desire to thwart you in carrying out the regulations you were anxious to introduce.

3. I do not remember your saying anything which would bear out this statement; but it appeared to me that Mr. Powell was desirous to understand you to say that you would have allowed the drawback, had it not been for the offensive proceedings of some of the parties, and it was at this stage that I drew your special attention to what Mr. Powell said he understood you to mean—upon which you observed—"why, what personal feeling could I have against Sir D. Cooper or Mr. Knox, who are my personal friends;" in fact, at this part of the conversation, although "deprecating the insulting mode adopted in the matter, and the interference of Sir D. Cooper," you distinctly denied any personal feeling whatever.

Yours, &c.,

W. A. Duncan, Esq.

W. N. LLEWELLIN.

Sydney, 18 August, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to submit the following explanation relative to certain statements made by Mr. Powell, in reference to two tons sugar, shipped on board the "Spray," wherein he states the officer might have seen it at the ship, which he refused to do.

In reply to which I beg to say that, when I applied at the office on receiving the notice, Mr. Stokes informed me that it had been shipped two days previously; therefore it was impossible for me to have seen it without discharging cargo, which I did not think it my duty to do.

With regard to his statement of the old system having been reverted to, I may state such is not the case, for since the 8th day of July all goods for drawback have been examined previous to shipment by the searchers and landing-waiters, at their respective stations on the water side.

Mr. Powell also states that he suggested to the landing-surveyor that the same course should be adopted for the Sugar Company as that for Robey and Co.; this could not have been done, from the fact of my not having been able to see it, as in the case of Robey and Co.'s sugar, which was stowed on top of the other goods in the hold.

I have, &c.,

The Collector of Customs.

J. M. CHAPMAN.

Sydney, 19 August, 1859.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your note of this day's date, I beg to state that the conversation which took place on the occasion in question was, as nearly as possible, the following:—

I requested to be allowed the drawback on the goods shipped, upon my producing the certificate of their having been landed at their port of destination (the requisite notice not having been served upon the landing-waiter in the regular way); stating, at the same time, that when an omission of this kind had occurred, on previous occasions, it had been customary to allow the drawback on production of such certificate.

Your reply was, that as this was one of the first cases that had occurred since the new regulations with regard to drawbacks had been passed, and that, as in all probability it was not generally known out of the Custom House, you would be inclined to allow the drawback upon my producing the certificate from the Collector of Customs of the Port to which the goods were consigned, of their safe landing. At the same time you gave me fully to understand, that on no future occasion, whatever the circumstances might be, would you allow drawback on goods for which the proper notices had not been given.

This is almost verbatim the conversation that occurred.

I remain, &c.,

W. A. Duncan, Esq.,

M. BAYLEY.

[No,

[No. 9.]

Custom House, Sydney,
30 August, 1859.

Sir,

I deem it necessary again to submit to the consideration of the Honorable Treasurer, the systematic opposition of the manager and agents of the Sugar Refining Company to my regulations for the shipment of goods for drawback.

1. It will be remembered that before I took charge, no declaration was made by the shipper, and no officer weighed the goods or saw them shipped; there was little or nothing, therefore, to prevent a person so inclined from obtaining drawback for goods that were never shipped. I took the earliest opportunity of putting a stop to this loose system, by requiring the exporters to make a proper declaration before me, and the searchers to examine and weigh the goods before shipment. To this regulation the merchants generally have made no opposition, while the most harassing and persevering resistance has been made to it on the part of the Sugar Company from the commencement to the present time.

2. In addition to the obstacles mentioned in previous correspondence, on the 10th instant the Company shipped  $2\frac{1}{2}$  tons of sugar, between 11 and 12 cwt. of which was packed in a large cask, which they well knew we had no means of weighing; the searcher ascertained by boring that it contained sugar, but could only guess at the weight, or take it at the shipper's word.

3. Again late in the afternoon of the 26th entry was passed on behalf of the Sugar Company for 6 tons of sugar for drawback; the searcher on the station heard nothing about the shipment till about half-past 12 on the following day (Saturday), when going on board the ship, the mate informed him that 5 tons of the sugar had been already shipped; on Monday he was informed in like manner that the remainder had been shipped on Saturday afternoon after he left the station. I enclose the Company's shipping notes for this sugar; remarking 1st, that the dates of all save one have been altered from 2nd to 27th; 2ndly, that the bill relating to the lot last shipped still bears date the 2nd August; and 3rdly, that although addressed to the Custom House Officer, they were never presented to him, on the part of the Company, but to the mate of the ship, who handed them to the searcher after the presumed shipment,—the last of them two days after.

Under such circumstances, it becomes necessary that I should receive the Honorable Treasurer's instructions how I am to meet this opposition. Whether I am to yield to it, and pay drawback on any quantity that may be declared to, or to insist upon this Company affording us the same facilities as others for the examination of their debenture goods.

[No. 10.]

Custom House, Sydney,
2 September, 1859.

Sir,

In preparing a list of goods in the warehouses for an overtime sale, a great number of deficiencies have been discovered, the particulars of which I herewith enclose, for the Honorable Treasurer's information, and instructions as to their disposal, so that our books may be made to correspond with the actual stock on hand.

1. A good many of the smaller packages are stated to have been used to fill up, and omitted to be written off the books. This explanation no doubt implies great negligence, but if it be admitted as correct, I would propose to write these off at once, as also those reported to have been destroyed by the floods. In other cases I purpose to make a formal demand of the duty, and I wish to know what course I should pursue in the event of its being refused.

2. The most important items are the deficiencies in sugar. The first three of these shew a deficiency of  $8\frac{1}{2}$  per centum on the whole, which, if assumed as waste, is perfectly monstrous, the real deficiency in this climate having been proved by repeated experiments to be next to nothing. The sugar has in fact been taken out of the warehouse without payment of duty, and the deficiencies should have been brought to account in the overtime sales of 1856 and 1857.

3. There is something mysterious about the 747 packages of tea deficient in Towns'. The tea seems to have been taken into consumption almost immediately after it was warehoused without payment of duty; and it seems a question whether the mere payment of the duty, which has been made now, should satisfy the Government, seeing that the goods must have been abstracted, not only with the knowledge of the locker (Newton), but with the knowledge and by the order of some person connected with the firm of Towns and Co. Nor does the mystery end with this. I forward herewith the red book of the vessel from which this tea was landed. From this it appears that the landing-waiter's net weight of this parcel was reduced by the late landing-surveyor from 32,354 lbs. to 29,134 lbs., being a loss to the Revenue of the duty on 3,220 lbs. of tea; and the same book shews that a still larger reduction was made on the net weight of another lot of tea consigned to Messrs. Towns and Co., by the same ship; making altogether a loss to the Revenue of the duty on 6,970 lbs. of tea. The landing-waiter, Mr. Kidd, who is still in the department, assures me that the original net weight was ascertained by him by actually turning out the tea.

4. The other items to which I would specially call the Honorable Treasurer's attention are a quantity of coffee missing from Fisher's and the Exchange warehouses, 3 cases of cigars missing from Pollard's, 33 cases of gin missing from Lloyd's, 58 packages of tea missing from Mitchell's, 2 cases of brandy missing from Pollard's, and 6 cases of Geneva missing from either Campbell's or Pollard's.

5. It does seem strange that all these deficiencies, if they escaped attention at previous overtime sales, were not brought to light and accounted for, or written off in 1857, when stock was taken in all the warehouses by Mr. Still, and the exact quantities on hand detailed by him for the purpose of comparison with the books. As, however, Mr. Garling and Mr. Nash, who appear to be the parties responsible for these omissions and discrepancies, are no longer in this department, I do not know that I can do more than forward the list with these few remarks.

It will be understood that the list does not include all the actual deficiencies, but such only as came to light in preparing for a sale of goods bonded more than three years since.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

The Collector will call for a report from Mr. Still, especially as to his stock-taking of all the goods in bond in 1857.

E. C. W.

8 Sept., '59.

Mr. Still's original report of 1857 herewith, together with an explanatory Nemo., and a letter from Messrs. Towns and Co., which so far as it does explain refers to another lot of tea, on which also there appears to have been a large deficiency. None of the 747 packages were in bond in 1857. The parties who compared Mr. Still's report with the books are no longer in the Department, and have left no traces of their labors. The stock of sugar was not taken at the time, but there seems to have been no restriction on the owners taking what they pleased, and even claiming drawback on it afterwards if they had the courage.

9 Sept., 1859.

W. A. D.

From a note by Mr. Fancourt it appears that the Locker at the Bond brought the matter to the notice of Messrs. Towns and Co., and the duty was paid on 3rd August, while the first intimation given to me was 2nd September. It was, I conceive, the duty of the Locker or Warehouse-keeper, or both, to have reported to the Collector forthwith, as it appears that the matter was commonly talked about more than a month ago. Application should be made in the cases referred to, and the result reported. The matters connected with the tea and sugar must be dealt with separately.

Sydney, 19 September, 1859.

Sir,

In answer to your letter of this date respecting 747 packages of tea ex "Hirondelle," in 1856, had been removed from Towns' Warehouse without payment of duty.

In reply, I beg leave to state that the stock-taking at that time, by Mr. Still, was compared in the Warehouse-keeper's Office by the Clerks in that branch of the Department, having myself little or no time to attend to the comparison, therefore those duties were left entirely to the persons employed in the Office, and as they made no report to me of any deficiency of tea in Town's Bonded Store I considered it to be correct.

I have, &c.,

The Collector of H. M. Customs.

D. NASH.

Sydney, 31 August, 1859.

Sir,

In reply to your letter of this date we beg to say that we cannot trace out how the error in regard to the "Hirondelle" has arose.

It has been the usage with our Custom House Clerk, when getting near the end of a cargo to pay duty on the balance, as per Customs warehouse-book, which appears to have been done in this instance.

On examining the book kept by Mr. Coleman (our former clerk in that department), we find he has left a memo. of a difference between his and the Customs account, which we have reason to believe he brought under notice of those in charge of the department at the time, as we are given to understand that a pencil memorandum exists in the Customs books to the effect that these teas were duty paid.

Mr. Coleman left our service shortly after, and we suppose the matter has since lain in oblivion until recent bringing up the arrears of the Customs books brought it to light.

It was not brought to our notice by Mr. Coleman, or by any one in your department, until recently, when having, by examination of the accounts relative to the cargo, satisfied ourselves that it had not been paid, we ordered its immediate payment.

We understood that about ten years ago stock was taken of all goods in the Bonded Warehouses; but how it escaped detection then we are unable to understand.

We have made inquiry and the above is the only explanation we can give, and we believe you will find that while our clerk, at the time, considered that it was not duty paid the Custom House considered that it was, and instructed its delivery.

We have, &c.,

W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs.

MEMO.

When I took stock at Towns' Warehouse, in August, 1857, I sent in my inventory to the Customs Warehousekeeper, to be compared by him with the Registers. He had the locker then in charge of the bond to assist, and the absence of the tea ex "Hirondelle," (12436) without payment of duty, had these officers properly compared the return, should at once have been detected.

My duty was merely to put down what I found; it was the duty of the Warehousekeeper to discover what was missing, as he had charge of the Registers, which shew all that each bond is charged with. The memorandum alluded to in Messrs. Towns and Co's letter, is in the handwriting of Newton, who was then locker, and refers to a different parcel of tea by the same vessel, marked I 436, of which 69½ chests were in bond when I took stock.

MEMO.

Custom House, Sydney,

15 September, 1859.

The document was retained by the locker, in order to assist him in checking the items as the discrepancies were afterwards reconciled. He is not in the Department now, and I cannot find the Memo. among the papers he left behind him.

I am positive no allusion was made to the tea ex "Hirondelle," marked K 436, but another batch by the same vessel, marked I 436, was mentioned, and on referring to the Stock Books it will be seen that 238 half-chests were paid for in September, 1857, on the audit of the return being finished. My return shews that only 69 of these half-chests were in bond at the time. I trust it may be clearly understood that the landing and bonding of these teas took place the year before I entered the Customs department.

Custom House, Sydney,

Mr. Kidd will be good enough to state when he weighed the tea belonging to Towns & Co., ex "Hirondelle," in 1856, and how he ascertained the net weight—whether a certain number of chests were turned out, or otherwise.

W. A. D.

To the best of my recollection, with the assistance of my messenger and two Chinamen in the employ of Messrs. Towns & Co., I weighed, as the vessel was discharging, one package of each descriptions of tea per "Hirondelle," and I can safely assert that the net weights, as shewn in my Red Book, are the weights actually found to be in the several packages. I emptied each package into a sheet, and weighed the sheet separately.

JOHN KIDD.

The tea was weighed in Messrs. Towns & Co's Bonded Store.

Sir,

With reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the 747 packages of tea, ex "Hirondelle," abstracted from Towns' Bond, I forward herewith a memorandum from Mr. Still respecting the document referred to by Mr. Soares, which, it seems, did not refer to the tea in question, but to another lot of 238 half-chests then on the Customs books, duty unpaid, and only 69 of which were actually in bond at the time stock was taken.

I enclose also letters from Mr. Garling, late landing surveyor, and Mr. Nash, then warehouse-keeper, neither of which, however, throws any light upon the subject.

The statement of Mr. Garling, that he ascertained the net weight as "corrected" by him by weighing, seems to be irreconcilable with that of the landing waiter, Mr. Kidd, who says, "I weighed, at the time the ship was discharging, one package of each description of 'tea per 'Hirondelle,' and I can safely assert that the net weights, as shewn in my red 'book, are the weights actually found in the several packages.'" He adds, "I emptied each 'package into a sheet, and weighed the sheet separately."

With respect to the smaller deficiencies in the warehouses, I have called upon the parties to produce the packages or pay the duty, but hitherto without result.

On the subject of the large deficiencies in sugar I await further instructions.

I have, &c.,

Sydney, 19 September, 1859.

Sir,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th instant, asking information for the Honorable Treasurer relative to the delivery of certain teas from Towns' Warehouse, ex "Hirondelle," in 1856 or 1857, and in reply beg to state that stock was taken in all the Bonding Warehouses in January, 1857, by direction of the Honorable the Minister for Finance, for the purpose of ascertaining whether any deficiencies existed, and if the tea in question was delivered prior to that it ought of course to have been then discovered and reported at the time.

With respect to the alteration in the weights I beg to observe, that when the return was sent in by the landing-waiter, the importers, Messrs. Towns and Co., objected to the weights as being heavier than the teas were invoiced to them in China, I consequently caused the contents of several of the packages to be turned out and weighed net, when it was found that the actual net weights were agreeable to the corrections made by me.

Custom House, Sydney,

Sir,

With reference to previous correspondence on the subject of irregularities in the shipments for drawback of the Australian Sugar Refining Company, and of their Custom House business generally, I forward herewith a letter and certificate from the Collector at Auckland, informing me of a deficiency in a quantity of sugar shipped here, per "Moa," for drawback, and short landed there to the extent of 9 cwt. 23 lbs.

Also a certificate from the Collector at Hobart Town, shewing that in a quantity of sugar landed there, a deficiency was found of 11 cwt. 2 qrs. on the quantity on which drawback was paid here.

In accordance with these certificates, I called upon the Company's Agents to refund the drawback on these deficiencies. I enclose their answers, on which I would only remark that the way in which Mr. Powell pretends to account for the loss of more than a ton of sugar is perfectly absurd.

The

The officers in New Zealand no doubt charge duty on all that reaches them. As to the weighing by the officers here, this is often rendered impossible by the way in which the Company pack their sugar in large casks, which happened in one of these very instances.

As a further example of the Customs entries passed on behalf of this Company, I append an entry, in the handwriting of Mr. Powell, declared to and signed by him, for 15 tons refined sugar. Under the old system drawback would have been doubtless claimed, and if claimed, certainly paid on 15 tons at 6s. 8d. per cwt. This sugar was, however, examined (though I fear not very accurately weighed) by the landing-waiter; and on referring to his indorsement it will be seen that only 5 out of the 15 tons was refined sugar, the other 10 tons being bastards.

Sydney, 7 October, 1859.

Sir,

We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter calling upon us to refund an amount alleged to have been overpaid upon Sugar shipped by the "Tasmania" to Hobart Town.

We have referred to the Colonial Sugar Refining Company for information upon the subject, and find that the sugar in question was weighed at the sugar-house immediately before shipment, which weight is certified by the landing-waiter to be correct. The Sugar Company are therefore unable to account for the discrepancy between the weights, and conceive that they are not accountable for any difference in the system of weighing and taring in the two Colonies.

We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th instant, calling upon us to refund the duty alleged to have been overdrawn on 9 cwt. and 23 lbs. sugar.

We have inquired into the matter, and find that the sugar was shipped in the usual manner, having been first weighed at the sugar-house, and the weight certified by the searcher at the time of shipment.

We desire to suggest that the allowances for tare, loss during the voyage and at the time of discharge, may possibly account for the deficiency referred to.

[No. 13.]

Custom House, Sydney,
22 November, 1859.

Sir,

I enclose for the information of the Honorable Treasurer a comparative list of monthly payments for drawback during the last three years. It is a very remarkable document, and will, if I mistake not, shew at a glance that there was great need of a stringent check upon these payments; it will account also for the enmity that my restrictions have excited against me, on the part, chiefly, of certain agents, who profited largely by the former laxity.

You will perceive that in the early part of last year from £3,000 to £6,000 a month were paid for drawbacks. Towards the end of the year a visible decrease, corresponding with the date of the "Louisa" case, is visible, but with the month of May, when I took charge, the thousand's column disappears from the list altogether. During the six months I have been here the amount paid by me has not been nearly one-half of that paid by my predecessor during the six previous months; and the amount paid from May to October, 1858, is nearly three times that paid from May to October, 1859. This, too, at a time when the New Zealand trade (to which the bulk of drawback goods usually go) is greatly on the increase.

I saw, on the very day I took charge of this office, that from the then looseness of the drawback system enormous frauds were practicable under it. These figures prove that frauds must have been practised extensively; for no coincidence could run uniformly through six successive months, beginning with the exact period of the change.

Unfortunately for me the public, who hear so much against me emanating from the men whose frauds I have checked, have no knowledge of the large sums I have saved to the country in this and other ways, by carrying out the intention of the law.

In connection with this subject, I would respectfully draw the Honorable Treasurer's attention to some previous correspondence on the way in which the Custom House Agents of the Sugar Company transact their business (Vide my letters of the 29th June, 18th July, 4th August, 18th August, 30th August, 2nd September, and 20th September). In calling attention to these letters, I must express my regret that the late Government did not afford me that support against these Agents to which my zeal for the public service should have given me a claim; for I do not believe that at any other port in the Empire a Custom House Agent would have been allowed to retain his license one hour after indorsing, and falsely indorsing too, a landing-waiter's warrant, as Mr. Metcalfe did; retaining a drawback thus obtained long after he was aware the goods were not shipped, as Mr. Powell did; to say nothing of the unparalleled misconduct subsequently exhibited by the latter up to the present time.

On the subject of the deficiencies alluded to in some of these letters, it will be necessary to obtain the Honorable Treasurer's decision, as we are about preparing for the December overtime sale, and the books must be balanced.

W. A. DUNCAN,
Collector.

[No. 14.]

Sydney, 22 November, 1859.

Sir,

It is with much regret, and with many apologies, that I now address you, but as I have for some months been subjected to great annoyances and insults in my business, by the conduct of the Collector of Customs to my partner Mr. Powell, and more especially yesterday, I have no other resource left than to appeal to you, as the head of the Revenue Offices, to afford me the protection to which I am entitled.

Almost from the commencement of his taking office, the Collector has chosen to misrepresent our intentions, and in consequence of Mr. Powell having had occasion to represent to his principals, the Sugar Company, certain unfairness in the Collector's decisions as to drawbacks claimed by the Company, Mr. Duncan has not only embraced every opportunity to disparage Mr. Powell, to persons applying to him in reference to business in our office, but has also, most unwarrantably, as I conceive, refused him admission to his room, or to have any personal communication with him.

I am sure I need not inform you how inconvenient and prejudicial such behaviour is to our business, and as I am certain no valid reason (nor any reason at all beyond personal dislike) can be given for this conduct of the Collector's, I do myself the honor to request that you will make inquiry into the matter, should you deem it necessary to do so, and that you will instruct that Officer that no personal feelings can be allowed to influence his conduct to anyone in business, and representing, as we do, nearly one-third of the merchants of this Port.

I need not remind you, as you are well aware of the fact, that I have upwards of twenty years carried on the business of an Agent at the Custom House, and that during that long period the Government have never heard any complaints of the manner in which business has been transacted in my office, and Mr. Powell has now been with me seven years, and is equally, if not more capable, than myself, of carrying on the business, and has always shewn himself most desirous and willing to carry out such instructions in the mode of transacting the business as the Collector of Customs has from time to time directed.

I have, &c.,

M. METCALFE.

The Honorable

The Secretary for Finance and Trade.

[No. 15.]

Custom House, Sydney,
24 November, 1859.

Sir,

With reference to the accompanying letter of Mr. Metcalfe, I have the honor to report:—

1. There is no foundation for the statement that Mr. Metcalfe has been "subjected to great annoyances and insults in his business," by me. No one who knows me will believe that I would wantonly insult the humblest person living. I never had an angry word with Mr. Metcalfe; and my intercourse with his partner, Mr. Powell, has been confined to my giving an affirmative or negative to his official applications, with, at times, a reason for my refusal, when pressed by him. This, and no more, took place on the day to which Mr. Metcalfe refers, "more especially."

2. Neither, "from the commencement of my taking office," nor at any time, have I misrepresented Mr. Powell's or Mr. Metcalfe's intentions. I had to deal only with their acts, acts, and with the probable result to the Revenue of their unparalleled mode of doing their Custom House business; and when I found them offering me blank clearances to sign, to be filled up afterwards, as they chose; when I found that they had obtained from the Executive Council a remission of duty to a large amount, by means of a false representation; when I discovered that Mr. Metcalfe was confessedly in the habit of supplying the place of the searcher with respect to debenture goods entered by himself; when he had the audacity to indorse a searcher's warrant of shipment, and receive the drawback on the quantity thus indorsed, the proper officer never having seen the goods; when I afterwards discovered that the quantity thus indorsed was false, being 40 or 43 bags of sugar in excess of the quantity actually shipped; when I found that Mr. Powell was confessedly aware of the deficiency, (probably before the drawback was paid,) certainly full three weeks before I accidentally discovered it; that during these three weeks Mr. Powell neither mentioned the deficiency to me, nor refunded the drawback, as any honorable man would have done; when I found that Mr. Powell made the most desperate efforts after this to prevent goods shipped for drawback from being examined by my officers, and stirred up others to do the same; when I found by correspondence with the Collectors of the other Colonies that the quantities of goods here shipped for drawback were rarely received to the extent borne on the manifests; when I found that, despite the obstacles thrown in the way of my Regulations, the payments for drawbacks decreased more than one-half from the day I took charge; when I every day heard that Mr. Powell was stirring up the mercantile community against me by false representations; when I had to report on a letter of his to the Manager of the Sugar Company, (Treasury, No. 5144,) in which he misrepresents my words and acts in the most shameless manner, as I then proved. (See my letter No. 189.) After these and many similar instances of Mr. Powell's conduct, I admit that I lost all respect for that person, and for the safety of the Revenue which I protect, and the dignity of the Office which I hold, I determined (with the Governor General's consent, as the law requires,) to withdraw his license. Why that consent was withheld, I have never been informed: I can only say, I never deemed its refusal possible; and while awaiting that permission, I allowed Mr. Powell to pass his entries as usual, but refused to have any further personal intercourse with him. He has, however, forced his conversation upon me several times—once bursting forcibly into my room, although the messenger informed him that he could not see me, and he himself knew that I was engaged with others at the time.

3. Mr. Metcalfe makes it a ground of complaint that I refuse to see Mr. Powell. A perusal of his letter to Mr. Ross, above referred to, and my answer, will shew the impossibility of my conversing with Mr. Powell without a witness.

4. As to what Mr. Metcalfe says about "personal feeling," it is perfectly ridiculous. I know nothing of Mr. Powell but what I know officially. Forgetful of his position as a Custom House Agent, (the mere creature of the Collector by law) and of the due respect and obedience he owes to the Head of the Department, he has done everything in his power to thwart me in my efforts to reform the service, and has not succeeded. Mr. Metcalfe boasts that he represents nearly "one-third of the merchants of the Port." This, itself, is a monstrous evil, on the face of it, but I believe it is diminishing. It grew from the circumstances that Mr. Metcalfe was understood to be able to accomplish for his constituents nearly all he pleased; it will decline when merchants find that all agents are treated alike, and are often quite unnecessary.

5. If, during the last twenty years, "the Government have never heard any "complaints" against Mr. Metcalfe, I can only say, so much the worse for the Government and the public. Mr. Metcalfe ruled the Department, and pleased the merchants, and who was to complain? Even the other agents profitted by the precedents created by Mr. Metcalfe's influence, and the clerks dared not utter a word. Yet I hesitate not to assert that that influence has more than any other cause—more perhaps than all causes put together, been the bane of this establishment.

6. When I took charge of this Office, I was told by Mr. Cowper that the Government looked to me to reform it. I was quite prepared for the opposition that the expected reforms would create, and my answer was, "I know I can reform it if the Government support me,—if that support is withheld, no man can." At first I was supported well, and reform was rapid and successful, until it became my duty to report the abstraction from the warehouse by an eminent firm, of 747 half-chests and bags of tea, and numerous irregularities of a like nature by the Agents of the Sugar Company, when all at once personal and political influence was brought to bear against me, and although I have not relaxed in my exertions in the least, I have felt that I was deserted by the late Government, and others have made me feel that they were aware of it. I regret the necessity of being compelled to ask from the Government a decision which should have been given by others at the proper time, but is absolutely necessary for the interest of the public service, that Custom House Agents should be made aware that they are not in the position of Advocates to take advantage of every point of law, or evade it altogether, in favor of their clients, but simply persons licensed by the Collector, for the public convenience, to write bills of entry and other papers for persons who are unable or disinclined to write for themselves, and that they are liable to immediate removal for any act of fraud, or leading to fraud, against the Revenue, or of insubordination or disrespect to the Officer from whom they hold their license.

I have, &c.,

The Secretary to the Treasury.

W. A. DUNCAN.

EXTRACT

EXTRACT from Proceedings of the Executive Council on the 14th July, 1857, Minute No. 57-33.

As it appears that under the Act 16th and 17th Victoria, No. 107, all deficiencies on sugar are allowed if the sugar be duly weighed in and out of the Bonding Warehouse, and that the law has in that respect been duly complied with in the present case, the Council are not aware of any reason why the deficiency in question should not be allowed and written off.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER,

Clerk of the Council.

23rd July, 1857. No. 57-506.

The authority of the Executive Council must be obtained; and if the Crown Law Officers approve of such a course, I recommend that Colonel Gibbes' (the Collector) proposal to close the account be adopted.

S. A. D.

4 June.

Will the Collector of Customs say, for the information of the Executive Council,—In the case of the sugar, 10,371 tons, &c., in which waste 260 tons 18 cwt., &c., is proposed to be "written off,"—was this sugar entered by invoice weight, and not weighed in; and was the weighing out the first ascertained weight of the sugar.

S. A. D.

It appears that the whole of the sugar in question, viz., 10,371 tons, was weighed in, and also weighed out, but frequently without reference to particular cargoes; and thence arises the apparent over-payment on two or three of the parcels.

The balance short paid, therefore, is the actual deficiency, as ascertained upon the last delivery. Such being the fact, it would be better not to return the over-payment by special certificate; and the right way of settling the matter is, I submit, to bring the whole quantity together, and deduct the over-payment from the short-payment, and write off the balance as loss by waste and other causes.

J. GIBBES,

Collector of Customs.

3 July, 1857.

This Minute is not strictly in accordance with the former explanation given. Had the facts been so stated at first, there cannot be a doubt that the law has been satisfied, and the explanation would have sufficed.

As this has been before the Executive Council, I think it should be referred again, with my recommendation that the allowance pass.

S. A. D.

7 July.

Custom House,

Sydney, 11 April, 1857.

Sir,

In the Auditor General's observations and queries on my accounts for the quarter ended 31st December, 1856, appears the following:—

"260 tons 18 cwt. 0 qr. 2 lbs.

"This large quantity of sugar, representing duty amounting to upwards of £1,300, is written off in the Warehouse Register as deficiency in the different importation, caused by waste, &c., from drainage and atmospheric causes.

"In accordance with the 71st clause of the 9th Victoria, No. 15, the power to remit duties is vested in the Governor General and the Executive only.

"This authority, therefore, will be required.

"With regard to the proposed deduction of 80 tons 15 cwts. 1 qr. 17 lbs. from the above amount, as this is virtually a refund of the duties, the sanction of the Honorable the Minister for Finance and Trade will be required before it can be passed in this Office.

To which I have made the following answer:—

"The 71st clause alludes solely to goods lost in going into or being taken out from the Warehouse, or in transitu, and not in any way to deficiencies.

"The 73 section provides for all deficiencies in goods liable to fluctuation of quantity.

"The 8 and 9 Victoria, cap. 91, sect. 22, allowed three per cent. for waste on sugar for three months, and I therefore thought that the claim of the Sugar Company of 1½ was very moderate, not having perceived that the 16 and 17 of Victoria, cap. 107, had done away with the fixed allowance, and granted all deficiencies, however great, on weighing out.

"These sugars, however, had not been weighed out, and I therefore do myself the honor to request that the authority asked for may be given.

"I have, &c.,

J. GIBBES,

Collector of Customs.

"The Secretary to the Treasury."

The

The Collector of Customs :

Some further explanation is necessary. Will the Collector report—

- (1.) Upon what quantity of sugar is the 260 tons 18cwt. 0qr. 2lbs allowed?
- (2.) What deduction is alluded to in the 2d par., 2nd page, 80 tons 15cwt. 1qr. 17lbs.?

Before laying before the Governor General and Executive Council, please reply to these queries.

S. A. D.
14 April.

- (1.) On 10,371 tons 4cwt. 2q. 9lbs. belonging to the Sugar Company, and imported by them in 2 years ended 22nd December, 1854.
- (2.) The 80 tons 15cwt. 1q. 17lbs. is an over-payment of duties on three of the cargoes imported within the above-mentioned periods, which being only a clerical error, was on making up the account of the sugar, deducted from the short payments as the readiest way of adjusting the account, otherwise the money could have been claimed by a certificate of over entry.

J. GIBBES, Collector,
18 April, 1857.

I think, as a general rule, it will be better for the future to adhere to the form of obtaining certificate of non-entry. I think accounts should not be otherwise adjusted as the custom here.

S. A. D.
23 April.

I presume that this means the matter is to pass as it stands; but that in future it must be done by over entry.

J. GIBBES, Collector,
24 April, 1857

Can the over-payment of the duty on the 80 tons 15 cwt. 1 qr. 17lbs. be admitted as a set off against the deficiency of 260 tons 18 cwt. 0 qr. 2 lbs., the claims of like kind being in future made on certificates of over-entry? The Civil Crown Solicitor will kindly give opinion.

Treasury,
27 April, 1857.

H. LANE.

I am of opinion that the over-payment of the duty on the 80 tons 15 cwt. 1 qr. 17lbs. cannot be admitted as a set off against the deficiency of 260 tons 18 cwt. 0 qr. 2 lbs.

W. W. BILLYARD,
Civil Crown Solicitor.

As a general principle I agree with the Civil Crown Solicitor, but in this particular case I think it would be more to the advantage of the Government to deduct the 80 tons 15 cwt. 1 qr. 17lbs., from the 260 tons 18 cwt. 0 qr. 2 lbs., and allow the difference of 180 tons 2 cwt. 2 qr. 13 lbs., to be written off the books as waste, which will meet the case and close the account.

J. GIBBES, Collector,
9 May, 1857.

Royal Mint, Sydney,
5 December, 1859.

Sir,

A mass of correspondence, referring to differences between you and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, on behalf of the Sugar Company, in which you bring certain charges of fraud or irregularity against the Custom House Agents, having been referred for investigation and report to a Board, consisting of members named in the margin, they desire me to request that you will put these charges in a succinct form, and forward them to me, with a view to a copy being furnished to Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, before the inquiry is proceeded with.

You will also be good enough to furnish, in the like form and for a similar object, a statement in detail of those deficiencies found to exist (as stated in your report to the Treasury, dated 2nd September last) in Messrs. Towns & Co.'s Bonded Stores, in those of the Sugar Company, or in any other which you consider of sufficient importance to justify an inquiry.

I have, &c.,

[No. 17.]

Custom House, Sydney,
6 December, 1859.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday, and in compliance therewith to state, as succinctly as I can, the chief grounds of my complaint against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents.

1. When I took charge of the office in May last, I found that Mr. Metcalfe occupied, not the humble position of a writing-clerk, licensed by the Collector, during good behaviour, to pass entries for the accommodation of the public, but rather that of a Commissioner of Customs, ruling the whole department. This is a fact well known to every person in any way connected with the Custom House. One of the first acts I was called upon to perform was to sign a blank clearance, prepared by Messrs. Metcalfe & Co., for a vessel, leaving it to be afterwards filled up by them as they might choose. The very presentation of such a document by agents of long experience ought, in my opinion, to have terminated their connection with the Custom House.

2. About the same time my attention was called to the fact that the agents were in the habit of obtaining drawbacks for goods without going through the regular forms of declaration, &c. To this loose practice I immediately put a stop, by which act alone, I have good reason to believe, I have saved the revenue many thousands of pounds. Certainly it procured me the enmity of Messrs. Metcalfe & Powell.

3. With reference to this subject I may state that before I took charge, Mr. Powell, in the presence of two of the long-room clerks, used these words with reference to the new Collector:—"If any man comes here, and attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will very soon walk him out." The words were written down by Mr. Mackenzie, one of the gentlemen alluded to, and I copy them from the original memorandum; nor were they altogether an empty threat, Mr. Powell has certainly done his very best to verify them; he has tasked to the utmost a talent of no ordinary kind, with the view of driving me from my post by the most harassing opposition to all my regulations for the examination of drawback goods, and for the general improvement of the service.

4. From letters received from the Collectors of the neighboring Colonies I had learned that the quantities of drawback goods borne on the manifests as having been shipped here, were rarely if ever landed there in their integrity; and in particular, I was informed on the 24th of June that of one lot of sugar shipped per "Moa," for New Zealand, 43 bags had been short landed. The Manager of the Sugar Company acknowledged that they became aware on the 8th June that 40 bags had been short shipped, and that the same morning Mr. Powell was informed of the fact. But Mr. Powell, instead of immediately informing me of the mistake, supposing it such, and refunding the drawback, as any honest agent would have done, concealed the matter for about three weeks, until I called upon him to refund the money. This fact alone ought in my opinion to have put an end to Mr. Powell's career as a Custom House Agent, and I shall be surprised indeed if the Board do not concur with me in this opinion.

5. But even this is not the worst feature of this case. On looking over the papers of the "Moa," I found to my astonishment that the indorsement of the shipping warrant, which should have been in the handwriting of the searcher, Mr. Russell, was in that of Mr. Metcalfe himself. Further inquiries proved that the searcher never weighed the sugar, never counted the bags,—never saw it in fact; and Mr. Metcalfe acknowledged that he was quite in the habit of enabling this officer (a weak minded man, appointed to this exclusive duty on his own recommendation) to complete his drawback warrants, he, Mr. Metcalfe, receiving the largest share of the money paid on them! From the knowledge of Custom House documents acquired by the Board during a former investigation, I need hardly say that a warrant is by far the most important paper we have, and that any tampering with such a document, more particularly by a party interested, as Mr. Metcalfe was, is about the greatest offence that can be committed against the rules of the department. No one knows better than Mr. Metcalfe that if he had done an act like this in England, he would have never been allowed to pass another entry as an agent, even if the quantity indorsed had been the true quantity. But it is admitted that the indorsement was false, being 40 or 43 bags in excess of the actual shipment. Under such a system as this, what was to prevent a dishonest agent from receiving any ordinary sum of money, as drawback, for goods never shipped. Even the merchant, in whose name he acted, might remain for ever in ignorance of the transaction.

6. My confidential correspondence with the Collectors of the other Colonies satisfies me that the case of the "Moa" was by no means a solitary case; and if the Board will compare the sums paid by me for drawback during the last seven months with those paid by my predecessor during any seven months within the last two or three years, there is, I conceive, but one way in which they will be able to account for an abrupt falling away of nearly two-thirds, commencing with the very day on which I took charge. Nor have I been yet able to reduce these payments altogether to their just dimensions. Since the case of the "Moa" I have had to call the intention of Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, & Co. to at least four different instances of over entries for drawback passed by them. In one instance I found they had described ten tons of sugar entered for drawback as "refined," which on examination proved to be "bastards," making a difference of 1s. 8d. per cwt. in the amount of drawback.

7. After the case of the "Moa" I removed the searcher, Russell, notwithstanding the efforts of Mr. Metcalfe and the Manager of the Sugar Company to retain him at that duty; and I insisted on every thing shipped for drawback being weighed. To this Mr. Powell offered the most persevering opposition; and a correspondence arose between the Manager of the Sugar Company and the late Colonial Treasurer, in which Mr. Powell took a part. I would refer the Board to a letter from Mr. Powell to Mr. Ross, and to my report thereon; and I would respectfully ask their decision on the proposal with which I conclude that report. I have to complain that political influence prevented the late Government from deciding that question; for I learned by an accident that the correspondence was submitted by Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, at the request of Sir Daniel Cooper (a large shareholder in the Sugar Company), and by Mr. Cowper to Sir Daniel, who had interviews with the Ministers on the subject; but the result, if any, was never communicated to me.

8. I should state, however, that before this I had discovered that Messrs. Metcalfe and Co., as agents for the Sugar Company, had taken out of the warehouse, without payment of duty, about 231 tons of sugar, representing £1,155 of duty; that Messrs. Towns & Co. had taken out of their warehouse in the same way 747 packages of tea. These deficiencies and others of less moment I reported to the Treasury, and requested to know what I was to do in the matter. I was told to demand the duty on the smaller deficiencies (most of which might have been fairly written off); but, up to this time I have received no instructions to close Towns' warehouse, nor to demand the £1,155 from the Sugar Company. It is right to add that, by a false representation to the Executive Council, Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. were enabled to obtain a remission of duty on sugar thus abstracted, in one case amounting to £700, and in another, to £1,350. The representation was, that the sugar had been weighed for duty; and that the deficiency had arisen from waste. The truth is, that the sugar had not been weighed for duty, and that there is no such waste on sugar in this climate; repeated experiments made by Mr. Still, the landing surveyor, having proved that the weight sometimes increases, and never decreases to any considerable extent. I submit that the duty should not only be demanded on the present deficiency, but the remissions thus improperly obtained should be cancelled, and the agents punished as they deserve.

I have many other just grounds of complaint against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, but as they relate to personal disrespect to myself, as the head of this department, I will not dwell on them.

I now leave this long-pending case in the hands of the Board, who, from their former investigation into the state of this department, and their very able Report on the subject, are, I believe, perfectly competent to deal with it.

I have, &c.,

W. A. DUNCAN.

CAPTAIN WARD, IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents, were called in.

Captain Ward, as Chairman of the Board, said: I have received from the Under Secretary of the Treasury, the following letter.—(Letter from Henry Lane, Under Secretary to the Treasury, to Captain Ward, R.E., dated 30 November, 1859, appointing Board of Inquiry, and referring correspondence to them, was read.) The correspondence alluded to was read over by the Board, but as it was very voluminous, I thought it better to communicate with Mr. Duncan on the subject. This I did in the following letter.—(Letter from E. W. Ward, Chairman of the Board, to W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, dated 5th December, 1859, requesting that the charges against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, might be placed in a succinct form, was read.) In reply to this, I received the following letter from Mr. Duncan.—(Letter from W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, to Captain Ward, R.E., dated 6th December, 1859, containing charges preferred by Mr. Duncan against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, was read.) In consequence of receiving this communication, I wrote the following letters to Mr. Duncan, and to Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell.—(Letters dated 7th December, 1859, from E. W. Ward, Esq., Chairman of the Board, to W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs; and to Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, informing them of meeting of the Board, and requesting them to be prepared with evidence, were read.) That is all the correspondence that has occurred, and I may now say, that the Board have decided on conducting the inquiry in this way:—In the first place, Mr. Duncan, who appears here in a character somewhat analagous to that of a prosecutor, will make his statement as to the charges he prefers, and will then bring forward evidence in support of them. We will then hear Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, in their defence. We shall afterwards go into the matter of the Sugar Company, and then hear any complaints or charges that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell may have to make against Mr. Duncan. Our inquiry will not end here if anything should occur in the course of the examination to lead us to carry it further; at the same time, we wish to give all parties notice, that we are desirous of affording them every opportunity to bring whatever charges they may choose, and that the Board will be prepared to examine into them. As Mr. Duncan, as I have said, is in the position of prosecutor, the Board will hear him first.

Mr. Duncan addressed the Board:

Mr. Duncan said: The first statement in my letter has reference to the position occupied by Mr. Metcalfe in the Customs Department. A Custom House Agent, as I understand it, occupies a very humble position, being merely a clerk licensed by the Collector of Customs to pass entries for persons who do not understand the process, or who are unwilling to take the trouble of it. It is a very humble position, entirely under the control and held only at the will of the Collector of Customs, in whose power it is at any time to withdraw his license, upon the commission of an act of insubordination to the Collector or breach of the

Mr. Duncan.
12 Dec., 1859.

Mr. Duncan. the rules of the department. Here, however, I found to my astonishment, on assuming office as Collector, that the Collector of Customs was almost in a subordinate position in relation to that occupied by Mr. Metcalfe; and I shall be able to prove from the testimony of officers of the department that Mr. Metcalfe was able to do exactly what he pleased with my predecessor in office. That, if at any time a discussion arose between officers of the department and himself, his partner, or his clerks, of whom he has several—all mere boys, and some of them exceedingly forward and impertinent—he had only to walk into the Collector's room to have the matter decided in his favor, and against the Customs Officer. That, in consequence, he and his subordinates domineered over the officers, and treated them with marked discourtesy and disrespect. On coming into office I found this to be the case, and, as a matter of course, I at once resisted; and the consequence has been this collision between myself and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell. I can prove this to have been the state of things, and also that before I was appointed to the office Mr. Metcalfe's partner, Mr. Powell, made a remark, in the presence of two clerks in the office—one of whom took down a memorandum of the conversation at the time. The memorandum I now hand in; and the two clerks will come forward and verify the conversation, fully bearing out the statement made in my letter. This remark of Mr. Powell was, "If the new Collector attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will soon walk him out." This was the remark, and I believe the same expression, or one to a similar purport has been used by the same parties within the last week. With such a feeling openly displayed against me by a mere subordinate clerk, attached by surffiance to my department, what security can I have in the unpalatable reforms I have been and am still engaged in making, that I shall not be continually thwarted, and that these agents are not thus insidiously employed in carrying out their threat of ousting me from the Collectorship. Coming to the second part of the paragraph, I shall prove by the Clearing Clerk, Mr. Lane, that a document was put into my hands, prepared by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, in a blank state; that I was requested to sign it in that state, leaving the blank to be filled up by the agents in any way they liked. As I remark in my letter, the very presentation of such a document by agents of long experience ought to have been sufficient to justify me in at once terminating their connection with the Custom House. I found also that Debentures for drawbacks were never properly declared before the Collector; that the agent was in the habit of filling up the Debenture without making the declaration prescribed by law, and that though he might attach his name to it, he did not make the declaration,—so that the mere signature amounted to nothing, being in law no declaration at all. I shall also be able to prove that, previous to my time, Mr. Metcalfe was in the habit of obtaining money on drawback goods before the documents were signed. One case is mentioned in my letter, in which I received on the 20th June a letter from one of the Collectors of Customs at New Zealand, informing me that 43 bags of sugar had been short landed from the "Moa." The fact of this short shipment was known to the manager of the Sugar Company so early as the 8th June, and the circumstance was stated to Mr. Powell at the same time. Yet it was not until three weeks afterwards, and only after my application to him for repayment of the drawback, that the amount was refunded. I know that the small amount of the drawback has caused some to ridicule this matter—but the Board must remember that a principle is involved of very considerable importance—and that thus the question becomes one of consequence, irrespective of the actual loss to the revenue. The very fact that a Custom House agent should conceal from the Collector his knowledge of a short shipment, and that for a period of three weeks, shews that he must be a person quite unfit for his position. I know that in London an agent who would be guilty of such a thing would be instantly dismissed; and I refer the Board to the English regulations upon this point. Upon receiving this letter from New Zealand, I at once looked up the papers connected with the shipments, and to my astonishment found that the warrant, which is in the possession of the Board, is contrary to all Custom House practice endorsed by the person who received the drawback, instead of by the Officer of Customs who supervised the shipment:—that is, that the certificate of the quantity shipped, and for which drawback was to be received, was given by the person who received the drawback. I need hardly say, that a thing of this kind would not be tolerated for an instant in the London Customs, nor should it be here.

Captain Ward: I do not see this warrant amongst the papers handed to us.

Mr. Duncan: It ought to have been handed to you from the Treasury, but Mr. Metcalfe admits the endorsement of the warrant in his letter of the 1st July, 1859. But even if he did not admit it, it would be of little consequence, because I can produce a hundred or a hundred and fifty warrants all indorsed by Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell in the same manner. Here are a number that I have taken at haphazard, being those that have first presented themselves. (Warrants put in and marked from A to I inclusive.) One of them has no indorsement at all, another appears to be indorsed by their clerk, and others again by themselves. I shall prove by the searcher, that he always took the quantity of sugar shipped for drawback by the Sugar Company from Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell; and that he never weighed the Company's sugar that came down to be shipped. This searcher, Russell, informed me that he had been told by Mr. Metcalfe, that he was to take the weights of all sugars coming down from the Sugar Company from him, without re-weighing; and also that Colonel Gibbs had told him the same thing—that he need not weigh the Sugar Company's sugar, but might take the weights from Mr. Metcalfe. In fact, Mr. Metcalfe admitted to me that he was quite in the habit of furnishing the weights of the Company's sugar to the searcher, Russell.

Mr. Metcalfe: I admitted nothing of the kind.

Mr. Duncan: I recollect your making this admission most distinctly, and am prepared to swear that you did so, if necessary. (Vide Mr. Metcalfe's written admission, Appendix.)

Appendix.) But the very fact of the agents' indorsing the warrant in the face of the law, which expressly insists that no drawback shall be given, without the goods being previously weighed—even if they had the express permission of the Collector, and even supposing that the endorsement was correct—ought alone to have at once terminated their connection with the Custom House. The law is very clear upon this point, and I refer the Board to the Act 9th Vict. No. 15, sect. 41. This is the general clause relating to drawbacks, but there is something more specific, in relation to sugar, in the Act 19 Vict. No. 14, sect. 5. This clause declares that there shall be allowed on all sugars entered for exportation, certain drawbacks, provided that the sugar be weighed and shipped under the care of a proper officer of Customs. Now they, as Custom Agents of long standing ought to have known this law, and to have known also that to have shipped as they did any drawback goods, unless under the care of a proper officer of Customs, is an offence against the law, and such a breach of all Custom House rules and regulations as ought to put an end to their Custom House agency. I beg also to call the attention of the Board to the fact, that notwithstanding all the vigilance I can exercise relative to these drawbacks, irregularities are still going on, though in a much smaller way than previously. In more than one instance a larger amount has been received for drawback than ought to have been paid, the quantity certified having been more than that really shipped. In addition to the several instances alluded to in the correspondence before the Board, I hand in letters from the Collector of Customs at Geelong, and from the Collector at Melbourne—the one referring to a short shipment of 557 pounds of tea, and the other to a short shipment of 200 pounds; the entries in both these cases having been passed by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell. There is also another case in which entries were passed by this firm for sugar for drawback, to the extent of 23 tons 3 cwt., the whole of which was passed as refined sugar. It had been all very nearly passed and shipped when the Landing Surveyor happened to be going by. He looked into one of the bags and saw that instead of being refined it was bastard sugar. An examination was then made, and it was found that no less than 11 tons of this sugar that had been entered as "refined," was only "bastard." The Board will see that the shippers would have received a drawback of 6s. 8d. per cwt. as for refined sugar, upon sugar on which a drawback of only 5s. is allowed; and that the revenue would have been defrauded to the extent of 1s. 8d. per cwt. I shall also be able to prove—though I have not been able to find the documents connected with this transaction—from the evidence of two witnesses, that upon one occasion six casks of sugar were entered for drawback by Mr. Powell, whilst four only were shipped; and that this was done in such a clumsy manner, that even the searcher, Russell, a man not famous for sharpness, was enabled to see through it; for, happening to pass along the Flour Company's Wharf, he saw two of the casks of sugar that ought to have been shipped lying there after the other four had been put on board. Russell will explain all this, but it seems that he asked the captain or mate to take the sugar on board, and that they refused because the room in the vessel was wanted for other goods. After this, and after Russell had been made aware that only four hogsheads had been shipped, Mr. Powell asked him to indorse the warrant for the six, thereby certifying that that had been shipped that really had not been. Russell of course refused to do so; and in the excitement of the moment, he uttered, on returning to the office, some wild exclamation about being asked to do something against his conscience, that drew the attention of one of the clerks to the matter. However, Russell was asked by Mr. Powell to sign for six hogsheads when only four had been shipped, and when he had seen them after the vessel in which they were proposed to be shipped had left the port, in a shed or store upon the Flour Company's Wharf. I do not know that it will be necessary for me to prove the first portion of the next paragraph of my letter (No. 7); but with regard to the correspondence between the late Treasurer and the manager of the Sugar Company, I would particularly call the attention of the Board to the letter of Mr. Powell of the 9th August, as well as to my reply of the 18th August, and to the letters of Messrs. Llewellyn, Still, Chapman, and Bayley, all having reference to the conversation alluded to by Mr. Powell. I beg the particular attention of the Board to this letter of Mr. Powell, because from its utter want of truth, as well as from the great disrespect therein shewn to myself, I would ask the Board whether they consider it proper that the head of a department should be compelled to have dealings with a person, a mere subordinate, who could so far forget himself, as to be guilty in an official correspondence, of such an utter want of truth and principle as this letter evinces. I do not think that it will be necessary for me to prove the statement made by me in my letter to the Chairman of the Board on the 6th inst., that the correspondence was submitted by Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, at the request of Sir Daniel Cooper (a large shareholder in the Sugar Company), and by Mr. Cowper to Sir Daniel Cooper, who had interview with the Ministers on the subject. The matter was alluded to by me under a feeling of regret that one, who had made such efforts as I had done, to reform the department of which I had taken charge, should be thwarted in his exertions by political influence, and without some inquiry being made into the circumstances I alleged. The reason why I would rather not go into this matter is, that the knowledge of this reference having been made to Mr. Cowper and Sir Daniel Cooper came to me by pure accident, and in a way that I think I can scarcely avail myself of the information.

Captain Ward: You had better go into this matter, because in this part of the letter you make as it were a kind of charge against Mr. Weekes and Mr. Cowper.

Captain M'Leir: Mr. Duncan had better go into this matter, because it is one of the charges made against him by Mr. Powell, in the letter of the 9th August. That forms the strongest reason for explaining this matter.

Mr. Duncan: I can prove the existence of the correspondence, though it is not in my possession. It came into my hands, though probably it was not intended, together with the other correspondence on the subject, which was referred to me after it had been returned by Sir Daniel Cooper to Mr. Cowper, and by the latter to Mr. Weekes.

Captain

Mr. Duncan.

12 Dec., 1859.

Captain McLerie: Then, I presume, it came before you officially.

Mr. Duncan: It came with the other correspondence forwarded to me—no doubt unintentionally. The letter I refer to, was one from Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, containing a minute of Mr. Cowper's in the corner, and I think some short remark of Sir Daniel Cooper, in returning the correspondence to the Premier. That letter I returned to Mr. Lane, the Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Brown: In the 6th paragraph of your letter of the 24th November, you state this very point still more strongly than you have afterwards done.

Mr. Duncan: Then the matter had better be gone into. In June last, I ordered a list of overtime goods to be made out. The Board are perhaps aware that every half-year we have a sale of overtime goods, that is, of goods that have been in a bonded store over three years. At the end of last half-year I requested the warehousekeeper to make out a list of these overtime goods; and when the list was completed, and the goods were sought for in stores, it turned out that there were a very great many deficiencies. I believe a copy of the warehousekeeper's list of these deficiencies is in the hands of the Board. These deficiencies were very numerous; but, with the exception of those of the Sugar Company and in Towns and Co.'s store, they were not generally of very great importance. In that list I found a heavy deficiency of tea in Towns and Co.'s store. This, I may state, has nothing whatever to do with Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell; but I mention it here, as exemplifying the system I had to battle against. Some two years and a-half ago, Towns and Co. took out of their bonded store 747 half-chests and boxes of tea, without paying the duty that should have been paid before removal from the store. When this came to my knowledge, I reported it to the Government.

Captain Ward: Has the duty been paid since?

Mr. Duncan: It has. But I conceive that the mere payment of the duty is not sufficient in such a case. I also discovered that Messrs. Metcalfe and Co., as agents for the Sugar Company, took out of the warehouses, without payment of duty, 231 tons of sugar, representing £1,155 of duty. When I ascertained the fact, I reported it to the Government; but as yet, I have received no answer to my communication. When my report was sent in, the late Treasurer requested me to collect the duties upon the smaller articles that had been found to be missing; but with respect to the charge against Towns and Co., and against the Sugar Company, I have had no answer nor instructions whatever up to this hour. Now, I think, I have good reason to complain of this, because such neglect of my efforts as the head of a department by the Government, is calculated to weaken my authority, and to lessen my power of reform, as well as to prevent me from doing many other things that I otherwise would do, in order to eradicate the abuses that have been so long growing up in this department.

Captain Browne: How did you receive the duty upon the missing tea; did you receive it from Towns and Co. by the authority of the Government, or simply by your own act?

Mr. Duncan: It was not by any special authority that it was received; but so soon as Mr. Stewart, who is managing partner in the colony of the firm of Towns and Co., learnt that the discovery had been made, that the 747 packages of tea were missing out of his store, he rushed up to the Custom House, and before I could interfere, he passed entries for it and paid the duty on it. This very large deficiency led me to look back into the books to see what kind of system had been going on previously. I then found that these deficiencies were quite a common thing. I found that Towns had taken out other teas. I discovered that on two previous occasions, the Sugar Company obtained remissions of duty. Of £705 in one instance, and of £1,350 in another; and this upon sugar taken out of the warehouse illegally, without weighing and without passing proper entries. The sugar had been taken out by entries of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, and the remission was made of the larger amount, upon the representation of Mr. Metcalfe that the sugar had been duly weighed, and that the deficiency had arisen from atmospheric causes. I shall, however, be able to prove, that the sugars never were weighed, as they should have been in the presence of an officer of the Customs; and the law expressly declares, that no remission whatever shall be made, except under these circumstances.

Mr. Browne: Was there any application from Mr. Metcalfe in respect to these remissions?

Mr. Duncan: I have seen and read a letter from Mr. Metcalfe, in which he says that the sugars on which the deficiency arose of £1,350 were weighed. Now, Colonel Gibbs' letter, of 11th April, 1857, most distinctly states that the sugars had not been weighed out. Here then is a manifest contradiction.

Mr. Browne: We have not that letter of Mr. Metcalfe's amongst the correspondence referred to us?

Mr. Duncan: It ought to have been. I will endeavour to get it from the Treasury, and lay it before the Board; but without it I think I can substantially prove what I assert,—that Mr. Metcalfe stated that the sugars had been weighed out, when in reality they had not. Taking the Minute of the Executive Council of 15th July, 1857, it is there stated, that "As it appears that under the Act 16 and 17 Vict. No. 107, all deficiencies on "sugars are allowed if the sugar be duly weighed in and out of the Bonding Warehouse, "and that the law has in that respect been duly complied with," &c. This evidently shewed that there was at the time, before the Executive Council, some statement that the sugar had been duly weighed in and out of Bond. I think I can also prove, from a letter of Mr. Metcalfe's, dated 31 March, 1859, which I now hand in, (Letter handed in and received by the Board) that an admission is therein made, that his statement with reference to a previous claim for wastage had been that the sugar had been re-weighed. I find by this this letter, which has reference to the £705 allowed for waste, that the £1,350 previously allowed on the same score by the Government, was obtained by misrepresentation—for whilst in that Mr. Metcalfe admits that the second lot, for which he was then claiming, had not been re-weighed, he asserts “in the first the deficiency was discovered by actual re-weight, “ and in the second the deficiency is assumed to be the amount allowed by law.” Mr. Duncan.

12 Dec., 1859.

Mr. Metcalfe: This passage has reference to a previous quantity altogether.

Mr. Duncan: It refers to that sugar which is alluded to in the Minute of the Executive Council. In a previous part of his letter, Mr. Metcalfe says, speaking of the three per cent. allowance, that “this allowance covered all waste before ascertained by “re-weighing;” but I shall be able to prove that it never was so ascertained, and that even if it were, as he declares, “assumed to be the amount allowed by law, which we understood to “be a fixed allowance,” he was not in a position to claim remission in the second instance, seeing that he had not complied with the requirements of the law by re-weighing. In order to shew the Board that I am not single in the opinion I here express, I will read to them a Minute of the Auditor General, dated 23 March, 1859 (See Appendix), to the statement transmitted to him relative to this loss by waste in the weight of sugar. (Mr. Duncan read the document.) An act of this kind, if committed against the Customs of England, would be a misdemeanor, and would be punishable by indictment. Upon this point I refer the Board to Hamel’s Laws of the Customs. I refer to the English law, because Mr. Metcalfe is exceedingly fond of quoting it upon all occasions, in order to shew that he was right. Now it is true that the English Customs do allow three per cent. waste for the first three months upon sugars, but it is only when it can be shewn to them by actual re-weighing that waste to this extent occurs. In this case, however, the sugar had not been in Bond anything like three months, the half of it having been taken out three days after warehousing, and the whole of the remainder within five weeks. Under no circumstances, however, will the English Customs allow one pound waste, unless the quantity be duly weighed in and out of Bond. But whatever way the law might be there, it was very clear and distinct in this colony, the wording of the Act being unmistakeable. (Mr. Duncan then quoted from the English Customs Act, in relation to the allowance for drawback.) Our Colonial Act goes to exactly the same point, the fact being that our merchants here complain that our Colonial Act is far too stringent. (Mr. Duncan here quoted from the Customs Act of New South Wales, relative to the allowance for waste upon spirits and tobacco, &c.) It was evident that under this Act dutiable goods could only be taken out of Bond, either according to the original quantities, or that the actual quantity or weight was to be ascertained by re-gauging or re-weighing. There is nothing here in our law that will enable sugar to be taken out of Bond or upon a re-weigh, except upon the original entry. I maintain, then, that all this sugar has been taken out of Bond illegally and fraudulently by these gentlemen, and that the Ministers of the Crown in granting these remissions have been led into a wrong construction of the law of the case. Under the English law no abatement of the duty for loss in the weight of sugar is allowed, until after the actual deficiency has been ascertained by re-weighing; and that in computing this deficiency three per cent. is regarded as the maximum deficiency to be allowed, and is not by any means the regular recognized allowance. No allowance whatever is made for damage in sugar; and our own law is substantially the same in these respects.

Captain M’Lerie: Do you find any record in your office of three per cent. being allowed here for waste on sugar?

Mr. Duncan: No, there is nothing of that kind in our law, but I know that in England that allowance is made, or anything under it, when ascertained by weighing.

Captain M’Lerie: It has not been a regular allowance here?

Mr. Duncan: There is no record of anything of the kind in my office, to my knowledge, and it would be contrary to our law. All that has been done is that there have been remissions of the duty made occasionally by the Executive, upon what I call false representations—and in my opinion, contrary to law.

Capt. M’Lerie: You have no law, authority, or custom, then, for such an allowance?

Mr. Duncan: Nothing. The only thing I have before me is the Minute of Mr. Weekes, the late Treasurer, in which he allows the remission, and a previous Minute of the Executive Council, already referred to.

Capt. M’Lerie: There is no general rule, then?

Mr. Duncan: No; and I believe that the granting these remissions is illegal and unconstitutional. I have now generally to complain of Mr. Powell’s constant attempts to evade the law in every possible way; and, in reference to this investigation, I have also to charge him with having attempted to tamper with one of the officers of my Department, and to get from him a public document belonging to my office. It is quite evident that Mr. Powell does not at all understand his position at the Custom House, and that he imagines himself to be of more importance in the office than the head of the department, instead of being as he is, a mere writing clerk, holding office at the discretion of the Collector. I do not attach much importance to the fact—but I think it right the Board should know that Mr. Powell has attempted to get a document out of the hands of one of my officers.

Capt. Ward: In the correspondence before us you state something about the regulations you made with reference to the drawbacks; would you not wish to offer some observations upon this point?

Mr. Duncan: I shall shew by the shipping officers that obstacles of every kind have been put in my way, and that, notwithstanding the directions I had given that it should be done, I could not get the goods in all cases weighed for drawback. The first excuse was that there were not proper weights attached to the wharfs. I found that there was some foundation

Mr. Duncan. tion for this complaint, and to remedy this it was suggested that the drawback officer should go to the Company's store and weigh the sugar there. I consented to this arrangement as a temporary expedient, never intending it to be permanent; but I soon found that it was made the subject of ridicule. I admit that there was some reason for this, because, though the arrangement was made for the Company's convenience, it was ridiculous that a Custom House officer should leave the wharf, where he ought to be watching the shipment, to go to a private store to see the goods weighed. Seeing my efforts to accommodate them thus spurned, I gave up this arrangement at the end of a few days, and then I made them weigh the sugar on the wharf. When they found this, they adopted the plan of putting the sugar into immense casks or hogsheads, which we could not weigh, not having on the wharf the necessary machinery for doing so. The case of the sugar per "Lord Worsley," also shews the system of obstruction that was pursued. On receiving notice of the shipment, I sent one of my officers to the Sugar Company's store to inquire when it would be convenient to weigh the sugar for drawback. The reply that the officer received was, that they "did not know when it would be ready, perhaps it was not made yet." On receiving this answer the officer left the store and walked down to the wharf to look after another shipment by the same vessel, when to his astonishment he found that the sugar was then in the process of being shipped, and that they had been shipping it all the morning. This is a very fair specimen of the sort of thing I have had incessantly to put up with from the Company and their agents, Messrs. Powell and Metcalfe.

Mr. Browne: Did you promulgate this order relative to the weighing of drawback sugars in writing?

Mr. Duncan: Not at first. In the first instance it was a mere verbal one, and this put me at some disadvantage, as they thought, in the correspondence, because they said they were not bound by it. In point of fact, however, they knew perfectly well about the regulation, because it had been discussed between us, before the 6th July, the date on which the shipment per "Lord Worsley" was made. Mr. Powell was fully aware of it, before that shipment was made, and knew that he would have to act upon it. The letter from Mr. Powell to the manager of the Sugar Company is one of the most extraordinary productions that I ever had to read, and I am desirous that it and my reply should be particularly noticed by the Board. I may mention that in a few days more I shall have some more deficiencies to report in the Company's sugar, but though I know there are deficiencies I do not yet know their extent. The list of overtime goods for the last six months is now being made out, and in a few days a new list of deficiencies will have to be reported in the Sugar Company's bonded goods.

Mr. Browne: With regard to the verbal order, did you ever make it a written one?

Mr. Duncan: Yes, shortly afterwards. About the time this correspondence was going on, I recollect allusion having been made to the fact that this was merely a verbal order, and I then promulgated it in writing. But I have to issue very many orders in the course of the day, to direct one officer to do this and another to do that, and the extent of my order in this case was no doubt to direct the drawback officers to see all sugars entered for drawback weighed before it was shipped. Issuing so many orders as I do in the course of the day, it would be physically impossible for me to commit them all to writing.

Mr. Browne: Did you give any direction, in the first instance, to the Sugar Company or their agents?

Mr. Duncan: I repeatedly mentioned my intention to Mr. Powell and to their clerk. The order was given in the first instance to my own officers, and it was not necessary that I should issue orders to the Company or to the Custom House agents. Indeed it should not have been necessary for me to make any order at all upon the subject, because under the law it is illegal to pay drawback, unless upon the re-weighing of the goods, and the Custom House agents ought to know this.

The Board requested Mr. Duncan to call whatever witnesses he might consider necessary to substantiate his case.

Mr. Thorn Bate Mackenzie, called in and examined:—

- Mr. T. B. Mackenzie.
12 Dec., 1859.
1. Examined by Mr. Duncan: You are a clerk in the Customs office? I am.
  2. Do you remember having a conversation with Mr. Powell some short time before I was appointed Collector of Customs? I do.
  3. Will you be good enough to state what he then said? The conversation was a very short one, and was purely accidental. I went to Mr. Maddocks' desk on some business, and whilst standing there, somebody said something about the new Collector of Customs. My remark was, knowing the lax manner in which business had lately been conducted in the department, "I hope we shall have a cast-steel man." Mr. Powell's remark to that was, "Any one who comes here as Collector, if he attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will very soon bundle him out." My impression was, that the words "bundle him out" were used, but on referring to the note I took at the time, I find that I put down the words "walk him out;" therefore, I suppose those must have been the words employed.
  4. By Captain Ward: You took down the memorandum at the time? I did.
  5. Will you read the memorandum? Yes; it is as follows:—"29th March, 1859.—Query suggested,—Who is to be our new Collector? Myself: I hope he will be a cast-steel man and then things will go on properly. Mr. Powell: If any man comes here and attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, we will very soon walk him out. Myself: "Mr. Powell, I think you will not repeat what you have just said, viz.: 'If any man comes here

"here as Collector, and attempts to carry out the law in its integrity, you will soon walk 'him out.' Mr. Powell: Yes, I will repeat it; we know our duty, and if he does not know 'his, we will not have him. Myself then suggested that the agents had better have the 'appointment of Collector and officers, and then it would be a good trade with them."

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.

12 Dec., 1859.

6. By Mr. Duncan: Had you occasion to see Mr. Powell on the business of the office pretty often? Yes, pretty often.

7. Are you aware whether both Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell have exercised considerable influence in the Custom House; more so, in fact, than any mere Custom House agent ought to do? I have not the slightest doubt about their having done so.

8. Are you aware that, at one time, Mr. Metcalfe occupied a large room in the Custom House to himself, whilst the other Custom House agents were crowded together into one room? When I first went there, Mr. Metcalfe occupied a room at the back of the building, and the warehousekeeper's room was as it is now, that is, two rooms communicating by a large doorway. Mr. Metcalfe caused the communication to be closed, and took possession of the front room; the warehousekeeper and his clerks were put into the other room, to which there is an entrance round the passage; and the keeper of the register was placed into the room vacated by Mr. Metcalfe, and of which room I took possession on my appointment to that duty. My health suffered very severely in consequence.

9. Did this change take place with the permission of the late Collector of Customs? I presume it must have been with his permission. The clerks could hardly have been moved without it.

10. Have you seen Mr. Powell behind the railings in the Long Room examining the books and papers? Yes, almost daily.

11. Is that proper? No; I consider it most improper, more particularly as regarded the entries. I was responsible for these, and they were so frequently taken out of my hands, by Mr. Powell, that at last I went to the Collector (Colonel Gibbs,) and told him that I could not be answerable for them if Mr. Powell was to be allowed to take them away as he did. He told me I was perfectly right, and when Mr. Powell came next for them, I declined to let him have them. He and Mr. Metcalfe then made application privately to Col. Gibbs, and the result was that authority was given to them to receive these entries from me at half-past three o'clock every day.

12. In fact, then, they seemed to have the complete run of the place? Yes; so much so that when I first went into the office, I received a caution not, under any circumstances, to offend Mr. Metcalfe. I should have endeavored to act under this caution, but before long the conduct of Mr. Metcalfe became so unbearable that I determined, situation or no situation, not to put up with it. I was informed too, that as regarded these entries, Mr. Metcalfe made money out of them by the use of the information they contained; and I thought that if anything was to be made of them the clerks in the office ought to get something of it. I mentioned this to Mr. Powell, and said I thought the clerks had as much right to make something out of it as he had. He said he would take care that no clerk should have a farthing out of it if he could help it.

Mr. Powell: Am I expected to meet the charges that this witness may choose to bring against me.

Captain Ward: This evidence is not taken as a charge. We receive it solely as showing the influence you are said to exercise in the department.

Mr. Duncan: One of the charges against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, is that they exercised an influence in the Custom House that was totally subversive of my authority. If they have had access to the various parts of the department in the way the witness has described, I submit that neither I nor my officers can do our duty in such a way as we would wish. If a mere Custom House agent is to come into the office and get whatever papers he may select to take away and do with as he pleases, no man could ever conduct the department satisfactorily.

Captain Ward: The witness had better not wander away from the question; let him answer the question as nearly as he possibly can.

13. By Mr. Duncan: Did he ever threaten to have me turned out of the department? I never heard him say so.

14. Was not the general bearing and manner of both partners that of persons having great authority in the place—was it not presuming and dictatorial? Very much so.

15. Does this remark apply more particularly to the one or other of the partners? No; to both alike.

16. Have they insulted you in the discharge of your public duty? I hardly know what a public officer is entitled to look upon as an insult in his public duty. I know that they have given me a great amount of trouble, and that I have had considerable annoyance with them.

17. Have you ever had occasion to complain to the Collector of Customs of their conduct? Not to you; but there was one occasion, when I was appointed collector of pilotage dues, when I had to make complaints of Mr. Powell's conduct.

18. What I wish to find out is this, whether Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell, or either of their clerks, who are mere boys, has not been exceedingly forward and rude in his manner? As far as my experience has gone with regard to the clerk, George, I never had any fault to find with him.

19. There is no charge pending against the boys, but I would ask you whether the influence that is exercised by Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell is beneficial to the Customs Department, or the reverse? It is quite the reverse of beneficial.

20. Have you had occasion to take notice of the system of drawbacks that was pursued prior to my taking office as Collector? Yes; I was not long in forming an opinion upon that subject.

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.
12 Dec., 1859.

21. Will you state what that opinion is? Why the whole system rested on the responsibility of one single officer, with whom it rested to declare that such and such goods had been put on board ship. This officer in making his declaration often had to rely upon the ipse dixit of the mate or the agent, and I have reason to believe that very frequent misrepresentations have been made.

22. The drawback officer had at one time a desk in your room? He had.

23. Had Mr. Powell occasion to see him there pretty often on business? Yes, Mr. Powell, as well as others, came to see him there; but that did not last for long. I noticed that there was always a good deal of whispering whenever Mr. Powell came in; and I said to Mr. Russell that I could see no occasion for so much whispering and mystery in a public office and about a public matter. After that Mr. Powell always sent for Mr. Russell to his own office. On another occasion Mr. Russell came into the office in a very excited state saying, "I will not be bounced into it;" "I will not do it." I asked him several times what was the matter, and all he said was, "I will not be bounced into it by anybody." At last, when he became more cool, he told me that Powell had a warrant for the shipment of six casks of sugar, that these had come down to the wharf, but that only four of them could be taken on board, so that there were two short shipped. The six casks were stated to weigh three tons; and Mr. Powell had been bothering him to sign for the whole three tons,—to sign for the six casks when only four were shipped. This he said he had refused to do, and asked me what I thought. I told him I thought he had done quite right. He then handed me the warrants, and said, "Will you tell me what these four casks make in weight?" I said I would, took the papers from him, and gave him the total. I then said, "Now let me see what the other entry is?" He gave me the warrant of the two short-shipped casks, and from what I remember of their weight, I am sure that if the whole six had been shipped they would not altogether have weighed more than four and a-half tons. This was the case; and yet Mr. Powell was pestering Russell to sign for six casks when only four had been shipped.

"This is an error: I should have said two and a-half tons. In all cases, in speaking of the weight of the said casks, I do so to the best of my recollection. I am only sure that the six casks did not amount to the three tons as represented."

24. Did I in your presence call upon Russell for an explanation of this matter? You did.

25. Did he admit the transaction? No, he denied all knowledge of it at first.

26. But afterwards? He admitted it afterwards. He said at first that he had forgotten all about it; but he afterwards remembered it all.

27. By Capt. Ward: You say that Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell exercised great influence in the Customs Department,—what sort of influence was it? I scarcely know how to answer your question.

28. Give us some example of the influence he employed? When I first went to the office I was given to understand that I must take care not to offend Mr. Metcalfe,—or rather, I was told not to offend "Michael the Archangel,"—for that is the name he is known by in the department.

29. That is not an answer to my question. Did either of them exercise an undue influence in the department; if so, give us an example of it? I scarcely know how to answer you. But I recollect on one occasion, when I had passed an entry of some goods for Mr. Bailey, one of Metcalfe and Powell's clerks came to me and asked me to pass an entry for the same goods that I had passed before. I told him that it was more than I dared to do such a thing. He went away, and then Mr. Powell came to me and said, "Pass this entry for me in place of the one you passed for Mr. Bailey." I told him that I could not pass the two entries for the one set of goods. Mr. Metcalfe next came and asked me to do the same thing; and I said it was more than I could venture to do. He then went into the Collector's room and complained of my refusal. I went to the Collector myself and explained the matter to him, and he said I had done quite right. A short time afterwards Mr. Metcalfe called me down to his room and began abusing me. When I found this, I said to him that I did not come down for that purpose; and that the next time he wanted me for no more than this he had better come up stairs to my room to say it.

30. In this case then the Collector supported you? He did.

31. Is there any other case that you can remember? No, not in my experience.

32. There is not another example that you can adduce? No.

33. You say that Mr. Powell was in the habit of coming behind the rail in the Long Room—have you seen other Custom House agents do the same thing? They have come there occasionally.

34. In this respect, had Mr. Powell any preference over the others? He used to come there occasionally.

35. Others have been also allowed there? Oh, yes; in the event of their having business there was no impediment to their coming in.

36. There was no preference then given to Mr. Powell? No, not particularly.

37. By Mr. Duncan: Is it not a matter of general notoriety that they had a great deal of influence in the department? Yes.

38. By Captain Ward: The Board do not wish for evidence of general notoriety, they wish to get at particular cases, from which to judge for themselves; you say that the conduct of Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell was unbearable in a great degree, will you give us an example of this? The first thing I had to complain of was this—I was appointed Receiver of the Pilotage Dues. My experience in the public service taught me that I ought never to receive cash without at the same time taking a voucher and giving a receipt for it. I found that this had never hitherto been done, and I determined upon acting upon my own system, system, though had I gone on in the old way I might easily have put a hundred or two into my pocket without anybody being a bit the wiser of it. When Mr. Powell came to me to pay the pilotage rate on one of the vessels for which his firm was agent, I told him I must have a voucher for the amount he paid. The rate is paid upon the draught of water of the vessel, and for this reason the voucher is necessary, because the amount of rate varies. I said "You must give me a writing or memorandum of the amount you pay." He said "No; it has never been done before, and I am not going to do it now." I went to the Collector (Colonel Gibbes), and he pooch-pooched the matter. Feeling sure that there was no remedy likely to come from that quarter, I went to Mr. Lane at the Treasury and explained the matter to him. He said I was quite right—he said, "Do not let the matter drop." I did not press the matter on, because at the end of the year the rate would be levied on the tonnage of the vessel, instead of on the draught of water, and then the voucher would not be so necessary. To prevent any objection, however, I drew up the forms of vouchers myself, only requiring the parties paying to fill in and sign them. Mr. Powell however, refused to do either.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.

12 Dec., 1859.

39. Did you go to the Collector and ask him to carry out your views? I did.
40. What did he do? Nothing. Mr. Powell met me in Mr. Llewellyn's room, and began speaking of this matter. He said that we, the Custom House clerks, would never do anything if it was not for the agents. I was going away when he said that I would be a d— fool if I did not stop to listen and hear what he had to say. I answered that I should be a d— fool if I did, and went away.
41. Then when you asked for vouchers, the then Collector did not think them necessary? He did not.
42. Did Mr. Powell ever interfere with you, in the conduct of your business? Yes, in the instance I have just given.
43. Have you any other instance to adduce of what you call his unbearable conduct? That must depend upon what you consider to be unbearable conduct. A great deal depends upon a person's temperament—I am of a warm temper and cannot put up with much—I conceive his conduct generally to have been unbearable.
44. We want facts more than opinions. We can draw our own influences when we have the facts before us; if you can give us these facts, do so? Their whole conduct was very much of the same kind throughout.
45. Did either Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell ever interfere with you in the discharge of your duty; when there was an established law or order of the Collector, did either of them interfere to prevent its being carried out? No, I cannot say that he did, except in this case.
46. He never prevented you carrying out a law or order of the Collector? No.
47. By Captain Browne: The instances you have referred to took place under the late Collector of Customs; can you give us any instance of improper conduct on the part of Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell since Mr. Duncan has taken charge of the department? Since then I have not been in the same room that I was in before.
48. During the time you have alluded to the department was in a very disorganised state, and I want to know if there has been any impropriety of conduct since then? I cannot say; since then I have been in a different room.
49. By Mr. Powell: Did you have any difference of opinion with me, after the affair of the brig "Louisa"? I cannot remember having any difference with you.
50. Did you have any personal quarrel with me? No; not that I remember.
51. You remember no quarrel? No; but I remember you writing me a letter apologising for language you had used; and I wrote you an answer.
52. Have you got that letter still? Yes, at home.
53. Do you remember telling me that I was picked out of the gutters in Thames-street? No, those were not my words.
54. When did the conversation you say you had with me relative to the new Collector take place? On the day the memorandum bears date.
55. What day was that? On referring to it, I find it was on the 29th March.
56. Were you at that time in the Long Room? No, I had a room of my own.
57. A small room connected with the warehousekeeper's room? Yes; I was at that time in the room before described as vacated by Mr. Metcalfe.
58. What business had you upstairs then? That is nothing to you.
59. I appeal to the Board to have my question answered? I had business there.
60. Why did you write all this conversation down? Because on one occasion you told me something which you afterwards denied having said. I told you then that I would not in future believe you on your oath—that was the reason I took it down, and that was why I repeated the words to you, so that you should not be able to deny it afterwards.
61. Did you write those words down with a view to their ulterior use? Not to this use that is now being made of them.
62. For any ulterior use? Yes, I took them down for use in the event of your attempting, as you threatened to do, to turn me out of the office. I thought that having this by me might help me against you.
63. Who was I talking to at the time? Well, I forget who was there; Mr. Maddocks I know was there.
64. Do you not know that Mr. Maddocks is fond of joking? Yes, he may be.
65. And he often says things in jest that he does not mean in earnest? He may perhaps be guilty of that folly.
66. You yourself are not guilty of it? I may be sometimes, but it is very seldom.
67. What were your duties when in the Long Room? First, keeping the pilotage account, then

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.

12 Dec., 1859.

then keeping the immigration register, taking stock of the daily consumption of the home issue of spirits, and several other things.

68. You have nothing to do with the drawbacks? No.

69. And know very little about them? Not much.

70. And yet you say you had suspicions respecting them? Yes; because the money was refunded out of the revenue upon the receipts of an officer, who in most instances did not know of his own knowledge whether the goods had been shipped or not.

71. However you had no authority for forming these suspicions? No, if I had had any you would have heard of it before this.

72. You know of no fraudulent act of mine or of Mr. Metcalfe's in relation to these drawbacks? No, I do not.

73. I believe I have not spoken to you since the quarrel we had? No; you have latterly evinced a kind of desire to be nice in your dealings with me.

74. Since then, I have never spoken to you except upon matters of business? No.

75. Have you ever at any time heard me make any remarks or see me do anything that was calculated to set aside the forms of the department? Yes, decidedly. You tried to do that which would have set aside my duty.

76. At the time I made the remarks you took down, was it known who was to be the new Collector of Customs? No; for if it had been, the question would not have been put.

77. Was not Mr. Duncan at that time appointed? He might have been; but if he was I was not aware of it.

78. Was I excited when I made use of the language? I do not know when you are excited—I have heard you make use of very strong language when you were to all appearance as cool as you are now.

79. You say that I said "We know our duty, and if he does not know his we will pack him off"? I do not pretend to remember the precise words, but they are as I have taken them down.

80. You say that the influence of myself and Mr. Metcalfe was used in an improper manner—do you know of any one case when it was so used? I have already said that I cannot of my own knowledge state any distinct case. However, judging from the appearance of Russell on the day he refused to sign for the six casks of sugar, I should say that there must have been some undue and improper power at work with him.

81. You knew nothing of the Custom House duties until you came into the department? No.

82. And you only performed one duty when you were removed into the warehouse room? No, but when in the Long Room I did almost every kind of duty.

83. What induced you to bring this statement you took down under the notice of Mr. Duncan? Simply because he asked me for it.

84. You have said that I was in the habit of obtaining the entries from you every afternoon? Yes, your boy used to fetch them.

85. Did I take them away? Not you, but your clerk used to get them for you.

86. Did he take them for the purpose of copying them? I do not know what he did with them, I know he used to get them.

87. And we got them every afternoon? Yes, every afternoon. You may, perhaps, have missed taking them sometimes.

88. Were they removed from your room? They were.

89. Were they returned to you? Yes; I think I used to find them in my drawer the next morning.

90. Did you ever miss any of them? No.

91. Have you ever missed a whole day's entries? Yes, once.

92. And did you not afterwards find them in the Long Room? I do not recollect where I found them, though I have an indistinct recollection of once missing a day's entries.

93. Did not the then Collector give us authority to have these entries? He did.

94. You say we made money of them? I did not say that.

95. You know that as an officer of Customs you are not allowed to take any fee or reward for whatever you may do in your public capacity? I do, perfectly.

96. What did you mean then by saying that if there was to be anything made out of these entries you ought to have it? What I said was, that if any advantage was to be derived from it the clerks in the office ought to have it. The Government do not object to the clerks being paid for anything they may do in their own time.

97. You were held responsible for these entries? Yes, and that was the reason why I objected to your having them.

98. Did you say that to Colonel Gibbes? I did, and he said that I need not let them go unless I chose.

99. Do you know if they are given now? Yes, I believe they are.

100. You never received any insult, I believe, from me? I never received anything else from you to my knowledge.

101. You never received any opposition from me in doing your duty? I scarcely recollect a case in which I had to do with you in which I did not have some considerable difficulty.

102. Was the manner of our boys at all insulting to you? No.

103. We had a man for a time who was scarcely as civil as he might be; did you ever complain to us of his conduct? I did not; I had no occasion.

104. You know nothing of the drawback system except that it is open to abuse, from misrepresentation? No.

105. And upon what do you ground this belief—is it from facts that have come to your knowledge or from your general impression? I have given my opinion and I think I am not called upon to do any more than that.

106. When Russell was in your room there were other persons besides myself who used to visit him there? There were.
107. Then there was nothing particular in my being there? Only in the whispering; and then, when I remarked upon this, it did appear strange that you should send for him down to your office.
108. With regard to the six hogsheds or casks of sugar that were to be shipped, will you explain more fully about them? I have said all I know. Six were to be shipped, but only four were on board, there being two short-shipped, and yet you wanted Russell to sign for the six.
109. Did you ascertain the weight? I did. The order was for the shipment of three tons, and when the sugar came down there were two casks included in each ticket. On adding up the weights of these I found that even if the whole six had been shipped they would have been short of the three tons.
110. But you said before that the whole six casks together only made four and a-half tons? What I meant to say was, that the total quantity was short of that which was ordered to be shipped. The whole six casks were intended to represent three tons, but on totting up the entries I found that the six did not weigh more than two and a-half tons.
111. This is a different statement to what you made before; will you have the goodness to again detail the whole particulars, so that we may understand you? Mr. Russell came into the room and appeared very much excited. I asked him what was the matter, and he said "I will not be bounced into it;" I asked what they were bouncing him into and he replied, "Mr. Powell wants me to sign for three tons of sugar, and I have only shipped four casks out of the six." He gave me the tickets and asked me to be kind enough to tell him what the four casks made. He did not say that there were two casks short-shipped; I myself made that remark; but what he said was, that he had only shipped four out of the six casks that ought to have made the three tons weight. He said to me, "Give me the total of the four casks." I added them up, and thought they were not of the weight to make up three tons of the six of them, so I then asked him for the weights of the other two short-shipped casks; he gave them to me, and on adding them to the others I found that the whole six casks would, if weighed, not have amounted to the three tons ordered for shipment.
112. Then the whole six hogsheds together made half-a-ton less than the quantity entered for shipment? Yes; if Russell had done what you wanted, you would have received drawbacks on half-a-ton more than you had shipped—even if the whole of the six hogsheds had been shipped—but as two were short-shipped you would further defraud the Government of the drawback on them.
113. The most that would have happened would have been that we should have shipped half-a-ton less than we passed entries for, the drawback being paid, not on the quantity we pass for shipment, but on the receipt of the Customs officer? It seems to me that in trying to get the receipts for the whole quantity passed, you were trying to get the drawback for more than a half-a-ton more than you ought to have done had the whole of the six hogsheds been shipped—but two being short-shipped, you would have defrauded the Government of the amount of drawback on them.
114. Was the drawback paid upon the whole quantity? That I do not know.
115. How is that? Why, when I had explained the whole thing to Russell I thought no more about it.
116. Why did you not bring this matter under the notice of the Collector, if you thought there was anything wrong about it? Because there was no necessity, as I thought that Russell was doing his duty in the matter.
117. Why so? Because he had refused to sign what you had so much pressed him to do, and I knew that he would still refuse to sign unless you coerced him.
118. Did you, in point of fact, report this matter to the Collector? I did not.
119. You say, that on your first entering the Department, you were specially warned against the danger of offending Mr. Metcalfe; may I ask you whom you were warned by? By Mr. Llewellyn.
120. Do you know what induced him to give you this warning? No, I do not.
121. He is chief clerk in the office, I believe? He is.
122. If he knew of anything wrong in the office with regard to Mr. Metcalfe, do you not think that he ought to have made you acquainted with it? Well, I do not know why he should make me in particular acquainted with it.
123. You say that I wished you to pass two entries for the same goods? Yes, and so you did.
124. Had not the entry been passed wrong in the first instance? No, I am quite sure that it was right.
125. Might not the goods have been wrongly described? No; they were not. Mr. Bailey came to me with a full description of the goods, and I was perfectly right in passing the warrant for them as I did.
126. Was the new entry insisted on? Yes, by you and by Mr. Metcalfe—but I would not give way.
127. On account of an error in description? No; you said it was because Mr. Bailey had had no authority to pass the entries.
128. You say that Mr. Metcalfe sent for you afterwards? Yes, I suppose he did; his boy came up to me and told me Mr. Metcalfe wanted me.
129. Did you speak in an abusive manner of Mr. Metcalfe after you left his room? Yes; I said that the next time he wanted me for such a purpose—that was for the purpose of abusing me—he might come up stairs to me, instead of sending for me to come to him.
130. You are aware that, as an officer of the Customs, you are not permitted to enjoy any fee, perquisite, or reward, for anything you may do in that capacity? I know it well.

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.

12 Dec., 1859.

Mr. T. B.
Mackenzie.

12 Dec., 1859.

131. And yet you thought you ought to have a share in any advantage that was to be derived from the entries? I never said so.
132. With reference to the pilotage dues and the vouchers,—were you not in the habit of receiving from the pilots the certificates of the draught of water of vessels brought in by them? Yes, I was.
133. What other voucher than this could you require? I wanted a voucher from the party paying, shewing the draught of water for which he paid.
134. But why did you require this when you had the pilot's certificate? Because the vessel paying by her draught of water, might have to pay less on going out of port than on coming in; and as the pilots did not generally send in their certificates until three or four days after a vessel had sailed, I required some voucher of the draught of water paid for. For instance, you might pay me a smaller sum than you ought to have done; and then, the vessel having gone, how was I to know but what you might turn round and say, "Ob, I paid for a draught of 15 or 16 feet"—or you might say you had paid the money when you had done nothing of the kind.
135. You received from the pilot a certificate of the vessel's outward draught of water? Yes; but not until after she had gone out.
136. Then I cannot understand how you can require a voucher from me, when you have the pilot's certificate? Sometimes it is a week before I get the certificate of the outward draft from the pilot. If you pay me without a voucher, I am entirely at your mercy; for the vessel having gone away, it would be useless for me to say to you I want the fee for 20 feet draught, and you have only paid me for 14 feet.
137. Did you expect me to supply you with information, in the same way as if I were a Government servant? I asked for no information—I merely wished you to shew how much you paid and what for.
138. You say you went to Mr. Lane on the subject? I did.
139. Why did you go to him? I went to him, because I found it was of no use to go to the Colonel, as I could get no redress there.
140. Did you think it right to go to him, after the head of your department had virtually settled the matter? Certainly.
141. Would you have done so, had it been in Mr. Duncan's case? No, I should not.
142. Then why did you do it in the case of Colonel Gibbes? Because I felt, as many other officers of the department had done, that there was no chance of justice with him in cases in which Mr. Metcalfe was concerned.
143. You said you might have pocketed a good deal out of the pilot fees without anybody being the wiser? Yes; and you know very well that I might have done so.
144. Then you think that the system recommended by me, is an improvement upon the old plan? I do not know what your system is.
145. The system that has been adopted this year, is better than the one followed last year? Yes, certainly.
146. Since you have been down stairs have I ever trespassed on your room? I do not recollect that you have; you may have come in occasionally.
147. On the particular occasion when Russell came into your room as you say, in a very excited state, was it your impression that he had been taking a glass too much? It was, at first; but that impression was afterwards removed.
148. By Mr. Metcalfe: You charge me with abusing you, and telling you that you did not understand your duty? Yes; you said in a blustering tone, "Why don't you do your duty, Sir;" "Do you know your duty, Sir." I left your room saying, if that was what you wanted, you had better come up stairs to me; I went to the Collector, and told him what had occurred, and he said that I had no business to go down to you.

Mr. George Norton Russell called in and examined:—

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

12 Dec., 1859.

1. By Mr. Duncan: You are an officer in the Customs Department? I am.
2. You were for some time drawback officer at this port? I was.
3. You were appointed to that office by the late Collector? I was.
4. Do you know at whose suggestion you were so appointed? No, without it was Mr. Lewellin who spoke for me.
5. Did Mr. Metcalfe recommend you? I do not know. When the Collector told me I was to take the office, I told him I would rather not have it. I said that the responsibility was so great that I would much sooner that he would get some one else; but he said I must do it or he would report me.
6. It was a portion of your duty, whilst drawback officer, to attend to the shipment of debenture goods, and to indorse the warrants? It was.
7. Did Mr. Metcalfe ever say to you that you were not to weigh the Company's sugar for drawback? He did.
8. Did you act upon that statement? No. When Mr. Metcalfe told me I was not to weigh the Company's sugar, but take their weights, I went to the Collector and asked him whether I was to do so—the Collector told me, that when the Company sent sugar down, I was to take the number of bags and see that they were correct; and then, that I should take the Company's weight for the bags and give a receipt for them.
9. And you did so? Yes, after the Collector had told me this.
10. What Collector was this? Colonel Gibbes.
11. After receiving this order from the Collector, you took the Company's weight from their own documents? Yes.

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

12 Dec., 1859.

12. Then you did not weigh it at all? Yes, I did, two or three times. I weighed it at the Grafton Wharf and the Flour Company's Wharf; on these occasions I took five bags and weighed them, and averaged the others by this weight; whenever I did this I found the weight to be correct.
13. But if the officers of the Company had been inclined to be dishonest they might have been so, the sugar not being weighed after them? Yes.
14. There was nothing to prevent their being so, if they were so disposed—there was no check upon them? No, only in the number of bags.
15. Did you take the weights and indorse the warrants with them, exactly as the figures were put before you by Mr. Powell? Yes; I would get the tickets sent down by the carter with each load, and would see that there were the number of bags specified—I would then sign the warrants for the weight of the bags given by the Company.
16. Do you recollect a short shipment of sugar by the "Moa"? Yes, they were short forty bags.
17. Will you state how that occurred? If I had the warrants I could explain it better than without them. (Mr. Duncan here handed in a number of warrants, and witness proved the handwriting of Mr. Powell to the warrants marked from C to I inclusive.)
18. Will you now mention what you recollect of the short shipment by the "Moa"? There was a quantity of sugar to be shipped to New Zealand by the "Moa," for Mr. Robertson, the merchant, of Jamison-street. I was ordered to see this sugar shipped; but having to do by myself everything connected with the drawbacks, I was so busy, and my attention was required in so many places, that I could not pay that attention to this shipment that ought to have been paid—I received from the carter the ticket with each load—the Company were in the habit of sending down duplicate tickets with each load; one for the mate of the vessel, and the other for the drawback officer. On these tickets were marked the number of bags sent on each dray. On this occasion forty bags were sent down on each load. When the whole number had been received I went on board the vessel, to check the mate's receipts and to sign for the whole quantity received on board. On looking over these tickets, however, there was one short; and the mate said, as an excuse for not having it, that the wind had blown it away, and it had been lost overboard. I told him I could not sign for these forty bags, and he said that he knew the sugar was on board, and would swear that it was; the captain also came and said the same thing; he said he knew he had the sugar on board—that he would sign the declaration to that effect. When he said this I thought it was all right—that they ought to know what they had on board better than I did, so I signed the warrants.
19. Who cleared the vessel? Mr. Metcalfe. I spoke to him about the short quantity, and he shewed me the note from the Company, in which it was stated that so many tons had been sent down and received on board, and that he was to pass entries for that quantity.
20. How was it discovered that there were 40 bags short? When the ship arrived in New Zealand, the Custom House authorities there found 40 bags short of the quantity shewn on the manifest, and communicated with this port on the subject. The matter was inquired into, and I was brought forward to prove how the mistake had occurred. I went down to Mr. Metcalfe, and afterwards to the Sugar Company; but the Company said that it was all right, that they had sent the full quantity down to the ship, and that Mr. Robertson had paid them for it, and therefore they presumed it had been received. I was obliged to believe it was all right when the Company insisted so strongly that they had sent the quantity on board, and when the captain and mate also declared that they were ready to swear they had received it on board; that was the reason why I signed the warrants for it.
21. Did you make no objection to signing the warrants under such circumstances? Yes, I did; I asked for the tickets, and finding one short, I asked where it was; the mate said that as it was a very blustering, blowing day, the wind had perhaps caught it and blown it overboard.
22. Did you speak to Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell about it? Yes; and they said they would make inquiry into the matter.
23. But before you signed the warrants? Yes; I went to them, and they sent to the Sugar Company's place to inquire into the circumstance. The answer from the Company was that the full quantity of sugar had been shipped; that they had sent it down, and held receipts to shew it had been shipped.
24. Who told you this was the answer? Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell.
25. Which of them? I cannot say which.
26. Who wrote the warrants that you signed? Mr. Powell.
27. Do you remember, some time ago, shipping four casks of sugar at the Flour Company's Wharf? Yes.
28. Will you state the circumstances of that case? Yes. I got an order to ship six casks of sugar from the Sugar Company for Mr. Sayers. I went down to see them shipped; they were marked from 1 to 6, and the weight was specified on the tickets; I saw four of the casks shipped, and I then said to the officer of the vessel that there ought to be six; he said that he would not take more than four on board, for though he had room for the other two, yet it was engaged for persons who were regular shippers by the vessel; I signed for the four casks at that time. I afterwards went down again to the wharf to see about the other two casks; and when I got down to the wharf, the men were in the act of rolling these other two casks into Mr. Sayer's stores. When I came back to the office Mr. Powell came to me and said that he would get me to sign for the whole six casks, because though the other two casks had not been shipped, they would be sure to be so by the next vessel; I refused to sign for the six, because I knew that four only had been shipped.
29. How many entries were passed for the sugar? I cannot say. I think there was only one

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

12 Dec., 1859.

- one entry for the four casks. There was another vessel took the other two casks away, and a different entry must have been passed for them.
30. Then Mr. Powell pressed upon you to sign for the six casks? Yes, he did. He said he was informed by the Company that they were shipped—but I said I knew they were not, and that I would not sign for that which I knew was not correct.
31. Do you remember saying something to Mr. Mackenzie upon this subject? Yes, I do.
32. What was it? I do not recollect exactly, but it was something like this, "Is this not a pretty thing to ask me to sign for what I know is not shipped?"
33. Did Mr. Mackenzie make some calculations for you? Yes, he reckoned up the weight and told me that if the whole six casks had been shipped they would not have amounted to the quantity mentioned in the warrant. The total weight of the casks differed from the weight ordered to be shipped.
34. Is this a common occurrence? Sometimes. I have received warrants for the shipment of 80 tons, and when I came to put it on board, I have found two or three tons short shipped.
35. Has this been the case with other parties, as well as with the Sugar Company? No, I got directions to see that the sugar shipped from the grocers or any of the shops in the City, was weighed before it was received on board ship; this was not done with the Sugar Company's shipments, and that is the way the differences occur.
36. Do the Sugar Company alone enjoy this privilege? No, Mr. Robey has the same privilege; but all the sugar from the grocers' shops or merchants' stores, I had to see weighed.
37. By Captain Ward: Do the Company enjoy the same privilege, now that the present Collector is in office? I believe so.
38. By Mr. Powell: How long were you drawback officer? Some four or five months before the present Collector took charge of the department.
39. And you held that office for about eight months? Yes, about that.
40. You think you were appointed to that office at the suggestion of Mr. Lewellin? Yes.
41. You do not know whether Mr. Metcalfe interfered in any way? No; I know that Mr. Metcalfe and the Collector were very intimate, but how I got appointed to the office before others who were better suited for it, I do not know.
42. Do you think that Mr. Garling recommended you? I do not know; I know this, that I went to Mr. Garling so soon as I heard I was appointed, and told him that I did not wish to incur the responsibility when there were so many better suited for it than I was; he said he knew nothing about it, but that I must do the duty, or else Colonel Gibbes would have to report me.
43. However you did object to taking the office? I did.
44. Did I advise you to take the office? I do not recollect your giving me any advice at all upon the subject.
45. You have asked my advice upon different occasions? I have, and very good advice I always got from you.
46. Why did you object to taking the office? Because of the very great responsibility; it was a very responsible office, and one man had to do all the work, which was a great deal too much for any man to do properly; I wanted assistance very much, but I could not get it.
47. With regard to taking the Company's weight for sugar shipped for drawback, you did not take Mr. Metcalfe's mere word? No, I did not; I had the Collector's authority also, or else I would not have done it.
48. He told you to take the number of bags received, and then to compare the weight on the tickets with that marked on the warrant? Yes.
49. Do not the bags of sugar, particularly the refined and bastard, run pretty evenly about the same weight per bag? Yes, they run about forty to the ton.
50. The bastards run about forty bags to the ton? Yes; they generally make them that, by the size of the bags.
51. And the refined runs thirty-two bags to the ton? Yes.
52. Then forty bags of sugar generally go to the load—to the dray load? Yes.
53. And a ticket comes down to you and to the officer of the ship with each dray load? Yes.
54. If you had a drawback entry for ten tons of sugar, and if fifteen loads of a ton each came down to the vessel, what would you do? I should take no notice of the other five loads; I have only to do with the ten tons entered for drawback; I would, however, get the tickets for the whole.
55. You have explained that duplicate tickets were sent down with each load of sugar, one for the vessel and one for the Customs officer, is that the plan pursued now? Yes; we follow the same practice with regard to the tickets.
56. I believe the landing-waiters and searchers are all now appointed as drawback officers? Yes.
57. And they follow the same plan that you pursued? Yes; only being more of them they are able to look closer after the shipments.
58. I believe you have no means of weighing the large casks of sugar that come down to the wharf? No.
59. And so you are compelled to take the Company's weight? Yes.
60. What is the largest cask of sugar you have seen come down from the Company? Ten or twelve hundredweight. There was one cask that came down to the wharf to be shipped for the Company that was entered as weighing so much, but when I came to weigh it, I found that it was two hundred weight short of the weight entered.
61. Was there a ticket sent down with the cask? Yes.
62. Did the weight on the ticket agree with the actual weight of the cask? Yes, but not with the weight in the entry.

63. However, where the sugar was in bags, you were satisfied to take the number and estimate the weight? Yes.
64. If a larger number of bags were sent down than you had tickets for would not that strike you? Yes, certainly; but I should have nothing to do with anything beyond the quantity entered.
65. The tickets you speak of are a separate and distinct thing from the warrants? Yes.
66. They merely shew the quantity sent by each dray, the number of bags, and the weight? Yes. I receive one with each dray load, and I hold them until the whole of the goods is received on board.
67. You then compare your tickets with those held by the officer of the vessel? Yes; but his ticket is in a different form to mine.
68. Will you look at the Warrant produced (B); it is signed, I believe, by Mr. Clifford? Yes.
69. He has signed it for you, has he not? Yes.
70. This other warrant is in your handwriting? It is.
71. It is not signed? No.
72. Have you put anything—any mark or sign—to induce you to believe that the goods herein named were shipped? No; I see nothing.
73. Now, referring to the drawback warrants, C and D, I find that in each of these cases, where I have written information for you, you have re-written that information underneath, in your own hand? I have.
74. Was that your ordinary custom? It was.
75. I noted this information down for your guidance and you subsequently copied it? Yes.
76. The only object of my making this memorandum, being, to supply you with information? Yes.
77. And in all cases were you in the habit of satisfying yourself by a reference to the mate of the vessel, and a comparison of his tickets with yours, that the goods named in the warrant were shipped? I was.
78. You said, I think, that it was impossible for you to look properly after the shipments, without having assistance? Yes.
79. And that this was the reason why you did not attend so particularly as you ought to have done to the shipments by the "Moa"? Yes.
80. The mate, however, signed for the whole quantity that the Company said they had sent down? He did.
81. And the captain offered to sign for all, as well as to swear that it had been received on board? Yes.
82. What reason have you for believing that there were forty bags short-shipped? I only know because the ticket was not forthcoming, and because the cargo was found to be forty bags short in New Zealand; I did all I could to make inquiry; I went down to the Sugar Company for an explanation, and they said that the sugar was there and that they had been paid for it by the shipper.
83. You think now that the sugar was on board? I cannot think anything else for the Company said they sent it—the officers of the vessel declared that they received it—and Mr. Robertson paid for it; and this he would not have done if the sugar had not been there.
84. Now with regard to the six casks of sugar of Mr. Sayers—I believe they were cleared for shipment in one of that gentleman's own vessels? Yes.
85. And the Captain signed for four only of the six casks, although he saw the other two lying down on the wharf? Yes.
86. Mr. Giffard told you that these other two casks were shipped? No; you did.
87. I did not deceive you, for they were actually shipped the next day, in another of Mr. Sayers' vessels? I thought you would not do so, for you have never led me wrong; but I could not go against my conscience and sign for six casks, when I knew that only four were shipped.
88. You saw the other two casks put into the store? Yes.
89. And you know that they have since been shipped away? I do.
90. How many hogsheads did you sign the debenture for? For four.
91. On the occasion when you spoke to Mr. Mackenzie about this matter, had you been drinking? No, I had not; I have been a teetotaller on principle for many years past.
92. Do you weigh all the sugar that is shipped from the grocers' shops? Yes.
93. The sugar then goes down to the ship, and you get the mate's receipt for it? Yes.
94. Did you not also weigh the Company's raw sugar? There was an officer put on duty at the Company's store, and he used to weigh the raw sugars and give me the weights.
95. Did you weigh them yourself? Yes; I have done so often.
96. This was distinct from the arrangement made for taking the Company's own weights? Yes, that had reference to the refined and bastard sugars.
97. Did you not say that you sometimes re-weighed the Company's refined sugars? No; I did so once, and found the weight correct.
98. Who succeeded you in the drawback department? Mr. Chapman.
99. How long did he carry it on? About a month.
100. Are the Company's refined sugars weighed now? Yes; the present Collector desired that they should be so.
101. You shipped fifteen tons Company's sugar for Captain Tinley—did you not weigh that? No, not all; I took a load and weighed it, and found that it was equal to weight; upon finding that it was so, the landing waiter was satisfied as to the rest.
102. Is it not the practice now to weigh all sugars previous to shipment for drawback? It is.

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

12 Dec., 1859.

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

12 Dec., 1859.

103. Then, on the 1st November last, you shipped twenty-five tons Company's sugar for Captain Tilney, in the "William and Alfred," and found on re-weighing that the weight was correct? I did not re-weigh the whole—I only weighed two drafts, and they being correct, I assumed that the others were so.

104. How many years have you been in the Customs Department? I obtained my commission about twenty years ago.

105. Your eyesight is now bad? Yes.

106. And you getting infirm? Yes, I am so.

107. Have you latterly applied to the Government for a pension? I have.

108. Will you tell me what your conversation with Mr. Duncan was, relative to the two casks of sugar short-shipped of the six cleared for Mr. Sayers? Yes. The Collector called upon me to give him the necessary information about the six hogsheads of sugar cleared for Mr. Sayers. I could not at first bring the matter to my memory, and I told the Collector so; he said that he wanted only the truth of the matter, but that the truth he would have; he said I could not have forgotten it; he then rung the bell for Mr. Mackenzie; when Mr. Mackenzie came up, he told the Collector all that had occurred in the office between him and me; I tried to bring the matter to my recollection, and when I went home I thought over it all, and it came back to me.

109. Did Mr. Duncan hold out any threat respecting your pension, in the event of your not stating what you knew? No. All Mr. Duncan said to me was that I was to tell the truth and be afraid of nobody, for that nobody would hurt me if I spoke the truth; but that he would have the truth, and if I did not tell it, all he would have to do would be, to write a few lines to the Government, and then I would not get my pension.

110. When the Collector sent for you in the first instance and asked you about the four casks of sugar, was your memory clear upon the subject? No; not at that time.

111. And then he said to you, that if you did not tell the truth he would have to write a few lines and you would lose your pension? Yes.

112. Did you not look at this as a kind of coercion? No. All he said was that I was to speak the truth and nobody would hurt me. I went home and began to think over the matter in the evening; and then I came to him in the morning, and told him that I had brought everything to mind about the sugar.

113. Was the matter of the pension again referred to in the morning? No.

114. During the time you have been in the Customs, have you received anything in the shape of fee or reward from either Mr. Metcalfe or myself? No, certainly not.

115. By Mr. Duncan: Had you any conversation with Mr. Powell respecting what I said to you about the sugar? Yes.

116. When? Immediately afterwards. Directly after you spoke to me I went to Mr. Metcalfe, and asked who it was that had been writing letters to the Government relative to my neglect of duty about the drawbacks;—they said that it had not been them.

117. What did Mr. Powell ask you respecting the conversation? Nothing. I told him all that you had said; he said it was not they who had written about me, and asked what it was all about. I then told him what you had said to me.

118. Did I hold out any threat towards you? No; only in saying that if I did not speak the truth you would prevent my having my pension.

119. By Capt. Browne: When you received one of these warrants made up by Mr. Powell or Mr. Metcalfe, did you take the trouble to ascertain its correctness? Yes, by examining them with the tickets I received.

120. You checked them also by the indorsements made by Mr. Powell? Yes; and I wrote my certificate by that.

121. Were the other agents in the habit of making similar indorsements for you to check the warrants by? No; only Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell.

122. By Mr. Powell: When the Collector called you in and asked about the six casks of sugar, you knew that he had spoken to Mr. Mackenzie on the subject? Yes, he told me he had.

123. By Capt. McLerie: Have you ever indorsed warrants without having seen the goods or articles mentioned in them? No; I must be satisfied, before indorsing the warrants, that the goods were on board ship.

124. How did you satisfy yourself? By the tickets sent down to me by the Sugar Company, and by the receipts from the chief officer or captain of the ship, with which I checked the tickets.

125. Then you took the tickets and checked them by the ship's receipts? Yes.

126. And you might do this without seeing the goods? I will not swear that I saw all the goods I signed for.

(EXTRACTS referred to in Mr. Duncan's statement of 12 December, 1859.)

16 and 17 VICT., c. 107.

"16.—The Commissioners of Customs may, and they are hereby authorised, to grant licenses, in such form and manner and to such persons as they shall think fit, to act as agents for transacting business, which shall relate to the entry or clearance of any ship, or of any goods, or of any baggage, in any of the ports or places in respect of which such appointments as aforesaid now are, or hereafter shall be made, so long as such appointments shall remain in force; and by order, under their hands, may cancel or revoke any license so granted to any such person for fraud or misconduct; a copy of such order, stating the cause of dismissal, shall be delivered to such person, or to his clerk, or left at his usual place of abode or business; but such person shall be at liberty to appeal to the Commissioners of Customs in manner provided by sections thirty-three and thirty-four of this Act, for an investigation and re-consideration of the case; and if no such appeal be made within three days after the delivery of a copy of such order, or if such order shall be confirmed, such license shall be void: And the Commissioners of Customs, on granting any such license, are hereby empowered to require bond to be given by every person to whom such license shall be granted (not being one of the sworn brokers of the City of London, and acting as such agent in the port of London), with one sufficient surety, in the sum of one thousand pounds, for the faithful and incorrupt conduct of such person and of his clerks, acting for him, both as regards the Customs and his employers; and all licenses, heretofore granted by the Commissioners of Customs, to any persons to act as agents shall be valid, until revoked, and all bonds taken for the faithful and incorrupt conduct of such persons, shall remain in full force: Provided always, that any person or any persons in copartnership may, with the approval of the Commissioners of Customs, appoint a clerk or servant to transact such business on his or their behalf, and the name, residence, and date of appointment of such clerk or servant shall thereupon be indorsed on the License of such person or persons, and shall be signed by him or them in the presence of and attested by the Collector or Comptroller of Customs at the port for which such License is granted, and all such appointments shall be recorded in a Register to be kept at the Custom House for that purpose; and no person shall act as such clerk or servant unless so appointed, indorsed, and recorded, nor act for or on behalf of any other than the person or persons so appointing him; and every such appointment may be revoked by the Commissioners of Customs at any time by order under their hands.

"95.—If any goods shall be taken out of any warehouse without due entry of the same with the proper Officer of Customs, the occupier of such warehouse shall forthwith pay the duties due upon such goods; and every person so taking out any goods without payment of duty, or who shall aid, assist, or be concerned therein, and every person who shall wilfully destroy or embezzle any goods duly warehoused, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, suffer the punishment by law inflicted in cases of misdemeanor.

"109.—No warehoused goods shall be taken or delivered from the warehouse, except upon due entry, and under the care of the proper officers, for exportation, or upon due entry and payment of the full duties payable thereon for home use, except goods delivered into the charge of the Searchers to be shipped as stores, in such quantities as the Collector or Comptroller shall allow, subject to the directions of the Commissioners of Customs, and under such regulations as they may see fit to make.

"110.—Upon the entry of any goods to be cleared from the warehouse for home use, the person entering such goods shall deliver a bill of entry, and duplicates thereof, in like manner and form, containing the same particulars as are hereinbefore required on the entry of goods to be delivered for home use on the landing thereof, as far as the same may be applicable, and shall at the same time pay down to the proper Officer of Customs the full duties payable thereon, not being less in amount than according to the account of the quantity taken by the Landing Waiter or other proper officer on the first entry and landing thereof, except as to the following goods, viz., tobacco, wine, spirits, figs, currants, raisins, and sugar, the duties whereon, when cleared from the warehouse for home use, shall be charged upon the quantity of such goods, ascertained by weight, measure, or strength at the time of actual delivery thereof, unless there is reasonable ground to suppose that any portion of the deficiency or difference between the weight, measure, or strength ascertained on landing and first examination of any such last-mentioned goods and that ascertained at the time of actual delivery has been caused by illegal or improper means, in which case the proper Officer of Customs shall make such allowance only for loss as he may consider fairly to have arisen from natural evaporation or other legitimate cause."

WEDNESDAY, 14 DECEMBER, 1859.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, Esq.,

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents; and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the examination of witnesses.

Mr. Duncan handed in a letter from Col. Gibbes to the Secretary to the Treasury, dated 2nd March, 1857, relative to the deficiency in the sugars warehoused by the Sugar Company, and stated that he had not been able to find at the Treasury the application from Mr. Metcalfe to which that letter referred. He also handed in another Minute of the Auditor General in relation to the second claim of the Company for allowance of duty on the ground of alleged deficiency by waste, dated 6th May, 1859. He further handed in an opinion of the Crown Law Officer, (J. B. Darvall, Esq.) on the illegality of the remission claimed, and dated 10th March, 1857. He further handed in a warrant for the shipment of the three tons of sugar alluded to by the witness Russell at last meeting of the Board.

Mr. John Alfred Maddox called in and examined :—

Mr. J. A.
Maddox.

14 Dec., 1859.

1. By Mr. Duncan: You are second clerk in the Custom House? I am.
2. Do you remember, some time before I took charge of the department, Mr. Powell stating anything about turning out the new Collector? Yes, I remember his making an observation before me. I forget what led to the remark, but we were talking about who was to be the new Collector, and about the arrangements he would make when he came into office, and Mr. Powell said that any Collector coming there and carrying out the regulations in their integrity, would not be there long—that they, the agents, would soon have him out.
3. Are you not aware that Mr. Metcalfe and his partner were very great authorities in the Custom House at one period? Mr. Metcalfe always had a great deal of influence in the department, having been there so many years as agent.
4. Do you think that influence has been exercised by him beneficially for the public service? Why, the agents, generally try to push their business through the office as quickly as they can—this leads to errors. They try to push it through just to serve themselves, and without reference to the public service; and then if what they want is not done for them, we sometimes give offence,—I mean if we detain them we give offence. The agents are very impatient, and there are now so many that they cannot all be served at once. I think the agents a great benefit to the public, and facilitate the business of the department.
5. Have you not very often known the clerks to refuse to do things that were irregular, and that then Mr. Metcalfe had an interview with the Collector and got what he wished? When he required any matter that came within my duty—and in saying this I do not speak for the other clerks, but only for myself—and I may say that I have not taken notice of any particular matters; but when I refused to do what he wanted, he went to the Collector and got what he required. Whether the matter was one that I was right in refusing to do, I cannot now recollect. There is only one case that I remember particularly, and I recollect it, because it led to my being called up before the Collector. It was when I had the duty of clearing ships, Mr. Metcalfe came to me to clear out a vessel for which he was agent. I forget what her name was, and I refused to clear the vessel because it was after hours, and the papers were not in. Some of the entries for the outward cargo were under bond entries. Mr. Metcalfe went to the Colonel, and after an interview with him the Collector cleared the ship, taking the captain's declaration. When I saw this I wrote upon the manifest that the vessel had been cleared irregularly in every respect. This memorandum of mine was shewn to the Colonel, who sent for me into his room and made some very severe remarks upon the liberty I had taken in making any observations upon a document bearing his signature. I apologized to him, and stated that it was out of no disrespect to him that I had done it, but solely for the purpose of clearing myself in the matter in the event of any remarks being made upon it. That is the only circumstance that I can remember as having occurred to myself. It happened many years ago when I was clearing clerk. But there were frequent occasions when the agent was not satisfied, and he then went into the Collector, and if he got his sanction of course the clerks were put on one side. Mr. Metcalfe generally got what he required from the Colonel.
6. Was it not matter of notoriety that he could obtain whatever he wanted from the late Collector? It was generally considered that he had great influence with the Collector, especially when he was in the long room. He had an office there, and was almost one of us, having access to all our papers.
7. Did you not find it necessary at last to obtain an order that no one should come within the rail? Yes. After I returned to my duty, after the "Louisa" affair, I wrote an order out for the Collector to sign, prohibiting all persons from coming within the rail. I took it in to him to sign, but Mr. Metcalfe asked him not to sign it until he had made a few remarks upon it. He then stated that it would be exceedingly detrimental to his interests, because he would be prevented from having many papers that he wanted in order to make out his accounts. He did all he could to prevent Colonel Gibbes from signing the order, but at last the Collector did sign it. After that notice was posted up, I was insulted on several occasions by the agents, and told that I should not remain there long; that they would soon have me out.
8. Did Mr. Powell ever threaten you in this way? I don't recollect his having done so. He behaved on several occasions in the most abusive manner, and insulted me most grossly. I am not singular in this respect, for he has done so to others. When the order was first given, one of the agents asked me to hand him twenty volumes of the Import Entries at a time over the rail, only to impede and annoy me. I mention this to shew the system of obstruction that was carried on to everything that was calculated to benefit the service. Before the Collector signed the order, Mr. Metcalfe stated to the Collector that if he was kept outside the railing and denied access to the documents, &c., that it would put a stop to his business. Mr. Metcalfe asked me, before the Collector, if he came behind the rail whether I should turn him out. I said I should not turn him out, but ask him what he wanted. I told Mr. Metcalfe he should have any information he required in office hours. The matter was arranged, and, after some little annoyance, the rule has worked well so far; but at first I had to put up with a good deal of annoyance from some of the agents.
9. Had not Mr. Metcalfe the whole end of the long room to himself? Yes, at one time.
10. Had he not after that a whole room to himself? Yes, he used to have one room down-stairs.
11. Were not the warehouse-keepers turned out of the room they occupied in order to make a place for him when he returned from England? Yes; the room was divided, but I do not know for what cause.
12. Was it not the case that in consequence of their interference there was hardly any law or or regulation in the proceedings of the Custom House? It was. The agents had so much stronger power than the clerks that it led to great irregularities. They always enforced their own measures, by reason of the Collector giving way to them upon all occasions. So that, though in the execution of our duty, the orders issued by the Collector would be set aside; for Mr. Metcalfe had only to go in to the Colonel to get them countermanded.

Mr. J. A.
Maddox
14 Dec., 1859.

13. Do you not think that this tended in a great measure to create the disorganization that the department so long suffered under? For my own part, I on some occasions certainly felt that I was not sufficiently supported by the Colonel. But I had to consider my duty, and that was to obey the directions of the head of the department. I saw the loose and easy way he had of doing business, and I had to do the best I could to keep things straight. Not long before the "Louisa" affair I was reported to the Colonel by Mr. Metcalfe for obstructing his business. I certainly felt very much hurt at such a charge being brought against me, especially as it was groundless. The cause of it was that I had refused to take his bonds, and I had had repeatedly to bring the same thing under the notice of the Collector. These bonds were made out in the names of the clerks of the firms who imported the goods, instead of being in the names of the firms themselves. The manifest shewed the goods to belong to these firms and not to the clerks, whilst the entries also were made out in the names of the firms. Then the bonds, being given by other parties, did not of course agree either with the manifest or with the entries. Besides this, they were altogether irresponsible persons who gave the bonds, and I felt it to be my duty to bring the matter under the notice of the Collector.

14. By Captain Ward: How did the Collector deal with this matter? He listened to all that was said, and made no reply. The Collector might have been engaged at the time with Mr. Metcalfe on other business.

15. Did he do nothing in the matter? No; the Collector used to say that he was not particular about the import bonds; sometimes he told me not to take the bonds, and sometimes he would send for the agent. I had also to report to the Collector that the agents neglected to sign their bonds.

16. By Mr. Duncan: You were at one time drawback clerk? I was.

17. Are you not aware that Mr. Metcalfe often obtained cheques for the amount of drawback before the debentures were completed? Yes, I remember instances of cheques being given to him for the amount of drawback on goods when the debentures had not been jerked. The cheque was given to him, and his debenture was jerked after he had been paid. This, however, is so long ago that I hardly remember the process that was then followed. The only reason I remember these instances is because I was responsible for the correctness of the amount, and I know that I used to wonder how it was that Mr. Metcalfe could manage to get the money before his account was passed.

18. By Captain Ward: Who advanced the money, or gave the cheque? Colonel Gibbs.

19. During the time you have been in the Customs, have you ever found Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell breaking the Collector's rules, or acting against his orders? No; I never allowed them to do so.

20. Have they ever acted against the orders of the department? I have no distinct recollection of their having done so.

21. You complain, however, that they were in the habit of passing by the officers of the department and going direct to the Collector for his opinion? I make no complaint of their having done so; but it was the case that, if Mr. Metcalfe could not get his business through the office by reason of any irregularity, he used to go to the Collector and get it done there.

22. And you found that to be a hardship? Yes, I felt that I was not being supported in my duty.

23. You say that they have spoken to you in an abusive manner; will you give the Board an instance of this? I forget any particular instance, but I remember upon one occasion that I told Mr. Powell that he was telling a falsehood, and his answer was, "Do not tell me 'I am a liar, Sir, or I will knock you down.'"

24. Do you know of any other instance? No; I do not remember one.

25. Were Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell the only agents who were in the habit of coming behind the rail? No, all the agents used to come there.

26. They were not then specially privileged in this respect? No, not since Mr. Metcalfe's office was removed from the long room. The rule was made because we complained of being unable to get on with our business by reason of the agents coming behind the rail in the long room.

27. Then Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell were not specially privileged to go behind the rail? No.

28. You thought, however, that they had an undue influence in the department? I did.

29. Can you give an example of the exercise of this influence? No, except by the fact that they were in the habit of putting one on one side like a mere cypher.

30. By Mr. Browne: Since this notice has been published have they been in the habit of going behind the rail? No.

31. How long has this notice been issued? Some months previous to the present Collector taking office.

32. Since the "Louisa" business? Yes.

33. Have they ever broken this rule? No; except once, when Mr. Powell came behind the rail for some papers; but he had understood that the head of each firm should be allowed behind, and on this point he had made a mistake. It was explained to him, and he did not come behind again.

34. Then have not then, in fact, broken the rule? No, they have not.

- Mr. J. A. Maddox.
14 Dec., 1859.
35. By Mr. Powell: With regard to the conversation you had with Mr. Mackenzie and myself, do you remember every word that took place? No, I do not; for I took no note of it at the time. I do not remember the whole of the conversation, but I remember what I have stated in answer to question No. 2.
36. Was it after the "Louisa" affair? It was.
37. How long before the appointment of the new Collector? That I cannot tell.
38. At all events, it was before a new Collector had been appointed? Yes.
39. Was it known at the time that Colonel Gibbes was about to leave the office? It was supposed that he would, though nothing was then known positively.
40. Have you been consulted in this matter by Mr. Mackenzie? No; I had a distinct remembrance of the conversation myself, without consulting him.
41. Has not Mr. Mackenzie spoken to you about it, within the last few days? I think he has done so; no doubt he has mentioned the matter to me.
42. Are you sure of this? I think I may say that I am.
43. Did he recall the whole conversation to your mind? Yes; Mr. McKenzie asked me whether I remembered what you stated about any Collector carrying out the regulations in their integrity, &c.
44. And when he mentioned it, you recollected it all distinctly? Yes, perfectly.
45. Have you lately had any conversation with the present Collector about what you could prove in this matter? I can hardly remember whether the Collector mentioned the matter to me or not.
46. Surely you can remember whether he has spoken to you on the subject? I do not remember.
47. I will ask you distinctly, and I wish to have a definite answer: Have you had any conversation with Mr. Duncan relative to this matter? I will say that I have, if that will suit you; but to tell truth, I cannot exactly remember whether any question was put to me about this conversation. One or two things, I know, were mentioned to the Collector—about the bonds and the drawbacks—but I do not remember speaking of the conversation.
- Mr. Duncan*: I may say at once, to prevent further questioning, that I did speak to Mr. Maddox about the conversation.
48. By Mr. Powell: Did you volunteer the statement about these things, or was it sought from you? I hardly know; I have spoken of them in the office, and they may have come to the Collector's ears.
49. Then was your statement made in the first instance to the Collector, or did it reach him through an intermediate party? They may have been brought to his knowledge by an intermediate party.
50. Who was that party? I cannot say, because I do not know whether the statements were made to the Collector by myself or by an intermediate party.
51. But you have said they may have been made by an intermediate party; in that case, who would it be? I decline to answer that question.
52. By Captain Ward: You have said that certain information had been given to the Collector, and that it reached him through some intermediate party; now we must know who that party was? If it was through an intermediate party, it must have been through Mr. Llewellyn. It might have been through him, or he must have been by at the time I made the statement to the Collector. I hardly know, however, how it was.
53. By Mr. Powell: You speak about the agents hurrying their business through your office; I believe, as a general rule, this is the case with all agents? Yes, they are always in a hurry.
54. Is there anything very wrong in that? No; only sometimes it causes them to be very impertinent, and leads to errors and irregularities.
55. Were you ever asked to do anything improper? I have been asked to do things that I ought not to do.
56. But an improper thing,—have you been asked to do anything absolutely improper? Yes; I have been asked to take bonds that were improperly made out. But I never did anything that I conceived was irregular when I could avoid it,—when I was not ordered to do so by the Collector.
57. You are quite sure of that? Yes; I never did.
58. You have said that the clerks in the office, at times, refused to do certain things for Mr. Metcalfe or myself? No; I distinctly stated, in the commencement of my evidence, that I spoke only for myself.
59. Then, as regards yourself; have you often refused to do things for Mr. Metcalfe and myself? Yes; I allude to the bonds, as regards yourself; as regards Mr. Metcalfe, I allude to years gone by.
60. And for what reason? When I have refused, it has always been because what I was asked to do was irregular.
61. Yet when you have refused to do what was asked, the Collector has afterwards ordered you to do it? Yes.
62. What were the irregularities of which you had to complain, and which the Collector afterwards sanctioned? I have never taken notice of many things that I might have done had I known that they would have been subject of inquiry. I cannot therefore state now any particular instance, except the one I have already mentioned, when the Collector cleared a ship after I refused to do so.
63. Do you know whether it was necessary that, in all the cases referred to him by Mr. Metcalfe, the Collector should have refused the application? I do not.
64. Mr. Metcalfe could not have been wrong in all cases? No, certainly not in all cases.
65. Do you know of any one case in which you are satisfied that he was wrong? I cannot remember one.
- 66.

66. Can you remember the name of the ship that the Collector ordered to be cleared after you had refused? The Collector did not order the vessel to be cleared, but took the captain's declaration; I had then to make up the clearance. I have already said that I cannot.
67. How many years ago is it since this happened? It is a very old affair. I was then clearing clerk, and jerked the inward papers. I cannot say what year it occurred. I was clearing clerk from 1847 to 1852; I remember it particularly, because after I had made my remarks in red ink on the manifest, I took it to Mr. Webb the chief clerk, and desired him to lay it before the Collector.
68. Do you think that Colonel Gibbes was satisfied with Mr. Metcalfe's explanation? He may have been, but I was not. But the vessel should not have been cleared without my initials.
69. Was it not sufficient for you in your subordinate capacity, that the Collector should be satisfied? It was not, because I was responsible for any irregularity.
70. How is it that you, who cannot remember what occurred only a few days back, can recollect what happened so long ago? Because of the circumstances of the case, and of my being set aside in a matter when I was clearly right, and because of my being called before the Collector and reprimanded when I was only doing my duty. Besides the whole thing was so irregular that I could not help remembering it.
71. Do you think if you had time you could find the papers connected with that case? Yes, I could. It is a mere question of time.
72. Were not the other agents, besides Mr. Metcalfe, accustomed to see the Collector on matters connected with their business? Yes.
73. And they used to carry their points with the Collector, against the clerks, the same as Mr. Metcalfe did? I do not think that any of them had the same influence with Colonel Gibbes that Mr. Metcalfe had.
74. But did they not carry their point in opposition to your judgment? I can hardly answer that, because in general matters, so long as the Collector gave his permission for anything to be done, I had nothing more to do than to follow his directions; but with the particular case I have alluded to I had everything to do, because I was responsible for any irregularity.
75. I believe that every one of the agents have at different times questioned your decisions, and appealed to the Collector? Yes, I have no doubt they have.
76. In such a case their only resource was to appeal to the Collector? Certainly.
77. Do you not think that it is extremely probable that in consequence of Mr. Metcalfe's great knowledge of the Customs Laws, he was enabled to put his case in such a way before the Collector as almost invariably to carry his point? Yes, he might.
78. Have you any very great knowledge of the Customs Laws? No; my duty is more of a mechanical character, and does not require any great study of the law, so that I leave that to the Collector.
79. You have not then studied the Customs Laws? No, only so much as is necessary for the performance of my duties.
80. Have you studied them so much as to make yourself completely master of them in every respect? No; I have not studied them so much as you have, or as you pretend to have done, for you told me one day that every point you had, you would have the law for it.
81. Was it not necessary that the agents should have access to the papers of the department, in order to obtain, especially in the case of drawbacks, such particulars as are indispensably necessary for the use of the department; have we not in fact to supply information for the use of the department? I do not know to what you allude.
82. Do you not know that it is necessary for the agents to insert in the warrants the numbers and dates of the entries of the goods, before they can obtain drawback on them? Yes, it is.
83. And to do that they must have access to the Customs books? Yes, and the Customs give them the opportunity of doing this.
84. All the agents I believe have that opportunity afforded them? They have.
85. You are much given to joking, I believe? I joke sometimes.
86. And you sometimes lose your temper? Yes, I may at times.
87. Did I ever complain to the Collector of your not being at the office in proper time in the morning? You did; one morning I was two minutes late, and you reported it to the Collector.
88. Do you not happen to know that it was a subject of remark by Mr. Donaldson that you were always late? No, I do not.
89. Since the alterations in the department you find things all go on well? Yes; only we have plenty of work to do. The reduction of two clerks in the office has left our hands full.
90. Have you any complaint to make against Mr. Metcalfe and myself as agents now, since these alterations? No; only that you and others have behaved yourselves in a very discourteous manner. I have no complaint to make against Mr. Metcalfe. I have never been insulted by Mr. Metcalfe.
91. Now, with reference to the bonds;—you have said, I believe, that the late Custom House Board was not pleased with the manner in which these bonds were made out—they being given in one name and the entries been made out in another? Yes; the Board was not pleased with the parties allowed to execute the bonds.
92. Did you ever make any representation about this? I did; I represented it several times to the late Collector.
93. Have you ever done so to the present Collector? No; I have had no occasion to do so. The bonds are now made out regularly, and are all executed before the entries are passed.
94. You have taken bonds since then? Yes.

Mr. J. A.
Maddox.
14 Dec., 1859.

- Mr. J. A. Maddox.
14 Dec., 1859.
95. And in the manner recommended by the Board? Yes.
96. Now, about these drawbacks that were improperly given before the debentures were checked—did not this happen in Mr. Barnes' time? Yes.
97. Was it reported to him? Yes, I believe it was.
98. Did he do anything in the matter? I am not aware.
99. Was he not here purposely to investigate any irregularities in the Customs Department, and to recommend alterations where he thought them necessary? Yes.
100. And yet he did nothing in this matter? That I cannot say.
101. You state in one part of your evidence, when asked for an instance of offensive conduct on my part, that I on one occasion gave you considerable offence because you told me that I had been guilty of a falsehood? Yes. I told you that you had uttered a falsehood, and you replied, "Don't tell me I lie, Sir, or I will knock you down."
102. It is not a very extraordinary thing for a gentleman to get out of temper when he is accused of falsehood? It was your manner that was offensive.
103. You say that I went in behind the rail in the long room the first day after the order for the exclusion of agents was promulgated? You did.
104. I went in, I believe, to transact some business with Mr. Lane? That I do not know.
105. At all events, Mr. Lane is not a man who is likely to allow an improper privilege to any one? No; certainly not.
106. And I went to speak to him? That I cannot say; you may have done so.
107. By Mr. Browne: I would wish to ask you whether the clearance comes to you now, before it goes to the Collector for his signature? Yes; I take the captain's declaration to the manifest.
108. Does the content come to you to be declared before the clearance is made out for the Collector's signature? Yes, in office hours.
109. Have you ever been called upon, by Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell, to take a declaration to a blank content, since the appointment of the present Collector? No; I only take the declarations to clearances passed in office hours. I know however that they bring steamers clearances to the Custom House in blank; the captain declares to them, and the content is afterwards made up at the wharf under the supervision of an officer of Customs.
110. Have you received any such? No. If any content is brought to me that is not complete and not signed by Mr. Lane I do not pass it. There were some contents brought to me not filled in, and I was asked to take the captain's declaration to the blank form to be finished afterwards, but I do not remember the particular circumstances.
111. You did not take the declaration? No. In that case I would not do it without express orders.
112. Can you say whether these were tendered to you by Mr. Powell? I cannot say, for I do not remember the particular circumstances.
113. By Mr. Powell: Did I ever present a blank content to you for the purpose of taking the captain's declarations to it? No; I cannot recollect your having done so.
114. Were you ever asked by me to sign a blank clearance? No, not to my recollection.

Mr. Thomas Fancourt called in and examined:—

- Mr. Thomas Fancourt.
14 Dec., 1859.
1. By Mr. Duncan: You were at one time Jerker in the long room of the Custom House? I was.
2. It was your duty to examine ships' papers? It was.
3. Has Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell ever interfered with you in the performance of this duty? I have refused to sign documents for them, when I have not had the papers complete.
4. They have asked you to sign under such circumstances? They have.
5. Were such papers ultimately signed? Yes. They went in to the Collector, and he gave orders for the vessel to be cleared.
6. Was that often the case? Yes, it happened many times that vessels were cleared by the Collector's orders.
7. When the necessary papers were incomplete? Yes.
8. Did not Mr. Metcalfe at one period exercise a most extraordinary influence over the Collector? I cannot say that he had more influence over him than any of the other agents.
9. Have you not heard it commonly mentioned in the department that such was the case? I have; but I do not know of it to my own knowledge.
10. And he often obtained clearances irregularly? Not he himself, but his firm did. In these cases the Collector gave his sanction to the clearance.
11. Were such things as these beneficial to the good order of the establishment, or to the regularity of its mode of conducting business? No, quite the contrary. It was very much against it.
12. You are now warehouse-keeper? I am.
13. Did you not some time ago make out a list of overtime goods in the different bonded warehouses? Yes, very soon after I took charge of the warehouse department.
14. Can you produce the original list then made out? I can. (List of Overtime Goods produced.)
15. The items in that list are very numerous? They are.
16. On comparing that list with the goods actually in the bonded stores, did you find any large quantity of tea deficient? Yes; I found between 800 and 900 packages of tea missing from Towns' Warehouse.
17. Will you refer to the list, and state the exact quantity? Yes. I found on opening the books books that duty had not been paid on 747 packages of tea, containing in the whole 29,134 lbs. I found that the account of this tea was standing open in our books, and I at once applied to the Locker at Towns' store for information respecting it. He informed me that there was no such marks or brands of tea in the bond; and he informed me that there was no such bond mark as K 436 in the store or books, that it must belong to another mark by the same vessel I 436, that the brands must have been substituted by mistake for some other mark.

Mr. Thomas
Faneourt.
14 Dec., 1859.

18. Ultimately, however, they paid duty on it? Yes. I then applied to the locker to give me date of delivery and number of packages of tea by that vessel, and whether delivered for home consumption or exportation. He then applied to Towns' respecting it, and when he came up to the Custom House in the evening he informed me that the duty would be paid the next day; but it was not paid until the day following.
19. Did you find any large deficiency of sugar in the Sugar Company's stores? Yes, a very great quantity. The whole amount of the deficiency in the stock of sugar was 297 tons 8 cwt.
20. That includes the deficiency in some of the private stores? Yes; that is the total deficiency. The quantity missing from the Sugar Company's stores was 231 tons.
21. These sugars were found to have been taken out of bond? Yes. They were stated by the locker as not being in bond when applied to; yet the account was standing open in our books.
22. By Captain Ward: Who were the agents who paid the duty on the tea? Towns and Co. are their own agents.
23. Then the duties were paid in by them? Yes; they paid in between £300 and £400.
24. By Mr. Browne: How was the money paid in? In the usual way—by entries.
25. Is it the custom to allow money to be paid in for duty upon overtime goods missing from the stores? If a deficiency takes place in the bond in overtime goods it has to be accounted for, and then we take the duties due upon the overtime entry.
26. It is the custom then to receive these duties? It is.
27. By Mr. Powell: How long have you been warehouse-keeper? Since the 1st June last.
28. When you were jerker, and we obtained clearances for ships from the Collector, contrary to your opinion, do you think that there was anything absolutely wrong in the clearance itself, under the circumstances? No. In the instances I refer to the papers were not complete. All the forms of the department had not been properly complied with.
29. Since you have been in the Custom House you have, I believe, done almost every duty in the department? Yes.
30. Did you ever have charge of the drawback department? Yes, many years ago.
31. Did you ever find anything wrong in our office in the way in which we obtained drawbacks? No; only I must say that I did not like the system pursued.
32. But you always found us correct in our transactions? Yes.
33. Then your objection to the system has no reference to our mode of carrying it out? No.
34. From what you saw of the warehouse-keeper's books when you first took charge of them, do you think that, up to the time of your taking the office, any reliance was to be placed in them? I found a very great number of mistakes in them.
35. Are not mistakes turning up daily? Not daily; but mistakes are sometimes shewn to exist.
36. Do you believe that Mr. Nash kept the books correctly? I do.
37. But, notwithstanding his correctness, mistakes have turned up? Yes.
38. Did you generally find, in your experience in the office, that I was always correct in my transactions with the department? Yes; I always found you pretty correct.
39. Have you ever found anything very incorrect about our way of doing business? No; I cannot say that I have.
40. Have you ever seen anything about our mode of doing business to make you suspect that there was anything wrong in it? No.
41. By Mr. Duncan: What made you say that you disliked the system of drawbacks pursued, when you were drawback officer? Because, in former times, the landing waiter signed the papers without knowing whether the goods were shipped or not.
42. You know the landing waiter Russell, and the particular kind of man that he is? Yes.
43. Do you think that when he was drawback officer, he could see all the drawback goods that were shipped, and examine and weigh them where necessary? No; he could not. It would be impossible for any one man to do it.
44. Is he not rather a simple minded kind of a man? He is.
45. And a man that could be very easily imposed upon? I do not know anything about his private character.
46. I do not refer to his private character, but to his intellectual capacity; is he not a man of that particular kind of stamp that is led to believe anything? Well, I believe he is.
47. Was he at all fitted for the office of drawback clerk? No; not at all.
48. By Mr. Powell: You attribute the looseness that existed in the department to the want of care on the part of the officer, and not to an advantage being improperly taken of it by the Custom House Agents? That, I cannot say.
49. You do not think, however, that any advantage was taken of it by the agents? I do not pretend to say whether it was so or not.
50. Do you think that Mr. Chapman, when he was drawback clerk, could have done the whole of the duties of that office? No, I do not; nor could any one man.
51. Did you know that he was appointed to that office? I did not.
52. By Mr. Browne: Is there a deficiency in the sugar bonded by other firms, to the same extent as that found in the Sugar Company's sugars? Yes, nearly about the same.

- Mr. Thomas Fancourt.
14 Dec., 1859.
53. What is the per centage of deficiency? About seven or eight per cent., but this is merely a guess.
  54. Has the same thing occurred with respect to the other Sugar Company which is in existence? I cannot say. These returns have reference only to the one company,—the Colonial Sugar Refining Company.
  55. Mr. Robey's company was not in operation, I presume, at the time for which these returns were made out? It was not.
  56. By Mr. Metcalfe: When you say that the per centage of deficiency averages from seven to eight per cent., do you speak from your own actual knowledge? No; but I speak only from memory.
  57. Does this return specify the names of the vessels by which the sugars were received, and the weights of the respective cargoes? It does.
  58. Have you checked it by the entries in your books? I have.
  59. And you believe that all the entries are correct? I do.

Mr. John Lane called in and examined:—

- Mr. J. Lane.
14 Dec., 1859.
1. By Mr. Duncan: You are Clearing Clerk at the Customs? I am.
  2. Do you remember some time in May last bringing me a blank clearance to sign for a steamer? I do. It was on the 1st June.
  3. And I refused to sign it? Yes.
  4. It was not altogether a blank clearance, because some entries were made in it. There was, however, a long blank left to be filled up at the wharf? There was.
  5. Who prepared that document? It was prepared in Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell's office by some of their clerks.
  6. By Captain Ward: Who handed it to you? Either Mr. Powell or one of the clerks.
  7. But you cannot say which? I cannot.
  8. By Mr. Powell: Is this anything like the document I handed to you? It is. (Document produced by Mr. Powell.)
  9. Does it differ in any form from the kind of clearance that you are in the habit of giving now? Yes; the document I give now is a complete one, and contains no blank.
  10. With that exception it is the same as this? It is.
  11. And this form I now produce is the form of clearance now given? It is.
  12. You give out now a blank clearance with the Custom House seal attached, and this clearance is filled up at the wharf, and signed by the Customs Officer on duty there? The ordinary clearance is made out and declared to by the captain, and is then signed by the Collector. After this a blank clearance is sealed, but not signed, and is sent down to the officer on duty at the wharf; he fills up any additional goods that may be put on board, and then signs the document.
  13. You term this the additional clearance? We do.
  14. And it is for free goods only? Yes.
  15. It is sent down to the wharf with the Customs seal attached? Yes.
  16. The additional goods shipped are entered into the content, the officer takes the captain's declaration to this addition, and then signs the additional clearance? Yes.
  17. By Mr. Duncan: What was it I objected to? You objected to sign the clearance, because a blank was left in it to be filled up afterwards.
  18. By Captain Ward: Before Mr. Duncan's time, when a steamer was about to clear, what was the system pursued? The clearance and content were brought down with a vacant space left for any additional goods. The Collector then signed, and the space was afterwards filled in by the agent with whatever goods were put on board.
  19. To this the present Collector objected? Yes. He objected to having any space left, or to signing for goods that did not appear on the manifest at the time he signed. He then told me that an additional clearance should be made out for such goods as were not on the manifest when he signed.
  20. The usual plan then was to leave a blank to be filled in on the wharf? Yes.
  21. By Mr. Duncan: And that blank might be filled up with dutiable goods? Yes.
  22. It being passed at the Customs, but being filled in at the wharf, the Customs had no further control over it? No.
  23. By Captain Ward: In this case, however, Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, in presenting this document, did not depart from the custom sanctioned by the previous Collector? They did not.
  24. By Mr. Browne: Was there a particular officer appointed for clearing these steamers? No, it was done by whichever of the landing-waiters happened to be on duty at the time.
  25. Was he authorised to take the captain's declaration, and to pass the ship? I am not aware.
  26. Was he authorised to take it before Mr. Duncan's time? I am not aware. The declaration of the captain was always taken at the Custom House before the Collector signed.
  27. Then the landing-waiter really had no check upon the goods shipped? No.
  28. Then what did he do there? He merely saw the goods shipped.
  29. By Captain Ward: Then a vessel cleared at the Customs with only a portion of her cargo entered on the clearance? Yes, in the case of Melbourne steamers.
  30. And yet the master made a declaration that these were the contents of his vessel? Yes.
  31. By Mr. Browne: How did the Custom House get a record of the goods that were sent down on board afterwards? They sent in a paper in which the additional goods were filled in.
  32. Who sent this in? The agents of the vessel.

33. Did the other agents, who acted for the steamers, do their business in the same way as Mr. J. Lane. Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell? Yes, I believe so.
34. There was no difference in their mode of conducting this business? No; not to my knowledge. So far as I am aware that was the practice, though I give no opinion as to its correctness. 14 Dec., 1859.
35. When Mr. Duncan became Collector he put a stop to that system? He did.
36. Was the document you offered him for signature on the 1st June the first that you presented to him in that shape? It was.
37. And since then the custom has been put a stop to? It has.
38. Has any inconvenience to the shipping arisen in consequence of this alteration in the mode of clearing? I do not know of any.
39. By Mr. Duncan: The blank portion of the clearance might, under the old system, have been filled up with dutiable goods? No doubt it might.
40. And we had no control over the vessel to prevent it? No.
41. By Mr. Powell: Can you suppose it possible that dutiable goods would be entered upon the blank in the clearance after that document had left the Custom House? Their doing it would be quite possible, but I cannot see any reason for their doing so.
42. Could they have shipped dutiable goods on board without entries being passed for them? No. They might be written down on the clearance, but they could not be put on board.
43. They could not be obtained out of bond, without entries being passed for them in the usual way? No, certainly not.
44. And so they could not be put on board? No.
45. Then even if dutiable goods were entered on the manifest, would the revenue suffer by it? No.
46. In fact, no entry for dutiable goods would be taken at the Customs for shipment by a vessel the clearance of which had left your hands? No, they would not.
47. When this system of which Mr. Duncan complains was in force, was it not your practice to fill in the goods for which entries were passed up to the latest hour for taking entries? It was.
48. And when that was done you used to initial after the last entry—both on the content and the copy? Yes.
49. So that no goods could afterwards be inserted except after your initials, and you were thus able to see what additional goods were shipped; then on the following morning entries were passed for the free goods that appeared on the manifest, in addition to those checked off by you? That was the practice.
50. If any goods had been inserted on the clearance that were not afterwards entered at the Custom House you must have heard of it from Melbourne, or wherever else the steamer went? That I cannot say.
51. Was it not the practice also for the landing-waiter to countersign the clearance at the wharf? I do not know.
52. It was only a short time before the clearance was presented to you in blank that a change was made in the practice of clearing? The change has only been made within the last few months.
53. When the captain made a declaration only for such goods as then appeared in the manifest, did he not declare to the content to the best of his belief? That is the form I believe.
54. Since you have filled the position of clearing clerk have you ever found our firm throwing any impediment in the way of your duties? No.
55. Have you always found us correct? Yes. I must say that your business is much better conducted than that of the other agents.
56. When you were drawback clerk, have you ever found, when drawback entries came to you, that there were errors in the indorsement? I have.
57. And have I not called your attention to them, and had them sent back for correction? You have.
58. Do you remember one case of the "Moa," in which Mr. Godfrey was concerned, where I pointed the error out to you? No, I do not recollect, unless I had the papers to refer to.
59. You have found, however, that we have always put our papers before you in a correct manner? Yes. I always make a point of seeing that they are so.
60. We always gave you every assistance in our power? You did.
61. Has this system of blank or additional clearances led to any abuse? That I cannot say.
62. Is it not as easy, under this system of blank clearances, for parties to commit a fraud upon the revenue as it was under the old system? I cannot say.
63. By Captain Ward: Just explain to us what the system is that is now adopted? The system now pursued with regard to steamers is this.—The captain comes to the Custom House about one o'clock, when the goods passed for entry are put upon the manifest. The captain then makes a declaration, and the Collector signs it. Then a blank clearance is furnished and sealed with the Custom House seal. This is sent down to the landing-waiter at the wharf, who fills in whatever additional goods may be shipped. He takes the captain's declaration to it, and, signing it himself, sends it back to the Custom House.
64. Then there are in fact two clearances? Yes, one before the Collector at the office, and an additional one by the officer on the wharf.
65. Is there anything to prevent dutiable goods from being shipped after the vessel has been cleared by the Collector? Yes; the officer at the wharf would not enter them on the additional clearance, as his orders are to enter free goods only.
66. But the agent might do it? No; the landing-waiter would not permit it.
67. By Mr. Duncan: Would it not be possible to put dutiable goods into a steamer while going - Mr. J. Lane. going down the harbor, or from alongside of a ship, and thereby to cheat the revenue? Yes; quite possible.

- 14 Dec., 1859. 68. In the event of such goods being taken on board, would it not be possible to bring them back here from Melbourne? Yes.
69. And in that case, in the event of discovery, was there anything under the old system of clearance to bind the captain in any way in respect to such goods? No, there was not.
70. By Mr. Powell: Do you recollect clearing the steamer "Lord Worsley," for Auckland? I do.
71. Do you remember a large quantity of sugar being on board that vessel, and entered in her manifest, and that you struck out of the manifest by the Collector's orders? Yes, I do.
72. Did not the captain in that case, when he declared to the content, make a false declaration? Yes.
73. And was he not compelled to make it, by reason of the goods being struck out of the manifest when he knew them to be on board? If you will allow me, I will explain that matter. Before I went down to clear the ship a difficulty had arisen with the landing-waiter about some sugar shipped for drawback, which the officer had not seen. I went to the Collector, and asked him what I should do in the matter. He said he would not allow drawback on it, and ordered me to strike it out. In the haste of the moment, however, instead of striking it out for drawback, I made a mistake and struck it out of the manifest altogether.
74. Then if goods are on board ship, do you think you are justified in striking them out of the manifest? That I do not know. They were ordered to be struck out for drawback, and striking them altogether out of the manifest was my error. At all events, I had no warrant for their shipment.
75. Then as regards this supposed transshipment that Mr. Duncan has suggested—if any number of casks of spirits or tobacco were taken out of a ship as he says, what check have you got under the new system to prevent it? None that I see.
76. Then the present system would not at all interfere to prevent this kind of thing, any more than the old one? No.
77. Was the old system of clearance authorised by Colonel Gibbes? I am not aware.
78. And it was the regular system of the port? Yes, since I joined the department.

MONDAY, 19 DECEMBER, 1859.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ., | CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents; and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the examination of witnesses.

Mr. Duncan said: Before proceeding to call any witnesses, I would wish to state to the Board, that I have twice applied to the Secretary of the Treasury for the letters I alluded to on the last day of meeting; one being from Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, and the other the application of Mr. Metcalfe for the first remission, and alluded to in Colonel Gibbes' letter, handed in by me at the last meeting of the Board. The letter from Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, came to me enclosed with the other correspondence, and I returned it to Mr. Lane, who states that the correspondence has since passed through a variety of hands, and now this is wanting as well as the important letter of Mr. Metcalfe, and the drawback warrant indorsed by him.

Captain Ward: It has not been forwarded to us with the other correspondence.

Mr. Duncan: As to the letter of Mr. Metcalfe, the contents of it are to be very clearly ascertained from the Minute of the Executive Council, allowing the remission of duty.

Captain Ward: No doubt Mr. Metcalfe can furnish us with a copy of that letter.

Mr. Metcalfe: I have not a copy of it.

Mr. Duncan: Instead of these missing documents, however, I have received from the Treasury, a copy of a memorandum from Mr. Ross, in which that gentleman states, that I have, by a verbal notice, done away with an arrangement that has been in force for the last seven years, and with which no fault had been found. Now, I did not know that such a regulation as Mr. Ross speaks of existed, neither have I any record of it in my office. I do not, in fact, think that any such regulation exists in a written form, for no record of it is to be found. If then it was a mere verbal order of the late Collector, which I believe it was, I had quite as much right to alter it verbally, as he had to make it. That memorandum I now hand in. (Memorandum of Mr. Ross, dated 12 July, 1858, handed in.)

Mr. Duncan: A statement was made by Mr. Powell, that documents were now as freely taken out of the long room, as they were formerly. I confess that I was extremely astonished at hearing this statement, and I addressed a note on the subject, to the clerks occupying the long room; their answer I now produce. (Letter to W. A. Duncan, from clerks in the long room, of Custom House, and dated 19 December, 1859, handed in.)

Mr.

Mr. Duncan : I also hand in Mr. Powell's bond, and I think that when the Board read it, they will find that he has broken its conditions, and has not acted as an agent should do. (Bond of Mr. Powell handed in.) Mr. Metcalfe has, I believe, been acting illegally as a Custom House Agent for many years past, as he has been acting without having given a bond, at least it is not to be found in the Custom House, nor any record of its existence.

Mr. Metcalfe : I beg to say that I gave the regular bond as a Custom House Agent, in 1838.

Mr. Duncan : I shall have to day to give some evidence of the way in which Mr. Powell has been tampering with an officer of my department, and endeavouring to get an official document out of his possession. It is also said that he is endeavouring to get up some very strange evidence in this case. I cannot say all that I have heard on this subject, but there are rumours afloat of a most extraordinary character. I shall proceed to shew, by the evidence given by Mr. Powell before the Board that formerly sat upon this department, that upon that occasion, he deceived the Board in the evidence he then gave. It affects the former system of drawbacks, and the necessity that existed of some such change as that which I have made, and which has led to all this opposition. (Mr. Duncan quoted from the evidence given by Mr. Powell, before the Customs Board of Inquiry, page 57, question 40; page 58, question 41; and page 60, question 92.) Now to shew you the falsity of this statement, I produce a return, made up of Mr. Russell's book, of three days work done by him. This is taken from the book in which Mr. Russell kept the accounts of the drawbacks. I find from this, that one day's work, (the first there returned) that no less than 237 loads were shipped off in the one day by the drawback officer Russell; and amongst that quantity, there were no less than 3,832 bags of sugar. Russell certifies to having shipped and examined these 237 loads in one day, a thing that it was physically impossible for any man to do. (Return handed in with Warrants appended, of the shipment of 3,832 bags of sugar.) To shew also the facilities that Mr. Metcalfe had of doing business in the Custom House during the time of the late Collector, I produce two written orders made by the Collector, they being the only written orders that I was able to find in the office. Both these orders are in the hand writing of Mr. Metcalfe, signed by Colonel Gibbes (Orders handed in.)

Mr. Duncan then proceeded to call evidence.

Extracts from Mr. Powell's Evidence before the former Board, referred to by Mr. Duncan in Mr. Duncan's statement of this day, December 19, 1859.

- "40. You think the quantity of goods (by the "Louisa") should have excited suspicion?
 "Yes If it had been a box of tobacco or a case of cigars, he (Mr. Bramwell) might have signed the papers without further consideration.
 "41. Do you think the extraordinary amount of goods said to have been taken on board for one day could not have failed to draw his attention? It is an extraordinary amount of goods; I never knew such an amount of dutiable goods to be shipped in one day. I cannot conceive a person shipping so many goods to discharge his duty properly.
 "92 By Mr. Browne: Do you think it possible for one officer to have put all these goods on board in one day? This signature is to the document, but I never got such a day's work done; if I could get a quarter of the work done in one day I should think myself very fortunate. Sometimes I find a whole day is wasted with a few half tierces of tobacco; but perhaps a powerful stimulant was applied."

Extract from Mr. Manton's Statements before the former Board, p. 51.

- * * * "Under the circumstances this question will arise to me how Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. can justify themselves to clear vessels over hours when they say it is contrary to the regulations. I will say nothing about drawbacks, or the recently appointed party to superintend that duty, or hint at whose recommendation he was established."

Mr. Robert Sempill called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You are now clerk to Mr. Justice Dickinson? I am.
2. You were once a clerk in the Custom House? I was.
3. How long ago? In 1851.
4. You had occasion at that time to transact business with Mr. Metcalfe? Yes.
5. Just state to the Board what occurred between you and Metcalfe when in the execution of your duty? There was a difference between us soon after I went to the department with respect to the conduct of my particular part of the business.
6. Will you state how that difference arose? Mr. Metcalfe's clerks were in the habit of pressing me to dispose of their business in priority to that of other people. On all these occasions I refused to give them any priority, or to make any difference between them and other people.
7. After your refusing to do this for the clerks, did Mr. Metcalfe interfere? Yes. He brought his entries to me himself. I at that time kept the import journal, and had charge of the ships' manifests. On my refusing to give his clerks a priority, he brought his entries to me himself.
8. What did he say? On the first occasion when he came I refused to attend to him before I had disposed of the business of others who were there before him. On one particular

Mr. R. Sempill.

19 Dec., 1859.

Mr. R. Sempill. ticular occasion, however, subsequently, when I happened to have a great many manifests on my hands, two of his clerks came together with a number of entries, and put them on my desk, requesting me to attend to them at once. I refused to pass them, or to check them off the manifests until the entries presented before they came in—and for which other people were waiting—were disposed of.

19 Dec., 1859. 9. By Captain Ward: Are you alluding now to some particular occasion? I am.

10. What was the name of the vessel for which they wished to pass the entries? That I cannot say. They were no doubt for several vessels, for I had eight or nine ships on hand at the time.

11. By Mr. Duncan: And Mr. Metcalfe wished his business to have precedence over that of others? Yes, that was what he wanted, and he tried to get it for a long time. On this particular occasion, however, the difference came to a settlement, for when I would not pass the entries for his clerks they went down and informed him, and in a few minutes he came up himself. He said to his clerk, "Here, give me those entries." He snatched the papers from him, and throwing them down before me in a most rude manner, said, "Here, Mr. Sempill, check off these entries for me." This he said in a very excited and passionate manner. I said to him, "Mr. Metcalfe, these gentlemen about my desk came here before you, and I shall attend to them first. I shall take every one in his turn as he has come 'in before me.'" He said, "I do not care, Sir, you shall pass these for me now at once. Do 'it, Sir, at once.'" I replied, "I shall not do it until your turn comes." And with that he went away from my desk muttering threats, and immediately after his chief clerk came up and took away a ship's manifest from my desk, and took it down stairs. After business hours on that day, I wrote a complaint to the Collector of Mr. Metcalfe's conduct to me. I stated what had occurred, and asked the Collector for his determination in the matter. The Collector never answered that letter, but he personally told me what the consequence would be to myself if I persisted in making a complaint against Mr. Metcalfe.

12. By Captain Ward: What did he say those consequences would be? The Collector sent for me into his room next morning, and said to me, "I have received this letter from you, and I do not know what to call it, whether it is a mark of your dissatisfaction of the place you have got, or what." I replied to him, "It is not an expression of dissatisfaction, but a complaint that I make against Mr. Metcalfe, and I want your settlement of it." He then said, "I will receive no complaint against Mr. Metcalfe; he is a gentleman who has been a Custom House Agent for many years, and who has the full confidence of the Government and of the whole mercantile community. Therefore, if you say anything against him, you must be prepared to put up with the consequences." He afterwards added, "You are a young man who has only just come into the department, and I advise you to withdraw this letter." I said that I could not do that for I was in the right, and that I wanted the matter settled if only to guide my practice in future. The Collector said a great deal more to me in the same strain that I do not recollect, and the result was that I left the room without any settlement of the matter. However, from that time Mr. Metcalfe ceased to annoy me.

13. How long did you remain in the Customs after this? About four or five months.

14. Did you leave the department in consequence of that letter? Not wholly.

15. But partly? Yes. I thought the Collector had acted unjustly towards me, and when I subsequently made a representation to the Government stating that I wished to get out of the department, not for that but for other reasons, in reply the Colonial Secretary directed me, if I had any charges or representations to make that I must do so through the head of my department. For the reasons stated I declined to do this, or to bring forward any charges unless permitted to do so in my own way; and as it was insisted upon, and I refused, my services were dispensed with.

16. You were discharged? I first requested to be removed to another department, as I could not remain in the one I was in.

17. And you were not removed? I was not, and then I sent in a letter and said I resigned my place in the department, and then, after further correspondence, I received a letter from the Colonial Secretary to say I was discharged.

18. By Mr. Duncan: Independent of this matter between you and Mr. Metcalfe, did you observe that he had an extraordinary amount of influence in the department? No doubt he had.

19. From such knowledge of the department as you acquired whilst there, do you think that that influence was calculated to tend to the safety of the public revenue or the reverse? I have no doubt that the great influence he had there tended to the prejudice of the revenue. I stated to the Government in the letter I wrote to them on the occasion referred to, that if the irregularities were done away with that I found to exist (on the part of Mr. Metcalfe and others) that the revenue would be increased to the extent of £50,000 or £60,000 a year. I was only two or three months in the department when I saw that its business was carried on in a very bad state. It was this made me wish to be removed. I felt considerable uneasiness at being there, because there were so many persons mixed up in what I perceived to be wrong, and I desired to get away from it.

20. By Captain Ward: In your letter to the Colonial Secretary did you give that as your reason for desiring to be removed? No; I did not specially do so, for I did not desire to make charges that I knew I could have made against some persons. I said there were irregularities which gave me great anxiety, and I was called upon to specify any charges I had to make through the Collector, and that was a course that I was not desirous of taking.

21. But you inserted charges in your letter to the Colonial Secretary? I said that there were very great irregularities existing in the department.

22. And you were called upon to make good this charge? I was.

23. And you declined? Yes; unless permitted to make charges exactly in the way I thought proper. 24.

24. And you were then dismissed? The Colonial Secretary in his letter said I was discharged. Mr. R. Sempill.
25. By Mr. Metcalfe: You had to pass the free entries? Yes, and entries for dutiable goods. There were ad valorem duties at that date. 19 Dec., 1859.
26. But you did not receive the duties? No; but I passed the entries,—I checked them from the manifest, and entered them in the import journal.
27. Did you ever find any of my entries wrong? I do not know how you mean.
28. I mean as regards the amount of duty? It was no part of my duty to calculate it. That was done by another clerk, and I merely marked the entry off from the manifest.
29. Will you inform the Board how my influence tended to the prejudice of the revenue? I had my own opinion on that point.
30. How was it formed? Amongst the clerks in the office it was generally spoken of, that Mr. Metcalfe could do as he liked in the department.
31. Then it was merely formed on hearsay? Exactly, and upon solid facts.
32. Can you tell the Board of any one case in which the revenue has suffered by means of my influence? I cannot at this distance of time remember any one particular case that I knew of at the time, though there were many.
33. If you heard of them, why did you not report them to the Collector or the Government? Because it was dangerous to say anything there. I had already experienced this, and I wanted to get out of the concern as quickly as I could.
34. You say that I wanted you to put the business of other persons on one side in order to do mine? Yes.
35. Did you not know that I represented a great number of firms? You did.
36. And considering that I represented two-thirds of the merchants of Sydney ought I not to have some precedence in getting their entries passed? No, you had no such right.
37. But ought not all the entries I brought to be passed before others? Yes, when those who came to the desk before you had been disposed of, but not till then.
38. You know Mr. Llewellyn? I do.
39. Have you had any conversation with him about this matter? Nothing beyond this:—Mr. Llewellyn and I have been intimate for fifteen years, but I had not seen him for some months, when the other day he called at my office. He told me of this Inquiry, of which I had not then heard, and informed me that the Collector had heard that I had had some difference with Mr. Metcalfe relative to the business of the office, and wished to know whether I would give evidence respecting it before the Board. I said I would, and that was all the conversation that occurred. I wish to add that in addition to the irregularity I charged against you, and that I have already mentioned, it was stated in my letter of complaint to the Collector, that after I had refused to pass your entries one of your clerks came to my desk and took away the manifest of a ship I was then discharging; that I called to him not to do so, but he took no notice of me; that I afterwards sent the messenger down to your room for it twice, and the answer you sent back was, that you would return it when you had done with it.
40. I remember nothing about that? I made the charge at the time, because of the great inconvenience it caused. There were a great number of persons waiting to pass entries, and they could not do so whilst you had the manifest away. This caused them considerable delay, and must have greatly prejudiced their business. (Witness here handed in the original draft of the letter of complaint against Mr. Metcalfe, directed to the Collector of Customs, and dated 5 February, 1851.)
41. By Captain Ward: The letter you now hand in is the one upon which you complain the late Collector did not support you? It is—the original draft.
- Mr. Metcalfe:* The Collector thought it of so little importance that I have never seen it.
42. By Mr. Duncan: Were you cautioned not to quarrel with Mr. Metcalfe if you wished to remain in the department? I was.
43. By Mr. Metcalfe: Who warned you? I cannot recollect. There were so many then in the department who have since left that it is hard to remember names of the persons who warned me.
44. By Mr. Browne: At that time when Mr. Metcalfe pressed you to pass his entries were there many arrivals at the port—was the Custom House pressed with business? Yes; business was on the increase. I know that at that time I had eight or nine manifests of English ships on hand.
45. And the ad valorem duties were then in operation? They were.

Mr. John Kidd called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Duncan: You are an officer in the Customs? Yes; I am a landing-waiter. Mr. J. Kidd.
2. Do you remember some time ago being offered a bribe by a merchant's clerk? I do. 19 Dec., 1859.
3. Will you state the circumstances? So far as I can remember it was some four or five years back. The occurrence took place on a Saturday. The vessel had sailed; it was, I think, the "Mary Grant," and I think I must have been landing-waiter for her. The papers were handed me to sign, and I found that the ship had sailed. It was a drawback for two hundred casks of bottled beer that was claimed. I said I could not sign the warrants, as I had not seen the goods shipped, and as I knew that the vessel had sailed. Mr. Metcalfe's clerk came to me in the first instance with the warrants, and requested me to sign them; but I declined to do so. He afterwards came back to me with Mr. Powell's compliments, and would I be good enough to sign the warrants as the goods had been shipped.

- Mr. J. Kidd. I refused to do so. A clerk in the office of Mr. Clarke, the American merchant, then came to me and asked me if I would sign. He said it was not Mr. Metcalfe's fault that the goods had gone on board so late as not to have been inspected by the landing-waiter, but his in not having attended to them in time. He pressed me very hard to sign, saying that he would lose his situation if by his neglect this loss should occur to his principals. I declined to sign the papers, but at the same time I would see what was to be done in the matter, and would take the documents with me to the Custom House. He walked down with me, and on the road he repeated that he should lose his situation if the papers were not signed, and at last said, "If you will only sign them for me I will make you a handsome present." I at once turned round to him, and told him that, after his saying such a thing as that to me, I could hold no further conversation with him, and I left him. I immediately went down to the Custom House, and at once informed Mr. Powell of what had occurred.
- 19 Dec., 1859. 4. By Captain Ward: Was this gentleman in any way connected with Messrs Metcalfe and Powell? No; he was clerk to the merchant who was shipping the goods.
5. By Mr. Duncan: But Mr. Powell pressed you to sign the papers? He did. I went down to him, and told him of the insult I had been offered, and he expressed himself extremely sorry that any person should have so outraged my feelings; but before I left him he again pressed me to sign the papers.
6. Did they ultimately get the drawback? They did; Mr. Powell told me not very long ago that they got it.
7. Do you remember the date of this shipment? Yes, it was in August, 1855.
8. Do you think you would recollect the documents connected with the transaction? Yes, I am almost sure I should if I saw them.
9. Could you remember the handwriting? Yes. I am almost certain they are in the handwriting of Mr. Harris.
10. And you think you would remember them? Yes, I think so.
11. Is this document (Warrant handed to witness) in Mr. Harris' handwriting? It is.
12. Is it anything like the document you were asked to sign? It is, and I am almost sure that it is the same; but, after this lapse of time, I cannot of course speak positively to the document. The circumstances of the case, however, are extremely vivid in my mind.
13. By Mr. Browne: Was there not a rule in force that the landing-waiters were expected to sign documents for goods they had never seen: I mean a rule promulgated by Mr. Barnes when he was here? I think the landing-waiters used to do so, generally speaking; but they would not sign for goods shipped at any wharf except the one they were stationed at.
14. Did you not give evidence before the late Board of Inquiry into the Customs Department that you were the only landing-waiter who refused to sign warrants for goods that you had not seen shipped? I think I did say so; but I should have qualified that statement by saying that I have done this myself sometimes. I generally refused to sign where I had not seen the goods shipped, and that is what I should have said. I refused to sign for goods I had not seen shipped unless I had some clear knowledge that they had been so, or was satisfied from other causes of the correctness of what I signed to.
15. Would not other landing-waiters, in accordance with Mr. Barnes' regulation, have signed this warrant that was presented to you, and that you refused to sign without seeing the goods shipped? Of course I cannot say what others would have done, I can only speak for myself.
16. Was it not an ordinary thing at that time to go up to the first landing-waiter they met, and get him to sign the drawback warrant for goods he had never seen? It may have been with others, but I never did it for drawback.
17. By Mr. Duncan: You are not quite certain that this is the warrant you have alluded to, but you think it is? I do.
18. I believe it is necessary for the master or mate of the vessel in which the goods are shipped to sign the warrant as well as the landing-waiter? It is.
19. And the document is not available until it is so signed? No.
20. Now I ask you to look at these three drawback warrants, on each of which the money has been paid, and say whether they are properly indorsed? No. The proper indorsement is that the captain or mate certifies that he has received on board such or such things, and signs his name; then the landing-waiter's signature comes under that of the officer of the ship.
21. These are not signed in any way by the officers of the vessel in which the goods were shipped? No.
22. Consequently they contain in the body of them a false statement by the agents, Messrs. Metcalfe and Co.? No; I cannot say that.
23. Have they not acted improperly as Custom House Agents, in obtaining drawbacks on such documents as these? Only in so far as they are not indorsed. (Series of warrants of shipments per "Mary Grant" put in.)
24. By Captain Ward: Is there anything on the face of these warrants to shew that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell have acted improperly? No, not on the face of them, but there is on the back of them. They want the indorsement of the officer of the ship on the back of the warrant.
25. By Mr. Duncan: From their knowledge of the regulations of the department, should they not have known that the warrant was in an unfinished state, inasmuch as there should have been indorsed upon it the receipt for the goods of the captain or officer of the ship? Most decidedly so.
26. However, this you can say, that the documents were put in by Metcalfe and Powell in an incomplete state? Yes.
27. Did not Mr. Powell, some days before the sitting of the Board, endeavour to obtain an official official document out of your possession? Yes. He sent one of his clerks to me for an official document signed by himself and addressed to you, and bearing a minute in your handwriting relative to the discharging of the sugar by the "Virginia." As I was the landing-waiter on duty, this document, with the Collector's memorandum, was sent down to me, and about half-an-hour after I received it, Mr. Powell's clerk came to me, and asked if I would restore that letter. The request was such a very extraordinary one that it at once aroused my suspicion, and I of course declined to accede to it. I sent word back that I should be happy to do anything I could to oblige Mr. Powell, but that it was inconsistent with my duty to comply with his request. I have since retained the document in my possession.

Mr. J. Kidd.

19 Dec., 1859.

28. As Mr. Powell wishes for the document I now produce it. Is this the letter you allude to? It is. (Letter of Mr. Powell of the 21st November, 1859, put in.)

29. This is the letter which you declined to give up? It is.

30. After your sending him back that message, did he press you further on the point? Yes, he asked me to let him have a copy of it, but as he was so pressing in the matter it made me suspicious as to what his motives were; and so, under the circumstances, I thought it better not to let him have it.

31. By Mr. Powell: Can you tell us how many landing-waiters there were at the Circular Quay at this time? Two.

32. Was it the practice of landing-waiters to interfere with each other's duties—being stationed at different wharfs? I cannot give a reply to that.

33. If you had been stationed at Campbell's Wharf, and another officer had been stationed on the Circular Quay, would the officer on the Quay have given receipts for drawback goods shipped at Campbell's Wharf? I cannot say what others would have done; I should not have done it. (The Board stated that they were satisfied from the evidence given before them during a previous inquiry, that it was the custom of landing-waiters to sign for anything they were asked.) Note by witness: It should be understood that the export officer had previously signed the back of the warrant specifying the shipment of the goods previous to presenting the document to the landing-waiter who then indorsed it.

34. I find that the whole of these papers are signed by Mr. Rolleston, who was an officer at that Quay—now I would ask you whether you think it likely, that knowing, as everybody did, your custom of refusing to sign for what you had not seen shipped, you would have been asked to sign these papers? Yes; I am quite sure I was asked to sign, but whether that particular paper or not I will not say.

35. Were you stationed at the Circular Quay? No; at Macnamara's Wharf.

36. And the vessel you allude to loaded at Campbell's Wharf? I do not recollect.

37. And you swear you were asked to sign for two hundred casks of bottled beer shipped in her? I am prepared to do so, more or less.

38. Are these the papers you refer to? I have already said that I am not sure upon that point.

39. Has it always been the practice to obtain the signature of the officer of the ship on the back of the drawback warrants? It ought to be there, or the warrants would not be correct.

40. What I ask you is, whether it has been the practice to obtain these signatures? The regulation is and was that, having received the goods on board, the captain or mate should certify on the back of the warrant that he had done so.

41. I am not speaking of the regulation, but of the practice: let me ask if you have always insisted upon having the signature of the officer of the ship before you placed your own at the back of the drawback warrant? I may have omitted doing so, but I do not think I have.

42. Was there any order from the Collector to the effect that the signature of an officer of the ship was required? As to that I cannot say, because I had so very little intercourse with the officer that I might not have heard of the order.

43. Did you in practice get such a receipt? Yes, I did.

44. Was it the practice of the other officers of the department? I do not know about them; I know it was mine.

45. Do you not happen to know that this regulation requiring the signature of the captain or mate to a drawback warrant has only been in force within the last ten months? No, I do not; the practice has been in force since I have been in the department—now more than twenty years.

46. And that it was made in accordance with one of the recommendations of this Board on the occasion of its former sitting? No. I think it was always in force, though it might have been set aside by some parties.

47. As a matter of fact, is there one warrant out of five hundred of those in the Custom House that bears the mate's receipt? I cannot say; but they should have it.

48. With reference to the Company's sugar, I would wish to ask you whether it is the custom to weigh the Company's sugar exported? I have not been in the habit of having any. I am not stationed at a wharf where it is shipped.

49. You were at one time stationed at the Flour Company's Wharf? I was.

50. You shipped the Company's sugar there? Yes.

51. Did you weigh it? Yes. When there was any quantity of it I generally applied for a tide-waiter to do so, and I got the weights from him. This was for raw sugar only.

52. But I am speaking of Company's refined sugar,—that in uniform sized bags? I cannot remember having shipped any.

53. Just try and remember whether you have or not; I have seen some very heavy shipments of yours,—of 80, 90, and 100 tons in a parcel? At what wharf?

54. At the Flour Company's Wharf? I do not recollect having done so; but I know that whenever

- Mr. J. Kidd. whenever any large quantity came down I always applied for a tide-waiter to weigh it, and then by his accounts of the weights I indorsed the drawback warrant.
- 19 Dec., 1859. 55. Do you know the Sugar Company's tickets sent down to the Customs Officer with each load of sugar? Yes, I do for refined sugar.
56. Did you take them as representing the weight of sugar sent down? Yes, I did. It was the rule to do so.
57. You were in the habit of taking them, each ticket representing the weight of the load with which it was sent? Yes, it was understood that the landing-waiters were to do so.
58. From whom did you understand this? From the Officer of the Department.
59. Then, when the tickets were sent down, one was handed to you with each load of sugar? Yes.
60. And when the whole quantity was sent down you added up the quantities mentioned in the tickets, and signed for the amount? Yes.
61. With reference to the bribe that was offered to you, I have nothing to do with that? No; but I told you of its being offered to me by Mr. Clarke's young man, almost immediately after it occurred.
62. And I regretted that you should have been so outraged? Yes.
63. Do you think that I am a kind of person to insult you in such a way? No, I do not.
64. Your memory seems so indistinct in relation to the documents that it is no use to ask you any questions concerning them? Well, I am not sure that this is the document that was handed to me.
65. Are you sure that it is in Mr. Harris' handwriting? I am.
66. Because I think I can shew that they are not? It is my impression that it is Mr. Harris' writing.
67. How long is it since you were stationed at the Flour Company's Wharf? I have not been stationed there for some considerable time past.
68. And you have had nothing to do with the shipment of sugar lately? No.
69. You are now at an import wharf? Yes.
70. Coming now to the letter that you say I sent to get back; was there anything about this document that made you regard it with suspicion? No; but the circumstance of your asking for it back again made me think that there was something of more importance about it than I could then see. I suspected that there was something more in it than I could comprehend, as you seemed so anxious about getting it back, and sending your clerk to me for it. If you had come down yourself and asked for it I should have thought nothing about it, and I should have handed it over to you at once; but your sending your clerk for it so very soon after having despatched it to the Collector, certainly struck me as strange.
71. Did I not tell you that if you had any hesitation about giving it I would get an order from the Board for a copy? You did, or something to that effect.
72. About this bribing matter; did you volunteer to the Collector to give this evidence? I did.
73. To the Collector directly? Yes.
74. Was it given at the instigation of any one? No, of no one on earth. I felt that it was a duty I owed to the head of my department to make him acquainted with these matters. On Saturday last I told you that such cases had occurred, and that I had to inform you as a friend that if I was asked about them I must tell the truth.
75. Did I attempt to prevent your taking that course? No; you denied all knowledge of the matter at first, but afterwards when I called circumstances to your mind you referred to your books and remembered all about it.
76. By Mr. Duncan: Was that regulation about receiving Company's sugar without weighing in force before I took charge of the department? Yes, long before, for refined sugar only.
77. You took the weight from their tickets? Yes, and added up the amount of the tickets and signed for it.
78. You never received any directions from me to receive any merchants' tickets for weight of sugar? Never.
79. Latterly you have had very little to do with exports? No, I am at an import wharf.
80. By Captain Ward: Why was it that you did not report this case of attempted bribery? I had my reasons for not doing so. In the first place I was not a favorite with Colonel Gibbes and others in the department; and because upon several other occasions I have reported cases to him and I have been very badly treated.
81. Then you did not report it because you thought you would not be supported? I am certain I should not have been. I should have been sure to have got the worst of it if I had reported it.
82. At the time you were engaged in the exporting of sugar, did you allow to other parties the same privilege that you gave to the Sugar Company? I do not think I did.
83. But you always allowed it to the Company? We did.
84. Have you latterly, as landing-waiter, received any orders from the present Collector as to the shipment of sugars for drawback? Yes; he has told me himself verbally that his injunctions were most imperative upon all officers shipping for drawback to take care and see that all goods were weighed.
85. By Mr. Powell: You have received, then, an imperative order from the present Collector that all sugars and goods should be weighed before shipment for drawback? Yes; what Mr. Duncan said was that all goods were to be weighed or measured, but that with regard to tea and sugar he was particularly anxious that attention should be paid to them, and that they should be carefully weighed.
86. By Mr. Duncan: I never made any distinction between shipments by one party and shipments by another? No, certainly not.

A List of shipments during the temporary appointment of Mr Chapman as Drawback Officer, for which refund of duties has been refused.

Mr. J. Kidd.
19 Dec., 1859.

NAME OF SHIP.	DATE OF CLEARANCE.	DESCRIPTION OF GOODS.
Kate Kearney.....	8 July, 1859 ...	{ Half-ton refined sugar. Half-ton bastards sugar.
Spray .....	8 ditto ...	{ 3 tons sugar. 5 tons refined sugar.
Lord Worsley .....	9 ditto ...	{ 5 tons bastards sugar.

William Cathcart Still, Esq., called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You are Landing Surveyor at this port ? I am.
2. How long have you been in the department ? Nearly three years.
3. When you joined it the department was in a very disorganized state ? It was.
4. What is your opinion of its recent working as compared with when you first joined ? It is greatly improved.
5. Will you state where the Sugar Company bonded their sugar about that time ? It was bonded at Campbell's Store.
6. Did they bond in any other store than Campbell's ? No ; it was bonded in that part of Campbell's Store, on Campbell's Wharf, known as Knox's Bond.
7. Who was the locker in charge of that bond ? Mr. Anderson had charge of Campbell's bond, but there was no one to attend to the other store where the Sugar Company's sugar was bonded.
8. Mr. Anderson I suppose had charge of that store also ? Yes, he was supposed to be in charge of it ; but I need not say that it was impossible for the one locker to look properly after the two stores.
9. Was it the practice to weigh the sugar of the Company out of bond ? When I took charge of the Warehouse branch of the department, it was impossible to weigh the sugar at Knox's Bond—the locker's time being entirely taken up at Campbell's.
10. Then, in point of fact, it was not weighed ? It was not.
11. Did you make any alteration in this respect ? Yes ; it struck me at once that this was wrong, and, when my appointment as Inspector of Warehouses was confirmed, I at once made certain recommendations to the Ministry, relative to the appointment of additional lockers. They were appointed, and one was put in charge of Knox's Store.
12. When was this done ? I think in the month of May or June, 1857. My appointment as Inspector of Warehouses was confirmed in April, and it took me about a month to make myself acquainted with the department, to send in my recommendations, and to get the necessary officers.
13. You are aware that a considerable deficiency was found in the Sugar Company's Store ? Yes ; I perceive, by the figures in the books of the department, that there is a deficiency charged against that bond.
14. You have had some experience in this matter—now do you think that this large amount of deficiency shewn against the Company could have occurred from waste ?
Mr. Powell objected to this question as not affecting Mr. Metcalfe or himself.
Captain Ward thought that the case of the Sugar Company's deficiency should not now be gone into, as the parties charged were not then before the Board. Even if it could be shewn that the deficiency had occurred by illegally taking the sugar out of bond, that would in no way affect the position of Messrs Metcalfe and Co.
Mr. Duncan referred to the Act of Parliament, regulating the duties of Custom House Agents ; and submitted that the whole of the correspondence connected with the deficiency, having been conducted by Mr. Metcalfe, that gentleman had made himself liable.
Mr. Metcalfe : I wrote as the agent of the Sugar Company, and so signed myself.
Mr. Ross : The Sugar Company take all the responsibility of Mr. Metcalfe's communication.
- Captain Ward* : If Mr. Duncan can shew that Mr. Metcalfe knowingly made any misrepresentation for the purpose of defrauding the revenue, then the evidence will be admissible.
- Mr. Duncan* : In his letter, handed in by me to the Board, Mr. Metcalfe states that the waste was more than 3 per cent. ; now, if I can shew it was not, surely that is something to his prejudice.
- Captain Ward* : That statement was made on behalf of the Sugar Company, and that Company have accepted the responsibility of the statement ; therefore, we cannot see that Mr. Metcalfe is bound by it, he only making it in pursuance of instructions.
15. You know something about the former as well as about the present system of drawbacks ? I do.
16. Do you think the system formally pursued, afforded very great facilities for fraud ? It did.
17. Will you state how you arrived at that conclusion ? The goods were frequently shipped without anybody connected with the Customs department knowing anything about them, whilst

- W. C. Still, Esq.
 19 Dec., 1859.
- whilst the necessary documents seem to have been signed by the landing-waiters entirely as a matter of course, without any reference whatever to the actual weights or quantities of the goods shipped. The indorsement on the drawback warrant was merely a copy of the shipping note, and was not made after actually ascertaining the weights or quantities of the goods. It was done entirely as a matter of course.
18. You know Mr. Russell, the landing-waiter? I do.
19. He was at one time drawback officer? He was.
20. Do you consider that he was suited for that office? I did not consider him a very efficient officer.
21. Do you think that he could attend to the shipment of 250 loads in a day? He could not do it, nor could any one else.
22. Do you not think that there was frightful danger to the revenue from such a state of things as this (Mr. Duncan read from document handed in on previous day, a list of shipments certified to have been made by Mr. Russell, on 11 December, 1858, and 6 January, 1859.)? No one man could have shipped all those goods in one day.
23. Do you think that with such a system as that, where such a large quantity of goods had to be shipped in one day, by one officer, the revenue could be safe? It would be impossible to check the exports—utterly impossible. You might as well have done away with the officer altogether, as expect him to do such an impossibility.
24. Under such a system, the shipping officer was a mere name without being of any real effect, as far as the protection of the revenue was concerned? Yes; he was, in many instances, really nothing more than an imaginary person.
25. You are aware that a different system is now adopted? I am.
26. Will you describe to the Board the change that has been made? The system at present is, that instead of one person being appointed as drawback officer, the whole of the landing-waiters act as export officers. When the drawback goods come down to the wharf for shipment, the officer on duty takes possession of them, and weighs them before they are shipped, and then indorses the warrant in accordance with the ascertained weight.
27. The landing-waiters, in fact, now act as searchers? Exactly.
28. Have you not had very great difficulties thrown in the way of enforcing the new regulations? I have. There appears to be some prejudice against them on the part of a portion of the community. They complain that the change is for the worse and not for the better.
29. Is that your opinion? No; I entirely differ from them in that respect.
30. Do you know, of your own knowledge, that considerable difficulties have been thrown in the way, as regards weighing the Sugar Company's sugar? I believe there have been.
31. Have you not been called upon to interfere?—
Mr. Powell objected to this line of examination, as it affected the Sugar Company, and not Metcalfe and Co.
- The Board thought this was going into the charge against the Sugar Company.
32. You have read a letter from Mr. Powell to Mr. Ross, on which I asked you to make some comments? Yes, I recollect it perfectly.
- Mr. Duncan* pointed out to the Board, that in that letter, Mr. Powell fully identified himself with the whole of the business whereby these obstacles had been thrown in the way of carrying out the regulations of the department; and that such acts affects Mr. Powell's position as a Custom House Agent.
- The Board thought it a matter that affected the Sugar Company.
- Mr. Ross*, on behalf of the Sugar Company, disclaimed any responsibility that might attach to Mr. Powell's letter.
- Mr. Duncan*, after the ruling of the Board, would not pursue this matter, as the correspondence would speak for itself.
33. Do you remember, subsequently to this letter, an occasion upon which Mr. Powell burst into my room, after the messenger had been told by me to inform Mr. Powell that I could not see him? I do.
34. Did he not insist upon forcing his conversation upon me at a time when I was engaged speaking upon business with another gentleman? Yes. He mixed in the conversation, and you requested him to leave the room. After some time and some remarks had been made, he went out.
35. Do you not think that the irregularities of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell has been the cause of these deficiencies in the Sugar Company's Bond?—
- Mr. Powell* objected to this question. The Board had already ruled that his firm had nothing to do with these deficiencies.
36. By Captain Ward: Do you not think that the deficiencies arose rather from the laxity of the system pursued previous to your being appointed? Possibly.
37. The whole of the Custom House Agents did their work in much the same kind of way as Mr. Metcalfe? There was not much difference between them.
- Mr. Duncan* said: I admit that the business of the department was carried on under circumstances of great laxity, and that to some extent Messrs. Metcalfe and Co. were the creatures of those circumstances; but what I complain of is, that they have thrown obstacles in the way of my reforming the department as thoroughly as I wish, and either I must put down this opposition or must resign my post. In making good my charge against them I confess my utter inability to separate the charge against them from that of the charge against the Sugar Company.
38. By Mr. Duncan: Nearly all my out-door orders were given through you? They were.
39. Have you ever seen the slightest indication on my part of a desire to favor one firm more than another? Certainly, I have not.
40. Do you believe, from all you have seen of me, that I am not at all the man to extend favor favor to one firm more than to another? You are not. I do not think you would favor anybody. W. C. Still, Esq.

41. Has any case ever come to your knowledge in which I have done so? I am aware of no case in which you have displayed favor to any one. 13 Dec., 1863.

42. By Mr. Browne: How are the rules of the department promulgated—are they written rules or merely verbal orders? Sometimes the one and sometimes the other.

43. Have you written rules for the guidance of the officers in relation to their duty as regards drawback goods—rules, for instance, that would be applicable to this particular case of the Sugar Company? We have; and I can, if the Board desires it, shew them a copy of the rules I drew up on the subject.

44. Are they promulgated with directions to the officers to act on them? Yes; they are written by the Collector himself, or else copied by me from memoranda made by him.

45. And are given to the officers in the shape of definite orders? Yes. I produce a copy of the rules respecting drawbacks. (Regulations produced.) These were written out by me, and they lie open on my desk to be read when the officers come every morning to sign the "Attendance Book."

46. By Mr. Duncan: In addition to these there are printed regulations issued for the guidance of each branch of the service? There are.

47. That have been drawn up and printed by me since I have been here? Such is the case.

48. In the cross-examination of Mr. Russell by Mr. Powell the latter tried to elicit from the witness, and partly succeeded, an answer to the effect that there was still some partiality shewn to the Sugar Company, in the way of shipping sugar for drawback—is that the case? The only difference between the Sugar Company and other exporters is, that we do not weigh the whole of their sugar but only a sufficient number of bags to enable us to be satisfied that the weight of the whole tallies with the amount indorsed on the warrant.

49. Are you not aware that it is impossible to weigh some of the Company's sugar, on account of its being packed in large casks? Yes, that has been a difficulty. We have no means on the wharf of weighing these casks. It is the wharfinger's duty to have all necessary weights upon the wharf; but, though they have been applied to, they have failed to supply them in all cases. The department has since taken steps to remove this difficulty for the future at some of the stations.

50. By Mr. Browne: Was this order with respect to drawback goods issued previous to the question arising upon the refusal of the Collector to pay drawback upon the goods alluded to in this correspondence of the Sugar Company? I cannot say positively without reference to the papers.

51. At what date did that order come into force? In July.

52. What orders were in force previous to that? The same orders to weigh, &c., only verbal ones.

EXTRACTS referred to in Mr. Duncan's Statement.

NEW SOUTH WALES CUSTOMS ACT 9 VIC., No. 15.

"68. And be it enacted, that upon the entry and landing of any goods to be warehoused, the proper officer of the Customs shall take a particular account of the same, and shall mark the contents on each package, and shall enter the same in a book to be kept for that purpose; and no goods which have been so warehoused shall be taken or delivered from the warehouse except upon due entry and under the care of the proper officer for exportation, or upon due entry and payment of the duty for home use."

"73. And whereas spirits and tobacco, and certain other goods are liable in time to fluctuation of quantity by the effect of the atmosphere, or other natural causes: Be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Collector or other principal officer, or for the proprietor or importer of any such goods as aforesaid to require the same to be re-gauged, re-measured, or re-weighed, at the time when the same shall be declared from the said warehouse, and the duties respectively payable thereon shall be paid according to the quantities ascertained upon such re-gauging, re-measuring, or reweighing, unless it shall be mutually agreed by and between the said parties, that the said duties shall be paid on the quantities originally entered."

19 VICT., No. 14.

"5. There shall be allowed upon the exportation of refined sugar made in this colony, the amounts of drawback following, &c."

"Provided that such sugars respectively shall be shipped under the care of the proper officer of Customs, in order that the shipment and exportation thereof may be duly certified on the debenture."

9 VICT., No. 15.

"59. And be it enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any person to act as agent for transacting any business at the Custom House which shall relate to the entry or clearance of any ship, or of any goods, or of any baggage, unless authorised to do so by license of the Collector or other principal officer of Her Majesty's Customs, who is hereby empowered to require bond to be given by every person to whom such license shall be granted, with one sufficient surety, in the sum of two hundred pounds for the faithful and honest conduct of such person, and of his clerks acting for him; and if any person shall act as such agent, not being so licensed, or if any person shall be in partnership in such agency with any person not so licensed, such person shall, in either case for every such offence, forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds, &c."

"60. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Collector or other principal officer of Customs, with the concurrence of the Governor of the said Colony, by any order under his hand to revoke any such license, and that after a copy of such order shall have been delivered to any such licensed person or his clerk, or left at his usual place of abode or business, such license shall be void."

TUESDAY,

TUESDAY, 20 DECEMBER, 1859.

Present :—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, Esq.,

CAPTAIN McLERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents; and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the examination of witnesses.

William Cathcart Still, Esq., called in and further examined :—

W. C. Still,
Esq.

20 Dec., 1859.

1. By Mr. Duncan: Are these Regulations now produced those which were drawn up and issued by me, and printed by authority of the Government? Yes. They point out the duties to be performed in the different branches of the office. (Printed Custom House Regulations handed in.)

2. By Mr. Browne: At what date were they issued? They were issued from time to time to the different branches of the department as they were printed.

3. By Mr. Powell: In part of the evidence you gave yesterday you state, in reference to the system pursued before your time, that goods were shipped without the Customs officers knowing anything about them; is that the fact? I believe it to have been the case in very many instances.

4. How could the drawback have been obtained if the office knew nothing about the shipment of the goods on which the drawback was claimed? I judge that such was the case from the experience I have gained since I took charge of the landing branch.

5. But I wish to know how the shipper could obtain the drawback without the officer knowing anything about the goods being shipped? It was obtained.

6. The drawback warrant had to bear the indorsement of the officer? Yes; but it did not follow that because he indorsed the warrant that he saw the goods.

7. By Captain Ward: It was necessary that the signature of the proper officer should be obtained to the drawback warrant? Yes; but the officers used to sign as a mere matter of form.

8. Your impression is then that the signature of the officer to the document, on which the refund of duty was obtained, was affixed as a mere matter of form? Yes. The goods were put on board without any inspection by the landing-waiter, and then the warrants were sent to him to sign, and he signed them as a mere matter of form.

9. That is, in other words, that these officers grossly neglected their duties? I consider so.

10. By Mr. Powell: But the debenture for payment would not be issued until the signature of the landing-waiter to the drawback warrant had been first obtained? No.

11. You have now, in your opinion, instituted a better system? Yes, far better.

12. Are not the evils of the late system attributable to the careless manner in which it was carried out by your predecessor in office, rather than to anything particularly wrong in the system itself? That I wish to say nothing about; I only give an account of the system as it was actually worked.

13. If the signature of the officer was given as a mere matter of form was he not responsible for signing in such a manner? I give no opinion upon that point. I merely state the facts that have come to my knowledge.

14. Do you consider yourself responsible for these signatures now? I do. I consider myself responsible for passing over any neglect of duty that occurs in my branch.

15. Then, if the landing-waiter now gives his signature as a matter of form, you look upon yourself as being responsible? Yes, in some degree.

16. Previous to Mr. Russell's appointment as drawback officer, did not the searchers always certify to the shipment of drawback goods? Yes, they were supposed to do so.

17. And is not the same system followed now,—do not the searchers sign for drawback goods? Yes; but not on the same system as formerly.

18. I want a plain answer, yes or no; do not the searchers sign for drawback goods now, the same as they did previously? If I answer yes I shall not convey a correct impression. What I say is that the searchers do sign for goods as they did formerly, but in a very different manner; for they sign now only after actual observation has assured them that the goods have been shipped in the quantities named in the drawback warrant. This they did not do formerly.

19. Do you know that the practice before Mr. Russell's time was to take the ticket of the weight of sugar sent down from the Sugar Company, the officer weighing such a number of bags as would enable him to estimate the weight of the whole? I cannot speak of anything in connection with the Sugar Company's shipment before Mr. Russell's appointment.

20. Did he take the weights in the manner I have described? I always understood that he ascertained the weight of sugar shipped. My impression certainly was that he took the weight of each load as it came down.

21. What, of all the bags,—that he weighed each bag? No, not the whole; but that he took a certain number of bags from each load and weighed them, and approximated the weight of the load.

22. You believe that the weight was ascertained by actual weighing, before he signed the drawback warrant? Yes, by weighing such a number of bags from each load as would allow him to approximate the weight of the whole.

23. You remember when Mr. Chapman was appointed drawback officer? Yes.

24. Was it not understood that he was to weigh all sugars for shipment prior to indorsing the drawback warrant? Yes; the orders he received from me were not to indorse for anything of which he had not previously ascertained the exact weight or quantity.

25.

25. Then he was to weigh the Company's sugar as well as that of other parties? Yes; but he was only three days in that office. From something, however, that then occurred, we went back to the water-side practice. W. C. Still,
Esq.
26. That is that you went back to the old system? No, not to the old system; I should be ashamed to make an admission of anything of the kind. 20 Dec., 1859.
27. Will you tell us what took place on Mr. Chapman's appointment, and what instructions you gave him? I do not remember giving him any other than general instructions. Something occurred that induced the Collector to supersede Mr. Russell, and I then directed Mr. Chapman temporarily to undertake the duty. I directed him to attend to all the drawback notices left unacted on by Mr. Russell; further than instructing him that he must see everything weighed that he undertook to certify as having been shipped, my orders were general.
28. You did not give him any special instructions with reference to the Sugar Company's shipments? No, nor with regard to any person in particular; I gave him general instructions.
29. Throughout the correspondence that the Board has had referred to them, I find that Mr. Duncan appears to be under the impression that all sugars were weighed previous to shipment by drawback, and that he never intended to make any distinction between one shipper and another;—now are you aware whether, in point of fact, any distinction has been made? There has been a slight distinction; I believe that the Sugar Company waited on the Collector, and—
30. Do you know that of your own knowledge? Well, I was not present at any conversation that took place upon the subject.
31. You believe, however, that there was some understanding with the Sugar Company in regard to the weighing of their sugar? Yes, I understood that there was an arrangement by which the sugar of the Company was to be approximated; that so many bags should be weighed from each load as would enable the officer to approximate the weight of the load.
- Mr. Powell* handed in a letter from Metcalfe and Co. to the Collector of Customs, dated 8th July, 1859; and reply of Collector to same of date 16th July, 1859.
32. According to that correspondence it is clear that some distinction was to be made? The distinction is very slight indeed. We take a fewer number of bags of the Company's sugar to weigh than we do of the merchants; because the sugar of the Company being packed in regular sized bags we can arrive at the exact weight by weighing a few of their bags, whilst we are obliged to weigh all those shipped by other persons.
33. By such a system of averaging would it not be possible for one officer to ship 260 loads in one day? No. It would be hardly possible for one man to count them into the ship, still less to weigh them, as there are forty bags to each load. Then he would have to weigh some of each load, and it would not be possible for such a number of drays to discharge in the time. Then another thing is, that they might not all be going to discharge at the same wharf, and this would render the thing utterly impossible.
34. How many loads could one officer ship in a day? Well, I suppose the Company would seldom send down more than twenty tons in one day for shipment by the same vessel, and one officer might ship that quantity.
35. Could thirty tons be shipped in a day? Yes, at one or two stations, with an officer at each.
36. In applying this to a particular example, I would ask you whether the quantity of goods in the "Louisa" case could have been shipped in one day? Not by one officer.
37. Is there any difference in exporting free goods from the warehouse, and shipping goods for drawback? Yes; for in the case you refer to the officer ought to have taken the drawback goods down to the ship.
38. Does he take them down to the ship now? No, they are delivered to him on the wharf.
39. And in the case of export goods from the warehouse, does the officer accompany them? No.
40. By Captain Ward: Was it the practice at the time of the "Louisa" case, for the officer to accompany dutiable goods from the bond to the wharf? He was supposed to do so.
41. But in practice did he do so? The regulation was that he should.
42. Did he do it? It was his orders to do so.
43. Then I suppose you mean to say that it was the regulation but not the practice? Yes.
44. In point of fact, the officers could not accompany all they had to ship—they were not numerous enough? They were not.
45. Could one officer have shipped off this quantity of goods in one day, if sent down to him to the wharf? No.
46. One officer could not do it? No.
47. By Mr. Powell: There is some prejudice I believe against your system of weighing sugar? Yes.
48. There is also some objection made to stripping tea? There is.
49. And those objections are made by the merchants generally? Yes.
50. Do you know anything about the tares of the bags of the Sugar Refining Company? The allowance of tares rests with the shipping officer.
51. Have you any idea of what the tare of a bag of bastards sugar would be, in exportation? I myself rarely saw them.
52. You have not taken a shipment of them? No.
53. You have seen the sugar? Yes.
54. Can you form any estimate of what the tare on one of these bags would be? About 2lbs.

W. C. Still,
Esq.

29 Dec., 1859.

55. Have you tried them? Only on importation am I called in respecting tares of sugars.
56. How many bags would you consider it necessary to weigh in a parcel of twenty-six tons—say 1,000 bags? We do not generally get such a large lot as that together—we get some on one day and some on another, and then we weigh a dozen bags or so, and count the others, and so approximate the weight and indorse the warrant accordingly.
57. Will you turn to the printed instructions this morning handed in, and read the 34th regulation relative to the duty of drawback officer? I have read it.
58. It says there that the landing-waiter “shall re-gauge or re-weigh if necessary;” does he exercise his own discretion as to the necessity for re-gauging or re-weighing? I hardly understand your question.
59. In other words then, has the landing-waiter any discretionary power as to the necessity for re-gauging or re-weighing? No, certainly not, he acts only under his instructions.
60. But if a case of any difficulty, unprovided for by his instructions, should arise, has he any discretion? No. In such a case he would refer to me.
61. If sugar were sent down to the wharf for shipment for drawback, would he weigh it or would he refer to you as to the necessity for doing so? He would weigh it.
62. But in case of its being sent down in these large hogsheads that have been spoken of? He would then refer to me; that is precisely a case in point.
63. By Captain Ward: Then if any case of difficulty occurred, the landing-waiter would refer to you? Yes.
64. And he had instructions to see the whole of the sugar, shipped for drawback, weighed before shipment—with the exception of that shipped by the Sugar Company, of which a portion only was weighed? Yes.
65. By Mr. Powell: You said, in answer to Mr. Duncan, that, on a certain occasion, I burst into his room? Yes; you came in after I had heard him tell the messenger not to admit you. He told the messenger to say that he could not see you.
66. You do not know if the messenger gave me that message? No, of course I do not.
67. Do you know if I knocked at the door previous to entering? I should presume that you would do so, seeing that it is a usual thing with gentlemen.
68. And, when I knocked, I was told to walk in? That I do not know.
69. Do you know what was said on the occasion? Not the exact words; but the nature of what the Collector said was, that he declined to have any communication with you.
70. Was his manner excited? It certainly was; but, it was very natural that it should be so, under the circumstances.
71. Do you remember anything particular he said? Well, I cannot say I recollect every word; but, if you repeat any particular observation, perhaps I may recollect it.
72. Did he say, “You are a dangerous man”? I do not recollect the particular words; but I remember words being made use of to the effect that he could not trust you on account of some observations you had previously made, misrepresenting what he had said.
73. Did I ask him for a cheque? That I do not remember. The conversation became very personal after this remark of the Collector, and ended by your walking out.
74. Was Mr. Llewellyn present at this time? I do not remember if he was present when Mr. Duncan’s observation was made; but he was there, I think, at the close of the conversation.
75. You do not recollect his telling me that I was a dangerous man? I do not recollect the precise words he used; but what he said conveyed to my mind the impression that you were a person that he would not communicate with, unless in the presence of a third person.
76. But you say, in the letter you wrote in answer to Mr. Duncan’s request on the 17th August, “I do not remember”? Yes; but that had reference to another conversation.
77. You do not remember whether he told Mr. Llewellyn to give me a cheque? I do not.
78. Do you think my conduct was offensive or improper, or such as you, for instance, would have taken offence at? I feel reluctant to give an opinion upon what is a merely personal matter. There are many antecedent matters that have to be taken into account.
79. But taking my manner alone, and separating it from these circumstances, was it, in your opinion, offensive? Well, if you had come into my room after I had sent the messenger to say that I could not see you, I should have considered it so.
80. Are you prepared to say that the messenger gave me that message? No, I did not hear him tell you; but I heard the Collector give the order to the messenger.
81. Putting aside this question, after my entry into the room, was my conduct of such a character as to be considered offensive to the Collector? Considering the directions I had heard him give to the messenger, I consider that you were wrong in intruding upon the Collector.
82. But was there anything insulting either in my words or my conduct, after I had entered? You certainly persisted in remaining, after the Collector had told you to retire.
83. In remaining, was I guilty of any insulting or improper conduct? It was conduct that was likely to irritate the Collector.
84. That was the fact of my remaining in the room, but nothing that I said? I cannot remember anything offensive that you said.
85. Do you remember my referring to a cask of sugar that had been sent down to the “Louis and Miriam,” that was so large that the officers could not weigh it? You may have done so, but the Collector would not enter into anything with you, he was engaged in business with another person.
86. Who was he engaged with at the time? He was talking to me about some matters connected with the department, when you intruded upon the conversation.
87. Did not your conversation with the Collector arise after I entered the room? No; we began it before you came in, and your entrance interrupted it.
88. Did not Mr. Duncan remark, in my hearing, upon the ungentlemanly and discourteous manner manner of the Sugar Company, in sending down a cask of sugar too heavy for you to weigh? We were talking about some business of the kind, when you came in—some drawback business. W. C. Still,

Esq.

89. Do you remember some large casks of sugar being sent down for shipment? I do. 20 Dec., 1859.

90. They were 11 cwt. or 12 cwt. each, I believe? Yes.

91. And you had no means of weighing them on the wharf? We had not.

92. Would any inconvenience have arisen if you had provided yourselves, as you ought to have done, with the means of weighing them? No, certainly not; but it was the wharfingers duty to provide them, and not ours. We called upon all the different wharfingers to furnish the necessary mechanical appliances, but some have neglected to do so.

93. You have since provided yourselves with the means of weighing these casks? Yes; upon some wharfs, but not upon all.

94. And you can weigh these large casks now? I am not sure if any of them have been sent down to us since we have provided for them.

95. Yes, some very large ones have been sent? I cannot say without reference to papers.

96. Are you aware that there have been some goods sent off latterly, that the officer has not weighed at all, with the entries indorsed? Certainly not, to my knowledge.

97. Do you not know of some tea having been shipped off by Mr. Caldwell, under these circumstances? Yes, the officer refused to certify on the warrants, by my instructions.

98. And the drawback is to be paid upon production of the certificate from Auckland, of their delivery at that port? I cannot say, without reference to the papers.

99. Do you remember some tea being shipped by the "John Omerod," by Gilchrist, Watt, and Co.? No, I do not.

100. Do you recollect the shipments by the "Spray," and "Lord Worsley"? Yes; I recollect hearing of them, but the first was specially arranged between the Collector and the officer, and I personally had nothing to do with it.

101. Have you ever found Mr. Metcalfe or myself offer you any opposition in the execution of your duty? No; I have nothing to allege against you.

102. Have any of your officers ever complained to you of any opposition on our parts, to the regulations of the department? No; I do not recollect any complaints being brought to me.

103. Have I not, since you have held the office of landing surveyor, given you every assistance, by furnishing you with documents when necessary? I make no charge against you.

104. Have I not furnished you with documents to enable you to carry out reforms in your department? To what reforms do you allude?

105. Particularly with reference to this pricking note system you have established? Yes; but you have condemned it since.

106. Have I not furnished you also with valuable information? Yes; I have had many conversations with you, from which I have received information.

107. With reference to the "Louisa" case, did I not give you every assistance towards enabling you to arrive at the discovery of the frauds? You did.

108. I gave you information as to certain public-houses, where you were likely to discover some of the spirits? Yes, you shewed every disposition to aid us in the discovery.

109. I gave you information about Goldring's share in the business? You did; but it was not till after I had heard of it from other quarters. I was there twice before I received any information from you.

110. By Mr. Duncan: You have been asked about the instructions given to Mr. Chapman, relative to weighing all goods for drawback; was not his appointment a merely temporary arrangement, in order to permit us to perfect the pricking note system? Yes; it was only intended for two or three days.

111. Merely to keep the work going on? Yes, whilst we were completing our arrangements with the licensed carters, and bringing in this waterside practice. Chapman was brought in to give us time to get this system into operation.

112. We were obliged to hasten on our proposed system somewhat prematurely, in consequence of what we had seen in the cases of Russell and Chapman? Yes, we brought it into operation in July.

113. Now, with respect to what Mr. Powell has asked you, as to whether it is in the discretion of the officer how many bags he shall weigh in order to arrive at the average weight—you say that the officer has no discretion? No. In case of any difficulty he would refer to me.

114. And if you had any doubt in the matter? I should take your instructions.

115. Do you not think that in cases of some kinds of goods,—such as chests of tea, and the Sugar Company's manufactured sugars, which are in packages of regular sizes,—that the fair average weight can be ascertained by weighing a certain number of packages? Yes, I think so.

116. And that by doing this the revenue can be sufficiently protected? Yes; I see no objection to it.

117. Then, with respect to the interview which Mr. Powell has confounded with one that occurred previously; I had occasion to call upon you for a report upon that first interview? You had.

118. And you were obliged in that report to contradict some of the statements made by Mr. Powell in the letter to which I referred? I was.

119. Then the interview relative to which he has this day questioned you is a second interview? It is.

120. You heard me tell the messenger that I could not see Mr. Powell? I did.

121. Do you not think that, situated as I am, if a person, who has so misrepresented a conversation as Mr. Powell has to your knowledge done, comes and asks for an interview with

- W. C. Still, Esq.
20 Dec., 1859.
- with me, there would be some danger to me in entering upon a conversation with him, without witnesses? I should have acted in the same way as you did, if the person had behaved in the same manner to me as Mr. Powell has done to you.
122. You were present at the first conversation? I was.
123. And Mr. Llewellyn also? Yes.
124. By Mr. Powell: To which conversation do you refer? To that to which Mr. Duncan's letter refers.
125. By Captain Ward: You were present, then, at both interviews? I was.
126. By Mr. Powell: In your written statement, in reply to Mr. Duncan's note to you, you representing him as having said, "What feeling can I have in the matter? Sir Daniel Cooper is a personal friend of my own."—What led to that conversation, and to the introduction of Sir Daniel Cooper's name? The Collector mentioned Sir Daniel Cooper's name in some way, and you seemed to take what he had said in a wrong light, and then he said what you have quoted.
127. But I want to know what led to the introduction of Sir Daniel Cooper's name? The conversation was with reference to drawbacks and the Sugar Company; and Sir D. Cooper's name was mentioned in connection with the Company.
128. Did I introduce it? No. I have already said it was mentioned in some way by Mr. Duncan.
129. Then how could he have alluded to it, unless there had been some previous conversation on the subject to which he was referring? What I state is that the Collector casually mentioned Sir D. Cooper's name; you asked him a question upon it, and said, "Am I to understand —"
130. That is not to the purpose. Was Sir D. Cooper's name introduced by me or by Mr. Duncan? I have told you before that it was by Mr. Duncan.
131. What reason had he for introducing the name? I cannot recollect every word of the conversation, but there must have been some reason for it, for the name was used in answer to something you said. You asked some question or made some remark, in reply to which the Collector used Sir D. Cooper's name. You then seemed to misunderstand his reply, and said, "Am I to understand then that any mere personal feeling is to interfere with the payment of this drawback?" That was the effect of what you said, but I do not recollect the exact words.
132. Do you recollect my saying to Mr. Duncan that this had now ceased to be an abstract question, and had become a personal one? Yes, I do, now that you mention the words.
133. However, you are sure that Sir Daniel Cooper's name was first mentioned by Mr. Duncan? Yes.
134. By Mr. Duncan: Did I not make some complaint about Sir Daniel Cooper going to the Treasury and interfering in this matter? Yes, you did.
135. And it was in that way that his name arose? It was.
136. By Mr. Powell: Did he make any complaint about Sir Daniel Cooper's interfering at the Treasury? He did.
137. Were not the whole of the drawbacks that have been refused to the Sugar Company for sugars shipped during the time that Mr. Chapman held office? No, I think not. To the best of my recollection there were only two vessels that took in sugar during that time, the "Spray" and the "Lord Worsley." I can only speak of one case that came under my own personal knowledge—that of the "Lord Worsley."
138. Were not all the drawbacks for the shipments by the "Kate Kearney," the "Spray," and the "Lord Worsley," refused during the time of Mr. Chapman's holding office, and when your department was in a more than ordinarily disorganised state, owing to the arrangements making for the introduction of the new system? I cannot say positively, without reference to the various documents.
139. By Mr. Duncan: Do you not recollect this shipment being refused upon similar grounds at a later date? (Papers produced.) Yes. I recollect the mode in which that shipment was made.
140. These warrants I produce are not indorsed? They are not.
141. Will you explain what this matter was? It was a shipment of goods by the "Louis" and "Miriam," on the 26th August. The goods were put on board the vessel without the officer having been made acquainted with the fact, and for this reason he refused to sign the warrants. I recollect that on the Monday after I had been made acquainted with the circumstances, I went down to the mate of the vessel, and he told me that some of the goods had gone on board after the officer had left his station on Saturday at half-past one. The officer would not certify to the shipment of the goods because they had been put on board without his knowledge.
142. A portion of the goods, I believe, had been put on board before the officer saw them, and the rest of them on Saturday afternoon after he had left? Yes. The mate told me that the carters who brought the sugar down had been in the habit of handing him the notes that were intended for the Custom House officer, and that he was accustomed to hand these notes to the officer when he came down to the ship, and that there had never been any difficulty about checking the warrants with these notes. This had always been the case previously, and he was not aware of any alteration in the system. (The documents relative to the shipment per "Louis and Miriam," on the 26th August were then handed in.)

Mr. Cyrie D. Cecil called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Duncan: You have only lately arrived in this Colony? I have.
2. You were for some time Clerk to a Custom House Agent in London, and Custom House Clerk to a merchant in the same place? I was.
3. From your experience of the practice of the Custom House Department in London, are you enabled to say what the consequences would be to a Custom House Agent who indorsed the quantities on the back of a drawback warrant? I never knew of such a case in London.
4. But what would the consequence be, if such a thing did occur? I am unable to say, because I never knew a case of the kind to occur.
5. Would such a thing be for an instant permitted? No, certainly not.
6. Would a Custom House Agent hold his license for a day after it was known that he did such a thing? I do not think he would.
7. That would be the case if he indorsed the warrant, even though he indorsed the proper quantity? I have no doubt it would.
8. But if the quantity so indorsed by the Agent were shewn to be incorrect, and that he indorsed for drawback more than was actually shipped, would it not be still more likely to be the case? No doubt of it.
9. Would not his license be immediately cancelled? Yes, in London it would be.
10. Suppose again, that an entry had been passed for six casks of sugar for drawback; and that the searcher had ascertained that four only of the six had been shipped; and that after learning this, the searcher was asked by the Custom House Agent to certify to the shipment of six :—Would any Custom House Agent be allowed to pass a single entry after such a fact was made known? No, I am sure he would not; but I only speak of London, as I do not know the practice of other ports.
11. Suppose also the case of a Custom House Agent who should ask an officer of the Customs to certify to a shipment for drawback that he had never seen, and after the vessel had left the port? He would be considered as having tampered with the Custom House Officer, and the matter would end in an investigation. What the consequences would be to the agent I cannot say.
12. In the latter case he would be considered as having tampered with the officer? Yes.
13. Have you ever heard of such a thing being done in London? No.
14. Supposing a large quantity of sugar to have been taken out of bond, representing an amount of duty of £1,300 and odd, and that the Custom House Agent represented to the Collector that the sugar had been weighed, and that the deficiency had been caused by waste—if it were shewn afterwards that the deficiency had not so arisen, would not the agent be held responsible, even though his principal had so instructed him? I do not quite understand your question.
15. Supposing sugar to be taken out of bond without payment of duty, without entry, and without weighing, and that there was a representation by the agent that the sugar had been weighed, and that the deficiency had been caused by waste, would not the agent be held responsible by the Collector, even though his principal had so instructed him? It would have to be proved, in the first instance, that the agent knew all about the matter.
16. But it would not save him to say that he was the mere instrument of his principal? If he was proved to have known all about it when he made the statement, he would be held to be answerable, but not without.
17. Are not the Custom House Agents in London obliged to be very respectful in their behaviour towards the superior officers of the Customs? They are.
18. Did you ever hear of such a thing occurring in the long room of the Custom House of London, as an agent saying, that if a Collector did his duty, or carried out the law, that they would soon walk him out? It would depend a great deal upon the manner in which such a thing was said.
19. But if it were said in earnest, and the statement then made was followed up? The Collector, for his own sake, would have to follow the matter up.
20. By Captain Ward: How long were you in the London Custom House? I was never attached to the department; but I was four years clerk to a Custom House Agent, and in charge of the Custom House business of a merchant's office.
21. By Mr. Powell: You know what shipping bills are? I do.
22. Will you look at this warrant, and say if it is anything like the shipping bill used in England? I believe it is substantially, but I do not at this moment recollect the exact words of the shipping bills. However, substantially there is no difference between the two. Latterly, however, I have seen more of the shipping bills of the East Indies, where they are in a much more simple form than in England; and from what I remember, those of the East Indies more resemble this warrant than do those of England.
23. These shipping bills go down to the docks, and are then returned to the establishment in Thames-street? Yes.
24. The Customs officers have charge of them the whole time? Yes.
25. Are the short shipments shewn on this document? Yes, they have to be taken off the Bill.
26. By the agent—the party preparing it? No; the Custom House officer has to do that.
27. The drawback is not paid on the shipping bill? No; on the debenture.
28. Who prepares that—the agent? No; it is prepared in the Custom House.
29. And the exporter or the agent prepares the shipping bill? Yes.
30. Can you get goods out of bond at all in London without the necessary documents being first deposited at the Customs? I should not like to say that you could not, because I have heard of some extraordinary things being done by a well-known importer in London.

Mr.C.D. Cecil.

20 Dec., 1859.

- Mr.C.D.Cecil. 31. Have you ever heard of 500 casks of sugar being taken out of bond in England, and nothing being known about it? I have not, but I have been absent from England some years.
- 20 Dec., 1859. 32. Would the officer deliver 500 tons of sugar from the bond unless he had first received a locker's order? Certainly not, unless he were conniving with some other parties to defraud the revenue.
33. The Collector of the Port of London is subordinate to the ruling and decision of a Board? That I cannot say. I have not been an officer of the Customs, and am not aware of its internal management.
34. You have had, I presume, more to do with waterside practice? Yes, a great deal, more particularly in the country house where I was employed.
35. You have had nothing to do with the actual import and export of goods? No.
36. By Mr. Duncan: The debenture is prepared, not on the quantity entered on the warrant for drawback, but upon the quantity actually shipped? Yes; and a declaration made by agent or exporter as to its correctness.

---

Mr. Robert Sempill called in and re-examined:—

- Mr.R.Sempill. 1. By Mr. Duncan: You were asked yesterday who it was that warned you not to quarrel with Mr. Metcalfe, and you said that you could not remember who it was:—You have since I believe recollected who it was? Yes; it was Mr. Jones who specially warned me. He was a sort of Secretary to the Customs, and was most intimate both with the Collector and Mr. Metcalfe.
- 20 Dec., 1859. 2. Will you state, as nearly as you can recollect, what he said to you? He said "He advised me as a friend not to have any conflict with Mr. Metcalfe, as if I did it would result in my being dismissed. That he would get me dismissed in a minute, he had such a great power in the department."
3. You were asked by Mr. Metcalfe yesterday, if you could mention any case in which the revenue had suffered by the mode in which he did business. You said then that you could not. Have you since remembered any? I could find hundreds of such cases if I had access to the papers of the department.
4. Will you mention the nature of them? In his passing entries for dutiable goods, such as wheat, tea, sugar, duties on brandy were quantitative, and other articles upon which an ad valorem duty was fixed.
5. From the mode in which he passed entries, and paid duty on ad valorem goods, you think the revenue suffered? Yes, I am certain it did.
6. In what way? From the declaration he made as to the value of the goods; many of these were false declarations, and came into my hands almost daily.
7. By Captain Ward: Did you know them to be false at the time? Not when I first went into the office, for I was not then up in the routine of the department, having only just joined it.
8. You found it out afterwards? Yes. At first I did not know anything about the system upon which the business was conducted, or about the law of the case, but when I had been there some time, and had become acquainted with the routine of the office, and had looked up the law, I found out that many of these declarations were false.
9. That the declarations were knowingly false? Yes; he must have known that they were so.
10. What makes you think so? Because he could not help knowing it, for he must have known the value of goods as well as any man in Sydney. I found it out when I had only been a very short time in the office—it was so apparent.
11. Did other officers of the department know of it also? Yes; some of them did.
12. Did you report this to the Government? No. I wished to report it, but the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Deas Thomson, dictated conditions, and the way in which I was to do it, and so I declined.
13. By Mr. Browne: In declaring as to the value of ad valorem goods, did Mr. Metcalfe do this part of his duty differently from the other agents, or did they all make the declaration alike? They were all alike. Mr. Metcalfe was permitted to do it, and then the other agents insisted upon their right to do the same thing.
14. And to what did the false statement in the declaration have reference? To the value of the goods.
15. How was the value calculated? At the discretion of the agent.
16. Not on the value of the goods in the market? No; it did not come up to that—less 75 per cent. in many cases.
17. And in your calculation of the value were you guided by the wholesale or the retail price of the goods? By the Act of Parliament—which says "the true price and value."
18. By Mr. Duncan: Then false certificates as to the value of import goods were sent in by Mr. Metcalfe? Yes.
19. At a time, too, when he was in a position to know their true value? Yes, certainly.
20. By Captain Ward: Did he see the goods then so as to judge of their value? No, I do not see how he could, since they would be in the ship, and would remain their till entries were passed.
21. By Mr. Browne: Did you, on receiving these entries, ask for the production of the invoices? No; I had no power to do so, or I would have insisted upon having them.
22. Do you know the rate at which the goods were invoiced? No; but when I knew that a cargo of sugar for instance was passed at a declared value of £10 a ton, when the market price was £25 a ton, I could not help perceiving that there was something wrong.

23. By Mr. Duncan: Are you aware that this declaration was by law equivalent to an oath? I am. Mr. R. Sempill.

24. By Captain Ward: Are there any other cases besides these certificates of value of ad valorem goods, in which the revenue has suffered through Mr. Metcalfe? Not that I remember now. 20 Dec., 1859.

25. The papers to which you wish to have access will refer to these ad valorem duties? Yes; if the papers I wish to find are in the Customs—I am given to understand that there are hundreds of them deficient. I wish to say, that besides Mr. Jones, I was warned by Mr. Arnold, who was next clerk to me, not to fall out with Mr. Metcalfe. I may also state in reference to a question asked me by the Chairman of the Board, yesterday, that I was discharged from the Custom House because I would not specify any charges I had to make, and I refused to do that unless I could bring them forward in my own way. The Colonial Secretary first directed that I should bring them through the head of the department, Colonel Gibbes; and for the reasons I have stated I declined to do this. He then stated conditions under which my statements would be received, and I positively refused to advance any charges except in the way my discretion pointed out as the proper mode. Upon the occasion of my discharge I saw Sir Charles Fitzroy, and on the first application I made for a Government employment after that he gave me the place.

WEDNESDAY, 28 DECEMBER, 1859.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.,

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; and Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell, Custom House Agents, were present during the proceedings.

Captain Ward read a letter received from Mr. Stewart, of the firm of Towns and Co., requesting to be heard before the Board. (Letter dated 21 December, 1859.)

Captain Ward also read a letter from Mr. Ross, requesting to be furnished with certain correspondence and returns.

The Board directed the returns to be furnished.

Mr. Duncan handed in the following protest:—

PROTEST.

With respect to the decision of the Board, not to receive evidence respecting the deficiencies in sugar, and the obstacles thrown in the way of weighing sugar for drawback, on the ground that what Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell have done in these matters they have done as agents for the Sugar Company, who are alone responsible, I protest against this decision on the following grounds:—

1.—Because, although it may be true that in ordinary mercantile affairs, the principal and not the agent is responsible, the position of a Custom House Agent is quite different. A Custom House Agent receives special advantages upon special conditions. If he allow himself, under the pretext of agency, to be made the instrument of defrauding the revenue; if he declare what is false, to enable his employer to under-pay his duties; if he is instrumental in removing goods from the warehouse without payment of duty; if he afterwards allow himself to be made the instrument of a false representation to the Government, with a view of obtaining a remission of the duty on goods thus illegally taken out of bond; and, if he lend himself further to throw obstacles in the way of the officers in their duty of protecting the revenue; then I say that such an agent is not protected by his agency from personal responsibility to the Collector of Customs, and to the Government, for these acts.

2.—Because the doctrine laid down by Mr. Metcalfe at last meeting of the Board, that in making false declarations, he is merely acting under instructions from his employers is grossly immoral as well as contrary to the terms and conditions of his license. A Custom House Agent ought not, I conceive, to be an instrument for enabling an importer to lie, or perjure himself by proxy. A jury would not convict a merchant for a false declaration made by his Custom House Agent.

For these reasons I hold, that the Custom House Agents are personally responsible to the Government for their acts performed in that capacity; and I assert my right, therefore, to tender evidence on the whole question now before the Board.

W. A. DUNCAN.

Captain Ward said: The Board do not decline to hear any evidence you may have to produce, provided it be brought forward at the proper time; but, at this stage of the proceedings, when they are examining into the alleged criminality of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, they decline to hear evidence regarding those acts of which Mr. Ross accepts the whole responsibility. Produce evidence to convict Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell with any deficiencies of sugar, evidence of privity or negligence on their part, and we will hear it. Otherwise, as Mr. Ross has accepted the whole responsibility regarding the deficiencies, it is not fair to place it on the agents.

Mr. Duncan: I know nobody in the matter but the Custom House Agent; the only business of the Company with me is done through them.

Captain

Captain Ward : But Mr. Ross takes the responsibility of this upon himself.

Mr. Duncan : That does not relieve the Custom House Agents. I do not recognise Mr. Ross in the matter.

Mr. Browne : An agent in passing goods must every day make declarations, in which he depends upon the information furnished him by his principal, since he cannot know the interior of cases of goods. He has to pass entries for goods he never sees, and must take their description from others. It was for that reason that the oath was abolished; but it was perceived to be an immoral practice to allow a man to swear to that which he could not know was true. For that reason, then, I think that you ought to shew that Mr. Metcalfe had a knowledge of these improprieties before you can charge them against him.

Captain Mc Lerie : I quite go with the Collector of Customs if he can shew us that Mr. Metcalfe wilfully and knowingly made a false declaration.

Mr. Duncan : I am shut out from doing this by the unaccountable loss of certain important documents. Four of these which I require to substantiate my case are most unaccountably missing. I have already mentioned that a letter of Mr. Metcalfe, and a letter of Mr. Ross, bearing memos. of the Treasurer and Chief Secretary, are missing. In addition, the warrant indorsed by Mr. Metcalfe, on which I could have shewn a deficiency in the shipment by the "Moa," independent of the forty bags short, cannot now be found.

Captain Ward : I go farther than the other members of the Board, for if you can shew any negligence on the part of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, that they did not take all proper precaution, and that the revenue suffered in consequence, then they would be amenable, though in a lesser degree.

Mr. Duncan : I contend that I have already shewn that they made a false statement.

Mr. Browne : At all events, the same facts that you now seek to urge against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell will come out in the examination into the Sugar Company's case; and then, if it be found that blame attaches to Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, it will be as easy to apply the evidence to them then as it is now. The only effect of our decision is, that we do not wish to attach fraud where no guilt really applies.

Mr. Duncan : All I claim is, that I may bring my whole case before the Board.

Mr. Metcalfe : If upon hearing the Sugar Company's case, Mr. Ross finds that I have done anything that I ought not to have done, he will at once say so; and if I am open to blame I shall not escape.

Captain Ward : Or even farther: if it is shewn that from your not having taken proper precaution any mischief has occurred, you will be held liable.

Mr. Metcalfe said: I propose to confine myself to those charges which Mr. Duncan has brought against me individually, and leave Mr. Powell to deal with those advanced against us as partners. I confess myself to be very much astonished at the nature of the charges brought against me; but I have heard nothing from any of his witnesses which seems to me to demand an answer. I will, however, trouble the Board with a few observations, and if there is any point in the evidence which I fail to touch, and on which they may require information, I shall esteem it a favor if they will direct my attention to it. It appears to me that Mr. Duncan holds very erroneous ideas as to the position, rights, and duties of Custom House Agents. The phrases he uses in his correspondence, that they are "creatures of the Collector," and removable at his pleasure, are, I conceive, quite untrue. Nor are they "humble writing clerks," but persons acting in a fiduciary character towards the Crown and their principal, who give bond to the Crown for their "faithful and honest conduct," and in return are entitled to receive from the Crown every reasonable and proper accommodation, and such respect as would be paid to their principals were they to transact their own business. Again, they are not removable at the will of the Collector; but the sanction of the Governor must be obtained, before their removal can be effected. Indeed, in this respect their position is better than that of an attorney who may be struck off the rolls by order of the Judges. In other respects the position of a Custom House Agent and an attorney are very similar, and to shew that their position is thus recognised by the Custom House authorities in London, I can state it as a fact that several licensed agents have seats given to them in the Long Room in the Custom House in London. All agents have not the privilege; indeed it would not be possible to grant it to all, but twelve or more have it still, and I contend that it is a proper and useful privilege to grant to a limited number of persons, thoroughly acquainted with the laws and rules of the Customs. Mr. Duncan, however, makes it a grave charge against me that I had a room to myself! I will inform the Board that that room was given to me by Mr. Barnes, the gentleman appointed by the Commissioners of Customs to inquire into the working of the department; and the late Collector was always of opinion that the Customs officers derived considerable benefit from the presence of a few agents. I am certain that had the Minister for Finance understood the working of the department he would not have consented to Mr. Duncan's proposal to eject us; but he did not wish, as he informed me, to incur any responsibility. To shew the Board clearly that our eviction was not Mr. Duncan's act solely, I must acquaint them that one week had not elapsed since his taking office before he wrote to the Government for permission to eject us. I have Mr. Cowper's reply, dated 20th May, to a note of mine of the 18th. Mr. Duncan took office on the 10th, in which he states that the reason given for ejecting us was that the health of the officers was suffering from a bad office,—in which very office, I may state, the Steam Navigation Board used to hold their meetings and have their Secretary, and which my partner and clerks occupied for a year or more during my visit to England, and to which they had been moved at the instigation of Mr. Llewellyn and Mr. James Stewart, the smuggler. Can the Board believe that I would have continued to occupy the position of a Custom House Agent, if it was of the humble social character Mr. Duncan represents it to be? I was offered the appointment Mr. Duncan now holds, but conceiving that I enjoyed the respect of the mercantile body of this city, and having a good connection, I declined it. I have also been offered partnership by Mr. Mort, where my income would have been three times as large as it now is, but I declined that, and also partnerships offered by two merchants, because I believed that the business I carried on was one that was not degrading to a gentleman or a man of honor. And yet, now I am told by a person, whose only experience in Custom House matters has been gathered by being Collector at a mere coasting port, that my position is that of a "humble writing clerk"—"a creature of the Collector." I beseech the Board to give this matter their consideration, and to say whether they consider my position to be of the nature described by Mr. Duncan. I am then charged with acting as a Commissioner of Customs, but not one single act of usurpation of authority has been proved. Mr. Mackenzie says that I asked him to pass a second entry, and that Col. Gibbes decided against me. Was this like a Commissioner? I can assure the Board that I should not have asked for a second entry had I not known that it was perfectly legal; even a third entry I have known to be passed in England for the same goods. But in the case in point the facts are these. The agents of the vessel passed entries to clear the goods which were in the way, and our friends' goods were described by them as hardware, valued at £300, when in point of fact they were drapery, worth about £3,000. Now, there is no law in this Colony to allow an agent of a ship or a captain to enter other persons' goods; therefore, the first entry by the agent of the ship was illegal, and our entry would have been legal, whilst the returns to the Government would have been correct; whilst, as passed, they were manifestly wrong. Again, Mr. Maddox says that I appealed to Col. Gibbes against the decision of the clerks, and generally gained my point. No doubt. The clerks were ignorant of law, and, sticking to routine only, often wished to detain a vessel because some importer had neglected to pass perfect entries for goods, or because some unimportant document had not been returned by the searchers. I assert that the public business of the port would have been much impeded had these gentlemen, who, on their own admission, knew nothing of the law, had their own way. As to Mr. Sempill and his charges, I can afford to pass them by with almost silence. The moroseness of his character, and his gross ignorance of mercantile business, render explanation unnecessary; besides, if there had been reasonable grounds for charging me with fraud, can the Board believe that Mr. Deas Thomson would have shielded me and dismissed him. I shall content myself by asserting that his statements, as to my behaviour to him, are gross fabrications. But how comes it, that such a man, who was, as he tells you, dismissed from the department eight years ago, should be brought forward now to bring charges that have no relation to the present Collector. Does it not clearly prove that a conspiracy, to injure me and my partner, has been formed by Mr. Llewellyn, and that Mr. Duncan has allowed himself to be made a party to it. See how insidious are Mr. Duncan's charges. The Treasurer is invoked over and over again (without our being made acquainted with it) to cancel our licenses. But it is evident that the Treasurer did not believe the statements, or we should have been called upon for an explanation. The charges are re-iterated, and one charge is made to have the appearance of two. In the "Moa's" matter, first, Mr. Duncan says he does not impute anything wrong to me in indorsing the warrant for the officer.

Mr. Duncan: I deny that I say anything of the kind. My words will bear no such construction.

Mr. Metcalfe: I allude to the Collector's remarks on my letter of 1st July, 1859, in p. 3 of the correspondence; and then I would place, in juxtaposition with that remark, the quotation from his letter of the 22nd November, p. 20, in which he states that I falsely indorsed the warrant, and that my connection with the Custom House ought to cease. Then he asserts that I recommended the appointment of Mr. Russell, as drawback officer; and a little further on, that I used great endeavours to keep him in office. Where he got his information from I know not, and can only surmise. I can, however, give it a most flat contradiction. I did not recommend Mr. Russell's appointment, but, on the contrary, I recommended that he should not be appointed. It was Mr. Garling who insisted on his appointment; and as to using exertions to retain him after the "Moa's" business, it is simply untrue.

Mr. Duncan: Did you not call upon me and ask me to retain Mr. Russell in office.

Mr. Metcalfe: No, I did not.

Mr. Duncan: Both you and Mr. Ross came down to my office, and requested me to do so.

Mr. Metcalfe: No, certainly not. Mr. Russell asked me to interfere in the matter, and I distinctly refused. I admit that I did not think that he deserved dismissal, but I took no part whatever in the matter; and as to my indorsing the warrant, I shall only say that I did what I believed was right, and that I am still of the same opinion. To shew that Mr. Duncan does not really attach any importance to a document being filled up by a merchant or agent, for the signature of the Customs officers, he has himself issued instructions that the lockers orders, by which delivery from the Bonding Warehouse is obtained of goods on which the duty may amount to thousands, shall be filled up by the merchants or agents, for the signature of the warehousekeeper.

Mr. Duncan: That is the law.

Mr. Metcalfe: It is not so in England. But how can the Collector say that I assumed authority. I have not had more than half a dozen interviews with him, which were of a friendly character; and, since June, I have not been in the Custom House an hour in the course of any week; and yet my influence is said to continue. If it is so, I can only accept it as a great compliment that, notwithstanding all the undisguised hatred and malice shewn by the Collector and his friends, I should be looked upon as an authority and guide in matters relating to the department. I again beg to assure the Board that I never used the influence I possessed to the prejudice of the revenue. I have been deeply grieved to hear Col. Gibbes and his regulations so lightly spoken of. My knowledge of that gentleman emboldens me to say, that no one understood the business of the department better than he did; and had he only required from his officers the same amount of zeal and knowledge that he himself possessed and practised, things which have happened would not have come to pass. Col. Gibbes suffered from having incompetent people about him, whom his kindness of heart did not permit him to have removed. The Board will have observed that all the witnesses admit that the other agents had the same privileges accorded to them that we had. And yet we are singled out for persecution on account of some mysterious influence which cannot be explained. I again assert that my influence, if I had any, arose solely from my knowledge and the officers' ignorance of the laws and regulations of the Customs; and it is surely not to be wondered at that persons newly appointed to office should seek advice from those who really do understand the business and are willing to give it. As nothing to the contrary has been proved, I think I am not assuming too much in saying that my influence in the Customs Department has been very beneficial. As to improvements in carrying out the business of the Customs, I confess I can see none, except that the officers are more active than formerly; and I venture to say, that so long as the present system of weighing cargoes into the warehouse exists, there will always be deficiencies which cannot easily be accounted for. I now confidently leave my case in the hands of the Board, who I am persuaded are desirous to do even-handed justice.

Captain Ward: Mr. Duncan, in his opening address, states that previous to his time you were in the habit of obtaining money for drawback previous to the debenture being signed.

Mr. Metcalfe: That I do not admit; but I have received the money before the debenture has been examined and checked. This, however, was solely by reason of the dilatory way in which business was done in the office, so that it sometimes took a fortnight to examine and check the debenture. He made me an advance on account, knowing that I was always at hand in case he found anything wrong.

Captain Ward: In what state were the debentures when the money was paid to you?

Mr. Metcalfe: Quite complete, with the exception of the signature of the clerk, who examines them as to the correctness of the amount. The signatures of the searcher and the agent were affixed.

Mr. Duncan: The evidence has shewn how much value is to be attached to the searcher's signature.

Mr. Browne: Col. Gibbes, I believe, kept his own account of payments and gave his own cheques for moneys due?

Mr. Metcalfe: Yes. That was the way it was done. I used to go to him and ask him to give me a cheque on account.

Captain Ward: With respect to the short shipment by the "Moa;" the Board would like to know the particulars of that case; and to hear some reason from you why you kept back the refund so long as you did?

Mr. Metcalfe: I know nothing of that case; Mr. Powell had the whole management of it, and he will explain it. As to my indorsing the warrant, the officer, who is short-sighted, came to me with the shipping note in his hand, and asked me to be good enough to indorse on the warrant the quantities contained in the shipping notes. The captain had given him a receipt for the full quantity, and to do the officer a service I did indorse the warrant for him, but in accordance with the documents he shewed me and the information we had from the Sugar Company.

Captain Ward: In acting as agent for the Sugar Company, how do you transact your business? What authority do you have for passing the entries?

Mr. Metcalfe: We have first a notice of drawback. (Witness hands in a book labelled "Notices for Drawback") The Company sends this down to us, and we then prepare the entry, on the face of which we declare that the Import Duty has been paid upon it.

Captain Ward: Is this declaration necessary?

Mr. Metcalfe: Yes; it was established by a regulation of Colonel Gibbes. This entry is then sent down to the searcher on the wharf, and he weighs the goods or not to satisfy himself as to the quantity shipped. This quantity being ascertained, he indorses it upon the back of the document, the indorsement shewing the actual quantity shipped. This may be a little less than the quantity named on the face of the document.

Captain Ward: Can you shew me the "Moa" business in your book?

Mr. Metcalfe: Yes. I produce the notices of drawbacks, and shew that on the 3rd May I received an order to ship twenty-eight tons of bastard sugar by the "Moa" for Auckland. After this the Company sends us down another book, in which are contained the actual shipment and short shipment. The book which contains the "Moa's" shipment I have not here now; but here is a copy of it. The book contains all the particulars of quantities, packages, and weights, and when the officer asks us to do so we indorse his warrant from that book.

Mr. Browne: Then you only indorse the warrant with what the Sugar Company sends down to you.

Mr. Metcalfe: Exactly. The entry respecting the "Moa" is as follows:—2 hhds. 22 cwt. 2 qrs. 21 lbs.; amount of drawback, £44 6s.; 216 mats, 110 cwt., 1,120 mats, 560 cwt.: drawback on the two, £140.

Captain Ward: There are some deficiencies at Melbourne and Geelong, that you might allude to?

Mr. Metcalfe: Mr. Powell will explain all these matters.

Mr.

Mr. Powell said: Before I commence my statement in defence, I must call the attention of the Board to a letter I wrote to the Collector of Customs, asking him to furnish me with information indispensably requisite to enable me to get up my case in reply to Mr. Duncan's charges. To that letter I had no reply, and on the following day I wrote another letter, to which likewise I received no answer. As the papers I then asked for are not produced before the Board, I beg to submit to the Board, that having been called upon to answer these charges preferred against me by Mr. Duncan, I am entitled to have the documents necessary for my defence. The Board must have perceived that very many difficulties must encounter me on every side in answering these charges, and that these difficulties are very much enhanced by the refusal of Mr. Duncan to furnish me with the papers I require. (Letters from Mr. Powell to the Collector of Customs, dated 22 December, 1859, requesting to be furnished with the papers of certain vessels, and 23 December, 1859, requiring an answer to letter of previous day, put in by Mr. Powell and read.)

Captain Ward: Mr. Duncan, did you receive that letter?

Mr. Duncan: I did; but it was not at all likely that I was going to give public documents into the hands of a private person.

Mr. Powell: On a former occasion Mr. Duncan promised to furnish us with any documents in his possession that we might consider necessary for our case; and as I am laboring under very great difficulties in proving my case, I trust that the Board will at all events relieve me from this one.

Mr. Duncan: The papers have been already looked out by the clerks in my department, and if Mr. Powell will state the object for which he is going to use them, I have no objection to hand them over to the Board. Some of these papers, however, are partly of a private nature, and as the correspondence is not yet complete, I should not wish them to be made public.

Captain Ward: To what correspondence do you allude?

Mr. Duncan: To that from the Collectors at Auckland and Melbourne.

Captain Ward: You can furnish us with extracts containing the official portions of them, or such portions of them as you may not object to produce.

Mr. Duncan: I wish first to know for what object they are to be produced.

Captain Ward: Let them be sent in, and the Board will take care that they are not improperly used.

Mr. Powell: In answering the charges made by Mr. Duncan against myself, I claim the indulgence of the Board for the manner in which I may deal with them. I shall feel great difficulty in separating the charges made against Mr. Metcalfe from those that specially refer to myself. The charges brought against us in Mr. Duncan's letter of the 6th December are of so general a character that they have enabled him to introduce other charges throughout the inquiry. I propose therefore keeping in view as far as possible the charges first made, and also commenting as briefly as possible upon the new matter introduced. I entirely differ from Mr. Duncan as to his opinion of the character and position of a Custom House Agent. I cannot regard myself, as the Collector in his letter of the 24th November to the Secretary of the Treasury regards me, as the "mere creature of the Collector" by law, or as holding my license at his will; neither do I admit that he has the right to cancel my license or to interfere with me in any manner, except he can shew that I have been guilty of fraud or misconduct, and I only understand misconduct to mean, anything that may peril the safety of the revenue. Neither do I admit that I hold my license by sufferance, as stated by Mr. Duncan. I give bond, and have to find surety for my good conduct, and that license can only be cancelled with the concurrence of the Governor General. Upon this point I refer the Board to the 9th Vict., No. 15, Sect. 60. By a previous clause it is provided that the Collector of Customs shall have power to grant licenses to persons to act as Custom House Agents, they giving bond with one security in £200 for the faithful and honest discharge of their duties. Then the 60th clause provides that it shall be lawful for the Collector, with the concurrence of the Governor, to revoke any such license, clearly evidencing that the Collector of his own act should not have this power.

Mr. Duncan: What does the bond say? That it is to be given up whenever the agent shall be called upon to do so by the Collector.

Mr. Powell: The bond is only given under the Act, and consequently the Act must be taken to over-ride the bond. Thus then the Collector can grant, but cannot revoke a license. But further than this, if the Board will do me the favor to refer to page 86 of Hansmill's Customs Laws, they will find by a decision of Lord Abinger's that licensed agents are not in any way the servants of the Customs, and are to be viewed as necessary and valuable auxiliaries against fraud by securing identity where frauds may be perpetrated. An agent may be made the unconscious instrument of a fraud by false representations on the part of the persons employing him, but how can it be imagined possible that any respectable agent would peril his license by shielding his principal if he knew that a fraud was contemplated. Yet, according to Mr. Duncan's theory, agents are responsible for the acts of their principals. In answer to this allegation of Mr. Duncan, I put before the Board the view upheld in Woolrich's Commercial Law, p. 321. Here it is very clearly laid down that "where the agent communicates to the party with whom he is dealing that he does not himself undertake any responsibility, and discloses his principal, he is not liable." This is what we as Custom House Agents most unmistakably have done.

Mr. Duncan: The quotation does not apply, since it refers to a commercial and not to a Custom House Agent.

Mr. Powell: The same principle applies in all cases; we gave up the name of our principal, and so relieved ourselves. Had I considered it necessary, I could also have brought the the authority of Macculloch upon this same point. I will now endeavor to answer the charge made against me by Mr. Duncan with reference to the blank clearance, and I think I shall be able to shew that, so far from its being a matter of such magnitude as to require the termination of my connection with the Custom House, it was perfectly harmless, and that it has been shewn in evidence that no fraud could possibly have been committed; that it was sanctioned by Mr. Duncan's predecessor, and altered to suit the wishes of Mr. Duncan, without complaint or opposition on our part; and further, that in substance the same form of clearance is now allowed. In order to facilitate the clearance of the Melbourne steamers, and to enable them to take in free goods, consisting chiefly of fruit and other merchandise of a perishable character, till the time of the vessel's departure, the late Collector permitted an additional clearance to be made at the wharf. He objected to the clearance being signed by the officer then in charge of the wharf, and was in the habit of signing the clearance for all goods for which entries had been passed, to within about two hours of the vessel's departure; all drawbacks or bonded goods being satisfactorily accounted for, and the signature of the clearing clerk placed under the last entry in the outward content. The free goods at the wharf were then filled in, in continuation, the declaration made, and the clearance countersigned by the officer on the wharf. The same system was submitted to Mr. Duncan, in the usual course, and he objected to sign, not a blank clearance as stated by him, but a clearance which it was intended to have filled up in the course established by his predecessor. How Mr. Duncan can assert that we filled in the clearance as we chose, when he knew that it would be countersigned by the officer at the wharf; how he can continue now to let us have blank clearances, with the Customs seal affixed, and filled in by the clearing clerk for free goods only, to be afterwards signed, witnessed, and declaration taken by his own officer on the wharf, and then insinuate the possibility of fraud, I am at a loss to understand. I will specially refer the Board to the evidence of Mr. Lane, clearing clerk, on this subject, which shews clearly the impossibility of any fraud being committed under the present, or under the past system; and I think the Board will agree with me, that there is no practical difference between the two plans, and certainly not the slightest shadow of a pretence for depriving me of my licence, for presenting a document for Mr. Duncan's signature, of which I have heard no complaint in any shape or form from him, except in his letter to the Board, dated 6th December, 1859. To prove this, I put in the papers of the "City of Sydney," of 10th May, 1859; and of the "London," of the 14th May, 1859, which I would ask the Board to examine. The object I have in doing this, is to shew the practice that existed in Colonel Gibbs' time; and then to shew that which is now followed, so that the Board may see how very little difference there is between the system of Mr. Duncan, and that of his predecessor. It will be here seen, that the clerk has initialled the manifest, and that no drawback or bonded goods are entered after these initials. After it had been thus initialled, it was submitted to the Collector, who signed it. Any goods afterwards taken on board were entered beneath the initials, and were looked after by the landing-waiter at the wharf. Now the only change that Mr. Duncan has made has been to have these additional goods entered upon another manifest, instead of being upon the same one as the other goods shipped by the vessel. I now beg to draw the attention of the Board to the alleged loose system of obtaining drawbacks for goods without going through the regular form of declaration. Declaration has always been made upon the face of the warrant, merely as to the fact of payment of duties upon importation. I further hand in a form, shewing the declaration made in the first instance upon the face of the warrant.

Mr. Duncan objected: This is not the declaration I object to, and Mr. Powell knows it, and is endeavoring to lead the Board away in a wrong direction.

Mr. Powell only put in this form to shew the Board the system pursued from the beginning.

Captain Ward: The Board think the form had better not be put in, as Mr. Duncan objects, and as it has nothing to do with the case.

Mr. Duncan: My objection goes to the fact, that money was obtained on the debentures without the declaration having been first signed.

Mr. Powell: I am aware that such is the objection, and that is the one that I am prepared to answer. But I will proceed.—The declaration, in the form I have shewn the Board, having been made, it is passed to the clerk receiving the entry, although the mere form of acknowledging a signature, which is perhaps seen by that gentleman fifty times a day, has been admitted. The declaration on the debenture, by which the money is paid, is the only declaration of importance, as pledging the declarant to the fact that the goods are really and truly exported. Before this declaration is made in the presence of the Collector it is necessary to have the debenture examined by the drawback clerk, who closely compares it with the searcher's warrant. It is then necessary to procure the signature of the searcher who saw the goods shipped, and when this is done the document is ready for declaration before the Collector. With reference to the loose practise complained of by the Collector, and by the abolition of which he states he has saved to the revenue many thousands of pounds, I think I have shewn that he could have saved nothing, so far as the declaration at the time of entry is concerned; and by the time the declaration reaches him, the declaration or non-declaration could not result in a penny of advantage to the revenue. The practice of Col. Gibbs was to take the whole of the debentures from me, first asking me if my signature was attached to each debenture, and taking a general declaration as to the truth of the statements contained. Mr. Duncan's practice requires me to make declaration upon each separate document. It might as well be urged that we should repudiate our receipt for the money because the landing surveyor was not witness to the payment of the money, although the document requires his signature as such. I cannot understand what the the Collector means by stating the very questionable hypothesis of saving thousands of pounds; or admitting any doubt of possibility of such saving, why he should have incurred our enmity, as he complains in the second section of his letter, upon the mere absence of declaration to a signature which could be proved at any time. I now hand in for the consideration of the Board the debentures with the necessary declaration attached.

Mr. Duncan: That is the only declaration to which my letters allude, and the one that I consider of importance. It was, however, so little thought of by my predecessor, that I myself, on the first day I came into the Custom House to take charge of the department, saw Col. Gibbes sign two large bundles of these, without Mr. Powell or Mr. Anybody else being present to make the necessary declaration.

Mr. Powell: In that case the declaration must have been taken in the way I have just described.

Mr. Duncan: I cannot conceive it to be legal to take declarations in that manner.

Captain M'Levie: I have seen informations on oath taken in the same way at the Police Court.

Captain Ward: The debenture is signed, however, before you receive the money?

Mr. Powell: Yes. The signatures have all to be obtained before the declaration is made. When that is made and signed the money is paid on the Collector's signature. There is one thing that I would remark upon, and that is that this declaration to the debenture may at first sight appear at variance with the declaration on the warrant, but this discrepancy arises out of the system of short shipments that has been introduced.

Captain Ward: The Board fully understand this.

Mr. Powell: The third complaint the Collector makes against me is in reference to some words said to have been uttered by me, the truth of which I entirely deny. The evidence in support of this charge is brought by Mr. Mackenzie, a junior clerk in the department, who represents that he wrote down these words at the time of their utterance, for the purpose, as he says, of making use of them when opportunity might offer. This testimony is corroborated by Mr. Maddox, whose memory Mr. Mackenzie refreshed especially for this purpose; and Mr. Duncan admits in the cross-examination of Mr. Maddox by myself, that he, Mr. Maddox, with the assistance of Mr. Mackenzie, called to mind the conversation referred to. I need not remind the Board of the manner in which Mr. Mackenzie gave his evidence; the insolent malice indicated by his answers, his gross and studied disrespect towards Mr. Metcalfe, and his servile flattery of Mr. Duncan, prevent the necessity of any attempt on my part to refute that person's testimony. Of Mr. Maddox I have little to say, his entire ignorance of Customs Laws, by his own admission, and of his duty, have been already on a previous occasion sufficiently demonstrated to require any further comment from me. The absurdity of supposing such a speech could be made by me, when at that time the late Collector had not retired from office, and it was not known that he would retire, is so palpable that I need not trouble the Board with any further remarks. I emphatically deny that I ever offered any opposition whatever to the Collector, or that I have offered opposition to his regulation for the examination of drawback or any goods, but, on the contrary, I assisted him, until I found that my suggestions were unwelcome. I first suggested to the Collector the propriety of the locker's delivery order being signed by the cashier as well as by the warehousekeeper. This has been carried out in a very imperfect manner, and the whole warehousekeeper's department is carried on in an unbusiness-like manner. It was my special desire to have introduced a sound and practical plan, based upon the English practice; but, finding the Collector wedded to mere theory, and observing his jealousy, suspicion, and distrust of practical suggestions, I abstained as far as possible from offering any opinion upon the management of the department. The fourth paragraph of Mr. Duncan's charges relates to the short shipment of one ton of sugar per "Moa," and I beg particularly to call the attention of the Board to the fact that Mr. Duncan prejudices my case by expressing the surprise he will feel if the Board does not concur with him in the necessity of cancelling my license; but when I have placed before the Board the whole facts of this matter, and produced the evidence in support of those facts, I shall be content to accept their decision. On the 3rd May last we passed an entry for twenty-eight tons bastards, and seven tons refined sugar for drawback; the Sugar Company, upon completion of their shipment, returned to us as having been shipped by them—2 hhds, 1 ton 2 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs.; 216 mats, 5 tons 10 cwt.; and 1,120 mats, 28 tons; making a total of 34 tons 12 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs., shewing a short shipment of 7 cwt. and 7 lbs. The mate's receipt appears first on the back of the warrant, agreeing with the returns made by the Company; the indorsement was made by Mr. Metcalfe at Russell's request, bills of lading were signed by the captain, invoices were rendered to the purchaser, and payment made by him for the quantity of sugar referred to. I knew nothing of any short shipment beyond the 7 cwt. and 7 lbs. until the return of Captain Bowden to port.

Captain Ward: At what date was this?

Mr. Powell: I cannot remember the date; however, we shall call Captain Bowden as a witness, and he will remember the date. On the captain's return to port, he told me that something was wrong with the sugar; but what that something was, he could not say with any degree of certainty. He told me that at his request the Collector of Customs at Auckland would write to Sydney upon the subject. I at once instituted inquiries, the result of which will be found in Mr. Ross's letter of the 26th July, paragraph 5, where he says—"With these facts before me, I could not be expected, without full inquiry, to refund to the Collector the amount of drawback—especially as I had not then, nor have I yet, been satisfied that the sugar was actually short shipped." I referred this matter then in the first instance to Mr. Ross; but, being unable to obtain any satisfactory explanation, I determined to wait the Collector's letter from Auckland. The very fact of the whole quantity of sugar believed to have been shipped having been supplied by the Company, indorsed by Mr. Metcalfe on the warrant, and placed upon the clearance, is a clear proof that we had no intention of committing a fraud. It must also be evident to the Board that the Auckland authorities would require from Captain Bowden some explanation for the protection of their revenue, and in the absence of such explanation they would require him to pay the duty. The sugar has not been discovered to this day, although it left the sugar-house in due course for shipment; and the carman who was responsible for its delivery has been compelled to pay for the sugar and the duty thereon. I do not understand that I did anything wrong in the matter, and having during three years received drawback amounting to £51,000, and having never had a mistake (except one of a similar character for one ton of sugar which has afterwards found at Wanganui instead of Nelson, for which port it was supposed to have been shipped) I cannot conceive that my career as a Custom House Agent should be so summarily put a stop to, as Mr. Duncan so frequently desires in his correspondence with the Treasury.

Captain Ward: Before we go further, it is important that we should know the exact date when the "Moa" came back to Sydney.

Mr. Powell: The drawback was received by us on the 9th May, and we repaid it on the 27th June.

Mr. Duncan: The 29th June.

Mr. Powell: Our cheque is dated the 27th June, and I presume that was the day the money was paid; and we were called upon by the Collector to explain the matter on the 30th June, after the money had been paid.

Captain Ward: But the date of the vessel's arrival?

Mr. Powell: That I have not got. The 6th paragraph of the Collector's complaints against me refers to the confidential correspondence which he asserts satisfies him that the "Moa's" is by no means an isolated case. Now, if the case were as the Collector has represented it, can the Board believe that Mr. Duncan would have hesitated to bring such serious charges before them, like many other statements he has made partaking of the same vague and indefinite character, which has characterised his assertions throughout the whole of this inquiry. If this confidential correspondence that I have asked from him be produced, I think the Board will find on reading it that it will bear but one interpretation, and that is, that errors have been occurring in both ways, sometimes against the revenue, sometimes in its favor. I feel that this will be the case. I know that when the time comes for explaining these deficiencies, I shall be able to shew the reason for the occurrence of these errors. Can Mr. Duncan suppose, that because he took office, the system of fraud which he alleges to have been in existence, ceased immediately; or that his coming into office could have any effect upon the amount paid for drawback? If he does, he makes a great mistake. The amount of drawbacks depends entirely upon commercial principles. The falling off of the intercolonial trade is too well known to require any comment at my hands. Again it is well known that consequent upon glutted markets goods are shipped for the sake of obtaining advances and drawback. In the return I now lay before the Board, it will be seen that the drawback claimed from the Government has fluctuated and decreased during the last two years, whilst the causes of this fluctuation are shewn in the remarks made on the opposite side. It will be seen also that Mr. Duncan is entirely wrong in stating that the bulk of these drawback goods found their way to New Zealand, and that this trade is on the increase, as by this return the very reverse is shewn.

(Return of amount of drawback received by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell during each month from November, 1856, to November, 1859, put in.)

Mr. Powell: Mr. Duncan would have us believe that the falling off in the amount paid for drawbacks is owing to an increased vigilance in his department; I, however, find other, and as I conceive better, reasons for it,—in the falling off in the intercolonial trade, in the rival sugar works established here, and in the large establishment that has been for some time at work in Melbourne, and which now supplies many of those markets hitherto fed from here. That since the commencement of 1859 the export of sugar and the consequent amount required for drawback has been falling off. To shew how far I am correct in my surmises, I would direct you to any month given in Mr. Duncan's table. Take for instance the month of January, 1858, and you will find that during that month the Government paid £6,123 for drawback. Now by looking at our return it will be seen that we claimed on behalf of the Sugar Company, during this same month, £6,429, a larger amount than that paid altogether by the Government. The difference between the two amounts arises solely from the fact of our not having put in our debentures within the month.

Captain Ward: Can you tell us where the sugar went to?

Mr. Powell: The entries are very numerous, but I find exports to Melbourne, Geelong, Hobart Town, Adelaide, and Auckland. Of the total, £51,000, here shewn to have been claimed by us as drawback, £23,000 was claimed for shipments to Victoria, Tasmania, and Adelaide, the rest being for New Zealand and other ports. We are now deprived of nearly the whole of the Victorian, Tasmanian, and Adelaide trade, and much of the New Zealand, by this new Sugar Company that has come into operation in Melbourne.

Captain Ward: When was that Company started?

Mr. Powell: Some time in 1858. I contend that my statement is fully supported by the figures of this return, and that I have shewn that the falling off in the drawback is owing to the falling off in the sugar trade of the Colonial Sugar Company, owing to the establishment of a sugar-house in Melbourne. In fact I have it in my power, if the Board could spare me the time to explain the causes of the fluctuation in the drawback for every month;—for instance, the apparent increase of the drawback in February, 1859, was owing to some large orders the Sugar Company had to execute; and of this amount we had to claim

£150

£150 as drawback on sugar exported to Adelaide alone. In addition to his other complaints, Mr. Duncan says, incidentally, that he has not been able to reduce these payments for drawback to their just dimensions. I would ask Mr. Duncan what these just dimensions are; and upon what data he would fix them? I have always believed that it is the duty of the Collector of Customs solely to collect and protect the revenue, and that when he officially steps out of his way to interfere with the operations of trade, such interference is uniformly attended with annoyance and vexation. The alleged deficiencies I shall refer to before I have finished my remarks. The charges contained in the seventh paragraph, which refers to my letter to Mr. Ross, I propose to deal with separately, and shall therefore pass them over here, merely remarking that Mr. Duncan's charges take a very much wider range than I can be expected to follow, since the late Government, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, and the Executive Council, are all more or less censured by Mr. Duncan, whilst the whole force and weight of his censure have been brought to bear upon the weakest and the one the least able to support it—myself. The accident by which Mr. Duncan became possessed of the knowledge of the political influence which he deprecates, the manner in which he became possessed of the document, and the use he so improperly made of it are matters which I hope will engage the consideration of the Board. The conclusion of these charges contains a general accusation of personal disrespect to the Collector of Customs; I have only to say that I have seen Mr. Duncan but once since the 9th August, 1859, and up to that period I do not find in the printed correspondence any such charge made against me. Since that time I have had none but written communications with Mr. Duncan, and I challenge him to produce one instance in which I have shewn a want of respect to his office, although I have received frequent provocations by rude messages sent to me, and by most uncalled for comments made upon my written applications. I shall now deal as briefly as I can with the printed correspondence before the Board. And first as regards the short shipment by the "Moa." Mr. Duncan seems to lay great stress upon this, alleging that the shipment was improperly made, and that Mr. Metcalfe's conduct in the matter was reprehensible. Now, I assert that, even if the shipment had been made by a person utterly unknown to the department, it was by no means improperly placed; but, made as it was by Mr. Metcalfe, a gentleman so long and so well known to the Customs, it was perfectly right and correct in every respect. The circumstances were plainly these:—On the 3rd May entry was passed for 7 tons refined, and 28 tons bastards sugar; the quantity shipped was as follows:—2 hds., 1 ton 2 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs.; 216 mats, 5 tons 10 cwt.; 1,120 mats, 28 tons; in all, 34 tons 12 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs. The quantity short shipped was shewn on the warrant as 7 cwt. 0 qrs. 7 lbs. The short shipment was indorsed on the warrant by a person well known, whom I can and will produce, if I am shewn the warrant. The short shipment as indorsed was believed by all concerned to be correct; and it was so in all except one ton.

Mr. Duncan: Then, if that be the case, Mr. Metcalfe's indorsement must be false.

Mr. Powell: I repeat that the reduction of 7 cwt. 7 lbs., was made by us on account of the short shipment, and was correct. The whole shipment was thus correct, save and except only as regards the one ton, which we admit to have been wrong. How, I would ask, we could possibly have known, before the return of the vessel, that the sugar was one ton short—that the whole quantity sent down had not been shipped? Mr. Duncan, however, insinuates that we must have known it, for in his letter of the 29th June, he says,—“I cannot but express my surprise, that on the return of the “Moa,” no intimation of this short landing should have been made to me, by the Company or their agents, who must then, at least, if not before, have become aware of the fact.” Does Mr. Duncan imagine that the Company would have charged the purchaser, who was owner of the ship, for a ton more sugar than went on board, for the sake of defrauding the revenue of £5, an insignificant sum as compared with the value of the sugar? The thing is almost too absurd to imagine. Will the Collector deny, that I, in his presence, spoke of Russell as a totally unfit person to have so great an amount of responsibility placed in his hands? Besides, I knew it to be a physical impossibility for any man, however active, to perform the duties of the office without assistance. This was proved in the case of Mr. Chapman, as that gentleman informed Mr. Duncan, again in my presence, that he was unequal to the task. I now wish to shew the Board, the change that came over Mr. Duncan's opinion relative to this matter of the “Moa,” within a very brief period. In his note to Mr. Metcalfe's explanation, of the 1st July, he says (p. 3 of the correspondence,)—“I do not, of course, mean that Mr. Metcalfe would do anything of this kind.” Afterwards, however—whatever it was that wrought the change—we find Mr. Duncan writing, on the 22nd November (p. 20 of the correspondence) in the following terms:—“In calling attention to these letters, I must express my regret that the late Government did not afford me that support against these agents to which my zeal for the public service should have given me a claim; for I do not believe, that at any other port in the empire, a Custom House Agent would have been allowed to retain his license one hour, after indorsing, and falsely indorsing too, a landing-waiter's warrant, as Mr. Metcalfe did.” These passages, placed side by side, scarcely need any comment from me, as they speak quite forcibly enough for themselves. When I saw the Collector on the subject of this short shipment by the “Moa,” he told me that there was a very grave offence, upon the part of some person, in having indorsed the warrant for the shipment of the sugar by the “Moa;” and he said that if he knew who had written these remarks, he would punish him severely. I, at once, said that the writing was Mr. Metcalfe's, and that we were prepared to defend the course we had taken; and I tendered, pending inquiry, any amount the Collector might think necessary, to cover the deficiencies proved. The Collector threatened to prosecute the captain, and dealt out threats in all directions. I knew the matter to be perfectly fair and honest, and had no fear of anything the Collector could bring against us.

Mr.

Mr. Duncan : There was this, however, to be said against the captain, and that cannot be got over: he declared here, that the goods were on board his ship; whilst he declared in Auckland, that they had never been put on board. The declaration, in both cases, being in the nature of an oath.

Mr. Powell : The captain makes his declaration to the best of his knowledge and belief, and a mistake is as likely to occur in shipping goods as in anything else. I will now endeavor to explain why the sugar by the "Lord Worsley" was struck out of that vessel's manifest. All goods have to be entered and made shipped by the searcher, and had a free entry been passed for the sugar, the officer would have certified at once to the shipment; and to evade this consequence, an illegal and improper act was allowed to shield the department, and deprive the Company of a sum to which they were and are legally and morally entitled. I draw the attention of the Board to the papers of the "Lord Worsley" of 9th July. They will there see that entry was made of 344 mats and 2 hogsheads of sugar. The sugar was taken on board, and the quantity entered on the manifest as correct, and yet this was struck out of the manifest, and thus the captain, when he came to declare to his content, was forced to make a false declaration, by reason of the sugar which he knew to be in the ship not being on the manifest. Here it was certain that the sugar had been shipped, and I assert that it was much more wrong to compel the captain of the "Moa" to make what he knew was a false declaration than for the captain of the "Moa" to make a declaration which at the time of making he believed to be true. The sugar was entered for drawback, but the searcher objecting that he had not seen the goods shipped, the warrant was not passed. In consequence of this disallowance no entry was passed, the sugar was struck out of the manifest, and the Company were thereby defrauded of the amount of drawback which they ought to have received. Now I refer the Board to the papers of the "Spray" of the 8th July, and the "Kate Kearney" of the 8th July; it will be seen from them that a different course was pursued upon these occasions. (Papers produced and examined.) In the case of the "Kate Kearney" I find a claim made for 40 mats, 10 hogsheads, and 10 tons of sugar, which the officer says he has not seen, but which were yet allowed and passed for drawback, and left upon the manifest. The same thing occurs in the case of the "Spray," and I allude to these cases here solely to shew that different kinds of conduct were pursued in different cases, just as it happened to suit the humour of the officers. I shall have to refer to these vessels again when I come to the review of the letter I wrote to Mr. Ross, in which these three vessels are mentioned. I shall then go fully into all the facts that led me to write this letter. I would direct the attention of the Board to the practice of passing free goods. The entry is sent in describing the goods, the officer signs it, and it is passed at once, and the goods are shipped without any question from the searcher. Now had I passed an entry for 500 bags of sugar free, they would have been shipped by the searcher without remark, but in consequence of the drawback being claimed upon them, this difficulty has arisen, and these objections have been taken in order to prevent us from receiving the money. On the 13th July, in a letter to the Treasury, Mr. Duncan declares that we, as agents, were aware of his intention not to take the weights of the Company. Now I propose to shew that, not only was I not aware of any change made in this respect, but that, in fact, no change whatever has been made, the same system being followed as had been hitherto pursued. In his letter of the 13th July, Mr. Duncan writes:—"Mr. Ross says that the sugar was accompanied as usual with two cart notes—no doubt, so was the sugar per 'Moa'; yet it never got on board. But the truth is, the agents of the Company were perfectly aware that I would not take the weights from them, nor the quantities from the cart notes, and they had no right to expect me to do so." Then again in his letter of 4th August, 1859, p. 7, Mr. Duncan says:—"Long before the date of that shipment (per 'Spray'), I stated to the agents of the Company, and to their managing clerk, that the sugar shipped for drawback must be weighed in the presence of an officer." Mr. Chapman, on 12th July, 1859, p. 7, writes:—"I called again at the office, and urged the necessity of my seeing the sugar weighed and shipped, in order to secure the drawback;" and then again, under date 19th August, p. 13, he says:—"With regard to his statement of the old system having been reverted to, I may state such is not the case, for since the 8th July, all goods for drawback have been examined previous to shipment." On the 30th August, p. 14, Mr. Duncan writes:—"I took the earliest opportunity of putting a stop to this loose system, by requiring the exporters to make a proper declaration before me, and the searchers to examine and weigh the goods before shipment. To this regulation the merchants generally have made no opposition, while the most harrassing and persevering resistance has been made to it on the part of the Sugar Company from the commencement to the present time." In his letter of the 18th August, p. 10, paragraph 2, he says:—"I never intended to make any distinction, either for them (the Sugar Company) or against them;" whilst Mr. Still, on 17th August, p. 12, says:—"Mr. Powell, on being reminded by you that you had spoken to him on several occasions respecting the weighing of drawbacks, admitted you had done so, but that you had not specially mentioned the Sugar Company." Mr. Still answers the Collector's letter very carefully, and it is completely silent about the weighing. The reason for this silence I shall presently have occasion to shew. I have shewn the Board that Company's sugars are not weighed now.

Mr. Duncan : Not all weighed.

Mr. Powell : Will the Collector deny that he now takes the average of the Company's refined sugar?

Mr. Duncan : Of the Company's refined sugar, certainly, or of chests of tea, or of anything of a uniform weight.

Mr. Powell : I submit then that all along the Company's sugar has been averaged for drawback, and that Mr. Duncan has given orders himself that such should be the course pursued; pursued; and yet he says that he never made any distinction between Company's and other sugar. Now, we have distinct evidence that no other sugar than the Company's was ever averaged. Other sugar was always weighed. I have shewn the Board that Company's sugars are averaged, and not weighed, even now; and from the cross-examination of a witness brought here by the Collector himself, I have proved that on the 1st December, only a few weeks back, no less than twenty-five tons sugar were shipped by the Sugar Company and were not weighed, a few bags only having been taken and weighed for average—the same practice in fact that has always existed, and in reference only to the Sugar Company's shipments. The whole correspondence I have quoted generally bears out this same point. The evidence also shews that it was by the orders of Mr. Duncan that this was done, and not by any act of the Customs officer. Thus my statement contained in my letter to Mr. Ross is substantially borne out by the evidence and the correspondence, as well as by Mr. Duncan's own letter and statement. What I said was,—“There was no renewal of the practice of weighing sugar, simply because no sugar manufactured by the Company had been weighed previous to the error in the “Moa's” shipment, nor subsequently, until the appointment of Mr. Chapman on the 6th.” Now, I ask the Board whether this statement has not been substantially borne out? In the commencement of my letter I say,—“I assert most unhesitatingly that I had no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have Company's sugar weighed for drawback, except as I shall hereinafter shew.” It is clear here from the reservation I make, that I mean that I had no intimation of Mr. Duncan's wish to have the whole of the sugar weighed. It has been shewn that only a few bags were weighed, and that then the bags were counted and averaged by the ascertained weight of these bags. And yet the Collector says he wanted to have the whole of the bags weighed. Now Mr. Still admits that he authorised Russell to weigh only a portion of the bags in order to average the weight, and there can therefore be no doubt about this course having been sanctioned by the Collector. Will the Board be prepared to believe that Mr. Still, the second officer in the department, authorised that which his principal has endeavoured to make you believe he never did or would sanction? In disavowing this sanction, Mr. Duncan deals with the matter in such a manner as prevents me from speaking of it calmly, since he throws discredit on the acts of his worthy predecessor in office, by assuming that the non-weighing of Company's sugar for drawback had been a fertile source of fraud. On the 22nd November, in his letter to the Treasury, Mr. Duncan represents that he has reduced the amount of drawback one-half. I presume that he means that he has effected this by his system of weighing the goods entered for drawback. If so, I can inform him that his predecessor did the same. I have had drawback refused me by Colonel Gibbes for this reason, but that gentlemen was always satisfied with the production of a certificate of one landing. If he has saved anything by this system of weighing, he certainly gained none of it by the Sugar Company. This was simply because (except during the three or four days of Mr. Chapman's being in office, during which time he most improperly prevented the Sugar Company from obtaining drawback, amounting in all to about £75) the Company's Sugar has not been weighed, and I have shewn the authority of Mr. Duncan for this course. If we are to have more quibbling about the “Moa,” let me remind the Board that he has worn this one ton completely threadbare, commencing on the 29th June, and insisted upon during the whole of this correspondence. In fact the “Moa's” one ton short shipment seems to be always present to his distorted imagination, and he does not appear to be able to get rid of it. The position I have taken is even more strongly proved by the fourth paragraph of Mr. Duncan's letter of 18th August, 1859. He there says,—“If the sugar entered on the 1st and 4th July was not weighed, it was contrary to the searcher's instructions, contrary to my belief, and to that of the landing surveyor.” If Mr. Duncan pleads that he did not alter his plan until the 16th; then I refer him to our letter of the 8th. The suggestions contained in that letter were adopted at once, and Mr. Chapman was removed from an office the duties of which he had the honesty to declare he could not fulfil, and the old system was reverted to. I refer the Board specially to this, as proving the truth of the statement contained in my letter of the 9th August, 1859,—a letter which I hope the Board will pardon my egotism when I say that it is utterly impossible for the Collector to refute the statements therein made. And again, I invite the attention of the Board to the fact that no difficulty of any kind has occurred since that date. Short shipments have passed without challenge, qualities have not agreed with the claim, and in spite of the Collector's opposition the respect of the officers of the department has not been diminished for us, nor have they ceased to place that reliance on the good faith of the Sugar Company, which gentlemen and men of honor are always ready to place in each other. If the Board will refer to the papers of the “Louis and Miriam” of the 26th August, they will find that we entered for drawback for shipment by that vessel two tons refined and four tons bastards sugar. An objection was made to signing the warrant, as the searcher had not seen the sugar shipped.* This is the only case of difficulty that has arisen, with the exception of those which occurred during the time Mr. Chapman had charge of the drawback department. From that time to the present nothing of the kind has occurred; and yet during the three days of Mr. Chapman's management the Company was deprived of drawbacks amounting in the whole to £75. Our not having lost a single drawback since shews that the system under which the Sugar Company were so heavily mulcted must have been a wrong one, especially as on reverting to the old system no inconvenience, either to the department or to exporters, has arisen. Upon all this the Collector endeavors to build up up charges of dishonesty and fraud, and resorts to charges, the character of which only betrays his inexperience, and proves that he has been advised by a person whose entire ignorance of Customs practice was brought under the notice of the Board during the "Louisa" investigation; it is not to be supposed that the Collector, so recently arrived in Sydney, would have been likely so soon to have come down to the Government to make such charges as these, unless he had been urged on by some other person, who furnished the necessary material.

Captain Ward: To whom do you refer?

Mr. Powell: To Mr. Llewellyn. A very great point is made or attempted to be made of my having claimed for 15 tons refined sugar, per "Tasmania," and then only having shipped 5 tons, the remainder being of an inferior quality. Now, the Collector tries very hard to make it appear that we have done something exceedingly wrong in thus claiming drawback upon sugar of a different quality to that which was really shipped; but in this, as in other things, he has entirely mistaken his ground. The fact is that we received an order from the Company to clear outwards for drawback 15 tons of refined sugar. We entered the sugar for drawback, and sent notice to the proper officer, the description and quality of the sugar being notified on the face of the notice. For these we can claim if the goods are shipped; but we know as well as the Collector himself that we can only claim for the quality and the quantity actually shipped. Thus, then, we drew our debenture only for 5 tons refined and 10 tons bastards, the quantities and qualities certified by the landing-waiter to have been shipped. I direct the attention of the Board to the copy of the warrant in page 18 of the correspondence; and if they will turn to the original document in their possession they will see that what I have said is correct. The Board will see that the amount mentioned in the warrant is nothing more than a notice to the Customs authorities of the intention of the exporter to ship about that quantity; the subsequent indorsement by the searcher being the actual guide as to quantity and quality. Thus, then, we send in a claim for drawback on a certain quantity of sugar, but we get the money only for the actual quantity and quality that we ship; and we do not get paid for more than the officer knows and certifies to have been actually shipped irrespective of what appears on the face of the warrant.

Captain Ward: As it appears from the warrant, the transaction seems regular enough.

Mr. Duncan: The warrant now produced is not the one that I handed to the Board. The one I gave in bore an indorsement by myself and another by Mr. Still, neither of which is on the back of this document.

Mr. Powell: Had the Collector consulted us before making these charges; had he ever expressed his dissatisfaction with our mode of conducting business, or had he hinted at the apparent impropriety of any of our acts, we might have set him right. Such a course of conduct however appears to be foreign to his principles and to his nature, and whilst we have been pursuing our established practice, the Collector has, without our knowledge, been employed in misrepresenting us. But this will form matter for a future occasion. The practice at one time was to give notice, prior to shipment, of the estimated quantity and quality of the goods about to be shipped. When the shipment was completed a perfect entry was passed for the whole shipment, the officer retaining the notices. This plan worked well, but it was set aside by the late landing surveyor, Mr. Garling. The notices were done away with, or rather were made into entries, and thus documents which previously were looked upon as imperfect notices were passed as entries with the understanding that the perfect shipment was to be indorsed upon them. Hence it is that the shipments do not agree with the face of the entries, the entry being only approximate to the quantity intended to be shipped, whilst the drawback is payable only on the quantity indorsed. We can shew cases where, from various causes, principally from the Sugar Company being unprepared to execute the order, 12, 13, and even 30 tons have been short shipped in this manner. The old system was to give an imperfect notice to the landing-waiter, and then to pass entries when the shipment was completed. This was altered by turning the imperfect notice into the entry, and from this the system of short shipment has arisen. As the whole approximate quantity was put on the entry, it became necessary to indorse the short shipments afterwards. I can instance several cases of this.

Captain Ward: I do not know to what point this has reference.

Mr. Powell: It is merely to shew that the short shipment indorsed on the warrant is not to be taken as assuming anything wrong.

Captain Ward: It has not been said that it is.

Mr. Powell: Then I will leave that point. Now, if the Collector supposes that he has discovered a fraud because the return on the back of the warrant does not agree with the front, then he shews no superior amount of penetration. The same thing was a daily occurrence with his predecessor, who, understanding the arrangement, and having a perfect knowledge of the business, regarded our check as a safeguard and a wholesome assistance to his officers. The sugar shipped on the 1st and 4th July amounted in all to 19 tons. It was not weighed, yet drawback was allowed. How does Mr. Duncan suppose that, after he had called for and obtained a report from Russell, dated the 2nd July, on the 4th, that officer would voluntarily violate the Collector's orders or lend himself to a fraud? Mr. Duncan says that with such an officer I could obtain any terms of shipment. I repudiate the malignant insinuation, and will rely upon my character to refute so false an accusation. In paragraph 5 of his letter of 18th August, Mr. Duncan says,—“When, however, Mr. Powell states that I, ‘three days after the commencement of the new practice, reverted to ‘that which had been in force previously,’ he asserts that which he knows to be utterly ‘untrue.’” I think I have clearly proved to the Board that Mr. Duncan did in fact revert to

to the system previously in force, namely, that of averaging sugar shipped by the Company, all the evidence of those most likely to be acquainted with the actual working of the system going to shew that this was the mode of shipment in Colonel Gibbs' time. I come now to what is the most important part of the matter to me, as well from some important additions having been made to it, Mr. Ross, on the part of the Sugar Company, having repudiated any responsibility connected therewith. I allude to my letter to Mr. Ross of the 9th August, 1859; and I may say here that I wrote that letter under feelings of very great annoyance at the character of the report that Mr. Duncan had made to the Treasurer. When that report was shewn to me, and I found that it reflected very sharply upon our firm and upon our character as Custom House Agents, and that it was penned after Mr. Duncan had himself told me that he was perfectly satisfied with our conduct, I felt annoyed at having such a statement sent abroad against me, without my having any opportunity of refuting it. When I found Mr. Duncan using such an expression as this—"that on the return of the 'Moa,' the agents must then at least, if not before, have become aware of the error"—I felt so much vexation and annoyance that I wrote this letter to Mr. Ross. I first assert that I had no knowledge of Mr. Duncan's wish to have Company's sugar weighed for drawback. This I have already succeeded in proving. The next two paragraphs refer to the matter of the "Moa," and that of the "Spray," both of which I have already gone into very fully. In the 9th paragraph, I say "there was no renewal of the practice of weighing sugar." In the 11th paragraph, again, I state, "Robey and Co.'s sugar shipped by the 'Spray' was not weighed either at the works or on the wharf, but the Collector allowed the drawback upon the bags as counted in the ship's hold, taking other bags to represent the weight. I suggested that the same course should be followed for the Sugar Company, which was objected to by the landing surveyor." How will the Collector attempt to deny that this course was followed with regard to Robey's sugar? And yet, if the Board will refer to the correspondence, they will find that in his replies to the queries of the Collector Mr. Still says—"I have no recollection of any application being made to me in the matter at all." The fact was, that I asked to have the same thing done for the Sugar Company as had been done for Robey and Co., and I was refused. The matter that I am now about to refer to is one of a disagreeable nature, as it has reference to a gentleman who ought not to have had his name dragged into this inquiry. It has reference to the remarks made as to Sir Daniel Cooper. In the last paragraph of my letter, I state that Mr. Duncan said to me that "he very likely would have been inclined to allow the drawback, had it not been for the impertinent character of Mr. Ross's letter, and the running about by Sir Daniel Cooper from Minister to Minister in a matter he did not understand." I have already stated, and I repeat the statement, that no person was present at that interview but Mr. Duncan and myself; I assert that such was the case. Of course this is a mere matter of assertion on my part, and of contradiction on the part of Mr. Duncan, and between our two statements the Board will have to decide. I shall therefore make only a very few remarks in support of my statement. I say that this conversation with Mr. Duncan did occur at a time when no other person was present; Mr. Duncan denies this, and I can only pledge my honor that such was the case. Mr. Duncan in his letter says—"Mr. Powell's version of the conversation mentioned in his two last paragraphs is substantially contradicted by Mr. Still and Mr. Llewellyn, who were present." I say, on the contrary, that I had this conversation with Mr. Duncan at a time when no person but he and myself was present, and that he made use of the words I have just read. The Board have heard the evidence on this point and can judge of its value, but for my own part I seek for no other proofs of the correctness of my statement than those I am now about to adduce. In the first place, I know nothing of the Sugar Company beyond their Custom House business. I do not know who are its directors and shareholders, nor was I aware that Sir Daniel Cooper had taken any interest in the matter. I can safely say that I had no intimation of such interference, if it may be so called, until Mr. Duncan informed me of it. The words in my letter are exactly as spoken by Mr. Duncan. I will now refer to the letters of Mr. Duncan's officers on this point. Mr. Still is very judicious in his answers, but Mr. Llewellyn, with less prudence and care, writes—"Although deprecating the insulting mode adopted in the matter, and the interference of Sir D. Cooper, you distinctly denied any personal feeling whatever." Mr. Still, on the other hand, very judiciously appears not to remember anything about it. The idea of personal feeling being indulged in by the Collector against Sir D. Cooper is so absurd that it does not require the slightest consideration. It is, however, in its other bearings, that this point has to be viewed, viz., in that of political influence. In other parts of the correspondence, the Collector complains bitterly of this. And how has he arrived at this conclusion? By an accident, namely, the improper use of a Treasury document, which was never intended for his perusal, the Collector learns that the correspondence was submitted by Mr. Weekes to Mr. Cowper, at the request of Sir D. Cooper, who had interviews with the Minister on the subject. Now, I could have known nothing of all this, so that if my statement in this letter of 9th August is not correct, then I must have been gifted with a second sight, and have learnt, by mysterious influences, that which was really a fact, and a fact too that displeased Mr. Duncan so much, that he invites the present Government to pass a censure upon their predecessors in office, as well as upon the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. It is only with the personal question I have to deal, and I confidently point to the confirmation of my statement by Mr. Llewellyn, as well as to the subsequent animus of the Collector against the late Government, upon the same grounds as those upon which he bases the charge of untruthfulness against me; and they being beyond his reach, he now brings the whole force of his anger to bear upon the weakest of those who have offended him, and the one the least able to bear the brunt of his displeasure—myself. We find by a careful perusal of the letters and minutes, that apart from the question of the Sugar Company, the Government

Government did not appear to listen to the repeated, violent, and impudent attempts of the Collector to injure Mr. Metcalfe and myself, by disposing of us as obstacles standing in his way. In the last paragraph of his letter, Mr. Duncan speaks of my "utter recklessness of truth and gross disrespect," to himself. Throughout this correspondence, only one letter is written by me, and that a letter to Mr. Ross, sent by that gentleman to the Treasurer, and thence to the Collector. I do not complain of Mr. Ross so using the letter; every word contained in it is true, and there is nothing disrespectful to the Collector to be found in it. I fairly criticised his acts, and shewed clear reasons for his conduct. Upon this he builds a quarrel with me, and again and again, whenever an opportunity could be seized, he, not satisfied with endeavoring to injure me in other ways, has advised that my license should be withdrawn, whilst at the same time he insinuates that Mr. Metcalfe has no license at all, thereby offering an insult almost unworthy of notice. And now, with reference to the deficiencies, I will offer a few words. The deficiency in the case of the "Tasmania," upon 15 tons—480 bags—sugar, is stated at 11 cwt. 2 qrs. That being the case, I want to know what tare has been allowed on these goods. This is not stated, and no allowance is made for breakage of bags or waste on the voyage. It appears, with reference to this sugar, that it was entered for drawback as refined, but the officer accidentally passing by, opens a bag and finds the sugar to be bastards instead of refined. This, of course, became matter for very grave suspicion; and then, when the sugar reaches Hobart Town there is found to be a deficiency, Mr. Duncan's suspicions are at once verified. But, looking at the quantity shipped, and the amount of deficiency, I should like to know what tare has been allowed for the packages.

Captain Ward: What do your bags weigh?

Mr. Powell: Eleven ounces, including the ropes with which they are tied. Now it must occur to the Board that sugar, in the heat and dampness of a ship's hold, must drain; and consequently the bags would become heavier on reaching Hobart Town, than they were on leaving Sydney, and this will account for very many deficiencies. The other deficiency of 9 cwt. and 23 lbs., which the Collector refers to, but the particulars of which he has suppressed, will carry ridicule with it when known. The astounding deficiency of 9 cwt. and 23 lbs. is upon a shipment by the "Moa," of 1 hhd. and 965 bags, in all 24 tons, which is all we passed for, not 24 tons 1 cwt. 1 qr. and 19 lbs., as stated by the Collector. The quantity certified by the Collector at Auckland is 23 tons 12 cwt. and 24 lbs., making a deficiency upon the entry of 7 cwt. 3 qrs. and 4 lbs., or 872 lbs. upon 965 bags and 1 hhd. Again I ask, what tare Mr. Young, the Collector at Auckland, has allowed? The actual weight of the bags I have already stated to be 11 ozs.

Mr. Duncan: A portion of this shipment was in a large cask, that I had no means of weighing. This is one of the obstacles thrown in my way that I have had so much reason to complain of.

Mr. Powell: We found, however, that the deficiency was 872 lbs. upon 965 bags, or not 1 lb. per bag. We have nothing before us to shew what tare was allowed for these bags, and it is very probable that some reference may be made to this in the correspondence I have asked for, that has taken place between Mr. Duncan and Mr. Young. There is every reason to believe that Mr. Young's letter shews that discrepancies occur in both ways. The Collector is silent upon a point which should have had great weight with him before he indulged in such reckless charges of fraud; and this silence will require some explanation from him. Had the correspondence I have asked for been produced I feel quite certain that it would have fully made out our case. I now come to the matter of the deficiency of the tea, which we were called upon to account for on the 5th December. I hand in two debentures for drawback on tea, which have been refused payment;—one for tea shipped by the "Jeannie Dove," and the other by the "City of Sydney." I also ask the Board to favor me with the Red Book of the "Osprey." (Book produced.)

Mr. Duncan: I shall object to this being produced, if it is intended to prove by the inward weight the weight of the export packages, as it is a document entirely beyond our control.

Mr. Powell: I merely wish to refer to it, my case is clear enough without it. On the 31st October we entered for drawback, by instructions from Messrs. Thacker, Daniell, and Co., to ship by the "City of Sydney," to Melbourne, 200 half-chests of tea, branded D in triangle, W F under, Nos. 13 and 14. On the 4th November we again received instructions to ship to the same port 110 and 90 half-chests tea, Nos. 13 and 14, branded also D in triangle, W F under; and on the same day, by the "Jeannie Dove," to Geelong, 50 chests No. 12, 7 half-chests No. 13, and 193 half-chests No. 20; all branded as the others. We made our claim for the drawback, and the landing-waiter was supplied with a note of the weights. Thus we shipped by the "City of Sydney," No. 13, 100  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests tea, and No. 14, 100  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests tea, each 46 lbs. net, making in the whole 9,200 lbs. These, when weighed in Melbourne, where 1 lb. more is allowed for tare, make only 9,000 lbs. net, being 45 lbs. instead of 46 lbs. per package, and shewing an alleged deficiency of 200 lbs. on the shipment. Now, in the original import ship there was not a single package weighed to 45 lbs.; thus shewing that a more liberal system is pursued in Melbourne than here in reference to tare. By the following steamer we shipped to the same port—No. 13, 110  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests tea, and No. 14, 90  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests tea, at 46 lbs. each, in all 9,200 lbs.; and we have heard no question about difference of weight. By the "Jeannie Dove" to Geelong we shipped, No. 12, 50 chests at 82 lbs., No. 13, 7  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests at 46 lbs.; and No. 20, 193  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests at 47 lbs.; the same quality and numbers except in the case of the No. 20. Now, assuming a difference in tare on the 50 chests of 3 lbs. each, or 150 lbs.; on the 193 half-chests of 2 lbs. each, or 386 lbs.; and on the 7  $\frac{1}{2}$ -chests of 3 lbs. each, or 21 lbs.; and the whole deficiency, 557 lbs., would stand accounted for. Now, how does it happen that we ship two parcels of Nos. 13 and 14 by successive successive steamers, and that we claim for each the net weight of 46lbs. per package; the qualities marks are the same, and are all marked in China, shewing the respective chops of the tea, and yet that one lot is returned deficient, whilst the other is not. The one is shipped on the 31st October, and the other on the 4th November, no very great difference in time; and yet there is this extraordinary discrepancy in weight of 1 lb. per package. This, no doubt, appears strange; but then again we ship the same marks and brands to Geelong, and there they are made lighter than they were in Melbourne. I can only say that the whole of the teas referred to were imported by an influential mercantile house, and weighed at the time of entry by a very careful officer, and the quality and marks kept separate. And yet when weighed in Melbourne they are found to be 1 lb. short, whilst in the import ship there was not one that represented 45 lbs. weight. Now, can the Board understand that tea landed in Sydney, and weighed and having the quality Nos. on the package, thus giving the drawback officer full opportunity to test the import weight, should be passed by the searcher as correct, thus confirming the import officer, and then be found weighing at Melbourne upon one occasion 45 lbs., upon a second occasion 46 lbs., and at Geelong lighter than at either Melbourne or Sydney. It is tiresome to be obliged to bring all these statements before you; but it shews clearly that the Collector's system of writing to the other colonies is only productive of annoyance, whilst it is destitute of all practical good. The example I have given shews plainly that if the Melbourne weighing is correct the importer has been overcharged, and has a perfect right to receive back his overpayment upon such overcharge. The principle which we advocate, and which is acknowledged by the Customs Laws in England is, that drawback should be paid upon the goods as shipped, and that bond should be given for the due landing of the goods in the same manner as for goods from warehouse. We contend that we have a perfect right to receive drawback upon proving due shipment of the goods, and that if the vessel went down at the heads we should be quite entitled to claim our drawback. How is it that we are never called upon to account for deficiencies in goods removed from the warehouse? Why, then, when goods are shipped for drawback under the supervision of a Customs officer, who is supposed to weigh and take every precaution, are we called upon for deficiencies which, if they exist, can only be a censure upon the officers who certify to the shipment? And I would ask the Collector whether we are the only parties who have had deficiencies. Did he not commence a correspondence with a certain mercantile house upon the same subject? Has he reported that to the Government; and, if not, how is it that we are singled out for this vexatious and annoying distinction?

TUESDAY, 3 JANUARY, 1860.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.,

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents; and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company; were present during the proceedings.

Captain Ward produced a drawback warrant for the shipment of certain sugars, bearing an indorsement by Mr. Still and by the Collector.

Mr. Duncan said that was the document he had referred to, and admitted that he had been in error in stating that it referred to the 15 tons shipped per "Moa."

Captain Ward: May I ask the object for which this has been put in?

Mr. Duncan: My object is to shew that, in the first place, the whole quantity had been entered as refined sugar; so that, if it had been shipped without discovery, the shippers would have been able to claim a drawback of 6s. 8d. per cwt., instead of 5s. The examination of Mr. Still, however, shewed the sugar to be "bastards" instead of "refined," and that it was not therefore as represented. In consequence of this 5s. per cwt. only was allowed for drawback.

Captain Ward: But this is understood to be only an incomplete document, and the quantity entered upon the face of it only to be regarded as approximate.

Mr. Duncan: Admitting such to be the case, which, however, I deny, still the warrant has indorsed on it the same quantity and quality as shewn upon its face. This indorsement bears the signature of the Customs officer, Godfrey, who made the shipment.

Captain Ward: And after this indorsement was made, it was discovered that the qualities were not as represented.

Mr. Duncan: Yes. In passing, accidentally, Mr. Still examined the sugar, and found it to be "bastards" instead of "refined."

Mr. Browne: Still that does not alter the complexion of the other case of the 15 tons, of which Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell declare themselves to have given the first information.

Mr. Duncan: Yes, if their story is to be believed; but I deny its correctness.

Mr. Powell: As this still appears to be a vexed question, I may be pardoned for making a few remarks upon it. I had understood at the last sitting that the entry made in the first instance did not pledge the maker to make his claim for drawback in accordance with the quantities and qualities shewn on the face of the warrant. The fact is, the first entry made is merely an imperfect one, standing in place of a notice of the exporter's intention to ship certain goods. Then, as to what has to be claimed as drawback, reference has to be made to the back of the warrant, on which is indorsed the actual quantities and qualities shipped. Now, as to the case of the "Moa," the Collector complains that he was not able to assure himself as to whether the two hds. weighed the 22 cwt. as described. If he had examined the Company's tickets he would have found that they did so.

Mr. Duncan: But I do not recognise the Company's tickets.

Mr. Powell: The Collector has already used them as evidence, having put them in in proof of shipment in the case of the "Louis and Miriam." However, to shew that no credit was due to Mr. Still in this matter, I hand in a note that I wrote to the officer, calling his attention to the error. In consequence of this the officer backed his note in accordance with my return. (Letter produced and read.) I also produce the books of the firm, in which are entered the notices for drawback, and where the sugar is entered as "bastards," the mistake in the entry having been a merely clerical one on the part of one of our clerks. (Book produced and extract read.) Thus, I think, I have shewn that I was the first to call attention to the mistake, which I admit was made, though accidentally, in our office.

Captain Ward: When did you discover the error?

Mr. Powell: At the time of shipping the goods.

Captain Ward: When was the entry passed?

Mr. Powell: On the 4th October, and the shipment was made on the 14th October; on that date we wrote this note.

Captain Ward: To whom?

Mr. Powell: To the Custom House Officer, Mr. Godfrey.

Mr. Duncan: I called the attention of the Board to this admission; and to the gross impropriety of a Custom House Agent writing to a Custom House Officer in a matter of this kind.

Captain Ward: Did you inform the office of this mistake, before Mr. Still pointed it out?

Mr. Powell: Certainly I did.

Captain Ward: Did you know of this having been done?

Mr. Duncan: No; I never heard of this letter before. Had I known of it, I certainly should have reprimanded Mr. Godfrey for not reporting the matter, particularly with regard to this letter. I can only say that I do not believe this statement.

Mr. Powell: And I can only say that Mr. Duncan saw this on the date upon which it professes to be written, and this I can prove. When the warrant came up it was backed by the officer as being all refined sugar. When I found, I wrote a note to Mr. Godfrey, and this note, with the warrant, was taken and shewn to Mr. Duncan, who expressed great annoyance at the carelessness of his officer.

Mr. Duncan: But the very fact of writing to one of my officers upon such a subject was a gross breach of discipline.

Mr. Powell: The Collector was shewn the letter at the time, and if he had any complaint to make against us for writing it, that complaint ought also to have been made at the time. (Letter again read.)

Mr. Duncan: I recollect now the words "Please compare." I must have seen the document.

Mr. Powell: As Mr. Duncan remembers having seen the document, I repeat that if I had done anything wrong in writing to the officer, he should have complained of it when he saw the letter, and not now. Now, with regard to the short shipment by the "Moa," I find that the vessel returned to port on the 8th June; the "Spray" arrived on the 24th June, bringing a letter from the Collector of Customs at Auckland to the Collector at Sydney, which Captain Bowden had asked him to write. The Collector's letter arrived then on the 24th, the 25th was Saturday, a broken day; and on Monday the 27th I paid Mr. Duncan a cheque for the amount stated. He has said that I did not pay it to him until the 29th, but I am in a position to prove that I paid it, and he received it, on the 27th. His own letter, printed with the correspondence, dated the 29th June, shews that he must have received the cheque before that date, because he speaks there of a "surcharge of £5 on sugar shipped for drawback, which I paid into the Treasury yesterday." This shews, beyond doubt, that the money was paid before the 29th. But I have other evidence to shew that it was paid on the 27th—the Monday after the vessel arrived; and when I gave him the cheque, he expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the conduct of the Sugar Company in the matter, and also with our conduct as Custom House Agents. In concluding my observations upon this case, I respectfully ask the Board what Mr. Duncan has proved. He commenced by promising to prove Mr. Metcalfe's undue influence in the department; I ask, has he done so? While evident desire has been shewn by Maddox and Mackenzie to readily answer a general charge, no particular instance has been adduced; and their grievance appears to be, that Mr. Metcalfe respected, and was respected, by the late Collector. Mr. Duncan was understood to offer proof of marked discourtesies by myself and clerks in our office towards his officers, yet no proof is brought forward. On the contrary, one of his witnesses speaks in terms of the highest compliment of the manner in which our business has been performed; and I think the Board will agree with me, that the manner in which Mr. Lane gave his evidence is a strong proof of its fairness and truthfulness. Mr. Kidd and Mr. Russell both speak well of us; and even Mr. Still, a most reluctant witness where we have been concerned, had no fault to find. Of Mr. Mackenzie, I will say but little; he says he never received anything but discourtesy or insult from me, and my coolness has been to him a source of anger. This person's conduct in the department, the malice he has evinced towards us, and the utter absence of any appreciation by him of the position he holds—all of which were so reprehensibly displayed before the Board—lead me to augur, as I think successfully, that his evidence will have but very little weight with you. But I think that it must appear strange to the Board that the Collector has not brought forward witnesses from his department who, from their long experience and personal knowledge of Mr. Metcalfe and myself (the result of daily intercourse and a full acquaintance with the business and forms of the establishment) should be able to give the Board valuable information. It is evident that Mr. Llewellyn has busied himself very much in getting up this case against us. We find him prompting Mr. Maddox and Mr. Mackenzie, and seeking the almost forgotten Mr. Sempill for the purpose of disturbing records which have not seen the light for nine years. Had Mr. Kidd been more candid, or had I put my questions more carefully, I should, I think, have found the same hand dealing with him also. I should much like to know, too, whether Mr. Llewellyn is one of the officers who begged to be excused giving evidence, fearing Mr. Metcalfe's personal influence. Having held the position of secretary to the late, and holding the same position under the present, Collector, and having the correspondence under his care, who should have been so well able to prove Mr. Duncan's case as this secretary—the same person who was censured by the "Louisa" Board—the intimate friend of the Stewart's and Gibbes, and always ready to uphold them as patterns of commercial integrity. Is it feared that we should elicit uncomfortable facts? If not, why does Mr. Llewellyn shun this inquiry. The man who was most ready to assist James Stewart in removing us from our room, and who used every exertion to oppose Mr. Metcalfe and injure his business during his absence from the Colony, found at last a fitting opportunity of pouring his evil tale into the ears of Mr. Duncan, and that gentleman, naturally suspicious, received as truth that which Colonel Gibbes would have spurned as slander. If Mr. Duncan found Mr. Metcalfe's influence so potent on the first day he took office, and if frauds have diminished from that time; if drawback has been fraudulently obtained, and Mr. Duncan checked it from the day he took office, I take it only Mr. Llewellyn could have thus succeeded in flattering Mr. Duncan to the top of his bent. Why was not Mr. Collyer—why was not Mr. Rucker—why were not Mr. Mowle and many other gentlemen having great experience in the department called upon to give some of these sweeping denunciations such as we have already heard? And why, I ask, was not Mr. Fancourt—a valuable, exact, and careful officer—called upon to give testimony against us, if these allegations have any truth in them? They were not so, because it is evident to me that Mr. Duncan's witnesses had to be drilled into the parts that they were to be called upon to play, and that these gentlemen could not have been so easily dealt with as others have been. I will illustrate my meaning by the case of Russell, in the matter of the "Zone's" 4 bds. of sugar. Mackenzie, in his evidence, says that in the first instance Russell denied all knowledge of the matter. Russell confirms this—he says that the Collector insisted upon having what he termed the truth. Russell still not remembering, the Collector rings his bell and Mr. Mackenzie appears and gives the narrative for Russell's information. Russell then says that he tried to recollect the matter, that he went home and thought about it, and that then it all came back to him. And Mr. Duncan tells this witness, whom he speaks of as a simpleton, that unless he speaks the truth, he will write a few lines, and the old man will not have his pension. Can it be wondered at that, after this, this simpleton—this weak-minded infirm old man as Mr. Duncan calls him—with a large family, with notice to leave his situation at the end of the year, and with no prospect in the future—beginning again the world at an age when most persons desire to retire from active life—can it be wondered at I say that all should have come back to him after the introduction of the narrative of Mackenzie, and his hesitation and his positive denial should have given way before the Collector's threat? I hope for the honor and credit of the Collector that he may be able to remove the impression that this matter has left upon my mind. Then Mr. Kidd's evidence is of a very questionable character. His slips before the "Louisa" Board were very palpable. His excessive vanity overcomes that love of truth and sense of honor which I know form part of his nature; yet how can I reconcile that Pharasaical boast which is ever present with him—that whatever others did, he was always right? I shall shew by the few documents I have been able to obtain with much difficulty from the Collector, that he has stated that about which he is ignorant. I have not seen the papers to examine them, but I feel sure of being able to find in them sufficient to shew the Board that Mr. Kidd has spoken without thought. I now refer to the papers of the "Content" of March, 1858, and the "William" and Alfred" of January, 1858. (Papers produced.) I find here five quarter-chests tea which Mr. Kidd signs for without the mate's receipt; fourteen chests of tea, also signed for by him, but with no mate's receipt. I find a warrant for one ton of sugar, shipped and indorsed by myself for Mr. Kidd; also for five tons raw sugar, represented to have been shipped, but for which there is no mate's receipt. Then there are forty quarter-chests tea, sixty-three bags raw sugar, and many other drawback goods, all shipped by Mr. Kidd, and without any mate's signature. I have no doubt that I could produce twenty other cases of the same kind, if my time and the time of the members of the Board permitted me to do so. Now as regards the practice of short shipment, if the Board think it necessary, I am prepared to prove this practice.

Captain Ward: I think that has been admitted to be the practice of the port.

Mr. Duncan: As regards quantity, but certainly not as regards quality. I contend that it is unlawful to pass an entry for refined sugar and then to ship bastards in its place.

Captain Ward: The entry ought to be as correct as it possibly can be, without impeding business.

Mr.

Mr. Duncan : As regards quantity ; but with respect to quality there ought to be no mistake, or look what the result would be if it were left only to the honor and honesty of the exporter to get drawback upon whatever quality he chose.

Mr. Powell : However, in the case brought against me by the Collector I have shewn that I was the first to give information of the error—a merely clerical one—that had been made. I turn now to the papers of the "Airdale," October, 1859. (Papers produced.) This will shew that the Custom House officers make mistakes the same as the Custom House Agents. On the 7th we passed an entry for sixteen tons bastards and one ton refined sugar. The officer signed on the back of the warrant for fifteen tons bastards and two tons refined sugar. Knowing this indorsement to be wrong, we refused to take drawback for a larger quantity of refined sugar than we knew we had shipped. I waited upon Mr. Lane on the matter, and he, attaching more importance to our books than to the indorsement of the Customs officer, guarded himself by taking a copy of the entry in our book, and paid us drawback on that, and not on the officer's indorsement.

Captain Ward : Who indorsed the warrant ?

Mr. Powell : It is indorsed by Mr. Hunt.

Captain Ward : Where is the evidence that you declined to take the drawback ?

Mr. Powell : In our books and in those of the Sugar Company. (Books produced and entries read therefrom.) I might, if I thought proper, bring up many other cases, of of this kind to shew that we were, as a rule, very much more correct in our business than were the Custom House officers ; but this one instance will suffice. And now, in answer to the Collector's statement, that the Company's weights were not taken by his officers, I turn to the papers of the "Breadalbane," September, 1859, in which two hogsheds are indorsed on the warrant as Company's weight. This warrant also shews an indorsement for 18 cwt. more than the quantity actually shipped.

Mr. Duncan : Who is it signed by ?

Mr. Powell : By Mr. Eames.

Mr. Duncan : A new man, only just appointed, and not yet up to his duty.

Mr. Powell : But it is not the new men only who do this sort of thing. I have instances of its having been done by Kidd and Godfrey. In fact there are very few in the department that will not be found making mistakes at times. And here in fact was the great secret of our influence with the late Collector. That gentleman knew perfectly well that he could always rely upon us, and that our correctness was a good check upon his officers. The present Collector, however, wishes to be entirely independent of us, to be rid of us in fact ; but he will soon find how utterly impossible it will be for him to rely upon his own officers, when our check is removed. During the carrying out of this arrangement, which has been shewn to be a very imperfect one, the Collector charges us with having been guilty of various frauds and wrong doings. He brought Mr. Kidd here to prove something against us in reference to some bottled beer ; but in this the evidence quite broke down. We put in the warrants, and they were found to be indorsed by Mr. Rolleston. Finding himself beaten upon that position, the Collector turns round and says, "Oh ! this is a drunken officer." But there is evidence of there being many such as he amongst the Customs officers, and it is somewhat remarkable, that this very man should have been recommended for a pension.

Mr. Duncan : Not by me.

Mr. Powell : If he was a drunkard, why was he not reported ?

Mr. Duncan : He was so, and was dismissed in consequence.

Mr. Powell : These matters are now being raked out, rendering this a most unpleasant inquiry ; but, as regards drunken officers, they were plentiful enough in the Customs Department, though I admit that we have a superior class of officers now in the department. I will now say a few words with regard to the document which Mr. Duncan charges me with endeavouring to get out of the possession of one of his officers. I certainly was desirous of obtaining a copy of it, but in order that the character of the letter may be understood, I should like to have it read. It is simply an application I make to the Collector, on the part of a master of a ship, relative to the repacking of sugar. (Letter read.) This document was written on behalf of a customer of our firm, and I will explain the reason I had for desiring a copy of it. In connection with this application, the Collector made some exceedingly offensive remarks in reference with myself. When this came to my knowledge, I sent down, not at all in a private way, but quite publicly and openly, by one of my clerks, to obtain a copy of the letter and the memoranda appended, in order to enable me to make such use of it as my friends might advise. There was nothing at all surreptitious in the way I did this. All I sent for was a copy of the document, and when it was refused to me, I at once said that I would apply for it through the Board.

Captain Ward : Was the application made after this Board had commenced sitting ?

Mr. Powell : No. It was in consequence of certain conversations arising out of this letter, in which the Collector made use of some very offensive remarks in reference to me, that Mr. Metcalfe wrote to the Treasurer demanding this investigation. We felt it to be due to our firm not to let the Collector's most unwarrantable remarks go on in the way they were going, without some notice being taken of them on our part. In his letter of the 24th November, when called upon to report upon Mr. Metcalfe's letter of the 22nd—and here I would impress upon the Board the fact that it is we, and not Mr. Duncan, who have asked for and obtained this inquiry, shewing thereby that we have no disposition to avoid meeting any charge of fraud, or of whatever else the Collector can bring against us—in this letter, he says, "There is no foundation for the statement that Mr. Metcalfe has been 'subjected to' great annoyances and insults in his business' by me." Now, I am myself an evidence of Mr. Metcalfe having received both annoyances and insults at the hands of the Collector or by his means.

Captain

Captain Ward: This is travelling out of the present charge, and going into the complaints you have to make against the Collector.

Mr. Powell: I shall not then pursue this subject further. And now, in conclusion, I beg to say that we shall be very ready to place all the books of our firm before the Board, so that the Board may see the whole nature of our transactions with, and on behalf of, the Sugar Company, and how we have received the drawbacks on their behalf. Any inquiry the Board may think proper to institute into any of the entries we shall be most happy to assist them in, either by tracing them through our books, or by whatever course the Board may deem necessary.

Mr. Browne: There is one point alluded to in your letter of the 9th August, which I conceive to be a most important one, and yet you have not touched upon it in your address. I allude to the 11th and 12th paragraphs, in which you impute favoritism to Mr. Duncan in allowing drawback on a shipment of sugar to one Sugar Company, in a way that he would not permit to the shipment by the other Company. I do not know whether you intend to offer evidence of this, but you have not dwelt upon it here; and unless it be proved, the Board will doubtless be of opinion that you have made a most unjustifiable charge against the Collector.

Mr. Powell: I have alluded to it in commenting upon the documents; and further, I think, that in the course of this inquiry documents have been produced that have afforded full proof of what I say.

Mr. Duncan: If there is any object in proving the fact of my allowing the shipment of sugar by Robey and Co., I am quite willing to admit that I did so. The Board, however, will see that this was done on the 18th May; just eight days after my taking office, and before I could have had time to make any rules.

Captain Ward: You say that you returned the drawback on the ton of sugar missing from the "Moa," on the 27th June, after the "Spray" came in.

Mr. Powell: I did.

Captain Ward: Why did you not refund it at once, when the "Moa" returned?

Mr. Powell: Because, as I have said, though we had intelligence that something was wrong, yet the news was not of such a character that we could depend upon it. Mr. Ross, however, in his letter of the 26th July, gives his reasons for not refunding the money; and the Board must remember that we were only agents in the matter; that the money to be refunded was Mr. Ross's, and not ours; and that we could not return it without first receiving Mr. Ross's authority.

Captain Ward: Then it was not until the "Spray" came in that you received such information as satisfied you that the sugar had not been shipped?

Mr. Powell: Not until then.

Mr. Duncan: My charge is not so much that the money was not refunded at once, as that the deficiency was not reported to me by the agents as soon as they had ascertained it.

Mr. Powell reminded the Board that he had not yet received the correspondence promised to be laid upon the table by the Collector.

Mr. Duncan said he had the documents with him, but declined to produce them until he knew what purpose they were to serve. They could not be received as evidence.

Captain Ward: What is the object for which you require these papers?

Mr. Powell: Mr. Young, in his letter of the 20th September, speaks of the great variation in the capacity of packages of tea and weights of sugars; and I want to see, by a reference to the certificates returned, if there is not something in our favor as well as against us. By his using the word "variation," I assume that the difference has not always been in the one way.

The Board held that the papers might be used for this purpose.

Mr. Duncan protested against the documents being received as evidence.

(Correspondence, and certificates of goods landed at certain ports, produced.)

Mr. Powell: I find here a shipment by the "Sea Gull," to Wanganui, wherein it is certified that 170 cwt. of sugar net had been landed there. We claimed drawback on only 165 cwt. 2 qrs. 2 lbs., so that the certificate shews a difference of 5 cwt. in our favor. I would again point out to the Board, that my only object in examining these papers is to shew that if there are mistakes against us there are also some in our favor, and that these certificates are not really to be relied upon. I have here an exemplification of the practice of taring:—Here is a shipment of 424 bags sugar, shipped by us as 10 tons net. When weighed in New Zealand, they turn out to be only 9 tons 16 cwt. 0 qrs. 24 lbs., shewing a deficiency against us of 3 cwt. 3 qrs. 4 lbs. Now it is quite clear that if 1 lb. per bag is allowed for tare, the full discrepancy will be exactly made up. This is an important point for us; because we have been called upon to account for deficiencies, all of which may be accounted for by the difference of tares allowed in different ports. We contend that the deficiencies of 9 cwt. and 11 cwt. charged against us by Mr. Duncan are to be accounted for in the same way.

Mr.

Mr. Edward B. Forrest called in and examined:—

Mr. E. B.
Forrest.
3 Jan., 1860.

1. By Mr. Powell: You are clerk in the Sugar Company's office? I am.
2. Will you explain to the Board what you know of the short shipment by the "Moa"? On the 3rd May we gave notice to the Custom House authorities of our intention to ship per "Moa" for Auckland 7 tons refined, and 28 tons bastard sugar. By the 5th May we had shipped as per Day Book the following quantities:—On account of Messrs. Henderson and Co., 1 hhd. loaf, weighing 10 cwt. 21 lbs; 40 mats refined, 1 ton; and 40 mats bastards, 1 ton. On account of Mr. Somerville, of Auckland, 1 hhd. loaf, 12 cwt. 3 qrs.; 96 mats refined, 2½ tons; and 360 mats bastards, 9 tons; and on account of Mr. Robertson, of Sydney, 80 bags refined, 2 tons; and 720 mats bastards, 18 tons—making in all 2 hhds. loaf, weighing 22 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs.; 216 bags refined, weighing 110 cwt.; and 1,120 bags bastards, weighing 560 cwt., or 34 tons 12 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs. Invoices and bills of lading were made out in the usual course and signed, and we received payment from the different parties for the various parcels. When the "Moa" returned, Mr. Robertson gave us notice that there had been about one ton short shipped, but he was not in a position to say anything definite on the subject, as the papers certifying the short shipment were to come by the "Spray". Of course the matter then stood over until the "Spray" arrived, which she did on the 24th June. Mr. Robertson then gave us notice of the one ton having been short shipped, and that he claimed upon us for that quantity. The other consignees wrote us to say that they had received their various parcels according to invoice.
3. Do you state all this of your own knowledge? I know it from the books and letters of the Company.
4. And you know that Mr. Robertson informed the Company of the short shipment on the arrival of the "Moa"? Yes. He knew there was a short shipment, but he was not in a position to say what claim he had against the Company until the "Spray" arrived, as by her he was to receive advices relative to the short shipment. When she came in he made his claim on us for one ton, 40 bags, as having been short shipped.
5. What further do you know of this matter? On the 27th June I saw the Collector and explained to him how the mistake had arisen—that it had arisen from some error of our draymen, and that the sugar had really left our stores to go down on board the "Moa." He expressed himself satisfied so far, and asked me to let him know if we found out that the sugar had gone anywhere else. He said that if I tendered him a cheque for the amount of drawback received on the sugar that he would accept it. I then went to Mr. Powell, and told him what had taken place between the Collector and myself. This was on Monday the 27th June.
6. By Captain Ward: Have you heard anything of the sugar? No, up to the present time we have not been able to discover where the sugar went to. We have given it up as lost, and have charged our contractor with it.
7. What contractor? The drayman who contracts for our work. He is responsible, and will be made to pay for it.
8. Has he actually paid for it? It is charged against him. We have a running account with him, settled half-yearly, and in that account he is debited with this sugar.
9. By Mr. Powell: Has the amount been refunded to Mr. Robertson? Yes.
10. By Captain Ward: At what date? I can hardly remember.
11. It was after the return of the "Spray"? Yes. He gave us a bill at four months for his account on the 5th May. This fell due on the 8th September, and on its being taken up, we gave him a cheque for the amount charged in our account for the missing ton.
12. Then you had no distinct evidence to shew that the sugar had not actually gone on board the "Moa"? No; up to the present time we believe that it did go there.
13. Has the drayman been charged the duty as well as the price of the sugar? Yes, just the same as if he had purchased it for home consumption, or had lost it in the streets.
14. By Mr. Powell: Do you recollect a case of the kind occurring previously? Yes, I believe there was one case of the kind occurred before, but just at this moment I forget the name of the ship to which it happened. A ton of sugar was taken to the wrong vessel, owing to her lying at the same wharf as the vessel by which it should properly have been shipped.
15. Was that the sugar that was afterwards found at Nelson? No; it was to have gone to Melbourne, and it went to Geelong instead.
16. You do not remember a case that occurred when the sugar was afterwards found at Nelson? No, I do not.
17. Do you know of your own knowledge of the shipment of sugar by the "Zone"? Yes. On the 8th February we gave notice to the Customs of our intention to ship three tons refined sugar by the "Zone" to Melbourne. We sent from the sugar-house 6 hhds. numbered 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, and 643, and weighing net 56 cwt. 8 lbs. We received the mate's receipt for their shipment, and they were entered in our books accordingly. We made out invoices for them as shipped, and sent them into Mr. Sayers, the purchaser. We heard no more about the matter until the ship was just on the point of sailing, when I received a note from Mr. Powell informing me that only four hogsheads were on board. This was just when the vessel was clearing, and four hogsheads only were then entered on the clearance. I went down to the Custom House, and saw Mr. Chamberlain upon the subject; and he said that in order to make room for something else the two hogsheads had to be left behind, and that the Company could only claim drawback on the four hogsheads on board. The two hogsheads taken out of the vessel were Nos. 642 and 643, weighing together, net 18 cwt. 3 qrs. 15 lbs. In consequence of this we altered our entry to four hogsheads only, making a short shipment of the two hogsheads taken out of the vessel.
18. What was done with the other two? They were afterwards sent in another vessel in a subsequent subsequent shipment of sugar by Mr. Sayers. They appear with eighteen others on the manifest of the "Monarch."

Mr. E. B.
Forrest.

3 Jan., 1860.

19. Will you tell the Board what your practice is in passing entries for drawback? We first give a notice to the Customs of the quantity we intend to ship. This is done in the rough, estimating the number of tons. (Book produced to shew the nature of the notice.) In shipping raw or loaf sugars it is impossible to say the exact quantity that will be shipped until it is weighed; consequently the notice is only a rough estimate. We, however, give notice of the exact quantity as soon as possible after we have ascertained it by weighing. When it is shipped entry is made in another book in which the exact quantity shipped is entered, and if it be anything short of the quantity for which notice has been given it appears in the shape of a short shipment, as in the case of the "Zone."

20. And on the tickets the quality of the sugar, as well as its quantity and weight, is marked? Yes.

21. By Captain Ward: What tickets do you allude to? To those sent down to the vessel with each dray load that leaves the sugar-house.

22. Who are they directed to? One is for the mate of the vessel, on which he gives his receipt; and the other is specially for the Custom House officer, with the qualities, quantities, and weights marked, and sent down to him on board the ship as a check upon our entry.

23. By Mr. Powell: Does it not sometimes happen that the Sugar Company receive orders for sugar that they are unable from various causes to execute? Yes, it has been the case.

24. Orders for the shipment of which you have given notice to the Customs? Yes.

25. Do you remember a shipment on the 6th September, for Hobart Town, of ten tons bastards sugar in lieu of the same quantity of refined that had been entered? Yes.

26. The entry was for fifteen tons refined sugar, and I presume from your sending down ten tons bastards you were not able to ship the quality in accordance with the original intention? No doubt it was so.

27. You, however, regard the first entry sent in as an imperfect one? Yes; I look upon it merely as a notice that we intended to ship if possible.

28. By Captain Ward: Can you bring the circumstances of the case you have just been asked about to your recollection? No, I cannot.

29. Then it may or may not be as you have said, that the Company were unable to furnish the quality for which entry had been made in the first instance? Yes; but if we engaged freight for fifteen tons of sugar by any particular vessel we were bound to make up that quantity.

30. Then after freight has been engaged, if you cannot execute an order to the exact letter, you make up the quantity as nearly as you can? We do this in cases where we make a shipment on our own account. If we engage freight we have to pay for the full quantity engaged, and circumstances sometimes compel us to make an alteration in the qualities first intended to be shipped.

31. By Mr. Browne: Can you say whether this shipment—the "Tasmania's"—was on the Company's account? Yes, I am aware that it was.

32. By Mr. Powell: However, regarding the first entry as a mere notice, it was very immaterial which you shipped? Yes; we might have shipped either the one or the other, provided we sent down proper descriptions on our tickets.

33. What are the weights of the mats and bags? The bags, that is those made of linen or canvas, weigh about six ounces; and the mats from twelve to fifteen ounces, according to their size.

34. All your refined sugars however are weighed net? Yes, they are weighed into the bags.

35. If there is any difference in the weight of the sugar at the out ports, it must arise from a difference in the tare allowed? Yes. We weigh the sugar here into the bags, putting a particular weight into each, so that there can be no mistake about tare.

36. Have you ever had any complaints of short weight from purchasers of sugar at the out ports? No; we have never had any difficulty in this respect.

37. You have never been called upon to refund on account of deficiency in weight? Never by any of our customers.

38. By Mr. Browne: As I understand you, the Company makes no allowance for tare? Never, on refined sugar. We weigh the sugar altogether irrespective of the package which is to contain it, and you will find that the net weight in the bags is always a trifle over the ton.

39. You do not weigh it in the bags? No. The exact net weight is charged to our customers, as weighed to them into the bags.

40. By Mr. Powell: Do you recollect a shipment by the "Spray," and another by the "Lord Worsley," upon which drawback was refused. I do.

41. Can you inform the Board, from memory, of anything connected with those shipments? As to the quantity we shipped?

42. No; but with regard to the shipments not having been allowed for drawback?—You saw Mr. Duncan respecting them, I believe? No; I never saw him on this subject.

43. By Mr. Duncan: Do you remember Mr. Chapman calling upon you respecting a shipment of sugar? I do.

44. Can you say when you first ascertained the non-shipment of the 40 bags of sugar by the "Moa?" On the return of that vessel to this port.

45. What did you then learn? Mr. Robertson came to us and said, that he should have a claim to make against us for a short shipment; but he could not give us the particulars until the "Spray" arrived, as he was to receive his advices by that vessel.

Mr. E. B.
Forrest.

3 Jan., 1860.

46. Did you communicate this to Mr. Powell? I did not; because, from what Mr. Robertson said, I did not know whether it was one ton or more that was short.
47. Who were the other parties to whom you shipped? Henderson and Co., Mr. Somerville, and Mr. Robertson.
48. On what date were they shipped? Between the 3rd and 5th May.
49. And when was the sugar purchased by these parties? Somerville has a monthly order, Henderson and Co. ordered by the "Moa," and Mr. Robertson's order might have been given a week or a fortnight before the sailing of the vessel.
50. Was the sugar purchased prior to the sailing of the vessel? It was.
51. And yet the Company received the drawback? They did.
52. Are you aware that their doing so was illegal? No, I am not.
53. Look at the 42nd clause of the Customs Regulation Act, in which it is provided that drawback shall be received only by the owner of the goods at the time of shipment? I have read the clause.
54. Do you not think now that it is contrary to law for the Company to claim and receive drawback after they have sold the goods? No; we consider ourselves to be the owners of the goods until they are delivered. And besides, Somerville and Henderson and Co., being in Auckland, could not collect here the drawback claimable on the goods they purchased from us.
55. By Mr. Browne: Let me understand you with regard to the freight; do you say that when you engage freight, you have to pay for the quantity engaged, whether that quantity be sent on board or not? Yes; if we engage freight for 5 tons, the captain looks to us to send that quantity. If we do not send it, we have to pay for the room reserved for that quantity, just the same, if the captain insists upon it.
56. Then in the case of the "Tasmania" had the Company engaged the freight? Yes; we had engaged freight and given notice at the Customs of our intention to send down 15 tons refined sugar; but not being able to complete this quantity of refined, we sent down 10 tons of the one quality, and 5 of the other, so as to make up the quantity for which freight had been engaged.

Mr. Nicholas Giffard called in and examined:—

Mr. N. Giffard.

3 Jan., 1860.

1. By Mr. Powell: You are a Custom House Agent? I am.
2. You know the landing-waiter Russell? I do.
3. You recollect when he was drawback officer? Yes.
4. Have you ever made an indorsement on a drawback warrant for him? I have.
5. Do you consider that you did wrong in so doing? Certainly not, I did it to oblige the officer.
6. The indorsement to this warrant (warrant produced) is in your handwriting? It is.
7. Have you been called upon by the Collector to account for your having made this indorsement? I have not.
8. Do you consider that by your making this indorsement the safety of the revenue was in any way imperiled? Certainly not. I wrote it for the convenience of the officer and at his request.
9. Do you remember a shipment of sugar for Robey and Co. on board the "Spray," to which the officer refused to certify? I do.
10. Subsequently, however, the bags were counted in the ship, and other bags were taken and weighed to represent the weight of the bags shipped? Yes. Some other bags in Robey and Co.'s stores that were said to be of the same weight were weighed in the stores, and the landing-waiter took this to represent the weight of those shipped.
11. Did the officer see the bags? Yes, he saw them in the ship, and counted them, but he had not seen them weighed.
12. Do you remember a shipment of tea by the "Breadalbane," on which drawback was refused? Yes, some shipped by Mr. Caldwell.
13. Has the drawback been since allowed? It has not been paid, but it has been promised; the certificate of landing is in the hands of the Collector.
14. Did the Customs officer see that tea shipped? I think he saw the packages, but he did not weigh it.
15. With respect to the matter of the "Zone," will you state what you know about it? I was agent for Mr. Sayers' vessels, of which the "Zone" is one. Late one afternoon he sent down word to me to say that the "Zone" must be cleared out that day. On coming down to the Custom House to see what entries had been passed for the vessel, I found amongst others an entry of 6 hhds. loaf sugar. As these were entered for the Sugar Company, and Mr. Powell did that Company's business, I called upon him to see if the 6 hhds. had gone on board. He could not tell me at the time, but whilst we were in conversation Mr. Forrest came into the office, bringing with him a receipt from the mate of the vessel for the 6 hhds. as having been shipped. Mr. Russell, the drawback officer, was present at the time, and I turned round to him and said, "You need not be alarmed now, because there is the mate's receipt for the 6 hhds. shipped." Russell declined to sign for them; and just then Mr. Chamberlain came in and said that four only had been actually shipped; that the six hhds. had been put on board, but that two had been re-landed to make room for other goods; and that these two hhds. re-landed had been put into store until the next voyage.
16. Had Russell signed for the 6 hhds, do you think that drawback would have been claimed for them? Not when only 4 hhds. were shipped. The claim would have been made only on the quantity actually sent away.

17. By Captain Ward: Was Russell present during the whole of this transaction? Yes. He was there when I went in; and, as I was agent for the ship and anxious to get her cleared, I asked him not to go away until I had got him to sign the warrant. Mr. N. Giffard.
3 Jan., 1860.
18. Did Mr. Powell ask him to sign? I do not know. I know that I was the person most interested in getting him to sign, because I was desirous of getting the vessel cleared.
19. Did Mr. Russell offer any particular objection to signing; did he seem at all excited? No. He did not wish to sign until he knew certainly whether the goods had been shipped or not; but to ascertain this he had to go down to the Flour Company's Wharf; and it would then have been too late to clear.
20. Do you mean to say that Russell did not go down to the wharf at all? He did go down, but the hhds. were not there when he went. He certified to the four on the mate's receipt for the six, and on the representation of Mr. Chamberlain that four had been shipped out of the six.
21. By Mr. Powell: You had a far greater object than I had in getting Mr. Russell to sign the warrant? Yes; my object was to get the vessel cleared, but you could have had no particular object.
22. I had no interest in getting Mr. Russell to sign for 6 hhds. when only 4 hhds. were shipped? None that I can see.
23. By Mr. Duncan: Do you know whose sugar it was? Yes; it was Mr. Sayers'.
24. Was the entry for drawback made in Mr. Sayers' name? No; it was made in the name of the Company, because no one else could pass it.
25. Are you aware that, under the 42nd sect. of the Customs Regulation Act, that is not legal? I am not.
26. As a Custom House Agent you ought to be acquainted with this? I certainly did not; and besides, the Company will not allow any one but themselves to pass entries for drawback on their sugars. The Company have always been allowed to do so, and I do not see how any other person could claim it.
- Mr. Browne*: I do not know how this point bears upon the question before us.
- Mr. Duncan*: It shews the system of illegality that is going on, and that I am trying to put down, and the result of which has been to bring me into these difficulties that now surround me.
27. You say that the 6 hhds. were put on board, and that two of them were re-landed? Yes.
28. Were you agent of the ship at the time? Yes.
29. Are you aware that by thus re-landing these two hhds., not only the goods themselves, but the vessel from which they were landed became forfeited? No; I certainly am not. At the time of re-landing, the goods had never been made shipped by any officer of Customs, neither was drawback claimed, and therefore not liable to forfeiture. The Sugar Company never claimed upon the entry of the 6 hhds.; they only claimed for the 4 hhds. actually sent away.
30. By Mr. Powell: Have you been called upon by the Collector to account for any deficiencies? Yes; some little time ago I was asked to account for deficiencies in a shipment of tea.
31. Do you happen to know whether I endeavored to obtain drawback upon the 6 hhds. said by the mate's receipt to have been shipped by the "Zone"? I do not; but I should imagine that you would only claim for the 4 hhds. actually shipped.
32. Now, could I, as a Custom House Agent, have obtained the drawback on the 6 hhds.? No; not without the indorsement of the Customs officer.
33. It was on the producing the certificate of landing of the tea at Auckland, to the Collector here, that he promised Mr. Caldwell that the drawback would be paid—as before stated the certificate is in his possession—you say that drawback on the tea by the "Breadalbane" was promised on receipt of a certificate of landing at the port of discharge—to whom was the promise made? To Mr. Caldwell.
34. Who by? By the Collector, Mr. Duncan.
35. By Mr. Duncan: Who told you that I had ever made such a promise? Mr. Caldwell. He called upon me, immediately after he had had an interview with you, and he then told me what I have now stated.
36. Has the drawback been paid up to the present time? No, it has not.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1860.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ., | CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; and Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell, Custom House Agents, were present during the proceedings.

Mr. James Bowden called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Powell: You were Captain of the "Moa," the trip she took in May last, to Auckland? I was. Mr. J. Bowden.
4 Jan., 1860.
2. You indorsed the warrant for the shipment of a certain quantity of sugar by your vessel to Auckland? I did.
3. And after your arrival in Auckland you found some of the sugar short? Yes, forty bags.

- Mr. J. Bowden. 4. At the time you signed the warrant you believed that the sugar really was shipped? Yes, and I signed bills of lading for the same quantity.
- 4 Jan., 1860. 5. Who did the sugar belong to that was missing? To the owner of the ship.
6. By Captain Ward: When you got to Auckland will you tell us what occurred? I found that we had short shipped forty bags of sugar, and I requested the Collector of Customs there to write to Sydney and explain the matter. I did not bring his letter with me, as I had to leave Auckland very hastily. When I came back to Sydney I reported the short shipment to Mr. Powell, and to the owner of the ship.
7. You brought back no letters with you? I did not.
8. It was merely a verbal message then that you gave to Mr. Powell? Yes.
9. What did you say to him? I told him that the sugar was one ton or forty bags short.
10. What did he say when you told him this? He said he was very sorry there should have been any error.
11. When did you discover the error? Not before the vessel was unloaded at Auckland.
12. Did you tell Mr. Ross about it when you came back? No.
13. Then the only persons you communicated with were Mr. Robertson and Mr. Powell? Yes; Mr. Robertson would be sure to inform the Sugar Company of the mistake.
14. By Mr. Browne: At whose suggestion did you sign the bill of lading—was it on your mate's receipt for the goods having been shipped? That must have been produced in the office before I would sign.
15. And your mate's receipt was given upon the Company's tickets sent down with each load? Yes, that is the usual way of doing the business.
16. These tickets then must have been correct before you signed the bills of lading? Yes.
17. You say you brought back no communication from the Collector at Auckland to the Collector here? No; I do not think that I brought back any mail, because I came away from Auckland very hastily. I had to be in Sydney by a particular day in order to join the "Prince Alfred," of which I was to have charge; and for that reason, I hurried my departure. However, as soon as I had entered the "Moa" inwards on my arrival, I reported the error to Mr. Powell.
18. Was there any doubt expressed by the Custom House authorities as to whether you had the full quantity of sugar cleared on board? No; not by the authorities here.
19. Did you hear anything about a ticket being blown away? No; I heard nothing about it.
20. By Mr. Duncan: Do you know the exact number of bags that were missing? Yes; forty bags.
21. Are you sure of that? Yes.
22. Are you certain it was not forty-three? I think not.
23. You were called upon to make a declaration as to the contents of your vessel, before leaving the port? I was.
24. And you then declared that these 40 bags were in your vessel? Yes; I believed them to be there.
25. And in Auckland, did you not make a declaration that these 40 bags were short shipped in Sydney? I did.
26. And yet you made this declaration, after declaring in Sydney that they were shipped? Yes; I suppose I did.
27. Does not that appear a strange mode of proceeding, declaring one thing in Sydney, and another in Auckland? Yes, it does; but then we know that these errors will sometimes arise.
28. Did you report this short shipment at the Custom House on your return? No; I only reported it to Mr. Powell. I did not know you then.
29. Your knowledge of me had nothing to do with the matter—why did you not report it to the Custom House? Mr. Metcalfe has done my Custom House business for the last twelve years, and I have never had anything to do with any body else.
30. Then you expected that they would have reported it to the Custom House? Yes, if they thought it necessary.
31. By Mr. Powell: You did not hear anything of 43 bags being short at Auckland? Not that I recollect; only 40 bags were short to my knowledge.
32. Do you recollect telling me that you had reported the deficiency in Auckland, and that the Collector there would write up to the Collector here about it? Yes, I do.
33. Did the Collector in Auckland call upon you to pay the duty on the missing bags? No.
34. You made a declaration that they were short shipped, and that saved you? Yes.

---

Mr. Augustus Birnie, called in and examined:—

- Mr. A. Birnie. 1. By Mr. Powell: What office do you hold? I am fourth landing-waiter in the Customs Department.
- 4 Jan., 1860. 2. How long have you been a landing-waiter? I can hardly recollect the exact time.
3. You have had some experience in the system of claiming drawbacks? I have.
4. Have you, at any time, found anything wrong in the drawback entries? No; I do not recollect anything.
5. You are in the habit of making short shipments on the back of drawback warrants? Yes.
6. Do you consider that there is any irregularity in that? No, I do not.
7. Was it your practice, before the appointment of Mr. Russell as drawback clerk, to average the weight of Company's sugar that was shipped for drawback? Not generally the practice, but I have done it.

8. It was, however, the recognised plan of shipment? Yes; but for the fine sugars only. Mr. A. Harris.
9. You never averaged the raw sugars? No; we always weighed them.
10. You have never found that I have asked you to do anything out of the course of your duty? 4 Jan., 1860.
- No; I do not recollect anything of the kind.
11. By Captain Ward: Is it customary to allow an agent to record a short shipment on the back of the drawback warrant, for the information of the landing-waiter? They have never done anything of the kind for me.
12. You always did that for yourself? Yes.
13. Do you happen to know if it is allowable in other cases than your own? No, I do not.
14. Do you consider that there is any harm in the agent doing this? No; not if the short shipment be recorded correctly, and the landing-waiter satisfies himself that it is so, before he signs.
15. You do not think that in doing this, a Custom House Agent exceeds his duty? I do not think so. It hardly matters who writes the short shipment, provided it is correct; and that the landing-waiter ascertains it to be so before he signs.
16. By Mr. Duncan: But, supposing the landing-waiter has not seen the goods, is there anything wrong in the agent himself indorsing the short shipment? Yes, if he asks the landing-waiter to sign it.
17. What would you do in such a case? I should certainly decline to sign under such circumstances.
18. It would be wrong then? Yes, certainly.
19. By Captain Ward: Do you mean that it would be wrong for the landing-waiter to sign it, or for the agent to put the memorandum on the back of the warrant? It would be wrong for the landing-waiter to sign; but I do not see that there would be anything wrong in putting the memorandum on the back.
20. By Mr. Duncan: Would it not be wrong for a Custom House Agent to ask you to sign to the correctness of a document when you had not seen the goods alluded to in it? It would not be wrong if he knew the document to be all correct; but I should decline to sign it until I had satisfied myself that it was so.
21. Have not cases occurred in which drawback goods have been actually shipped before entries were passed for them or notice of the shipment been given? We used to ship the Company's sugars on their notes that were sent down. With every load the Company send down a receipt to the mate of the vessel in which it is to be shipped, and a cart note for the Customs officer, and upon these we used to act.
22. But has it not been the case that the sugars have been shipped before you got these notes? Yes, in some cases.
23. But under any circumstances you would not sign the debenture for the payment of the drawback unless you were satisfied that the goods had been shipped? No, I would not.
24. Do you take the Company's tickets now? Yes, as a check upon our own account of the shipment.

Mr. James Collyer called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Powell: You are an officer in the Customs? Yes, I am senior tide surveyor. Mr. J. Collyer.
2. How many years have you been in the department? Nineteen.
3. And during that time you have filled most of the offices in the out-door department? 4 Jan., 1860.
- I have.
4. In that time have you ever found our firm doing anything wrong in so far as the revenue is concerned? No.
5. Have we ever asked you to do anything for us out of the course of your duty? You have not.
6. You have generally found us correct in all business matters? Yes.
7. By Captain Ward: Do warrants for drawbacks come under your inspection? Not now, but they did some six or seven years ago, when I was landing-waiter.
8. Do you think it proper for a Custom House Agent to indorse the amount of short shipment on the back of the drawback warrant? It would be for the landing-waiter who makes the shipment to say this.
9. My reason for asking the question is this—Mr. Russell, the late drawback officer, seems to have been in the habit of having certain information indorsed on the back of the drawback warrant by the agent, for him to sign. Do you think there is any harm in this? No, I think not.
10. There is not anything wrong in an agent making an indorsement on the back of the warrant of the quantities actually shipped? No; not if the officer afterwards satisfies himself that the indorsement is correct.
11. By Mr. Metcalfe: Would you have signed such an indorsement without previously assuring yourself of its correctness? Most assuredly I would not.
12. By Mr. Duncan: You think, then, that there is nothing wrong in an agent indorsing a drawback warrant? I do not, if the officer satisfies himself before signing that it is correct.
13. You have not been so long in the Customs without having read the old orders for the conduct of business? I am afraid I have not read them.
14. Was there not an order made that the drawback warrant was not to leave the hands of the Customs officer, after it quitted the long room, until it was brought back completed? I am not aware of any such order.
15. Are you not aware that goods for drawback have been shipped without the knowledge of the Customs officer? In my time we always had notice of the shipment.

Mr. J. Collyer. 16. Have you not heard that this has been done? It has been done with none that I have shipped. We always had a printed notice, shewing the kinds and quantities of the goods that were about to be shipped.

4 Jan., 1860.

17. Then you never indorsed a drawback warrant for goods you had never seen? No; we could always see the goods, and I made a point of doing so.

18. Would it not be wrong for an agent to ask an officer to indorse a drawback warrant when he had not seen the goods he was indorsing for? Yes; because the officer, if he signed, would not be doing his duty.

19. By Captain Browne: Was it not the practice for the landing-waiter to sign without being really acquainted with the shipment of the goods, and understanding that the order of Mr. Barnes was to be carried out in that way? Yes, under that order the officer frequently signed on goods that he never saw; but that was on the report of the man who accompanied the cart from the bonded store to the vessel, that the goods were shipped. This applied, however, only to spirits and tobacco.

20. He signed on the faith of the export officer's certificate? Yes; and very often the goods were shipped at a different wharf from that at which he was stationed.

21. By Captain Ward: Have you ever had anything to do with the clearance of vessels, or with taking declarations on contents outwards? No, I have not.

---

Mr. George Norton Russell called in and re-examined:—

Mr. G. N.
Russell.

1. By Mr. Powell: You were lately an officer in the Customs? Yes; my connection with the department ceased on the 1st instant.

4 Jan., 1860.

2. Have you ever been called upon to sign drawback warrants for goods you have never seen? Yes, I have.

3. Will you state the instances in which this has been required of you? I was called upon by Mr. Bayley to examine a quantity of sugar that was being shipped by Messrs. Gilchrist and Watt. I told Mr. Bayley that I had just then such an immense deal of business to do that every one must come in his turn. He said that the ship was just going to clear, and pressed upon me to go down and see the sugar weighed. He continued to press this on me, and at last I consented to go down to the store. When I went there I saw the storekeeper at Gilchrist and Watt's, who laughed when he saw me, and asked me what I wanted. I said I wanted to see the sugar weighed that they were about to ship. He then said, "It has been shipped these last five days." I then asked what I had been sent down there for, away from my business, when the sugar had been already shipped. He said he did not know, he only knew the sugar had been shipped. I said that as I had not seen the sugar I would not sign the drawback warrant. He said that I must do it. I insisted that I would not. He said that I would be made to do it. I then came up to the Collector and told him that I had been called upon to sign for over five tons of sugar that I had never seen, and that when I went down to weigh it I found that it had been shipped five days before. Some conversation then ensued between the Collector and Mr. Bayley, and at the end of it the Collector insisted upon my signing the warrant. I did not wish to do it; but he insisted upon my doing so, and I signed it, though I said that it was not right to make me sign for what I had never seen.

4. What Collector did this? The present Collector, Mr. Duncan. I said that my orders from the late Collector were to see all sugars weighed that were shipped for drawback; but he called upon me, in the presence of Mr. Bayley, to sign the warrant, and I did so.

5. Is there any other case in which you have been required to do the same thing? Yes, in the case of some tea—7 chests, that were shipped by the same firm. I did not see them, but I was called upon, by the same authority, to sign the certificate of their shipment.

6. By Mr. Duncan: Did I ever ask you to sign a warrant for any body? You did. You made me sign for what I never saw.

7. By Mr. Browne: When did this take place? It happened in May last.

8. And you say you were made to sign? Yes. I persisted right or wrong not to sign, because my responsibility in the matter was very great; and I ought not to have been asked to sign for what I did not know was correct. I never would sign for anything I was not sure about.

9. By Mr. Duncan: Do you mean to say that you never signed for any goods without first seeing them? No; I never signed for anything but what I had previously weighed.

10. Will you look at this list of three days work, copied from your book—(Return produced)—and say if you saw even the half of these goods shipped? I must have seen them all, except the Sugar Company's shipments. There is a large quantity of their sugar in the list, and this I did not see, because I was directed by the Government to take their weights from the tickets.

11. Putting this sugar out of the question, did you see all the other goods shipped? I could not swear that I did.

12. By Mr. Powell: You still assert that you were called upon by the Collector to sign for sugar that you had not seen shipped? Yes, I do.

13. By Captain McLerie: Was any one present when Mr. Duncan ordered you to sign? Yes, Mr. Bayley; he was in the room all the time.

---

Mr.

Mr. William Passmore called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Powell: You are a landing-waiter in the Customs? I am.
2. How long have you held that post? Since 1854.
3. You have had some experience of the drawback system during that time? I have.
4. Do you know whether the practice prevailed of taking the average of the weights of the Sugar Company's shipments of sugar for drawback previous to the time of Mr. Russell's appointment as drawback clerk? Yes; the order was to take the Sugar Company's weights.
5. Who gave that order? The late landing surveyor.
6. You were in the habit of making short shipments on the back of the drawback warrants? I was.
7. Do you think there would be anything wrong in an agent doing this for you? Not if I satisfied myself afterwards that he had done it correctly.
8. You would not sign it without first doing this? No, certainly not. I would not sign for what I knew nothing about.
9. Have you ever been asked by our firm to do anything in an irregular manner, or out of the strict line of your duty? I have not.

Mr. W.
Passmore.

4 Jan., 1860.

Mr. Stewart Mowle called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Powell: You are a tide surveyor in the Customs? I am.
2. You, at one time, had charge of the drawback accounts? I had.
3. During the time you had charge of those accounts did you discover any irregularity in our manner of claiming drawbacks? In what way?
4. In the manner in which the warrants were indorsed or our claims made? No, I did not.
5. You never saw anything to lead you to fancy that we were in any way guilty of a fraud upon the revenue? No; I should have reported it if I had.
6. Have you ever observed any irregularities in our method of transacting business? I have not.
7. Have we or any one in our office ever treated you with incivility or disrespect? Not at all, but quite the contrary.
8. Have we not shewn every disposition to assist the officers of the department in their business? Yes, you have.
9. By Captain Ward: Mr. Metcalfe is charged with having exercised undue influence in the Customs Department, now I would wish to ask you whether he has had any illegitimate influence in the department, or whether, in fact, he has had any influence that was not due to his great influence? Not upon me.
10. Has he had it upon any of the officers of the department? Not to my knowledge.
11. Have you ever known him to act against the regulations of the department, or against any law or other authority in force there? I have not.
12. As a general rule has he done his best to carry out the laws and regulations of the department? I think so; I always found him inclined to do what I wished.
13. Did you ever know him oppose the Collector or his regulations? No.
14. By Mr. Duncan: Are you not aware that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell had greater influence in the Customs Department than any one else? No, I am not.
15. Was it not matter of common remark that they had this influence? Yes, it was.
16. Do you know if there was any foundation for this remark? No, I do not; but I know that it was remarked.
17. By Captain Ward: Can you mention anybody that you heard make this remark? When I first came from Twofold Bay, it was the general impression and remark throughout the department that Mr. Metcalfe had this influence; and I may mention the names of Mr. Maddox and Mr. Llewellyn as having said this.
18. Have these remarks been confirmed by anything you have since seen? No, they have not.
19. How long have you been in the department? I have been in Sydney for the last four years, and a greater portion of that time I have been in the long room.
20. By Mr. Duncan: Are you not aware that influence has been exercised in your favor, more or less, by Mr. Metcalfe? I am not. I do not recollect his using any.
21. Were you not at one time an aspirant for promotion? I was.
22. And Mr. Metcalfe made some great exertions in your favor? I know that he was kind enough to say that he would do so.
23. Are you not aware that both Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell have used threats against some of the officers of the department? No, I am not.
24. Have you not heard them complain that such was the case? I have not.

Mr. S. Mowle.

4 Jan., 1860.

Mr.

Mr. Henry Moore, called in and examined :—

- Mr. H. Moore. 1. By Mr. Powell: You are a locker in the Customs Department? I am.
 4 Jan., 1860. 2. Were you at any time doing duty on the Australian Steam Navigation Company's Wharf? I was.
 3. In what capacity? As acting tidewaiter.
 4. What were you in the habit of doing with regard to the clearances of steamers? I was only a very short time at the clearances. I took the papers and witnessed the captain's signature to them.
 5. The captain's declaration and the documents were sent down to the wharf to you, and you countersigned them with respect to any additional articles shipped? I did.
 6. They being first signed at the Custom House by Colonel Gibbes? Yes.
 7. Were drawback goods ever inserted upon the clearance after the papers came to you? Not that I remember, but I was only a short time at this branch. Before I left I had to attend to the shipping of the sugar sent down for drawback.
 8. That would not appear on your clearance? No. I inserted only free goods on the manifest after it came to me.
 9. By Mr. Duncan: How long were you employed in this way? From two to three months; not more.
 10. Do you remember any instance of a steamer having gone away without your clearance? Not that I remember. I do not think that such a thing ever happened to me.

Mr. Henry John Rucker, called in and examined :—

- Mr. H. J. Rucker. 1. By Mr. Powell: You are in the Customs Department? Yes. I am third clerk in the Custom House.
 4 Jan., 1860. 2. How long have you been in the department? Eleven years.
 3. During that time you have been engaged in almost every branch in the long room? I have.
 4. You have for some time been drawback clerk? Yes.
 5. During the time you have had charge of that branch, have you found anything irregular or improper in our manner of claiming drawback? Not that I remember.
 6. Have you found that we in any way obstructed you in the execution of your duty? No. Not in any way that I am aware of.
 7. Have you ever been treated with any incivility or want of respect either by us or by the clerks in our employment? No.
 8. Have you had handed to you a certificate of the landing of the tea of Mr. Caldwell's, shipped by the "Breadalbane," on which drawback was refused? Yes, I think I have.
 9. Did you understand that that drawback would be allowed on receipt of that certificate? At first I did.
 10. Who led you to believe that it would be allowed? I think it was Mr. Llewellyn.
 11. Have you received any instructions with reference to that drawback now? I took the certificate to the Collector, and asked him how I was to enter it upon the sheets; and he said, I was to lay it by for the present.
 12. Your impression, however, was, that it would be allowed? Yes, up to that time it was.

Mr. Francis Spence, called in and examined :—

- Mr. F. Spence. 1. By Mr. Powell: You are a clerk in the Custom House? I am.
 4 Jan., 1860. 2. You were at one time a clerk in our office? I was.
 3. And during the time you were there you were acquainted with our mode of conducting business? I was.
 4. Do you know of any irregularity in our way of doing business? I do not.
 5. By Captain Ward: How long have you been in the Custom House? Nearly five years.
 6. And you left Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell's office to go into the Customs? Yes.

(Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell then handed in certain correspondence as part of their evidence.)

WEDNESDAY,

WEDNESDAY, 11 JANUARY, 1860.

Present :—

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents; and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the proceedings.

Mr. Robert Sempill called in and re-examined :—

1. By Mr. Browne: You stated, on a former occasion, that you could produce proof of your Mr. R. Sempill. assertion that Mr. Metcalfe had exercised in the Customs Department an influence detrimental 11 Jan., 1860.
to the revenue and at variance with his position as a Custom House Agent; are you now prepared to do so? I am. On that occasion—19 December, Question 32—Mr. Metcalfe challenged me to produce proofs of what I asserted, and that I am now prepared to do, by producing a few warrants, as examples of the mode in which his business was done.

2. Will you state the instances to which you allude? I first produce the report of the French ship "Arche d'Alliance," of Havre, from Lombard to Port of Sydney, with the copy of her manifest inwards, and the declaration of the master, of date October, 1851. I produce a warrant for the importation of dutiable goods by that ship. It is passed by Mr. Metcalfe, but the declaration upon it is signed by one of his clerks. That declaration states that she is a British ship, and from London. By that declaration 42 bolts of Osnaburgh are passed as British goods, and as of the declared value of £5 for the whole, and duty paid thereon 10s.;
and I say that that declaration is a false one. I produce another warrant passed by Mr.
Metcalfe, on his own declaration, for rice imported by same ship, the value being fixed at £3 and a fraction per ton; the value of rice at the time being, in Sydney, £4 to £7 per ton.
I produce another warrant passed, on the declaration of Mr. Metcalfe, for 6 tons of resin, imported by the same vessel; the value being declared at £2 per ton, the price in Sydney being then £15 per ton. I produce another warrant passed for rice (warrant No. 697), in which the value is declared at £3 per ton, the Sydney price being £4 to £7. I next produce an entry for copper, imported by the "Oceanic," from Manila, 7,601 lbs., passed by Mr.
Metcalfe on a declaration, stating the value at less than 2½d. per lb., the whole being entered at a value of £70. (But in the body of the declaration the value is stated at £7 only, which I presume to have been a clerical error.) I also produce a warrant and declaration for coffee, imported in the "Velocity," from Adelaide, 3 tons 10 cwt, the value being declared at £30 per ton, the market price in Sydney being at the time £112 per ton. I produce another warrant and declaration, dated March 10, of coffee imported from Adelaide; value declared at £30 per ton, the Sydney market price being £112 per ton. I produce another warrant and declaration, of the 17th January, for 40 quarter-casks of Marsala wine; the declared value being £100. I produce another warrant and declaration, dated 17 March, for 950 broad palings, imported from Launceston; the declared value being £2. I produce another warrant and declaration, dated 28th March, 1851, for American caught sperm oil, imported by the United States ship "Massachusetts;" the declared value being £31 10s. per ton, the Sydney market price at the time being £72 per ton. I produce another entry, passed on the next day, the 29th March, 1851, for British caught sperm oil, by the "Nelson," British ship; the value being stated at £60 per ton, no duty being payable. I produce another warrant and declaration, passed on the 19th April, 1851, for 2,120 bushels of wheat, from Launceston, the declared value being 2s. 6d. per bushel, whilst the market price in Sydney was 7s. 10d. per bushel. I also produce a warrant and declaration on the same date, for potatoes imported from Hobart Town, by the "Six Brothers," 80 tons, at a declared value of £2 a ton, the market price in Sydney being £4 10s. per ton. I produce a warrant and declaration, passed on 19th April, for flour imported by the "Sarah," from Launceston, the declared value being £9 per ton, whilst the Sydney market price was £20. I produce a warrant and declaration, dated 19th April, for 4,046 bushels wheat, imported by the "Sarah," from Launceston, the declared value being
2s. 6d. per bushel, whilst the Sydney market price was 7s. 10d. per bushel. I produce a warrant with declaration, also on the 19th April, for 1,500 bushels of wheat, imported by the "Favorite," from Launceston, and passed by Mr. Metcalfe for T. W. Smart, at a declared value of 2s. 6d. per bushel, Mr. Smart's report of the price given by him for inferior Colonial wheat at his mill at that time being 8s. per bushel. I produce a warrant and declaration, dated 23rd April, for 9 tons cordage, by the "Arabia," from Manila, the declared value being £20 a ton, whilst the Sydney market price was at the time £50 a ton.
I also produce an entry of the 26th June, for sugar, by the "James Gibson," from the Mauritius, the declared value being £2 4s. per ton for 8 tons, £5 10s. per ton for 6 tons, £7 14s. per ton for 1 ton; the market price being then from £22 to £24 per ton.
I produce a warrant and declaration, dated 11th August, for coffee imported by the "Caldew," from Batavia, 27 tons of the declared value of £25 per ton, the market value in Sydney then being from £51 to £84 per ton. I also produce an entry, passed on the 11th September, 1851, for sugar by the "Richard and William," from the Mauritius, 25 tons being of the declared value of £10 per ton, 20 tons of the value of £9 per ton, and 40 tons of the value of £8 per ton; the Sydney price being then about £30 for such sugars.
I also produce a warrant and declaration, passed on the 10th November, 1851, for black oil imported by the "Emma," from Auckland, the declared value being £10 per ton, whilst in Sydney the quotation for black oil was on the 25th October—the nearest quotation I could find—from £38 to £40 per ton. I also produce a warrant and declaration, passed on the 18th September, 1851, for sugar imported by the "Stratheden," 50 tons at £9 per ton, and

Mr. R. Sempill. 60 tons at £10 per ton; the Sydney value of sugar of the same quality being at the time £22 per ton. I produce a warrant and declaration, passed on the 5th January, 1852, for 11 Jan., 1860. flour by the "Tamar," from London, 19½ tons on a declared value of £117 12s., or about £6 per ton, the actual price in Sydney being £12 per ton. I produce a warrant and declaration, passed on the 17th January, 1852, for rock salt imported by the "Tamar," 25 tons on a declared value of £5, that is, 4s. per ton, the price in Sydney at the time being £2 10s. per ton. I also produce a warrant with declaration, of the 1st December, 1851, for rice imported by the "Duchess of Northumberland," from Calcutta, 242 tons at a declared value of £3 per ton, the price in Sydney at the time being from £5 to £8 per ton. I produce warrant on declaration, of the same date, for 7 tons of sugar at a declared value of £7 per ton, the price in Sydney at the time being from £18 to £20 per ton. And I also produce a warrant and declaration, passed on the 2nd December, 1851, for 50 tons rice by the same ship, at a declared value of £3 per ton, the price in Sydney at the time being from £5 to £8 per ton. These entries were all passed by Mr. Metcalfe. They are produced by me as examples only of the way business was transacted. In addition to these cases, there are many more that I could have adduced for the period I served in the Customs, but the records of the Custom House for that time are not in a good state of preservation, many being quite illegible, and others entirely destroyed by damp.

3. Did these entries come under your notice whilst you were engaged in the Customs Department? Most of them did; a few of them, however, occurred not in my time.

4. Whose indorsement is this on the back of this warrant? I have been told it is Mr. Garling's.

5. What does that indorsement mean? I do not know, except from hearsay; I do not know Mr. Garling's signature, except I have been told that this is it.

6. Did you bring the cases you have here mentioned under the notice of the Government; did you, in your letter of complaint, let the Government know of these frauds upon the revenue, that were being carried on by Mr. Metcalfe? I did not mention these or any other cases specially. No inquiry was gone into.

7. Do you happen to know whether the entries you have adduced are exceptions to the general rule, or whether the entries, made at that time, were all made in the same way with regard to values, by other agents? There was very great variation in the declared values of goods entered.

Mr. Metcalfe having been asked if he had any question to put to the witness, said:—The goods are all entered here, and the landing surveyor has, in each case, approved of the value set against them. If any false value had been put to them, it was in the power of the Government to stop the goods and take them at the value entered, if they chose to do so; but in no case was the valuation on the entry objected to. Besides, we have no interest in the matter, the values are given to us by the merchants who import, and that is all we know of the matter.

8. By Mr. Browne: Are you aware whether such was the case, that is, whether the Custom House authorities had power to take the goods at the declared value and sell them? No doubt they had that power by law,—expressly by the Act of Parliament,—and they ought to have exercised it in many of the instances I have alluded to; but they did not do their duty in this, as in many other cases.

Mr. Metcalfe: I have no interest in these values. The importer tells me that the value is so much, and I never see the goods, and am bound to believe him, and enter them as of that value. Afterwards, when the Customs officer approves, I can, of course, have nothing to say.

9. Mr. Browne: Are you aware of what the law was with respect to the value of goods imported, at the time these entries were passed? Yes; the law (Act of Council, 9 Vic., No. 15, section 22,) provided, that the duties should be paid on a declaration of their value by the importer or his agent; and section 54 of the same Act provides a penalty of £200 for every false declaration of the value or otherwise of goods entered; and the Act of Parliament, 2 William IV., No. 14, substituted those declarations in lieu of the oaths formerly required, and provided a penalty of £100 for every false declaration; and the Act of Parliament, 5 and 6 William IV., c. 62, further provides that every false declaration shall be punishable as perjury.

10. Did the law state whether the duty was to be fixed on the value existing in the colony at the time of the importation, or upon the value invoiced to the importer? The Act provided, that in case of any difference of opinion, between the importer and the Customs officer, as to the value of the goods imported, the value was to be determined by the ruling market price in the port of importation.

11. By Mr. Duncan: With respect to Mr. Garling's approval of the value, and the option of the Customs to seize the goods and take them at the declared value in cases where they imagined a proper declaration had not been made,—do you think, from the influence that Mr. Metcalfe had with the then Collector, and with Mr. Garling, that there was any probability of his values being questioned? I do not know what particular influence Mr. Metcalfe had, but I do know that the surveying officer did not do his duty in one case out of five hundred. In almost every case, the value was entered entirely at the discretion of the agent, without any reference to the real value or market price. I was asked, at a former meeting of the Board, on 19 December (Question 44), with reference to the state of business in the Custom House, whether there was not a large increase of business in that department just about the time when I was there, and when Mr. Metcalfe pressed me so much to pass his entries, before those of other parties; and, to satisfy the Board, I have made out a return, from which I find that the ad valorem duties received at the Port of Sydney were, in 1849, £16,775; in 1850, £17,833; and in 1851, £22,930; that the value of goods imported was, was, in 1850, £1,333,413; and in 1851, £1,563,931: and that the number of ships entered at the Customs, Port of Sydney, was, in 1850, 421 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 126,185 tons; and in 1851, 553 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 153,002 tons. Mr. R. Sempill.

11 Jan., 1860.

12. You were asked if you made a special report of the cases you have mentioned, and you have said that you did not; but did you not offer to substantiate these and other charges if the Government gave you the opportunity? I did not make any special charges, but when I was called upon to specify charges I said I was willing to prove all I had alleged, but that I must do it in my own way. The Government required that I should do it in their way, but I would not be forced to do it under the conditions that the Government laid down. I have heard that it has been stated before this Board that Mr. Llewellyn has improperly had something to do with procuring my attendance here as a witness. With respect to any conversation that has taken place between myself and Mr. Llewellyn, and about which Mr. Metcalfe questioned me on a former day—19 December, Question 39—I now say that I have had no conversation with Mr. Llewellyn or any one else on the subject of this inquiry. On the contrary I have carefully avoided it, and have expressly refrained from asking anything about it. At the present moment I do not know what is the Collector's complaint against Metcalfe and Powell, or what is the subject matter of the present inquiry. I have also here a note as to the importance of these declarations of value for the levying of ad valorem duties, and I would hand this in as an answer to Mr. Metcalfe's remark—on 19 December, after my answer to question 41—that my complaint to Mr. Collector Gibbs against him “was one of so little importance that he had not even heard of it.” This note also shews that Mr. Metcalfe was then guilty of a violation of the law of the Customs Regulations—S. V., i.e., of Act of Council 9 Vict., No. 15, secs. 13 and 14, and promulgated by the Lords of the Treasury.

Mr. Duncan, before proceeding to reply, said that he should have to mention the names of one or two gentlemen whose opinions bore out his statements, and whom the Board might call in evidence if they thought fit. He was himself desirous of calling them, but from the case being closed was precluded from doing so.

Mr. Browne said that if the Board thought it necessary, these or any other witnesses that were necessary to elucidate any point would be called upon to give evidence.

Mr. Duncan then addressed the Board as follows:—

In offering to the Board a few observations on the defence made by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, I labor under the disadvantage of not having the evidence before me, nor, indeed, any notes of it. If, therefore, my memory shall be found in any way defective as to any portion of the evidence given on either side, I must crave some indulgence from the Board, on this ground. If the report of the short-hand writer bear out substantially what I shall say, absolute verbal accuracy will not be looked for.

On another ground I feel that I require some indulgence. The letters in which my charges against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell were originally made were written to the Minister of my department, from time to time, as the facts arose, and were of the nature of privileged communications. They were often written in haste, under an enormous pressure of business, and in the heat of conflict with a variety of persons, officers, merchants, agents, and others whose interests were affected by the reforms and regulations which I was then engaged in making. They contained my impressions at the time, and I see now very little in them to retract. On the contrary, they give but a very feeble notion of the difficulties that have been thrown in my way by the parties referred to, and more especially by Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell. They give absolutely no notion whatever of the enormous extent to which I know this revenue has been defrauded by the loose system of which I believe Mr. Metcalfe to have been the principal author, and which loose system, coupled with his uncontrolled sway at the Custom House, has enabled him so to serve his constituents and increase their number, that he can boast that he “represents nearly one-third of the ‘merchants of Sydney.’”

But a person in my place may know much, with a moral certainty, he may have just grounds to suspect much more than he knows, and it may be his duty to communicate this knowledge and these suspicions to the Minister of his department, and yet he may not possess one tittle of legal evidence of the facts. When, however, these facts come to be investigated by a commission like the present, no doubt such a body will feel bound to adhere—if not strictly—at least in some degree to the established rules of evidence; and in such case it will be admitted that much that may be perfectly true—much that may be certainly known—cannot be proved. All I can expect of the Board, under these circumstances, is to give due weight to the proofs actually adduced, and to make fair inferences where the evidence may fall somewhat short of strictly legal proof. If this be done I have no hesitation in asserting that my case against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell is in all essential points proved, and that it will be the duty of this Board to recommend their removal from the Custom House, where they have done so much evil, and where their continued presence would be subversive of my authority as the head of the department.

My first charge against this firm was that they had asked me to sign a clearance before it was filled up or the goods shipped. I submit that this is completely proved by the evidence of Mr. Lane. I might have added a similar request, in a much more reprehensible form, made by Mr. Metcalfe since this investigation commenced. He has asked me to sign a clearance which would have allowed a vessel to carry a cargo coastwise to a port where there is no officer, discharge there, load there for a foreign port without entries, warrants, or anything else, and depart whithersoever her commander pleased—all under the same false and illegal clearance! And he has done me the honor to complain to the Treasurer that I would not be guilty of so illegal an act.

On the subject of my requiring the claimants for drawbacks to make declaration in proper form of their shipments, the fact has not been denied by Mr. Powell, but he endeavored, if I understood him rightly, to convey to the Board the notion that these declarations were really made before my time as well as since. I can only say that all my clerks assert the contrary, that Mr. Powell himself admitted the contrary to me in May last, and that on the 10th day of that month I myself saw Colonel Gibbes attest a great number of these declarations in the absence of Mr. Powell and all the other declarers. That very day I announced my determination to give these declarations all due solemnity. The announcement did create a little stir in the office. I believe it made claimants more cautious, at any rate the drawbacks immediately fell off more than one half, as I have proved by a return before the Board. Mr. Powell has put in a return of a different kind, with a view to account otherwise for this remarkable falling off. I have had no opportunity of examining this document, but I heard enough of it read by the chairman to satisfy me that it proves nothing to the point.

I next charged Mr. Powell with having threatened to "walk out the new Collector" if he attempted to carry out the law in its integrity, and this before he knew who the new Collector was to be. This has been clearly proved by Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Maddocks, and by an original memorandum made by the former at the time. Mr. Powell made desperate efforts to depreciate the testimony of these gentlemen; he had the effrontery to put an infamous question to the former, knowing his very excitable nature, and to a certain extent he succeeded in ruffling his temper, but he utterly failed in shaking the testimony of either witness, and I am confident that the Board must regard this fact as undoubtedly proved. Nor do I think that there can be any doubt in the mind of any one, who has read the papers before the Board, that Mr. Powell has fully acted up to what he said on that occasion. But I admit that I am unable to convey to the Board by direct evidence any adequate conception of the almost supernatural perseverance with which Mr. Powell, aided by the social and commercial influence of his partner, has pursued his object. I can only say that it has wasted my time, injured my health and spirits, and caused me again and again to deliberate with my family on the prudence of resigning an office which I have attained by long and faithful service, which is my sole dependence, and which I honestly believe myself peculiarly qualified to fill with advantage to the public. What has most pained me in my intercourse with Mr. Powell is his incessant lying.

Mr. Powell called the attention of the Board to this expression.

Mr. Browne: I think it would be much better if this case could be divested of personalities. The use of these strong words can have no other effect than to embitter private feelings, and, speaking for myself, I know that they will not have the effect that is anticipated on the Board.

Mr. Duncan: I can find no other word that is applicable to Mr. Powell's continued want of veracity, and I must decline to withdraw the word.

Mr. Browne: It is not for us to dictate to you, but the Board would advise you to moderate the tone of your address.

Mr. Powell: Let the word stand. It will shew the public the kind of man we have to deal with.

I do not know that I have ever had from him, either orally or in writing, two consecutive sentences of naked truth. In his letter to Mr. Ross, at page 9 of the printed correspondence, I have counted fourteen deliberate falsehoods. The most material of them are proved to be such by letters of Mr. Still, Mr. Llewellyn, Mr. Chapman, Mr. Bayley, and Mr. Macpherson, at pages 7, 12, and 13. That letter was never intended for my eye. It was intended to do its work silently with the Sugar Company and with the Speaker of the House of Assembly, whose name is insidiously introduced into it, when in a happy moment Mr. Ross sent it to the Treasury, by which accident it is now in the possession of the Board. How many similar letters Mr. Powell may have written to his other constituents I can only judge from the false prejudices he has succeeded in creating. This one at any rate we have, and I would earnestly request the Board to read it, with my answer and the letters referred to, and to judge of my position at the head of a large and most onerous department, with such a man stationed among its officers—in constant contact with them, and tampering with them,—the managing partner too of a firm representing "nearly one-third of the merchants of Sydney."

Mr. Powell has, however, made an effort to justify some portions of that letter, and I would beg the attention of the Board to the disgraceful means he has resorted to for that purpose. He has called Mr. Russell, and instructed him to tell the Board that I compelled him under a threat to indorse the warrant for Messrs. Gilchrist's sugar which he had not seen shipped. Mr. Russell certainly did boldly and deliberately make that statement, and stuck to it. I ask, did the Board believe him? I feel confident no one present did believe that I ever asked Mr. Russell to sign a warrant for the shipment of goods without knowledge of the fact—far less that I did so under a threat. Here Mr. Powell has surely overacted his part. I hope it can hardly be necessary for me to deny that I pressed Mr. Russell against his conscience to sign a warrant. The Board have had ample evidence of the flexibility of his conscience in signing for drawbacks, but, to remove all doubt on the subject, I have requested Mr. Bayley, who was present in the room, to state what really took place. Here is one of the cases on which I leave it to the Board to say whether they will call for the evidence of the party alluded to or not. After mentioning the condition on which I agreed to allow the drawback, Mr. Bayley says, "You then sent for Mr. Russell, and instructed him in my presence that he might make the goods shipped immediately on "my producing the above certificate of the landing of the goods. This was every word that passed, to the best of my recollection." So far Mr. Bayley, whom the Board may call and examine, if it should be deemed necessary.

The Board will observe that the allowance of the drawback was, in this case, contrary to the ordinary rule made to depend on the Collector's certificate at the port of landing, not on that of Mr. Russell, who in fact did not sign till that certificate was produced long after. Mr. Powell called Mr. Giffard to prove that I had very recently promised a drawback to Mr. Caldwell under similar circumstances, and certainly Mr. Giffard boldly asserted the fact. But when asked by me how he knew it, he was obliged to admit that it was pure hearsay. The truth is that I refused drawbacks to Mr. Caldwell and one or two others in similar circumstances, but told them they might obtain certificates of landing which would be taken into consideration after the Government had decided the claims of the Sugar Company, which are now before this Board. Was there anything wrong or inconsistent in this?

I turn from this lamentable exhibition of Mr. Powell and his witness to his attempt to explain away the printed evidence of his falsehood in reporting to Mr. Ross a conversation he had with me on the subject of the Sugar Company's drawbacks. The Board will remember that in the first instance he attempted to shew that the conversation in question was the same that took place when he burst forcibly into my room after I had refused to see him. This, however, was too glaringly false to deceive the Board for a moment. Mr. Powell was made feel his error, and it became necessary to shift his ground. This one conversation having been proved to be two, he wished afterwards to make it three, in order to exclude the witnesses who prove so clearly his mendacity. I ask the Board if they ever saw a more lamentable failure? Can a doubt exist in the mind of any one who reads the correspondence that the conversation alluded to in Mr. Powell's letter to Mr. Ross is the identical conversation that took place in the presence of Mr. Still and Mr. Llewellyn? And can any blame be attached to me if, after such an exhibition of malevolent falsehood, I refused to give him another opportunity of misrepresenting my words? I am in the habit of speaking out rather unguardedly what I may happen to think at the moment, on all public matters and public men, and I constantly say things that, reported by a mendacious auditor like Mr. Powell, might bring something more dangerous about my ears than even the Speaker's wig. Unless, therefore, I could adopt a habit of circumspection, which I despair of ever attaining, I must, at whatever cost, keep walls or space between me and such men as Mr. Powell. I am happy to believe that few such men exist.

My next charge against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell was their having concealed, for about three weeks, a short shipment of sugar on which they had received drawback; and that on reference to the shipping warrant the quantity was found to have been indorsed, not by the searcher, on whose indorsement drawbacks are paid, but by Mr. Metcalfe, himself the recipient of the drawback. This I have asserted to be an unpardonable offence in a Custom House Agent, and I have proved my assertion by the evidence of Mr. Cecil as to what would be thought, in London, of such an indorsement. This, even if the indorsement had been correct, but it is admitted that in the case of the sugar per "Moa" the indorsement was false. I use the word false advisedly, because an indorsement has no reference to what may have been intended to be shipped, but to what the searcher knows to be shipped. But Mr. Metcalfe's indorsement is not only false as regards the short shipment of 43 bags, but it is false even supposing them to have been shipped. Mr. Metcalfe indorsed for the whole quantity shewn on the face of the warrant 35 tons, while the Company do not pretend to have shipped more than 34 tons 12 cwt. 3 qrs. 21 lbs. It seems that Mr. Russell could not make Mr. Metcalfe's indorsement tally with the Company's weights, and he succeeded in getting some third party to write off 7 cwt. 7 lbs. from the quantity indorsed by Mr. Metcalfe. The Board are aware that the original warrant, together with other important papers connected with this inquiry, has been mysteriously abstracted from the correspondence, but there is left therein sufficient secondary evidence of the facts here stated.

The Board have heard from Mr. Cecil what would be thought of such a transaction in England, supposing it possible that it could take place there.

Mr. Powell has not been able to deny that, aware of the short shipment on the 8th June, he allowed the "Moa" to enter, discharge, load, and depart again without informing me of this breach of the law. Is it possible to justify such conduct in a licensed agent? Is it not a violation of his bond?

To return to the indorsements. I produced a number of drawback warrants indorsed by Mr. Powell in the same way. Whether these indorsements were true or false will probably never be known, nor does it in my opinion make any difference as regards this inquiry. The Board have seen the searcher Russell, in whose name the indorsements were made. They have seen how little he knew, or could know of the enormous shipments for which he was nominally responsible; they have seen that the drawback system—the searcher being their mere tool—was entirely in the hands of the agents to take what they pleased, more especially in the case of the Company's sugar; they have seen that the belief of the Government and the public that Customs officers were engaged in watching the shipment of goods for drawback was a perfect delusion; and they will say if men who could be parties to such a gigantic imposture, or rather its authors, should continue in the position of licensed agents.

It has been said that this abominable system was expressly sanctioned by the late Collector as regards the Sugar Company. No proof has, however, been adduced, and I do not believe that Colonel Gibbs ever signed such a regulation. Unless the contrary be proved, I shall believe the arrangement to have been made between Mr. Metcalfe and his tool, Russell, with the Collector's authority. And surely such a scheme more pregnant with fraud was never devised.

It is not to be expected that many proofs can be adduced of actual fraud on the part of these agents. The officers who may have been cognizant of such frauds cannot expose them without either condemning themselves as accessories, or at least exposing themselves to have all their own faults brought to light in retaliation. The treatment of Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Kidd by Mr. Powell shews to what extent even comparatively good officers expose themselves to annoyance by exposing frauds. Yet it has been proved, beyond all question, by Mr. Mackenzie, aided by the unwilling memory of Mr. Russell, that Mr. Powell did urge the latter to make a fraudulent indorsement of two casks of sugar that were either short shipped, according to Mr. Russell, or illegally re-landed according to Mr. Giffard; and it has been proved, equally beyond question, that Mr. Powell again and again pressed Mr. Kidd to make a false indorsement for drawback, even after the latter informed him that he had been offered a bribe by a third party to sign for it. And we have it in evidence that after Mr. Kidd had persisted in his refusal, Mr. Powell obtained the drawback by means of a less scrupulous officer. Mr. Powell, I admit, proved that Mr. Kidd, himself, had not been always so scrupulous as he ought to have been, and as he had led the Board to believe. It was difficult for any man wholly to escape the general contagion; but I have no hesitation in saying, from my observation of his character, that, compared with many others, Mr. Kidd was scrupulous, and that his testimony respecting Mr. Powell is not to be gainsayed. Mr. Powell called Mr. Collyer—an officer of very loose notions of duty—to prove that, in his opinion, there was little harm in an agent's indorsing a warrant for the searcher; but even Mr. Collyer failed him here. He could not justify Mr. Powell in asking a searcher to sign for a shipment of which he had no knowledge, not even the mate's receipt. Still Mr. Collyer did justify Mr. Powell and his partner to some extent, by saying that he saw no harm in an agent's indorsing warrants to be afterwards signed by the searcher. If so, why not add the searcher's name? Why not dispense with the searcher altogether, and save his salary? I am astonished that any man—and particularly an old imperial officer like Mr. Collyer—would damage his own reputation here, and his future prospects with the Imperial Board by giving utterance to such a doctrine. Very different is the language of Mr. Fancourt (and here is another case in which the Board can call in the party as an evidence or not as they may think proper), who from his earliest years had an acquaintance with the practice of the London Docks, and whom the Board may recall and examine on this point. Mr. Fancourt says, "I am satisfied that no such thing is done in London, neither would it be allowed. In my opinion if an officer was to sign such a document he would stand a good chance of losing his situation." (Vide letter annexed.) This accords with the straightforward evidence of Mr. Cecil, and with every principle of integrity and common sense. And if further proof were necessary it is furnished by Mr. Deane, an old imperial officer, whom it is yet competent for the Board to call and examine, and who is the third and last of the witnesses I referred to, and who states (vide answers annexed) that it is most decidedly improper for a landing-waiter to allow any one to indorse for him; that he never allowed an agent to indorse a warrant; that the Board of Customs would not tolerate such a practice, which might open the door to great irregularity and fraud. Mr. Powell's own notions of indorsements were not quite so loose when he wished to establish for himself a character with the former Board, by denouncing the irregularities of others. At page 59 of the evidence then given, Mr. Powell is asked with reference to certain warrants in the "Louisa" case:—

"63. Whose handwriting is that in? The agent's; but I see the export officer, Mr. Newton, acts as a clerk, in a manner; he has indorsed these documents, which is a very unusual circumstance.

"64. Whose duty is it to make these indorsements? The locker's duty." If, therefore, it was irregular for an officer of the department to indorse for another, surely it is tenfold more irregular for an agent—a party interested—to indorse the quantities on which he is to be paid. I observe, also, that in a note to his evidence, Mr. Powell, who opposes all examination for drawback now, states that it is the practice in London to examine such goods—"the exporter attending to open and close the packages," (p. 58.) On the same page, in answer to a question respecting Mr. Bramwell's having signed a shipping warrant for goods he had not seen, Mr. Powell had no hesitation in saying that he thought it "VERY WRONG." But Mr. Powell was then Queen's evidence. He is now the defendant. The case is altered with him; and that which was then "very unusual" and "very wrong," is now "all right" and praiseworthy.

There are in the hands of the Board two drawback warrants in which Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell enter some ten and eleven tons, respectively, as refined sugar, which, on examination, were discovered to be bastards, and entitled to the lower drawback only. Mr. Powell has claimed to be the first to point out the error in one of these cases; but I do not remember that he proved it, and I do not believe it, far less that he would have done so in the quiet old regime. He attempted to justify the false entry and declaration on the face of the warrants by the instructions received from the Sugar Company, but on referring to the book in which these instructions were entered, it was found that they did not agree with the entry. Mr. Powell here also displayed his wonderful power of mixing truth with falsehood by stating that the indorsement of the warrant was everything, the entry on the face of it nothing. This is really true as to the quantity, but quite false as to the quality or description of the goods. A false entry as to the quality or description of the goods would in England expose the agent to a penalty of £100. In our Colonial law, I believe, it is of the nature of perjury. And on this subject of false declarations I confess to some surprise that the Board should have entertained for a moment Mr. Metcalfe's argument that such a declaration is the act of the principal and not that of the agent. In morals it is certainly not so, nor is it so in Customs law. The Act 16 and 17 Vic., c. 107, s. 198, says,

"If

"If any person shall make and subscribe any false declaration, or make or sign any declaration, certificate, or other instrument required to be verified by signature only, the same being false in any particular * * * every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the penalty of one hundred pounds."

If this penalty were enforced with rigour against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, I believe the gross amount of penalties would more than pay the whole public debt of this Colony. I do not believe that there ever existed such a system of falsehood as the Custom House declarations of these agents exhibit. Even now that their debenture declarations are properly taken, I believe that there would be no difficulty in proving the majority of them to be substantially false, and the drawback thereby illegally obtained.

I had charged Mr. Metcalfe with obtaining for the Sugar Company, by means of a false representation, a large remission of duty on sugar illegally abstracted from the bond. The letter of Mr. Metcalfe on which I relied to prove this has, like the famous "Moa" warrant, and other important documents connected with this inquiry, disappeared, the correspondence having been twice at least in the hands of persons connected with the Sugar Company. I do not know what the Board think of this strange disappearance of public documents; for my own part I have formed without difficulty my own conclusion. Even without this letter of Mr. Metcalfe's, however, I undertook to prove the false representation; but the Board refused this portion of my evidence, on the ground that Mr. Metcalfe was acting under the advice of his employers, the Sugar Company, who alone should be held responsible. I thought, and I still think, this was an erroneous ruling of the Board; but I have no doubt the transaction will be brought to light in another way, and substantial justice done. The Board will shortly see with what facility the agents of the Sugar Company enabled that firm to take hundreds of tons of sugar out of bond without payment of duty; and, consequently, to obtain drawback of duty which was never paid, thereby committing a double fraud on the revenue. It will then better appear whether or not it was safe to take the Company's weights, and their agents' indorsements, with Mr. Russell's valuable signature attached, as the sole authority for paying away many thousands of pounds of the public moneys. Nor do I imagine that the Board will be satisfied with the production of two pass-books, which they have had no opportunity of comparing with the private books of the agents and of the Company, and with the accounts and correspondence of both parties. If the Board are not prepared for this immense investigation, and to carry it out with a minuteness and perseverance corresponding with the sharpness and cunning of these men they have to deal with, I submit that these pass-books are of no importance whatever in this inquiry. And if Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell repeat their assertion that I am too "suspicious," I refer them to the evidence of Mr. Sempill as to the gigantic frauds practised on the revenue by Mr. Metcalfe in years gone by,—frauds compared with which the case of the "Louisa" sinks into complete insignificance. Sugar worth, as per Herald's Wholesale Price List, £23 per ton, entered for duty at £2 8s. to £5,—coffee worth £70 per ton entered at £25 to £30, rice worth £5 to £8 entered at £3, black oil worth £38 to £40 entered at £10 per tun, and so on without end.

One of Mr. Metcalfe's plans of operation was to secure to his own creatures such offices in the department as he required the control of. In this he generally succeeded. Mr. Russell's appointment was one of these, according to universal belief in the office. Mr. Manton (himself at one period a tool of Mr. Metcalfe) stated the same thing to the former Board, and I have no doubt of it. Mr. Metcalfe, however, denies it, and says it was the appointment of his alter ego, Mr. Garling. Be it so. On my taking charge I found the first and second clerks in disgrace with the Government, partly through the restraint with which they evidently made their statements before the Board in the "Louisa" case, and partly through the efforts of Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell to make the most of the awkward figure they then made. I well remember the effect that Mr. Llewellyn's evidence made upon myself, to his prejudice, when I read it, at a distance. I cannot wholly justify it now, but I now understand the cause of it. He knew that the influence of these agents was the chief, if not the sole, cause of the irregularities then made manifest, but neither he nor any other had the courage to risk his own dismissal by denouncing them. But I believe that Mr. Llewellyn and Mr. Maddocks were both greatly instrumental in restraining the evil, and they were to be got rid of. Their places were to have been filled by friends of the firm. Mr. Mowle was to take the place of one, several proteges of Mr. Metcalfe were successively named for the other high office, and Mr. Spence, an ex-clerk of Mr. Metcalfe, was to have been warehousekeeper. I was almost led into the snare myself; and if Mr. Powell had not displayed his irregularities too soon, and thereby put me on my guard, no doubt Mr. Mowle would be now secretary, or cashier, and Mr. Spence warehousekeeper. However, I began to "suspect" in time to enable me to do justice to both the aspirants and the intended victims; and while Mr. Mowle and Mr. Spence, as in duty bound, have been here to express their gratitude to their patrons, Mr. Llewellyn and Mr. Maddocks remain at their posts, the duties of which they discharge, in my opinion, faithfully and conscientiously. And while alluding to Mr. Llewellyn, I would, in justice to him, notice the desperate efforts made by Mr. Powell to drag him into this present affair, by representing him as the originator of the difference between myself and these agents, and the chief mover of this inquiry. I assure the Board that this is utterly untrue. Mr. Llewellyn never said one word to me unfavorable to these agents till I myself discovered their shamefully irregular mode of doing their business, and until I called upon him to assist me in instituting such inquiries as I thought necessary in the matter. He has simply given me the assistance it was his duty to give. In fact, if I have any fault to find with Mr. Llewellyn it is that he is, and has been all along, too much afraid of these agents; and if he is a little bolder now than formerly, it is no doubt because he sees that they are now likely to become harmless. It is greatly to Mr. Llewellyn's

Llewellyn's credit that, being naturally nervous and timid, and well aware of Mr. Metcalfe's power, he has never been of Mr. Metcalfe's party. I respect him for this; but that he, or any one in the department, or out of it, is capable of leading me by the nose in a matter of this kind, will not be believed by those who know me best, and whose chief complaint against me is that I will "neither be led nor driven."

These remarks have extended so far beyond what I intended, that I must pass over much that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell said in their defence, but failed to prove. The defence of the latter was, indeed, rather a string of falsehoods and recrimination against myself, than a defence of his own misconduct; and I have to apologise to the Board for my inability to avoid interrupting his continual mis-statements, during an address that occupied nearly two sittings. I pass over his attempt to persuade the Board—from the simple fact that I allow average weights to be taken when possible—that my regulations are the same as those that previously existed. The Board have seen enough of the old system, and they have copies of my rules and instructions, and they can judge if they are the same. They will, however, consider the difficulties I have had to contend with in carrying out these regulations by means of officers, too many of whom, as we have seen, incline to my opponents, and to the former easy way of getting over their duty. It will be necessary to make very large allowances on this score, and at the same time to consider the continual pressure on me for relaxations of particular rules; the numerous appeals to the Treasury against my decisions; my desire on the one hand to enforce the law strictly, and at the same time to give every safe facility to legitimate trade. It will be necessary to consider that I have to give decisions twenty times a-day on points many of which would each require a whole day's consideration to decide them well; that every such decision forms a precedent, which men like Mr. Powell are always ready to avail themselves of, and strain beyond its proper limits (witness the cases of Gilchrist's, Robey's, and Caldwell's drawbacks); that my every act is watched and recorded for hostile purposes; that those who seek interviews with me are followed and listened to, and our conversations misrepresented. If all these circumstances are duly weighed, I think the Board will be surprised that Mr. Powell and his partner have been so unsuccessful in fault finding, and that they will receive credit for prudence in withdrawing their formal charges which were to have terminated the Board's labors. Except that this abandonment of their case will save some valuable time, I cannot say that I am thankful for it; nor can I meet them half-way in their concluding effort to reduce the whole matter to a personal misunderstanding. There is no misunderstanding whatever. I believe we understand each other perfectly; at least I am quite sure I understand them, and I shall take care, now that matters have gone so far, that the whole community understand us both, unless, indeed, which I sincerely hope, the report of this Board shall be such as to relieve me from the necessity of ever bestowing another thought on Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, sometime Custom House Agents at this port.

I now leave my case in the hands of this Board, with the most perfect confidence as to the ultimate result.

Mr. Duncan proposed to hand in as evidence the letters from Mr. Bayley, Mr. Fancourt, and Mr. Deane, alluded to by him in his address.

Mr. Powell objected, unless he could have an opportunity of replying to him.

The Board determined upon taking time to consult as to whether the letters now handed in by Mr. Duncan should be retained as evidence. If they were so, Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell would have an opportunity given them to refute the allegations contained in the documents; if they were not, they would be returned to Mr. Duncan.

Mr. Metcalfe now wished to address the Board on the subject of his charges against Mr. Duncan.

Mr. Browne said the Board cannot think of proceeding in that way. They have been bound to consider the position that Mr. Duncan holds, and the fact that he has taken the course that has caused this misunderstanding solely for the protection of the revenue, and looking upon him, moreover, in the light of an imperial officer, we give him the first opportunity of putting his case before us, as against Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Mr. Stewart, and the Sugar Company. These being concluded, we will hear your charges against Mr. Duncan, and he will then have full and fair opportunity to defend himself. We had, however, understood at the last meeting that it was not the intention to press these charges against Mr. Duncan.

Mr. Metcalfe: Surely it is not the intention of the Board to shut out our case.

Mr. Browne: No. The Board will be quite prepared to hear you at the proper time if you insist upon going on with it.

Mr. Metcalfe: We consider that we have proved a great deal of our case in the evidence that has been already given, and we thought that time might be saved by handing in this correspondence, and hearing a few remarks from me, which would conclude our case at once.

Mr. Browne: If the charges are brought, Mr. Duncan must have full notice and full opportunities of replying in the same way as notice and opportunity were given to you.

TUESDAY, 17 JANUARY, 1860.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.,

CAPTAIN McLERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; and Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents, were present during the proceedings.

The Chairman announced that he had received a communication from Mr. Stewart, of the firm of Towns & Co., who, in consequence of a domestic affliction, would not be able to go on with his case to-day, as had been agreed upon.

The Chairman now said, with reference to the letters appended to Mr. Duncan's statement, made at the last meeting of the Board, that it seemed to him objectionable to refuse to receive anything that was offered in the shape of evidence, and that in this view the Board concurred with him; the Board had, therefore, decided to receive the letters. At the same time, if Mr. Metcalfe or Mr. Powell wished to make any remark in reply to the statements contained in those letters, they will be entitled to do so.

The following letters were then read as part of the evidence:—

Custom House, 7 January, 1860.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to state, in answer to your question to me, whether from the long experience I had in the Docks in London, a Custom House Agent would be allowed by the Customs authorities to indorse a warrant for the due delivery of goods for drawback or export, and then the searcher to sign it for shipment.

I am satisfied that no such thing is done in London, neither would it be allowed. In my opinion, if an officer was to sign such a document, he would stand a good chance of losing his situation.

W. A. Duncan, Esq.,
Collector of Customs.

I have, &c.,
THOS. FANCOURT.

My dear Sir,

Sydney, 9 January, 1860.

As you were for many years a landing-waiter at this port, and one who was admitted to have a thorough knowledge of the out-door business of the Customs department, I should esteem it a favor if you would give me your opinion on the following subject:—

A landing-waiter, having shipped some goods for drawback, takes the warrant to the Custom House Agent who passed the export entries, and gets him to make the usual indorsement on the back of it, instead of writing it himself,—to which he then places his signature in the usual way.

The points upon which I wish to have your opinion are these:—

- 1st. Is it proper for the landing-waiter to allow any one except himself to write upon the back of a warrant for goods shipped by him for drawback?
- 2nd. Is an agent justified in writing upon the back of a warrant for goods shipped for drawback under any circumstances whatever?
- 3rd. Would such a practice be approved of by the Board of Customs?
- 4th. Would not such a practice open the door to great irregularity, and probably admit of fraud upon the revenue?

J. L. Deane, Esq., &c., &c.

Believe me, &c.,
W. N. LLEWELLIN.

Ans. 1. Most decidedly not.

Ans. 2. I never allowed such a thing, nor am I aware of such a circumstance ever having taken place during my time; but it used to be the practice of the agents to send us the Memo. to indorse upon the export warrant.

Ans. 3. No. See Landing-Waiters' Instructions, issued by the Commissioners, Art. 4.

Ans. 4. It might, in the event of the landing-waiter being called upon to sign these documents in a hurry, as was frequently the case.

J. L. DEANE,
Late 1st Landing-Waiter.

*Circular Quay, Sydney,
4 January, 1860.*

Dear Sir,

Having learnt that a misrepresentation of facts connected with an allowance of drawback to my clients, Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., has been made to the Board now sitting on the Customs Department, and being anxious they should receive a correct statement, I beg to offer you the following history of the case as it really occurred,—either for your own satisfaction or for the purpose of laying before the Board, as you may deem expedient.

I made application that a drawback might be allowed Messrs G., W., and Co. on some sugar which they had shipped inadvertently, without the requisite notice for drawback having been given,—presenting at the same time the “captain of the ship’s” receipt for the sugar on board. You at first refused, but on consideration you said, “this being one of the first, if not the first case (I forget which) that had presented itself since your taking office, you would allow the drawback on my producing the certificate, from the port of destination of the sugar, certifying the goods had been landed there.”

At the same time you stated, that on no future occasion would you recognise a drawback claim without all the forms of our Custom House were complied with. You then sent for Mr. Russell, and instructed him in my presence that he might make the goods shipped immediately on my producing the above certificate of the landing of the goods.

This was every word that passed to the best of my recollection.

I have, &c.,

M. BAYLEY.

W. A. Duncan, Esq.

Captain Ward: We will now hear any remarks that may be offered upon these letters.

Mr. Metcalfe: The letter of Mr. Fancourt is intended only to throw dust into the eyes of the Board. The London Shipping Bill, which answers the purpose of our warrant, though signed by the searcher, is filled up by the merchant; and there every entry is made on the face of the document, there being no indorsements on them. Upon this point I quote from Beedell’s British Tariff, 1853–4, which says, “The shipping bills filled up and signed by the exporter as agent for the consignee of the ship, and countersigned by the searcher, shall be the clearance for the goods enumerated therein; and if any of such goods shall consist of tea, spirits, or tobacco, the exporter or his agent shall furnish to the searcher an account thereof, containing the number and description of the packages, and the respective quantities contained therein, which, when certified by the searcher, shall accompany the ship, and have the same force and effect as the cocket in use prior to the passing of this Act.”

Mr. Powell: I shall confine myself mainly to the letter of Mr. Bayley, and there is much in that that is calculated to lead the Board astray. All that I have endeavoured to shew has been that the ship could not be cleared without the signature of the landing-waiter Russell, and that we, as agents of the ship, were anxious to clear her, so that I was in attendance when he left the Collector’s room. Now Mr. Lane’s evidence goes to shew that he would not have cleared the vessel had not all the warrants been returned to him signed by the landing-waiter, and that, consequently, the presumption is that Mr. Russell did, as he says he did, sign the warrant.

Captain Ward: As Mr. Powell is directing his observations to this particular point he had, perhaps, better wait until he hears the letter from Mr. Duncan to the Board, opening up a new phase of the question.

[The letter from Mr. Duncan to Captain Ward, dated 12 January, attached to this Appendix, was then read.]

Custom House, Sydney,
12 January, 1860.

Sir,

Some discussion having arisen at the Board yesterday, in your absence, as to the reception of three letters handed in by me, the decision on which was deferred, I am desirous that my object in handing them in may not be misunderstood. I am aware that, according to the strict rules of the Courts, I could not at that stage call new evidence, but the Judge has power to call and recall witnesses at any stage, and may be requested to do so by either party. In my address I suggest that Messrs. Bayley, Fancourt, and Deane, may be called by the Board, should they have any doubt on the points to which their letters refer; and the letters are handed in, not as evidence, strictly speaking, but to enable the Board to judge whether they should be called or not. If the Board should think it unnecessary to call them, then their letters may either be received or rejected; and in the latter case the allusion to them in my address will stand quantum valeat.

Another matter occurred yesterday which has given me great pain. At the previous sitting, Mr. Powell called Mr. Russell to prove, and he certainly did say, boldly, that I required him, against his will, to sign for Gilchrist’s drawback, and that under a threat from me he did sign. This I, of course, denied; and Mr. Russell’s statement appearing to be received with signs of incredulity, Mr. Powell supported his witness with a statement to the effect that he was waiting in the passage leading to my room, the door being open, and that he heard the conversation as given by Mr. Russell. On this I exclaimed, “Good God! the plot ‘thickens’—or something like that.”

Now, in my address, yesterday, I had made some severe remarks on this gentleman-like position of Mr. Powell, listening at my door, when he absolutely denied having said anything of the kind, and, to my still greater surprise, neither Captain Browne nor Captain McLerie remembered it. In consequence, I had no help but strike out from my address a castigation which Mr. Powell’s unguarded, but characteristic, avowal exposed him to.

As you were not present yesterday, I am anxious to know if you remember this avowal of Mr. Powell, which places him beyond recovery in the position either of a spy, or of something still worse.

And

And I would beg to remind you of a similar undue advantage obtained on the second day, I think, of this investigation. In my opening statement on the previous day I said that Mr. Metcalfe had confessed that he was in the habit of indorsing warrants for drawback. This Mr. Metcalfe indignantly denied. At next sitting I alluded to this denial of Mr. Metcalfe, and produced a number of warrants indorsed by his partner, when Mr. Metcalfe immediately denied that he had made any such denial on the previous day, and appealed to the Board, who supported him. Now in the short-hand writer's notes of my address, assent to me for revisal, Mr. Metcalfe's interruption on the first day is faithfully reported, thus confirming my statement on the second day, and disproving Mr. Metcalfe's, and shewing also the imperfect recollection of the Board.

I shall certainly be greatly disappointed if your recollection of Mr. Powell's statement, denied by him yesterday, prove to be equally imperfect, for I think it concerns the honor of the Board much more than it does mine, that Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell should be prevented from saying and unsaying the same things in this way.

Apologizing for giving you this trouble, but forced to it by the extraordinary position in which my zeal for the public service has placed me,—

Captain Ward, R.E.,
Royal Mint.

I am, &c.,
W. A. DUNCAN.

The Board decided to receive the letters. I recollect Mr. Duncan making use of the words "the plot thickens," which I understood to refer to Mr. Russell's evidence on his second examination. I did not hear Mr. Powell make the statement imputed to him by Mr. Duncan. As regards Mr. Metcalfe's alleged admissions and subsequent denial, it appears to me that Mr. Duncan persists in confusing a memorandum furnished by Mr. Metcalfe to a Customs officer at his request, with an assumption of the officer's duty in indorsing that information on the warrant with a fraudulent intent. Mr. Metcalfe has admitted the former several times—never the latter. In my opinion, whatever he has done in this way has been bonâ fide, and for the benefit of the public service.

This is my view of the matter.

H. H. B.
13 January.

I concur also in this view of the matter.

J. M'L.
13 January.

Captain Ward: With regard to this letter, I have already said that the Board have decided upon receiving the letters appended to Mr. Duncan's address. I may also state that I do not recollect hearing the expression attributed to Mr. Powell. I now come to the other letter, bearing upon the point alluded to in Mr. Bayley's letter to the Collector.

[The letter to Captain Ward, dated 13 January, was then read, as follows:—]

Custom House, Sydney,
13 January, 1860.

Sir,

Since I wrote to you, yesterday, a most important fact in the present inquiry has come to my knowledge, which will remove all doubt, if any still exist, as to Mr. Powell's and Mr. Russell's veracity in the matter of Gilchrist's drawback. You will remember Mr. Russell stated most boldly that he signed the warrant at the time under a threat from me, and when, at last meeting, I argued against the probability of this on the ground that the debenture was not passed till the following month, when a landing certificate was received from Nelson, Mr. Powell, as the members of the Board then present will recollect, stated that it was not the debenture but the warrant that Mr. Russell signed, and that he had to sign it to clear the ship.

Now I propose that the Board recall Mr. Lane, the clearing clerk, who will produce the warrant with both the duplicates thereof, not one of which has Mr. Russell's name indorsed upon it up to the present hour!

But for Mr. Powell's intrepidity in denying his own words as to his having overheard what indeed was never spoken, I should have taken it for granted that Mr. Russell did sign the warrant, not on the day mentioned (18th May), but on the 30th June, the date of the debenture, and after the arrival of the landing certificate from Nelson (dated 20th June).

Such, however, is not the fact. I was curious to ascertain when Mr. Russell did sign, and the result of my inquiry is that he never signed at all!

Captain Ward, R.E., Royal Mint.

I have, &c.,
W. A. DUNCAN.

Captain Ward: I presume Mr. Powell will not object to hear Mr. Lane examined, as should he establish all that is here alleged, he (Mr. Powell) will have little doubt as to the want of credibility that attaches to the evidence of Mr. Russell.

Mr. Duncan: Excuse me; but my letter goes still further, for the Board must surely remember that Mr. Powell has over and over again affirmed that he was waiting for Russell's signature to this document in order to clear his ship, and that it was his expectation of this that kept him hanging about my door on the occasion in question. At the same time Mr. Powell has affirmed that he must have got this signature before he cleared the ship; consequently it becomes a matter of considerable importance to me that Mr. Lane should be examined, so that from his evidence the Board may see the kind of character for veracity that Mr. Powell has, and the kind of men I, in my public capacity, have to struggle with.

Captain Ward: The Board will hear Mr. Lane.

Mr. John Lane called in and re-examined:—

- Mr. J. Lane. 1. By Mr. Duncan: Do you remember clearing some sugars shipped by Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, & Co., by the "Lady Denison"? I do.
- 17 Jan., 1860. 2. Do you produce the original drawback warrant? I do.
3. Who is it indorsed by? The writing is mine; and it is indorsed with the copy of a notice written I believe by Mr. Bayley, and signed by you on the back of my copy of the warrant. This indorsement on the searcher's warrant is written by me and signed by you.
4. How do you account for this indorsement on the warrant? The warrant handed to the drawback officer, Russell, had not been returned, and without it I could not clear the vessel. Mr. Bayley then went into the Collector's room with my copy of the warrant in his hand, and I suppose had some conversation with him, and afterwards came out with this indorsement on the warrant—"Allow the within entry to pass, pending advices from Nelson."
5. Was the drawback officer's warrant signed? No; it came back from him blank, and without a signature, thereby assuming that the goods had not been shipped. No doubt the officer had not seen the goods shipped, and had declined to sign for them. When I found this, I wrote a duplicate of the entry made on my copy of the warrant, and you signed it.
6. By Captain Ward: Are these the only warrants issued? No; there are three copies of the warrant, but the third one does not go into the hands of the officer.
7. By Mr. Duncan: The third copy, I believe, is sent down to the Auditor General? It is.
8. Have you seen that copy? I have.
9. Does it bear Mr. Russell's signature? No, it is not signed by him. It has only his initials in one corner.
10. Have you received the landing certificate for these goods from Nelson? I do not receive them, and am not aware whether they have been received. I was not aware that I should have been called upon to give evidence on this matter, or I would have looked up the papers.
11. By Mr. Powell: I could not have cleared the ship without this indorsement by Mr. Duncan? No; not unless all the warrants had been duly returned as shipped.

Mr. Powell said: In my letter of the 9th August I state, that "Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., claimed drawback upon 5 tons 8 cwt. of sugar, which had been shipped fully a week before the entry was passed; and although no officer of Customs had weighed or seen the sugar, Mr. Duncan authorised the allowance of the drawback, only deferring the payment until a certificate could be procured of the unloading." This is all I ever wished to prove, and this I believe I have substantially proven. Of course with Mr. Russell's statement I can have nothing to do, except in so far as it bears out what I allege, and this I contend has been done by Mr. Duncan's own remarks. All I know of the matter at issue between Mr. Russell and the Collector is, that I was waiting in the passage to get the documents necessary for clearing the ship, when Mr. Russell came out and said that the Collector had authorised him to sign the papers. As the vessel was subsequently cleared I could not but imagine that Mr. Russell's statement was correct.

Captain Ward: You will, however, admit now that Russell's evidence is of no value?

Mr. Powell: I do; but the Board must remember that I have no responsibility on that account.

INQUIRY INTO DEFICIENCIES OF TEA IN TOWNS & CO'S. BOND.

TUESDAY, 17 JANUARY, 1860.

Present :—

CAPTAIN WARD, R. E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.,

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs, was present during the proceedings.

Mr. Frederic Garling called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You were formerly landing-surveyor at this port ? I was.
2. The Board are now engaged in making inquiry into a deficiency of tea that has occurred in Towns & Co's. bond, and as it appears that you made some alteration in the weights of the tea entered in the red-book of the "Hirondelle," they are desirous of hearing your explanation of it—here is the red-book and the alterations to which I refer ? (Book produced.) Yes ; I see there are some alterations with my initials to them.
3. But with respect to the alterations, how were they made ? They appear to have been returned by the landing-waiter at a certain weight, and then to have been altered by me.
4. How did you come to do this ? When the return of the landing-waiter was sent in and reached the importers, they appealed against the weight as being more than the tea had been invoiced to them in China. Upon this being done, I went down to Towns's bond, and, in the presence of Mr. Stewart, weighed the tea ; that is, I weighed a few packages from each class of tea net, and then struck an average of the whole, and these figures are what the packages turned out according to my calculation.
5. Was the landing-waiter who returned the weights present during the second weighing ? I am not sure.
6. Who was the landing-waiter ? It was Mr. Kidd. I have no doubt but that I drew his attention to the error, if I did not give him formal notice. I do not, however, remember whether he was present at the re-weighing or not. It is my impression, however, that Towns & Co. wrote to the Custom House respecting the weights of the tea, and said in their letter that the weight was more than they had paid for in China.
7. When they made this complaint, did they shew you their invoice ? That I cannot say, but I have seen their invoice since ; but even this alteration that I have made rates the weights at considerably more than the average of teas generally ; I should say by 7lbs. or 8lbs. per chest more than the weight of the tea generally imported.
8. There are some of the lots, however, that you did not alter ? Some of them were correct, I suppose, and did not require alteration. There were a great many marks or chops as they are called, shewing the different qualities of tea, and each mark had to be weighed separately.
9. It has, however, been remarked that all the larger quantities, those numbering 400 and 500 packages, have been altered, whilst the smaller quantities, of less than 100 packages, have not been so—how is this accounted for ? I cannot say. They were all weighed, and the weight of those were altered that required to be so. The alteration was made, and the initials were put to them at the same time ; I recollect the whole thing perfectly well.
10. You have no recollection of the packages beyond having weighed them—no recollection I mean of the particular brands or marks ? No.
11. What I want to call your attention to is the fact that the weight of all those brands containing the larger quantities of packages are altered, whilst those containing only a small number of packages remain as the landing-waiter had first entered them ; now this may be a coincidence, but, if so, it is a strange one, and one that has been subject of remark—can you say how this has happened ? I do not know. I only know that I weighed them all, and altered those that had been entered too high ; and even now they are higher than the average weight of teas imported into this Colony.
12. By Mr. Browne : The course that you adopted in altering the entries of the landing-waiter was, I presume, a usual one ? Yes. If anything was found to be incorrectly entered we altered it. This instance, however, is rather an unusual one, because so many packages were found to be over weight.
13. Is it customary to alter the entries in the red-book without consulting the officer who made those entries ? Whenever I have had to make alterations I have given the officer notice. I did so on the present occasion to Mr. Kidd, and I believe he was present at the re-weighing, though I am not certain about this.
14. You say that an application was made to the Customs, relative to the weights, by Messrs. Towns & Co. ? Yes.
15. Was it in writing ? My impression is that it was so.
16. Was this application made before the goods were entered into the warehousekeeper's book at the Customs ? That I do not know.
17. By Mr. Duncan : You had charge at that time of the warehousekeeper's department ? No ; that branch was in charge of the warehousekeeper himself.
18. Do you know how the teas got out of the bonded store ? No ; the locker in charge will be the person to speak to that. The goods would be delivered into his charge.
19. Did you not examine his books to see that these teas were duly entered ? I examined his

- his teas occasionally, but then the amount of business that devolved upon me as landing-surveyor and inspector of warehouses was so very great in 1856 and the two previous years, that it was impossible for me to examine all the books as carefully as ought to be done, or, in fact, for me to do one-half the business that I had to attend to. This became so apparent at last, that a separate appointment of an inspector of warehouses was made, that the work might be properly done.
20. You are not aware then that these teas got out of bond without paying duty? No. That would be the locker's business, and he would have to report to me.
21. You received no such report? I did not.

Mr. Thomas Fancourt called in and examined:—

- Mr. Thomas Fancourt.
17 Jan., 1860.
1. By Mr. Duncan: You are warehousekeeper at the Customs? I am.
  2. Do you recollect, in June or July last, finding a deficiency in Towns and Co's. bonded store? I do.
  3. Will you state what you found? I found that there were 644 half-chests and 103 boxes of tea deficient in Towns and Co's. stores, weighing in all 29,134 lbs.
  4. And these were deficient at the end of June last? Yes.
  5. And no duty had been paid into the Customs upon that quantity of tea? No, not at that time.
  6. The duty was paid on it a few days after you made the discovery? Yes. When I discovered that this large quantity of tea was standing open in our books, I sent word to Mr. King, the locker at Towns and Co's. bond, that such was the case, and that they were overtime goods, having been in bond over three years. Mr. King informed me that there was no such mark in the bond as that which I had sent him, namely, K 436; and that these teas must be a portion of the I 436 entered by mistake as K 436. When I found the goods standing open in my books, I wrote to the locker to know the exact dates of the receipt into bond, and the delivery of any parcels, together with the number of packages then on hand. When Mr. King came up to the Custom House in the evening, he told me that he had spoken to Towns and Co. about the tea, and that the duty on it would be paid the next day. It was not, however, paid till the day following, that was on the 3rd August.
  7. Then these 747 packages all belong to the K 436 mark? Yes.
  8. Did you discover anything respecting the I 436 brand? No; they appeared properly as entered and delivered in the stock book.
  9. Were there not some of them short? I believe that when Mr. Still came to take stock, he found some of the I brand short.
  10. Can you state how many of this I 436 brand appear by your book to have been delivered from bond, since February, 1857? 38 chests and 750 half-chests.
  11. And how many since April of that year? The delivery commenced in April, so that the same number as I have mentioned were delivered since then.
  12. Do you happen to know how many packages of the I brand were reported by Mr. Still to be in bond at the time of his stock-taking? I do not.
  13. By Captain Ward: Then the locker reported to you that the goods you alluded to in your note had never been in bond? He did. The present locker informed me that the tea did not appear at all in the store books.
  14. If it had been received into bond, it would have appeared in the locker's book? Yes, indubitably.
  15. What inference would you draw from the fact of this tea not appearing in the locker's book? That it did not go into bond at all; but that it went into consumption at once.
  16. By Mr. Duncan: I believe there was a man dismissed from the Customs for delivering goods out of this very store without the duty being previously paid on it? Yes; there was a case of the kind. A man named McGrath was so dismissed.
  17. And with regard to the goods not appearing in the books of the present locker, if the old books had chanced to have been filled up and removed, and new books substituted for them, of course the entries would not appear? They would not.
  18. By Captain Ward: Has this change of books been made? I do not know.
  19. Have you any impression as to whether such has been the case or not? I have not.
  20. Who is the present locker at Towns's store? Mr. King.
  21. Was he the locker at the time the goods were received? No, I think not. Mr. Newton was the locker at this time.
  22. Have you had any means of tracing these missing teas? Yes; I have traced them in so far as my books are concerned.
  23. And what have you found? I found that the teas were entered in my book as being still in bond, and being overtime goods, I at once wrote to the locker about them; and he then said they were not in bond.
  24. Have you gone any further than this? Yes; I got out the red-book of the "Hirondelle," and examined it by my entries, and finding the entries to be correct, I shewed the red-book to Mr. Duncan, for his decision on the matter.
  25. By Mr. Browne: What makes you think that the goods were not received into bond? Because there was no trace of the brand in the store books, or in my book; and with such a large quantity of tea as this, some of it must have appeared as having been taken out of bond.
  26. But the very fact of the red-book having been sent to you shews that the goods must have been received into bond. I believe it is the landing-waiter's place to see that the goods are safely lodged in bond before sending you the red-book? It is; and it is evident that that the landing-waiter must have had the right marks and brands, because he is very particular in specifying them, with the different weights of each.

Mr. Thomas
Fancourt.

27. By Captain McLerie : Do all the deficiencies in the store occur in tea imported by the "Hirondelle?" Yes, all.

17 Jan., 1860.

28. In which of the lots did the greatest deficiency occur? In the brand K 436. The whole of that was wanting.

29. Is there no signature of the locker to the red-book? No; at one time he used to sign the red-book as acknowledging the receipt of the goods in bond; but at this particular time, that custom had been done away with.

30. By Mr. Duncan : Just look at the red-book of the "Hirondelle," you will see there that the weights of different parcels of tea have been altered; now, does it not seem to you that this alteration of weights is a verification of the fact of the goods being in bond? Yes. I see the weight of half-chests of tea altered from 48 lbs. to 43 lbs., and this would seem, as you say, as if the goods had really been in bond.

31. Whose initials are those? They are the initials of Mr. Garling; they are Mr. Garling's own figures too that have been inserted for those erased.

32. Is it a usual or an unusual thing to have alterations of this kind made in the red-book? So far from its being usual, it would not be sanctioned by the Customs at Home.

33. By Captain Ward : But is it a usual thing here—has it been done before? Yes, repeatedly.

34. Do these weights appear in your warehouse-book as originally entered in the red-book, or as subsequently altered? In my book they appear to have been entered as in the red-book, and then similar alterations to those made in the red-book have been made in my book. All the packages appear to have been entered in the first instance at the heaviest weight, and then to have been subsequently altered to the lighter one.

35. There is no record in the Customs to shew that these teas were actually received into bond? No, nothing beyond this book. At one time, as I said before, the locker used to sign the red-book as an acknowledgment that he had received the goods into bond. This practice was discontinued, I do not know by whose authority; but as I found that we were thus left without any actual proof of the goods having been received into bond, I called the attention of the Collector to the point, and the practice of signing the book by the locker was resumed.

36. Who came down to you to pay the duty on these teas? Mr. Brown, a gentleman in Towns & Co.'s office. When he came down I spoke to him respecting it, and he told me that he knew that the duty had not been paid (long ago). I told him that if he knew that he ought to have come down and paid it; he told me that it was our business to look after it, not his. There the matter ended. I then went up to the Collector and informed him, and wished to know whether I could pass the entries; and he told me yes, which was done accordingly; of course our warehouse-book is not signed by the present locker for the delivery, as the goods were not in existence, and he spoke to me on the subject.

Mr. William Cathcart Still called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You took stock of the goods in Towns & Co.'s bonded warehouse in 1857? I did.

Mr. W. C. Still.

2. How many packages of tea did you find there altogether? I cannot say precisely from memory, but you will find them all given, with their respective bond marks, in the return sent in by me to the Collector.

17 Jan., 1860.

3. Can you not say from memory, as that return has been mislaid in the Treasury, how many packages of tea were missing; were there not a considerable number of packages missing? I believe there were.

4. Now, referring to your memo. of 8th September, how many of the brand I 436 did you find in bond? That memorandum was taken from and sent in with my return, and I find by that that there were 69 half-chests of the brand I 436 in bond when I took stock of Towns & Co.'s warehouse, and none of the brand K 436.

5. You are quite certain that such was the case? The return was made up by me to the best of my ability, and I believe was correct.

6. In what month was it that you took stock? Early in August.

7. And there were none of the K brand, and only 69 half-chests of the I brand? Yes.

8. Your original stock-taking account was handed by you to me? It was, with a memo. of mine attached.

9. That was forwarded by me to the then Treasurer, and you were afterwards called upon by the Treasurer to further explain your return and memorandum? Yes; and I then attached the second memorandum to it, as appears in the printed correspondence, page 16.

10. Do you know what day in August it was that you took stock in Towns & Co.'s bond? I cannot say now the precise day, but I know it was early in August. I commenced the stock-taking of all the bonds in July, and had finished early in August. This was the second stock-taking I had had. When I took stock the first time, I was directed by the then Collector to omit, in my returns, the tea, coffee, sugar, molasses, and chicory that were in bond. In the second stock-taking I included all these. Since that time I have had introduced a "stock journal," with different columns for the different articles in bond, so that when kept up from day to day, its columns will correspond with the quantities of the different articles in bond at the time. By this it may be seen at any time what is actually in bond at each store, so that such a matter as this now before the Board is not likely to occur again.

- Mr. W. C. Still. 11. By Captain Ward: Did you report the result of your stock-taking? I did.
12. And were you informed that there was a deficiency in that store? No, I never heard officially anything about it. It was the business of the Customs warehousekeeper to look into the matter when he received my return, and I suppose that he and his assistants overlooked the matter. It would be the duty of the warehousekeeper to inform the bonded storekeeper of any deficiency that appeared on his books, and to call upon him to pay up the duties.
13. And you say that no one reported to you that there was this large deficiency of tea in Towns and Co.'s store? No one did so. I was not informed of it until the duty on the missing teas had been paid.
14. And you found only part of the I brand, and none of the K brand? No. As regards the K brand I found an entry of tea of that brand in the stock-book, but on the page opposite there was written, in the handwriting of Mr. Newton, who was locker at the time, the words "Entered in error—should have been I 436."
15. What did you infer from that? That the locker was ignorant of its having gone into bond at all.
16. By Mr. Browne: But does not this red-book, having been received at the Customs from the landing-waiter, indicate that the goods mentioned therein have been received in bond? It does not always follow that goods are taken into bond because they have been entered for bond. If you pay duty at once on passing your entry you will get a locker's delivery order there and then, and the landing-waiter will deliver the goods from the ship's side if required, at the same time the goods will appear in his red-book as passed into bond.
17. Then it might happen that a delivery order might come down whilst the goods are in the act of being landed? Yes.
18. By Mr. Duncan: Yes, but look at this red-book of the "Hirondelle," and you will see this K 436 brand entered there, with the packages at a certain weight as certified by the landing-waiter; these weights have been subsequently altered, and is it not a fair presumption that the goods were in bond in order that this alteration should be made? I should say so.
19. By whom are those alterations made? I could not say from my own knowledge.
20. You see the initials there? Yes.
21. Whose are they? I see the initials F. G., and I presume they are Mr. Garling's.
22. Now does not this alteration imply that the goods have been bonded, and that the weight has been verified in bond? It does; but yet the goods may have been landed and examined both by the landing-waiter and the landing-surveyor without having been bonded by the former officer.
23. Then again, if the same alterations as have been made in the red-book appear to have been made in the warehousekeeper's book, would not that be an indication that the goods had been received into bond? No doubt it would; but speaking generally, even this could be done without the goods going into bond at all. At the same time I think it a very singular kind of proceeding to alter the landing-waiter's figures without some explanation appearing, accompanied by the landing-waiter's initials, who informs me that he actually weighed those teas at the time, and never heard of the after correction.
24. You would not like to make such an alteration? I should not; and if I felt myself called upon to do so it would only be in the presence of the officer who made the original entry, whose signature should accompany mine.
25. By Captain Ward: What is about the average weight of a half-chest of tea? From 43 to 44 lbs.
26. Then do you consider 48 lbs. per half-chest, as originally entered here, above the average weight? Yes.
27. From what you have said I gather that the entry in this red-book is no positive indication that the goods there named went into bond? No, it is not.
28. What was an indication in those days of goods having been received? It is impossible to say what was an indication in those days of goods going into bond, as the regulations were so lax, and the lockers did not receipt the red-books as they do now. In this particular case it must depend entirely upon the recollection of the officers concerned, as to whether the goods were sent into bond or not. My return of stock will shew that they were not in store when I visited Towns's warehouse in August, 1857.

---

Mr. Thomas Fancourt called in and re-examined:—

- Mr. Thomas Fancourt. 1. By Mr. Duncan: What quantity of the I 436 brand was in bond in the beginning of August, 1857, according to your books? They paid duty upon 38 chests and 200 half-chests, the quantity charged against them in my books.
- 17 Jan., 1860. 2. How many packages must have been missing from the bond if Mr. Still, at his stock-taking, only found 69 half-chests in store? There must have been 38 chests and 131 half-chests that had been delivered out of bond without paying duty. The duty on the whole lot of 38 chests and 200 half-chests was paid on the 7th and 12th September.

Mr.

Mr. John Kidd called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You are a landing-waiter in the Customs? I am.
2. Do you remember landing a quantity of tea from the "Hirondelle," in 1856? Yes, perfectly well.
3. Where was it landed? At Towns's Wharf. The vessel was consigned to Towns and Co., as far as I can remember.
4. Did you ascertain the weight of the tea? I did.
5. Will you state to the Board by what process you arrived at the weight? I arrived at it in the usual way. The packages varied in size, being chests, half-chests, and boxes of different brands or marks. When I had got a list of the packages and brands, I had one of each kind opened, and the tea was poured out into a sheet and weighed net, and the remaining packages were averaged from the weight thus ascertained.
6. Was that done on the wharf, or in the store? The plan I followed was this :—I waited till the whole of the tea had been landed and placed in the bond, and then when all the packages had been stacked up together according to the sizes and brands, I took a package from each and ascertained its weight in the way I have described.
7. Then you are able to state positively that you weighed one of each kind of package, and so ascertained its weight? I am.
8. These are your initials affixed to the red-book of the "Hirondelle"? They are.
9. And this book contains a list of the goods bonded ex "Hirondelle"? Yes; it is the book issued to me for that purpose by Mr. Garling.
10. You will observe that your weights have been changed in this book? Yes, I see they have been.
11. Can you say who has done this? I see Mr. Garling's initials to the alterations, so I presume they have been made by him.
12. Which of these weights do you conceive to be correct—you see there is a great difference between them? Yes, I see that; where I make the weight 44 lbs. per half-chest, he makes it only 42 lbs., and that makes a great difference in the total weights of these large parcels.
13. Which of these two weights, then, do you conceive to be the true one? I may say that I am sure that I was right; for whenever I have had to weigh goods I have always been exceedingly careful, and whilst I am honestly liberal to the merchant I take care never to wrong the Government by whom I get my bread. I hardly think I could possibly have made such mistakes as some of these would be.
14. Then you think yours to be the true weight? Yes. I can honestly say that, to the best of my belief, I think it is so.
15. You can say also, of your own knowledge, that the tea got into the warehouse? Yes; it was there that I weighed it.
16. And you do not know how it got out again? I do not; it was only latterly that I was aware that it could not be found.
17. By Captain Ward : Who took charge of the tea from you? The locker of the bond. I forget who filled that office at that time.
18. Is it your duty to see the packages landed by you entered in the locker's book? No; nor was it customary at that time to get the locker's receipt to the red-book for the goods there entered. He used to sign the red-book at one time, but just then this custom had been discontinued.
19. Do you think it possible that, whilst that tea was being taken into bond, a home consumption warrant may have come down, and some part of the shipments may have been delivered on that warrant from the ship's side? No; for I never weighed one single package of the tea until the ship had been discharged, and the whole of the cargo had been received in bond.
20. You did not weigh any of it then from the ship's side? No; the whole of it was weighed in bond.
21. Such an order may have come down however after your weighing in the bond? It might; after I had weighed and entered it in the red-book, I had nothing more to do with it.
22. But you are quite certain that no order for the delivery of any of the tea came down to you whilst you were weighing? I am quite sure of that.*
23. It has been stated that an order for home consumption may have come down to you whilst the weighing was going on, and that thus some of the tea being delivered on that order, would not go into bond at all? Such a thing might happen, but in this case the tea was all in bond before I weighed any of it. Had a delivery order come down, none of the tea would have been delivered until I had put my signature upon the order, to verify the correctness of the weights of the parcels. In all cases when merchants are anxious to get their goods into consumption at once, and this is often the case, they must come, in the first instance, to the landing-waiter for his initials, to verify the weights or quantities, otherwise the warehousekeeper does not know what amount of duty to receive, and he would free no delivery order without seeing the landing-waiter's initials to the warrant in the first instance. This is his only guide as to the correctness of the entry.
24. By Captain Ward : But in case of a delivery order coming down just after your weighing, the goods delivered on that order would not be entered in the locker's book? Yes;

Mr. J. Kidd.
17 Jan., 1860.

* I have since ascertained that a home consumption entry was passed for a portion of this tea before it was weighed, but it never came through my hands; it was passed improperly as a prime entry, at an assumed weight, and afterwards completed by a post entry; this, however, was most irregular after a warehousing entry had issued.—J. K.

- Mr. J. Kidd. Yes; it would pass through his book just the same, even though the goods were delivered at the ship's side; yet if they are entered for bond they will pass through the locker's book.
- 17 Jan., 1860. 25. By Mr. Browne: Supposing you had made a delivery of part of the goods from the ship's side, how would the transaction appear in your red-book, what kind of entry would you have made? The delivery would not have appeared in my red-book, but the persons paying the duty would not have got the tea without my initials to the delivery order; this would have been given over to the locker, who would have entered the goods as delivered from bond.
26. Then it is possible for the tea to get into this red-book without going into bond at all? It is.
27. And supposing an order for delivery to have come down whilst you were weighing this in bond, there would be no record of the delivery of the goods? No.
28. So that, in fact, it would stand recorded in your red-book that certain goods had gone to the warehouse when they had done nothing of the kind, but had been delivered for consumption? There would be the record of the delivery order to check it; but then such an entry would not have been passed at the Customs without my initials in the first place, as I have already described, and I am quite certain that I never initialled any order of the kind. It is a long time ago, and of course I speak to the best of my belief; but I am almost positive no such order came to me.
29. By Captain Ward: Were you present when the figures in the red-book were altered? I was not; I have not the slightest recollection of seeing this alteration of the figures until a few months ago.
30. By Mr. Duncan: You were not present then when Mr. Garling re-weighed the tea? I was not.
31. By Captain Ward: Can you recollect whether, at the time of making delivery of the tea from the vessel, any order for delivery for home consumption came down to you? I could almost swear they never did; but of course, after such a lapse of time, I cannot speak with entire certainty.
32. Are you quite sure that you weighed all these teas in bond? Yes, quite; and I remember well that I did not commence operations until the whole cargo was in the warehouse.
33. Had a delivery order come down, would you have been the proper officer for it to have come to? Yes, if I still retained the red-book, the order would come to me for my initials for the guidance of the warehousekeeper; when I give him up the red-book he has that to guide him, and does not need my initials.
34. You are certain that no order would have been given without your initials? Quite certain, so long as I retained the red-book, for, seeing my initials, the warehousekeeper knows that the weights and quantities of the entry are correct; of course, when the book has gone in there is no necessity to come to me.
35. What is about the average weight of a chest of tea? They range from 81 lbs. to 84 lbs.
36. And of the half-chests? About 44 lbs. net.
37. Then 48 lbs. is above the average weight of half-chests of tea? It is, rather; though, some time ago, I weighed teas here (congous) that ran as high as 87 lbs. the chest.
38. Then 48 lbs. per half-chest is rather too high? Yes, I think it is; but weights vary very much.
39. You see these are hysonskins and not congous? Yes, but they vary very much. I have weighed teas some years ago that ran as high as 95 lbs. the chest.
40. Now, let me ask you, with respect to these alterations—do you think those alterations were made bonâ fide? Well, I honestly think that he could not have weighed them.
41. You, however, weighed them? I did.
42. How many did you take of each lot? I took a package of each kind. Sometimes, if I had any doubt, I weighed two packages, and took the mean of the two weights.

WEDNESDAY, 25 JANUARY, 1860.

Present:—

CAPT. WARD, R. E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs; and Mr. Alexander Stuart, Merchant, were present during the proceedings.

Mr. Alexander Stuart was called in and examined:—

- Mr. A. Stuart. 1. By Captain Ward: You are a partner in the firm of Towns and Co.? I am.
- 25 Jan., 1860. 2. You have seen the evidence taken at the last sitting of the Board, relative to certain teas alleged to be missing from your bond? I have.
3. The Board wish to ask you a few questions relative to that tea, and when those are answered the Board will hear any further statement you may wish to make. The first question we wish to ask is respecting the alteration of the weights of some teas marked I 436, and K 436, in the red-book of the "Hirondelle." Certain figures were entered in that book by the landing-waiter, and have since been altered by Mr. Garling, making the packages of a less weight than they previously were. It has been urged to us that the reason reason for doing this was, that it had been shewn to Mr. Garling that the invoice weight of Mr. A. Stuart. the tea in China was less than that entered in the red-book—can you establish this fact? I can. With regard to the actual alteration in the red-book I can say nothing; that is a <sup>25 Jan., 1860.</sup> Custom House book, and I have never seen it; but I can detail the circumstances under which the alterations in the weights of the tea were made. On the 6th August, 1856, this cargo of tea was imported by the "Hirondelle," and a bond entry was passed on the following day for the whole cargo. However, when the hatches were opened for the purpose of discharging the cargo, it was found that a considerable portion of the upper part was damaged, the vessel being an old one, and the decks rather leaky. It was, therefore, considered injudicious to put this in bond, and it went at once to auction for sale. Accordingly, entries were passed for home consumption for 40 chests, 200 half-chests, and 50 boxes of tea. Our having done this is totally at variance with Mr. Kidd's statement, in which he expressed himself as quite certain that no home consumption entry had been passed prior to the goods going into bond. By a reference to the Custom House books of our firm I find that duty was paid on the 9th August upon 40 chests, 200 half-chests, and 50 boxes of tea. Of course it was quite impossible that we could know the exact weight of the tea, and under those circumstances we followed the ordinary custom, which was to pass the entry at the presumed weight of the teas, leaving the exact weight to be ascertained when the cargo was discharged, when any difference between the actual weight and that upon which we had paid could be adjusted. We, therefore, passed entries at the following approximate weights, namely—80 lbs. for the chests, 40 lbs. for the half-chests, and 12 lbs. for the boxes. The number of packages I have named were delivered from the ship's side, and never went into the bonded warehouse at all. I have indisputable evidence to shew that, between the 8th and the 13th August, there were delivered to Messrs. Frith and Payten, auctioneers, 168 packages of tea, which were sold by that firm, as damaged tea, on the 13th August. This clearly proves that, at all events, this number of packages never went into bond, but went direct from the ship's side to the auction rooms, where they were surveyed and sold. As a further corroboration of this statement, I produce a copy of the Sydney Morning Herald of the 13th August, 1856, in which the following advertisement occurs:—

Damaged Teas.

On account of whom it may concern.

Ex Hirondelle, Rees, master, from Shanghai.

To Grocers, Tea Dealers, and others.

FRITH and PAYTEN are instructed to sell, at the Sydney Auction Rooms, 41, Pitt-street, this day, the 13th instant, at half-past 10 o'clock,

168 packages of teas, damaged by sea water—
RT&Co.—	Slight	Much	RT&Co.—	Slight	Much
1 half-chest congou	11	1	24 half-chests congou	7	1
2 ditto ditto	14	1	34 chests ditto	7
3 ditto ditto	14		7 ditto ditto	2
4 ditto ditto	5		13 10-catty boxes ditto	6	2
8 ditto ditto	10	1	15 ditto ditto	3	1
9 ditto ditto	1		17 5-catty ditto ditto	0	1
10 ditto ditto	2		25 half-chests hysonskin	5
11 ditto ditto	2	2	27 ditto ditto	5
18 ditto ditto	7	1	28 ditto ditto	13	2
19 ditto ditto	7	1	29 ditto ditto	1
20 ditto ditto	1		30 ditto ditto	10
21 ditto ditto	2	2	31 ditto ditto	2
22 ditto ditto	5	1	32 boxes ditto	1	2
23 ditto ditto	3	1	33 ditto gunpowder	3

Besides these that went to the auction rooms, there were others that turned out on examination not to be damaged, and which were not put into bond. Of those that went to auction, there were of the congou, I 436, 9 chests, 163 half-chests, and 12 boxes; and of the hysonskin, or K 436, there were 39 chests and 12 boxes. There seems to have been some confusion made in drawing out this advertisement, for the half-chests are called in our invoice three-quarter chests, but have been set down in the advertisement as half-chests. The remainder of the cargo, in the ordinary course, went into bond. After it was there, it became the duty of the landing-waiter to satisfy himself as to the weight of the packages. Upon this point there is some variance between Mr. Kidd's statement of what occurred, or of the manner in which he declares that he ascertained the weight, and the practice existing in those days. I do not speak of the custom now, but it is well known that in August 1856, it was not the custom for landing-waiters to weigh one package from each chop or brand and number, but only one of each particular kind of package, chests, half-chests and boxes. These teas were part congous and part hysonskins of several chops or brands, and the custom in those days was not to weigh one package of each brand and number, but to weigh one chest, one half-chest, and one box of the whole lot, and from that to average the weight of the other packages. It was not until long subsequent to this importation that the practice of weighing one package of each mark or number was introduced. When this was commenced I objected to it very strongly, and wrote a letter on the subject to the then Collector, condemning the innovation, and shewing that it destroyed a very great quantity of tea owing to the increased number of packages we were obliged to open and turn out. In all cases where this has been done, we are forced to make an allowance to the grocer who takes them, as from their being broken and opened they are regarded as ullage or damaged packages. When it is considered that in a cargo of tea there are sometimes as many as 70 or 80 chops, and that there are chests, half-chests, and boxes of each, the Board will see that in weighing one package of each chop or brand, the importer must be put to very considerable expense. I suggested that the officer should be allowed to select some few numbers or brands from the invoice, that he should weigh them, and by the weight thus ascertained

Mr. A. Stuart: ascertained, check the weights in the invoice. If these were found to be correct, then the invoice weights should be taken. I mention this fact to shew that I am certain that at the time of this importation it was not the custom to weigh one package of each chop of tea.

25 Jan., 1860.

Mr. Duncan objected to any statement of this kind being received in direct opposition to Mr. Kidd's solemn evidence.

Mr. Stuart: Accusations have been made by Mr. Duncan against me and my firm, which I consider to be of a most unwarrantable character, and in defending myself from them I conceive I am at liberty to comment in any way I may think proper upon the evidence adduced.

Mr. Duncan: I have made no accusations against your firm. I have merely laid a series of facts that have come to my knowledge before the Government, but I made no accusation beyond what the facts themselves conveyed, consequently I must say that I do not know to what the witness alludes.

Mr. Stuart: The accusations I allude to are conveyed in a letter, dated 24th November, 1859, from Mr. Duncan to the Secretary of the Treasury. In the sixth paragraph of that letter, on page 22 of the correspondence, I find that Mr. Duncan says, "When I took charge of this office, I was told by Mr. Cowper that the Government looked to me to reform it. I was quite prepared for the opposition that the expected reforms would create, and my answer was, 'I know I can reform it if the Government support me,—if that support is withheld no man can.' At first I was well supported, and reform was rapid and successful, until it became my duty to report the abstraction from the warehouse by an eminent firm, of 747 half-chests and bags of tea." Now, this expression, "abstraction from the warehouse" is what I consider to be an unfounded and calumnious statement against our firm, and one that, for the sake of our mercantile character, I feel bound to rebut in the most complete manner. Mr. Duncan may possibly look upon it in the light of a mere statement of a fact, but I regard it very differently. I look upon it as a most serious charge against the character of our firm, and one which, if substantiated against us, would make us liable to punishment by the Criminal Court of the Colony. What is abstraction from the warehouse but stealing; and surely Mr. Duncan cannot deny that that is a serious accusation. But the sting of the thing is in the passage that follows,—for Mr. Duncan infers that, after this important discovery of the abstractions had been made by himself or his agents and reported to the Government, the matter was hushed up, in consequence of my connection with the then head of the Government,—for he goes on further to state, that after reporting the offence, and when expecting its immediate punishment, he found that "all at once personal and political influence was brought to bear against me; and, although I have not relaxed in my exertions in the least, I have felt that I was deserted by the late Government." These are the passages that form the ground of charges against me. Evidence has been taken, in order to endeavor to substantiate those charges. I have a right in my defence to comment at full length upon that evidence, and to shew if I can how little reliance is to be placed upon some of the most important parts of it. In doing this I have made a statement to the Board as to what the practice then was; and if they do not think proper to take my statement, they can investigate its correctness by taking the testimony, not of Mr. Kidd—who is implicated in the matter, and is not likely to give evidence to shew that he had been guilty of neglect—but from some of the other landing-waiters in office at the time. If this be done I am convinced that my statement will be borne out, and that the Board will find that what Mr. Kidd states was not the practice at the time these teas were taken into bond; but that, on the contrary, it was only within the last two years that the opposition was offered by importers against what was then considered to be an innovation upon the existing practice; namely, the weighing one package of each chop and number separately. I was proceeding to shew, when interrupted by Mr. Duncan, that a certain part of the original invoice of tea was duty paid for home consumption, and was delivered from the ship's side, and that the rest was duly received into bond. It then became the duty of Mr. Kidd to ascertain the weight of tea thus received into bond. He did so, as he considered, no doubt, correctly; but as we considered, very much beyond the real weight. The matter was reported to me, and mentioned as perfectly absurd—the weights being far above those of the Chinese invoice; and I thereupon instructed our Custom House clerk to appeal against the weights set against the packages by the landing-waiter. The appeal in those days lay to the landing-surveyor, which office was then filled by Mr. Garling. The appeal was made; and on receiving it Mr. Garling came down to our store, and in my presence weighed a certain number of the various packages—more than in those days it was usual to weigh; but as I was appealing against his officer, I wished to satisfy him perfectly that everything was correct. When he weighed the tea, I held in my hands the invoice of the packages; and the weights he made them corroborated very nearly the correctness of the weights in the invoice. All the boxes he made more than the invoice; and in this way,—that where a box was a little over 13 lbs. he made it 14 lbs., giving the Government the advantage of the odd weight. I produce the original invoice of the tea, from the house of Russell & Co., of Shanghai, bearing the signature of that firm; but as it may as well be said that this invoice has been prepared for the occasion as that books and documents have been altered to suit our views, I shall, if the Board wishes it, call a number of persons who will verify the signature of the firm. Now, there may be some difference between the Custom House and us in the weights of individual packages, but in the total quantity of the tea the difference is very slight. The Board will see by the invoice that the total weight of the Congou tea (marked I 436) was 92,694 lbs., but the whole of this was not entered for home consumption, as 150 chests and 675 half-chests were exported; the weight of these was 41,813 lbs., leaving 50,881 lbs. to be accounted for. In his re-weighing, Mr. Garling made the chests rather more than the invoice weight, whilst whilst the half-chests were about a pound less. I may mention, with reference to this, and Mr. A. Stuart, to a remark I made a short time ago as to the entering in favor of the Customs, the weights above the even pound, that it was one of the instructions to the Custom House Officers of London by a Treasury Order upon the subject of weighing tea, that in doing this, the chest shall in the first instance be weighed gross, and that if it shall prove to be any weight over and above an even pound, this extra weight shall be given up in favor of the merchant. Thus, if a chest weighs gross 120½ lbs., then only 120 lbs. are entered against the merchant; the package is then turned out, and tared with a standing beam, so as to give any little advantage that there may be of weight to the importer. This order is dated, I believe, in 1852, and was made upon the representation and complaint of the influential tea importers of London; they explained to the Treasury Board that, owing to the remains of dirt in each chest, the importer of tea found himself a loser of three-quarters of a pound of tea on each package, from the Customs officers taking advantage of any additional weight above a pound on the part of the Government. Owing to this representation being made to the Commissioners, they sent notice to the Customs that in weighing this allowance was to be made to the merchant to cover this source of loss. The quantity of tea left then, after the 150 chests and 675 half-chests were exported, was 50,881 lbs. as shewn by the invoice.

Mr. Duncan asked if the Board would consider the invoice as evidence.

Mr. Stuart: The Board of Customs in London constantly take them as such.

Mr. Duncan: But it is known that here two or three different kinds of invoices for different purposes come out here with goods. In saying this, I do not, by any means, wish to insinuate that such is the case in this instance; but I mention it as a known fact, to shew that these invoices are not admissible as evidence in an inquiry of this kind, and Mr. Stuart acted wrongly in putting it before Mr. Garling.

Mr. Stuart: I shewed it to him, solely for the purpose of convincing him that his weights on re-weighing were borne out by it.

Captain Ward: Mr. Garling accepted the invoice at the time, as corroborative evidence of the weight, and we do not think that we should be now justified in rejecting it.

Mr. Duncan thought the bonâ fide of the invoice ought at least to be proved before it was taken as evidence.

Captain Ward was of opinion that it lay with Mr. Duncan to shew that the invoice had not been drawn bonâ fide.

Mr. Stuart: Returning to the argument, I was shewing that the quantity of tea left, after the exportation of the 150 chests and 675 half-chests was, according to our invoice, 50,881 lbs.; whilst, according to the Customs account, as altered on re-weighing by Mr. Garling, the quantity was 50,350 lbs.—no very great difference, as the Board will see the one account is within 531 lbs. of the other. Now I think I have proved as one step, that the weight, according to our invoice, which gives the amount as weighed out in China by the pound, was 50,881 lbs.; whilst I can shew by the Customs books, if they are produced, that according to Mr. Garling's re-weighing, the weight was 50,350 lbs. I therefore consider that I have now corroborated the statement made by Mr. Garling, in the evidence given before the Board on a previous day, that when he re-weighed the tea at my request, and in my presence, he arrived at very nearly the correct weight as by my invoice; and certainly at the full weight to which the Customs were entitled. Whereas the weight entered by Mr. Kidd would have acted so very heavily upon us as importers, that we felt bound to appeal against it. So much was this the case, that I assure the Board, that had our appeal to Mr. Garling been ineffectual, we should have carried it to the head of the department, the Collector. Now, Mr. Kidd, though he assessed the tea at 48 lbs. the half-chest, acknowledges to the Board that the weight was heavier than usual, or than he ever knew before. I can only add to this, that it is very much heavier than I have ever known it to be, for though I have seen chests of tea that weighed 91 lbs., yet the half-chests have never to my knowledge exceeded 45 lbs. Our instructions to our correspondents in China have been for some time not to send us half-chests containing more than from 40 to 42 lbs. The reason for this is obvious, as, whilst we pay for it by the pound, and whilst we pay duty to the Customs by the pound, we only sell by the chest, and in selling the half-chest is only calculated as containing from 40 lbs. to 42 lbs. net. The consumer consequently only pays us on that calculation and on no more, whilst we have to pay on the full weight, both in respect to prime cost and duty. The standard weight of tea is taken to be 84 lbs. the chest and 42 lbs. the half-chest; and for a long time here, prior to Mr. Duncan's day, the universal custom was to assume the weight of the chest to be 80 lbs., and of the half-chest 40 lbs.; and if the Board had before them only one landing-waiter of those days to examine, I think I could shew that this case of the "Hirondelle" was one of the first, if not the very first, case of approximating the weight of a cargo by actual weighing. I would again press upon the Board, that they should give their particular attention to the very positive manner in which Mr. Kidd speaks of the circumstance, and the certainty with which he affirms that there was no entry for home consumption of any part of the cargo prior to its receipt into bond. My reason for doing this is not to impute blame to Mr. Kidd, for he did no more than other landing-waiters were at that time in the habit of doing, and in fact only followed out the system then in force; but I desire that the Board should see that the whole concern has occurred through the very lax manner of doing business that was then followed by every branch of the Customs Department. Neither do I stand here to support that system, for I readily admit that it was, in some respects, most lax and improper. Nor do I desire in any way to stand in the way of Mr. Duncan's reforms, some of which I consider to be beneficial, whilst of others I may be allowed to hold a different opinion, although I by no means wish to prevent his carrying out those that are beneficial. But at the same time I wish to shew that the whole system was loose

Mr. A. Stuart. loose and irregular, and that this alone has been the cause of the present misunderstanding. Mr. Kidd says, in his evidence, that it would be impossible for any entry for home consumption to have been passed, or any goods to have been delivered from the ship's side, without his knowledge; but, in the face of this, I assert that such an entry was passed, and this could be easily proved if the Board would call before them the Custom House clerk who at that period was in the habit of receiving payment of the duties. By a reference to the Custom House books it will be found that, on the 7th or 8th of August, we passed a home consumption entry for and paid duty on the quantity of goods I have mentioned, whilst the ship was being discharged. The Custom House book of home consumption entries was subsequently produced, and the entries produced in corroboration of this statement, that these goods were taken from the ship's side. The sale of the goods by Frith and Payten, on the 13th, is also corroborative of this. Had a proper system been adopted by the Custom House officers, I take it that Mr. Kidd's initials to the entry would have been absolutely necessary before it could have passed, or before the goods could have left the ship's side; but I assert that a proper system was not followed, and hence these misunderstandings.

Mr. Duncan: Mr. Kidd said distinctly that the goods could not pass through the Customs without his signature.

Mr. Stuart: I admit that they could not do so now, but I call attention to the very different custom that existed then to what exists now; and the production of the Custom House entry proves that in fact they did pass without his signature. I entirely concede that the custom was not a correct one, but, nevertheless, it was the custom; and, as it was one that was highly convenient at times to the merchants, it is not to be wondered at that they followed it. I contend then, that in those days we could pass home consumption entries and take goods from the ship's side, not only without the landing-waiter's signature, but also without his knowing any thing at all about it until done. That such was the case here was evident from Mr. Kidd's own confession, and from the fact that the goods were received and sold by Messrs. Frith and Payten on the 13th, or a few days after the vessel's arrival. I again say, that I do not accuse Mr. Kidd of any neglect, but I desire to shew that a lax system of doing business prevailed in the Customs at that time, and in establishing this, I shew how the whole matter has occurred. Referring again to the invoice, it will be seen that the weight of the bysonskin (K 436 mark) is shewn to have been 29,175 lbs. when shipped at Shanghai. The amount paid duty on by us was 29,134 lbs.—the weight according to Mr. Garling's re-weighing. Had we paid duty upon the weight shewn upon the first weighing by Mr. Kidd, our firm would have been out of pocket a very large amount; he having made the total weight 32,354 lbs., instead of 29,134 lbs. Mr. Duncan does not regard the matter in this light; for he says that by this alteration of the weights the Government has been defrauded of duty upon 3,220 lbs. of tea.

Mr. Duncan: That is, assuming Mr. Kidd's weighing to have been correct.

Mr. Stuart: That ought not to have been assumed. Very little inquiry would have convinced him, and prevented all this unpleasantness; and I am sure that a line from him to me would have brought him as full an explanation as we could give. In his letter of 2nd September, 1859, to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Duncan says—"I forward herewith the red-book of the vessel from which this tea was landed, from which it appears that the landing-waiter's net weight of this parcel was reduced by the late landing-surveyor, from 32,354 lbs. to 29,134 lbs., being a loss to the revenue of the duty on 3,220 lbs. of tea; and the same book shews that a still larger reduction was made on the net weight of another lot of tea consigned to Messrs. Towns & Co. by the same ship; making altogether a loss to the revenue of the duty on 6,970 lbs. of tea."

Mr. Duncan: That is quite true.

Mr. Stuart: I maintain that it is not true; and I will now proceed to shew why it is not true. Had Mr. Duncan investigated closely the quantity of this cargo that was taken into home consumption, he would have found that the difference of weight between the estimate of Mr. Kidd and the weights in our invoice upon the quantity of tea upon which we paid duty was nothing like as large as he supposes it to be. He insists that there has been a loss to the revenue of the duty on 6,970 lbs. of tea; but this assumes that the whole cargo was taken for home consumption; whereas, had he made inquiry, he would have found that instead of this, a very large portion of the cargo, amounting nearly to the half of the whole weight, was exported soon after arrival, and that upon this there could have been no loss to the revenue, even though there had been a reduction of 50 lbs. per chest; for, whether they were entered at 100 lbs., or whether they were entered at 10 lbs., could make no difference to the revenue, since they were exported and no duty was paid on them. Thus, then, Mr. Duncan's assumed loss to the revenue would, at all events, be reduced to one-half. My statement of the transaction and that given by Mr. Garling fully corroborate each other in every particular, and I think we are entitled to quite as much credence as Mr. Kidd, especially as we are borne out by the China invoice that I have produced. I take it now that I have shewn that the whole weight of tea imported by the "Hirondelle" has either been exported by us, or entered for home consumption, and duty paid; and that, therefore, there has been no loss to the revenue. But the weights returned by Mr. Kidd were so manifestly high, that, as I have before said, if Mr. Garling had not reduced them we should have gone to the higher authority, the Collector, to do so, so perfectly were we convinced that Mr. Kidd's estimate was erroneous. With reference to Mr. Still's evidence—his first statement that he found some 3,000 or 4,000 packages missing from our store must surely have been a slip of the tongue, or must have been taken down in mistake, so that I shall pass that over. Mr. Still then says, "I found none of the K 436 mark in the store." Does Mr. Still mean by this that he took no note of any of that brand in the store, that they were not brought to his knowledge, or that he looked for them and could not find them? It could not have been the the latter, because no notice was given to us, and therefore he could not have looked for that brand. Mr. Still's idea of taking stock is, however, very different from mine. He appears to be content to take a list of what appears to be in store, and then considers he has done all that is necessary, whereas my idea of a stock-taking is, not merely to take what is in the place, but also to compare that with the list of what ought to be in it. My reason for calling the attention of the Board to this is that because he says in reply to questions, that he found only so many of one brand, and none of the other, it might be imagined, and it certainly appears so from the way the questions are put, and the answers given, that he had been looking for the brand and could not find it in the bond, whereas the actual fact was, that he merely went through the store, and took a list of what he found there. Now, this shews again the continuous laxity of the former system, as I contend that there cannot be anything like a proper stock-taking unless the person goes through the store with a list in his hand of what ought to be in it, to compare as he goes along with what he actually finds there, or unless he compares his list afterwards with some book in the Customs containing an account of what ought to be in each store. Had this been done, when he failed to find the K 436 brand, he would have naturally asked if there were any other room or store in which bonded goods were kept; in that case the matter would have been brought to our mind, and would have led us to apply to our books, when the whole thing could have been satisfactorily explained. Mr. Fancourt says that there is nothing to shew that the goods went into bond at all; but there are the Customs books to shew that they did do so, and if these had been compared with the locker's store-book, the discrepancy which occurred only within the space of a few weeks of Mr. Still's stock-taking would have been at once discovered. To shew this, I may mention that Mr. Still examined the store twice within the period of a few months. In the beginning of 1857, he took stock for the first time, and he then brought under our notice certain irregularities, such as the missing of a case or two of gin, and other small matters, owing no doubt to the pilfering of subordinates either in our own employ or in that of the Customs; he says that at that time he did not take stock of the tea and sugar, though it was my impression that he did do so. Now, it so happens that the bulk of the K 436 brand left our stores between the two periods of his stock-taking, for, though a portion of this brand left the ship's side as I have shewn, yet the larger part went into store, and Mr. Kidd is correct in saying that it was received into bond, whilst Mr. Fancourt and Mr. Still, who stated that it might not have gone in at all, are wrong. Any one looking at the store-book will find that the thing is as clear as possible with but a word or two of explanation. Every one connected with the Customs who has hitherto looked at the note entered of Mr. Newton, to which allusion has been made in the correspondence, then locker at our bond, has thought that it referred to the whole of the K 436 brand. The Board will remember that it was mentioned in evidence, that against the entry of the K 436 brand, there was this note in Mr. Newton's hand-writing:—"Entered in error, should have been I 436." Now I shall be able to shew that this note never referred at all to the import of this brand into the warehouse, but to a mistake of Mr. Newton's in entering for home consumption the chests and half-chests of this brand, instead of the brand I 436, having, in fact, written in the entry for home consumption upon the wrong folio. Finding it out, he has erased it, and then made the note that has led to this confusion. But, instead of regarding it in this light every person who has hitherto had charge of the books has considered that this note cancelled the whole entry, and imagined thereupon that no such brand as K 436 was ever received into bond, so that when Mr. Still took stock in 1857, it was believed that there should be no such brand as the K 436 in bond. To shew that such was the impression in the Custom House, our Custom House clerk went down to pay duty upon the balance of the "Hirondelle's" cargo, and he paid upon 38 chests and 150 half-chests, which was the whole balance that the Custom House books shewed against that cargo. The whole thing has evidently originated from a confusion between the I 436 and the K 436 marks, the note of Mr. Newton having led the locker who succeeded him to imagine that the import entry of the K 436 was cancelled. When applied to to deliver these teas he would have assumed that they were duty paid, and have permitted them to be taken out as free goods. It may seem strange that such a thing as this should have occurred, and I quite admit that it is so; but I think I have shewn the Board that from the laxity of the system formerly pursued such a thing was perfectly possible. Such cases did occur, though it might be but seldom. Then again our liability was complete in every way, for on passing the import entry we give our bond to the Customs, the condition of the bond, under a heavy penalty, being that we should pay duty upon all the cargo not exported. Hitherto the Custom House has placed implicit confidence in our firm, and our custom has been to pay, from time to time, a certain amount to cover duties upon entries we might wish to pass. We had several cargoes of tea in store whilst we had that of the "Hirondelle," and it often happened that a grocer coming into our store to purchase tea would take a fancy to some particular brand more than to another; and we have been treated with such confidence by the Custom House authorities, that we could send out of our bond any particular kind of tea that our customer might select, even though we had not a home consumption warrant for that tea open at the time; provided, however, that we had such a warrant open for some other brand of tea. When we had an open warrant, we were allowed to regard the whole of the teas in store as one lot, so long as the warrant remained open, with the understanding, however, that when any other brand than that for which the warrant was taken out was sent out of store, we should pass entries for it as soon as practicable. When our warrants were nearly out the locker would tell us that it was so. On receiving this notice we always paid in, perhaps from £200 to £300. This, no doubt, may appear to the Board to be a very loose system. I admit that it was so, I do not attempt to defend it; but being permitted, and being

Mr. A. Stuart.
25 Jan., 1860.

Mr. A. Stuart. being evidently a very great convenience to large mercantile firms, I am not to be blamed if I took advantage of it as well as others. It was a loose system, but I confidently appeal to Mr. Duncan to say whether such was not the case. That having been the custom, I conceive that it would have been far more gracious of Mr. Duncan if he had said in his letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, that, in consequence of the very lax system pursued in the department at the time, certain mistakes had arisen, rather than to charge our firm with abstracting the tea from the store, especially when he knew that the Customs held our bond for the payment of any duties that might be found to be receivable upon the cargo in question, and that, therefore, the Government could not be defrauded or suffer loss. Our firm was not like a stranger in the Colony, or one about whom there was any doubt as to the ultimate payment of the money due, as it must have been known to Mr. Duncan that he could have got from us at any time any amount that was found to be payable by us. I may again remark that when our Custom House clerk, Mr. Coleman, went down to the Custom House in 1857 to pay duty on the balance of this cargo, he paid it upon the number of chests and half-chests that were asked for. At the same time he pointed out that there were these hysonskins marked K 436 then in bond. A reference was made to the locker's books, and all the Customs officers taking the same view of it, that the whole entry had been annulled by Mr. Newton's note, he was told that this brand was considered as duty paid. Mr. Coleman was not, however, satisfied with this, and I find that to the original warrant for the tea he has pinned the remarks I now produce, jotted down in his own handwriting, being to the effect that some discrepancy in this K 436 mark existed between ours and the Customs books. I have no doubt that he intended to call my attention to the matter, but shortly after this he left the Colony. He is still in our employ, but is engaged in the Melbourne branch. I conceive from this that he was not satisfied that the whole thing was paid, and put this note in his book for reference at some future time. The matter has lain there since then, my attention having never been called to it, and I not knowing of its existence; and it was not until these bonds which the Custom House held came in their due course to be examined that it became evident for the first time that duty had not been paid on this K 436 mark, that it had not been exported, and that consequently it ought still to be in store. It will be seen, I think, now, that the mistake in reference to this brand has occurred solely in consequence of the very imperfect and careless way in which the books of the Customs Department were at that time kept. The Board will naturally ask how it was that some of the teas went away without any entry being passed for them, but I can only say that that is a point upon which I am unable to give them any information, any more than I am able to say how it happened that the two teas which formed the one cargo should have received a separate bond mark.

Captain Ward: To what do these letters refer?

Mr. Duncan: They are the Custom House brand. As the cargoes are received they are marked alphabetically, commencing with the year with A 1, and running on B 1, C 1, until the alphabet is exhausted, when it is commenced again with the next number, as A 2, and so on.

Mr. Stuart: The most curious thing is, that though both these teas belonged to the same cargo, and were both passed at the same time, they have been marked with a different letter. I now produce the locker's store-book (book produced). Turning to the entry of the I 436 brand, the Board will see that when a bonding warrant is passed at the Customs the goods are entered upon the left-hand side of the book, or, as we may call it, the Dr. side of the book, debiting the store with the quantity of goods received into it; then, as entries are passed for the goods, either for home consumption or for export, they are entered upon the other, or, as it may be called, the Cr. side of the book. The cargo was entered inwards for bond on the 6th August, the day of the vessel's arrival, and the entry having been passed on that day, the red-book bears that date; but there is an omission in the red-book, since it does not bear the date of its return to the Custom House by the landing-waiter, and I appeal to Mr. Duncan to say whether this ought not to have been done. If this date had been affixed it would have prevented us much trouble, for it would have shewn that the home consumption entry was passed whilst the red-book was in the hands of the landing-waiter. According to the dates in the locker's book, then, it appears that the import entry was passed on the 6th August, and that on the 8th August an entry for home consumption was passed for 40 chests, 200 half-chests, and 50 boxes of this I 436 tea, and that this shipment is credited with that entry, the goods having been landed from the ship's side. Now, there ought to be something like a counterpart of this book in the Custom House, and as the entry for exportation that I have before referred to appears here, it ought also to appear in the Customs book, and if so Mr. Duncan ought to have been acquainted with it. However, the entry here quite justifies me in my statement that so very many chests and half-chests having passed the Customs for exportation, and not having been taken into home consumption, the allegation of Mr. Duncan that the revenue had suffered to the extent of 6,970 lbs. by the alteration of the weights, is altogether an erroneous one. Coming now to the K 436 mark, the Board will see that the date of entry is precisely the same as that of the I brand. Now, by looking on the credit side of the book it will be seen that precisely the same number of chests, half-chests, and boxes have been booked to the credit of this brand as being entered for home consumption as were booked on the preceding page to the credit of the I brand. From this it is perfectly evident to me that Mr. Newton entered the home consumption entry of the I tea by mistake against the K brand. Finding his mistake out, he has entered it in the proper place, and has then scored out this entry for home consumption, putting a note against the erasure, "Entered in error—should have been I 436." Now this clearly means that the delivery should have been I 436, and that it has been entered in error against the K 436. But every Custom House officer who has examined this book has imagined imagined that the note referred to the whole entry, and that not merely the delivery but the whole entry—import and delivery—had been made in error. It was reported to me that such was the case, and I was under that impression until I came to look at the book for myself. Immediately I saw it, the whole thing became at once evident to me, and I am the more confirmed in my view of the case from the fact that the entry of the delivery of the goods has been very neatly erased with a ruler, whilst the debit entry of the cargo has been erased subsequently in a very much less careful manner, no doubt by some officer who followed Mr. Newton as locker, and imagined that the note referred to the whole entry. This, however, was not very extraordinary, since it appears that every Custom House officer who has seen the books has held the same view. Mr. Still and Mr. Fancourt both had the same notion. From some remarks that passed during the examination of the witnesses on the last day of the Board's meeting an inference has been attempted to be drawn that as Mr. Newton has been connected with other transactions of a discreditable character, that therefore he has been acting in conspiracy with us in order to make it appear that these goods were not in bond. When I first came into the room this morning I asked Mr. Duncan to get the names of the lockers who had been employed in our bond from the date of the import of this tea, until the last of it left the store. My object in wishing for this was to shew that Mr. Newton was not the whole of this time in our store; as, if he had been, he would have known the meaning of the entry, and we should not have been able to get the tea out without having first paid duty on it. But he remained at our store only a very short time after this importation, and two others succeeded him during the time I have mentioned; and these, seeing Mr. Newton's entry, have fancied that the whole thing was cancelled, and that this brand of tea was all duty paid and done with. This book, moreover, conclusively shews, that this brand of tea went regularly into our bonded warehouse, though a small portion of it was landed from the ship's side, under the home consumption warrant. This must have occurred by some chance or accident, and is to be accounted for by the very loose manner in which this part of the business was transacted at that time by the Customs officers. That it is so is apparent from the admissions of the officers themselves, as they tell the Board in their examination, that no evidence could be got that the tea had been received into bond; and that the fact that it did so, must be entirely left to the recollection of the officer or to the sense of honor of the importer. Mr. Kidd says, that he lands the goods from the ship's side, and that then they ought to go into bond, when he has nothing more to do with them; and further, that though prior to 1856, the locker was accustomed to give a receipt for the goods placed in bond, yet that, at the particular time of this importation, this practice had fallen into desuetude; and that, therefore, the Customs had no check by which to know whether the goods landed ever went into bond.

Captain Ward: Except the locker's entry in his store-book.

Mr. Stuart: That was no check, because he gets a document from the Custom House, directing him to receive into bond certain goods and packages, and it is these that he enters in his store-book.

Captain Ward: But does he not enter them by actually counting them into the store?

Mr. Stuart: I think not, because if he did so, the goods would appear in his books as received in smaller parcels and at different dates. For instance, in the case of this tea, it is all entered in his book under one date and in one entry; whereas the landing of so large a cargo, must have taken several days. Instead of entering the parcels as they are received, he waits until the vessel is discharged, and he receives his memorandum from the Custom House officer. The home consumption entry was for the congou I 436, but part of the hysonskin, or K 436, went from the ship's side, although the Customs officer had no home consumption entry for it. Now, though this K tea left the ship, the whole amount of the shipment appears in the locker's book as if it had gone into bond. Now, it is quite clear that these packages did not go into the store, nor was there any home consumption warrant for them; but, as they are entered in the locker's book, he ought either, to have them in store or hold a delivery order for them. He had neither the one nor the other, and, therefore, it is evident to me at least that these debit entries were made from the Custom House warrants, and not from the locker's actual receipts into warehouse. The K tea that was received into store remained there for a long time,—the bulk of it for 6 or 8 months. The deliveries ranged over that period, and, as there were not many of them, perhaps it would be as well that I should specify the different dates. In addition to those which I mentioned as having gone from the ship's side, on the 3rd September, 35 chests and 67 boxes were delivered; and on the 13th September, 3 boxes; on the 22nd October, 1 chest; on the 7th, 28 boxes 1 chest; on the 13th November, 10 packages; on the 30th, 100; on the 22nd January, 2; on the 23rd February, 10 and 135; on the 21st March, 153, 16, and 50; on the 30th April, 1; and on the 22nd May, 97; and one or two others on different dates, making up the whole quantity. When we get the return of the lockers that I have asked for, it will be found that there were no less than three lockers engaged in our bond during these deliveries; and the fact that these goods were taken out duty free under the rule of three different lockers corroborates still more the statement of Mr. Still and Mr. Fancourt that the impression was that the whole of the entry of the K tea was expunged, and that it was duty paid. As regards our firm, we could not check the entry, because we kept no account of duties paid on cargoes, as the locker's account was our check. We paid in a large sum on account of duties, and, if this was exhausted, when we sent down to the store for goods, the locker would inform us that we could not have them until more duty was paid. If we had a delivery warrant for tea open, and we sent down for more than the warrant was open for, the locker would tell us that the warrant was only open for so many, and that we must get a new warrant for what balance we required.

When

Mr. A. Stuart. When this was brought to our notice we sent round to the Custom House and paid duty on such a number as would keep us a few packages in advance. In consequence, however, of the locker's imagining that this tea was duty paid, they have not checked us in our orders for delivery of it, and thus, until the matter was brought under our notice in August last year I knew nothing about it. In July last the goods would have been three years in bond; and having to be cleared out as overtime goods the bond was examined, and then it was found that these teas had not been accounted for. The Custom House thereupon sends down to the locker of our store, and he returns for answer that there is no tea of the kind in store. He mentioned the matter to one of our clerks; and then, of course, it was brought under my notice. I understand that when Mr. Duncan was asked why he received the duty on these goods his reply was, that it was not received with his authority; but that I, having learned that the fraud was discovered, at once rushed up to the Customs House and paid the duty on the goods, before the matter had been fairly brought under his notice. So far, however, from "rushing up" to pay it when I learnt of the affair, I can inform the Board that the duty was not paid until several days after I was first informed of it. The matter was mentioned to me in July last; and when informed of it I said that it was impossible that such a thing could have happened, and that there must be some mistake about it. I was pressed by the locker to look into the matter; but being very busy just at that time, I told him that I could not attend to it for some days. Mr. Ferguson, our chief clerk, however, pressed the matter on my notice from day to day, and said the locker was anxious to have it settled; therefore, although I was very much pressed with business at the time, and had told him several times that the matter must lie over for a time, at last I looked into it. Now, though the matter was brought to my notice in July (I think about 28th or 30th of that month), yet it laid over until the 3rd August, when I spent some hours in taking out from our books the quantities of tea that had been sold by us, in order to see if the duty had been paid. On referring back through the cash-book and ledger, I found that the duties had not been fully paid; and when I had clearly satisfied myself of this, I at once gave a cheque for the money. Thus the matter was named to me at the end of July; and through the pressure of Mr. Ferguson, I looked into it on the 3rd of August; so that at least four days must have elapsed from the time of my being acquainted with the deficiency and the payment of the duty; and this did not look like any undue haste. When my clerks first named the matter to me I was greatly astonished how such a thing could have happened; and, as a matter of course, I wished to make some inquiry before I paid so large a sum as £300 or £400 for duty which I had been always led to believe was paid. No doubt it is a reasonable assumption that if in this matter I had had an idea of defrauding the revenue, I should have rushed up, as Mr. Duncan says, to pay the duty the moment it came to my knowledge that the fraud was discovered. That is the natural assumption, and it was, no doubt, to lead to such an inference that it was said that I "rushed up" to pay the duty. But as I had no intention to defraud the revenue, and as the mistake originated with the Customs officers and not with our firm, instead of "rushing up" I let several days elapse in order to make inquiry before I paid the money. The way I arrived at a conclusion was by referring to our ledger and taking out the cash payments. The task was not a very long one, because the debit entries to a cargo are very few, consisting only of the original cost of the goods, freight and charges, landing charges, and payments of duty, whilst the credit entries are very numerous, every parcel of goods sold being entered. The entries then being so few, as soon as I got the time to spare, an hour or so enabled me to convince myself that the duty had not been paid, when, as I have said, I at once gave a cheque for the amount. I took out from the ledger the duties that we had paid on account of the cargo on each particular date, and by adding them up I found that duty was short-paid upon 23,900lbs. of tea. It then became plain to my mind, that however the mistake had arisen, it had occurred, and there was nothing left but for us to pay the money. I mention all these facts thus particularly in order to shew the Board that there was no undue haste on our part, and that so far from "rushing up" to the Custom House to pay the duty, we proceeded carefully and cautiously in the matter, making all due inquiry before we paid the money claimed. In substantiation of the statement I made a short time ago, relative to the quantities of tea delivered, I now hand in the receipts of the different parties to whom the tea was delivered, in order to shew that the account I have furnished is correct. The signatures to these receipts I am prepared to verify if the Board should think it necessary. Mr. Still says in his evidence that he found only 69 half-chests of the I 436 tea. Now I was not with him when he took stock, and am not, therefore, able to say whether he took down all the goods, or went through the whole store; but I know that there was at the time a very considerable quantity of tea in the store, and that there was every probability, from the manner of his taking stock—that is, his not being furnished with a list of the goods that ought to have been in store—that he might be in error. To shew that he must have been so, I am prepared to prove that we got out of store about the time of, or subsequent to, Mr. Still's investigation of its contents—that is, between the 22nd July and the 15th October—705 half-chests of tea of that brand. So that, at the time of Mr. Still's stock-taking, instead of 69 there must have been 705 half-chests of the I 436 tea. But supposing his investigation to have been subsequent to the 22nd July, I can state positively that we got out of store 181 half-chests since his stock-taking. We can shew that 50 half-chests were delivered to us under an export warrant on the 9th September; and on the 12th September following, Betteridge & Haydon received 120 half-chests; these, with one or two small deliveries, make 181 half-chests.

Mr. Duncan: Are those the dates of delivery?

Mr. Stuart: No, they are the dates of the warrant in each case; but though they are are only the dates of the warrant, I presume that the Custom House preserves some record of the date of delivery from the store, and I would ask Mr. Duncan if such is the case. Mr. A. Stuart.

Mr. Duncan: There has been a practice grown up of allowing goods to remain in the bonded store after entry has been passed for and duty paid on them. This practice I am trying all I can to put a stop to. 25 Jan., 1860.

Mr. Stuart: That is what I wish to come to. I wish to shew that there was such a practice in existence.

Mr. Browne: If the delivery is doubted, you can send for your books, and the Board will receive them in evidence.

Mr. Stuart: Supposing in the interim that these deliveries have been proved, I have shewn that after Mr. Still took stock we delivered 181 half-chests of tea of this cargo, and this number is not very far from the amount charged against us by the Customs. They say that we should have had 200 half-chests in bond, and we shew that we had 181. This discrepancy in numbers on so large a cargo is not very great, and can be accounted for when it is borne in mind what I before remarked, that having different cargoes of tea in bond we were not very particular about taking the tea from the particular cargo for which we held a warrant, but allowed our customers to suit themselves according to their choice. I would press this particularly upon the attention of the Board, for though such a practice as I have described might not be permitted under the keen administration of Mr. Duncan, yet it was the custom formerly, and I appeal to that gentleman to say whether such a thing was not perfectly possible under the more lax manner of conducting the business of the Custom House that was formerly permitted. In those days the Custom House were quite satisfied so long as we kept our payments a-head of our deliveries, and permitted us to suit our convenience in the cargoes we delivered. To shew that this was the invariable rule, I can produce the books of our firm, and if the Board will take the trouble to investigate our deliveries upon any of the cargoes of tea we have received they will find that the practice that has been followed until within the last few months has been such as I have described. Again, further to disprove the statement made by Mr. Duncan, that any loss to the revenue could have occurred through this cargo and by our means, I may be permitted to remind the Board that the Custom House held our bond for this cargo conditioned to pay the whole amount of duty thereon, and if the authorities were in any way dissatisfied with our mode of dealing with the goods, or were led to believe that any of them were surreptitiously taken out of bond, they could at once have put the bond in force and have made us pay compensation to the Government.

Mr. Browne: What is the amount of penalty fixed in the bond?

Mr. Stuart: It is fixed at double the amount of the estimated duty; so that, presuming we were attempting to feloniously take away the tea from the store, as Mr. Duncan insinuates, we could have actually had no object in doing so, because we should have had to pay the duty in the end, whenever our bond came to be examined. I press this point particularly upon the attention of the Board, because the whole sting of this part of the charge lies in Mr. Duncan's statement that the tea was "abstracted" from the warehouse. Now I do not so much blame Mr. Duncan for reporting this matter to the Government, but for the language in which it is couched. For instance, it is possible that Mr. Duncan may make a statement which he believes from the information he has received to be perfectly true, but which may yet, upon explanation, be shewn to be without foundation. I, knowing better, tell him that he is mistaken or misinformed, and do not accuse him of directly telling a lie, even though his statement be proved to be fallacious. It is just that very difference in manner of stating the matter that I complain of in Mr. Duncan's letters. In his letter of the 2nd September, he says, "seeing that the goods must have been abstracted, not only with the knowledge of the locker, Newton, but with the knowledge and by the order of some person connected with the firm of Towns and Co." And in his letter of the 24th November, he says also, "it became my duty to report the abstraction from the warehouse." Now, Mr. Duncan finds that a quantity of tea is missing from our warehouse, and surely he might have satisfied himself with stating that fact, without charging us with abstraction, which he must know is a felony, and punishable as such. But not contented with this, Mr. Duncan goes even further, and charges me with having, after committing this felony, used my personal influence to prevent exposure and punishment. In saying this, he evidently alludes to the connection between Mr. Cowper and myself; and in answer to this I may say, that I never spoke to Mr. Cowper about this matter but once, and that I was not aware that it had been brought under the notice of the Government, until I saw the notice on the business paper of the Assembly. I never mentioned the affair to Mr. Cowper, nor he to me, until Mr. Flood gave a notice of motion, inquiring into the case of the "Hirondelle." Mr. Cowper first called my attention to the motion, and asked me what was this about this tea of mine, at the same time pointing out this motion of Flood's. I said I did not know what the matter was, but that the tea had been taken out of bond, and the duty paid upon it. Mr. Cowper then said, "But there is something further than that, there is some charge about altering the weights of the tea." I said that such a thing as that was absurd, but that I would look into the matter, and let him know about it; he replied, that he did not wish to know about it, that it was not in his department, but in Mr. Weekes'. A few days after this, I went up to Mr. Weekes' office, and shewed him the invoices of the tea, to satisfy him as to the alteration in the weights. So that after this explanation, which contains every word that transpired between myself and Mr. Cowper, I most indignantly repudiate the idea that any personal influence was brought to bear in the matter. But I can tell Mr. Duncan, still further than this, when he charges us with abstracting goods from the store, that the system of conducting the business of the Custom House has been such, that the collection of the duty has to a very great extent been left to the honor of importers, and

Mr. A. Stuart. and that though irregularities may have occurred amongst parties whose characters were not unimpeachable, and that though goods may have been taken out of store without paying duty by persons who were afterwards unable to pay the penalties recoverable on their bond, that our firm has always stood high in the confidence of the Custom House authorities; I can tell him that we have had cargoes of tea and sugar in our stores that have never had a Custom House lock upon them at all, that the Custom House officers had no more idea of what was done with other cargoes than the Board has, and that some of these officers have been so incapable or so ignorant of their duties that they have not counted the packages as they have been landed. On one occasion it was reported to me by our storekeeper that a man who was in charge of our bond went to sleep drunk in his box with the keys of the store beside him for anyone to take and make use of that thought proper. With such facts as these before us, what right has Mr. Duncan to charge a firm, that has always been correct in its dealings with the Customs, with a misdemeanor, merely because through a mistake of his own officers a quantity of tea is not accounted for, and that quantity, though it looks large when reduced to pounds, only a very small one when compared with the business of our firm, which passes through its hands every month a much larger quantity of tea than this. If such things as these were carried on by the Custom House officers, what is more natural than that the merchants should fall into the same loose system, particularly when it offered them a convenience in their business, and when the Government could suffer no ultimate harm so long as they gave bond and paid duty on everything they took from store. I would mention also another matter that arises out of this, in an allusion that was made by one witness, I do not remember which, to a matter that occurred in our store. The witness was asked by Mr. Duncan, "Was it not from this bond that an officer of Customs was dismissed for delivering tea for which no entry had been passed?" And the answer to this question was, "It was." Now, a more insidious way of putting this matter before the Board could not have been found than this; because the inference from this question and answer would be naturally that the case now under the consideration of the Board was not the first of the kind that had occurred to implicate us, especially as the inquiry ended there, and the witness was not asked whether the goods so taken out were held in bond on our account or not. The fact was, however, that the tea belonged to Smith, Campbell, and Co., and not to us. The goods were stored by us for that firm, and they sent down an order to us to deliver the goods. This, of course, we were prepared to do upon their order, we having nothing to do with the payment of duty, which the Custom House officer in charge of the store has to look after. When the order came down to us, we marked on it, for the guidance of our storeman, to deliver the tea. They then went to Macgrath, the locker in charge of the store, and, having passed no entry for the tea, they asked him to deliver it, as it was to be sent on board a vessel that was then on the point of sailing—that there was no time to pass an entry then, but that an entry would be passed for it the first thing on the following day. Macgrath, following up the system that was then in force of keeping a sort of account current with particular firms, allowed the tea to go out of bond without passing an entry. Having done this, he should have taken care that on the following day that firm redeemed their promise. He did not do so, and Smith, Campbell, and Co., omitted to pass the entry on the following day, though when the matter came to be inquired into they pleaded that they had done so quite through inadvertence on their part. Macgrath believing that, according to custom, an entry was passed on the following morning, soon forgot all about the matter, until it was discovered in some such a way as this deficiency has been. The matter was investigated, and it was found that the tea had been exported without any warrant at all, and the locker was dismissed. Had this explanation been given when the question was asked and answered it would have caused the case to assume a very different complexion. I now produce my warehousekeeper's book (book produced), in order to shew the delivery of the "Hirondelle's" tea since Mr. Still's stock-taking. From this I shew an entry, on the 9th September, of 50 half-chests tea, ex "Hirondelle," delivered to Bannatyne and Co.; on the 18th September there is a delivery of 3 chests and 2 half-chests; on the 14th September, 1 half-chest; on the 12th September there are deliveries to Betteridge and Haydon of 20 half-chests, 5 half-chests, 15 half-chests, and 60 half-chests; on the 10th, a delivery to the same firm of 20 half-chests; and on the 15th October a delivery of 7 half-chests. In reference to Mr. Still's stock-taking, I would once again press upon the Board the utter impossibility of any man taking stock accurately unless he has with him a list of the articles that he ought to find in the store, or compare it with such list or book afterward. I will now content myself with calling any of the old lockers who were in the Customs at the date of this affair, to speak as to the practice of delivering the goods, and I will then leave my case in the hands of the Board.

Mr. Thomas Thompson called in and examined:—

- Mr. Thomas Thompson. 1. By Captain Ward: How long were you a locker? Three and a-half years.
 2. What are you now? A landing-waiter.
 3. Were you a locker in 1857? I was.
 25 Jan., 1860. 4. In what store? In Towns & Co.'s.
 5. Can you inform the Board of the practice in respect to the delivery of goods from bond—as to whether in delivering them you adhered to the terms of the warrant? Yes, strictly.
 6. Supposing a warrant to be issued for the delivery of teas ex "Hirondelle," and Towns & Co. asked you to allow other teas to go out of bond on that warrant, would you have allowed it? Most certainly I should not have allowed it.

7. By Mr. Stuart: Leaving the practice of the present day altogether out of mind, and reverting to that which was followed some years ago—has it been the custom for lockers to allow, or have you ever allowed, tea or sugar to go out of bond (though you had not at the moment the warrant for their delivery) on the promise of the importer that the amount of duty should be sent up to the Custom House and an entry passed? I do not remember any circumstance of the kind. It is possible, however, that I may have allowed the delivery of packages when I knew that you had sent up to the Custom House for a warrant.
8. You are much stricter now in every department of the Customs than you were a few years ago? Yes, much stricter.
9. You take care now to have all correct? Yes.
10. But in former days there was not such a strict adherence to rules and regulations, or to the exact terms of a warrant? There was not. I have heard that lockers have not always adhered to the terms of a warrant.
11. And so long as the general amount of duty was paid, the particular mark or cargo named in the warrant was not necessarily adhered to? I do not say anything about that.
12. You have heard of goods going out of bond before the warrant for them had been received? I have.
13. And you have had considerable experience as a locker? Yes.
14. And it is within your experience that such was the case, although you never did it? It is.
15. Was it not matter of notoriety that the Customs lockers were not very particular? Yes, I know that they were not.
16. And that persons would say to the locker—"We want this or that out of bond, and will send down and pass an entry for them to-morrow"? I cannot say that I know of that being done.
17. By Captain Ward: Was it ever a rule of the Customs that a merchant should be allowed to pay in a certain sum to the Customs on account of duty, and should then be permitted to take out bonded goods so long as he kept within the amount that he had paid? Not that I recollect.
18. By Mr. Stuart: It was more a matter between the locker and the importer than between the Collector and the importer? I should imagine it would be. I never heard of such a rule.
19. Do you ever do so? No, I do not think I ever let anything go out of store without a warrant, except in one instance, when I let you have out a case of brandy for your own private use.
20. By Mr. Browne: While a locker in former years, if you received an order for the delivery of 300 packages of tea would you allow them to remain in store, and deliver them in tens or twenties, as they were asked for, until the order was expended? I have been obliged to do so.
21. Then while that order was in force were you particular in issuing only the numbers and marks mentioned in that order? Yes, and as I delivered them I wrote them off on the back of the order.
22. Then by this means a delivery order might be made to spread over the space of a month? Yes, it has done so in several instances.
23. Was it the practice to take duty in advance on portions of a cargo? Not that I am aware of. When duties were paid warrants would issue for the delivery of the goods on which duty had been received.
24. If you got a warrant for 300 chests tea, and you had delivered 275, and that then the owner of the stores sent an order for the delivery of 35 chests, would you say to him that the warrant was only open for 25 chests and that you would deliver no more; or would you, supposing it to be a case of emergency, let the other 10 chests go? I would not let them go. I always made a point of having the duty paid before I delivered anything from the stores.
25. By Captain Ward: Did you ever allow the merchant to take one brand out of the store instead of another? No, never.
26. By Mr. Stuart: Are you aware that other lockers have not been so strict as you have been? I am aware of it. I know that this has been done in many cases, and that the lockers have got into trouble through it.
27. When you took charge of our bond you introduced there a more strict state of things than had existed formerly? I did.
28. You found that there had been very considerable irregularities in the deliveries from our bond? I did.
29. And these irregularities you remedied? I did.
30. Whom did you succeed in our store? Mr. Newton was there before me.
31. You know the locker's store-book? I do.
32. Have you seen this entry of "Hirondelle's" tea, I 436? I must have seen it when I had charge of the book.
33. Look at that entry and at Mr. Newton's note at the end of it, and tell me what you understand by it? I understand from that, that this entry should have been K 436, and that it has been entered I 436 in error, and that there was no tea of this kind received into the store.
34. Then, if you had received warrants for this other K tea, that would have satisfied you that all in the store had been paid for? It would.
35. By Mr. Duncan: Can you tell how much of this tea was in bond when you left the store? Yes; all that was entered in the store-book must have been then in the bond. I had to hand the goods over to the next locker who relieved me, and I had them all built up ready to count and hand over when he came to tally them with the books.

Mr. Thomas
Thompson.

25 Jan., 1860.

- Mr. Thomas Thompson. 36. There were no very specific regulations for the guidance of lockers in those days? There were not.
- 25 Jan., 1860. 37. You were left pretty much to yourselves to do what you thought right? Yes.
38. By Captain Ward: When goods are landed and entered for bond are they delivered to you? They would be delivered from the ship by the landing-waiter.
39. And how then would you take account of them? I take my account from the landing-waiter's receipt.
40. Do you give a receipt for what you take into store? I do now; but no receipt was given by the locker at that time.
41. Then, after the landing-waiter had discharged the cargo, there was no check upon it, so as to learn what actually came into bond? No, there was not.
42. So that if an order came down for the delivery of a couple of hundred chests of tea, and that order was executed before the tea got into bond, no one would know anything about it? Yes, the locker would know that he did not receive it.
43. But if a home consumption entry was passed for it, and it was delivered on the wharf under that? In that case it would go through the books. If a cargo is entered for bond, every package is entered into the store-book, and any delivery, even from the ship's side, will have to pass through the store-book, though the goods have never actually come into bond.

TUESDAY, 7 FEBRUARY, 1860.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.

CAPTAIN McLERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs, and Mr. A. Stuart, Merchant, were present during the proceedings.

Mr. George Ferguson called in and examined:—

- Mr. George Ferguson. 1. By Captain Ward: What is your position in Towns and Co.'s office? I am chief clerk.
2. Do you remember the landing of the tea ex "Hirondelle," in 1856? I know that it was landed.
- 7 Feb., 1860. 3. What more do you know respecting it? I know that the greater portion of it went into bond, and was issued from time to time.
4. And was it issued with the consent of the locker? It was always issued by the locker. We could take nothing out of bond without his knowledge.
5. And the whole quantity of tea was issued, with his knowledge, in different parcels at different periods? Yes.
6. With respect to the duty, how was it paid? At different periods too, as we required the tea.
7. How did you do it? We went down to the Custom House, and passed entries for it.
8. Did you go several times on account of this cargo? Yes, frequently. A cargo of this kind would extend over many entries.
9. With respect to the K 436 brand, did you pass many entries for that? No; it was all paid for at one time.
10. How was that? It was a different number and bond mark from the rest of the cargo.
11. What caused that difference? Some Custom House regulation.
12. How was the duty paid? It was all paid at once, but only latterly; in August last.
13. But in what way? We thought it had been paid before. We had no intimation from the locker that it was not paid, and we therefore considered that the duty on the entire cargo had been paid.
14. What made you consider this; did you not look to your books to see if it were so? No; we looked to the locker to let us know where duty was required. We supposed that we had paid duty on the whole of the remainder of the "Hirondelle's" cargo. We sent down to pay duty at the Custom House, on the balance of that vessel's cargo, and paid upon what appeared against us in the Customs books; having done this, we thought that all was paid, and did not know the reverse until latterly.
15. What process do you go through in paying duty on home consumption entries? We pass an entry for so many packages, and take them out as we require them. If we require more than the locker holds an order for, that is, if we are getting to the end of our entry, the locker lets us know, and we pay more duty.
16. Then when you wanted to take out any of the K 436 tea, you passed the usual entries for it at the Custom House? No; this seems never to have been done at all. When we paid up duty on the balance of the cargo, we were under the impression that this tea was paid for, and could be taken out of bond without passing entry for it. We lost sight of the fact that there were two brand marks for the cargo in the Custom House books.
17. But when you came to issue the tea you would see that it bore different brands? No, not necessarily; the bond mark is not put upon all the packages.
18. Where was the mark put then? Only upon a package here and there in several hundred.
19. Has it never been the practice to put the bond mark upon every chest? No.

20. How is it done then? The tea is stacked up in the store, and one chest in each stack or division is marked. Mr. George Ferguson.
21. Were you not aware that one portion of the cargo had received a different bond mark from the other? No, we were not. 7 Feb., 1860.
22. So that when you paid on the balance of the I 436 you thought you had paid duty on the remainder of the whole cargo? Yes.
23. But how comes it that, having passed entries at the Customs only for a certain number of chests of tea, you were allowed to issue more than that number from the bond? That I cannot say.
24. Did you keep no account in your books of the deliveries made in satisfaction of the different entries? No, we have not done so hitherto.
25. Then, having passed an entry for so many chests of tea, you go on drawing tea from bond on the strength of that entry, until the locker stops you? Yes; he goes on delivering until he has given us the full quantity he owes us on the delivery order, and then we pass entry for another lot.
26. Then as you get delivery of the goods named in the order, he ticks them off on the back of the order until the quantity is completed? Yes, I presume so.
27. But he must have come to the end of his delivery orders long before all these teas went out of bond? That was his business, not ours.
28. Who was locker at the time these teas were in course of delivery? There were several lockers there during that time.
29. Then your only check upon the entries passed by you was the warning you got from the locker when the delivery order was exhausted? We have always been in the habit of passing entries for a certain portion of the cargo. On receiving the delivery order we hand it to the locker, and he keeps it. When he has delivered somewhere about the quantity named in the order, he lets us know, and we then pass entry for more.
30. Then the locker would let you know when the first portion of the cargo, the I 436, was all delivered? No, for when we paid duty on the balance of the cargo, we thought that all the tea had been paid for.
31. How was it first brought to your notice that the duty on the K 436 had not been paid? The locker applied to me for information respecting the K 436 tea, and told me he had received notice from the Custom House that there should be so many parcels of that tea in bond, and requiring him to furnish information respecting it. He told me that he had looked into the matter, and found that the tea was not there. He spoke to me two or three times, and at last I did look into the matter, and found that the duty was not paid. When I had satisfied myself upon this point, I went to Mr. Stuart and explained the matter. He also looked into it, and when he found that the statement from the Custom House was correct, he paid the duty.
32. Was that the first time that you became aware of the fact that the duty was not paid? Yes.
33. When was this? In the latter part of July, when the locker mentioned the matter to me and requested me to look into it.
34. That was at the end of July last? Yes.
35. And when was the duty paid? From a week to ten days after I was first spoken to; at all events some few days afterwards.
36. What position does Mr. Brown hold in Towns and Co.'s employ? He attends to our Custom House business.
37. You are senior clerk to him? I am.
38. Would he be likely to know about these teas not being duty paid? No. The locker applied to me in the first instance; and there was no possibility of Mr. Brown knowing anything about it, because he was not performing the duty of Custom House clerk at the time the supposed balance of duty on these teas was paid.
39. There was no probability of his knowing at that time that the duty on the K 436 was not paid? There was no possibility of such a thing. Besides, if he had known it he would have mentioned it to me when the matter was first spoken of. Mr. King, the locker at our store, did not know of it, and if he did not Mr. Brown could not have known it.
40. By Mr. Duncan: You said that the tea had two bond marks, and that this had been on account of some Custom House regulation? Yes, I believe so.
41. What is your reason for believing it? Because they would not have been put on the packages unless from some Customs regulation. We should not have put the marks on of ourselves, for we did not require them.
42. But it is quite contrary to the Customs regulations to put two bond marks upon one cargo? All goods that go into bond are marked by the Customs.
43. Not with two marks? It was not at Towns and Co.'s request that this was done. Had they had any reason for wishing the cargo under two marks I should have known it.
44. You say you knew of the landing of this tea? Yes. I did not know how many packages were landed each day, or to what part of the store they went, but I know that they were landed.
45. You say you could not trace this matter in your books; but do you mean to say that your accounts are kept in such a way that you did not know whether duty upon so large a quantity as 740 packages of tea was paid or not? We might have known by looking through our books, but it was not brought to our notice to look first. We had to do it at last, and then found that the duty was not paid.
46. Do you keep your books by double entry? We do.
47. And do you mean to say you did not know this? Such was the case. Double entry would not take notice of what was never entered.

Mr. George Ferguson.

7 Feb., 1860.

48. You say that your practice is to pay duty on a quantity of tea, and then to take it out by degrees as you want it,—does that allude to your present or your former system of doing business? To the former and to the present system too. We must pay the duty before we can take the goods out of bond.
49. But, having passed an entry for 100 chests of tea, do you still continue the system of taking them out of bond a few at a time as you want them? Yes; we cannot take them all out at once.
50. By Mr. Stuart: Does the importer or the Custom House place the bond mark on goods? The Custom House.
51. Therefore, when you say that the second mark was placed on the cargo by some Customs regulation, you mean that it was done by order of some Custom House official? Yes.
52. The importer has nothing at all to do with the bond mark? No.
53. The importer keeps one key of the bonded store, the other being retained by the Custom House officer? Yes.
54. Does the owner of the bond consider himself as the custodian of the goods for the Customs? No.
55. When goods are required from the bond would the locker deliver them merely on the importer or storekeeper's warrant or order? Certainly not.
56. The locker is bound to take his orders only from the Customs authorities? Yes, always.
57. Does the storekeeper's man deliver upon the same order as the locker? No, he delivers on the importer's order.
58. Then two orders are necessary in order to obtain goods from bond? Yes, the locker and the storeman act independently of each other.
59. It is the duty of the storeman to get his master's order, and of the locker to get the order of the Custom House? Yes.
60. You said that Mr. Brown, the present Custom House clerk of Towns and Co. did not hold that situation when the "Hirondelle's" tea was in bond—can you say who was Custom House clerk to that firm at that time? Yes, Mr. Coleman.
61. Did not Mr. Brown hold a very subordinate situation in our office at that time? Yes, he did.
62. And it was not at all within his province to have anything to do with the Custom House business of the firm? No.
63. After duty had been paid upon a parcel of tea, was it possible that it might remain in the bonded store for some considerable time afterwards? Yes.
64. For a year or two? Yes, for an indefinite period.
65. Are you aware that a number of cases of champagne upon which we paid duty remained in store for two years afterwards? Yes; some of it remained for a longer period than that.
66. And it was taken out case by case as it was required? Yes; but it was not entirely taken out until very lately.
67. Are you aware that Mr. Still, shortly after his appointment as inspector of warehouses, gave instructions that this system of keeping goods in bond after the duty had been paid, should be discontinued? I know that notice was given to that effect, but am not sure that Mr. Still gave it.
68. Do you know when it was? I do not remember the period, but it was not very long since.

Mr. James Brown called in and examined:—

- Mr. J. Brown. 1. By Captain Ward: What is your position in Towns and Co.'s office? I am shipping clerk.
- 7 Feb., 1860. 2. Mr. Fancourt has stated in his evidence that, on one particular occasion when you came down to the Custom House to pay duty on the teas per "Hirondelle," the following conversation occurred between you:—Mr. Fancourt says, "When he came down I spoke to him respecting it, and he told me that he knew the duty had not been paid long ago. I told him that if he knew that he ought to have come down and paid it; he told me that it was our business to look after it, not his." Do you remember that conversation? Yes, I believe it was something to that effect.
3. Will you explain to the Board what you meant by saying that you knew of it "long ago?" I had known of it some three or four days.
  4. Then by "long ago" you meant some three or four days? Yes.
  5. How did you become aware of the fact? By the locker making an application to the firm respecting the goods.
  6. To whom did he make the application? To Mr. Ferguson.
  7. Did Mr. Ferguson acquaint you with the matter? He did; and gave me a memorandum of the facts, telling me to look into the thing, and I did so.
  8. And that was the first time that you became acquainted with it? Yes.
  9. By Mr. Stuart: When goods are taken into bond you are aware that a mark or brand is fixed on them? Yes.
  10. Is that done by order of the importer or of the Custom House? By the Custom House.
  11. The "Hirondelle's" cargo was landed in 1856, and a portion of it remained in bond until 1857—were you our Custom House clerk at that time? No.

12. Who was? Mr. Coleman.

13. You held a subordinate position in the office at that time? I did.

14. And it was not within your province to know anything about the Custom House business? It was not.

15. And you had no means of knowing that the duty had not been paid? No, none whatever.

Mr. J. Brown.

7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. Alexander Stuart called in and examined:—

1. By Captain Ward: Have you anything to add to your statement made the other day? Mr. A. Stuart. Only a few words. These two witnesses examined to-day complete the evidence that I have to offer; but there is one point to which I would once more particularly draw the attention of the Board; and that is—that the Custom House held our bond for the full amount of duty on the whole cargo, and that this is a practice that does not exist in England. There the importer gives no bond; and when goods are entered into a bonded warehouse they pass on a simple warehouse entry. The reason for the bond being required here is—that the Custom House Department in the Colonies is not expected to be so complete or so vigilant as the same department is in England; and on that account it has been considered necessary to take the bond of the importer, in case of any error occurring or of any goods being lost in bond. For the same reason, the period during which goods are allowed to remain in bond has been fixed at a much shorter date than in England. The time during which they may remain in bond has been fixed here at three years, and it is the same in all the Colonies. At the end of that time it is the duty of the proper officer of Customs to examine the bonds, and to see that the goods named in them have either been exported, entered for home consumption and duty paid, or that they are still in store. After the examination of the bond shews the goods to have been accounted for the giver of the bond is free; otherwise he may be called on for the fulfilment of his bond. Now in England goods are allowed to remain five years in the warehouse; and another great difference is, that there the warehouse is bonded; here it is the goods that are bonded. By the provisions thus made for the conduct of the business of the Custom House in the Colonies, it is evident that some inaccuracies and mistakes have been contemplated; and that it was intended that the Government should have a remedy at law against the importer in such a case; as they must from the bonds of necessity discover any deficiency whatever. Looking at this, I think the Board will see that it furnishes a very strong argument in favor of the supposition that no fraud could have been intended on our part; because it is we who give the bonds; and the person who gives them would not be mad enough to commit a fraud, when he knows that in the ordinary course of business it must of necessity be discovered. Another point is, that Mr. Still, soon after he was appointed, gave instructions that goods on which duty had been paid should not be allowed to remain in bond, and that those then in bond should be removed. Many goods were removed in consequence of these orders, particularly a quantity of champagne, which I have Mr. Ferguson's evidence to shew had been in bond, though duty paid, for over two years. Mr. Thompson's evidence goes to shew that the whole of the tea which ought to have been in bond was there when he left, because he stacked the whole up, and counted it over to his successor. He, however, considered the K 436 tea as not being under the Custom House care at all. It follows, from what I before proved, that the goods must chiefly have left the store after Mr. Thompson had handed them over to his successor, and most probably after Mr. Still had given his orders to remove all duty paid goods from the bond. The locker, considering the K 436 tea to be duty paid, would naturally be only too glad to get rid of it as soon as the importer could take it away. As the teas were taken out subsequent to the succeeding locker taking charge, and between the two stock-takings of Mr. Still, it is clear that the locker imagining he had no control over the goods considered he was only carrying out the views of his superior in hurrying them out of bond, and thus the error has arisen, as I formerly said, either through the mistake of the Custom House officers or the laxity of the system; and by the affixing of two different marks by the Customs to one cargo of tea, which, according to Mr. Duhean's own admission, is directly opposed to the Customs regulations, but over which we had no control.

INQUIRY INTO THE COLONIAL SUGAR COMPANY'S DEFICIENCIES.

THURSDAY, 2 FEBRUARY, 1860.

Present :—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ., | CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs, and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the proceedings.

Captain Ward mentioned that Mr. Fancourt having made an addition to his evidence, Mr. Stuart had requested to be allowed to call a witness upon that particular point, and that the Board had decided that he should be permitted to do so.

Mr. Duncan called in and examined :—

- Mr. Duncan. 1. By Captain Ward: In the letter addressed by you to the Secretary of the Treasury, and dated 13th July, 1859, you state in the 5th paragraph :—" Mr. Ross says that the sugar was accompanied as usual with two cart notes—no doubt—so was the sugar per 'Moa,' and yet it never got on board. But the truth is the agents of the Company were perfectly aware that I would not take the weights from them, nor the quantities from their cart notes, and they had no right to expect me to do so." The Board would wish to know if you have any evidence to offer on this point, either by the production of some written order, or of the testimony of some person to whom the order was given? I gave no orders to the Sugar Company or to the merchants of the port, but to my own officials; and, at that time, having only just come into office, and having a large amount of business on my hands, most of my orders were given verbally.
2. In what way did you give the order that the sugar of the Sugar Company should be weighed? I gave the order to all the landing-waiters, and particularly to Mr. Russell, who was then drawback officer, that they were to weigh all goods shipped for drawback. Of course, in saying this, I did not mean that every package was to be weighed, but that a sufficient number of each kind of package was to be weighed to enable them to strike a fair average of weight. I stated over and over again to my officers that they were to weigh sugar and tea, and everything else that was shipped for drawback, and I was under the impression, until this case of the "Moa" occurred, that my orders had been followed.
3. Then you gave a verbal order? Yes.
4. That the Company's sugar was to be weighed? No. That all goods shipped for drawback should be weighed.
5. Did your officers understand from this that the sugar of the Company was included in this order? Most assuredly, "all goods" were mentioned.
6. And did Mr. Russell so understand it? Of course he did; because from conversations I had with him, he must have told the agents of the Company of my order.
7. Will you produce Mr. Russell to give evidence as to this point? After the manner in which Mr. Russell has given his evidence before the Board, I consider it would be almost an insult to the Board to offer Russell as a credible witness.
8. You have a distinct recollection of giving this order to Russell? Yes, most distinct. After I had first given the order I saw that there was still something very wrong about the drawbacks, and on one occasion I went down to Mr. Russell's place to speak to him more particularly on the subject, and to impress my orders upon him as forcibly as I could. His answer was, in his usual way, that he was very particular in these things, and never allowed anything to pass him. I was then under the impression that he did examine the goods.
9. What was the practice with regard to drawbacks before you gave this order to Russell? There was not a regular recognised practice in any one branch of the department at the time I took charge. I cannot say therefore that there was any established practice. The drawback system was the worst of all.
10. In his letter of 26th July, 1859, addressed to the Colonial Treasurer, Mr. Ross asserts that the late Collector framed certain regulations, specially for the Sugar Company, in regard to the drawback on refined sugar; is there anything in the Custom House—any record in writing—to shew that such an arrangement was made? I have never seen any record of the kind, nor have I ever seen any document in which such an arrangement is either mentioned or alluded to as having been made with the Sugar Company, or with anybody else. I first saw it mentioned in Mr. Ross's letter, from which you quote. I have made particular inquiry, and I am given to understand that there never has been in the Custom House any record of this sort; and unless such a thing were in existence, and that it came to my knowledge, I could not be expected to recognise it or act upon it. But the inference is, that there was nothing of the kind; for if you refer to the evidence of Mr. Powell, given before the former Board, he says, in answer to question 28, "There is great difficulty to say what are fixed regulations in the Customs here. There are no minutes. A rule may be made to-day, and broken a few days hence." And again, question 29: "The instructions given are not in writing? Never in writing, unfortunately." I conclude, therefore, therefore, that the arrangement alluded to by Mr. Ross, if it existed at all, must have been <sup>Mr. Duncan.</sup> purely verbal.

11. You say that Russell was informed that he was to take the weight of all goods shipped <sup>2 Feb., 1860.</sup> for drawback; but were the Company informed that for the future all their sugars would be weighed? I never had any direct communication with the Company on the subject—my business was not with them, but with their agents; besides, I issue orders not to the Company or to the merchants, but to the officers of the department. Once or twice, however, I had conversations with the clerks of the Company, and this subject of the weighing formed part of those conversations.

12. Then, when you gave your orders to Russell you were not aware of any understanding or regulation of a contrary character that had been made between the Company and the late Collector? I had never heard of anything of the kind.

13. And therefore, you did not conceive it necessary to advise the Company of the order given by you to Russell? Certainly not.

14. Do you know whether Russell communicated to the Company your order on the subject of their sugars? I think he did; from circumstances that occurred subsequently, I conjectured that he had had some conversation with the Company respecting it; but I am not in a position to prove this.

15. So far as you are aware, then, neither the Company nor their agents were made acquainted with your order? Yes; I can swear distinctly that I spoke to Mr. Powell about it myself.

16. When did you first speak of it to Mr. Powell? I cannot take upon myself to speak distinctly as to the dates; but I can safely say this, that I have over and over again told Mr. Powell that I would not take anybody's weight for drawback goods.

17. We wish you could fix the date, as that is a material point? The only record I have to guide me in any way to the date is a conversation I had with Mr. Bayley, another Custom House Agent, upon the same subject. The conversation with Mr. Bayley took place on the 18th May; and, as Mr. Powell has very much more business in drawbacks than Mr. Bayley, it is more than likely that I should have quite as early had similar conversation with him. (Vide Mr. Bayley's letter in printed correspondence.)

18. Mr. Ross alleges that the Company had a particular arrangement with the Custom House in respect to their refined sugars? That could not affect me, as I was in no way cognizant of it.

19. But it may affect the Company in this way, that unless they were particularly informed that their sugars were to be weighed, even though the new regulation came to their knowledge, they might believe that, owing to the arrangement between them and the late Collector, the new regulation was not to apply in their case? I have no doubt whatever but that they were informed, but, unfortunately, I cannot prove it. I could only do so by calling Mr. Powell, who is the only person who could speak directly to this point; but as he is a party interested in this question, I should not think of asking for his evidence.

20. The Board would very much like to have some proof of this point, if you could produce it? The Board will see the position in which I am placed. The only conclusive evidence I could produce would be that of Mr. Powell, and him I cannot call.

21. Then you assert that, long before the shipment by the "Spray," the Company were aware that all sugar shipped for drawback must be weighed? I do. Their agents were.

22. Have you anything, beyond your own assertion, to shew that this was the case? Not as regards the Company specially, because there was no special order given by me for them; but it was a general order that all goods were to be weighed. Of course the Company's sugars were included in this order, but I never dreamt of making any special reservation either for or against the Company.

23. With the light that has since been thrown upon the matter, and the assertion that such an understanding existed with the late Collector, do you now think that the Company should have had some notice in reference to their sugars? I was not then aware of the arrangement, and could not therefore give the notice. I admit that I have since become aware that practically such a plan as that described was pursued, but I did not know whence the authority for it had proceeded, till I saw Mr. Ross's letter, nor do I feel quite certain of it now.

24. By Mr. Browne: But admitting that such a practice had been sanctioned, do you think it right that it should be cancelled without some communication being made to the Company? I did communicate my orders over and over again to the agent of the Company with whom only I had to deal. I had more trouble with the Company's drawbacks than with all the others put together.

25. By Captain Ward: Can you establish by evidence that there was any practice of weighing sugars for drawback prior to the 6th July? I cannot; for I believe that not only were they not weighed, but the packages were not even counted, and that drawback was granted upon any quantity that the shipper chose to claim for.

26. Then, as a matter of fact, it was not weighed? It was not; and was very often shipped before entries were passed at the Custom House. The inquiries arising out of the "Moa" case convinced me of this, though previously I was under the impression that my orders were being strictly carried out, and that all goods were weighed.

27. Then your impression now is that prior to the 6th July sugars for drawback were not weighed? Neither sugars nor any other goods, although shortly before that time I believed that they were.

28. In your letter to the Secretary to the Treasury of the 4th August, 1859, you say in the 4th paragraph:—"the case of the 'Moa' caused me to renew my notice;" do you mean by that that there had been any suspension of the order? What I meant by renewing the notice

- Mr. Duncan. notice was this, that I mentioned to the Custom House Agents, to Mr. Russell and to Mr. Still, my intention strictly to enforce the order previously given. Of course it was expected that they would communicate this notice to the parties severally interested in it in their respective branches. As to the original order there was never any suspension of it, but it came to my knowledge that after my order was given, they still went on in their own system in spite of my orders—at least Mr. Russell did, and I was determined to put a stop to it.
29. Then you do not intend by this passage to infer that the order had been suspended? Not at all, but solely this, that finding out when I called for the papers of the “Moa” that no less than forty bags were missing of the quantity then given, and that consequently Russell could not have done his duty or have obeyed my order, I renewed that order by repeating it with very strong injunctions that it was to be strictly followed.
30. By Mr. Browne: Was it about that time that you directed the landing-surveyor to put the order in writing? I cannot recollect the time when I directed it to be put in writing;* but I know that I gave the direction in consequence of an observation of Mr. Powell’s. But when I first came into the office I had so many things to give directions about, that it would have been physically impossible to have put the twentieth part of my orders in writing. They have been since put in writing and many printed.
31. By Captain Ward: In your letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated 30th August, 1859, you bring forward some fresh irregularities on the part of the Sugar Company, and you then say, in paragraph 2, “In addition to the obstacles mentioned in previous correspondence, on the 10th instant, the Company shipped  $2\frac{1}{2}$  tons of sugar, between 11 and 12 cwt. of which was packed in a large cask, which they well knew we had no means of weighing; the searcher ascertained by boring that it contained sugar, but could only guess “at the weight, or take it at the shipper’s word.” We would ask you whether it was contrary to the usual custom to pack sugar in large casks? It was contrary to what they should have done, as they knew that we had no means of weighing them.
32. Did they know it? They could not help knowing it; and in point of fact I mentioned this matter because the packages were found to be light on their arrival at the port of destination. But not only did they send the goods in these hogsheads, but they sometimes put them on board before the Customs officer saw them, and sometimes even before we got the entry.
33. Then do you suppose this was a special proceeding, done purposely to annoy you? I must say that it looked very much like it.
34. Have you ever given the Company notice not to pack their sugars in such large packages? No; but they knew that the sugar would not pass without weighing, and that it could not be weighed in those packages.
35. By Mr. Browne: But you could not control the size of the packages? No, but I could refuse the drawback unless I could ascertain the weight.
36. By Captain Ward: In the third paragraph of the same letter you say, “Again, late in the afternoon of the 26th, entry was passed on behalf of the Sugar Company for six tons of sugar for drawback; the searcher on the station heard nothing about the shipment till about half-past twelve the following day, Saturday, when going on board the ship the mate informed him that five tons of the sugar had been already shipped; on Monday, he was informed in like manner that the remainder had been shipped on Saturday afternoon, after he left the station.” What is your special complaint in reference to this matter? That a portion of the sugar was shipped before the officer had had a proper opportunity to examine it, and that the rest was shipped after the proper hours of business.
37. And that the officer was thus not in a position to certify for the drawback? Exactly.
38. Then did the Company lose the drawback? No, the sugar was taken out of the hold and the weights ascertained, so that the Company got their drawback.
39. The shipping officer protested against the irregularity, and then the Company took steps to satisfy him? Exactly.
40. In the same paragraph you make some allusion to the dates on the Company’s shipping notes having been altered—will you explain this? I do not attach much importance to this point, but it is a curious thing, because these notes should bear date the day the goods are sent down.
41. Have you any imputation to make against the Company in reference to dates? No, I have not; but they or their agents are very fond of proving things by dates, and that makes me very cautious in admitting anything of the kind. Another thing is, that these notes, which we have in evidence should be given to the Custom House officer, were not given to him at all. This is a point that I am prepared to prove.
42. But you do not impute to the Company any intention to deceive the Customs by these changes of the figures? No; all I wish to shew by it is the general bad and irregular conduct of their agents in their dealings with the Custom House.
43. Coming now to your letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, of the 11th October, you say there “with reference to previous correspondence on the subject of irregularities in the shipments for drawback of the Australian Sugar Refining Company, and of their Custom House business generally, I forward herewith a letter and certificate from the Collector at Auckland, informing me of a deficiency in a quantity of sugar shipped here “per ‘Moa’ for drawback, and short landed there, to the extent of 9 cwt. 23 lbs. Also a “certificate from the Collector at Hobart Town, shewing that in a quantity of sugar landed “there

* NOTE—I find, on reference, that I myself put the order in writing on the 9th July, but Mr. Still had given verbal notice to the officers some time previously, and, as I have already stated, I had long before mentioned my determination to the Agents and to Mr. Russell, the officer then in charge of the drawbacks.

"there a deficiency was found of 11 cwt. 2 qrs. on the quantity on which drawback was paid here." I would ask you with respect to these two parcels of sugar, whether they were shipped according to your amended regulations, and whether they were duly passed by your shipping officer? I believe that the shipping officer took the Company's weights, but this is by no means a singular case, for I have had their shipments returned to me as being short over and over again. Ever since the Board has been sitting, I have received several letters making complaints of the short weights of the Company.

44. As far as the Sugar Company was concerned, have they offered you all requisite facility for ascertaining the weight of their shipments? Yes, latterly; but I am afraid that some of my officers did not follow out my instructions as they should have done. No doubt the New Zealand officials are very strict, and charge duty on every pound actually landed. Allowances for tare may differ slightly at different ports. Still, however, it is strange that there should be so regular a deficiency in these weights.

45. By Mr. Browne: Are not the bastards sugar very wet when they are put into the bags fresh from the manufactory? No doubt they are, but not to such an extent as to account for so large an amount of deficiency. If the deficiencies were not so continual I should not have thought so much of the matter. I should have attached but little importance to a single case of deficiency, but when I find that shipment after shipment is reported short, I am bound to take notice of it. At the same time I make no charge against the Company, except that I think they weigh rather too close.

46. By Captain Ward: You impute no irregularity to the Company then, in this respect? No; I do not for a moment doubt the integrity of the Company, but it is no less a fact that the recipients of the sugar at the port of destination do not pay duty on the quantity of sugar that appears to go from here, and on which drawback is paid here.

47. What is your complaint, then, against the Company? All I mean to say is, that the Company are too keen and exacting upon the revenue here in their weights for drawback.

48. Could you not be just as sharp upon them in your turn? If I had officers all of whom I could depend upon I should be so.

49. Coming now to the general sugar deficiency, and taking first the case of remission of the quantity alluded to in the Executive Council Minute of 23rd July, 1857, which appears finally to close up the account of 10,371 tons of sugar, on which had occurred a deficiency, from waste, of 260 tons 18 cwt., the Board would wish to say, that if you can shew that this remission was obtained by misrepresentation, or that any incorrect statement of facts was made to induce that decision, the Board will open up this case; but that if you cannot do this, they will be inclined to let the decision of the Executive stand as final? The Minute itself shews that there must have been a false representation made. There was a document in existence, however, which has since most mysteriously disappeared, as I have before had occasion to remark—a letter from Mr. Metcalfe, applying for a remission of duty on this amount of deficiency, in which he stated distinctly that the sugars had all been weighed in and weighed out of bond. The Minute of the Executive Council clearly proves the existence of this letter, for it says that "deficiencies in sugar are allowed if the sugar be duly weighed in and out of the bonding warehouse," and that "the law has in that respect been complied with." Now, how did the Executive know that the law had been complied with, unless upon some representation to that effect having been made to them?

50. There is nothing in the correspondence before us to shew that any such letter was written by Mr. Metcalfe? In my opinion, the correspondence and Minutes shew that a claim had been put in by Mr. Metcalfe, on account of the Sugar Company, for a remission of duty, and that a representation was made by him that the sugars had been weighed in and out. The representation was made, and could have been made, by no other person than Mr. Metcalfe.

51. But can you in any way shew this to have been the case? I think Mr. Metcalfe's letter of the 31st March, 1859, which I before handed in, shews it, because in that letter he makes a distinction between the two deficiencies of 1857 and 1859, by stating that the first deficiency was discovered by actual re-weight, whilst the second was only assumed to be the amount allowed by law, which was understood to be a fixed allowance. (Mr. Duncan here read the letter.)

52. Allowing that it has been asserted that the deficiency of 1857, to which I am now confining my questions, was ascertained by re-weight, have you any evidence to shew that it was not so ascertained? I have several witnesses in attendance whom I wish to call before the Board. I have not examined them as to the testimony they could give, but I believe they will all prove that the sugars at that time were not weighed out of bond.

53. Have you any other evidence on this point? I have proved by Mr. Metcalfe's letter of 31st March, 1859, that he asserted that the deficiency was ascertained by re-weight. And I now produce a copy of a letter from Colonel Gibbs, or rather a minute of that gentleman, on a remark of the Auditor General relative to this deficiency, and dated 16th March, 1857, (Minute produced) shortly before the time that the Executive Council allowed the deficiency to be written off. He therein states that he allowed the claim of the Company to be written off, although the sugars had not been weighed out, conceiving that  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. was a reasonable claim for deficiency.

54. It would appear from this, then, that Colonel Gibbs on his own motion allowed the deficiency of  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent., and not upon any representation of the Company that the sugars had been weighed out, since he states distinctly that they were not so? But in his minute of 3rd July, 1857, he states distinctly that the whole of the sugar in question was weighed in and weighed out; thus shewing that between the time of making the two statements that some representations had been made to him relative to the re-weighting. Upon this point also, I refer the Board to Mr. Metcalfe's letter of 26th February, 1857. (Letter put in and read.)

Mr. Duncan. 55. What is the deficiency you refer to in your letter of the 18th August, 1859, when, in the 10th paragraph you say, "Again in the first quarter of the present year a deficiency of 141 tons was discovered, representing duty to the amount of £700 and upwards?" That is the second lot that was written off by direction of the Treasurer.

2 Feb., 1860. 56. But it appears to us that the Minute of the then Secretary for Finance, Mr. Weekes, dated 16th May, finally disposes of this? I think I have given extracts from Acts of Parliament to shew that the Secretary for Finance took a mistaken view of this matter, and of the law.

57. By Mr. Browne: Has the amount been paid to the Company and the matter been closed? Nothing has been paid. The amount has been simply written off our warehouse-book in their favor.

58. By Captain Ward: In reference to this deficiency of 141 tons, the Secretary for Finance having allowed the Company to write it off, as appears by his Minute of 18th May, we would ask you if you can give us any valid reason for re-opening the question? All I can say is that the thing was quite illegal, and that Mr. Weekes had no power in my opinion to give an order contrary to law.

59. As a responsible Minister of the Crown he is answerable for his acts, and can be proceeded against by impeachment, but the Board are not the parties to take this step—have you any reason beyond this? I have not; but I would urge on the Board, that though a Minister of the Crown, the Secretary for Finance should not break the law any more than another. The whole tenor of my letter goes to shew that there has been an infraction of the law, which I conceived it to be my duty to point out, as there are other deficiencies still to be disposed of, and that unless my acts, which are done only for the good of the revenue and with no possibility of a personal object, are upheld against the Company, I cannot carry on my official business with that advantage to the country that I conceive to be desirable.

60. Unless it can be shewn that the remission has been made upon false premises, the Board cannot re-open the question? But see my position. There are other large deficiencies on my books, and here am I alone and unfriended, struggling with a powerful Company that has friends at every corner, only for the good of the revenue which I am bound in duty to protect, and it is absolutely necessary that I should be well supported, otherwise I must fail in protecting it.

61. Passing now to the third case of deficiency, to which you allude in the 11th paragraph of your letter of 18th August, where you say—"In addition to these cases, which had already come under the notice of the Government, I have now to state that we have discovered deficiencies in the sugar belonging to the Company, now appearing to be in bond, to over 231 tons, representing duty which ought to be now in the Treasury, amounting to £1,155." To what time does this deficiency refer? To the three years ending 30th June, 1857.

62. And is there any correspondence respecting it? No. It seemed to be useless to call upon the late Government to give any decision relative to the Sugar Company. I referred the matter to the Treasury, but got no answer, and though I once or twice drew attention to it, my appeals were unheeded.

63. How did you discover this deficiency? In making up the lists for the sale of overtime goods, the warehousekeeper, Mr. Fancourt, found that this quantity of sugar was still unaccounted for in his books, and on reference to the bond the sugar was found to be gone.

64. And you say that the Government have taken no notice of your letter bringing this matter under their attention? No; except that in one communication upon other minor deficiencies discovered, I was informed that this matter would have to lie over for further discussion.

65. During the three years over which the deficiency extends, you say that sugar was not weighed out of bond? No.

66. And in balancing your books for those years you found this deficiency? We did.

67. According to your calculation, what per centage of deficiency would this be on the whole amount bonded during those three years? I have made no calculation on the subject.* I go by the law, which allows for no deficiency not ascertained by actual weighing.

68. From the 6th May last, you have made it imperative that all sugars should be weighed into bond and weighed out of it? I have.

69. So that such a discrepancy as this is not likely to occur again? No, it cannot.

Mr. William Cathcart Still called in and examined:—

Mr. W. C. Still. 1. By Captain Ward: How long have you been in charge of the bonded warehouses? Since the month of April, 1857.

2 Feb., 1860. 2. Have you since then taken notice of the deficiencies of sugar in bond—that is, of the loss by waste? I have.

3. And what do you find to be the average amount of loss since you have held your office? I will read from a memorandum I have taken of the quantity received into and delivered out of Knox's bond from July, 1857, to April, 1859. I make the deficiency of the quantity delivered to be under  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. the quantity received into bond.

4. And how long had the sugar been in bond? It was bonded at different times during the period I have mentioned.

5.

* NOTE.—I find the deficiency to have been a little over 2 per cent. on the average; some parcels much more, and some less of course.

5. But what would be about the average time that the sugar would remain in bond? I can only give a guess at that. Perhaps each cargo would take from three months to six months to deliver. Mr. W. C. Still
2 Feb., 1860.

6. How have you arrived at this per centage? During the time I have mentioned, 16,749 tons 13 cwt. 2 qrs. and 18 lbs. were received into bond, and during the same time there was delivered 10,732 tons 9 cwt. 1 qr. and 25 lbs. making a deficiency under one quarter per cent. of deliveries upon receipts.

7. Does it not strike you that any inference to be drawn from this must in a great measure depend upon the time the sugar is in bond? Yes, but as regards the separate lots of sugar, they did not all shew the same result. Some of them shewed an increase, others a decrease in weight.

8. If the whole of the quantity you have mentioned were to remain in bond for two years, surely the per centage of loss would be much greater than if the same quantity only remained there for a week? No doubt.

9. Consequently, in making the calculation it is important that we should know how long each lot was in bond? I cannot state that, as I have only brought a memorandum of the total quantities; but there has been a return made up of each cargo of sugar received into the bond during the period mentioned, which may give some information relative to the time the twenty-two cargoes were delivered.

10. It is of no use to tell us how many cargoes were received and delivered unless you can also shew us how long each remained in the bond? No man can speak from memory of so many matters, because different portions of these cargoes were taken out at as many different times. For instance, the Company might perhaps take half a cargo out of bond almost immediately, and then the remainder would be left in bond for six weeks or six months. The sugar was only taken out as the Company required it.

11. By Mr. Browne: Can you say what was about the average time that sugar remained in bond during the period you have stated? On the average, it takes three or four months to work off a cargo.

12. By Captain Ward: There might not be on an average more than 20 tons in bond at a time, and therefore the per centage of loss would be very much greater than you assume it to be; whilst if the whole quantity was in bond, the per centage would be a small one? I could not say what was the average quantity in bond during the time.

13. By Mr. Browne: How was this deficiency ascertained? By actually weighing the sugar in and out of bond. In July, 1857, we began with this system upon the first cargo that arrived, and the numbers I have read are taken from the locker's books.

14. Then how do the deficiencies in the locker's books, alluded to by Mr. Duncan, arise? They have nothing to do with me; they were all previous to my time, and occurred under a very different system to that which I have introduced into the warehouses.

15. What is about the average time that sugar stops in bond? Say about three or four months.

16. By Captain Ward: I cannot see that any value attaches to your memorandum, unless it can be shewn how long the sugar stopped in bond? Taking the receipts and deliveries for two years, I shew that, where parties are taking sugars in and out of bond, under one quarter per cent. is the amount to allow them for waste.

17. By Captain McLerie: Can you shew the quantity of sugar in store at the end of every three months of the two years? It would be a somewhat tedious job to do, to detail all the numerous small lots, delivered at various periods, from the twenty-two cargoes.

18. If the waste were only one quarter per cent. upon sugars bonded for two years, you would not consider that to be a great loss? Certainly not.

19. By Captain Ward: In your return you have given no weight of the different parcels, and no time during which they were bonded? No; I have not. I am merely detailing from a memo. of the total quantity.

20. By Mr. Duncan: Do you know who was the locker in charge of the Company's bond in 1854? I cannot say positively; Mr. Anderson had charge of Campbell's when I came into the department, and I think he had been there for the previous two years.

21. Who was there before him? Mr. Turner, I have heard mentioned—

22. Do you know who had charge there from 1852 to 1854? Most probably Mr. Turner.

23. By Mr. Ross: Are you not aware that it has frequently happened that the Company has passed an entry for bond for a whole cargo of raw sugar, and yet have paid duty on certain portions before landing, and that that sugar has been sent from the ship's side to the sugar works? Yes, there have been such cases.

24. In such a case your returns would shew the whole cargo as bonded, and the quantity taken from the ship's side as having been delivered from bond? They would.

25. So that the quantity you shew as delivered from bond would be increased by that which never was in bond, but which went from the ship's side? Yes.

26. What is the quality of the sugars that the Company ordinarily take from the ship's side—are they wet or dry sugars? Latterly it has been the wet sugar they have taken.

27. Have you noticed the qualities of sugar lately imported by the Company? I have.

28. Do you think that if they were bonded the loss on them by waste would be no more than one-fourth per cent? Some of it is very bad, and of course the loss would be greater.

29. More than a quarter per cent.? That I cannot say. We have had good and bad sugars in the list I take my average from.

30. I believe you have not had any large quantity of low sugars in Knox's bond? On the whole I should not call them of the lowest class. We have had good and bad.

31. By Captain Ward: Will not the dry nature of a store make some difference in the waste of sugar in bond? It will depend more on the sugar than the store.

- Mr. W. O. Skill. 32. But, practically, would not the loss of sugar be greater in a dry bond than in a wet one? Certainly. Some sugars might imbibe moisture in a damp store, whilst they would lose weight by evaporation in a dry one.
- 2 Feb., 1860. 33. Have you in practice found any difference in the amount of waste in different stores? I have found the deficiency very small all round the stores; in some we have even had a small overplus of weight in several cargoes.
34. By Mr. Ross: In the other stores did you find any qualities of sugar so low as ours? No. The sugars in the other bonds are much better in quality.
35. And being fine and dry sugars that might account for the gain in weight? In some instances that might be the case; certainly they are better qualities of sugars than the Company's.
36. By Mr. Duncan: Do you think that any sugar of the Company's was ever weighed out of bond before you took charge? I could never gather that it had been so. At all events it was never weighed out in the presence of an officer of Customs in the same way that has been done under my supervision.
37. Referring to the system of drawbacks, you are aware that considerable changes have taken place in the system of allowing drawbacks since I have taken charge, and that numerous obstacles have been thrown in our way by the agents and others to impede us in reviewing their weights? Yes; we have had considerable difficulty placed in our way in shipping goods for drawback, more particularly the sugars, owing to the want of proper arrangements on the part of the Company and other merchants.
38. On some occasions it has been impossible to ascertain the weights of sugars? Yes; they have been shipped without the presence of a Customs officer, and on many occasions in evident neglect of a compliance with the Customs regulations.
39. On some occasions, I believe, goods have been sent down on board the ship, before entry for them has been passed? They have.
40. And on other occasions they have been sent down after the officer has left his station? That has been the case I am informed.
41. By Mr. Ross: On more than one occasion? I cannot speak positively of its having been the case more than once from my own personal knowledge.
42. By Mr. Duncan: But there have been obstacles put in our way by the Company? Yes; we have had difficulties to contend with that might have been obviated had the Company made better arrangements for shipping their goods.
43. You remember the case of the "Moa," and the dispute that arose in July last, in reference to the allowance of drawback on sugar shipped by that vessel? I merely know the case from having read the papers connected with it. I have no personal knowledge of the facts.
44. You remember Mr. Chapman being appointed drawback officer? I do.
45. And some obstacles that arose in reference to some shipments made by him? Yes; he reported to me some difficulties he had in relation to two or three shipments of drawback goods.
46. Were you not under the impression that the drawback officer, Russell, weighed all sugars that were entered for drawback? I was; and more than once I warned him to be careful in carrying out his duty. He always told me that he was careful in weighing.
47. And I believe on one occasion when he said this, you told him that you would come down some time and see his process of weighing? I did. When he said he was so very careful, I told him that I should come down some day, when he did not expect me, and check his weights.
48. Was this before the 16th July? Yes, it was whilst Russell was drawback officer; and of course, before Mr. Chapman's appointment to that office.
49. By Mr. Ross: The order given by you to Russell would refer, I presume, solely to the general performance of his duty by that officer? To his general duty.
50. And had no specific reference to the Sugar Company? It included the Sugar Company as well.
51. Do you not happen to know that it was the custom not to weigh Company's sugar, but to take the weights from the Company's cart notes? I never heard of the custom, but I have not been long in this branch; it was only in May last that I took charge of the landing department.
52. You say that the arrangements of the Company were defective, and that the Customs officers were thereby caused much annoyance; in what way were they so? I think it is the duty of every shipper or his agent to make himself acquainted with the Customs regulations or arrangements; and that, consequently, the Company ought to have made better arrangements for us to take the weights of their sugars.
53. But the weighing is the business of the Customs, and has nothing to do with the Company? I think differently. It is the business of the shippers to provide us with assistance, and the means of weighing the sugar if we require them.
54. If the goods are sent down to the wharf at a proper hour, and the Customs officer is not at his post, surely you would not have them wait his arrival? It seems to me that the Company trust solely to their carters to get the goods on board the vessel without any reference whatever to the Customs officer being in attendance or not.
55. It is the custom for an exporter to give notice of shipment for drawback? It is.
56. The object of this notice is to give the Customs officer warning of the shipment? It is.
57. And then it is the officer's duty to be on the spot and look out for the goods? Yes.
58. How do you think it probable that the Company, after sending down to the wharf, would order their drays back from the wharf to some private store in order that the load should be weighed? They should do so if required, and I think should be glad of thus being

- being able to get their drawback. It is the duty of the exporter to give an opportunity of Mr. W. C. Still.
the sugar being weighed in the presence of a Customs officer, otherwise the drawback will be lost from want of the officer's indorsement. 2 Feb., 1860.
59. But the Customs have latterly furnished the means of weighing? Yes, but the Customs were not bound to do this.
60. Have any private merchants been compelled to provide scales and weights for themselves? In many cases the merchants have sent down to the wharf scales and weights for themselves, sooner than risk the loss of drawback.
61. Has any application ever been made to the Sugar Company to furnish the means of weighing their shipments? Not that I am aware of. We had to do with the wharfingers only, and we called upon them to furnish the necessary scales and weights, but they have not taken notice of our demand in all instances.
62. Then you thought the wharfinger the proper person to supply the means of weighing? He is the proper person to have them on the wharf, but when the exporter knows that they are not supplied, he ought himself to provide us with those means.
63. That is a mere matter of opinion? Not at all; it is a matter of law and custom. The law declares that the weighing of goods shall be at the expense of the merchant.
64. Is there any law or custom here that the exporter shall furnish weights? There is custom and law, I consider, and many merchants have done so. As I have said, they have sent scales and weights down to the wharf when the wharfingers have not supplied them.
65. Have you ever requested the Sugar Company to furnish scales and weights? I have not.
66. Do you remember an order having been given in July last, by Mr. Duncan, that all refined sugars were to be weighed at the sugar-house? I do not.
67. Would it be part of an officer's duty to do this? I consider it would be the duty of the officer to ascertain the weight by some means.
68. By Mr. Browne: Do you think that the obstacles thrown in the way of the Customs were intended to defraud the revenue, by enabling the Company to obtain drawback upon what they did not ship? I do not believe that they intended any fraud; but as a matter of business I think they were bound to make better arrangements, in order to enable us to carry out the regulations respecting drawbacks.
69. You do not then attribute any fraud to the Company? I could not for an instant believe that they would be guilty of such a thing.

Mr. John Entwistle Turner called in and examined:—

1. By Captain Ward: Were you a locker in 1854? I was. Mr. J. E. Turner.
2. Have you been many years in the Customs? I have, many years. 2 Feb., 1860.
3. How many? About thirty.
4. At what place were you stationed from 1852 to 1854? At Campbell's bond, I think.
5. Were you stationed at Knox's bond? Yes, that is the sugar bond.
6. Is Campbell's a sugar bond? Knox's bond was. It was part of Campbell's stores, and rented from Mr. Campbell by Mr. Knox.
7. Was it the practice in those days to weigh the sugar out of bond? Yes; when it was for duty we always weighed it.
8. Always? Yes, always.
9. Then all the sugar in your time was weighed into bond and weighed out again? It was.
10. Will you tell us how you used to manage? I did not weigh it all myself, but I used to go down and check Mr. Martin's weights now and then. I had charge of the spirit bond as well as the sugar bond,—so that, when I got an order for 50 or 100 tons of sugar, I used to go down and see to its delivery, as well as my time would admit.
11. By Mr. Duncan: Were you present during the whole weighing? No, not at every draft, because, as I said, I had charge of the spirit bond as well; but I used to come down every opportunity I had and check the weights of the storekeeper.
12. Is that the way you do now? No, not now, because there are two of us now, whilst then I had to look after both bonds. There is one locker now specially for the Sugar Company's bond.
13. By Mr. Ross: You used to send back the weighing orders with an indorsement of the weight upon them? No; I got no weighing orders.
14. You indorsed the weights on the warrants? No. I posted them up in the stock-book, and then compared them with the Customs books.
15. You say you did not see all the drafts weighed? No, I could not do so. Campbell's spirit bond is a very large one, and orders are constantly coming down to it; and, under Mr. Donaldson's Ministry, a second locker was appointed.
16. Was it possible, then, for you to see every draft weighed? No, it was not.
17. How did you ascertain the weights if you did not see it all weighed? In this way. Suppose that 10 or 15 tons of sugar were going out of bond, I went down and opened the store, and stood at the steelyards whilst one or two tons were delivered. Then, perhaps, an order would come down to me from the spirit store, which I had to go and see delivered. When I had delivered that order I came back again to look after the weighing, perhaps in about ten minutes time.
18. By Captain Ward: You are quite sure that you never allowed sugar to be taken out of bond, on the understanding that some day you would balance the books for the Company; that is, that you sent it out on trust as it were? No. The orders generally came in for regular amounts, 50 or 100 tons, and immediately I received them I commenced weighing for duty.

- Mr. J. E. Turner.
2 Feb., 1860.
19. But how could you indorse for it if you never saw it weighed—how could you say that there was so much delivered? I can only say, that with all the duty I had to do, it was impossible that I could see it all weighed, as I was fetched away to deliver from the spirit store every five minutes.
  20. By Mr. Ross: Who was at the head of your particular department at that time? Mr. Garling.
  21. And was he aware that you could not do it? I cannot say. Any man who knows what the duty is must have known that it was impossible.
  22. By Mr. Duncan: As you were not present during the whole weighing, how did you get your weights? From Mr. Martin, but I used to look after him very closely, and he was never certain at any moment that I might not come down to the steelyards. On one occasion when I came down I saw half a ton of sugar that had just been weighed, and which I thought had been weighed too close; so I made them take it off the drays and had it re-weighed.
  23. Then, as you did not see the sugar weighed, the weights you certified to have delivered you had to get from some one else? Yes, I had to depend in a great measure upon Mr. Martin, but I was never long absent from the weighing, and he never knew at what moment to expect me.
  24. Who is this Mr. Martin? He was storekeeper at Campbell's bond, and used to weigh all the goods received and delivered from the store.
  25. And you had to trust to him for the weights? Yes; but I used to check him. It was utterly impossible for any one officer to do the duty in a proper way.

Mr. James M. Chapman called in and examined:—

- Mr. J. M. Chapman.
2 Feb., 1860.
1. By Mr. Duncan: You are a landing-waiter and searcher? I am.
  2. You have had occasion to weigh sugars shipped for drawback by the Sugar Company? I have.
  3. Have you had obstacles thrown in the way of your properly obtaining the weights of the sugar shipped? Yes. Upon one or two occasions I have had a difficulty in getting the goods weighed.
  4. When the new system of drawbacks was instituted you found difficulties thrown in the way of your weighing the goods? Yes; on account of their being no scales on the wharf, on the station I have been at.
  5. Do you remember in the beginning of July last going to the Company's place with a warrant for the shipment of sugar for drawback? I do, perfectly.
  6. Whom did you see on that occasion? One of the Company's clerks. His name, I think, is Stokes.
  7. You went there in relation to a shipment that was to be made by the "Spray"? Yes.
  8. To ascertain, I believe, when you could have an opportunity to weigh the sugar? Yes.
  9. You told me that you had no means of weighing on the wharf; and I said that if you could not weigh it on the wharf you might weigh it if you liked at the sugar-house? Yes, you did.
  10. And you asked the clerk when they would be ready to have the sugar examined? I did. I went there two or three times, and I asked him the same question upon each occasion; but I could get no information from him. He told me that he did not know even if the sugar was made yet.
  11. Have you ever had sugar sent to you to ship in packages that you could not weigh? No.
  12. None of the Company's large packages have come to you? No.
  13. By Mr. Ross: On the 6th July, when you first came to our office, you told Mr. Stokes, the clerk, that the Collector had sent you down to see certain sugars weighed? I told him that I had come down to see the sugars weighed that were about to be shipped for drawback by the "Spray."
  14. Did you not say that you had to go to the sugar-house to see it weighed? Yes, I think I did.
  15. You called twice, I think? Yes, twice or three times.
  16. When you called in the morning, the clerk said that I was not in, and that before you could go to the sugar-house, the matter must be referred to me? He said something of that sort.
  17. And when you called in the afternoon, was not his answer to you that he could not tell when the sugar would be ready; that perhaps it was on its way then, and perhaps it would not be made till the end of the week? Yes, something to that effect. He said he did not know if it was even made yet.
  18. Did they laugh at you, or treat you in any way improperly? They seemed not to care whether I weighed the sugar or not.
  19. Did he not say that it was utterly impossible for you to weigh it at the sugar-house? Yes. I found it so, for the sugar was on its way to the wharf whilst I was at your office.
  20. By Mr. Duncan: About that weighing at the sugar-house; did ever I say to you that it was necessary that the sugar should be weighed at the sugar-house? No; your orders to me were, "If you can satisfy yourself that the sugar is right in regard to weight, then sign the drawback." We had no facilities on the wharf for weighing; and it was impossible to weigh that sugar without them.

---

Mr.

Mr. Donald Macpherson called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Duncan : You are a landing-waiter and searcher ? I am.
2. You have had occasion to ship sugars for drawback in large quantities for the Sugar Company ? I have.
3. Have you not had occasion to complain to your superiors of obstacles having been thrown in your way in shipping these sugars ? I have. I have experienced very great difficulty in weighing from there being no weights nor beams.
4. Do you remember a shipment of sugar by the "Lord Worsley," about which there was some difficulty ? Yes ; I got the warrants for the shipment of three tons of sugar.
5. And did you proceed to execute them ? Yes ; but when I went to the wharf I found that the sugar was already on board.
6. Do you remember the date of the warrants ? No, I do not ; but I think the sugars were transhipped afterwards.
7. Was it subsequent to the 7th July ? Yes, it was.
8. What did the officers of the ship say when you went down ? That the sugar was covered up in the hold, and that I could not see it because there were other goods over it.
9. Did he say when the sugar was shipped ? Yes ; he said it had been on board some days.
10. By Mr. Browne : You say you proceeded to the vessel with the warrant when you got it ? I did.
11. Was she then lying at a sufferance wharf ? Yes, she was lying at the Grafton Wharf.
12. Is there a landing-waiter stationed there ? Yes, there is one between that and the adjoining wharf.
13. And the sugar went on board without his knowledge ? Yes. I got the warrants, but not having either seen or weighed the sugar, I could not certify to the shipment.
14. By Mr. Duncan : Do you remember some goods being shipped on a Saturday, on the 26th August last ? I do. I received the drawback warrants for a shipment on the "Louis and Miriam." I was at the wharf, and the drays came down with the first lot about 10 o'clock. Three or four other lots came down before one o'clock, and I then told the drayman not to bring any more, as I was going away, and if they were put on board without my seeing them the merchant would not get his drawback. On the Monday morning following I found that the remaining quantity had been sent on board after I had left on Saturday.*
15. By Mr. Ross : How much remained to be sent on board after you left on the Saturday ? Two or three tons.
16. By Mr. Browne : And you left your station, although you knew that a shipment of sugar was going on ? Yes. I went away in accordance with the instructions, which permit us to leave off work at one o'clock on Saturday.†
17. Do you not conceive it to be your duty to remain on the wharf so long as any business remains to be done ? No ; not unless I receive notice that my attendance is required, sanctioned by the Collector or landing-surveyor.
18. By Mr. Duncan : I think you reported that 5 tons, out of the 6 tons entered, had been shipped before you had been there at all ? The quantity shipped is marked on the warrant.
19. Did you not report that you never saw the goods at all, and that when you went on board the vessel, the mate handed you the papers that had been sent down from the Sugar Company to you, and which had been left with him in your absence ? Yes, that was the case, as I now recollect the circumstances.
20. Did you not make at the time the memorandum I now produce ? I did. The memorandum produced contains a statement of the facts, and was made by me upon that occasion.
21. But this memorandum contains a very different statement to that which you have just given ; which is the more correct statement of the two ? That which is contained in the memorandum ; and I may add, that the whole facts of this particular case escaped me till I examined the papers drawn up by me at the time.
22. Then in point of fact you did not see a single package of the sugar delivered ? No ; I did not.
23. By Mr. Browne : Then did you see the carter, and did what you have stated take place with him ? Yes ; I perfectly remember seeing the chief officer, but not the carter, and telling him that I was about to leave.
24. Was this on the wharf ? Yes, I saw him on the wharf, and told him to take no more on board, as if he did so, I could not certify to the shipment of the drawback.
25. By Mr. Duncan : You were afterwards afforded an opportunity of seeing the sugar ? Yes, and I then indorsed a second set of warrants that were handed to me.
26. How did you ascertain their correctness ? By going down into the hold of the vessel, and

Mr. Donald Macpherson.
2 Feb., 1860.

* In answer to this question, I beg to state as follows, as I have since my examination examined the notes taken by me on the occasion :—About half-past 12 p.m. on Saturday, the 26th August, I received drawback warrants for the shipment of several tons of sugar, on board the "Louis and Miriam." On their receipt I went to the ship and told the chief officer to take no part of the sugar on board without giving me notice, as if he did so the merchant would lose his drawback ; he then informed me that a large portion of the sugar had been already on board, and that he acted as he always before had done to take the sugar on board when brought to the wharf, and to hand the shipping-notes to the officer when he called. A full report of the case was made by me at the time, to which I make particular reference.

† I knew, from the papers in my possession, that the shipment was not completed ; but, having no order from the Collector to remain on the wharf, I considered I was justified in leaving.

Mr. Donald Macpherson. and counting the bags, and weighing some of them. The Company sent me down a man to help me. This duty I performed by instructions received from the landing-surveyor.

27. By Captain Ward: What are the dates on which the the three vessels, the "Lord Worsley," the "Kate Kearney," and the "Spray," cleared at the Customs? The "Lord Worsley" cleared on the 9th July, 1859; the "Kate Kearney" on the 8th July, 1859, and the "Spray" on the 8th July, 1859. These dates I have learned from the ship papers at the Custom House now in the hands of the Board.

TUESDAY, 7 FEBRUARY, 1860.

Present:—

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.,

CAPTAIN M'LERIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs, and Mr. Ross, Manager of the Sugar Company, were present during the proceedings.

Mr. Duncan said: At the last meeting the Board requested me to state the percentage that the deficiency mentioned on the last day of meeting formed of the whole amount of sugar in bond. I have since made the calculation; I find that it amounts to something over two per cent.

Mr. J. Grafton Ross called in and examined:—

Mr. J. G. Ross. 1. By Captain Ward: You have heard the evidence that has been given, and have seen the correspondence that has been submitted to the Board—have you any remarks in explanation that you would wish to offer? When I applied to the Government, on the 5th December last, for my dispute with the Collector of Customs to be referred to the decision of a Board, I contemplated only having to make good my claim for certain drawbacks to be allowed to the Company which I believed had been improperly refused by the Collector. Now, however, after having been placed in possession of the printed correspondence between the Collector of Customs and the Colonial Treasurer, I find it becomes incumbent upon me to defend myself, and the Company I represent, from certain charges and insinuations which Mr. Duncan has seen fit to make;—the most important of which is, that the Company have (through their agents), by means of false representations, fraudulently abstracted from their bonded stores, without payment of duty, a very considerable quantity of sugar. I shall be as brief as I possibly can, and call only such evidence as will bear upon the main points of the case. For convenience I shall divide my remarks into three heads:—First, with reference to my claim for the drawbacks on refined sugar exported per "Lord Worsley," "Kate Kearney," and "Spray;" second,—as to the charges made by Mr. Duncan of obstructiveness and insinuations of fraud (especially in reference to the drawback system); and third,—as to the present deficiency in the bonded stocks of sugar, and the allowances for drainage and waste, which Mr. Duncan asserts to be the results of fraud and false representation. First,—as to the disputed drawbacks. I shall call evidence to prove that not until the morning of the 6th July had I, or any officer of the Company, any intimation of the intention of the Collector to alter the drawback system for sugars exported from the Colony previously in use, and which had been expressly framed for the guidance of this Company, no other persons or companies at that time existing who were engaged in the business of sugar refining. I shall shew that the officer who brought the verbal message of the Collector was not treated with discourtesy, or "laughed at," as Mr. Duncan asserts; that, on the contrary, he was made aware of the impossibility of his ever doing the duties the Collector had appointed him to; that he was told that shipments, notices of which he had received, might at that moment be going forward (as they actually were), or that they might not be made for a few days, and that it was almost always impossible to know the exact time the sugar would leave the refinery; not only was he told this plainly and distinctly, but the reasons why it was impossible were explained to him. Mr. Chapman has been called as a witness, and has confirmed all the foregoing. I shall prove further, that the notices of shipment were all given in the usual way, as well as shew the time and manner of shipment; but on these particulars I need not enlarge, for Mr. Duncan does not complain of any irregularity in this respect. The Board will, I imagine, have little or no difficulty in deciding whether or no the evidence adduced has borne out the statements made by Mr. Powell in his letter to me, dated 9th August; statements which Mr. Duncan admits (letter 18th August) would, if true, more than justify the complaints I made, and the strong language in which they are couched. Many of the assertions contained in my letter to the Treasurer were founded upon these statements, made to me by Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Powell; for, having the fullest belief in the veracity of these gentlemen, I did not hesitate to make the use I did of the facts and opinions they brought under my notice, and which were repeated in the letter from Mr. Powell above referred to. I can hardly believe it possible that the decision of the Board should be adverse to the veracity of Mr. Powell; but whether it be so or on the contrary, the Board believe all Mr. Powell's assertions, it will equally be unnecessary for me to waste the time of the Board in attempting to prove over again that upon which all possible evidence has already been taken. I shall not, not, therefore, try to prove that Mr. Powell had not received from the Collector notice of any alterations in the system of drawbacks for refined sugars, but leave this important point to the decision of the Board, merely remarking that, to my mind, it seems highly probable that—fresh from a port where no refined sugar is made or exported for drawback—Mr. Duncan may have fancied, at the time of the alleged conversations, that the system for drawbacks for refined sugars was exactly the same as that in force for other goods; whilst Mr. Powell, from long habit of viewing the two systems as distinct, never regarded these conversations as applying to refined sugars, for which a special system had long existed. Certain it is that neither myself nor any of the shipping clerks in my office ever heard of the proposed alterations until the morning of the 6th July, and I am quite at a loss to discover who was the managing clerk to whom Mr. Duncan, “long before the case of the ‘Moa’” (as he asserts in his letter of 4th August, page 9) “had made known his intention of having all sugar “for drawback weighed in the presence of an officer.” When the case of the “Moa” first came under notice of the Collector, I was not in the Colony, and the clerk who has for years past managed the shipping department of our office will presently be called to say whether or no he ever had received such a communication as the one represented. But, without doubt, had this notice simply been given, it would never have been objected to by myself or any member of the Company. We never wished to ship refined sugar for drawback without its being duly inspected by the proper officer, or even without means being taken to ascertain that the weight represented was the correct one. What I did object to was, that the Collector should take upon himself to order that this sugar should be weighed by his officer out at our sugar-house. He had no right ever to give such an order, or to expect compliance with it. He had no power to send his subordinates for such a purpose into the house, store, or manufactory of any one, much less had he the power to refuse drawback because his illegal orders were not complied with. The Board will please observe that, in my first letter to the Colonial Treasurer, I gave my opinion that the wharf is the proper place to weigh sugars before shipment. Indeed, custom everywhere points to the waterside as the only proper place where to inspect and weigh goods exported for drawback. I do not know of a single exception to this rule. I am quite aware that much of the refined sugar exported from Great Britain is weighed by excise authorities in the refinery, but in such cases the sugar house itself is a bond, and officers are constantly on the premises, superintending the receipt of every pound of raw material, and held answerable for a certain product or out-turn. No duty is paid upon the raw material, and the out-turn is always exported. So it is clear that no analogy can exist between the practice of shipping from such a refinery, and that which should obtain here, where all the raw material is duty-paid, and all work conducted without any government surveillance. That Mr. Duncan should propose such a course as he did is the best proof that at that time he was somewhat unfit to have the charge of the safety of the revenue. If this Company or I as its manager (for Mr. Duncan evidently wishes to draw some distinction between us) were the dishonest persons he at one time endeavored to prove us to be—for he now declines to press the charges he felt himself safe in making under cover of a partially privileged communication to the head of his department—if such were the case, what abundant facilities would not Mr. Duncan’s plan have afforded us for defrauding the revenue, without fear or chance of detection. The Board have, from former evidence, some idea of the large extent of our shipping business; it was a common thing to export 20, 30, 50, and sometimes even 100 tons each day, not to one vessel only, but to half-a-dozen; of course it would be easy for Mr. Duncan’s officer to weigh these sugars at the sugar-house—provided he staid there all day—but could he be ubiquitous enough to see that all of them safely reached their several destinations? What easier than for the packages to be changed, or the contents partially abstracted, during the transit from our sugar-house to the wharfs, a distance, as the Board may be aware, of between one and two miles. That a single officer, however zealous, could go backwards and forwards with each dray load, and yet see all shipped, is perfectly impossible; as indeed Mr. Chapman confessed to the Collector two days after his appointment. Mr. Duncan seems to have become ashamed of his plan of protecting the revenue, and wishes to father it upon some one else, but he does not say who; he says, however, through Mr. Still, that this arrangement was never intended to be permanent, a repetition of what he wrote on the 18th August, where he says that he consented to the arrangement merely with the view of meeting the convenience of the Company; a statement as devoid of probability as of truth. If it was consented to expressly to meet our views, the proposition would surely have emanated from an officer of the Company, and is it likely—is it possible—that we would, immediately it was put into force, oppose an arrangement to which we had taken the trouble to obtain the Collector’s assent? The idea is absurd; this plan must have emanated from either Mr. Duncan or one of his officers. Certainly it never originated with any member of the Company, or with Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell. It is a pity too, that Mr. Duncan did not think it necessary to inform those who were almost exclusively interested that this improper and oppressive regulation was only intended to last a few days, until some other arrangement had been made. Had he done this, I am sure that to have obliged the Collector of Customs we would willingly have submitted to any temporary inconveniences such an arrangement would cause; but, until I saw Mr. Duncan’s letter of 18th August, nothing ever transpired to lead me to any other belief than that Mr. Duncan devised this plan for protecting the revenue; a plan, however, that I have shewn is so defective, that, to use Mr. Duncan’s own forcible language,—“The imagination can place no limit to the extent of fraud that “might or rather must follow such a drawback system as this.” Since the above was written, I have heard Mr. Chapman’s evidence, and it appears from his own confession that in delivering the message that he must see all sugars weighed at the sugar-house he rather exceeded the instruction he received from the Collector, but the Board will remember that the message actually delivered to us by Mr. Chapman was that he must see the sugar weighed at the sugar-

Mr. J. G. Ross.
7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. J. G. Ross. sugar-house and not a word about the wharfs; it was then, as far as we were concerned, a direct order from the Collector. Holding these opinions, I believe I should have been justified under the circumstances in openly resisting Mr. Duncan's order that all refined sugars for export should be weighed at the refinery; but it never was my wish or intention to come into collision with the Collector, or to endeavor to thwart his rightful authority, and the course I pursued will, I think, prove this. On the morning of the 7th July, I explained my views to Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, & Co., and asked them to see the Collector on the subject. On the 8th July, those gentlemen addressed an application to the Collector, (the original of which has been put in evidence by Messrs. M., P., & Co.) On the same day, I instructed Mr. Stokes, the shipping clerk, to wait upon the Collector, and endeavor to get the matter settled, to offer a full and exact explanation of all the circumstances of the case as far as we were concerned, and to shew the impossibility of the drawback officer who had been appointed doing the work at all, much less satisfactorily. Mr. Stokes had the interview with Mr. Duncan; he will shortly relate to the Board what happened at that interview; he, of course, reported the conversation to me, and I hoped that the matter was amicably settled. Mr. Duncan seemed to acquiesce in my proposed mode of ascertaining the weight of refined sugars exported, and seemed also to comprehend that the plan he proposed was impracticable; this last supposition being the more probable as Mr. Chapman, upon representing to the Collector the impossibility of carrying out his instructions, was removed to another department and fresh arrangements made. But I was mistaken in my surmise, for, on the 10th or 11th July (I forget which) I was informed, by Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, and Co., that the Collector positively refused to allow the drawbacks in question, even if certificates were produced of the due landing at port of destination. On receipt of this intelligence (and no answer having been received to our agent's application, dated 8th July) I addressed the letter to the Colonial Treasurer (dated 11th July, and printed in page 3 of the correspondence), in which I stated that "the new verbal orders" from the Collector were of such a nature that we could not immediately comply with "them"; and, also, recorded my opinion that the export wharf was the proper place where to weigh the goods. Whether the "new verbal orders" thus referred to had been previously communicated to Mr. Powell, I leave the Board to determine from the previous part of this investigation; but I hope to shew that they were "new" as far as any officer of the Company was concerned; and I shall do this with the sole view of removing any suspicion of want of veracity, or of courtesy, on our part, for I am of course well aware that the Company is responsible for the deeds of its recognized agents. Whatever decision, however, may be arrived at as to the notice given, there can, I think, be no doubt that the Board will determine that the orders themselves were highly injudicious, if not clearly illegal, and will have no difficulty in seeing that their nature was such that they could not possibly be immediately complied with, if at all. Mixed with a great many complaints of the obstructions I am said to have thrown in the way of the Customs authorities, and which I shall deal with presently, Mr. Duncan is fond of sneering at the system of shipping refined sugar for drawback, as arranged by the former Collector, and is pleased to think that the plan of which Mr. Ross so highly approves is most admirably adapted to facilitate extensive frauds, which, he has the temerity to add, "must have occurred." I feel that it is altogether unnecessary for me to defend, from a charge so vaguely put, a Company, the reputation of whose directors is fortunately beyond the reach of the malicious attacks of any person, even though he occupy a position such as Mr. Duncan now holds. The animus that actuated Mr. Duncan is so apparent, that I feel I can safely leave unsaid much that a just indignation would prompt. Bad as the old arrangement is represented to be, it is strange that Mr. Duncan still allows it to exist. I know he denies this, but the so-called new system, as far as the Company is concerned, is, I assert, exactly the same—not a single alteration having taken place in our mode of making shipments, giving notice, and passing entries. The object of the old arrangement was to avoid the heavy expense of weighing every bag of sugar upon the wharf; and one of the terms was, that as the Company had a uniform size for their refined sugar package, with the net weight stamped thereon, the sugar should not be re-weighed before shipment. The plain meaning of this being that the whole quantity should not be weighed; but it implies, almost of necessity, that the correctness of the weight marked on the single package, and its correspondence with the Custom House tickets, was to be ascertained. If the Customs authorities failed to provide an adequate number of officers to do the necessary work, and sufficiently to guard the revenue; or if, as is admitted to be the case, a general laxity prevailed throughout the department—but for which we certainly are not to blame—is that a sufficient reason why the Company and its manager should be so directly charged with fraud, and taunted for adherence to a system which, if properly carried out by the Customs authorities, allowed us no opportunity of defrauding the Government—a system which, as far as any acts to be performed by the Company are concerned, is still permitted, and applauded even by Mr. Duncan himself. Having endeavored to prove that no valid reason exists why we should not receive the drawback on sugars exported per "Lord Worsley," "Kate Kearney," and "Spray." I shall now, as the second part of my case, attempt to shew that all the charges of fraud, obstructiveness, opposition to all reforms, discourtesy, and want of honor, on the part of the Manager of the Company are false—without any foundation whatever. I would have been glad to have passed over all these charges; for I cannot but think that they are, in the eyes of the Board, more prejudicial to the accuser than to the accused. It may be, however, that this inquiry will be hereafter brought prominently before the public; and with such a probability I think it my duty—unless the Board express a wish to escape the infliction—to defend myself against such of those charges as are tangible. To the multitude of insinuations I can do no more than give the most emphatic denial. First, as to the case of of the "Moa".—I shall prove that the whole circumstances of this shipment are exactly as detailed in my letter of 20th July; that the captain's receipt was actually obtained for the full quantity upon which we claimed drawback; that the owners of the sugar—who were also owners of the ship, and resident in Sydney—actually paid for such quantity; and I shall also bring a witness who will state that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, he himself despatched the whole quantity from the sugar store. I will bring forward another witness, who will relate what took place at an interview between himself and the Collector, when the whole circumstances were explained to him, and he expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the Company in the matter; and, were it competent for me, I could repeat words to the same effect addressed by Mr. Duncan to myself personally. If any of this evidence be worthy of belief, then it will be proved that there was not an officer of the Company who, until after the return of the "Moa," knew that the short-shipment took place. Mr. Duncan, on the 27th June, was of this opinion, and acquitted the Company from all blame; but on the 4th August, after an amicable intercourse had been somewhat disturbed, he has the audacity to write this statement:—"I had also good reason to use these words,—If not from the first the Company were aware of the short-shipment." He did not say upon what this good reason was founded; but he goes on to indulge in rather a clever sneer, which I presume he directed at myself personally; "for," says he, "the foregoing remarks, as to the conduct of honorable men, do not apply to gentlemen of known integrity who may happen to be shareholders of the Company." The sarcasm is, I suppose, intended to be severe, but fortunately the blow happens to fall harmless. At the date of the "Moa's" shipment I was absent from the Colony, on board a P. & O. steamer in the Indian Ocean. I did not return to Sydney until the 19th June. Domestic matters kept me away from the office for several days, and when there I had, after eight months' absence, many more important matters to attend to than to ascertain whether the duty on a single ton of sugar ought to be refunded or no. During my absence Mr. Knox managed the business of the Company—perhaps Mr. Duncan intended his observation to apply to him, but by a clerical error wrote my name instead! In his letter of 18th August, Mr. Duncan says,—“How is it that the manager and agents of the Company strove hard to have this most careless officer (Russell) retained at his post, and when that could not be, to prevent his dismissal from the service.” The agents of the Company have, I presume, answered this charge for themselves; I answer it by denying the accuracy of the statement. It is true that I did call upon Mr. Duncan for the purpose of interceding for the searcher, Russell, and the following is a truthful account of what passed between us. Old Russell came to me about 28th June, and in a great state of excitement told me he was about being dismissed the service, and would lose, with his salary and pension, all means of livelihood, and with tears entreated me to intercede for him with the Collector. I called upon the Collector and told him what Russell had said to me—explained fully, as far as I knew them, the particulars of the short-shipment per "Moa." I then said that had I not only a week or so before returned to the Colony, after many months' absence, I would have hesitated to interfere in the matter, but that as the error had occurred at a time that I was many thousands of miles away, I thought it right of me to represent the matter fairly, especially as I considered it hard that so old a servant of the Government should suffer severely for an error which had escaped the attention of many far abler men. Mr. Duncan, so far from imputing any sinister motives to me in making the visit, told me that of course he was satisfied with the conduct of the Company in the matter—he never, for a moment doubted our integrity; also, that Mr. Russell would not, he thought, be dismissed, but only removed to another department; he further informed me that the case had been referred to Mr. Weckes. I do not believe that the Board will be able to discover, in this interview, any grounds for supposing that I was actuated by improper motives in plainly stating the case to the Collector, although my doing so may have been in the hope of saving old Russell from poverty and want. I fear it has never entered Mr. Duncan's head that, in seeking this interview, I may have been influenced solely by charitable motives. To revert to the case of the "Moa." I just now expressed my surprise at the audacity of Mr. Duncan, in deliberately stating that he believed that we were aware of the short-shipment, at the very time we claimed the drawback. I use this strong language advisedly, for when Mr. Duncan wrote his letter of the 4th August, he was fully aware of the facts of the case, and must have known that in making this charge against the Company, he not only accused us of a wilful attempt to defraud the revenue, but also of the crime of swindling the purchasers of the sugar. The only supposition that Mr. Duncan could arrive at to maintain his statement would be, that, for the sake of £5 or less, a Company, such as I had the honor to represent, had actually conspired with the captain of a small coaster, to rob his masters, also the owners of the sugar, of a single ton of that commodity. If such is the opinion of Mr. Duncan, how is it, after stating to a Minister of the Crown that he had "good reasons" for forming these opinions, how is it he does not drag at once before a criminal tribunal those whom he believes to be guilty of a double felony, against a private individual and against the Government of the country. Mr. Duncan has repeatedly stated in the course of this inquiry, that he will bring no charge against myself, or against the Sugar Company; and I am willing to believe, that were he now able he would be glad to remove from his correspondence all such charges and insinuations as the foregoing, which are unfounded upon any reliable evidence, or rather are without any foundation at all. Mr. Duncan again, in his letter of 18th August, says he "he can never exonerate the manager of the Company from blame in opposing all his reforms." And again a little further on he adds, "If I have been firm with the Sugar Company, it is because their clerks and agents have set all my orders at utter defiance." But Mr. Duncan specifies no case, gives no instances,

Mr. J. G. Ross.

7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. J. G. Ross. instances, and thus leaves me to fight the air. Of course no notice can be taken of such charges, which I can only answer by stating that they are false. I have never opposed the Collector, except in his attempt to force the improper system of weighing at the refinery. On the 20th August, Mr. Duncan is so fortunate as to find two cases, which he thinks are formidable enough to require the interference of the Government. I think I can produce evidence that will easily explain away what Mr. Duncan calls "this most harassing and persevering resistance." The first charge is that we—for the express purpose of annoying him—packed a small quantity of sugar in a very large cask, so large that it could not be weighed. Had there ever been any formal communication from the Collector, objecting to the size of such packages, I do not think he would have had a second time to complain. It appears, however, from Mr. Still's evidence, that at that time the Customs were not properly furnished with scales, weights, &c., but that now that deficiency having been supplied they are able to ascertain the weight of even the largest casks. To prove that these large casks were not specially picked out for the annoyance of the Collector or his subordinates, I will produce a book in which the size of the casks for some years past has been carefully registered, and which will shew that packages of the same size as that referred to have very frequently been shipped. The casks in which refined loaf sugar is exported from England and Holland average fully, I believe, 8 to 9 cwt. The other case indicative of the "harassing opposition" Mr. Duncan says I make to all his reforms is the following. Certain sugars were to be shipped per "Louis and Miriam." Notice thereof was duly given on the afternoon of the 26th of August last; but the searchers, it is said, heard nothing of this until the sugar, or the greater portion of it, was on board. I understand the rule at the Custom House to be, that all notices of shipment must be lodged at least the day previous to the shipment, so that each morning the waterside officers may know what drawback goods will probably be exported from their wharfs during the day. This particular notice, it is admitted, was lodged on the afternoon of the 26th August; the searcher knew nothing of the shipment until after half-past 12 the following day. This surely was not our fault. Then it seems 5 tons had been shipped. Ignorant, I presume, that any more was coming, the officer did not go near the wharf again until Monday, when he was told that another ton had been shipped after he had left the station. Mr. Duncan means, I suppose, to imply that we purposely sent this one ton sugar down so late in the day that it might evade the inspection of the Custom House officer. I will call evidence to prove that the drays taking the whole six loads left our sugar house before noon that day, and must have delivered these loads by one o'clock. What criminality Mr. Duncan's fertile imagination can discover in a clerk having altered—before it left his charge—the date from the 2nd to 27th August I cannot conceive, or how the revenue could be defrauded by his having omitted to make this alteration in one instance,—but it evidently must be great, for Mr. Duncan deems it his duty to bring the circumstance prominently before a Minister of the Crown. (See his letter of 30th August). Of all facts connected with the case of the "Tasmania," mentioned in Mr. Duncan's letter of 11th October (to the Secretary of the Treasury) I believe the Board are fully aware, and I have no doubt that they will arrive at the conclusion that though the notice of shipment may have been imperfect, that is a matter of very little importance, for the tickets to the Custom House officer, the accuracy of which it was his duty to ascertain, and by which the entry is checked, plainly set forth that only five tons of the fifteen were refined sugars, and that the remainder were bastards. When we sent documents expressly to the Customs authorities, specifying the exact particulars, surely no fraud could have been contemplated, and it becomes a matter of little moment what was our reason for deviating from the terms of the original notice, which certainly I never considered as binding in any respect. I need not refer to the case of the "Zone," in February last. No doubt Mr. Sayers acted improperly in taking drawback goods out of his vessel after they had once been put on board in the presence of an officer, although the said goods belonged to himself, but I feel sure that there is no necessity for me to add further evidence to that already taken to show that no blame whatever could possibly be attached to us or to our agents. To try to prove that there really exists very special and substantial grounds for looking very closely after this Company's shipments—apart, I mean, from the ordinary care and attention that should always be paid to such matters, Mr. Duncan says that he has ascertained by means of private correspondence with the Collectors at ports in the adjacent Colonies, that the weights of refined sugar landed at those ports is frequently less than that which appears in the manifest of the vessels. Two cases are mentioned, viz., per "Moa," on the 13th August, and per "Tasmania," on the 8th September. I don't know how Mr. Duncan persuaded himself that he had any right to ask us to make good certain alleged deficiencies after his own officers had carefully (I presume) ascertained that the weights for which entries were passed were the correct ones. He makes rather light of a suggestion that these deficiencies must have occurred through allowances for tare, loss during the voyage, and a system of weighing not so precisely accurate as that we pursue. The tare of our refined sugar bags averages from six to fifteen ounces, but 2lbs. is the tare allowed by general usage for such packages. Such a difference alone would more than account for the deficiency in the case of the "Moa," and reduce very considerably that of the "Tasmania." But, perhaps, the best answer I can give to these charges is this document I now hand in (See Appendix A), which is a certificate signed by 36 of the leading merchants, storekeepers, and grocers of this city, who here testify that, during the many years most of them have purchased largely from the Company, never have they discovered any deficiency in our weights. To prevent any quibble, I shall shew that all refined sugars are taken from store indiscriminately whether for shipment or for town delivery, so that it cannot be insinuated that though we may give full weight to purchasers on the spot, yet we may have cheated those at a distance who have not been present to protect themselves. I have omitted to state, when speaking of Mr. Duncan's letter of 18th August, that he charges the clerks of the Company

Company with wilfully deceiving the drawback officer, by informing him that probably certain sugar was not then made, "they knowing at the time that it was actually shipped." The shipping clerks of the Company—who will be called as witnesses—can easily rebut this falsehood. There are many minor insinuations plentifully strewed through the printed correspondence, but I shall not waste the time of the Board by referring to them. Perhaps, however, I ought to answer the charges of my having made use of the political influence of Sir Daniel Cooper to upset the authority of the Collector. I can do this in a few words. Sir Daniel Cooper is the Chairman of the Board of Directors of this Company; I brought the vexatious conduct of the Collector before the Board, and requested Sir Daniel Cooper, as head of the Company, to bring the matter under the notice of the Government; he asked me to give him particulars on paper; I did so, and he laid them before one of the Ministers without, I understand, any comment of his own. This was all that, to my knowledge, took place. To shew how careful the Board should be in accepting the accuracy of the statements of Mr. Duncan or Mr. Llewellyn, I hand in a note received from Mr. Knox (who has been absent in Melbourne for several months), in which he tells me he has never had the pleasure of Mr. Duncan's acquaintance (See Appendix B). Now, according to Mr. Llewellyn's letter of 17th August, either Mr. Duncan did say that Mr. Knox was one of his personal friends—a statement which this note would prove to be wilfully inaccurate—or, if Mr. Duncan did not say so, then the value of Mr. Llewellyn's account of this interview is much diminished. His memory having failed him in this one particular, it is very probable it has been equally defective in others. I will conclude these remarks upon the second part of my case by drawing the attention of the Board to the letter of Mr. Duncan, dated 22 November, enclosing a document shewing the amounts paid for drawback during the years 1857, 1858, and ten months of 1859, and proving—as Mr. Duncan thinks—how great was the need of a stringent check upon such payment, and how vast the profits of certain agents (and principals too, I suppose) under the former laxity of system. There is no doubt that Mr. Duncan fancied, or wished to make the Treasurer believe that he fancied, that his clever arrangement and ever watchful attention had saved the country from £500 to £1,500 per month in drawbacks alone, and this too at a time when shipments to New Zealand (whither, he says, the bulk of the drawback goods usually go) were greatly on the increase. This statement is of a similar character to nearly all made by Mr. Duncan in this inquiry; and though sorry to disturb Mr. Duncan's self-complacency by proving that he has not benefited the revenue to the extent he wishes to imagine, I shall have no difficulty in shewing how disingenuous and inaccurate he is. No doubt it appears strange at first sight that immediately the Collector took office the shipments for drawback greatly fell off; but the reason why, in our case, they so materially declined was, that on the 16th May last year a Sugar Refinery was opened in Melbourne, which not only destroyed our market in that Colony, but also in Adelaide, and partially in Tasmania, and the southern part of New Zealand. To the two Colonies first mentioned I do not think a single shipment from this of refined sugar has taken place since May last, and very little during the previous part of 1859, for it was anticipated that the Melbourne Sugar Refining Company would commence work much earlier than it did. This is the singular coincidence that Mr. Duncan thinks impossible. A statement (See Appendix C) put in by Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, & Co. shews that out of £51,296 paid for drawback from 1st November, 1856, to November, 1859, £23,524 was paid to the Company on sugar exported to Victoria, Adelaide, and Tasmania. Add a proportionate sum to the amounts paid during 1859, and the deficiency will not be so startling as Mr. Duncan wishes to shew, but one easily accounted for by the notorious diminution of the export trade in other goods to Victoria. These figures then conclusively prove that to the cessation of shipments to Melbourne and Adelaide, consequent upon the opening of a Sugar Refinery at the former port, is attributable in our case the great falling off in drawback shipments. I now come to the deficiencies said to exist in present bonded stocks of sugar, and to certain allowances for waste and drainage stated by Mr. Duncan to be illegal. As the matter of past allowances has been, after a full investigation, settled by the Government, and as the present deficiencies have been caused by exactly similar circumstances to those which the Government considered sufficient to warrant them in allowing the former deficiencies to be written off; I do not think I shall have to do more than clearly put before the Board what those circumstances were. I think it right to add that, as Mr. Duncan has refused to bring any charge against the Sugar Company, I make this explanation merely to shew that our conduct in the matter has been strictly correct—and I do it without prejudice to the position in which we stand through the Government having already acknowledged the justice of our claim. Sometime during the year 1854, a representation was made to the late Collector of Customs to the effect that, as our refining sugars were generally of the lowest quality, a considerable deficiency was nearly always discovered between the quantity weighed into bond and that which appeared when it was again weighed out; and we suggested that, as an allowance of 3 per cent. for the first three months and 1 per cent. per month afterwards was permissible under the English Customs laws, 3 per cent. should be allowed us on sugars so bonded—3 per cent. only, whether they remained in bond for two months or two years. We applied for this allowance in order to save the expense of re-weighing, and the Collector granted it to ourselves and others, because he not only considered that such low quality sugars as we nearly always imported would lose fully this per centage in a very short time; but also, because, with such an arrangement one locker would be able to do all the work at Campbell's wharf where our sugars were stored. No minute supervision being required, as the Company would pay duty in every case to within exactly 3 per cent. of landed weight. To prove that I am correct in stating that such an arrangement did exist—besides calling a merchant to whom similar allowances have been made—I would direct the attention of the Board to the fact that Colonel Gibbes does not dispute the existence of the agreement as detailed in Messrs.

Mr. J. G. Ross.
7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. J. G. Ross. Messrs. Metcalfe & Co.'s letter of 31 March, 1859, which he certainly would have done had any of our representations been incorrect. Some time previously Colonel Gibbes had explained to the Government how it was he sanctioned a course which was afterwards thought to be illegal. This arrangement having been completed, it worked without interruption until about March, 1857, when the whole question was again opened by a query of the Auditor General's, referred to in a letter of the late Collector's, bearing date 11th April, 1857. This query had reference to certain deficiencies in cargoes imported between December, 1852, and December, 1854, before the date of the arrangement with the Collector just referred to. This is an important point, and I would ask the Board's attention to it, for I shall presently shew that, after the discussion raised by this query, and settled by the Executive Council Minute of 2nd July, 1857, in no instance has the 3 per cent. been deducted. Then it was that the validity of the Collector's arrangement was first questioned—never before then had it even been hinted at that he was pursuing an improper or illegal course. A letter written by Messrs. Metcalfe & Co. on our behalf, was about this time (2nd March, 1857,) addressed to the Collector, and handed by him to the Government, applying for an uniform allowance of 3 per cent. on account of waste on all raw sugars imported for the purpose of refining. I am sorry this letter is not forthcoming, so that I might quote the exact words used. Unfortunately Mr. Metcalfe has kept no copy. This letter had reference of course to the 3 per cent. which had been deducted from nearly all cargoes imported from about 1855 up to that time, and was a formal application for the sanction of the Government to the course allowed by the Collector for nearly two years previous. From a Minute of Mr. Donaldson's, dated 5th March, 1857, now for the first time seen, I find that Mr. Donaldson thought 2 per cent. enough, and it appears also that the Crown Law Officers were adverse to the application; but, no final answer, to the best of my knowledge and belief has ever been sent to me, or to Messrs. Metcalfe & Co. This, however, is not a point of much consequence, as after March, 1857, the 3 per cent. has never been deducted. In this same letter Colonel Gibbes records his belief (which it is hardly likely he would do from mere hearsay) that 3 per cent. was not an excessive allowance. Colonel Gibbes also alludes to certain allowances for waste on the cargoes imported, during two years ended December, 1854, when only  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. was claimed by us, and allowed to be written off by the Collector. These letters were written at the same time the Auditor General's queries as to these very deficiencies re-opened the question of allowances. There is one sentence in Colonel Gibbes' letter of 2nd March, 1857, which, as it stands, is certainly ambiguous. It is this:—"During the years 1853 and 1854, the Company has claimed only  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. for waste, which I allowed to be written off the books as a natural deficiency in the quantity imported, but they have discovered it appears that such falls very far short of what they had lost." I do not think the original words would convey exactly the same meaning. What it was our intention to represent when we instructed Mr. Metcalfe to write the letter was,—that we had ascertained that the loss on raw sugar for refining was greater than  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent., and this conviction had been arrived at principally from data supplied by certain later cargoes, upon which we paid duty, calculated at landing weights, a course we commenced at the time when the rate of duty was about being doubled, and, having paid upon full weight, we could not claim for the deficiency afterwards discovered by ourselves, and which we had every reason to believe was very much in excess of  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. A letter from our agents, Messrs. Metcalfe & Co., dated 26th February, 1857, has since the above was written been handed in by Mr. Duncan. This letter—if not the one referred to in Colonel Gibbes' letter of 2nd March, 1857—must be of the same purport as that missing document. I am sorry that some of the expressions therein are not put so clearly as to make the intention of the letter apparent at first sight; at the time, no doubt, it was clear enough to all parties, numerous interviews on the subject having taken place. The Board will remember that, from about 1855 to beginning of 1857, Colonel Gibbes had sanctioned an arrangement by which exactly 3 per cent. was deducted from landing weight of sugar, and duty paid on the balance without reference to actual weight at all, which in most cases was never known. The question having been raised of the propriety of continuing this plan, Mr. Metcalfe, immediately after his return from England, and after several interviews with the Collector, wrote the letter of the 26th February, "with the view of obtaining a definite decision as to the allowances to be made for drainage and waste by atmospheric causes," which previous verbal arrangement had fixed at 3 per cent. Mr. Metcalfe supports his application by reference to a statement of the deficiencies that existed in cargoes bonded during the period between December, 1852, and December, 1854, and which shews a loss caused by waste and drainage of about  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. This is arrived at by deducting certain over payments on particular cargoes, a course, however, Mr. Metcalfe says, which makes the loss appear less than it actually was, and thus "that deficiency cannot be taken as a true index of the loss that is sustained by the Company." The next paragraph in this letter is the one that is rather obscure. Mr. Metcalfe there admits that certain sugars were not weighed out; and at first sight it would perhaps be thought that these sugars were those upon which the  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. had been claimed and allowed by Colonel Gibbes (though not at that time sanctioned by the Government); but an attention to the context will clearly shew that it was not so. The sugars referred to as not weighed out were those imported subsequent to 1854, and upon which, by verbal agreement with the Collector, 3 per cent. had been deducted without re-weighing. That this assertion could apply to any others the Board will see to be impossible, for not only was Mr. Metcalfe aware that duty upon all sugars imported previous to 1855 had been paid upon the weights obtained through the Custom House from the locker in charge of the bond, but he had just before handed in a statement of the weights of those sugars,—copy of which I beg to lay before the Board (See Appendix D); a statement which bears upon the face of it the proof that the quantities mentioned are actual weights. The evidence of the locker, Turner, Turner, on this point the Board has already heard, and it, with the foregoing remarks, must Mr. J. G. Ross, I think convince the Board that this application of the 26th February, 1857, was for a fixed allowance which would have a prospective effect as well as determine whether the 7 Feb., 1860. verbal arrangement for (3) three per cent. existing from 1855 to 1857 was to hold good. How the 260 tons 18 cwt. 0 qrs. 2 lbs., mentioned in Colonel Gibbs' letter of 11th April, 1857, is made up I cannot find out. My private account, which tallies with that furnished by Mr. Duncan, makes the figures 247 tons 17 cwt. 1 qr. 4 lbs., and I have no doubt this is correct. I had better here point out to the Board an error in the arrangement of the letters, minutes, &c., as pointed out at pages 23 and 24 of the correspondence now before the Board. Colonel Gibbs' letter of 11th April, 1857, should come first, and then Mr. Donaldson's minute of the 14th April, with others, which are rightly arranged, until that of 4th June, 30th June, 3rd and 7th July, which should all be read before the Executive Council Minutes of 23rd July, which has erroneously been placed first. In the first letter on the subject (Colonel Gibbs', 11th April, 1857) the late Collector accounts for the deficiency of 260 tons (which as I have just said I can only make 247 tons), but erroneously states that the sugar was not weighed out. This I have shewn was a mistake which he himself acknowledges, and rectifies on the 3rd July following,—when he distinctly says, "The whole of the sugar in question was weighed in and also weighed out, but frequently "without reference to particular cargoes, and thence arises the over-payment on two or three "of these parcels." It is not possible that Colonel Gibbs would correct a former misstatement in a matter of so much importance without having made careful inquiry as to what the facts of the case actually were. These explanations, as far as the 167 tons are concerned, I conceive, settle the question. Again, on about March, 1859, we were called upon to report as to certain deficiencies—then under the notice of the Government—in cargoes imported by us from October, 1855, to February, 1856,—deficiencies of 3 per cent. (the Board will please to observe) which occurred during the currency of the arrangement sanctioned by the late Collector, and before we had any intimation whatever that such an arrangement would not be approved by the Government. The Auditor General noted certain deficiencies which he believed to be excessive, but which we explained in our letter of 31st March, 1859, by referring to the foregoing agreement with the late Collector; and to shew our perfect good faith in the matter, we offered to make good the difference between the 3 per cent., as deducted, and the  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent., the loss before actually arrived at by re-weight; although we had all along believed the 3 per cent. to be the legally fixed allowance, and one that we were aware had been made to other merchants. Mr. Weekes, the then Colonial Treasurer, after considering the Audit Office Minute of the 2nd May, allowed the deficiencies to be written off as they stood (as per Minute of 6th May, 1859). This, I imagine, settled the question of the 141 tons deficiency, which cannot now be disturbed; unless Mr. Duncan can prove that the late Collector connived to defraud the revenue, by asserting, in the emphatic manner he did in his Minute of 3rd July, 1857, that the deficiencies, during the two years ended December 1854, were actually weighed out, when such was not the case. Mr. Duncan has tried to shew that these sugars were not weighed out in the presence of a Customs officer; Mr. Turner fully explained this point to the Board. If the Government appointed one officer to do work which it was perfectly impossible that he or any other single individual could do, we are not to be blamed; it was not our duty to regulate the working of the Custom House,—enough if we complied with its existing regulations, and obeyed all its lawful orders. It was sufficient for us to know, that the locker, after satisfying himself as well as he could of the correctness of our weights, sent those weights, attested by his signature, to the Custom House; and that upon them duty was paid. In the eleventh paragraph of Mr. Duncan's letter of 18th August last, he says, "In addition to these cases which have already "come under the notice of the Government, I have to state that we have discovered "deficiencies in the sugar, belonging to the Company, now appearing in bond, to over 231 "tons." Of this quantity, 198 tons are composed of the allowance of exactly 3 per cent., deducted under the arrangement with Colonel Gibbs, from cargoes imported from April, 1856, to 20th January, 1857; before (the Board will again observe) we had any intimation that that arrangement would not be continued, which notice we first received in about March, 1857. So, in fact, 198 tons of this 231 are in precisely the same position as the 141 tons referred to, and which were ordered to be written off by Mr. Weekes; and I trust the Board, not discovering any good reason for impugning the correctness of that gentleman's decision, will recommend that this deficiency be likewise written off. I am aware that it may be argued that Mr. Weekes was wrong in allowing a deficiency to be written off which had not been ascertained by re-weight, as is required by the strict letter of the law; but I hope the Board will agree with me in thinking that if the course Mr. Weekes pursued was not strictly legal, yet that it was both equitable and just. A certain arrangement having been sanctioned by the Collector—the exponent to the public of the Customs laws—that arrangement was afterwards discovered to be illegal; but before the discovery took place, it had been acted upon for more than two years, and under it, believing that we were pursuing a legal course, we took sugar out of bond without re-weighing; and in so doing, we deprived ourselves of the means of ascertaining the actual deficiency. Had we now any means of ascertaining the actual loss, no doubt it would be right for us to be called upon to declare it; but it seems to me to be most unfair to be deprived of any allowance whatever, because we acted upon an arrangement which not only ourselves but also the Collector of Customs at that time thought to be legal. The 30 tons or so remaining is, I believe, to be accounted for by difference in figures between our accounts and those of the Customs officers, and actual deficiencies on such small quantities of low sugars as have remained in bond for any time during the period, March, 1857, up to end of year 1858. I do not doubt that other small deficiencies from that time to the present exist, but they are, I fancy, very trivial in amount.

- Mr. J. G. Ross. If Mr. Duncan mentions any special cases, I shall, I am sure, be able to explain them to the satisfaction of the Board. I do not think it necessary to notice the very intemperate language Mr. Duncan makes use of in speaking of these deficiencies, nor his absurd insinuation—nay, direct charge—that drawback on the product of these “stolen” deficiencies had been claimed long since, and thus double duty had been lost to the revenue. (See letter of 18th August.) A moment’s reflection would have made even Mr. Duncan aware, that not only is it impossible to defraud the revenue twice in the manner described, but also that, as we do not export a tithe of our sugars, the inaccuracy of this charge is self-evident. Mr. Still has been called to give evidence as to the deficiencies that have been found to exist in our bonded stocks since the year 1857. He estimates these deficiencies at about  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent., but the Board will remember that in cross-examination I elicited from that gentleman, that during this period it has very frequently happened that duty has been paid on the bulk of the low sugars in each cargo before such sugar has been landed. Thus, though the whole cargo has been entered for bond, yet the sugars on which the loss principally (if not altogether) occurs have been taken out of bond at landing weights—they never having actually passed through the bond, but have been sent from the ship’s side to our free stores at the Sugar Works. Mr. Still’s statement, therefore, can give no idea of the loss that would actually take place had the sugars remained any time in bond. The Company are, of late years, the only importers of the very low quality sugars upon which the deficiency claimed can take place. The other sugars that come to this market, Mr. Still rightly says, would lose little or nothing in weight if bonded in well-constructed stores. In England, no sugar of lower quality than ours are ever imported, and if the Government there permitted a loss of 3 per cent for the first three months for any raw sugars, I do not think it would be unreasonable to allow us this rate for the very lowest class sugars which we received between December, 1854, and February, 1857. There is no occasion to decide what the allowance shall be for the future. Ever since 1857 every ton has been carefully weighed out of bond in the presence of a Customs officer; and by the 16 and 17 Vict., cap. 107, any deficiency, however great, is allowed, unless proved to be the result of fraud. I wish the Board could see for themselves the condition of much of the sugars now in our stores at Campbell’s wharf, the molasses therefrom is dripping through from one floor to another, and it would require no great knowledge of the properties of that article to see that, during three months, the loss from drainage alone must far exceed three per cent. I am sorry I can produce no accounts showing what the loss in weight has been of late, for as I have just said, having erected free stores at the works, we have nearly always paid duty from ship’s side on the whole of the very low sugars which constitute the bulk of each cargo, and we do this in order to save expense of twice storing, re-weighing, and double cartage, for these charges more than counterbalance the duty we would save through keeping the sugars in store. As a further indication, however, of what it is likely to be, I will mention the low quality sugars ex ships “Virginie,” “Esperance,” “Electra,” “Billeton,” and “Azzan,” lately arrived from Manila, after being on board ship only a little more than two months, on landing shewed a loss in weight during the voyage of  $7\frac{1}{2}$ , 9, 10, and 13 per cent. (See Appendix E.) I do not think I have omitted any point upon which it is important that I should have touched, if I have, no doubt I shall be able to supply the omission in the evidence to be elicited from the various witnesses I shall call. In the foregoing I have endeavored to be as brief and yet as explicit as the importance of the various matters demands, but I fear I have dwelt almost too long upon the charges and insinuations Mr. Duncan has seen fit to bring against the Company, or myself as its manager; but as it is probable that the whole investigation will appear before the public in some shape or other, I have deemed it my duty to defend myself against all the tangible charges Mr. Duncan’s various letters contain—charges I hope to prove to be unfounded, ungenerous, and unjust. These disposed of, the Board will have no difficulty in recommending the immediate payment of the drawbacks claimed on shipments of refined sugar per “Kate Kearney,” “Lord Worsley,” and “Spray,” and the writing off of all deficiencies in bonded stocks that have arisen in the manner described, and I trust that in their Report the Board will record their disapprobation of the course pursued by Mr. Duncan, in daring to charge the Company I represent with fraud and dishonest practices, without having first ascertained from the evidence within his reach whether or no facts would bear out his statements.
2. Then you assert that previous to the shipment by the “Lord Worsley” you received no notice respecting the intention of the Customs to weigh all your sugar? We did not.
  3. But in your letter of the 26th July, 1859, to the Colonial Treasurer, you state, in paragraph 8, “we received notice, through a drawback officer, that he must see such sugars weighed at the sugar house”—and yet on the 8th, two days after receiving this notice, you make a shipment on the “Lord Worsley” without weighing—now how was it that you did not act upon this notice, which you admit to having received two days previously? Because I objected entirely to the proposed arrangement.
  4. You surely could not object to weighing somewhere? I heard nothing about the “somewhere.” The only thing the officer said was, that he was ordered to weigh at the sugar house.
  5. Was there no alternative given? None whatever. The officer came to us and said he was ordered to weigh at the sugar house; and when we objected, he went away, and I heard no more from him. I sent to the Collector, and then the conversation took place as described in the 9th paragraph of the letter you have quoted, about which I shall bring my clerk to give evidence.
  6. Have you received any certificate of the landing of the sugars shipped by the “Spray” and “Kate Kearney”? The certificate of the landing of the sugar by the “Kate Kearney” I have already handed in to the Government. With regard to the shipment by the “Spray”

I applied to the merchant who received it; but he has since got into difficulties, and my request has not been attended to. The certificate of the "Lord Worsley's" shipment was handed in by me to the Government, enclosed in my letter of the 18th August, and has been printed in the correspondence, and see the sugar shipped too. Mr. J. G. Ross

7. What was your objection to allowing the officer to weigh at the sugar house? Because it was impossible that the officer could do it.

8. That was a matter for the consideration of the Customs authorities? Besides that it retarded our business. We objected to having strangers about our premises; and the character of the Custom House officers of former times was so notorious that we did not wish to have them there. But in addition to this, the Board must be aware that all sugar refiners are particular in this respect, and refuse to allow strangers about their premises.

9. And you can state positively that no refined sugar manufactured by the Sugar Company was weighed previous to the 6th July? Not within my knowledge. If it was I never knew of it. Our arrangement with the late Collector was such that it was not necessary to weigh it; and if it was weighed it was entirely on the part of the Customs and had nothing to do with the Company.

APPENDIX A.

Sydney, 30 January, 1860.

At the request of J. Grafton Ross, Manager of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Sydney,—

We hereby certify that, for many years past, most of us, the undersigned, have constantly purchased Refined Sugars from the Company, and that we never found the net weight of such sugars to be less than that which is stamped upon the packages in which the sugar is contained:—

Melbourne, 16 January, 1860.

My dear Mr. Ross,

Referring to your remarks about the disputed drawbacks, I am at a loss to understand your meaning when you say that Mr. Duncan's letters express regret at being at issue with Mr. Knox, "one of his personal friends."

There must be some mistake in this, as I have not the pleasure of Mr. Duncan's acquaintance, and did not even know him by sight till you pointed him out to me a few weeks ago. A little bit of by-play, I presume.

The amount shewn in this column, received for sugar shipped by the Sugar Company, for sugar shipped to Melbourne, Adelaide, and Tasmania, only, and included in the amounts shewn in the first column.

*Mr. Duncan appointed.

NOTE.—It must be remembered, that to a comparatively recent period the New Zealand, Tasmanian, Victoria, and South Australian Markets were supplied by the Sydney Colonial Sugar Refining Company. The falling off, in the amount of Drawback paid by the Government, is partly in consequence of the operations of a rival Company, and mainly to the fact of a large Sugar Refining Company having been started in Melbourne, which has secured the Victoria and Tasmanian Markets, and also those of the Southern and Middle Provinces of New Zealand.

APPENDIX F,

NEW ZEALAND.

Port of New Plymouth.

7 Feb., 1860.

THESE are to certify that John Gilmour did enter for home consumption, and pay the duties of Customs at this Port, on one ton of sugar imported per the "Kate Kearney," Driver, master, from Sydney, which appears on the clearance of the said vessel at that Port, bearing date the eighth day of July, 1859, as follows:—

"Ten cwt. refined sugar.

"Ten cwt. bastards do., for drawback of duties."

Given under my hand, at the Custom House, this 22nd day of September, 1859.

W. LEECH,
Collector.

Mr. Henry Fisher called in and examined:—

Mr. H. Fisher. 1. By Mr. Ross: You have been for some time a large sugar importer? Yes, for twenty years past.

7 Feb., 1860. 2. And you have had some experience in the waste that occurs in sugar remaining any time in bond? I have.

3. Can you give the Board any idea of what you have found that waste to be—what per centage? So very much depends upon the description of sugar.

4. On low qualities of sugar, such as Taal and Zeba? My experience has chiefly been in in Java and Mauritius sugars.

5. These are sugars of a superior quality? Yes; they are very much drier.

6. And what have you found the waste in these to be? In looking over the invoices of several cargoes I have received, I find that the average has been about from 2 to 3 per cent. loss from the Mauritius invoice and the weight on landing in New South Wales of Mauritius syrup sugars.

7. But that is on the voyage? Yes; but from that I ground my belief that the Mauritius syrups would lose generally about the same quantity here during the first three months.

8. This statement is founded on actual experience? Yes; all my sugars have been weighed at the store door by the Custom House officer.

9. And you have found an average deficiency of from 2 to 3 per cent. from waste? Yes, on the syrup sugars; but on the cleared or centrifugal sugars it has not been so much; and in the finest descriptions of counter sugars I have had no loss at all.

10. Then we may take it, as your opinion, that from 2 to 3 per cent. is about the average loss by waste on Mauritius syrups? Yes; on three or four months' storage.

11. And the loss upon Taal and Zeba would be much greater? Yes; the loss, according to what experience I have had, would be very much greater. But I have never imported any of this sugar, though I have at times purchased it and warehoused it for other merchants, when, on green Taal, as much as from 5 to 8 per cent. loss has occurred in that time.

12. These sugars have more molasses in them than the Mauritius sugars? Yes; the process that the Mauritius sugars go through with the centrifugal machines, and with drying in the sun, takes the molasses out of them.

13. Do you recollect seeing Colonel Gibbes in reference to deficiencies of sugar in your bond? Yes; In 1855 or 1856, owing to some very large deficiencies in cargoes that I had imported, and all ascertained on actual re-weight, for I was always very particular in having all my sugar weighed in and out of store, by the Custom House officers, I entered into a correspondence with the Government. I then found that other sugar importers were corresponding with the Government upon the same subject—amongst them the Sugar Company; I was then asked by the Collector if I would be content to take a fixed allowance for waste of 3 per cent., as had been fixed by the Custom House of England by their board orders. I had an interview with the Collector, and compared books with him upon the point, and finding that the Board of Customs of England had decided upon a fixed allowance of 3 per cent. for all sugars for the first three months they were in bond, and 1 per cent. afterwards, by the authorities then produced, vide Beedell's British Tariff, 1853, I thought, perhaps, that might be sufficient. However, I took time to decide upon the offer; but after consideration, and after consulting other authorities, I insisted upon the sugars being re-weighed out of bond, as I found that I was entitled to call for the re-weighing if I thought proper.

14. By Captain Ward: Did Colonel Gibbes make you any promise? Yes; he offered me the fixed allowance of 3 per cent. for waste; and made the offer distinctly on behalf of the Government.

15. When did he offer it? It must have been somewhere about the end of 1855, or the beginning of 1856.

16. How did he offer it? He referred to his books shewing that that was the arrangement in England, and urged that, as it was considered satisfactory there, it ought to be so here.

17. Was his object the saving the labor of the Custom House officers in re-weighing? No. I understood it to be to prevent disputes that had arisen respecting the condition of sugar that had been bonded.

18. And you did not consider the allowance sufficient? No. I have known as much as 8 per cent. deficiency upon the invoice weight on landing here, through salt-water damage. I can instance the cargoes of the "Seahorse" and "Thames," imported by me, in which the loss by waste was quite 8 per cent.

19. Yes; but that would have reference to the loss upon the voyage, and not whilst in store? True; but the salt-water would be in it when landed, and the dissolution would go on quicker quicker in the store than when in the hold of the vessel. In cases of damage of this kind I have known a loss of 3, 4, and even 5 per cent. within the first week of storing. Large quantities of sugar waste in this way. In the case of the "Seahorse," I was not the importer, but only the agent for her cargo, and, consequently, could have no interest in making the deficiency larger than it actually was; the reduction of weight after it went into the store was immense, and almost incredible. The reason is obvious, as when sugar is stored it is always stowed, no matter how you may pack it, in a way that the evaporation will be much greater than it can be in a ship's hold confined from the air. That was the reason why I objected to having the stated allowance proffered by Colonel Gibbes. I may also add, that I have sometimes noticed in very damp weather, and when sugar has been of a very dry quality, that it has turned out, on re-weighing, over the weight it was entered at; but any sane man must know, when this is the case, that the sugar itself does not increase; but that, from atmospheric causes, it imbibes moisture which it will throw off again under a different state of the atmosphere. By the English Customs regulations, where it can be shewn that water exists in sugar, a corresponding allowance is made; and the British Customs, in their drawback regulations on refined sugars, particularly guard against any undue per centage of moisture being passed in weight—the same, in common fairness, is applicable to charging duties, vide Beedell's British Tariff.

Mr. H. Fisher.
7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. Edward B. Forrest called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Ross: You have been for a considerable period a clerk to the Sugar Company? I have.
2. Do you remember, about the 6th July last, Mr. Chapman coming to our office? Yes, I remember it quite well.
3. Before that date had you heard that it was the intention of the Collector to require the refined sugars exported by the Company to be weighed? No, I had not.
4. Or to make any alteration in the system of the Company with regard to their shipments for drawback? No.
5. Do you remember, sometime about the 28th June, calling upon Mr. Duncan, according to my directions? I do.
6. Will you state what then took place? I called upon him with reference to a ton of sugar short-shipped by the "Moa," and explained to him how it had happened; that it had left our stores to go on board, and that we believed it had been shipped, and that we had obtained the captain's receipt for its shipment.
7. Did you offer to refund the drawback? I did. The Collector said he was quite satisfied with my explanation, and that if I tendered the money he would accept it. I went to Mr. Powell, and told him of what had taken place with the Collector, and he wrote out a cheque, and took it up to the Collector.

Mr. E. B.
Forrest.
7 Feb., 1860.

Mr. Julius Perry called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Ross: You are warehouse clerk at the sugar store at the Company's works? I am, Mr. J. Perry.
2. Do you remember, sometime in May last, shipping a quantity of sugar per "Moa" for Auckland? I do.
3. You shipped some on account of John Robertson? I did.
4. Can you say what quantity was shipped? Yes—20 tons.
5. Are you confident that that quantity left the sugar-house? Yes, I am; quite confident.
6. You have been made aware that one ton of that sugar did not reach Auckland? I have.
7. And yet you have no doubt that the full quantity left the sugar-house? Yes.
8. You have a receipt-book in which you enter every load that leaves the sugar-house, and the name of every carter who takes it, and to which the carter gives his receipt? I have.
9. And do you find the stumps in that book to contain receipts for the full quantity that ought to have been shipped? I have the proper number of stumps for 20 tons, with the carter's name attached for every load.
10. Then you have no doubt about its having been shipped? No doubt whatever that it left the works with that intention. That has always been my belief.
11. Is there any difference made in the stores in the weights of sugars intended for shipment, and those for delivery in town? Not the least.
12. You deliver the bags of sugar, whether for shipment or for town, indiscriminately as you get the orders? I do.
13. Did the sugars ordered for shipment by the "Lord Worsley," "Kate Kearney," and "Spray," all leave the sugar-house? They did.
14. You have no doubt about it? None whatever.
15. There was no deficiency in the weight of any of the orders? Not to my knowledge.
16. Do you remember about the 6th August, shipping six tons of sugar by the "Louis and Miriam"? I do.
17. It was on a Saturday, I believe? It was.
18. What time did those loads leave the sugar-house? Five loads left between 9 and 10 o'clock, and the sixth left about 12 o'clock.

7 Feb., 1860.

- Mr. J. Perry. 19. Have you any means of ascertaining when these loads were delivered at their destination? I can only tell by what the draymen say when they bring me back their receipts.
- 7 Feb., 1860. 20. Were they all there before one o'clock? I know that five of them were, but I cannot speak for the sixth any further than that the drayman says most positively that he had partially delivered his load before gunfire at one o'clock.
21. Do you recollect my speaking to you shortly after the occurrence and asking you about it? I do, perfectly.
22. And you then gave me the same explanation that you now give the Board? I did.
23. And that explanation you believe to be correct? As regards the five loads, I am certain; and as to the sixth I know, from the drayman's own statement, which I now produce (See Appendix), that he partly delivered his load before one o'clock; and to the best of my recollection, he, on his return to the sugar-house, brought back a load of raw sugar from Campbell's store, and he could not have got that if he had not been there soon after one o'clock.
24. You explained to him, as you do to all the draymen leaving with loads, that the Customs ticket sent with each load was to be delivered to the Custom House officer in charge of the vessel? I did.
25. What did you tell him? That he must give his ticket to the Custom House officer before he took his load off the dray.
26. Then, if the carter neglected to do this it was his fault, and he did not follow his instructions? Certainly.
27. I believe there is not a single drayman employed by the Company that is not aware of this regulation? There is not. I have always been very particular in explaining it to them.
28. Have you ever received instructions from me or from anyone else to ship sugar in such a way as to cause annoyance to the Customs? I have not.
29. Have not the orders given you been rather in a contrary direction? They have.
30. What were they? Particularly not to ship sugar beyond certain hours, and that I have been very careful in observing.
31. On page 6 of the printed correspondence now before the Board is a certificate, dated 15th July, and signed by you, relative to the shipment of 120 mats sugar by the "Lord Worsley,"—do you recollect writing it? I do, and the printed copy before me is correct.
32. During the number of years you have been with the Company, have you ever heard any complaint from any one with regard to the short weight of our sugar? I never heard but one; about two or three years ago. Mr. Caldwell complained to me that one ton of his was light, but he never came to the office with a formal complaint about it. I met him accidentally in the Bank, and he mentioned the matter to me.
33. Can you tell me the tare of the bags used by the Company for packing sugar? They run from 5 ozs. and 6 ozs. to 8 ozs. I weighed a dozen of each kind the other day, and the following is the result:—12 double mats, to contain 2 qrs. 14 lbs., weighed 9 lbs. 13 ozs., being an average of  $13\frac{1}{2}$  ozs. each; 12 of the same kind, to contain 2 qrs., weighed 8 lbs. 1 oz., or an average of  $10\frac{1}{2}$  ozs. each; 12 Hessian bags, single, to contain 2 qrs. 14 lbs., weighed 6 lbs. 8 ozs., or an average of  $8\frac{1}{2}$  ozs. each; and 12 calico bags, to contain 2 qrs. 14 lbs., weighed 3 lbs. 7 ozs., or an average of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  ozs. each.
34. Will you explain to the Board the system of weighing that is followed at the sugar-house? Every bag of sugar is weighed singly. The bag is filled and put into one scale, and into the other is put the weight and a similar bag or mat to that which contains the sugar, doubled up and put under the weight. The bag of sugar is then filled up to the requisite weight.
35. Was there any sugar shipped on the "Lord Worsley" on the 7th July? Yes, there was some shipped on the 7th and some on the 8th July; but the particular mark referred to, the N. E. and Co., was shipped on the 8th July.
36. By Mr. Browne: Whose sugar was shipped on the 7th July? I almost forget; but I think it was for William Ellis, and that on the 8th was for Gilchrist, Watt, and Co.

APPENDIX.

John McManus remembers the 27th August, and that he took a load of sugar to the "Louis and Miriam," at Grafton Wharf, on that day. His load was partly off when the one o'clock gun was fired. He gave the Custom House ticket to the mate of the vessel, because he saw no Custom House officer at the wharf.

22 December, 1859.

JOHN McMANUS.

J. PERRY.

Mr.

Mr. Charles Frederic Stokes called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Ross: You are shipping clerk to the Colonial Sugar Refining Company? I am. Mr. C. F. Stokes.
2. How long have you held that situation? Some years.
3. You are in the habit of making shipments of refined sugars for drawback? I am. 7 Feb., 1860.
4. And are aware of the regulations under which we conducted those shipments in the time of Colonel Gibbs? I am.
5. Before the 6th July, had you any intimation from any one that it was the intention of Mr. Duncan to make a new arrangement? I had not.
6. Or that the old arrangement would be in any way disturbed? No.
7. From whom did you first hear of the alteration? From a Mr. Chapman, reporting himself as the drawback officer. On the 6th July, he came up to the Sugar Company's Office, about 10 o'clock in the morning, and said that he had received notice of a shipment of sugar for drawback, that he was the drawback officer, and that he had received instructions from the Collector to see the sugar we intended to ship weighed at the sugar-house.
8. Are you quite sure that he said "at the sugar-house?" He may have said "at our works;" I will not be certain.
9. Did he say anything about weighing at the wharf? No.
10. He said he came from the Collector? I presumed from what he said that he came from the Collector.
11. And what did you tell him? I said that it would be impossible to tell him when the sugar would be ready, that we had just then a great many shipments on our hands, and that these were weighed at different times, and never altogether, and that thus he could not see it weighed.
12. Did he make any reference to the shipment of which he had received notice? Yes; I think it was the shipment by the "Spray."
13. What did you say about that shipment? I only said that I could not tell him when that shipment would be ready.
14. Did you say anything about the sugar being on its way then? No; not at that time. I said that I could not possibly say when it would be ready; that you were not in, and that I should have to refer the matter of weighing at the sugar-house to you.
15. That was in the morning, but when he came in the afternoon? I told him that the sugar might be ready then, perhaps it was on its way then, or it might not be ready for two or three days.
16. Did you lead him to think that he could not do what he desired? Yes; I said that the sugar-house was so far from the wharfs at which the sugar was generally shipped that if he went from one to the other with each ton as it was weighed, and then back again to see more weighed, he would never be able to complete the shipments in time.
17. And there was nothing said about weighing on the wharf? Nothing.
18. About a day or two after this you called upon Mr. Duncan? Yes; I think on the 8th July.
19. What took place then? Mr. Duncan told me that the drawback on the sugar shipped by the "Spray" would not be allowed; I asked him why, and he said that his reason for refusing it was, that the officer had not seen it weighed, and that he was determined to allow no drawback unless the Custom House officer had seen the goods weighed and put on board.
20. Did you say anything about taking the average weight of the bags? I did. I told him what our system had been, and he said he had changed all that, and that he thought we knew of this alteration before.
21. Did you say anything about Robey & Co? Yes. I said I had heard that in making the alteration, some allowance had been made to Robey & Co. on some of their sugar shipped per "Spray," and that he might do the same by us. His answer was, that the two cases were different, for that we had had notice of the change, but Robey & Co. had not.
22. Did you explain to Mr. Duncan why you thought the new arrangement would not work? Yes, as well as I could, I explained to him how we weighed the sugar at the works, that the bags were of uniform size, and that after this if the officer weighed a few bags on the wharf for an average of each load, that would be sufficient for the protection of the revenue. After thinking a bit, he said he thought so too.
23. Did you ask him whether in the event of your getting a certificate from Auckland of the due landing of the sugar there he would allow the drawback? I did, and he said he would see about it when the certificate came up, but would make no promise.
24. You made use of some particular words on that occasion? I did; I said that the Company would not forego their claim to this drawback.
25. What did Mr. Duncan reply? He said that was his business and not the Company's.
26. Have you any memorandum of the date on which you gave notice of the shipment of the sugar by the "Lord Worsley"? Yes; I produce our notice book. Two lots were shipped, one on the 7th July, the other on the 8th July; notice of the first shipment was sent on the 6th July, and of the other on the 8th, the day it was shipped. For all shipped I got the mate's receipts, but I did not know before I got them that the sugar had been actually sent on board.
27. When you spoke to Mr. Chapman on the morning of the 6th July, did you know that the sugar per "Spray" had been shipped? No, I could not tell whether it was so or not, until I got the mate's receipt.
28. When did you ship the "Spray's" sugar? I gave notice on the 1st, 2nd, 6th, and 7th July. The last notice was on the 7th for one ton.
29. When did you first know of the shipment? Not until the next morning, when I got the receipts.

- Mr. C. F. Stokes.
7 Feb., 1860.
30. When was notice of the shipment by the "Kate Kearney" given? Notice for shipment for drawback was given on the 5th, and the shipment was made on the 6th, but I did not know of the shipment until after I saw Mr. Chapman.
31. How was that? Because we had not had the particulars up from the works at the time.
32. I believe they only send up from the works to the office at stated times, in consequence of the distance? Yes.
33. 344 mats of sugar, marked E, were shipped in the "Lord Worsley," in July last; can you give me the net weight of the consignment? It was 180 cwt., or 9 tons, and 2 hhds. refined sugar.
34. Is there any separate entry passed for loaf sugar? No; the sugars are all passed in one entry, I believe.
35. Will you tell the Board what the book now produced contains? It contains a memorandum of every hogshead of loaf sugar packed at the works.
36. When does the first hogshead appear to have been sent out? In February, 1857.
37. What are the average weights of these hogsheads? They run from 13 cwt. 2 qrs., down to 12 cwt. and 11 cwt., and less.
38. Then in sending down for shipment a hogshead weighing 11 cwt., there was nothing very remarkable? Not at all.
39. By Mr. Duncan: Was the interview you had with me at the Custom House, relative to the weighing for drawback, the first time I had spoken to you on the subject? Yes; that was the first time that I saw you.
40. The first time at all? Yes.
41. You say you did not know at your office the particular times at which shipments were made? No; we could not tell the exact time.
42. Then if you did not know, how was the officer to know? He should be ready on his station at any time, to examine goods when they come down to be shipped.
43. But surely some opportunity should be given to him to see the goods, in order that their shipment may be duly certified? The same opportunity was given to him as always had been given.
44. The goods, however, were actually put on board in the officer's absence, and you will not say that that gave him an opportunity to examine them? It was his duty to be on the station when the goods arrived.
45. Then do you consider that it would be either prudent or proper in me to allow drawback on goods when no opportunity has been given to my officer to examine them? He always had the opportunity when the Company's goods were shipped. His opportunity was, having received notice, to have been there when the sugar came down to the wharf.
46. Do you think it more proper that the officer should be at the wharf, waiting your convenience to send down sugar for shipment, when you have confessed that you do not know within three or four days when it would be ready, than that the sugar should have to wait a short time for the officer? If goods had to wait for the attendance of an officer, nearly all export business would be put a stop to.
47. Has it had that effect? It does retard us more if the officer is not present. If he is on the wharf, to meet the goods, it is no inconvenience.
48. By Mr. Ross: Practically, has there been any alteration from the time of the late Collector, in what the Company have to do now? No. The only thing is, that we have to give notice of shipment earlier. We must now give a day's notice, and cannot, as formerly, give notice at ten and ship at twelve o'clock of the same day.
49. The notice, however, is still in the same form? Yes; we send down precisely the same notice, only earlier.

---

Mr. Alexander Simm called in and examined:—

- Mr. A. Simm.
7 Feb., 1860.
1. By Mr. Ross: You are accountant to the Sugar Company? I am.
2. Do you remember a new officer of Customs calling at our office in July last? Yes; immediately after Mr. Russell had been suspended.
3. Do you recollect what he said? I do.
4. Will you repeat it to the Board? He said he wished to see the sugar weighed, and asked when it would be ready, as he would then go down to the sugar-house and see it weighed before it was shipped.
5. Did he say any thing about seeing it weighed at any other place than the sugar-house? No.
6. Was he laughed at, or treated in any way uncourteously? Not in the least.
7. What was said to him? He was told that it would be impossible for him to see it weighed. That there was no certainty of when it would be ready, as it might then be on its way to the wharf, or might not be made for some days.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. DUNCAN.

TUESDAY, 7 FEBRUARY, 1860.

CAPTAIN WARD, R.E., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. BROWNE, ESQ.

CAPTAIN M'LEBIE.

Mr. Duncan, Collector of Customs, and Mr. Powell, Custom House Agent, were in attendance.

Captain Ward said that the Board wished to know if Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell desired to go on with their case by calling further evidence, or whether they would be satisfied to allow it to rest upon the evidence already given, much of which bore upon the complaint Mr. Metcalfe had made.

Mr. Powell said he had no wish to take up the time of the Board, or to re-open the inquiry. He should call no further evidence, but wished to put in some correspondence in support of his case.

Mr. Duncan: If that correspondence is put in I shall feel called upon to call evidence respecting it.

Mr. Powell: In that case, I shall only ask the Board to permit me to put in evidence the following letter, written by me to Mr. Duncan :—

Sydney, September 2, 1859.

Sir,

The interview which I had with you yesterday left the impression on my mind that you have a personal ill-feeling towards me. I deeply regret that such should be the case, and I write this to assure you that it is my earnest desire to co-operate with you in carrying out any changes that you may consider desirable; and if, in my position as Agent or substitute for any merchant, I have occasion to question the propriety of any arrangements made by your officers, or to ask for the modification of any of the rules of the department, I trust that you will consider that I am not offering you personal opposition, but merely seeking to advance the interests of my principals where they do not run counter to the safety of the revenue.

I am sure that you will do me the justice to say that in all my communications with you I have acted in a courteous and gentlemanly manner, and I beg that you will from henceforth receive me as a person desirous to assist, rather than to thwart your wishes, and if in the course of business I have the misfortune to differ with you, you will do me the justice to believe that I am only doing that which I believe to be in consonance with the spirit though perhaps not the letter of the law.

I am, &c,
JAMES POWELL.

W. A. Duncan, Esq.

Mr. Duncan: I have no objection to the letter being received; but I would remind the Board that this letter was written after Mr. Powell's letter to Mr. Ross, and after Mr. Powell had burst forcibly into my room at the Custom House, in the manner that has been described. With this remark attached to it, I shall not object to it. (The Board received the letter in evidence and the proceedings terminated.)

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTE OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

IN THE MATTER OF THE

DISPUTES BETWEEN THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AND CUSTOMS AGENTS AND OTHERS.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 24 April, 1860.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council in the matter of the Report of the Board, relative to disputes between the Collector of Customs and certain Mercantile Firms.

5 April, 1860.

HIS Excellency the Governor General lays before the Council the Report of a Board, consisting of the Deputy Master of the Royal Mint, the Immigration Agent, and the Inspector General of Police, which was appointed on the 30th November last, to inquire into certain disputes which had arisen between the Collector of Customs on the one hand, and the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Messieurs Metcalfe and Powell, Custom House Agents, and Messieurs Towns and Stuart, merchants, on the other.

2. The correspondence out of which the inquiry has arisen, together with the evidence taken by the Board, accompanies their Report, and both having been printed, and a copy being hereto appended, it is scarcely necessary to detail in the body of this Minute the various matters in dispute between the Collector and the persons with whom he has been at issue; and it may be sufficient here to record that these matters involve charges impugning the integrity of the latter in their business transactions with the Customs Department, and, consequently, with the Public Treasury.

3. In their report the Board recite seriatim, as furnished by himself, the principal charges brought forward by the Collector, and state in detail the conclusions to which they have been led by the evidence adduced before them upon each specific charge.

These, except in the case of Mr. Powell, wholly relieve the persons accused from the imputations sought to be fixed upon them by the Collector, and in closing their Report the Board deem it due to those gentlemen to express themselves as follows:—

“There has been no evidence produced to reflect in the slightest degree on Mr. Metcalfe’s integrity, capacity for business, or general demeanor as a Custom House Agent. Of Mr. Powell it has been proved that he expressed himself in a hasty manner to some subordinates in the Long Room regarding the steps he was prepared to take against any future Collector mindful of the public interests.

"That he endeavored to obtain an incorrect certificate from the officer, Russell; and "that, acting under a sense of provocation received, he has without sufficient cause accused
 "the Collector of partiality in the discharge of his public duties.

"In other respects Mr. Powell has been shewn to be an Agent faithful in the "discharge of his duties, zealous to protect the public interests, and desirous of conforming
 "to established laws and regulations.

"Mr. Ross (who represents the Sugar Company) and Mr. Stuart have satisfactorily "defended the firms which they represent from the imputations cast upon them.

"These several parties have just grounds to complain of the treatment they have "received at the hands of the Collector.

"Many expressions used by him which are scattered through the correspondence and "evidence, and more especially many of those in his letter to the Government which bear on
 "Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, and in his reply to the defence of the Agents, are altogether
 "unjustifiable.

"Whilst the Collector's ruling desire has, without doubt, been to reform a Depart"ment which had become greatly disorganised, and to protect the public interests with the "utmost vigilance, he appears repeatedly to have expressed opinions formed in haste reflecting "on the integrity of others.

"Without knowledge of the practices existing in the Customs, under sanction of "authority at the time he took office, he has found fault with those who acted in conformity
 "with them; and thus, having been led into altercations with the Sugar Company and their "Agents, he has without consideration charged them and others with disgraceful practices, of "which he has failed to produce any evidence."

4. Having carefully perused the Report and Evidence which has been circulated amongst the Members, the Council desire to record their concurrence in the opinions expressed by the Board. It is not, however, without regret that the Council have been compelled to arrive at this conclusion, as they conceive it due to the Collector to bear in mind that he had to contend with great difficulties when he assumed the charge of the Customs Department.

At the time of his appointment that Department was completely disorganised; and he unquestionably experienced considerable opposition in making those reforms which were necessary.

But giving Mr. Duncan every possible credit for zeal in the performance of his duty, and for an earnest desire to promote the public interests solely, the Council are of opinion that there can be no sufficient justification offered for his attacks upon the personal integrity of parties, unsupported as those attacks now appear to have been by any evidence.

It is quite clear to the Council that such a course is not calculated to aid him in the performance of his duty, but must on the contrary tend to nullify in a great degree all his endeavors to make his department efficient; and they advise that this expression of their opinion be communicated to Mr. Duncan by the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer.

Acting Clerk of the Council.

THE REPORT OF THE BOARD, ORDERED BY THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
TO BE PRINTED, 13 APRIL, 1860.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 2 May, 1860.

S.

Sydney, 8 July, 1859.

Sir,

We have the honor, on behalf of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, to request that you will not insist upon the refined sugar shipped for drawback being weighed in the Sugar Company's warehouse, prior to shipment, as it entails upon them an expense and inconvenience; and the safety of the revenue may be protected by another and more simple course.

On every bag of sugar the weight is marked, at the time of its being filled; it is then stacked in the sugar-house, and when sold is sent to the buyer or to the ship, in which last-named case notice is given to the Customs. If, therefore, the drawback officer, or the searcher attending the shipment, would weigh a few, or, if not found to agree with the weights marked on them, all the bags on the wharf, the revenue would be protected, and the expense of weighing would not fall heavily on the Company.

As an additional security the Company will have no objection (should you require it) to give you a memorandum of the actual weight charged by them to the purchasers.

We have, &c.,
METCALFE, POWELL, & Co.

The Collector of Customs.

Custom House, Sydney,
16 July, 1859.

Gentlemen,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 8th instant, requesting me, on behalf of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, not to insist upon refined sugar, shipped for drawback, being weighed in their warehouse, and suggesting some arrangements in respect to such shipments, I do myself the honor to acquaint you, that the weights will in future be taken on the wharves, under the supervision of the landing-waiters, and that I shall be satisfied with the average weight as proposed, so long as I find the Company's weighing accurate.

I have, &c.,
W. A. DUNCAN,
Collector of Customs.

29 August, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to report, that at 45 minutes past 12 o'clock, on Saturday afternoon last, the messenger left the enclosed warrants with me, at the Flour Company's Wharf. Immediately on receipt I went on board the "Louis Miriam," at the Grafton Wharf, to inform the Chief Officer, that before he shipped the sugar he would require to acquaint me of its arrival at the wharf, that I might satisfy myself as to its quality and quantity before shipment; when he informed me that five tons of the sugar had already been shipped.

Under the circumstances I deemed it prudent to report the matter to you; as it will be impossible for me, without first examining the sugar, to sign the necessary papers for the securing of the drawback to the merchant.

No. 1.

Sydney, 31 March, 1859.

Sir,

In reply to your inquiry respecting the balances of the various cargoes of sugar imported by us from Manila, and which remain outstanding in your warehouse-keeper's books, we beg to say that they are the deficiencies of 3 per cent. upon the several cargoes, as compared with the landing weights.

We were under the impression that the allowance of an actual 3 per cent. for the first three months had become a recognised one, and as this allowance covered the waste before ascertained by re-weighing, we deemed it to be unnecessary to re-weigh before taking the sugar from the warehouse.

In the early part of 1857 we were called upon in a similar manner to account for a deficiency of 167 tons 16 cwt. 3 qrs. 13 lbs., which was shewn by the Customs books to exist on 22 cargoes of sugar, imported into Sydney from January, 1852, to December, 1854; and we then satisfied the Government that the deficiency was waste in re-weighing from drainage and such like causes; and the quantity was ordered to be written off in the books as such.

The difference between the two cases is this:—In the first the deficiency was discovered by actual re-weight; and in the second the deficiency is assumed to be the amount allowed by law, which we understood to be a fixed allowance.

Should the Government think that the actual deficiency is the correct one for allowance, we are prepared to pay the duty on the difference between the two; but, as the full allowance has, in more than one instance, been made to private merchants, we conceived that as manufacturers we were at least entitled to a similar privilege. We ought not to omit to mention that all our sugars are of a wet description, and that the ascertained loss on them during a voyage of little more than two months is from 7 to 9 per cent.

We remain, &amp;c.,

COLONIAL SUGAR REFINING COMPANY,
M. METCALFE.

From the above statement it would appear that the importers are satisfied with the allowance made for waste, but are willing to abide the decision of the Government on their case.

J. GIBBES, Collector.

6 April, 1859.

No. 2.

Audit Office,
2 May, 1859.

No doubt the 73rd clause of the 9th Vic., No. 15, allows all deficiencies on goods warehoused, caused by "the effect of the atmosphere or other natural causes," but only on the condition that the goods are re-weighed on leaving the warehouse, which does not appear to have been done in this instance.—(See letter from the Colonial Sugar Company herewith.)

herewith.) The deficiencies referred to appear to be excessive in the particular cases referred to in my Memo. of 23rd of March last, and for this reason authority was requested from the Honorable the Minister for Finance to pass the account.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

W. C. MAYNE,
A. G.

It appears that the sugars referred to were taken from the bond without re-weighing, and if so, I apprehend the actual deficiency cannot now be ascertained. As, however, the Collector states that the total of deficiencies does not exceed the allowance fixed by Act of Parliament for waste in sugars, of 3 per cent., I think the account may be passed. As it does not follow that the waste in sugars must always be 3 per cent., it would be more satisfactory to ascertain, by weighing, the actual deficiency.

E. C. W.
6 May, 1859.

Audit Office, Sydney,
23 March, 1859.

Forwarded to the Honorable the Minister for Finance, for his decision touching the deficiencies of sugar alluded to in query No. 9, herewith. A statement is transmitted, shewing the quantities and dates when the several parcels of sugar were bonded, and the quantities and dates when these were removed from the warehouses; also a memorandum shewing the loss on Y 399 in 9 months, and the loss on G 407 in 7 months. I must confess myself incredulous as to any importer silently submitting to a loss of nearly 17 tons of sugar out of less than 512 tons, in a period of 9 months, particularly when 452 tons of the whole quantity bonded were taken out within 11 weeks, 150 tons of the 452 having been taken out 24 hours after bonding. Still more incredulous must I admit myself to be as to any importer silently submitting to a loss of nearly 28 tons of sugar out of a little over 862½ tons, particularly when 400 tons of the whole quantity bonded were taken out on the fourth day after bonding, when 240 tons more were taken out on the 15th day after bonding, and when 150 tons more were taken out in 5 weeks after bonding;—that is, when 790 tons out of 862½ tons were all taken out in five weeks after bonding.

No. 4.

Custom House, Sydney,
2nd March, 1857.

Sir,

I have the honor to transmit herewith an application from the Colonial Sugar Refining Company through their Custom House Agents, Messrs. Metcalfe and Co., to be allowed from and after the passing of the Act of Council 19 Vict., No. 14 (1855), a uniform allowance of 3 per cent., on account of waste, on all raw sugar imported for the purpose of refining.

531—B

They

They state, and I believe it to be the case, that this will by no means cover the loss they sustain between the time of warehousing the sugar and the period at which it is taken out to undergo the process of refining.

During the years 1853 and 1854, the Company has claimed only  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. for waste, which I allowed to be written off the books as a natural deficiency on the quantity imported; but they have discovered, it appears, that such allowance falls very far short of what they had lost.

In England, 3 per cent. used to be allowed for the first three months, and 1 per cent. for every additional month that the sugar remained in bond, making 12 per cent. per annum; but by the 16th and 17th Victoria, cap. 107, it seems that 3 per cent. for waste is fixed, let the time be long or short.

The Secretary to the Treasury.

I have, &c.,
J. GIBBES,
Collector of Customs.

Treasury,—B.C., B—330.

I do not read the law in England as the Collector or as Messrs. Metcalfe, do.

I understand that 3 per cent. is the maximum, and that in England the ascertained waste within this margin only is allowed.

I do not feel authorised to accede to Messrs. Metcalfe and your request without the opinion of the Law Officers that I may legally assess the waste. I should feel disposed to fix 2 per cent. as quite high enough. Refer in the form agreed upon to the law officers.

No. 5.

*Crown Solicitor's Office,
Sydney, 10 March, 1857.*

Sir,

Returned.
B.C.

Referring to your blank cover Minute of the 5th instant, transmitting letters from Messrs. Metcalfe and Company, and the Collector of Customs, respecting an application of the former on behalf of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company for an allowance of 3 per cent. on account of waste on raw sugar imported for refining, and requesting me to submit the same for the opinion of the Law Officers, I do myself the honor to state that having laid the matter before the Honorable the Solicitor General, he has advised as follows:—

"I do not see any authority in England under the 16th and 17th Vict. Customs' Act, by which an arbitrary allowance on sugar or spirits can be made.

"The 110th section requires the duty to be paid on the amount delivered, and that amount is to be ascertained by re-weighing, re-measuring, or re-gauging.

"The Customs' Regulations Act in force in this Colony, 9th Victoria, No. 15, s. 73, enables the Collector or the Proprietor to have the amount of duty ascertained at the time of the delivery of goods out of bond by re-weighing, re-gauging, and re-measuring, as regards particular goods such as sugar, spirits, &c., but I see no authority to compound, but only to reduce the claim for duty by distinct proof of diminution.—J.

"B. DARVALL, 7 March, 1857."

I have, &c.
W. W. BILLYARD,
Civil Crown Solicitor.

Collector of Customs Minute on observation on B.C.—330.

What the Solicitor General states is, I am aware, the case in regard to the provision of the 16th and 17th Victoria, cap. 107, but that Act is not, I apprehend, binding on the Customs of New South Wales; and if all the sugar in the bonding warehouses of the Sugar Company is to be weighed out when removed for refining, I cannot attend to it without some additional strength in officers, and consequently additional expense.

Since this Department was handed over to the Colonial Government the Board of Customs have ceased to send me the Acts of the Imperial Parliament, and although the above-mentioned Act was passed in August, 1853, I do not think that it reached me until the early part of 1855; and then, although I read through its 363 sections in a cursory manner, I did not take notice of the change that had been made in the allowance for waste of sugar in bond.

I therefore allowed the claim of  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. by the Sugar Company to be written off in the warehousekeeper's books for the years 1853 and 1854, although the sugar had not been weighed out, and I trust that the Government will sanction this proceeding, as the allowance is less than that named by the Minister of Finance for the future.

If from the passing of the present tariff in September, 1855, the allowance is fixed at 2 per cent., I think the Sugar Company will not object, and that it will facilitate business and save expense.

J. GIBBES,
Collector of Customs.

16 March, 1857.

Custom

No. 10.Custom House, 5 February, 1851.*

Sir,

I beg respectfully to call your attention to the conduct of Mr. Metcalfe, Custom House Agent, as I cannot discharge my duty in a correct or proper manner, if I meet with such obstruction and arrogance as he has inflicted on me.

I may state for your information that I have at present in my hands the manifests of nine English ships, and that I was engaged this morning in marking off entries of goods, at a particular time, when I had two or three persons waiting for me to mark off their entries in their respective turns. Mr. Metcalfe's clerk came to my desk with an entry, and in a minute or two he followed himself, and exclaimed, "What! have you been kept waiting all this time to get this passed? Give it to me. Here, Mr. Sempill, mark this off." I said I would attend to him as soon as I had done with those who came before him. In the course of a few minutes his clerk came to my desk, and without any permission from me, he took the manifest of the "Blonde," down stairs, and did not bring it back again for more than half an hour, during which interval a person came to me to mark off an entry of goods by this vessel.

I would not have made this complaint if I did not feel compelled to request your interference, as I know that it is impossible for me to perform my work in a satisfactory and in an efficient manner, unless Mr. Metcalfe's irregularities are put an end to. He seems at present to think that he has a right to have his business transacted before that of other parties, even to their prejudice, and in unison with this idea he assumes a most offensive, overbearing, and insolent behaviour.

I am, &amp;c.,

ROBERT SEMPILL.

The Collector of Customs,
Sydney.

No. 12.Sydney, 26 February, 1857.*

Sir,

We have already presented to you a statement of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company's bonding account for sugar, with a view of obtaining from you a definite decision as to the allowance to be made to them for drainage and waste by atmospheric causes.

You will perceive by the account that we have rendered you, that duties have been paid by them to within  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the imported quantity, but as several errors were committed in over-paying, by accident, on the cargoes of some of the vessels (which we intend to apply for the return of), that statement cannot be taken as a true index of the actual loss of weight sustained by the Company.

We are aware that it may be urged that the Company had always the opportunity of re-weighing the sugars in the presence of the Custom House Officers before paying duties thereon, and that by the Act of Council, 9 Vict., No. 15, duties are only chargeable on the actual weight delivered, but as such an operation would be both tedious and expensive, and as the actual loss from the causes above stated is much greater than the Sugar Company ask for at your hands, we apprehend that such an objection would not be taken by you.

It is clear from the perusal of the English Customs Orders, that a very large allowance is there made, by Act of Parliament, 8 & 9 Vict., cap. 91, sec. 22, it is directed that "in warehouses of special security the duty is to be charged on the weight actually delivered, and in warehouses not of special security, 3 per cent. for the first three months, and 1 per cent. for every subsequent month during which it shall have been warehoused" shall be allowed (clearly, we think, without re-weighing); this is a larger allowance than the Sugar Company demand, but as it is a well ascertained fact that the waste and drainage of sugar during the first month after arrival is very great—fully 3 per. cent.—they ask that in all cargoes of sugar warehoused by them, such an allowance be made to them in full of all claims whether the sugar remains in bond a longer period or not.

We have, &amp;c.,

METCALFE &amp; CO.

Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose a note just received from Colonel Gibbes, in reply to the questions which the Board requested me to put to him as to the existence of a special arrangement for drawbacks with this Company.

It is hardly to be wondered at, that the Colonel has only a "faint recollection" of an agreement made eight years ago, and which had never again to be brought prominently under his notice.

This note—with the admissions of Mr. Duncan and several of the Custom House Officers, who appeared as witnesses—will, I think, prove to the Board that a special arrangement with the Company did exist, and was acted upon almost daily for many years.

Gentlemen,

Having been led to understand that, in the correspondence referred to you, as the groundwork of an inquiry into certain matters in dispute between the Collector of Customs and Messrs. Metcalfe, Powell, and Co., our name has been dragged in by Mr. Duncan, in his official capacity, in a most unwarrantable manner, by accusing us of abstracting tea from the Customs warehouse, an imputation which we indignantly repudiate. We have the honor to request that you will not close your inquiry without taking evidence from our Mr. Stewart as to the facts of this case, which are not set forth by Mr. Duncan in their true light.

CUSTOM HOUSES ON THE RIVER MURRAY.
(PETITION RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 June, 1860.

To His Excellency Sir William Thomas Denison, Knight, &c., &c., &c.

The Petition of the Inhabitants of the Town and District of Albury, in the Colony of New South Wales, in Public Meeting assembled,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners have read with surprise and regret the Proclamation re-establishing Custom Houses on the River Murray, believing, as they do, that the course pursued will prove most disastrous to the prosperity of the Town and District of Albury.

That your Petitioners consider the establishment of Inland Custom Houses is wrong in principle and absurd in practice, and that the application of the present Customs' Laws to inland towns is injurious to their commercial interests and oppressive to the people in general.

That the distance of Albury from the metropolitan market renders it impossible to procure supplies overland from Sydney with anything like regularity or in good condition. Your Petitioners are therefore of opinion that the imposition of Customs' duties, on goods crossing the Murray from Victoria, instead of benefiting the Revenue will only tend to annihilate trade and injure and depreciate land and property in the district.

That the imposition of Customs' dues on goods imported into this Colony from Victoria is in reality to place a prohibition on the dealings of the honest trader, and offers a premium to the fraudulent practices of the smuggler, while the cost of a preventive service along the Murray frontier will entirely absorb the Revenue derived from the established dues.

That the operation of the Customs' Act in Albury, in the year 1855, resulted in the almost entire stagnation of trade and the serious depreciation of property in this district; and since the removal of this obnoxious impost the progress and prosperity of the Town is sufficient evidence of the importance of maintaining our commercial relations with Victoria.

Your Petitioners would, therefore, humbly pray that your Excellency, in consideration of the premises hereinbefore set forth, will be pleased to annul and revoke the Proclamation establishing Custom Houses on the River Murray.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

(FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT FROM THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL to THE HONORABLE THE COLONIAL SECRETARY, transmitting the Annual Report for 1858.

General Post Office,
Sydney, 25 May, 1859.

SIR,

In accordance with instructions, I have the honor to transmit my Fourth Annual Report on the Post Office Department, being that for the year 1858.

2. The delays that have occurred in transmitting the Reports of former years, have, as you are aware, been caused from the fact, that the First Annual Report was not called for until the 21st July, 1856; and that, since that period, it has been thought inexpedient by the Government to present more than one Annual Report during any one Session of Parliament.

EXTENSION OF INLAND SERVICE IN 1858.

New Postal Lines, to the extent of 872 miles, have been established during the past year.

In the Western District, the extended postal communication consists of a branch line from Bathurst to Caloola (12 miles); one from Molong to Obley (35 miles); an extension of the Wellington and Dubbo Line to Cannonbar (125 miles); a cross line connecting Dubbo and Munderoran (60 miles); and the extension to Condobolin on the Lachlan River, of the line already established as far as Bundaburra (85 miles).

In the Southern District, there has been established a branch line connecting the Oaks and Burragorang with Picton (14 miles); and one connecting Camden and the Oaks (21 miles). The coast line as far as Eden has been rendered complete by the establishment of a postal line from Bodalla to Bega (60 miles); and a line from Bombala to Delegate (11 miles) has carried the postal communication in that direction to within a mile or two of the Victorian frontier. A branch line from Marengo to Morangarell (25 miles) has also been established.

The postal extension in the Northern District comprises branch lines from Dungog to Bandon Grove (9 miles); Wallabadah to Quirindi (20 miles); Rocky River to Uralla (5 miles); a line from Goonoo Goonoo to Nundle (Hanging Rock), via Bowling Alley Point (35 miles); and one from Armidale to Walcha (32 miles). In addition to this, Ipswich and Warwick have been connected (103 miles); a coast line from Casino to Brisbane has been established (120 miles); and the connexion between the Northern and Western Districts has been facilitated by the establishment of a line from Wee Waa to Coonabarabran (100 miles).

The additional communication afforded on existing postal lines includes a second daily mail to Penrith (33 miles); a fourth weekly communication between Singleton and Murrurundi (71 miles); and between Hartley and Mudgee, via Bowenfels and Running Stream, with Branch Post to Rylstone (89 miles); a third weekly communication between Orange and Molong (21 miles); Molong and Wellington (43 miles); Merton and Muswellbrook (20 miles); and a communication twice instead of once a week between Stroud and Port Macquarie via Tinonee (98 miles); between Tinonee and Wingham (6 miles); Tinonee and Cundletown (4 miles); and between Glen Innes and Wellingrove (15 miles). The extra accommodation extends, consequently, over 400 miles of postal lines.

Several changes have been effected during the past year with respect to postal lines, chiefly consisting of the substitution of one line for another. Thus, the line from Cowra to Bundaburra takes the place of the line from Canowindra to Bundaburra; the communication to Paterson is from East Maitland via Largs, instead of from Morpeth via Hinton; the line from Stroud to Port Macquarie is via Tinonee instead of via Wingham, the line to Wingham being made a branch line from Tinonee, from which latter place also, instead of from Andrew's Inn, Cundletown is now reached. Farther north, the line from Jerry's Plains to Merton has also been discontinued; the Merton, Merriwa, and Cassilis Mails being now conveyed via Muswellbrook instead of via Singleton; and a direct Postal Line from Goonoo Goonoo to Nundle, on which the Mail was conveyed by Troopers, has been abandoned in favor of the route by Bowling Alley Point already alluded to. A line from North Brisbane to Burnett Inn has been substituted for that between Ipswich and Burnett Inn; whilst a line from Burnett Inn to Taroon has caused the line from Condamine to Taroon to be dispensed with. The line from Drayton to Burnett's Inn, which was discontinued in 1857, was resumed in 1858. The substitution of a line from Maryborough to Gladstone, in lieu of the one from Gayndah to Gladstone, completes the list of changes.

As it not unfrequently occurs, that the ordinary Mail from Brisbane to Ipswich has left before the arrival of the Sydney Steamer, a contract has been entered into which provides for the Mails being at once conveyed from Brisbane to Ipswich on all such occasions. I may here add, that Ipswich has benefited during 1858 by the appointment of a letter carrier.

The number of miles travelled by the Mails in 1858, was 1,454,242, being 164,856 in excess of the number travelled in 1857.

Twenty-five new Post Offices have been established during 1858, viz., in the Western District, at Caloola, near Bathurst; Obley, near Molong; Cannonbar, in a north-westerly direction beyond Dubbo; Sackville Reach, on the Hawkesbury; Bald Hills, near Tambaroora; and Condobolin, on the Lachlan. In the Southern District, Offices have been established at the Oaks and Burragorang to the westward of Picton; at Major's Creek and Araluen, on the line from Braidwood to Mullenderree; at Nimitybelle, on the line from Cooma to Bombala; at Morangarell, near Marengo; and at Delegate, to the southward of Bombala. The new Offices in the Northern District consist of Bandon Grove, to the north of Dungog; Largs, between East Maitland and Paterson; Quirindi, to the westward of Wallabadah; Toowoomba, 4 miles to the north of Drayton; Uralla, 5 miles to the south-east of Rocky River; Bowling Alley Point, on the Peel River Gold Diggings; Timbarra, near the Fairfield Gold Diggings; and Rockhampton, on the Fitzroy River. In the vicinity of Sydney, Offices have been established at Waverly, Five Dock, Canterbury, and Hunter's Hill.

The Office known at first as Vinegar Hill, has been designated Rouse Hill; that at Stoney Creek, having been removed to Iron Bark, has received the latter designation; and the Woolshed is now called Gunnedah, the Government name for the Township. The Post Offices at Falconer, to the north of Armidale, and at Running Stream, on the line to Mudgee, have been discontinued, chiefly from the impossibility of obtaining eligible persons to hold the office of Postmaster.

The number of Colonial Post Offices on the 31st December, 1858, was 221.

Six more persons have been authorized to sell Postage Stamps in the City, making the total number of places at which Stamps can be procured in Sydney, inclusive of the chief Office, 31. As many applications have been made to me by persons residing in Country Towns, for authority to sell Postage Stamps, I think it well to state that I have not up to the present time felt that I should be justified in granting such authority; as by so doing, the commission received by the Country Postmaster, and which forms part of their scanty remuneration, would be diminished. It becomes, however, a question, whether such authority to sell Postage Stamps should not for the sake of the Public be granted to persons residing in some of the larger Towns, the Postmasters of such Towns being compensated for the loss of commission by an increase to their salaries.

The

The extension of the Southern Railway to Campbelltown, in May last, and that of the Northern Railway to West Maitland, in July last, has been taken advantage of for the conveyance of the Mails on those lines. The extension of the Northern Railway was too trifling to prove of much advantage, but the extension of the Southern Railway has enabled me to accelerate the arrival of the Goulburn Mails in Sydney by 12 h. 45 m.; and to make the arrival of the Sydney Mails at Goulburn one hour earlier. With this exception, the position of the Post Office Department, with respect to the railway, remains exactly the same as pointed out in my last Report. It has to pay for the conveyance of the Mails the sum fixed by the Railway Department, viz., £11 10s. a mile per annum, and has no practical control over the hour of arrival or departure of the Mail trains.

Since the 1st November last the Mails to and from Armidale, on the Great North Road, have travelled by night as well as by day; by which change they arrive at Armidale 24 hours sooner; and at West Maitland, from Armidale, 15 hours earlier. Sydney, however, does not benefit by this latter acceleration, in consequence of no steamer leaving Morpeth in the evening.

I have already, in my former Reports, called attention to the inconvenience arising from the circumstance of the hour of arrival and departure of the Hunter River steamers being beyond the control of the Post Office Department. To obviate, however, this inconvenience, and to render existing circumstances as favorable as possible, the letters brought by the Hunter River steamers, when these arrive prior to 6.30 P.M., are delivered at the General Post Office up to 7 P.M. the same evening; and letters addressed to the Hunter River Districts are forwarded the same night, when posted before 7.30 P.M. In the first case the public had previously to wait until the following morning for their letters; and, in the second, two hours additional time for correspondence is afforded them, 5.30 P.M. having formerly been the time for closing such Mails. A sum of £100 per annum has been voted to be divided amongst the four clerks who are obliged to work after office hours, to ensure the above accommodation. Travelling by night has likewise been adopted on the Bathurst line, during eight months of the year, by which change the Mails are conveyed to their destination in 24 hours less time than in 1857. The hour for closing the Western Mails in Sydney has also been changed from half-past 4 P.M. to 1 P.M.,—an alteration that I was not disposed to consider advantageous, especially as regards Sydney, for it breaks through a postal practice that has for a long time been enforced, and has always been considered beneficial, viz.,—that of bringing the country Mails into the metropolis as early as possible in the morning, and despatching such Mails as late as practicable in the evening. This arrangement is readily understood,—economizes the time of the public,—enables them to post all their letters at the same hour; and, moreover, permits a record of the full business transactions of the day being despatched on the day itself. I am bound, however, in fairness, to state, that except from some intermediate towns, no complaints have arisen as to the present Western Time Table, which appears to be working well; but I trust that this vital change may not be considered to form a precedent for the future.

The following Tabular Statement shews the extent of Postal Lines, the total cost, and the average cost per mile of the Conveyance of Inland Mails.

"The results given by this Return, with reference to previous statements, appear at first sight somewhat anomalous, but are capable of explanation. There is nothing to notice in the portion relating to the railway, beyond the increase in the number of miles, and that the cost is still more than double the general average cost per mile.

The extent of "coach" postal lines shows a decrease of 74 miles, which must be explained by the extension of the railway; the use of horses instead of coaches on some lines; the circumstance that the substitution of one postal line for another has caused variations in the distance travelled; that the distances, as shown on the Post Office Map lately issued from the Survey Office, are not the same as those formerly acted on by this department; and lastly, that advantage has been taken of this map to rectify errors made in former years, as to the distances in question.

These remarks to some extent apply to "horse" postal lines, which it will be observed have only increased, according to the Return, 754 miles; whilst the extent of the new lines (all of which are horse lines) given by me is 872 miles. In neither of these cases is the accuracy of the amount given as the average cost per mile affected, so far as 1858 is concerned, although the comparison of the averages with those for 1857, and the increases or decreases shewn thereby, are necessarily made fallacious; but it has been thought better to make no change in the Return for 1857, which forms a statistical document for that year. It will be noticed that, according to this Return, there is a slight decrease in the general average cost per mile.

Great improvements have taken place during the past year, with respect to the delivery of letters in the Sydney Suburbs. Prior to the 1st November last, letters for the Glebe, Camperdown, Newtown, Redfern, and Paddington, were sent to the District Post Office, to remain there until called for. Since that date, however, a letter carrier has been appointed for each of these suburbs (one for Balmain having been appointed previously, viz., from the 1st April), and they start from the General Post Office every morning at 9 A.M., for the purpose of delivering the suburban letters. Those addressed to places beyond the limits of the delivery are left as heretofore at the District Office. The Balmain delivery includes all that portion bounded by the water and a line extending from the Dry Dock along College-street, William-street, Darling Road, and Jane-street, to Johnson's Bay. The Glebe delivery is bounded by the City boundary, the water, Johnstone's Creek, and the Parramatta Road as far as Annandale Bridge. The adjoining delivery of Camperdown includes the whole of that locality, and the Parramatta Road from the Cook's River Road to Annandale Bridge; the Old Cook's River Road and the Newtown Cemetery being its principal boundaries. The Newtown delivery extends as far as Blackstone's public-house on the Newtown Road, and includes a considerable portion of the Kingston Estate. The Redfern delivery comprises Redfern and a portion of Chippendale and South Sydney. The Paddington delivery extends to Carisbrook Cottage on the Old South Head Road, and includes a considerable portion of the locality north of that road.

Complaints have been made that the letters circulating between the City and the Suburbs, or passing from one Suburb to another, are subject to the Country rate of postage instead of the Town rate, which is the one payable when the letters are posted for delivery within the same Suburb, or posted in the City for delivery therein. This is a matter that has been regulated by the 15 Vic., cap. 12, and is one over which the Post Office has no control whatever.

NUMBER OF LETTERS, PACKETS, BOOK PACKETS, AND NEWSPAPERS.

The following Tabular Statements shew the number of Letters, Packets, Inland Book Parcels, and Newspapers, that passed through the Post Offices in New South Wales, during 1858. From the commencement of the year, I have received from all Post Offices a Return of Letters, Packets, and Newspapers posted in one week during each month, which enables me to give the Statistics under the head of my Report more correctly; but at the same time prevents any minute comparison with the results of former years, the Statistics relating to which were partial, and were based on Estimates or on Returns derived from the General Post Office alone.

On reference to my last Report, I find by the Returns given therein, that 3,515,870 letters, packets, and book packets are estimated to have passed through the New South Wales Post Offices in 1857; 2,214,411 being the number of newspapers (exclusive of provincial papers). By the Returns for 1858, it appears that 3,551,773 letters, packets, and book packets passed through the Post Offices of the Colony, and 2,808,140 newspapers. As the latter number includes the provincial newspapers, the increase of 1858 is at once accounted for. As the general increase in the number of all letters, &c., (35,903) is smaller, as will be seen by a Return hereafter given, than is the increase on ship letters alone, viz., 72,165; it would appear that there is a decrease in the number of inland letters, &c., as compared with those received and despatched during the preceding year. As previously explained, however, it may be that the number for the previous year was over estimated; although, as stated in my last Report, the best procurable data at that time were made use of.

It is worthy of notice, that the 2,408,863 newspapers delivered throughout the Colony were conveyed and distributed gratuitously, neither the General Revenue, nor that of the Post Office, benefiting by an accommodation that very largely increases the annual expenditure of the Department.

The following Tabular Statements relate solely to Ship Letters and Newspapers:—

The increase in the total number of ship letters is large, compared with the increase for 1857, which was only 15,242. It is, like the increase for the previous year, chiefly owing to the increase of the number of letters passing between the Colony and the United Kingdom. This class of letters has increased at the rate of nearly 28 per cent. in the number received, and at more than 11 per cent. in the number despatched. There is a singular falling-off in the number of letters passing between this Colony and the other Australasian Colonies. The increase for 1857 over 1856 was only 976, and during the past year there has been a decrease of 627 letters. I am unable to account for this decrease, unless it can be attributed to commercial depression.

The foreign letters, which comprise those not going through the United Kingdom, excluding, however, those sent via Marseilles and Trieste, continue to increase rapidly in number. The increase for 1857 was 1,353, whilst for the past year it was 3,802. No doubt this increase is owing to the influx of foreigners, and to the more direct and regular communication with India, China, &c., that exists now than did in former years.

The newspaper return is numerically less favourable than that of 1857, the increase in the total number being only 20,565, whereas in the former year it was 63,893.

The decrease is to be found chiefly in the newspapers passing between the United Kingdom and the Colony, which in 1858 shews an increase of only 27,267, against an increase in 1857 of 58,313.

The number of newspapers passing between New South Wales and the Australasian Colonies has fallen off considerably, there being a decrease of 11,615, against an increase in the previous year of 6,642.

The number of foreign newspapers shews an increase of 4,913, against a decrease in the previous year of 1,062.

21,415 letters posted in the Colony during 1858 were returned to the writers as unclaimed, viz., 15,560 addressed to places within the Colony; 1,849 addressed to Victoria; 755 to the United Kingdom; 153 to other places beyond the seas; and 3,098 returned as insufficiently stamped. There is a small decrease in the number of letters thus returned, 22,223 having been the number for 1857. The number of letters addressed to parties residing in the Colony, and returned to their writers as unclaimed, has, however, increased; the number being 2,560 more than in the previous year. The number of unclaimed letters returned from Victoria has considerably decreased, 1,849 being the number against 4,243 in the previous year. The same has to be said of letters returned to the United Kingdom, their number being only 755, against 1,040 in the former year. The number returned from other places beyond the seas has slightly increased, 153 being the number, against 120 in 1857.

The number of insufficiently stamped letters shews a decrease of 722, but it is nevertheless sufficiently large to prove that great carelessness still characterises the stamping of ship and overland Victorian letters, which are the only class of letters that are returned for being insufficiently stamped, the reason being that in these cases (the letters for the United Kingdom being excepted) there are no means of otherwise obtaining the amount of insufficient postage. 8,064 of the letters received from beyond seas were returned as unclaimed, viz., 4,999 to the United Kingdom, against 4,608 in the previous year; 2,204 to Victoria, against 1,779 in the year 1857; and 861 to other parts, against 1,266 in the former year.

REPORT FROM THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.—1858.

95,199 registered letters passed through the General Post Office in 1858, being an increase over the preceding year of 8,285.

The quantity of gold that passed through the office was 945 ozs.

The regular establishment of Escorts has of course had the effect of diminishing the quantity of gold forwarded by post.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

The following Tabular Statement shows the Revenue and Expenditure of 1858, compared with that for 1857.

YEAR.	REVENUE.	EXPENDITURE.	EXCESS OF EXPENDITURE.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.

Increase .....	4,238 2 5	5,642 8 5	1,404 6 0
Decrease .....	.....	.....	.....

This Return is far less favorable than one furnished by me in my last Report, in which I compared the Revenue and Expenditure of 1857 with that of 1856. The Revenue of 1858 has only increased about 12 per cent., whereas the increase for 1857 over that for 1856 was about 21 per cent. The Expenditure has increased at the rate of nearly 9 per cent., whilst in 1857 there was a decrease of nearly 3 per cent., and in 1856 of about 2 per cent. The excess of the Expenditure over the Revenue has increased £1,404 6s., whereas in 1857 the comparison between the Revenue and Expenditure with that of 1856 shewed an amount in favor of the former year of £8,030 14s. 4d. The following Statement will, however, give more detailed information on the subject.

Decrease	.....	12 12 0	218 10 10	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

This Return shews that an increase has taken place on the principal head of Revenue, viz., the sale of stamps, amounting to £4,469; whilst a decrease, amounting in the aggregate to £231 2s. 10d., has taken place on the items of private boxes in the General Post Office, and the postage on unpaid letters. The small decrease on the item of private boxes is probably caused from the increased facilities for delivery by letter carriers; and I attribute the decrease in the item of postage on unpaid letters, which includes those insufficiently stamped, to the fact that the public are more accurate in their stamping, and that samples of merchandize (a fertile source of surcharge) have been rarely transmitted through the Post, since the increased postage rates on this description of packets came into operation, viz., on 1st April, 1857. The sale of stamps is probably less than it would otherwise have been, from the same cause. The Expenditure, as might be expected, has increased under every head. That under the head of Salaries includes the following additions to the Department, viz., a Postal Inspector, a letter-carrier at Ipswich, and 5 suburban letter carriers, from 1st November, 1858; a letter-carrier at Balmain, from 1st April, 1858; and the appointment of 25 Country Postmasters at different dates during the year. The increase of expenditure under the head of Conveyance of Mails includes the sum of £1,050 disbursed by the Government, to meet the expense of Supplementary Mails transmitted to Melbourne, there to overtake the regular contract ships; as also provision for the 1,044 miles of additional postal communication which has been established during the year.

The

The expenditure on Contingencies, during the year 1858, has been swelled by the following items, viz.:—6 iron pillar boxes, for the country; stamps, seals, and stores for new Post Offices; uniforms for the additional letter-carriers; with, in some instances, the allowance of forage for country letter-carriers, and a new boat for the use of the General Post Office. These explanations will shew that the increase of expenditure is consequent on increased postal accommodation, and is not to be attributed to undue extravagance.

The Return does not include the £20,000 voted to cover the proportion to be paid by New South Wales towards Steam Postal Communication with England, as to which the account from Great Britain has not yet been finally rendered.

IMPROVED ORGANIZATION.

In my Report for 1855, I explained the system of sorting inland letters which was adopted from the 1st October of that year. This is still in existence, and works satisfactorily. At the same period, a general revision of the forms and books used on the despatch and receipt of Inland Mails took place; but as a Board was then enquiring into the state of the Department, it was thought desirable that the new forms should be referred to the Board before being finally adopted, and they were consequently submitted to them. Apparently, the matter was considered by the Board as one of detail, on which they were not called on to report, and which might safely be left to the head of the Department, and no further steps were taken with regard to these forms until the end of 1857, when I caused them to be printed, and subsequently brought them into use from the 1st January, 1858. The alterations may be explained as follows:—Prior to 1858, upon making up a Mail, the letters had to be classified, and the letters and newspapers counted, the necessary entries for both being made upon the letter bill under distinct headings. These letter bills formed, with the exception of a return furnished each November by the Country Postmasters, the only source from which the number of letters and newspapers passing through the Post Office could be determined. The information thus derived from the letter bills was entered in books kept in the Sydney and Country Post Offices, but the books kept in Sydney only were referred to for statistical purposes, as the books kept in the Country offices were not available for reference; and, in consequence, the letters passing between Country Post Offices, and not via Sydney, were not entered in the annual returns transmitted for the Blue Book; the returns, therefore, not being as full as was expedient. I may add, that even if the information given by the books kept at the Country Offices had been collected, which would have entailed much labor, the result would not have been strictly correct, from the fact that letters and newspapers passing through several offices on their way to their destination were counted and entered both on receipt and despatch at each intermediate office, and would consequently have appeared in the general return twice, thrice, and in some cases oftener. A further disadvantage attending the system was the time spent by the clerks and Postmasters in classifying and counting letters and newspapers, and that, too, at the very period when every moment was an object, and every delay prejudicial. The only advantage that could be put forth in favor of the system was, that in the event of a Mail robbery, the number of letters and newspapers contained in the Mail could be ascertained by reference to the office books. As this is not thought essential in Great Britain, where the letter bills substantially resemble those now adopted in this office, it did not appear to me, that for the sake of providing for a contingency, I should be justified in allowing a defective system to remain in existence, more especially as perfect reliance could not be placed upon the accuracy of the entries on the letter bills, owing to the short time allowed for making these out; and as an approximation to the number of letters and newspapers contained in any particular Mail could in almost every case be obtained from the despatching office. The entry of the number of letters and newspapers on each letter bill was therefore discontinued, and another mode employed for obtaining this information.

The amount of postage continued to be entered on the bills, but under two heads only—"Inland" and "Foreign," instead of appearing under 5 heads, as before. The duties connected with the letter bills were further simplified, by adopting the practice of dating them by means of the date stamp, instead of by handwriting, by which greater certainty of accuracy was ensured, and to some little extent, a supervision over Country Postmasters, as to their keeping their dated stamps in order, obtained. To render the duties as simple and compact as possible, the addresses of the registered letters, which had previously been entered on the margin of a time bill, were entered on the face of the the letter bill itself, which thus afforded every necessary information concerning the Mail it accompanied; and the time bill was dispensed with. To afford facilities for reference, a difference was made between the form of letter bill despatched from Sydney, that received from Country Post Offices at Sydney, and that used for cross Posts. As regards Country Post Offices, the letter bills used were formerly made out in duplicate,—the originals accompanying the Mail, and serving to check the receiving Postmaster's account,—and the duplicates being retained by the Postmasters until the expiration of the month, when they were sent to the General Post Office, as vouchers for the despatching Postmasters. The use of these duplicates was to check the credit side of the Postmasters' accounts, on which was entered the amount of postage originally debited, and for which they claimed credit, the letters on which the postage was charged not having been delivered by them; but it is clear that these duplicates could be no real check on the accounts, as both were made out by the same party. It also not unusually occurred, that during the whole month there was nothing to credit; nevertheless the "margins," as they were called, were drawn out, forwarded to the Chief Office, and there underwent the full process of examination. To simplify matters and ensure a more effectual check, a distinctive letter bill was adopted, only to be used when letters bearing postage for which the despatching Postmaster claimed credit, or when letters prepaid in money in lieu of stamps, were forwarded in the Mail. This bill accompanies the ordinary letter bill, and is retained by the receiving Postmaster, by whom it is afterwards transmitted to the Chief Office, to check the account of the despatching Postmaster; thus reducing considerably the labors of the Postmasters, and of the clerk who checks the accounts, and furnishing, in addition, a more efficient voucher, seeing that the receiving Postmaster, who is not interested in the accounts, has now to transmit this extra bill, as examined by him, instead of a duplicate bill, reaching this Office through the Postmaster, whose accounts such bill was supposed to check.

Previous to 1858, it was customary to allow country Postmasters to retain the letter bills received at their respective offices until the end of the month, when they were sent, with the Postmaster's accounts, to the Chief Office. As no means could well be adopted in the Account Branch to ascertain whether all the letter bills (which formed the only check upon the accounts made out by the Postmasters) were sent up to Sydney, it became necessary to devise some means to effect that object; and it is now made incumbent on the receiving country Postmaster to send back to the despatching office, by the return Mail, the letter bill received by him, after signing, stamping, and entering the particulars thereof in his Letter Bill Book; the despatching Postmaster being made responsible for the transmission to Sydney of the full number of bills despatched by him, and being instructed, in the event of any not being returned to him, to report the circumstance at once. The return of letter bills to the despatching office, as before explained, does not include the extra bills despatched, nor has it reference to those sent to the General Post Office.

The unclaimed letters transmitted to Sydney from the country offices were, prior to 1858, always forwarded with the ordinary letters, which led to confusion and mistakes, and to time being occupied in sorting these when such time was more urgently required by the Inland Branch for the treatment of the current letters. This inconvenience has been obviated by transmitting such letters direct, in sealed packets, to the office where they are to be dealt with, a special letter bill accompanying them. The alterations in the Letter Bill Books correspond in a great measure with the changes in the letter bills. In the country offices, the two books (Receiving and Despatching Mails) formerly in use, have been amalgamated. In the Sydney office the "rough" books, formerly used to enter the particulars of the letter bills have been discarded, the particulars being at once entered in the "fair" book. The books that had to be kept by the letter carriers have also been set aside, the number of letters taken out by them for delivery no longer being counted; and a sufficient check, as regards the postage received by them, being maintained by the use of one general book, which includes all their accounts. The mode now adopted for obtaining a return of the number of letters, packets, book packets, and newspapers, is as follows. Every Postmaster is required to send in a return of the number of letters, &c., posted at his office from the 16th to the 22nd of each month, the Sydney Inland Letter Office following the same course. From these returns the average for each month is derived, and the yearly average calculated. A complete return of the ship letters received at and despatched from the General Post Office being kept, the returns thus required from each Post Office are sufficiently accurate for all practical purposes, and the result is certainly more reliable and correct than any return of a similar kind yet furnished by this Department. I have elsewhere referred to a time bill, upon the margin of which was entered the addresses of registered letters, and which was enclosed in the mail-bag. These time bills were only sent from Sydney, in addition to which a way bill, which however specified no time, accompanied the Mails upon some of the principal lines. The addresses of the registered letters being no longer entered on the Sydney time table, it was decided to adopt one that would give the name of every office at which Mails were received or despatched, the number of the bags, together with the hour of arrival and despatch; and that this bill should be conveyed by the mailman or guard to be presented at every office on the road, the necessary entries being made thereon by the Postmasters. This time bill is now in use throughout the Colony, and, when duly filled in, is transmitted to Sydney, by which means the office is in the possession of valuable information concerning the transmission of every Mail. I anticipate being able further to simplify and improve many of the forms I have alluded to in this section, and to render them still better adapted to effect the purposes for which they are intended.

MISCELLANEOUS.

I alluded so fully in my Report for 1857 to the short comings of the Mail Contract on which the Colony depended for its Postal Communication with the United Kingdom, that it is unnecessary I should in this Report go over the same ground. I append, however, a return shewing the actual days of arrival and departure of the Mail Contract Steamers during 1858. The days of despatch have in every instance been adhered to, except in the case of the January Mail, which was detained two days for the accommodation of the public, in order to allow time for replies being sent to the correspondence arriving by the "Simla."

The Return shews that with one exception, that of the "Emeu," which brought the June Mails, the rule has been that the Mails should invariably arrive after the stipulated time. There was no September Mail; and the July Mail did not arrive until the succeeding month. I sincerely trust that the Post Office Report for 1859 will shew a very different and improved state of things.

I am glad to be able to state that the Department has at length obtained the services of a Postal Inspector, an appointment that has been urgently needed for a very long period. During the two months of 1858 that succeeded his appointment, Mr. Levinge, the gentleman selected, was chiefly engaged in arranging Time Tables, and making himself master of various points that required attention, both as to the Postal Contracts and Postal Routes. I cannot, therefore, give in this Report the details of his first Tour of Inspection, which embraced the main Southern Road as far as Albury, and some of the Southern Branch Lines. I anticipate the greatest benefit from Mr. Levinge's appointment.

The Mail Contracts and the Country Post Offices require a supervision far more minute and more local than can be afforded by correspondence with and from the General Post Office; whilst, as regards the Postal Routes to be pursued, and the new Postal Lines to be established, I am too often dependent for the decisions arrived at, on the opinion of residents who may take a one-sided, and sometimes an interested, view of the matter.

Foremost of the present requirements of the Department, I must again advert to the absolute necessity that exists for a new General Post Office. The Annual Reports of 1855 and 1856 allude to different extensions and alterations that have from time to time been made; and I may state in this Report, that at the present time a new Inland Room is in course of erection, which will be of considerable benefit. But these alterations necessarily afford but inadequate and partial accommodation. The disconnection of the various offices, and the general want of space, continue to be severely felt, and can never be effectually remedied until a Post Office, commensurate with the importance of the Colony and its metropolis, is completed.

A new Post Office, on an extended scale, would not only allow of branches being added to the Department, but would consolidate the work of the office, and concentrate the duties of its clerks. At present the Report published by a Government Board, held on the Post Office, in 1851, is as applicable as ever, and I cannot do better than transcribe it:—

"THE

"THE PRESENT POST OFFICE.

"This is, in our opinion, very ill adapted for the business required to be carried on in it; and its unfitness will be more and more felt as that business increases; nor is it practicable (according to the opinion of the Colonial Architect) to alter or extend the accommodation (save temporarily) so urgently required, owing to the walls and other parts of the building being in so dilapidated a state, and so weakened by repeated alterations. Under these circumstances, and considering that the very large piece of ground on which the present Post Office stands is extremely valuable, and would, if sold, in all probability realise a sum nearly sufficient to cover the cost of erection of a new Post Office, we are of opinion that it would be greatly to the advantage of the public if a site were reserved on some of the ground in the Old Barrack Square, still undisposed of, and a new Post Office erected thereon on a scale suitable to the present and increasing wants of the community, and in keeping with the great improvements now going on in that quarter of the city; and that when completed the present Post Office, and the ground on which it stands, should be sold to the public."

Referring to the branches which I have stated might be added to the Department, the establishment of a Money Order system, in connection with the Post Office, would be, with the present building, impossible; and yet its establishment in the sister Colony of Victoria, points to the necessity of preliminary steps being shortly taken by this Colony, towards being in a position to establish an institution which is so popular in the Mother Country. The Telegraph wires too have for some time past been brought to the Post Office, but except in or over the passage there is no space for a Telegraph Room, nor has the building of such room been commenced. In every point of view, therefore, the erection of a new Post Office is a work that cannot long be deferred.

I must here also bring under the notice of the Government, the applications that have from time to time been received from many of the large provincial towns, for Government Post Offices to be erected therein. The increasing postal business of these towns, the disadvantages attending the employment of Postmasters who have other engagements, and the gradually increasing staff of provincial letter carriers that has become necessary, are all strong reasons for the adoption of some such measure.

It may be that it would be expedient and economical to have Telegraph Stations under the same roof as these Post Offices, although I think it doubtful whether the same party could discharge the duties conjointly of Postmaster and Telegraph Clerk.

I have, &c.,

W. H. CHRISTIE,

Postmaster General.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

POST OFFICE.

(FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT FROM THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL to THE UNDER SECRETARY, TREASURY, transmitting the Annual Report on the Post Office Department for 1859.

*General Post Office,
 Sydney, 22 June, 1860.*

SIR,

In accordance with former instructions I have the honor to transmit, for the information of the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, and to be laid before the Legislative Assembly, the Fifth Annual Report on the Post Office Department, being that for the year 1859.

EXTENSION OF INLAND SERVICE IN 1859.

On the 31st December, 1858, the whole extent of the Postal Lines in New South Wales was 7,743 miles. On the same date of last year the extent was 8,737 miles, inclusive of 1,558 miles now in the Colony of Queensland, shewing an aggregate increase of Postal Lines amounting to 994 miles during the past year.

The postal lines established during the year extend over a distance of 1,298 miles. On 93 miles of this distance the Mails are conveyed by coach; on 1,205 miles on horseback.

The new lines in the Western District comprise a branch line from Sackville Reach to Lower Portland (6 miles); a cross line connecting Mangrove Creek with Gosford (about 12 miles); one connecting Mudgee and Wellington (57 miles); a branch line from Mudgee to Merrendee (25 miles); the extension of the Mudgee and Mendooran line to Coonamble (90 miles); and that of the Bathurst and Calula line to Long Swamp (10 miles).

Furthermore, the line which extended in 1858 to Condobolin, on the Lachlan River, has been prolonged to within 60 miles of the junction of the Lachlan and Murrumbidgee, and thence to Lang's Crossing Place, on the latter river (210 miles).

This line is of great importance to parties engaged in forwarding stock to the sister Colony of Victoria, who had previously no means of receiving intelligence during the overland journey of the state of the Victorian market, or of receiving instructions from their employers.

On all the lines mentioned above, a weekly communication on horseback has been carried out.

I have further to note the extension to Pyramul (4 miles) of the line hitherto terminating at Pure Point, and upon which extension a bi-weekly postal communication on horseback has been established; as also a direct line by coach, connecting Parramatta and Richmond (22 miles), six days in the week.

The additional postal lines in the Southern District include a branch line from Goulburn to Kenny's Point (28 miles); one from Burrowa to Reid's Flat (40 miles); a cross line passing through Reid's Flat and connecting Wheeo and Cowra (65 miles); a branch line from Braidwood to Nerriga (46 miles); and the extension of the Bodalla and Bega line to Pambula via Merimbula (30 miles); which last extension effectually completes the entire coast line from Wollongong to Eden.

On the above lines the Mails were, during the past year, conveyed weekly and on horseback.

In addition to these lines the Southern District has benefited by the establishment of a line from Tumut to Adelong (10 miles); and from Tarcutta to Adelong (30 miles); the communication being effected on horseback, on both lines, three times a week.

A branch line has also been established from Major's Creek to Oranmore (20 miles); and a cross line from Lang's Crossing Place to Deniliquin (80 miles); this last being a continuation of the Lachlan River postal line already referred to. On both these lines the communication is bi-weekly by horse post.

To these additions I have finally to add a line from Braidwood to Nelligen, on the Clyde River (35 miles), which line is in connection with the Sydney steamer; and one from Gundaroo to Queanbeyan via Gininderra (31 miles). The Mails on these two lines are conveyed twice a week by coach.

In the Northern Districts there have been established branch lines from Gosford to Kincumber (7 miles); Gresford to Eccleston (20 miles); Tinonee to Redbank (12 miles); East Maitland to Mount Vincent (16 miles); and Murrurundi to Oakey Creek (90 miles). Upon these lines the communication is weekly, and on horseback.

On the following branch lines the communication is twice a week, and by horse post, viz., from Singleton to Fordwich (16 miles); and from Tenterfield to Table Land, at the Timbarra gold diggings (16 miles). To these I have to add a fortnightly communication between Gladstone and Rockhampton (70 miles); and a weekly one between Dalby and Gayndah (115 miles); and between Condamine and Taroon (80 miles); the last being a line again resumed. On the three last lines the Mails are conveyed on horseback.

A line from the General Post Office, Sydney, to Randwick (5 miles), upon which the Mails are conveyed six days a week by vehicle, completes the list of new postal lines for 1859.

It was found necessary, from difficulties connected with the Government Punt, to discontinue during the past year the postal line from Sydney to Gosford via Peat's Ferry (48 miles), and to substitute a communication via Mangrove Creek. There being already a line from Camden to Oaks, the line from Picton to Oaks (10 miles) was discontinued.

The line from the junction of the Pambula and Kameruka Roads to Bega (56 miles) has likewise been discontinued; the present communication being from Bombala to Bega via Pambula.

The line from Drayton to Burnett Inn (130 miles) was discontinued during the past year.

The lines from Goode's Inn to Gayndah and from Dubbo to Mendooran were not in existence during the whole year, but came into operation, the first on the 1st April, and the last on the 1st of August.

The contract taken for the conveyance of Mails three times a day between the General Post Office and the Railway Terminus (2 miles) ceased at the expiration of 1858, the service having since been performed by the department.

The contract for the conveyance of Mails to and from the Chief Office and Redfern, Glebe, Newtown, St. Peter's, Camperdown, and Petersham (10 miles), daily, has also ceased, in consequence of the appointment of suburban letter carriers. There only remains a contract for the convenience of St. Peter's (5 miles), the Petersham Mails being conveyed by railway.

Various changes in postal routes have taken place during the past year. A line from Richmond to Camden (34 miles) has been substituted for the line from Windsor to Camden (39 miles). The communication to Bundaburra and Condobolin again starts from Canowindra, instead of from Cowra.

The

The Mails are now conveyed between Orange and Wellington via Ironbarks (60 miles), instead of by Molong (73 miles), which, besides being a shorter route, is more advantageous to the mining population of the district.

The performance of the contract for the conveyance of Mails between Dubbo and Canonbar (125 miles) having become almost impossible, the line was made to terminate at Drungalee (101 miles). A postal line starting from Mudgee and passing through Avisford, Louisa Creek, Richardson's Point, and Pure Point (16 miles) has replaced two lines, one of which ran from Mudgee to Avisford and Louisa Creek (14 miles), and the other from Mudgee to Richardson's Point and Pure Point (14 miles).

The line from Camden to Oaks (10 miles) has been made to pass by Brownlow and Lowe's Hill (14 miles), which prolongs the distance, but affords greater accommodation.

The Ipswich and Burnett Inn line has been reverted to in lieu of that from Brisbane to Burnett Inn; and a line from Gayndah to Taroona has taken the place of the one from Burnett to Taroona.

The twice a day communication between Sydney, St. Mark's, and Watson's Bay (6 miles), and the daily Mail between the General Post Office and Paddington and Waverly (4 miles) have been discontinued.

There is now a daily post to and from Sydney, St. Mark's, Waverly, and Watson's Bay (7 miles), and a letter carrier delivery at Paddington.

Very considerable additional accommodation has been afforded on existing postal lines during the past year.

A second daily Mail has been established between Parramatta and Windsor (19 miles). The communication between Goulburn and Yass (49 miles) has been made six times instead of thrice a week; as has also been the case on the line from Campbelltown to Picton via Riversford (17 miles).

The Mails have been conveyed three times instead of once a week between Oaks and Burragorang (22 miles); Orange and Ironbarks (30 miles); and Deniliquin and Moama (50 miles).

A thrice instead of twice a week communication has been established between Gundagai and Tumut (20 miles); Yass and Albury (196 miles); and Tarcutta and Wagga Wagga (25 miles). A second weekly communication has been arranged between Goulburn and Binda (53 miles); Binda and Tuena (25 miles); Wagga Wagga and Deniliquin (180 miles); Braidwood and Moruya (47 miles); Bateman's Bay and Moruya (20 miles); Pambula and Eden (10 miles); Louisa Creek, Richardson's Point, and Pure Point (6 miles); Port Macquarie, Rolland's Plains, and Kempsey (40 miles); and Dungog and Bandon Grove (10 miles). The foregoing details shew an increased accommodation during the past year of 819 miles.

The Mails between Cooma and Bombala were conveyed during the past year by coach, thereby giving the district the benefit of the book post which a horse post does not give.

The following Tabular Statement shews the Extent of Postal Lines, the Total Cost, and the Average Cost per mile of the Conveyance of Inland Mails:—

This

This Return is satisfactory. It shews an increase in the total extent of postal lines of about 50 per cent. over that afforded in 1858; and, at the same time, a marked diminution in the increase of the total cost of conveyance of Inland Mails. 1858, compared with 1857, shewed an increase in the total extent of postal lines of 695 miles, and an increase in the total cost of Inland Mails of £3,664 8s. 11d.; whereas, in the past year, an increase of 994 miles in the extent of postal lines took place, whilst the increase of cost was only £3,053 10s. 4d. The extent of railway lines, and their cost, continues the same.

There is a slight variation in the figures given, as having reference to the Statistical Return for 1858, but it is caused by my being able to give some postal distances more correctly.

Forty-six new Post Offices have been established during 1859, viz.,—in the Western District at Long Swamp, 10 miles from Calula; at Long Creek and Campbell's Creek, on the Meeroo Gold Fields; at Coonamble, 90 miles from Mundooran; at Drungalee, 101 miles from Dubbo; at Lower Portland, situate at the junction of the Colo and Hawkesbury Rivers; at Pitt Town, about 4 miles from Windsor, on the line to Wilberforce; at Eastern Creek, between Prospect and St. Mary's; at Rydal, between Hartley and Bathurst; at Merrendee, 25 miles from Mudgee; at Black Rock, between Ironbarks and Wellington; at Keen's Swamp, on the line from Hartley to Mudgee, near to the site of the office at Running Stream (discontinued); at Kirkconnell, on the main Western Road between Bathurst and Meadow Flat; and, finally, at Cobbora, at the junction of the postal lines from Dubbo to Mundooran, and Mudgee to Mundooran.

In the Southern District there have been established offices at Bateman's Bay, at the mouth of the Clyde River; at Nelligen on the Clyde River; at Kenny's Point, Lake George; at the Adelong Diggings; at Gillinbah, between Wagga Wagga and Lang's Crossing Place, on the south side of the Murrumbidgee; at Reid's Flat, about midway between Wheeo and Cowra; at Lang's Crossing Place, on the Murrumbidgee; at South Gundagai, on the south bank of the Murrumbidgee, on the Main Southern Road; at Ginninderra, between Gundaroo and Queanbeyan; at Oranmore, about 20 miles from Braidwood; at Nerriga, about 46 miles from Braidwood; at Boro, at the junction of the Goulburn and Braidwood and Goulburn and Queanbeyan Roads; and at Woonona, about 6 miles from Wollongong, on the road to Appin.

The office at Moulamein, between Deniliquin and Balranald, and the one at Euston, between Balranald and Moorna, have been re-established. The offices established in the Northern District are, at Miller's Forest, on the Lower Hunter; at Eccleston, beyond Gresford; at Redbank, on the Manning River; at Kincumbar, near Gosford; at Oakey Creek, about 90 miles from Murrurundi, and about 15 miles from Coolah; at Fordwich, 16 miles from Singleton; at Ulmarra and Lawrence, on the Clarence River; at Mount Vincent, 16 miles from East Maitland; at Gloucester, on the line from Stroud to Tinonee; at Maryland, between Tenterfield and Warwick, on the frontier of Queensland; at Limeburner's Creek, between Raymond Terrace and Stroud; at Table Land, Timbarra Gold Diggings; at Lismore, between Casino and Richmond River Heads (Ballina); and at Moonbi, about 14 miles from Tamworth, on the Main Northern Road.

In the vicinity of Sydney, offices have been established at Randwick, on the Coogee Road, and at Bourke-street South, Surry Hills.

The Post Office at Canonbar was discontinued from 1st January of last year; and that at Pure Point from 1st February.

The office at Byron has been removed to Inverell, which name it now bears; and the office at Richardson's Point has been designated Windeyer, that being the Government name for the township.

The separation of Moreton Bay reduced the number of New South Wales Post Offices by fifteen; the total number of such offices on the 31st December, 1859, was 252, being an increase of 31 over the number at the end of last year.

Twelve more persons have been authorized to sell Postage Stamps in Sydney, making the number of places in the city at which Postage Stamps can be procured 43, including the chief office.

The

REPORT FROM THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.—1859.

The necessity for authorizing persons residing out of Sydney other than Postmasters to sell stamps has been recognised, and licenses have been issued to two persons, one residing at Balmain, and the other at Newcastle.

Four additional Iron Letter Receivers have been erected in Sydney, and two in the Country Districts, during the past year.

NUMBER OF LETTERS, PACKETS, BOOK PACKETS, AND NEWSPAPERS.

In my Report for 1858 I gave, for the first time, estimated Returns of the number of letters, &c., based upon the Returns received month by month from every Post Office in the Colony. As might have been expected on the introduction of the new system, errors and omissions occurred, which I trust I have been enabled to avoid in the Returns given for 1859. As the comparison however between 1858 and 1859 might mislead if the former Return were now adhered to, I have caused the data for the year 1858 to be carefully checked, and fresh information obtained, and have altered the Returns accordingly, which change will account for the Statistical Return for 1858, as now given, not being precisely the same as that which appeared in the previous Report.

The following Tabular Statements shew the Number of Letters, Packets, and Book Parcels, and of Newspapers, that passed through the Post Offices of New South Wales (that of Sydney included) during 1858 and 1859 :—

On

On examining the Return that relates to letters, it appears that the town letters, i. e., letters posted in Sydney for delivery therein, have increased at the rate of nearly 34 per cent.; and the country letters, viz., those circulating between the Country Post Offices, or between Sydney and the Country, have increased nearly 15 per cent.

The former augmentation no doubt arises from the increasing practice of transmitting letters by post in place of by messengers, and also from the advantages offered by the third delivery.

The ship letters received have decreased at the rate of rather more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., and those despatched have increased at the rate of nearly 4 per cent. I shall have occasion further on to comment on the class of letters that cause the above increase and decrease.

The total number of Letters passing through the Colony has increased at the rate of more than 13 per cent.

The next Return that claims attention is that relating to packets and book parcels.

The inland packets closed against inspection appear to have increased at the rate of nearly 7 per cent., whilst those open at the ends have decreased at the enormous rate of nearly 32 per cent. These results require some explanation, as they are so different to what might have been anticipated.

The inland packets and parcels have, since the 1st April, 1857, been divided into two classes—1st, Those still allowed to be posted under the 8th Clause of the 15th Victoria, No. 12, and which are closed against inspection; and, 2nd, Those posted with the ends open. The former class includes merely a few articles excepted when the 8th Clause of 15th Victoria, No. 12, was repealed by the 20th Victoria, No. 26, whilst the latter comprehends almost every description of packets or book parcels transmitted through the post.

That a considerable decrease would take place with regard to Packets closed against inspection (which were formerly a numerous class, but are now reduced to a few articles; and seeing that the postage on closed packets is ordinarily letter rate, whilst on packets open to inspection, it is a reduced rate) might have been anticipated.

It might further be supposed that the public would not transmit the same description of articles through the post upon the condition of leaving the ends of their parcels open.

On the other hand, the reasons that would have led me to expect a decrease on the number of packets closed against inspection would, on the whole, have led me to expect an increase in the number of those transmitted with the ends open.

I can only account for the very different results by believing that the Country Postmasters may, through want of attention or intelligence, have allowed packets closed at both ends to be transmitted at reduced rates of postage, which packets ought, when closed, to have been charged letter rate; and have also failed to classify correctly in their Returns the two descriptions of packets, by misapprehending the headings of the columns of the Return Form sent to them to be filled up. However this may be, it is clear that, on the whole number of packets forwarded in 1859, there is a decrease of nearly 16 per cent., which I account for by the absence of packets containing packets of merchandize.

The ship packets received shew an increase of nearly 12 per cent.; and those despatched have increased at the rate of more than 3 per cent.

The General Return having reference to newspapers comes next under examination. The most remarkable fact in this Return is the large increase shewn in the number of Colonial newspapers. The increase is at the rate of more than 18 per cent. There is a small decrease in the ship newspapers received, and an increase in those despatched of about 2 per cent.

It is worthy of note that, of the 3,178,028 newspapers passing through the New South Wales Post Offices, only 256,051 have contributed during the past year to the Colonial Revenue, leaving 2,921,977 which were forwarded to and from all parts of the Colony gratuitously.

A trifling additional sum is, however, collected from newspapers posted upwards of seven days after publication.

Decrease ..	13,095	....	2,611	....	3,098	....	....

From the letter Return it appears that the ship letters despatched to the Australasian Colonies have decreased in a trifling degree, and that those received have only increased at the rate of nearly 2 per cent.

The letters sent to and through the United Kingdom have increased at the rate of nearly 5 per cent. ; but those received have decreased at about the same rate; such decrease, in fact, causing the decrease in the total number of ship letters received, which has been already commented on.

The letters passing between this Colony and Foreign Countries, and British Possessions not already alluded to have increased; those despatched at the rate of more than 29 per cent., and those received at the rate of nearly 37 per cent.

The total number of ship letters passing through the office during 1859 shews an increase of less than 2 per cent. There is a marked falling off perceptible when this increase is compared with that for 1858, which was 11 per cent.

The

The Return of packets and book parcels is more satisfactory. With the exception of those received from the Australasian Colonies there is an increase in every class of packets, &c., the increase in the total number being at the rate of nearly 1 per cent.

The newspaper Return shows results somewhat similar to that of the letters, and the increase in their total number is almost nominal.

The newspapers sent to the Australasian Colonies have decreased at the rate of nearly 9 per cent., whilst those received have increased nominally only.

The number of newspapers despatched to the United Kingdom have increased at the rate of more than 9 per cent, but those received have decreased at the rate of rather more than 1 per cent.

Of the Foreign newspapers those despatched shew a decrease of more than 15 per cent., but those received an increase of more than 12 per cent.

Taken as a whole, it will be seen that these Returns shew a very trifling increase on the number of ship letters, packets, and newspapers passing through the department during 1859, compared with the number for 1858.

19,838 letters were returned to the writers as unclaimed; of these 15,083 were addressed to places within the Colony; 3,498 to the Australasian Colonies; 1,164 to the United Kingdom; and 93 to other places beyond the seas.

The first named class are less in number by 477 than they were in 1858, when they amounted to 15,560. Considering the large increase in the total number of inland letters, this is satisfactory.

The letters returned that were originally addressed to the Australasian Colonies have increased, the number being for 1858 only 3,084. This result is somewhat unaccountable, seeing that the letters despatched to such Colonies during 1859 shew a decrease of 207 compared with the number for 1858.

The letters addressed to the United Kingdom have decreased, the number for 1858 being 1,260. This shews a more satisfactory delivery, as the total number of letters despatched to that country during 1859—exhibit, when compared with the number for 1858, an increase of nearly 5 per cent.

The number of unclaimed letters addressed to other Foreign parts for 1858 was 114, so that there is a decrease in this class of letters also.

The number of letters addressed to the Colony, and returned as unclaimed, is as follows:—To the Australasian Colonies 2,846, against 2,710 in 1858; to the United Kingdom 5,105, against 5,009 in 1858; to other parts beyond the seas 295, against 296 in 1858.

The increase in the first class of letters is explained by the increase in the correspondence; but in the case of the English letters a decrease is what might have been expected, seeing that that class of correspondence has decreased at the rate of more than 4 per cent.

The number of letters returned as insufficiently stamped was 2,402, against 3,098 in 1858. The decrease shews that there is a slight improvement in the care taken by the public to stamp their letters sufficiently; although the list is swelled by the misconception on their part as to the postage to be paid on letters addressed to Queensland on the separation of that Colony from New South Wales. Considerable carelessness is, however, evidenced by the fact, that 3,087 letters were returned, the majority of which were wholly unstamped, whilst others had defective addresses. 319 of the letters returned to the writers contained money, or articles of value; 112 of such letters having been registered. 89,260 registered letters passed through the General Post Office during 1859, being 5,939 less than during the previous year. Of this number 67,934 were Inland Letters; 14,947 passed to and from the United Kingdom; 5,886 to and from the Australasian Colonies; and 493 to and from other parts beyond the seas.

1,414 ounces of gold were received at the General Post Office during the past year, being 469 ounces more than in 1858.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

The following Tabular Statement gives the Revenue and Expenditure for 1859, compared with that for 1858.

YEAR.	REVENUE.			EXPENDITURE.			EXCESS OF EXPENDITURE.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.

Decrease .....	.....			.....			1,861	18	9

This Return is rather more favorable than the similar one given in my last Report. The Revenue has only increased at the rate of about 9 instead of 12 per cent., but, on the other hand, the Expenditure has increased at the rate of less than 8 per cent., instead of 9 per cent., which was the increase for 1858. There is consequently a decrease in the excess of the Expenditure over the Revenue, whereas, in 1858, there was an increase.

It may be well to state that the Postal Revenue from Queensland was lost to this Colony from the beginning of December last, during which month the Postal Expenditure, in connection with that Colony, was defrayed by the Queensland Government.

The following Statement gives further details on the subject.

Decrease	....			....			....			....			....			....			1,935	0	7

The Revenue has increased under every head; the sale of Postage Stamps, the chief source of revenue, shewing, as a matter of course, the largest increase.

The Expenditure shews a considerable increase under the head of Salaries; whilst, on the other hand, the amount paid by the Department under the head of Contingencies has decreased by £1,935 0s. 7d.

The increase of Expenditure on the item of Conveyance of Mails, of £2,150 13s. 11d., is about one-half that of 1858 over 1857.

The increase in the item of Salaries is owing, firstly, to the appointment of the Postal Inspector, of a Letter Carrier at Ipswich, and of six Suburban Letter Carriers for Paddington, Redfern, the Glebe, Newtown, Camperdown, and Balmain.

Of the above appointments, however, it is but right to state that the Postal Inspector and five of the Suburban Letters Carriers commenced duty on the 1st November, and the Balmain Letter Carrier on the 1st July of the preceding year.

The Clerical Staff of the General Post Office has cost about £150 more than it did in 1858, and the rest of the staff, including a Mail Boy and two Newspaper Sorters for six months more in 1859 than in 1858, to about £336.

Forty-six new Post Offices have also been established during the year, each Postmaster being paid at the rate of £12 per annum, and the salaries of some of the Country Postmasters have been increased as compensation for the increased amount of business transacted by them.

The postal facilities above alluded to would have caused a still greater increase of postal expenditure in the item of Salaries, had it not been that, on the 1st March last, the boatmen attached to the General Post Office, together with boats, were handed over to the Government Boat Establishment in Sydney, and placed under the order of the Harbor Master.

The decrease in the amount of Contingencies is chiefly to be accounted for by several items of expense,—such as stationery, stamps, stores, seals, and fuel, which were met by the Department in 1858,—being made chargeable on other Departments during the year 1859.

The new postal lines, and the increase of communication on old established lines, fully enumerated in section No. 1, more than justify the increase of expenditure under the head of Conveyance of Mails; for, I am happy to state, that chiefly from cheaper Mail Contracts in 1859 than in 1858, the Government have been enabled from savings in other Contracts, to pay claims for increased Mail communication to the amount of £2,758 in excess of the increased expenditure, which is set forth in the Return.

A perusal of this Table does not afford grounds for much congratulation, and a great improvement in punctuality must take place before the Colonists will be satisfied that the advantages derived by them are fully commensurate with the amount of the New South Wales subsidy.

For the first four months of arrival, and for the first month of despatch, the steamers were those of the Royal Mail Company; during the last eight months the vessels of the Peninsular and Oriental Company have brought the mails; but in no single instance during the year did they arrive on the day specified. In two cases the homeward mails were despatched before the arrival of the outward ones, and in one instance the outward mails reached Sydney on the day of the departure of the homeward mails. In every case a supplementary mail was deemed expedient, the outward mail being invariably too late, and the Colony was thus put to additional expense to obviate the inconvenience experienced by the non-fulfilment of the contract.

In four cases out of the eight, a Colonial steamer was specially engaged to convey the supplementary mails, at a cost to the Colony of £300.

In the four other cases supplementary mails were sent down by the Colonial steamers, the usual gratuity of one halfpenny a letter being paid thereon; the total sum thus paid being £1 7s. 1d.

To meet the expenditure thus caused, the only amount received was the proceeds from the late fees on letters so sent, which are estimated to amount in the aggregate to £183 5s.

The letters from the country that arrived too late for the mail steamer, but in time for the supplementary mail, were transmitted without any extra fee being paid thereon.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

I must again call attention to the urgent necessity for a new General Post Office. The want of space and the disconnection of the various offices are inconveniences that are being more felt every day, and the prospect of a Post Office being built that may be equal to the requirements of this increasing city seems more remote than ever, seeing that the site which has been available for eight years past for that purpose is no longer so, and that no new site has as yet been purchased.

I have been in communication, during the past year, with the Secretary to the General Post Office, Melbourne, and with the Postmaster General of South Australia on the subject of the Money Order System, which has been in operation in Victoria since the 1st July, 1858, and in South Australia from the 1st January, 1859.

In Victoria there are seventeen Money Order Offices, exclusive of the one in Melbourne, but they are, in every case, attached to Post Offices, conducted by officers on the staff of the Department, and whose whole time is consequently devoted to the Postal Service alone.

In Melbourne, one clerk's services are required for the issue and payment of money orders, the remaining business in connection with the system being transacted in the Accountant's office.

In August last 803 money orders, representing a sum of £3,295 16s. 10d., were issued in Victoria, and the amount of business was said to have increased steadily since the introduction of the system.

In South Australia fourteen Money Order Offices were established, inclusive of Adelaide, and a special clerk was, at first, employed for the issue and payment of the orders at Adelaide, but the business was found to be too limited to necessitate his services, and in October the duty was performed by one of the permanent staff, and the office was only open for one hour during the day.

In order that the system might have a fair trial in this Colony, although there are minor difficulties to be got over, I sent in (in the beginning of the present year) to the Government an estimate of the probable expenditure necessary to introduce and carry on a Money Order System in this Colony. I proposed that the service should be extended to seventeen Post Offices, exclusive of Sydney, and that it should be brought into operation from 1st July next. I estimated the expense for the last six months of 1860 at £650, but stated that an advance from the Treasury of a sum estimated at £2,000 would be necessary until the system was fairly underweigh.

With the confined space already alluded to, it would be not easy to find room for an office for the issue and payment of money orders in the General Post Office, but I proposed that it should be managed by railing off part of the entrance hall or lobby. It is essential that it should be on the ground floor, and the only other available spaces are taken up by the Superintendent's Office, the sale of stamps' room, and the store room for the use of the Department.

In considering and searching for information with respect to the Money Order System, my attention has been attracted to a new advantage which it is proposed in the United Kingdom the system shall confer, and which certainly promises to be of no slight importance, and would be of great advantage in this Colony. I allude to the proposal, that Money Order Offices should be made the medium for the deposit and withdrawal of moneys in the Savings' Bank, as it is obvious that many provident persons might have ready access to a Money Order Office, although residing far from a Savings' Bank.

The plan, which is very simple, may be briefly explained as follows:—a working man who presented himself at a Money Order Office with a sum—say £4—for the Savings' Bank would obtain a money order to that amount, and enclose it in a printed form to the Savings' Bank Manager, who would in course of post return to him the usual voucher, and the transaction would be complete. In withdrawing the money, he would have to transmit by post this voucher to the Savings' Bank, and he would receive in return a Post Office money order to that amount, minus the commission.

The plan is not intended to compete in the slightest degree with the Savings' Banks, but to extend the benefit of such institutions to districts that are as yet without them. One excellent excellent feature is that each depositor would have a Government guarantee for the safe transmission of his savings, whilst more frequent opportunities for depositing would be given, as Money Order Offices are open every day for not less than six hours.

The scheme, which originated with Mr. C. W. Sikes, of the Huddersfield Banking Company, has been approved of by the late Mr. Baines, M.P., for Leeds, Sir Rowland Hill, K.C.B., Secretary to the General Post Office, London, and the Managers of the Money Order Department of that establishment.

The Council of the Dublin Statistical Society, Archbishop Whately, President, have passed a resolution recording their entire approval of the principles of the plan, considering it to be specially applicable to Ireland; and at the Social Science Meeting at Bradford, Lord Brougham in his address drew the attention of the audience to the scheme.

That it would be particularly advantageous in this Colony, there can, I think, be no doubt; indeed, it seems to me one of the strongest arguments in favor of the establishment of a Money Order System.

The late Government having expressed a wish that I should submit a plan by which the delivery of the English Mails could be accelerated, I accordingly proposed that the letters should be sorted on board the Mail Packets before their arrival in Sydney.

I made three propositions:—1st, that the sorting of the letters should commence at Melbourne, which would have entailed an expense of £1,400 per annum, and allowed only of the sorting of the letters via Marseilles; 2ndly, That the sorting should commence at Nepean Bay, which would have occasioned a cost of £1,730 per annum under the present system of Admiralty Agents, and would have allowed all the letters to be sorted; 3rdly, That Post Office Sorting Clerks should be substituted for the Admiralty Agents, and take charge of the New South Wales Mails from Nepean Bay, previous to which period they could be under the charge of an Officer of the Mail Steamer.

I ascertained from the Inspector, and from the Agent of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, that this proposition—which was the one I was disposed to recommend—would probably reduce the expenditure necessary to £650 per annum, and of course confer the same advantages as my second proposal.

As the third proposition, however, could not at once be acted on, owing to the Inspector of the Peninsular and Oriental Company not being in a position to state positively the terms upon which it could be carried out, which were to be those already sanctioned on board the Homeward Mail Steamers in the Mediterranean, as also because the concurrence of the Home Government was necessary, I recommended that the estimate necessary for carrying out the second proposition should at once be laid before the Executive Council, and that steps should be taken to ascertain the views of the Home Government on the subject.

Until the passing of the Act 22 Vict., No. 19, the 55th clause of the Railway Act, 13th Victoria, gave me the power to control the time of departure and arrival of the Mail Trains, though I never received authority to exercise such power. The postal disadvantages attendant on my not being able to fix the time of arrival and departure of the Mail Trains is shewn by the present Railway Time Table, which causes the morning Mails from the westward to arrive at the Station at 8.25 A.M., only thirty-five minutes before the time fixed (9 A.M.) for the delivery of such Mails by letter carriers.

Before the Railway existed, and when the correspondence was much less, the Western and Southern Mails were received at the Post Office at 8 A.M. It is, therefore, manifest that the morning delivery at 9 A.M. must be unpunctual, or that the Western Mails must be delivered at the second delivery, 1 P.M.

As at present there is no early train from Campbelltown, and with the view of mitigating the evil above alluded to, by being able to sort the Southern Mails before the Western ones come in, I have been obliged to sanction the objectionable arrangement of bringing in the Southern Mails overnight, which of course deprives the residents in the South of some twelve hours' correspondence; but even with this arrangement the Western Mails can rarely, if ever, be sorted so as to be delivered at the appointed hour.

Attention has been called to the matter, and I am disposed to hope, either that an early train may be put on from Campbelltown to reach the station-house at Sydney at 7.35 A.M., which was the former arrangement; or, if this cannot be conceded, that the anomaly anomaly may be got rid of by a morning train leaving Campbelltown in connection with the present first train from Parramatta, the first delivery of letters being fixed to take place at 9-30 A. M., in which case punctuality and some degree of certainty may at all events be insured.

I append the Postal Inspector's Report for 1859, which gives information as to his tours of inspection during the year.

There is certainly considerable improvement in the performance of the Country Postmasters' duties since they have been enabled to acquire a further knowledge of these from that officer's personal supervision.

I have, &c.,

W. H. CHRISTIE,
Postmaster General.

APPENDIX.

General Post Office,
Sydney, 8 June, 1860.

Sir,

In obedience to your request that I would furnish you with a short statement of my proceedings during the past year, 1859, I beg to submit the following:—

My first tour of duty as Postal Inspector was to the southward, upon which I started early in February, and visited the Post Offices at Liverpool, Campbelltown, Narellan, Camden, Picton, Berrima, Marulan, Goulburn, Gunning, Yass, Jugiong, Gundagai, Tarcutta, Ten Mile Creek, Albury, Wagga Wagga, Adelong, Tumut, Burrowa, and Binalong, and inspected the horses, carriages, &c., employed by the contractors for the conveyance of Mails between these places.

My next tour was to the northward, as far as Wide Bay. Upon this tour, which extended over the districts of the Burnett, Darling Downs, Moreton Bay, Liverpool Plains, &c., I inspected the Post Offices at Maryborough, Gayndah, Goode's Inn, Ipswich, Brisbane, Towoomba, Drayton, Dalby, Warwick, Maryland, Tenterfield, Table Land, Dundee, Glen Innes, Wellingrove, Armidale, Uralla, Rocky River, Bendemeer, Tamworth, Carrö, Gunnedah, Gulligal, Wee Waa, Moree, Warialda, Bingera, Barraba, Manilla, Breeza, Quirindi, Wallabadah, Murrurundi, Goonoo Goonoo, Scone, Aberdeen, Muswellbrook, Singleton, Lochinvar, Maitland, East Maitland, and Newcastle; and the horses, carriages, &c., employed in the Mail Service between these places.

The reports and my journals, which I have already furnished to you, contain the details of my observations on these tours, and it affords me much pleasure that I am able to state that the alterations which I have felt authorized to make in the Time Tables, and those of my suggestions which met your approval and were acted on have given general satisfaction.

The Mail Contractors generally have performed their work fairly, but although I am willing to make allowance for the difficulties which they have to contend with in wet weather, particularly on lines which are travelled at night, I must say that there is much room for improvement in the average rate of speed at which the Mails travel, and I trust that it will be proportionably increased as the roads are put in repair and the creeks bridged.

The American coaches which have been introduced (by Mr. Gill the Mail Contractor) on the Northern Road will, if generally adopted throughout the Colony, be of considerable advantage to the Mail Service, as these vehicles are much better suited for our roads than the carriages which are generally used.

The new forms of letter bills, accounts, books, as also the date stamps, &c., are, I am glad to find, generally appreciated by the Postmasters; and as, in almost every instance, I found a desire on the part of the Postmasters to avail themselves of my instructions as to their duties, I have no doubt but that a marked improvement in the management of Country Post Offices generally will be the result.

I noticed on the Northern Roads that considerable improvements were carried out. From Brisbane to Drayton the creeks were nearly all bridged, and the cuttings and sites of the bridges remarkably well chosen.

The road at Moonbi Pass and the crossing-place between Bendemeer and Carlisle's Gully were very much improved; indeed, the improvements on the line first mentioned, i. e., Drayton, are equal to those which I have seen in Victoria.

The want of a uniform time is productive of great inconvenience as regards punctuality in the arrival and despatch of the mails, and I would respectfully suggest that Sydney time should be Post Office time all over the Colony. In those places to which Electric Telegraph extends this might be easily carried out.

As it would also be a great advantage to the public if the Telegraph and Post Office were in the same building, I would also beg attention to this subject before the Telegraph Stations are finally fixed.

It appears to me to be desirable that the Post Offices in the principal Towns should exercise some supervision over the neighboring offices. If such arrangements could be made it would tend much to improvement and uniformity of system, as well as greatly assist the Inspector in the performance of his duties.

In conclusion I beg to state, that during these tours, on which I examined the working of sixty-three Post Offices and thirty-one Mail Contracts, which extended over a distance of nearly four thousand miles, and occupied a period of nearly nine months, it is particularly gratifying to me to be able to say, that not only the Postmasters, Contractors, and those connected with the Mail Service, gave me all the assistance in their power, but I received from the Government officials, the resident gentry, and members of the Press, much valuable information respecting the postal requirements of the districts through which I passed, and I feel myself bound to take this opportunity to acknowledge their kindness, and of thanking them for the attention I received at their hands.

No. 1.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*5, Cannon-street, City,
8 February, 1859.*

SIR,

Referring to the Under Secretary's letter of the 18th December last, I now do myself the honor to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General, that having duly embarked on board the Mail Steamer "Columbian," I reached London on the evening of Saturday the 5th instant, and on the 7th, in pursuance of your instructions, presented at the Colonial Office the Despatch accrediting me to Her Majesty's Government, and formally announced my arrival in a letter in which I also intimated that I was prepared to wait upon the Secretary of State upon any day that he might be pleased to appoint.

2. I have this day seen the three gentlemen nominated by you to form, with Mr. Hamilton, the Committee of Advice, and it affords me much pleasure that I am enabled to state that they all expressed a cordial desire to meet the views of the Government of New South Wales in the matter, and readily consented to act as members of the Committee.

3. As it was obviously desirable that they should without delay be in possession of the scope and tenor of my instructions, I at once proposed that we should meet at an early day for the purpose, and a meeting has accordingly been arranged for Friday, the 11th instant.

4. The departure of the February Mail will probably be postponed some days in consequence of the delay in the starting of the vessel at the Sydney end of the line, and I trust therefore that I may be enabled to transmit to you by it the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Committee.

5. You are doubtless aware by this time that since the issue of the Notice calling for Tenders for the Suez route, no further steps have been taken by Her Majesty's Government for carrying out the intention expressed in the postscript to that Notice with respect to inviting Tenders for the Panama service; and, as far as my present information goes, there is no immediate intention of proceeding with the scheme.

6. It is with much gratification that I have to report to you that Mr. E. Hamilton, in his capacity of Governor of the Australian Agricultural Company, has placed a room in the offices of the company at the disposal of myself and the Committee—an act of courtesy and consideration which I venture to express a hope may be suitably acknowledged.

I have, &c.,

No. 2.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*5, Cannon-street, City,
23 February, 1859.*

SIR,

Referring to my letter of the 8th instant, I now do myself the honor to enclose for your information copies of the Minutes of the Proceedings taken by the Committee of Advice on the 11th instant, and at a subsequent meeting held yesterday, the 22nd instant.

2. The Minute of the 22nd contains a general statement of my proceedings up to that date, and, in transmitting these documents, I do not consider it necessary to say more than that I earnestly trust that I may receive by return of post, an authority to guarantee the £50,000, irrespective of the New Zealand contribution; for if it is really desired to secure the establishment of the route, this must be conceded, or the New South Wales subsidy must be increased, as in common with the members of the Committee, I am quite satisfied that the service will not be undertaken for a subsidy of £100,000.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,

&c.,      &c.,      &c.,
New South Wales.

MINUTES of the Proceedings of a Committee consisting of Edward Hamilton, Esq., Robert Towns, Esq., Donald Larnach, Esq., and George A. Lloyd, Esq., being a Committee appointed in London by the Government of New South Wales, to assist with their advice and co-operation, Edward C. Merewether, Esq., the Agent of the Colony accredited to Her Majesty's Government in England, for the purpose of negotiating the establishment of Steam Postal Communication between Sydney and Great Britain, by way of the Isthmus of Panama.

FRIDAY, 11 FEBRUARY, 1859.

Pursuant to previous arrangement the Committee met at the Offices of the Australian Agricultural Company, 5, Cannon-street, City, where a room had been kindly placed at their disposal by Mr. Edward Hamilton, the Governor of the Company.

There were present at the Meeting—

E. C. Merewether, Esq., Agent, in the Chair.

E. Hamilton, Esq.

D. Larnach, Esq.

R. Towns, Esq.

G. A. Lloyd, Esq.

And it is here desirable to record that, at the opening of the proceedings, the three last named gentlemen expressed themselves willing to accept office as Members of the Committee, according to the terms of a letter bearing date the 10th December, 1858, addressed to them individually by Mr. Cowper, the Chief Secretary of New South Wales, and personally delivered to them by Mr. Merewether.

Mr. Merewether then proceeded briefly to explain the question, in so far as it was known to his Government at the date of his departure from Sydney; and having laid before the Committee the various documents specified in the margin, read his letters of appointment and instruction, in the latter of which it is stated that Mr. Hamilton has consented to act as one of the Committee, and furthermore, in the event of the death or inability to act of Mr. Merewether, to assume the duties of Agent.

The Committee then proceeded to consider the following question, which presented itself upon a perusal of the "Panama Route Postal Act," viz.:—whether the amount appropriated by that Act is to be regarded as a moiety of the whole subsidy to be paid for the maintenance of the service, and therefore inclusive of any sums that might be contributed towards it by New Zealand as well as by the Australian Colonies, or otherwise.

After some deliberation, and having before them, in addition to the above-mentioned documents, a private communication bearing upon the point, addressed to Mr. Merewether by Mr. Cowper, the Committee inclined to the opinion that under the terms of the Act the subsidy of £50,000 guaranteed by the Colony of New South Wales does not include, and is irrespective of, any sum that may be contributed towards the service by the Colony of New Zealand;—and acting upon this view they advised that if inquired of in the matter, Mr. Merewether should so answer to Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Merewether then informed the Committee that, on Monday the 7th instant, he had presented at the Colonial Office, a Despatch from the Governor of New South Wales, duly accrediting him to Her Majesty's Government, and had by letter formally notified his arrival to the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and applied for an interview;

1. Printed copies of the Minutes of the Proceedings taken by the Executive Council of New South Wales, on the 9th, 16th and 23rd of August, 1858, on the matter of Steam Postal Communication with Great Britain.
2. Printed copies of certain Resolutions, adopted by the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, on the 8th September, 1858, in reference to the establishment of Steam Postal Communication by way of Panama.
3. Printed copies of the Panama Route Postal Act of 1858, as passed by the Assembly, and assented to by the Governor General.

10th December, 1858, with accompanying documents.

interview; but that as yet he had received no reply to that communication, and until he received the instructions of the Secretary, as to the course which he must next adopt, he was not in a position to inform them further in the matter.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

EDWARD HAMILTON,
D. LARNACH,
G. A. LLOYD,
Members of the Committee.

TUESDAY, 22 FEBRUARY, 1859.

At a Meeting of the Committee duly convened by the Agent, and held at their Office, in Cannon-street, this day;—

PRESENT:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., the Agent, in the Chair.

Edward Hamilton, Esq.
Robert Towns, Esq.

Donald Larnach, Esq.
George A. Lloyd, Esq.

Mr. Merewether read the Minutes of Proceedings on the 11th instant, and the Committee recommended that they should be entered as a correct record of their proceedings on that date, but as they had been afforded an opportunity of again reading the Postal Act in connection with the Resolution of the Legislative Assembly, and had seen reason to doubt whether the opinion they had adopted was in exact accordance with the views and intentions of the Government and Legislature of New South Wales, they were not prepared to confirm the advice tendered on that occasion, viz.,—that if inquired of in the matter, Mr. Merewether should assume the responsibility of informing Her Majesty's Government that the subsidy guaranteed by the Colony of New South Wales towards the establishment of the Panama Route does not include any sum which might be contributed by the Colony of New Zealand in aid of the service. Fully impressed, however, with the important bearing of this question upon the ultimate success of the scheme, they recommended that, if enquired of in the matter, Mr. Merewether should hold out the prospect that the Government of New South Wales, when apprised of the insufficiency of the amount at present appropriated by the Postal Act, will be disposed to guarantee the £50,000, irrespective of any sum which may be contributed by New Zealand.

The Committee further recommended that Mr. Merewether should, by the Mail which will leave London for Australia to-morrow evening, forward to the Government of New South Wales copies of this and the previous Minutes, and apply for further and specific instructions upon this head.

Mr. Towns having dissented from the recommendation, and maintained that according to his view and understanding of the terms of the Postal Act and the Resolution of the Assembly, the subsidy guaranteed by New South Wales was intended to be irrespective of any sums which might be contributed, either by New Zealand or the rest of the Australian Colonies,—The Committee advised that his dissent should be entered upon the Minutes, as also any protest that he might wish to have recorded.

Referring to the previous proceedings, Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee as follows:—

- 1st. On the 17th instant he had waited upon the Secretary of State for the Colonies by appointment, and that Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton had at once referred him to the Department of the Treasury, as the proper channel from which to obtain further information as to the views and intentions of the Government with respect to the objects of his mission.
- 2nd. That, acting upon this instruction, he had, on the 18th instant, sought and obtained an interview with Mr. Stephenson, the principal clerk in the Treasury, who stated that Sir Stafford Northcote, with whom the negotiation would have to be conducted, had only recently entered upon his office, and was scarcely prepared at present to take up the question, but that as soon as he had made himself master of the subject, for which only a few days would be required, arrangements would be made for discussing it.
- 3rd. That the opinions expressed by Mr. Stephenson encouraged the belief that, if it could be satisfactorily shewn that the Panama route could be so worked in connection with the Suez route as to afford a fortnightly communication, and could be carried out at a reasonable cost, the Government would still be disposed to complete the intention expressed in the postscript of the notice calling for tenders for the Suez route, but that information as to the probable cost would be a necessary preliminary.
- 4th. That he had accordingly instituted inquiries on both the points indicated by Mr. Stephenson, and had ascertained that the service could be so arranged as to alternate fortnightly with the Suez service; and that there are several Companies willing and prepared to tender for its performance, at rates, it is true, in excess of the subsidy contemplated by the Government of New South Wales, but still not so much so as to render their rejection inevitable—£140,000 has been named by one Company as a sufficient and remunerative subsidy.

Mr.

Mr.

Mr. Merewether further informed the Committee, that having ascertained that, by the November Mail, Despatches had been transmitted to the Governors of the several Australian Colonies, on the subject of Steam Postal Communication by way of Panama, he had, immediately after his interview with the Secretary of State, requested to be furnished with copies of any Despatches that may have been addressed to His Excellency Sir William Denison in reference to the question, since the departure of the October Mail.

Mr. Towns laid before the Committee the undermentioned letters, and in compliance with a request to that effect consented that they should remain in the office for the perusal of the Members at a future day :—

Letter from David Hoadley to E. B. Neill, Esq., dated New York, 4th January, 1859, as to the question, whether the Government of New Granada, had the right to insist that a tax be paid to them on all Mails crossing the Isthmus of Panama.

Letter from Patrick Gibson to E. B. Neill, Esq., dated 13th January, 1859, regarding the treaty between Great Britain and New Granada, as to the amount to be paid by the former to the latter for the passage of the Mails across the Isthmus.

Letter from R. W. Cameron to the Honorable Robert Towns, dated Boston, 25th January, 1859, respecting Tenders for the Postal Service between Great Britain and New South Wales, via Panama, &c.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

No. 3.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY to EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,
1 June, 1859.

(M. 14-681.)

SIR,

I have received your letters of the 8th and 23rd of February last, reporting your arrival in England, and forwarding Minutes of the Proceedings of the Committee of Advice, who were associated with you, containing a general statement of the proceedings taken by you, from the time of your arrival, as Agent for this Colony, in connexion with the subject of Steam Postal Communication via Panama.

2. You report that the information which you had been enabled to obtain, had convinced you that the establishment of the desired line of communication, via Panama, could not be calculated upon for the subsidy of £100,000, originally estimated as sufficient for the purpose, and that you had therefore considered it necessary to take the opinion of the Committee upon the following question, which, upon perusal of the "Panama Route Postal Act," had seemed to you to present itself, viz.:—"Whether the amount appropriated by that Act should be regarded as a moiety of the whole subsidy to be paid for the maintenance of the Service, and, therefore, inclusive of any sums that might be contributed towards it by New Zealand as well as by the Australian Colonies, or otherwise."

The Committee, although at first inclining to a different opinion, had considered that the information which they possessed, of the views and intentions of the Government and Legislature of this Colony, did not justify them in advising that you should assume the responsibility of informing Her Majesty's Government that the sum of £50,000 would be contributed by this Colony, irrespectively of the contributions of any of the other Colonies interested in the same object; but they recommended that you should, if inquired of in the matter, hold out the prospect that this Government, on being apprised of the insufficiency of the amount at present appropriated, would be disposed to guarantee the sum in question, without reference to any other contributions.

3. Under these circumstances you express a hope that you may receive authority to guarantee that the full sum of £50,000 will be contributed by this Colony alone, towards subsidising a Mail Service via Panama.

4. The Government having had under review the proceedings which have taken place, from time to time, during the consideration of this subject, and having maturely deliberated deliberated upon the question, now more particularly submitted, are of opinion, that the Committee, in the advice which they tendered to you with regard to the interpretation of the Act, 22 Victoria, No. 15, have rightly construed the intentions of the Legislature, in passing that Act, namely,—as authorising the Government to make arrangements with Her Majesty's Government, whereby a subsidy to the extent of £50,000 (inclusive of other expenses) might be guaranteed by this Colony, but reserving a right to the Government of agreeing with the other Australasian Colonies, or any of them, for their sharing in the benefits of the proposed Postal Service, upon such terms as should seem fit.

5. At the same time it is desired that the Government of New South Wales should be understood as willing to co-operate, to the fullest extent that can reasonably be expected in any general arrangements, consistent with the spirit of the Resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly, on the 8th September, 1858, of which you have been provided with copies, that may tend to the improvement of the Mail Communications between these Colonies and the Mother Country, and I have therefore to state, for your guidance, that the Government will be prepared to invite the local Parliament to make such provision towards the subsidising a Postal Service generally (comprising a line via Panama) as may be considered fair and reasonable, not exceeding the sum of £50,000 per annum, an amount which, from the best information that can be obtained, is believed to be rather in excess of the share which this Colony can fairly be called upon to contribute to the general service.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ.,

No. 4.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

5, Cannon-street, City,

18 March, 1859.

SIR,

Referring to my letter of the 23rd ultimo, I now do myself the honor to transmit to you, for your information and consideration, a copy of the Minutes of the Proceedings taken by myself, and the gentlemen forming my Committee of Advice, since the date of that communication.

You will perceive from this that the first interview afforded to me by the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, at which the members of the Committee were present, and the subject of my mission was discussed at some length, resulted somewhat unsatisfactorily, but that at the second interview I obtained from Sir Stafford Northcote a written statement of the views and intentions of Her Majesty's Government, couched in the following terms:—

"In case the difficulties of the transit across the Isthmus can be got over, and in case the time within which the service can be performed via Panama can be made to fit the time within which it is performed via Suez.

"And in case the Government receive a full assurance that one-half the whole expense of both the services via Suez, as well as via Panama, will be borne by the Colonies, they will be prepared to call for Tenders for the service, but will not bind themselves to accept such Tenders, should the amount demanded appear to them unreasonable.

"It is understood that the whole service from England to Australia is to be included in the Tender."

You will also observe that Sir Stafford Northcote subsequently explained and modified the third stipulation by saying that the Government would not consider £100,000 an unreasonable amount to be demanded for the service; and by consenting to call for Tenders so soon as the next Australian Mail has arrived, with the understanding, however, that they would resort to the step, simply as a means of ascertaining the probable cost, and would not pledge themselves to accept any of the Tenders.

Almost all the information which I am at present in a position to afford with respect to the various points involved in the stipulations, already appears in the Minutes or their Appendices, and further comment at my hands would almost seem unnecessary; but as the Committee

Committee expressly advised that I should draw your attention to the question of the assurance required by the Imperial Government, I will offer a few remarks upon the subject.

You will see that the Committee when deliberating upon the question, resolved that I should not be justified in giving the assurance in question, even if Her Majesty's Government would accept my individual pledge, and little doubt can be entertained of the correctness of this view, as whilst on the one hand I am unable to guarantee a moiety of the cost of the Panama service because it will not exceed the amount appropriated by the Legislature, so on the other my powers are straitened as I am unable to bind the Colony to contribute unconditionally to the Suez route, and the Imperial Government will not hold Victoria responsible for the whole moiety (although she has guaranteed it,) but only for her proportionate share.

It is clear therefore that I am not in a position to give the assurance required, and to place me in that position you must not only authorize me to extend the guarantee of New South Wales to a full moiety of the sum required for the Panama service, but you must also obtain and forward to me a distinct pledge from the Government of Victoria that they have already guaranteed to Her Majesty's Government the full moiety of the Suez service, and are willing to adhere to that guarantee.

I trust that I have not expressed myself more strongly than the necessities of the case demand, as I feel perfectly convinced, and in this I shall be borne out by my colleagues, that Her Majesty's Government will not grant their assistance until they have received the assurance that they require.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,
Sydney.

5, Cannon-street, City,
15 March, 1859.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day.

PRESENT:—

Edward Merewether, Esq., the Agent, in the Chair.

Edward Hamilton, Esq.

Donald Larnach, Esq.

Robert Towns, Esq.

G. A. Lloyd, Esq.

Mr. Merewether having read the Minutes of the Proceedings on the 22nd ultimo, which were duly confirmed, laid before the Committee, for their information, the following papers:—

1st. Copies of three separate Despatches from His Excellency Sir William Denison to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the subject of Steam Postal Communication with Australia, via Panama, dated, respectively, the 10th August, 10th September, and 6th November, 1858.

2nd. A copy of a Despatch from the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated November 16th, 1858, forwarding to His Excellency Sir William Denison a copy of a Treasury Letter and Minute on the same subject, and other papers.

3rd. A copy of the Despatch from His Excellency Sir William Denison, accrediting Mr. Merewether to Her Majesty's Government, dated December 3rd, 1858.

Adverting then to an interview which he had obtained, on the 5th instant, with Sir Stafford Northcote, Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, and at which the Members of the Committee had been present, Mr. Merewether read a draft memorandum setting forth the substance of what had passed on the occasion, and requested from the Committee an expression of opinion as to its general correctness.

The Committee agreed that the memorandum in question was a fair statement of the substance of what transpired at the interview, and advised that it be recorded on the Minutes. (Vide Appendix A.)

Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee, that on Wednesday last, the 9th instant, as he had not received the information promised by Sir Stafford Northcote, and referred to in the concluding paragraph of the memorandum just read, he had called upon Mr. Stephenson, and requested him to remind Sir Stafford of his promise; and on the Monday following, being still without it, he had again, through Mr. Stephenson, drawn attention to the matter, and requested an interview.

This request, he was happy to say, had been acceded to, and he had just now left Sir Stafford Northcote and Mr. G. A. Hamilton, Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, from the former of whom he had received a written statement of the terms and conditions upon which Her Majesty's Government would consent to call for tenders for the Panama service, and contribute a moiety of the cost.

Mr.

Mr. Merewether then read the statement in question, a copy of which is hereinafter set forth (vide Appendix B.); and, referring to it, further informed the Committee that, in reply to inquiries bearing upon the following points, Sir Stafford Northcote had intimated to him,—

- 1st. That he had not yet obtained the information he had promised with respect to the transit of the Mails across the Isthmus.
- 2nd. That, with regard to the question of the cost of the service, the Government would not consider £150,000 "an unreasonable amount."
- 3rd. That taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, and especially the fact that the greater portion of a moiety of the sum which had been named as the cost of the service was already guaranteed by the Colony of New South Wales, Her Majesty's Government would not be unwilling to call for tenders, even before they were satisfied that the conditions set forth in the statement could or would be complied with; but they would not undertake to call for them until after the arrival of the Australian Mail now due, by which it was not impossible that answers might be received from some of the Colonies to the reference made in November last; and it must also be distinctly understood that, if they adopt the step, it is simply with a view of ascertaining the probable cost of the service, and without pledging themselves to accept any of the tenders that may be sent in.
- 4th. That, before the Government issued any notice calling for tenders, Mr. Merewether should see it, and be afforded an opportunity of proposing any alterations or additions, and
- 5th. That, upon the arrival of the Mail, Mr. Merewether had better again communicate with the Treasury in the ordinary official way by letter.

The Committee then deliberated as to the course which it would now be advisable for Mr. Merewether to pursue, and, having carefully considered the question, resolved that, under existing circumstances, Mr. Merewether would not be justified in giving the assurance required by Her Majesty's Government, even if the latter were content to take his individual assurance, and that the only prudent course open to him is to apply for further instructions. They advised, therefore, that he should transmit to Sydney by the Supplementary Mail, via Marseilles, a copy of the statement handed to him by Sir Stafford Northcote, and should clearly point out, that, in order to place him in a condition to give the required assurance, the Government of New South Wales must authorize him to extend their guarantee to the full moiety of the sum required for the Panama Service, and must also obtain from the Government of Victoria a distinct acknowledgment, that they have already guaranteed to the Imperial Government one-half of the Suez subsidy.

The Committee further advised that Mr. Merewether should, at the same time, forward to the Government of New South Wales, a return shewing the amount for which, according to the computation contained in the Treasury letter of November last, the several Colonies are now liable, under the contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company, and also the amount, which, if they all consent to subsidise it, each would have to contribute to a service by way of Panama, estimated to cost £150,000.

From this it will be seen that if all the Colonies contribute towards the Panama route, the gross amount New South Wales would be called upon to pay for the services would be far within the sum at present guaranteed by her for one, and would not exceed that amount, even if South Australia, Tasmania, and Western Australia declined to give their quota, and New South Wales undertook to bear them.

The Committee expressed an opinion that the terms proposed by Her Majesty's Government are fair and reasonable, and that the stipulation as to the transit of the Mails, and the time within which the service must be performed, can be fulfilled, but they recommended that Mr. Merewether should, at once place himself in communication with the Foreign Office, in reference to the transit difficulty, and take such other steps as may appear expedient.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX A.

London, 5th March, 1859.

Memoranda recording the substance of what occurred this day at an interview between Mr. E. Merewether and Sir Stafford Northcote, Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, on the subject of Steam Postal Communication with Australia, by way of Panama.

Sir Stafford Northcote was accompanied by—

Mr. W. B. Stephenson, principal Clerk in the Treasury, and Mr. Merewether, by Mr. E. Hamilton,
Mr. R. Towns,
Mr. D. Larnach, and
Mr. G. A. Lloyd.

In

In formally introducing these gentlemen to Sir Stafford Northcote, Mr. Merewether took occasion to draw particular attention to the circumstance that in their anxiety to secure the postal communication by way of Panama, the Government of New South Wales had not only resorted to the somewhat unusual step of despatching a special agent to England, for the sole purpose of endeavouring to effect this object, but had also further evinced their earnestness of purpose by adopting the additional precaution of appointing a Committee in London, of which the gentlemen present were the members, to advise and assist their Agent in the prosecution of the duty entrusted to him.

Having then briefly explained that he waited on Sir Stafford Northcote, in pursuance of an intimation from the Secretary of State for the Colonies,—that the Department of the Treasury was the proper channel from which to obtain further information as to the views of the Government with respect to the objects of his mission,—Mr. Merewether represented that shortly prior to his departure from Sydney, the Government of New South Wales had been placed in possession of a copy of the Admiralty Notice calling for Tenders for a monthly Postal Service by way of Suez, and having observed that in a postscript to the notice it was stated that so soon as the arrangements were completed, it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government to call for Tenders for a monthly Steam Postal Communication with Australia, via Panama, in addition to the service via Suez, they had framed the instructions to him accordingly.

Since his arrival in England he had ascertained that the arrangements for the Suez service had been completed, but that, as yet, no Tenders had been invited for the second service, and he requested, therefore, to be informed whether Her Majesty's Government were still willing to adopt that course.

Sir Stafford Northcote, in reply to this question, stated that the Government were not indisposed to carry out the intention expressed in the notice, but before doing so, desired to obtain some information, not only as to the practicability of establishing a second service, via Panama, that would work harmoniously with the Suez service, so as to afford a fortnightly communication, but also as to the probable expense of carrying it out.

Mr. Merewether observed, that since his arrival in England, his attention had been directed to obtaining information upon both these points, and that he had come prepared with a Table, clearly shewing that by a simple alteration in the times fixed for the arrival and departure of the steamers conveying the West India Mails, the Postal Communication desired by the Government of New South Wales, and sketched out in the Resolutions adopted by their Legislative Assembly, on the 8th September last, could be carried out, and be made to alternate fortnightly with the service by way of Suez.

Appended.

Mr. Merewether having briefly explained the arrangements proposed in the Table, which he stated had been prepared after communication with the Secretary of the Royal Mail Company, proceeded to say that with regard to the question of expense, he was not in a position to give such a satisfactory answer, and for the obvious reason that those most competent to afford the requisite information, viz., the parties prepared to tender, were naturally unwilling to disclose that which might subsequently be used to their prejudice. He had ascertained however, that in the event of Tenders being called for, there were parties willing and prepared to tender, and that an American Company would do so if a subsidy of £140,000 per annum were guaranteed; he felt it right however to state on the other hand, that the Royal Mail Company had expressed their determination not to tender unless the subsidy exceeded that amount. It was clear from this that full and satisfactory information on the point could only be obtained by calling for Tenders, and as it appeared that the service could be made to work harmoniously with the Suez service, he hoped that the Government would at once adopt the step and solve the question.

Appended.

Sir Stafford Northcote replied that the Government were unwilling to commit themselves to any definite line of action, until they had received a reply to a reference which had been made to the Governors of the various Australian Colonies in November last, with the view of ascertaining clearly the wishes of the Colonists with respect to the two routes, and also the amount which each Colony was willing to contribute to them respectively.

Mr. Merewether stated that he was aware that this reference had been made, and was prepared to answer any questions as to the views of his own Government, but would urge that in pursuing the course he had suggested, the Government need not pledge themselves to accept any of the Tenders that might be sent in, and might fix a distant day for receiving them, so as to afford time for obtaining a reply from the Colonies and settling all subsidiary questions.

Sir Stafford Northcote then stated that upon the dissolution of the contract with the European and Australian Company, Her Majesty's Government in order to prevent the postal communication from being interrupted had entered into a fresh contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company upon the faith of the arrangement laid down in the Treasury Minute of 1855, and assented to by the various Colonies, and he desired therefore, to be informed, whether in the event of the Panama route being established the Government of New South Wales would still contribute towards the maintenance of the service via Suez, as from the terms of certain resolutions adopted by the Legislature there appeared some reason to doubt whether they would do so.

To this Mr. Merewether replied that he was not in a position to give a specific answer, as he had received no instructions upon the subject, but it would be seen by a reference to the latest proceedings of the Legislature and Government of New South Wales, copies of which he believed had been transmitted to the Treasury, that it was proposed that the Government of Victoria should make the necessary arrangements with Her Majesty's Government for the maintenance of the service by way of Suez, and that the Government of New South Wales should act in like manner with regard to that by way of Panama, leaving the question as to the terms upon which they would reciprocally carry each others letters to be settled by after negotiation. It is true that the Government of Victoria never formally accepted this proposal, but they virtually evinced their approval of it by deliberately guaranteeing for the service by way of Suez a sum which they considered, and has proved to be sufficient, to cover the Colonial moiety of the cost. The British Government is therefore secured against loss, and may without prejudice leave the question of the apportionment to be settled by the Colonies inter se.

With respect to this point, however, it would be seen by a reference to the Resolution of the 8th September last, that the Government of New South Wales are prepared to contribute towards the Suez service, provided that the Government of Victoria act in like manner with regard to the Panama service, and he was authorised to state that the Government of New South Wales are anxious to deal with the question in a fair spirit, and are willing to adopt the principle of receiving and contributing in proportion to the amount of correspondence.

Sir Stafford Northcote admitted that the proposed arrangement would simplify the matter very much, but there was nothing to shew that the people of Victoria desired the second service by way of Panama, or would contribute to it,—and although they had guaranteed the Colonial moiety of the cost of the Suez service, it was only to meet an emergency,—and as Her Majesty's Government had given the Government of the Colony to understand that they would only be called upon to contribute this proportionate share according to the correspondence, and not the whole moiety, it would still be open to them to claim to contribute to the service upon that understanding, and if they did so claim there would be a deficiency in the Colonial moiety, for which the British Government would be responsible.

It was again urged by several of the gentlemen present that the Colony of Victoria had clearly guaranteed an amount sufficient to meet a moiety of the cost of the service, and Mr. Hamilton stated that when recently in Melbourne on his way Home, he was informed by more than one influential Colonist, that now the Suez route was secured the people of Victoria would not object to support the establishment of the Panama route, and that there was reason to believe that the Government were disposed to take the same view.

Sir Stafford Northcote next inquired, what amount of subsidy would be available from all the Colonies for the establishment of the second service? To which Mr. Merewether replied, that he could not at present promise more than the £50,000 guaranteed by New South Wales, which, at the time it was appropriated, was considered sufficient to cover a moiety of the cost, and was intended to include any sums which might be contributed by the Australian Colonies. Upon a perusal of the Colonial Act, appropriating the subsidy, he might state, however, that the gentlemen associated with him doubted whether it was the intention of the Legislature so to include any sum appropriated towards the service of the Colony of New Zealand, and, as he fully concurred with them in this opinion, he had, by the February Mail, requested further instructions from his Government, and had urged them to guarantee the £50,000 irrespective of any contribution which might be granted by the Colony of New Zealand.

Mr. Merewether added, that he felt no hesitation in saying that he firmly believed that his Government would at once adopt this course when they became aware that their original estimate of the cost of the service fell short of the subsidy really required; and, if they did, the necessary amount would, without doubt, be forthcoming between the two Colonies—as when in the year 1857 the Royal Mail Company offered to establish a steam postal communication by the route in question, the Government of New Zealand undertook to pay a subsidy of £15,000 in aid of the service, and it was pretty well known that they were prepared to contribute a larger sum if necessary. It might be urged that an undertaking entered into so long ago would not be binding upon them now; but he was able to say, that, when asked to co-operate in the present scheme, the Government of New Zealand intimated their willingness to do so, and to contribute towards it in proportion to the advantage which they might derive.

Sir Stafford Northcote then enquired, whether, under such circumstances, Mr. Merewether was prepared to guarantee the Colonial moiety of the cost, as, unless they had some more definite idea of what was available for the service, he could not see that the Government would be justified in calling for tenders.

Mr. Merewether replied to this, that the Government had issued the postscript to the Admiralty notice entirely on their own responsibility, and without knowing for a certainty whether the Colonies would contribute one sixpence to the service, and he would observe that he did not now ask them to pledge themselves to accept any of the tenders, but simply to call for them as a means of ascertaining the probable cost.

Sir Stafford Northcote having then remarked that it would scarcely be fair to the public to call for tenders unless it was really intended to establish the service.

Mr. Merewether asked whether he was to understand by this that the postscript to the Admiralty notice meant nothing—was in fact a delusion? to which Sir Stafford Northcote answered, that it was merely meant as a caution to those tendering for the Suez service, that a second service by way of Panama might hereafter be established.

Mr. Hamilton suggested that as the difference between the amount already guaranteed by New South Wales, and that which would probably be required to complete the Colonial moiety is comparatively small, Her Majesty's Government would, perhaps, as a matter of grace and favour, be responsible for it, they would then be in a position to call for tenders with perfect good faith towards the public; he had no doubt but that the full moiety would be forthcoming from the two Colonies, who had both evinced an anxious desire to secure the route, and shewn that expense was not the chief consideration.

Sir

Sir Stafford Northcote answered that even if the Government were to do this they could not be certain that they would eventually be able to carry out the arrangement, as in addition to other difficulties there is one as to the transit of the Mails across the Isthmus of Panama, and although it was not improbable that this might be got over, it would not be dealing fairly with the public to invite tenders, unless it was quite clear that the difficulty could be satisfactorily adjusted.

Mr. Merewether stated that, having heard that there was a difficulty of this kind, he had entered into communication with the London Agent of the Panama Railway Company, and had ascertained that the difficulty was of a pecuniary nature only,—he was informed that under existing laws the New Granadian Government insisted on all British postal matter passing through their own offices, and then imposed a postal charge of three dollars per lb., which, upon the large Australian Mails, it would be impossible to pay;—he had also been informed, however, that the New Granadian Government was willing to waive this claim, and permit all postal matter to pass free for a lump sum of £2,000 per annum, and he believed had made some such offer to the English Government. Mr. Towns, however, who had been in communication with various persons in America on the subject prior to his arrival, could give fuller information in the matter.

Mr. Towns confirmed these statements, and added, that from his own experience he was aware that the postal charge amounted to 22 cents, or about 10d. an oz. on the letters sent by the English Mails, whilst if sent via America it was very much less. This arose from the American Government having refused to recognize the right of New Granada to make the charge in question, and positively declined to pay it—enforcing their refusal by placing a man-of-war at the Ports on each side of the Isthmus, and saying touch our Mails at your peril. He was also informed by his American correspondents that there was formerly a treaty with the New Granadian Government with respect to the transit of the British Mails across the Isthmus, but as it had expired, and was only now continued by mutual agreement from year to year, it was quite in the power of the British Government to make fresh arrangements without delay, and obtain the same treatment as is extended to the Americans.

Mr. Larnach remarked that this question is one which concerns not only those interested in establishing a communication with Australia, but also those having transactions with the Western States of America and British Columbia, and its settlement cannot long be deferred.

Sir Stafford Northcote admitted this, and stated that he believed there was some negotiation taking place in the matter, but not being within his province he was unable to say how the question stood, he would, however, place himself in communication with the Foreign Office, and apprise Mr. Merewether of the result.

Mr. Merewether and his colleagues then inquired whether they were to understand that, in the event of this difficulty being adjusted, the Government would then call for Tenders for the Panama Service, to which,—

Sir Stafford Northcote answered that he could not pledge himself upon the point until he had had an opportunity of learning whether Her Majesty's Government were prepared to contribute a moiety of the cost—other business of importance had fully occupied his attention since he entered upon Office, and he had not been able to speak to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the subject, but he would now do so without delay, and communicate the result of this inquiry also to Mr. Merewether.

Mr. Merewether then stated that he was anxious to be able to report to his Government the probable event of his mission by the Mail which will be made up on the 12th, as having been more than a month in England they might reasonably expect that he would be in a position to do this, and he trusted, therefore, that Sir Stafford Northcote would be good enough to place him in possession of the views and intentions of Her Majesty's Government before the departure of the Mail.

Sir Stafford Northcote promised that he would attend to, and comply with this request if in his power, whereupon the interview terminated.

Homeward Route, same distance and number of days.

The Royal Mail Company's Steamers, as at present arranged, leave Southampton with the West Indian Mails on the 2nd and 17th of each month, calling at St. Thomas, St. Martha, and Carthagena, and reach Colon on the 10th and 25th of each month.

It is proposed to alter these dates of departure to 12th and 27th, and the 20th and 25th, respectively, so as to accord with the arrangement proposed in the Table; and also to omit calling at St. Martha and Carthagena.

It is understood that the Royal Mail Company will offer no objection to the changes in question.

The dates of arrival and departure in the Suez route are taken from the Peninsular and Oriental Company's own tables.

The course of post, under the existing service, via Suez, is, in the case of Sydney and Melbourne, 120 days; New Zealand, 149 days.

The course of post, by the proposed service, via Panama, will be, in the case of each of the three Colonies, 120 days.

The time which will elapse between the arrival and departure of the Mails, via Panama, will be amply sufficient to enable residents at Melbourne and Moreton Bay to receive and reply to letters by the same post.

No. 5.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY to E. C. MEREWETHER, ESQ.

(No. 59-2477.)

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,*

14 June, 1859.

SIR,

Referring to my letter of the 1st instant, I have now to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th March last, enclosing Minutes of the further proceedings taken by yourself and the gentlemen who are associated with you as Agent for this Colony, connected with the subject of Steam Postal Communication via Panama, and relating generally to the objects of your mission.

2. You state that you have had two interviews with Sir Stafford Northcote, the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, and that you have obtained a written statement of the views and intentions of Her Majesty's Government, couched in the following terms;—

“In case the difficulties of the transit across the Isthmus can be got over—and in case the time within which the service can be performed via Panama can be made to fit the time within which it is performed via Suez—and in case Her Majesty's Government receive a full assurance that one-half of the whole expense of both the services (via Suez as well as via Panama) will be borne by the Colonies, they will be prepared to call for tenders for the service, but will not bind themselves to accept such tenders should the amount demanded appear to them unreasonable.”

“It is understood that the whole service (from England to Australia) is to be included in one tender.”

3. You further state that Sir Stafford Northcote subsequently explained and modified the third stipulation, by saying that the Government would not consider £150,000 an unreasonable amount to be demanded for the service; and by consenting to call for tenders on the arrival of the then ensuing Australian Mail—as a means of ascertaining the probable cost, but without pledging Her Majesty's Government to accept any of the tenders; and with respect to the other stipulations, you refer to the Minutes and documents which you have forwarded as containing all the information which you possess with reference to the various points involved in them, and the measures by which any difficulties which may arise under them may be overcome.

4. In concluding your report, you, with the advice of your Committee, point out that in order to enable you to give the assurance required by Her Majesty's Government, it is necessary that you should be authorised to extend the guarantee on the part of this Colony to the full moiety of the sum required for the Panama Service; and that there should be obtained from the Government of Victoria a distinct acknowledgment that they have already guaranteed to the Imperial Government one-half of the Suez subsidy.

5. His Excellency the Governor General addressed a Despatch, of which I transmit a copy, to His Excellency the Governor of Victoria, on the 28th ultimo, in which, with a view to elicit the views of the Government of that Colony, he forwarded the document forming Appendix C to your communication, shewing the estimated amount of the payments to be made by each of the Australasian Colonies for the two services, and in which the share of New South Wales, in proportion to the number of letters sent, was estimated at £37,558 19s. 0d.; but His Excellency, at the same time, intimated that this Government would be prepared to recommend to the Legislature to secure to the Australias the benefit of a second line of steamers, by taking upon itself the responsibility of South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, should those Colonies consider that their interest in the establishment of the Panama Line did not render it advisable for them to incur the expense shewn in the document referred to. His Excellency's Despatch, with its enclosure, exhibited that a contribution of £50,000 from New South Wales, of £96,000 from Victoria, of £9,395 from New Zealand, and of stated sums from the respective Colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, and Western Australia, for the Suez Line, would fully cover the cost of establishing a fortnightly Mail to England. From the reply of Sir Henry Barkly, dated the 7th instant, a copy of which is also enclosed, you will observe that the Government of that Colony are of opinion that the question is one so important as to require that it should be dealt with by the Victorian Parliament, which is not at present in Session.

6. By this correspondence, taken in connection with the intimation already conveyed to you in my letter of the 1st of this month, it may be considered that every practicable step has already been taken with respect to the objects of your present communication. You were, in that letter, apprised that it was desired that the Government of this Colony should be understood as willing to co-operate to the fullest extent that could reasonably be expected in contributing to the maintenance of both services, and they now see no reason to alter their instructions on this head; but with respect to an unconditional extension of the guarantee offered by this Colony towards the Panama Service, they are of opinion that they would not be justified in recommending that the decision of the Local Legislature upon a matter so important should be anticipated. Under these circumstances, considered in connection with your representations, the Government of New South Wales, while they cannot doubt that the neighbouring Colonies will be induced to co-operate in a feasible and equitable arrangement for affording the guarantee demanded by Her Majesty's Government, are led to consider that their efforts should now be principally directed to the endeavour to bring about such an arrangement.

7. It is, therefore, the opinion of this Government, that the measure of success which has already attended your efforts, and which may result from the further assurances that you have been authorised to lay before Her Majesty's Government, will have comprised all that is likely to be effected for some time by your presence in England; and entertaining this view, I have now to apprise you that your mission may be considered at an end, and that you are at liberty to return to the Colony in pursuance of the terms of the Instructions given to you at the time of your departure.

8. Although the services of a special agent in London are not any longer considered necessary, this Government does not contemplate the breaking up of the Committee, and I shall therefore be glad if those gentlemen who have acted with you will still afford the Colony the benefit of their aid in securing the establishment of the Panama Postal route, and particularly as a medium of communication between Her Majesty's Government and that of this Colony, as occasion may require, until the object so much desired has been attained. I have, therefore, to desire that you will signify to the members of the Committee, of whose valuable services I am fully sensible, the wish of this Government to this effect, and convey to Mr. Hamilton, who obligingly undertook to act in your room in the event of circumstances rendering it necessary, my request that he will be Chairman of the Committee.

9. I have requested Mr. T. W. Smart, an experienced Colonist, much interested in the attainment of the object in view, and who is now in England, to become a member of the Committee, who will, I have no doubt, be glad of his co-operation.

I have, &c.,

E. C. MEREWETHER, Esq.

CHARLES COWPER.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 5.]

Government House,
Sydney, 28 May, 1859.

Sir,

You are probably aware that the Government of New South Wales has sent to England a Special Agent, for the purpose of completing arrangements with the Imperial Government for the establishment of a new line of Steam Postal Communication between England and Australia, via Panama. Letters have been received from the Agent stating the willingness of the Imperial Government to take its share in the expense of establishing a second line, in addition to that already established, via Suez, by which a fortnightly communication with these Colonies would be secured, provided it can be made to work regularly with the existing line. It will not cost more than a reasonable sum, which has been at present put at £150,000 per annum, for which there is every reason to believe that the work can be done, and that the Colonies will undertake to pay their half of the cost.

I enclose a paper shewing the estimated amount of the payments to be made by each Colony for the two services, in which the share of New South Wales, in proportion to the number of letters sent, is put at £37,558 19s. But the Government at Sydney will be prepared to recommend to the Legislature to secure to the Australias the benefit of a second line of steamers, by taking upon itself the responsibility of South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, should these Colonies consider that their interest in the establishment of the Panama line does not render it advisable for them to incur the expense shewn in the Table.

I should wish to be informed of the views of the Government of Victoria with relation to this scheme. I have little doubt but that the New Zealand Government will be inclined inclined to secure a line, via Panama, by the payment of a larger contribution than that shewn as their share of the cost of the Panama line, but then it might object to pay so largely for the Suez line. But upon the whole there can be no doubt that a contribution of £50,000 from New South Wales, of £90,000 from Victoria, of £9,395 from New Zealand, and of the sums set against the respective Colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, and Western Australia, for the Suez line, will fully cover the cost of establishing a fortnightly Mail to England. And I trust, therefore, that I may be favored with your views on the subject in time for the next Mail.

His Excellency
Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.

I have, &c.,
W. DENISON.

No. 14.

Government Offices,
Melbourne, 7 June, 1859.

Sir,

Upon receipt of your communication of the 28th ultimo, requesting to be informed as to the views of this Government with respect to the scheme proposed for securing a second monthly Postal intercourse with Great Britain, via Panama, I at once urged on the attention of my Responsible Advisers a subject of such great importance to the Australian Colonies generally.

I have now to state, however, that my Postmaster General has just intimated to me, as the result of his deliberations with his colleagues, that they are of opinion that so grave a question can only be dealt with by the Victorian Parliament, which is not at present in Session.

Dr. Evans adds, that when the new Assembly is convened, and time has been afforded to test the working of the arrangement with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the Cabinet will be prepared to give the matter careful investigation, and if unable to arrive at the determination desired by the Government of New South Wales, to refer the inquiry to a Select Committee of the Legislature.

His Excellency
Sir William Denison, K.C.B.

No. 6.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

5, Cannon-street,
London, 18 May, 1859.

Sir,

Herewith I do myself the honor to transmit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General and the Government, copies of the Minutes of the Proceedings taken by myself and the Committee of Advice since the date of my last official communication. A portion of these should have been forwarded by the Mail on the 18th ultimo, but, as for reasons which appear on the Minutes, I only met the Committee late on the afternoon of that day, I was unable to get them copied in time to avail myself of the opportunity. My private letter, however, of that date, written as the Mail was about to close, will have apprised you that the Lords of the Treasury had consented to call for Tenders at once, and also conveyed to you a copy of the broad conditions which had been agreed to as the basis of the notice.

These appeared to myself and the Committee substantially to carry out the views of the Government and Legislature of New South Wales, and will, I trust, be deemed satisfactory. The only point in which they depart from the views expressed in the Resolutions of the 8th of September, is in the provision which it is proposed to make for the Conveyance of the Mails of Victoria and the other Colonies on to, and from Melbourne. This was insisted upon in order to assimilate the service as nearly as possible to that via Suez, and I did not think it expedient to press my objections.

The Minutes now enclosed contain a full report of my own proceedings, and appended to that of the 13th instant, you will find a copy of the Treasury Minute embodying the result of my negotiations with the Government, in so far as they have proceeded.

The substance of this document is already in your possession, and I would only draw your attention to the 4th paragraph, from which it appears that Her Majesty's Government fully understand that the arrangements for the contract are made with the Government of New South Wales alone. This point has been repeatedly admitted during the progress of the negotiations, and may now be considered as officially recognized.

I

11 April, 1859.
11 May, 1859.

I have to report to you that Mr. George A. Lloyd has considered it necessary to resign his seat for reasons which are stated in his letter, also appended to the Minutes.

I do not at present see any occasion to supply the vacancy thus created, but should such arise, I shall, with the advice of my Committee, invite some other gentleman to give us his assistance, and will apprise you accordingly.

In consequence of official delays which I am led to believe were unavoidable, the notice calling for Tenders has not yet been issued; but I enclose a copy which I obtained at Somerset House this morning, where I was at the same time informed that it would appear in the public journals of to-morrow, and in the next Government Gazette. No practical inconvenience, however, will result from this delay, as the time of receiving the Tenders, the 1st July, remains unaltered.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,

Sydney, New South Wales.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 6.]

THURSDAY, 7 APRIL, 1859.

5, Cannon-street, City.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day,—

PRESENT:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., the Agent, in the Chair,

Robert Towns, Esq.

Donald Larnach, Esq.

George A. Lloyd, Esq.

The Minutes of the Proceedings on the 15th ultimo having been read and confirmed, Mr. Merewether informed the Committee that, by the "Oneida" and "Salsette" which had recently arrived with the Australian Mails of January and February, he had received private letters from Mr. Cowper, the Colonial Secretary of New South Wales, from which it appeared that the Despatch of the Secretary of State for the Colonies transmitting the Treasury letter and Minute of the 15th November, a copy of which had been laid before them on the 15th ultimo, had been received in the Colony, but that up to the time of the "Salsette's" departure, Mr. Cowper was not in a position to forward any instructions upon the matters referred to in it, and that, in fact, there was no immediate probability of any satisfactory arrangement being entered into between the Governments at Sydney and Melbourne with respect to their joint action for securing the establishment of the Panama route.

It further appeared, however, that both the Governor General and Mr. Cowper were in private communication with the authorities at Melbourne upon the subject, and that the latter proposed to negotiate with them officially, either by letter, or by personal visit, so soon as the Session of the Colonial Parliament was brought to a conclusion.

Mr. Merewether read extracts from the letters in question, and also laid before the Committee, for their information, printed copies of all the correspondence which had passed between Mr. Cowper and the Government of Victoria on the subject of the proposed Postal route by way of Panama, explaining at the same time that Mr. Cowper had laid these before the Legislature, and moved that they be printed, for the purpose of removing an impression which was current in Victoria, that the Government of New South Wales had acted towards their Government somewhat discourteously in the matter.

It would be seen upon a perusal of the papers that this impression was altogether unfounded, and Mr. Cowper had, therefore, instructed him to take every opportunity of explaining the true state of the case.

Mr. Merewether then drew the attention of the Committee to Sir Stafford Northcote's promise to call for Tenders so soon as the January Mail had arrived, with the view of ascertaining the probable cost of the service, and stated that as the February Mail was expected to arrive a few days after the January Mail was delivered, he had considered it expedient to await that event before he again brought the subject under notice.

As, however, the promise in question was verbally given, and the rejection of the Ministerial Reform Bill rendered it not impossible that a change of Ministry might take place, he had thought it prudent, pending the arrival of the Mail, to write privately to Sir Stafford Northcote asking for a written acknowledgment of the promise which he might use officially in the event of such a contingency occurring.

Sir Stafford had apparently misunderstood the purport of this communication, as he had in reply simply repeated in an official letter the conditions already given in writing, upon which Her Majesty's Government would contribute towards the Panama Service, and had not alluded to the verbal promise.

A formal acknowledgment of it however was not now so necessary, because it was understood that the Ministry did not intend to resign, but it was very desirable that no time should be lost in re-opening the question; and as he had been informed at the Colonial

Office

Office, that no answer had been received by the January Mail to the Treasury Minute of the 18th of November, and it would appear from the Schedules which are forwarded via Marseilles, that no such answer would be received by the February Mail, he proposed therefore at once to remind Sir Stafford Northcote of his promise, and with this view had prepared a draft letter for the approval of the Committee.

Having perused this draft the Committee approved it, as set forth in the Appendix hereto, and advised that Mr Merewether should forward it without delay, and personally wait upon Sir Stafford Northcote in the course of a day or two to ascertain the determination of the Government.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX.

5, Cannon-street, City,
8 April, 1859.

Sir,

I avail myself of the opportunity afforded by the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, to recall to your recollection that at the interview which I had with you on the 15th ultimo, and at which you first communicated to me the terms and conditions upon which Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to contribute towards the establishment of a monthly postal service with Australia, via Panama; you also intimated to me that if by the January Mail no answer should be received to the reference made to them in November last, the Government would not object, under all the circumstances of the case, to take present steps to ascertain the probable cost of such a service, and with this view would be willing to call for Tenders immediately after the arrival of the Mail, if the subject were then again formally brought under notice.

As therefore both the January and February Mails have now arrived, and I am informed at the Colonial Office that by them no reply has been received from any of the Colonies to the reference in question, I lose no time in again inviting your attention to the matter, and trust, that as those answers whenever they may be received, will have no direct bearing upon the question which it is now sought to solve, viz., the cost of the service, the Lords of the Treasury will waive all further delay, and will at once move the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to issue the necessary notice calling for Tenders.

I would point out to you that by adopting this course, not only will it be ascertained whether the amount demanded for the service is reasonable or not, but it will also be seen whether the time within which the route can be performed will fit the time within which that by way of Suez is performed.

These are two of the points upon which Her Majesty's Government desire to be satisfied before they will pledge themselves to subsidize the service, and reliable information with respect to them can be obtained in no other way.

I venture also to express a hope that the Tenders will be called for before the departure of the Mail of the 18th instant, and that the notice inviting them will be so framed as to meet in all essential particulars the views and wishes of the Government and Legislature of New South Wales.

These are fully set forth in the Resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 8th September last, and in the Bill appropriating the subsidy, copies of which are already in your possession; but should any further information be required with respect to them, I shall be happy to afford it, and shall be prepared to wait upon you or any one else you may be pleased to appoint for the purpose.

In conclusion, I consider it desirable also to remind you of your undertaking that I should be furnished with a copy of the Admiralty notice before it is issued, and also be afforded an opportunity of suggesting any alterations therein.

Praying your early reply to this communication.

Monday, 18 April, 1859.

At a Meeting of the Committee, held this day,—

PRESENT:—

E. C. Merewether, Esq., Agent, in the Chair.
Edward Hamilton, Esq.	Donald Larnach, Esq.
Robert Towns, Esq.	Geo. A. Lloyd, Esq.

The Minutes of the proceedings on the 7th instant were read, and confirmed.

Mr. Merewether explained to the Committee that he had postponed calling them together until this day, on which he was aware that they attended at some personal inconvenience, because he had been unable sooner to place before them the result of the letter that he had addressed to the Government, in pursuance of the advice given by them at their last meeting.

That letter he had considered it desirable to deliver in person; and had, accordingly, on the 9th instant, sought for, and obtained, an interview with Sir Stafford Northcote, at which Mr. G. A. Hamilton was also present.

He was happy to say that the expediency of at once calling for Tenders for a Postal Service via Panama, as well as the verbal promise to adopt the step as soon as the January Mail had arrived, were fully admitted by both gentlemen; but they pointed out that the settlement of the difficulty with respect to the transit of the Isthmus was a necessary preliminary which could not be dispensed with; and as it had not yet been ascertained how the question stood at the Foreign Office, and the objections to inviting Tenders for the Service had originally proceeded from thence, they felt they would scarcely be justified in issuing the necessary notice until they had first communicated with that Department, and were assured that the objections in question had been removed, or were waived. They promised, however, that a letter on the subject should be written, and sent that afternoon, and if the reply, which they would press for, were satisfactory, that the Tenders should be called for before the departure of the Mail.

They also requested that, pending the receipt of the answer, he (Mr. Merewether) would see Mr. Stephenson, and arrange with him the terms of the notice to be issued. In pursuance of this request he had, accordingly, met Mr. Stephenson on the 12th instant, by appointment, and having previously obtained the individual opinions of the majority of the members of the Committee on the subject, had settled with him the broad conditions which should form the basis of the notice.

He had subsequently called, daily, at the Treasury, to learn if any reply had been received from the Foreign Office; and on Friday, the 15th, was told that, owing to the time which had elapsed since the objections were first raised, the subject had been lost sight of at the Foreign Office, but that it was now receiving attention, and an answer would be forthcoming at one o'clock this day.

Acting upon this information, he had called at the Treasury this morning, at the hour named, and had again seen Sir Stafford Northcote, who stated that it appeared, from the reply which had been received from the Foreign Office, that Lord Malmesbury had not yet been able to make any arrangements for the abolition or reduction of the transit duty on English Mails sent across the Isthmus, but that his Lordship saw no objection to the issue of a notice calling for tenders for a Postal Service between Panama and Australia.

Under these circumstances therefore, Sir Stafford had consented to the immediate issue of the notice, upon the understanding that the Tenders would not be received for two months, say until the 1st of July, and that the Government did not pledge themselves to accept any, even if otherwise eligible, unless they were first assured that the conditions upon which they had already intimated that they were prepared to subsidize the route, could or would be satisfied.

Mr. Merewether further informed the Committee that the conditions previously agreed upon between himself and Mr. Stephenson as the basis of the notice, were then submitted to Sir Stafford Northcote, who adopted them, and directed that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty should at once be moved to issue on or before the 1st of May, a notice in accordance therewith; and that a Treasury Minute should be prepared, embodying shortly the result of this and the previous negotiations on the same subject.

Mr. Merewether then laid before the committee a copy of the conditions inserted in the notice, and as they had only received the individual assent of a majority of the members, invited from them a formal approval of the same.

The Committee thereupon expressed their formal approval of the conditions in question, as substantially carrying out the views and wishes of the Government and Legislature of New South Wales, and advised that they be entered on the Minutes, as follows:—

Invite Tenders for a Monthly Mail Service between Great Britain and Sydney via Panama and New Zealand.

Provision must be made for conveying to and from Melbourne the letters of Victoria, and the other Australian Colonies.

It must be stated at what Ports between Great Britain and Panama, and between Panama and Australia, it may be in contemplation to call.

The Contractors to state the time at which they will be prepared to commence the service from Australia and from England, and to specify the maximum number of days between Great Britain and Melbourne.

The Mails must be conveyed to and from Melbourne within a period of 55 days, and the times of arrival and departure must be so arranged as to alternate fortnightly with the Mail Service via Suez.

18 April, 1859.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day,—

PRESENT:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., Agent, | Edward Hamilton, Esq.,
Donald Larnach, Esq.

Mr. Merewether read a letter from Mr. Lloyd, of which a copy is appended, resigning his seat in the Committee, and also stated that Mr. Towns was absent from London, and would not be able to attend the Meeting.

The Minutes of the Proceedings on the 18th ultimo, having then been read and confirmed,—

Mr. Merewether laid before the Committee for their information, a letter from W. B. Stephenson, Esq., transmitting a copy of the Treasury Minute setting forth the views and decisions of Her Majesty's Government with respect to the establishment of a Postal Service with Australia via Panama.

A copy of the letter with its enclosures is also hereto appended.

Mr. Merewether informed the Committee that the notice calling for the Tenders was in print but had not yet been issued, as the ordinary official routine required that it should, in the first instance, be referred for the report of the Postmaster General.

He had, however, been in frequent communication with the authorities at the Treasury and Admiralty on the subject, and had that morning ascertained at the former that the report of the Postmaster General had just been received, and that one or two questions had been raised in it, which were not, however, of such a nature as to interfere with the issue of the notice.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX A.

2, Royal Exchange Buildings,
London, E. C., 4 May, 1859.

My Dear Sir,

I regret to inform you that circumstances have occurred within the last few days, which have induced me to call a meeting of my creditors.

I beg therefore to resign my seat in the Committee of Advice upon the Panama question.

It is a very sad end to a business which I have been twenty years collecting; and hoping for the sympathy of yourself and the other Members of Committee,

Believe me,
Yours faithfully,

E. C. Merewether, Esq.

APPENDIX B.

(Immediate.)

Treasury Chambers,
19 April, 1859.

Sir,

I am desired by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit to you, with reference to your letter of the 8th instant, the enclosed copy of a Minute of My Lords, of this day's date, relative to the establishment of Postal Communication between this country and Australia, via Panama.

I am, &c.,

E. C. Merewether, Esq.,
14, King-street, St. James.

W. H. STEPHENSON.

COPY of Treasury Minute, dated 19th April, 1859.

My Lords have under their consideration the various communications which have taken place with reference to the establishment of a Mail Service with the Australian Colonies via Panama.

At the time when my Lords were negotiating for the service via Suez, expectations were held out that steps would be taken to set on foot this second service, as soon as proper arrangements could be made for the purpose, and in the notice calling for Tenders for the Suez service, a distinct intimation was given to this effect.

Since

Since then, Mr. Merewether, Clerk of the Executive Council of New South Wales, has been deputed by the Government of New South Wales to act as their Agent in any arrangements to be made for carrying out the project in question, and has been in communication with this Board on the subject.

The Colony of New South Wales has actually appropriated a sum of £50,000 for ten years, for this monthly service via Panama, and my Lords are informed by Mr. Merewether, that he has no doubt that the Colony will be prepared to take upon itself the responsibility of one-half of the cost of a monthly service via Panama, provided it can be accomplished within reasonable limits, undertaking, at the same time, the necessary inter-colonial arrangements as regards New Zealand and the other Australian Colonies.

One obstacle which interfered with the earlier adoption of this line was occasioned by the state of the transit route across the Isthmus of Panama, and the heavy charge to which the Mails conveyed by that route are subjected on the part of the Granadian Government for transit dues, in addition to the payment made to the Railway Company for actual conveyance.

My Lords are informed by the letter from the Foreign Office, dated 15th instant, that Lord Malmesbury has not yet been able to make any arrangement on the subject, but that it is a matter to which his attention is constantly directed, and that he will avail himself of the first opportunity to settle it on a more favorable basis than that at present existing.

Considering the vast importance to the Australian Colonies, especially to New South Wales and to New Zealand, of a communication which, amongst other advantages, will afford them facilities of intercourse with the whole continent of America, from which they are at present comparatively excluded; and looking to the very liberal manner in which the Government of New South Wales have come forward in support of this scheme, My Lords are of opinion that they ought no longer to delay fulfilling the intention which they formerly announced of inviting Tenders for the service.

In coming to this decision however, it must be clearly understood that My Lords will not consider themselves bound to accept any of the Tenders, unless they are fully satisfied,—

1. That the Amount is reasonable, and such as they would be justified in incurring.
2. That the times and rates of speed are such as to harmonize perfectly with the Suez Service, so as to make the two alternate fortnightly with each other, and—
3. That the Governments of the Australian Colonies will undertake one entire half of the cost of both the services, via Suez as well as via Panama, whatever that may be.

Write accordingly to the Admiralty, and request that they will take the necessary steps for procuring Tenders for the performance of a Monthly Mail Service between Great Britain and Sydney, via Panama and New Zealand.

The Contractors must make provision for carrying to and from Melbourne the letters of Victoria and the other Australian Colonies.

They must also state what Ports between Great Britain and Panama, and between Panama and Australia, it may be in contemplation to call, and the time at which they will be prepared to commence the service from Australia and from Great Britain.

The Tenders must specify the maximum number of days to be occupied on the voyages out and home, which must not exceed 55 days on the whole, exclusive of the transit across the Isthmus, and the times of arrival and departure must be so arranged as to alternate fortnightly with the Suez route.

My Lords propose to allow a period of two months, say to the 1st July, for the delivery of the Tenders.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

E. C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

5, Cannon-street, City,
19 July, 1859.

SIR,

Nothing having occurred between the date of my last letter and the departure of the June Mail which appeared to me to call for a formal report, I did not consider it necessary to address you formally by that opportunity, but will now state, as briefly as I can, my proceedings since the 18th of May.

Although I was enabled to forward a copy on that date, the Conditions of Tender were not ready for issue to the public until the 20th, but I then procured a number of copies and forwarded them to various persons who I had reason to believe were prepared to Tender, with a note intimating that I was ready to afford any further information that might be required.

During the course of that and the early part of the ensuing month, I called frequently at Somerset House, to ascertain if possible what was likely to be the result of the Admiralty Notice, and was informed that, judging from the applications for copies of the "Conditions of Tender," the contract had excited more attention amongst ship-owners at the principal ports in England and Scotland than any similar contract which had been called for for some time past. Having subsequently ascertained, however, that one of the largest ship-owners, Sir S. Cunard, did not intend to tender, I waited upon him, at the suggestion of Mr. Stuart Donaldson, who kindly accompanied me; and although we were unsuccessful in obtaining from Sir Samuel a distinct promise to compete, he consented to reconsider the matter, and intimated that at all events he was prepared to treat with the Government for the performance of the service should there be no eligible tenders sent in.

I have further to report that, as my presence in London was at this time no longer absolutely necessary, I availed myself of the interval between the departure of the June Mail and the day fixed for the opening of the Tenders, and proceeded to Scotland, having first ascertained that no steps had been taken by the new Government to withdraw the notice calling for Tenders, and that the result of them would not be communicated to the Treasury till the 4th of July. On that day I returned to London, but did not obtain any reliable information until the 7th, when I learnt at the Treasury that six actual Tenders had been sent in, and two informal communications on the subject, one of which was from Sir S. Cunard. I was unable at the time to procure access to them, but on Friday last, the 15th instant, I received from the Treasury a copy of the Abstract, which I now enclose. You will observe that three of the Tenders are within the limit fixed by the late Government, and I am informed that none of the Contractors make any difficulty as to the time within which the service is to be performed. The letter which accompanied Messrs. Seymour and Peacock's Tender has been shewn to me by those gentlemen, and I am enabled to state that, save in the matter of cost, their offer is satisfactory, and such as I should feel justified in recommending for acceptance, if the necessary bonds are forthcoming. Of the special conditions of the other two Tenders, which are within the limit of the late Government, I am not in a position to speak, as I have not been furnished with copies of the letters covering them; and since the receipt of the Abstract, I have not had time to call upon the Tenderers to procure the information.

July 8, 1859.
July 15, 1859.

I also enclose to you copies of the minutes of the proceedings taken by myself, and the Committee of Advice, since the opening of the Tenders; and in referring you to them for further information, as to the present state of the question, I cannot refrain from expressing the deep chagrin and disappointment which I feel at the nature of the tidings they will communicate.

I can at present add little to what is therein contained, but the Select Committee, to which the question is referred, will meet upon Monday, the 18th, to decide upon the course of procedure; and I trust that before the Mail closes I may be in a position to state whether they accede to my request—that the Panama contract may be first inquired into.

Until this has been decided, and I have ascertained what turn the inquiry will take, I cannot of course say positively what my own line of action will be, but if the Select Committee do consent to take my case first, I shall at once plead the undertaking of the late Government to establish the service, if certain conditions are complied with—and urge that the matter has gone too far to be now receded from. In the event of these pleas being admitted, I shall at once press for a progress report to that effect, so that the Government may be left free to deal with the Tenders; should they not be admitted, I shall then be prepared to go into the whole question, and shew the expediency of establishing the service.

If, however, the Select Committee do not take my case first, I fear the consideration of it will inevitably be deferred until the next Session of Parliament, as all the cases cannot be heard during the present Session, and those which would probably have the preference—the Dover Packet Contract, and the Galway American Service—are, from circumstances to which I need not more fully allude, likely to occupy much time.

This result would place me in a somewhat embarrassing position, and I cannot at present say how I should act under the circumstances, but you may rest assured that I shall take no decided step without the full concurrence of the Committee of Advice.

In conclusion I have only to add, that the non-arrival of the Mail for this month, leaves me still unable to fulfil, if called upon to do so, the third condition imposed by the late Government, but I do not anticipate that any serious inconvenience or difficulty would arise from this circumstance, as it is clearly beyond my control.

I have, &c.,

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,
Sydney, New South Wales.

London,

Friday, 8 July, 1859.

Upon the invitation of Mr. Merewether the Committee met at the official residence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the purpose of having an interview with the Right Honorable William Gladstone, relative to the Tenders sent in for the Contract for the Panama Postal Service.

PRESENT :—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., Agent.

Edward Hamilton Esq., | Robert Towns, Esq.
Donald Larnach, Esq.

Prior to the interview, Mr. Merewether stated to the Committee, that on the previous day he had ascertained at the Treasury that in pursuance of the invitation of the Government six Tenders had been sent in for the performance of the Postal Service, via Panama, and two informal communications in reference to the subject, but that he had not been able to obtain access to them; he had, however, been informed that they ranged from £119,000 to £220,000, and that no difficulty had been raised as to the time in which the service was to be performed.

That having also on the previous day seen in the Times, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had given notice of his intention to move on that day for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire, amongst other things, into the mode in which Contracts for Ocean Postal Services had of late years been made, or modified, he had thought it expedient to be present on the occasion, and from what fell from Mr. Gladstone on making the motion, he had reason to suppose that the question of the Australian Service via Panama would be included in the inquiries of the Committee, and a decision upon the Tenders delayed in consequence; he had considered it necessary, therefore, to seek an interview with Mr. Hamilton, the permanent Secretary of the Treasury, and accompanied by Mr. Towns, had accordingly waited upon that gentleman this morning.

At Mr. Hamilton's suggestion they had subsequently seen Mr. Laing, the Political Secretary, who, upon being asked what course the Government intended to pursue with reference to the Tenders, stated that a somewhat similar question would be put to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his place in the House of Commons that afternoon, the answer to which would explain the intentions of the Government—but he was not himself at liberty to state what that answer would be.

That both Mr. Towns and himself had then at some length drawn Mr. Laing's attention to the terms of the Treasury Minute of the 19th April, setting forth the views and intentions of the late Government with respect to the proposed service, and urged that the matter had gone so far that to abandon it now, or even delay it, would scarcely be fair to the Colonies, and would create great discontent and dissatisfaction amongst all interested in its accomplishment.

That they pointed out that the conditions upon which the assistance of the Imperial Government would be granted to the scheme had been announced by the Treasury so long ago as March last, and having been communicated to the Government of New South Wales by the Mail of that month, the answer was daily expected which would shew whether the Colonies were prepared to fulfil one of those conditions, viz.:—guarantee a moiety of the cost of both services.

That as far as they were informed, the Tenders now before the Government were eligible, and afforded satisfaction upon the points involved in the two remaining conditions.

That according to commercial practice the Tenders are only open for a reasonable period, and should the question be remitted to the Select Committee delay must ensue, the Tenderers might withdraw their offers, and both the Mother Country and the Colonies lose the opportunity of establishing the service upon advantageous terms.

They expressed a hope, therefore, that the Government would except this question from those to be referred to the Select Committee, and deal with the Tenders at once.

That Mr. Laing having intimated that he was not in a position to give any answer upon these points, they inquired whether it would be convenient for the Chancellor of the Exchequer to see them on the subject before the House met, and the Government committed themselves to any particular line of action.

That Mr. Laing agreed to ascertain this, and subsequently stated that Mr. Gladstone would receive them, and the other Members of the Committee of advice, at a quarter to four P.M.

Mr. Merewether further explained that this appointment was made at two o'clock, and that he was unable, therefore, to do more than ask the Committee to meet him a short time before the time fixed for the interview, in order that he might place them in possession of the circumstances which led to it. With their approval he proposed simply to ask Mr. Gladstone, what are the intentions of the Government with respect to the Tenders, and to press for their immediate consideration.

The Committee having expressed their approval of this course, and of the previous steps adopted by Mr. Merewether, Mr. Gladstone shortly thereafter entered the room, and Mr. Merewether stated that, presuming Mr. Laing had already explained the object for which the present interview had been sought, he would, without further preface, ask what course the Government intended to pursue with reference to the Tenders which had recently been sent in for a Postal Service to Australia via Panama, and were now in the Treasury?

Mr. Gladstone replied, that in consequence of Parliament having evinced a desire to inquire into the mode in which Contracts for Ocean Postal Services, and other engagements involving a large expenditure of public money, had been entered into of late years, and a Committee

Committee having been agreed to for this purpose, the Government felt that they would not be justified in proceeding with any fresh arrangements for services of the kind, whilst the inquiry was yet pending—no immediate action therefore would be taken with reference to the Tenders, and the question of the proposed service via Panama would be submitted with others of a similar nature to the Select Committee.

Mr. Merewether having then urged that there were peculiar circumstances connected with the present case which would appear to except it from the category of those to be remitted to the Committee, briefly recapitulated the arguments which had been pressed upon Mr. Laing, and earnestly requested that the Government would not send the case to the Committee but at once proceed to consider the Tenders—this request was not made from a desire to shirk inquiries, but simply to avoid delay, and the chance of losing a favorable opportunity of establishing the service upon advantageous terms.

Mr. Gladstone observed that from what had just been stated, it was not clear that all the conditions imposed by the late Government would be fulfilled—but it was not necessary to go into that question—all existing contracts for services extending over a period of years, and engagements involving expenditure of the public money would be submitted to the Select Committee; and the Government would not be justified in specially excepting the service for which no contract had yet been concluded.

The question must, therefore, be regarded as in the hands of the Committee, the members of which would be nominated in a few days, and it would be for Mr. Merewether to prove to that Committee that a pledge of the nature stated by him had been given by the late Government.

Mr. Merewether and the Members of the Committee of Advice then withdrew, and having adjourned to Mr. Merewether's lodgings, proceeded to consider what course it would now be expedient to adopt, and having deliberated, recommended that so soon as the Committee was nominated, Mr. Merewether should wait upon the Chairman and press for an early hearing of the case.

That, in the first instance, the conditional undertaking of the late Government to organize the service, should be prominently brought under the notice of the Committee, and a decision prayed for on that specific point.

That, failing in this, Mr. Merewether should lay the whole question fully before the Select Committee, and, if necessary, support it by the evidence of Colonists, and others in a position to speak to the facts.

That, pending the nomination of the Committee, it might be productive of advantage, if Mr. Merewether were to wait upon His Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and endeavour to enlist his Grace's influence in favor of the service, and

That, as the Treasury Minute was verbally referred to at the interview, and not actually laid before the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Merewether should, in writing, distinctly draw Mr. Gladstone's attention to its terms, and the steps taken in consequence of the pledge it contains.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day,—

PRESENT :—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., Agent, in the Chair.

R. Towns, Esq.

| Donald Larnach, Esq.

Mr. Merewether having explained that reasons of a private nature would prevent Mr. Hamilton from being present at the Meeting, the Minutes of the Proceedings on the 8th instant were read and confirmed.

Referring then to the several recommendations of that date, Mr. Merewether informed the Committee—

1st.—That he had on the 9th instant waited upon the Duke of Newcastle, and received from His Grace much the same answer as they had obtained from Mr. Gladstone on the previous day; but that His Grace had promised to use his influence to get the question of the Panama Service brought first before the Select Committee.

2nd.—That he had also addressed a letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pointedly drawing attention to the terms of the Treasury Minute of the 18th April, and had received in reply a note from Mr. Gladstone's Private Secretary, intimating that if it was desired, this letter should be submitted to the Select Committee.

Mr. Hamilton, to whom he had shewn the letter before it was sent, was of opinion that it should be so submitted, and if the Members now present concurred, it should be done.

The

The copy of the letter, hereto appended, having been read,—

The Committee recommended that Mr. Gladstone's offer should be accepted, and Mr. Merewether proceeded to state, that having this morning ascertained that Mr. Cobden had been appointed Chairman of the Select Committee, he had waited upon him, and requested that the Panama question might be first inquired into. That in support of this application, he had urged that the Government had declined to take any action with respect to the Tenders, until the question had been considered by the Committee. That prompt action was necessary, as the Tenders were, according to commercial usage, only open for a reasonable time, and might be withdrawn, if any unusual delay occurred in dealing with them. That many of the other matters referred to the Committee were likely to occupy much time, and that all could not be inquired into during the present Session, that if the consideration of the Panama question were deferred until the next Session— not only would the Tenders be imperilled, but unnecessary expense would be entailed upon the Colony of New South Wales by his, Mr. Merewether's, detention in England, and bitter disappointment occasioned to the Colonists, who, at present, had reason to believe, that the settlement of the question depended solely upon the fulfilment of certain conditions—and finally, that little time would be occupied in the inquiry, as his negotiations with the late Government, had reduced the question into a very narrow compass.

That after some further conversation, Mr. Cobden intimated that the Select Committee would meet on Monday, the 18th, to decide the order in which the various matters referred to them should be taken, and that if in the interim the reasons above given were communicated to him in writing he would lay the letter before them, and as it was an open Committee, he, Mr. Merewether, could be present and ascertain the result.

That in compliance with this information, he had drafted a letter to Mr. Cobden to the above effect, and proposed to attend the meeting of the Select Committee.

The draft letter in question having then been read and approved, the Committee adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX.

14, King-street,
Monday, 11 July, 1859.

Sir,

At the interview which you did me the honor to afford me on Friday last, relative to the proposed contract for a postal communication with Australia via Panama, I verbally explained to you the decision arrived at by Her Majesty's late Ministers with respect to the question, but having omitted to lay before you the Treasury Minute setting forth the views and intentions of the Government, I consider it necessary pointedly to draw your attention, in writing, to the terms of that Minute, and also to offer a few remarks upon the subject, not only in justification of the opinion I then expressed, that Her Majesty's Government are pledged to establish the service, if certain conditions are complied with, but also in fulfilment of the duty I owe to my own Government. In pursuance of this view, then, I would first observe that, in the early part of the Minute, allusion is made to a distinct intimation, given at the time the Suez service was being negotiated, that steps would be taken to set on foot this second service so soon as proper arrangements could be made for the purpose; the Minute then, reciting the fact and objects of my mission, disposes of an obstacle which had interfered with the earlier adoption of the line, and proceeds to state, that considering the importance of the proposed communication to the Australian Colonies generally, and New South Wales and New Zealand in particular, the advantages which it will confer upon them, and the liberal manner in which the Government of New South Wales has come forward in support of the scheme, My Lords are of opinion, that they ought no longer to delay fulfilling the intention which they formerly announced of inviting Tenders for the service.

"In coming to this decision, however, it must be clearly understood that My Lords will not consider themselves bound to accept any of the Tenders unless they are fully "satisfied" upon three points, which it is not necessary to extract. The Minute then directs that the Authorities at the Admiralty be requested to take the necessary steps for procuring Tenders, and details the specialities of the notice to be issued.

Of the clear and obvious meaning of the words literally quoted, and placed between inverted commas, there can, I apprehend, be little doubt. They distinctly imply that, if Her Majesty's Government are satisfied upon the points in question, they will establish the service, and upon these words I base my statement that they are pledged to do so. I would further remark that the conditions upon which the assistance of the Imperial Government would be granted to the scheme were announced to me in March last, and the determination to call for Tenders was communicated to me in the following month. The former were transmitted to the Colony by the March Mail, and the latter by that for April, and I am daily expecting the reply from my Government, which will apprise me whether the Colonies are able and willing to guarantee the moiety of the cost of both services—the third point specified in the Minute.

In compliance also with the instructions of the Lords of the Treasury, Tenders have been invited, and having been sent in after a lapse of two months, are now awaiting the decision decision of the Government. Of the precise nature of those Tenders I am not in a position to speak, as I have not obtained access to them, but I have reason to believe that some of them are highly eligible; and as they afford full satisfaction upon the two points upon which such is required by the Government, I trust that it will not be forgotten that according to commercial custom the Tenders so made are only open for a reasonable time, and that any unusual delay in dealing with them may result in their withdrawal, and consequently of serious injustice to the Colonies.

There are many other considerations which I might with propriety bring under your notice, but having effected my immediate object of prominently calling your attention to the terms of the Treasury Minute, and the steps taken in consequence of the pledge therein contained, I will abstain from further trespassing on your time, and conclude by the expression of a hope that whatever may be the decision arrived at by the Select Committee, Her Majesty's present Ministers will under the circumstances pause before they decline to fulfil an engagement which appears to have been deliberately undertaken and acted upon by the late Government, and the result of which is so important to the interests of the Colony of New South Wales.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

E. C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Thursday, 18 August, 1859.

SIR,

In my letter of the 16th ultimo, I expressed a hope that, before the mail closed, I might be in a position to state whether the Select Committee on Packet and Telegraph Contracts would accede to my request that the Panama contract should be the first inquired into, but was unable to add this information to any official letter, owing to the late hour at which the Committee adjourned.

I now, however, do myself the honor to transmit to you copies of the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Committee of Advice, at a meeting held on the 12th instant, which will place you in possession of the issue of my application.

You will perceive that, from an unfortunate misunderstanding of the tenor of the Chairman's verbal reply, I missed an opportunity of being examined, and was unable to obtain another before the prorogation of Parliament took place.

I much regret that this should have occurred, but can honestly say that my absence on the occasion in question did not arise from carelessness or neglect of the important business entrusted to me, but simply from a misunderstanding of Mr. Cobden's meaning; and I may also state, that, from conversations which I subsequently had with Mr. Cobden on the subject, and information derived in other ways, I have reason to believe that little, if any, real advantage would have resulted from my being examined, as my inability to give the guarantee required by the Lords of the Treasury would have been held a sufficient bar to any immediate decision being arrived at with respect to the question.

I would also draw your attention to that portion of the Minutes which relates to my return to the Colony, and have to report to you that although my first disposition was to return by the mail steamer of the present month, I have, upon more mature consideration, considered it right to act upon the advice of the Committee, and to defer my departure until the ensuing month.

I think it essential, however, that I should then return, in order that I may arrive in time to afford an opportunity of again despatching an agent to England, or communicating with Mr. Hamilton, as may be deemed expedient, before the next Session of Parliament, and I shall accordingly leave England by the September Mail Steamer.

Before my departure I shall hand over to Mr. Hamilton all the papers connected with the Panama question, and go carefully through them with him.

I shall also again meet the Committee for the purpose of laying before them any communications which I may receive from you by the next post.

I have only to add, in conclusion, that I have not yet received a reply to the letter which I have addressed to the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, a copy of which is appended to the Minutes.

I have, &c.,

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,

Sydney, New South Wales.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

[Enclosure.]

5, Cannon-street, London,
Friday, 12 August, 1859..

At a meeting of the Committee held this day,—

PRESENT:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., in the Chair.

Edward Hamilton, Esq., | Donald Larnach, Esq.

Mr. Merewether having explained that Mr. Towns was absent from London, and would not be able to attend the meeting,—the Minutes of the proceedings on the 15th ultimo were then read, and confirmed.

Mr. Merewether then stated, that on the 16th ultimo he had left with Mr. Cobden the letter, of which the draft had been approved by the Committee on the previous day, and on the 18th, when the Select Committee on Contracts held their first meeting, he had been informed by Mr. Cobden that little hope could be held out that the Panama question would be gone into during the present Session of Parliament, as the Select Committee had determined, in the first instance, to take evidence as to the practice which had hitherto been followed in making contracts for Ocean Postal Services, and then to proceed with the Dover and Gay Packet Contracts, both of which cases it was considered should be inquired into without delay, as they involved charges against the late Government; that in pursuance of this determination, the Committee had already examined Mr. Clifton, of the Admiralty, and had summoned Messrs. Hamilton and Stephenson, of the Treasury, for the next day of meeting, Thursday, the 20th, and proposed, after their examination was concluded, to commence with the Dover contract.

Mr. Cobden had, however, further informed him, that as the examination of these two witnesses would probably not occupy the whole of the day, and as an application had also been made to the Committee to postpone the inquiry into the Dover case until a motion which would be made in the House of Commons to suspend the action of the Committee with respect to it, had been decided, if he (Mr. Merewether) was in attendance on Thursday his evidence in the matter of the Panama contract might possibly be taken.

Having seen in the public journals of Wednesday, the 20th, that the House of Commons had declined to interfere with the action of the Select Committee, he did not consider it necessary to attend the meeting on Thursday, but assuming that under the circumstances the Committee would now act upon the original intention, and at once proceed with the Dover case, he had remained at home for the purpose of preparing a written statement of the present position of the Panama postal question, a step which he had been strongly advised to take for the greater convenience of the Committee.

It was therefore with great surprise and annoyance that he had heard on the evening of Thursday, that at the conclusion of Messrs. Hamilton and Stephenson's examination, which had been conducted jointly, he had been called upon to give evidence in the matter of the Panama Contract.

On the following day he had waited upon Mr. Cobden to explain why he had been absent, and how he had been employed, and expressed a hope that under the circumstances the Committee would consent to examine him at their next meeting.

This request, however, it appeared could not be complied with, as the witnesses in the Dover case had already been summoned, but Mr. Cobden had informed him that if he would send in the statement in question, and be present at each meeting of the Committee, any opportunity which might be presented of examining him should be taken advantage of.

Acting upon these suggestions he had forwarded to Mr. Cobden the statement referred to, and had regularly attended the meetings of the Committee until Tuesday last, the 9th instant, when the inquiry into the Dover case was closed; on the following day the Committee reported to the House, and met again yesterday to examine the Right Honble. James Wilson, and also a gentleman from Canada.

During

During the whole of these meetings no opportunity of examining him had occurred, and, as the prorogation is fixed for to-morrow, there is no probability that any such can now arise.

He had reason to believe, however, that little good would have resulted from his examination, as his inability to give the guarantee required by the Lords of the Treasury was held to be a sufficient obstacle to any prompt decision being arrived at in the matter.

Mr. Merewether further stated to the Committee that, in a private letter which he had received by the May Mail from Sydney, Mr. Cowper, the Colonial Secretary, has expressed himself satisfied with the condition imposed by the Lords of the Treasury, and intimated that full instructions on the subject would be transmitted by the Mail of the ensuing month of June—that Mail, as the Members were aware, had now been delivered some days, and he regretted to say that by it he had received no further communication from Mr. Cowper, either official or otherwise; he had, however, been informed, that in private letters which had reached Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Towns, and Mr. Lloyd, by the June Mail, Mr. Cowper spoke of his (Mr. Merewether's) recal, and mentioned that an official communication consigning the necessary instructions to that effect, and explaining the reasons, had been transmitted by the same opportunity.

On ascertaining this, he had made inquiries at the General Post Office and the Colonial Office respecting the missing letter, but could gain no intelligence with regard to it, and was completely at a loss to account for its non receipt.

He naturally felt some considerable embarrassment as to the course which he ought now to adopt, and desired to obtain the advice of the Committee on the matter. For his own part he thought that, under any circumstances, whether recalled or not, it would be better for him to return to the Colony, as it must be borne in mind that his services here could now be no use until the next Session of Parliament, whilst his presence in Sydney might be productive of much advantage, and it appeared to him that the only question to be considered was whether he should return by the mail which will leave during the present month, or defer his departure until the ensuing month. He was, however, quite prepared to act implicitly upon their recommendation.

The Committee then deliberated, and, having carefully weighed all the circumstances of the case, expressed their concurrence in the view taken by Mr. Merewether, as to the expediency of his now returning to the Colony; but thinking that the letter announcing his recal will, probably, arrive by the July Mail, which should be delivered early in September, and deeming it highly desirable that, before his departure, he should be in possession of the views of the Government of New South Wales, with respect to the proposition of the Lords of the Treasury, they were of opinion that he ought to defer his departure until the ensuing month of September, and advised accordingly.

Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee that as he had considered it expedient, if not absolutely necessary, to take out with him to the Colony the full particulars of the Tenders which had been sent in for the Panama Service, he proposed, with their concurrence, to address a letter to the Secretary to the Treasury, applying for complete copies of the documents in question, and at the same time asking for information;—

1st. As to the course which Her Majesty's Government intend to adopt in the event of the consent of the Australian Colonies to guarantee a moiety of the cost of the Suez and Panama Services being received, before the Select Committee on Contracts have concluded their investigations; and, 2nd., as to whether any, and if any, what new arrangements have been made with the Government of New Granada with respect to the dues or charges for the transit of British Mails.

The Committee, concurring in the propriety of the proposed communication, Mr. Merewether laid before them a draft letter to the above effect, which they approved, as set forth in the Appendix herewith annexed.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX.

5, Cannon-street, City,
12 August, 1859.

Sir,

It is my present intention to return to New South Wales by the Mail Steamer which will leave in the ensuing month; and as I am desirous of taking out with me full information respecting the Tenders recently sent in for the proposed Postal Service to Australia via Panama, I have the honor to request that I may be furnished with copies of those documents, as well as of the letters which accompanied them.

Before I leave England I am also anxious to obtain some formal intimation of the course which Her Majesty's Government intend to adopt, should the consent of the Australian Colonies to guarantee a moiety of the cost of both the Suez and Panama Services be received before the Select Committee on Contracts have reported to Parliament the result of their investigation.

The

The Tenders, to which I have above referred, shew that two of the conditions imposed by the Lords of the Treasury in their Minute of the 18th April are or can be satisfied; and I would respectfully submit that as the terms of the Minute clearly imply that if all are fulfilled, the Lords of the Treasury will be prepared to accept one of the Tenders, the Colonies being parties to the arrangement, are fully entitled to look for some distinct expression of the intentions of Her Majesty's Government in the event of the only other condition—the guarantee in question—being complied with.

I have, therefore, to ask that you will be good enough to bring the subject under the notice of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and apprise me of the result with as little delay as possible.

I beg also to draw your attention to that portion of the Treasury Minute which relates to the Transit dues for the conveyance of the Mails across the Isthmus of Panama, and have to request that you will be pleased to inform me whether any, and if any, what arrangements have been entered into for placing this question upon a more satisfactory basis, than that which existed at the date of the Minute.

Praying your early attention to the several matters touched upon in this communication.

Samuel Laing, Esq.,
Assistant Secretary, Treasury.

17 September, 1859.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatches of the 1st and 14th June, replying to my letters of the 8th and 23rd February, and the 18th March.

I have duly laid them, with their enclosures, before the Committee of Advice, and you will perceive from the accompanying Minutes, that the Committee are of opinion that, under existing circumstances, it would be of little practical advantage to submit them at present to the consideration of the Lords of the Treasury, who have distinctly declined to take any steps which would have the effect of apparently abridging the discretion of the Select Committee of the House of Commons in dealing with the Panama Postal question.

Sept., 1859.
5 Sept., 1859.
16 Sept., 1859.

I have accordingly handed them over, with the other papers on the subject, to Mr. Hamilton, who, I have to report to you, has consented to act as Chairman of the Committee of Advice; Mr. Larnach, the only other member of the Committee present when I submitted your Despatches, has also consented to retain his office, and I have, by letter, communicated to Mr. Towns your wishes upon the subject, with an expression of the desire of the other members of the Committee that he should continue his services.

I have also to report to you that, under the circumstances set forth in the Minute of 9th instant, I have drawn upon the Colonial Treasurer for the sum of £55, through the London Branch of the Bank of New South Wales—a step which I trust will meet your approval.

I myself return to the Colony by the mail steamer of the present month, but for greater precaution think it advisable to send this letter, with its enclosures, through the post, and shall transmit the duplicate by the succeeding mail.

I have, &amp;c.,

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

THE HONORABLE
THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

9 September, 1859.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day.

Present:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., in the Chair.

Edward Hamilton, Esq.,
Donald Larnach, Esq.

Mr. Merewether having explained that Mr. Towns was still absent from London, the Minutes of Proceedings on the 12th August were thereupon read and confirmed.

Mr. Merewether then laid before the Committee a letter from George A. Hamilton, Esq., Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, forwarding copies of the Tenders for the Panama Postal Postal Service, and also replying to the other questions raised in the draft letter appended to the Minutes of the last Meeting.

The Committee advised that Mr. Merewether should take out with him the copies of the Tenders, for the information of the Government at Sydney, and that a copy of Mr. Hamilton's letter be entered on the Minutes. (See Appendix.)

Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee, that the sum of £1,000 placed to his credit at the Oriental Bank in London, by the Government in New South Wales, to cover his expenses during his stay in England and the cost of his return passage, would be insufficient for these purposes, and that he would require a further sum of about £50.

The Committee advised that Mr. Merewether should draw upon the Colonial Treasurer at Sydney, through one of the Colonial Banks, for the necessary amount. At the same time, Mr. Larnach intimated that the Bank of New South Wales would discount Mr. Merewether's draft for £55.

The Committee then adjourned sine die.

Treasury Chambers,
17 August, 1859.

Sir,

I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your communication of the 12th instant; and I am directed by their Lordships to transmit to you copies of the Tenders for the proposed Postal Service to Australia viâ Panama, in accordance with your request.

I am at the same time to recal to your recollection the previous communications with you since the accession of the present Government, and the appointment of the Committee of the House of Commons on the general question of Postal Contracts; and to state that, under present circumstances, their Lordships must consider the subject of the Panama, as well as of every other projected Mail Service, to be under reference to the consideration of a Committee of Parliament, and that their Lordships are not therefore in a condition to enter into any explanations which might have the effect of apparently abridging the discretion of the Committee, which is wholly independent of that of the Treasury.

I am to add, that no arrangements have been yet completed with the Granadian Government with respect to the transit dues across the Isthmus of Panama.

I am, &c.,

GEO. A. HAMILTON.

Edward C. Merewether, Esq.,
5, Cannon-street, City.

5, Cannon-street, City,
15 September, 1859.

At a Meeting of the Committee held this day.

Present:—

Edward C. Merewether, Esq., in the Chair.

Edward Hamilton, Esq.,
Donald Larnach, Esq.

The Minutes of Proceedings on the 9th instant having been read and confirmed, Mr. Merewether laid before the Committee two letters from the Honorable the Colonial Secretary of New South Wales, of the 1st and 14th June respectively, replying to the Despatches sent out to the Colony by the February and March Mails.

See Appendix A.

Having carefully perused these letters, which are hereinafter entered at length, the Committee expressed their opinion that under existing circumstances it would be useless at present to bring them under the notice of Her Majesty's Government, and advised Mr. Merewether accordingly.

In compliance with the wish contained in the letter of the 14th of June, Messrs. Hamilton and Larnach intimated their willingness to continue their services as members of the Committee of Advice, and the former gentleman consented to act as Chairman.

They also recommended that Mr. Merewether should communicate with Mr. Towns their strong desire that he also should retain his office.

Mr. Merewether then stated to the Committee that he had forwarded to Mr. T. W. Smart, at 12, Cleveland Terrace, Bayswater, the Colonial Secretary's letter inviting him to become a Member of the Committee.

Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee that on the 10th instant he had received a letter from the Secretary of the Australasian and Pacific Company, offering on behalf of the Company to commence without more delay than was absolutely necessary to complete their arrangements, a temporary Steam Postal Service to Australasia via the American Isthmus, upon certain conditions.

See Appendix B.

This letter having been read, the Committee advised that it should be entered on the Minutes, and that Mr. Merewether should in reply explain his inability to treat with the Company, but state that their offer should be laid before the Government of New South Wales upon his return to Sydney, which would shortly take place.

Mr.

Mr. Merewether further informed the Committee that on the 13th instant he had had an interview with Mr. Champion Wetton, who had recently arrived in England, on the subject of the Panama route, and that Mr. Wetton had requested that he might be furnished with a copy of the statement which he (Mr. Merewether) had proposed to make to the Select Committee of the House of Commons if he had been examined, Mr. Wetton giving as his reason for making the request that he intended to address a letter to Mr. Cobden, or the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the question of Ocean Postal subsidies generally, and the Panama route in particular.

The Committee, after some consideration, arrived at the conclusion that Mr. Merewether would scarcely be justified in complying with Mr. Wetton's request.

Mr. Merewether then laid before the Committee a letter which he had received from Mr. Wetton this day upon the subject of that gentleman's estimate of the probable cost of the Panama service. This letter having been read, the Committee advised that it be entered upon the Minutes. See Appendix C.

Mr. Merewether next informed the Committee that from a conversation which he had recently held with Mr. De Salis, a Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, he had been led to believe that the Company would not be unwilling to establish, upon reasonable terms, a fortnightly communication with Australia via Singapore and Torres' Straits, and, at the instance of that gentleman, he had called upon Mr. Howell, the Secretary of the Company, in reference to the subject, as, although not strictly within the scope of his instructions, he considered it desirable to take out with him all the information bearing upon the question of Postal Communication which it was in his power to obtain.

Mr. Howell, however, had informed him that the Peninsular and Oriental Company had no disposition to establish any such service as that indicated by Mr. De Salis, a statement which was fully borne out by a letter which he had subsequently received from Mr. Howell, who had submitted the matter to the Board of Directors, and by a conversation which he (Mr. Merewether) had since had with Mr. Hadon, another Director.

The letter in question having been read, the Committee advised that it be entered in the Minutes. See Appendix D.

Mr. Merewether lastly informed the Committee, that he had addressed letters to His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, and George A. Hamilton, Esq., Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, announcing his intended departure for the Colony, and also requesting that any further communications upon the subject of the Panama Postal Route might be directed to Mr. Edward Hamilton.

Mr. Merewether having expressed a wish that the Committee should meet again before his departure to confirm the Minutes—they adjourned until to-morrow, when they would meet for that purpose.

APPENDIX A.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,
1 June, 1859.*

Sir,

I have received your letters of the 8th and 23rd of February last, reporting your arrival in England, and forwarding Minutes of the Proceedings of the Committee of Advice who were associated with you, containing a general statement of the proceedings taken by you from the time of your arrival as Agent for this Colony in connection with the subject of Steam Postal Communication via Panama.

2. You report that the information which you had been enabled to obtain had convinced you that the establishment of the desired line of communication via Panama could not be calculated upon for the subsidy of £100,000, originally estimated as sufficient for the purpose, and that you had, therefore, considered it necessary to take the opinion of the Committee upon the following question, which, upon the perusal of the "Panama Postal Act," had seemed to you to present itself, viz., "Whether the amount appropriated by that Act should be regarded as a moiety of the whole subsidy to be paid for the maintenance of the service; and, therefore, inclusive of any sums that might be contributed towards it by New Zealand as well as by the Australian Colonies or otherwise." The Committee, although at first inclining to a different opinion, had considered that the information which they possessed of the views and intentions of the Government and Legislature of this Colony, did not justify them in advising that you should assume the responsibility of informing Her Majesty's Government that the sum of £50,000 would be contributed by this Colony, irrespectively of the contributions of any of the other Colonies interested in the same object; but they recommended that you should, if inquired of in the matter, hold out the prospect that the Government, on being apprised of the insufficiency of the amount at present appropriated, would be disposed to guarantee the sum in question, without reference to any other contributions.

5. Under these circumstances, you express a hope that you may receive authority to guarantee that the full sum of £50,000 will be contributed by this Colony alone towards subsidising a Mail Service via Panama.

4. The Government having had under review the proceedings which have taken place from time to time during the consideration of this subject, and having materially deliberated deliberated upon the question now more particularly submitted, are of opinion that the Committee in the advice which they tendered to you with regard to the interpretation of the Act, 22 Victoria, No. 15, have rightly interpreted the intentions of the Legislature in passing that Act, namely, as authorizing the Government to make arrangements with Her Majesty's Government, whereby a subsidy to the extent of £50,000 (inclusive of other expenses) might be guaranteed by this Colony, but reserving a right to the Government of agreeing with the other Australasian Colonies, or any of them, for their sharing in the benefits of the proposed Postal Service, upon such terms as should seem fit.

5. At the same time, it is desired that the Government of New South Wales should be understood as willing to co-operate to the fullest extent that can reasonably be expected in any general arrangements consistent with the spirit of the Resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 8th of September, 1858, of which you have been provided with copies, that may tend to the improvement of the mail communications between these Colonies and the Mother Country, and I have therefore to state for your guidance, that the Government will be prepared to invite the local Parliament to make such provision towards the subsidising a Postal service generally (comprising a line via Panama) as may be considered fair and reasonable, not exceeding the sum of £50,000 per annum; an amount which, from the best information that can be obtained, is believed to be rather in excess of the share which this Colony can fairly be called upon to contribute to the general service.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,
14 June, 1859.
14 September. E. C. M.

Sir,

Referring to my letter of the 1st instant I have now to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th of March last, enclosing Minutes of the further proceedings taken by yourself and the gentlemen who are associated with you, as Agent for this Colony, connected with the subject of Steam Postal Communication via Panama, and relating generally to the objects of your mission.

2. You stated that you have had two interviews with Sir Stafford Northcote, the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, and that you have obtained a written statement of the views and intentions of Her Majesty's Government, couched in the following terms:—

"In case the difficulties of the transit across the Isthmus can be got over, and in case the time within which the service can be performed via Panama can be made to fit the time within which it is performed via Suez; and in case Her Majesty's Government receive a full assurance that one-half a whole expense of both the services, (via Suez as well via Panama) will be borne by the Colonies, they will be prepared to call for tenders for the service, but will not bind themselves to accept such tenders should the amount demanded appear to them unreasonable.

"It is understood that the whole service (from England to Australia) is to be included in one tender."

3. You further state that Sir Stafford Northcote subsequently explained and modified the third stipulation, by saying that the Government would not consider £150,000 an unreasonable amount to be demanded for the service, and by consenting to call for Tenders on the arrival of the then ensuing Australian Mail, as a means of ascertaining the probable cost, but without pledging Her Majesty's Government to accept any of the Tenders; and with respect to the other stipulations you refer to the minutes and documents which you have forwarded as containing all the information which you possess with reference to the various points involved in them, and the measures by which any difficulties which may arise under them may be overcome.

4. In concluding your report you, with the advice of your Committee, point out that in order to enable you to give the assurance required by Her Majesty's Government, it is necessary that you should be authorised to extend the guarantee on the part of this Colony to the full moiety of the sum required for the Panama service, and that there should be obtained from the Government of Victoria a distinct acknowledgment that they have already guaranteed to the Imperial Government one-half of the Suez subsidy.

5. His Excellency the Governor General addressed a Despatch, of which I transmitted a copy to His Excellency the Governor of Victoria, on the 28th ultimo, in which, with a view to elicit the views of the Government of that Colony, he forwarded the document forming Appendix C to your communication, shewing the estimated amount of the payments to be made by each of the Australian Colonies, for the two services, and in which the share of New South Wales, in proportion to the number of letters sent, was estimated at £37,558 19s, but His Excellency at the same time intimated that this Government would be prepared to recommend to the Legislature to secure to the Australias the benefit of a second line of steamers, by taking upon itself the responsibility of South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, should those Colonies consider that their interest in the establishment of the Panama line did not render it advisable for them to incur the expense shewn in the document referred to His Excellency's Despatch, with its enclosure exhibited, exhibited, that a contribution of £50,000 from New South Wales, of £96,000 from Victoria, of £9,395 from New Zealand, and of stated sums from the respective Colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, and Western Australia; for the Suez line would fully cover the cost of establishing a fortnightly mail to England. From the reply of Sir Henry Barkley, dated the 7th instant, a copy of which is also enclosed, you will observe that the Government of that Colony are of opinion that the question is one so important as to require that it be dealt with by the Victorian Parliament, which is not at present in Session.

6. By this correspondence, taken in connection with the intimation already conveyed to you in my letter of the 1st of this month, it may be considered that every practicable step has already been taken with respect to the objects of your present communication. You were in that letter apprised that it was desired that the Government of this Colony should be understood as willing to co-operate to the fullest extent that could reasonably be expected in contributing to the maintenance of both services, and they now see no reason to alter their instructions on this head; but with respect to an unconditional extension of the guarantee offered by this Colony towards the Panama Service, they are of opinion that they would not be justified in recommending that the decision of the local Legislature upon a matter so important should be anticipated. Under these circumstances, considered in connection with your representations, the Government of New South Wales, while they cannot doubt that the neighbouring Colonies will be induced to co-operate in a feasible and equitable arrangement for affording the guarantee demanded by Her Majesty's Government, are led to consider that their efforts should now be principally directed to the endeavor to bring about such an arrangement.

8. It is therefore the opinion of this Government that the measure of success which has already attended your efforts, and which may result from the further assurances that you have been authorised to lay before Her Majesty's Government, will have comprised all that is likely to be effected for some time by your presence in England; and entertaining the view, I have now to apprise you that your mission may be considered at an end, and that you are at liberty to return to the Colony in pursuance of the terms of the instructions given to you at the time of your departure.

9. Although the services of a special agent in London are not any longer considered necessary, this Government does not contemplate the breaking up of the Committee; and I shall therefore be glad if those gentlemen who have acted with you will still afford the Colony the benefit of their aid in securing the establishment of the Panama Postal route, and particularly as a medium of communication between Her Majesty's Government and that of this Colony, as occasion may require, until the object so much desired has been attained. I have therefore to desire that you will signify to the Members of the Committee (of whose valuable services I am fully sensible) the wish of this Government to this effect, and convey to Mr. Hamilton (who obligingly undertook to act in your room in the event of circumstances rendering it necessary) my request that he will be Chairman of the Committee.

10. I have requested Mr. T. W. Smart, an experienced colonist, much interested in the attainment of the object in view, and who is now in England, to become a member of the Committee, who will I have no doubt be glad of his co-operation.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES COWPER.

Government House,
Sydney, 28 May, 1859.

Sir,

You are probably aware that the Government of New South Wales has sent to England a special Agent for the purpose of completing arrangements with the Imperial Government for the establishment of a new line of Steam Postal Communication between England and Australia via Panama. Letters have been received from the Agent, stating the willingness of the Imperial Government to take its share in the expense of establishing a second line in addition to that already established via Suez; by which a fortnightly communication with these Colonies would be secured, provided it can be made to work regularly with the existing line. It will not cost more than a reasonable sum, which has been at present put at £150,000 per annum, for which there is every reason to believe that the work can be done, and that the Colonies will undertake to pay their half of the cost.

I enclose a paper shewing the estimated amount of the payments to be made by each Colony for the two services, in which the share of New South Wales in proportion to the number of letters sent is put at £37,558 19s; but the Government at Sydney will be prepared to recommend to the Legislature to secure to the Australias the benefit of a second line of steamers, by taking upon itself the responsibility of South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, should these Colonies consider that their interest in the establishment of the Panama Line does not render it advisable for them to incur the expense shewn in the table.

I should wish to be informed of the views of the Government of Victoria with relation to this scheme. I have little doubt but that the New Zealand Government will be inclined to secure a line via Panama by the payment of a larger contribution than that shewn as their share of the cost of the Panama Line, but then it might object to pay so largely for the Suez Line. But, upon the whole, there can be no doubt that a contribution of £50,000 from New South Wales, of £96,000 from Victoria, of £9,395 from New Zealand, and of the sums set against the respective Colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, and Western Australia for the the Suez Line, will fully cover the cost of establishing a fortnightly mail to England; and I trust, therefore, that I may be favored with your views on the subject in time for the next mail.

Sir Henry Barkley, K.C.B.

Government Offices,
Melbourne, 7 June, 1859.

Sir,

Upon receipt of your communication of the 28th ultimo, requesting to be informed as to the views of this Government with respect to the scheme proposed for securing a second monthly postal intercourse with Great Britain via Panama, I at once urged on the attention of my responsible advisers a subject of such great importance to the Australian Colonies generally.

I have now to state, however, that my Postmaster General has just intimated to me, as the result of his deliberations with his colleagues, that they are of opinion that so grave a question can only be dealt with by the Victorian Parliament, which is not at present in session.

Dr. Evans adds, that when the new Assembly is convened, and time has been afforded to test the working of the arrangement with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the Cabinet will be prepared to give the matter careful investigation, and if unable to arrive at the determination desired by the Government of New South Wales, to refer the inquiry to a Select Committee of the Legislature.

Sir,

I have the honor to inform you, that in consequence of arrangements which have been provisionally made by the Engineers of this Company, we are enabled to propose an early commencement of the Westward Mail Service to Australasia via the American Isthmus, if the Colonial Governments adopt the condition we venture to submit.

In consequence of advices received from Victoria, we feel satisfied that the new Melbourne Parliament will give its co-operation in the establishment of the Postal route by the Pacific, and we have instructed our agent in that Colony to urge the prompt concurrence of the authorities in the necessary measures to sanction the immediate opening of the line.

Assuming that the advantages of the Pacific Route will recommend it for the conveyance of the Victorian letters, and those of the other Colonies, at least in the same proportion as the Suez Route, which has unfortunately and so soon fulfilled the prediction of our Engineers, the proposition we have made to the Southern Colonies will, instead of increasing the responsibility of your Colony, bring it much within the limits originally intended. We offer to effect a temporary service, say for twelve or eighteen months, on the following terms:—At the expiration of three months from the date of the contract, (indispensable for stocking the coal depôts in the Pacific,) we shall commence the service by vessels of guaranteed capacity and speed, performing the passage from Queenstown to Sydney and Melbourne simultaneously in 55 days during that temporary service, subject to the terms of our Tender, reducing that time to 45 days under the permanent contract. For this we shall be satisfied with the guarantee of the Colonial Governments for £82,000, as representing their half of the requisite subsidy, and we shall take our risk for the remainder, subject to the resolution of the Imperial Government upon the general question of subsidies, now referred to the Committee on Postal and Telegraphic Contracts, that is to say, that the half of the postal receipts in the event of a subsidy being refused by the Home Government shall be held answerable for the residue of our claim.

As a condition essential to carry out this plan, it will be necessary for us to stipulate that we shall be at liberty to carry the mail from the Cove of Cork to the American Isthmus in connexion with another postal service we are about to effect under a foreign flag, but the responsibility of our Company will extend over the whole contract from Cork to Australia.

On the subject of the Company's responsibility and the capability of the ships, we are satisfied that the contract shall be conditional on our submitting satisfactory proof of both.

*Royal Mail Steam Packet Company,
No. 55, Moorgate-street, London,
14 September, 1859.*

My dear Sir,

In your communication with this Company respecting the establishment of the Panama line, I learn that you have occasionally made reference to the estimates of revenue and expenditure submitted by me unofficially to the head of your Government at Sydney, in which it was shewn that a subsidy of one hundred thousand pounds per annum would be sufficient to guarantee contractors for such a service against loss. As there appears to be some misconception in your mind in reference to these estimates, I wish before you return to Australia to explain that the estimate I submitted was for providing and working four vessels only, and those at a lower rate of speed than you now require, viz., ten knots per hour on the Pacific, and ten and a-half knots per hour across the Atlantic. No provision was made in my estimates either for a spare ship at the Panama terminus or for a service connecting Melbourne with the main line at New Zealand, both no doubt highly desirable, but not absolutely necessary. These will, of course, if insisted on, add materially to the expenditure, and the increased speed for which you now stipulate will increase the cost to an extent not readily appreciated by those in conversant with the management of steam ships—for increased speed for long distances (say 7,000 miles) means larger ships, more wear and tear, greater consumption of coal, and increased risk in every way. And with regard to the supposed revenue, since framing my estimates a large experience has taught me that, except at periods of great pressure in the money-market, we must not calculate on deriving any revenue from your freights, the specie now being conveyed by clipper ships at a rate we could not compete with after paying the transit charges on the Isthmus of Panama. With reference to this Company's present tender, I must ask you to bear in mind that the proprietary have lately suffered such heavy losses from the Australian Mail Service that they are naturally unwilling to embark in a large undertaking involving the expenditure of not less than half a million sterling without a subsidy fully ample to guarantee them from a repetition of their late losses, and for such a service as you demand £220,000 per annum is no more than sufficient. If your Government will be satisfied with smaller ships, and a lower rate of speed in the Pacific, I am satisfied the Royal Mail Company would be prepared to extend their operations from Panama to Australia, on terms more permanently favorable to the Colonies than can be offered by any contractors inexperienced in the conduct of an Ocean Mail Service.

Dear Sir,

I did not fail this morning to mention to the Board of Directors the purport of our conversation yesterday, and I am requested to inform you, with reference thereto, that the subject of the establishment of a bi-monthly service with Australia via Torres Straits has not been as yet brought before them, and they do not feel prepared to make any proposition in the matter; they, however, will at all times be happy to give their best consideration to any application that may be submitted to them by the Home or Colonial authorities tending to the improvement or extension of the existing communication with Australia.

Mr. Anderson desires me to express his regret that he had not the opportunity of making your acquaintance yesterday.

(FURTHER REPORT FROM E. C. MEREWETHER, ESQ.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to the COLONIAL TREASURER.

Sydney, 21 November, 1859.

SIR,

Referring to my letter of the 17th September last, addressed to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, I now do myself the honor to report to you that, in accordance with the intention therein expressed, I took my passage for the Colony in the Mail Steamer of the month of September, and, proceeding viâ Marseilles, arrived in Sydney on the 15th instant.

2. I have further to acquaint you that, in pursuance of the recommendation of the Committee of Advice, recorded in the Minutes of their Proceedings on the 9th September, I have brought out with me the copies of the Tenders for the Panama service, which were furnished to me by the direction of the Lords of the Treasury, and herewith enclose them for the information of the Government.

3. I also enclose a copy of the statement, which you will perceive, from the Minutes enclosed in my letter of the 18th August, I prepared for the information of the Select Committee on Ocean Postal and Telegraphic Contracts, and subsequently handed to Mr. Cobden, the Chairman.

4. These papers, together with my former letters and their accompanying documents, will, I trust, fully explain my proceedings in fulfilment of the instructions furnished to me by this Government, and also place you in possession of the present state of the question; and, as I am not aware that I can add anything further to them, I will in conclusion only suggest that as the Imperial Parliament will reassemble early in February, and the Select Committee will probably resume their labors shortly thereafter, it may perhaps be desirable that some communication of the view of the present Government on the subject of the Panama route should be made to Mr. Hamilton by an early opportunity.

I have, &amp;c.,

THE HONORABLE

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER.

THE COLONIAL TREASURER.

June 30, 1859.

Sir,

I hereby offer to the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the above-mentioned steam vessels for seven years certain, for conveying Her Majesty's Mails monthly each way between Great Britain, Sydney, and Melbourne, via Panama and New Zealand, at the rates following, namely—at the rate of £119,000, subject to the several conditions marked A, and to an abatement at the rate of £1,000 per annum, in case no accommodation should be required for a Naval Officer in charge of the Mails.

In the event of the tender being accepted, I engage that the vessels above-mentioned shall be ready for survey on the day or respective days above-mentioned for that purpose, in failure of which I agree to pay to Her Majesty the sum of £10 for every vessel from the day she ought to be ready for survey, for every day during which she shall not be ready for such survey; and I also engage that such vessels shall be complete for sea on the day or respective days above-mentioned for that purpose, in failure of which I agree to pay to Her Majesty the sum of £10 for every vessel from the day on which she ought to have been complete for sea, for every day during which she shall not be complete for sea.

And I hereby agree with the said Commissioners to commence the said service from Great Britain on the 6th day of October, 1859, and from Sydney on the 6th day of October, 1859; and in the event of such service not being commenced on such days, I hereby agree to pay to Her Majesty the sum of £100 for every day from those days respectively until the said service shall be commenced by me. And I hereby agree that such respective sums of £10, £10, and £100, are to be considered not as penalties but as liquidated damages, and payable whether any damage shall or shall not be sustained by reason of all or any one or more of such failures, or in the event of any one or more of such failures the said Commissioners shall have the option of determining any agreement for such service by me.

And I do hereby agree to execute a contract according to the said conditions marked A, and for the performance of the said service by not less than the above number of vessels, to be approved of as in the said conditions mentioned.

I am, &c.,

(Signature)
(Address)

THOMAS HOWARD,
Manchester.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

N.B.—All Tenders to be made upon this printed form, and they are to be addressed to the Secretary of the Admiralty, at Somerset Place, with the words "Tender for the Conveyance of Mails," and "Comptroller of Transport Service" in the left-hand corner of the envelope, and no Tender will be received unless it be made precisely according to the preceding printed form. Any conditions or alterations which the party tendering may wish to suggest must be added to the tender, either at the end of the printed form, or by a separate letter at the time of making the Tender.

CONDITIONS of the Tenders to be received for a Contract for the Conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails to and from Sydney and Melbourne, via Panama and New Zealand.

Referred to (as marked A).

1. The contractors must engage to convey Her Majesty's Mails and Despatches, monthly, each way between Great Britain and Sydney, via Panama and New Zealand, by a sufficient number of full power steam vessels. The contractors must also make provision for conveying to and from Sydney and Melbourne the letters of Victoria and the other Australian Colonies.

2. It is to be stated at what intermediate port or ports between Great Britain and Panama and between Panama and Australia, it may be in contemplation to call.
3. It must be stated at what time the contractors will be prepared to commence the service from Australia and from Great Britain, under the penalties hereinafter provided for.
4. The contractors must engage to supply, during the continuance of the contract, a sufficient number of vessels for the performance of the contract, and these vessels are to be subject at all proper times to survey by officers in the employment of the Admiralty; and any defect discovered on such survey to be immediately made good by the contractors. The survey to extend to the crew, officers, and engineers, and machinery, as well as to the hull of the vessel; and it is to be understood that no vessel is to be employed under this contract until she shall have been surveyed by the Admiralty in hull and machinery, tried under weigh, and finally approved by their Lordships.
5. The vessels to be always supplied and furnished with all necessary and proper machinery, engines, apparel, furniture, stores, tackle, boats, fuel, oil, tallow, provisions, anchors, cables, fire-pumps, and other proper means for extinguishing fire, lightning conductors, charts, chronometers, proper nautical instruments, and whatsoever else may be requisite and necessary for equipping the said vessels, and rendering them constantly efficient for the service to be performed, and also manned and provided with legally qualified and competent officers, and a sufficient crew of able seamen and other men.
6. The said Commissioners are to have the power of ordering the vessels to be so arranged and constructed for the purposes of the contract as they may consider suitable; and may require the designs and plans of all vessels to be built for the performance of the contract to be submitted to them previously to their construction.
7. Proper accommodation to be provided, free of expense, for the Naval Officer in charge of the Mails; but the parties tendering are at liberty to state what deduction they would make, in the event of this condition not being required.
8. The said Commissioners may, at their option, substitute for the Naval Officer, an Officer of the Post Office and his assistant, to be employed in sorting the Mails on board the packets.—They may also require the contractors to erect a suitable sorting room on board each of the vessels employed between Great Britain and Sydney, such sorting room to be not less than 10 feet by 8 feet, and 6 feet in height.
9. The tenders must specify the the maximum number of days between the departure of the Mail from Great Britain and its arrival at Melbourne, and from Melbourne and its arrival in the United Kingdom respectively, but in no case must the voyage out or home exceed fifty-five days in the whole, exclusive of the transit across the Isthmus. Although, however, fifty-five days are fixed as the maximum time for performing the service to and from Melbourne, proposals embracing a shorter time will receive favorable consideration.
10. The days and hours of departure from each port are to be fixed by the said Commissioners, and may be altered from time to time by them, on giving three months' notice to the contractors; it being understood that the departures will be so arranged, as to alternate fortnightly with the Mails by the Suez route.
11. A penalty of £500 to be incurred when the contractors fail in providing a vessel, in accordance with their agreement, ready to put to sea at the appointed hour; and also the sum of £100 for every successive day which shall elapse until such steam vessel shall actually proceed to sea; and also £10 per hour for every hour consumed on the voyage beyond the total number of days stipulated in the contract as the period within which the respective voyages will be completed, either outward or homeward; but so that the full amount of such penalties on any one voyage shall never exceed the proportion of the subsidy applicable to such voyage; and penalties for overtime will not be enforced if it be shewn to the satisfaction of their Lordships that the delay has arisen from causes over which the contractors have not, and could not have, any control.
12. A premium of £50 will be given for every day less than the total number of days occupied in the voyage.
13. The Mails shall be conveyed in the said vessels, and be delivered and received at each of the places to which the said vessels are to proceed in the performance of the contract; and, at each port or place where the said Mails are to be delivered and received, the Agent having charge of them shall, whenever and as often as by him deemed practicable or necessary, be conveyed on shore, and also from the shore to the vessel employed in the performance of the contract, together with, or, if necessary for the performance of the duties of such Agent, without Her Majesty's Mails, in a suitable and seaworthy boat of not less than four oars, to be furnished with effectual covering for the Mail-bags, and to be provided and properly manned and equipped by the contractors; and the directions of such Agent shall in all cases be obeyed, as to the mode, time, and place of receiving and delivering Her Majesty's Mails.
14. Should the said Commissioners deem it expedient to place the said Mails and despatches in charge of the Master or Commander of any of the said vessels, the said Master or Commander shall take the usual Post Office oath or declaration, and furnish such journal returns and information, and perform such services, as the said Commissioners or their agent may require, and be responsible for the due receipt and delivery of the said Mails and despatches.
15. The contractors shall not receive, or permit to be received on board any of the vessels employed under the contract, any letters for conveyance other than those duly in charge of the said Naval Officer, or which are, or may be, privileged by law, the said Naval Officer to report any default in this respect; and in case of any such default, the contractors shall be liable to be proceeded against for a breach of the contract.
16. The whole postage of all letters conveyed in the vessels employed under the contract is to be at the disposal of Her Majesty's Postmaster General.

17. The contractors and all commanding and other officers of the vessels to be employed in the performance of the contract, and all agents, seamen, and servants of the contractors, shall at all times during the continuance of the contract, punctually attend to the orders and directions of the said Commissioners, or of any of their Officers or Agents, as to the landing, delivering, and receiving Her Majesty's Mails; and all and every the sums of money stipulated to be forfeited and paid by the contractors unto Her Majesty, Her Heirs and Successors, shall be considered as stipulated or ascertained damages, and shall and may be deducted and retained by the said Commissioners out of any moneys payable, or which may thereafter be payable to the contractors, or the payment may be enforced, with full costs of suit, at the discretion of the said Commissioners.

18. The contractors shall and will, when and as often as in writing they or the masters of their respective vessels shall be required so to do by the said Commissioners, or by any Naval or other Officer or Agent acting under their authority, (such writing to specify the rank or description of the person or persons to be conveyed, and the accommodation to be provided for him or them,) receive and provide for, victual, and convey on board each, every or any of the vessels to be employed in the performance of the contract, for the whole or any portion of the voyages of the said vessels, (in addition to the Naval Officer authorised to have the charge of the said Mails) any Naval, Military, or Civil Officers in the service of Her Majesty, not exceeding four, and also their wives and children as chief-cabin passengers, and any non-commissioned or warrant officers, or civilians in Her Majesty's service, not exceeding two, with their wives and children, as fore-cabin passengers, and any number of seamen, marines or soldiers in Her Majesty's service, not exceeding ten, with their wives and children, as deck passengers, to be effectually protected from sun, rain, and bad weather, charging for such chief-cabin, fore-cabin, and deck passengers, the fares or rates charged by the said contractors for ordinary passengers of a similar description; a fortnight's notice being given to the agent of the contractors at the port of embarkation. Whenever the contractors shall convey any soldiers as deck passengers, other than those specially provided for by this contract, the contractors shall provide them with adequate protection from rain, sun, and bad weather, and they shall not be exposed on deck without such competent shelter.

19. When a passage has been ordered for any person at the expense of the public, the payment shall only be made on the production of the order for the passage, and certificate from the person in the following form, viz:—

I embarked

The passage-money for the families and wives of officers shall be paid to the contractors by the officers themselves. All children under three years of age, to be conveyed free.

20. The contractors shall receive on board each and every of the said vessels employed in the performance of the contract, any number of small packages, not exceeding 20 feet, containing astronomical instruments, charts, wearing apparel, medicines, or other articles, and convey and deliver the same to, from, and between all or any of the ports or places to or from which the said Mails are to be conveyed, in the performance of the contract, when and as often as directed by the said Commissioners, their agents, or by the British Naval Officer in command of the station, free from all costs and charges; and shall also receive on board each and every of the said vessels, and convey and deliver to, from, and between all or any of the said ports or places, any naval or other stores not exceeding ten tons in weight, at any one time, in any one vessel, at the rate of freight charged by the contractors for private goods, on receiving from the said Commissioners, or any of their officers or agents, two days' previous notice of its being their intention to have such stores so conveyed; and the said contractors shall in all cases be strictly responsible for the due custody and safe delivery of the said packages, articles, and stores.

21. The contract to continue in force for seven years from the day on which the first vessel shall commence her voyage. The Board of Admiralty will be empowered to determine the contract in the event of repeated irregularities.

22. Payments will be made by bills on Her Majesty's Paymaster-General, payable in seven days from and after the respective dates thereof, on the production by the contractors, from time to time, to the Accountant-General of the Navy of certificates from the proper officers that the several voyages have been duly performed and the contract strictly and punctually carried out.

23. The contractors shall undertake for themselves all arrangements relative to Quarantine, as connected with the due and regular performance of the conditions of the contract.

24. The contractors shall not assign, underlet, or dispose of the contract, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the said Commissioners; and in any case of any deliberate or wilful breach thereof by the contractors, the said Commissioners may terminate it without any previous notice to them, nor shall they be entitled to any compensation in consequence of such determination.

25. No member of the House of Commons shall be admitted to any share or part of the contract, or to any benefit to arise therefrom, which is not permitted by Act of Parliament now in force.

26. The contractors to be bound with two sureties, in £25,000, for the due performance of their contract.

N.B.—Tenders will be received for a service subsidiary to that now existing between this country and the Isthmus of Panama,—e.g., one between Panama and the Australian Ports, subject to the foregoing conditions so far as they are applicable—and it is to be understood that the said Commissioners do not engage to accept the lowest tender irrespective of all other considerations, and are not bound necessarily to accept any of the tenders that may be sent in.

[The following Memorandum is appended to the Tender of Mr. Thomas Howard, of Manchester.]

The service (exclusive of the transit across the Isthmus of Panama,) is hereby agreed to be performed in Fifty-three days, and less if practicable.

Milford Haven is proposed to be the port of arrival and departure to the Isthmus, and it is not proposed to call at any other port in the Atlantic.

It is proposed to call at a convenient port for the landing of the Mails and passengers in New Zealand, and that port only in the Pacific between Panama and Sydney.

If the arrangements of the Government would permit the contractor to carry any other Mails without prejudice to this service, the contractor would allow from the price above tendered, the sum of £1,000 per voyage, (out and home.)

Manchester.

AUSTRALASIAN AND PACIFIC COMPANY (Limited).

Explanatory Statement referred to in the annexed Tender for the Conveyance of the Australasian Mail, viâ Panama.

Sir,

The circumstances of the case requiring more details than the formal tender will admit, I am desired most respectfully to present the following explanations for the consideration of Her Majesty's Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral.

1. The primary purpose is to commence with the least delay that will allow preparations for coaling in the Pacific Ocean and the execution of contracts for building ships specially adapted to the service.
Firstly, By a temporary line of screw steamers to perform the passage within the limit of 55 days stipulated by the conditions of tender.
Secondly, By a permanent line of fast steamers, affording a despatch for Mails and convenience to passengers, beginning in eight months from the opening of the temporary service, or in twelve months from the date of the contract; and the entire sea passage from Cork Harbour to Sydney and Melbourne being reduced to 45 days during eight months of the year, with an allowance of three days for heavy weather during the other four months.
2. The advantage of the temporary service is that this alternative route to Australia, so important at the present crisis, may be opened almost immediately by vessels well calculated to convey the Mails within the stipulated time, carrying fuel for the whole of the passage from station to station, out and home, with water ballast tanks to compensate for the consumption which would otherwise detract from the ship's trim. The class of vessels to be employed will enable this Company to avoid the losses which inevitably result from commencing a new line with large ships, and to afford the desired opportunity for building steamers specially designed to make the voyage with economy, efficiency, and speed, as it is certain that there are none at present available for that purpose, and very few afloat adequate to the work under those conditions.
3. This Company, therefore, offers to perform the Mail Service by this temporary line between the Port of Cork on the one side, and Sydney and Melbourne on the other, in 55 days; and reciprocally in the same time from Sydney and Melbourne to the Port of Cork, during the period of eight months from the 1st of October next, or such other dates as may be appointed. On the expiration of one month from the last proposed despatch of the said temporary line of eight months, will be commenced the permanent and special service in regular succession of departure; that is in twelve months from the date of the contract, and so to continue monthly under the stipulated engagement, performing the passage out and home in 45 days each way, from March to October; and in 50 days during the remaining four months.
4. But it is submitted, that while the Company will be subject to heavy penalties for delays beyond the maximum of time mentioned in the conditions of tender, (the largest it is believed ever imposed) we may be allowed perhaps to represent that the premium stated for anticipated deliveries is by no means commensurate with the expense of accelerating the passage—a matter of great consequence for Mails as well as passengers—and that a reciprocal advantage equivalent to the penalty would offer a more sufficient inducement to advance the arrival of the packets, so that if the penalty be fixed at £10 an hour over the maximum stated by the contract, the conditions may reasonably be varied to allow the like amount of premium for the saving of time below the minimum; but although the Company is prepared to encounter the risk of such penalties as in the discretion of the Commissioners may be appointed, it is with great respect suggested that the line should be placed in this and other respects on the same footing as the Suez line, the contractors for which have the vast advantage of other ample subsidies for a considerable portion of their service.
5. For the conveyance of Mails to Cork Harbour, I am authorized to state that the Great Southern and Western Railway Company, Ireland, is prepared to facilitate the passage of the Mails along their line, and it is believed that the new Irish postal arrangements will come into operation about the time here proposed for the permanent service;—thus correspondence from the manufacturing districts and all parts of the United Kingdom, except those South and East of Birmingham, will be benefited by the departure from Cork Harbour, whilst the London letters will suffer no practical detriment.
6. The offing and landfall of Cork Harbour confer so great an advantage in the voyage out and home, provable by the most experienced mariners, and many recent examples,—a few being enumerated in the Appendix to this Company's Prospectus,—that the departure thence will amply compensate for any partial inconvenience; whilst one effect of a Mail Station there will be the establishment by this Company of extensive engineering works so much required in cases of accident, as very lately to the "City of Baltimore," the "Weser," and many other large steamers, which have put in there disabled in machinery or otherwise.
7. From Cork Harbour to the American Isthmus it is intended to make the passage in one stretch, unless otherwise approved or required by Her Majesty's Government.

8. The transit of the Isthmus, on which so much of the efficiency in the service depends, requires the following observations:—

At the beginning of the present year the Company received from Bogota a confident assurance that the Government of New Granada was prepared to accede to the proposals on the part of this Company for a reduction of the present transit impost of one shilling to one penny per letter, as appears by the extracts from the letters of Dr. F. Gonzales, ex-Advocate General of that republic. This concession, from some unaccountable delay, has not arrived, and we are obliged to accept the status in quo, should we be required to pass by the Panama Railway. The Panama Railroad Company also (the advantage of whose route is mostly appreciable for the transmission of passengers and merchandize), by a refusal to modify its rates, raises an impediment to traffic on account of the unreasonable high charges which the monopoly of way enables them to maintain; and we must, of course, submit to the subsisting conditions of their tariff, as stated in the letter of the Chairman to this Company.

9. However, it may be deserving of notice that the transit of Mails and passengers may be effected without inconvenience, and under advantageous conditions, by the Nicaraguan route; and with that view it would be desirable that the corresponding terms of the contract should be,—That the transits of the American Isthmus shall be effected by such route, and on such terms, as shall be approved by Her Majesty's Government. The Panama Railroad Company pay Mr. Vanderbilt £12,000 annually to avoid the competition of his steamers originally placed on the Nicaraguan line, which must therefore afford sufficient facility to justify so great a sacrifice; and there is little doubt that, should permission be given to resort, if necessary, to that route, both the New Granadian Government and the Panama Railroad Company will promptly abate their pretensions.

10. There are besides certain other advantages, as we consider, in primarily adopting the Nicaraguan route, which justify the hope that this modification will be approved:—

The new treaty, negotiated by Sir Wm. Gore Ousley, reduces the postal charges on letters passing that way to one penny per rate, which would naturally be further reduced if the transport be effected by this Company, so as to warrant its undertaking the carriage of the Mails by that route for one penny per quarter ounce.

A call may be made by the Company's steamers at Port Royal (Jamaica), where coaling can be more economically performed than at any point of the Isthmus.

The Company would be enabled ad libitum to carry from Jamaica, from the Nicaraguan territory, mules, mechanics, and laborers, on reasonable engagements, as required for the transport.

An establishment for repairs may be located advantageously at Jamaica.

The terminal stations at Greytown and St. Jean del Sud or Realijo, can be made better than Aspinwall and Panama, where the rollers and set of tide are prejudicial to ships at anchor.

The land carriage is comparatively short and sufficiently solid and safe, whilst there are great fears for the stability of a considerable portion of the Panama Railroad, on account of the swampy nature of the ground.

The efforts of the Nicaraguan Government and the Promoters of the inter-Oceanic Canal Company to attract traffic, will induce those parties to afford all possible facilities for the desired transit.

The distance from St. Jean del Sud to New Zealand is 234 nautical miles nearer than from Panama, whilst the offing from the former is much better, as giving the run clear of all islands, which obstruct navigation in the bay of Panama.

The temporary adoption of this route will allow of the development of other routes; for example—that of Honduras, which has excellent harbours at both termini, and is conceded to a company of British capitalists, and the Tehuantepec Road, which would probably give, on the completion of the American system of railways, an overland delivery by the United States—analogous to the Marseilles route—of 33 days to New Zealand and 58 to Australia; and it is 479 miles nearer to Australia than Panama.

11. From the American Isthmus to New Zealand the course adopted for this Company is that marked out by Sir Edward Belcher, in his evidence before the Committee of the House of Commons (Steam to India, &c., 1851), from the Isthmus to Cook's Straits, making Peard Island (Gambier Group) the midway coaling station most conveniently situated in regard to division of the distance and to advantage of winds, in both respects far preferable to the Tahiti route, and at the same time being shorter, on the whole distance, to Sydney.

12. The station in New Zealand will be at Cook's Straits, where are Wellington and Nelson, the commercial Capitals of the two main Islands, the places of most importance in that Colony. A call there appears the only means of suiting the requirements of this case, as both Melbourne and Sydney have virtually settled the question by establishing their first Stations for Inter-Colonial purposes—the one at Nelson and the other at Wellington. It will further afford the only solution of the difficulty of reconciling the interest in this line, of the two great Australian Colonies, by a nearly simultaneous delivery at Sydney and Melbourne.

13. To effect this desideratum the Company will be assisted by the Australian Steam Navigation Company of Sydney, who have provisionally consented to co-operate on equitable terms, as appears by a communication from them, and instructions received by their Agents in London—Messrs. Redfern and Alexander—to the same effect. It is scarcely requisite to observe that such a coalition will tend to reconcile the Colonial influence of that Company; render the benefits of its extensive establishment available to our purposes; and at the same time insure against competition and conflicting claims, which might otherwise arise, to the prejudice of all parties.

14. This portion of the service would naturally absorb the present Inter-Colonial line from Melbourne to Wellington, the subsidy of £12,000, now paid to the Australasian Steam Navigation Company, passing as part of the contribution of Victoria, for the general service. On the arrival of the main liner at Wellington, the Mails for Tasmania, Victoria, and Adelaide would be transhipped on board the branch packet, which would proceed to Port Phillip, calling at Nelson and Georgetown (Tasmania) and return in time to meet the Homeward Mail from Sydney at Wellington. As this return passage would be performed with the favor of the prevailing winds, but little margin for contingent delays would be required, and the rest of the homeward run would be the reverse of that stated for the outward passage.

15. The estimate of distance for the computation of mileage is as follows:—

	Miles.
Queenstown to the American Isthmus ... ..	4,308
St. Juan del Sud to Peard Island ... ..	3,560
Peard Island to Wellington ... ..	2,574
Wellington to Melbourne, calling at Georgetown ...	1,500
Wellington to Sydney ... ..	1,221
Estimated deviation... ..	177
Total nautical miles... ..	13,500

Entire distance for twelve monthly round voyages 324,000 nautical miles.

This, at the rate of ten shillings per mile, gives the amount at £162,000, which, with £2,000 for the accommodation of the Mail Agent (sorters being charged as second class passengers) is the sum for which the Company's tender is given, should Her Majesty's Government require Mails to be conveyed by the Company's ships fortnightly, the increased mileage will be undertaken at 75 per cent. of the foregoing rate; if more frequently, the further mileage will be only 60 per cent., and in the event of the New Columbian Mail Service being combined with the Australian, as first proposed, the additional distance will be 75 per cent. of the original mileage.

16. I am further desired to state that the Company has in special view to afford for the first time, on an efficient principle, accommodation for all classes of passengers. Though it is generally contended that postal lines should be established for the sole object of conveying Mails, it may be urged that in many peculiar cases personal communication is of more importance than written. Merchants, mere agents and others, having private interests at stake, adopt the former view; probably, the mass of settlers would support the claim for facilities of passage which would have the important, social, and political result of maintaining the natural attachment to the parent State that distance and obstructions to intercourse tend to impair. The Company is prepared to afford this advantage, and undertakes to provide second and third class through passages, at the rate of 45 and 35 guineas, the latter being about the rate of three farthings per mile less than the Railway Parliamentary fares, with this difference, that the passengers are fed, lodged, and carried for that sum, when on Railways, they have to purchase their refreshments often, through the monopoly of supply, at three-fold the value. Engagements to that effect would be binding on the Company, and subject to the approbation of Her Majesty's Government in regard to dietary, accommodation, and general regulations.

17. In the event of the postponement of a contract for the whole service from Great Britain to Australia, this Company tenders for the conveyance of the Mails from the American Isthmus to Australia, within the terms of the supplemental note to the conditions of tender, as subsidiary to any subsisting Mail Service, including a simultaneous delivery at Melbourne and Sydney, (calling by branch packet at Nelson and Georgetown, en route for Melbourne, to land Mails) for the sum of £109,000, subject to an abatement of £1,000 per annum, in case no accommodation should be required for an officer in charge of the Mails. The passage to be performed in thirty days, as stated in the Company's Tender, No. 2.

18. And provided the Company is permitted to contract with the American, French, or other Foreign Government, for the conveyance of Mails in the Pacific, the Company hereby offers to perform the service for £90,000, subject to the like deduction of £1,000 as above stated from the time such foreign contract shall come into operation.

And as the "Powerful" and "Modern Greece" are the only boats suitable for the Mail Service to Sydney, this Company intend to build eight steam vessels of 1,200 tons gross register, and 350 nominal horse power, but of 1,000 effective horse power, and with an average speed of fourteen knots per hour in smooth water, and twelve knots at sea, in every way fitted for the Service.

This Company will establish Coal Depôts at Fayal, at Colon, at Panama, at Tahiti, and at Sydney. The vessels will, however, take on board sufficient coals to prosecute the whole voyage on each side of the Isthmus of Panama. The vessels will call at a port in New Zealand, somewhere in the neighbourhood of the Bay of Islands; and from Sydney the Company will send forward by separate steamers the Mails for the other ports in Australia.

This Company also beg to add that they, in offering for this service, consider that they are justly entitled to the same amount of allowance for every hour less than the contract time, in which they shall be able to complete the several voyages between Sydney and England, as they are liable to, in the shape of deduction for every hour consumed on the voyage beyond the number of days stipulated in the contract on behalf of this Company. I only add that we are prepared to execute a contract according to the printed conditions which this letter accompanies. I am also prepared to shew to your Lordships the responsibility of myself and friends in being able to carry out this contract.

STEAM POSTAL SERVICE via PANAMA.

*The following Letter of Explanation accompanies this Tender.*116 and 117, Fenchurch-street, London, 1 July, 1859.

Sir,

With reference to the accompanying Tender for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails to Australia, via Panama and New Zealand, we beg to call your attention to the following explanations:—

The number of Vessels to be constructed will not be less than nine,—so as to provide for every emergency in case of accidents.

We propose to start from Southampton or Milford Haven, and proceed direct to Aspinwall—without calling at any intermediate Port, and thus promoting the interests of the Colony by avoiding the risk of yellow fever, &c., incurred by touching at any of the West India Islands.

From Panama we propose to steam direct to Sydney, calling at a convenient port in New Zealand on the outward and homeward voyages, with privilege of coaling at intermediate places if absolutely necessary.

At Sydney the Mails would be transhipped into one of the Contractors' steamers for Melbourne, and the return Service would be performed by the same means and route.

We do not include in our Tender the expense or risk of the transit of the Mails across the Isthmus of Panama.

In the event of Her Majesty's Government desiring at any time to vary the route by the way of Nicaragua, instead of Panama, we possess peculiar facilities of transit by that route, which we shall be glad to submit to the Government, having already communicated our views on this subject to the late Government, as calculated to assist in settling the central American difficulty.

We are very sanguine, from the calculations we have made, that we shall be able to accomplish the Service in considerably less than fifty-five days to Melbourne; but we cannot undertake the risk of incurring penalties by contracting to perform the service in less than the maximum of fifty-five days.

With reference to the period at which we propose to commence the Service, we beg to say that at the present moment there is not a sufficient number of suitable steam vessels available capable of performing the service in the stipulated time,—a matter of grave importance in working a Mail Contract of such magnitude.

We consider, therefore, as practical ship-owners, well acquainted with the service to be performed, that vessels must be constructed expressly with such modern improvements as are calculated to work in a satisfactory manner.

We are enabled to tender for this service on economical terms, intending to employ vessels of about 1,200 tons gross measurement, adapted for conveyance of Mails, specie, and passengers, without looking to cargo as an element of profit, and avoiding thereby at the same time all the delay occasioned by taking in and discharging cargo.

Hitherto similar services have been performed by very large vessels, involving an expensive outlay of capital, and requiring large returns beyond an unnecessarily heavy Government subsidy to render the undertaking remunerative; but experience proves to us that smaller vessels, constructed chiefly for the subsidised service, will be most advantageous to the several contracting parties.

Any further details required by Her Majesty's Government we shall be glad to furnish at a personal interview or otherwise.

Although not made a condition of our Tender, it is hoped that there would be no objection on the part of Her Majesty's Government to permit our arranging with the French or other Governments to carry their Mails, provided it in no way interferes with the efficiency of the present service.

We are, &amp;c.,

INTERCOLONIAL ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY, (Limited.)

41, Moorgate-street, London, E. C.,
30 June, 1859.

My Lords,

With reference to the accompanying Tender for the Mail Service to Australia, via Panama and New Zealand, we beg to state that we have been induced to tender for the Service from the fact that we are already the contractors between the provinces of New Zealand and Sydney at £24,000 per annum, and have now for some time been performing the Service regularly and well; and supposing that your Lordships will not be disposed to subsidise two services between New Zealand and Sydney, and thus place another line in competition with our own, which has been established at great labor and cost to ourselves, and thus possibly prevent that success to our undertaking which we had a right to expect, and which we did expect when we entered upon the undertaking and accepted the Service. We trust your Lordships, if declining to accept of our tender, will especially take into consideration our being already on the station a part of the distance; you will make it a condition with the successful parties that they shall make arrangements with us either for purchasing up our contract and steamers, &c., or making such arrangements with us as will not interfere at all with the undertaking in which we are engaged, and which has conferred such great benefits on the Colonies already.

If our tender is accepted we propose to build entirely new vessels, fitted especially for the service, of full power, and of 1,500 tons, a size which we consider small enough for the service, and which we think will be large enough for all purposes. Begging your Lordships' favorable attention,

We remain, &c.,
Z. C. PEARSON COLEMAN & CO.

To the Lords

Commissioners of the Admiralty.

P.S.—We respectfully beg your Lordships will consent to favor us with an interview before you accept any tender, in order that we may lay our peculiar case before you.

Sir,

With reference to a Mail Service to Australia via Panama, I beg to state that there are several influential gentlemen in this country at present from Australia, who have called on me, and have requested me to state that in making the arrangement for a Postal Communication between this country and Australia, that it would be advisable to embrace Canada and the other British Provinces, together with the United States, which would be of the most essential importance to Australia as well as Canada; at present there is no Postal Communication between Australia and North America, and the proposed line from this Country via Panama direct would not afford any additional facility.

I could convey the Mails from England to Chagres via New York at a trifling expense, which would so far meet their wishes.

I could deliver the Mails at Chagres by this route as soon, if not sooner, than it can be done in any other way.

I am not, however, prepared at present to make an offer for the Service from Chagres to Australia.

I am induced to make this statement at the request of the gentlemen from Australia.

Sir,

I beg to state that it is no private advantage but the welfare of Britain which moves me to address you, and as it was with me in 1825, so now in 1859, pro bono publico.

Having studied at Addiscombe I went out to India in the Artillery in 1819; was employed as Executive Officer at Singapore under Sir T. S. Raffles (i.e. Superintending Engineer) for some years, and enjoyed the patronage and confidence of the Supreme Government ment of India, under Lord Hastings. Retired from the service on account of ill-health, in 1836, or I should now have been a General in the Army; Major General Sir Archibald Wilson, Bart., K.C.B., was side by side with me in the Royal Artillery.

For upwards of 30 years I have considered the matter of steam and especially with regard to the Panama route.

In 1825 I proposed to the Marquis of Hastings—who wished to try it—to build vessels of 1,000 tons at 500 horse-power (steam being then in its infancy) to run between Calcutta and Australia (Sydney); his Lordship referred it to nautical men and it was pooh-pooh'd as absurd.

Note—time has proved the correctness of my view.

It is not too much for this enlightened age to say it would be so now also (if similarly dealt with) in any new or improved method.

As for instance a proposal to build vessels superior to existing ones, especially from a non-professional.

When I saw the Admiralty advertisement in Times of May last, I wrote for the terms and fully intended to make a tender; but, alas! no suitable vessels are to be had, and I cannot attempt to build on my own risk; my friends, moreover, strongly object to my health, as not fit to undertake such a work,—nevertheless,

I have the honor to state, for the information of the Lords Commissioners, &c., &c., that I am fully persuaded a Contract may be made for 42 days—and even less, bye-and-bye, if Government build suitable vessels—direct, viz., Milford to Sydney, the Colonial work should be done separately.

I should not hesitate to undertake to carry this out if it should please Her Majesty's Government to employ me.

[Explanatory

[Explanatory Letter accompanying Tender of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company].

Royal Mail Steam Packet Company,
No. 55, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.,
1 July, 1859.

Sir,

In transmitting to you the enclosed Tender for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails to and from England and Australia, &c., via Panama, I am instructed by the Court of Directors of this Company to state that the Estimate of the expense for performance of that Service has been confined to the working only of that portion of the line which lies between Panama and Australia, the working of the line from England to Colon being already embraced by the existing Contract between this Company and Her Majesty's Government. As however, the present Tender is for the performance of a Service (subsidiary to that now existing between this Country and the Isthmus of Panama) for a period of seven years, and the existing Contract with the Government will expire in four and a-half years, it will be obvious that the Company's present Contract should be extended so as to correspond with the time specified in the accompanying Tender, which is made upon the assumption that such extension will be granted.

The times mentioned in the Tender as those at which the ships will be ready for survey and for sea respectively, have been arrived at by the Directors, upon careful calculations; but, should it be found possible to get them ready at an earlier date, the Directors will offer them for approval without loss of time, and prepare to commence the Service accordingly.

Referring to the conditions annexed to the Tender, I am to offer the following remarks:—

Condition No. 2.—Between Great Britain and the Isthmus of Panama, it is proposed to call at St. Thomas; and between Panama and Australia at such port in New Zealand as may hereafter be agreed upon.

Condition No. 9.—The number of days between the departure of the Mail from Great Britain, and its arrival at Melbourne, and vice versa, exclusive of the transit across the Isthmus, to be fifty-five.

Condition No. 22.—In order that no unnecessary delay may take place in the payment of the contract money, it is proposed that the same shall be paid quarterly, upon the production of such of the required certificates as in ordinary course shall have reached this country.

I have, &c.,

RD. T. KEEP,
Secretary.

MEMORANDUM of intended statement on the subject of the proposed Contract for a Steam Postal Service with Australia via Panama.

In order to place the matter clearly and intelligibly before the members of the Committee, it may be desirable to give a brief summary of the past and recent proceedings with respect to the establishment and maintenance of Postal Communication between Great Britain and Australia.

In the year 1851 a Select Committee of the House of Commons was appointed to inquire into the question of Steam Communication between the United Kingdom, India, and Australia.

The relative advantages of three routes by which the communication with Australia could be maintained, viz.,—by way of the Cape of Good Hope, via India, and via Panama, were submitted to the consideration of the Committee, which, after taking a mass of evidence with respect to each, ultimately reported in favor of the line by the Cape of Good Hope, but at the same time admitted the merits of the Panama route, believing "that it would afford a regular and sufficiently rapid Postal Communication securing to the passengers a voyage comparatively free from storms, and at the same time it would bring the rising Colony of New Zealand into the main line of communication."

The Imperial Government did not act wholly upon the recommendation of the Select Committee, but in the year 1852, organized a monthly Steam Postal Service alternately by the Cape and Suez routes.

Up to this time the communication had been maintained by means of sailing vessels, and was altogether insufficient to satisfy the commercial and social requirements of the Colonists.

In November, 1854, the new Service was abruptly discontinued, ostensibly on account of the exigencies of the public service, created by the war then being waged with Russia, and the Postal Service then reverted to sailing vessels only, to the great inconvenience of the large and increasing trade interests of the Colonies.

In the year 1855, in compliance with the earnest and repeated representations of the Colonies, the subject of Steam Postal Communication was again taken into consideration by the Imperial Government, and after correspondence with the various Colonies, in the close of 1856, tenders were invited by the Treasury for the performance of a Monthly Steam Service between Southampton and Sydney via Suez.

The

The Tender of the European and Australian Company for a through line was ultimately accepted, and this Service came into operation in the early part of the year 1857. In April of the same year Mr. Champion Wetton arrived in Sydney, duly accredited by the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company to negotiate with any or all of the Australian Colonies, for the establishment of a Monthly Steam Postal Communication with England viâ Panama, in extension of the Company's existing line between Southampton and Aspinwall.

The Colonists of New Zealand and New South Wales gladly availed themselves of the opportunity thus presented of obtaining a second Postal Service, which would not only give them increased facilities of communication, but also place them on an equal footing with the Southern and Western Colonies with respect to the arrival and departure of the Mails.

A lengthened negotiation ensued, and eventually a provisional agreement was entered into between the Government of New South Wales and Mr. Wetton, by which the latter undertook, on behalf of the Company he represented, to establish and maintain the Service in question for a term of years, for a yearly subsidy of £50,000, of which amount £15,000 was to be contributed by New Zealand.

This agreement was made subject to the approval of the local Parliaments of the two Colonies, and to the ratification of the shareholders of the Company in England, and in the early part of the year 1858, a communication was received in Sydney from Mr. Wetton, intimating that the Shareholders decline to ratify it.

The contract of the European and Australian Company which was carried out from the very commencement in a most irregular and unsatisfactory manner, was in June, 1858, dissolved by the Imperial Government, which made temporary arrangements for maintaining the service viâ Suez until a contract of a more permanent nature could be entered into.

In the month of August, before they were apprised of this result, the Executive Government of New South Wales had, at the instance of the Legislative Assembly, carefully considered the question of the best means of maintaining a rapid, regular, and frequent communication with Great Britain and the rest of the civilised world. And when the official announcement of the dissolution contract was received in Sydney they again took it into consideration in all its bearings, and eventually submitted their views on the subject to the Assembly, with a proposal that in furtherance thereof a sum of £50,000 per annum should be appropriated for a period of seven or ten years towards the establishment of a monthly Steam Postal Communication with Great Britain viâ Panama.

On the 8th September the Legislative Assembly adopted a series of Resolutions which substantially embodied the views of the Executive Government. A Bill was thereupon introduced to give them practical effect, and having been passed by both Houses of the Legislature, was assented to by the Governor on the 2nd of November.

Appendix A.
Appendix B.
Appendix C.

It was then resolved that a special Agent should be sent to England to negotiate with Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of the Panama Service, upon the basis of the terms indicated in the Resolutions and Act of the Legislature; and I was appointed to the office.

The principal reasons which induced the Government and people of New South Wales to take up the question so warmly may be briefly stated as follows:—

1. That from the experience which had been gained of the Suez route, strong doubts were entertained whether it would ever be carried out with regularity and despatch.
  2. That by the Suez route, Sydney being the last port of arrival and the first of departure, the Colonists are liable, in the event of any irregularity of the Mails, to a disadvantage to which the southern and western Colonies are not liable, or if so, only in a minor degree, viz.,—that of being unable to answer letters by the same post by which they are received. Under the late Contract this occurred twice in 1857, and seven times in 1858. It is true that, on two of these latter occasions the homeward Mail was caught at Melbourne, but only at a heavy extra cost to the Colonial Government.
  3. That by the proposed route not only will this disadvantage be mitigated in the case of New South Wales, but New Zealand will be placed on an equal footing with the other Australian Colonies, and be able to receive and answer letters by the same Mail, a boon which she does not obtain by the Suez route.
  4. That a second line of independent communication is absolutely necessary, to provide against the contingencies to which a single line would always be more or less exposed.
  5. That the increasing wealth and importance of the Australian Colonies demand a more frequent communication than has hitherto been maintained with the Mother Country.
  6. That the second monthly service, viâ Panama, could be so arranged as to afford a fortnightly communication, and satisfy this requirement;
- And, lastly, that the proposed route would connect Australia and New Zealand directly with North and South America and the West India Islands, with the former of which large trade is at present carried on.

It must not be forgotten, however, that there are other than Colonial interests involved in this question of rapid, regular, and frequent communication with Australia. Imperial interests are largely concerned in it, for, exclusive of other influencing causes identifying the interests of the Colony with the Mother Country, the interchange of trade and the Gold receipts receipts are of the highest importance to Great Britain. The aggregate amount of the import and export trade between the United Kingdom and Australia amounted in 1857 to £80,350,000, of which £11,000,000 was due to Gold receipts.

A statistical return recently issued by the Board of Trade shews, that during the year 1858 the declared value of British and Irish produce of manufactures exported to Australia was £10,464,198.

The population of the Colonies which would be affected by the proposed service being in round numbers, according to the last Census returns, 1,000,000, the consumption of British goods was therefore at the rate £10 10s. per head per annum, a consumption far beyond that of any other possession or foreign country, as may fairly be inferred from the following figures taken from the same Return, which exhibit the value of British produce exported during the same period to—

1. India	...	...	...	...	£16,782,515
2. All other Colonies	...	...	...	...	12,678,281
3. America	...	...	...	...	14,510,616
South America	...	...	...	...	8,634,636
4. Germany	...	...	...	...	12,753,655
5. Holland	...	...	...	...	5,456,423
6. France	...	...	...	...	4,861,558

The much larger population of each of these countries of course reducing the consumption per head to a much lower average.

It must also be borne in mind, that of the expensive Postal routes subsidized by the British Government, which include not only the Colonies but Foreign Countries, the Australian is the only case in which the expense is shared equally by the Mother Country, the others being almost exclusively maintained by Imperial Funds.

To resume my statement. Before my departure from Sydney, a copy of the notice issued by the Admiralty, calling for Tenders for a new contract for the Service, via Suez, was received in the Colony, and to that notice the following postscript was appended:—"It is observed that so soon as arrangements are completed, it is the intention of the Government to call for Tenders for a Monthly Steam Communication with Australia via Panama, in addition to the Service via Suez."

The Government of New South Wales were hence led to conclude, that the Imperial Government not only admitted the expediency of establishing a second Postal Service by way of Panama, but were about to take prompt measures to bring it into early operation.

Upon my arrival in England, in February, 1859, duly accredited with full powers to negotiate with the Imperial Government, on the basis of paying a moiety of the cost of the proposed Service to the extent of £50,000 voted by the Colonial Legislature, I was referred by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the authorities at the Treasury. I then ascertained that since the issue of a notice calling for Tenders for the Suez Service, no steps had been taken with reference to the Tenders for the Panama Service. But that, on the contrary, the question had been referred to the Colonies, and that the Lords of the Treasury were not prepared to take any further action in the matter until an answer had been received to that reference. After some negotiation, however, this determination was abandoned, and on the 15th of March, the Lords of the Treasury consented to call for Tenders, if certain conditions were complied with, and subsequently, on the 18th of April, consented to call for Tenders at once, in order to ascertain if the conditions could be complied with.

These several decisions were communicated by me to the Colonial Government as they were arrived at.

This paper has already appeared

On the 19th of April the last decision was embodied in the Treasury Minute, a copy of which I, myself, forwarded to my Government by the May Mail. By the same opportunity also copies were forwarded to the Governors of the Australian Colonies direct from the Colonial Office.

It will be seen by reference to this document (Appendix) that after reciting the promise to call for Tenders for the Panama Service given when the Suez Service was being negotiated, the Minute goes on to state that considering the advantages which the Service would confer upon the Australian Colonies generally, and the very liberal manner in which the Colony of New South Wales had come forward in support of the scheme, My Lords were of opinion that they ought no longer to defer acting upon that promise.

"But it was to be understood that in coming to this decision, their Lordships would not be bound to accept any of the Tenders, unless they were satisfied,—

"1st. That the amount is reasonable and such as they would be justified in incurring.

"2nd. That the times and rates of speed are such as to harmonize perfectly with the Suez Service, so as to make the two alternate fortnightly with each other, and—

"3rd. That the Governments of the Australian Colonies will undertake one entire moiety of the cost of both the services via Suez, as well as by Panama, whatever that may be."

It will be further seen that the Minute directs that the Admiralty be requested to take the necessary steps for inviting Tenders.

In pursuance of this direction a notice was issued by the Admiralty calling for Tenders for a monthly Postal Service between Sydney and Great Britain via Panama, and the 1st of July was named for their receipt. (For copy of conditions of Tender see Appendix.)

In the interval which elapsed between this determination being arrived at by the Government and the day named for the receipt of the Tenders, the change of Ministry took place, but the notice inviting Tenders was not withdrawn.

On calling a few days after at the Treasury I ascertained that some of the Tenders were within the limit fixed by the late Government as a reasonable sum to be demanded for the Service, viz., £150,000, and that no objection had been offered by any of the Tenderers to the time appointed for the service, i. e., they complied with the Treasury requirement that the Service should be performed in 55 days. I also ascertained that the present Government were not prepared to take any immediate action with respect to the question of the proposed Service, as it had been resolved by the House of Commons to appoint a Select Committee to inquire into Ocean Postal, and Telegraph Contracts generally, and that this would be dealt with inter alia, as the scope of the inquiry included all.

I have since been furnished with a copy of the Abstract of Tenders, from which I learn that the minimum Tender is as low as £109,000. The amount voted, therefore, by the Colonial Legislature is within a small sum of a half of this minimum Tender; and as a moiety of the cost of the Suez Service is already guaranteed by the Government of Victoria, and all the conditions, therefore, imposed by the Treasury are in a position to be complied with, I respectfully trust that the Committee will find it consistent with their views to report during the present Session, so that the proceedings of the Imperial Government, already so near completion, in furtherance of the request and necessities of the Colonies may not be arrested, or so important and vital a measure be longer delayed.

I hope I may not be deemed intrusive in respectfully pressing for a prompt decision, when I call to the recollection of the Committee the distance which exists between this country and those whom I have the honor to represent.

I have ventured, for the more convenient information of the Committee, to reduce these remarks to writing, adding the collateral points in the form of an Appendix,—by the production of existing documents; but I am prepared, in the event of any portion of the statement being insufficiently explicit, to answer such questions as Honorable Members of the Committee may be pleased to suggest, or in the event of the Committee desiring more detailed information as to the inconvenience resulting from the present state of things; there are, fortunately, gentlemen in the country who have large stake in the Colonies, and are fully competent to give expression to their views, if the Committee should think fit to examine them.

STEAM POSTAL SERVICE viâ PANAMA.

No. 1.

THE SECRETARY TO THE COMPANY to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY, NEW SOUTH WALES.

Australasian and Pacific Company (Limited),
 88, Cannon-street West (F.C.),
 London, 17 October, 1859.

SIR,

Owing to arrangements which have been recently provisionally made by our Engineers, Messrs. Moore and Co., this Company is now prepared to submit terms for the conveyance of Mails to Sydney viâ the American Isthmus, which, if approved by the Government of New South Wales, will obviate delay in commencing this important line of communication. It is certain that the Imperial Government will give no decision on the subject till the Committee on Postal and Telegraph Contracts shall have reported; and, as there are other matters of priority, involving the tedious investigation of Submarine Telegraphs and subsisting Contracts, it may be probable that the next session will close without any resolution on the question.

As Mr. Edward Merewether informed our Mr. Moore that the New South Wales Government was prepared to largely increase the intended contribution of £50,000, we assume, for the sake of this pro formâ proposal, that, for an immediate opening of the line, £25,000 would not be an exorbitant addition, to be equitably increased in case the other Colonies should contribute their quota, in proportion to the amount of their respective Mails. This increase would be with a view to diminish the Company's risk, when that of the Colony of New South Wales would be lightened by the coalition.

We therefore propose, on a guarantee of £75,000 per annum, to undertake the conveyance of Mails from Queenstown to Sydney, without regard to the delivery of Mails at any other Colonial port, unless the Colonial Governments shall give their adhesion to that of New South Wales for a joint interest in the service. Should the other Colonies (Victoria, Tasmania, and New Zealand) join in the arrangement, the contribution should be increased to £90,000 yearly, which would be again decreased to £84,000, in case the British Government advance the corresponding annual subsidy (making the total £164,000) of £84,000, of which this Company takes the responsibility, until the question of Imperial contribution is settled. One-half of the Postal receipts would be retained by the Government of New South Wales as against its liability on the guarantee; and as it is computed that there will be two millions of rates (an increase on last return, = 1,368,000), at 9d. the rate, which would be fully justified by the regularity of the service, £37,500 would be received, leaving thus only £37,500 to be provided. The remaining half of the receipts would be for this Company, to cover the additional risk and cost of transit across the American Isthmus.

At the expiration of 18 months the accelerated service would be commenced, to deliver the letters in 45 days both ways, taking, as the basis of remuneration, £164,000 per annum,—one-half chargeable to the Colonies. But, if the sum be augmented to £200,000 per annum, of which £100,000 should be provided by the Colonial subvention, we would undertake to convey the Mails outwards in 40 days, and homewards in 42 days. This increase of speed has been well considered, and our shipbuilders are prepared to guarantee the desired efficiency of their ships.

In this we assume that we shall be allowed to make arrangements with Foreign Governments for the conveyance of their Mails, but in no wise to prejudice the Colonial Mail Service, which shall be made paramount to all other considerations, and subject to the sanction of the New South Wales Government; and also, that we shall be allowed to carry the Mails from Queenstown to the American Isthmus, in conjunction with Foreign Mails, under a Foreign flag. This will be obviously a necessity, under the circumstance of starting the line independently of a Contract with the Home Authorities, for, otherwise, the Mails might be forced on the Company as a ship's mail, for which the statutory remuneration would pass to the captains of the ships, and be of no benefit either to the Colonial Government or the Company, as no compact with the captains can be valid against a legislative provision.

Although we have computed the revenue on the subsisting rate viâ Marseilles, we think that a four-penny rate would lead to a more rapid development of correspondence, and the Company will be prepared to assent to the corresponding risk of that reduction, without discussing any speculative result in securing the early adhesion of the other Colonies. Considering that no advance is required—that no engagement is to be made, beyond the temporary contract for 18 months, and that without this temporary measure that period must inevitably elapse from the time the Cobden Committee shall deliver their judgment on the question of subsidy—which may or may not be favorable to this line—before the establishment of any effective service under a permanent Contract, thus risking a period of from 2 to 2½ years—we trust that the Sydney Government will promptly accept this proposition, for there is no risk and no delay to prejudice the case, if we do not satisfy the Government by opening the line effectually. They will be bound to the guarantee and to the stipulated term of service only so long as it is performed in accordance with the conditions.

Without doubt the Sydney Government will look beyond the narrow calculation of postal revenue in considering that the development of correspondence must be commensurate with increase of business, and that the ostensible sacrifice in this outlay will be met by enlarged income under general taxation or customs.

In addition, we have to state that, as the Company contemplates extensive demand for inter-communication by this route, they will be prepared to bind themselves to accept 75 per cent. of the mileage now to be granted for the conveyance of mails fortnightly, when the traffic shall demand a semi-monthly departure; and 50 per cent. of this original mileage for Mails conveyed weekly, in the same manner, when circumstances shall require it.

I have, &c.,

GEO. CLARK,

Secretary for the Australasian Steam Navigation Company.

THE HONORABLE

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,
New South Wales.

No. 2.

THE SECRETARY TO THE COMPANY to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Australasian and Pacific Company (Limited),
88, Cannon-street West (E.C.),*

London, November, 1859.

SIR,

Confirming my previous communication of the 18th October ultimo, I beg leave herewith to transmit the copy of a proposal dated 10th September last, submitted by this Company, in pursuance of the offer contained in my letter of the 18th August, to convey the Mails temporarily on a Colonial guarantee, and also Mr. Secretary Hamilton's answer thereto.

Taking into consideration the extent of business entitled to precedence before that Committee—the Galway Mail Contract, which will be subject to a litigious and protracted investigation; subsisting Contracts to the United States of North America and Canada, West Indies and Pacific, Brazils, Cape of Good Hope, Western Africa, Peninsular, India, and China; as well as Marine Telegraph projects, of which there is a pressing accumulation—it appears nearly certain that the next Parliamentary Session will pass without a practical Resolution on the Panama line.

The principal supporters of this Company, therefore, resolved to incur the responsibility of proceeding with the organization of a line of steamers preparatory to some arrangement for anticipating the decision of the Government. Naturally, in the absence of any official co-operation from the other Colonies, that measure should be adopted exclusively sively in concert with the Government of New South Wales, which has so long and consistently advocated the Pacific route.

I was, therefore, instructed, and accordingly by the last mail did forward proposals imposing on the Company considerable risk in carrying into effect the terms. But satisfied that our plans will ultimately obtain universal approbation in preference to those, if any, of the other competitors, the Company will be prepared to abide by any temporary loss that may result, having in view other employment for the ships in the event of being disappointed on the ultimate adjudication of the Contract.

To avoid any prejudice to the tenders sent in by this Company, and for other business, it is intended to form a distinct enterprise for the present purpose, by the name of the Maritime Steam Company (Limited), and under the direction of the leading parties to the present Company, the proof Prospectus of which will be forwarded by this mail. The Company will be incorporated in the meantime, and unless some political or monetary crisis should unexpectedly intervene the capital will be subscribed, and every detail of operations completed, by the arrival of the February mail, when we shall, no doubt, have a favorable answer.

The conditions we stipulate are so equitable, and so consistent with the declared resolution of the Government of New South Wales, while the present Suez Mail appears permanently irregular, to the great prejudice of the commercial interests of both the Colonies and this country, as well as disadvantageous to passengers of all classes, that we do not anticipate an unsatisfactory decision.

We shall, therefore, in all confidence, energetically proceed with the preliminaries for the building of our ships, and prepare to commence a monthly service for delivering the Mails within the time specified in our proposal of the 18th October. At considerable loss, both to ourselves and the Contractors, we have kept on hand the ships necessary for the early and provisional despatch of the Mails; but, as the material operation is the accelerated delivery of Mails—say in 45 days—it will be satisfactory to you to be informed that we shall commence that service in seven months from the date of the Contract; and we have every hope of obtaining an arrangement for transit more beneficial in regard to time, economy of charge, and salubrity, than the Panama Railroad, and which will ultimately (on completion of the system of American Railways in a few years) give an Overland communication by New Orleans of 38 days to Sydney; thus—Cork or Galway to Halifax, 6 days; via New Orleans to Ventosa, 5 days; and thence to Sydney, 25; with 2 days for detention.

Although the vessels now to be employed are not of the Leviathan class, they will be amply sufficient for the traffic to be expected; and as to the success of their promised performance the builders will guarantee their stability, speed, and economy, on which depends their regularity, in large pecuniary penalties. Herewith I subjoin a copy of the outline specification of our ships, which I venture to think will satisfy every requirement of the service in view. Five eminent building firms on the Clyde, the Tyne, the Wear, and the Lee have agreed for the building of these ships in the terms of the document.

As I believe there is no other party who is prepared, or competent, to make the same engagements, I trust to the determination of the New South Wales Government to support, with the same liberal hand that originally subscribed to the Pacific route, the Maritime Steam Company in its present undertaking.

Mr. Moore, the Engineer of the Company, now at Cork, has already completed the arrangements with the leading parties in Cork, and representing the Great Southern and Western Railway of Ireland, for the requisite financial support, which will enable the Company to proceed, subject to the approval of the proposal of the 18th October ultimo by the Government of New South Wales, so that no unnecessary delay will ensue after receiving the desired sanction.

I have, &c.,

GEO. CLARK,

Secretary.

AUSTRALIAN MAIL SERVICE.

My Lords,

The continued irregularities of the Australian Postal Service viâ Suez, which, from first to last, has failed to satisfy the requirements of the Colonial correspondence, may justify at the present crisis the offer already made on the part of the Company to undertake a temporary special contract for the service westward, viâ the Central American Isthmus and the Pacific. We venture to submit that the probable delay in the deliberations of the Postal and Telegraph Contracts Committee, and the urgent necessity for this alternative route, will furnish sufficient motives for this exceptional service, which we engage to commence for a period of 12 or 18 months at our own risk, on the guarantee of the Colonies, upon the following terms:—

We respectfully propose, at the expiration of three months from the date of the Contract (which delay is indispensable for stocking our coal depôts in the Pacific), to commence a monthly line by vessels of approved and guaranteed capacity and speed, and to perform the passage from Cork Harbour to Sydney and Melbourne simultaneously, as well outwards as homewards, within fifty-five days.

For this we shall be satisfied with the guarantee of the Colonial Governments for the annual subsidy of £82,000 (eighty-two thousand pounds sterling), which will naturally be contributed in the same "relative proportions to the number of letters received and "despatched on account of each," as suggested by your Lordships' Minute of the 15th November, 1858, as against half of the Postal returns to the account of the Colonies. And as to the remaining half to the account of the Imperial Government, on the principle laid down by the Minute above referred to, the company will consent to accept the corresponding half of the Postal receipts, subject to the decision of Parliament or the Report of the Committee on Postal and Telegraph Contracts. In so doing, the Company takes the entire risk, pending such temporary contract, of that decision being adverse to any subsidy on this line.

This will afford full time for duly maturing all necessary arrangements for the successful performance of a permanent contract; and as this Company was the first and, we believe, only party originally submitting such a plan, we venture to hope for a preference in case your Lordships should resolve to adopt it. In soliciting this favour, we undertake to satisfy your Lordships before the return advices from the Colonies, on which, of course, the execution of this contract would depend, that the Company's capital will be available within the limit of sufficient means for performing the duty;—that the ships will be ready for the stipulated departures, and suitable, in every respect, for the work in question;—that the time in which we propose to deliver the Mails is practicable with a view to regularity;—and that our plans are efficient, and calculated to satisfy the wants of all the Colonies of the Australasian group.

We have some grounds for hoping that the Victoria Legislature will concur in the necessary support, and as the Governor of that Colony has informed His Excellency the Governor of New South Wales, as well as our Melbourne Agent, that, on the meeting of the new Assembly, the Postal question would be taken into consideration, a Resolution on that subject may be expected by the January or February Mail of next year, in answer to our proposal.

In the mean time, in case your Lordships approve the principle of this intermediate service, all preliminary arrangements can be provisionally made, so as to facilitate operations in anticipation of a favorable result.

I have, &amp;c.,

GEO. CLARK,
Secretary, Australasian & Pacific Co.

Gentlemen,

With reference to your Secretary's letter, dated 10th instant, proposing a temporary special contract for the conveyance of the Australian Mails viâ the Central American Isthmus and the Pacific, I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to state that, the subject having been referred to a Committee of the House of Commons, their Lordships would be unwilling to take any step until that Committee has reported; and, in the present case, as it appears that the subject could hardly be entertained with a view to any practical result until January or February next, an additional reason is afforded for waiting until Parliament has had an opportunity of considering the principles upon which Mail Contracts should in future be conducted.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY to THE SECRETARY TO THE COMPANY.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,
13 February, 1860.*

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of November last, and previous communications, containing an offer from the Australasian and Pacific Company to enter upon a temporary Steam Postal Service to Sydney, via the American Isthmus.

2. It appears from your letter of November that you are aware that the whole question of Ocean Postal Subsidies has been remitted to a Select Committee of the House of Commons, and that, pending the report of that Committee, Her Majesty's Government have intimated that they are not prepared to take any further steps for the execution of a Postal Service to Australia by way of Panama. This decision must, for the present, place a limit on the action of the Government of New South Wales, inasmuch as the amount appropriated by the local Parliament for this Service is only available, provided a subsidy to the extent of one-half the sum to be paid to any contracting parties is contributed by the Government of Great Britain.

3. Under these circumstances, the Government of this Colony is not in a position to treat with the Australasian and Pacific Company on the basis of the proposals contained in your letters.

4. I consider it necessary, however, to add, that it is the intention of this Government to bring the subject again under the consideration of the Colonial Legislature, with a view to obtain further and more general powers for establishing, in concert with Her Majesty's Government, the Postal Service via Panama, which is so earnestly desired by this Colony as well as by New Zealand.

No. 4.

Australasian and Pacific Company (Limited),
 88, Cannon-street West (E.C.),
 London, 19 December, 1859.

SIR,

I had the honor of addressing you by last Mail, of the 18th November, which I beg to confirm.

Although rumours were then in circulation of the total failure of the Mauritius route, under the management of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, they were not at that time of sufficient authenticity to justify mention in my communication. Subsequently, however, the Report of that Company left no doubt of the fact, that their conduct of the Mail Service has been a disastrous and complete mistake, and that it is their intention to renounce their Contract, unless they receive a considerable addition to their subsidy.

You will, no doubt, also notice in the Times of December 10th, the announcement of their proposal to substitute the Ceylon route for that by the Mauritius, and to effect a fortnightly Mail viâ Suez, to the exclusion of the Pacific Mail, for which our tenders have been submitted to the Colonial and Home Governments. With what confidence they venture to suggest that punctuality can be ensured by the Galle passage, which, at the sacrifices made by their two predecessors, has been proved, beyond a doubt, to be liable to the same obstacles to regularity as the present, is yet to be explained; but it is more surprising to find that an attempt is thus made to supersede the Pacific Mail route, indisputably exempted from the same liability to severe weather, and which has been in principle adopted by the Home Government for the semi-monthly Mail. It is in effect to say that they, having shewn their incapability for the transmission of a monthly Mail, (not forgetting how they left the Colonies in the lurch, with the Singapore Contract,) are thereby entitled to be doubly trusted for a Line, demonstrated to be unsatisfactory even for the service for which it had been fully tested and found wanting.

On the other hand we, who have so earnestly and sincerely advocated the Pacific Line, say that it is the only one untried; that it possesses the strongest claims to have at least a trial; that in the event of having a semi-monthly Mail it is entitled to an absolute preference for one of the two Mails;—that the passage is incontestibly favorable for a regular delivery of Mails, and most eligible for passengers;—that we can undertake by this route to carry the Mails in ten days less time than can be effected by the Indian passage, at the same time that several of the Colonies will be largely benefited by its adoption; and that it can be made subservient to the purpose of conveying treasure, passengers, cargo, and parcels, at moderate rates.

At all events, we may venture to suggest, that it is unfair to dispose of the Pacific Line without an experiment, and with that view we are prepared to meet the extraordinary proposal of the Peninsular and Oriental Company by the challenge to try our route as against theirs for a period of 18 months or two years, with the addition of an extension of our line from Melbourne viâ Kangaroo Island, King George's Sound, Perth, (weather permitting,) and thence to Singapore, (or otherwise, if desired by the Colonies, viâ Torres Straits,) as the route most suitable for alternating the Mails by the Mediterranean. This gives, not only the double service to Europe, but also the most direct communication from the Australasian Group of Colonies to India and China.

This is what we proposed to the Treasury on the 5th October, 1858, and we persevere in thinking it the most efficient and comprehensive plan. The remuneration we should ask on that extension would be 12s. 6d. per mile for the additional mileage to Singapore, where several independent Companies have fast and commodious steamers plying between Calcutta and China,—a fact that, probably, induces the Peninsular and Oriental Company to give that station a wide berth to avoid the competition, and forces them to revert to the precarious weather of the Galle Line, on which they will have the Colonists completely at their mercy.

May I be permitted to ask, is it not in the interest of the Colonies thus to promote a healthy competition of efficiency? Is it not unwise to tie the Mails Service exclusively to the Indian route, which may be interrupted at any moment from the hour I write by a war with France—else whence this vast grant of ten millions sterling to our dock-yards recently announced—or why the panic of armaments against possible invasion?

The

The monopoly of the Peninsular and Oriental Company is already overgrown; their Peninsular, Mediterranean, Indian, and China business is more than enough for any one management; but at least let them merit confidence by the success of one Mail in the month to Australia, before they seek to engross two. They have not shewn their aptitude for the work by the selection of the Mauritius route, nor by the prohibitive rates charged by them on passengers, specie, parcels, and merchandize. It is manifest that navigation in the Indian Ocean is uncertain and hazardous, and the perils of the Red Sea are too numerous and too sadly testified to be ignored. When that Company boldly, if not presumptuously violated the experience of navigators, by their Mauritius Line, our Engineer's Report, as duly transmitted to you, stood as a protest, which has been justified sooner than could have been expected. It is, therefore, not without fair confidence that we claim consideration for the evidence on which the plan of this Company has been adopted.

In conclusion, we trust that we shall have the support of the Colonies in contesting the policy which is now, at the eleventh hour, urged on the Home Government for the unreasonable abrogation of the decision of the Treasury, on which our Tenders have been called for; and if so supported, we are prepared to abide by our proposal, forwarded by the Mail of the 18th of October, or that preceding it by the Mail of 18th August, confirmed by my last despatch on the 18th November, and these present lines.

SIR,

With reference to my predecessor's Circular Despatch of the 17th of May last, informing you that the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury had taken measures for inviting Tenders for the execution of a second monthly Mail Service between this country and Australia, by way of Panama, I transmit herewith, for your information, the copy of a further letter from the Secretary to the Treasury, enclosing copy of one which has been addressed by desire of the Lords Commissioners to Mr. Merewether, the Agent deputed by your Government to advance the project, from which you will perceive that the whole question of Mail contracts has been referred to the consideration of a Committee of Parliament, and that it is consequently not in their Lordships' power, pending the report of the Committee, to enter into any explanations, or to take any further action in the matter.

Sir,

I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your communication of the 12th instant, and I am directed by their Lordships to transmit to you copies of the tenders for the proposed Postal Service to Australia via Panama, in accordance with your request.

I am at the same time to recall to your recollection the previous communication with you since the accession of the present Government, and the appointment of the Committee of the House of Commons on the general question of Postal Contracts, and to state that, under present circumstances, their Lordships must consider the subject of the Panama, as well as of every other projected Mail Service, to be under reference to the consideration of a Committee of Parliament, and that their Lordships are not therefore in a condition to enter into any explanation which might have the effect of apparently abridging the discretion of the Committee, which is wholly independent of that of the Treasury.

I am to add that no arrangements have been yet completed with the Granadian Government with respect to the transit dues across the Isthmus of Panama.

No. 2.

GOVERNOR GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

Government House,Sydney, 8 December, 1859.

MY LORD DUKE,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Grace's Circular Despatch, dated 7th September, 1859, enclosing a copy of a letter addressed by the Secretary of the Treasury to Mr. Merewether, the Agent from the Government of New South Wales, informing him that the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury must consider the subject of the Panama as well as of every other projected Mail Service to be under reference to the consideration of a Committee of Parliament.

Under these circumstances, it has appeared to the Government of New South Wales that an opportunity is afforded of bringing under consideration the general principles which should regulate the establishment of lines of Steam Postal Communication with the Australian Colonies, at all events, if not with the Colonies generally.

I have accordingly addressed a Despatch, a copy of which is enclosed, to the Governors of Victoria, South Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, and Queensland. In this Despatch I have laid down the principles which appear to the Government of New South Wales to be those by which not only all future contracts, but even that about to be entered into with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, should be regulated. I have at the same time applied these principles to the determination of the mode in which the existing Steam Postal line viâ Suez should be carried out, as well as the manner in which the proposed line viâ Panama should be combined with the existing lines from England.

I may be allowed to express a hope that the principles which seem to the Government of New South Wales to be applicable generally to lines of Steam Postal Communication between the Colonies and the Mother Country, when the Colonies contribute largely towards the expense of such lines, may be brought under the consideration of the Committee of Parliament, and I do so the more confidently as one of the principal questions to be discussed by that Committee is one in which this Colony is deeply interested.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. DENISON.

HIS GRACE

THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

[Enclosure in No. 2.]

DESPATCH sent to the Governors of Victoria, Tasmania, South Australia, New Zealand, and Queensland.

Government House,Sydney, 12 December, 1859.

SIR,

I forward herewith a copy of a Despatch which I have just received from His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, enclosing copies of a communication addressed by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Agent appointed by the Colony of New South Wales to negotiate the arrangements required for the establishment of a second line of Steam Postal Communication viâ Panama. From the enclosed documents it would appear that the general question of Steam Postal Communication has been submitted for the consideration of a Select Committee of the House of Commons, and, as this Committee cannot commence its deliberations until after the meeting of Parliament, a favorable opportunity would seem to be afforded to the Australian Colonies of bringing under the consideration of the Imperial Government those defects in the existing system of Steam Postal Communication which lessen the advantages which they have a right to expect to derive from it, and also those additional facilities for communicating with other parts of the world which it might be desirable to engraft upon our general Postal scheme.

I propose in this communication to lay before you the views of the Government of New South Wales with relation to the general question of Steam Postal Communication, trusting that these will be found to harmonize with those of your Government, and, if so, that that you will bring them under the notice of the Secretary of State, or empower me to do so, in order to their submission for the consideration of the Select Committee of the House of Commons.

The principles upon which the Government of New South Wales is disposed to have all the arrangements for the conveyance of the Mails to and from England, are—

- 1st.—That the Contract for this purpose should have reference solely to the conveyance of the Mail, and should not embody any arrangement involving extra payment for the accommodation of passengers.
- 2nd.—That, subject to the conditions required for the most speedy conveyance of the Mails, the cheapest routes should be adopted.

These principles, if applied to the existing line of communication viâ Suez, would indicate the advisability of altering the present route viâ Mauritius, and of reverting to the original line viâ Ceylon; they would also require that there should not be a separate line from Point de Galle to England, but that the line from Australia should merge into the great line from India and China.

It seems to the Government of New South Wales that the money expended in running two lines of steamers parallel to each other from Ceylon to England, when the single line already in existence is amply sufficient to convey the Mails, is altogether wasted. The only purpose which this second line is calculated to answer, is that of securing certain conveniences to passengers to and from Australia; but this does not appear to the Government of New South Wales to be a legitimate reason for imposing upon these Colonies, and upon the Mother Country, an additional subsidy of from £80,000 to £100,000 per annum; it is, in point of fact, a payment by the community to the Company of from £40 to £50 for each passenger conveyed.

Should the Australian Line be made a branch of the Great Eastern Line of Steam Communication, it is probable that the subsidy required would not exceed £90,000 or £100,000 per annum, and the payments made by these Colonies, including their share of the postage from Point de Galle to England, would not be more than from £50,000 to £55,000 per annum, instead of upwards of £90,000.

The question of a second Monthly Mail has commended itself to the Government of New South Wales, and appears to deserve the attention of the other Australian Colonies; it seems desirable that this second line should proceed by way of Panama, as by such an arrangement the rising Colony of New Zealand would, without any inconvenience to the Australian Colonies, be placed upon an equal footing with these, so far at least as regards the Monthly Post. By the adoption of the Panama route for a second line, the Australian Colonies would be placed in direct and rapid communication with the States of North and South America, with several of which an extensive trade has already sprung up.

With reference, however, to this line, it is the opinion of the Government of New South Wales that it should terminate at the Isthmus of Panama, and that advantage should be taken of the existing lines of Steam Communication for the conveyance of letters from Panama to England and America. Under such an arrangement it seems probable that a subsidy of £120,000 would be amply sufficient to remunerate a Company for the risk and expense of conveying a Monthly Mail from Panama to Australia, in which case the whole cost to the Colonies of a communication with England, twice in the month, would be but little in excess of the amount now paid for the Monthly Mail Service.

It is possible that the Government of South Australia may not consider the advantage to that Colony of the Panama Line as commensurate with the expense to be incurred in its establishment. It is also possible that the Government of New Zealand would not, were this Panama Line once in operation, wish to continue its contribution towards the line viâ Suez. Should this be the case, the Government of New South Wales would be prepared to recommend to the Legislature such an additional appropriation towards the subsidy, to be paid by the Colonies, as would cover its share of the deficiency thus created.

Trusting that these views of a question so important to the welfare of these Colonies will meet with your favourable consideration.

I am, &c.,

W. DENISON.

Auckland, New Zealand,

27 December, 1859.

SIR,

In the absence of His Excellency Colonel Gore Brown, I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, detailing the principles upon which your Government is disposed to enter into arrangements for the conveyance of the Mails to and from England.

I have referred your communication, with its enclosures, to the responsible Ministers of this Colony, who have requested me to inform your Excellency, that the Government of New Zealand coincide so generally in the views expressed in your letter as to ensure its cordial co-operation with the Government of New South Wales with respect to the whole question of the Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and the Australian Colonies, including New Zealand.

No. 4.

THE GOVERNOR OF VICTORIA to THE GOVERNOR OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

Government Offices, Melbourne,

11 January, 1860.

SIR,

I lost no time in submitting your Excellency's Circular Despatch, of the 12th ultimo, respecting the question of Steam Postal Communication with Great Britain, for the consideration of my Responsible Advisers, and in urging especially upon their attention the desirableness of some definite expression of opinion, on the part of the Victorian Government, in regard to the oft-mooted project of a second monthly service by way of Panama.

2. To the establishment of such a line I expressed myself, as I have ever done, favorably disposed, on grounds both of Imperial policy and of convenience to the general trade of the Australian Colonies; though I thought the estimate put forward as to its cost too low, and could not concur as to the advantages anticipated from conducting the service by means of branch steamers in place of "through lines," believing that it would prove impossible to secure the punctual transmission of Mails under the former system, and that the diminution under it of receipts from passengers and freight would tend to render it more expensive proportionately to the postal facilities afforded.

3. I have now the honor to forward, for the information of the Government of New South Wales, copy of a Minute in reply to my own from the Chief Secretary of Victoria, from which your Excellency will perceive that, in the name of his Cabinet, Mr. Nicholson declines to ask the Legislature of this Colony to increase the large amount already appropriated to the Steam Postal Service, except it be for the purpose of perfecting the present monthly line via Suez, which is considered to possess decided advantages, as ensuring more speedy and regular delivery of Mails than could be accomplished by the Panama route, and to effect indeed all that is necessary at present in the way of inter-communication between Great Britain and Australia.

4. I am afraid that so positive a refusal on the part of this Colony to join in the Panama scheme will be extremely distasteful to the people of New South Wales, particularly as it appears that an offer has recently been made by the Australasian and Pacific Company to run steamers from the American Isthmus, in connexion with a projected Foreign line, for a subsidy which, though considerably larger than that calculated on in your Excellency's Despatch, may be deemed within the compass of the united resources of these Colonies.

5. I earnestly trust, however, that no feeling of disappointment at the probable temporary postponement of the realization of its views will induce the Government of New South Wales to separate itself from the other Australian Governments in so important a matter as their continued joint contribution towards the Suez Line.

6. That a single line of Steam Postal Communication is as much as, under present circumstances, can be supported may be inferred from the fact that an increase in this contribution is about to be demanded by the Peninsular and Oriental Company; and although it may be perfectly true, that if Victoria stood alone in co-operating with the Mother Country to uphold it her Parliament would vote the sum required, it would be manifestly unjust, supposing the Suez Line to be really the best, that she should be called on to pay more than her fair quota towards it.

7. The superiority of this long established route over all others cannot I imagine be disputed. The intended change of the intermediate stopping place from the Mauritius to Galle, in March next, will once more render commercial relations with India and China direct and speedy, whilst the completion of the Electric Telegraph to Galle, by the laying of the Submarine Cable between Aden and Kurrachee, now actually in progress, will bring all these Colonies within three weeks intelligence of England during the course of the present year.

8. When this can be punctually relied on every month it will be time enough, it strikes me, to discuss further the practicability of a bi-monthly service.

I have, &c.,

HENRY BARKLY.

HIS EXCELLENCY

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.,

GOVERNOR GENERAL, &c., &c., &c.

[Enclosure in No. 4.]

MEMO. by the Honorable the Chief Secretary.

It appears undesirable to attempt a second Monthly Mail communication with England via Panama. It appears doubtful if the communication between Panama and the Australian Colonies can be maintained for £120,000 per year (His Excellency the Governor General's estimate); and even could this be accomplished, special provision must be made for continuing the communication from Panama to England, otherwise great delay and irregularities must ensue. If England is expected to support the latter portion, then it is probable the greater part, if not the whole amount chargeable between Panama and the Australian Colonies, must be paid by the Colonies.

So far as this Colony (Victoria) is concerned, I consider the present route via Suez has decided advantages. We may expect a more speedy and regular delivery of Mails by it than can be accomplished by the Panama route, and cannot, therefore, ask the Legislature of this Colony to contribute funds towards the latter.

This Colony would be willing to co-operate with the other Australian Colonies for the purpose of perfecting, so far as possible, the present Mail communication via Suez; and I think the route via Galle has decided advantages over that via Mauritius, inasmuch as it gives speedy communication with India and China.

The importance of regular Mails to and from India, China, and the East generally, is greatly felt, and the trade between these Colonies and the East may be expected to increase as our population increases.

It is also very desirable that the calling at Nepean Bay (the Homeward Mail, perhaps, excepted) should be discontinued, as it delays the delivery of the Mails at all the other Australian Colonies, and has given great dissatisfaction to the commercial portion of this community, which has been frequently expressed through the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce.

I attach, for His Excellency's information, a copy of certain Resolutions agreed to by the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce on the 3rd September, 1858. I think that, for a speedy and regular communication with England, a through service is desirable; and, if so, the passenger traffic is an advantage, and the passengers' fares, which are considerable, tend to reduce the subsidy which, without the passenger traffic, would most likely be considerably more than it now is.

A through, speedy, regular Monthly Mail communication with England, via Suez, appears to be all that is necessary at present, and the Cabinet will not be justified in asking the Legislature of this Colony to increase the large amount appropriated for this purpose, except for the purpose of perfecting the present monthly service.

The Cabinet concur with me in this Minute.

29/12/59.

[Enclosure

[Sub-Enclosure in No. 4.]

*As the result of 'their consideration' of the subject assigned to them, your Committee have to report:—

1. That they are of opinion that the time has not arrived for the Australian Colonies to undertake the conveyance of the Mails, either for the whole or for a part of the distance to England.

2. That the interests of this Colony demand 'the establishment of a through line of communication via Suez to England.

†3. That, in the altered position of the Postal question in these Colonies, your Committee are of opinion that the Chamber should urge upon the Government the desirableness of this Colony undertaking to pay a moiety of the subsidy requisite for the monthly conveyance of the Mails via Suez; reserving power to recover from the Governments of the adjacent Colonies payment of their proportions, rateably with the advantage they derive from a participation in the same.

4. That in any Contract for the Postal Service, it should be stipulated that the Company undertaking it should make provision for spare vessels at the termini. And your Committee, believing that the length of the voyage between Melbourne and Suez renders it impossible to maintain the perfect efficiency of the vessels throughout, recommend that a steamer should be kept in readiness at Galle, to which the inward and outward Mails and passengers should be transhipped.

5. That an alteration should be made in the dates at present fixed for the departure of the Homeward Mail, in order to afford the neighboring Colonies sufficient interval to reply to the inward correspondence.

Chairman of Committee.

SIR H. E. F. YOUNG, HOBART TOWN, to GOVERNOR GENERAL, SYDNEY.

Sir Henry Young informs Sir W. Denison, in reply to his Despatch, that the Government of Tasmania would be glad to see the Panama route opened, but decline to contribute any part of the cost. Preference is given to increased Postal communication by Melbourne Bi-Monthly Branch Line between Australia and Point de Galle, in place of the present Line to Mauritius.

The delay caused by any non-arrival of the Branch Mail at Galle to catch the Indian Mail would be reduced by a Bi-Monthly Mail, so as in no case to exceed a fortnight, and the cost would not much exceed that at present incurred.

MR. EDWARD HAMILTON to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

5, Cannon-street,
London, 17 October, 1859.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to transmit herewith, copies of a correspondence relative to the Panama Service, between the agents of Mr. Howard (who is connected with Messrs. Lever & Co., the contractors for the Galway Line to North America), Her Majesty's Treasury and Colonial Department, and myself as the representative of the Government of New South Wales.

The

* This was agreed to on account of a feeling that we had steamers fit to do the work to Galle. The "City of Sydney" had just made what was considered a successful trip.

W. N.

† This resolution was agreed to because Sydney was urging the Panama route; and the Chamber of Commerce were apprehensive that the Home Government would take no action, unless this Colony became responsible for a moiety of the subsidy.

W. N.

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury, Mr. S. Laing, M.P., with whom I had an interview at his own request on Saturday, the 15th instant, stated so positively that, under the advice of the present Government, the Treasury would not give any contribution in money towards a new Postal subsidy, that I anticipate no change of intention from the appeal made in my letter to Mr. W. H. Stephenson of the 17th instant. Under these circumstances it is not necessary that I should enter into any discussion of Mr. Howard's proposal, or of the ability of the parties with whom he is associated, to establish and maintain an Ocean Steam Service surrounded with so many difficulties, both in point of distance and arrangement, as that between Great Britain and Sydney via Panama.

* * * * *

After an attentive perusal of your official communication to Mr. Merewether, dated 14th of June, 1859, and your private letter to him of the same date received since his departure, it appears to me doubtful whether the executive power which I was only authorized to exercise in the event of his death or incapacity to act is not at an end, and the functions of myself and the Committee for the present limited to the communication to you of the views of Her Majesty's Government, and of any circumstances bearing upon the main question. I have sought the advice of the Committee on this matter, and though they passed a resolution unhesitatingly affirming that the powers originally entrusted to Mr. Merewether are now vested in me, I shall feel obliged if you will advise me how to act in the event of any eligible proposal being submitted to our consideration. My own opinion rests upon the ground that you appear to think that until the two principal Colonies of Australia have come to some mutual understanding as to the two Postal routes, any further action would only increase the complications already existing, and that it would be unwise to incur any separate responsibility for the Panama Service until you are released from your assumed liability on the Suez contract. I also observe that you intend to refer the whole question to the consideration of the Local Legislature, and that you will not take upon yourself the responsibility of anticipating their decision on a question so important.

On the 13th instant I had the pleasure of reading Sir William Denison's last Despatch on this subject. His Excellency's proposal that half the subsidy for each route should be separately guaranteed by New South Wales and Victoria would, I am informed, be acceptable to the Lords of the Treasury, and there can be no doubt that this is the only feasible arrangement where so many interests are involved, and until some provision is made for the discussion and settlement of inter-colonial questions.

I have made inquiries as to the views entertained by the present Government as to Postal subsidies in general,—whether they object only to the unconstitutional mode in which these contracts have been entered into by the Executive without reference to the House of Commons, and the extravagance of the aid granted, or to the principle of subsidizing the Ocean Postal Service; and I am told that they are opposed to the whole system, and hope to get rid of it gradually, or to reduce it within very narrow limits. It is not, therefore, probable that a demand for a second subsidized service to Australia will be entertained, unless you take up the question warmly, and enlist on your side the support of those who now sit on the opposition benches, and take a more liberal view of this postal question than the present Government.

There can be no difficulty in making out a very strong case in favor of the claims of New South Wales, and I beg to suggest that a statement of them be addressed by your Legislative Assembly to the House of Commons, which is not indisposed to force a compliance with reasonable requests upon an economical Government.

I am, &c.,

EDWD. HAMILTON.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,

Sydney, New South Wales.

STEAM POSTAL COMMUNICATION.

9

[Enclosure 1 in No. 6.]

32, Upper Brook-street,
London (W.), 17 October, 1859.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 13th instant, in which you inquire whether I am in a condition to accept, on behalf of the Colony of New South Wales, the offer made to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, by Mr. Howard, through his Agents, Messrs. Hunt and Elsdale, in their letter dated 30th September, 1859.

In answer, I beg to state that as it is intimated in your letter now under reply, that their Lordships, pending the reference to the House of Commons, do not feel themselves at liberty to grant any pecuniary subsidy towards the Steam Postal Service viâ Panama, beyond the giving up of the Ocean Postage, Mr. Howard's proposal cannot be entertained. For in the New South Wales Act, No. 15, 22 Victoria, appropriating annually, on certain conditions, the sum of £50,000 for a Panama service, it is expressly stipulated that no contract shall be entered into on behalf of the Colony of New South Wales, unless one-half the amount which may be paid to the contracting parties shall be paid or contributed by the Government of Great Britain.

The terms of Mr. Howard's offer are so moderate that I venture to hope that their Lordships will review their decision, if it is found that he is prepared to organize the service at once, and to carry it out efficiently—for it is hardly consistent either with the promises made to New South Wales by Her Majesty's Government, or with the liberal spirit in which questions affecting the commercial interests of Great Britain and the Australian Colonies have hitherto been treated, to refuse all assistance on the ground of a resolution which seems to be aimed more against the extravagance than against the principle of ocean subsidies.

In this instance the contribution required from the Imperial Treasury is only £25,000, and there can be no doubt that a considerable portion of this sum would be re-imbursed by the increased inland correspondence which a second mail per month to and from the Australian Colonies would give rise to.

I shall esteem it a favor if you will desire Mr. Howard to place himself in communication with me on that subject.

I am, &amp;c.,

EDWARD HAMILTON,

(On behalf of the Government of New South Wales.)

W. H. Stephenson, Esq.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 6.]

Treasury Chambers,
11 October, 1859.

Sir,

I am desired by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit, for the information of His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, the enclosed copy of a letter from Messrs. Hunt and Elsdale, and Messrs. Vallance and Vallance, together with a copy of their Lordships' reply, on the subject of the tender of Mr. Howard, for the performance of the Mail service to Australia viâ Panama; and I am desired to state that My Lords would be glad to be informed whether there are any persons in this country who have adequate authority to act in this affair on the part of the Australian Colonies—or any of them—so as to warrant their Lordships in proceeding further with the consideration of this offer, as they would be disposed to do if satisfied that it had the approval of the proper Colonial authorities, and that the risk of the Mother Country would be limited to the Ocean postage.

I am, &amp;c.,

GEO. A. HAMILTON.

H. Merivale, Esq.,
&c., &c.

[Sub-enclosure 1 in No. 6.]

London, 30 September, 1859.

Sir,

We have to acknowledge your letter of the 28th instant, stating that, in the present state of the question of Postal contracts, in reference to the inquiry which had been instituted by the House of Commons, the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury do not feel themselves in a position to enter into new arrangements for the Australian Mail service.

In reply, we are requested to state that Mr. Howard, yielding to the request of many influential merchants connected with the Australian Colonies, and being in possession of ships in complete preparation for sea, will commence a monthly line at once, viâ Panama to Australia, provided the Government will pay him the subsidy granted by the Colony, namely, £50,000 a-year, and the amount of postage which this new line of communication will produce.

Mr. Howard proposes this arrangement as a temporary service only, to be entirely subject to whatever decision Her Majesty's Ministers may come to, on receiving the Report of the Committee, which, he is informed, it is intended to re-appoint next Session.

It will be manifest that the interests of the Colonies must suffer materially by the delay which will be the result of postponing any service via Panama, until late in the ensuing year; and the offer now made has suggested itself to Mr. Howard as a means of affording early accommodation to the Colonists and our Home merchants.

Should the Government accept this offer the line could be opened forthwith.

We are, &c.,

HUNT and ELSDALE,

Treasury Chambers,
11 October, 1859.

Gentlemen,

I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury the letter, addressed to this Board by yourselves and Messrs. Vallance and Vallance, further relative to the Tender of Mr. Howard for the performance of the Mail service to Australia via Panama, and I am desired by My Lords to observe to you in reply, that your proposal rests entirely on the assumption that the Australian Colonies, or some of them, are prepared at once to enter into a definite engagement to pay at the rate of £50,000 a-year, without any corresponding subsidy from the Imperial Government, for a temporary service. On this point My Lords have no information, and they have, therefore, forwarded your letter to the Colonial Office, and I am to suggest that you had better place yourselves in communication with the authorities of that department, as it would be impossible for My Lords, while questions relating to Mail Contracts at the cost of this country have in general been suspended for the reasons stated in their Lordship's former letter, to enter upon a consideration of the present offer, until they are satisfied by the proper department that the Colonies really desire to enter into this provisional arrangement at their own expense, and have given sufficient authority to enable the Imperial Government to act in the matter on their behalf.

I am to add, with a view to avoid further misunderstandings, that My Lords understand your offer as including the service across the Atlantic, as well as across the Pacific, and that the Postage for which you ask, applies to the Ocean postage only.

I am, &c.,

GEO. A. HAMILTON.

[Enclosure 3 in No. 6.]

Downing-street,
13 October, 1859.

Sir,

I am directed by the Duke of Newcastle, in answer to your letter of the 11th of this month, enclosing copy of one from Messrs. Hunt and Elsdale, and of the reply of the Secretary of the Treasury thereto, to request that you will inform their Lordships that Mr. Merewether was appointed Agent in the matter of the Postal communication by the Government of New South Wales, in the manner notified to your department in letters from this office of the 23rd February and 16th March last. I am to subjoin copy of a further letter from Mr. Merewether, informing this department of his leaving for Australia, and of the substitution of Mr. Hamilton for himself. But the Duke is not sufficiently informed of the extent of the powers conferred on Mr. Hamilton by the New South Wales Government to be able to answer their Lordships' question, whether Mr. Hamilton is authorized to entertain such a proposal as that of Mr. Howard. He has accordingly caused a letter to be addressed to Mr. Hamilton on the subject, placing that gentleman in direct communication with their Lordships.

The Duke of Newcastle is not aware that any Agent has been empowered to deal with this matter by the Government of any other Australian Colony. But all information which his Grace possesses on the subject has been already communicated to their Lordships.

I am, &c.,

G. A. Hamilton, Esq.

HERMAN MERIVALE.

Sir,

Having been informed that you are authorized by the Colony of New South Wales to act on behalf of that Colony in the matter of the Mail Steam Service in the absence of Mr. E. Merewether, who has left for Australia, the Duke of Newcastle has directed me to transmit to you copy of the enclosed correspondence between the Treasury and this department, respecting the offer from Mr. Howard for the temporary performance of that service via Panama.

I am to request that you will communicate direct with their Lordships on the subject.

I am, &c.,
HERMAN MERIVALE.

[Enclosure 5 in No. 6.]

Treasury Chambers,
15 October, 1859.

Sir,

I am desired by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you that their Lordships are informed, by a letter from the Colonial Office, that you have been deputed to act for the Colony of New South Wales on the subject of the Postal arrangements between this country and the Colony, and that you have been put in possession of the correspondence which has recently passed with reference to an offer made by Mr. Howard, of Manchester, to perform a provisional Mail service to Sydney via Panama.

I am to state that My Lords would be glad to learn from you whether you are in a position to accept this offer on the part of the New South Wales Government, and that their Lordships will be ready to afford the aid of this Government as far as it is in their power.

You must, however, clearly understand that, in the present position of the question of Ocean Postal Contracts, with reference to the inquiry instituted by the House of Commons, My Lords will not feel themselves at liberty to grant any pecuniary subsidy for the purpose in question, beyond the giving up of the Ocean postage.

I am to suggest to you that it may be desirable for you to place yourself in direct communication on this matter with Mr. Howard or his agents.

I am, &c.,
W. H. STEPHENSON.

Mr. Edward Hamilton.

No. 7.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY to EDWARD HAMILTON, ESQ.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,

Sir,

13 February, 1860.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th of October last, transmitting copies of a correspondence between the agents of Mr. Howard (who is stated to be connected with Messrs. Lever & Co., the contractors for the Galway line to North America), Her Majesty's Treasury and the Colonial Department, and yourself, as the representative of the Government of the New South Wales, on the subject of a proposal made by that gentleman to establish and maintain an Ocean Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and Sydney via Panama. I have at the same time to apologize for the delay in replying to your communication, which has arisen from the change which has taken place in the Administration, and the consequent pressure of many important matters on the attention of the Government. I have also been favored by Mr. Cowper with extracts from your private letters to him, respecting the present state of the question relating to the Postal Service between England and Australia.

2. With respect to the proposal of Mr. Howard, it may be stated that the decision of Her Majesty's Government not to take any further steps for the execution of a Postal Service via Panama, pending the inquiry by the Select Committee of the House of Commons, would of itself prevent, for the present, his offer from being favorably entertained, inasmuch as the amount appropriated by the local Act for this purpose is only available provided a subsidy, to the extent of one-half the sum to be paid to any contracting parties, is contributed by the Government of Great Britain. The Government of this Colony is not, therefore, for this reason, as well as for other considerations, which it is not necessary to specify, disposed to treat treat with Mr. Howard for the performance of the service. An offer of a similar character has been received from the Australasian and Pacific Company, to which an answer to the same effect has been given.

See Enclosure
in No. 2.

3. The decision of Her Majesty's Government above adverted to, seemed to afford an opportunity for further consultation with the other Australian Colonies, on the subject of the Ocean Postal arrangements,—and the Governor General accordingly addressed a Despatch to the Governments of Victoria, Tasmania, South Australia, Queensland, and New Zealand, stating the views of this Government, and inviting their co-operation for securing, in the manner pointed out, a communication with England twice in each month. Of this Despatch I enclose a copy for your information, together with copies of the replies which have been received from Victoria, Tasmania, and New Zealand. Answers from the other Colonies have not yet reached Sydney.

4. You will observe that the Government of Victoria decline to enter into the arrangements suggested for the establishment of the Panama Line; and the feeling of this Colony appears to be unfavorable to the acceptance of the offer which has been made by the Peninsular and Oriental Company for a fortnightly service by way of Suez on an increased subsidy. In this feeling the present Government of this Colony participate; and, as there is evidently a disposition, on the part of Victoria, to undertake the entire Colonial cost of the line by Galle, it is probable that the result of the present negotiation will be, that New South Wales, with the co-operation of New Zealand, and probably of Queensland, and, it is hoped, in concert with Her Majesty's Government, will take up the Service via Panama; leaving Victoria, Tasmania, and South Australia, to conduct that by way of Galle. But it is hoped that, by a friendly arrangement for reciprocating the conveyance and delivery of letters by either line, such an agreement may ultimately be made, as will reduce the cost to the Governments responsible for the subsidies.

5. The Government of New South Wales have under consideration the measures which it will be advisable to adopt under the circumstances in which this question is now placed, with a view to a definite proposal being submitted to the local Parliament, and whatever may be decided upon will be duly communicated to you.

6. I take this opportunity to express to you the warmest acknowledgments of this Government for the information which you have communicated and the services which you have rendered in promoting an object calculated to advance the welfare of these Colonies; and I request that you will have the goodness to continue to act as the representative of New South Wales, in conjunction with the Committee of Advice. For this purpose you will be considered to be invested with the same authority which the Government themselves have for negotiating for this service, which, however, is at present limited to the powers given by the local Act as before stated.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD HAMILTON, ESQ.,
5, Cannon-street, London.

No. 1.

GOVERNOR OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Government House, Adelaide,

29 February, 1860.

SIR,

1. I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your Excellency's Despatch of the 12th December, explaining the views of the New South Wales Government in reference to Steam Postal Communication between these Colonies and Great Britain.

2. I have delayed replying earlier to that Despatch that my Ministry might consider the subject in all its bearings, and to ascertain how far it might be possible, consistently with a due regard to the interests of this province, to adopt a policy harmonizing with that of New South Wales, in reference to the establishment of a Second Postal Route viâ Panama.

3. Nevertheless, though this Government is fully sensible of the great advantage which would attend a more united action of all the Australian Governments on matters involving interests common to all, it is impossible not to feel that many such general questions are seriously complicated by the very different degrees in which those several interests are affected in the case of each Colony. This conviction has, no doubt, induced you correctly to anticipate that this Government would not consider the benefits it might derive from a second Postal Route viâ Panama as commensurate with the expense to be incurred in its establishment.

4. This Government, however, as a proof of its anxiety to promote the views of your Excellency, and of the Government of New South Wales, will be prepared, in the event of the establishment of a Second Postal Route viâ Panama, to collect the postage on letters transmitted by that route and to account for the same either to the New South Wales Government or the proper authorities in England, as may hereafter be arranged. In this way, probably, South Australia will be enabled to contribute to the maintenance of that route in proportion to the benefit derived therefrom.

5. I avail myself of this opportunity to express my concurrence generally in the views which you have laid down regarding the most economical mode of establishing and maintaining lines of Postal Communication with Europe.

I have, &c.,

RICHARD GRAVES MACDONALD,
Governor.

No. 2.

HENRY PARKES, ESQ., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 10 March, 1860.

SIR,

I beg to bring under the notice of yourself and colleagues the present state of the question of Steam Communication between Sydney and Panama, with a statement of recent circumstances that in some degree have imparted a new character to that question.

Some short time ago, a Committee was appointed by the Sydney Chamber of Commerce to consider the proposal of the P. & O. Company to establish a fortnightly Steam Line viâ Ceylon and Suez, and that Committee reported in favor of the relinquishment of the Asiatic route, and the concentration of the efforts of this Colony in establishing Steam Communication viâ the American Isthmus, making the Port of Sydney the Australian terminus.

terminus. A petition was prepared by the Committee embodying this view of the matter, which, at the meeting of the Chamber convened to consider the report, was adopted by a majority of 32 to 2, Mr. Ingelow and Mr. Alexander Campbell being the dissentients. As one of the Members for Sydney I presented this petition to the Assembly; I then gave notice of a motion reaffirming my former resolutions as adopted by the late Assembly in August, 1858, but embracing other resolutions added with the intention of giving greater scope of action to the Executive. On the 21st of February, the day when this motion came on for consideration, I presented another petition, signed by 998 inhabitants of Sydney, including nearly all the leading mercantile firms, praying for the "immediate establishment of Steam Communication via Panama," and that this Colony may be placed in the position of "Sole Australian Contractors" for the Service. My motion, after a lengthened debate, was carried by a majority of 22 to 14. As the division took place after midnight, many Members had left the House, or the majority I believe would have been more decisive. On the 28th of February, a message was sent down from His Excellency the Governor General declining to act upon the resolutions of the Assembly, and on the same day I gave notice of a motion to take the message into consideration, which still stands in my name on the Business Paper. With the view of saving your time, I enclose herewith copies of the petition from merchants and other citizens of Sydney, of the Proceedings of the Assembly when my resolutions were adopted, and of his Excellency's Message.

Having placed before you the case as defined by recent circumstances, I beg to inquire, on behalf of the large and influential body of my constituents who have manifested so active an interest in the matter, whether the present Government intend to take any immediate steps to carry out the views of Parliament and of the people of the Colony (so far as they have been expressed) on this question. If your Government should, as I feel a confident expectation you will, determine to act upon the resolutions of the Assembly, I would respectfully but strongly urge the desirableness of your communicating by the "Northam" your intentions to the persons charged with the management of this business in England.

Before leaving the subject I beg to be permitted to point out that the resolutions as passed by the Assembly give to the Executive, in the following important respects, a greater freedom of action than was possessed under the Act of 1858 in accomplishing the great object in contemplation:—

- 1st. The Government can contract for a line of steamers between Sydney and Panama without regard to a new connecting line on the other side of the Isthmus, provided that the postal delivery is guaranteed all through, which, I believe, might be easily done by one of the lines already in existence. The Act of 1858 enables the Government to contract only for a through line.
- 2nd. The Government is released from the absolute condition of the Imperial Government paying half the subsidy, which, though not requisite even to meet the intentions of the Legislature in any contract such as is indicated above, would by the Act of 1858 preclude this Colony from entering into such contract, however favorable it might be.
- 3rd. Though the Assembly, by the third resolution, expresses its willingness to concur in the passing of an Act embodying certain express conditions, it does not say that it would not agree to other conditions if their necessity should be shewn by sufficient reasons.

As I intend leaving town on Tuesday, and shall be absent from Sydney some days, an early acknowledgment of this communication will oblige me.

I am, &c.,

HENRY PARKES.

THE UNDER SECRETARY to HENRY PARKES, ESQ., M.P.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 13 March, 1860.*

SIR,

I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to acknowledge the receipt, yesterday, of your letter of the 10th instant, in which you advert to the present state of the question of Steam Communication between Sydney and Panama; and suggest that if the Government propose to act upon the Resolutions of the Legislative Assembly recently passed on the subject, some communication of their intentions should be made to England by the "Northam."

2. The Colonial Secretary desires me to state, in reply, that the Government are not prepared at this moment to make any specific pledge as to the measures which will be adopted with reference to the Panama route; but that the subject of Steam Postal Communication with the Mother Country will immediately engage the attention of his colleagues and himself.

They are fully sensible of the advantages which the Colony will derive from the establishment of a line via Panama, and no time will be lost in taking such further steps as may be considered the most likely to secure its speedy attainment.

With reference to previous communications on the subject of the Steam Postal Service between the Australasian Colonies and Great Britain, I do myself the honor to transmit, for the information of the Government of New South Wales, the copy of a memorandum explanatory of the views of this Government with respect to it; as also the copy of a further memorandum, specially referring to the proposal made by the Peninsular and Oriental Company to substitute Ceylon for Mauritius in the line of route, an additional subsidy of twenty-five thousand pounds per annum being paid to them for conducting the Australian Mail Service.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 4.]

*Colonial Secretary's Office,

Steam Postal Service.

MINISTERS have had under their consideration various Despatches from Sir E. B. Lytton and the Duke of Newcastle, as also a communication, of the 12th ultimo, from Sir William Denison, relative to the question of the Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and the Australian Colonies, and especially referring to the establishment of a line of Steam Postal Communication via Panama.

It is with great regret that this Government has become aware that the measures initiated by the Lords of the Treasury in April last, for instituting the latter service, have not been proceeded with, nor are they aware of any circumstances which have occurred since tenders for that service were invited and received which ought to have prevented the conclusion of a contract on the conditions laid down in the Treasury Minute of the 19th April, 1859.

The advantages certain to result to the Australian Colonies from a service by Panama, which would both afford the means of a fortnightly communication with Great Britain and open up an intercourse with North and South America, are so obvious, and have been so readily admitted, alike by the Colonies and by the Imperial Government, as to render it unnecessary, unnecessary, on the present occasion, to adduce arguments in support of it beyond what present themselves from the experience of the working of the existing service. From this experience it has become evident that, in so far as New Zealand is concerned, any service viâ Suez must, however well conducted, be infinitely inferior as a postal medium to one by Panama. In illustration of this it is sufficient to state that under no circumstances can the letters from London which may arrive at Sydney for New Zealand, viâ Suez, in any month, be replied to by the return mail leaving Sydney for London on the same month, while by the Panama route, which would involve calling at New Zealand both on the outward and homeward passage, ample time would be afforded for replies. This consideration alone would recommend that New Zealand should co-operate with New South Wales in the endeavor to obtain a service by way of Panama. Ministers also entirely concur with the Government of New South Wales in believing that the cost of the Suez line would be materially diminished, while its efficiency as a Mail Service would be unimpaired, by the substitution of Ceylon for Mauritius as the line of route, and by the employment of vessels with a view to the conveyance of mails rather than passengers. A saving of time, averaging about twenty-four hours in each voyage, might also be effected if the Suez steamers, instead of going up to Williamstown, were to land and receive at Queenscliffe the mails to and from Victoria and Tasmania.

STEAM POSTAL SERVICE.

The propositions of the Government of New South Wales will accordingly receive every support from this Government, which will, in the approaching Session of the New Zealand Legislature, propose that this Colony should contribute to the cost of the Australian Steam Service on the following conditions, viz. :—

1. That, with respect to either the Suez or the Panama Service, one moiety of the whole cost is to be borne by Great Britain.
2. That, of the whole amount of subsidy payable by the Colonies, New Zealand is to contribute such proportion as the number of New Zealand letters received and sent bears to the whole number of letters conveyed.
3. That in the event of the Panama Line being brought into operation, and any of the Australian Colonies refusing to contribute towards its cost, it may in that case, be optional with New Zealand to decline to contribute any longer to the cost of the Suez Line.

E. W. STAFFORD.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 4.]

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 1 March, 1860.

REFERRING to the Duke of Newcastle's Despatch of the 1st December last, with its enclosures, on the subject of a proposal to substitute Ceylon for Mauritius in the line of route for the Australian Mail Service—an increase of Twenty-five thousand pounds being made to the subsidy now paid to the Peninsular and Oriental Company for that Service—it is observed that the line of route now proposed is the same as that recommended in Mr. Stafford's Memorandum of the 24th January last. The change proposed will, therefore, in this respect, it is believed, prove beneficial.

As regards the additional amount asked for by the Peninsular and Oriental Company, it does not appear—if the service is carried out mainly in conformity with the propositions of the Government of New South Wales, referred to in Mr. Stafford's Memorandum of the 24th January—that it would warrant any additional payment on account of it; on the contrary, a saving of expense, as between such a Service and that which now subsists, appears probable. The Government of New Zealand cannot, therefore, without further information of the cost of the Service after the new line has been tested, pledge itself to propose to the Legislature to vote unconditionally any addition to the amount for which New Zealand is now liable, but is prepared to recommend that such additional amount be authorized if it should subsequently appear to the Government of New Zealand, and that of New South Wales (which has an almost identical interest with New Zealand in this question, and with which this Government desires to act in concert as regards it), that a further payment by these two Colonies was absolutely necessary in order to maintain their Steam Mail Service with Great Britain.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, New South Wales,
16 April, 1860.

SIR,

Adverting to the communication made to you by my predecessor, on the 13th of February last, on the subject of the Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and the Australian Colonies, including New Zealand, I have now the honor to inform you that the state of the question was again taken into consideration by the present Government soon after they assumed office in the early part of last month.

Laid before the Assembly on the 5th April, 1860.

2. Their views, both with respect to the performance of the service by way of Suez and by Panama, are stated in the Minute of the Executive Council, of which I enclose a copy for your information; and a copy of this document having been laid before the Legislative Assembly, it is proposed, as soon as the state of public business will admit, to invite the concurrence of the local Parliament in these views, and to introduce a Bill to authorize the Government to negotiate further with Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of the Panama route, and pledging the Colony to contribute one-half of the necessary subsidy for a line in connection with the existing service to the West India Islands and Chagres.

No. 6.

EDWARD HAMILTON, ESQ., to THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

5, Cannon-street,

London, 18 April, 1860.

SIR,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 13 February, 1860, together with some printed correspondence relating to the question of Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and Australia. From your letter I gather that, though the views of your Government were not at that date fully matured, it was finally decided that New South Wales would not be a party to any arrangement in which a service viâ Panama should not be provided; and that it is probable that the result of negotiations then pending between the various Australian Governments would be, that the Southern Colonies would provide for the Colonial cost of the service viâ Suez, and that the Eastern Colonies, including New Zealand, would take upon themselves the Colonial cost of the service viâ Panama.

Since the receipt of your letter now under reply, I have been to the Treasury, and the Colonial Office, and have gained the following information.

That during the continuance of the present contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, and so long as it is maintained on the principle of proportionate contribution by all the Colonies, the Government of Victoria is prepared to give an absolute guarantee for one moiety of the additional subsidy demanded by that Company, as necessary to meet the charges of the service, and a change of course from the route viâ Mauritius to the old route viâ Point de Galle.

That, on the termination of the present contract, the Government of Victoria will give up the through line rather than undertake the responsibility of guaranteeing the full half of the required subsidy, but authorize the Home Government to contract for a monthly branch line between Melbourne and Point de Galle, with the understanding that each party, viz., Great Britain and Victoria, shall be responsible for half the subsidy.

Having seen Sir Henry Barkly's Despatch to the Secretary of State, dated 16th February, and the Cabinet Minute of the Government of Victoria, dated the 15th of February, on which the Governor's Despatch is based, I have no hesitation about giving this information as authentic.

From the Treasury I learn that no further steps will be taken by the Government in the matter of contracts of this nature until the Committee of the House of Commons has reported; but I am assured that there is no disposition to repudiate or set on one side the engagements entered into, or the expectations held out, by the predecessors of the present Government, and that the wishes of New South Wales and New Zealand will receive full and impartial consideration.

The Government of New Zealand have written to say that they side with New South Wales, and offer to pay a portion of a Panama subsidy proportionate to their correspondence. This does not appear to me adequate, considering the enormous advantage which this service would secure for that Colony.

As to the Contract Committee of the House of Commons, now sitting, I beg to offer the following remarks. On the re-assembling of Parliament a communication was made to me me by the Treasury that it was the intention to take up the Australian services, and that Mr. Laing (the Financial Secretary of the Treasury) wished that I, and any other colonists interested in the matter, should have an opportunity of being examined. In an interview I had on that occasion with the principal Clerk of the Treasury, I stated that I could not venture to put myself forward as the representative of New South Wales, as I had received no authority to act, and was not acquainted with the views of the existing Government; but that I should not hesitate to go before the Committee and give any information respecting the practicability and advantages of the Panama line, provided it was understood that I did not appear in any official capacity; and I further suggested that Mr. Donaldson should be summoned, as the person best qualified to give information on all matters connected with the Australian Contract question.

On the day named, before commencing business, Mr. Laing, who was in the chair (in the absence of Mr. Dunlop, the member for Greenock), announced that the Committee had determined that it did not fall within the terms of the reference (a copy of which is herewith enclosed) to consider the comparative merits of different lines of communication, and that their inquiries would be solely directed to the past history of the Australian Contracts.

Under this restriction, Mr. Donaldson was examined at some length, and I feel it only due to that gentleman to say, that the Committee seemed much impressed with his evidence. It was given with a clear recollection of every fact, beginning from the first organization of the branch service between Sydney and Galle in 1851 or 1852 pointing out where the conditions of previous contracts were insufficient, how the colonists had been disappointed by gross mismanagement, and how the interests of New South Wales especially had been sacrificed by the absence of all regularity and punctuality so long as the contract was in the hands of the European and Australian Company. He also incidentally stated that the interests of the inhabitants of the last-named Colony could only be effectually secured by the establishment of a service via Panama.

I did not press my claim to be heard on Mr. Laing, as it did not appear to me that I could add anything of value to the very full evidence of Mr. Donaldson, so long as I was debarred from opening up the whole Panama question.

Since my communication to you in October last, two or three persons have called upon me, stating that Companies in which they were interested were willing to take up the Panama Service at moderate rates; but no evidence was given that any capital was subscribed, or that a Company had been duly organized. It is not therefore worth while to trouble you with an account of any of the schemes laid before me. Though I felt it more prudent to hear what the gentlemen had to say, I paid no attention, and attached no value, to their representations.

In the City of London there are many who live on prospectuses of this kind; they have plenty of large projects in view, and profess to be in a position to undertake them; but the result of inquiry generally is that no Company has been formed, and that not a farthing of capital has been subscribed.

My own opinion, which, however, is not entitled to much consideration, as I have little or no experience in these matters, is that the establishment of a Panama Service, by which I mean a Pacific Service only, will be attended with great difficulty, and will be very costly.

The last tender of the Peninsular and Oriental Company is to run vessels at the present contract speed between Sydney and Point de Galle to and fro twice a month for £205,000. The distance run over being about 254,400 miles, the rate per mile would be somewhat less than 16s. 2d. The distance from Sydney to Panama being about 8,500 miles, the whole distance run in a year under a monthly contract would be 20,400 miles, and the subsidy required at the above rate of 16s. 2d. per mile, would amount to nearly £170,000; and, considering the contractors would have to meet all the expenses incident to the opening of a new line,—that between New Zealand and Panama the islands adapted for coaling stations are but little known, and not conveniently situated,—that the service would be completely isolated, which is a drawback of a most serious nature,—and, lastly, that there is only one port for refitting—the port of Sydney, my belief is that no respectable respectable Company would face the risk without the cover of a subsidy of at least the above-named amount, and that the service would not work satisfactorily for many years.

As your Despatch now under reply was only received on Friday last, I have had no opportunity of conferring with the gentlemen with whom I am instructed to communicate on this question.

In conclusion I beg to thank you for the marked terms of courtesy in which you are pleased to acknowledge my communication of October, 1859, and to assure you that it will at all times be a pleasure to me to place my services at the disposal of a country in which I was for so many years a resident, and to which I am under the deepest obligations, both social and material.

I have, &c.,

EDWD. HAMILTON.

(DESPATCH RELATIVE TO.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

EARL CARNARVON to GOVERNOR SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.

(Circular.)

Downing-street,

12 April, 1859.

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose for your information the accompanying copy of a letter from the Treasury and of the answer from this Department, relative to the Draft Contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company for the Australian and Mauritius Mail Service.

I deferred sending out this correspondence under the impression that I should almost immediately be in a position to transmit to you the Contract itself in its formal shape. But as circumstances have accidentally delayed its final execution, I think it advisable to send you the accompanying papers, in order that you may be apprised of the progress of the matter up to the present date.

I have, &amp;c.,

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.,

[Enclosure in the foregoing.]

Treasury Chambers,

17 December, 1858.

SIR,

I am desired by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit, for the information of Secretary Sir E. B. Lytton, the enclosed Draft Contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company for the Australian and Mauritius Mail Services, and also a letter from the Postmaster General thereon; and I am to request that you will call the attention of the Secretary of State to that part of the Postmaster General's letter which relates to a change of vessels at Melbourne. I am to state that my Lords are desirous of knowing whether the Secretary of State is of opinion, having reference to the advantages pointed out by the Postmaster General's letter, that this change of vessels may be sanctioned.

I am to request that the papers, being in original, may be returned to this Department.

[Sub-Enclosure 1.]

General Post Office,
14 December, 1858.

My Lords,

I have the honor to return the Draft Contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company for the Australian and Mauritius Mail Services, referred to me on the 2nd instant, and to offer the following observations in respect to certain of the provisions of this Contract:—

1st. The Table marked A, referred to in folio 5, is not with the Draft, but I presume that it is the same Time Table, a proof of which was forwarded to me by the Company on the 8th ultimo, with a request that I would communicate my views respecting it to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for their guidance in preparing the Contract. In compliance with that request, I drew the attention of the Board of Admiralty to that part of the scheme by which it appeared that it was the intention of the Company to send the packet from Suez as far as Melbourne only, and to perform the service between Melbourne and Sydney by means of a branch packet; and I suggested that, before this arrangement was sanctioned, the Secretary of State for the Colonies should be consulted, as the Government of Victoria had made it a condition, when agreeing to pay their share of the present subsidy, that the stay at Melbourne of the homeward packet should be at least forty-eight hours, exclusive of Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday.

I am not aware whether my suggestion was adopted, but the question has since been raised whether the people of New South Wales will not complain if the main packet does not go on to Sydney.

I presume, however, that the Admiralty will take care that a vessel of sufficient size, and supplying ample accommodation, is employed for this branch service, and, as it is proposed to transfer the Mails to and from the steamers on the main line, at Port Phillip Heads, the outward Mails for New South Wales will obviously be delivered at Sydney much earlier than they would be if the steamer from Suez proceeded with them to Sydney after landing the Mails at Melbourne, and the Homeward Mails, instead of being detained two days at Melbourne, will be despatched two days later from Sydney, thus lengthening the interval for replies. These advantages will be so great that I can hardly suppose any serious objection will be made to the arrangement on behalf of New South Wales.

2ndly. With respect to the penalty of £200 per day for every 24 hours beyond 55 days consumed in the voyage between Sydney and Southampton, I beg to remark, that the statement of the Peninsular and Oriental Company to the effect that 55 days are to be allowed, exclusive of the time occupied in crossing the Isthmus of Suez, is quite correct, such having been the understanding come to at the conference which took place at the Post Office, before the Tender of the Company was accepted.

The reference to this point affords me the opportunity of calling attention to an oversight which has taken place in adopting a system of Penalties and Premiums for the Australian Mail Service; for, while these Penalties and Premiums are payable in respect to the heavy Mails conveyed by the long sea route, they are not applicable to the far more important portion of the Mail which is forwarded through France. To remedy this omission, I recommend, if your Lordships approve, and the Company offer no objection, that a Penalty or a Premium (as the case may be) of only one-half the amount specified in the Draft may be payable for the service between Sydney and Southampton, and that like amounts be payable in respect to the Mails brought to or conveyed from Marseilles, the time fixed in the Table, forty-eight days, being allowed for the voyage between Sydney and Marseilles, exclusive of the time occupied in the passage of the Isthmus.

I have further to suggest that, instead of the penalty being £100 per day, it be fixed at a proportionate sum per hour, or probably your Lordships, if you approve of the idea, would not object to fix the penalty at four pounds per hour. The premium should then be payable in like manner—say one pound for every hour.

3rdly. The Draft specifies that the Company shall provide a proper room for sorting letters on board each of the vessels to be employed under this Contract between Southampton and Alexandria, and a query is made in the margin whether a similar provision is to be made on board the vessels between Marseilles and Alexandria.

In reference to this question, I beg to state that the arrangement desired by the Post Office is as follows:—

That the Mails forwarded to the United Kingdom via Marseilles, should leave Alexandria one day in advance of the Mails via Southampton, and should be sorted on board the packet going to Marseilles, during the voyage from Alexandria to Malta, and that the Officers employed in this duty should land at Malta and there await the arrival of the packet bringing the heavy portion of the Mail, which would then be sorted by them during the voyage between Malta and Southampton.

By this arrangement, one Clerk and his assistant would suffice for sorting both the Marseilles and the Southampton portions of the Mail, and the Company would not have to maintain and provide sleeping accommodation for more than these two persons throughout the entire distance from Alexandria to Southampton.

4thly. With regard to the demand of the Company that the days and hours of despatching the Australian Mails shall not be altered without a corresponding alteration being made in the days and hours of despatching the Bombay Mails, I beg to inform your Lordships that this claim is quite in accordance with the understanding arrived at when the conference took place at this Office, and I recommend that the clause should be altered accordingly.

I have, &amp;c.,

COLCHESTER.

of the Treasury.

STEAM POSTAL COMMUNICATION.

[Sub-Enclosure 2.]

Downing-street,
8 January, 1859.

Sir,

I am directed by Secretary Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th ultimo, requesting to be furnished, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, with Sir E. B. Lytton's opinion whether the proposal made for sending the principal Australian Packet from Suez as far as Melbourne only, and for performing the further service between Melbourne and Sydney by means of a branch packet, may be sanctioned.

The conclusion of the voyage of the chief packet at Melbourne cannot, it may be presumed, prejudice any interest of the Colony of Victoria. On the other hand it is pointed out in the letter from the Postmaster General, so far as regards the interest of New South Wales, that by the proposed transfer of the Mails to and from the steamers on the main line at Port Phillip Heads, the outward Mails to New South Wales must reach Sydney much earlier than they would do if the steamer from Suez proceeded with them to Sydney after previously landing the Victoria Mails at Melbourne; and that the homeward Mails, instead of being detained two days at Melbourne, may be despatched two days later from Sydney, thus lengthening the interval for replies at that place.

Without injury to Victoria, these will undoubtedly be benefits to New South Wales, so far as regards the rapidity of Postal Communication. On the other hand, however, the arrangement may possibly be viewed with less satisfaction by New South Wales passengers. In order to obviate this, as far as practicable, the Admiralty should be requested to make conditions for securing a vessel of sufficient size, and with ample accommodation, to be employed on the branch service; and Sir E. B. Lytton would suggest, unless there be any objection of which he is unaware, that the Company should be called upon to bind themselves under penalty to carry on to their destination in the branch steamer all passengers who have embarked for New South Wales in England, or at any of the intermediate stations before reaching Port Phillip Heads.

No course that can be taken will be beyond the possibility of exception, but in so large and complicated an affair as the mail communication with Australia, inevitably entailing so many prompt decisions by the Government in England, it is necessary to act on the principle of doing that which appears best on the whole, trusting to the moderation and liberality of the different Colonies to support the conclusions thus adopted. Proceeding on that principle, Sir E. B. Lytton trusts that, with the precautions and securities above suggested, the plan which has been devised as best for the general interests of the Postal Service of Australia, will not be objected to by the Colonies chiefly concerned.

On the details of the Contract Sir E. B. Lytton defers to the judgment of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury and to the Postmaster General.

E. C. MEREWETHER, ESQ., to SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE.

5, Cannon-street, City,

8 April, 1859.

SIR,

I avail myself of the opportunity afforded by the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date to recall to your recollection that at the interview which I had with you on the 15th ultimo, and at which you first communicated to me the terms and conditions upon which Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to contribute towards the establishment of a Monthly Postal Service with Australia via Panama, you also intimated to me that if by the January Mail no answer should be received from the Colonies to the reference made to them in November last, the Government would not object, under all the circumstances of the case, to take present steps to ascertain the probable cost of such a service, and with this view would be willing to call for Tenders immediately after the arrival of the Mail, if the subject were then again formally brought under notice.

As, therefore, both the January and February Mails have now arrived, and I am informed at the Colonial Office that by them no reply has been received from any of the Colonies to the reference in question, I lose no time in again inviting your attention to the matter, and trust that, as those answers whenever they may be received, will have no direct bearing upon the question which it is at present sought to solve, viz., the costs of the service, the Lords of the Treasury will waive all further delay, and at once move the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to issue the necessary notice calling for Tenders.

I would point out to you that by adopting this course not only will it be ascertained whether the amount demanded for the service is reasonable or not, but it will also be seen whether the time within which the route can be performed "will fit that within which the route via Suez is performed."

These are two of the points upon which Her Majesty's Government desire to be satisfied before they pledge themselves to subsidize the service, and reliable information with respect to them can be obtained in no other way.

I venture also to express a hope that the Tenders will be called for before the departure of the Mail of the 18th inst., and that the notice inviting them will be so framed as to meet in all essential particulars the views and wishes of the Government and Legislature of New South Wales. These are fully set forth in the Resolutions passed by the Legislature on the 8th September last, and in the Bill appropriating the subsidy, copies of which are already in your possession; but should any further information be required with respect to them, I shall be ready to afford it, and be prepared to wait upon you, or any one else that you may be pleased to name for this purpose.

In conclusion, I consider it desirable to remind you of your undertaking, that I should be furnished with a copy of the Admiralty notice before it is issued, and also be afforded an opportunity of suggesting any alterations therein; and praying an early reply to this communication;

[Enclosure

[Enclosure 4 in No. 1.]

[Copy of Treasury Minute, dated 19 April, 1859.]

My Lords have under their consideration the various communications which have taken place with reference to the establishment of a Mail Service with the Australian Colonies via Panama.

At the time when my Lords were negotiating for the service via Suez, expectations were held out that steps would be taken to set on foot this second service as soon as proper arrangements could be made for the purpose; and in the notice calling for Tenders for the Suez Service, a distinct intimation was given to this effect.

Since then, Mr. Merewether, Clerk of the Executive Council of New South Wales, has been deputed by the Government of New South Wales to act as their Agent in any arrangements to be made for carrying out the project in question, and has been in communication with this Board on the subject.

The Colony of New South Wales has actually appropriated a sum of £50,000 a-year for ten years for this monthly service via Panama, and my Lords are informed by Mr. Merewether that he has no doubt that the Colony will be prepared to take upon itself the responsibility of one-half of the cost of this service, provided it can be accomplished within reasonable limits, undertaking at the same time the necessary inter-colonial arrangements as regards New Zealand and the other Australian Colonies.

One obstacle which interfered with the earlier adoption of this line was occasioned by the state of the transit route across the Isthmus of Panama, and the heavy charge to which the Mails conveyed by that route are subjected on the part of the Grenadian Government for transit dues, in addition to the payment made to the Railway Company for actual conveyance.

My Lords are informed by the letter from the Foreign Office, dated 15th instant, that Lord Malmesbury has not yet been able to make any arrangement on the subject, but that it is a matter to which his attention is constantly directed, and that he will avail himself of the first opportunity to settle it on a more favorable basis than that at present existing.

Considering the vast importance to the Australian Colonies, especially to New South Wales and to New Zealand, of a communication which, amongst other advantages, will afford them facilities of intercourse with the whole Continent of America, from which they are at present comparatively excluded, and looking to the very liberal manner in which the Government of New South Wales have come forward in support of this scheme, My Lords are of opinion that they ought no longer to delay fulfilling the intention which they formerly announced of inviting Tenders for the service.

In coming to this decision, however, it must be clearly understood that My Lords will not consider themselves bound to accept any of the Tenders unless they are fully satisfied:—

1. That the amount is reasonable, and such as they would be justified in incurring.
2. That the times and rates of speed are such as to harmonize perfectly with the Suez service, so as to make the two alternate fortnightly with each other; and—
3. That the Governments of the Australian Colonies will undertake one entire half of the cost of both the services, via Suez as well as via Panama, whatever that may be.

Write accordingly to the Admiralty, and request that they will take the necessary steps for procuring Tenders for the performance of a monthly Mail Service between Great Britain and Sydney via Panama and New Zealand.

The contractors must make provision for conveying to and from Melbourne the letters of Victoria, and the other Australian Colonies.

They must also state at what ports between Great Britain and Panama, and between Panama and Australia, it may be in contemplation to call, and the time at which they will be prepared to commence the service from Australia and from Great Britain.

The Tenders must specify the maximum number of days to be occupied on the voyages out and home, which must not exceed 55 days on the whole, exclusive of the transit across the Isthmus, and the times of arrival and departure must be so arranged as to alternate fortnightly with the Suez route.

My Lords propose to allow a period of two months, say till the 1st of July, for the delivery of the Tenders.

[Enclosure 5 in No. 1.]

T. F. ELLIOT, Esq. to SIR S. NORTHCOTE.

Downing-street,

4 May, 1859.

SIR,

I am directed by Secretary Sir E. Bulwer Lytton to acquaint you that he has had under his consideration your letters of the 9th and 19th ultimo, on the subject of the establishment of Postal Communication between this country and Australia via Panama. In the first of those letters you transmit a copy of one from Mr. Merewether, the Agent deputed by the New South Wales Government to advance that project, suggesting that Tenders for the execution of the service should be immediately called for; and in the latter letter you transmit a copy of a Treasury Minute, from which it appears that the Lords Commissioners have decided to delay no longer, inviting Tenders for the service, and have requested the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to take the necessary measures for that purpose.

Sir

Sir E. B. Lytton observes that these Tenders are to be invited on the clear understanding that the Lords Commissioners will not accept any Tenders, unless they are satisfied on certain specific points, one of which is, that the Governments of the Australian Colonies will undertake the entire half of the cost of both services via Suez, as well as via Panama, whatever that may be. This reserve appears to be the more necessary in order to guard against any possible dissatisfaction on the part of the public, at the non-acceptance of Tenders, after having been invited, as, unfortunately at present, a want of cordial understanding on the subject is shewn to exist between some of the Australian Colonies.

Sir W. Denison,
No. 19, 1st February, 1859.
Sir H. Barkly,
No. 19, 11th
February, 1859.

On this point I am directed to transmit, for the information of the Lords Commissioners, copies of two Despatches which have been received respectively from the Governors of New South Wales and Victoria, written with reference to the Circular Despatch which was addressed to the Australian Governors, founded on the Treasury letter of the 16th of November last. From the last of those Despatches it would appear that difficulties existed to prevent any immediate arrangement of the question being effected by the Governments of these two principal Colonies. Sir E. Lytton trusts, however, that the further report promised by Sir W. Denison may shew, that the difficulty thus existing between these two Colonies has been overcome, and that it may prove eventually to offer no bar to the completion of the arrangement which their Lordships propose.

The Lords Commissioners will perceive in Sir H. Barkly's Despatch, an intimation, that after the House of Assembly had guaranteed the payment of £90,000, being the Australian moiety of the subsidy of £180,000 in support of the present Postal Service, the Postmaster General of that Colony had subsequently obtained the leave of the House to defray temporarily out of that grant the sum of £6,000, promised by that Government towards a Steam Postal Service between Melbourne and Wellington. Sir E. Lytton regrets that the sum guaranteed for a specific purpose, should have been in any way interfered with after having been so pledged, although he cannot doubt the readiness of the Colonial Legislature at once to make good any deficiency which might arise from such subsequent appropriation. The two enclosed Despatches also report the arrangements made by those Governments, for the adjustment of the payments due for the Postal Services executed under the previous contract with the European and Australian Mail Company.

(No. 19.)

SIR,

Your several Despatches noted in the margin, relative to the lapsing of the late and the completion of a new contract for Steam Postal Communication with Australia, have been laid before the Legislature as they reached me, and as they have have elicited no expression of opinion to the contrary, it may be assumed that the arrangements therein announced are deemed the most satisfactory that could under the circumstances have been made.

Objections it is true, on the part of the mercantile community, to the change of route involved in the steamers touching at the Mauritius instead of Ceylon, were hinted at—the daily increasing commercial relations of this Colony with India and China outweighing those connected with the first-named Island; but these objections have not assumed a definite shape. They will no doubt be more loudly urged whenever the Electric Telegraph is carried all the way to Galle, since intelligence to this part of the world might then be thence accelerated by fully ten days; but it is to be hoped, that ere that the Australian Colonies will have advanced sufficiently to fill up the loop, between Galle and King George's Sound, by steamers, in connection with the fortnightly despatch of the Indian Mails by the Peninsular and Oriental Company, so as to secure practically a second line.

With regard to the establishment of a second monthly service via Panama, I am not yet in a position to afford definite information as to the views of the Legislature; and it seems probable that notwithstanding the clear light in which the question is placed by your correspondence pondence with Sir William Denison, the Session will terminate next week, without its being adverted to in either House.

There is something so Imperial in the idea of thus uniting the British Dominions, by means of lines of steamers, circumnavigating the globe, and it offers at the same time such safeguards to these Colonies against interruption to their communication with the Mother Country through accident or otherwise, that I have always been disposed to view the project favorably, and though conscious that obstacles exist to its accomplishment, and that a good deal of experience must be gained before it can work smoothly, I have given my best support to a line by way of the Pacific, especially since the permanence of the established route through the Old World has been placed beyond doubt.

During the recent visit to this city of Mr. Henry Sewell, of New Zealand, I did all in my power accordingly to enforce the argument he employed with my advisers, that the contribution, namely, which would be required from this Colony to maintain the two lines (one-fourth of the entire estimate, or £105,000) did not greatly exceed what it had already intimated its willingness to devote to the upholding of one (£90,000), and might therefore safely be proposed to Parliament. Unfortunately, however, other considerations than those of either practicability or expense are introduced into such discussions by the jealousies prevailing between some of these Colonies—the question becoming in fact not one of Panama versus Suez, so much as of Sydney versus Melbourne; so that whilst my Ministry decline to moot the subject until the feeling of indignation engendered by the attempt a short time back of New South Wales to form a separate treaty with the Royal Mail Company shall have been appeased by suitable apologies, the Sydney Ministry complain to their Assembly that mine are adding fuel to the fire by not even having the courtesy to acknowledge the receipt of their three last communications on the Postal question!

Time, it is to be hoped, will soften these asperities; meanwhile it is satisfactory to state, whatever their issue, that the Legislature of Victoria has, in pursuance of the intention already indicated, voted £15,000 in addition to the £75,000 specially appropriated by 18 Vic., No. 31, and 19 Vic., No. 10, for the Steam Postal Service; so as to make good, whatever happens, the moiety of the subsidy of £180,000 guaranteed by the Australian Colonies to the Mother Country.

The probability, however, of all the other Colonies repudiating their liability to the Suez contract seems so small, that the Postmaster General has subsequently obtained leave of the House to defray temporarily out of this extra grant the sum (£6,000) promised by this Government towards a Steam Postal service between Melbourne and Wellington, recently established with a view of improving the communications with the New Zealand provinces bordering on Cook's Straits, the trade with which is gradually growing into importance.

I will only add that in accordance with the Treasury Minute enclosed in your Despatch of 16th November, No. 41, to Sir William Denison, the sum of £74,033 16s. 4d. has been duly paid over by my Treasurer to the Deputy Commissary General here for the Victorian proportion of ascertained expenditure to 30th September last, under the expired Contract, and the balance is forthcoming whenever the further liability up to the expiration of that Contract can be correctly calculated; on which occasion, I presume, a more formal account will be rendered to each Colony, to serve as a voucher for payment of the demand in full by its Government.

I have, &c.,

HENRY BARKLY.

No. 2.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(No. 68.)

Government House,Sydney, 3 August, 1859.

SIR,

In my Despatch, No. 10, dated 1 February, 1859, in reply to yours, No. 41, dated 16 November, 1858, I stated that I should on a future occasion go more fully than I was then able to do into the questions raised with reference to the line of Steam Postal Communication via Suez and Panama. I have not, however, as yet been in a position to make a report as satisfactory as I could have wished of the progress of the negotiations between the Colonies with reference to these lines of communication. As, however, your Circular Despatch, dated 17 May, explains the steps taken by Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of carrying out the scheme of a fortnightly Mail via Panama, submitted by the Government and Legislature of this Colony, I have thought it advisable, in acknowledging this Despatch, to lay before you such facts as may have a bearing upon the general question of Steam Postal Communication between England and Australia, which at present can hardly be said to be in a satisfactory position.

In your Circular Despatch above alluded to, you enclose copies of the correspondence between Mr. Merewether, the Agent of the Government of New South Wales, and the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, on the subject of the Panama Line of Postal Communication, from which it appears that their Lordships have taken measures for inviting Tenders for the execution of that service, the acceptance of these Tenders being, however, dependent upon the following contingencies:—

- 1st. That the amount of subsidy is reasonable, and such as they would be justified in incurring.
- 2nd. That the times and rates of speed are such as to harmonize perfectly with the Suez service, so as to make the two alternate fortnightly with each other.
- 3rd. That the Governments of the Australian Colonies will undertake one entire half of the cost of both the Services via Suez as well as via Panama, whatever that may be.

Of the reasonableness of these conditions, provided it be necessary to establish a through line from England to Australia, there can be no question.

The Legislature of this Colony in voting a specific sum for the Panama Line implied an opinion that it was a limit which it would not be desirable to exceed in subsidising a second line of steamers; though, as to the actual limit, the data upon which the estimate was founded were perhaps insufficient.

The second condition is of course an essential element in the establishment of a fortnightly Mail Service; and, as to the third, it is in perfect harmony with all the arrangements in accordance with which the Steam Postal Service has been established—the principle that the Colonies receiving their own postage, and being assenting parties to the contracts made by the Imperial Government for the conveyance of the Mails, are liable to defray half of the subsidy payable to the Contractors, is at the base of the existing system, which it is now sought not to alter but to extend. It must not, however, be forgotten, that the proposal of the Government of New South Wales only went the length of making the Australian Line in the case both of that via Suez and that via Panama, a branch of the existing lines; in which case, it was expected, that the amount to be divided between the Imperial and Colonial Governments would not have much exceeded the subsidy now paid to the Peninsular and Oriental Company for the Suez line alone. Concurring then, with these reservations, in the justice of the decision which makes the establishment of the Panama Line of Mail Steamers contingent upon the conditions before stated, I wish to draw your attention to the complications which have arisen in the relations existing between the Australian Colonies, which may make it difficult to obtain from them the distinct undertaking required by the third condition.

I see in a copy of a Despatch from Sir Henry Barkly, enclosed in yours of the 17th May, that allusion is made to the jealousies existing between the Colonies of New South Wales and Victoria; the existence of these I cannot deny, neither can I shut my eyes to the evil effects which are likely to result from them, when they are allowed to influence the action of the Governments. I cannot, however, admit the correctness of the statement made to Sir Henry Barkly, by his advisers, that an attempt was made by the Government of New South Wales to form, unknown to the Government of Victoria, a separate treaty with the Royal Mail Company; on the contrary, the enclosed correspondence* will shew that on every occasion the frankest communications have been made to the Government of Victoria of all the steps taken by that of New South Wales.

When in 1857 a proposition was made by the Government of New Zealand, for the establishment of a line of Steamers between England and Australia via Panama and New Zealand, the correspondence was, as will be seen, laid before the Governments of Victoria and Tasmania from time to time as it proceeded; and although these Governments declined to co-operate in the scheme until the contract was sanctioned by Her Majesty's Ministers, yet they expressed their sense of the advantages of the contemplated arrangement, and their disposition to entertain it. Then again, in August, 1858, upon the receipt of the intelligence of the failure of the European and Australian Mail Company, the general question of the Steam Postal Service was brought by me under the consideration of my Executive Council, but so far was it from being the wish or intention of the Government of New South Wales to conceal from that of Victoria the course which it was proposed to adopt, that on the 31st August,† copies of the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Executive Council were furnished to the Chief Secretary of Victoria, and on the †10th September, copies of the Resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 8th were also forwarded, these latter embodying the principles upon which the double Mail Service via Suez and Panama should be conducted.

I have reason to believe that these documents were not shown to Sir Henry Barkly for many months after they were received; and most certainly no reply was ever made to them by the Government of Victoria. This neglect has naturally had the effect of indisposing the Government of New South Wales to renew a correspondence on this subject. In order, however, that I might be in possession of the views of the Government of Victoria with relation to the Panama line, and at the same time place the views of the Government of New South Wales upon record, I addressed a letter to Sir Henry Barkly upon the 28th May (a copy of which I enclose‡), bringing under his notice the results, so far as they were then known, of the communication between Mr. Merewether and Her Majesty's Government. By the reply to this (a copy of which is also enclosed‡), it will be seen that the question will have to stand over until the meeting of the Legislature of Victoria.

Nothing, I think, can be fairer or more liberal than the propositions submitted to the Government of Victoria. New South Wales expresses its willingness to take upon itself the liabilities, so far as the Panama line is concerned, of West Australia, South Australia, and Tasmania, which Colonies, it was anticipated, might not consider the advantage to them of a second line of steamers sufficient to warrant the payment of their proportion of the expense of the new line,—while Victoria, it was proposed, might take upon herself the proportion payable by New Zealand of the Suez line.

I trust, therefore, that the Legislature of Victoria will be willing to make the necessary provision for securing, in the manner proposed, the very great advantage of a fortnightly communication with England.

Should, however, the jealousies before alluded to unhappily prevent the cordial co-operation of these two Colonies towards a scheme in the advantages of which each will participate, I am afraid that there will be great difficulty in persuading the Legislature of New South Wales to continue the appropriation towards the payment of the subsidy to the Peninsular and Oriental Company for the Suez line. That a refusal to contribute towards this expense would be most unwise is perfectly true; but passion and prejudice overlook considerations of expediency, and even of justice. And it is my duty to make you aware of the probable or possible effect of such motives upon a Government responsible directly to a Legislature popularly constituted.

I will now suggest a method by which this difficulty, should it arise, may perhaps be obviated. At present the Government of Victoria is empowered to expend the sum of £90,000—(an amount equal to that payable to the Peninsular and Oriental Company in support of the Suez line)—and the Government of New South Wales has authority to expend

* Laid before the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly on the 11th August, 1857.

† Laid before the Legislative Council on 2nd February, 1859, and the Legislative Assembly, 1st February, 1859.

‡ Laid before the Legislative Council, 14th September, 1859, and the Legislative Assembly, 1st September, 1859.

expend the sum of £50,000 in support of the Panama line. It is true that the Government of Victoria may not consider itself pledged to make up the balance which would have to be paid to the Peninsular and Oriental Company, should New South Wales refuse to contribute towards the Suez line, but it is most probable that in such an event it would be willing to adopt the responsibility. In the same way, I think it very probable that the Governments of New South Wales and New Zealand would engage to take upon themselves the responsibility of making good the half of the subsidy payable for the Panama line, should such subsidy not amount altogether to more than £150,000 per annum. The result of such an arrangement would be, that New South Wales and New Zealand would have a communication with England once a month by Panama, while Victoria, Tasmania, and South Australia would have a communication with England once a month by way of Suez. The payments to be made by both New South Wales and Victoria would be, in the case of the former, equal to, if not in excess of that which it would have to pay for a fortnightly mail, while, in the case of the latter, it would amount to upwards of 50 per cent. in addition to that which it now has to pay for the single line. The folly of this would soon become so palpable as to lead to an understanding between the Governments which would enable each to avail itself of the benefit of the fortnightly mail,—the arrangements for which would of course be a matter for local consideration. By the adoption of this course—that is, by accepting the guarantee of New South Wales and New Zealand for one line, and that of Victoria, Tasmania, and South Australia for another, Her Majesty's Government will shew its anxiety to meet in every way the wishes of the people of these Colonies, while it maintains the rule of leaving all matters of local interest to be dealt with by the Legislatures of the respective Colonies.

I have thought it advisable to bring under your notice these possible contingencies and the suggestions to which they have given rise; but I shall not be able for some months to speak positively as to the course which the Governments of the different Colonies will adopt, more especially, as some complications may be created by the separation of Moreton Bay and the creation of it into a new Colony.

I may observe, with reference to some of the provisions in the advertisement for Tenders, that all the wants of these Colonies would be fully met by the establishment of a branch line from Panama to Sydney. It would seem to be but a waste of money to pay for a second line of steamers from England to Panama, while the Royal Mail Company is running vessels, possessing ample accommodation for the Mails, at a speed fully equal to that which it would be wise to demand, with the benefit of a long experience, to secure regularity.

I have, &c.,

W. DENISON.

THE RIGHT HONORABLE

SIR E. BULWER LYTTON, BART.

No. 3.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(No. 70.)

Government House,

Sydney, 6 August, 1859.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Circular Despatch, dated 12 April, 1859, enclosing copies of a correspondence between the Treasury and the Colonial Office, on the subject of the Contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, for the Australian and Mauritius Mail Service.

I gather from your Despatch that the arrangements for the completion of this Contract have not been finally determined; and I feel therefore justified in bringing under your notice the objections which are entertained in this Colony to certain of the provisions, in the hope that it may not be too late to make such modifications as may lead to some improvement of the scheme.

I would observe, in the first place, that the feeling of the Government of New South Wales has always been opposed to a through line to England,—the Imperial Government having already a trunk line as far as Ceylon, perfect in its arrangements, and adequate in every way to convey the Mails; the additional expense, both to the Colonies and the Mother Country, of a separate line of steamers from England to Point de Galle, is evidently, so far as the conveyance of the Mails is concerned, altogether unnecessary.

Now

Now, it has always been my opinion, and the occurrences of the past three years have added strength to my conviction, that the Government ought not to attempt to interfere with the arrangements of Contractors for Steam Communication, further than to secure the attainment of the particular object it has in view—the speedy and regular conveyance of the Mails. If, in anticipation of a large passenger and goods traffic, it insists upon the employment of a larger class of vessels than is requisite for the Mail business, it must, to a certain extent, be taken to guarantee a remunerative traffic. This, however, is a purely speculative question, dependent upon a variety of considerations, into which the Government cannot enter, and on which it can exercise little or no influence; and it should be left altogether to the Contractors: these should there be a sufficient demand, will be sure, for their own sakes to meet it by supplying proper accommodation. Should the passenger and goods traffic not be sufficient to remunerate the Contractors, the Government ought not to be called upon to supplement the returns out of the General Revenue. I would therefore venture to urge strongly a reconsideration of the present arrangements, as I feel certain that a simple branch line to Point de Galle will secure the rapid and regular delivery of the Mails; be more economical in every way, and meet all the wants of these Colonies. I venture to press this point the more earnestly, as the Act by which the Government was empowered to pay a sum not exceeding £20,000 per annum as a subsidy towards the cost of a line of steam communication via Suez will expire in November, 1860; and, as I have mentioned in my Despatch, No. 68, dated the 3rd instant, I feel apprehensive that the Legislature may refuse to renew it, unless some arrangement can be made for the establishment of a second line via Panama. There would be less chance of the adoption of such an extreme measure were the cost of the Suez line reduced.

I would also beg to call the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the inconveniences and delays arising out of the change of route. The steamers now proceed by way of Mauritius instead of by way of Ceylon. The consequence is, that the correspondence between Australia, India, and China is delayed, to such an extent, as to make it advisable, in many instances, to send letters by sailing vessels instead of by the steamers. For instance, a letter sent from here to India has to wait at Aden for a week or more before it is picked up by the India steamer; and the result of this delay, and of the additional time taken, first in sending the letter to Aden, and thence back again to Point de Galle is, that it takes about two months for a letter to reach Calcutta.

Again, the Mail from Calcutta reaches Aden about three days after the Australian steamer has left for the Mauritius; so that a delay of twenty-seven days is occasioned here, in addition to the time taken in running down from Point de Galle to Aden. I may observe that the traffic between this Colony and India and China is great and increasing, while that with the Mauritius is comparatively trifling. Most of the sugar imported comes either from the Philippines or Calcutta, and there are large importations of other articles from China, India, &c., which make it very desirable that the means of communication between these countries and Australia should be as speedy as possible.

With reference to the provision made for forwarding the Mails between Sydney and Melbourne, as alluded to in the letter of the Postmaster General, it would seem that difficulties have already arisen on account of the absence of proper Dock accommodation at Melbourne. In consequence of this the vessels which convey the Mail to Melbourne from Suez now come on to Sydney, the consequence being a delay of two days at least in the reception of letters, and a shortening by two days of the time afforded for replies by the earlier departure of the Mail Steamer. The Government of New South Wales does not wish to press this point unduly upon the consideration of the Government, or to throw difficulties in the way of the Contractors; but, it is evident that an arrangement which would practically make a difference of three days in the time afforded for answering letters is not one to be adopted hastily.

I have, &c.,

W. DENISON.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

STEAM POSTAL COMMUNICATION.

(FURTHER DESPATCH RELATING TO.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Downing-street,

(Circular.)

1 December, 1859.

SIR,

With reference to my predecessor's Circular Despatches of the 16th of October, 1858, and 12th of April last, respecting the arrangements which had been entered into with the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of the Mails to the Australian Colonies, I transmit, for your information, the copy of a letter from the Treasury, forwarding a correspondence with the Directors of the Company relative to the change of route which they feel it necessary, in the interests of their shareholders, to propose to the Lords Commissioners.

You will learn from these papers, that the Company propose to conduct the service to Australia by way of Ceylon, instead of as heretofore by Mauritius, and to establish an independent line of steamers from Aden to Mauritius; but they express, at the same time, their belief that, even under this new arrangement, they will not be able to maintain the service without a further subsidy of twenty-five thousand pounds, for which they accordingly apply.

The Lords of the Treasury, you will observe, are prepared to assent to these arrangements, so far as the change of route is concerned; but they decline to sanction the grant of the subsidy, without being apprized of the views of the Australian Colonies on the question.

I should, therefore, wish to receive from you, at your earliest convenience, the assurance, which I trust you will be able to convey to me, that, with a view of preventing any interruption of the service, the Colony of New South Wales may be willing to contribute its share of the further subsidy of twenty-five thousand pounds asked for by the Company, in addition to the sum of one hundred and eighty thousand pounds, already contracted for.

I have, &amp;c.,

NEWCASTLE.

GOVERNOR SIR WILLIAM DENISON, K.C.B.,

&amp;c., &amp;c., &amp;c.,

New South Wales.

[Enclosure.]

Treasury Chambers,
16 November, 1859.

Sir,

I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit, for the information of His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, the accompanying copies of a correspondence which has recently taken place between the Peninsular and Oriental Company and this Board relative to the route of the Australian Mail Service.

His Grace will perceive that the continuance of the Mail Service with Australia and the Mauritius has been endangered, but that my Lords have succeeded in making arrangements with the Peninsular and Oriental Company which, without involving any increase of payment, secure for the present the continuance of those services in the same time, and by routes which from the recent despatches it appears will be more satisfactory to the Colonies—namely, as regards the Mauritius, by an independent line to that Colony; and as regards Australia, by the route via Ceylon, which gives them the benefit of a communication with India and China, by the steamer which carries the English Mail.

His Grace will observe that the proper performance of these services will be ensured by the same penalties and conditions as had been agreed to in the original contract, and that, in sanctioning the deviation to Ceylon, my Lords have expressly stated that any arrangement made by the Peninsular and Oriental Company for obtaining traffic from India or China must not interfere with the main object of securing the greatest possible regularity in the performance of the postal service between Southampton and Sydney in a period not exceeding fifty-five days.

My Lords cannot doubt, looking both to the recent despatches (more especially those from the Governors of New South Wales and Mauritius) as well as the obvious advantage of the new routes, that their adoption would have been highly satisfactory to the Colonies, even if the alternative had not been a probable suspension of the service altogether. They think it right, however, to point out that the demand made by the Company was for an additional subsidy of £25,000 a year; and that although they have consented to try the Ceylon route, which it is stated will involve an additional expense of £55,000 a year for steamers for the independent service for Mauritius, without any increase of subsidy, they expressly state that they do so only provisionally, and it will remain open to them at any time to avail themselves of the usual clause in contracts of this description, of terminating their engagement by forfeiting a sum which in the draft of the original contract, ready for signature, had been fixed at £25,000.

My Lords, therefore, can feel no security that, in the event of the service via Ceylon continuing to be a source of loss to the Company, they may not after a short period avail themselves of this clause; and thus the Government may be placed in the alternative of allowing the service to be interrupted, or making fresh arrangements possibly involving some increase of subsidy.

Looking forward to this contingency, it would perhaps be well if His Grace the Duke of Newcastle were to ascertain the views of the Australian Colonies who are principally interested, and who now contribute half the cost of the service, and learn whether, in the event of any emergency arising, they would desire the Government here to act for them to the best of its power, with a view to prevent any interruption of the service, undertaking to contribute their half of the expense, beyond the £180,000, which might be incurred.

Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company,
Offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, London, E. C.,
November 4, 1859.

My Lords,

By order of the Board of Directors of this Company, I have the honor to make the following communication to your Lordships.

On the 5th October, 1858, in consequence of an advertisement, published by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, inviting tenders from parties willing to perform the Steam Postal service with Australia, the Directors, on behalf of this Company made a tender for the execution of that service for the sum of £180,000 per annum.

This sum was, they have since learned, £70,000 per annum less than that demanded for the same service by a competing company (the Royal Mail Steam Company) who then also made a tender for it.

It was also £5,000 per annum less than the sum received by the former contractors for the service, who in nineteen months lost their whole capital of £400,000, and were involved in bankruptcy by undertaking it.

It was also between £70,000 and £80,000 per annum less than the cost of the temporary execution of the service between the time of the failure of the former contractors and the commencement of it by this Company.

The Directors ventured to undertake the service on so comparatively low terms, by combining it with the Postal Service to Mauritius, (for which they had also contracted) establishing establishing the route of the Australian mails by that island, and thus by performing the two services by means of one line of vessels, saving the cost of running two steamers, which would have been required to execute the Mauritius service separately.

That cost would have amounted to about £55,000 annually, and by being so saved, enabled them to tender for so much less for the Australian service.

The Directors now regret to have to state, that the experience which they have had during the eight months that they have been carrying on the service is of such an unsatisfactory nature to the financial interests of the Company, that, in justice to their shareholders, they will feel compelled to relinquish the service under its present arrangement.

At the same time they beg to point out the only means by which they can see a prospect of being able to maintain the service without a loss to the Company.

The chief source, they would beg to observe, from which the maintenance of their other lines of postal communication is derived is the freight and passenger traffic, the subsidy for the postal service bearing but a small proportion of the expense.

On the Australian line the reverse is the case, the freight and passenger traffic contribute in a very small proportion to the expenses of the vessels, and the Directors, after every effort made by them to obtain an increase of it, see no prospect of being able to do so. The probable means of augmenting their traffic, to which the Directors advert, is to change the route of the Australian service to its former course, via Galle, to which point, by means of branch steamers from India and China, some additional freight and passenger traffic may be drawn to supplement the earnings of the Australian main line of steamers.

The Mauritius service to be performed by a separate line of steamers to and from Aden, as originally agreed upon; such an arrangement, the Directors submit, involves public advantages of an important nature, besides being in accordance with the now strongly expressed wishes of the Australian Colonies.

These colonists, and particularly the commercial class of them, complain that the present route cuts them off from direct communication with India and China, which they consider of great importance, as an extensive trade has recently been springing up with the latter countries.

On the other hand the Mauritius colonists are dissatisfied at their postal service being, as they consider, made subsidiary to the Australian service and interest for the purpose of reducing the expense in favor of Australia.

The Directors make these statements on what they consider reliable private sources of information, but they believe a reference to official information at the Colonial Office will confirm them.

The other objects of public importance embraced in the proposed arrangement are:—

- 1st. An extra direct postal communication would be provided with Ceylon, and thence by the branch steamer plying in connection with the main line with India and China,—such extra communication with the latter country, in the present aspect of our relations with it, being, it is assumed, of considerable importance.
- 2nd. It would render the transit of the Australian Mails more secure from interruption, as at Galle the Company would always have a vessel to take forward the Mails, either outwards or homewards, in the event of the Mail Steamer being disabled from proceeding, which would not be the case at Mauritius.
- 3rd. The converging of the extra communication thus proposed to be given at a point (Ceylon), whence radiate lines of telegraph to all the principal places in India, and which will, in every probability, be in a short time extended to the United Kingdom, enhances much both their political and social importance.

It now remains for the Directors to deal with the financial interests of their shareholders in reference to this proposed arrangement.

It will be obvious to your Lordships, that unless such an augmentation of the earnings of the steamers performing the Australian service can be obtained under the new arrangement as would not only cover the expense of £55,000, which would be incurred by the separate service for Mauritius, but also the present deficiency—estimated from ascertained results at £30,000 per annum—the service could not be carried on. Such an amount exceeds very far what the Directors calculate upon.

They are, however, prepared to take the chance on behalf of the Company of obtaining to the extent of £60,000 additional traffic by the branch lines, which, deducted from the present deficiency on the Australian line and the cost of maintaining a separate line for Mauritius, together making £85,000, will still leave £25,000 to be added to the present subsidy, which the Directors submit will form a very moderate consideration for the various public and national advantages herein pointed out.

The suggested change of the route can be effected without any irregularity in, or interruption of, the Mail Service between this country and Australia, and will not involve any alteration in the existing time table, beyond the substitution of Point de Galle for Mauritius, the dates of arrivals at and departures from each port remaining the same as at present.

I am only further instructed by the Directors to state, respectfully, that an early consideration and decision of the question will be of essential importance to the interests of the Company.

I have, &c.,

*Treasury Chambers,
9 November, 1859.*

Gentlemen,

I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your Secretary's letter of the 4th instant, on the subject of your contract for the Conveyance of the Australian Mails, and I am directed to state that their Lordships have no objection to the substitution of the Ceylon route for that of Mauritius, as proposed by you, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made, as they are disposed to think that the former route will be on the whole more satisfactory to the Colonies, and more for the interest of the public as well as of your Company.

As regards the question, however, of an increase of the present subsidy, £25,000 a year, it would be impossible for my Lords to agree to any increase, for reasons, among which it may be sufficient for the present to state, that no such increase could be sanctioned without consulting the Colonies who contribute a large proportion of the cost; nor could my Lords entertain any question of altering the present financial condition of the contract, without waiting for the report of the Committee of the House of Commons on Mail Contracts.

If, therefore, the Company wish to obtain the immediate sanction of the Government to the proposed change of route, you must be prepared to waive any question of increasing the amount of subsidy, and confine your application simply to a change of route.

My Lords would not object to sanction such an application, leaving to the Company the right of taking at any time any steps for terminating the contract by payment of the penalty of £25,000, which would have been open to them under the original contract; and further providing that, after two years' experience of the Ceylon route, either party may terminate the contract without penalty on giving 12 months' notice.

In the event of the Company adopting this course, the contract will have to be modified, so as to establish Ceylon for the Mauritius, and a separate contract made for the Mauritius. These contracts will be immediately prepared and signed, and in the meantime they may be acted upon as if signed.

It is assumed, however, that the proposed change will not be carried out until the Company are in a position to give Mauritius the full benefit of an independent service as originally contemplated, and that in all other respects the time table will remain unaltered. Also, that the Australian Mail Service will be considered as the main service, and that any arrangements which may be made for combining other services with it at Galle, Aden, or Suez, shall be of such a nature as not to interfere with that which is the main object of the contract, viz., the attainment of the greatest possible regularity in the transmission of the Australian Mails in a period not exceeding 55 days between Southampton and Sydney.

Sir,

I have the honor, by order of the Directors, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, stating in reply to my communication of the 4th, that the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have no objection to the substitution of the Ceylon route for that of Mauritius, for the Mail Contract Packets between Suez and Australia, and for the establishment of a separate monthly line of packets between Aden and the Mauritius, as originally agreed upon in the correspondence which took place between the Treasury and the Company in the early part of 1858, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made; their Lordships being of opinion, that the route of Ceylon for the Australian packets will be, on the whole, more satisfactory to the Colonies, and more for the interest of the public, as well as of the Company.

In reply, I am desired to acquaint you, for the information of their Lordships, that the Directors will accordingly transmit instructions on the subject to their agents in India and Australia, by the next out-going mail; and that they hope to make arrangements for giving effect to the change of route with the departure, from Southampton, of the Mail of the 12th March, and the homeward departure, from Sydney, of the Mail of the 14th of the same month.

A steamer will, in that case, be provided at Aden for the conveyance, to Mauritius, of the March outward mail; and another, at Mauritius, for the conveyance, to Aden, of the mail leaving Mauritius about 7th April next.

The Directors beg respectfully to decline the proposition of their Lordships as regards the termination of the contract by either party, after two years' experience of the Ceylon route, without penalty on giving twelve months' notice; and they will prefer to adhere to the terms and conditions of their tender for the Australian service, with the exception of the alteration of the route.

The Directors feel it right, however, to repeat their opinion that, without the addition to the subsidy proposed in their letter of the 4th, the Company will not be able to maintain the Australian service, even under the new arrangement.

Treasury Chambers,
15 November, 1859.

Gentlemen,

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have directed me to state, in reply to your Secretary's letter of 14th instant, further on the subject of the proposed alteration in the route of the Australian Mail Service, that my Lords will not insist upon the condition, to which you object, as regards the termination of the contract by either party after two years' experience of the proposed route by Ceylon, and they will be prepared to adhere to the terms and conditions contained in the original tender for this service, and of that to the Mauritius, with the single exception of sanctioning the alteration of route as proposed in your Secretary's letter of 14th instant.

As the service, however, by the altered route, at the rates of subsidy fixed by the tenders is avowedly experimental on your part, it must be understood that the sanction thus given by Her Majesty's Government is also provisional—and may be recalled at any time upon reasonable notice, if circumstances should occur to render it desirable.

Among the circumstances, my Lords must repeat that much may depend on the manner in which your Company conduct their traffic at Galle, Aden, and the other points of junction, so as to satisfy the reasonable expectations of the Colonies of Australia and Mauritius, by whom so large a proportion of the subsidy is contributed.

Oriental Steam Navigation Company.

(PETITION OF CERTAIN CITIZENS OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 22 February, 1860.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Citizens of Sydney,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners have learned, with satisfaction, that certain parties have expressed their willingness to commence, without delay, a Steam Postal Service between Great Britain and Sydney viâ Panama.

That your Petitioners are informed that the parties tendering to perform this service are prepared to commence operations before the expiration of the current year, upon being guaranteed by the Colony a subsidy of £75,000, and are, moreover, ready to engage to deliver English letters in this Colony within forty-five days, whereas the letters by the Indian Service have never been delivered under fifty-five days from Southampton, and the course of post to the people of the Colony at large has not been less than five months.

That your Petitioners have never looked favorably upon the granting any exclusive subsidy to a Steam Service viâ Suez, being persuaded that the future well-being of this Colony, its natural prosperity, and its political status, are intimately bound up in the successful prosecution of Steam Communication viâ Panama.

That your Petitioners humbly pray that your Honorable House will take such steps as in your wisdom may seem desirable, to induce the immediate establishment of Steam Communication viâ Panama, and placing this Colony in the position of sole Australian contractors for the accomplishment of such service.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

STEAM POSTAL SERVICE.

(PETITION OF SYDNEY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 10 February, 1860.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Chamber of Commerce as represented by their Chairman,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners have had submitted to them a communication from the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and upon which the said Company have requested an expression of opinion, proposing that the existing Steam Postal Service with the Mother Country viâ Suez shall, under certain stipulated provisos, cease and determine.

That, for many reasons, your Petitioners are averse to the stipulations proposed, not the least being that the adoption of them would completely annihilate all prospect of the establishment of a service viâ Panama.

That the argument urged by the Peninsular and Oriental Company, that under any circumstances they do not intend to continue the existing Contract, simplifies in a very great degree the steps which your Petitioners deem it would be advisable to take with respect to future Postal Communication.

That the Southern Colonies of the Australian Group appear to consider their interests involved in the continuance of Steam Communication viâ India, and, notwithstanding the readiness evinced by the Government of this Colony to co-operate with them in the Suez Service, they have hitherto steadily declined their support to the proposed communication viâ Panama.

That, in a question involving a heavy expenditure for a Postal subsidy, mere rapidity of communication is not the only consideration ; although your Petitioners are of opinion that this would be equally as well secured viâ Panama as viâ Suez.

That, as no Contract could be entered upon for a shorter term than seven years, your Petitioners place but little weight upon the argument of the advantage to be derived from Galle, being, as it shortly will be, in direct Telegraphic Communication with Europe, entertaining a sanguine hope that the wires of the Electric Telegraph will, at an early period, reach our Metropolis.

That the line of Steam Communication which is best calculated to benefit this Colony at large is the route via Panama; and, consequently, it is the only one entitled to the assistance of a Government subsidy.

That the Colonies of New Zealand and Queensland, and, as your Petitioners are informed, the Protectorate of Tahiti, being prepared to co-operate in the establishment of Steam Communication via Panama, the amount of contribution payable by this Colony would scarcely exceed the sum that has been already voted by Parliament.

That for all these reasons, as well as those others which at different times have been laid before your Honorable House, your Petitioners humbly pray that you will decline all assistance whatever towards carrying out any new arrangement with the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company; but, taking the premises into your consideration, will adopt such course as may appear to your Honorable House the best calculated, by independent action on the part of the Parliament of this Colony, to advance the public interests.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

(PROCEEDINGS OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ON 2 APRIL, 1860.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 5 April, 1860.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council on the subject of Steam Postal Communication with England.

Extract from Minute No. 60/16, dated 2 April, 1860.

Present:—

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

THE HONORABLE THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

THE HONORABLE THE SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

THE HONORABLE THE COLONIAL TREASURER.

THE HONORABLE THE SECRETARY FOR WORKS.

REFERRING to previous proceedings on the subject of Steam Postal Communication with England via Suez and via the Isthmus of Panama, His Excellency the Governor General now again invites the attention of the Council to the question, and lays before them a despatch from the Right Honorable the Secretary of State, transmitting the copy of a letter from the Treasury, forwarding a correspondence with the Directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, relative to the change of route which they feel it necessary, in the interests of their shareholders, to propose to the Lords Commissioners.

2. It appears, from these documents, that the Peninsular and Oriental Company propose to conduct the service to Australia by way of Ceylon, instead of, as heretofore, by Mauritius, and to establish an independent line of steamers from Aden to Mauritius; but they intimate, at the same time, their belief that even under this new arrangement they will not be able to maintain the service without a further subsidy of £25,000, for which they accordingly apply.

3. The Lords of the Treasury are prepared to assent to the change of route, but have declined to sanction the grant of the additional subsidy without being first apprised of the views of the Australian Colonies in reference to the matter; and His Grace the Secretary of State therefore desires to be informed whether, with a view of preventing any interruption of the service, this Colony is willing to contribute its share of the further subsidy asked for by the Company, in addition to the sum of £180,000 already contracted for.

4. It is also understood, but of this neither His Excellency nor the Council have any official intimation, that the Peninsular and Oriental Company are disposed entirely to modify the terms of the present contract, and to substitute for it a contract for a fortnightly service from Australia to Galle, in connection with their existing India and China line, and to effect such new service for the same subsidy which they ask for the modified arrangement referred to in the despatch now before the Council—that is to say, for a subsidy of £205,000.

5. Communications which have been received by the Chamber of Commerce in this and the adjoining Colony of Victoria leave no doubt that such is the disposition of the Company; and although the proposal has not been officially brought under His Excellency's notice, he desires the advice of the Council in reference to it, as well as to that upon which the Secretary of State seeks an expression of opinion from the Colony.

6. The arrangements under which it is proposed to effect the fortnightly service are precisely in accordance with the general views adopted by this Government when the question of Steam Postal Communication was under consideration in the years 1858 and 1859, as recorded in the proceedings of the Executive Council on the 9th and 16th August, 1858, and on the 10th May, and 13th June, 1859; and so far, therefore, the proposal meets the approval of the Council;—but, bearing in mind that both branches of the Legislature have, by express resolutions, distinctly affirmed their preference for the Panama route, as that best calculated to subserve the interests of this Colony, and that the same view is entertained by the community generally (if the opinions enunciated in the public press may be taken as a test), the Council are unwilling to commit themselves to any unqualified approval of, or sanction to, either of these proposals—which, if accepted, might have the effect of prejudicing the establishment of the service which the voice of the Legislature and community so clearly approve.

7. They are not therefore prepared to advise that this Colony should be a party to any contract which would bind it to support for a series of years the Postal Service by the Suez route. Fully alive, however, to the inconvenience which would necessarily result from an interruption of Steam Postal Communication with this Colony, the Council are not disposed to recommend that either of the proposals in question should be absolutely rejected; on the contrary, they are quite willing to advise that whichever of the two proposals may be ultimately approved by the Colonies most interested in the maintenance of the Suez route, this Colony should subsidize that service so long only as it is used by the Colony, and should support it upon the same terms, and in the same rateable proportion, as the contribution to the present contract is paid.

8. This expression of opinion, however, is that of the Executive Government only, and may not be shared by the Legislature. Before, therefore, pledging the Colony to any particular line of action with respect to the proposals, the Council advise that, so soon as the state of the public business admits, His Excellency the Governor General should by Message invite the concurrence of both Houses of the Colonial Parliament in the views above expressed, and should at the same time suggest to the Legislature the expediency of preparing the way by resolution or otherwise for the passage of a Bill authorising the Government to negotiate further with Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of the Panama route, and binding the Colony to contribute one-half of the necessary subsidy.

9. It appears to the Council that it is only by so binding the Colony that the establishment of the route will be eventually attained.

10. The Council further desire to reiterate the opinion which stands recorded in the proceedings above referred to, viz. :—That the service by way of Panama need not be a through service, but should be established in connection with the existing service to the West India Islands and Chagres.

11. As some time must elapse before the opinion of the Legislature can be obtained, the Council think it desirable that His Excellency should intimate to the Secretary of State that the proposals contained in His Grace's despatch are under consideration, and that the delay in deciding upon them is due to the necessity for securing the concurrence of the Colonial Parliament.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER,
Clerk of the Council.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

(Circular.)

*Downing-street,
5 March, 1859.*

SIR,

I transmit, for your information and guidance, the copy of a letter from the General Post Office, announcing that, in order to cover the cost of transit through Egypt it is intended that, on and after the 1st of April next, an additional rate of one penny shall be levied on all newspapers posted in the United Kingdom, addressed to Mauritius, Ceylon, or any of the Australian Colonies, and forwarded, via Suez, from Southampton, thereby making the total charge upon such newspapers two-pence each.

You will also see that you are authorized to adopt a similar regulation in regard to newspapers sent to this country by the same route.

I have, &c.,

GOVERNOR SIR W. DENISON, K.C.B.,
&c.,      &c.,      &c.

E. B. LYTTON.

[Enclosure in No. 1.]

*General Post Office,
22 February, 1859.*

Sir,

I am directed by the Postmaster General to acquaint you, for the information of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, that to cover the cost of the transit through Egypt it is intended, on the 1st April next, and thence forward, to levy an additional charge of one penny each upon all newspapers posted in the United Kingdom, addressed to Mauritius, Ceylon, or any of the Australian Colonies, and forwarded by way of Southampton, making the total charge upon such newspapers two-pence each.

This transit rate has hitherto been charged upon book packets only, but there seems to be no sufficient reason for the anomaly, especially considering that the cost of the conveyance of the Mails is greater than the whole amount of postage derived from the correspondence, and the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury have directed, therefore, by their Warrant dated the 16th instant, that from the date mentioned the transit rate shall be also collected on all newspapers sent across the Isthmus of Suez.

As this regulation will be equally applicable to newspapers sent in the opposite direction, I am to request that Sir Edward Lytton will write to the Officers administering the Governments of Ceylon and Mauritius, and will ask them to cause an additional rate of one penny each to be collected in future upon all newspapers addressed to the United Kingdom, and sent via Southampton, such additional rate to be accounted for to this Office in the Letter Bill of the Mail by which the newspapers are forwarded.

The Governors of the several Australian Colonies should also be informed that they will be entitled to adopt a similar regulation for the collection of an additional rate of one penny upon newspapers sent to the United Kingdom, via Suez and Southampton, but under the arrangement agreed upon for the division of the postage upon Australian correspondence, the whole sum collected upon the newspapers will be retained in the Colony.

I am desired, at the same time, to observe, that it has been foreseen that for some little time after the change takes effect, newspapers will continue to be occasionally posted upon which, through ignorance of the new regulation, the senders will only prepay the present rate of one penny, and as it will not be advisable to stop such newspapers, the Treasury Warrant provides that those posted in this country under such circumstances shall be sent forward charged with the amount of the deficient postage added to a fine of one penny. It is not intended, however, that this course of proceeding shall give rise to any accounts between this Office and the Post Office of Ceylon, Mauritius, or Australia. The deficient postage and fine is to be retained by the Colonial Post Office collecting it.

A similar regulation should be made in Ceylon, Mauritius, and the Australian Colonies, with respect to newspapers addressed to the United Kingdom upon which the additional rate of postage is not prepaid, such newspapers should be sent forward charged with the deficient postage and a fine of one penny.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS.

I have only to add, that it is not proposed to increase the charge upon newspapers forwarded via Marseilles and Suez, as the postage now levied, three-pence each, is sufficient to cover the transit rates paid for the conveyance of the newspapers through both France and Egypt, and still leave a penny for the ordinary postage on a newspaper from the United Kingdom to a British Colony.

SIR,

With reference to my Circular Despatch of the 5th instant, I transmit for your information the copy of a further letter from the General Post Office, stating that for the reasons there specified the period from which the additional charge upon newspapers sent via Southampton, between the United Kingdom and places to the eastward of Suez, shall take effect, has been postponed until the 1st of January, 1860.

General Post Office,
12 March, 1859.

Sir,

With reference to my letter of the 22nd ultimo, respecting the additional charge proposed to be levied upon newspapers sent by way of Southampton, between the United Kingdom and places to the eastward of Suez, I am directed by the Postmaster General to acquaint you, for the information of Secretary Sir Edward B. Lytton, that in consequence of the strong representations which have been made to his Lordship of the inconvenience likely to be occasioned to the publishers of newspapers and to the public generally, if the proposed regulation be carried into effect without a long previous notice, the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury have, by a further Warrant, postponed until the 1st of January, 1860, the period from which the additional charge shall be levied.

The Postmaster General requests that this postponement may be communicated to the Officers administering the Governments of Ceylon, Mauritius, and the several Australian Colonies.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL'S REPORT.

(No. 59-2959.)

Considering that the Expenditure of the Post Office Department in New South Wales is greatly in excess of the Revenue, and that the extra charge of one penny upon newspapers transmitted between the United Kingdom and the Australian Colonies, via Suez and Southampton, is intended to cover the cost of transit through Egypt, and will be adopted by the Imperial Government, it would appear reasonable, and tending to uniformity, if the increased rate be also levied in New South Wales from 1st January, 1860, as proposed, and I beg to recommend its adoption accordingly.

To prevent misconception, however, and having reference to the Minute from the Chief Secretary's Office, dated 1st instant, I apprehend that there is no compulsion in the matter, and that it is optional with the Government of this Colony to adopt the additional rate, or otherwise, as may be deemed expedient.

The arrangement detailed in the letter from the Secretary of the London Post Office, dated 22nd February, 1859, and referred to in the Minute in question as providing that unless newspapers posted in the Colony pay here a postage rate of 2d., instead of 1d., the extra charge will be made to the parties to whom they are addressed on delivery in the United Kingdom, has reference, as it appears to me, only to a temporary arrangement intended intended to protect senders from suffering through ignorance of the new Regulations, though perhaps also proceeding on the supposition that this Colony will co-operate with Great Britain in the establishment of the increased rate of postage.

I conceive that no additional postage, as a permanent measure, will be levied in England on newspapers sent to the United Kingdom from this Colony, via Suez and Southampton, should the Government decide that the postage rate on such newspapers shall continue to be 1d. instead of 2d.

THE CHIEF SECRETARY.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council on the 13th June, 1859, with respect to Despatches from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the subject of an additional rate of 1d. on Newspapers carried through Egypt.

Minute No. 59-24.

HIS Excellency the Governor General lays before the Council two Despatches, dated respectively the 5th and 16th March last, from the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, with enclosures, announcing that in order to cover the cost of transit through Egypt, it is intended that from the 1st January, 1860, an additional rate of one penny shall be levied on all newspapers posted in the United Kingdom addressed to the Australian Colonies, and forwarded via Suez from Southampton, and authorising the adoption of a similar regulation, in regard to newspapers sent to the United Kingdom from these Colonies by the same route.

2. His Excellency at the same time lays before the Council a Minute by the Postmaster General reporting upon the subject, and consults them as to the measures which it will be advisable to adopt with respect to the levying of the increased rate upon newspapers forwarded from this Colony.

3. The Council having deliberated at some length, express an opinion that the question is one with which it will be unadvisable to deal until the decision of Parliament shall have been obtained with respect to it; the more especially as it has been the aim of Legislation to diminish to the utmost extent possible the cost of transmission of newspapers by post.

4. They therefore confine themselves to advising, that copies of the Despatches and accompanying correspondence now before them be laid upon the Tables of both Houses of Parliament, on an early day after the commencement of the ensuing Session.

STEAM POSTAL SERVICE.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 28 February, 1860.

W. DENISON,
Governor General.

Message No. 27.

In reply to the Address presented this day, enclosing copies of certain Resolutions adopted by the Legislative Assembly upon the subject of Steam Postal Communication via Panama, the Governor General, with every desire to comply with the wishes of the Assembly, is under the necessity of stating that he feels it will be difficult, if not impossible, to carry into execution the provisions of an enactment such as that contemplated by the Assembly, for he is unable to see how any Contract for the Conveyance of Mails to and from England and New South Wales can be entered into "without reference to the Imperial Government."

Any Bill, however, which may be passed by both Houses of the Legislature for the purpose in question, shall receive the most careful consideration of the Executive Government.

MRS. MARY JONES.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 27 January, 1860.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Mary Jones, of Bargo, in the County of Camden, widow,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner's late husband, Joseph Henry Jones, contracted with the Government of New South Wales to convey the Mails from Sydney to Melbourne for and during the year 1851.

That in consequence of the gold discovery in the month of February in that year, the price of wages, horses, and forage became exorbitant.

That nearly all the persons employed by the said Joseph Henry Jones, to carry out the said Contract, threw up or abandoned their employment shortly after the said discovery, and that all the Out-Contractors, who had agreed with the said Joseph Henry Jones to convey the said Mails from Gundagai to Melbourne, threw up their Contracts.

That the said Joseph Henry Jones, by reason of his exertions to carry out the the said Contract, in or about the month of April in the said year, became subject to such bodily and mental disease as totally incapacitated him from further personal attendance on the performance of the said Contract.

That the said Joseph Henry Jones had not then entered into the required recognizances for the due fulfilment of the said Contract.

That your Petitioner, under the circumstances above set forth, in or about the month of April, or early in the month of May, in the said year, waited on the then Colonial Secretary, the Honorable E. Deas Thomson, on behalf of her said husband, for the purpose of throwing up the said Contract, and forfeiting the four months' Mail money then due, and then shewed to the said E. Deas Thomson, from her husband's books and accounts, that he had already incurred a loss of about £1,500 (one thousand five hundred pounds).

That the said Colonial Secretary thereupon stated to your Petitioner, that, if her said husband would give the required security, and continue the said Contract, any loss your Petitioner's said husband might sustain would be made good by the Government at the end of the term for which the said Contract was taken.

That, on the faith of such statement, your Petitioner obtained and gave the required security, and on her said husband's behalf performed the said Contract, advancing to him a large sum of money belonging to the children of your Petitioner's first husband, John Lupton.

That

That had the said Contract been thrown up in the said month of May, only the Mail money due would have been forfeited by the said Joseph Henry Jones, amounting, as your Petitioner believes, to a sum not exceeding £300 (three hundred pounds); that all Postal Communication on the Southern Road would have ceased, and, that the Government would have been put to trouble, delay, and expense in finding another person or persons to place horses and vehicles on the road from Sydney to Melbourne.

That, after the termination of the said Contract, the said Joseph Henry Jones applied to the Government for compensation for the losses he had sustained in the fulfilment thereof, and that, by direction of the said Government, all accounts that could be collected by the said Joseph Henry Jones, for the purpose of shewing the amount of loss he had sustained, were forwarded to the Auditor General's Office, in Sydney, for examination, and have never since been returned.

That your Petitioner believes her said husband, Joseph Henry Jones, lost by fulfilment of the said Contract, a sum of money exceeding (£5,000) Five Thousand Pounds; but your Petitioner is unable to set forth the particulars of such loss, by reason of the evidence thereof being in the custody of the Auditor General.

That neither the said Joseph Henry Jones, nor your Petitioner, have ever received any recompense or compensation for the said loss.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your favorable consideration.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

M. JONES.
