SIR,

The inhabitants of the District of Hunter's Hill have deputed me to transmit the accompanying Petition for the sanction of His Excellency; they also beg me to say, that no expense shall attend it, except the necessary officer to survey it.

You will observe, Sir, they have only petitioned to have the road laid out from the water-side to join the Kissing Point Road, as far as the Lock-up Station; to continue it would, in my opinion, be of further advantage to the district, as you will observe (by an accompanying sketch) the thoroughfare would cross the Kissing Point Road, and continue on till it joins the Great North Road, leading to the Common, which right of road belongs to the inhabitants, and which is at present completely shut up by fences.

This, however, can be decided upon as His Excellency may choose, when the proper officer has reported upon it.

(Enclosure in No. 1.)

To His Excellency Sir George Gipps, Knight, Governor, &c., &c., &c.

We, the undersigned, resident inhabitants of the Parish of Hunter's Hill, Kissing Point, beg leave most respectfully to state, that there is a great and rapidly increasing population in that neighbourhood, and that at present there is no sufficient public thoroughfare leading to the Parramatta River.

That the roads now used all lead through private property, and can be stopped at any time, there being gates through which to pass, in consequence of which the inhabitants are exposed to great inconvenience in conveying their produce to the water-side, boats being the usual mode of transit to Sydney; that originally lines were marked out by the Government Surveyors, intended as roads, from the Parramatta River through the district; that one of those lines leads from the water-side by the watch-house, in the village, but in consequence of the encroachment of individuals who have land adjoining, it is rendered impassable.

We, therefore, most respectfully and earnestly entreat, that your Excellency will be pleased to direct, that the original line marked out in the parish map, leading from the water-side, by the watch-house, to the public road leading to Parramatta, may be thrown open, so as to enable the inhabitants to convey their produce to market.

And, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

REPORT of Surveyor General.

THE road which the Memorialists request the Government to "throw open," is one of those wide driftways left expressly for the purpose of facilitating, not only the carriage of produce to the river, but likewise the driving from the Commons behind, and the feeding and watering of cattle. This driftway, however, with the exception of the tract complained of as being rendered impassable, is in the occupation of the conterminous proprietors, who would have to be ejected by course of law, before they would resign land which some of them, I believe, have had in possession for twenty or thirty years. The readiest course seems to be, to have a proper parish road laid out and proclaimed under the Act of Council, 4 Gul. IV., No. 11.

There are several of these driftways in the neighbourhood in question. I look upon them as a sort of commonage, to which the inhabitants should maintain their right, instead of allowing them to be fenced up by the adjoining proprietors.

MINUTE of Sir George Gipps.

I CANNOT undertake the eject of the intruders at the expense of Government, neither can I do anything which will strengthen their claim to the land. It is very probable that the Commons may be handed over to the Councils of the different districts in which they are situated, in which case the Council of this district may take measures for the recovery of this land.

I, nevertheless, will not object to the opening of a parish road in the way proposed by the Surveyor General, if that will satisfy the parties.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of the Memorial enclosed to me in your letter of the 13th instant, from certain inhabitants of the Parish of Hunter's Hill, Kissing Point, praying that the original line of road, as reserved on the parish map, from the Parramatta River to the Lock-up Station at Kissing Point—but which, they state, has been encroached upon, and blocked up by the adjoining proprietors—may be thrown open, I am directed by the Governor to inform you, that he cannot undertake to eject the intruders at the expense of the Government, neither can he do anything which will strengthen their claim to the land. It is, His Excellency remarks, very possible that the Commons may be handed over to the Councils of the different districts in which they are situated, in which case the Council of this district may take measures for the recovery of this land.

His Excellency further desires me to inform you, that he, nevertheless, will not object to the opening of a parish road, under the provisions of the Act of Council, 4th Gul. IV., No. 11, if that will satisfy the Memorialists.

MEMORIAL of Inhabitants of Kissing Point.

*Kissing Point,
18 August, 1845.*

To His Excellency Sir George Gipps, Knight, Governor-in-Chief of New South Wales, &c., &c., and Vice Admiral of the same.

We, the undersigned resident inhabitants and lauded proprietors in the District of Kissing Point, beg leave to state to your Excellency, that a short time since, a number of us made application, requesting that your Excellency would be pleased to cause that a line of road (leading from the high road to Parramatta and the village) by the lock-up, to the Parramatta River, might be thrown open by the Government; and that we received in answer, that the Government would not incur any liabilities in reference to it; at the same time, that there would not be any opposition made by the Government to a parish road being formed, under the Act of Council in reference to roads, if that would satisfy the people. It is with feelings of alarm that we find that application has been made to your Excellency, representing it to be the wish of the people that a parish road may be laid down, to extend not only from the water-side to the road leading to Parramatta, but to continue on through the district. We would with respect, but firmly, state to your Excellency, that we were not consulted on nor made acquainted with such request; and however desirable it might be to form a road leading from the main road, either by the lock-up house or direct from the church, to the river, it is not, in our opinion, required to proceed further than the high road to Parramatta, as there is a sufficient road leading from the village, by the church, to the interior of the district; and that the present attempt has been made, not to benefit the district generally, but merely to serve the individual interest of one, and at the expense of many.

We would further observe, that we consider it very unreasonable that any attempt should have been made, by an interested party, to incur such a heavy expense as must unavoidably be the case, without the concurrence or knowledge of a majority of the people.

Trusting that your Excellency will see the justice of our petition, and that you will concur with our desire of not going to any needless expense at present,—

MEMORIAL of Inhabitants of Kissing Point.

To His Excellency Sir George Gipps, Knight, Governor of the Colony of New South Wales.

The Petition of the undersigned Landholders and Residents of the Parish of Hunter's Hill,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

See Enclosure to
No. 1.

That on or about the 5th May last a Petition was got up and presented to your Excellency by certain parties of the Parish of Hunter's Hill, praying that a part of certain drift road, as therein described, should be thrown open to the public, there being no public thoroughfare for the convenience of the inhabitants.

That, in regard to this statement, your Petitioners respectfully desire to acquaint your Excellency that such statement is at variance with facts,—an easy access by the road in question to the river from the road leading to Parramatta having always been open for the use and purposes of the inhabitants; but that, there being no wharf (an indispensable convenience which cannot be constructed except at a serious outlay), the road has never been used by the inhabitants.

That if any substantial grievance have to be complained of on the part of the public, it exists in the fact, that the road alluded to in the Petition has never been open, even for foot passengers, in that part which is embraced between the road leading to Parramatta and the Great Northern Road, from which circumstance the inhabitants have been, and still are, debarred from that direct and easy access to the Common Lands to which they are justly entitled.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that the said road may be thrown open in the part just alluded to.

In illustration of their Petition, your Petitioners beg to annex a sketch, as taken from the Government charts.

And, as in duty bound, your Petitioners will ever pray.

It is with regret that I have heard that a second Petition is got up, and signed by persons who, in order to influence the Government in their favour, have induced parties to sign who are neither resident inhabitants nor landed proprietors in the district, as proof of which, I beg to forward to you, for His Excellency's information, the enclosed letter, which, in my opinion, is quite sufficient to shew an attempt has been made to mislead the Government.

I know not how to address Mr. Drinkwater to tell him this, and to request my signature may be erased. Will you take the trouble to forward this in some way to his present residence. SIR,

The inhabitants of the Parish of Hunter's Hill having memorialized His Excellency the Governor to throw open the driftway passing through the Kissing Point lands to the Parramatta River, in order that they might have an unobstructed road communicating with the river in that direction, His Excellency the Governor, although he declines taking measures on the part of the Government to eject the intruders on the driftway, has been pleased to direct, as intimated to me by Colonial Secretary's letter No. 45-175 of the 11th June, that steps be taken to open a public road from the Great North Road to the Parramatta River, to be proclaimed as a parish road, under the provisions of the Act of Council, 4 Will. SIR,

I have the honor to return herewith the two Memorials addressed to the Governor by the inhabitants of Kissing Point and Hunter's Hill, relative to the parish road to the river, about to be surveyed in that district;—the one sent to me for my report, under your Blank Cover of the 22nd ultimo; the other under your Blank Cover of the 2nd instant. See No. 10.
See No. 12.

In pursuance of your letter of the 11th June last, No. 45-175, Mr. Licensed Surveyor Galloway has been instructed to survey and prepare a plan for a road from the Great North Road to the river, thus crossing the Parramatta Road, which is nearer to the river. The subscribers to the first Memorial object to the opening of that part of the proposed line which intervenes between the two roads; whilst the subscribers to the other Memorial represent that the portion between the two roads is the most essential to be opened. Under the circumstances therefore, and seeing that the extension of the Great North Road will make the arrangement most complete, Mr. Galloway's instructions need not, perhaps, be altered. I am not indeed aware from what fund it may be deemed expedient to pay the amount, but I may observe that there being so many individuals interested in the matter, the expense could be met by them, should there be no fund out of which it could be paid for by the Government.

29 September, 1845.*

To His Excellency Sir George Gipps, Knight, Governor-in-Chief of New South Wales and its Dependencies, and Vice-Admiral of the same.

We would most respectfully beg leave to state, that we are resident landed proprietors in this district.

That, some time since, a requisition was forwarded to your Excellency, representing it to be the wish of the people of this district, that a line of road should be laid down according to the Parish Road Act.

That we, with others, in a Petition, of date 18th August, addressed to your Excellency, disclaimed any knowledge of, or participation in, such requisition; and expressed a hope that your Excellency would be pleased to cause that no unnecessary expense should be incurred in the matter.

That, since then, we learn that a Counter-Petition has been got up and signed by a number of persons who represent themselves to be landholders, or resident inhabitants in this parish. We would beg leave to state to your Excellency, that the said Petition is calculated to mislead the Government, inasmuch as many of the signatures are those of persons who are not bonâ fide residents or landholders in this parish, but of many who have not any stake in the place; domestic servants, non-residents, and prisoners of the Crown, three of whom we will will name—Thomas Ward (prisoner of the Crown), John Logan, and William Davis,—who, at the time of signing said Petition, were in the service of one of the undersigned.

Under these circumstances, the inhabitants have thought it advisable to call a public meeting, so that the true wishes of the people may be obtained on a matter so important to us all; and we respectfully beg leave to request that your Excellency will be pleased to stay giving any decision in reference to the various Petitions, until after such meeting shall have been held, the result of which shall be forwarded to your Excellency.

8 September, 1845.

SIR,

Agreeably with your instructions, No. 45-179, I now do myself the honor to Appendix C. transmit to you, herewith, a plan and description of a proposed road through a driftway, in the Parish of Hunter's Hill, from the Parramatta River to the Great North Road.

I beg leave to point out, that the proprietors of the abutting grants have encroached more or less upon this driftway; and in one case, that of Devlin, it is completely enclosed. As, however, it has been reserved as a right of way for the public, it cannot be considered as Crown Land, and I have, therefore, no power to eject these individuals as a Commissioner, and, I presume, that these encroachments must be remedied—should the lands be required—by the provisions of the Act of Council, 4 William IV., No. 11.

I have also to point out, that Mrs. Blanch, the owner of Chcer's 30 acres, considers the river to be the boundary of that grant; whereas a small strip of Crown Land, about four acres, intervenes between it and the water; and upon this portion of land her residence, outbuildings, and a cottage are built, as is shewn upon the accompanying plan.

I beg to be favoured with your instructions upon this subject.

I have, &c.,

DESCRIPTION.

SIR,

I beg leave to forward to you, for his Excellency the Governor's information, a resolution passed at a public meeting of the inhabitants of this district, held at the Parochial School House, yesterday, the 7th instant, the Rev. George E. Turner in the chair.

[Enclosure in No. 24.]

1st Resolution moved by I. Shepherd, Esq.; seconded by — Mitchell, Esq.

That, however desirable it may be to have an authorized line of road marked out, leading either direct past the Church or from the road to Parramatta by the lock-up house to the river, that this meeting, taking into consideration that the inhabitants have a sufficient thoroughfare to the water side, and in the event of any interruption to travelling the present road, that there is space enough left dividing the lands of Mr. Drinkwater and Mrs. Blanch,* to admit of a road being made; it is of opinion that no expense shall be incurred with the Government in laying out any line of road, as the present road, leading by the church to the interior, fully answers every purpose, and that this meeting will not be liable for any expense that shall be incurred.

SIR,

See No. 23.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 4th instant, No. 318, forwarding a plan of the proposed road from the Parramatta River to the Great North Road, I am directed by the Governor to observe to you, that, of the parties who oppose the opening of this road, one (viz: Mr. Devlin) has encroached greatly on the driftway, and it may be presumed, perhaps, that the opposition is chiefly maintained by parties who, like Mr. Devlin, have encroached on it. This leads His Excellency to ask when, and how, the driftway was reserved? And why Mr. Galloway says in his report, that he has no power as a Commissioner of Crown Lands to eject the intruder?

If the Crown cannot shew a better title to the driftway alluded to than was recently shewn in the case of the driftway near the Pennant Hills quarry, His Excellency is inclined to agree with Mr. Galloway; but, on the other hand, if there be a clear reservation of it recorded in any public document, he cannot see why the land may not be resumed, like any other Crown land which may have been encroached on.

I am accordingly to request your further report on the foregoing points.

I have, &c.,

DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 15 November, 1845.

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 13th ultimo, No. 45-352, in which, with reference to the proposed parish road at Kissing Point, you inform me that His Excellency the Governor observes that the parties who oppose this road are those who have encroached upon the driftway through which it has to pass, and inquire why Mr. Galloway says that, as a Commissioner of Crown Lands, he has no power to eject the intruders, and why, if there be a clear reservation of the driftway recorded in any public document, it may not be resumed like any other Crown land which may have been encroached upon; on which points I am requested to report.

I have the honor to state, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that all the maps exhibit the driftway as the boundary of the conterminous locations, and that unless any special claim be set up by the parties encroaching they can have no title: the main question, however, appears to be, whether the driftway (most certainly left as a way of access and commonage to all) can, after such dedication, be considered Crown land; if so Mr. Galloway might proceed to eject the parties; but then long occupancy would be pleaded, and the parties would not yield possession unless compelled to do so by an action in the Supreme Court. It might, on the other hand, be a more simple process to proceed against the parties as encroaching on a highway or common; but in such a case, I apprehend, Mr. Galloway,

* Mrs. Blanch is an intruder on Crown Lands (See Mr. Galloway's Report, 45-7213)

ROAD FROM PARRAMATTA RIVER TO GREAT NORTH ROAD. 11

Galloway, as a Commissioner of Crown Lands, would have no voice in the matter, nor would the Crown have any direct interest in proceeding for the benefit of a neighbourhood, in a matter which ought to be done at their own expense, rather than at that of the public.

DIRECTORS OF THE PARRAMATTA RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Ryde, Kissing Point,
10 September, 1856.*

SIR,

A Company having been formed, styled the Parramatta River Steam Navigation Company, for the purpose of plying steamers to and from Sydney from various points of the Parish of Hunter's Hill, and as no public wharves have as yet been formed in that locality, though there is a large space of Crown Lands set apart on the original charts, intended as landing-places, and for the purpose of forming roads through the district, we, as Directors of the said Company, have the honor to request that the Surveyor General be directed to cause the said public reserves to be marked out and defined; and particularly the part commencing at the Parramatta River, on the north-west side of James Wood's grant of 30 acres, and extending as far as the main road leading from Ryde to Parramatta. And also to determine which would be the best line of road to connect Onions' Point with the present Bedlam Road; as at present there does not exist any line of road connecting one extremity of the parish with the other.

We beg further to state, that we are prepared to pay the necessary expenses which may be incurred by the Government in making the survey.

*Surveyor General's Office,

SIR,

See No. 22.

In the year 1845, Mr. Galloway, in forwarding a plan and description of a proposed road through a driftway, in the Parish of Hunter's Hill, from the Parramatta River to the Great North Road, stated that the proprietors of the abutting grants had encroached more or less upon the driftway, and that in one case, that of Devlin, it was completely enclosed. This matter having been now re-opened by a letter addressed to the Colonial Secretary, by the Directors of the Parramatta River Steam Navigation Company, I request that you will favour me with your early report as to whether this driftway is still in the state described by Mr. Galloway.

With reference to your letter, No. 56-1694, dated 3rd October, 1856, requesting me to report whether the driftway in the Parish of Hunter's Hill, leading from the Parramatta River to the Great North Road, is still in the same state (i. e., encroached upon by various parties) as shewn by Mr. Galloway on his plan, forwarded to the office in the year 1845,—I have now the honor to report that I have examined the driftway in question, and find it exactly in the same state as described by Mr. Galloway.

MINUTE of Surveyor General.

See No. 27.

It appears from Colonial Secretary's letter (within) of 21st Novr., 1845, that Sir George Gipps declined taking any steps against the parties who had encroached on the driftway, on account of the expense which legal proceedings would involve.

Should it now be determined to proceed in the resumption of this land, the course would be to send a copy of Mr. Galloway's plan to the Secretary for Lands and Works, with a recommendation that legal measures should be resorted to to induce the abatement of the encroachments.

From various causes, however, such as the imperfect nature of the old surveys, the vague descriptions in deeds, the lengthened possession of the lands encroached on, and the valuable improvements which have been made upon them—considerable expense and loss of time would be incurred, in all probability, by the pursuit of this course; and as much conflicting evidence of surveyors would doubtless be brought forward by the persons encroaching, the result might after all be unfavourable to Government. (See note below.*).

It therefore seems to be worthy consideration, whether it would not be a shorter and better course to proclaim a parish road sufficiently wide to meet all the requirements of the district, through the driftway, from the North Road to the river, and with a space for a wharf wharf on the river. Although this would perhaps interfere slightly with "orchards," and pass nearer than the Act of Council (4 William IV., No. 11.) admits to "dwelling houses," the circumstance that the land over which the road will pass is legally public property, would probably obviate any illegality, while individuals would most likely be too well satisfied at not incurring the risk of losing all their encroachment occupations, to make any objection.

* NOTE.—The portion of driftway now in question is only part of one of several which exist in the Parish of Hunter's Hill.

No. 34.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 17 December, 1856.*

SIR,

In returning the letter of the Directors of the Parramatta River Steam Navigation Company, respecting reserves for wharves on the river in, and roads through, the Parish of Hunter's Hill, referred to me under your Blank Cover of the 17th September last, I do myself the honor to state that, from the lengthened occupation of the grants in the parish in question, and the period which has elapsed since the lands therein comprised were surveyed, great difficulty exists in determining, with any degree of certainty, the boundaries between alienated lands and the reserves for roads, wharves, &c. See No. 29.

2. A survey made some time back by Mr. Surveyor Galloway determines, however, and probably with considerable accuracy, the position of certain grants adjacent to the Kissing Point Wharf, and shews also that great encroachments had been made on the wharf reserve and the driftway (which should be 200 feet wide), extending northerly therefrom, and ultimately communicating with the Field of Mars Common. Between the river and the road to Parramatta, however, the road or driftway had not in any portion been stopped by these encroachments, although narrowed in more than one place to little more than 50 links, and fenced across at the river bank; and, from a report recently received from Mr. Assistant Surveyor Burrows, the encroachments exist at the present time to precisely the same extent shewn by Mr. Galloway.

3. This latter subject was under the consideration of the Government in the year 1845, when His Excellency Sir George Gipps declined taking any steps against the parties who had encroached on the driftway, on account of the expense which legal proceedings would involve. Should it now, however, be considered desirable that measures should be taken to induce the abatement of the encroachments, a copy of Mr. Galloway's plan will be furnished.

4. From various causes, however, such as the imperfect nature of the old surveys, the vague descriptions in deeds, the lengthened possession of the lands encroached on, and the valuable improvements which have been made upon them—considerable expense and loss of time would be incurred, in all probability, by the pursuit of this course; and as much conflicting evidence of Surveyors would, doubtless, be brought forward by the persons encroaching, the result might, after all, be unfavourable to the Government. And here it may be remarked, that the portion of driftway in question is only part of one of several which exist in the Parish of Hunter's Hill.

5. It therefore seems to be worthy of consideration whether it would not be a shorter and better course to proclaim a parish road sufficiently wide to meet all the requirements of the district through the driftway, from the North Road to the river, and with a space for a wharf on the river.

6. Although this would perhaps slightly interfere with "orchards," and pass nearer than the Act (4 William IV., No. 11.) admits to "dwelling houses," yet the circumstance that the land over which the road will pass is legally public property, would probably obviate any illegality, while individuals would most likely be too well satisfied at not incurring the risk of losing all their encroachment occupations, to make any objection.

7. Of the question of the road from the Bedlam Point, or Great North Road, to Onions' Point, that of the road through Monsieur Sentsis' property forms a part. The best course would, I apprehend, be, without instituting careful surveys, to determine the positions of the reserved roads bounding grants, and which are in all probability ill suited to general use, to determine, survey, and proclaim, as a parish road, the best line which can be found between the Bedlam Road and Onions' Point, at the very spot most suited to the construction of a wharf, for which the breadth of the road would probably afford sufficient space; more breadth could, if necessary, however, be given to the extremity of the road.

from the lengthened occupation of the grants in the parish in question, and the period that has elapsed since the lands in that parish were surveyed, great difficulty exists in determining with any degree of certainty the boundaries between alienated lands and the reserves for roads, wharves, &c.; and that also, from various other causes, such as the imperfect nature of the old surveys, the vague descriptions in the deeds, the lengthened possession, and the encroachments made on the wharf reserve and driftway at Kissing Point, it seems to you to be worthy of consideration, whether it would not be a shorter and better course to proclaim a parish road sufficiently wide to meet all the requirements of the district, through the driftway from the North Road to the river, and with a space for a wharf on the river,—I am directed to inform you that, under all the circumstances of the case, the Secretary for Lands and Public Works is inclined to think that the best course will be to try the efficiency of the Road Act; for if that should fail, the Government are still in as good a position as before to seek a legal remedy against intruders.

2. I am to add, that the course suggested by you, with regard to the road from the Bedlam Point, or Great North Road, to Onions' Point, has been approved.

SIR,

No. 32.

Referring to your letter of the 19th November last, No. 56-51, I have now to request that you will, with a view to its proclamation under the Act, 4 Wm. 4, make a survey of a road, of sufficient breadth to meet all the requirements of the district, through the driftway at Kissing Point, from the North Road to the river, leaving a space for a wharf on the river, and forward to me a plan and book of reference thereof.

2. It is also desirable that a road from Bedlam Point, or Great North Road, to Onion's Point (that through Monsr. Sentis' property forming a part), should be marked out and also proclaimed under the Act before mentioned.

The best course would appear to be, that is, without instituting careful surveys to determine the positions of the reserved roads bounding grants, which are in all probability ill suited to general use, to determine and survey the best line which you can find between the two places, Bedlam Road and Onions' Point, at the spot at the latter most suited to the construction of a wharf, for which the breadth of a road would afford sufficient space.

You will, however, if you consider it necessary, allow a greater breadth at the extremity of the road than the general width thereof.

ROAD FROM THE PARRAMATTA RIVER TO KISSING POINT ROAD.

THE road recently proclaimed and opened from the Parramatta River through a reserved driftway terminates at the road from Bedlam Ferry to Kissing Point.

The road called the Great North Road diverges from the Bedlam and Kissing Point Road, a short distance to the north of the point where the recently opened road meets the latter, and the driftway joins the two roads which, in its line, are about a quarter of a mile apart.

Beyond this point, that is, north of the North Road, the driftway is believed to be open—it was so in 1847—and what I understand is now desired is, that the road recently opened should be continued northerly to the Great North Road, through the now enclosed driftway.

The plans in the office shew this portion of the driftway to be unsuitable for a road, but do not shew what distance would be saved by the use of it by persons coming from the north, although the probability is that it would be less than a quarter of a mile.

These points could be set at rest by one day's labour of a surveyor, if it be so desired.

Mr. Secretary Robertson wishes the question of the expediency of opening this road to be looked into without delay. It will involve a survey of the Kissing Point and Great North Roads northerly to their junction, and an examination of the intervening portion of driftway, and its suitability to a road.

Mr. Darke must, I presume, be employed, as it is only a matter of one day's work, and he may obtain efficient information to render practicable the preparation of a fair plan and book of reference, for proclamation purposes, in the office.

MEMO. of Surveyor General to Mr. Licensed Surveyor Knapp.

WITH the view of completing this report, Mr. Knapp is requested to say what difference of distance there is between the existing road through Ryde and that proposed, which can be done easily from his plan, and to state what advantages are possessed by the former line over the other to more than compensate for the difference of distance, as may be inferred from this letter.

SIR,

In accordance with instructions contained in your letter of the 26th ultimo, B. C. 58-1267, I beg to append to my letter, No. 1, 14th August, 1858, my grounds for advocating the superiority of the present road through Ryde over that sought to be opened.

1st.

20 ROAD FROM PARRAMATTA RIVER TO GREAT NORTH ROAD.

1st. The present line of road traverses the crest of a range, whereas the proposed road will have to be carried over an undulating surface, and through a portion of two waterholes situate in the line. And, secondly, the expense of maintaining the present line of road (which is only 16 chains 40 links longer than the proposed road) will not, on account of its self-drainage, be so great as the necessary expenditure which will be required to keep the proposed new line of road in a fit state of repair.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 9 November, 1859.*

SIR,

The road from Kissing Point Road to the Great North Road having been confirmed as a parish road, by a notice dated 17th August, 1859, in the Government Gazette of ——— I have to request that you will, as early as may be convenient, proceed to formally open the road.

In carrying out this instruction you will give notice, either verbally or in writing, to the proprietors of any enclosed lands through which the road passes, and suggest to them the desirability of removing any fences or other obstructions which may exist; and you will then proceed to define the road, by marking trees or fences with the broad arrow, and, where you can do so, by the letter R, and by stakes or lockspits, by which persons desiring to fence the road may be able to place the fences in their proper positions. The marking should be on one side of the road throughout, with occasional marks on the other side, to shew the breadth.

Should the parties to whom you may give notice not remove the fences or other obstructions, you will summarily remove them, and, in doing so, you will be guaranteed from loss by action by the Government.

You will be good enough to report the fulfilment of this instruction, and to state in your report the mode in which you may have marked the road.

MR. LICENSED SURVEYOR KNAPP to ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL

*100, Elizabeth-street,
Sydney, 30 March, 1860.*

SIR,

In obedience to the instructions in your letter, 59-9776 (No. 59-2775), dated No. 61. 9 November, 1859, that I should proceed formally to open the road from the Kissing Point Road to the Great North Road, which has been confirmed as a parish road, in the Government Gazette of the 19th August, 1859, I have the honor to state that I have done so, and herewith transmit a plan shewing the same, colored pink. cc Enclosure to No. 56.

The road is marked with stakes driven into the ground, and the soil at each of them is lockspitted; the fences crossing the line of road are also all notched.

The southern division of the road passes through a valuable orchard, the property of Mr. James Devlin, including a large number of choice and valuable fruit trees.

Mr. Devlin states he will remove the trees and fences when required by the Government, but hopes he shall not be called upon to do so before the season for transplanting has arrived, or much loss will accrue to him thereby.

I may take this opportunity of informing you that the road round the hill in front of the Church is far more preferable and accessible, notwithstanding its greater length, than this line, which, in its present unformed state, is with difficulty passable.

MR. JAMES DEVLIN to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND WORKS.

Ryde, 24 May, 1860.

SIR,

I am this day in receipt of a communication from the Acting Surveyor General, requesting me to remove my fruit trees and fences on the site of the road reserve from the Kissing Point Road (meaning, I suppose, the road from Bedlam Point to Parramatta) to the Great North Road, in order that this road reserve may be opened as a public road for the use of the parishioners. Not traceable in Survey Office.

I

I have the honor to inform you, that petitions are now in course of signature by the parishioners, praying that the road may not be opened, as being totally needless, and uncalled for by the local public, which petition, I have reason to believe, will materially influence the determination at which the Government has arrived, and induce it to suspend, indefinitely, further action upon the initiatory proceedings which have already been taken, which I venture to anticipate will be the result when taken in the matter His Excellency the Governor shall be in receipt of the proposed petitions.

I beg respectfully to request, therefore, that you will authorize a suspension of further proceedings in the matter, say for one month from this time. The delay will be of no injury to the public, who have for upwards of thirty years remained passive under the supposed grievance, and it may be the means of preventing great individual injustice.

I have, &c.,

MEMORIAL of Inhabitants of Ryde, Hunter's Hill, &c.

To His Excellency Sir William Thomas Denison, Knight Commander of the Bath, Governor General of Her Majesty's Australian Colonies, and Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Her Colony of New South Wales, &c., &c., &c.

The humble petition of the undersigned inhabitants of the Village of Ryde, and surrounding district, Parish of Hunter's Hill,—

SHEWETH:—

That a considerable portion of land within the Parish of Hunter's Hill is occupied as orchard and garden lands.

That your petitioners' chief market for their produce is Sydney, and that this produce is sent to market partly by water and partly by land, crossing the Parramatta River on the ferry at Bedlam.

That the Great North Road, and the road leading from Parramatta by the Village of Ryde, are the only roads that are or can be used by your petitioners to convey their produce to market.

That your petitioners are informed that it is the intention of the Government to proclaim a new line of road, branching off from the Great North Road, on the north side of the village (passing through the orchard and inclosed land in the occupation of Mr. James Devlin), meeting the Parramatta Road near the Ryde Watch-house, and evading the Village of Ryde.

That your petitioners have not nor have any of them sought to have the said contemplated line of road open, and if opened it is certain that they would not use it, unless certain gullies along it were bridged over or filled up.

That your petitioners consider that to open the said contemplated line of road would be inflicting an injury on the present occupant, without in any way benefiting the public.

Your petitioners therefore pray that your Excellency will be pleased, so far as in you lies, to revoke the Proclamation of the said intended road, or to suspend the opening thereof for an indefinite period. And your petitioners will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

MEMORIAL of Messrs. Devlin and Shepherd, of Ryde.

To His Excellency Sir William Thomas Denison, Knight Commander of the Bath, Governor General of Her Majesty's Australian Colonies, and Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Her Colony of New South Wales, &c.

The petition of James Devlin, of Ryde, Parish of Hunter's Hill, landowner, and Isaac Shepherd, of Ryde aforesaid, landowner,—

SHEWETH:—

That your petitioners became possessed of land by purchase, situated in the Parish of Hunter's Hill, prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty.

That, in or about the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty your petitioners were applied to by Major Lockyer, who then held the office of Surveyor of Roads in the said Colony, to allow certain roads to be opened through the land so purchased by them, for the purpose of obtaining suitable lines of road for the convenience of the inhabitants of the district, the sites of which were level and otherwise convenient for traffic.

That Major Lockyer, whom your petitioners believed to be duly authorized by the Government to make all necessary arrangement for promoting the traffic of the district, made the following:—That, in consideration of their permitting roads to be made through their their land for the use and benefit of the public, they should have an equivalent for the land so given up by them out of the reserves made for a road upon the original survey of the district, and adjoining the land held by petitioners.

That your petitioners, in full reliance in the arrangement made, permitted roads to be made through their respective lands. That the said line of road was opened and is now used by the public; and upon the faith of the promise so made to them, they took possession of, and fenced in, the said reserved road, and have expended considerable sums of money in the cultivation and improvement thereof, and they have been in the uninterrupted possession of to this time.

That the said lines of road given up by your petitioners for the use of the public have been used for the public traffic ever since, and are the only lines so available in the immediate neighbourhood.

That your petitioners have been informed, and believe, that it is the intention of the Government to proclaim the said reserve as a parish road, under the provisions of the Act, 4 William IV, No. 11. A fact of which your petitioners, who are not in the habit of reading the Government Gazette, through which alone notification is made to landowners of the intention to open roads, that such a road through the said reserve was contemplated, and that they neglected, therefore, to set forth in writing their objections to the adoption of the line of road so proclaimed.

That your petitioners are informed, and believe, that a great number of the inhabitants of the district are prepared to petition your Excellency, praying that the said line of road may not be adopted in preference to the lines of road which have been in use for thirty years; and your Petitioners respectfully submit, that as the proposed new road will be of no benefit, as they are prepared to shew from the physical difficulty of its construction, that the equitable estate in the land, which they submit that they have under the promise, may be continued.

Your petitioners, therefore, pray that your Excellency will be pleased to withhold your Excellency's assent to opening the said line of road; and your petitioners, for such mark of justice, will pray, &c., &c.

REPORT of Acting Surveyor General.

THE line of road referred to will, in my opinion, be of little public advantage, even See No. 61. should expenditure be made on its construction; and without that would never be used in preference to the road through the Village of Ryde for vehicles.

The road has, however, been confirmed, although not yet formally opened, and the only extent to which Government could now comply with the request in this petition would be by the omission to formally open the road and to notify such opening. And this would scarcely, I think, protect Mr. Devlin in the occupation of the land, did any one desire to use the road, as neither the formal opening nor the notice is specifically prescribed by the Act. There is no room for doubt that the road passes through a driftway which has not been alienated by the Crown, although long occupied by Mr. Devlin, and it will be for the consideration of the Secretary for Lands whether, under the circumstances, the formal opening should be proceeded with.

Legislative Assembly.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

BRIDGE OVER THE MURRUMBIDGEE AT GUNDAGAI.
(PETITION FROM GUNDAGAI.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 15 January, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Residents in the Police Districts of Gundagai and Tumut, and at the Adelong Gold Fields, and others,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

1. That between the townships of North and South Gundagai, the Great Southern Road of this Colony is intersected by the Murrumbidgee River.

2. That the only means available to the public of crossing the river at this place is a punt, the property of two individuals, who hold from the Government a lease of the ferry, which lease expires on the 31st day of December, 1861. The lessees pay to the Government for their privileges an annual rent of £40; whilst their receipts from this source are, at the lowest calculation, £1,000 a year.

3. That, notwithstanding this large sum paid by the public every year for transit, the most vexatious and injurious delay is caused to travellers and traffic, by the necessarily insufficient accommodation afforded by the punt, and by the interruption to its working, resulting from the frequent rising of the river. Owing to these causes, the overland postal communication between Sydney and Melbourne, as well as the usual traffic, is often completely obstructed for more than a week at a time.

4. That the traffic between the districts on the further side of the Murrumbidgee and Sydney—including as they do the richest portions of the whole Colony—is so great, and, owing to the discovery of various Gold Fields in those districts, is so rapidly increasing, as to render the present arrangements for crossing the Murrumbidgee River, at Gundagai, utterly inadequate to the requirements of the case.

5. That, for these reasons, your Petitioners do humbly pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the grievances herein set forth into your consideration, and will adopt the only sufficient measures for their removal, namely, the construction of a Bridge over the Murrumbidgee River at Gundagai.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

WAHGUNYAH MURRAY BRIDGE COMPANY'S BILL.

FRIDAY, 8 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. HAY,
MR. MACLEAY,
MR. WILSON,

MR. MORRIS,
MR. MATE,
MR. WATT.

JOHN HAY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

William Godfrey McCarthy, Esq., (Solicitor for the Bill) called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are solicitor for this Bill? I am.
2. What is the intention of the Bill? To erect a bridge over the Murray River, as stated in the preamble, at Wahgunyah, and in connection with Corowa, which is on the New South Wales side of the river—Wahgunyah being on the Victoria side.
3. What is the proposed amount of capital? Eight thousand pounds, as stated in the second clause. W. G. McCarthy, Esq.
 8 Mar., 1861.
4. You prepared this Bill? No; I did not prepare it myself.
5. You have examined the Bill with a view to its completeness for the objects intended? Yes, I have read it through.
6. Do you know what is the model of the Bill: it seems different from that passed in this Colony? It has been founded on the Studeley Park Bill in force in Victoria.
7. I see it adopts extensively certain clauses of an Imperial Act—the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act of 1845? Yes; I have it here.
8. Have you examined those clauses with reference to their applicability to this Bill? I have.
9. And what is your opinion with regard to the efficacy of those clauses? The clauses in question are made expressly applicable to all special Acts for these purposes. I have examined them carefully with reference to their applicability to the special Bill we seek to carry through, and they do apply perfectly.
10. Those clauses, I suppose, have been very well considered, and have been long in operation in England? They have.
11. And do you consider it then a preferable course to adopt those clauses in a Bill like this rather than frame separate clauses for the purpose? Undoubtedly. They have not only stood the test of experience, but they also prevent every special Act being burdened with clauses unnecessarily. They are all referred to a parent form.
12. I suppose the interpretation too has been well tested by their having been so long in use in the Mother Country? Yes.
13. Have you any particular information to afford with regard to the plan or the site of this bridge? I have a witness in attendance who is a resident at Wahgunyah, and who is, I believe, informed very fully on all those local points.

- W. G. M'Carthy, Esq.
8 Mar., 1861.
14. What is the witness's name? Mr. J. M'Bean.
15. Have you got any plans of the bridge? I have (witness produced two maps and a plan): The large plan is, with respect to the district and surrounding localities, to show the situation of the bridge. I produce also plans shewing the elevation, and so on, and giving the scientific information in reference to the bridge.
16. From whom did you receive them? That plan, with the specification, I received from the Secretary to the Company, as the bridge they have decided on building—shewing the size, measurement, and all other particulars.
17. These (plans) are copies? Yes, prepared for the purpose of being shewn to the Committee.
18. They have the name of Mr. Merrit? Yes.
19. Is he engineer to the Company? Yes.
20. You give this as a plan of the intended structure? Yes.
21. But not as a plan by which the Company desire to be bound? No; the Bill does not profess to bind them to any particular plan, but is merely to authorize them at their own expense to build a bridge.
22. From whom have you received your instructions? From the Secretary to the Company, Mr. William Butler.

Mr. John M'Bean called in and examined:—

- Mr. J. M'Bean.
8 Mar., 1861.
23. By the Chairman: Do you know the side on which it is proposed to erect a bridge at Wahgunyah? Yes.
24. You are well acquainted with that part of the country? Yes; I have been there for the last four years.
25. Do you know the gentlemen named in this Bill: John Foord, Christopher Godfrey Baldock, and Henry Baylis? Yes.
26. Are you aware that they, with others, are prepared to form a Company for the construction of a bridge at Wahgunyah? Well, I only know from what they told me, that they were prepared to begin and build a bridge as soon as the Bill was passed.
27. Do you know if any survey has been made for the purpose of erecting a bridge? Yes, they have made arrangements with the contractors to commence constructing a bridge as soon as the Bill is passed—Mr. Cornwell, and some other gentlemen from Melbourne.
28. They have entered into contracts for the work to be commenced as soon as the Bill is passed? Yes.
29. Where is the proposed site for the bridge—do you know? On the Victorian side it is the north end of Foord-street, in the township of Wahgunyah.
30. Is that opposite the Corowa Reserve, on the New South Wales side? It is not opposite the township of Corowa, but it is opposite the Corowa Reserve.
31. Do you think that is a more suitable site than opposite the township of Corowa itself? Oh, yes; it is flooded on the Victorian side, and any bridge there would have to be made half a mile long.
32. That is, if it were erected opposite Corowa? Yes, if it were erected opposite the township of Corowa.
33. Of your own knowledge, can you say whether the site selected is the most favourable site for the erection of the bridge? It is the best site I have seen all the way from Adelaide to Albury.
34. The best site you have seen from Albury downwards? Yes.
35. And you are well acquainted with the Murray? I have been up and down the river six or seven times by the steamer. It is acknowledged by everybody acquainted with the river that this is the best site for the bridge.
36. Have you been resident at Wahgunyah for any length of time? Yes, for three years.
37. What makes the site particularly eligible—does the river not spread so much as usual there? On the Victorian side it is a high cliff, on the New South Wales side it is lower—much lower.
38. And level land? Yes.
39. As this map (the smaller) shews clearly? Yes, it is low land, but it is very seldom flooded, except along this lagoon. (Lagoon pointed out by witness.)
40. It is very seldom flooded on the New South Wales side? Yes.
41. Then the level land is higher than the surrounding land generally is? Yes.
42. And the communication with the bridge will be very seldom interrupted, even on occasions of very high flood? Very seldom; but I understood that the Company were to make approaches from the high bank to the bridge, so that it would not matter what the flood might be.
43. So that the bridge would be passable at any time—in the highest flood? Yes.
44. What is the distance of Wahgunyah from Albury? Forty miles by land.
45. What is the distance from the township of Chiltern, in Victoria? From where?
46. From Wahgunyah? It is sixteen miles.
47. Is there a considerable population at Wahgunyah now? I cannot state what is the number of the population, but four miles from the south of Wahgunyah there is a town called Rutherglen. There was a rush to that place, and there are about seven thousand people there.
48. At the present time? Yes, they were there when I left, a month ago. And again, six miles to the south of Rutherglen there is a town called Christmas Town, where there are about three thousand people.

49. Engaged in mining? Engaged in mining—and further on is Chiltern.
50. Which is about sixteen miles distance? Yes, through which the Sydney road passes.
51. Chiltern is on the main line of road? Yes, from Wangaratta to Albury.
52. Is there a large population near Chiltern? Oh, yes, there are five thousand people in the neighbourhood of Chiltern. There is, within a radius of sixteen miles from Wahgunyah, according to the police returns, a population of fifteen thousand people.
53. In the Colony of Victoria? In the Colony of Victoria.
54. How far is it from Wahgunyah to Beechworth? Thirty miles.
55. Do you know how far it is from Albury to Beechworth? About the same distance.
56. Then do you consider Wahgunyah, as far as the present mining population is concerned, to be the most eligible terminus of the Murray River steam trade? Yes; you save, in the first place, by landing your cargoes at Wahgunyah, one hundred and twenty miles of navigation.
57. To Albury? Yes; you will be nearer the Gold Fields: you will be only sixteen miles from Chiltern, four miles from Rutherglen and the intermediate place called Christmas Town—and you will be as near Beechworth; steamers have found it necessary to land their cargoes there.
58. What sort of country is it on the New South Wales side of the river at and about the site of the bridge? It is a very fine country indeed, it is all good country.
59. An agricultural country? Yes.
60. Both up and down? I have not seen finer country in the Colony than that between Corowa and Albury. A great many farmers are settled there now.
61. Is there much land sold there? Yes, considerable quantities of land have been sold.
62. What is their principal market? Rutherglen, Chiltern, and Beechworth.
63. In fact the population—which is the mining population—on the southern side of the river? Yes, they are obliged to sell their produce on the diggings.
64. So that to get at their market they must cross the river? They must cross the river to get at their market.
65. Do you anticipate that it would be of great advantage to the agriculturists who are settled on the New South Wales side of the river, if a bridge were erected at this place? Most decidedly.
66. According to your account, it would enable them at all times to cross with their produce? Yes; they are now paying high rates to cross in punts.
67. What is the nature of the provision for crossing the river now at Wahgunyah? Just a common punt.
68. That is where? A little below the site of the proposed bridge.
69. Is there only one punt in that vicinity? There is only one.
70. To whom does that punt belong? It is Mr. Foord's.
71. Does that pay anything to the Government of New South Wales, do you know? I am not aware that it does.
72. The Government of New South Wales derive no advantage from it—can you tell us what the charges are? I cannot exactly state what the charges are.
73. They are not regulated by any Act of the Government of New South Wales? No; Mr. Foord himself fixes them; they are lower than the Albury rates, and the Government rates too—this is all I know.
74. Then you cannot tell us exactly what they are? No; but I understood that the revenue exceeded six hundred pounds a year—that was twelve months ago; but now the traffic is increased considerably, owing to the rush to Corowa.
75. There is a Gold Field now on the New South Wales side of the river? Yes, about four miles north of Wahgunyah.
76. Have you been there lately? I have not been on the Gold Field, it was discovered about the time I left.
77. Is that Gold Field extensively developed? From letters which I have lately received, there were only about a thousand people at Corowa,—there is a great scarcity of water there.
78. By Mr. Morris: Four miles back from the river? There is no water except in the river.
79. By the Chairman: You cannot tell us, then, what the tolls are at the punt? They are much higher than the scale in the Bill.
80. Have you seen that—foot passengers, 3d.; pigs or goats, 2d.; and sheep, ½d? The passengers now pay 6d.
81. Foot passengers? Yes.
82. Do you know what they charge for sheep? I do not; but I know I pay 1s. 6d. for crossing on my horse.
83. 1s. 6d. for a horse? Yes.
84. You do not recollect what they charge for vehicles? For a dray and eight bullocks it is 8s.
85. A two-wheeled dray? Yes, 8s.
86. You know a good deal about the steamers? Oh, yes.
87. And the steam trade on the Murray? Yes.
88. What do you think will be the effect of the erection of this bridge on the navigation of the river? It will not obstruct the navigation, unless there is some enormous flood which rises to a height that has not been known before. The cliff is very high on the Victoria side; and I see by the Bill that there will be allowed fifteen feet clear of high water—the river at the very highest flood does not remain at that height. I never knew it to remain at its highest above twenty-four hours; the water then recedes.
89. It recedes rapidly? Yes. I think fifteen feet is ample, if steamers had their funnels hinged.

Mr. J.M. Bean:

8 Mar., 1861.

- Mr. J. M'Bean. 90. Is the space of fifteen feet ample for any of these steamers if they have their funnels hinged? Yes, at the highest water fifteen feet will be quite sufficient.
- 6 Mar., 1861. 91. I suppose that when the funnels are hinged, a steamer does not require much greater height than to allow the paddle-boxes to pass? That is all.
92. The bridge is the highest part, higher than the funnels? Yes, where the wheel is.
93. There is no difficulty in having the funnels hinged? No; they can be lowered in a second. All river steamers should have their funnels hinged for this reason—there are overgrown branches of trees along the rivers, and they are compelled to lower their funnels.
94. Have you been at Wahgunyah at very high floods? Yes, I have been there at the highest flood which has occurred for the last three years.
95. Could you say, from recollection, what number of feet it rose to from the top of the cliff on the Victoria side? I cannot tell; we have a water-gauge at Wahgunyah, which shews us the number of feet the water rises from the lowest ebb; and the highest I have seen it rise is twelve feet, according to the gauge.
96. From the lowest to the highest? From low water; twelve feet above that is the highest I have seen it there.
97. By Mr. Watt: In how many years? In three years.
98. By the Chairman: And from what you have heard, what would you suppose to be the comparative height of that flood you spoke of as having been the highest during the last three years, in reference to floods which have taken place before? Mr. Foord told me of a much higher flood than that.
99. By Mr. Morris: How much higher, do you remember? I could not state the number of feet, but it was a much higher flood than any I have seen.
100. By the Chairman: That was one particular great flood? Yes.
101. Did he point out to you any spot on the bank? He pointed out logs which the flood had left on the bank, and shewed me the height of the water from that.
102. By Mr. Watt: On the New South Wales side—on the low ground? Yes, it must have been an extraordinary high flood to leave the logs where he pointed them out to me: it is impossible for it to get flooded on the Wahgunyah side.
103. I see they have marked here (on the plans produced) the distance between the level of low water and the highest flood as being fifteen feet perpendicularly? Very likely.
104. That would be three feet higher than the highest you have observed? Yes.
105. And have you any idea how high that would be from the top cliff—the highest that you have observed? I should think it would be about seventeen feet.
106. It might be twenty? It might be twenty. I calculated always seventeen feet when I saw the river at its highest. I did not measure it, but I calculated it at that.
107. I see by this plan that it would be a little more? They will very likely raise the bridge a little above the roadway.
108. Does that (showing plan to witness) give you a pretty accurate idea of the construction? Oh, yes, it shews you the high cliff, and the road is higher than the cliff, and that would make the height appear greater; I calculated from the cliff itself.
109. So that your observation would pretty well agree with this plan? Yes; it is very seldom the river is at the height shewn in the plan. I never saw the flood so high at Wahgunyah as at the time I mentioned, and it only remained so for twenty-four or thirty hours.
110. How far would it have fallen in the course of these twenty-four hours? It generally falls about two feet per day on an average, until it comes down to about middle flood.
111. Six or eight feet above low-water mark? Yes, and then it remains stationary, perhaps for months.
112. Does the river run with great rapidity in high floods? It does there, on account of the contracted channel.
113. Do you think river steamers could stem the current? Yes.
114. By Mr. Watt: At high flood? Yes, at any flood.
115. By the Chairman: What width between the piers would it require to give accommodation for the largest class of steamers that navigate the Murray? The largest beam that I have seen on the Murray, or that I know of about to be placed on the river, is thirty-four feet over all; but there is no steamer on the river at present as broad as that; there is, however, one building of that size.
116. Do you think it likely that steamers of greater beam are likely to be employed on the Murray? They will require to have a larger beam to have lighter draught of water.
117. Perhaps forty feet? Perhaps so.
118. It is not likely to be more? I have no knowledge of ship-building, but that is what I understood.
119. You are not prepared to give an opinion as to the likelihood of increased beam or increased height in the steamers? I know the height; the depth of the hold is never more than six or seven feet; and if they draw two feet of water, that would be four feet above water to the deck, and then comes the funnel.
120. I see it mentioned that some steamer on an American plan was to be built? That is thirty-four feet build over all.
121. Do you mean the one being put together now? Yes.
122. Do you know what height that will be out of the water? When laden, her deck could not be above four feet above water.
123. But what would be the height of the bridge of the steamer above water—would she be higher than ordinary vessels? That is the highest, certainly. It would be four feet more—another four feet.
124. Than what you have mentioned? Yes.
125. But what height would the bridge of this steamer be above the water's edge? It would be at least ten feet.

126. Not more? No; if you notice in going along decked ships, you can just get under ^{Mr. J.M'Bean.} the bridge, and not much more—which is six or seven feet to the deck.
127. Then if the vessel was light coming down the river, it would require more room? ^{8 Mar., 1861.} Yes, a little more.
128. Twelve feet, perhaps? There is one just built; it is reported that this vessel will draw two feet, but when light she would only draw half that, which would make one foot difference.
129. Did you say what was the greatest height required by any of the steamers? The "Gundagai" is the only one trading up now, and the "Sturt." The "Gundagai," when laden, draws four and a half feet; that would leave about three feet above water to the deck.
130. How much more? The bridge is six and a half feet above the deck, and the funnel is hinged.
131. She would only take, then, according as she was laden or light, from ten to twelve feet? Yes.
132. To give her a free passage under the bridge? Yes.
133. You think seventeen feet ample? Seventeen feet is ample for steamers.
134. Do you know the "Bunyip"—Randolph's steamer? Yes.
135. That steamer would require a greater height, would it not? I do not know. If they can lower their funnels, the height of the deck is nothing;—it could not be anything like seventeen feet—the depth of the boat; besides, at present none of the steamers pass Wahgunyah, and have not for the last three years; no steamers have been at Albury since five years ago.
136. By Mr. Watt: Why? There is no inducement for them; the trade is done with the diggings—the Gold Fields in the neighbourhood of Wahgunyah and Beechworth; and by going to Albury it would be one hundred and twenty miles further of navigation, and you would not be any nearer to the Gold Fields; nor would there be as good a way as from Wahgunyah.
137. Is not there a sufficient number of inhabitants above Albury to create a market, and supply a steamer? No; not above Albury. There are the Yakandah Diggings above Albury, to supply steamers from Wahgunyah, but that is only thirty miles from Wahgunyah.
138. By the Chairman: Still there is a considerable trade at Albury? Oh, yes.
139. But it is the increased distance from Wahgunyah which I suppose prevents that trade from being carried on by the steamers to Albury? Yes.
140. The trade is carried on otherwise overland? Yes; besides the river is not navigable from Albury, except at high water.
141. That is to say, the navigability is not so practicable above Wahgunyah? No.
142. At the same time you do not consider it would be desirable to make Wahgunyah the head of the navigation? It will be the principal.
143. You think it will be so? Yes, I think so, because one or two cargoes would supply Albury for twelve months: they raise their own produce, and only require general merchandise—foreign goods.
144. By Mr. Watt: They would have no market for flour down the river? But Albury exports a good deal of flour to the diggings.
145. By the Chairman: Which may be sent as cheaply by the road? Yes; three years ago I sold a thousand tons of Adelaide flour in twelve months, but last year there were only eight hundred tons of flour brought from Adelaide.
146. To Wahgunyah? Yes, but there would not have been so much required had it not been for the Ratherglen and Corowa rush, and the new diggings.

WEDNESDAY, 13 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. MACLEAY, | MR. MATE,
MR. MORRIS.

JOHN HAY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Present for parties—W. G. M'Carthy, Esq., Solicitor for the Bill.

Edward Orpen Moriarty, Esq., called in and examined:—

147. By the Chairman: What is your profession? I am a Civil Engineer by profession. ^{E.O.Moriarty, Esq.}
148. You are likewise in the Government employment? Yes, I am Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers. ^{13 Mar., 1861.}
149. You are aware of the project for building a bridge over the Murray River at Wahgunyah? Yes, I am aware that there is a Bill for that purpose.
150. You have seen certain plans? I have.
151. It is a pile bridge that is proposed? Yes, a pile bridge.
152. Do you think that is the best sort of bridge, generally speaking, in this country? That depends upon the locality, the facilities for getting timber and so on; I am not sufficiently acquainted with the locality there to pronounce an opinion as to the suitableness of the bridge.

- E.O. Moriarty, Esq.
13 Mar., 1861.
153. There is not the same cause to operate against a pile bridge in the interior that there is on the coast—the timber is not likely to be attacked by the worm? Not in the fresh water. The mere effect of that is to save the cost of coppering.
154. Do you think the proposed height, 15 feet above the highest water mark, would be sufficient to provide for any navigation there is likely to be on such a river as the Murray? I think 15 feet is quite enough above the highest flood level.
155. That is on the supposition that the funnels of the steamers are hinged and capable of being depressed? Yes; it is a very simple arrangement, and a very common one.
156. Have you looked over the Bill proposed? No, I have not.
157. You were engineer for some bridges that were put up on the Hawkesbury? Yes.
158. Were they pile bridges? Both pile bridges.
159. As to the width of the piers—what do you think should be the minimum width of pier sufficient to provide for the passage of such vessels as are likely to navigate a tortuous river like the Murray? The bays, or openings, in that design are 72 feet.
160. That would be sufficient? Ample.
161. Would not less than that be sufficient? Less than that would do, but as they have fixed that amount I should say that is a very fair allowance.

Mr. Robert Napier called in and examined:—

- Mr. R. Napier.
13 Mar., 1861.
162. By the Chairman: What are you by profession? An engineer.
163. Have you been connected with the construction or ownership of any of the steamers that have been plying on the Murray River? Yes, I was part owner of one that my partner and myself brought out in frame and put together at Port Adelaide, and with which we traded on the Murray.
164. Were you trading yourself on the Murray in that vessel? Yes, my partner and myself went together, he was master and I was engineer of the vessel.
165. Have you been up the Murray as far as Wahgunyah? Yes, several times.
166. As far as Albury? No.
167. Have you taken steamers as far as Wahgunyah? Yes.
168. But not further? No.
169. Have you reason to suppose that the navigability of the river is inferior above Wahgunyah to what it is below? No, the navigation is quite as easy up to Albury, but at present there is no trade there.
170. Then Wahgunyah was as well situated as a terminus for the trade as Albury? Yes.
171. And of course there was so much less river navigation? Yes.
172. Do you know the site of the proposed bridge at Wahgunyah? No, I cannot say I do.
173. You are not aware of the exact locality? No.
174. Is the river near there, in your opinion, favourable for the erection of a bridge? Yes, there is high ground on each side.
175. The access to the river is comparatively good at that part of it? Yes.
176. The river is more confined within one channel? Yes, than it is in some other parts.
177. There is not such a great extent of flooded ground? No, the land lies higher there than it is in other places.
178. There is a considerable population on the Victorian side of the river, is there not? Yes, but I could not say how many.
179. There are extensive diggings in the neighbourhood, are there not? Yes; I have not been there since the newest diggings were found.
180. Have you been up since the Chiltern diggings were opened? Yes.
181. From your experience of the navigation of the river, and of the steamers which are used, or are likely to be used on that river, what is your opinion as to the provision that will require to be made, in the erection of a bridge, for the passage of steamers under it? Well, I could say what height would be absolutely requisite to enable them to go under at a given height of the water. It would require fourteen feet for the largest at present on the river; and I think there is not likely to be any requiring more than fourteen feet clear from the top of the paddle-boxes to the water.
182. What is the largest steamer now that requires the greatest height? There used to be a vessel called the "Sturt," which was about 37 feet overall.
183. That vessel would require a height of about fourteen feet? Yes, when light.
184. What tonnage is the "Sturt"? I think about 120 or 130 tons.
185. And you do not think it is likely that vessels will be navigated on the Murray requiring any greater height? No, not on that part of the Murray; when there is any trade up there it is more likely to be carried on by a small class of vessels.
186. Is it likely that vessels may be constructed for the navigation of the Murray, something more on the American principle, with a small draught of water, but standing higher out of the water? I should think not. There is an American at present building a vessel at Port Adelaide for the Murray, but I do not apprehend she would be higher than fourteen feet. She is a larger vessel than any at present on the river, but will not be so much overall; she is broader, but the paddle-wheel is placed at the stern of the vessel.
187. So that she will not require so much width? No.
188. Do you think she will require more height? I cannot say what size the paddle-wheel is likely to be. It depends upon that. The Americans are rather given to very extensive paddles; but I should think it would have the advantage in this case of being exactly in the middle of the bridge, and so taking the highest part of it. It could soon be ascertained ^{Mr. R. Napier.} what height she is to be.

189. If there was any difference in the height of that particular bay of the bridge it would be ^{13 Mar., 1854.} an advantage to this vessel in particular on account of her only paddle being in the centre of the vessel? Yes.

190. And the highest part would therefore be exactly in the centre? Yes.

191. In this vessel, or any vessel constructed according to American principles, do you suppose the height of the paddle-wheel would regulate the necessary height—that that in fact would be the highest part of the vessel—or would the decks rise higher? In the American vessels the decks frequently rise higher than the paddles; but I do not apprehend that that class of vessels will be suitable for the Murray trade, inasmuch as there is not likely to be so much passenger traffic as on the American rivers, and they are only made that way to get accommodation for passengers.

192. Even if the traffic was considerably extended on the Murray, you do not think the passenger traffic would be likely to become very extensive? No; not to require such vessels as the American.

193. The circuitous nature of the river rendering travelling by it somewhat tedious? Yes.

194. Your opinion then is that a bridge having bays 72 feet wide and 15 feet clear above high-water mark in the central bays would be sufficient for the accommodation of any trade likely to arise on that part of the Murray? If that 15 feet is above the highest flood level I should say it is quite sufficient.

195. Do you know anything about the highest flood level at Wahgunyah? I do not. I have never been there when the river was high.

196. There is a very high bank on the Wahgunyah side, is there not? Yes.

197. A sort of cliff? You can hardly call it a cliff.

198. A steep bank? Yes.

199. You cannot form a reliable opinion as to whether the water overtops that bank or not? No, not of my own knowledge.

200. You have never heard of its have done so, have you? No; I should feel myself safe in saying it would be a very long way from overtopping that at the very highest.

201. I suppose you do not know anything about the management of the punt at Wahgunyah, and the tolls charged there? No, I do not.

Legislative Assembly.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

PUBLIC WHARF AT WINDSOR.
(PETITION FOR.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned Inhabitants of the Town and District of Windsor,—
RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That the town and district of Windsor are amongst the oldest settled localities of the Colony, containing, in round numbers, about ten thousand inhabitants.

That the town of Windsor is the head of the navigation of that important river called the Hawkesbury, and, for many years, numerous sailing crafts have traded upon it, to and from Windsor and Sydney.

That latterly the traffic upon the river has greatly increased, and steamboats frequently visit Windsor greatly to the advantage of the residents of Sydney and other parts of the Colony, as well as of the people of the town and district.

That much inconvenience and loss is occasioned to the steamboats and vessels trading to and stopping at Windsor, and to passengers and others interested, by reason of there being no proper wharf or landing-place for passengers or goods at Windsor; and your Petitioners believe that the time has arrived when it is absolutely necessary that a structure of that description should, at a moderate cost, be erected.

That considering that the town and district of Windsor, from their extent, importance, and population, necessarily contribute largely to the revenue and general prosperity of the Colony.

Your Petitioners humbly pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your early consideration, and grant your Petitioners such relief as to your Honorable House shall seem meet.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

PROPOSED STEAM FERRY AT RAYMOND TERRACE.

(PETITION.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 3 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

In consequence of the immense traffic existing between Stroud, Port Stephens, Manning, Gloucester, Port Macquarie, M'Leay, and New England, with Newcastle, Morpeth, East and West Maitland, the only outlet being across the River Hunter, by the Raymond Terrace Punt, it was unanimously agreed at a meeting convened at the Court House, Raymond Terrace, of the householders, landowners, and others, that a Petition should be presented to your Honorable House, relative to the present communication across the River Hunter, at Raymond Terrace, and to suggest an alteration by which the present means of transit would be materially improved, and the expenses greatly lessened.

We, the undersigned, beg most respectfully to inform your Honorable House, that the Government having lately surveyed and opened a road from Seaham and Hinton to Raymond Terrace, at the junction of the Williams and Hunter Rivers, on which a punt will of necessity be required, and which will entail a cost of from five to six hundred pounds for a punt, besides the making of roads, wharves, and approaches, on both sides of the ferry, we, with all due respect, beg to suggest the granting to Raymond Terrace a Steam Ferry of five or six horse-power, capable of carrying a team of six bullocks and loaded dray, when the present punt could be removed to some other ferry of smaller traffic. The present ferry to Maitland, and the one across the Williams to Hinton, being so close to each other, the same steam ferry would be enabled to act on both lines of road, thus saving a new punt, rope, &c., besides preventing an obstruction in the navigation, which a punt rope at the junction of the Williams would be. The increasing number of passengers and traffic on the Maitland line will, in a short time, require either a punt of larger carrying capacity or a quicker means of propulsion. The plying of the steam ferry from the present punt wharf, centrally situated in the town to both termini, would thus save the expense of making the approaches and wharf on the Raymond Terrace side of the Williams River. Hoping your Honorable House will take into its favourable consideration the foregoing resolutions.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

COLONIAL SECRETARY to BENCH OF MAGISTRATES, WINDSOR.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 14 March, 1861.

GENTLEMEN,

With reference to your letter of the 25th ultimo, I am directed to point out that in the accompanying Return, relative to persons relieved by you on the occasion of the last Flood in your District, you have, in several cases, omitted to furnish the names of the gentlemen at whose instance the relief was afforded, and to request that you will be good enough to complete the Return in this particular, and transmit it to this office at your earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

BENCH OF MAGISTRATES, WINDSOR, to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Court House, Windsor,
25 March, 1861.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 14th instant, relative to the Return of persons relieved on the occasion of the last Flood in this District, which was furnished by us on the 25th ultimo, and pointing out that, in several cases, the names of the gentlemen, at whose instance the relief was afforded, is omitted, we do ourselves the honor to inform you, that the idea never occurred to the Magistrates that the recommendations would ever be required, and, therefore, they were not taken such care of as if they had been considered public documents. In some instances, it was known to us that the parties applying were in distress and stood in need of relief, owing to the Flood, either of our own knowledge, or from recommendations received on former occasions.

The list of persons relieved is now returned under separate cover.

Dated 25 Feb.,

We have, &c.,

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 5 February, 1861.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

(No. 11.)

Downing-street,
7 February, 1859.

SIR,

With reference to that part of my Despatch, No. 43, of the 17th of November, in which you were informed that the Act of your Government, No. 4, of 22nd Victoria, "to increase the rates of Pilotage and to impose certain Harbor Dues and to provide further for the Pilot Establishments of New South Wales," was under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, I transmit to you herewith the copy of a letter which has been received from the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, in reply to the reference which was made upon the subject to that Board, and I have to request that you will submit to your responsible advisers the expediency of amending the Act in the manner pointed out by their Lordships.

I have, &c.,
 E. B. LYTTON.

 [Enclosure.]

Office of Committee of Privy Council for Trade, Whitehall, 26 November, 1858.

SIR,

I am directed by the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th ultimo, transmitting a copy of an Act of New South Wales (No. 4, 22nd Victoria), entitled an Act to increase the rates of Pilotage, and to impose certain Harbor Dues, and to provide further for the Pilot Establishment of that Colony.

In reply, I am to request that you will state to Secretary Sir E. B. Lytton, that, by the 3rd section of this Act, vessels trading between the ports of New South Wales, or between any port of New South Wales and any port in any other of the Australian Colonies, or in the whaling trade, and being registered in New South Wales, or in any other Australian Colony, or in the United Kingdom, are, except in certain cases, subject to one payment only of the Pilotage rate fixed by the Act for each year in respect of any port in New South Wales. This provision is inconsistent with these treaties of reciprocity between this country and Foreign States, which provide that not only in Great Britain, but in any of Her Majesty's dominions, no other or higher dues shall be levied on the shipping of those States than are levied on national vessels.

It may perhaps not be necessary that, on this account, the expression of Her Majesty's pleasure on the Act should be suspended, but my Lords would suggest that the attention of the Governor should be called to the subject, in order that the Act may, at the earliest convenient opportunity, be amended so as to extend to all vessels of whatever country (or at least to the vessels of countries with which treaties of reciprocity may be subsisting) engaged in the trades specified in the 3rd section of the Act, the privilege conferred by that section.

Mr. Elliot.

I have, &c.,
 JAMES BOOTH.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Downing-street,

SIR,

I have received your Despatch No. 109, of the 29th July, forwarding authenticated copies of three Acts passed by the Legislature of New South Wales, the numbers, dates, and titles of which will be found in the annexed Schedule, and to which you have assented in Her Majesty's name.

I have to acquaint you that I have laid the two Acts, No. 3 and No. 5, before the Queen, and that they will be left to their operation.

The Act No. 4 is still under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

I have, &c.,
E. B. LYTTON.

LIGHT-HOUSE, NEAR JERVIS BAY.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly appointed on the 12th February last, "to inquire into all the circumstances connected with the erection of the Light-house, near Jervis Bay," and to whom, on the 1st and 7th March, were severally referred "the Return of all Correspondence and other documents connected with the erection of the Light-house," and "the Report of the Commissioners appointed by the Governments of New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, and Tasmania, to confer upon the subject of Light-houses in the several Australian Colonies, together with the Minutes of Evidence taken before the said Commissioners," have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee having given to the subject submitted to their consideration all the attention which its importance demanded, now beg to state the result they have arrived at, after very full and careful inquiry. They have examined very fully all the members of the Pilot Board, with whom they imagined this question principally rested, as well as other persons who might through circumstances have been in a position to have afforded information.

Capt. H. J. Browne.
Capt. DeLoitte.
Capt. Darley.
Capt. Chas. Smith.
Capt. Fox.
Capt. Watson.
Colonial Architect.
Surveyor General.
Engineer for Rivers and Harbours.

2. Your Committee have to express their unqualified regret that errors—very grave errors, highly censurable—have been committed in the erection of this Light-house, which, from the evidence of the entire Pilot Board, is not only not erected on the spot where its benefits would have been most extensive, but has been placed where it never should have been built, according to the unanimous opinion of the Board; while the majority—and these four gentlemen, it is now shewn, incomparably the best qualified to give an authoritative opinion on the subject—assert, unhesitatingly, that the Light is calculated to prove prejudicial, and should be at once extinguished.

3. It appears that the Government of the day, influenced by the report of a Conference, requested the Surveyor General to direct a survey of the coast near Cape St. George, with the view of fixing a site for a Light-house in that vicinity. (It is worthy of remark that the subject was never brought under the notice of the Port Master, the head of the Light Department at that time, although that officer had on various occasions, occasions, orally and by letter, submitted to the Government the necessity of erecting a Light on Crocodile Head, as well as on other places in the Colony.)

pp. 33, 34.

4. This survey, when made, was forwarded to the Pilot Board, to determine which of two spots, marked S and T, was preferable.

Vide 444.

5. The Pilot Board at once decided that neither was the proper spot for a Light-house, the majority—four to two—agreeing that Crocodile Head was the best situation. This decision the Chairman overruled; enforced a decision as to which of the points, S or T, was preferable; and conveyed to the Government, not only that S was preferable to T, but added, without any authority, that “they therefore approve of the tower as recommended by you being erected.” This addition was removed from the Minute Book at the next meeting, but it does not appear that this fact was communicated to the Government; and your Committee feel bound to express their disapprobation of the disingenuousness of an officer who, as Chairman of the Pilot Board, conveyed to the Government, authoritatively, as the opinion of the Board, what in point of fact was at variance with it, and which by one member has been stigmatized as untrue.

6. Another gross neglect on the part of the Pilot Board was, in not having suggested the necessity of fixing the precise spot for the erection of the building after a personal inspection, a procedure which would have saved the country an outlay of over £5,000—a course actually pointed out by the Port Master not very long previously.

In conclusion, your Committee recommend, that a Commission of competent persons be at once appointed to investigate and decide upon the proper situation—whether at Cape St. George, Crocodile Head, or any other spot in that vicinity.

MERION MORIARTY.

Chairman.

Committee met pursuant to summons.

Copies of the Draft Report having been furnished to Members upon the 26th ultimo.

Proposed Report read, paragraph by paragraph.

Paragraphs 1 to 6 (now 5) successively read, and agreed to without amendment.

(Paragraph 4, placed within parentheses.)

Paragraph 7 (now 6) read, viz.:—

Vide 585.

“Another gross neglect was in the Chairman of the Board not having suggested the necessity of fixing the precise spot for the erection of the building personally, a procedure which would have saved the country an outlay of over £5,000—a course actually pointed out by the Port Master not very long previously.”

Amended, on motion of Mr. Piddington, and agreed to.

Paragraphs 8 and 9 (now 7 and 8) respectively read, viz.:—

Vide 600, 611.

“It is scarcely possible to doubt that a Minister, charged with the department, on a professional subject, the full merits of which he could not be supposed to understand, would have deferred to the opinion of the majority of that Board, under whose exclusive management it was vested; and it appears unfortunate that he should, under any influence, which it is clear was exercised, have submitted from the proper Colonial authority the decision of a question to two naval officers in no way responsible, one of whom (Commodore Loring) does not appear to have assigned any reason for differing with persons so every way qualified to decide this question, and the other (Captain Denham) gives as reasons for his opinion what it would have been much more to the credit of his professional character not to have advanced,—and, be it remembered, without personal examination by either.

Vide 619, 620, 621.

“We trust, this is the last time we shall hear of a Responsible Minister of the Crown setting at naught the opinions of a Board specially appointed for the decision of such subjects, and appealing from their decision to persons no way responsible to the country, who, although officers of rank, are not necessarily of superior professional attainments or higher intellectual power,—to bolster up the opinions of a minority, as in this case, on their own shewing, the least competent to form sound opinions on the subject.”

Severally expunged.

Concluding paragraph withdrawn.

Chairman's new paragraph, proposed in lieu thereof, agreed to.

Motion made (Mr. Garrett) and Question,—That the Draft Report, as amended, be the Report of this Committee,—agreed to.

Chairman requested to report to the House.

Alexander Dawson, Esq., called in and examined:—

- A. Dawson,
Esq.
28 Feb., 1861.
9. By the Chairman: You are Colonial Architect? Yes.
10. And have been for a considerable period? Upwards of six years.
11. I believe that in the year 1857 you received instructions from the Under Secretary for Public Works to prepare plans and join with Mr. Surveyor Millington in framing a report as to the eligibility of the different sites for a light-house, at Jervis Bay, marked on a plan forwarded to you? I was requested to accompany Mr. Surveyor Millington to Cape St. George, for the purpose of inspecting the nature of the summit of the locality, and to ascertain the description of material procurable for building operations.
12. Proper material for the building? Proper material for the building, as well as to ascertain the easiest approach to the summit of the Cape.
13. Without any reference to the site? Without any reference to the survey at all. I never interfered with the survey; I did not consider it part of my duty to interfere with the Survey Department in making the survey of the locality, and while Mr. Millington was occupied in doing so I was inspecting the locality to find out proper material, and other information that I have already stated to the Committee.
14. Then, in point of fact, your survey went only to ascertain whether proper material could be obtained conveniently? Only for that and the approach to the light-house. I refused to take any part in the survey, or in fixing the actual site of the light-house; I considered that to be the duty of the Survey Department, and consequently Mr. Surveyor Millington was appointed by the Surveyor General for that purpose. (Vide the Surveyor General's letter of the 8th July, 1857.)
15. Was any particular place pointed out to you as the proper position for the light-house to be erected? After Mr. Millington had taken his survey he showed me in his field book the two points marked S and T. Mr. Millington informed me that his instructions were to survey Cape St. George, and the gist of the whole question lies in this—how far does Cape St. George extend? (Witness explained by reference to charts produced by Mr. Wilshire.)
16. Where were you desired to build the light-house? On the point marked S, the site approved of by the Pilot Board. (Vide Appendix A.)
17. Is that the spot where the light-house is now erected? That is the precise spot.
18. The light-house, as at present erected, has its sphere of vision intercepted by high land to the southward of it, between it and George's Head? I believe that is the case, although I have not personally tested it.
19. So that vessels coming from Bateman's Bay do not see the light till they get within—? I would rather decline answering that question, being a nautical one; I would prefer giving no opinion on nautical subjects. This is the fifth light-house I have built on the coast of New South Wales, and I have never presumed to give any opinion with respect to the proper site of any of them.
20. Did any one go with you, on the part of the Pilot Board, to point out the precise spot on which the light-house should be erected? No; the Board approved of the site as marked on Mr. Millington's plan in Sydney, and I believe without the Board seeing the site at all. I insisted on being furnished with the opinion of the Board in writing before I would commence the light-house. I had been told verbally severally times by the Chairman of the Board that the site marked S, shown on Mr. Millington's chart, was the right one; but I would not go on with building operations until I got an authority in writing to that effect from the Board, and, accordingly, in the letter of Mr. Wilshire, the Secretary to the Board, dated 4th July, 1859, you will find the following:—"With reference to the sites marked S and T on the coast chart, the Board coincide with you in opinion—also expressed by Mr. Surveyor Millington—that that marked S possesses considerable advantages over the latter, and they therefore approve of the tower being erected as recommended by you." Now you will observe—
21. Your recommendation was simply confined to the superiority of one spot over another? That is what I was just going to remark, without reference to George's Head or any other head.
22. It was simply the expression of your opinion that one spot was preferable to another, as between two spots? Yes, on Cape St. George.
23. Not that the spot marked S was the best possible site that could have been chosen? No; on the contrary, I consider that there are three other spots that would be more eligible, viz., either George's Head, Point Perpendicular, or Crocodile Head; the latter is, you are aware, a continuation of Point Perpendicular; I should prefer Crocodile Head; but that is merely my individual opinion, and not one which I am in any way required to give officially.
24. By Mr. Wilson: Crocodile Head is the easternmost point of the North Head of Jervis Bay? Yes. Although I think Crocodile Head on the whole the most favourable site, yet there are disadvantages connected with it as regards Wreck Bay, for the light, if placed there, would not be seen in Wreck Bay.
25. By the Chairman: You never had the spot fixed by any member of the Pilot Board, and pointed out to you as the spot on which you were to erect the light-house? No; all the instructions I received were as I have already stated.
26. No intimation of that kind was afforded to you? No, excepting by letter. As I said before, I would not proceed with the building of the tower until the Pilot Board approved of the site as marked upon the plan, and communicated their approval to me by letter. When they did so, I procured tenders and commenced to build the tower and out-buildings.
27. Are you of opinion that if the Board had sent some one to point out the site on the ground, it would have prevented any subsequent fault being found with the erection of the light-house? I am of this opinion, that if the Pilot Board had taken the trouble to have gone and verified the site marked S, they would have seen that George's Head was the preferable preferable site—and that would have been the cause of opening up the question, and making known the fact that the Surveyor General's instructions to Mr. Millington were to survey Cape St. George. No doubt any member of the Board would have seen that George's Head was a preferable site. Any nautical person going down would have seen that Cape St. George was not so good a site as George's Head.

A. Dawson,
Esq.

23 Feb., 1861.

28. You were influenced a good deal in your opinion, as far as these two places were concerned, by the facilities afforded for the erection of the light-house? Yes, I preferred the point marked S to the point marked T on that account.

29. It possessed advantages over T as far as the material for the light-house was concerned? Yes.

30. By Mr. Dalgleish: You gave your opinion merely as an architect? As the architect to carry out the erection of the buildings —

31. With regard to the solidity of the foundation, and the adaptability of the position for obtaining materials? Yes, of course, and to examine other facilities, such as approaches, &c., &c.

32. You do not consider anything you have stated here, with regard to any other point, as anything more than the opinion of a private individual, without any reference to your architectural duties? Yes, without any reference to my official duties.

33. Consequently your opinion with regard to the preferential site is merely the opinion of an individual? Yes, of a private individual. With reference to your last question, Mr. Chairman, you will see that in my report to the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, dated 17th August, 1857, I say:—"The site marked T is situated on another cliff of similar geological structure, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the northward of site S; its present height is 195 feet above the level of the sea, and the light, if this spot be selected, would be elevated 215 feet above the sea-level; the range of vision is only 174 degrees. A heavy outlay would have to be incurred in cutting down the top of the cliff to obtain a sufficiently level site; the access to it is most difficult for cart, or even for foot traffic. The cost, under these circumstances, of erecting the necessary buildings, cannot be estimated at less than £6,500—that is upwards of £2,000 more than the other. The figures of levels, &c., in this report, are from Mr. Millington's survey."

34. By the Chairman: Was any visit paid by the Pilot Board during the erection of the building? No, not that I am aware of, until the lantern was fixed.

35. By Mr. Wilson: The Pilot Board visited the locality before the lantern was lit—did they not? Yes, they did—some short time before the lantern was lighted. I went down to light the lantern myself.

APPENDIX A.

Added to Appendix No. 16.

I beg to refer the Committee to the Board's instructions and acquiescence of the site marked S* to me, viz.:—"With reference to the sites marked S and T on the coast chart, the Board coincide with you in opinion—also expressed by Mr. Surveyor Millington—that that marked S possesses considerable advantages over the latter, and they therefore approve of the tower being erected as recommended by you."

MR. EGAN,
MR. GRAY,

MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. PIDDINGTON,

MR. PARKES.

MERION MORIARTY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

A. G. McLean, Esq., called in and examined:—

36. By the Chairman: You hold a position in the Survey Department? I am Acting A. G. McLean, Surveyor General.

Esq.

37. You are requested to furnish us with a map of the coast from Jervis Bay to the south, as far as Meruya? The one I produce is from an engraved map; it is on a small scale, but being on one sheet I thought it would be convenient.

6 Mar., 1861.

38. That extends beyond Bateman's Bay? Yes.

39. By Mr. Gray: Is the plan drawn by Mr. Millington the original plan? It is.

40. By the Chairman: You have a larger plan? Yes, shewing Jervis Bay and the two headlands.

41. Are you in a position to mark upon that map the precise locality of the light-house? No, I am not.

42. Not from comparison with the other upon which it is marked? I could not do so with accuracy.*

* NOTE (revised thus):—I could do so with approximate accuracy.

- A. G. McLean, Esq.
6 Mar., 1861.
43. By Mr. Gray: How came the position of the light-house to be marked on that map drawn by Mr. Millington which was made before the light-house was built; the spot is marked with the letter S, which I presume is his mark? It looks as if it were an addition to the plan.
44. What is the other map you produce? A survey of the coast from the north side of Jervis Bay down to Moruya, being a survey made by Mr. Thomas Florence early in the century; and I have another map by Robert Beechcroft, of H.M.S. "Crocodile," giving the soundings of the bay.
45. By Mr. Gray: With regard to the apparent alterations in Mr. Millington's map—who made them? I have no doubt that certain additions have been made upon it since it was drawn, but I cannot say who made them.
46. Who made this other plan? It is a map made in the office from the plan by Mr. Millington, which was sent to the Pilot Board or to the Colonial Architect.

H. H. Browne, Esq., called in and examined:—

- H. H. Browne, Esq.
6 Mar., 1861.
47. By the Chairman: You are in the public service? I was, but am not now.
48. I thought you held the appointment of Immigration Agent? The office is discontinued. I held the appointment of Immigration Agent up to the 28th of February last.
49. Did that appointment occupy your entire time, or did the duties require your undivided attention? No; I had several other honorary duties that occupied a considerable portion of my time.
50. Then you held some other appointments? I have done so, particularly during the last two or three years, when immigration has been reduced to a very small scale.
51. How long have you been in the public service? Nearly twenty-one years.
52. How long have you been in the Colony? I came here in 1838, that is twenty-three years ago. I was in the Colony several years before in command of a ship.
53. Then you have, previous to your settling in the Colony, been employed as a sailor? Yes; I was brought up to the sea.
54. You were a nautical man? I performed four complete (and one incomplete) voyages to the Colony.
55. Where were you particularly employed during your nautical career? In the India and China seas particularly. I made one voyage (my first in command) to Russia (St. Petersburg), and afterwards one to the United States of America; after that, I sailed to no other part but New South Wales. My early career was in the India and China trade.
56. You were brought up to the sea, you say? I joined my first ship at Gravesend in 1824.
57. That was when you first went to sea? Yes, in 1824.
58. I think you were employed by Mr. Donaldson to represent New South Wales in a Commission of the four Colonial Governments—Victoria, South Australia, New South Wales, and Tasmania—appointed to confer upon the subject of light-houses? I was employed to represent New South Wales in a Conference, which took place at Melbourne, to decide upon the question whether any additional light-houses were to be established in the Colonies, and upon the mode in which the cost of those light-houses was hereafter to be provided for. The original intention was to establish a general fund, of which one Colony should be the Treasurer, and disburse all the amounts required for light-houses in each of the four Colonies, from which it was likewise to receive their respective contributions to the general fund. That Conference consisted of the Colonial Secretary of Van Diemen's Land; Captain Kay, R.N., Private Secretary to the Governor of Victoria; Captain Douglas, Master of Trinity House, for South Australia; New South Wales being represented by myself. We found, however, that the adoption of that scheme was impracticable, because each Colony was naturally anxious to disburse its own expenditure, and the idea was given up. But, we finally decided, I believe by a unanimous decision of all the members of the Conference, that we should first see what additional light-houses were required, so that when we had arrived at that conclusion we might be better able to apportion the contributions for their support according to the advantages they were expected to produce to the respective Colonies in which they should be erected, and also to the general navigation of shipping to and from the whole of the Australian Colonies. That principle was laid down and embodied in our report—that the expense of the erection and maintenance of any additional light-houses for the joint benefit of the Colonies should be apportioned between those interested, and be paid for by contributions from their different Governments. The Cape George light-house was one of the new light-houses recommended by that Conference to be established, but to be erected and maintained by New South Wales only.
59. It was recommended by that Conference that a light-house be erected on Cape St. George? I should answer that, by saying that we were guided as to the position of the new light-houses by evidence taken on the occasion. The evidence is voluminous. And we also made a visit to one of the positions recommended, in the steam sloop "Victoria," because we were not clear on the evidence given; indeed, we found it necessary to choose another locality.
60. By Mr. Gray: What was that? Wilson's Promontory. We sought to ascertain whether it was practicable to fix a light-house upon the Ten-foot Rock, that appearing the most suitable place for the light, but we found it to be almost impracticable, and substituted Wilson's Promontory, where it is now erected. I have taken a note of the names of the persons examined before this Conference, and have divided those who gave their opinion in favour of a light on Cape St. George from those who were in favour of a light on Point Perpendicular.

61. Did they give their reasons for choosing one or the other? I think the evidence has been printed for the House, and if I leave this memorandum you can see what the opinions of the different witnesses were. We examined all that we could get hold of on the different points brought under our notice. There were Adelaide traders, Van Diemen's Land traders (for lights in the Straits), Sydney traders, Melbourne traders and coasters (with regard to Cape St. George); and we were guided to our conclusions by their evidence. The following witnesses gave their evidence in favour of Cape St. George:—R. G. Gilmore, of the "Wonga Wonga"; W. H. Saunders, of the "Royal Shepherd"; Arthur Devlin, late master mariner; R. T. Moodie, of the "City of Sydney"; Joseph Walsh, of the schooner "Eagle"; Charles Ferguson, harbour master, Melbourne; C. Pasco, R.N., late of H.M.S. "Beagle"; Thomas Wing, of the "Pioneer"; George Kelly, of the "Monarch"; Francis Rozea, of the "Wanderer"; William Watts, of the "London"; G. V. Bentley, of the "City of Hobart"; George Gilmore of the "Telegraph"; Bloomfield Douglas, Master of Trinity House, Adelaide, and a Member of the Commission. These fourteen witnesses gave opinions in favour of Cape St. George, whilst the following four witnesses were in favour of Point Perpendicular:—James Rusden, R.N., of H.M.S. "Electra"; Henry Tulloch, of the "Water Lily"; William Bell, of the "Yarra Yarra"; and Colin Brown, no vessel.
62. By the Chairman: You are connected with the Steam Navigation Board? I have been Chairman of that Board for many years.
63. You are also Chairman of the Pilot Board? I have been for the last few years.
64. Ever since my retirement? Yes, I succeeded you.
65. And I believe you also succeeded me as Chairman of the Steam Navigation Board? There I think I succeeded Colonel Gibbes.
66. I rather think you succeeded me? Well, I might have done so, I do not recollect with certainty.
67. Was the question of the erection of a light-house at Cape St. George, or anywhere in the neighbourhood of Jervis Bay, submitted to the Pilot Board of this port? Yes, and I think that the report made by the Conference was adopted by the Executive of the day, and that some steps were taken to examine the locality. When the report from Mr. Dawson, the Colonial Architect, was given, and a chart, purporting to be a survey of Cape St. George and the neighbouring land was completed, they were submitted to the then Board, which was the late Pilot and Navigation Board, of which Captain Lamb was the Chairman. That was the first notice of the intention of the Government to carry out the recommendation of the Conference that was brought under the attention of that Board.
68. What was the decision of the Board? I think it was printed in the Government correspondence; it was very short. My impression is, that we recommended the place marked S upon Mr. Millington's chart.
69. Captain Lamb was Chairman on that occasion? On the first occasion. I produce a sketch of the plan I allude to.
70. By Mr. Gray: When was it made? I see the original is on the table. I copied it for my own information, and it is therefore a counterpart of Mr. Millington's plan.
71. By Mr. Dalgleish: How far does Cape St. George extend towards George's Head? This tracing, I believe, is an imaginary delineation of the land. I think you might transfer the head marked S to the lower point.
72. This then is not a correct chart? No, it is most inaccurate.
73. By the Chairman: What was it taken from? From Mr. Millington's survey, which I believe was made by Mr. Millington and Mr. Dawson.
74. Then Mr. Hixon's sketch is the most correct? Yes. I accompanied that gentleman in the steamer "Mimosa", on a visit to inspect the position. We got both the latitude and longitude by observations on a fine day, and took the bearings with a theodolite and prismatic compass. We also determined the angles of vision between the extremities of the land to northward and southward, the radius of which instead of being 201" would be only about 150".
75. By Mr. Gray: There is another sketch by Mr. Millington* on tracing paper? That is the original (the drawn plan).
76. Is Cape St. George situated as there represented? Yes.
77. By the Chairman: George's Head is the eastern extremity of Wreck Bay? Yes, it is so. From George's Head you can see the low land all round the bay.
78. Have you any idea of the point of the compass by which to steer to the westward in passing along the land there? I think we laid it down as near as possible in the published direction, as the points at which the light would be shut in.
79. I have run down there and we steered west and by south-westerly? If you go into the light at all you shut out the light.
80. Then, in point of fact, the light-house, as at present erected, forms no guide whatever for ships coming up from the southward, inasmuch as it is not possible to see it when the danger is most imminent, and only when at a certain distance from the land? It may be seen within a certain bearing of the coast.
81. By Mr. Gray: (Referring to the Admiralty chart)—Is the bearing correctly laid down here? The line of bearing is correct there, and shews where the light really is. It was at one time thought that it would shew into Ulladulla, but as it cuts the saddle of the hill it only shews down to about three miles east of Brush Island.
82. In point of fact the light-house is not placed in the position with a view to the advantages of which it was erected? That we consider is the case quite clearly.
83. By Mr. Dalgleish: On looking at the plan of the coast as described in the Admiralty chart,

- chart, and comparing it with Mr. Millington's plan, there appears to be no point of resemblance between the two headlands. Do you consider this (Millington's plan) in the light of a fancy sketch rather than as a geographical guide? I do; I consider it most imperfect and imaginary, because we have tested these positions by actual observation.
84. By Mr. Gray: You consider that the Admiralty chart is correct? Yes.
85. When was Mr. Millington's survey taken? In 1857, I think.
86. By Mr. Dalgleish: Then the high land marked S on that plan does not exist as marked here—it is a fancy sketch, and does not portray the actual formation of the coast land in this locality? No, it is merely imaginary.
87. By the Chairman: The light-house is some distance from the coast—how far? It stands upon a rather prominent cliff, but it is a straight line of coast. I do not think it is indented; there is an impression that there is a bay there, but I think the indentation is very slight.
88. By Mr. Gray: How far is the light-house situated back from the sea? It stands right upon the edge of the cliff.
89. There are two letters, S and T, marked on the chart; were they so marked when you first received the chart? Yes.
90. And the position as since marked was in error? I think that was done by the contractor, though I am not sure. When I received information of the light-house being placed in the wrong position, I sent for the contractor, whilst he was in Sydney, and at my office asked him whether the light-house was erected on the spot suggested to him. He then shewed me where it is—it is a little more to the northward than the mark T. He was an intelligent stonemason or builder.
91. Who went with the contractor to shew him where the light-house was to be situated; did any one go with him? I can only tell you what he said to me; he said he was for two months quarrying stone before he had any information as to where the light-house was to be put.
92. Who gave him that information? He says he put himself in communication with the Colonial Architect, and a gentleman was sent down to fix the site.
93. Who was the gentleman? A Mr. ———
94. By whom was he appointed? I think it was the Clerk of Works in the Colonial Architect's Office.
95. He pointed out the position to the contractor? That was what the contractor told me.
96. Whose duty was it to point out the situation to the contractor? In my opinion it should not have been decided upon until some competent person had been sent to determine the best site, and then it should have been marked with sufficient distinctness, so as to leave no question or doubt about it. Some person from the Pilot Board should I think have done this.
97. By the Chairman: Then the proper course to be adopted would have been that a person chosen by the Pilot Board should have fixed the precise spot for the light-house? Yes.
98. By Mr. Gray: Had the Pilot Board power to act in this respect without being instructed; had they power within themselves to interfere in this way by going down without instructions from higher authorities, and saying where the light-house should be placed? No, they could not act without the instructions of the Minister; but, I think, if proper representations had been made, the request would have been attended to—I have always found it so.
99. I understand from your evidence that the Pilot Board were not called upon to select any position on which the light-house should be fixed; that they were merely furnished with a plan, with the letters S and T marked thereon, and were asked to give their opinion as to the point upon which it should be placed? I believe it was so.
100. You consider then that the Pilot Board was justified by the representation on the chart or plan in choosing the position they thought the right one? It appeared so plain upon the chart (if it had been a proper one), that it did not seem necessary to send down a nautical man. It was considered that the plan was correct, and as this prominent headland was so clearly defined, and was obviously the one on which the light-house should be placed, it did not seem necessary to make representations to the Minister, until we knew, in fact, that the light-house was not placed there.
101. You had a perfect right to look upon the plan as correct, and do not consider the Pilot Board implicated? That is for you gentlemen to decide.
102. By Mr. Gray: You have examined that part of the coast, I believe? I have, with other members of the Board.
103. Will you favour the Committee with your opinion as to where the light-house should have been placed? I will tell you why I am biassed in favour of Cape St. George, and I give my opinion as a seaman, formed when I had command of a ship. I believe it is pretty well known that several vessels have been lost in Wreck Bay; there is an indraught which sets in on the coast, and though vessels may be steering to clear Cape St. George, they do not make sufficient to windward, get embayed, and are lost. In the year 1836 or 1837, I was in command of a ship, and passed Montagu Island early in the morning five or six miles to the eastward. We were carrying all sail, and steering about north by east to clear Cape St. George. Just before sunset I went up aloft, as was my usual custom, to take a look in the direction of the land, and on going on to the foretop-sail yard I could plainly see the point (Cape St. George) which we were trying to avoid broad on the starboard bow. I immediately shortened sail and got the vessel's head off the land, and steered north-east by east, and then only just cleared the Cape. A ship that was coming up astern of me, and carrying the same sail, not having seen me alter my course, stood on and was lost.
104. What vessel was that? The "Hive."

105. By the Chairman: With immigrants? With prisoners. Our vessel was subjected to a considerable indraught, and the "Hive" must have stood her course and not hauled off as I had done on discovering the land before sunset. If I had not done this I also should have lost my ship. A light on this headland would shew to the northward of Ulladula; any vessel could then keep clear of danger.

H. H. Browne,
Esq.

6 Mar., 1861.

106. By Mr. Gray: One of the greatest dangers to be guarded against is, I believe, the indraught, so as to prevent being jammed by it into Wreck Bay? I think it is. It is necessary to have that bay well lighted, instead of having the light on Point Perpendicular.

107. Would it, as a coast light, be equally as good on Cape St. George as on Point Perpendicular? Considering where the light is now I think it would be more advantageous if it were put on Point Perpendicular, because it would still shew as far to the westward as it now does, and also much further to the northward.

108. With regard to Point Perpendicular, Crocodile Head, and Cape St. George—would the light-house situated upon Cape St. George, as represented to you by the sketch of Mr. Millington, leaving out of consideration the advantages it afforded in guarding against Wreck Bay, possess the same advantages as if situated on Point Perpendicular or on Crocodile Head? I think it would, because it would always be a point of departure for vessels, for unless they are proceeding to Jervis Bay they never approach the coast within seven miles, and being a well-known point of departure vessels could always avoid getting into a fix both to the north or the south.

109. With reference to the danger of getting wrecked in Wreck Bay, would not a light on Montagu Island be of more importance? I think not. It is a low island; I do not know the exact distance, but I think it is sixty or seventy miles to the south of Cape St. George. Besides the light at Gabo Island would sufficiently serve up to this point.

110. If there was a light on Montagu Island and another on Crocodile Point, in the running from one to the other, you would catch sight of one before you lost the other? Yes.

111. And if you pick up the light on Crocodile Head you avoid all dangers of getting embayed on the coast, that is, supposing a foreign trader was running from Gabo Island to Sydney? It must always be considered a disadvantage to have too many lights. If the principal headlands are lighted, I do not see any necessity for this on Montagu Island. It might be an advantage to some coasters; but the southern part of the coast is, in my opinion, well lighted.

112. By the Chairman: Have you been much employed in the narrow seas at Home? No; my whole experience of them has been limited to a voyage to St. Petersburg and in navigating the English Channel.

113. Do you not think the lights in the English Channel are more extensive than anything you suggest here? I believe they are.

114. Have you been in St. George's Channel, the Clyde, or in the Bristol Channel? No.

115. By Mr. Dalgleish: How far is a sea light visible according to its height and without impediments of weather or other and more than ordinary obscuring causes? If you have an elevation of something like 220 feet it would be seen at about twenty miles distance.

116. Would not this light-house, if on Crocodile Head instead of Cape St. George, be seen sufficiently soon to warn vessels of the vicinity of Wreck Bay? No, not in thick weather.

117. By the Chairman: Is it not the duty of the master to keep a ship to windward in bad weather? Undoubtedly, but you may have a succession of thick weather and no observations.

118. By Mr. Gray: Cape St. George is the best site, you think? I think so.

119. It is what was recommended as the best site? Yes.

120. By Mr. Dalgleish: Do you recognize any one point of land as distinctive of Cape St. George, or is the whole headland considered as Cape St. George? Cape St. George is a green rocky point extending to the eastward of the other land.

121. Then the remaining part of the coast is not distinguished by any name? None whatever.

122. Cape St. George is a distinct point, and should have been specially distinguished by the party who made the survey, and George's Head is the whole headland? I think so. I cannot see how, even with a bird's eye view of the position, the surveyor could have made such a tracing as that which he has produced.

123. The blame must revert to the surveyor and those who authorized him to make a survey, whether he was competent or not? They must have been to blame; but there must also have been a want of care on the part of the person who set the contractor to work; when he had the angles of bearing and seeing four points shut in on the point he selected, he might have communicated with his superior officer, and have waited for further instructions.

124. I speak of the primary cause? The defective survey is the primary cause.

125. By the Chairman: Was there a difference of opinion among the members of the Board when the light-house was erected as to the expediency of lighting it? Yes, considerable difference of opinion. Captain Watson and myself, who were in a minority, considered that it was not erected in the place where it ought to be; but it was also considered that it would still be a useful beacon, and we recommended that it should be lighted, after carefully explaining in a memorandum the dangers to be avoided from the low rocky point over which the light is shewn.

126. In point of fact, then, if a vessel were wrecked in Wreck Bay, the present light would afford no possible benefit or assistance? I cannot say how far the light would reach in that direction; but I think that if the light had been there when we discovered the land, it would have been of no benefit. I steered out north-east and by east.

127. Then the question of lighting it came under the discussion of the Pilot Board? Yes; it was brought under the attention of the members, and in the discussion a majority of them were opposed to it, and recommended that the light should not be brought into operation.

The

H.H. Browne, Esq. The members who were opposed to lighting it were Messrs. Deloitte, Darley, Fox, and Smith.

6 Mar., 1861. 128. Four to two? The separate opinions were reported, with an intimation that a majority were unfavourable to lighting it. The matter was then referred to Captain Denham, of H.M.S. "Herald," and I think his decision guided the Government in the course they adopted.

129. Notwithstanding the objections you have here made to the position of the light-house as being an improper place for it, you were of opinion that it might be lighted without inconvenience, and with some benefit? Although I think it will not be productive of mischief, and not do so much good as it might have done, yet I think it will be a good coast light for departure; and with ordinary care and attention to the proclamation of the bearings, no ship ought to get into difficulty there.

130. But according to the evidence you have given here to-day, this light would be utterly useless to vessels under the circumstances in which you were placed? Yes, I stated that fact.*

131. Was the lighting a question of finance with you? Well, I thought that if we abandoned this light-house at once, we should not get another; and that as £6,000 or £7,000 had been spent upon it, and that whilst it would be productive of some good and no very great harm, my opinion was that it would be better to light it.

132. By Mr. Dalgleish: Do you consider that it would do any harm? The harm is in lighting over a point. The principle of lighting is to light before a danger. Unless a man is careful in approaching that point, there is an absolute danger; and as it does not light in sufficient to the westward, a ship may become embayed. But being erected, and likely to be productive of some good, I thought that it would be better to light it, and to point out the danger to be avoided by keeping within range of the light.

133. By the Chairman: As it is clearly your opinion that the light-house was not erected in the proper place with a view to the benefits to be derived from it, am I right in assuming that it was simply a question of finance that induced you not to oppose the lighting of it? It was scarcely a question of finance, but a question of expediency. I thought a certain amount of benefit might be derived from it, and stated this in our report.

134. But not so large an amount as if it had been erected somewhere else? Exactly.

135. You thought it would be of some good, though it would not produce all the good that it ought to do? Exactly.

136. By Mr. Piddington: You condemn the position of the light-house looking at it abstractedly? I do.

137. When you object to the position, is that objection so deeply seated as to lead you to imagine that any master of a ship would be actually misled by the mal-position of the light-house? I think not. Although being erected on a place where it ought not to be, it will still be of benefit, particularly to the coasting trade, and I would therefore leave it where it is.

138. I do not allude specially to the coasting trade? I mean the trade on the coast, whether the voyages be short or long.

139. By Mr. Gray: That is, taking into consideration the proclamation issued, if care be taken as to the bearings, no danger will be incurred? I think not.

140. In coming from Ulladulla or Bateman's Bay—which are the principal ports to the southward—or from Merimbula, up along the coast, do you not think the masters of vessels would not see the light until within three miles of it? I am not aware of that. But the traders to these ports care very little about a light. If you refer to page 8 of the correspondence, you will find it stated that the minority of the Board considered that "notwithstanding the ineligibility of the present site to accomplish all that was originally intended "by this light, if lighted it will still be of considerable benefit to vessels navigating the "coast, and that, by a judicious exemplification of the bearings of the light when partially "intercepted by the land, and when wholly unintercepted, sufficient warning will be afforded "the mariner to avoid the danger in its immediate vicinity." We clearly pointed out that we did not approve of the position of the light.

141. By Mr. Dalgleish: What would your opinion be of the results if a chart of the coast were made according to the projections shewn upon the plan you submit to the Committee? They would be very lamentable. It is a correct copy of Mr. Millington's survey.

142. By Mr. Piddington: Do you consider that Mr. Millington was a right person to send to decide upon the site of a light-house, or was he likely to be qualified to give an opinion upon the subject, so as to justify the Surveyor General in sending him? I think a nautical man should always be sent to decide upon the site of a light-house, as it may be necessary to describe the position; and no person can so well decide upon the advantages of a position, and the amount of good to be derived from it, than a person accustomed to reap the benefit.

143. But Mr. Millington was not a man of nautical experience? I do not know!

144. Was the Colonial Architect the right person to decide upon it. I think he has only to do with the building of it.

Mr.

*NOTE:—But had a light-house then been in existence, I should have been led to the eastward in not discovering it in a reasonable time.—Added on revision.

Mr. Thomas Watson called in and examined:—

145. By the Chairman: You are a member of the Pilot Board, I believe? I am.
146. Has the subject of the light-house in the vicinity of Jervis Bay been lately brought under the consideration of the Board? It has.
147. Did the Board approve of the position in which it has been erected? No.
148. The subject, I presume, was fully discussed at the Board? Oh yes.
149. There was a difference of opinion, I believe, between the members of the Board? There was.
150. And the majority decided adversely to it? They did.
151. I believe you were one of the minority with Captain Browne, who were the two dissentients from the impression of the majority of the Board? We were.
152. Is it your opinion that the light-house, as at present erected, is in the proper position? I think not; the whole Board was of that opinion.
153. Are you of opinion that the light-house, as at present erected, is not in a position to afford the advantages which the public are entitled to expect from a light-house erected in that locality? I think not. My opinion is that as a coast light it will be merely of benefit to coasters; but for the benefits with a view to which it was intended, it will be of no use.
154. Then, in point of fact, you are of opinion that in its present position it is not capable of affording all the advantages reasonably to be expected by the public from a light-house erected in that locality? I think it is not.
155. What are the disadvantages which, in your opinion, it possesses? In the first place, it is situated about a mile and three-quarters from the site in which it was intended to be placed; and being on an indent of the coast, it has not the desired effect which it would have if placed on the site at first intended, that is, at Cape St. George.
156. Are you clearly of opinion that the light-house, as at present situated, is not one calculated to afford all the advantages the public have a right to expect from a light-house on that part of the coast? Except as a coast light.
157. Is it of any benefit as a coast light? Oh yes, or I should not have given my assent to its being lighted.
158. Suppose you are coming from Ulladulla—does the light afford the slightest advantage? It is not seen at Ulladulla.
159. Nor on any part of the line from Ulladulla? I think not.
160. Is it seen by coasters coming from the next port, Nelligen, or Bateman's Bay, in a direct line—can they see the light until they are within two or three miles of it? You can see it from Brush Island, about seven miles off the land, to the eastward. It is not perceptible until you get six or seven miles off the land.
161. Suppose you were entering Wreck Bay, does it afford the slightest possible assistance in guarding against the dangers of that spot? A vessel coming from the southward would never go into Wreck Bay as long as she kept the light in sight.
162. Are you aware of the line of bearing from Crocodile Head to Cape St. George? It just shows to Alligator Point. I cannot say from memory what is the exact line of bearing.
163. Which is the eastern point of that coast? Crocodile Head is the most easterly.
164. Which point on the coast affords the greatest advantages to vessels bound both north and south? Crocodile Point would.
165. Then a light-house upon that point would be a guide to all vessels bound to the southward, if coming from the northward, and to all vessels bound to the north from the south? I think it would not be seen sufficiently soon from the southward to avoid Wreck Bay.
166. Does the present light-house guard against any of the dangers of Wreck Bay? Oh yes; as long as the vessel keeps the light in sight.
167. Do you not say that a light-house on Crocodile Point would not as effectually guard against the dangers of Wreck Bay as the light-house where it is at present situated? I think not.
168. Is the present light-house visible in Wreck Bay, or in any part of it? Not in the bay.
169. Then, as the present light-house is not seen from Wreck Bay, would not one on Crocodile Point be of equal value to vessels going into that bay? More so.
170. If it were made a rule to keep seven miles off the land from Cape Howe to the northward, would not that take you to Crocodile Head? Decidedly it would.
171. If the light-house were on Crocodile Point would it be of similar advantage to vessels from the ports to the north? Yes.
172. Are you acquainted with the entrances to the Crookhaven and Shoalhaven Rivers? Oh yes, pretty well.
173. Is there any moderately good anchorage in that bight from the north-east of Crocodile Head? Oh yes—there is an offing where there is anchorage.
174. Then a light on Crocodile Point would guide a vessel going into that bay? Of course it would be a guide to all vessels coming from the north.
175. And to vessels bound to Crookhaven, Shoalhaven, and Kiama? Oh yes.
176. From that I infer that the light, if put on Crocodile Head, would be of more general benefit than where it is at present? Yes; but the intention was to put it upon Cape St. George. That was what Captain Blackwood, R.N., recommended.
177. In your opinion, then, a light upon Crocodile Point would be of more utility than a light upon any other point in that vicinity? No; I say Cape St. George is the proper place.
178. Would it be of any possible utility to vessels from the north? It would be useful in rounding the point.
179. But not to any of the ports to the north of Crocodile Head? Very little, if any.

Mr. T. Watson.
6 Mar., 1861.

- Mr. T. Watson. 180. Therefore the sole benefit of the light-house is confined to Wreck Bay? Just so.
- 6 Mar., 1851. 181. And you are of opinion that the light-house, as erected at present, is of no possible utility in guarding against the dangers of that bay? Very little; but if you get out to sea with the light in view, you are safe from Wreck Bay—that is seven miles from the land.
182. The majority of the Board were of opinion that this light-house, placed as it is, ought not to have been lighted? They were.
183. Did you concur in their opinion, because I understand you to say that the position is better at Crocodile Head? I concurred in thinking that better than the present site.
184. And yet you agreed to light the present light-house, although you concurred in thinking another situation better. I presume you had financial reasons for that? My reason was, that the light-house being built, and as it was probable we should not have another if this were not made use of, and seeing also that it may answer some of the purposes it was intended to serve, I was favourable to lighting it.
185. Are you aware that it is a common practice in Great Britain to alter the sites of light-houses when a superior site is found? I am not aware of that. I am very slightly conversant with the practice of Great Britain with regard to light-houses.
186. Then, in point of fact, you know nothing with regard to light-houses there? No.
187. By Mr. Dalgleish: As it is usual to place light-houses upon headlands, and from light-houses being placed upon points, great danger is supposed to exist near or at these places? Exactly.
188. Therefore you ground your recommendation of Cape St. George, or Crocodile Point, on the circumstance that it would guard against danger on the coast extending in that vicinity, and also against the danger of Wreck Bay? Just so.
189. May I ask whether, if a vessel left Ulladulla with a commander in his senses, he would go direct from Ulladulla to Wreck Bay? I should think not.
190. Therefore the light is not necessary to guard vessels against Wreck Bay when coming from Ulladulla? Precisely so.
191. May I ask whether, if a vessel was leaving Nelligen with a commander having a knowledge of the coast, he would be likely to mistake the land at this point of the coast, even if a light did not exist there, and whether he would not keep to sea at such a distance as prudence would suggest until he gained a sight of the light, if he knew it to be there? Certainly.
192. Therefore, for all useful purposes as a coast light, although the present position is not desirable, it is useful as a general coast light? Yes.
193. I presume that was the desideratum you had in view when recommending that it should be lighted? Just so.
194. In coming from the south, when the bearings of this light are duly proclaimed in the Gazette, and the dangers pointed out upon the chart, a vessel after arriving in the vicinity of Wreck Bay, whether coaster or foreign trader, would put to sea; that is, if they came within the radius of that light it would be a warning of dangerous waters, and that they would be in a position to get to sea when they saw the light? I should do so myself.
195. Although in a bad place, and the adoption of the site, therefore, to be deplored, when the light is duly gazetted, it will be of advantage to the general trade on the coast? Yes, as a coasting light.
196. A light-house at Crocodile Head would light to the northward as well as to the southward, but does any danger exist to the northward? Nothing of any importance.
197. Have there been any wrecks to the north of Crocodile Head for want of a light? I do not recollect any.
198. Have there been any to the southward in consequence of the want of a light? Yes, in Wreck Bay there have been several wrecks, but none to the northward that I am aware of.
199. By the Chairman: Are you sure upon that point? I am not quite sure, but I do not recollect any.
200. By Mr. Dalgleish: From the number of wrecks in Wreck Bay, and the paucity of those to the north of Crocodile Head, you give the preference to Cape St. George? Yes.
201. By Mr. Piddington: Would the objections you confess to entertain to the present site be of so grave a character as to induce you to recommend the removal of the light-house? No.
202. Do you think that any master of a vessel from England would be misled by the existing light not being placed upon Cape St. George, and thus be drawn into danger? I think that, knowing the light was not in existence there, he would keep off the land.
203. By the Chairman: Suppose you found yourself embayed? I have been so. There is a great necessity to avoid the indraught, but there is a strong eddy under the point which draws you out again. It comes again round the Cape.
204. By Mr. Dalgleish: Had you been aware of the existence of a light at the head at the time you were embayed, is it probable that you would have allowed yourself to become so situated? I think not; I should have kept off the land.

Mr. PIDDINGTON.

MERION MORIARTY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Honorable John Lamb, Esq., Commander R.N., M.L.C., examined :—

205. By the Chairman : I believe you were at one time Chairman of the Board denominated the Light, Pilot, and Navigation Board? I was in the year 1857.

The Hon.
J. Lamb, Esq.,
R.N., M.L.C.

206. Was the subject of the light-house on Cape St. George mooted at that time? A light-house in the neighbourhood of Jervis Bay was proposed at that time.

12 Mar., 1861.

207. Did the Board of which you were Chairman express any opinion as to the proper site for that light-house? Opinions were expressed in official form by the Board at that period, and the Board were unanimous in their approbation of a site which had been recommended by Mr. Millington, a surveyor, and Mr. Dawson, the Colonial Architect, who had sent certain plans which were laid before us. I had not been at the locality, nor am I aware that any member of the Board had been.

208. The Committee are in possession of information which leads them to doubt the accuracy of the chart on which that opinion was founded,—did you ever contrast that chart at your Board with the Admiralty chart? I think it was compared with the Admiralty chart, but I am not certain on the point. We depended upon these two official gentlemen, who were stated to have surveyed and examined the site, having delineated it correctly on the chart which was sent to us.

209. Then further than expressing an opinion as to the superiority of one position on that chart sent to you over another, you or your Board expressed no opinion whatever? None whatever; we confined ourselves to the opinion that the locality marked in the map by the letter S was the fittest one for the general objects of the light.

210. None of the Board inspected that spot prior to the approbation of that site? No, none that I am aware of; we had no opportunity of inspecting it; there were no means at our command.

211. The Board took no steps to verify the advantage of any one position more than another? The Board relied upon the chart which was sent to them by the Government as being correct, that chart having been drawn, as we understood, by Mr. Millington and Mr. Dawson. I remember perfectly that at the time we all agreed that the site marked S, according to the descriptions furnished to us by Mr. Millington, was the most advantageous.

212. There was no subsequent discussion on the subject of the light-house while you continued chairman of it? I only continued a short time a member of the Board after the matter was brought under our notice by the Government. There was no further communication on the subject, that I am aware of.

213. By Mr. Dalgleish : Do you recognize this (Mr. Millington's chart) as a correct sketch of that part of the coast? I do not know whether it is correct or incorrect; it was the one submitted to us, and we concluded that the officers of the Surveyor General's, and other departments, in sending it to the Pilot Board with an official communication, had given their verdict in favour of its being correct.

214. You are not aware whether it is correct or not? No. It was transmitted to us from the Colonial Secretary's Office, having been furnished to that office by the Surveyor General of the Colony.

215. And it was, therefore, accepted by the Pilot Board as being correct? Yes, as being official.

216. By Mr. Parkes : You received it, in fact, as from the highest authority? We received it as from unquestioned authority, two gentlemen, supposed competent, having been sent down particularly to survey the locality.

217. It was precisely stamped by that authority by which you would have thought of testing any chart from an inferior source? Yes, as being a more minute survey than could be made during any general survey of the coast.

William Salmon Deloitte, Esq., called in and examined :—

218. By the Chairman : You are a member of the Steam Navigation and Pilot Board? W.S. Deloitte, Esq.

219. You were a member of the Board in the year 1857 when a question respecting the erection of a light-house in the vicinity of Jervis Bay was submitted for the consideration of the Board? I was; I have been several years a member of the Board. 12 Mar., 1861.

220. At that time a plan was submitted to the Board for an opinion as to the proper site for the erection of a light-house? I think so—about that time.

221. Would you recognize the plan if you saw it—is that the plan (Mr. Millington's chart)? I have no doubt this is the same.

222. Upon that plan being submitted the Board came to a decision as to the proper spot to erect a light? I forget whether at that time the question arose whether it was the best, or the best of that locality.

223. Did it occur to the Board to contrast the accuracy of that survey with the Admiralty survey? I am afraid not.

- W.S. Deloitte, Esq. 224. Have you contrasted them since that period? No.
- 12 Mar., 1861. 225. You have never examined the Admiralty chart with reference to the accuracy of that plan? No.
226. Since the erection of the light-house was commenced has the impropriety of the site been brought under discussion in the Pilot Board? It has several times.
227. May I ask of what nature that discussion has been? Principally that the majority of the Board objected to the site altogether, and were in favour of erecting a light-house on the eastern portion of the headland, on the northern portion of the Bay; we were strongly of that opinion, whatever passed before.
228. This subject was not discussed previous to the erection of the light-house? It was.
229. While the thing was in progress? Previous, I believe, to the foundation being laid.
230. The majority of the Board expressed a decided opinion as to the impropriety of that position for the light-house? Yes.
231. Was that opinion conveyed to the Government? It was, I believe. But perhaps it would make it more clear to you if I explained that I believe before it was commenced at all this chart, which is called Mr. Millington's chart, was placed before us, and we were asked this question—Which of the two sites would you approve of, S or T? And, knowing our previous opinion respecting the light being placed further north, we objected in the first instance to give any opinion about it, but we were pressed to do so on the ground that it would be discourteous if we would not answer the question which was the best of the two, and without further reference we said that S was unquestionably the best, and a letter I believe was written to that effect; but we did not say it was the proper site for a light-house.
232. And you had previously expressed a decided opinion that it was not the best position for a light? Decidedly.
233. Was there any further correspondence on the subject when so decided an opinion adverse to the erection of the light-house on that particular spot was expressed by the Board? Then, or later, the majority of the Board forwarded a protest against its being proceeded with or lit—it was in the form of a protest—which will, I presume, be laid before you. I signed it.
234. By Mr. Dalgleish: Is this the letter, dated 9th August, 1860? That is the last one; that is the protest.
235. Against the lighting? Against the lighting.
236. By the Chairman: With reference to its being a guide for vessels to avoid Wreck Bay, what is your opinion of the present light? Well, if I may speak from what I am informed, the present light has a very dangerous quality, it is not seen for eight miles, being masked by a small hill.
237. You were not one of the deputation that went down to examine the spot before the light was lit? No, I remained to attend to other duties here.
238. Suppose there was evidence that it could not be seen at all from any portion of Wreck Bay, would that fact satisfy you that the light was in a most improper position with reference to that object? It depends upon where you allow Wreck Bay to finish.
239. Take it in any imaginable way? How far south?
240. You cannot see it at Ulladulla—to the northward of Ulladulla Wreck Bay commences. If you acknowledge that fact, that when eastward of Wreck Bay, and clear of it altogether, you cannot see the light, what is your opinion then? I have not changed my opinion about it; I think it is wrongly placed.
241. That is your opinion clearly? Yes. When it was first commenced we were not informed that it was masked by a hill and could not be seen for eight miles. As far as I am informed the light-house is not on S, nor is it on T.
242. You have expressed an opinion in favour of Crocodile Point as the proper position? Yes, that is the easternmost point of the northern headland of Jervis Bay, which, being a coast line, at once gives you 180 degrees clear, without any deviation to north or south.
243. A light on Crocodile Head would be a certain guide to Jervis Bay? I think it would be a very excellent guide; it would lead in without difficulty, being close to the headland, which is high land; and it would assist to clear Wreck Bay certainly better than the present light. It would take you a little further out, but that is an advantage.
244. Any seaman running up the coast would, as a matter of course, endeavour to sight a light on Crocodile Head when he came within its range? Yes, either north or south. I also think that two revolving lights—this and Sydney light—so near to one another, is not politic, not prudent, when the current runs as it does sometimes at the rate of 40 miles a day.
245. You also object to the nature of the light as well as to its position? Yes.
246. But this light is red, white, and green? Yes, but the red and green are not seen where the bright light is seen; and when you lose them of course the white light shows more as a revolving light.
247. But the intervals between the periods are different? Yes, of course they are, but in the haste of catching a glimpse of it that is not always a sufficient guide.
248. Then you would adopt some other mode of distinguishing this light from others? Yes, a fixed light for instance, which would be far less intricate and less liable to damage.
249. Have you had much experience at Home of lights in the narrow seas? I have been 25 years on the sea, in active service, in Europe, and various parts of the world. I have been in the Irish Channel, the British Channel, the German Ocean, and to St. Petersburg—a considerable time in those trades.
250. Then on the whole you are of opinion that this light is not only improperly placed, but that the peculiarities of its revolving are unfavourable? Yes.
251. Have you ever seen a light coloured green? I do not recollect one. I had a work the other day, which I lent to Captain Browne, which mentioned 240 light-houses, but I do not recollect a green one among them.

252. A green light is not visible at any great distance? I think it is the weakest of any lights that are occasionally used.
253. Well, I understand, then, that a majority of the Board—yourself, Captain Smith, Captain Darley, and Captain Fox—conveyed to the Government your distinct opinion that the light was badly placed, and ought not to be lit? Yes.
254. Was that opinion arrived at at a meeting of the Board and forwarded by your Secretary in the usual way? By our request.
255. I presume it was a minute of the Board? I believe it was; I am only speaking from recollection now. I think I ought to explain, because it may appear before you that as we were made to say we preferred S to T, therefore, in our opinion, the light should be placed there. It was written by some member of the Board, and forwarded to the Government, but at the next meeting it was erased from the minutes. Of course we objected to it as not being what we meant. It is but fair to say that, otherwise we should appear to stultify ourselves.
256. Was there a letter written conveying the opinion of the Board to the Government that that was the proper site, by any one member of the Board, when the Board had not agreed to it? You can satisfy yourselves by calling for the Minute Book.
257. That is what I understand you to say? That is what I mean. I say it in self defence, because, surely, if I appear to say that is the best place, and then afterwards say it is not, I shall appear to stultify myself.
258. If you will look at the Admiralty chart — ? This is the running survey of Captain Stokes, I see.
259. You will perceive that Wreck Bay is not protected by the light in its present position? No. The same advantages are to be obtained by having a light on Crocodile Head. The only object they seem to have in putting the light on Cape St. George is that vessels should not go into Wreck Bay, but that advantage would be equally attained by a light on Crocodile Head; perhaps it would take you a mile or two farther out, but that would be beneficial.
260. Giving your opinion as a seaman, if it were necessary to have another light, would not a light on the little island called Montague Island be a better protection for vessels running up to the northward with reference to safety from approaching Wreck Bay—suppose there were a light-house there, and a vessel passed that light a certain distance to seaward, she would be sure to pick up a light on Crocodile Head before she got into any danger from Wreck Bay? I should prefer Crocodile Point.
261. Suppose you have them both? I have no objection to as many lights as you can get.
262. A light on Montague Island would be a certain protection to all that part of the coast? And very useful.
263. By Mr. Parkes: I understand you to say provided there were one on Crocodile Point? Yes, not to sacrifice Crocodile Point.
264. If it were a question of one light-house, you would have it on Crocodile Point? Yes.
265. By Mr. Dalgleish: Was the plan which was sent to the Pilot Board submitted for their opinion, or as a correct survey of that part of the coast? The one which we were accustomed to call Mr. Millington's survey we supposed to be a detailed survey, and therefore more correct in its details than any other made as a running survey.
266. You did not consider it was sent to you to give an opinion as to its correctness? No; we had no opportunity of knowing that.
267. You took it for granted that the points marked S and T, with their elevations, and the trending of the land as indicated, did exist? Yes, of course we did.
268. And when you gave your opinion, it was with respect to the eligibility of the site S over T? Yes, but no further; in fact we felt rather aggrieved, and did not wish to answer the question at all.
269. That was after you had advanced an opinion of the Board with regard to Crocodile Head? Yes; or a site in that vicinity.
- (Mr. Dalgleish here putting a question with reference to the interception of a light on Crocodile Head, so far as Wreck Bay was concerned, by high land at Cape St. George and George's Head, stated to be 610 feet above the sea, reference was made to the charts, and a long conversation ensued.)
270. By Mr. Piddington: What protection against the dangers of Wreck Bay would a light-house afford if erected on Crocodile Head? It would prevent any ship going within five miles of the land, without knowing it.
271. In what respect would a light-house on Cape St. George afford less protection against the dangers supposed to exist in Wreck Bay than a light-house on Crocodile Head? Do you mean where the light-house is now.
272. On Cape St. George? There might be a difference of perhaps a mile.
273. Would a light on Crocodile Head be visible with as great a range of vision into Wreck Bay as a light at Cape St. George—would a light-house erected at Crocodile Head be equally as valuable against the dangers of Wreck Bay as one erected at Cape St. George? Quite so.
274. Are you of opinion that a light on Crocodile Head would not be intercepted by the high land marked on the Admiralty chart at Cape St. George? I have endeavoured to shew where it would be intercepted.
275. I am speaking entirely with reference to Wreck Bay? You lose sight of it for six miles; it is behind a hill here, and you cannot—
276. I am not speaking of the present site of the light-house, but of Cape St. George, the place recommended as a proper site? It would have been better there than where it is.
277. Comparing the two sites, both sites being now without a light, I want to know whether Cape St. George, if the light-house were erected there, would have been more or less a protection

- tection against the dangers of Wreck Bay than Crocodile Head? They seem to be in the same line, with the same angles, and the same distance off exactly.
278. Do you not see there is high land marked 610 feet high on the Admiralty chart—is not that in the direct range of a light-house on Crocodile Head? No, I avoided it purposely. Look to the area of vision. This is a north and south coast line nearly, so that you obtain 180 degrees at once. Then you have the advantage further —
279. I am not asking as to the general advantage, but as to the particular dangers of that place? I think a light on Crocodile Head would have cleared Wreck Bay perfectly.
280. By the Chairman: And with reference to all other questions Crocodile Head presents advantages which the other does not? Yes; It is seen to the north, south, and east, and the light would be serviceable for leading into Jervis Bay in the absence of any particular leading light.
281. By Mr. Piddington: Were you a member of the Board on the 14th September, 1857? Yes.
282. Were you a party to a letter of that date in the printed correspondence, signed by the Secretary, which not only states the opinion of the Board that the light-house should be erected on the point marked S on Mr. Millington's plan, but further expresses an opinion of the Board that the site "appears to have been judiciously selected"? That I deny.
283. Do you deny that you were a member of the Board at that time? No, I was a member.
284. Do you deny that this letter was authorized by the Board, though signed by the Secretary? It was not authorized in the whole of that shape, for at the next meeting the latter part was erased in the minute book.
285. What latter part do you allude to? "Which appears to have been judiciously selected." That, I believe, went in a letter, but was erased at the next meeting as being incorrect.
286. There appears to be another letter, signed by Mr. Crook, the Harbour Master, and he appears to have written it by direction of the Steam Navigation and Pilot Board—have you any connection with that Board? I am a member.
287. That letter appears to have been written on the 15th October, 1858, and the writer, Mr. Crook, the Harbour Master, confirms the letter written by Mr. Drew, the Secretary of the Pilot Board, with reference to the construction of the light-house—was that letter written by the authority of the Board? I do not think it was.
288. Were you a member of the Board in October, 1858? I was.
289. But you have no recollection of giving authority for the writing of that letter? I do not know what Mr. Crook had to do with it.
290. I am not asking what Mr. Crook had to do with it? I have no recollection of giving any instructions to Mr. Crook of that nature.
291. By Mr. Parkes: Did you know of the existence of that letter? No, I do not think I did.
292. By Mr. Piddington: Mr. Crook appears to have written this letter by direction of the Board, did it come under your notice? No, not that I recollect.
293. By Mr. Parkes: In what relation did Mr. Crook stand to the Navigation and Pilot Board—did he perform the duties of Secretary? No; he stood in no relation whatever to the Navigation Board.
294. I should have understood his office as comprehending all kinds of duties rather than the duty of writing letters by direction of this Board to the Government? It is not very likely.
295. Did he ever stand in such a relation to the Board as to be their medium of communication with the Government? Certainly not to my knowledge. I do not understand it, unless it is a misprint.
296. By Mr. Piddington: You were a member of the Pilot Board in July, 1859? Yes.
297. Were you a party to the letter signed "W. J. Wilshire," as Secretary to the Board, dated 4th July, 1859? No, I do not agree to that; I do not agree to the latter part of it.
298. Were you a member of the Board at that time? I was a member.
299. Were you a party to that letter? I think not.
300. Have you given expression to your dissent in any way officially to the Government? That is embodied in our protest.
301. But the protest you allude to is dated the 9th August, 1860,—I am asking whether you were a party to a letter written by your Secretary, previous to the erection of the light-house, expressing an opinion in favour of the site? I would rather see the minutes of the day than answer it one way or other.
302. You have no recollection of being a party to that letter? No.
303. Nor any recollection of conveying your dissent to the letter to the Government? We had before had that erased out of the minute book.
304. By Mr. Parkes: With reference to these letters to which your attention has been called by Mr. Piddington, when the Secretary is instructed to communicate the opinion of the Board to the Government, is the letter drafted, or does he prepare the letter from verbal instructions—I wish to know what is the practice of the Board when they give instructions to their Secretary to communicate their opinion to the Government? The first proceeding, when the Board assembles, is to read the minutes of the previous meeting, and if they are approved they are then signed by the Chairman. Then other questions are brought before us, generally verbally. Very often a number of papers are laid before us, and our opinion is expressed. Then, after that, Captain Browne, having the most leisure, prepares the drafts of letters, in accordance, I presume, with what he thinks our intentions, and these are read at the next meeting, and approved or altered.
305. So that the draft of a letter is always subjected to the Board before being forwarded to the Government? No.

306. Not always? No.
307. By Mr. Piddington: Is it not the practice of the Board to agree on certain points in official communications with the Government, when their opinion has been asked, previous to the Secretary drafting the letter? The Chairman frequently drafts the letter.
308. Speaking of the practice of the Board, as a Board, does not the Board insist that rough minutes should be taken of the opinion of the Board, in respect to topics of considerable importance, as a guide to the official correspondence? In practice I fear not.
309. By Mr. Parkes: Do you not think it would be the proper way, in conducting the business of a Board of so much importance, to record their opinions in distinct propositions submitted from the chair, so as to appear on the minutes? No doubt it would be better.
310. With reference to these letters to which your attention was first called by Mr. Piddington—one signed by Mr. Drew, one signed by Mr. Crook, and one signed by Mr. Wilshire, and dated respectively 14 Sept., 1857; 15 Oct., 1858; and 4 July, 1859—were you, as a member of the Board, aware of the existence of those letters communicating the opinions of the Board to the Government? The one of the 15th October, 1858, I certainly have no recollection of whatever, for I do not know that Mr. Crook has any authority whatever to write any letter on behalf of the Steam Navigation Board certainly, or of the Pilot Board. As to the letter of the 14th September, I cannot imagine any letter existing in which I have approved of the site marked S, "which appears to be judiciously selected." The difference appears to me to be this—that we never went further, that is, the dissenting members, than saying it was the best of the two. As to the letter of the 4th July, I think I recollect the tower and keeper's quarters, but the last half line, and the half line above it, I dissent from.
311. You see these three letters, written at long intervals, all express authoritatively the opinions of the Board, and convey these opinions to the Government, you being a member of the Board, and involved in that expression of opinion, yet you do not appear to know that these papers were in existence? Things were done by a majority.
312. Do you arrive at your decisions on the Board by a division, taking the votes? They are expressed by resolution.
313. Are the names of dissentients entered on the minutes? No.
314. Then it would be really impossible to ascertain whether you dissented from these instructions or not, even if we had the minute book here? Scarcely, because "resolved" means in practice by a majority.
315. The minutes do not shew of what numbers the majority consists? No.
316. By Mr. Piddington: Have you ever known, as a matter of practice, that in case the minority of the Pilot Board have dissented from the opinions of the majority, the minority have represented to the Government their views? No, I do not recollect a case, except this one here where the majority were misrepresented, and they then took this means of stating their opinion.
317. By Mr. Egan: Was the letter of the 14th September written between the time of this matter being brought under the consideration of the Pilot Board and the approval of the minutes at the next meeting? Yes.
318. The letter was written before the minutes were approved? Yes.
319. What steps did the Board take when they found they had been misunderstood? They demanded its erasure from the minute book. The proper course would have been to have sent a letter to have contradicted the previous one.
320. Was that done? No.
321. But the entry was erased? It is on the minute book now erased.
322. By Mr. Dalgleish: It would appear then that the Board existed for no useful purpose, seeing that when it arrived at so important a conclusion as erasing a minute on which action had been taken, and a letter written to the Government, no letter was written to the Government stating that the minute had been erased? We do communicate it in another way.
323. I understood that this erasure was not communicated? The notice of the fact of the erasure, I believe, was not communicated.
324. By Mr. Egan: The Government were never made acquainted with the erasure? No, I believe not.
325. By Mr. Piddington: If the Secretary of the Board had written a statement pledging the authority of the Board with regard to a sanction of a site for a light-house, but which authority the Board afterwards discovered had been founded in error, was it not the duty of the Board to advise the Government of the mistake? We took this means of doing it (alluding to the letter of 9th August, 1860, signed by four Members of the Board.)
326. But that was three years afterwards: this letter is dated 14th September, 1857, and the letter to which you allude was written after the construction of the light-house, nearly three years afterwards? There is another letter.
327. You have stated that a portion of the letter, signed by Mr. Drew, stating that the site appeared to have been judiciously selected, was subsequently erased from the minutes? I did not mean that letter.
328. Then the letter signed by Mr. Drew on the 14th September, 1857, so far as you know, has not been disputed by the Board or any member of the Board? So far as I know they never agreed to that.
329. It has not been disputed, I say? Not formally disputed.
330. By Mr. Gray: Were the Pilot Board aware that a wrong site had been selected for the light-house previous to its actual erection? It was erected on the present site before they were aware of it. In fact, none of the Pilot Board had visited it, nor were they asked to do so at first; but when they were requested to visit it, they did so, and found that it was not

W.S. DeLoitte, Esq. not on the site marked S, nor yet on the site marked T, and undoubtedly it was obscured by a rock or hill for six miles.

12 Mar., 1861 331. Do you not think it should be the duty of the Pilot Board to examine and report upon all sites selected for light-houses? It is our duty to make any examination that may be required, but we have no self-acting power.

332. Do you consider the Pilot Board the proper authority to examine into and report upon such matters? I think six nautical men ought to be good authority.

333. Have they done it previously? They have in two cases, the Inner South Head light, and the Port Stephens light.

334. These were previous to the erection of the light-house at Jervis Bay? One later, the other previously. The Inner South Head light was erected on the suggestion of the Trinity Board as they were called, and they called seventeen witnesses to obtain their opinions on the most eligible site.

335. By Mr. Doljeish: Do I understand that the Inner South Head light-house was erected at the recommendation of the Pilot Board? No, of the then Trinity Board, which existed for about nine months; Captain Lamb was Chairman, and Captain Browne, Captain Pockley, Captain Darley, and myself were members.

336. Almost the same members as the Pilot Board? Yes.

337. Are you aware that much dissatisfaction has been expressed with regard to the position of the Inner South Head light-house? As you ask the question, I say decidedly not, except as to the quality of the light; it is too good a light. There were seventeen witnesses examined, and sixteen agreed upon the site, Captain Denham being one; and it has proved of great utility.

338. On two or three occasions I recollect seeing notices in the public papers, to the effect that the light-house was calculated to blind mariners on approaching the harbour, so that they cannot see the dangers it was intended to guard against? That is complaining of its goodness—of the brilliancy of the light; that is the only complaint I ever heard.

339. By Mr. Egan: It appears that the Government adopted the opinion of Mr. Watson and the Chairman, and overruled the opinion of the majority of the Board? I am afraid that is true. That was as to whether it should be lit at all after it was erected.

340. By Mr. Piddington: I think you have stated that when Mr. Surveyor Millington's plan was submitted to the Pilot Board, they were asked to express an opinion as to whether S or T was the proper site? Which was the best of those two.

341. When asked that question were you or any other member of the Board of opinion that neither of those sites was the best site? We had written to that effect to the Government before, to which letter we had not received an answer, and therefore not having received an answer to our former advice or opinion, we were very much inclined to give no answer to this at all. However, it was insisted by some members of the Board, that it would be discourteous if we did not give an answer, and so we said very well, confine it to the question whether S or T is the better position; and there can be no question that S is the best. To that answer it was added that the site S appeared to have been judiciously selected, which the majority objected to at the next meeting.

342. By Mr. Gray: How many agreed to that part of the letter? Two.

343. And four did not agree to it? Yes.

344. By Mr. Piddington: I should wish to ask whether you are of opinion that the Pilot Board have no general discretion, beyond giving a categorical answer to questions put to them by the Government? In that instance we were very much disposed to give no answer at all—I mean of course the three members and myself, who were in the majority.

345. Are you not of opinion that, having given an answer to the question put to them, the Board might have given a decided expression of opinion with reference to the proper site for the light-house? We had done that.

346. Had not the Board the same discretion that they had previously? It would only have been repeating what we had said before.

347. As a question of fact, had not the Board ample discretion when this plan was submitted to them as ever they had before? We could only have referred them to what we had said before.

348. By Mr. Gray: I think the question Mr. Piddington wishes you to answer—yes or no—is this, did you consider the Board had sufficient authority to examine into and report upon the eligibility of the site altogether, not confining yourselves to the two places presented to you? We had no power unless we had been set in motion.

349. Unless such a question was asked, you had no power or discretion to enter into it? No.

350. By the Chairman: Is it your opinion that a member of the Pilot Board should have been deputed to fix the precise spot on which the light-house was erected? Yes, quite so—no doubt of it—one or two.

351. And that, in point of fact, no light-house should have been erected without such a decision? Certainly; and also taking evidence as to the best site.

352. Would it not, in your opinion, have been a judicious proceeding to have sent a member, or members, of the Pilot Board to point out to Mr. Dawson, who was acting merely as an architect in the matter, the exact spot, and say, this is the spot? Yes, giving their opinion, to be confirmed and discussed by the Board; taking evidence also if they thought it necessary.

353. By Mr. Egan: Any matter which the Board has to consider is, I presume, brought under their notice by the Chairman, not by their own motion? They can, of course, but it is generally as a matter of practice left to him; and it is his duty to take down the opinions he considers we have arrived at, and carry them out, to prevent delay.

Benjamin Darley, Esq., called in and examined:—

354. By the Chairman: You are a member of the Pilot Board? I am.
355. And have been for a good many years? I have.
356. Has the subject of the light-house at Jervis Bay been lately brought under your consideration, or the consideration of the Board? It has on several occasions lately.
357. Did the Board approve of the site on which it is erected? The majority of the Board did not approve of the site.
358. Then, in reality, the Board did not approve of it? The Board did not approve of it.
359. Was that disapproval conveyed to the Government? It was.
360. And, notwithstanding that fact, they proceeded to the erection of a light-house on a spot which was not recommended by the Pilot Board—which was disapproved in fact? It was disapproved by the Pilot Board.
361. Then it is not your opinion that the light-house, as at present erected, is in a proper position? Certainly not.
362. Not alone with reference to the general trade of the Colony, but even the coasting trade? Not even for the coasting trade—it is useless, good for nothing, for any purpose in its present position.
363. That being your opinion, then, do you not think it would be advisable to remove it with the least possible delay? I never would have lighted it.
364. But being lighted——? I think it ought to be removed.
365. From the fact of a light-house being required for general purposes, is it not your opinion that the most desirable site should be fixed upon? Most decidedly.
366. And that a trifling matter of money should not stand in the way—it should not be a question of finance? That is quite my opinion.
367. The present light-house being placed in a position where it does not afford all the advantages the community are entitled to expect, is it your opinion that it should be removed? It is. I cannot see any possible use it can ever be in its present position.
368. What position would you assign for a light in that quarter? Crocodile Head.
369. By Mr. Gray: Where is Crocodile Head situated? A little to the eastward of Point Perpendicular.
370. By the Chairman: Is it the extreme eastern point of the northern headland of Jervis Bay? Yes.
371. Therefore a light in that position would be of equal advantage to the general trade of the country, coming from north or south? It would.
372. Would it afford any advantages to vessels bound into ports in the immediate vicinity of Crocodile Head to the northward? It would be of service to vessels bound into Crookhaven. It would be a good leading light for ships running up and down the coast, and in as good a position as the present light for avoiding Wreck Bay. It would also be a good leading mark for going into Jervis Bay; and it would combine many advantages to which the present light is of no service whatever.
373. Would it not be attended with this additional advantage, that vessels coming from the eastward would fetch the light much sooner than anywhere else on that coast? Much sooner than where it is.
374. I believe there was considerable difference of opinion in the Pilot Board respecting the advantages of the position of this light—the one at present erected? I do not think there was very great difference of opinion; there were only two members out of the six that thought otherwise than that it was badly placed, and should not be lighted.
375. One-third of the members differed from the majority? Yes.
376. Was the opinion of the majority conveyed to the Government? It was.
377. Clearly? Clearly; for the Pilot Board's opinion was asked previous to commencing the building, and we were decidedly opposed to the southern point.
378. There is a letter in the printed correspondence signed by Mr. Wilshire, secretary of the Pilot Board, dated 30 July, 1859—was that letter written by your authority? It was written by the Chairman, and it was merely to strengthen his opinion that he made reference to the minority; otherwise it would have gone to the Government that the Board disapproved of it altogether.
379. Was that sanctioned as a part of a letter coming from the Board by the majority of the Board? It was.
380. They sanctioned the whole of it? Yes; they saw no objection to mentioning the names.
381. By Mr. Piddington: In fact, it was in that mode that the opinion of the Board was conveyed to the Government? Quite so.
382. By the Chairman: What is your opinion upon the propriety or otherwise of a member of the Pilot Board being deputed to fix the actual site on which a light-house should be erected? I never considered that any one member of the Board had the power.
383. The Pilot Board as a body——? The Pilot Board as a body have been authorized to do so.
384. They should select some person? They should go themselves.
385. You would not depute that to one member? I think it is a thing of such importance that the greatest care ought to be taken to fix a site before they commence building the tower.
386. The erection of a light-house you consider of extreme importance? Of immense importance. I think the one in question calculated to mislead instead of to be beneficial; and, in point of fact, as I said before, it is worse than no light at all.
387. Was there any alteration at any time ever made in the minutes after a decision of the Board—was any report made to the Government at variance with the recorded opinion of the

the Board on any point? There was a minute at variance with the Board's opinion, which we altered at our next meeting. It appears in the minute book, although I do not believe it went to the Government; it was not in accordance with our views.

388. That alteration did not go to the Government? I do not believe it did.

389. Between the time of the meeting of the Board at which this minute was passed, and the time of the next meeting when it was altered and confirmed, there was a letter forwarded to the Government, not in accordance with the opinion expressed by the Board, and although an alteration took place in the minute, that alteration was not reported to the Government? No, I do not think the altered minute was reported to the Government.

390. So that, in point of fact, the Government were left in the impression that the letter which was sent contained the opinion of the Board? Yes, I think so.

391. By Mr. Piddington: You have stated that an alteration of the minutes was made by the authority of the Board, on the ground that the minutes did not convey the opinion of the Board? The alteration of the minutes was made, but the opinion of the Board was not conveyed in the letter that was sent. The letter was written after the meeting of the Board, but not in accordance with the opinion of the Board; and at the next meeting when the minutes were read, we requested the Chairman not to sign them, as they were not in accordance with our opinion. We asked if this letter had been sent to the Government; he said yes, the letter had been sent; and we said we were very sorry for it, as it did not convey our opinions.

392. Did the Board take any steps to remedy the mistake that had been made in a matter of such importance? They did not.

393. Did you, as a member of the Board? I did not insist upon having another letter written.

394. By the Chairman: Did you express any opinion as to the propriety of doing so? I think we did express our opinion very strongly at the time, but nothing was done.

395. By Mr. Gray: Have you ever commanded ships on the coast? Not in the coasting trade.

396. You have run the coast up and down? Frequently.

397. Between Melbourne and this port? Yes.

398. Have you ever found an indraught into the bay known as Wreck Bay? No; I must confess I rather doubt there being much indraught into that bay.

399. Have you been along the coast near Cape St. George? Frequently.

400. During daylight? Both day and night. I have generally gone up and down the coast within a few miles.

401. And you found no indraught? No.

402. Would a light situated on Crocodile Head be seen from Wreck Bay over Cape St. George? It would.

403. Would it have a range into Wreck Bay equal to that of a light on Cape St. George? No; I do not think so, because Cape St. George is the southern point, and, of course, a light there would shew into Wreck Bay more than one on Crocodile Point would.

404. By the Chairman: Do you mean George's Head, or Cape St. George? Cape St. George.

405. Which do you consider Cape St. George? I should say it is the middle headland between the two points marked respectively, on the Admiralty Chart, "Cape St. George," and "George's Head." In the present position of the light-house this mountain (pointing to the chart) shuts the light out from Wreck Bay, and a ship coming from the southward may lead up inside the light without ever seeing it.

406. By Mr. Gray: You said the light-house would be better on Crocodile Head, would not that same mountain that intercepts the light, where the light-house is at present placed, still intercept the light if the light-house were placed on Crocodile Head? Not more than at present.

407. It would equally as much? Nearly the same.

408. Which of the two capes lies more to the eastward, Crocodile Head or Cape St. George? Crocodile Head.

409. Would not a light on Crocodile Head be intercepted by the land between that and Crookhaven, if vessels were to make use of it going into Crookhaven? Crookhaven entrance round here (pointing to the chart) is not very distant. It would shew up past Rocky Point.

410. Would Beecroft Point not intercept the light from Crocodile Head to Crookhaven? It would at the entrance of Crookhaven; but still it would shew in a north-westerly line from Crocodile Head.

411. By the Chairman: Mr. Gray asked whether a light on Crocodile Head would not be shut in when going into Crookhaven, but would not a light on Crocodile Head be a sufficient guide to vessels bound in there, because they could keep it steadily in view until they got close up to the land? Yes, sufficiently so; they would know exactly their distance off, because they would know that the moment they shut that light in, they were a certain distance off the land.

412. And in the case of vessels bound to the southward, supposing it was necessary to anchor in a southerly gale, they could be placed in a position to anchor under that headland? Yes, I think so.

413. By Mr. Gray: In what wind would it be necessary for a vessel to anchor on the northern side of that headland? A southerly wind.

414. And for what reason should she run in there? No reason, except that she was bound to the south.

415. Merely to wait for a wind? Merely to wait for a change of wind or weather.
416. By the Chairman: Or the moderation of the gale? Yes; and I think steamers might run in and anchor there and wait till the weather moderated.
417. By Mr. Piddington: Comparing Crocodile Head with Cape St. George as proposed sites for a light-house, which site would you prefer in order to prevent vessels running into Wreck Bay? Cape St. George.
418. By Mr. Egan: Are you aware what originated the idea of a light-house there at all? Nothing that I am aware of. We have not heard of any accident there for years; I always considered Jervis Bay a good harbour of refuge.
419. Was it in consequence of accidents that had previously happened in Wreck Bay and the chance of vessels running up that coast to the northward becoming embayed in Wreck Bay? That was a reason assigned by the Commissioner for placing a light on Cape St. George.
420. If that was the reason Cape St. George would have been the best place? Yes.
421. By Mr. Dalgleish: You are aware that a Commission to inquire into the position of light-houses on these coasts was instituted, or rather a conference was held? Yes.
422. Have you read the evidence that was given before that Commission? I think I did, some years ago.
423. Are you aware that a large majority of the individuals so examined—some of them men who, from their position, would be eminently qualified to give an opinion on these things—Captain Crawford Pascoe, of the Royal Navy; James Rusden, of the Royal Navy; Captain Watts, of the "London"; Captain Lamont, of the "White Swan"; Captain Gilmore, Captain Rozee, Arthur Devlin, Thomas Wing, and several others—were unanimous. I believe, with hardly an exception, the witnesses examined were unanimous in recommending Cape St. George over Point Perpendicular? Yes, I believe that was so.
424. Then might I ask your reason for considering a light on Crocodile Head preferable to a light on Cape St. George? Because it combines so many more advantages than Cape St. George.
425. I find it stated in the evidence of Captain Crawford Pascoe—who as commander of one of Her Majesty's ships, and also engaged in the survey of the coast, may be considered qualified to give an opinion—that Crocodile Head is too elevated for a light-house? Crocodile Head is low in comparison with Point Perpendicular.
426. I may have made a mistake in that—perhaps he alluded to Point Perpendicular? I think one objection that is stated is that a vessel would not see the light as at present erected? Yes.
427. Would not the same objection bear with regard to a light on Crocodile Head? A line drawn from Crocodile Head past this mountain would shew as far into Wreck Bay as the present light does. We have ascertained that. (Reference was here made to the charts.)
428. Assuming Mr. Millington's chart to be a correct plan of the coast, are you of opinion that the point marked S on that plan would be the proper place for the light-house? No; I never was of opinion that that was the proper position.
429. Not even with Mr. Millington's conformation of the land? No point to the southward that you could place it on. We compared this plan afterwards with the charts of the coast, and found it incorrect; they did not correspond at all.
430. If this chart had been correct the point S would naturally be the best position for a light-house? No.
431. For Wreck Bay it would, for it lights right into it? We were asked the question which of these two points was the best; at first we refused to give an opinion, as we did not consider either of them the best; but our Chairman overruled us by saying that we were not asked for our opinion as to the best position, but which of these two points was the best.
432. Did you consider that the evidence of these commanders, as given at the conference, was not worthy of consideration? Not in comparison with some other persons who had been on the coast for many years.
433. By the Chairman: In point of fact, you thought your own opinion as sound as any of theirs? Yes; quite as good.
434. By Mr. Dalgleish: It appears to me that the persons examined were men who had been for years on this coast, and must have had a thorough knowledge of it, and each individual gives his evidence that there is an indraught into Wreck Bay? Yes, I think they did; but I do believe that if you asked some of these same gentlemen their opinion over again, they would tell you that Crocodile Head was the best position for a light.
435. By Mr. Gray: Where do vessels coming from New Zealand make their landfall, to the north or south of Jervis Bay? That depends on the season.
436. Generally speaking? In the summer season to the north, and in winter to the south.
437. All vessels from England, of course, make their landfalls to the southward? Yes, they come up along the shore, except in the summer season, when they keep off for fear of the north-east current.
438. In the summer season, vessels coming from New Zealand make the land as far north as Sydney? As far as Newcastle sometimes.

FRIDAY, 15 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. EGAN, | MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. PARKES.

MERION MORIARTY, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Charles Smith called in and examined:—

- Mr. C. Smith. 439. By the Chairman: You are a member of the Pilot Board? I am.
440. Were you a member of that Board when the subject of the erection of a light-house at Jervis Bay was under discussion? The question had been discussed and agreed to before I was appointed a member of the Board.
441. How long have you been a member of the Board? Since the 1st March, 1859.
442. You have been a member of the Board since the commencement of the building of the light-house at Jervis Bay? Yes, undoubtedly.
443. The subject of its position was frequently discussed at the meetings of the Board? Yes, very frequently.
444. Did the Board arrive at any particular conclusion with regard to the spot on which this light-house should be erected? The first time that the matter was brought particularly under our notice was about the beginning of July, 1859; the subject was referred to us, asking our opinion as to which of two sites, marked S and T respectively, would be the best for the erection of a light-house. The Board were of opinion that neither site was the best that could be had, but that of the two the site S had an advantage over T. I may here remark, with reference to the letter of the Secretary to the Board to the Colonial Architect, under date 4th July, 1859, that that letter was not approved of by the Board. The Board desired to say that neither site was a proper one, for such was the decision they had come to; but the Chairman objected to our forwarding such a report, as that was not the question we were asked. He was of opinion, that as we were asked to say which of two sites, S and T, was the best, that we ought to confine our opinion to that point; we consequently confined ourselves to deciding which of the two sites was best, and a minute to that effect was entered in our minute book. More, however, was inserted on the minutes than we had sanctioned, and that portion of the minute corresponding with the passage in the letter of "and they therefore approve of the tower being erected as recommended by you" was, at the next meeting of the Board, scratched off the proceedings.
445. Then the Board did not sanction the latter part of the letter at all? No.
446. But, on the contrary, distinctly expressed their disapproval of it? Most distinctly; and the Board felt so strongly on the subject, that this passage was scratched out of the minutes. The Chairman, however, though our approval was struck out, would not insert our disapproval on the minutes, because he said the Board had not been called upon to give an opinion on the proper site for the light.
447. Then, as a matter of fact, the Chairman made a report to the Government which, though purporting to give the opinion of the Pilot Board, was actually untrue? No doubt.
448. And that report has never been contradicted? Not in so far as I know; and certainly it was not at that time.
449. When the subject was under the consideration of the Board, as I understand from your evidence, the Board expressed a decided opinion in favour of a spot that was not marked at all on the chart sent to you? Yes, certainly.
450. Two sites only were marked, S and T, and the Board considered that some other point was a more favourable one for the light? Yes.
451. Supposing that letter to have been an accurate representation of the views of the Board at that time, which however it was not, ought not the alteration of the minute to have been made known to the Government? I presume that the Treasurer had an intimation, if not officially, at all events privately, of the disapproval of the Board, and that this led to the Treasurer's note to the Board of the 26th July, 1859. This note induced us to give the reasons for the decision at which we had arrived, neither the reasons nor the decision having been previously called for by the Government.
452. Did you receive any intimation when it was decided upon to erect this light-house, in what you conceived to be an improper place? No; from the time the Board directed the letter of the 30th July to be sent to the Honorable the Treasurer, we had no intimation that the light-house was to be erected, until we had notice that it was in course of construction in this improper place.
453. By Mr. Egan: Are you sure that no intimation was given to any of the Board that the light-house would be erected at this spot? I did not know, nor as far as I am aware did other members of the Board know, that the erection of the light-house had been contracted for. In fact we knew nothing at all about it, beyond the communication sent to us.
454. By the Chairman: Then it was not communicated to you that it was in course of erection? No. After we had forwarded our letter of the 30th July, 1859, no correspondence on the subject took place until the 6th June, 1860. The light-house was then erected, and it was represented to us by certain captains trading on the coast that it had been built in a ridiculous place. We felt bound to place this information before the Government, and in reply we received from the Treasurer a note from the Colonial Architect, which we returned with a letter from the principal keeper of the light to the Treasurer in our letter of the 2nd July, 1860.
455. Have you had an opportunity of inspecting the light since its erection? I have.

456. And what has been the result of that visit on your mind; you went, I presume, as Mr. C. Smith, a member of the Pilot Board, to inspect the light? I did.
457. And were accompanied by other members of the Board? Yes; by Captain Browne, ^{15 Mar., 1861.} Captain Watson, and Captain Fox. There were four of us, besides an officer of H.M.S. "Herald."
458. An officer of H.M.S. "Herald" accompanied you on that occasion? Yes; Mr. Hixson, the second master of the "Herald."
459. What was the impression made on your mind by an inspection of the light-house; did you conceive it to be in a proper position? The impression made upon me was that the light was not at all in a proper place, and that it ought never to have been lit. So great is my objection to it as a beacon that in my opinion it must be done away with at some time or other, and to keep it on now is only incurring a very great expense without securing any of the advantages that might have been obtained had it been placed in another position.
460. Then sooner or later you are of opinion that this light ought to be done away with? Yes.
461. And if so, the sooner the better? No doubt. I am of opinion that it ought never to have been lit.
462. Did you make any report to the Government after this inspection? We did.
463. What was the nature of that report? Our report is amongst the printed correspondence, and is dated 9th August, 1860.
464. By Mr. Egan: You mean the 28th July, 1860? No; that is the date of the report of the deputation made to the Pilot Board; and the report to the Government was not made until afterwards, when the members came as a body to determine on the matter. I may remark here that in several instances where reports have been sent in to the Treasurer there have been two reports upon the one matter, one report from the majority and another from the minority. The reason the Chairman gave for sending in these two reports was that, after the opinions he had given as to the intended position of the light being the best, he would be stultifying himself if he allowed it to go in as the unanimous opinion of the Board that the light was improperly placed; and on this account he was bound to state his reason for dissenting from the Board. He, therefore, made out two reports to the Government, one from the majority of the members, and the other from the minority, a most unprecedented way in my opinion of giving the opinion of the Board.
465. The opinion of the majority of the Board was adverse to the position of the light? Yes, and not only that, but was adverse to the lighting it at all.
466. Upon what point of the coast in this locality would you recommend the erection of a light? Upon Crocodile Head. When we were going down on the steamer to inspect the site, I was speaking to Mr. Hixson, the second master of the "Herald," as we passed Crocodile Head, and he at once pointed to the very spot which the Board had approved of for a light, and said, "There, that is the place for a light-house."
467. That observation was not recorded in your report? It was not.
468. However, he made it, and the spot he pointed to is the one you now recommend? It is.
469. By Mr. Egan: Was the Board unanimously of opinion that this was not a proper site for the light-house? Not unanimously, there were two exceptions—that is, they agreed that it was not a proper site, but did not wish the light to be done away with.
470. Then the Board were actually unanimous in regard to the site? Yes.
471. And did they make a report to that effect? They did.
472. As a Board? Yes.
473. There were not then two reports, one against and the other in favour of the site? No, it was done in this way. Captain Browne and Captain Watson did not think the site a good one, but said that it would be better to light the building than to pull it down. We, on the other hand, said that it would be better to pull down the building at once than to create a beacon that would have to be pulled down hereafter.
474. Then Captain Browne and Captain Watson would not consent to moving the building? No, though a majority of the Board did. A minority, however, thought it was better to light it than to have nothing, and it seems that they had their way.
475. And that minority consisted of only two members? Yes, Captain Browne and Captain Watson.
476. By the Chairman: You have been a long time at sea, I believe? I have.
477. And have had great practical experience as a sailor? Yes.
478. In all trades, or in any particular trade? In all trades.
479. You must then have had considerable experience as to the value of lights on a coast? I have.
480. In all parts of the world? Yes, almost in all parts.
481. You are no doubt, then, perfectly conversant with the system of lighting the coast adopted at Home? I am, perfectly.
482. In the English Channel, the Irish Channel, the Clyde, and the Bristol Channel? I know the east coast of Scotland very well, and also the English and the Irish Channel, but I have never been on the Clyde.
483. The system of lighting these localities I have named may now be said to be perfect? No doubt.
484. Perhaps, though, you will first favour the Committee with your reasons for suggesting Crocodile Head for the site of the light-house in preference to the other locality? In the first place, I consider that a light ought to be placed in that position in which it will give the greatest advantages. That is, that, in my opinion, a light ought to serve to warn the seaman of a danger, or guide him to a port of safety; and, in choosing a spot for a light, we ought

Mr. C. Smith. ought to select that from which we can derive the most benefit in these two respects. Placed as it now is, to the northward of Cape St. George, we derive no advantage from the light whatever, except only to warn vessels very imperfectly out of Wreck Bay. Now, I consider that the entrance to Crookhaven, that is, the great bight lying between Crocodile Head and Kiama, is a much more dangerous place for vessels than Wreck Bay. It is not above twelve or fifteen months ago that a vessel was lost there; and I believe that as many vessels have been lost there as in Wreck Bay. A light on Cape St. George would never be seen at all to the north of Crocodile Head, as that head shuts it in; neither does it favour a vessel going into Jervis Bay. A light on Crocodile Head, however, would project well out, and would form a good guide into Jervis Bay; and not only would it be a guide in this direction, but would also be a guide into Crookhaven, into which many coasters run when they get a strong wind from the southward, and cannot get round Point Perpendicular. By putting it on Crocodile Head the light would be seen for thirty miles along the coast to the northward, and that would include all the length of coast that is dangerous in that direction. It would also be seen further in shore to the southward than where it is now, but not so far perhaps as if it had been placed to the westward of the Cape; it could be seen nearly as far as Brush Island from Crocodile Head. The present light cannot be seen nearer to the shore than some seven or eight miles by chart in that direction.

485. Is it not the practice at Home, in the erection of light-houses on the coast, to select the extreme headlands for the purpose, and not the heads of sounds or bays? Yes; they are always erected on the most projecting points of the land.

486. Going round from the Lizard, the Eddystone, the Start, to the Portland light, and so on to St. Catherine's Point and Beachy Head—are not all these lights erected on projecting points? Yes.

487. That, then, is the system pursued in the English Channel? Undoubtedly.

488. They never put a light at the bottom of a bay, except for mere harbour purposes? No.

489. Whilst those that are required for coast lights, to point out to the seaman his position on the sea, are always erected on projecting headlands? They are.

490. And the light we now have under discussion is intended as a coast light? Yes.

491. By Mr. Dalgleish: Do you consider that the light on its present site is situated at the bottom of a bay? No; not at the bottom of a bay; but where it is, it is certainly embayed by the land. It is erected in an indent of the coast. The headland, on an indent of which it is placed, is a turning point for vessels, and, consequently, the light should have been projected as far out as the nature of the land would allow. If it had been placed there, it would not have been embayed, but now it is considerably inland of the extreme point of the headland, and as the coast there trends off quickly in shore, the light is certainly embayed.

492. By Mr. Eyon: I believe that a vessel coming up from the southward, and keeping close in shore cannot see this light? It cannot be seen by a vessel close in shore, until they are right upon it. The light where it now is is not worth the expense of keeping up.

493. By the Chairman: You have stated that the great objects for which coast lights are established are to warn vessels of a danger, or to guide them to a safety; but is there not another in this—that a vessel coming in to the land from sea can the sooner ascertain their real position the sooner they make a light; and taking this view, that is—the advantage to sea-going vessels—would not the light have been of more importance if it had been erected on Crocodile Head? I take it, that the light was intended for a coast light, and as the most prominent point of this headland is Crocodile Head, and the light should have been on the most prominent point. Now it cannot be seen for more than six or seven miles to the north, and there are of very little use to the mariner, because when he opens the light he is past the point, and therefore past all danger in this respect.

494. Supposing a vessel coming in from the eastward—say from New Zealand—is it not of importance to them to ascertain their position on the coast as soon as possible, and if they are to do this by means of a light, the further the light is projected out to the east the better it must be for the ship? No doubt.

495. Then, in connection with the trade between this Colony and New Zealand, you think that Crocodile Head is the spot in that locality that is best suited for the erection of a light? No doubt.

496. Was the subject of the colour of the lights to be used brought under the consideration of the Pilot Board? I believe that it was mentioned by the Chairman to the Board, that a lantern of the description now used had been proposed, and that it had been decided upon to put it up.

497. You were not asked your opinion, as a Board, respecting it? No, we were merely told that it had been decided upon.

498. Decided upon by whom—by the Chairman? No, not by him. It was merely stated by him that it had been decided upon.

499. Is it your opinion that a green light is a proper one to use as a coast light? My opinion is that a green light is the faintest light you can use. This is a fact that is well known. On the coast of England, where lights are plentiful—perhaps in order to distinguish one from another—it may be necessary to use green lights, but I should not recommend them on a coast like this, where lights are so far apart.

500. Are there any green lights used in England? There are.

501. Are you sure of this? Yes; I think they have a green light on the Bell Rock. They have there a light similar to this—white, red, and green.

502. I think you are mistaken? I may be now, but it was so in my time some years ago.

503. By Mr. Dalgleish: It is not usual to alter the colour or position of the lights on the English coast? It is not.

504. And is not this light on the Bell Rock a very splendid light? Yes, it is a very fine Mr. C. Smith, light.

505. By the Chairman: By having these three coloured lights, a vessel running along close in shore is enabled to ascertain her distance from the shore, as, when out at sea, the white light only is seen; then, as they approach nearer, the red light becomes visible; and afterwards, as they get closer in, the green light is perceptible—the difference in the value of the lights being that the green light is not seen beyond ten miles, the red not beyond fifteen miles, whilst the white is seen at twenty miles distance—so that there is a difference of ten miles distance in the value of the white and the green light? I am not certain as to the actual distances, but I believe that it is computed to be very nearly those you have mentioned. I know that you can see the white light for a considerable time after you have lost the green one.

506. You lose sight of the green before the red, and of the red before the white light? Yes.

507. By Mr. Dalgleish: Have you any distinct remembrance of the Bell Rock light? Not perfectly distinct; but my impression is that it is white, red, and green.

508. That, I believe, is a very splendid light? Yes, it is a very good light; but then this light at Cape St. George is not of the same magnitude. The Bell Rock light is of the first class, but this is not.

509. By the Chairman: It is your opinion, I believe, that, previous to the erection of the light-house on the site it now occupies, the Pilot Board should have been consulted, and that it was they who should have pointed out the site for the erection? Certainly. I think that we ought to have been asked to point out the site for the light; and, if we were not satisfied with the plans before us, that we ought to have been called upon to take such evidence as would have satisfied us in regard to the site before we fixed upon it.

510. And then, having come to a decision that the Board, or some of their members, should have gone to the locality and pointed out the precise spot upon which they wished the light-house erected? No doubt.

511. This course of proceeding was not taken in the case now before the Committee? No, certainly not. And I may mention here that it was reported to us on board the steamer that the stones for the building were quarried out on the ground by the contractor, long before any person came out to shew them the spot where the work was to be carried on; and that, ultimately, it was a blackfellow who pointed out the site for the erection of the building.

512. By Mr. Dalgleish: You have not a chart of the coast before you, but I presume this is not absolutely necessary for you to describe the advantages of the situation you advocate for the light? No. I should only wish for the chart in order that I might be able to point out the places into which a vessel could get by means of the light if it were placed where I wish it to be—such as Kiauna and Crookhaven—in fact you would include thirty miles of the coast to the north, which is all that could be of any service.

513. Then the light placed as you proposed would just screen the northern part of the bay formed by Crocodile Head? Yes, exactly. I would place the light so as to screen the land when you come into shoal water, so that if a ship master lost sight of the light he would at once know that he was too far in shore. And then for a vessel going into Crookhaven, which is a safe harbour with the wind to the southward, the light might be so placed as to shew when he came to a safe place to drop anchor.

514. By the Chairman: You would then, to some extent, make it also a harbour light? Yes.

515. And would this combine the advantages of a coasting with a general light? Exactly.

516. By Mr. Dalgleish: Are you aware of any circumstances, irrespective of his own opinion, which may have justified Captain Browne in coming to the conclusion that Cape St. George was a more eligible site than Crocodile Head? The light is not on Cape St. George.

517. But supposing it to be there? Well, supposing that. I take it in this way—he may have said that vessels have been lost in Wreck Bay, and that it is better to avoid such accidents hereafter. But then it must be recollected that vessels have been lost also in the Crookhaven Bight, and that this is a much more dangerous spot than Wreck Bay. And in saying this I say it as one who has had ten times the experience of Captain Browne.

518. You are aware, no doubt, that a Commission of delegates from the different Colonies sat to inquire into this very subject? I am.

519. And that the weight of evidence taken was greatly in favour of Cape St. George over Point Perpendicular for the site for the erection of this light? I am aware of it; but I have looked over the evidence, and it is my impression that had I been a member of that Commission the weight of evidence would have been on the other side. It strikes me from reading the questions put that they were so framed as to draw from the witnesses examined an answer in favour of Cape St. George. (Vide Notanda appended.)

520. I certainly do not observe this? Well, such is my impression from reading the evidence; and from my knowledge of captains trading along the coast such must have been the case, because I know that the general feeling is against the light on Cape St. George.

521. In the evidence of Crawford Pascoe, Esq., R.N., given before the Light-house Commission, I find that he is asked—“Perhaps, from your passages up and down the coast you will be able to give the Commission your opinion as to whether you consider there should be any additional light on that coast between Sydney Heads and Cape Howe?” to which he answers—“It occurred to me in the last trip I made that a light would be desirable on Cape George.” And then he is asked—“That is the southern entrance of Jervis Bay?” to which he replies, “Yes, Point Perpendicular, I think, is too elevated for a light.” Now here are distinct answers given, and they do not appear to have been leading questions that have brought them forth? No, but the greater part of the evidence is what I allude to. (Vide Notanda appended.)

Mr. C. Smith, 522. If you have read the evidence you must be aware that the weight of evidence taken before that Commission was greatly in favour of Cape St. George, in opposition to Point Perpendicular, as a site for the light-house? I object to the manner in which the evidence was taken.

15 Mar., 1861.

523. But besides Mr. Pascoe, who gave the very strong opinion I have quoted in favour of George's Head, in opposition to Point Perpendicular, there were also the opinions of R. G. Gilmore, A. Devlin, R. T. Moodie, H. Tuiloch, J. Walsh, J. Brown, W. Bell, T. Wing, and several other witnesses, all of whom were in favour of St. George's Head, whilst only two of the witnesses examined were in favour of Point Perpendicular, and neither of them had had the same experience on the coast as the others had had, so that it is fair to assume that at all events the Board had good grounds for the decision to which they came? I am satisfied, from my acquaintance with captains trading on this coast, that, were evidence on this point to be taken now, three-fourths of them would decide in favour of Crocodile Head over Cape St. George.

524. But even if Captain Browne were ignorant of the locality himself, would he not be justified, from the evidence taken before that Commission, in forming an opinion in the way he has done? Certainly.

525. The evidence taken before this Commission was the foundation upon which the Government proceeded in coming to a determination to place the light-house on Cape St. George? No doubt.

526. Then, with this evidence before them, could they have consistently followed any other plan? I do not know. When they had a protest from the Pilot Board, the Government ought to have hesitated.

527. Yes, but that was subsequent to the Government having come to a decision? I do not think so. They had before them a report from the Board, recommending Crocodile Head as the best site, before the position had been fixed upon.*

528. So that it is evident that the Government acted upon the evidence taken, and the opinion given, by this Commission? I presume so.

529. You are aware that there was a letter sent from the Under Secretary for Lands and Works ordering a surveyor to proceed to that part of the coast, to make a minute survey of it, to send in a report of the particular point which he considered the best adapted for the purposes of a light-house, to mark the same upon his chart, and to send in the chart and the report to the Government for their approval. All this had been done, and the chart and the report of the surveyor were before the Government, as well as the evidence and the report of the Commission, prior to their receiving the protest of the Pilot Board, so that it must be confessed that they were justified in the determination at which they arrived? Yes, they certainly were under the circumstances.

530. We find that Mr. Millington, in pursuance of his orders, executed what he called a plan of that part of the coast, and that this plan was submitted to the Pilot Board for their approval of two sites, marked S and T, proposed for the light-house; were you a member of the Board when these plans were submitted? I was.

531. Do you recognize the plan now produced as that which was sent to you by the Government, and which was said to come from Mr. Millington? Yes, I believe it is the same.

532. Then, with this plan before you, and with the peculiar formation of coast there depicted, which of the two points marked would you consider to be the best for a light-house? Well, supposing the chart to be correct—which it is not—my opinion is that neither point is the best that can be found, but that of the two S is preferable to T.

533. This chart was sent to the Board as the most correct that could be given, being a detailed map of the locality taken by a surveyor on the spot, and the Board had, consequently, a right to assume that it was the most correct chart that could be placed in their hands. That being the case, on which of the two points, S or T, would you consider it best to place the light? I have said on the site marked S, supposing the map to be correct.

534. Let me ask you whether, from what you know of the coast, you consider the delineation here given to be an accurate representation of this part of the coast? No, I do not. I could not tell that it was this part of the coast at all from this map.

535. And is the light-house, as now erected, placed upon the site marked here as S? It is not.

536. Then whom, in your opinion, is to blame for the light-house being placed where it is? That I am not prepared to say. I have already said that the contractor told us on board the steamer that he had been six weeks quarrying stone before any one came near him, and that then he had to get a blackfellow to point out the place on which the beacon was to be erected also before anyone came near him.

537. Do you consider the Government to blame for the position of this light? I am not prepared to say where the blame rests.

538. Should it not, in your opinion, be the primary object of inquiry by this Committee to ascertain where the blame lies in not erecting the light-house on the site S, where it was ordered to be erected by the Government? I am not prepared to say anything about that; but it is my opinion that the site marked here as S is somewhere near what we call Black Head. What we term Cape St. George is not the site here marked as S; nor is the light-house erected on the point S, nor on any other point marked on this map, for where the light-house is placed is not shewn here. The light-house is erected about two miles from the point of the headland; and the map is not so far wrong as the light is wrong placed on it.

539. By the Chairman: Do you think that a land surveyor is a proper person for a Government to send to determine the position of a light-house? I think not.

* NOTE (by witness on revision):—Before the light-house was commenced building.

540. And do you imagine that the efficiency of the land surveyor in this respect would be in any way increased by sending to his assistance an architect? I do not. Mr. C. Smith.
541. By Mr. Dalgleish: We find that the Government deputed Mr. Surveyor Millington to survey the coast, and to fix upon a suitable site for the light-house, and that at the same time they appointed the Colonial Architect to assist him; do you consider this to have been a proper selection? I should say not, unless they had a nautical man associated with them. 15 Mar., 1861.
542. One nautical man, at least, should have been selected to accompany them? Certainly.
543. The Pilot Board were not communicated with in the first instance in regard to this light-house? Not to my knowledge. I joined the Board on the 1st March, and then about June or July this plan was sent down to us, simply asking us the question which of the two sites, S or T, was the most eligible. We said that neither of them were eligible, but the Chairman said we were not asked that, but merely to say which of the two we considered the best. We then said that if we must give an opinion in that way that we preferred S to T, but that we did not like either.
544. And you were not communicated with further on the subject? Not in so far as I know.
545. Then you were not asked on what part of the coast would be the best site for placing the light-house, but you were simply supplied with a sketch upon which two points were marked, and your opinion was requested as to which of these two points you considered the best? Exactly.
546. Consequently, having given you opinion in obedience to orders, your duty as a Board was complete, and you had no power of yourselves to fix and determine the position of the proposed light? No. Our powers as a Board are very limited; much too limited, I think.
547. Have your Board power to suggest where a light-house should be placed? Only when called upon to do so.
548. Did you take any steps to mark your disapproval of the site selected for the erection of the light-house? We did.
549. I find in this printed correspondence a very important opinion given by Mr. Crook, the Harbour Master, and I should like to know in what capacity he acted in regard to the Pilot Board, for in his letter of the 15th October, 1858, I see that he says—"I am directed by Steam Navigation and Pilot Board to inform you that the Board recommend that the sum of £4,350, for the construction of the light-house in question"—and "on the site indicated in Mr. Surveyor Millington's map, marked S"? This was before I joined the Board, and at that time Mr. Crook used to interfere a great deal in the business of the Board; after I joined, however, he had very much less to do with it, because I and others considered that he had no right to interfere in our business further than he was directed to do by the Board.
550. Have you seen this letter of Mr. Crook's? Yes, I have seen it in the correspondence. It was written prior to my joining the Board in March, 1859. After that period, all letters emanating from the Board were written by the Secretary.
551. Was there a majority in favour of lighting the lantern, after the light-house was finished? No; the majority were opposed to its being lighted at all.
552. So that the minority ruled over the majority? Yes; it seems so.
553. Is it a usual thing with your Board that the opinion of the minority should be taken in preference to that of the majority? No; this is an exceptional case.
554. But, do you not think that the majority have to a certain extent stultified themselves by allowing their opinion to be over-riden by that of the minority? No; we could not prevent it. It would have been impossible for us to have prevented the minority from sending in to the Government the reasons on which they dissented from the views of the majority.
555. But you say that it is an unusual thing for two reports to go in, one from the majority and another from the minority? No doubt it is an unusual thing; but I have already said that our Chairman explained that though he agreed with us in the views we expressed, yet having given to the Government an opinion in favour of George's Head, he considered that he would be stultifying himself if he did not give some reasons for that opinion, and on this account the report of the Chairman and Captain Watsen was sent in.
556. But his letters appear to express the opinion of the majority and not of the minority? In some instances, no doubt they do; but in other instances you will find the opinions of the majority given, with the dissent or modified opinion of the minority appended. We did not approve of the site proposed for this light, and though the words "they therefore approve of the tower being erected as recommended by you" appear in the Secretary's letter, yet they did not form part of the minutes of the Board. Something to that effect was inserted in the minutes, but was ordered to be scratched off them, at the next meeting of the Board.
557. By the Chairman: In giving an opinion upon the proper site for a light-house, would you be likely to be influenced more by your own conclusions arrived at from your own experience, than by the opinions of any given number of men who may be examined? In the case of Jervis Bay, I was guided solely by my own conclusions, because I have had a great deal of experience in cruising about all that part of the coast; but I was also aware that it was the general opinions of those captains who had been much in the locality.

Mr. C. Smith.

NOTANDA.

15 Mar., 1861.

Answer No. 519. Addendum.

By this I do not mean to infer that the Board were actuated by any other motives than those for the general good, but the fact that many of the witnesses examined being masters of steamers who were in the habit of hugging the land to the southward of Wreck Bay to avoid the current on their passage to the northward, caused the majority to be in favour of Cape St. George.

Had it been shewn to them that a light on Crocodile Head would have answered this purpose, and given other advantages to the northward, they would have been then as many of them are now in favour of this Head, since the two positions have been more prominently before them.

And, also, that captains in the habit of trading to ports within the radius of the said light should have been called upon to give their opinion before the said Commissioners, which opinions, I have no doubt, would have been in favour of Crocodile Head.

Answer No. 521. Addendum.

And the reason here given is quite erroneous, as Crocodile Head is only about two-thirds the height of our upper South Head light, having a large bay and low land for a long way immediately behind it, giving it the effect of an island, whereas where Mr. Pascoe recommends the light to be placed is not more than 50 feet lower, and at the base of land 600 feet high, where the mist and vapour lies long after it is clear on Crocodile Head.

Mr. W. J. Wilshire called in and examined:—

Mr. W. J.
Wilshire.

15 Mar., 1861.

558. By the Chairman: You are Secretary to the Pilot Board? I am.

559. You have been summoned here in order that you may produce the minute book of that Board—do you now produce it? I do; not knowing which you would require, I have brought them all.

560. Will you turn to the record of the meeting of the 4th July, 1859, or rather of the meeting that led to your letter of the 4th July? I have it here.

561. Have you before you the minute in reference to Cape St. George light? I have.

562. Will you read it? It is as follows:—"After a careful consideration of the subject, the Board resolved, that Mr. Dawson be informed that they approve of the design and elevation of the tower and keeper's buildings, as submitted by him; and that in respect to the sites marked S and T, in the coast plan, the Board coincide with the view expressed by himself and Mr. Millington, that the site marked S possesses considerable advantages over the one marked T, and therefore they approve of the tower being erected on the site recommended by him."

563. What was done on this? On this minute, a letter was written to the Colonial Architect, and forwarded by me. At the next meeting of the Board, when the minutes had to be read and confirmed, the last paragraph of the minute I have just read was ordered to be struck out, commencing at the words "and therefore" down to the end.

564. These were struck out at the next meeting of the Board? Yes.

565. The minute not being in accordance with the views of the Board was not confirmed? No; but the minute had been acted on before this last passage was struck out by the Board.

566. Was any communication of that fact made to the Government? No.

567. They were not informed that the Board did not concur in this last paragraph? No, they were not.

Mr. Charles Smith called in and further examined:—

Mr. C. Smith.

15 Mar., 1861.

568. By the Chairman: You have heard the evidence just given by Mr. Wilshire? I have.

569. That evidence, I presume, sufficiently explains your views in regard to this minute? It does.

570. By Mr. Dalgleish: Can you, in any way, account for the fact that the ultimate conclusion at which the Board arrived was not made known to the Government? No.

571. In no way? No, only from the unwillingness of the Chairman to represent views or opinions that were not asked for by the Government.

572. This conclusion could be of value only to the Government, yet being withheld from them, and they, being ignorant of the falsity of the concluding part of the Board's letter, would to a certain extent be justified in acting upon that paragraph? Yes, they would be justified in the meantime; but if you take notice of Mr. Weekes' note of the 26th July, where he refers the matter back to the Board, you will see that our views must have been before the Government, because in that note he details notions respecting coast lights in which the Board perfectly agreed.

573. But tenders having then been actually called for the erection of the light-house, the opinion of the Pilot Board could have been of no value to the Government? No, and prior to this the Pilot Board had not been called upon to give an opinion as to the proper place on which to put a light-house; at all events not whilst I was there.

TUESDAY, 19 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. WILSON, | MR. GRAY,
MR. PARKES.

MERION MORIARTY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

H. H. Browne, Esq., recalled and examined:—

574. By the Chairman: I have requested your attendance here to-day, Captain Browne, H. H. Browne, Esq., with a view to obtain from you further explanations with reference to some of the answers you have already given in evidence before this Committee. You expressed yourself in favour of the light-house being placed on Cape St. George, because you formed an opinion when a seaman in command of a ship, that that would be the best site. You say—"It is pretty well known that several vessels have been lost in Wreck Bay. There is an indraught which sets in on the coast, and although vessels may be steering to clear Cape St. George, they do not make sufficient to windward, get embayed, and are lost. In the year 1830 or 1837 I was in command of a ship, and passed Montague Island early in the morning, five or six miles to the eastward. We were carrying all sail, and steering north by east to clear Cape St. George. Just before sunset I was up aloft, as was my usual custom, to take a look in the direction of the land, and on going to the foretopsail yard I could plainly see the point—(Cape St. George)—which we were trying to avoid, broad on the starboard bow. I immediately shortened sail, and got the vessel's head off the land, and steered north-east by east, and then only just cleared the Cape. A ship was coming up astern of me, and carrying on the same sail, but not having seen me alter my course, she stood on and was lost." Am I to understand you to say that you were so close in to the land as to make the headland broad upon the starboard bow, that is three or four points, when you were steering north and by east? The high bluff land to the westward of the Cape was the headland I first discovered, and that was very broad upon the weather bow. It was a hot day, and a haze hung about the land. I did not see the cliff at first, but saw the water beneath; then, as I neared it, I opened up the headland, and saw the point outside, as well as Point Perpendicular. I do not say positively that I was steering exactly north and by east. I did not see the land at all on the port side, yet I might have supposed I was running along the land. It made such an impression on me that I felt sure that if by chance the vessel astern of me, which was carrying all sail, did not find out the danger she was approaching, she would be lost. She stood on following, I suppose, as she thought, the same track as myself, and she went ashore.

575. By Mr. Gray: That was the "Hivo"? Yes. I fancied that my vessel was brought into that dangerous position by the excessive indraught, not by bad steering—bad steering does not generally take place in the daytime.

576. By the Chairman: Steering north and by east from Montague Island would carry you clear of Crocodile Head? About two miles to the eastward of it, I think.

577. You stated, I think, that you had had no experience in the narrow seas at Home, or of the system of lighting there? With the exception of the British Channel.

578. And that only in command of foreign ships, and when you were in a junior position? Exactly so. I had, too, some opportunity of seeing the lights on the eastern coast, and also those in the Gulf of Finland, that sea being very well lighted. With this exception, and not having been in the Bristol or St. George's Channel, I have not had any experience of the lighting of the narrow seas at Home.

579. You have expressed an opinion that it would not be an advantage to have lights too close together—are you not aware that at Home they are much closer than you imagine there is any necessity for them being here? I expressed my opinion upon that point, because on an open coast of this kind, which vessels are not of necessity obliged to approach very close, it did not appear to me advantageous to have too many lights, which might be mistaken one for the other. If the turning points were lighted that appeared to me all that was really necessary. Although many persons have questioned the advantage of the Cape St. George light, I consider that as it is the most prominent headland between Sydney and Cape Howe, it is an advantage to have it lighted.

580. But, upon the broad basis you have stated, would not Crocodile Head be the best point, being in a more direct line? I should like to have been upon that head before expressing an opinion upon this point. Not having seen it so as to be able to form a good judgment, still I have an impression that Point Perpendicular shuts in Crocodile Head from the southward; Crocodile Head not being so high as Point Perpendicular, the latter would obscure it from the southward. I merely give this as my impression, not as an established fact. If I were to take the bearings I could give you a more precise opinion.

581. What course can a vessel steer after passing Crocodile Head—to the westward of south? A vessel after passing that point would have to make as nearly as possible a southerly course.

582. Have you not to make south-west and by south? I do not know exactly; my impression is that the course would be much nearer south than south-west and by south.

583. Allusion has been made to my being Port Master at the time this minute was made. Are you not aware that I never knew anything of that minute? It was not written with a view to cast any censure upon you in your position as Port Master, but with the idea that the Government had not consulted the proper persons, those who had the executive control of light-houses, who should have been consulted before the survey was made.

584. That letter was a simple expression of the opinion of those persons who wrote it, that it was the duty of the Government to consult me upon that point? Certainly. The report of

- H. H. Brown, Esq.
29 Mar., 1861.
- of the Commission was upon light-houses on the Australian Coast generally; but in carrying out the plans recommended they should have been submitted to the officer in charge of this department. It was considered by the Board at that time that you, being Port Master, ought to have been consulted before the survey was made, and have been asked to accompany the surveying officer instead of Mr. Dawson, who had merely the building to look to.
585. In point of fact, you mean to say that previous to fixing the site, I, as Port Master, if the subject had been brought under my consideration, should have gone and pointed out the spot where the light-house should be erected? Certainly.
586. And the Government ought to have asked what my opinion was? Certainly; it would have been only proper courtesy to you as head of the department.

Henry Thomas Fox, Esq., called in and examined:—

- H. T. Fox, Esq.
29 Mar., 1861.
587. By the Chairman: You are a member of the Pilot Board, I believe? I am.
588. How long have you been a member of that Board? Since the 1st of March, 1859; that being the date of my appointment.
589. For many years, I believe, you commanded a vessel upon this coast? Yes.
590. You were master of the brig "Phantom", were you not? I was; and for twelve years was engaged in various vessels in the intercolonial trade, principally between this port and Melbourne and Adelaide. I was also coast pilot of the steamer "New Orleans," now called the "Governor General."
591. During your experience then in these seas, you have had ample opportunity of forming an opinion as to the proper site of light-houses on the coast? I have.
592. Was the subject of a light-house, in the vicinity of Jervis Bay, brought under the consideration of the Board at any period previous to its being lighted? As a member of the Pilot Board, I recollect that, either at the end of June or the beginning of July, 1859, a communication (I think the first) upon the subject of the light-house near Jervis Bay, was sent to us from the Government.
593. That was previous to the building of the light-house? Yes; previous to its being commenced.
594. What was the opinion of the Pilot Board upon that occasion? With the first communication from the Government, a chart, or rather two plans, drawn by Mr. Surveyor Millington, were sent down, and we were asked to give an opinion as to which of certain sites—one marked S, the other marked T—upon the plans, was the best suited for a light-house in that locality. A majority of the Board—four out of the six—considered that neither of the points marked in the plans was the best site for a light-house in that vicinity. The Chairman, however, said we were not asked for an opinion whether other sites than these might not be better suited for a light-house, but merely as to which of the two points submitted to us, as marked upon the plans, was the best. We then said, that of the two we preferred the one marked S, though we did not consider either of them the best site that might be chosen.
595. Was that expression of your opinion conveyed to the Government? I believe it was; not at that time. In a letter from the Secretary to the Pilot Board to the Colonial Architect (dated 4 July, 1859), it was stated, however, that "with reference to the sites marked S and T, on the coast chart, the Board coincide with you in opinion—also expressed by Mr. Surveyor Millington—that that marked S possesses considerable advantages over the latter, and they therefore approve of the tower being erected as recommended by you.
596. That was not recommended by the Pilot Board, I believe? No, and when the minutes of the Board were read we called attention to the fact that we never approved of that site, and that portion of the minute which stated that we approved of the tower being erected there was erased from the book.
597. You not only did not approve of the tower being erected on that spot, but disapproved of it altogether as the site for a light-house? Four of the six disapproved of its being in that vicinity; but if the Government had determined upon having it upon one of the marked points we preferred that marked S.
598. Who was the constituted or proper authority for fixing the site of a light-house upon this coast? I scarcely know.
599. Who should it be? Those who had the greatest nautical experience I should think.
600. If there was in existence any Board for the management of such matters—do you think it would properly devolve upon them? I should think so. I think it would be their duty to decide by evidence if they were unable to do so without it.
601. You think the Pilot Board ought to have given an opinion upon that subject? I think so.
602. And any opinion of theirs adverse to a proposed scheme should have led to a re-consideration of the subject? I think the subject should have been re-considered before their opinion was thrown overboard altogether. (Vide Notanda appended.)
603. Upon what point would you recommend the erection of this light-house? Upon Crocodile Head, to the north of Jervis Bay.
604. What would be the advantages arising from the erection of a light-house there? It would be the most salient point on the whole coast line. On page 11 of the correspondence you will find a letter from certain members of the Pilot Board to the Colonial Treasurer, in which the advantages of a light on Crocodile Head are stated. (Vide Notanda appended.) After the letter from the Board, dated the 4th July, had been sent to Mr. Weckes, that gentleman again wrote to say, that "before the site for the light-house about to be erected at Jervis Bay was finally determined upon, he should be glad to be favoured by the Pilot Board “ Board with their views as to the most suitable locality on which the light should be placed. “ When speaking of the coast line, at one time Point Perpendicular and Crocodile Head were considered as synonymous, being separate only a mile or so; that was before the last chart was published; but since then the north head of Jervis Bay is called Point Perpendicular, and the outer margin of the cliffs Crocodile Head.” It is all perpendicular land like that at the North Head of Sydney, and very likely on this account some would call that Point Perpendicular which others named Crocodile Head, especially as they lay within a mile or two of each other. In his letter to the Board the Colonial Treasurer says:—“ In selecting a site for a light-house, the main purpose arrived at should, no doubt, be to accomplish as many advantages as the position will admit; and in erecting one at this particular point of the coast we should, if practicable, render it useful to shipping bound either north or south”; and he calls attention to what he had heard stated with regard to the desirability of selecting Crocodile Head as the site for this light-house. I perfectly agreed with him; and, with a view to carry out the wishes of the Treasurer, we again went into a close consideration of the matter, and four of us were of opinion that the best point that could be chosen for the purpose of accomplishing all the desirable advantages alluded to in the Treasurer’s letter of the 26th July was Crocodile Head. At this conclusion we arrived on the 30th July. The Chairman, however, desired that, in communicating this to the Government, the names of the four members in favour of it should be mentioned, his object, no doubt, being to avoid an appearance of stultifying himself after having given an opinion in favour of Cape St. George. We did not consider it necessary to go into the reasons why we adopted this course. From that time the Pilot Board had no further communication with the Government on the subject until long after the light-house was far advanced towards completion; and thus the Government might have been adopting our opinion, and building the light-house on Crocodile Head for aught that we knew officially.

H. T. Fox,
Esq.
10 Mar., 1861.

605. Are you of opinion that the most judicious course would have been for the Pilot Board to depute a competent person to indicate the precise spot upon which the light-house should be erected? I think so.

606. Do you think it was consistent with the duty of the Pilot Board to suggest such a course of action to the Government? Well, after Mr. Weckes had sent this letter of the 26th July, calling attention to the many advantages desirable in a light-house, and after answering that on the 30th July by recommending a site for the light-house which we considered would embrace all those advantages, the Board was not called upon to do more until we again heard from the Government. It was only by mere chance—by hearing from a ship that passed that part of the coast—that we learnt that they were building the light-house on the present site.

607. Do you know where it is erected now? Yes. I was one of a deputation who went down to inspect its position after it was built.

608. Did you approve of the situation? Oh! no; it is in one of the most absurd places that could be found for a light-house. I cannot see why you should put a coast light in a bight. It is within a line drawn from Crocodile Head to Cape St. George.

609. It was supposed, I believe, to possess some advantages over other spots, with reference to guarding against the danger of Wreck Bay? So it would if it had been put on Cape St. George.

610. Then if it had been put on Cape St. George instead of where it is at present situated, it would have the advantages it was presumed to possess? That would be more reasonable if it was intended only for ships coming one way; then you could put a light in the bay to be guarded against; but when there is traffic in both directions, and so great an expense incurred for a light that we can only afford one, I think our object should be to obtain the greatest possible good we can by it, and instead of specially considering one danger we should guard against all in the vicinity as much as possible, as would be the case if the light were placed on Crocodile Head.

611. Then by putting the light at Jervis Bay, as it is, it is made nothing but a harbour light, to guard against dangers only at one particular point? Certainly; it would keep a ship clear of Cape St. George, if she saw it; but it cannot be seen in Wreck Bay, except over the land.

612. If the light-house were placed on Crocodile Head would a vessel, when making it from the southward, come within range of Wreck Bay? Any ship, not seeing the light on Crocodile Head, when she had run her distance, ought to haul off, as she would most likely be too close in; but any ship coming up in her proper track would see this light far beyond Cape St. George. The light would be so far out as to be seen outside Cape St. George. In the track to the northward a light on Crocodile Head would be seen at Kiama, Jerringong, and, I believe, at the entrance to the Shoalhaven River, none of which advantages can be obtained from its present position.

613. From Crocodile Point, up along the coast, the light bears south-west and by south, therefore no point bearing in that direction could intercept the light at all? Certainly not.

614. Supposing a ship is coming from the eastward, say from New Zealand, with the light on Crocodile Head, what is your opinion of the advantages to persons on board to be gained from the light being placed on this in preference to any other spot—the ship being bound to Sydney, Jervis Bay, or wishing to make the land? It is the most easterly point, and of course would be the best for them, as it would be the sooner seen as they approached the land.

615. And if it were necessary to hit the land in the night-time, on seeing the light he would fix his course on getting a distant glimpse rather than by running in to make it, as would be necessary at present? Certainly; the land trends away on both sides, and he would be clear of the Cape.

616. Does the present light afford any guard against vessels getting embayed in Wreck Bay through thick weather? If a vessel is embayed it does not see the light; if it was more to the east, as on Crocodile Head, in making it they would be out of danger.

- H. T. Fox, Esq.
19 Mar., 1861.
617. That being your opinion, what course would you suggest with regard to it? I suggested that it should not be lighted, but being lighted I would do away with it, as it is only perpetuating an error, and it would be making matters worse to allow it to remain any length of time after being lighted.
618. Then the sooner it is removed the better? Yes; although it is a great waste of public money I think the sooner it is removed the better.
619. By Mr. Wilson: It appears from the papers that the Government, in determining upon the lighting of the light-house as at present situated, were influenced very much by the two opinions of naval officers—the one by Commodore Loring (who gave no reason), the other by Captain Denham, who makes a statement upon which, perhaps, you can throw some light. He says—“It would certainly have been preferable had that light-house occupied the shoal of the actual cape”—is there a shoal at this cape? No. I do not know what he means by the shoal at Cape St. George. There is no shoal off the coast there, and if there were, I would ask is a shoal a proper place for a light-house? There is no shoal there known to our navigators; you can go within two or three ships' lengths of the land at that point.
620. Captain Denham also says—“Looking, however, at its main character—a general coast light for voyagers, to check any ashore deviation of course upon that 240 miles run between Cape Howe and Sydney Heads—I consider it satisfactorily situated.” Looking upon it in that light do you consider that it is at all situated upon a good site? No, I do not. Captain Denham does not say it is well placed; he says it is “satisfactorily placed as a general coast light.” No; I consider it most unsatisfactorily placed for that purpose.
621. By the Chairman: If Captain Denham had asserted that this was a proper place to be lighted, would that have any weight with you? Not the slightest. I have seen it a hundred times to his once, and have run up and down by night and by day. With all respect to Captain Denham, I must say I think I know more about the proper position for this light than he does.
622. By Mr. Parkes: There appears to be a great discrepancy in Mr. Millington's charts which it is difficult to reconcile, I mean with reference to the marks S and T. I cannot see how the spot S could have been recommended when it does not exist? I think I can throw some light upon that. There are two coast sketches by Mr. Millington. I have no doubt the light-house is built upon the spot marked S, in the plan which shews the elevation and general features of the land. The other sketch he appears to have enlarged from the chart of the coast, and to have made the one I allude to from his own observations. No doubt he then thought the two points marked S would correspond, but that they do not do so is evident. The error he has made no doubt arose in this way.
623. By Mr. Gray: He never surveyed and laid down the coast? He surveyed this part, and drew the plan; and, looking upon it as a separate part, it is correct.
624. He never laid down the headlands? No; except from other charts. But the light-house has been put on since. It is upon the spot S, as far as the land around it is concerned.
625. That point of land bearing due south from the present light-house intercepts the light from any place to the westward of south? Yes; it is intercepted to the whole of the south-west, except a small space where it is seen (dangerously) over the land; in its present position it is worse for Wreck Bay than if it were on Cape St. George. It would then have shewn the way in and out of it, but does not do so now.
626. Would a light-house on Crocodile Head throw the rays of light into Wreck Bay? It would have shewn a light into that bay to a certain extent, certainly much further than the present light does.
627. You have come up the coast frequently? Yes.
628. In passing Wreck Bay, have you not found a considerable indraught? Very rarely; it has been the exception, not the rule.
629. Did you make it a habit to hug the coast or to stand out? I used to run tolerably close. After passing Montague Island, I steered for Cape St. George.
630. And never felt yourself drawn in shore by the indraught in the vicinity of Wreck Bay? On one occasion I fancied myself further in than I ought to have been, but I was never set into the bay; I mean I was not so far off Cape St. George as I ought to have been.
631. Do the coasters think there is danger on account of the indraught there? I believe some of them do.
632. There have been some wrecks in that bay, I believe? I think there have been three within the last twenty years.
633. How many miles to the eastward of Cape St. George is Crocodile Head—or is that head to the eastward? About two miles, I think; perhaps a little more, say three miles.*
634. And what is the difference between them north and south? About six miles.
635. The difference in longitude is three miles east, of the one over the other? It is a little more than three miles of longitude, but that is near enough.
636. And do you reckon that a greatly material difference? I do, in a coast light. The three miles off the land is a good offing. That is the most projecting point on the whole range between Twofold Bay and Sydney. If you are to the eastward of that point, you are all right; but if you are three miles to the westward, you have to guess how far to make to the eastward to clear the coast by getting outside the easterly point.
637. In your opinion a light on Crocodile Head would be of advantage with regard to Wreck Bay? More than the present light-house.
638. I mean more than a light-house erected in a proper position on Cape St. George? Yes; and infinitely more for other purposes. (Vide Notanda appended.)

NOTANDA.

* NOTE (By witness on revision):—I find since, by measurement, that the actual difference of longitude is 5', or about four nautical miles.

† Corrected:—Four.

NOTANDA.

Answer No. 602. Addendum.

As it appears to have been by the mere opinion of Commodore Loring, who could not be well acquainted with the locality.

Answer No. 604. Insertion after "stated."

In addition to the reasons stated in that letter there are several others, one being that, having an uninterrupted scope to the northward, there would remain but a small space of about 20 miles between its limit of visibility and that of Sydney light, and this would be the only unlighted part of the track along the coast from 30 miles north of Sydney to upwards of 100 miles south of it.

Answer No. 638. Addendum.

I did not mean to say yes without some modification. I meant it would be sufficient to keep a ship clear of that bay under ordinary circumstances, and was infinitely better for all other purposes.

TUESDAY, 2 APRIL, 1861.

Present:—

MR. GRAY,

MR. DALGLEISH.

MERION MORIARTY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Edward Orpen Moriarty, Esq., called in and examined:—

639. By the Chairman: You are the engineer for ports and harbours? I am. E.O.Moriarty,
Esq.
640. Have you lately been down the coast to Ulladulla? Yes, I was down last week. 2 April, 1861.
641. You passed the light-house at present erected in the vicinity of Jervis Bay? I did.
642. At what distance do you imagine? We passed from a mile and a half to two miles off the land.
643. Was it during the night? No, during the day, about eleven o'clock in the forenoon.
644. Have you ever passed it at night, or during the time when it was lighted? No, never.
645. How long did the light-house remain in sight after you passed when bound into Ulladulla? I made some notes at the time, to which, if you will allow me, I will refer. We were exactly abreast of the light-house at 11:30 a.m., being one and a half mile distant, and the speed of the steamer being about eight miles an hour; we were abreast of Cape St. George at 11:40, and abreast of George's Head at 11:48; the light-house was hidden at 11:55. The course she steered was south-west half west; Crocodile Head was hidden at 12 o'clock exactly.
646. By Mr. Gray: You did not observe when you first saw it? Yes, I did. We sighted the light-house at 10:35 a.m., two miles off the land; Crocodile Head at that time completely overlapped St. George's Head, the light-house not being visible until we got abreast of Drum Island, before coming to Crocodile Head; that island bore due west.
647. By the Chairman: Did you allow for variation? No, I took it by compass bearing.
648. The course from Crocodile Head up to Cape St. George is south-west by south? South-west half west was the course we were steering—that is not far off it. There was sure to be some variation, though I do not know what the local variation would be.
649. Is it your opinion that the coast line, as traced in the chart, is a correct representation of the coast as it is? I believe the coast line has never been completely surveyed except that part in the vicinity of this port, which was surveyed by Captain Denham. They have taken the latitude and longitude at certain fixed points, but never surveyed along the coast. We sighted the light-house at 11:35, being then distant about a mile; we were abreast of the light-house at 11:30—that is an hour all but five minutes from the time we sighted it until we were abreast of it. As we were steaming at the rate of eight miles an hour that would give a range of about seven and a half miles to the north.
650. Only as far to the north as Crocodile Head? Abreast of Drum Island.
651. How long did it remain in sight? The light-house was not visible until we got abreast of Drum Island, which then bore due west; Captain Mailler estimated the distance at about two miles, but I think if anything it was under a mile and a half. Point Perpendicular opened, or became visible, when we were midway between the island and Crocodile Head. At 10:43 we were abreast of Crocodile Head, distant one mile; abreast of Point Perpendicular at 11:3, distant about a mile; abreast of the light-house at 11:30, distant about a mile or a mile and a half. The speed of the steamer was about eight miles an hour.
652. By Mr. Dalgleish: What was the boat in which you made the passage? The "Mimosa." We had a leading wind, and the current setting to the south at that point. Cape St. George is visible into Ulladulla.
653. By the Chairman: Bearing about south-west half west? A little better than south-west half west, about three-quarters west.
654. Then as a guide to vessels running up the coast close in shore the present light is of no use? None whatever in my opinion.
655. Or is it any guide for protection to vessels entering Wreck Bay to the northward of Ulladulla? I do not think it would be of the least use.
656. Have you been lately running up the coast at night in any of the steamers? I have not seen the Jervis Bay light-house at night.
657. By Mr. Dalgleish: Might I ask whether a light-house upon Cape St. George would not be an improvement upon its present position? I think Cape St. George is the proper place for it.

- E.O.Moriarty, Esq.
2 April, 1861.
658. Will you oblige the Committee by looking at Mr. Millington's chart of the coast, and say whether, from the knowledge you have of the coast, you could verify either of the positions as Cape St. George? This point marked S is Cape St. George.
659. On which position do you imagine the light-house is at present placed? I think at T as marked on the plan. There is a projecting bluff where it stands.
660. There is a distance of two miles between these two points, I believe? It would be a little better than a mile and a half, according to the notes I took at the time I was running down there.
661. Do you still think the light is on the point marked T? Yes, I think that is the point. It is on a point, but I think not on the right point.
662. By Mr. Gray: Would you give us your reasons for thinking that this light should be on Cape St. George? Because from that point the light would be thrown into Wreck Bay and Ulladulla, and also, to a considerable extent, light the bay to the northward; the light-house could be seen into Ulladulla distinctly, and would be visible about halfway along the coast to Jervis Bay.
663. By the Chairman: Why would you go four or five miles inland for the site of a light-house, when there is a prominent headland showing both ways along the coast, up and down, and which, if lighted, would guard against Wreck Bay, and also protect vessels from running into the bay to the north of Jervis Bay? I believe the particular object of a light at this place is to light vessels coming from the southward; I believe it is not required for those coming from the north.
664. By Mr. Gray: Supposing you were going up the coast with the light on Cape St. George, might you not be misled as to the offing you took to avoid Crocodile Point, which is four miles to the eastward? I think not; if you see the light you get its bearing, and, knowing the direction of the wind, you are able to tell whether you will clear it or not.
665. Then there is no danger to vessels coming up the coast, by the light being situated three or four miles to the westward of, and inland to another point in the vicinity of it? I think not the slightest.
666. At the same time you consider that one of the greatest dangers to be guarded against is Wreck Bay? Yes.
667. Are you aware of the indraught into Wreck Bay? I should infer that there was one there; there is an eddy current mostly on the lee side of this headland. The prevailing current is from north to south, and all my experience serves to shew that there is an eddy current turning to the northward inside of the principal headlands. In proof of that, in coming up past there in the "City of Sydney," when about five miles to the south of Cape St. George, we found ourselves exactly in the course, as if coming from Ulladulla, and we had to keep well to the westward in order to keep in this counter current. This is the practice, I believe, of vessels going to the north: the steamers, after rounding the heads, keep in close to the coast to avoid the outer current.
668. That would also affect vessels coming from the south? Yes.
669. By the Chairman: Only within a certain distance of the coast? Only within the headlands.
670. Suppose a vessel after passing Gabo Island shaped her course for Crocodile Head, would that vessel be or not be within range of this indraught? I think she would not, unless she ran in to take advantage of it in working against a northerly wind.
671. By Mr. Dalgleish: Supposing a vessel was beating up with a head wind, is it not probable that, with that indraught, and not knowing the land, she would stand so close in as to come within its range and be drawn in, especially when the course of the current was not known—this light would warn him from that danger? I think so.
672. And the eddy would tend to keep a vessel from the north out of the bay? Yes.
673. Consequently the light would be better placed on Cape St. George than on Crocodile Head? Yes.
674. By the Chairman: Your opinion is in reference to lighting Wreck Bay, rather than in reference to general nautical purposes? Yes, I think so.
675. It has nothing to do with the advantages to be derived by ships coming from the eastern parts of the world—New Zealand, for example—in trying to hit the land in this locality? I do not think it would matter in the least. A vessel would run down a certain parallel of latitude, and make certain of hitting the land at a particular point.
676. By Mr. Dalgleish: In this case the coast is bold? Very bold.
677. And if she lost her course, and was going into Wreck Bay, this light would warn the vessel? I think it would.
678. By Mr. Gray: Do you conceive there is much danger in running down the coast north and south, northward of Point Perpendicular—is there any danger of a vessel becoming embayed? No, not to the north of Crocodile Point.
679. You consider there is little danger to the north of Crocodile Head to guard against? I think very little; indeed, I do not know of any. A sailing vessel would most likely keep in the southerly current, and run down well off the land. A vessel from the southward would try to hug the shore, and take advantage of the current—in that way she might be drawn into Wreck Bay.
680. By Mr. Dalgleish: Should the system of lighting a coast like this, in your opinion, be assimilated to the system of lighting the narrow waters of Great Britain, such as the English Channel? That is a wide question. I think the system of lighting this coast now should be with reference to an extensive system to be hereafter carried out, when the trade of our ports is to a large extent increased. You must take care that the class of lights on the prominent headlands may not be mistaken for the smaller harbour lights, but adopt a grand system of first-class lights, to be filled in with smaller ones as the trade of the country augments.
- 681.

681. By the Chairman: That being your idea, let me ask you, is it not the system of E.O. Moriarty, Esq. Great Britain to light the extreme headlands. For instance, in the English Channel, from Lizard Point to Start Point, from there to Portland Point, from there to Bechoy Head, and from there to the Foreland Lights, these being prominent points of the coast. I will take ² April, 1861. you to another instance—is it not the case that the lights from Cape Clear to Kinsale Head, from there to Hook Head, and thence to Wicklow Head, are on prominent points. And are there not in the Channel lights on the Smalls and the South Stack. And are not these prominent points, so that vessels can scarcely pass one before taking up another. Their positions, too, would be shewn at once; vessels would not be taken from the prominent points of the coast to look for lights four miles inland? I believe the mode of lighting the coast at Home is to place the lights on well marked headlands, but I consider Cape St. George a well marked headland.

682. By Mr. Dalgleish: Are not some of these light-houses just mentioned placed in reference to local dangers; for instance, the Portland lights, are they not intended to guard against the Shambles and Races, against which they act as a warning. And are we not, consequently, to deduce from that system of lighting that a light-house is wanted on Cape St. George, as a beacon against Wreck Bay. Would not that be in keeping with the system of lighting the English coast? It depends whether it is to be a local light or a general light. If a general light, I think Cape St. George would be the best site; but as a coast light I think it would be best on Crocodile Point. But I do not think that a light on Crocodile Head would guard vessels from the danger of running into Wreck Bay. When running up the coast, being on deck early in the morning, and not far off the land, I was astonished to see the land presently opening on the starboard bow, a long way out to sea. It struck me that this was an island. Between the high land at Cape St. George and the back country the land is quite low, and made the point appear like a detached island as you looked across the low country. Running up from the southward this land at Cape St. George looked like an island. I think that, if the light is to be of service to vessels going to Jervis Bay, Ulladulla, and those little places on the coast, such as Twofold Bay and Bate-man's Bay, Cape St. George would be the best site; they would keep within Montague Island.

683. Are you aware of the conference which took place some years ago with regard to the lighting of this coast? I am not.

684. It was with reference to lights for the coast; in fact, to light the coast with regard to danger. Your opinion with respect to the position of a light-house in the vicinity of Jervis Bay was corroborated by some fourteen men of experience; and only four held a contrary opinion? I merely give you my crude opinions, not thinking much of them. I think the matter is best left to sailors, not to engineers.

685. You will perhaps think your opinion of more value when you find it corroborated by the opinions of able nautical men? It is a satisfaction.

MERION MORIARTY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

William James Wilshire, Esq., called in and further examined:—

686. By the Chairman: Have you any documents to produce—you have been requested to W.J. Wilshire, Esq. produce some papers? Yes, I have copies of two or three letters that were written for by the Clerk of the House. They are letters from the Port Master to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, dated, respectively, 13 August, 1852, 15 May, 1855, and May, 1855, ²⁴ April, 1861 all having reference to light-houses on the coast. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix, A to C.)

APPENDIX.

A.

Port Master's Office,
Sydney, 13 August, 1852.

Sir,

Had I been aware that it was the intention of the Government to abolish the light dues, I should have deemed it my duty to have laid my views upon the subject before you for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor General, and in the hope that it may not yet be too late, I shall, as briefly as the subject will admit of, do so now.

At present it may be considered that there is only one light (and in the present state of our knowledge, unworthy of the country) upon the coast of this entire Colony, the abolition, therefore, of light dues entering Port Jackson can be of little consequence, but in fact neither masters or owners of ships ever object to paying for light where a good system is established. The immense additional security to life and property, obtained by their use, so infinitely overbalancing the cost of their erection and maintenance, if indeed the diminished insurance would not actually fully meet it.

It must be obvious to the most unreflecting mind, that the general as well as the coasting trade of this Colony is about to receive an immense increase, and extension of the advantages resulting from light-houses should go along, pari passu, with that increase; and I wish to place upon record my opinion that a light-house should not alone be erected at Cape Howe (no matter to what Colony it belonged, its advantages

W. J. Wilshire, Esq., advantages are to us), but that lights should also be placed upon the northern entrance of Jervis Bay, upon Nobby Island, the Solitary Isles, and Moreton Island, without any delay.

If I express very strongly my views upon these points, it is because my own experience in critical navigation, for many years, has fully confirmed the opinion entertained by all practical men of their extreme importance, and the numberless lives annually saved to the British Empire by their erection on the coast of the Mother Country.

24 April, 1855.

Should the Government deem it advisable to act upon this opinion, I shall be prepared to offer such further suggestions as to the description of lights most likely to meet the object, and will, I trust, render them worthy of the country. And if any ideas of mine have the effect of expediting this important improvement, I feel that I shall not have lived in vain.

The Honorable
The Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
MERION MORIARTY,
Portmaster.

B.

Port Master's Office, 15 May, 1855.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, No. 127, and in reply to state that my letter, No. 52-57, dated 13 August, a copy of which I enclose for the consideration of the Governor General, so fully explains my views that I do not know how I can more clearly convey them to His Excellency.

The Honorable
The Acting Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
MERION MORIARTY,
Portmaster.

Copy of foregoing letter enclosed.

Very well, let an estimate be made for lights upon the Solitary Isles and the northern entrance of Jervis Bay.

W. D.—16 May, 1855.

C.

Port Master's Office,
Sydney, May, 1855.

Sir,

In compliance with the directions contained in your letter of the 17th instant, No. 140, I have the honor to enclose, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor General, an estimate of the probable expense of maintaining a light-house establishment on the Solitary Isles, and the northern entrance of Jervis Bay, for the year 1856.

2. As the light on Gabo, the first on our coast, is a standing light, that at Jervis Bay should be a revolving one, alternating bright and red lights, to distinguish it from Sydney.

And as the light at Moreton Island is to revolve, I think that on the Solitary Island might be fixed; there would thus be no possibility of confounding them, except by the grossest stupidity.

3. The lights should all be of the first class, and may be estimated for at about, including freight, two thousand pounds (£2,000) each.

The Honorable
The Acting Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
MERION MORIARTY,
Portmaster.

P.S.—From the peculiar position of the Solitary Islets, no doubt considerable difficulty will arise in its erection, which, in my opinion, cannot be completed in less than two years. The charge for oil and incidental expenses, as well as the salaries, will therefore not be required until the light is in operation, or very nearly so.

The Colonial Architect's estimate for the building has not been received. Is it intended to provide for these on the present Estimates?

It is useless to include these in the Estimates for 1856, but I should like to provide for the two lights—that is, for the erection of them.

W. D.—30 May.

See further report from the Colonial Architect herewith.—31 May.

4. Table A, in the Appendix, gives the names and tonnage of the vessels chartered; Appendix A. the time of their departure from the United Kingdom, and the date of arrival in the Colony; the number of days occupied on the passage; the number of births and deaths which occurred during the voyage, and in Quarantine; the expenses incidental to detention in Quarantine; and the total cost of introduction, as far as the information is obtainable in the Colony, irrespective of the current expenses of the Emigration Commissioners' Establishment in the United Kingdom.

5. The number of immigrants originally embarked was 5,124; of whom 4,306 were Number of Immigrants embarked and arrived— Births, Deaths. for Sydney, and 818 for Moreton Bay. The number of births on the voyage were—to Sydney 49, and to Moreton Bay 17; the number of deaths on the voyage were—to Sydney 50, and to Moreton Bay 25, equivalent to 1·161 per cent. in vessels to Sydney, and 3·05 per cent. in those to Moreton Bay; making the whole number landed alive 5,114 souls, being the smallest immigration to this Colony, at the public cost, for the last six years.

6. Of the deaths, 18 were adults, 37 were between the ages of 1 and 12 years, and 20 were infants.

REPORT FROM IMMIGRATION AGENT FOR 1859.

12. The immigrants who arrived at their own expense, exclusive of Chinese, consisted of 795 from the United Kingdom, of whom 479 were males and 316 females; 5,887 from the neighboring Colonies, of whom 4,556 were males and 1,331 females; and 678 from foreign parts, including India, of whom 553 were males and 125 females; making a total of 5,588 males and 1,772 females. Appendix G.—
Unassisted
Immigration.

13. Of those who emigrated by sea, as shown by Table H, 953 embarked for the United Kingdom, 2,904 for the neighboring Colonies, and 1,115 for foreign parts; making a total of 4,972 souls. Appendix H.—
Emigration.

14. From these Returns, for the last of which, relating to Unassisted Immigration and Emigration, I am indebted to the Collector of Customs, the following results are deducible:—

|----------------------------------|--------|
| | Souls. |
| Immigration at public cost | 5,114 |
| Unassisted Immigration | 7,360 |
| | 12,474 |
| Emigration by sea | 4,972 |

15. In contrasting the small amount of Unassisted Immigration during the year 1859, as compared with that of 1858, it may be right to mention that the Return for the latter year did not distinguish between those who arrived from the neighboring Colonies and those from the United Kingdom, as, had this been done, it would have been found that by far the greater portion arrived from the former source.

16. Up to the present time 124,975 souls have been introduced into the Colony at a cost to the public of £1,923,816 3s. 7^d; and, during the same time, 59,764 souls have arrived at their own expense. The total Assisted and Unassisted Immigration during the preceding 22 years has been 184,739 souls. Appendix I.—
Assisted and Unassisted
Immigration.

CURRENT WAGES AND PROSPECTS OF IMMIGRANTS.

17. The Return marked J gives the rates of wages current in the country districts as well as in Sydney, and the average will be found to be as follows, viz. :— Appendix J.—
Rates of Wages.

| MALES. | FEMALES. | | |
|-----------------------------------------|----------------|-----------------------|------------|
| Smiths | 10s. per diem. | Per Annum. | |
| Carpenters | 10s. „ | Cooks | £25 to £30 |
| Wheelwrights | 10s. „ | Housemaids..... | £16 to £18 |
| Bricklayers | 10s. „ | Laundresses..... | £20 to £25 |
| Masons | 10s. „ | Nursemaids..... | £15 to £18 |
| Farm Laborers £30 to £40 per an. } With | | Farm Servants | £20 to £25 |
| Shepherds ... £30 to £35 „ } rations. | | General Farm Servants | £18 to £20 |

} With Board and Lodging.

18. It will thus be seen that wages have fluctuated very slightly during the twelve-months as compared with the previous year, and, notwithstanding the impression on the minds of some persons as to the preponderance of labor, there is unquestionably ample and highly remunerative employment still easily obtainable for all classes of mechanics employed in the erection of buildings, and all descriptions of farm laborers and female domestic servants.

19. The ships chartered by the Emigration Commissioners have been mostly of a good class, and as the arrangements on board these vessels have arrived at a great state of perfection the health and comfort of the immigrants is most satisfactorily maintained. Description of Ships.

20. The Surgeons Superintendent, with scarcely an exception, have performed their duties in a satisfactory manner, and the immigrants have evinced much thankfulness to those officers for their kind attention to them during the passage. Surgeons Superintendent

21. The immigrants have been on the whole of a good class, and, with few exceptions, have obtained employment readily or joined their relations upon arrival. Character of Immigrants.

22. Some irregularities which occurred on board the ships "Wellington" and "Alfred" were brought under the notice of the Government, and steps were taken to prevent, if possible, a recurrence of them. Irregularities on Board Ship.

Short issue of water on board "Sapphire."

23. The short issue of water to the immigrants by the ship "Sapphire" during the voyage was also brought under notice, and an investigation into the matter shewed that had it not been for the energy and foresight of Mr. Davies, the Surgeon Superintendent, the deficiency of that article might have been productive of very serious results.

REMITTANCE REGULATIONS.

Appendix K.—Deposits.

24. The deposits under the Immigration Remittance Regulations amounted to £16,780 16s. 1d., £15,050 of that amount being for passages, and £1,730 16s. 1d. being for outfit. The number of persons entitled to passages in pursuance of these deposits would accordingly be 3,759 souls.

Description of immigrants under Remittance Regulations.

25. As an adjunct to the ordinary system of selected Immigration, the Remittance Regulations have been productive of much benefit to the Colony, and considerable advantage to the working man. Some of the best people have been introduced under them who would not, under ordinary circumstances, have ever thought of leaving their homes; and the effect produced by bringing together members of families, and thus cementing more closely the ties of affection, has led in a great measure to check the restless spirit too much indulged in by immigrants in all new Colonies to change the scene and character of their habitations and employment.

Number of immigrants under Remittance Regulations.

26. During the year 3,723 persons have been introduced under these Regulations, consisting of 941 English, 2,544 Irish, and 238 Scotch. Included in this number are 705 persons, embarked in the ships "Sapphire," "Lady Elma Bruce," and "Caribou," who had obtained passages to the Colony under the auspices of the Committee of the Donegal Relief Fund, who, in consequence of the receipt of intelligence of the distressed state of the peasantry of that portion of Ireland, contributed a large sum of money towards their relief by offering passages to a new field of operation for the overburthened population.

27. The result of this experiment was most satisfactory, not only in an eleemosynary point of view, but also as affording an excellent adjunct to the immigration of the year by the introduction of an useful body of people.

Appendix L.—Number of Demoralized Immigrants.

28. These immigrants consisted of 80 married couples, with 40 male and 32 female children, 287 single men, and 276 single women. Previously to their arrival the Government had permitted the opening of the Immigration depôt at Bathurst, and consequently a considerable number of both sexes were drafted to that place, Maitland, and Newcastle, and they readily entered into service at most satisfactory rates of wages.

29. The progress of Immigration at the expense of the Government having now been brought before the public for so many years by the Annual Reports emanating from this Department, it is unnecessary to dilate any further upon its merits or demerits; and as it is contemplated to bring it to a close so soon as the existing undertakings for passages to the Colony have been concluded, it will only be by lapse of time that the problem can be solved as to whether the decision come to by the Legislature on the subject is likely to prove beneficial or otherwise to the community.

CHINESE.

Appendix M, N.—Chinese Immigration and Emigration.

30. The immigration of Mongolians during the year has consisted of 3,022 souls, and the emigration to 1,013. The vessels in which they arrived were tolerably cleanly, and the mortality, as formerly, was excessively small. The Tables M and N give the names of the several vessels in which they arrived and departed.

I have, &c.,

Agent for Immigration.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION REGULATION BILL.

(CERTAIN MERCHANTS, TRADESMEN, AND CITIZENS OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 March, 1861.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Merchants, Tradesmen, and Citizens of Sydney,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners have remarked with deep concern the proposals contained in a Bill, intituled "A Bill to regulate Chinese Immigration," and respectfully pray your Honorable House not to proceed in passing such a measure, for the following reasons:—

That, population being in all countries the source of wealth, any prohibition to its free ingress in a young and thinly populated country, such as is the Colony of New South Wales, would be a fatal blow to its advancement and prosperity.

That the Chinese Immigrants arrive without charge to the Colony, expend large sums immediately on their arrival, and at their own cost, and without delay, proceed into the interior, developing by their energy and perseverance the mining wealth of the Colony.

That these resources, so developed by them, afford increased activity to all the European population of New South Wales.

That it appears to your Petitioners that the Chinese who have hitherto arrived in the Colony are an orderly and sober race, and their faults and vices not greater than those of Europeans of a similar class; while the police reports are sufficient evidence of their being good citizens.

That some branches of industrial pursuits have been originated by Chinese and are now carried on by them only.

That no sufficient evidence has been adduced to impose a poll tax for excluding Chinese any more than any other aliens or subjects of other nations at peace with Great Britain.

That your Petitioners entreat your Honorable House to take into consideration the vast wealth in circulation which this Bill would interrupt—the employment of shipping—the importation of goods—the profits on resales—the increased local consumption of grain and meat—the trade of artizans and retailers, &c., &c., and for these various reasons, as well as the oppressive and invidious nature of this Bill, your Honorable House may see sufficient reason to revise its provisions.

Your Petitioners, therefore, most earnestly pray that any Chinese Immigration Regulation Bill may be deprived of all class legislation of an oppressive or prohibitory character, and be framed upon principles of justice to the mutual benefit of the Chinese and the inhabitants of these Colonies.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c.

Message No. 15.

In accordance with the request contained in the Address from the Legislative Assembly, of the 3rd May, 1861, the Administrator of the Government invites them to make provision for a sum not exceeding £5,000, for the salaries and travelling expenses of Immigration Agents and Lecturers in Great Britain and Ireland, and to defray the expenses of printing for circulation, in a cheap and popular form, throughout the United Kingdom, copies of Land Acts, and other trustworthy information relating to the Colony.

JANE COCKBURN

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 10 May, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Jane Cockburn, wife of George Henry Cockburn, late Messenger to the Immigration Department,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner has, for the last ten years, resided in the Immigration Barracks.

That, during the whole of this long period, your Petitioner has acted as office-cleaner, without receiving any remuneration whatever, although all other office-cleaners have been in receipt of from fifteen to twenty-five pounds per annum.

That, besides the work of office-cleaner, your Petitioner has always been compelled, in the absence on duty of her husband, to act as gatekeeper.

That Mr. H. H. Browne, the late Immigration Agent, repeatedly promised to procure some consideration for Petitioner's case, but failed to do so.

That, in consequence of Petitioner's husband having been disabled by paralysis, Petitioner and her family have been subjected to great distress.

Petitioner therefore prays that your Honorable House will take the circumstances into consideration, and grant her relief.

And, as in duty bound, your Petitioner will ever pray.

JANE COCKBURN.

HEALTH OFFICER, SYDNEY.

(RETURNS FOR 1859.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

THE HEALTH OFFICER to THE UNDER SECRETARY, TREASURY, forwarding Returns for 1859.

22 December, 1860.

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose you herewith the following Returns for the year 1859, viz. :—

No. 1.—A nominal list of Ships visited during that year.

No. 2.—A nominal list of Ships that have been placed in Quarantine; shewing the ports from which they sailed, the number of deaths which occurred among the passengers of each vessel during its detention in Quarantine, the duration of the Quarantine in each case, and the nature of the disease that occasioned it.

No. 3.—A nominal list of Emigrant Ships from the United Kingdom, during the year 1859; shewing the ports from whence they sailed, the tonnage of each ship, the number of passengers in each, the nature of the disease prevalent during the voyage, the number of deaths during the voyage, and the cause of the deaths.

The sanitary state of the Emigrant and other vessels arriving in this port has been generally good.

And owing to the excellent arrangements for securing efficient ventilation between decks, to the enforcement of the Orders in Council relating to cleanliness, &c., and to the superior quality of the provisions issued to the passengers, the Government Immigrant Ships have, with one exception, been all free from fevers and other diseases common to ill-regulated passenger ships.

Three ships only were placed in Quarantine—the “Wellington,” from Southampton, with 243 passengers; the “Lady Elma Bruce,” from Liverpool, with 318 passengers; and the “Annie Wilson,” from Liverpool, with 395 passengers; making a total of 956 persons, of whom one only (who was landed in an advanced stage of consumption) died.

In consequence of the care taken in conducting the examination of the passengers, previous to their embarkation, and to the improved sanitary condition of the depôts in England, there have been no cases of small-pox on board any of the Immigrant Vessels which arrived during 1859.

I have, &c.,

H. G. ALLEYNE, M.D.,
Health Officer.

Legislative Assembly.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

VACCINATION.

(REPORT FROM MEDICAL ADVISER TO THE GOVERNMENT, FOR 1860.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 13 February, 1861.

Parramatta, 28 January, 1861.

SIR,

I do myself the honor, for the information of the Government, to furnish the general return of persons vaccinated at the different Government Vaccine Institutions, during the year 1860, as directed by your letter, dated 7th January, 1861, distinguishing the age and sex; also the report of the Superintendent of the Vaccine Institution in Sydney, for the same period, distinguishing the age and sex, and also the different quarters of the year.

2. The total number of vaccinations during the year is 1,594, of which 1,453 were successful, 25 unsuccessful, and 105 unascertained.

3. I annex, in the margin, the number of persons vaccinated in each year, since 1853 inclusive, shewing an annual average of 1,899, or less than one-fifth of the number of births. It is therefore clear that this community is very inadequately protected against the most fearful and fatal of all diseases.

|------|-------|
| 1853 | 2,800 |
| 1854 | 1,842 |
| 1855 | 954 |
| 1856 | 1,521 |
| 1857 | 3,646 |
| 1858 | 1,174 |
| 1859 | 1,886 |
| 1860 | 1,594 |

4. The cost of vaccination per case varies from a little over two shillings in Maitland, to very nearly one pound at Yass.

5. I see no advantage in offering gratis vaccination to adults; it will be seen that only seventeen (17) have availed themselves of the privilege during the past year. If there were any alarm of approaching small-pox many would come in, but then also they would be willing to pay for the privilege. And every adult in this Colony should be, and I believe is, able to pay the small fee charged by the profession for the operation; and I believe that men generally value more what they have to pay for.

6. One reason for the small number of vaccinations performed this year, may be found in the prevalence of measles and hooping-cough, and other diseases of children during the year.

I have, &c.,

R. GREENUP,
Medical Adviser to the Government.

THE HONORABLE
THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General, the result of my operations during the past year.

I have vaccinated seven hundred and forty-seven individuals, at the Institution in Macquaric-street and the Benevolent Asylum.

I was obliged to discontinue for some time my duties at the latter, in consequence of the prevalence of great sickness.

I have supplied between eleven and twelve hundred charges of lymph to applicants from various parts, and am in a position to state that vaccination is extending.

TWELFTH REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF NATIONAL EDUCATION IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

To His Excellency SIR WILLIAM THOMAS DENISON, K.C.B., Governor General, &c., &c., &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:—

We, the Commissioners of National Education in New South Wales, beg to submit to your Excellency this our Twelfth Report.

I.—SCHOOLS.

By a Return herunto appended it will be seen that during the year we had 128 Appendix A. schools in operation, attended in the aggregate by 9,376 children. Of these schools 26 were opened in 1859, namely:—

| 2. Dubbo. | 6. Wollombi. |
| 3. Mudgee. | 7. Wollongong. |
| 4. Picton. | |

Appendix B.

A Return hereunto appended will shew that thirty-three new schools were sought to be established under the Board during 1859, at the places therein mentioned; and what action was taken by the Board in each case.

2.—GRANTS IN AID OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Appendix C.

The aggregate amount paid for the erection of school buildings, and for repairs, rent, and furniture, for 1859, was £5,356. At the close of the year we had pledged sums for similar purposes amounting to £2,461 2s. 10d., contingent on the vote for 1860, being double the amount of local contributions promised to be raised in accordance with our published regulations. The amount mentioned above as paid for school buildings, &c., does not include the sums locally contributed, but refers only to the expenditure of the public money.

3.—SALARIES.

The salaries and allowances paid to teachers, officers, and servants of the Corporation for the year amounted in all to £17,089 12s., of which sum £14,136 7s. 5d. was paid to teachers; and £2,953 4s. 7d. to the other officers, namely, Secretary, Inspector, and Superintendent, District Inspectors (2), Accountant, Clerk, Architect, and Messengers (2). The gross amount of fees paid by the children during 1859 was £8,245 9s., showing an increase of £2,040 18s. 10d. over the fees paid for 1858.

4.—CLASSIFICATION OF TEACHERS.

Annexes A, B, and C.

The systematic examination of teachers and their schools, with the view of classifying the teachers, and determining the rate of salary to be paid to them, first introduced in 1854, has been pursued with increasing efficiency, and with much success. We append a letter laid before us by Mr. Wilkins, our Inspector and Superintendent, in the beginning of last year, along with a Circular to Teachers founded thereon, which will shew the improvements introduced into the system during the year.

5.—TRAINING OF CANDIDATES.

Acting under the advice of Mr. Wilkins, we introduced in the beginning of last year several improvements in the mode of training candidates for situations, whereby a larger amount of direct instruction was communicated to them than before, and also a longer time allowed for becoming familiar with the organization and methods of teaching in the Model Schools. It was found that the time (one month) spent by candidates in training was in many cases too brief. Teachers thus often carried away with them crude and distorted views of the plans in use at the Model Schools; and the National System itself has in consequence been sometimes brought into discredit. The only obstacle that existed to lengthening the period of training was the general inability of the candidates to bear the expense of protracted residence in Sydney. It was accordingly arranged that eligible candidates should be permitted to remain in training for three months, and after the first month to receive pay at the same rate as would accrue to them if they were at once placed in charge of schools. Such arrangements were also made as would enable candidates to spend at least one-half of their time in improving their own attainments, either by writing exercises, or by attending lessons given them by Teachers of the Model Schools; whilst, at the same time, they would continue to attend the previously existing means of instruction, the mid-day class, and the normal class.

6.—INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS.

During the past year we have been able to obtain a more complete oversight of the country schools by means of the labours of two additional Inspectors, Mr. Gardiner and Mr. McCann, both appointed in February, 1859. Mr. Gardiner had previously been a teacher under the Board for a period of seven years, three of which he had spent as Head Master of the Fort-street Model Schools. Mr. McCann had been trained in the Model Schools of the National Board of Ireland, and was sent out to this Board in 1856. After being in our service as a teacher for nearly two years, he was sent as an Organizing Master to the schools of the Western and Southern Districts, and after a year's probation in this capacity he was appointed Inspector of the Western District. Mr. Gardiner was placed in charge charge of the Northern District, while the Metropolitan District was assigned to the Chief Inspector and Superintendent (Mr. Wilkins). As we were unable, last year, to appoint an Inspector for the Southern District, we sent Mr. Wilkins, Mr. Gardiner, and Mr. M'Cann, each on a special tour in different directions southward, so that every school in the Southern District had at least one visit during the year. It has not yet been found necessary to define accurately the boundaries of the several Inspectoral Districts, but the following have been adopted provisionally:—

Metropolitan.—Includes the Counties of Cumberland and Camden, the Shoalhaven District, and that part of Cook and Westmoreland which lies on the east of the Blue Mountains.

Northern.—Bounded south by the Hawkesbury and Colo Rivers; west by the Dividing Range, and by a line drawn from the western termination of the Liverpool Range, north-westerly, to the northern boundary of the Colony.

Western.—Includes the country lying south and west of the former districts, and north of a line drawn westerly from the head of the Abercrombie to the western boundary of the Colony.

Southern.—Includes all the remainder of the Colony.

GENERAL REPORT upon the condition of National Schools in 1859.

I.—ARRANGEMENTS FOR INSPECTION.

Three Inspectors were constantly employed, during the greater part of the year 1859, in examining schools and in visiting, for the purpose of inquiry and report, localities from which applications for aid in the establishment of National Schools, had been received. Of the four districts into which the Commissioners had divided the Colony for the purposes of school inspection, three—the Metropolitan, the Northern, and the Western—were each placed in the charge of an Inspector. The duty of visiting schools in the Southern District was discharged jointly by all the Inspectors. The instructions to the Inspectors required them to visit each National School at least twice during the year, and those in the more accessible positions much oftener; but the obstacles arising from bad weather and unexpected business, for which no provision had been made, rendered it impossible to carry out this arrangement in its integrity.

II.—AMOUNT OF INSPECTION.

During the year one hundred and twenty-four schools were formally inspected. The following Table exhibits the distribution of Schools visited, according to the district in which they are situated:—

| DISTRICTS. | *No. of Schools. | | |
|--------------------|------------------|--------------|--------|
| | Visited. | Not Visited. | TOTAL. |

OF THE SCHOOLS INSPECTED,

49 received one visit,
 43 „ two visits,
 22 „ three visits,
 10 „ four or more visits.

In this statement no account has been taken of the numerous visits to the Model Schools in Sydney, when no formal examination was instituted. Two of the schools not inspected are situated in the Colony of Queensland, and were removed from the jurisdiction of of the Board before the Inspector had an opportunity of visiting these localities; and the remaining ten were either closed before, or opened after, his visit to the neighbourhood.

The Tables A and B given below shew the number of pupils on the rolls of the schools inspected on the day of examination, and the number present, together with their ages and sexes. It will be remarked that the number of children seven years old and under constitutes 41 per cent. of the whole. This is partly explained by the fact that the infant schools are attended only by children of the ages just mentioned, though a majority of children in country schools are also very young. Above the age of seven years the proportions continue gradually to decrease until we arrive at those twelve years and over, when a considerable increase may be observed. This is occasioned by the circumstance that, in all newly opened schools, a number of young people above the ordinary school age, but whose previous education had been neglected, usually attend for a few months in order to remedy the more serious of their deficiencies, or to obtain at least the rudiments of knowledge. They rarely remain at school longer than a few months, and then their places are supplied by children of much less advanced ages.

In estimating the amount of work done by the Inspectors, the writing of the Reports upon the various schools must not be overlooked, nor the time and labour expended in revising the examination papers of teachers and candidates.

III.—CHARACTER OF INSPECTION.

In a previous Report the mode and character of the inspection have been minutely delineated, and it is consequently unnecessary to repeat the description. It only remains to add, in this place, that the process was not less rigid and searching than last year, while the whole of the arrangements for inspection were of a more complete and systematic character. There was an obvious advantage in possessing the means of comparison afforded by the inspection of schools that had been examined in the previous year; and while this circumstance stance materially aided in the formation of a correct opinion on the condition of the school, it was equally useful in rendering the inspection itself efficient. The difference between the course of inspection adopted in 1859, and that pursued in the previous year, may be briefly alluded to. The inspection was of two kinds, Primary and Secondary, and each school, it was intended, should undergo both in the course of the year. During a primary examination much greater minuteness was observed than at the secondary inspection, the object of the former being to collect data from which to form an opinion as to the state of the school in all its various aspects; and of the latter, to point out defects to the teachers, and to aid them in effecting improvements. On entering a school, the Inspector's first duty was to observe if the Board's fundamental regulations had been complied with; to notice the tablets upon the walls and the books used by the children; to ascertain if their occupations corresponded with the indications of the time table; and to inquire into the condition of the school registers. When this preliminary examination had been completed, the Inspector's attention was directed to the following matters in succession, and on each of them he was instructed to enlarge, with greater or less minuteness as the case required, in framing his Report, viz. :—

1. The material state of the school.
2. Its moral character.
3. The subjects and methods of instruction.
4. The proficiency of the pupils.
5. The teacher's qualifications.
6. The general tone of the school.
7. The local supervision.

IV.—CONDITION OF SCHOOLS INSPECTED.

Appended hereto is a detailed statement of the condition of each school inspected in Annex D. 1859, under the first four heads above-mentioned. By a careful analysis and comparison of the details comprehended in these statements, and in the Reports from which they are condensed, we are enabled to arrive at the following general conclusions respecting the actual condition of the schools on the day of inspection.

V.—MATERIAL STATE OF SCHOOLS.

The situation, or school site, first engages the attention of an Inspector. The usefulness and success of a school are greatly influenced by the character of the site, by its convenience to the majority of the inhabitants, its accessibility in all seasons, its healthiness and pleasantness. When these conditions are satisfied, there can be no valid objections on the part of parents to send their children to school on the ground of distance, danger by the way, or risk to health. In all newly established schools, great care is exercised in the selection of school sites, in order that all obstacles to regular attendance may, as far as possible, be removed. The same principle had been generally acted upon in former years, though in some instances, where the population has decreased by removal to other localities, the sites have ceased to be central to the residue of the inhabitants. Of the schools inspected, the sites of 94 may be pronounced good; of 19, fairly suitable; of five, indifferent; and of one, bad. Those classed as indifferent are mostly situated in or near swampy ground, not easily accessible in wet weather, and at all times somewhat unhealthy. The Panbula School is reported as being badly situated, being placed on an alluvial flat near the bank of a river, subject to periodical inundations, and frequently out of reach of a large proportion of the pupils.

The character of the school buildings may be regarded from two points of view; first School buildings. with respect to the materials of which they are constructed; and secondly with reference to their suitability for purposes of teaching. The choice of material for school building necessarily depends upon the amount of funds at the command of the local patrons; and hence we find every available kind of material employed in various localities—stone, bricks, weatherboards, and slabs. Most vested schools are now constructed of stone and brick, though in a few cases of weatherboards; and a few schools erected some years ago are built of slabs. In general terms, it may be said that the non-vested schools are of but indifferent construction, the majority of those in the country being built of slabs. In localities where schools of this kind exist, the people are commonly poor and much scattered, so that the raising raising of any considerable sum as a contribution towards the erection of suitable school premises would be a matter of no ordinary difficulty. This lack of the necessary funds is universally found to be the principal obstacle to the establishment of vested schools, and consequently to the spread of the National System. There is, however, a steady, gradual improvement in this respect, which encourages the belief that the time is not far distant when a more satisfactory state of things will be reached. With regard to the suitability of the school premises, the same general distinction applies to vested and non-vested schools; the former, especially those of recent construction, being well adapted to the purpose, and the latter more or less defective in this particular. Considering the question as to the condition of the schoolhouses from both points of view—as regards the materials of which they are composed and their fitness for the intended purpose—the following estimate may be arrived at:—

|-----------------------------------------------------------|----|
| School buildings of which the condition is good | 39 |
| " " fair | 24 |
| " " tolerable | 28 |
| " " moderate | 16 |
| " " indifferent or bad..... | 17 |

Of eight school buildings which are decidedly bad, three belong to non-vested schools, four to vested schools held in temporary premises until permanent structures can be erected, and one to a vested school.

Playgrounds.

The value of a playground and its appurtenances is very great, whether regarded from a sanitary or a moral point of view, and it is not less important as an aid to the teacher in the conduct of his school. In fact, no school can be considered as completely organized, to which a large playground properly enclosed and furnished with the requisite accompaniments is not attached. This is a very general characteristic of vested schools, though in numerous cases absent from those not vested. No less than eight non-vested schools are totally destitute of playgrounds and their appurtenances. In 71 schools, chiefly vested, the playground accommodation is good or fair; in 27, tolerable or moderate; and in 14, indifferent or bad.

Furniture.

The supply of school furniture has greatly improved since 1858, both as regards quantity and quality. It is of course requisite, for the efficient conduct of a school, that it should possess a supply of furniture adequate to the requirements of the pupils, and of a convenient description. Its tasteful appearance and orderly arrangement, though important in another respect, are not necessary for the actual working of the school. How far these conditions are met in the circumstances of National Schools may be inferred from the following Table:—

|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| No. of schools in which the supply of furniture is good or fair | 61 |
| " " tolerable | 39 |
| " " indifferent or bad | 23 |

In one vested school, Dubbo, the furniture had not been constructed at the time the school was inspected, though it has since been supplied on a liberal scale. Fifteen out of the twenty-three schools indifferently or badly provided with furniture are non-vested schools. In most cases of inadequate supply, the deficiency may be traced to paucity of means, but in some to ignorance. It is often difficult, for example, to prove to local patrons that a desk of a certain description is more useful than another; and they are in consequence strongly tempted to procure that kind which is the cheapest, without reference to its suitability. The visits of Inspectors to different localities are productive of much benefit in this respect, however, as they circulate among persons who have no other means of obtaining it, much useful information as to the best plans for school buildings and designs for furniture.

Apparatus.

The foregoing remarks as to the difficulty of obtaining furniture apply with equal force to the procuring of apparatus. There is consequently a wide difference between certain schools as to the amount of apparatus provided for the teacher's use, a few being absolutely destitute, while others enjoy an abundant supply. In the case of non-vested schools, the want of apparatus is particularly felt, and most of the schools reported as indifferently or badly provided belong to this class. In the following Table, the schools stated to be well or fairly supplied possess, in addition to the usual stock of maps, a black-board, so that in these books the character and habits of the teacher for the time being are more or less vividly portrayed. In consequence of the establishment of a large number of new schools, a majority of which were of the non-vested class, many teachers who had no previous instruction in the mode of keeping the books fell into errors which could not be corrected until the Inspectors had visited the school. From this cause some of the statistics relating to the number of children on the roll are approximate only; though in every such case a smaller number is stated than was actually attending the school. With the exceptions just noted, the great majority of the school registers are correctly and punctually kept, as may be seen from the subjoined Table. The incompleteness of the registers must be regarded as implying neglect, wilful or from ignorance, on the part of the teacher.

VI.—MORAL CHARACTER OF SCHOOLS.

Punctuality.

In the majority of schools no grounds of dissatisfaction exist as regards punctuality, either in reference to the attendance of pupils, or the observance of proper time in conducting the operations of the school. This is the more gratifying, as some children have to walk a distance of three or four miles to school; and it is generally remarked, that those pupils who reside furthest from the school are the earliest in their attendance. Wherever a want of punctuality is observable, its existence may be traced to one of two causes—either the teacher is not sufficiently precise in his observance of rule as regards time, or the parents neglect, for their convenience or profit, to send their children to school at the appointed hour. The principal share of blame will probably attach to the teacher, who, if not earnest and diligent, as well as rigidly punctual himself, will fail to produce the desired impression upon the habits of his pupils. On the whole, considerable improvement has taken place in this particular since the date of last report. From the annexed Table the condition of the schools with respect to this subject may be gathered:—

Regularity.

In this respect no improvement can be reported; it is even doubtful whether the irregularity does not become greater every year. This is one of the greatest obstacles to the success of any scheme of education. It is an evil pervading all schools, some to so great an extent as to nullify all the exertions of the teacher, and to render ineffectual all efforts for the improvement of the character of the instruction. There are schools in which the pupils attend for less than half a year, while in others they are sent at such times only as the caprice or convenience of parents may dictate. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon the evils of such a state of things even as regards the children themselves, for it must be obvious that distaste for continuous thought, and consequent desultoriness or vacuity of mind, can be the only results. It is lamentable to think that when all has been devised and executed that can conduce, under existing circumstances, to render school instruction valuable, and to place it within the reach of all, this fatal bar should interpose to prevent its reception by the classes to whom it is most necessary. The difficulties which surround this question are undoubtedly very great, and the prospect of a reasonable solution seems to be far distant; yet, while the state of things above-mentioned continues, while parents persist in depriving their children of one of their most valuable rights, and thus retard the progress of the country, and prepare future difficulty and danger to the public peace, it is well nigh useless to legislate for systems of education, to rear commodious buildings, provide able teachers, and supply sound instruction. These can only fail to produce satisfactory results, unless the attendance of the pupils for a certain number of hours daily can be effectually secured. At present there appears to be but one feasible mode of accomplishing that object—by a measure bordering upon compulsion. Although ungrateful to the feelings of a free people, the conviction conviction seems to be gaining ground among all who are conversant with the state of matters in the country as regards school attendance, that in no other way can children be kept at school with sufficient regularity to ensure their receiving even the rudiments of education. And yet a measure containing even a slight admixture of the compulsory element would press severely upon some classes of the community. The farmer, whose land must be cultivated and crops gathered in by his own labour, assisted by his children, would be ruined if deprived of that help, because he could not afford to pay for hired labour, even if it were procurable. It is not merely the amount of the school fee, but the sum to be disbursed for the labour substituted for that of his children, that makes a parent pause before sending them to school. It is true that the parent is bound to educate his child, and that the latter has a right to proper instruction. But the duty of providing bodily necessities must first be discharged, and is paramount to all others; and this the parent cannot in many cases perform without the aid of his children. This then is one of the most difficult problems with the solution of which any community can be concerned. The question is, how can an adjustment be brought about between the claims of the State for the education of its citizens, and those arising out of parental necessities. The nearest approximation to a settlement of this question would, perhaps, be found in the adoption of a half-time scheme, which would leave children free to attend school for a given number of hours per diem, while it would not trench too deeply upon the amount of assistance they were required to give in the labours of the field or workshop. Experience in the agricultural schools of the Mother Country has shewn that labour and instruction need not be antagonistic in their demands upon the child's time; that they may be carried on co-ordinately, not merely without detriment to either, but with positive advantage to both; and that as much work could be performed and as much instruction imparted, under this arrangement, as could be accomplished in either respect under the existing system. It is open to discussion, however, whether the time has arrived for the introduction of such a scheme. The passing of a Land Bill would materially affect the present distribution of the population; and under the altered circumstances, new conditions may be developed, which would possibly render such a step unnecessary, or, on the contrary, call for a measure much more stringent in its provisions. In the mean time all the indirect methods of increasing the regularity of attendance must be diligently employed. By improving the character of the instruction; by demonstrating its value, as well in an intellectual as in a material sense; and by reasoning with parents, and impressing upon them the expediency, the usefulness, the duty of educating their children, some good will be effected, which will be further increased by directing public attention to the subject, and eliciting expressions of public opinion. It is not impossible that the more general introduction of labour-saving machinery into agricultural operations may result in rendering the demand upon children's time less urgent, and thus contribute to remove the principal obstacle to their regular attendance at school. The following Table exhibits the character of the attendance at school, after making some deduction for irregularity, occasioned by sickness, bad weather, floods, and the requirements of special seasons, such as harvest. It may be remarked that after making every allowance for these and other circumstances, the attendance in at least twenty schools must be deemed exceedingly irregular.

There is little to complain of, and much to cause gratification, in the condition of Cleanliness. National Schools as respects cleanliness; and when it is remembered that many new non-vested schools are comprised in the list of those reported upon, it may fairly be concluded that they still continue to improve in this particular. In the greater number of schools the children are cleanly in person, and decently, though humbly, clothed. The girls still maintain their superiority over the boys. In the few cases in which defective cleanliness was noted, the fault could be distinctly traced to some neglect of the teacher, in his own person, in the schoolroom, or in the amount of attention devoted to the appearance of the pupils Instances are unknown in which teachers failed to cure this defect, when they sincerely and resolutely set themselves to remove it, by precept and example.

Order.

This is a subject of the highest importance. It includes all those considerations which may be supposed to influence the formation of orderly habits, or to bear upon the proper regulation of the will. Under this head, therefore, will be comprehended such matters as the arrangement of school furniture and apparatus, the manner in which the school business is carried on, the conduct and demeanour of the pupils, and the moral tone of the establishment. In this view, the order of the school will mainly depend upon the teacher's personal character; upon his professional knowledge and skill; upon his energy, patience, and resolution; and upon his love of order, sense of propriety, and capacity for government. To obtain good order, it is necessary that the school should possess a good organization. Every teacher, therefore, who is acquainted with his duties, and disposed to perform them faithfully, will so arrange beforehand, that all the pupils can be supervised from his position in the school without interfering with his main business of teaching. He will have all necessary materials in readiness, so that, when required, no confusion or delay may encourage noise and irregularity; full and appropriate occupation will be provided for all his pupils, since in school idleness is the sure precursor of disorder; and his own example, in manner, posture, and tone of voice, will be subdued, decorous, and earnest. In a school which can legitimately be characterized as orderly, the furniture, books, and other material appliances are well arranged in their proper places; the operations of the school are carried on with system, precision, and decorum, but without noise; the conduct, manners, and demeanour of the pupils are respectful and well regulated; and their application to their studies is earnest and diligent, and their attention close and well sustained. There will further be an appearance of quiet energy and settled industry, which indicates that the pupils are absorbed in their proper business, because the performance is both a pleasure and a duty. Judged by this high standard, few schools will be found to attain it, although some make a fair approximation. More satisfactory results could be obtained than are recorded in this Report, were teachers generally fully persuaded of the importance of the subject, more skilful in detecting the indications of disorder, and more prompt to prevent the evil, instead of endeavouring to cure it, after it has been allowed to gather strength. In adopting a low standard in this respect, teachers have overlooked the fact that many children are under no restraint except when at school; that their wills and tempers undergo no curbing and training at home; and that their only chance of growing up into orderly citizens, obedient to law, and capable of exercising a rational self-control, arises out of the disciplinal treatment they experience in the schoolroom. Even in the case of children whose home training is in accordance with right reason, the orderly habits acquired or confirmed at school, the power there conferred of governing their inclinations and passions, and the deference there taught to the legitimate wishes and feelings of others, are valuable moral gifts, calculated to increase, if not to produce, the happiness and well-being of the future citizen. The subject has been enlarged upon in this place, because the State has a right to expect results of the kind above described from the expenditure of public money on schools. With these views of the nature and importance of order, the condition of National Schools may be estimated, in general terms, as fair. The same judgment may be pronounced in reference to the moral tone of the schools, though exception must be taken to that puzzling peculiarity of character, the excessive timidity of the pupils in some country schools. All the Inspectors find it still in existence, and all complain of it as one of their most trying difficulties. Little or no improvement is yet observable in this respect—a result for which the teachers are mainly responsible.

By

By this term is meant the means by which a teacher rules his school, whether by Government. corporal punishments, moral suasion, or a combination of the two. Implicit obedience is essential to the proper management of a school; and in cases where it is refused or yielded reluctantly by the pupils, the master must be prepared to enforce it by physical or moral influences. An earnest, skilful teacher would employ the latter means, unless in extreme cases of decided insubordination. Three requisites are demanded in the teacher who would rule by moral suasion: knowledge of the tempers and dispositions of his pupils, mildness in his manner and considerateness in his conduct towards them, and great firmness and decision of character. Should a school exhibit evidence of being ruled by moral influence, it may be inferred that the teacher possesses these qualifications, and employs them in the actual government of his school. In a majority of National Schools, moral influence has been adopted as the rule of government, corporal punishment being resorted to only in extreme cases, and after milder measures have failed to accomplish the end desired. Speaking generally, the government of the schools may be described as mild, and the amount of corporal punishment at the minimum. The language and demeanour of the teacher to the pupils are, on the whole, distinguished by propriety. In four schools the government is reported to be above the average in point of severity, while thirty-four are distinguished by too great mildness, and the absence of necessary firmness and energy. In two cases the government is positively feeble and useless.

VII.—INSTRUCTION.

Under this head may be included certain arrangements which the teacher must make before commencing to teach. These are the classification of the pupils, and the proper distribution of their occupations. The fundamental principle of classification in public schools, conducted in accordance with the plans pursued in National Schools, is, that all the children in the same class shall closely approximate to a given standard of attainments, and shall all have acquired the same mental stature. Where this principle is duly observed, the instruction addressed collectively to the class is appropriate to the wants of each pupil, and all share alike in the advantages of the master's teaching; but where overlooked, or set aside, the scholars can no longer participate in the instruction upon equal terms, since that information which is adapted to the more advanced is too difficult for the remainder. The difficulties in the way of carrying out this principle of classification are acknowledged to be great, and arise from two different causes. One of these is the small number of pupils attending some country schools. Where this is the case, the attainments of the pupils will vary to a great extent, and the number nearly on an equality in respect of intellectual development will be very small. But the most important obstacle in the way of a perfect classification is the want of skill and experience on the part of the teachers, especially those of recent appointment in non-vested schools. To assist them as far as practicable, a standard of acquirement for each class has been provided in the "Table of Minimum Attainments," and it has been found that when this guide has been followed, in spirit as well as in letter, the classification has been the best possible under the circumstances. Even in cases where the teacher is alive to the importance of a good classification, and has endeavoured to secure it to the best of his ability, it not unfrequently happens that his plans are completely reversed by the irregularity of the attendance, and he finds, after three months' labour, that a portion of the class have made satisfactory progress, while the remainder, from repeated absence from school, have profited nothing. Leaving out of view the instances in which the teacher has not exercised sufficient care in his classification, but had advanced to a higher class pupils of varying capacity and diligence, there will be found examples of error arising from the desire to make an appearance of progress, or from the wish to please parents, who, not seldom, are the worst judges in such matters. A comparative view of the condition of the schools inspected, in this particular, is given in the following Table:—

|------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| No. of schools in which the classification is good or fair | 75 |
| " " " tolerable or moderate ... | 24 |
| " " " indifferent or bad | 25 |
| | 124 |

The classification and occupation of the pupils usually go together; the one must be skilful or the other can be productive of but little benefit. In National Schools, the occupations pations of the pupils are defined in the Time Table, constructed by the teacher in accordance with the requirements of the "Table of Minimum Attainments," and suspended on the wall of the schoolroom. In the Time Table, provision is made for the full employment of pupils in appropriate tasks, for the equitable distribution of school time among the various subjects of instruction, and for the arrangement of the lessons in such order that the change from one to another shall take place at regular intervals, and have the effect of relieving the mind of weariness and monotony. At the same time, it will be so arranged that a due proportion of the teacher's direct instruction and personal supervision shall be allotted to each class. The construction of a good Time Table is therefore a work of some difficulty, requiring much consideration and experience for its successful accomplishment. On the whole, the occupations of pupils in National Schools are judiciously arranged, and the Time Tables, by which the operations of the schools are supposed to be regulated, are faithfully observed.

Subjects. The subjects of instruction designated ordinary are taught in all National Schools. These are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography, Needlework, and Scripture History. In a large number of schools, Lessons on Objects are also given. Other branches receive attention in cases where the teachers are qualified, and the pupils are sufficiently advanced to warrant the necessary expenditure of time. But owing to the strong tendency existing among parents to remove children as soon as their services can be made available at home or in the field, there are few schools at which the pupils remain sufficiently long to be capable of entering upon the study of the higher branches. The following Table exhibits the number of schools in which extra subjects are taught:—

|-----------------------|----|
| Vocal Music | 17 |
| Outline Drawing | 9 |
| Algebra | 4 |
| Mensuration | 2 |
| Geometry | 5 |
| Latin | 5 |
| French | 4 |

A considerable improvement is therefore manifest since 1858 on this head. The number of pupils receiving instruction in each of the ordinary subjects is given below:—

|------------------|-------|
| Reading | 6,889 |
| Writing | 5,977 |
| Arithmetic | 5,283 |
| Grammar... .. | 3,259 |
| Geography | 3,954 |
| Needlework..... | 1,851 |

The fact that all the pupils do not learn writing and other subjects may be accounted for by the circumstance that some of them are too young to receive instruction in these branches.

Methods. By a method is meant such a mode of imparting knowledge as is best adapted to ensure its comprehension by the pupil, while at the same time it properly exercises his intellectual faculties, and tends to promote their training and development. A correct method will be based, first, upon the nature of the subjects to be taught; and, secondly, upon the special faculties to be called into exercise. In this view there are two classes of methods—analytic and synthetic; the former descends from general results and principles to special facts and details; it is, on the whole, best suited to pupils who have made considerable progress. The synthetic method, on the other hand, begins with individual facts and elements, and proceeds constructively until general results or principles are arrived at; it is best adapted for beginners. The methods in actual use partake more of the analytic than of the synthetic character, and hence are frequently not the best adapted to the pupil's capacity. On the whole, the amount of skill displayed in the choice and employment of methods cannot be regarded as high, except in comparatively few cases, where the teachers have have undergone a more thorough training for their work. The most striking defects are the want of logical arrangement in the matter of the lessons, the absence of a well defined purpose or object, and lack of skill in framing questions. When these characteristics prevail to such an extent as to form the most prominent feature in the instruction, the teaching is said to be mechanical. In giving a lesson, a teacher deficient in energy and skill would be likely to communicate a few isolated facts, having no logical relation or connection with each other; he would fail to observe whether his instruction was received by the pupils, comprehended, and made their own; and by way of examination, he might ask a few objectless questions, requiring no exercise of thought, and utterly valueless as mental discipline. Mechanical teaching of this nature is commonly practised by those among the teachers of non-vested schools, who have never undergone a course of training for the profession, and whose knowledge of the art of teaching is merely empirical. It is but justice to give them credit for an evident desire to increase their knowledge of method, and their practical skill; and, indeed, in many cases visible improvement in these particulars has already been effected. Having regard to all the circumstances attaching to the schools, the quality of the methods employed may be thus estimated:—

| No. of schools in which the methods are good or fair | 46 |
| " " moderate or tolerable ... | 44 |

As before remarked, the amount of instruction given in National Schools is, in a measure, determined by the "Table of Minimum Attainments"; and it may be further stated, that the quality of the teaching is regulated by the same means. One principal object of that table is to guard against any tendency to desultory and unsystematic teaching, and to secure for each pupil that continues sufficiently long at school, the benefits of a thorough training, by conducting him through a well defined and properly graduated course of instruction. By requiring in all National Schools uniformity of practice as regards the leading features of this course, this further advantage is gained, that the transference of a pupil from one school to another does not occasion any interruption in the process of education through which he is passing, but enables the teacher to carry him forward from the point already attained, without stoppage and without deviation from the path. The utility of the "Table of Minimum Attainments" has never yet been adequately appreciated even by teachers. If we suppose a boy to enter a tolerably efficient National School at the age of seven years, and to remain in regular attendance until he is fifteen, he ought at the expiration of that time to have received a thoroughly good English education. He should be capable of reading an ordinary English book with ease, fluency, and expression, and at the same time with perfect comprehension of its design and meaning. He should be able to express his ideas in neat and legible handwriting, clearly and grammatically, with correct spelling, punctuation, and style. He should have acquired such a familiarity with the principles and practice of arithmetic as to be able to solve any of the questions likely to arise in the actual business of life, especially those in which the merchant or the artizan is interested. He should be acquainted with the physical features of the various regions of the world; their natural productions, whether animal, vegetable, or mineral; the character of their human inhabitants, and their forms of civilization; their cities and towns; their commerce; and, in particular, their relations to his own country. To these may be added, under favorable circumstances, some knowledge of the elementary parts of Latin, mathematics, and physics, together with drawing and vocal music. That the education designed to be placed within the reach of the children attending National Schools is so seldom realized to its full extent is a fact, however much to be regretted, susceptible of easy explanation. Three circumstances concur to produce this result. Stated in the order of their importance, they are, miscalculation of the value of such education by the parents, irregularity of attendance on the part of the pupils, and inefficiency, arising from defective knowledge or skill, on the part of the teacher. In the better sort of schools these difficulties have to some extent been overcome, experience having shewn that under certain circumstances they are mutually dependent, and that the removal of one leads gradually but certainly to the partial cure of the others. In such schools, the development of mental power—the aim of education in one of its aspect aspects—is made the primary object of solicitude. Knowledge is imparted to the pupil not merely for its own sake, or on account of its so-called utility, but also because it ministers directly to the growth and expansion of the intellect, as material food nourishes and supports the body. The power of sustained attention and of independent thought, gained by pupils whose instruction is conducted in accordance with this view, are two of the most valuable qualities that could be imparted to them, and which must influence their future success in life. In striking contrast to these superior schools are some, chiefly non-vested, which have been too short a time in operation to allow the teachers to acquire sufficient knowledge and skill to carry out elevated views of their profession. It not unfrequently happens in such schools, that while there is some learning, the teaching will be unworthy of the name, comprising little more than a dull mechanical round of procedure, void of both profit and interest to the pupil. The higher objects of education being thus kept out of view, the pupils are at a loss whenever called upon to answer questions requiring exercise of thought, and hence many persons would suppose them to be more ignorant than is really the case; even when skill and industry are combined, and the pupils are regular in their attendance, it will sometimes occur that very little progress is made in any subject. The pupils, it may be, have failed to give the necessary constant attention, and sometimes they appear to sink into a kind of intellectual lethargy, from which they can be aroused only with great difficulty and care. The following remarks will exhibit the character of the instruction in detail:—

READING.—All the children attending National Schools are taught to read; the importance of the subject is therefore practically acknowledged, though vague and partial notions still prevail to a great extent as to its proper place in the course of instruction, and as to the most judicious mode of treatment. It may be said, in general terms, that teachers proceed upon one of two hypotheses, they either regard reading as a purely mechanical exercise, simply requiring the enunciation of certain sounds without reference to their meaning, or they look upon it as one of the most efficacious instruments in cultivating the ability to reflect. The distance between these extreme views is occupied by teachers of various degrees of merit, whose instruction approximates with more or less fidelity to one method or the other. Perhaps the more general tendency is towards the mechanical mode of procedure. In schools where this mode prevails, the lessons are read over with no great attention to distinctness of enunciation, correctness of emphasis, or appropriateness of expression, and then the pupils are asked to spell a few words, or to answer a few questions that tend but little to elucidate the subject, or to encourage mental activity. In the less numerous class of schools, the reading lessons are treated in a more thorough and systematic style. While great attention is paid to the mechanical department, the mental bearing of a lesson is made the subject of special consideration. The pupils are called upon to give the meanings of words and phrases, to find synonymous terms, and to express in their own words orally, or in writing, the sense of selected passages. Peculiarities of grammatical construction, or of style, are pointed out and explained; and questions are proposed on the subject matter of the lesson until the information it contains is completely mastered. Thus the two higher ends of reading—the acquisition of knowledge and the expansion of the mental faculties—are both subserved, and the exercise becomes one of great value. Unfortunately for the true interests of education, reading is a subject upon which parents too often profess ability to judge. Most frequently they are satisfied with mechanical reading, and they are unable to form a just conception of the proper mode of treatment. Hence discontent is often felt and expressed with the conscientious teacher who endeavours to carry out right principles, and whose pupils appear to the ignorant to progress slowly and unsatisfactorily. On the other hand, the praise frequently and unsparingly awarded by the unreflecting to those who teach mechanically, and whose instruction is worthless as a means of intellectual culture, is a direct premium upon unfaithfulness, and an effectual bar to improvement in method.

WRITING.—This is one of the branches in which the proficiency is of a more satisfactory character. In general it is very fairly taught, and even in cases where the actual skill in writing is regarded as moderate only, the cleanness and care with which the books are preserved speak favorably for the attention of the teachers. It is not unusual for the teacher in the better description of schools to give oral instruction to a class collectively upon the proper mode of forming and joining letters, and their relative proportions, together with illustrations of the difference between good and bad writing. Where this is done regularly, and examples are written upon the blackboard, the happiest results have followed. The subjects of the copies written by the pupils are frequently moral maxims and proverbs; but as these appeal to a mental and worldly experience far in advance of that possessed by children, they can scarcely be deemed appropriate. The more skilful teachers use geographical, historical, and other interesting facts, as subjects for copy lines, as being more likely to be understood. The junior classes appear to receive somewhat less than their due share of attention, the slates and copybooks sometimes exhibiting evidences of the want of minute and careful inspection, though this error is rapidly on the decline.

SPELLING.—The writing is often associated with the reading lessons. After a lesson has been thoroughly explained and read by the pupils, they are required to reproduce upon their slates in their own language the substance of the information they have gained. By this means habits of thought and attention are induced; the lesson previously read is fixed upon the mind; the pupils acquire facility of expression; and the correctness of their orthography is tested. In respect of the last-mentioned point, this exercise is supplemental to the ordinary dictation lessons, by which spelling is usually taught. The plan of giving children columns of spelling to learn is rarely resorted to, being confined to schools of which the teachers have had no opportunity of becoming acquainted with the methods adopted in National Schools.

ARITHMETIC.—The instruction in this branch still retains much of the mechanical rote character, and has, less than any other subject taught in National Schools, shared in the general advance as regards methods. The working by set rules, without any explanation of the principles upon which they are founded, is the most frequent mode of procedure in teaching this subject. Arithmetic still continues to be treated merely as an art, without any recognition of its claims as a science to a prominent position in every course of instruction. The consequences of this mode of treatment are that the progress of the pupils is slow, unsound, and partial, and the educative influence of arithmetic taught demonstratively is lost. In all cases where the teaching of this subject has been founded upon principles, the results have been of a gratifying character; but where this condition has not been observed, the attainments of the pupils are meagre and unsatisfactory. The greatest amount of deficiency is observable in the junior classes; but all, even the highest, are, in most schools, imperfectly acquainted with some branches, notation being one of those most frequently not understood. Some teachers appear to experience great difficulty in adapting their instruction to the capacities of the younger pupils, and in removing the obstacles to the comprehension of the subject, arising out of its abstract nature. Hence the character of the instruction is less suitable in the case of the younger children than in that of the more advanced pupils. In no branch of school instruction is the irregularity of the attendance found to have so injurious an effect as in arithmetic. The inequality of attainments, consequent upon frequent absence from school, destroys the classification; and the teacher, instead of giving collective instruction to the whole class by a demonstrative method, is compelled to occupy his time with individuals, and is thereby reduced to the necessity of employing rote methods. Of course the ultimate result is that the quality of the instruction itself is deteriorated, and that more individual teaching is practised in this subject than in any other. Mental arithmetic does not yet receive such general and thorough attention as its importance deserves. In addition to its use in business transactions, it is one of the most effectual means by which the mind may be trained to habits of rapid and sustained thought, and by which the memory is strengthened and the perception sharpened. It is therefore to be hoped that teachers will not any longer defer the systematic teaching of this subject.

GRAMMAR.—Although this branch continues to be well treated by the superior teachers, much remains to be accomplished before it can be considered as efficiently taught by the majority. The want of definite logical purpose is perhaps more evident in the teaching of grammar than of any other subject. There are two points of view from which grammatical studies may be regarded: first, as the art of using a language correctly, in speech and in writing; secondly, as a mental discipline of the highest kind. In neither case are the results, generally speaking, of a satisfactory character; for it is found that the pupils pupils possess but a limited acquaintance with the principles of English grammar, while, as an aid to development, the instruction in this subject must be considered as having failed. Besides the irregularity of the attendance, the following causes have contributed to produce the results now recorded:—want of complete and comprehensive knowledge on the part of the teachers; use of inappropriate text-books; and absence of well defined purpose, giving rise to neglect of systematic arrangement of lessons. The only effectual remedy for this want of progress, so far as it is produced by their inefficiency, would be the more thorough training of teachers.

GEOGRAPHY.—Generally speaking, this is a subject in which the pupils feel much interest, though there are yet to be found parents who object to have their children instructed in it. Considering the nature of the subject, and the many points of attraction it presents when treated with ordinary skill, a respectable amount of proficiency was to be anticipated, and the expectation has to some extent been realized. With one special defect, the teaching in a majority of schools was fairly skilful and efficient, interesting, but profitable, as opening up to the pupil almost unlimited sources of inquiry and reflection. In some schools, particularly those recently established, in which the teachers had but little experience, the instruction was deficient in point and appositeness; it was of too general a character, and often aimed at accomplishing too much. But the great defect pervading all the schools, with very few exceptions, was the fact that sufficient prominence was not given to the principle of making geographical knowledge commence at home, proceeding from the known to the unknown. In accordance with this view Australian geography would have received the first attention of the teacher; but it was sometimes found that pupils who were well acquainted with the map of Europe, or of the World, had formed no definite idea of the position, size, and character of the river upon the banks of which they were located, and seemed utterly ignorant of even the most striking features of the surrounding district. The want of a good school map of New South Wales probably occasions this defect in some degree, and is also its excuse.

OBJECT LESSONS.—The design of these lessons is to cultivate the pupils' powers of perception, comparison, and reflection, by giving information on matters falling within their sphere of observation, or within the compass of their reasoning faculties. When properly carried out these lessons are found to be full of interest, useful in training the mind to habits of fixed attention, and valuable for the mental exercise they afford—not to mention the worth of the information conveyed. It is therefore somewhat surprising that object lessons should be seldom taught in country schools, and still more, rarely taught well. The explanation must be sought in the character of the teachers, many of whom doubtless experience considerable difficulty in conveying the instruction in a clear, connected, and interesting manner; first, on account of their own lack of information; and secondly, from the circumstance of not being trained to the profession. Of the necessity and advantage of object lessons there can be no question. The powers of observation are remarkably low in country children. They appear to witness the operations of nature in the various seasons, and to gaze upon natural phenomena without interest or concern; the position and mode of growth in plants, and the nature and habits of animals seem to be considered unworthy of a thought; and even with regard to the processes of agriculture or manufacture, carried on under their own eyes, they appear to be utterly destitute of rational curiosity and the spirit of inquiry. To rouse them from this listless apathy—to excite in their minds a feeling of admiration of the works of nature—and to implant in them a desire to study and understand them, would be a work of great public utility, and ought to be considered by every teacher as an imperative duty.

SCRIPTURE.—Generally an hour daily is devoted to this subject, in the case of pupils able to read the Scripture lessons. The substance of these works, and especially of No. 1 of both Old and New Testament series, is familiar to the elder pupils. The General Lesson is regularly read in the schools, and its principles explained, though in many cases its real spirit is, as yet, but imperfectly understood. A more correct appreciation of its scope and design, and much greater sincerity in bringing them home to the children's minds, are needed, in order to produce much benefit from reading the General Lesson.

VIII.—LOCAL SUPERVISION.

In many schools the local supervision is merely nominal; in at least two-thirds the visits of local patrons are irregular, and therefore ineffective, and in comparatively few are they competent and punctual in the discharge of their duties. In the schools where the local Boards are properly organized an arrangement is made by which they visit the school together, or singly in rotation, not seldomer than once a month; but it not unfrequently happens that when some of the patrons absent themselves or remove from the district, the duty of supervising the school is neglected, being thrown upon a few individuals, who, from the pressure of business, or the urgency of other demands upon their time, are not always able to attend to the interests of the school. It is unfortunately too common to hear complaints from the teachers of the apathy of local patrons, and though the former are perhaps often unreasonable in their expectations, their representations are not inconsistent with fact. Some of the weak points in the local administration may, perhaps, be traced to the inherent defects of all voluntary organizations, and especially to the absence of power to raise money otherwise than by local subscription; and these are found to exist in other countries besides New South Wales. Even in Canada and some other American States, where the local oversight of schools is entrusted to the municipal authorities, who have power to levy rates for school purposes, similar difficulties have to be encountered. But a more serious defect than the want of interest in the schools is the unsuitability of some of the persons chosen to act as local patrons—a defect which becomes more apparent and more injurious in proportion to the increased efficiency of the schools in other respects. When individuals that are deficient in the necessary qualifications are elected members of a local Board, besides the mischief arising from the low conception they form of their duties, they are frequently found to be unreasonable and impracticable, even in matters obvious to persons of common sense; and the injury they occasion, by the obstructive line of conduct they pursue, militates very perceptibly against the prosperity of the school. In a few instances, in which the local patrons are in other respects highly suitable, dissensions and party spirit have prevented them from acting with unanimity; and as a natural consequence of divided feeling, the supervision of the schools was neglected, or performed in an unsatisfactory manner. These two points, then, tend to hinder effective local supervision:—first, the difficulty of obtaining individuals of the right spirit and qualifications for the office; and secondly, the difficulty of securing their united and harmonious action for any lengthened period. Until a remedy can be devised for these evils, it is doubtful whether the local supervision can ever become really beneficial in the majority of schools, although, from the circumstances of the country, it cannot be dispensed with.

IX.—TEACHERS.

Position of teachers.

It has formed one of the most conspicuous features in the policy of the Commissioners, in their administration of the National System, to secure for the teacher that position of comfort and respectability to which his honorable and valuable services entitle him; and, further, to raise up a class of teachers who shall be worthy in character, conduct, and ability, of the improved condition thus attained. While very considerable success has attended these efforts, and the position of National School Teachers possesses many of the desired advantages, it must be confessed that great improvements must be effected before a satisfactory state of things is arrived at. It is not surprising, therefore, that much discontent prevails among teachers. Some of the grounds of complaint are inevitable, and so far from being peculiar to the teacher's position, are such as fall to the lot of every one; while others are self-imposed, being the result of a want of ordinary tact and prudence. The real causes of dissatisfaction are the following:—The wretched character and condition of their dwellings; the annoyances attendant upon the payment of school fees; the interference of parents; the irregularity of the pupils; and the neglect or opposition of the local patrons. On the first of these heads, complaint is very reasonable. Leaving out of consideration the want of material comfort to himself and family involved in residence in a miserable slab hut, the teacher feels that it destroys his prestige; that he is regarded by the people as on a level with themselves, if not inferior; and that he loses their respect accordingly. His opinion on school matters is thus deprived of the weight of authority, for people will seldom attach much importance to the dictum of their equals or inferiors. This unpleasant state of feeling is greatly aggravated by the contentions arising out of the payment of school fees, under the existing arrangements. If the teacher be a high minded man, he can hardly avoid being shocked and disgusted by the meanness and injustice to which he is subjected, even by persons who cannot truly plead poverty in excuse for their niggardliness. From this fertile source of quarrels spring nearly all the more serious misunderstandings between teachers and parents, and probably their mutual feeling is greatly embittered by the very paltriness of the matter in dispute. Great annoyance is also occasioned by the interference of the parents with the conduct of the school. They profess at times to give directions as to the proper mode of managing the school, and the employment of particular methods; or they desire the teacher to place their children in classes for which he considers them unfit; or they command him to desist from teaching certain subjects. Should the teacher decline compliance with these unreasonable demands, and continue to follow the dictates of his judgment, offence is taken, and frequently the children are removed from the school in consequence. It is evident, therefore, that the more enlightened and conscientious the teacher, the greater will be his risk of giving offence, while the greater must be his impatience of dictation. The irregularity of the attendance has already been adverted to, and it is, in this place, only necessary to shew how it affects the teacher's position. If he be a man of ability, earnest in his teaching, and anxious for the improvement of his pupils, he will feel acutely their want of progress, and the fruitlessness of his labours in their behalf; and, if at all susceptible on the score of reputation, he will suffer from being exposed to invidious remark on the ground of his failure. Lastly, when not supported by the local patrons, all these grievances are intensified, and the teacher experiences the necessity of contending unaided against a host of difficulties. But should the local patrons, from ignorance, pique, or misconception, oppose the teacher, his position becomes one of intolerable misery, in spite even of the alleviation of his his

his suffering caused by the recognition of his services by his Inspector. Some improvement will doubtless be produced in this unsatisfactory state of things by the gradual progress of public opinion; but inasmuch as most of the complaints originate in imperfections of the system itself, no full and complete remedy can be expected, unless from the establishment of a general system of education from which the defects alluded to can be excluded.

The income of National School Teachers is derived from two sources. There is first the fixed salary paid by the Board, and ranging in country schools from sixty to one hundred and forty-four pounds per annum; and secondly, the local contributions in the shape of school fees, together with a residence. The average amount of salary received by the teachers is £92 8s. 8d., and of school fees, £52 19s., making a total of £145 7s. 8d. In estimating the value of the residence, regard must be had to the amount and character of the accommodation it affords. In some instances the dwelling must be considered absolutely worthless; in many cases the amount of accommodation is limited to two small rooms; and where, as generally happens, the teacher has a family, this want of space is not consistent with common decency, much less with comfort. In the schools recently created, the provision for the teacher's accommodation is more ample, and the building is generally well finished and impervious to the weather. In country schools, the salaries of teachers depend upon their classification, a lower scale being adopted in the case of non-vested schools. Opportunities are given of obtaining a higher classification, so that teachers have it in their power, by increasing their qualifications, to improve their pecuniary condition and to raise their standing in the Board's service. The amount paid for school fees is small, and bears no reasonable proportion to the means of most parents. But even this small sum, reduced as it is by the irregularity of the pupils' attendance, is paid grudgingly, and sometimes withheld altogether on the most frivolous pretext, although fixed by the local patrons at the lowest possible rate. In such cases, the teacher must be content to bear the loss in silence, for if he had recourse to his only means of redress—a Court of Justice—he would probably find himself ruined by the withdrawal of all his pupils and the breaking up of his school. Instances have occurred in which ignorant people have refused to pay school fees on the ground that the teacher had a "splendid" salary from the Government, when perhaps the whole of his income fell short of the wages of a mechanic.

With scarcely an exception, the teachers of National Schools are persons of good moral character, earnest, attentive, and industrious. Their attainments vary considerably, but in the main may be regarded as tolerably satisfactory. The following Table exhibits the relative qualifications of the teachers, as indicated by their classification:—

| | Section A. | Section B. | Total. |
|------------------|------------|------------|--------|
| First class ... | 1 | 5 | 6 |
| Second class ... | 18 | 24 | 42 |
| Third class ... | 26 | 28 | 54 |
| | TOTAL ... | | 102 |

Number of teachers not holding certificates, 45.

The possession of a third class certificate would guarantee that the holder was able to read with fluency and correct emphasis; to write neatly and legibly; and to express himself clearly in writing, with correct grammar and punctuation; and to parse and analyze simple sentences; to solve questions in arithmetic involving an acquaintance with decimals; and to give a comprehensive description of the more important countries in the world. In addition to these acquirements, he would have a good knowledge of the lesson books, and might therefore be supposed to possess some general information. The possession of a second class certificate presupposes all the foregoing qualifications in a higher degree, together with, in most cases, some knowledge of algebra and geometry, or of Latin; while for a certificate of the first or highest class, a more thorough acquaintance with the ordinary branches is demanded, as well as a fair knowledge of, at least, one special subject requiring diligent and successful study. There is a marked distinction between the teachers of vested and non-vested schools, as respects attainments; the latter being, as a rule, greatly inferior. This difference is being rapidly lessened, as teachers of non-vested schools are enabled to study and undergo examination, and in time will probably disappear altogether. The rule established in the commencement of 1859, by which teachers holding certificates lower than Class II, Section A, are required to undergo examination annually, has stimulated many to increased exertion in study; and its beneficial effects will, in all probability, be felt to a much greater extent. As regards practical skill in teaching, the results of the inspection are of a very mixed character. In this point of view, the teachers may be arranged in three groups; the first and least numerous of which consists of teachers fully trained in the Mother Country or in the Colony; the second of teachers partly trained in the Colony; and the third of untrained teachers. The teachers of the first class possess a good knowledge of methods of imparting instruction, and of modes of conducting schools; those trained in the Colony, in the first place as pupil teachers and afterwards as assistants, being in no way inferior to the others. But by far the largest number possess but a limited acquaintance with method, and a few none at all. These teachers have in various degrees failed; their errors being those of judgment, arising from defective information. It is only fair to add, that most of them are making strenuous efforts to improve their qualifications, both as respects attainments and practical skill.

X.—SPECIAL SCHOOLS.

The Model
Schools.

The annexed Table shews the position of these schools, as regards the attendance of pupils during the year:—

| | Average No. on the Rolls. | Average Daily Attendance. | Amount of School Fees Paid. | | |
|----------------------------|---------------------------------|---------------------------------|-----------------------------------|----|----|
| | | | £ | s. | d. |
| Fort-street School | 910 | 622 | 1,170 | 5 | 1 |
| William-street School ... | 786 | 505 | 761 | 8 | 3 |
| Cleveland-street School... | 269 | 172 | 346 | 15 | 9 |
| Paddington School | 208 | 127 | 210 | 3 | 5 |
| | 2,173 | 1,426 | 2,488 | 12 | 6 |

No change of importance has taken place during the year, in the organization and discipline of the schools. The instruction also remains the same, with the exception of the increased prominence given to the subject of Drawing. In carrying out the arrangements for teaching this subject, the views and methods adopted by the Department of Practical Art in connection with the Board of Trade have been followed, as far as they are applicable to instruction in rudimentary drawing. The object has not been to produce artists, or even to give instruction in art, in the proper sense of the term; but rather to give the pupils facility in representing things, as by writing they express ideas. The intention was not to create a school of design, but to render universal an acquaintance with elementary drawing. It was felt that, independently of its value as an agent in general education, a knowledge of drawing was specially calculated to make better mechanics, artisans, and skilled labourers of all kinds. Every "carpenter who has to cut straight lines, every smith who has to forge them, and every bricklayer who has to lay them," will better perform their respective works by acquiring the power of using the pencil correctly and with freedom. Sufficient time has not elapsed since the experiment was initiated to decide positively as to its success, but the progress of the pupils has hitherto been very encouraging.

candidates.

During the year 1859, twenty-eight candidates for situations under the Board—eighteen males and ten females—have completed their period of training at the Model School. Out of this number, thirteen males and six females have succeeded in obtaining certificates certificates of merit, and appointments to schools in various parts of the Colony. The following Table exhibits the number of each kind of certificate granted:—

| Certificate. | Section A. | Section B. | Total. |
|---------------|------------|------------|--------|
| Class I. | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| „ II. | 1 | 4 | 5 |
| „ III..... | 9 | 5 | 14 |

The average time of attendance has been two months; a period far too short, when the candidate has had no previous training, which is the case with the majority of those now under consideration. When it is remembered that, in the Mother Country, the period of attendance at a training school varies from one to three years, the existing arrangement can only be regarded as an approximation to a plan for securing an efficient staff of National School Teachers. To attain so desirable an end, each candidate ought to remain at the Model School for at least six months. The chief obstacle to the immediate adoption of such a course lies in the fact of its expensiveness. The circumstances of the Colony are peculiar. Many of the schools are situated in thinly peopled localities; and as a consequence, boys and girls are instructed together. It is obvious, therefore, that the only eligible candidates for such schools are married men, whose wives can take charge of the needlework and otherwise assist in the conduct of the schools. In the case of persons so situated, it generally happens that they are either unable or unwilling to bear the cost of maintenance during the time of training. It therefore becomes a matter of necessity either to dispense with their services altogether, or to grant them an allowance sufficient for the support of themselves and families, while passing through the necessary ordeal. This item of expenditure—supposing the period to be extended to six months—would involve an outlay of about sixty pounds for each married candidate, and about half that sum in the case of a single female whose services could be made available as assistant teacher in the larger schools. Besides, to carry out the systematic course which the extension of time would demand, it would be necessary that one or more teachers should be specially charged with the instruction of candidates; and therefore the expense would be increased by the addition of the salaries attached to such an office. The machinery called into existence for accomplishing such a purpose would be ample for the effectual training of teachers for all the primary schools in the Colony. Every true friend of education will admit that the establishment of one central training institution is an educational want that cannot be supplied too early. It may be worthy of consideration whether the candidate ought not to be called upon to bear at least part of the cost of his own training. The payment might be made by periodical instalments, after his appointment to a school. As a general rule, the candidates have striven to derive as much benefit as possible from the short period of their probation. A portion of each day has been devoted to private study, for which a room is set apart; they have also had free access to a library of educational works. Daily lessons in the ordinary subjects taught in National Schools have been given to them, and, in addition, they have attended the Normal Class Lectures, three of which are delivered in each week. Some of the lectures treat of the foregoing subjects in a more comprehensive manner than is attempted in the daily class, while others deal with an equally important question, viz.:—“The principles of Teaching and School Management.”

There is good reason to believe that, notwithstanding the limited amount of training now afforded, it is far better than no training at all, the experience of most candidates leading them to express a strong desire to remain for a longer period. The principal evil arising from so incomplete a course appears to be that, except in the case of persons of cultivated habits of mind, the candidate is apt to assume the mere externals of a teacher, rather than imbibe his spirit—in other words, to become a mechanical instead of a real and efficient instructor. It is here worthy of remark, that of the five candidates to whom second class certificates were awarded, one had been trained in the Mother Country, while the others were of the exceptional character just alluded to.

The success, as teachers, of persons circumstanced as the majority of candidates, must be regarded as very problematical. It will, in a great measure, depend upon their own exertions exertions to work out the ideas acquired during their stay at the Model School, and also to supplement the acknowledged deficiency of their training. And here it may be observed, that in making such endeavours, they may expect to derive great assistance from the periodical visits of the Inspector of the District. In fact, the necessity for regular and frequent inspection is greatly enhanced by the imperfect opportunities afforded for the systematic and complete training of teachers for primary schools. It may also be observed that it is extremely difficult in so short a time to form a just estimate of a candidate's capability to conduct a school efficiently. Whilst being trained he is under constant supervision, and is subject to strict disciplinary regulations, being at the same time within a circle of influences calculated to stimulate him to some amount of enthusiasm; whereas when appointed—it may be to a school in a remote locality—he is naturally very liable to a reaction. The pressure has not been sustained for a sufficiently lengthened period to make its effect enduring.

District Model
Schools.

The establishment of these institutions had been urged from time to time, experience having demonstrated their necessity and usefulness; and early in last year an opportunity of trying the experiment occurred at Mudgee, where the existing National School was converted into a District Model School for the Western District. By making certain alterations in the school buildings they were adapted for the division of the pupils into three departments—boys, girls, and infants; each under a separate teacher, but subject to the general control and supervision of the Head Master. This school achieved very gratifying success in both points of view—as a superior primary school, and as a model school for the training of candidates.

Non-vested
Schools.

Among the schools inspected were forty-six non-vested schools. From previous portions of this report it will be observed that they are, in general, much inferior in every respect to the vested schools. In fact, as regards efficiency, they occupy a position similar to that held by vested schools five years ago, though they will probably improve at a much more rapid rate, inasmuch as the greater perfection of the arrangements for examining them, gives more frequent opportunities for pointing out defects and providing remedies. Many causes operate to favor the establishment of non-vested schools. In some localities no land can be obtained as sites for vested schools, the owners being unable or unwilling to alienate any portion of their property. But in the majority of cases the obstacle to the erection of a vested school is the want of sufficient funds, and this again arises from the poverty of the people. In very few cases has the establishment of a non-vested school been the result of denominational action; and, as might be inferred, the consequence is that these schools are never of a sectarian character, or conducted with a view to sectarian interests.

XI.—GENERAL RESULTS OF INSPECTION.

If the present degree of efficiency attained by National Schools be compared with their condition a few years ago, their advancement in every essential particular is evident, and calculated to afford much encouragement. Every year a gradual improvement is observable in the character of the material appliances, the discipline of the pupils, and their intellectual training; and though the progress is slow, it is, perhaps, not the less valuable on that account. The large number of non-vested schools has tended to lower the average merit of the schools in general; but this evil is in course of reformation, and will soon be, to a great extent, rendered unimportant by the rapid improvement now taking place. While there is much to encourage in the present state of National Schools as compared with their condition a few years ago, it must be acknowledged that, measured by a proper standard, their shortcomings are only too evident. Leaving out of view for the present the improvements required in educational machinery, and observing only the result of past exertions, it will be apparent that the greater number of schools is characterized by two prominent defects—the absence of a high moral tone, and the want of vigorous mental power. These two qualities ought to be produced by any proper educational system, if worked with ordinary skill and energy; but the general character of our schools, in both particulars, is comparative feebleness. Even making allowance for the irregularity of the scholars, and the numerous other difficulties the teacher has to encounter, no more favorable opinion can be formed of the result of the past year's teaching. It is not for want of a desire to succeed that the teachers have failed, nor from the lack of persevering industry, but rather from the absence of fact and skill to apply their work in the right direction, and in such a manner as to yield a profitable return. In a good school the pupils will manifest in their appearance, demeanour, language, and conduct, the amount of attention paid to their moral training, and in all these respects the most rigid scrutiny should fail to detect serious departures from right. They should further be able to concentrate their attention upon their business, and sustain it in a vigorous exercise for a considerable time—to observe, consider, compare, and when at fault to retrace their steps until the right clue is taken up—to follow the teacher readily through all the steps of a lesson so as to make themselves masters of the subject—and to work cheerfully and perseveringly, until all difficulties are surmounted, and they have acquired the habit of mental self-dependence. Though a high standard, this is quite within the bounds of possibility. Even under existing circumstances it might be attained by a much larger number of schools, and a closer approximation might be made by all; though, perhaps, its general realization cannot be anticipated until the pupils attend with greater regularity, and the teachers acquire greater skill and energy.

XII.—HINDRANCES TO EDUCATION.

Various minor obstacles to the success of the system have already been discussed; but to complete the account of the condition of schools, it is necessary to explain, with some minuteness of detail, the more important considerations which oppose themselves to the advance of educational improvement. Perhaps that which is most generally felt, which is the most obvious, and which adds most to the effect of the others, is the existence of two rival systems of public instruction, each of which, to a certain extent, lives and flourishes in proportion to its ability to destroy the other. This is a waste of educational power. By the existence of two systems public feeling in regard to education is divided and weakened, local apathy and prejudice are increased, the chances of irregular attendance are doubled, and the efficient teacher is made to suffer, while the unskilful or unfaithful is encouraged and supported. This evil paralyses educational effort in every department of its operation. Next in order come the impediments produced by the indifference, ignorance, and prejudices of parents. It is generally believed, even by those who are otherwise well informed on educational matters, that parents are on the whole very anxious to secure a good education for their children, and willing to make large sacrifices to accomplish this purpose. Certainly instances do occasionally occur in which this spirit is exhibited in a most creditable manner; yet, judging by deeds, not words, it may safely be asserted that the general feeling manifested by the people ranges from a languid and evanescent interest in the local educational movement to positive indifference or repugnance. Large and apparently earnest professions are common, but they seldom endure beyond a few months. The localities are not few in which, if the people declared their real sentiments, they would express themselves in this manner:—"We are not particularly desirous to obtain education for our children, inasmuch as they are very useful to us at home; but, should the Board establish a school, erect buildings, and appoint teachers, without trouble or expense to us, then—to oblige the Commissioners—we shall have no objection to send them to school when they can be spared." Even when parents have gone so far as to contribute to the cost of school buildings, they have taken offence at some imaginary slight offered them, or the children, and have removed them from school. Others attempt to dictate to the teacher what he shall teach, and how he shall communicate his information; and, should he decline to accommodate his practice to their views, he at once raises a host of enemies. Certain subjects of instruction are interdicted by some parents, and particular methods by others. As a rule, parents in the country consider that by attending school for two or three years, in the usual irregular manner, the children ought to have acquired all necessary information, and to have become well educated; and should this unreasonable expectation be disappointed, they at once attribute the failure to the teacher's incapacity. Connected with this fault is the irregularity of the pupils, which need not be expatiated upon here, the subject having already been referred to at some length. But, practically, the circumstance most prejudicial by far to the interests of education is the lack of qualification on the part of teachers. Until a staff of teachers bred to the profession, thoroughly trained, and qualified in other particulars, has been secured, it is useless to expect any but imperfect results from educational effort. The teacher is the "school;"

"school;" whatever the amount and character of his qualifications, they will be visible in the effect of his teaching. The establishment of a training college in connection with the Model School is absolutely necessary for the purpose of ensuring a supply of suitable teachers, and of extending and perfecting the system; but the expense of such an institution is an obstacle of so formidable a nature as to render its establishment impracticable under existing circumstances.

XIII.—SUGGESTIONS FOR FUTURE IMPROVEMENTS.

The following are suggestions as to desirable reforms, which appear to be practicable, if not wholly, to a considerable extent:—

Detractibility of re-constructing the Boards of local patrons.

1. In considering this question, the following facts may be borne in mind: First, that many persons have ceased to act as local patrons on account of decease, removal from the district in which they held the office, indifference on educational matters, or some other cause; secondly, that some persons have been nominated local patrons, and have acted in that capacity, whose appointments have not been confirmed by the Board; and, thirdly, that the working of some local Boards is rendered ineffective, and the National System itself brought into disrepute by the recognition as patrons of persons who, from defective education, low social status, or doubtful moral character, are unfit for the office, and incompetent to discharge its duties. We are, therefore, of opinion, that it is desirable to re-construct the Boards of Local Patrons of all National Schools in the Colony. It would doubtless appear invidious to remove from the office a person who was already a local patron, and it might be supposed that injury would accrue to the system by rousing the angry feelings of the parties affected. But, granting that such a result might follow from the adoption of the course now recommended, we believe the toleration of such persons as those above referred to would prove a still greater evil. In the former case, the irritation would gradually subside, and the injury, should any follow, would be but temporary; whereas, by retaining improper persons in the office, the evil would be perpetuated. We venture to suggest that, where the services of eligible persons cannot be obtained, the Commissioners themselves should act as local patrons, and supervise the schools through the agency of their Inspectors; and that, in the event of no suitable party being proposed to represent any particular denomination at the local Board, the appointment of a patron belonging to that body should remain in abeyance.

Revision of regulations relating to school fees.

2. The rules on this head leave it to the local patrons to determine, without restriction of any kind, the amount of school fee to be paid by each child, and also the mode of payment. There is reason to believe that some teachers suffer much injustice from the want of consideration manifested by local patrons in this respect, while in a majority of cases, the income of teachers is rendered a matter of extreme uncertainty. The results, in a moral point of view, of this state of things, are seriously to be deprecated; it is, therefore, advisable to limit the power of local patrons by requiring each Board:—

1. To fix a certain rate of fee to be paid by the children attending the school under its supervision.
2. To submit the proposed scale for the approval of the Commissioners before carrying it into practice.
3. To avoid making the amount of school fee contingent upon the child's classification.

Revision of rules relating to the book fund.

3. The object for which this fund was originally instituted has in many cases been frustrated by the unwillingness of parents to pay the small amount required, from the neglect of the teacher to collect the fund, and from remissness on the part of local patrons in not checking the expenditure of the amount received. The schools have consequently suffered from a deficiency of books, and other appliances necessary for the effectual instruction of the pupils. As these are points of fundamental importance as regards the welfare and efficiency of the schools, we think it desirable that steps should be taken for the better administration of the "Book Fund;" and we accordingly suggest that a fixed proportion, say 10 per cent., should be deducted from the school fees, and that this arrangement should be communicated to the local patrons, in order that they may take it into account in fixing the proposed new scale of fees.

4. During the past year, we have had occasion to observe that the attendance of pupils in many country schools has frequently fallen short of the minimum average—thirty (30) pupils—fixed by the Board. Several causes have led to this result:—The unsettled state of the education question, the removal of the population to other localities, the poverty of the inhabitants, and, above all, indifference on the part of the parents to the education of their children. While we feel that this evil may be partially remedied by visiting the people, and by rousing parents and local patrons to a sense of their duties, we are persuaded that the only complete and permanent cure lies in making education to some extent compulsory. In the mean time, we think it may be desirable to reduce the expense of such schools, by paying the teacher such a proportion of his classification salary as the actual attendance forms of the required minimum. We are also aware of the existence of numerous localities in which a school of twenty children might be formed, but in which it is highly improbable that the minimum required by the Board could be obtained for many years to come. These places, which, perhaps, have the most imperative claim for state interference and assistance, are virtually excluded from any participation in the public funds by the operation of the Board's rules, which requires the attendance of thirty pupils at least. The difficulty may be met to some extent, by awarding aid to such schools, at a reduced rate, in proportion to the number of pupils in actual attendance.

Limited attendance of pupils in country schools.

5. There are many localities in the Colony, some of them populous, where the number of children would justify the establishment of schools, but where the people are unable or unwilling to contribute towards the cost of erecting the necessary buildings. We think that, in cases where it can be shewn to the satisfaction of the Commissioners that the inhabitants are really too poor to provide the usual quota of the cost of building, the expense of erecting the schoolhouse should be defrayed by the Board from the public funds; but, when proper school buildings cannot be obtained, on account of the disinclination on the part of the people to pay for them, we think no effectual remedy can be applied except under a general system, involving in some form or other local taxation for educational purposes.

The want of school buildings in certain localities.

6. District Model Schools may be regarded as seminaries for the training of future teachers, and as first class National Schools, through the medium of which, a high standard of instruction may be obtained. The advantages of District Model Schools are numerous. They would afford facilities for the training of candidates for situations under the Board, and render unnecessary the trouble and expense of sending all applicants to Sydney. Pupil teachers of country schools, many of whom, it is hoped, will be appointed as the system progresses, could here complete their education and training with a similar saving of expense; and to the teachers of non-vested schools, who are generally imperfectly educated and wholly inexperienced, opportunities would be afforded of qualifying themselves for the more efficient discharge of their duties. These schools would also exercise a great influence upon the teachers of country schools, by holding out a powerful incentive to study, and by creating an inducement to men of education and ability to attach themselves to the National System, and remain in the Board's service. There can be little doubt also that country schools would be beneficially affected, when the teachers come to observe the high standard of efficiency reached in the District Model Schools. Efforts would be made to improve the character of the instruction, and teachers would vie with each other and with the Model School in the endeavour to produce the most advanced pupils. The impulse given to education by the establishment of these institutions would, we think, soon be communicated to every National School in the Colony, and all would to some extent partake in the advantages thus offered.

District Model Schools.

We conceive that a District Model School should differ as little as possible in its arrangements from an ordinary vested school, except as regards the abundance and perfection of its material appliances. The Model School in Sydney, although useful as a place of instruction, fails as a means of training, simply because all the arrangements differ from those of the country schools, to which candidates are appointed. In a District Model School therefore there should be but one teacher, with perhaps a pupil teacher, as in ordinary country schools. It would, of course, be necessary that the master should be selected from the teachers in each district who were most highly distinguished for personal attainments and skill in teaching, and who were in every respect qualified to act as models for the instruction of candidates. We would recommend, therefore, that District Model Schools should should be established in some of the principal towns, as Maitland, Bathurst, and Goulburn, in the course of the current year.

The Table of Minimum Attainments.

7. We are aware that complaints have been made occasionally by several teachers that the standard fixed in the "Table of Minimum Attainments" is beyond their power to reach, and we believe it to be expedient to reconsider this document, in order to discover how far the charge is sustained. It will be remembered that the objects sought to be attained in framing this Table were:—

1. To furnish a general standard to which all teachers could work, and by which all schools could be measured.
2. To check the indiscreet and desultory manner in which many schools were taught, by laying down a definite and systematic course of instruction.
3. To prevent the premature removal of the children from school by their parents.
4. The prevention of errors in classification.

Having maturely considered the matter, we are of opinion, that, although the "Table of Minimum Attainments" presents no serious difficulty to teachers of ordinary ability and industry, yet, taking into account the meagre attainments, low practical skill, the total or partial absence of training, and general deficiency of qualifications, in many teachers, some reduction of the standard may be allowed.

District libraries.

8. Many reasons could be adduced in favor of the establishment of such libraries. It would be well were they unnecessary, but it is to be regretted that such is not the case. As numerous non-vested schools are now in operation, and as the teachers are often inexperienced, and in some cases imperfectly educated, it would follow, as a case of necessity, that something should be done to afford them as much information as possible upon matters connected with school management and the art of teaching, and to urge them to a systematic course of study. In the absence of other and better means of insuring so desirable an end, we would recommend the establishment of a small library in a central part of each district, to be afterwards attached to the Model School thereof; and that it consist of the more improved works on school management, and books of reference on all the subjects to which a teacher's attention might be legitimately directed.

Revision of the system of classification.

9. We think it desirable to revise the system of classification, as far as relates to the first class, by introducing another to be called Section I, to which grade a salary of £180 per annum should be attached.

One powerful reason for this change is the fact, that many of the most efficient teachers in the country become discontented, and crave removal to Sydney. But if their emoluments were more nearly assimilated to those of Sydney teachers, they would probably be more satisfied with their positions. Besides the ordinary inducements which such an arrangement would hold out to deserving teachers, it might be understood that future Inspectors and Masters of District Model Schools would be selected from men who had gained the highest rank. We observe that the National Board in Victoria have adopted this system of classification. It would also be highly beneficial to give a stamp of authenticity to the Board's certificates, by adding to the Board of Examiners persons of known eminence in educational matters; for example, Professors of the University or Masters of the Grammar School.

Institution of a probationary class.

10. When the Board for the first time accedes to a formal application for aid in the establishment of a non-vested National School, the teacher may not be in a position to undergo an examination. Indeed we think it more advisable to defer such an examination, until he has acquired some experience in the business of teaching. But the practice at present is to recognise such teachers as 3rd class, Section B, for which, however, it may eventually be found they are not qualified. We would, therefore, submit that all teachers, before their formal examination, be styled probationers; and in the event of such a course being sanctioned by the Board, we would further recommend that all such teachers should be paid at the rate of sixty pounds (£60) per annum.

11. We believe this to be simply an act of justice. As far as we understand the question, the difference in the two scales of salaries depends upon the following considerations. The teacher of a vested school is the servant of the Board only, who, in consequence, furnish the whole of his remuneration. In a non-vested school, on the other hand, the teacher is presumed to be the servant, for special purposes, of the local patrons, and of the Board, as regards general instruction merely. The responsibility of providing his emoluments rests, therefore, with both parties: in other words, the Board being the teacher's master for a portion only of his time, pay him but a portion of his remuneration. But in an overwhelming majority of instances, the assumed difference has no existence, but the teachers act in every particular like teachers of ordinary vested National Schools. This being the case, their salaries ought, we think, to be at the same rate, provided they exhibit equal qualifications.

Expediency of equalising the salaries of teachers in vested and non-vested schools.

12. The teacher's programme of study, published by the Board, contains subjects upon which few female teachers could be expected to undergo examination, and makes no mention of some of the branches appropriate to a good female education. We therefore think it expedient to publish a separate list of subjects upon which female teachers will be examined for certificates.

Programme of study for female teachers.

13. The average number of pupils now required to be in attendance at a country school, in order to procure the assistance of a pupil teacher, is seventy. There are many cases, however, where this average is difficult to attain, but yet where the appointment of a pupil teacher would be desirable. We beg, therefore, to recommend that where there is an average of fifty pupils, the master in possession of the required certificate, and the appointment in question can be shown to be expedient, the application should be entertained.

Appointment of pupil teachers.

14. We are of opinion that it would be desirable to require each teacher to furnish the Inspector of his District with a monthly report of the lessons given to each class during that period. This plan would be productive of a healthy understanding between the teacher and the Inspector as to the actual course and character of the instruction; it would facilitate the thorough inspection of the school; it would make the teacher, so to speak, his own examiner, and it would incite him to increased exertion for the progress of his school by enabling the Inspector to take him at his own word as to the amount of work done.

Reports from teachers to Inspectors.

15. We think it extremely desirable that the Board should supply Visitors' Books, uniform in size and appearance, to every school, as we are under the impression that from the absence of such books the observations of strangers are seldom recorded.

Visitors' books.

16. The duty of an Inspector in inquiring into the regularity of a school would be greatly facilitated by the addition of two columns to the Class Rolls, so that the number of days during which each pupil has been present may be exhibited, and also the number he has been absent during the quarter. We accordingly submit that these columns should be inserted when new class rolls are printed.

Class rolls.

17. Notwithstanding all the care and instruction given to the teachers respecting the quarterly returns, these documents are often furnished incorrectly and unpunctually. One cause of this fault is the fact that the Inspector never sees the completed return, and consequently is unable to exercise any check upon the teachers. We believe that correctness and punctuality may be secured by causing each teacher to forward the Quarterly and Annual Returns to the Inspector of the District, who, after examination, would certify as to their accuracy, and transmit them to the Secretary. We are further of opinion that no salary due or accruing to any teacher should be paid unless his Returns be certified in this manner. The distribution of Salary Abstracts, Returns, and other Forms, might also be entrusted to the Inspectors.

Quarterly returns.

18. The books usually employed in our schools are not in all cases well adapted to the purposes for which they are used. This is especially the case with the reading books. These books are not, in certain parts, properly graduated as regards their difficulty. Many lessons occurring throughout them are inapplicable; others, to be serviceable, would require to be re-written and corrected. The two Sequel Books, Nos. 1 and 2, might well give place to a new publication, more useful than either; and experience has taught us that the

The National School Books.

Supplement

Supplement to the Fourth Book does not supply the mental food and exercise expected from such a work; nor is it of much service as preparatory to entering upon the study of so difficult a work as the Fifth Book. The Text Books on Geography appear to us the worst in the series, and require to be remodelled. The best course, under these circumstances, would unquestionably be to compile an entirely new set of school books, suitable to the wants of the Colony, and alike adapted to the requirements of the National System and of the present age. In the present unsettled state of the education question this would, perhaps, be premature, but we are of opinion that an arrangement could at once be effected, whereby the best lessons in both Sequel Books might be selected, and, with some additional matter, carefully chosen, form one work.

The necessity for a good school map of the Colony of New South Wales is urgent, and we therefore submit that measures should be immediately taken to supply this deficiency.

Appendix C. The usual statement of Receipts and Disbursements is appended. The favorable balance from last year, together with the money accruing from the Church and School Estates, enabled us to expend £3,339 beyond the amount of the annual vote. It will be seen from this how urgently an increase of the annual vote is required if our operations are not to be greatly restricted.

We submit this our Report for the year ending 31st December, 1859; and in testimony thereof we have caused our Corporate Seal to be hereunto affixed, this sixth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty.

W. C. WILLS,

[Annex

[Annex A.]

(No. 59-29.)

National Education Office,
Sydney, 31 January, 1860.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to submit for the consideration of the Board of National Education, the following proposals for modifying the existing arrangements for examining and classifying teachers in the Board's service.

Annex A.

2. In the first place, it seems very desirable that the qualifications necessary for each grade of classification should be defined, in order that teachers may possess a standard by which they may measure their attainments, and learn what will be expected from them when undergoing examination. I accordingly forward herewith a list of subjects, in which teachers should be examined for each classification, for the approval of the Board.

3. It is now usual in England not to award a student just leaving a Training College a higher certificate than Class III, however successfully he may have passed the examinations. This course has been rendered necessary by the exclusive devotion of the students to the mere acquisition of knowledge, and by the comparative neglect of the means of obtaining practical skill in teaching, in consequence of which a race of schoolmasters arose, who prided themselves, perhaps justly, upon the extent of their acquirements, but who were deficient in many of the more useful qualifications of a teacher. As a similar feeling has manifested itself in the Colony, and as some teachers seem to think they ought to be classified in accordance with the amount of their attainments simply, without reference to their actual skill in managing a school, I think that, as a rule, the highest classification awarded to a teacher on his first appointment should be Class III, Section A, the exceptions being in cases in which the teacher had been previously engaged in teaching, and proved himself to possess undoubted ability.

4. It has appeared to me that country teachers require a constant stimulus to make them study; that it is one of the consequences of their isolated position to form listless, apathetic habits of mind, which react upon their schools. I would therefore render it compulsory upon every teacher to undergo an examination every year—not necessarily with a view to a higher classification, but principally in order to maintain his previous knowledge, and prevent him from retrograding. From this ordeal teachers who had attained a certain rank—e. g., Class II, Section A—might be exempted, leaving it to their own choice, as at present, whether they would offer themselves for re-examination. The arrangement now proposed is substantially the same as that acted upon in Ireland.

5. The annual examinations would be conducted by the Inspectors of the different districts, in some central and convenient spot; the questions, however, would be prepared by the Inspector and Superintendent, in order that a uniform relation to the common standard might be observed. A Board of Examiners should also be appointed, and, as it appears desirable that they should be directly responsible to the Board for the opinions they express, I submit that the Board should be composed of the Inspectors, and the Master of the Model School for the time being. The manner in which they should discharge the duty of revising examination papers would perhaps be better left to themselves to arrange.

Annex B.

6. In the event of the proposed appointment of an additional Inspector being carried out, I think it would be desirable to adopt a new form of teacher's certificate, of which I submit a copy. The most important difference between the proposed certificate and that now in use is the addition, in the former, of spaces in which the Inspector may enter his opinion of the state of the school at each annual inspection. This course has been attended with very satisfactory results in England, and has had the effect of causing teachers to work with great energy in school. Of course, certificates would not be actually issued to the teachers until they had been some time in charge of schools. In most cases it will be necessary that the certificates should be placed in the teacher's hands, in order that the Inspector may register his opinion at the time of examining the school; a copy of this opinion would be contained in the Inspector's report upon the school.

7. At the end of every three years, it would be desirable to revise the certificates. If it were then found, in the case of any teacher, that his school increased in numbers and efficiency, that the Inspector's opinion as expressed in his certificate was uniformly favorable, and that the local patrons reported well of his conduct, he might be considered as entitled to one grade of promotion. The promotion in such cases would be equivalent to a reward for patient, sustained, and skilful exertions in the actual work of the school, and would probably operate more beneficially upon the education of the children than any other course that could be adopted.

Secretary, Board of National Education.I have, &c.,
W. WILKINS.

[Per favor of the Local Patrons.]

(Circular No. 27.)

National Education Office,
Sydney, 1 March, 1859.

Sir,

In forwarding to you the enclosed Certificate of Merit, I have the honor, by direction of the Board of National Education, to acquaint you that they have adopted the following arrangements for the examination and classification of teachers in their service.

2. It is intended that every school shall be officially inspected and reported upon, at least, once in every year. You will observe that the certificate contains spaces in which the Inspector will enter his opinion as to the state of the school during three successive years. A copy of this opinion is included in the Inspector's Report.

3. At the end of the third year the teacher should report that his certificate is filled up. A revision of classification will then be made, and should it appear that during the previous period the school had increased in numbers and efficiency, that the Inspector's opinion was uniformly favorable, and that the local patrons had reported well of his conduct, he would then be entitled to one grade of promotion, without being required to undergo an examination. The promotion in such cases would be equivalent to a reward for patient, sustained, and skilful exertion in the actual work of the school.

4. With a view to prevent teachers in the country from contracting listless, apathetic habits of mind, which, from their isolated positions, they are liable to form, and which react injuriously upon their schools, it has been deemed expedient to require all teachers below a certain rank to undergo an annual examination. Success in this examination will not necessarily entitle a teacher to a higher classification, unless he has specially requested to be examined for that purpose; but the principal object will be to induce the teacher to maintain his previous knowledge, and to supply a stimulus to constant study. Teachers who have attained the rank of Class II, Section A, will be exempted from this ordeal, leaving it to their own choice, as at present, whether they would offer themselves for examination. Failure in the annual examination would be followed by a loss of classification, unless circumstances of a very favorable nature could be adduced in excuse.

5. In order to carry out these arrangements with the greatest possible precision, a Board of Examiners has been appointed, to whom has been confided the duty of revising all examination papers. To supply teachers with a standard by which they may measure their attainments and learn what will be be expected of them when undergoing examination, the qualifications necessary for each grade of classification have been defined, and a "List of Subjects in which Teachers will be examined for each classification" is appended hereto, Annex A.

6. The Board have further decided that, with a view to encourage the practice of teaching Vocal Music in country schools, they will award a gratuity of five pounds yearly to any teacher who has given systematic instruction in this subject, and who can produce a class, consisting of not less than twenty children, capable of undergoing an examination in the first and second parts of Hullah's Manual. In addition to the gratuity to the teacher, a grant of Hullah's Large Sheets or Exercise Books will be made to the school. It is indispensable that none of the ordinary subjects of instruction be neglected on account of the teaching of music.

I have, &c.,
W. C. WILLS,
Secretary.

The organization is defective. New school premises are much wanted. 2. The pupils are very clean, very regular, and in fair order. Their manners and demeanour are very pleasing. The moral character of the school is good. 3. Arithmetic and writing have not been made to form subjects for the first class. In all other respects the subjects are appropriate. The methods of instruction partake too much of the cramming system, and they are otherwise faulty. 4. Proficiency of second class fair, except in grammar and geography; that of the first class indifferent. The school has been only a short time in operation. |

NEW SOUTH WALES.

DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL BOARD.

(REPORT FOR 1859.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

REPORT OF THE DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL BOARD FOR THE YEAR 1859.

THE very voluminous statement forwarded by the Denominational School Board to the Government, in reply to certain queries contained in Mr. Plunkett's motion relative to School Statistics, which statement was submitted to the Legislature during the Session of 1859, forms so complete a detailed report upon Denominational Schools, that the Board feel it to be unnecessary to recapitulate the large amount of information therein contained.

The separation of the new Colony of Queensland from New South Wales has slightly affected the number of schools under the Board—the following schools having, from this cause, been withdrawn from their control, viz. :—

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

North Brisbane,
South Do.,
Drayton Swamp,
Fortitude Valley,
Ipswich,
Maryborough.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

North Brisbane,
Fortitude Valley,
Ipswich,
Maryborough.

These schools ceased to be in connection with the Board on the 30th of November, 1859. It has therefore been necessary to draw out the usual tabular form, hereto appended, in a different manner from that hitherto adopted; the numbers of schools and children in attendance are given up to the 30th of November only, and an additional table shews the number of schools withdrawn in December.

It will be observed, upon reference to this table, that a striking change has taken place during the year 1859 in respect of the number of children attending Denominational Schools, and also of the amount of support afforded by parents and guardians. By comparing the table given in the Report of the Board for the year 1858, with that now furnished, we have—

| YEAR. | CHILDREN ON THE ROLLS. | AVERAGE ATTENDANCE. | VOLUNTARY SUPPORT. |
| 1858 | 16,082 | 11,332 | £ s. d. 11,210 11 0 |
| 1859 | 15,147 | 11,268 | 13,976 11 7 |
| | 935 | 64 | 2,766 0 7 |

By which it appears, that although the number of children on the rolls is diminished, the average attendance is improved by about four per cent., and the amount of voluntary contributions very much increased, the vote for the two years having been the same.

The gradual increase in the proportion paid by the parents towards the education of their children, which is plainly shewn upon reference to the Reports of the Board for the past eight years, is a source of much satisfaction.

DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOLS IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

SECRETARY TO DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL BOARD to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Denominational School Board Office,

Sydney, 11 February, 1861.

SIR,

Referring to the Denominational School Board's letter, dated August 10, 1860, upon the subject of Returns to an Order of the Legislative Assembly, upon a motion by Mr. Plunkett, I have now the honor, by direction of the Board, to forward the accompanying additional returns which have been received since the date of that letter.

I have, &c.,

C. E. ROBINSON.

APPIN.—(MIXED.)

- 1.—St. Bede's Roman Catholic School, Appin, in connection with the Roman Catholic Church, Appin.
- 2.—The schoolhouse is weatherboard; the inside walls and ceiling lath and plaster; in good repair, and large enough for the present use.
- 3.—It consists of one room containing 384 square feet superficial in the area.
- 4.—Four acres of ground for recreation.
- 5.—Two weatherboard water-closets, separate from each other and in good order, one for girls and one for boys.
- 6.—One schoolroom for both sexes, containing 4,608 cubic feet, and 384 superficial square feet in the area.
- 7.—The annual average assemblance is 35.
- 8.—The ventilation consists of five windows and one door, containing 48 superficial square feet.
- 9.—The annual average number on the books, 52; the annual average boys in attendance, 15; ditto girls, 20.
- 10.—The ages of the boys, from 4 years to 15 years; ditto, girls, 3 to 14 years.
- 11.—Four classes of boys; four ditto girls. Six boys in the first class, ages from 13 to 15; nine boys in the second class, ages from 6 to 13; four boys in the third class, ages from 7 to 14; seven boys in the fourth class, ages from 4 to 7. Six girls in the first class, ages from 11 to 13; eight girls in the second class, ages from 6 to 12; five girls in the third class, ages from 6 to 8; five girls in the fourth class, ages from 3 to 5.
- 12.—The school opens at 9 a.m., and closes at 3 p.m.; from 12 till $\frac{1}{4}$ past 1 for prayers, dinner, and recreation.
- 13.—Every Saturday a whole holiday. The vacations on the 24th of June, or thereabouts, and at Christmas; there are fourteen days or thereabouts at each vacation, according to the day of the week the 24th June or Christmas Day may fall upon.
- 14.—240 days teaching in the year.
- 15.—The average time the children remain at the school is seven years.
- 16.—Absent during harvest season thirteen boys, ages 6 to 14; ditto nine girls, ages 6 to 12.
- 17.—The fees, in cases where the children's parents are labourers, 4d. per week; in other cases 7s. per quarter. There is no charge for school books, but the principle is bad, the children do not take care of them so well when allowed them free; they should pay cost price for them. The total cost of each pupil, including the Government salary and fees, averaged the year ending 30th September, 1858, £1 18s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for each child, having at that period an annual average of 52 children on the roll.
- 18.—The children's fees for the twelve months ending 30th September, 1858, amounted to £29 19s. 5d.; the fees are for the teacher's own use; there are no emoluments from any other source. The total amount from all sources being, with the Government salary of £70, amounted to £99 19s. 5d.
- 19.—The number of pupils in actual attendance during the year ending 30th September, 1858, were 27, making the annual charge for each pupil £3 14s.
- 20.—Subjects taught:—Boys, first class: Reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, and catechism of the Roman Catholic faith. Second class: Reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, geography, and catechism. Third class: Reading, writing on slates, spelling, tables, and catechism. Fourth class: Reading from tablets, and prayers. The Protestant children are not taught the catechism. The girls' classes are the same as the boys', with the addition of needlework. The duties of the boys and girls are as follows:—Morning, boys and girls—Reading, $\frac{3}{4}$ hour; writing, $\frac{1}{4}$ hour; spelling, $\frac{1}{2}$ hour; geography geography and grammar, every alternate day, 1 hour; catechism, $\frac{1}{2}$ hour. Boys, afternoon—Arithmetic and tables, 1 hour; history or reading, $\frac{3}{4}$ hour. Girls, afternoon—Arithmetic and tables, 1 hour; needlework and history, every alternate day, $\frac{3}{4}$ hour. One hour and a quarter for prayers, dinner, and recreation.

21.—List of books used in the school:—Tablets, first reading book, sequel to ditto, second reading book, third ditto, fourth ditto, grammar, geography, and arithmetic—by the Christian Brothers. History of the Bible, ditto of the Church—Reeves. Roman Catholic catechism of the Christian doctrine, Roman Catholic historical catechism of the Bible—by approval of His Grace the Archbishop. The books in tolerable good order, but not a sufficient supply. The kind of books now in use are adequate for the use of the children in their present stage of knowledge.

22.—The maps in the school consist of 2 of The World, 2 of Australia, 1 of the British Isles, and 1 of the Holy Land. New maps are wanted of the whole of the Australian Colonies, 1 for the British Isles, and 1 for the Holy Land. Astronomical and musical diagrams would be a great advantage.

23.—The mode of correction adopted:—Principally the system of reasoning with the children as to the great benefits they will gain hereafter by attention to their studies has been tried by me since holding this appointment, which, in most instances, has been successful, although attended with much difficulty. But I am of opinion that it could not be carried out in a large school. Remarks of Visitors:—

“8 August, 1859.—Visited unexpectedly; the roll was called over, 2 girls absent and 6 boys. The girls and boys in attendance very orderly. Half-past 11 o'clock.—ED. M'ENCROE, M. L. Board, North Sydney.”

“29 August, 1859.—Visited the school and found the children orderly, clean, and attentive to their studies.—J. P. ROCHE, R. Catholic Priest, Campbelltown.”

“29 August, 1859.—I have to repeat the same.—P. D. O'FARRELL, R. Catholic Priest, Liverpool.”

“12 December, 1859.—The small attendance of the boys and girls this day is accounted for by the Teacher as caused by it being harvest time.—ED. M'ENCROE, M. L. Board, North Sydney.”

“23 April, 1860.—I consider the remuneration received by the Teacher as school fees and the allowance from Government insufficient, especially as he has to pay rent for his residence. His remuneration at present being not more than at the rate of £100 the year. It ought to be £150 at least.—ED. M'ENCROE, M. L. Board, North Sydney.”

24.—There are funds to the amount of £5 for prizes to be distributed about Christmas. The last examination, September 6, 1858, by the Revs. J. P. Roche and D. M. Guinn.

25.—There are no official visitors or inspectors. For remarks of voluntary visitors see Answer 23. The children are very good scholars considering the great disadvantage they labour under by being called away every harvest season.

26.—Teacher, Joseph Salamé.

27.—Voluntary governess and assistant teacher, the wife and daughter of Joseph Salamé.

28.—London, England, their birthplace.

29.—Master, 40; governess, 42; daughter, 13.

30.—Appointed 1st May, 1859.

31.—Six weeks probation at St. Benedict's Roman Catholic Model School, Sydney.

32.—Have not been trained as a teacher. For experience see Answer 31. My certificate I could not wait for in consequence of leaving Sydney in a hurry for Appin, but I can have it upon application.

33.—No experience in teaching since I was a youth (at which period I acted as monitor), previous to coming to this country. In England I was carrying on the business of a hat manufacturer, at 251, Regent-street, London.

34.—The annual salary from the Government is £70, for the master only. The present services of the master's wife and daughter are voluntary.

35.—Annual fees, £30.

36.—Total income from the school, £100 the year.

37.—Instructions are given in the Roman Catholic faith every Sunday afternoon, and at different periods of the week whenever considered necessary by the Priest. The school is visited daily by the Rev. Father Maher, Roman Catholic Priest of St. Bede's Church, Appin. The books used for religious instructions—Roman Catholic catechism of the Christian doctrine, ditto Bible history.

 "I have this day examined the first class of this school. I have been most pleased with the children's answers, which prove that much care has been taken by the good mistress of the school. The clean appearance and orderly conduct of the whole school was most satisfactory.—D. V. M. O'CONNELL."

NEW SOUTH WALES.

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY.

(REPORT FOR 1860.)

Presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command.

*REPORT of the University of Sydney, for the Year ended the 31st of December, 1860.University of Sydney,
16 April, 1861.*

1. The Senate of the University of Sydney, in accordance with the provisions of the 22nd clause of the Act of Incorporation, 14 Vic., No. 31, have the honor to submit, for the information of the Governor and Executive Council, the following Report of their Proceedings during the year 1860.

2. Twenty-two Students were admitted to Matriculation in the University, after having passed the preliminary examination.

3. Eight Students who had completed the University course, extending over a period of three years, and had passed the statutory examination, were admitted to the Degree of Bachelor of Arts.

4. The Degree of Master of Arts was conferred on one member of the University who had obtained, previously, the Degree of Bachelor of Arts, and had complied with the requirements of the By-laws.

5. In the competition for Scholarships, the successful candidates were:—

BARKER SCHOLARSHIP (for Mathematical Science):—

Cecil Bedford Stephen.

DEAS THOMSON SCHOLARSHIP (for Physical Science):—

Cecil Bedford Stephen.

GENERAL UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIPS (for general proficiency):—

Third year:— Cecil Bedford Stephen.

First year:— { Samuel Walker Griffith.

{ Charles Stuart Mein.

{ Charles Edward Robertson Murray.

The SALTING EXHIBITION (devoted to a Student proceeding from the Sydney Grammar School to the University) was awarded to Charles Stuart Mein.

6. Vacancies were caused in the Senate by the resignation of Mr. Alfred Denison and Mr. James Macarthur on the occasion of their departure for Europe. Mr. William Charles Wentworth was elected to fill the seat vacated by Mr. Denison, and Sir William Macarthur was elected to the other seat.

7. The Senate have much pleasure in recording a further instance of the munificence of the Provost, Sir Charles Nicholson, to whose personal exertions and liberality the University already owes so much, viz., the donation of his large and valuable collection of Etruscan, Greek, Roman, and Egyptian Antiquities. The means of establishing a Museum having been thus secured, the Senate, with a view to render the objects contained in it accessible to all members of the community and to enable the Professors to avail themselves of their aid in the illustration of the classical lectures, prepared three rooms in the southern end of the building for their reception. Mr. Edward Reeve has been appointed Curator of the Museum, and a catalogue of the antiquities is in course of preparation.

8. The Senate are unable to report much progress in the building during the past year. The completion of the battlements of the tower has been deferred, the money reserved for that purpose being required for the Museum. The building, however, has been rendered in all respects proof against the weather.

9. With a view to enable persons who may have taken the Degree of Bachelor of Arts, or an equivalent first Degree in Arts in any University of the United Kingdom, or in Melbourne, to proceed to the higher Degree of Master of Arts in this University, the Senate, by virtue of the powers vested in them by the 13th clause of the Act of Incorporation, have passed a By-law to enable them to confer that Degree, after examination, under certain conditions. This By-law, a copy of which is appended to this Report, has been approved of by the Governor and Executive Council.

10. A By-law to enable the Senate to confer the Degree of Doctor of Medicine, after examination, under circumstances similar to the foregoing, has also received the assent of the Governor General. (A copy of this By-law is appended.)

11. A further By-law has been passed, repealing the By-law relating to Matriculation, in so far as the time of payment of the fee is concerned. Hitherto a candidate for Matriculation was required to pay a fee of two pounds previously to admission to examination. The payment of the fee under this By-law is deferred until after the examination and approval of the candidate by the examiners. Inasmuch as, at the present time, the examination for Scholarships of the first year is coincident with that for Matriculation, persons whose hopes of securing an University education depend upon the successful issue of their examination, are, in case of failure, exempt from any pecuniary loss. (A copy of this By-law is appended.)

12. Leave of absence for one year has been granted to Professor Smith, to enable him to proceed to Europe. In addition to considerations of health, the desirability of a visit to the principal laboratories of Europe, and of personal intercourse with their eminent conductors; and, further, the opportunity presented for purchasing apparatus for the Chemical Department of the University, induced the Senate to concede that leave. Provision for the fulfilment of the duties of the Chemical Classes has been made by the appointment of Mr. Charles Watt, as to whose ability to perform the work entrusted to him, the Senate have received ample assurance.

13. An account of the Receipts and Expenditure of the University, during the past year, is appended.

The foregoing Report was adopted at a meeting of the Senate held on the 15th February, 1861, and ordered to be transmitted to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, for presentation to the Governor and Executive Council and the Parliament, in pursuance of the 22nd section of the Act of Incorporation, 14 Vict., No. 31.

HUGH KENNEDY,
Registrar.

SYDNEY GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

(REPORT FOR 1860.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 10 May, 1861.Sydney Grammar School, 7 May, 1861.

SIR,

By direction of the Trustees of the Sydney Grammar School I have the honor transmit to you a report of their proceedings, and of the progress of the School during the year 1860, to be laid before His Excellency the Administrator of the Government and the Honorable the Executive Council, in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Incorporation.

2. Since the date of their last report the Trustees have not found it necessary to make any further regulations for the government and discipline of the School.

3. At the meeting held on the 3rd January Sir Charles Nicholson was re-appointed Chairman for the year.

4. The Trustees are sorry to report that the number of pupils has decreased during the past year, as shewn by the annexed Table: for this decrease the Trustees are unable to assign any special cause. According to the report, hereto appended, of the gentlemen who acted as Examiners—"The result of the examination not only displays a great improvement in the knowledge and style of writing out since the last yearly examinations, but would certainly, in our opinion, reflect credit upon the best schools in the Mother Country."

5. In consequence of the diminution of the number of pupils, the Trustees have found it necessary to dispense with the services of two of the Assistant Masters, Mr. Stuart Hawthorne and Mr. John Kinloch.

6. The Writing Master, Mr. John Mills, resigned during the year, and his place has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. C. J. Nelson.

7. At a meeting of the Trustees, held on the 1st May, John Hay, Esq., was elected in the room of George M'Leay, Esq., resigned; and on the 5th November, R. A. A. Morehead, Esq., was elected in the room of Edward Cox, Esq., resigned.

8. In the month of January a letter was received from the Registrar of the University, informing the Trustees that a sum of money having been presented by Mr. L. K. Salting for the encouragement of learning in the University, the Senate had passed the following Resolution, viz. :—

"That Mr. Salting's benefaction be applied to the foundation of an Exhibition for the maintenance of an Undergraduate in the Faculty of Arts, to be called 'the Salting Exhibition.'

"That the Exhibition be presented by the Senate, upon the recommendation of the Trustees of the Sydney Grammar School, to a pupil of that school proceeding to the University after the Christmas vacation.

"That the Exhibition be tenable for three years, upon such conditions as the Senate shall determine.

"That the Exhibition confer no Academic rank, and that the Exhibitioner be not precluded from competing for the ordinary or special Scholarships."

In consequence of this communication, upon the recommendation of the Head Master and the Examiners, the Trustees nominated Mr. Charles Mein to "the Salting Exhibition."

I have, &c.,

W. H. CATLETT,
Secretary.

CHARITABLE AND EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

SECRETARY TO COMMITTEE OF PARRAMATTA HOSPITAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Parramatta Hospital,
Parramatta, 1861.

SIR,

With reference to your several letters, requesting certain information respecting the above Institution, I have the honor, at the request of the Committee, to state that it is impossible to supply the information required.

The Hospital is conducted according to the provisions of the Act of Council, 11 Victoria, No. 59, 1847, and 13 Victoria, No. 20, 1849.

1. The officers are elected annually, as provided by the above Acts. I enclose the last report, which contains the names of the officers for the current year.

2. The only paid office-bearers are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burnside, who were appointed Master and Matron August 31st, 1859, their joint salary is £50; they also receive a like sum as Master and Matron of the Benevolent Society held in the same building; their only other allowances are board and residence.

3. It is, I presume, unnecessary to say more than that meetings of the Committee are held monthly—three forming a quorum; it would be an endless, and I should think, quite useless, trouble, to say nothing of its being extremely inquisitorial, to hunt up the numbers of attendances of the gentlemen who so kindly perform these gratuitous duties.

4. During the last five years I believe there has been no instance of postponement "in consequence of non-attendance of a quorum"; the annual meeting was once adjourned, there not being ten contributors present. (Vide Act of 1847, sec. 8.)

5. There are no data from which to supply detailed accounts; they have been made up annually and published with the report. (Vide report sent.)

The Institution receives three hundred pounds by annual vote of Parliament, the subscribers contributing an equal sum. The Treasurer has been frequently changed, and there are no existing detailed accounts besides such of the pay sheets as may be procurable; these are regularly audited, with much care and precision, at each monthly meeting.

I have, &c.,

CHAS. BETHEL LYONS,
Honorary Secretary.

[Enclosure.]

REPORT of the Parramatta District Hospital, from the 1st of January to the 31st of December, 1860.

Your Committee are very happy in being enabled to state that the anticipations mentioned in the report for the year 1859, that "the materials for a good report for the year 1860 were in some measure ready at hand," has been abundantly realized.

It appears that 106 patients have been admitted into the Hospital during the past year, and the sum of £325 14s. 3d. has been expended in their sustenance and medical treatment. The total receipts have been £576 2s., which—after payment of £2 due to the Treasurer at the end of the last year, together with the expenses of the year, £325 14s. 3d.—leaves a balance of £248 7s. 9d. in the Treasurer's hands.

Your Committee feel bound to acknowledge that this prosperous state of their affairs is in a great measure owing to the untiring zeal and exertions of your Treasurer, Mr. Purchase.

It appears that there is no guttering under the roof of the building, and the drainage is also quite insufficient. Your Committee would, therefore, recommend that part of the above balance be applied to the reparation of these defects; for if this be not speedily done, the spacious and useful verandahs will be destroyed, and the foundation of the building greatly weakened, which will cause the necessity of a much larger outlay; in fact, the buildings generally are being greatly injured for want of proper guttering, draining, and other repairs.

Your Committee also acknowledge the continued zeal and attention of Mr. and Mrs. Burnside to their respective duties as Master and Matron of the Institution.

Parramatta District Hospital in account with Mr. John Purchase, Treasurer.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS BILL.

(MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 12 February, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned Members of the United Church of England and Ireland in this Colony,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners have learned with deep concern that a Bill has been introduced into your Honorable House having for its object to declare the lands which were granted to the late Church and School Corporation Waste Lands of the Crown.

That the Bill proceeds upon the assumption that certain doubts exist regarding the tenure of these lands by the Crown, but your Petitioners submit that no such doubts exist upon the subject as bring the case within any precedent for passing a Bill of the nature of that now before your Honorable House.

That, when the late Church and School Corporation was dissolved, the lands which had been granted to that Corporation reverted to and became vested in the Crown, as Trustee, in the words of the Charter, "to be held, applied, and disposed of in such manner as to the Crown should appear most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and the education of the youth in this Colony." And that the revenues derived from these lands have ever since been and are now so applied by the Executive Government.

That your Petitioners regard the measure now proposed for the adoption of your Honorable House as calculated to impair public confidence in the tenure of all grants which may have been made by the Crown, especially those for religious and educational uses.

That your Petitioners are deeply interested in the continuance of the present application of the said revenues, inasmuch as several of the clergy receive portions of their stipends from this source, and it also supplies the only fund available for the building and repair of Denominational Schools.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that, having regard to the rights of your Petitioners and the reasons above stated, your Honorable House will be pleased to withhold your assent from the aforesaid Bill.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS BILL.

(PETITION OF BISHOP OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 14 February, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Right Reverend Frederic Barker, D.D., Bishop of Sydney,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner has heard with pain and regret that a Bill is now before your Honorable House, the object of which is to declare the Church and School Lands to be Waste Lands of the Crown, and to administer them under the ordinary Crown Lands Act or Regulations.

That these lands were originally granted by the Crown for the exclusive use of the Church of England, at the time and in the manner in which very large portions of the Colony were granted both to private individuals and to public bodies, and that the right of the Crown to make such grants is indisputable.

That, in the year One thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, a Corporation was created by Royal Letters Patent for the management of the lands in question.

That the Letters Patent contained a clause empowering the Crown to dissolve the Corporation, but with the proviso, that in the event of such dissolution the lands should revert to the Crown, "to be held and applied and disposed of in such manner as should appear most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and the education of the youth of the Colony."

That, in the year One thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, the Corporation was dissolved, and the lands held by it reverted to the Crown, under the XXXVIth Clause of the Charter.

That, when a question arose as to the future distribution of the revenues, directions were given by the Secretary of State, acting on behalf of the Crown, that the appropriation which is now in force should be adopted, being in conformity with the terms of the above-named clause in the original Grant.

That, in the correspondence upon this subject, no question even arose as to the Crown being a Trustee, and that, in fact, since the dissolution of the Corporation, the Crown has never ceased to act as a Trustee.

That the power of the Crown to act as Trustee is recognized by the most eminent lawyers at Home, and in this Colony.

That as these lands did not absolutely and unconditionally revert to the Crown at the dissolution of the Corporation, but were only held in trust and administered for the purposes named in the original Charter, they did not then become Waste Lands of the Crown.

That at the passing of the Constitution Act they could not be ceded by the Crown as Waste Lands, since they were not Waste Lands, and the Crown had not the absolute and unconditional disposal of them, but only held them in trust.

SEEING THEREFORE,—

That the validity of the original Grant has never been questioned by any high legal authority;

That the Trust has ever been administered in conformity with, and not in derogation of the original Grant;

That the religious body of which your Petitioner is a member, and of whose interests he is a guardian, has for nearly thirty years enjoyed the benefit of a participation in the revenues of these lands;

That a grievous injustice would be inflicted upon that body by the alienation of these lands from the purposes for which they were originally granted by the Crown;

That the proposed Bill would not only injuriously affect the Members of the Church of England, but also others, and would be calculated to shake the public confidence in the equity of the proceedings of your Honorable House;—

Your Petitioner humbly prays, that he may be heard by Counsel against the said Bill, and,—

That your Honorable House will be pleased to refuse your assent to the proposed Bill. And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

(ROMAN CATHOLIC ARCHBISHOP AND CLERGY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 19 February, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, the Archbishop, the Vicars-General, Deans, and other Clergy of the Roman Catholic Church, now assembled in Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners, with great surprise and dismay, have seen that a Bill has been introduced into your Honorable House, to declare that the Lands hitherto known by the name of the Church and School Lands are to be deemed as Waste Lands of the Crown.

That your Petitioners, with their co-religionists throughout the entire Colony, have been informed by their predecessors, and believe, that the said Lands were to be held by the Crown, and to be applied and disposed of in such manner as should appear to be most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and of the education of the youth of this Colony.

That your Petitioners earnestly entreat your Honorable House to grant such delay as may suffice to procure an adequate expression of the opinion of the Catholic body, and of the other religious bodies throughout the country, whose dearest interests are, with theirs, equally involved.

That, inasmuch therefore as your Honorable House would desire to come to a just and legal decision, upon a question of such vital importance to the whole community,—

Your Petitioners humbly pray that the said measure may not be passed into Law; and that your Petitioners, by Counsel learned in the Law, may be heard at the Bar of your Honorable House in support of their vested interests, and in opposition to the said Bill.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL LANDS BILL.

(MEMBERS OF DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL BOARD IN NEW SOUTH WALES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 20 February, 1861.

The Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the undersigned, being the Members of the Denominational School Board in New South Wales,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

1st.—That your Petitioners have observed that a Bill has been introduced into your Honorable Assembly, the object of which is to declare the lands which were granted to the Church and School Corporation as Waste Lands of the Colony.

2nd.—That your Petitioners would respectfully remark, that to pass such Bill would be at variance with the thirty-sixth clause of the Charter of the said Corporation, which provides that, upon the dissolution of the said Corporation, all the Lands which may be granted to the same shall revert to the Crown, to be held and disposed of towards the promotion of religion and education in the Colony.

3rd.—That since the dissolution of the Church and School Corporation, a portion of the annual revenue derivable from the said Church and School Estates has been, by Her Majesty's command, appropriated for the benefit of the Denominational Schools in the said Colony.

4th.—That the Denominational School Board (of which your Petitioners are at present the Members) has, since 1848, disbursed the funds thus placed in its charge in aid of the erection and repairs of School Buildings, under regulations which provide for the sums granted being largely supplemented by the recipients of the same.

5th.—That besides the amount thus receivable from the Church and School Revenue, your Petitioners have no other resource whatever at their disposal towards this most necessary object of assisting in repairing and building School-houses, and that the passing of the said Bill will deprive the Board of this means.

6th.—That, under the foregoing circumstances, your Petitioners humbly pray your Honorable House not to pass a measure fraught with such serious consequences to the Denominational Schools in New South Wales.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c., &c.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL CORPORATION.

(CORRESPONDENCE (1831—1849) RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 19 February, 1861.

No. 1.

(No. 81.)

EXTRACT of a Despatch from Lieut. General Darling to Viscount Goderich; dated Government House, 28th September, 1831.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's Despatch, dated the 14th of February last, transmitting His Majesty's Instructions for the sale of the Crown Lands.

I now do myself the honor to transmit for your Lordship's information, the enclosed Extract of the Minutes of Proceedings of the Council on that part of His Majesty's Instructions and your Lordship's Despatch of the 14th of February last, No. 21, which relate to the dissolution of the Clergy and School Corporation. The Attorney General having expressed some doubt as to the sufficiency of the instrument received to effect the object, the question was referred to the three Judges; and I beg to refer your Lordship to their Report, which will be found in the Appendix to the Minute of Council.

In consequence of the opinion of the Judges it was deemed expedient to delay acting on that part of the Instructions which relates to the dissolution of the Corporation until His Majesty's intention on this subject should be better understood.

Though, under this circumstance, I have abstained from disturbing the arrangements which had been made in the case of the lands already transferred to the Corporation, I have directed the Surveyor General to throw open, to persons desirous of purchasing, the lands which had been reserved for the Church and School Corporation.

Proceedings of the Executive Council relative to the Dissolution of the Clergy and School Corporation, 1st to 23rd August, 1831.

Extract from Minute No. 41, of the Proceedings of the Executive Council, on the 1st August, 1831.

Present: His Excellency the Governor, The Venerable the Archdeacon, The Honorable the Colonial Secretary, The Honorable Colonel Lindesay.

His Excellency the Governor referred the Council to that part of the King's Instructions in which His Majesty revokes and finally annuls the additional Instructions of 17th July, 1825, and also the additional Instructions of 19th June, 1830, and all Acts, Deeds, Matters and Things done under and in pursuance of the said additional Instructions, or either of them, and commands His Excellency to affix the Public Seal of the Colony to Letters Patent to be passed in His Majesty's name for revoking the Letters Patent establishing the Corporation of the Trustees of the Clergy and School Lands, and for further revoking the appointment of Commissioners for managing the said Corporation; and His Excellency laid before the Council the Draft of the Letters Patent prepared by the Attorney General in pursuance of those instructions.

The Venerable the Archdeacon submitted certain observations relative to the form which he considered necessary to be observed for dissolving the Corporation.

The Council having maturely considered the subject, recommended that the opinion of their Honors the Judges of the Supreme Court should be taken on the following points, viz. —

Whether the form for putting an end to, and dissolving the Corporation of Trustees of Clergy and School Lands in New South Wales, must indispensably be that which is pointed out in the Letters Patent establishing the same? And, if not, whether additional Instructions from His Majesty, revoking and annulling the Instructions of His late Majesty, under which the said Letters Patent were issued, would be sufficient for that purpose, and for resuming the lands granted to the Corporation in as full and ample a manner as if such Letters Patent had never been issued?

Extract

Extract from Minute No. 46, dated 23rd August, 1831.

Present, as before.

In reference to the proceedings on the 1st instant, His Excellency the Governor laid before the Council, a letter from their Honors the Judges of the Supreme Court, conveying their opinion on the questions recommended to be addressed to them, relative to the form to be observed for putting an end to and dissolving the "Corporation of Trustees of Clergy and School Lands." The Judges having stated that, as there is a distinct mode pointed out by the Charter for dissolving the Corporation, in legal strictness the power of dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation can be duly exercised only by force of an "Order to be issued by His Majesty, with the advice of the Privy Council," and as the additional Instructions under the Sign Manual are not founded upon such an Order, the Council consider that under this opinion of the Judges, the Instructions of His Majesty cannot be carried into effect.

(True Extracts.)

E. DEAS THOMSON, Clk. Col.

[Enclosure to Minute No 41, 1831, of the Proceedings of the Executive Council.]

Observations of the Venerable the Archdeacon.

Upon comparing the terms of the Charter of the Corporation with the additional Instructions submitted by His Excellency to the Council, a question arises whether the course proposed to be adopted in dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation be not at variance with the form appointed by His late Majesty's Instructions, and with the reservations contained in the Charter itself.

By Section 36 of that instrument, His Majesty is pleased to will and ordain, that "it shall and may be lawful for Him, His Heirs and Successors, by an order issued for that purpose, with the advice of His or Their Privy Council, to dissolve and put an end to the said Corporation."

The whole tenor of the following (or 37th) Section seems to shew, that the "Order" here declared to be requisite for dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation, is an instrument distinct from Instructions under the Royal Sign Manual for the issue of Letters Patent. The effect of these appears designedly to have been limited to revoking, altering, or varying any of the provisions, declarations, conditions or regulations contained in the Letters Patent by which the Corporation was established, and in their place and stead instituting other rules, orders, and provisions for the better conduct of the affairs of the said Corporation, or for better regulating the constitution thereof, or otherwise in respect of the matters aforesaid, or any of them.

The terms here employed evidently recognize the body corporate as still subsisting, and it is to be inferred, as still intended to exist, notwithstanding the issue of such Letters Patent, inasmuch as their purpose and effect is stated to be to provide for "better conducting its affairs," and "for better regulating its Constitution."

I submit, therefore, that the 37th Section cannot be made the groundwork of an instrument for dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation. To effect this purpose reference must be had to the 36th Section, which provides a form of proceeding for that purpose, and directs the disposal which shall thereupon ensue of the lands now vested in the Corporation.

Such lands, it is declared, shall, upon the termination of the present Trust, "revert to and become absolutely vested in His Majesty, subject to all mortgages and contracts for the sale thereof lawfully made by the said Corporation, to be held, applied, and disposed of, in such manner as to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, shall appear most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and the education of youth in the Colony."

I submit, therefore, in the second place, that such a reservation having been made by His late Majesty, the grantor of these lands, as to the manner in which they shall be held and disposed of in the event of resumption, this provision should be expressly included and set forth in the Instrument dissolving the Corporation. I conceive it to be not reconcilable with that reservation to say—as proposed in the draft of Letters Patent now before the Council—that the lands granted to the Corporation shall become vested in His Majesty in as full and ample a manner as if the said recited Letters Patent (establishing the Trust) had never been issued, anything therein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding; and it must be a subject of very great deliberation whether such lands can ever be applied otherwise than to the promotion of religion and the education of youth in the Colony.

Copy of a letter from their Honors the Judges of the Supreme Court to His Excellency the Governor.
Sydney, 8 August, 1831.

Sir,

We have to acknowledge the honor of receiving your letter of the 2nd instant, together with an extract of additional Instructions received from His Majesty by your Excellency, under date 30th January, 1830, with reference to the Corporation of Trustees of Clergy and School Lands in this Colony, requesting our opinion whether the form for putting an end to and dissolving the Corporation must indispensably be that which is pointed out in the Letters Patent of the 9th of March, 1826, establishing the same; and if not, whether the accompanying additional Instructions, revoking and annulling the Instructions of His late Majesty, under which the said Letters Patent were issued, are sufficient for that purpose, and for resuming the Lands granted to the Corporation in as full and ample a manner as if such Letters Patent had never been issued.

Upon the first point we are of opinion that, although His Majesty may, in pursuance of the power reserved to the Crown, revoke the whole of the provisions of the Charter, by Instructions under the Sign Manual, and thus reduce the Corporation to a nonentity in effect, yet, as this power is coupled with that of establishing other provisions in their stead, and as there is a distinct mode pointed out by the Charter of dissolving the Corporation, in legal strictness the power of dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation can be duly exercised only by force of an "Order to be issued by His Majesty for that purpose with the Advice of the Privy Council;" and as we do not collect from your Excellency's letter to us, that the last clause in the extract transmitted for our perusal from additional Instructions to your Excellency under the Sign Manual, dated 30th January 1831, is founded upon an Order issued by His Majesty "with the Advice of the Privy Council," it would seem that the Instructions for dissolving and putting an end to the Corporation are not conformable to the manner in which the power reserved to the Crown is required to be exercised by the express terms in the original Letters Patent establishing the Corporation.

Upon

Upon the second point referred to us we are of opinion, that upon the dissolution of the Corporation the lands granted to them for the purposes of the Trust created by the Charter will not revert to the Crown in as full and ample a manner as if the Letters Patent establishing such Corporation had not been issued; but that by the terms of the thirty-sixth section of the Charter all such lands will continue liable to the trusts therein particularly mentioned; and if it be intended to dispose of such Lands in any other manner, we presume that it will be necessary to resort to Parliament, or to an Act of the Local Legislature. We would take occasion to observe, that by a Local Ordinance of your Excellency in Council, passed in 1826 (No. 4, Sec. 2.), the Lands therein mentioned are vested in the Trustees of the Clergy and School Lands and their Successors for ever; and it will require another Act to enable the Crown to resume such lands, or to alter the Trusts for which they were so vested.

We have, &c.,

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR SIR R. BOURKE, K.C.B.

(No. 82.)

Downing-street,
30 November, 1835.

No. 16,
 Lord Glenelg
 to
 Sir R. Bourke,
 30th Nov. 1835.

SIR,

In my Despatch of this date (No. 81), on the subject of religious instruction and education in New South Wales, I have abstained from any specific allusion to the management or to the application of the rents and proceeds of the lands formerly held by the Church and School Corporation, which was dissolved by the Order in Council of February, 1833, thinking it preferable to advert to this topic in a separate Despatch. By that Order in Council those lands became vested in the Crown, to be disposed of by His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, in such manner as shall appear most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education of youth in the Colony. In your Despatch of the 1st October, 1833 (No. 77), you have transmitted a memorandum from the Archdeacon of New South Wales regarding the management of these lands, with a minute written by yourself on each specific proposal of the Archdeacon. From that paper I infer that a difference of opinion existed between yourself and the Archdeacon as to the construction of the Order in Council as it respects the appropriation of the lands in question. It appears that the Archdeacon contended that the lands were applicable to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education exclusively in connection with the Church of England in the Colony, while, on the other hand, you insisted on the absence of any such limitation, and on a more liberal and comprehensive construction. After a careful consideration of the terms of the Order in Council, I have not been able to discover anything to warrant the view taken of their meaning by the Archdeacon; and I am clearly of opinion, that it is open to the Government to consider in what way the produce of these lands may be rendered most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education of youth in the Colony, without reference to any particular Church. In my Despatch of this date (No. 81), I have proceeded on this principle; and I have considered the proceeds of these lands as part of those general funds which will be applicable to the plan of religious instruction and education sanctioned in that Despatch. At the same time I am willing to accede to your suggestion, that the proceeds of these lands should, in the first instance, be applied towards the maintenance of the two Orphan Schools, if, on further reflection, you deem such an appropriation to be expedient.

The question of management is, to a certain degree, connected with that of appropriation. As the latter is not to be exclusive, so neither should the former be placed exclusively under the control of persons of any one religious persuasion; nor could I sanction any scheme which placed the management of those lands in the hands of a body resembling the former Corporation. I am far from intending to cast the slightest reflection on the Members of that Corporation; I have no doubt that individually they discharged the trust reposed in them with zeal and fidelity; but experience has amply proved that a body so constituted is not well adapted for the office which devolved upon it. I am disposed to prefer the appointment, according to your suggestions, of a responsible agent, acting under the authority of the Executive Government, and giving adequate security for the due performance of the duty intrusted to him.

In your Despatch of the 11th March, 1834 (No. 25), you reported, that the arrangement for the management of these lands recommended in your Despatch of the 1st October, 1833, had been provisionally carried into effect, and that you had no reason to suppose that the Government would find any difficulty in the future superintendence of them, in the manner and on the principle which you had suggested. As the result of your experience of this new system, since that period, will have enabled you to form a correct judgment of its efficiency, I do not feel it necessary to give any further directions upon this point, until I shall have heard again from you on this subject. I feel it, however, necessary to recall your attention to what appears to have been the intention of my predecessors in directing the dissolution of the Church and School Corporation.

When Sir George Murray, in his Despatch of the 25th of May, 1829, to Lieutenant-General Darling, first announced that the Corporation was to be dissolved, he informed the Governor, that as soon as that measure should have been carried into effect, it would be desirable that he should proceed to dispose by sale of such portion of the lands set apart for the use of the Clergy and Schools of the Colony as it should be prudent to part with at once, and which he might conceive would meet with the readiest purchasers, letting on lease such portions of the remainder as could be advantageously disposed of in that manner. But looking forward to the enhanced value which such lands would in a few years attain, as well as to the future necessities of the Colony in regard to its establishments for Religion and Education, General Darling was directed not to sell more than one-fourth of these lands without further instructions. Lord Ripon, in a subsequent Despatch of the 14th February, 1831, to General Darling, evidently contemplated the sale of the whole of these lands; but I do not find that any express instructions has ever been given for the sale of more than one-fourth of the whole. It is, probably, for this reason, that in the scheme of management which you have submitted for the consideration of His Majesty's Government, you do not appear to contemplate a sale of the lands, but propose a system of leasing, selling only the flocks and herds formerly maintained upon them. I see no sufficient ground for adopting a different rule as to these lands from that which now applies to the disposal of all other lands in the Colony. The sale of the whole of these lands, subject of course to any existing leases, in the same manner and on the same terms as the sale of other lands is conducted, appears to me preferable to the creation of any new leases. Unless, therefore, any reason occurs to you which, in your judgment, would render such a course inexpedient (and which you will communicate to me), you will sell the reserved lands, as opportunities offer for an advantageous disposal of them in this mode. The proceeds of such sales will be paid over to the Colonial Treasurer in the same manner, and carried to a similar account as the rents of the lands under lease; and if any larger sum should be realized than may be required from time to time for the immediate purpose for which the proceeds are applicable, the surplus should be invested in order to meet the demand of future years. By this arrangement the revenue of the Colony will probably derive the greatest relief, and the expenses of management and superintendence will be eventually saved.

I am, &c.,
GLENELG.

No. 3.

GOVERNOR SIR RICHARD BOURKE to SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

*Government House,
Sydney, 11 April, 1837.*

(No. 20.)

MY LORD,

I was much gratified on finding, by the receipt of your Lordship's Despatch of the 30th November, 1835 (No. 82), which reached me in May last, that your Lordship concurred with me in opinion that, by the terms of the Order in Council, the proceeds of the estates, formerly granted to the Church and School Corporation, are, since the dissolution of that body, applicable to the maintenance and promotion of religion and to the education of youth in the Colony, without reference to any particular church. Your Lordship is also pleased to approve of the appointment of a responsible Agent to manage these estates, under the direction of the Executive Government, and to desire that a portion be sold annually for the purposes above mentioned, unless I should see cause, for reasons which are to be communicated, for considering such sales inexpedient.

In recommending to your Lordship, in my Despatch of the 1st October, 1833 (No. 77), that these estates should be leased in preference to being sold, I had not overlooked the instructions of Secretaries Sir George Murray and Lord Ripon, to which your Lordship refers; but as the financial circumstances of the Colony have very much improved since these Ministers wrote on the subject, and I did not find in their Despatches any objection to the principle of leasing land by the annual income, of which the expenses of general education might be in part or wholly defrayed, I thought it would be prudent in the Government to avail itself of the means which the possession of these estates afforded to create a permanent fund for so important an object. If the principle be not objected to, the present is a favorable opportunity for introducing the measure. The revenue of the Colony, including that derived from Crown lands, has been for the last five years, and will probably for some years to come, be more than sufficient to meet the expenditure, including the Church and School establishments; any additional sale of public property is not, therefore, at present required. And it might happen that by bringing these estates into the market to be sold for a specific object, the price of land generally would be reduced, and the public capital wasted; on the other hand, by reserving these estates, if only for the present, and by leasing them from time to time, as may seem most profitable, they may hereafter be sold, if required, at a greatly increased price. If, however, the period at which it may become necessary to charge them with the support of the Church and School establishments be distant, the rents which they will then produce may be adequate to the supply of one, if not of both, of these sources of expenditure; and it seems to me to be the duty of the Government of a new State to embrace the earliest opportunity for making a permanent provision for the general education of the people. Upon this view of the case, I would not recommend the sale.

If your Lordship should, however, consider the reservation of land for specific purposes to be inconvenient, and the instruction for the sale of a portion of the estates under consideration be renewed, it is probable they will be wholly disposed of in six or seven years. The amount which they will produce within that time may reach to £120,000, and the expense of churches and schools in the Colony may be estimated, for the same period, at about £30,000 a year.

Hitherto

Hitherto these estates have produced an annual income, which has been paid into the Colonial Treasury. For the last three years it has reached (including the proceeds of stock sold) to about £4,000 a year, and the amount of rent will, under proper management, considerably increase.

I may here observe that the offering Crown lands to be rented for terms of years will be to a certain class in this community, and to persons coming out to settle with small capitals, a very great advantage. Their money, insufficient perhaps for the purchase of both land and stock, will be laid out in the purchase of the latter only, and upon a rented farm they may, at the expiration of a few years, have acquired the means of purchasing land.

I annex a memorandum from the Agent for these estates, in which he recommends their being leased in preference to being sold. He states the probable rent-roll at nine or ten thousand pounds a year. He has, however, based his calculation upon the rate at which Crown lands have been sold during the years 1834 and 1835. This rate of purchase will doubtless increase, and on the expiration of a few years the rents of 450,000 acres (a large proportion of which is good land) must amount to a much more considerable sum than the Agent calculates. I add some other documents, shewing the receipt and expenditure of the estates from the time at which they came under the management of this Government to the 31st December last, and of what they now consist.

Having, in pursuance of the intention announced in my former Despatches, taken the most favorable opportunities for disposing, by public sale, of the flocks and herds which the Corporation had placed on the estates, I have the honor to add a statement of the amount obtained by the sale in the last month, which has nearly cleared the lands; they will thus be shortly ready, either for sale or lease, as your Lordship shall please to determine. An early intimation of your Lordship's wishes is desirable, as if the lands are to be sold, the sooner they are disposed of the better, in order that the expense of management may cease.

I have, &c.,

No. 4.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR SIR GEORGE GIPPS.

(No. 32.)

Downing-street,
24 November, 1837.

SIR,

I have had under my consideration Sir Richard Bourke's Despatch, No. 20, of the 11th April last, with its enclosures, on the subject of the disposal of the estates originally granted to the Church and School Corporation in New South Wales.

In requesting your early attention to this subject, I have some hesitation in giving you positive instructions as to the course which it may be expedient to pursue; at the same time I feel a very strong disinclination to sanction the retention of these lands in the hands of the Government as a permanent arrangement.

Experience has, I think, demonstrated the error of anticipating any considerable revenue from the reservation of Colonial lands, with a view to the application of the rents to some specific object.

The expense of management has in many instances exceeded, and in others nearly equalled the receipts derived from them; and I see no sufficient reason to justify the expectation of a materially different result in the present instance.

I am therefore strongly disposed to think, that the proper course will be gradually to sell these lands precisely in the same manner as other lands in New South Wales at the disposal of the Crown, taking of course adequate precautions in effecting this object against the effect apprehended by Sir Richard Bourke, of a depreciation in the value of the lands offered for sale by the Government.

There can be no objection to leasing a portion of these lands, until they are capable of being sold with advantage; but such leases should be on terms which will not interfere with the disposal of the lands whenever it may become advisable to offer them for sale.

Unless you should entertain any strong objection to the course which I have recommended, you will consider yourself fully authorized to act on it at once.

I have, &c.,

GLENELG.

No. 5.

GOVERNOR SIR GEORGE GIPPS to SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(No. 9.—Ecclesiastical.)

Government House,
Sydney, 9 January, 1839.

MY LORD,

Herewith I have the honor to transmit to your Lordship a copy of a letter which was addressed to me on the 11th December last by the Lord Bishop of Australia, in consequence of my having (in answer to his inquiries) informed his Lordship that I had been fully authorized by your Lordship to sell a portion of the lands granted to the late Church and School Corporation. I beg to state that the letter referred to by the Bishop as having been written by the Judges on the 8th August, 1831, is not on record in the office of the Colonial Secretary. As I can see nothing in the Lord Bishop's letter to make me doubt the legality of the Orders which have been so repeatedly given by different Secretaries of State for the sale of these lands, and particularly by your Lordship in the Despatch which was addressed to me on the 24th November, 1837, No. 32, it is my intention to proceed with the sale of such portions of these lands as are already advertised.

Considering that the Legislative Council has voted £44,000 to defray the expense of the establishments for the support of which the lands were originally given, the claim that the lands shall be left unsold, and, consequently, unimproved, to the detriment of the Colony (since no man will here expend capital on land of which he has not the fee simple), does, I must say, appear to me one of which the people of this Colony would have just reason to complain.

I have, &c.,
GEO. GIPPS.

[Enclosure in No. 5.]

Sydney, 11 December, 1838.

Sir,

Your Excellency having done me the honor to state, in answer to my inquiries, that positive instructions had been received from the Secretary of State for the sale by public auction of the lands resumed from the late Church and School Corporation, thus placing them, except as to the application of the proceeds, upon the same footing with the Crown lands in general, I beg permission to direct the attention of your Excellency to a letter addressed by their Honors the Judges of the Supreme Court to the Colonial Secretary, on the 8th August, 1831, wherein it is stated that notwithstanding any dissolution of the Corporation the lands would continue still liable to the trusts particularly mentioned in the 36th section of the Charter of Incorporation. The opinion delivered thus unanimously by these learned personages, confirms that which I know is entertained by other eminent members of the legal profession, that there is in the Crown no power to alienate these lands without an Act of Parliament reversing and quashing all that the Charter of the Corporation established; for that, according to the terms of the 36th section, in virtue of which the lands were resumed, the same are now vested in Her Majesty, to be held, applied, and disposed of. The latter words, I should submit, do not authorize a disposal by sale, but must be governed and restricted by the force of the foregoing words "to be held." Any attempt to make a new title to lands which have once passed from the Crown under its own authority, and have reverted to it liable to the condition expressed by these words, would shake the confidence of every holder of land from the Crown throughout the Colony.

For these and other weighty reasons I feel myself called, on behalf of the Church of England, which has an equitable interest in these lands, to record my objection to the sale of them, or any portion of them, without the authority of Parliament exonerating the Crown from the trusts and conditions upon which the lands are required to be held.

The questions hereby raised being so important, it appears to me it would be most desirable that they should be brought under the notice of both Houses of Parliament, where alone they can be discussed and disposed of with that degree of publicity and solemnity which is due to so great religious and constitutional a controversy. In preparation, therefore, for its being so brought forward, I beg to inform Your Excellency that I have forwarded to England petitions to the Lords and Commons, praying that no Act may be passed authorizing the sale of the Church and School Estates, or without containing such provisions as will be necessary for the establishment and support of the Protestant Reformed Religion in this Colony as it is by law established in England and Ireland.

His Excellency
The Governor of New South Wales.

I have, &c.,
W. O. AUSTRALIA.

No. 6.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR SIR GEORGE GIPPS.

(No. 27.)

Downing-street,
29 October, 1839.

SIR,

I have received your Despatch, No. 9, of the 9th of January last, with a copy of a representation addressed to you by the Bishop of Australia, in consequence of the decision of Her Majesty's Government to sell a portion of the lands granted to the late Church and School Corporation.

In consequence of that representation, I thought right to refer the whole case to the Law Officers of the Crown for their opinion, whether it is competent to the Government, as assumed by Lord Glenelg in his Despatch of the 30th November, 1835, to consider in what way the produce of the lands formerly held by the Corporation may be rendered most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education of youth in the Colony, without reference to any particular Church; and whether the measures adopted give sufficient authority to enable the Government to appropriate the property in question.

The Attorney and Solicitor General have reported their opinion, that it is competent to the Government to consider in what way the produce of the lands in question may be rendered most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education of youth in the Colony, without reference to any particular Church, and that the measures adopted do give sufficient authority to enable the Government so to appropriate the property in question.

They further state, that they entirely concur with the Colonial Judges in their opinion, that, by the dissolution of the Corporation, the lands revert to the Crown, not "in as full and ample manner as if the Charter had never existed," but for the purposes of the Trust declared by the Charter, in the event of the dissolution of the Corporation, namely, "to be held, applied, and disposed of in such manner as to Us, Our Heirs and Successors shall appear most conducive to the maintenance and promotion of religion, and the education of youth in the said Colony."

And that the Corporation, while it existed and held the lands, had the power, under the 15th section of the Charter, of selling one-third of the lands; and if it now appears to the the Crown to be most conducive to the objects of the present Trust, namely, the promotion of religion and education generally, that the whole, instead of a part only, should be sold, they think there is nothing whatever to prevent such an exercise of discretion.

As you state there is no record in the Office of the Colonial Secretary of the opinion of the Judges alluded to, I beg to refer you to page 42 of the enclosed Parliamentary Papers, where a copy of that Report is to be found.

With the decided opinion expressed by the Law Officers, I have no hesitation in directing you to proceed under the former instructions which you received on this subject.

I have, &c.,

J. RUSSELL.

No. 7.

EXTRACT of a Despatch from Sir George Gipps to Lord Stanley, dated 7th August, 1845.

The latter part of the Minute of the Executive Council relates to the future division of the funds which may be expected to arise out of the Church and School Estates. Though I have concurred with the Council in recommending that five-sevenths of the produce of these Estates shall be divided on the same principle as is recommended in respect to Schedule C., and the remaining two-sevenths be given in aid of Schools on the same principle, I have some doubts whether a larger proportion, or indeed whether the whole proceeds, ought not to go in aid of public education; it may also be a question whether the power should not be reserved to Her Majesty of making endowments out of the proceeds of these estates in favor of bishoprics, schools, colleges, or any analogous institutions.

(Extract from Minute of Council, dated 9th June, 1845. No. 45-12.)

Having now completed their proposal respecting the distribution of the £30,000, the Council beg to add some remarks and suggestions respecting the disposal of the Revenue derived from the Church and School Estates, which, under an Order of the King in Council, dated 4th February, 1833, is to be applied to the maintenance and promotion of religion and education. The average net proceeds of these Estates in the three years 1842, 1843, and 1844, amounted to £2,454 1s. 11d.; and as there is a considerable quantity of land which as yet remains unproductive, it may be anticipated that the Revenue under consideration will eventually afford an important addition to the sum provided by Parliament for the purposes of public worship.

In the original charter of the Church and School Corporation it was provided, that the balance remaining after payment of the expenses of collection and management of the Trust should be divided into two parts, of which two separate accounts were to be kept, to be called respectively "the Improvement and Building Account," and "the Clergy and School Account;" and it was declared that, until provision should be effectually made for the support of schools and the education of youth in the Colony, the balance of the funds standing at the credit of "the Clergy and School Account" should be applied as to two equal seventh parts for the support of schools and schoolmasters, and as to the remaining five equal seventh parts to the maintenance of the clergy. It was further declared by the charter, that on the dissolution of the Corporation "the lands vested in the same were to revert absolutely to the Crown, to be held, applied, and disposed of in such manner as to His late Majesty or his successors "should appear most conducive to the promotion of religion and the education of youth in the Colony." As the Corporation was dissolved on the 4th February, 1833, by an Order of the King in Council, it remains for Her Majesty to appoint the manner in which the Revenue derived from the lands which have reverted to the Crown shall be applied to the objects specified.

It appears to this Council that the proportions above-mentioned, according to which the balance of "the Clergy and School Account" was to be distributed under the charter, might be adopted in the future application of the Church and School Revenue, and that two-seventh parts thereof might accordingly be appropriated to the support of schools, and the remaining five-seventh parts to the maintenance of public worship; and the Council beg to propose that the amount of these five-seventh parts, or any other proportion which Her Majesty may be pleased to apply to the promotion of religion, should be divided among the four communions receiving aid under the Church Act, according to their numerical proportions at the time of the Census of 1841, in the same manner as it has been above proposed to divide the £30,000 provided by the Act of Parliament.

No. 8.

EXTRACT of a Despatch from Sir Charles Fitz Roy to Earl Grey, dated 31st March, 1848.

I have now to advert to the second topic referred to in the enclosed Minute, namely, the provision to be made for the building of residences for the three Bishops of Sydney, Newcastle, and Melbourne.

It is quite certain that the portion of the £30,000 assigned to the Church of England, charged as it is with the additional £500 above referred to, will not afford any surplus out of which to derive funds for the erection of the Bishops' residences in the manner proposed in Mr. Gladstone's Despatch of the 30th March, 1846. Under these circumstances I beg to recommend, in accordance with the advice of my Executive Council, that the sum of £6,000 should be set apart for the purpose out of the revenue derived from the Church and School Estates.

The provision made by Parliament for public worship in the Colony being already inadequate to its wants, the question respecting the appropriation of the income arising from the Church and School Estates has become one of pressing importance.

I therefore gladly avail myself of this opportunity to bring under your Lordship's notice the concluding part of the Minute of the Executive Council of this Colony, of the 9th June, 1845, which was forwarded in my predecessor's Despatch of the 7th August, 1845. The Council then set forth the general state of the revenue arising from the Church

Church and School Estates, and the purposes to which it was dedicated, and recommended a plan for its distribution in accordance with the principle on which they at the same time advised that the £30,000 provided by Stat. 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 76, should be divided. On that recommendation, however, no decision has as yet been communicated to this Government.

The net sum at the credit of the Church and School Lands Revenue, on the 2nd February last, was £15,342 6s. 8d., of which nearly £9,000 would fall to the share of the Church of England under the plan of distribution recommended in the Minute above referred to, and more than £6,000 would be available for Church purposes. There is, therefore, a sufficient sum now in hand for the payment of the sums proposed to be granted for the erection of the Bishops' residences, should your Lordship sanction the arrangement.

No. 9.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES to GOVERNOR SIR C. A. FITZ ROY.

Downing-street,
30 September, 1848.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch, No. 79, of the 31st March last, submitting for my sanction certain arrangements, by which you propose, with the advice of your Executive Council, that the payment of that portion of the salaries of the newly approved Bishops of Newcastle and Melbourne which is chargeable on the public revenue of the Colony, and amounting to £500 per annum, should be paid out of the present building fund of the Church of England; and as this is a question upon which I cannot doubt that the local authorities are the most competent to form a correct judgment, I do not hesitate to acquiesce in the measure.

I have also to signify the approval of Her Majesty's Government of your appropriating the sum of £30,000, provided for public worship in New South Wales under the Statute, 5 and 6 Vic., Cap. 76, in the proportions referred to in the Minute of the Executive Council which accompanied your predecessor's Despatch of the 7th August, 1845; and I approve of the sum of £6,000, out of the share allotted to the Church of England, being set apart for the erection of suitable residences for the Bishops of Newcastle, Melbourne, and Sydney, in the manner proposed by you, on the understanding that not more than £2,000 shall be applied in any one of those cases.

No. 10.

GOVERNOR SIR C. A. FITZ ROY to SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(No. 31.—Ecclesiastical.)

Government House,
Sydney, 21 February, 1849.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's Despatch, No. 172, of the 30th September, 1848, sanctioning the arrangement under which in my Despatch of the 31st March, 1848, I proposed, with the advice of my Executive Council, that the portion of the salaries of the newly appointed Bishops of Newcastle and Melbourne, chargeable on the public revenue of this Colony, should be paid from that division of the sum allotted to the Church of England out of the £30,000 provided for public worship in New South Wales by the Act 5 and 6 Vict., cap. 76, which has been designated the building fund.

2. Your Lordship further conveys to me "the approval of Her Majesty's Government of my appropriating the aforesaid sum of £30,000 in the proportions referred to in the Minute of the Executive Council which accompanied Sir George Gipps' Despatch of the 7th August, 1845;" and your Lordship also approves "of the sum of £6,000 out of the share allotted to the Church of England being set apart for the erection of suitable residences for the Bishops of Newcastle, Melbourne, and Sydney, in the manner proposed, on the understanding that not more than £2,000 shall be applied in any one of these cases."

3. As it is evident that I have failed to bring clearly before your Lordship the object of the detailed explanation with respect to the state of the fund allotted for the support of the Church of England, which it appeared to me to be desirable that I should afford before submitting a proposal that the sum of £6,000 required for the Bishops' residences should be taken from another fund, I trust I may stand excused in reminding your Lordship that the 37th clause of the Royal Instructions delivered to me on my appointment to this Government in 1846 had already put me in possession of Her Majesty's authority for the distribution of the £30,000 provided for public worship in this Colony under the Act 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 76. The question submitted, therefore, did not relate to any portion of that sum, but to the fund derived from the Revenue of the Church and School Estates, which, as I had the honor to state in my Despatch of 31st March, 1848, is also referred to in the concluding part of the Minute of the Executive Council forwarded in my predecessor's Despatch of the 7th August, 1845, wherein it is recommended that this revenue should be distributed on the same principle and in the same proportions as the £30,000 provided under the Statute.

4. In my Despatch of the 31st March, 1848, I reported that, as no decision with respect to the distribution of the revenue arising from the Church and School Estates had been communicated to this Government, I deemed it right to bring this question again under your Lordship's consideration. I stated that if the recommendation of Sir George Gipps and the Executive Council were sanctioned, the share to which the Church of England would be entitled would be nearly £9,000, the net sum at the credit of the Church and School Lands Revenue being at that time £15,342 6s. 8d. It now amounts to £19,053 14s., the share of the Church of England would be about £11,166, and it is from this sum that it is proposed that the £6,000 for erecting the residences for the three Bishops should be appropriated.

5. As, however, I trust I am right in assuming that your Lordship's Despatch of the 30th September last, intended to convey to me a general approval of the measures brought under your Lordship's notice in my Despatch of the 31st March, 1848, I shall, in order to save time and to prevent further inconvenience to the Right Reverend Prelates, take upon myself the responsibility of at once setting apart the sum of £6,000 from the Church and School Lands Revenue for the erection of residences for their Lordships, upon the understanding that not more than £2,000 shall be applied to the building of any one of these residences.

6. I would further beg to be informed whether your Lordship approves of the future distribution of the funds derived from the revenue of the Church and School Estates on the same principle as the £30,000 provided for public worship.

SIR,

I have received your Despatch, No. 31, of the 21st of February last.

2. You have very properly brought under my notice an error which had occurred in the Instructions conveyed by my Despatch, No. 172, of the 30th September, 1848. It was certainly my intention to express my approval of the arrangements which you had then brought under my consideration in your previous Despatch, No. 79, of the 31st March, 1848. Those arrangements were erroneously stated to have reference to the sum of thirty thousand pounds, reserved under Schedule C of the Constitutional Act, instead of the revenues arising out of the Church and School Estates.

And I approve of your distributing them in future in the manner proposed in the last paragraph of your Despatch.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(SAINT MARK'S, ALEXANDRIA.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Church of England, Parishioners of Saint Mark's, Alexandria, near Sydney, in the County of Cumberland, in this Colony,—

SHEWETH :—

That a Bill which has already received the sanction of the Legislative Council is now before your Honorable House, to authorize the holding of Synods of the said Church in this Colony, and to enable the members of such Church to regulate and manage the affairs thereof in this Colony.

That your Petitioners have learned with deep concern, that owing to ignorance and misconception on the part of some (many of whom are not members of the Church of England) as to the nature of the said Bill, and as to its effects should it pass your Honorable House, they are doing what they can to prejudice the public mind against the said Bill, and to prevent it from becoming law.

That your Petitioners, as among the number who will be affected by the said Bill should it become law, earnestly pray that it may receive the fullest consideration at your hands, and receive the assent of your Honorable House, and this, among other, upon the following grounds :—

First,—That such Bill has for its object the good of a Society whose end and design is the present and eternal welfare of its members, and indirectly through them, in a measure, the well-being of the whole community in which they live.

Secondly,—That at the same time the said Bill is not a Public Bill, directly concerning the whole body of Colonists, but a Private Bill, concerning only a portion of the community; and that when passed by Parliament, and assented to by Her Majesty, will affect only those persons who are members of the particular Church of England, and them only so long as they choose to continue in communion with the said Church, and will not affect in any manner the members of any other religious body in the community.

Thirdly,—That the members of the Church of England, in asking Parliament to pass such Bill, ask for their own Church no new privilege or authority, nor any privilege or authority which they are not willing should be conferred upon other religious Communions in the Colony. The Bill, in fact, only amends the present Act for the regulation of the Church of England in this Colony, and cannot make the said Church a dominant Church in this Colony any more than its present Church Act does, or any more than the present Acts of Council for regulating the Roman Catholic, or Presbyterian, or Wesleyan Communions, constitute those Communions established in the sense of dominant Communions in this Colony.

Fourthly,—That the Bill should now be considered as the Bill approved of and presented to Parliament by the united body of the Church of England in this Colony; all differences of opinion having been discussed and decided during the late Conferences of the members of the said Church, which were held in Sydney and in Newcastle. And if any members of the Church should oppose the passing of the Bill in Parliament because they differ in any point from the decisions arrived at in the late conferences, and embodied in the Bill, they will be acting as unreasonably as if they opposed and resisted the carrying out of any Act of Council because they were of the minority who opposed the passing of the Act when it was discussed in Parliament.

Fifthly,—That by reason of the legislation which has already taken place in relation to the said Church in this Colony, and other circumstances, it is impossible for the members thereof efficiently to regulate and manage the affairs thereof without the aid of a Legislative enactment.

Your Petitioners therefore pray your Honorable House to take the premises into your favourable consideration, and to give your assent to the passing of the said Bill into Law.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Church of England residing in the Town of Kelso and the adjoining districts,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners are desirous of having the Bill called "The Church of England Synods Bill" passed in your Honorable House, for the following reasons:—That while other denominations have power to meet and settle their own affairs, the Members of the United Church of England and Ireland are debarred, according to the Ecclesiastical law, from meeting in Synod to manage their own affairs in the Colonies. SHEWETH :—

1. That a Bill has been introduced into your Honorable House to enable Members of the Church of England to hold Synods in this Colony.

2. That in the months of November and December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, a Conference of the Bishop, Clergy, and Lay Representatives, elected by the various congregations in the Diocese of Sydney, was held in Sydney, for the purpose of considering a Bill similar in its provisions to that which has been introduced into your Honorable House, and such Bill was, after much discussion, adopted, with the view of obtaining Parliamentary sanction to the same.

3. That your Petitioners believe that the sanction of Parliament is necessary, to enable the Church of England in this Colony to regulate her affairs in the same way as is done by other religious bodies, and that the necessary aid will be afforded by the said Bill.

4. That the said Bill, as well in its general principles as in its provisions, meets with the approval of your Petitioners.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(PETITION FROM THE REV. THOMAS CAMPBELL EWING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 11 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Reverend Thomas Campbell Ewing, Incumbent of Saint Michael's, Wollongong,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner, having heard that the Church of England Synods Bill is under the consideration of your Honorable House, would respectfully submit certain facts, which, in the opinion of your Petitioner, would justify your Honorable House in passing the Bill aforesaid.

That the Church of England in New South Wales is, by the Act, 25 Hen. 8, prevented from holding Synods, unless with the Royal assent.

That this assent can be given only by an Act of the Colonial Parliament sanctioned by Her Majesty.

That the Church of England Synods Bill would confer upon Members of the Church of England in New South Wales the powers necessary to enable them to manage their own affairs.

That the said Bill provides only for the due administration of the affairs of the Church of England in this Colony, and in no way interferes with other Communions.

That the regulating of the concerns of religious bodies by Enactments of the Colonial Legislature is no new thing in the Legislation of this Colony.

Your Petitioner would call the special attention of your Honorable House to the 8 Gul. 4, No. 7, Sept. 9, 1837; for it grants to the Presbyterian body in New South Wales privileges which Members of the Church of England do not possess, and which the Church of England Synods Bill would secure to them.

For these and other reasons your Petitioner prays that your Honorable House will pass the Church of England Synods Bill.

And, as in duty bound, your Petitioner will ever pray.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, met in Parliament.

The Petition of the undersigned Inhabitants of the United Townships of Gunning and Collector, with their Suburbs,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That for years past we have seen the necessity of an amended government of English Church affairs.

That nevertheless its Bishops, Priests, and Deacons are bound by oaths of office restraining them from making by-laws for our own government, without the Royal Assent, which cannot be obtained without the authority of Parliament, our Sovereign possessing no despotic or absolute powers, but only constitutional authority over us.

We therefore humbly pray your Honorable House to facilitate the meeting of our clerical and lay governors in a corporate character by passing the English Church Synods Bill, that they may statutablely meet and regulate their own Church concerns.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.
(CITY OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 6 May, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Church of England in the City of Sydney,—

SHewETH :—

1. That a Bill has been introduced into your Honorable House, the object of which is to enable the Members of the Church of England, in this Colony, to hold Synods.

2. That in the months of November and December, in the year 1858, a Conference of the Bishop, Clergy, and Lay Representatives, elected by the various congregations in the Diocese of Sydney, was held in Sydney, for the purpose of considering a Bill substantially the same as that above-named, and that after undergoing the fullest discussion, it was adopted by the Conference and ordered to be laid before Parliament for its sanction.

3. That the same Bill was submitted to a similar Conference of the Members of the Church of England in the Diocese of Newcastle, and was likewise adopted, with a slight modification of that assembly.

4. That by reason of the peculiar position of the Church of England in this Colony, and of previous Legislation, it is expedient to seek the assistance of the Legislature, to enable the Members of the Church of England to meet in Synod.

5. That the Bill now before your Honorable House meets with the general approval of your Petitioners.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(SCOTS CHURCH, PITT-STREET, SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 March, 1861.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the Congregation of the Scots Church, in Pitt-street, Sydney, in public meeting assembled,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That Petitioners have heard, with alarm and regret, that an Act of the Legislative Council of New South Wales, which would, in the opinion of Petitioners, destroy the religious equality which at present exists in this Colony, invest one section of the community with superior and exclusive privileges, and give the sanction of law to doctrines and practices which we hold to be anti-Christian, and directly subversive of the Word of God, "the only rule of faith and practice," has been read in your Honorable House.

That the Preamble of the said Act declares—"It is expedient to provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of the United Church of England and Ireland in New South Wales, and to authorize the holding of Synods of the same Church in this Colony;" and Petitioners submit respectfully that if Parliament, who are the representatives of the whole community, provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of any section of the Church, and authorize that section to hold Provincial Synods, that section will necessarily be regarded as the established church in this Colony.

That the Act declares—"The Synod shall have power to establish a tribunal for the trial of offences by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop within the Diocese, as well as those involving breaches of discipline as questions of doctrine and the ritual of the Church;" but we hold that no such tribunal should be assented to by Parliament. It would be highly dangerous, and destructive to the rights of liberty and conscience, to give the sanction of civil law to the establishment of a tribunal for the trial of offences from whose decisions there would be no appeal to the civil courts of this Colony. Tribunals for the trial of all matters of doctrine and discipline should be permitted to exist only as voluntary associations, under the direction of the Holy Scriptures.

That the Act which establishes a tribunal for the trial of offences by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop makes no provision for the trial of any offences by the Bishop himself—it invests him with undefined and irresponsible powers, enables him to veto any and every rule or ordinance of the Synod relating to matters of spiritual concern, and declares the Bishop of Sydney and other Bishops attending the Synod to be a distinct House; and we maintain, with all respect, that the Archbishop of Canterbury possesses no such powers in England as this Act would confer on the Bishop of Sydney in New South Wales.

That the Act declares the Bishop of Sydney to be Metropolitan Bishop of Australia, and thus gives a national sanction to all the powers and privileges which he arrogantly claims; but the Word of God does not authorize the civil powers, as such, to appoint any Ministers in the Church of Christ; and the Queen of England cannot, either legally or constitutionally, invest any man with the powers and privileges of an English Bishop in Australia.

That the said Act would divide the followers of Christ into different orders, and enable any one nominated Bishop of Sydney by the Queen to act as Lord over God's heritage, in direct direct contravention of the law of Christ, who said, "The princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that be great exercise authority upon them: but it shall not be so among you, but whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister." And again, "Be not ye called Rabbi, for one is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

That Petitioners pray your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your serious consideration—withhold your assent from the said Act—reject every measure which may appear calculated to prevent the members of the Church of England in this Colony from regulating the affairs of their own church in accordance with their own wishes—and do all in your power to maintain and preserve perfect religious equality among all the inhabitants of this Colony.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

of the Scots Church, Pitt-street, by

G. HARRIS,
Chairman.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(MEMBERS OF THE UNITED CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND IRELAND.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Members holding the Faith of the United Church of England and Ireland, in this Colony,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners have heard, with great concern, that a Bill is before your Honorable House, entitled, "A Bill to enable the Members of the United Church of England and Ireland in New South Wales to regulate the affairs of the said Church and to authorize the holding of Synods of the same Church in this Colony."

That your Petitioners object to the said Bill on the following grounds:—

First. That in the opinion of your Petitioners, it is not necessary, neither is it expedient, to provide by law for the regulation of the Church of Members holding the Faith of the said Church of England and Ireland, inasmuch as the present difficulties of the Church to which such members belong arise from the superabundance and imperfection of secular legislation, and that all the legitimate and professed objects of this Bill can be accomplished by a voluntary compact, as in the Colonies of South Australia and New Zealand, supplemented by an amendment of the Church of England Temporalities Act, the eighth of William the Fourth, number five. Moreover, that it is not desirable to pass the proposed Bill in the face of the divided state of opinion and feeling on the subject among the members of our Church, as any attempt at compulsory legislation would cause much disunion and dissent.

Second. That it has been declared, by the highest Imperial and Colonial legal authorities, that Colonial Bishops are not properly Bishops of the United Church of England and Ireland, and that the United Church of England and Ireland has no existence in this Colony; therefore your Petitioners object to the granting to the Bishop by Colonial statute, a status and power not conferred upon him by the authorities in England, and also to the introduction among us of peculiar ecclesiastical legislation for one branch of the Church of Christ, which will be viewed with jealousy by other religionists, as conferring by law special powers and privileges upon one denomination in violation of the principle of religious equality now the law of the land.

Third. That the creation and imposition of any religious test as a legalized qualification for the office of representative to the Synod, as proposed in the said Bill, is highly objectionable, and is an express violation of our civil and religious rights.

Fourth. That the establishment of an Ecclesiastical Tribunal, competent to define its own mode of procedure and to administer oaths, the powers of which may be extended by future legislation, is a further encroachment upon the civil and religious liberties of the Colonists in general, and is viewed by your Petitioners with serious apprehensions.

Fifth. That the establishment of the veto in spiritual matters, or otherwise in the person of one individual—the Bishop—is opposed to the constitutional action of all representative bodies, which govern, necessarily, by simple majorities, and is therefore a proposition unworthy to be entertained by your Honorable House as representative of the general body of the people.

Sixth. That the legal institution of Provincial Synods, conferring on the Bishop the right of estate distinct from the Clergy and Laity of our Church, which, as Colonial Bishops, they do not constitutionally possess, establishes an ecclesiastical hierarchy, to the disparagement of other religious bodies, and is calculated to act injuriously upon our own Church, and to destroy the harmony which should exist among all religious denominations.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray, that the Bill in question may not be passed into law by your Honorable House.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.
(NEWTOWN.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the Members of the Congregational Church and other Inhabitants of Newtown.

Your Petitioners, enjoying as they do the blessings of religious equality and freedom in this Colony, pray your Honorable House may not endanger the same, by legalizing the Church of England Synods Bill now before your Honorable House, and which, in their apprehension, contains principles at variance with the freedom of Christian worship, and opposed to those principles of non-interference of the secular power with the Church so dear to their ancestors, and which, in their estimation, are essential to the purity of religion and to the rights of conscience, and in consonance with the teaching of the great Founder of their Faith, and the independence the Church enjoyed during the first four centuries of the Christian era. Your Petitioners disclaim any intention to interfere with the freedom of synodical action in the Church of England, enjoying, as they do, like freedom in their own denomination without the force of law; but they consider the present Bill establishes a Church constitution by law, and thus places the Church of England on a footing which they do not enjoy, and from their principles cannot apply for.

Your Petitioners cannot but regard legislation affecting the use of the holy ordinances of Christianity, which is not sanctioned by the Word of God, as desecration of the same, and implying a power of interference with spiritual obligations which they respectfully dissent from.

Your Petitioners view any legislation fixing the powers or status of Ministers of the Gospel, as reviving questions of supremacy which have in all ages of the Church been the fertile sources of controversy and disunion in the Christian body.

Your Petitioners, anxious to hand down to posterity the civil and religious equality and freedom they now enjoy, and which have been constitutionally acquired, without violence or shedding of blood, pray your Honorable House may be pleased to sustain their prayer.

And your Petitioners will, as in duty bound, ever pray.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.
(REDFERN, CHIPPENDALE, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 11 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the Members of the undersigned Inhabitants of Redfern, Chippendale, and neighbourhood,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners, enjoying as they do the blessings of religious equality and freedom in this Colony, pray that your Honorable House will not endanger the same, by legalizing the Church of England Synods Bill now before your Honorable House, and which, in their apprehension, contains principles at variance with the freedom of Christian worship, and opposed to those principles of non-interference of the secular power with the Church so dear to their ancestors, and which, in their estimation, are essential to the purity of religion and to the rights of conscience, and in consonance with the teaching of the great Founder of their Faith, and the independence which the Church enjoyed during the first four centuries of the Christian era.

That your Petitioners disclaim any intention of interfering with the freedom of synodical action in the Church of England (enjoying, as its members do, the like freedom with other bodies); but they are of opinion that if the present Bill should become law, it will create a Church establishment, and thus place the Church of England on a footing which your Petitioners do not enjoy, and, holding the principles they do, cannot avail themselves of.

That your Petitioners cannot but regard legislation affecting the use of the holy ordinances of Christianity (not sanctioned by the Word of God), as a desecration of the same, and implying a power of interference which they respectfully dissent from.

That your Petitioners view any legislation fixing the powers and status of Ministers of the Gospel, as tending to revive questions of supremacy which have in all ages of the Church been fertile sources of controversy and disunion in the Christian body.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to sustain their prayer, and enable them to transmit to their posterity the religious equality and freedom which they having constitutionally acquired now enjoy.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(SCOTS CHURCH, PITT STREET, SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the Minister and undersigned Elders and Deacons of the Scots Church, Pitt-street, Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That Petitioners have heard, with alarm and regret, that an Act of the Legislative Council of New South Wales, which would, in the opinion of Petitioners, destroy the religious equality which at present exists in this Colony, invest one section of the community with superior and exclusive privileges, and give the sanction of law to doctrines and practices which we hold to be anti-Christian and directly subversive of the Word of God, "the only rule of faith and practice," has been read in your Honorable House.

That the preamble of the said Act declares, "It is expedient to provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of the United Church of England and Ireland in New South Wales, and to authorize the holding of Synods of the same Church in this Colony"; and Petitioners submit, respectfully, that if Parliament, who are the representatives of the whole community, provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of any one section of the Church, and authorize that section to hold Provincial Synods, that section will necessarily be regarded as the Established Church in this Colony.

That the Act declares, "The Synod shall have power to establish a tribunal for the trial of offences by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop within the Diocese, as well those involving breaches of discipline as questions of doctrine and the ritual of the Church"; but we hold that no such tribunal should be sanctioned by Parliament. It would be highly dangerous and destructive to the rights of liberty and conscience to give the sanction of Civil Law to the establishment of a tribunal for the trial of offences from whose decisions there would be no appeal to the Civil Courts in this Colony. Tribunals for the trial of all matters of doctrine and discipline should be permitted to exist only as voluntary associations, under the direction of the Holy Scriptures.

That the Act which establishes a "tribunal for the trial of offences by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop" makes no provision for the trial of any offences of the Bishop himself; it invests him with undefined and irresponsible powers, enables him to veto any and every rule or ordinance of the Synod relating to matters of spiritual concern, and declares the Bishop of Sydney, and other Bishops attending the Synod, to be a distinct House; and we maintain with all respect that the Archbishop of Canterbury possesses no such powers in England as this Act would confer on the Bishop of Sydney in New South Wales.

That the Act declares the Bishop of Sydney to be Metropolitan Bishop of Australia, and thus gives a national sanction to all the powers and privileges which he arrogantly claims; but the Word of God does not authorize the Civil powers, as such, to appoint any Ministers in the Church of Christ, and the Queen of England cannot either legally or constitutionally invest any man with the powers and privileges of an English Bishop in Australia.

That the said Act would divide the followers of Christ into different orders, and enable any one nominated Bishop of Sydney by the Queen, to act as lord over God's heritage, in direct contravention of the law of Christ, who said, when he rebuked his disciples for contending who should be the greatest, "The princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that be great exercise authority upon them: but it shall not be so among you, but whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister." And again, "Be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

That Petitioners pray your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your serious consideration—withhold your assent from the said Act—reject every measure which may appear calculated to prevent the Members of the Church of England in this Colony from regulating the affairs of their own Church in accordance with their wishes, and do all in your power to maintain and preserve perfect religious equality among all the inhabitants of this Colony.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.
 (CERTAIN RESIDENTS OF CAMPBELLTOWN.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 11 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Residents of Campbelltown,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners, believing that all human legislation in matters of religion is an invasion of the prerogatives of God, in contravention to the spirit of Christianity—and, furthermore, unnecessary, from the completeness of the laws given by Christ and his Apostles, and from the fact that no such legislation can be effected, by your Honorable House in particular, on behalf of any section of religionists in this Colony, without destroying the equality hitherto enjoyed, and which ought to be maintained, amongst the various religious bodies in the community—do most humbly and earnestly pray your Honorable House not to pass into law the Bill now under your consideration, entitled “ The Church of England Synods Bill. ”

Your Petitioners desire to disclaim all interference with the rightful action of any religious community. They would contend on behalf of others for what they desire themselves to enjoy—freedom to worship—and to act in all religious affairs according to the dictates of the Word of God ; but as by the said Bill they conceive that an unscriptural end is sought, and which cannot be granted without a violation of religious equality, they respectfully beg your Honorable House not to allow the said Bill to pass into law.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

(MUDGEES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 6 May, 1861.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of Mudgee,—

SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners have heard, with alarm and regret, that an Act of the Legislative Council of New South Wales, which would, in the opinion of your Petitioners, destroy the religious equality at present existing in this Colony, and invest one section of the community with superior privileges above the others, has been read in your Honorable House.

That the preamble of the said Act declares, "It is expedient to provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of the United Church of England and Ireland in New South Wales and authorize the holding of Synods of the same Church in this Colony." Your Petitioners respectfully submit, that if the Parliament, who are the representatives of the whole community, provide for the regulation and management of the affairs of any one section of the Church, and authorize that section to hold Provincial Synods, that section will necessarily be regarded as the Established Church in this Colony.

That the Act declares that the Synod shall have power to establish a tribunal for the trial of offences committed by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop within the Diocese, as well those involving breaches of discipline as questions of doctrine and the ritual of the Church; but your Petitioners submit that no such tribunal should be sanctioned by Parliament, as it would be highly dangerous and destructive to the rights of liberty and conscience to give the sanction of Civil Law to the establishment of a tribunal for the trial of offences from the decisions of which tribunal there would be no appeal to the Civil Courts in this Colony, and that, in the opinion of your Petitioners, tribunals for the trial of all matters of doctrine and discipline should be permitted to exist only as voluntary associations.

That this Act by which it is proposed to establish a tribunal for the trial of offences by Clergymen licensed by the Bishop makes no provision for the trial of any offences of the Bishop himself; it invests him with undefined and irresponsible powers, enables him to veto any and every rule or ordinance of the Synod relating to spiritual matters, and declares the Bishop of Sydney, and the other Bishops attending the Synod, to be a distinct House; and your Petitioners submit, that the Archbishop of Canterbury possesses no such power in England as this Act would confer on the Bishop of Sydney in New South Wales.

That this Act declares the Bishop of Sydney to be Metropolitan Bishop of Australia, and thus giving a national sanction to all powers and privileges which he arrogantly claims.

That in the opinion of your Petitioners, the said Act would divide the religious bodies in the Colony of New South Wales, and by such means cause strife and contention amongst them.

Your Petitioners pray your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your serious consideration—withhold your assent from the said Act—and reject every measure which may appear calculated to give the Church of England a dominant power, and do all such things as may tend to maintain and preserve perfect religious equality amongst the inhabitants of the Colony of New South Wales.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.MEMBERS OF THE CHURCHES OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND, WESLEYANS, CONGREGATIONALISTS, &c.,
IN SYDNEY.)Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 5 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the undersigned Members of the Churches of England, Scotland, Wesleyans, Congregationalists, &c., in Sydney, &c.

Your Petitioners, enjoying as they do the blessings of religious equality and freedom in this Colony, pray your Honorable House may not endanger the same by legalizing the Church of England Synod Bill now before your Honorable House, and which, in their apprehension, contains principles at variance with the freedom of Christian worship, and opposed to those principles of non-interference of the secular power with the Church (so dear to their ancestors), and which, in their estimation, are essential to the purity of religion, the rights of conscience, and the independence of the Church, enjoyed during the first four centuries of the Christian era.

Your Petitioners disclaim any intention to interfere with the freedom of Synodical action in the Church of England, enjoying, as they do, a like freedom in their own denominations, without the aid of law; but they consider the present Bill establishes a Church Constitution by law, and thus places the Church of England on a footing which they do not enjoy, and from their principles cannot apply for.

Your Petitioners cannot but regard legislation affecting the use of the holy ordinances of Christianity, which is not sanctioned by the Word of God, as a desecration of the same, and implying a power of interference with spiritual obligations which they respectfully dissent from.

Your Petitioners view any legislation fixing the powers or status of Ministers of the Gospel, as reviving questions of supremacy which have, in all ages of the Church, been the fertile sources of controversy and disunion in the Christian body.

Your Petitioners, anxious to hand down to posterity the civil and religious equality and freedom they now enjoy, pray your Honorable House may be pleased to sustain their prayer.

And your Petitioners will, as in duty bound, ever pray, &c.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of the Members of the Church and Congregation meeting for Divine Worship in the Baptist Chapel, Bathurst-street, Sydney, New South Wales,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners, believing that all human legislation in matters of religion is an invasion of the prerogatives of God, in contravention to the spirit of the New Testament of Jesus Christ—and, furthermore, unnecessary, from the completeness of the laws therein given for the guidance of His Church, through all time, and in all places, and from the fact that no such legislation, by your Honorable House in particular, can be effected on behalf of any section of religionists in this Colony, without destroying the equality hitherto enjoyed, and which ought to be maintained, amongst the various religious bodies of the community—do most humbly and earnestly pray your Honorable House not to pass into law the Bill now under your consideration, intituled "The Church of England Synods Bill."

Your Petitioners desire to disclaim all interference with the rightful action of any religious community. They would cheerfully contend on behalf of others for what they desire themselves to enjoy—freedom to worship—and to act in all religious affairs according to the dictates of the Word of God; but as by the said Bill they conceive that an unscriptural end is sought by unscriptural means, and which cannot be granted without a violation of religious equality and the laws and prerogatives of Christ, they respectfully beg your Honorable House not to allow the said Bill to pass into law.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

WEST MAITLAND CHURCH LAND SALE BILL.

THURSDAY, 14 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. BLAKE, | MR. DICKSON,
MR. WALSH.

ALEXANDER DICK, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

*Present for parties:—*W. Barker, Esq., Solicitor for the Bill.

William Barker, Esquire, Solicitor for the Bill, examined:—

1. By the Chairman: Will you be kind enough to state how you propose to prove the preamble of the Bill? I beg to hand in the grant which is recited in the first part of the preamble in proof of the matter set forth in the first page and a half. (Grant produced.) Then I propose to prove the second recital in a mode that I apprehend will be satisfactory to the Committee—that is, by handing in a copy of the Bishop of Newcastle's Letters Patent, printed by the Government Printer by order of the Legislative Council. (Produced and handed in.) That will take us as far as the 20th line on the third page. I should inform the Committee that it will be necessary here to make an amendment, which was only known yesterday on the arrival of a gentleman who is present as a witness. It is recited here that the other two trustees are both dead, but it has been ascertained that that is not the fact. Mr. Hobler, although absent from the Colony about 17 years, is, we are informed, still alive in California. But under the Church Temporalities Act parties ceasing to reside in the Colony for a period of six months become disqualified as church trustees.

W. Barker,
Esq.

14 Mar., 1861.

Edward Peter Capper, senr., Esquire, called in and examined:—

2. By Mr. Barker: Where do you reside? At West Maitland.
3. Do you know a church at West Maitland called by the name of St. Mary? Yes.
4. What is the parish called? The parish of St. Mary.
5. Do you know of any other church in West Maitland? There is another called St. Paul's.
6. What is the name of the parish—the ecclesiastical parish? The parish of West Maitland has been divided into two parishes, one called St. Mary's and the other St. Paul's.
7. By Mr. Blake: Where is St. Paul's church? In the southerly part, near the railway crossing in High-street.
8. Is there not another church in East Maitland? Yes, St. Peter's. We have nothing to do with that parish.

E. P. Capper,
senr., Esq.

14 Mar., 1861.

- E. P. Capper, 9. By Mr. Barker: Do you know whether there has been a parsonage and schoolhouse built in connection with St. Mary's church? Both parsonage and schoolhouse have been built for several years.
 senr., Esq.
 14 Mar., 1861.
10. Can you inform the Committee whether it has been found necessary to erect a second church in the parish of St. Mary? The church already built in St. Mary's parish was very badly built, and is considered by Mr. Blacket, the architect, and also by the inhabitants generally, to be unsafe. The gables are opening out.
11. You are aware that Mr. Blacket has reported that the church in present use in the parish of St. Mary is in a dangerous state? Years ago I heard him express that opinion, but at present I have it only from what the churchwardens put me in possession of.
12. The churchwardens are of that opinion? Yes.
13. You have no official connection with that church yourself? At present I have not; I have acted before the new church of St. Paul's was built.
14. Are the churchwardens of St. Mary's church aware of your attendance here to give evidence in support of this Bill? There is my letter of authority (produced and handed in. Vide Appendix A), and here is a private memorandum from them in which they acknowledge that they are perfectly satisfied that whatever the sale of the land produces shall be divided between the two churches.
15. Are you aware whether the new church, to replace the present church of St. Mary, has been commenced? It has been commenced, and between £1,200 and £1,300 has already been paid on account of it. The foundation is laid, and the walls are four or five feet high. The contract for it is about £6,000. They are building on plans which were prepared by Mr. Blacket and approved by the churchwardens and parishioners.
16. Has a church been erected in the parish known as St. Paul's? It has.
17. Is it completely finished? It is. The parsonage is also completely finished, and the whole of the ground is fenced in, and on that is the grammar school in connection with the Church of England, which is also built and fully paid for. I may also say that the ground on which the church, parsonage, and grammar school are built, was bought by us.
18. Has the debt on these buildings in the parish of St. Paul been fully discharged? No.
19. There is a debt remaining? Yes, nearly £3,000.
20. On the church, parsonage, and schoolhouse? No, on the church and parsonage, the schoolhouse is fully paid for.
21. The land, which was originally granted for the erection of a church, school, and parsonage, at West Maitland, is not now required for the purposes for which it was intended, because of two churches having been built? It was found inconvenient to build on the first grant, and therefore the church of St. Mary was built in a different position, and St. Paul's has also been built in another part of the town.
22. And because of St. Mary's and St. Paul's having been erected this land is not now required for the purpose of erecting a church? Just so.
23. But the churchwardens of both parishes think it expedient that it should be sold, and the proceeds devoted to the discharge of the debts of the two parishes? Yes. It has always been held out as a hope that the enormous expenses we have been at should be reimbursed in that way.
24. Have you any connection with St. Paul's church? I have been a churchwarden ever since it was erected, and I was on the Building Committee for it.
25. Is it the desire of the Bishop and the churchwardens of these two churches that the proceeds of the sale of this land should be applied in the manner mentioned in the preamble of this Bill? It is.
26. By the Chairman: Has there been a schoolhouse erected in the parish of St. Mary? Yes; there has been for years a parish school in St. Mary's, as well as the church and parsonage.
27. By Mr. Blake: And there are similar erections in the parish of St. Paul? Yes; St. Paul's Church, we consider, will accommodate from 800 to 1,000 people.
28. By Mr. Dickson: Has there been any meeting of the parishioners in reference to this subject? Yes.
29. A public meeting? A meeting of the churchwardens and parishioners both in St. Paul's and St. Mary's parishes.
30. How was the meeting convened? In the same way as all vestry meetings. The sale of this land has been in agitation for years, and has been always looked upon as one of the sources that would repay the great expenses we were at in building the two churches.
31. There was no public meeting of the inhabitants? The inhabitants had nothing to do with it. It was specially given for the Church of England, the same as other grants to different churches, and therefore the matter was entirely amongst ourselves. The whole of the parishioners consented, in vestry assembled.
32. Has there been any public meeting of the parishioners? A vestry meeting—we call our meetings amongst ourselves vestry meetings.
33. By the Chairman: It was notified from the pulpit? Yes; and also a notice of the meeting was put in the ordinary manner upon the church doors. It was a general meeting of the parishioners.
34. It is with the consent of the parishioners that this proceeding is taken? With the consent of the whole of the parishioners of St. Paul's and St. Mary's.
35. No objection was made by any of the parishioners to the division as proposed in this Bill, so far as you are aware? Decidedly not; and it is one of the things put down in my instructions from the churchwardens of St. Mary's that they are perfectly agreed as to the proceeds being equally divided.

36. By Mr. Blake: I suppose a resolution to that effect has been passed in the vestry meetings of both parishes? Yes. E. P. Capper, senr., Esq.

37. By Mr. Barker: In point of fact you know this application to Parliament is made with the consent of the Bishop, the clergymen of the two parishes, the churchwardens, and the parishioners? Decidedly; with their full knowledge and consent. I consider myself fully enabled to say so. 14 Mar., 1861.

38. Do you know whether Mr. Henry Incedon Pilcher, one of the trustees of the land mentioned in this Bill, is still living? Mr. Pilcher is dead.

39. Do you know, or have you been recently informed, whether Mr. George Hobler, the other trustee, is living or dead? Mr. Hobler was living two or three months ago in California, and I am able to state that with certainty, as his son arrived here some ten days ago.

40. Were you informed by his son? I did not see his son, but some near relations of his told me that they had seen his son, and that Mr. Hobler was still alive.

41. Can you inform the Committee whether Mr. Hobler has ceased to reside in Maitland? I think it is nearly seventeen years since he resided in Maitland, and somewhere about thirteen or fourteen years since he left the Colony, as far as my knowledge goes.

APPENDIX.

A.

West Maitland,

10 March, 1861.

We hereby authorize and appoint Edward P. Capper, Esq., to appear and give evidence on the part of St. Mary's parish, before a Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly, relative to the sale of certain land in West Maitland, and the appropriation of the proceeds thereof.

COPY OF A DESPATCH from HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE to GOVERNOR SIR CHARLES A. FITZ ROY.

[CONFIDENTIAL.]

Downing-street,
29 November, 1853.

SIR,

I transmit to you the copy of a Despatch which I address by the same Mail No. 126, 29 Nov., 1853. to the Lieutenant Governor of Victoria, on the subject of the rights of the occupiers of Pastoral Runs under the Order in Council of 1847, which has excited so much discussion in that Colony.

The circumstances of Victoria are so peculiar and so pressing, that I have thought it necessary to give the Lieutenant Governor these directions, without any reference to the case of similar occupiers in New South Wales. It appears to me that the question is best viewed separately as regards each Colony; and I have no wish, by these directions, to interfere in any way with the proceedings which you, with the advice of your Executive Council, may have taken, or may contemplate on the subject.

I have made this Despatch confidential, the subject not being one of direct importance to your Government; but I have no objection to your communicating its contents to your Executive Council, or to the Legislative Council, if you deem it expedient.

I have, &c.,

I have to acknowledge your Despatches of the numbers and dates specified in the margin, on the subject of the questions which have been raised relative to the extent of the rights of licensed occupants of Crown Lands in Victoria, under the Order in Council of 9th March, 1847, and subsequent Orders and Regulations.

2. In the first of these Despatches you inform me (paragraph 61) that you have brought the whole of this very complicated subject under the attention of the Home Government, in compliance with the wishes of the Legislative Council, as expressed in their Address, voted on the 17th August, 1852, in the manner explained in your Despatch.

3. In giving you the directions which the present Despatch contains, I am actuated by the desire to satisfy, as far as in my power, what appears to be the deliberate wish of the Legislative body, as well as your own. It would, undoubtedly, have been a far easier course for Her Majesty's Government to decline this responsibility, and to leave the entire charge of future regulations and the decision of questions of vested rights, now actually in dispute, to the Local Legislature and to the Local Tribunals respectively; especially, as under the engagements of Her Majesty's late and present advisers to the Colonists, there is every reason to expect, that the general control of the waste lands will soon be transferred from the Home to the Local Government; but I am compelled to recognise the strong grounds on which your application and that of the Legislative Council rests, and the justice of the appeal on the part of the occupants themselves to the Home Government for its assistance in defining and securing those rights which they have acquired under its own Acts.

4. Still the difficulty of decision on such a subject, with the materials in possession of Her Majesty's Government, is very great. Even the substantial facts on which that decision is to rest are by no means fully before me. I say this with no view of imputing blame to yourself, or the local authorities, who have supplied me, no doubt, to the full with such information as they deemed requisite, but I am left ignorant of many things which are probably so familiar in the Colony, that they have not been thought to require specific notice; for instance, while I should rather have inferred from your Despatch, that the majority of stockholders in the intermediate as well as in the unsettled districts, were still without leases, I consider it doubtful, from other statements in these papers, whether some leases for eight years may not have been actually given in the former districts. Again, I am altogether without information how the very important clauses in the Order in Council, which give the occupants in certain cases the right of exclusive purchase and the right of pre-emption, are practically worked in the Colony; whether, for instance, the lessee has been held entitled, on any occasion, to demand the sale of land on valuation, or it has been always considered competent to the Governor to decline to accede to such demand. Yet these are important points with a view to understanding the equitable relation which now subsists between the Government and the occupants, and without a fuller knowledge of these and other particulars than I possess, I feel that any adjustment proposed by Her Majesty's Government runs the risk of being founded on mistaken data.

5. I have done my best to remedy this deficiency by conversation with such persons, well acquainted with the Colony, as I could from time to time consult; and I have postponed taking any steps on your Despatches for a time far longer than I should have otherwise judged advisable, partly in the expectation that further incidental intelligence from yourself might assist me, and not without hope also, that some progress might be made towards adjustment by farther discussion and comparison of views in the Colony itself. I feel, however, that it is due to the important interest concerned that this delay should last no longer.

6. It is necessary that I should commence by stating that Her Majesty's Government are perfectly satisfied with the reasons which you have adduced, why the portion of the Order in Council which declares that actual leases shall be granted on demand has hitherto remained a dead letter, and must, probably, long remain so unless some equitable adjustment intervenes. They are satisfied that the circumstances of the Colony have rendered the surveys, which were considered essential preliminaries to the execution of the leases, impracticable, and that such extensive surveys will long be impracticable. This is an obstacle which no one fully appreciated beforehand, and for which no one is justly responsible. But the occupants have, in addition, no ground, in my judgment, to complain of this delay, because, in fact, the burden lay on them, and not on the Local Government, under the terms of the Order in Council and Regulations subsequently issued, as I understand them, to furnish such descriptions of their runs as might render it possible to grant a lease, and the assistance of surveys was a benefit offered them by the Local Government, and no part of their rights; and, still more, because, in the absence of the leases they seem to have enjoyed up to this time the full practical benefit of leases (except so far as regarded a sense of security for the future) and the various privileges which the Order in Council conferred nominally on lessees only.

7. It must be farther stated that it is perfectly clear that the real purpose of the Order in Council was that fairly represented in paragraph 68 of your Despatch, namely, to give encouragement to those engaged in pastoral pursuits, the value of which to the Colony is fully explained in your Despatches, and fully recognised by Her Majesty's Government. It was intended to give them adequate use of the land for the purpose of their particular industry, and adequate protection against disturbance in it. It was not intended intended to give them advantages, beyond other members of the community, towards becoming purchasers of Crown Land, except to the very limited extent required for their actual accommodation, still less was it intended to enable them to become speculators in land, purchasing on terms peculiar to themselves, in order to sell again in the general market. And least of all was it intended that their pastoral occupations should stand in the way of the development of general population and industry, and of those facilities for the acquisition of land, by the public at large, which are essential to that development.

8. If the language of the Order in Council goes beyond these intentions, and if that language, coupled with the acts done under it, has conferred vested rights to an extent beyond what was at all foreseen and now felt as a practical inconvenience, a very serious question undoubtedly arises between private claims and the general interest. I will not say that in an extreme case the latter must not prevail, and that vested rights must not give way, subject to such compensation as it may be practicable to give.

9. But I am not satisfied that it is necessary to resort to measures of this nature. It requires to be first considered whether the existing powers of Government will not suffice at once to maintain the intended principle, and to repress the abuse. If the occupants insist on the extreme view of their rights, as controlling the obvious meaning of the concessions made to them, it becomes incumbent on Government to protect the public by insisting also on the rigorous interpretation of the Order in Council, when its provisions may seem to clash with the public interests.

10. Now the equitable rights of the occupants, on the strictest view, are also, I think, fully stated in your Despatch. I need only very briefly recapitulate those on which the questions now submitted to me, turn. They appear to be entitled to demand leases, under the conditions respectively specified as to intermediate and unsettled lands, to be executed whenever it is possible for Government to take the necessary measures, for terms not exceeding eight and fourteen years respectively. They are entitled to a right of pre-emption when lands are put up for sale, at the end of each year of lease in the intermediate—of the last year in the unsettled districts. They are entitled to an exclusive right of purchase in the unsettled districts whenever Government thinks fit to sell them land during the currency of the lease. And they are entitled to renewal under the conditions specified in section 16 of the Order in Council.

11. The limits to those rights on the other hand appear to be these, judging, as I am compelled to judge, only from the Order in Council itself and subsequent legal documents issued by the Local Government; for it is impossible that I can fully appreciate the modifications which usage or understanding, recognised both by Government and the occupants, may have introduced in the Colony.

12. In the first place, as the occupants have been treated in all respects as lessees since the Order in Council was acted on in the Colony, any lease granted must fairly be considered as dated only from that period. This I understand to be the view of the Legislative Council, in which I fully concur. The date on which I understand them to have fixed is the 7th April, 1848, to which I see no objection.

13. In the next place the Order in Council promises these leases only for terms "not exceeding" eight and fourteen years respectively. The squatters indeed appear to contend that these words are to be taken contrary to their plain import, as conveying a promise for the full extent of those terms; and I do not collect from any of your Despatches the impression of your own views on this very essential point. Mr. Forlonge, I observe, contends that the claimants in the unsettled districts have a positive "guarantee" for fourteen years absolute. I can only say that the most diligent examination of the papers has failed to show me any such guarantee. It cannot be seriously contended for a moment that a casual expression in the Despatch of Lord Grey transmitting the Order in Council (on which I see some reliance is placed—taken also apart from its context) had the effect of adding to or altering the definite words of an Order in Council. And could this be maintained, it would be easy to show from his Lordship's own subsequent Despatches, that he did not himself so interpret the Order. In a Despatch addressed to Sir Charles Fitz Roy, on the 6th August, 1849, he says, "but inasmuch as the Order of the 9th March leaves the length of the term of years to be granted entirely at your discretion, you will be able and justly entitled to refuse to such persons any lease for more than a year, unless they are willing to accede to the insertion of the conditions which you may require."

Par. 43 of Land and Emigration
Report.

14. It is hardly necessary to add, that as the occupants are now in the enjoyment of the full benefit of leases without possessing them, so they cannot justly claim that the term of lease to be ultimately allotted to each, whether fourteen years or less, must run from the actual issue of such lease. The antedating of the lease will be strictly equitable, inasmuch as they have hitherto had the same equitable advantage as if it had so been issued.

15. In the next place, although the lessee in an unsettled district has an exclusive right of purchase (subject to what I shall have presently to say on the head of reserves) during the currency of his actual or assumed lease, I find no provision in section 6 compelling the Governor to sell such lessee any land on his demanding it.

16. Nor do I find any provision in section 15 or elsewhere, compelling the Governor to put up land for sale at the expiration of each year in the intermediate districts, or of the lease in the unsettled districts; nor any provision continuing the right of pre-emption to the occupant at any future sale, when the Governor shall not have sold immediately on the expiration of the lease, and the lessee shall not have renewed or shall have been prevented from renewing by an alteration in the class of his land. And it must be added, that considering the great difficulties which you point out as attaching to the system of sale by valuation, it would be obviously unreasonable to suppose that the Governor was compellable to exercise these powers of sale when the public interest did not require it, merely in order to enable the lessee to exercise his exclusive or pre-emptive rights—those rights having really been given him only with a view to prevent interruption by others—not as a means of gain to himself.

17. In the next place, section 9 of the Order in Council gives the power of making grants or sales within the runs, and without any regard to exclusive or pre-emptive rights in the lessee, for many specified public purposes, including the purpose of digging for minerals, which may be of great importance in the present situation of the Colony; and, lastly, "for otherwise facilitating the government and settlement of the Colony." Without entering at length into the controversy to which these words have given rise, it is enough for me to say that the very differences of opinion which have existed among lawyers as to their exact construction, entitle you, in my opinion, to put on them the more liberal one, as regards the requirements of the public. If this construction be legal, and I have no reason to doubt it, it is plainly that which ought to be adopted both for the public advantage and also with a view to the equitable redemption of the promises, and no more than the promises intended to be made to the occupants themselves. It was intended to prevent land comprised in their runs from being sold by Government to parties purchasing for mere speculative purposes, and at the same time to enable it to be so sold (without regard to the lessees' right of exclusive purchase) where the public necessities of the Colony were such as to require it. When, therefore, you are of opinion that the progress of population and settlement in a particular quarter has rendered it matter of public importance, that enough land should be made available for the agricultural supply of the wants thus created, you may, in my opinion, sell land to that extent, under the general sale regulations of the Colony, though situated within a run.

18. And lastly, I consider it plain that Her Majesty's Government have the power to make rules respecting the division, from time to time, of the land into settled, intermediate, and unsettled districts, by Order in Council. And considering the great change in the circumstances of Victoria, it is obvious that the time has arrived for a liberal exercise of that power. I am not indeed certain (but prefer on such a point to be guided by local experience) whether an entire abolition of the "unsettled class" and a very wide extension of the "settled," leaving only the more distant portions as "intermediate," would not be the best course. I shall therefore so delegate the necessary powers to the Governor, as to leave him absolutely free in this respect. The effect of such an extension would, of course, not be to interfere with subsisting leases (whether actually granted or promised, and therefore assumed to exist) but it would, as it appears to me, destroy all right of renewal, except subject to the terms applicable to the class in which any run might, by the change, become included.

19. These are the powers which appear to me to be vested in Government, consistently with the equitable and literal engagement to the occupants, as far as they are to be collected from the Order in Council. But here the great difficulty to which I have referred at the outset of this Despatch, meets me at once. I cannot collect, even from the mass of documents before me, how far the interpretation which I have put on these powers may be modified by the subsequent acts or declarations, or tacit assent of the Local Government, so as to give place to an interpretation more favorable to the squatters. The mere assertion of the latter I cannot, of course, take for granted, and I am fully aware, in cases of contract between Government and individuals, or classes of individuals, how easily a more favorable view of each provision towards the private person, and less favorable to the Government, becomes current in common expectation; how watchful individuals are in extending their rights by implications and construction; and how little interest, comparatively, those who represent the Government have, in resisting such extension. The only rule I can furnish you with is this: that where a construction more favorable than what I have laid down, rests only on some vague and general understanding, current among the classes benefited, it may be altogether disregarded, nor can any loss incurred by individuals through the non-recognition of such an understanding be considered as establishing a right to compensation. But where such construction is so far supported by acts or declarations of the Local Government as to appear sanctioned by a pledge of the public faith, these individuals are entitled, either to its maintenance, or (if this be impracticable) to reasonable compensation. I am aware that in laying on you the duty of distinguishing between these supposed cases, I impose a task of difficulty and delicacy; but it is unavoidable.

20. With regard to the duration of leases, in particular, I have been led partly by your silence on the subject, and partly by other circumstances, to infer that the claim of the squatters for leases of maximum duration, though contrary to the plain words of the Order in Council, may, nevertheless, have derived some force from the acquiescence of the Local Government. If this is really the case, although I think it much to be regretted, my instructions must be regarded as open to some modification in partial recognition of a claim thus substantiated.

21. Subject to these cautions, I have to authorize you to employ the various powers which, according to these views, belong to the Local Government, as far as you may consider advisable. And I cannot but consider them as amply sufficient to ensure to the community at large an adequate supply of available land, without infringing on the real rights of the squatters.

22. But with regard to these latter, it is by no means the wish of Her Majesty's Government that they should be placed in real difficulties, or their well-founded expectations—expectations, that is, limited within the purpose for which these advantages were first given them—disappointed. I recognize to the fullest extent the great value of which their industry has hitherto proved to the community, and believe that whatever may be the development of the Colony under its present altered circumstances, pastoral pursuits will still furnish the most profitable and useful occupation to a considerable portion of its inhabitants. My only object is that the extensive privileges which have been accorded them may not be perverted by too literal claims to purposes for which they were not intended, and may not be exercised with manifest unfairness to other classes. It is to prevent this abuse that I have thought it necessary to point out that if the rights of the Crown are insisted on with equal strictness, the use of those privileges will be very materially curtailed.

23. If, therefore, any occupiers of runs should apply for leases, and should be content to receive leases exempt from those conditions which are at once injurious to the community and useless for merely pastoral purposes, you are fully authorized and desired to grant them. Such leases should contain no power of exclusive purchase during the term, or of pre-emption at the end of it, except with such limitations as should clearly confine such power to land really wanted by the lessee for those purposes of homesteads and bonâ fide improvements, which are specified in paragraph 65 of your Despatch, which appears to me to contain a reasonable definition of pre-emptive right. They should also be subject to the power of the Government to resume, from time to time, and offer for ordinary and open sale, after sufficient notice, land which may be really wanted for that purpose, in the judgment of those in whom the control of the public lands is vested. Par. 65.

24. To those who may prove willing to accept this offer, making thereby a concession of extreme rights, I would authorize you, in return, to make all reasonable concessions on the part of Government. As to the duration of their leases, for instance, I would leave you full discretion, to the extent of the maximum given by the Orders in Council, but dating the lease from the 7th April, 1848, as recommended by the Legislative Council. As the difficulties of accurate survey will no doubt continue for some time longer, I would leave you at liberty either to issue leases with such general description of boundaries as the lessee may be content with, and (with the consent of the Legislative Council, if necessary) so to confirm these boundaries as to secure the lessee from any encroachment on the part of Government, leaving, of course, the rights of third parties inter se; or, if the lessee preferred it, he might be allowed still to remain on the footing of an occupier, possessing an equitable title to a lease, until this could be executed with the more absolute precision which a survey would afford. I will not go farther into particulars which must be far better understood on the spot, but only repeat my general instruction, that additional security and advantage to those who are willing to take these leases for bonâ fide pastoral purposes, and free from the objectionable conditions, will be a very fair purchase for the surrender of a portion of their present claims.

25. With regard to the substitution which you propose, of an assessment on stock for present rent, I entertain some doubts whether much advantage will, in reality, be gained by such a measure; but it is one on which I am quite ready to adopt the views to which your own local experience has led you.

26. Lastly, if there be any parties who would prefer to surrender the extreme rights of which I speak for other compensation, or to whom injury may really be done by the disappointment of just expectations, which enforcing the powers of Government may occasion, it appears to me that both the land of the Colony (should the provisions of the present Waste Lands Act be modified) and its public funds might be very fairly resorted to for the purpose of affording such compensation; and Her Majesty's Government would readily afford any assistance in their power towards it, on being moved to do so by Address from the Legislative Council.

27. As to the manner in which the necessary measures are to be carried into effect, I have been reluctant to advise the exercise of the Queen's power of legislation by amending the present Order in Council, because it appears to me desirable to try the effect of farther arrangement and mutual understanding before resorting to any measure which might be construed as a legislative invasion of vested rights. I have also considered that under the engagements now subsisting between Her Majesty's Government and the people of Victoria, all the provisions of the Waste Lands Act will (as before said) probably soon come under the revision of Parliament, when this particular portion of the subject can be more satisfactorily treated in connexion with the rest. I prefer, therefore, waiting for a farther report from yourself, and using such power as may remain to the Crown, or be placed by Parliament at its disposal, to give validity to any measures which you (with the advice of your Executive Council) may have adopted under those instructions.

28. I am ready, however, to cause to be prepared, two short Orders in Council, the one empowering the alteration of the limits of the Districts, the other to enable you to substitute an assessment of stock for rent: neither however, to have any force in the Colony until publication there, the time of which will be left to your discretion. But as these Orders must necessarily be laid before Parliament, which is not yet in Session, some time must elapse before you can receive them, and it is possible that some intervening information from yourself may render them unnecessary.

29. I will not lengthen this Despatch farther than by expressing my sincere hope that this very difficult and pressing question will be fairly adjusted, whether through the use of such means as are here placed in your power, or (which would be much more satisfactory to myself) by mutual concessions and reasonable arrangement in the Colony. In this way only can the necessary progress of settlement, and the just demand of the increasing population for facilities in acquiring land, be reconciled, with the preservation of that important interest whose claims are now under review.

EAST MAITLAND LAND RESERVES.

No. 1.

REPORT of Acting Surveyor General to Secretary for Lands and Public Works.

THE most important portion of this communication is that in which Mr. Borthwick claims, on behalf of the Municipality or the inhabitants of East Maitland, the right to permanent use, for pasturage purposes, of the 800 acres which forms a portion of the Maitland Town Reserve.

To shew that this right does not exist, it is necessary to go back to the time when the reservation was first introduced in the Office Maps—and this, so far as the records of this office shew, was done in the year 1849, under the authority of a letter from the Colonial Secretary, the 22nd January, 1849, No. 30, and a Minute of the Executive Council, a copy of which was enclosed in that letter to the Surveyor General.

This Minute, it will be seen, had a general reference to towns in the Colony, and under it Pasturage Reserves were introduced on all the maps, in cases where land which was suitable to the purpose remained in the possession of the Crown, in the vicinity of the more important country towns, and, amongst others, in the case of Maitland.

The Minute shews distinctly that the appropriation was to be for so long only as the land might "remain unalienated by grant."

The next step, in reference to the 800 acres, appears to have been the transmission, in March, 1854, of a Memorial, addressed to Sir Charles Fitz Roy, praying that the Pasturage Reserve should be placed in the hands of Trustees, and on which reports were made by the then Acting Surveyor General (Mr. Thompson), and by the late Sir Thomas Mitchell, the former of which reports repeated the principle laid down by the Executive Council Minute before referred to—that the appropriations should only be "until the land is required for extension of the town, or for other purposes;" and the latter recommended that the Pasturage Reserve should be placed "under regulations, to be framed by the local Magistracy, and enforced on their responsibility, after having been approved by the Governor General."

The Governor General having approved of Sir Thomas Mitchell's recommendation, the Memorialists were so informed, and the Bench was requested to frame regulations, which, however, it appears, was never done.

It will thus be seen that the Government has never, in any way, pledged itself to make the Reserve of 800 acres a permanent appropriation, but, on the contrary, has always provided for its being only of a temporary character.

It may be proper here to call attention to the fact, that a person of the name of Hickey has permission (obtained from Government in 1851) to occupy for life a portion, as shewn on the tracing of Maitland, with these papers, of the 800 acres in question.

A lithographic plan of the town of Maitland, shewing the permanent and temporary Reserves, as approved of by the Executive Council, shall shortly be prepared, and copies of it will, of course, be sold in Maitland, and at this office.

A. G. McLEAN,
Acting Surveyor General.

No. 2.

MR. JOHN BORTHWICK to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

*East Maitland,
19 July, 1859.*

SIR,

I do myself the honor of addressing you on a subject of the deepest importance to us as a community.

A letter from your department was submitted to me by Mr. Chambers concerning the East Maitland Reserves. According to the tenor of that letter, it appears a portion of the Reserves were to be given permanently, and other portions temporarily. As I and others of the community are in a total state of ignorance as to the acreage or locality of those Reserves, would you cause a lithographic plan to be enclosed, pointing out the portions permanently and temporarily so granted? But I may at once state that I take exception to the word temporary, because, in the old map proposed by Mr. G. B. White, a portion of land consisting of some 800 acres was reserved as a common for depasturing purposes; therefore, I maintain that the Government had alienated that portion of land for the use of the inhabitants, consequently they had no right to resume possession again. Would you also inform me when the word temporary was substituted, whether under the old regime or since responsible Government was inaugurated? Perhaps you recollect that a public meeting was holden some time ago, for the purpose of protesting against the Government alienating a portion of one of our Reserves to the late Mr. H. Osborne; could you inform me if such Reserve comes under the head of "temporary?"

I submit that it is absolutely necessary that all ambiguity with reference to those Reserves should at once be cleared away, because we are on the eve of attempting to establish Municipal Institutions, for the better government of this town; therefore, we require something tangible and definite to put before the public, and this subject has been in abeyance sufficiently long.

Your earnest and immediate attention is solicited to the above.

I am, &c.,

JOHN BORTHWICK.

Department of Lands and Public Works,

Sydney, 20 June, 1859.

SIR,

Alluding to your letter, of the 22nd December last, respecting the Reserves at Maitland, over which the Municipality of Maitland will, when established, possess jurisdiction, I am directed to inform you that the Executive Council, before whom the matter was brought, have approved of the following portions of land being appropriated and set apart for the purposes specified in each case, namely:—

| | | | |
|------------|-------|----------|-----------------------------|
| 130 | Acres | Reserve— | Raccourse and Recreation. |
| 40 | " | " | Cook's Square and Park. |
| 3½ | " | " | Market Place or Square. |
| 6½ | " | " | Market Reserve. |
| 630 | " | " | Temporary Pasturage. |
| 250 to 300 | " | " | Reserve and Town Extension. |

No. 4.

J. CHAMBERS, ESQ., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Maitland, 22 December, 1858.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 20th instant, I am instructed to say, that the Committee nominated by the inhabitants of the Town did not intend to ask for any general pledge respecting the Reserves or other public lands, but sought only that which your letter appears to concede, viz., facility to enable the Municipality to carry out the duties specially imposed on it by the Act.

The duties so enumerated are, the formation and regulation of markets—the management of public recreation grounds—the control of commonages; and the Reserves applied for by the Committee were those, and those only, dedicated to the public on the sale plan of the town for the above purposes, namely, the Market Reserve, the Recreation Ground Reserve, and the Pasturage Reserve; and it was thought to be but a reasonable application, inasmuch as it appeared impossible for the Municipality to perform those duties without those Reserves—the inhabitants, it was said, could not be taxed for the erection of market buildings, or other public works or improvements, on lands from which they might at any moment be excluded—nor could the Corporation seek sites for these public works other than those marked on the town plan, for by so doing they would be acting most unjustly to those townsmen who purchased of the Government allotments abutting on the Reserves set apart for such works; paid for above their then value, and built largely on them, under the belief that the Government would not forget the representations under which those prices were obtained.

Hitherto, perhaps, the many demands on the public purse may suggest a cause for the non-performance of the contract; but when the inhabitants (being empowered by law to manage local works) express their willingness to aid in carrying out the Government plan of the town at their own expense, it is hoped that they are not asking for facilities beyond the scope of those which you state the Government will be willing to grant.

With respect to the second paragraph of your letter, noting that the applications will be decided on when made, I beg to state, that the authority of the Committee goes to the extent of now applying for the decision of the Government on the question before asked, namely,—Will the Government convey to the Municipality of Maitland, if duly established, those Reserves, necessary for the performance of the duties specially imposed by the Municipal Act, that is to say,—the Market Reserves, the Recreation Ground Reserve, and the Pasturage Reserve?

I have, &c.,

THE UNDER SECRETARY to J. CHAMBERS, Esq.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 20 December, 1858.*

SIR,

I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd ultimo, inquiring whether the Government will be prepared to vest in the Corporation of Maitland, when duly established, the Reserves for the Cattle Market, the Park or Recreation Ground, and that for Pasturage, which are included within the limits of the proposed Municipality; and to inform you in reply that the Government will be ready to give every facility to the Municipality to enable it to carry out the duties imposed upon it by the Act, but that no general pledge can be made respecting the Reserves or other Public Lands.

2. I am desired to add that the applications for portions of ground will be decided upon when made.

No. 6.

J. CHAMBERS, Esq., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Maitland, 22 November, 1858.

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose you copies of certain Resolutions passed at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Maitland (East), held on the 15th instant, and beg to state that the Committee appointed by said meeting have requested me to correspond with the Government on the matter referred to in such Resolutions.

The Act for establishing Municipal Institutions provides (Sec. 72), that the Councils shall make by-laws for the regulation of Markets, &c.; and by Sec. 76, for regulating the rights of the inhabitants over any land lawfully set apart as a Common. The inhabitants of Maitland have within their township Reserves dedicated to the above purposes, but hitherto, owing to there being no recognized body acting for the people, they have been unable to get those Reserves so surely and finally appropriated by the Crown to their public uses as to justify them in expending moneys on their improvement.

These Reserves are as follow:—

- 1st. The Cattle Market, on which, about 20 years since, sale yards were erected by private persons, and have since been maintained by them.
- 2nd. The Park, unimproved.
- 3rd. The Pasturage Reserve, also unimproved. A portion, it was understood, was to have been granted for a Racecourse, but it appears the authority was given in error, and has been recalled: the labour of clearing and fencing, which was cheerfully undertaken by the people, has therefore been suspended.

The inhabitants of the town expect they will be dealt with, as regards their dedicated Reserves, as other towns have been, and that these Reserves will be secured to the uses declared by the sale plan of the town. And as regards the other Reserves of the Crown for which no use has been declared, and the unsold allotments, the inhabitants will be content to abide by the effect of any general course of action which the Government may lay down for its guidance. Doubtless many Government townships will become municipalities, and claims be made to the unsold lands of the Crown within their boundaries, the principle of action should therefore be fixed, but this claim the inhabitants of Maitland would be willing to leave open for consideration, on the understanding that they shall hereafter enjoy the same benefits and privileges as the Government may hereafter extend to any Government township which may become a municipality.

The chief matter therefore for present consideration is, whether the Government will be prepared to vest in the Corporation of Maitland, when duly established, the Reserves for the Cattle Market, the Park or Recreation Ground, and that for Pasturage—all which are comprised within the Government township, being laid out on the plan thereof, and are included within the limits of the intended Municipality.

I have, &c.,
JOSEPH CHAMBERS.

SIR,

Being under the impression that the copy of the Resolutions passed at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Maitland was not enclosed in my former letter, I do myself the honor to transmit them herewith, and beg to inform you that the meeting at which such Resolutions were passed was adjourned until Monday next the 13th instant.

[Enclosure in No. 7.]

At a public meeting of the Inhabitants of Maitland (East), held at the Court House, it was resolved:—

That it is desirable that the township of Maitland (East), as described for police purposes, with the addition of the town Reserves, should be created into a Municipality.

That the following persons, with power to add to their number, form a Committee to correspond with the Government as to the rights of commonage, &c., &c., and report thereon to this meeting, viz.:—Messrs. Dodds, Ogg, Chambers, Robinson, Nainby, O'Meagher, and M'Loughlan.

That this meeting adjourn for one month.

MINUTE of Surveyor General.

(Cabinet. 58-4480.)

The Recreation Reserves are:—The Racecourse and Recreation Appropriation, containing 130 acres, the description of which was forwarded for final approval by my half-monthly return, No. 58-58; "Cook's Square" and the "Park" adjoining it, containing about 40 acres.

The Market Reserves are:—The Old Cattle Market Reserve, containing 8 acres; the New Market Reserve, containing about $6\frac{1}{2}$ acres; and the Market Place or Square, containing $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres.

A Reserve of 800 acres for Pasturage and Extension was shewn on the maps, but of this the portion of 130 acres before referred to has been taken for the Racecourse and Recreation Reserve, and part of the remainder has been designed for town extension, on each side of the Railway Line.

A part of what is left might be placed in the hands of the Municipality as a permanent Pasturage Reserve, but its extent and position would first have to be determined; and, should the Secretary for Lands and Public Works approve, the Improvement Committee, or the Municipality when erected, might be invited to make a specific application.

The Old Cattle Market Reserve before mentioned is unsuitable for the purpose for which it was reserved, and should it be determined that such lands are to be placed in the hands of the Municipalities, this should probably be excluded.

It will be seen by a reference to the papers noted in the margin, that it was not considered competent to the Government to appropriate this land to other purposes, even of a public nature, for which it was better suited, and it may be desirable hereafter to obtain that power through the Parliament, and so apply the land to some public purpose to which it may be suited, or sell it. 36-3374.

SIR,

In reference to your report of the 17th April last, respecting the land which has been reserved for the use of the townspeople of Yass as pasturage for their milch cows, I now do myself the honor to transmit to you the accompanying extract from a Minute of the Executive Council upon the subject, which has been duly approved by the Governor, and in accordance therewith, I am directed by His Excellency to request that you will have the goodness to furnish me, for the necessary publication, with a description of the land so reserved.

EXTRACT from Minute of the Executive Council, dated 19th December, 1848, respecting the best mode of securing to the Inhabitants of Townships the exclusive right of pasturage for their milch cows over certain lands proposed to be reserved for that purpose.

With reference to the proceedings on the 12th September last, His Excellency the Governor lays before the Council the Attorney and Solicitor General's letter of the 28th November, 1848.

In accordance with the recommendations contained in this opinion, the Council advise that, in the case of Bathurst, and of every other town to which a similar privilege may be conceded, notice should be issued, that His Excellency, acting on behalf of Her Majesty, has reserved a certain portion of land (to be described) for the exclusive use (so long as it may remain unalienated by Grant) of the householders residing in the town, for the pasturage of their milch cows, according to certain rules to be in that behalf made and provided; that the Magistrates in Petty Sessions should be authorized to frame such rules, subject to their approval by His Excellency the Governor, and that the Chief Constable or some other suitable person should, in such case, be authorized to act as Crown Bailiff in respect to the reserved lands, and to proceed against intruders thereon under the 4th section of the Statute 9th and 10th Victoria, chapter 104.

[Sub-Enclosure in No. 9.]

Attorney General's Office,
28 November, 1848.

Sir,

We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd September last, transmitting the accompanying Petition, forwarded by Mr. J. B. Darvall from certain inhabitants of Bathurst, praying that a portion of land may be set apart for their use as a Common, together with the decision of the Executive Council thereon; and requesting, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, that, in accordance therewith, we will report in what manner authority can best be given to the Magistrates in Petty Sessions, or to some person acting under the Magistrates, directions to protect the right of the townspeople to the exclusive pasturage of so much of the unsold lands adjacent to the town as His Excellency may think it expedient to reserve for the purpose from the use of the neighbouring land-owners, who might otherwise claim a right of commonage over them under the Regulations of 29th March last.

In reply, we beg to state that the 3rd section of the 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 36, authorizes the Crown, or the Governor acting on behalf of the Crown, either to dispose of or reserves any lands required for any purpose of public convenience, &c.

If, under this section, a Government notice were to be issued to the following effect, viz.:—
“That such a portion of land (describing it) had been reserved by His Excellency, acting on behalf of Her Majesty, for the exclusive use of the householders residing in the Town of Bathurst, for the depasturage of their milk cows, according to certain rules and regulations to be in that behalf made and provided”—it appears to us that it would prevent such land from being considered “vacant” within the meaning of the 2nd Clause of the Regulations of the 29th March last.

If it should be considered expedient by His Excellency, the Magistrates in Petty Sessions might be authorized to frame rules and regulations as to the mode of occupying this land by the townspeople, such rules, &c., to be submitted for His Excellency's consideration and sanction; and as this land would be reserved, and not granted or leased, any one wrongfully intruding on it, or depasturing cattle on it with license, might be summarily punished under the 4th section of the 9 and 10 Victoria, cap. 104, at the instance of any one duly authorized by the Governor to act in that behalf.

MEMORIAL of Inhabitants of East Maitland to Governor General.

To His Excellency Sir Charles Augustus Fitz Roy, Knight, Governor General of the Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

The Memorial of the undersigned, Inhabitants of the Town of Maitland, commonly known as East Maitland,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Memorialists reside at Maitland aforesaid, and have been accustomed to run horses and other stock, their property, on the Pasturage Reserve attached to the township, and to take firewood therefrom. That, of late, persons not interested in the township, have placed flocks of sheep and herds of stock on such pasturage, whereby the horses and cattle of the inhabitants have been driven off, or left without food. And that the present waste by fire, and indiscriminate cutting valuable timber trees for the purpose of procuring the upper branches for firewood, will, if not checked, soon produce a scarcity of wood, to the great inconvenience of the inhabitants.

Your Memorialists would also shew, that they believe that no grant has been issued of these lands to Trustees, for the public use, and that, therefore, no person has authority to act in suppression of the evils before pointed out.

Your Memorialists therefore humbly pray that your Excellency will be pleased to have the Maitland Reserve granted to Trustees, for the use of the public, in order that such Trustees may regulate the use of such land in accordance with the Commonage Act, 11 Vic., No. 31.

And your Memorialists will for ever pray.

REPORT of Deputy Surveyor General.

I DO not perceive any objection to a compliance with the prayer of this Memorial, provided it be understood that the conditions are similar to those on which the use of other Town Reserves has been allowed, namely, until the land is required for extension of the town, or for other purposes. In similar cases to this, the inhabitants have been required to frame their own regulations, founded upon certain general rules, subject to the approval of the Governor General, but the Act 11 Vic., 31, applies specially to the old Cumberland Commons, granted in the early days of the Colony. There is certainly provision in the Act for granting new

new Commons to Trustees, but this has never yet been acted on, and as such a granting would amount to an absolute alienation, it could only be made to apply to a part of the Reserve in question, if any; but that would not meet the views of the Memorialists, who desire such a control of the whole Reserve as would prevent its being improperly used. The granting of any portion of the Reserve to Trustees would be a matter of serious consideration.

The Memorialists ask for the granting of the whole, which would be to prevent the extension of the Town, and so stamp all their properties with an increasing value.

SIR,

In attention to your letter, No. 54-454, of the 26th ultimo, wherein you enclose to me a Memorial from the inhabitants of the Town of Maitland, requesting that the Pasturage Reserve in that town may be granted to Trustees, in order to secure to the Memorialists the benefits of the commonage, and by direction of His Excellency the Governor General request my report on the subject referred to, in addition to that already received from the Acting Surveyor General, No. 54-117, dated the 28th April last; I have the honor accordingly to observe, that as no commonage grants have been made to any inhabitants of towns since I have held my present office, and judging by my experience of any exercise of commonage rights formerly granted, I do not consider it expedient to grant rights of commonage to be exercised by any Trustees over the public Reserves marked on the plan of East Maitland. This, I beg leave to observe, I consider still less expedient, because the preservation of the wood on the land reserved as a place of recreation being very expedient, would be, I think, more possible under regulations to be framed by the local Magistracy, and enforced on their responsibility, after having been approved by the Governor General.

SYSTEM OF TENDERING FOR RUNS.

PROGRESS REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 5th of February last, "to inquire into and report upon the whole system of tendering for Runs," and for whose assistance and direction it was concurrently Resolved,—

"(2.) That all tenders, accepted and not accepted, for land in the Warrego District and other out Districts, for the last ten years, with all correspondence relating thereto, be laid upon the Table of this House, and be sent to this Committee to report upon.

"(3.) That it be an especial instruction to such Committee to inquire into and report upon the case of Messrs. Millar and Maxwell.

"(4.) That the Returns moved for * * on the 18th January, for a list of all tenders of Runs remaining undisposed of up to this date, with their dates of application and names of the applicants, be sent to the Committee to report upon,"— have agreed to the following Progress Report:—

1. Your Committee regret that, from not having been furnished with any of the Returns moved for, and which were ordered to be referred to them to report on, they have unfortunately been unable to make this inquiry so complete as they could have wished; nor can they, therefore, point out so easily those vexatious delays in receiving answers to tenders which the evidence taken before them has shewn to be inseparable from the existing state of the law.

2. They would beg to refer your Honorable House to the evidence taken before them, which has clearly and forcibly shewn that some more expeditious system of answering tenders, and placing persons in possession of their Runs, should at once be adopted, as, when persons are deterred from going on Runs until a satisfactory answer is received to their applications, it paralyzes the investment of capital; and, on the other hand, if they are induced to enter on an unauthorized occupation, it often leads to vexatious disputes—in some instances to their being dispossessed—and may end in lawsuits.

3. The urgent necessity of bringing their labours to an early close, on account of the rapid progress of the "Crown Lands Occupation Bill" through your Honorable House, your Committee hope will plead for them, as an excuse for bringing up their Report without waiting for the Returns before mentioned.

4. They have carefully taken and weighed the evidence in the case especially recommended to their notice—that of Messrs. Millar and Maxwell—and beg to call attention to the opinion of Mr. Moriarty, the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, that it is a case of great hardship, but that their tenders have been recently sent to the Warrego Commissioner, Mr. Huthwaite, to report upon.

5. Your Committee therefore beg to recommend as follows:—

- (1.) That, as Messrs. Millar and Maxwell were the FIRST tenderers on the Culgoa and Ballandoola, or Brie, and the FIRST occupants with stock, and took every precaution, by using the services of Mr. Dunsmore as their agent, to gain the necessary information from the Government with regard to their tenders for this country, your Honorable House will refer their case to the Executive, in order that any claims that they may have for pastoral lands may receive its favorable consideration.
- (2.) That, to prevent improper speculation in Runs, and to secure that the applicant for a Run intends to be the bonâ fide occupier, it be a regulation that no applicant for a new Run shall, when his tender is accepted, be allowed to alienate or dispose of said Run until the same shall have been stocked to one-fourth of its estimated capabilities, on pain of forfeiture of such Run; and the Committee hope that, in other respects, the provisions contained in the "Crown Lands Occupation Bill," now before Parliament, will be found sufficiently stringent to check, in future, the pernicious system of speculation in Tenders for Runs, and thus afford greater facilities for the bonâ fide tenderer than has been the case heretofore.
- (3.) That where Runs have been occupied for a period, and it has been found by the Commissioner that the occupier or lessee has taken up land two or three miles in excess, but has had a lengthened holding, such occupier should pay increased and even back assessment, rather than, old boundaries should be disturbed and greater confusion created.

The same having been submitted by the Chairman,—

Paragraphs of Draft severally read, and Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 verbally amended and agreed to.

No. 5. Recommendation 1, viz. :—

- (1.) That as Messrs. Millar and Maxwell were the FIRST tenderers on the Culgoa and Ballandoola, or Brie, and the FIRST occupants with stock, the Commissioner of the Warrego be instructed by the Government to report on their applications as soon as possible, and if all the land on the Culgoa is now taken up by the tenders of others having been accepted, they may be allowed to occupy five or six blocks, of five miles each, on the Ballandoola or Brie, where they now are, and which land your Committee have been given to understand has not yet been taken up.

—read.

Committee deliberated.

No. 1 amended, on motion of Mr. Robertson, and agreed to.

Recommendation 2, viz. :—

- (2.) That previous occupation should be allowed to any person who occupies with stock where the Run contains water; and in the case of dry or unwatered Runs, who commences improvements at once—provided that he forwards his tender for the Run, within two months, to the Crown Lands Commissioner's Office—giving a particular description of the country applied for, stating marked trees, &c. And that this first occupation, if he is eligible in other respects, shall give him undisputed possession; and the occupation of Runs proceed upon the principle of unrestricted free selection.

Motion made (Mr. Robertson),—That this recommendation be expunged.

Question,—That the recommendation proposed to be expunged stand part of the Report—negatived.

No. 2 expunged.

Recommendation 3 (now 2), viz. :—

- (3.) That to prevent improper speculation in Runs, and to secure that the applicant for a Run intends to be the bonâ fide occupier, it be a regulation that no applicant for a new Run shall, when his tender is accepted, be allowed to alienate or dispose of said Run until the same shall have been stocked to one-third of its estimated capabilities.

—read.

Committee deliberated.

No. 3 (2), amended.

Motion made (Mr. Robertson) and Question put,—That No. 3 (2) be further amended by the addition of the following words, viz. :—

“The Committee hope that, in other respects, the provisions contained in the ‘Crown Lands Occupation Bill,’ now before Parliament, will be found sufficiently stringent to check, in future, the pernicious system of speculation in Tenders for Runs, and thus afford greater facilities for the bonâ fide tenderer than has been the case heretofore.”

That where Runs have been occupied for a period, and it has been found by the Commissioner that the occupier or lessee has taken up land two or three miles in excess, but has had a lengthened holding, such occupier should pay increased and even back assessment, rather than, old boundaries should be disturbed and greater confusion created.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE THE

SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

SYSTEM OF TENDERING FOR RUNS.

TUESDAY, 19 FEBRUARY, 1861.

Present:—

Mr. RUSDEN,
Mr. NATE,Mr. WATT,
Mr. MORRIS,

Mr. HOSKINS.

FRANCIS TOWNSEND RUSDEN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Lockhart Millar, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You were a partner of Mr. Maxwell's? I was.
2. And you went out looking for runs? Yes.
3. When did you go? We left Sydney on the 3rd July, 1858, and arrived at a piece of land which we selected for a run somewhere about the middle of October, after having travelled down the Lachlan, the Murrumbidgee, and the Murray, and up the Darling—I suppose perhaps twelve or thirteen hundred miles.
4. Will you state where the land was that you found—was it at the junction of the Gulgoa and Baliandoola? We did not know the junction at that time. It was then almost an unknown country to us, and we had to take it from the nearest house, which was Mr. Dangar's, of Bunawonna.
5. By Mr. Hoskins: Is it in the Gwydir District? We were told that it was in the Gwydir District when we came to Sydney. We were so instructed at the head office, and we applied in accordance with that instruction, which of course we looked upon as official.
6. About thirty miles from Bunawonna? Yes.
7. That is on the Barwan? It is generally called the Lower Barwan.
8. It is a creek, is it not? It may be called a river, because it comes from the Condamine, but it is dry in the summer time, and there are only waterholes here and there down at our place.
9. By the Chairman: It was in October you selected this land? Yes, in October, 1858.
10. What did you do then? We then came direct to Sydney, stopping only one day at Oakey Creek.
11. You then went to the Surveyor General's Office and tendered, did you not? Yes. We got instructions at the office. We took with us Mr. Dunsmure.
12. You took with you a professional man? Yes, he said he expected to see Colonel Barney, but that gentleman was out, and we saw a gentleman whom we supposed to be the chief clerk, or something of that sort. I do not know his name. After the map was produced I pointed out the locality, and asked in what district it was situated, and he said all the Gulgoa was situated in the Gwydir District. This was one of the chief reasons for going to the Survey Office, and we noticed it particularly, because we were desirous of knowing about the district in which the land we wanted to apply for was situated.

L. Millar,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1861.

- L. Millar,
Esq.
19 Feb., 1861.
13. In order that you might make no mistake? In order that we might make no mistake, because it was near the confines of three districts. We were therefore determined not to go by hearsay reports, but at once to apply to the fountain head.
14. What three districts was it near the confines of? There was the Wellington, the Gwydir, and the Bligh. I believe it was not very far from the Albert.
15. The Albert is a district proclaimed recently, I believe? Yes.
16. You tendered? Yes.
17. What was the date of your tender? I cannot say to a day; but it was in the beginning of November.
18. I can tell you—it was the 7th or the 9th? My impression was that it was before that; but, at any rate, it was at the beginning of November.
19. By Mr. Morris: Was it in time for the first Monday in November? I think not.
20. By the Chairman: You tendered early in November, and your tender was opened on the 6th December? Exactly. I may here state, that when Mr. Dunsmore asked if there would be any objection to his friends taking possession of this land, the reply was, "By no means." We were, in fact, recommended to take possession. What is confirmatory that he told us the Gwydir District is the fact, that he said there was no Commissioner appointed for that district just then, but that as soon as he should be appointed there would be no time lost in completing our titles—or something like that.
21. And the next proceeding was, you took possession? We took possession.
22. And you remained in undisturbed possession how long? We were upon the Brie, if not upon the Gulgoa adjoining, somewhere about the latter end of May, 1859; and we remained in undisturbed possession, I may say, until lately. I cannot tell the exact date when it was given to Mr. Lord.
23. But did not Mr. Sibthorpe first order you off? Yes.
24. Who did order you off? Mr. Huthwaite told us that he had come to put Mr. Lord in possession of this land. Mr. Yeo (Mr. Lord's agent) told us that we must remove in seven days. We had removed some time before that to another part.
25. By Mr. Hoskins: When were you ordered to remove—at what date? When we were ordered to remove, we were removing to get the sheep washed and shorn over the Brie. We had a shearing station at the Brie.
26. By Mr. Watt: Were you going to abandon the station? Certainly not. The sheep had mostly been removing for washing, and we did not dispute this* part where the few sheep were. Although it was a place where we had erected sheds and shorn the sheep last year, we were not going to dispute that with Mr. Lord. I have a letter from Mr. Yeo (Mr. Lord's superintendent), stating that we must move beyond that. Although perhaps we had as good a right to the land as Mr. Lord, still we did not dispute it, because it was possible that Mr. Lord's tenders might have been sent in before ours for this particular part.
27. By Mr. Morris: Had you notice from the Commissioner to remove? No, not from the Commissioner.†
28. Had you no other notice to remove excepting that of Mr. Lord's superintendent? Only that of Mr. Lord's superintendent.
29. By the Chairman: You say here (in a "statement of facts" handed in by witness, vide Appendix A)—"We remained in peaceable possession until lately, when Mr. Commissioner Huthwaite came and put Mr. Lord in possession of all the land on the Gulgoa River which we had selected and occupied? Yes.
30. By Mr. Morris: But Mr. Huthwaite must have warned you? No; he merely said he had come to put Mr. Lord, through his agent, Mr. Yeo, in possession of this land. And Mr. Yeo said, "You must remove your sheep in seven days," or something to that effect.
31. Did you receive no written notice from Mr. Huthwaite? No.
32. By Mr. Hoskins: How long were you in possession of the run before you were ordered to remove? About fifteen or sixteen months.
33. By the Chairman: You occupied early in May, 1859, and got notice peremptorily to quit in December, 1860? It was earlier than that, I think.
34. November, 1860? It must have been earlier, I think.
35. You were shearing? We were just beginning to shear, I think, at that time. Here is a letter from Mr. Yeo about that part which we do not intend to dispute. (Letter read. Vide Appendix B.)
36. That was previous to the shearing—but you did shear before you left? That part of it we never intended to dispute, and Mr. Yeo allowed us to lamb a flock of sheep on it afterwards.
37. By Mr. Morris: Does that letter refer to a portion of ground to which you consider yourself entitled? No—not at all.
38. What part do you claim, if you do not claim this? I claim according to the tenders of 1859.
39. By the Chairman: The land you claim must be contiguous to this piece? Yes.
40. Was it above or below? Above the sixteen miles.
41. That is where your principal establishment was? Yes; we did take possession of that.
42. In which direction? Up the Gulgoa.
43. Above this sixteen miles? Yes, or thereabouts.
44. And what extent of country would you have after these sixteen miles were given up? Twenty-five miles, five blocks, above that.

45.

* NOTE (by witness on revision):—This alludes to the sixteen miles at the junction of the Gulgoa and Ballandoola.

† NOTE (by witness on revision):—I meant, in this answer, Mr. Commissioner Huthwaite.

L. Millar,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1861.

45. On each side? No, not on each side.
46. Five blocks continuously? Yes.
47. Of five square miles each? We claim five miles frontage and ten miles back.
48. By Mr. Morris: To each block? Yes.
49. By the Chairman: That would be twenty-five miles frontage? Yes—I believe the Commissioner has given Mr. Lord eight miles of frontage in blocks—that he has given him frontage on both sides.
50. Then Mr. Lord has these sixteen miles? Yes.
51. And did he claim the whole of the twenty-five miles? Yes, and more. He claimed the whole of the twenty-five miles, and we have his own superintendent's word that he claims the sixteen miles.
52. By Mr. Morris: Have you been dispossessed? We have been ordered to leave.
53. These twenty-five miles? Yes.
54. But you had notice from the Government that your tenders were not accepted, had you not? No.
55. By Mr. Hoskins: Then there is nothing to prevent you occupying the twenty-five miles? No.
56. By Mr. Morris: Do you know if any person other than yourself has obtained this land? The Commissioner* came and told us that he was sent there expressly to put Mr. Lord in possession of thirty-nine miles from the junction, and this included our twenty-five miles.
57. But you have had no written notice from the Chief Commissioner? No.
58. And none as to the acceptance of your tenders? No.
59. But have you had any notice from him of the acceptance of your tenders at any time? We just got the same notice which other people get, I believe—that the tenders had been referred to the District Commissioner. (Vide Appendix C.)
60. You received no final answer? No.
61. By Mr. Hoskins: You received this notice of your tenders being referred to the District Commissioner in December, 1858? Yes, or some time thereabout.
62. Have you been told that Mr. Lord's application was made anterior to your own? We were not told so.
63. By the Chairman: Will you state about what time you left? We have never left. We have sheep there still—upon the Ballandoola.†
64. I thought you sold them? A part of them only were sold—22,000. There may be five or six thousand remaining. None of them are delivered yet.
65. By Mr. Hoskins: Then you are still in possession of this land? We have still sheep upon the Ballandoola.
66. Were you authorized to put your stock on the run by any Government officer? We were, most decidedly. We were authorized by the head of the office to take possession immediately—the sooner the better. This was said in the presence of Mr. Dunsmure.
67. By the Chairman: Where are these sheep you now have running? On part of the Ballandoola.
68. Upon what part—on, or above the five blocks of which you have been speaking? It is not on the five blocks, but we expect it is on a part that we tendered for at the same time.
69. It is on the Ballandoola, not on the Gulgoa? Yes, it is on the seven blocks on the Ballandoola, we do not mention the name.
70. When did you tender for the run on which the sheep now are? At the same time that we tendered for the 25 miles on the Gulgoa; the sheep are now on two blocks on the Ballandoola.
71. You went out and found the country first? Yes.
72. By Mr. Mate: How has it been admitted? The Commissioners and all admit it, and the tenders shew it. That can be well proved. In about ten days after Mr. Huthwaite put Mr. Lord in possession the whole was offered for about £5,000, and he offered, I believe (through Mr. Yeo) to put a thousand head of cattle on this other land and sell it for £7,000. I think the land is now in the hands of Mr. Brewster for sale.
73. By Mr. Watt: There are no cattle on it yet then? No.
74. And there is no permanent water? No; there is water in wet seasons.
75. By Mr. Hoskins: Your property is still on a portion of these runs? Yes.‡
76. By the Chairman: You have already said that they were not, I believe, I want the Committee to understand the matter fully. Are your sheep on the twenty-five miles which you say Mr. Lord has now got but which you tendered for? No.
77. By Mr. Hoskins: Nobody has threatened to dispossess you from the land on the Brie or the Ballandoola? No, not yet, but we were afraid of having to move at a moment's warning, and were obliged to sell off all the sheep, and break up the establishment, and dissolve partnership. In fact it has ruined me entirely, and the recovering of the land would not compensate for all the loss I have sustained. The whole of my lifetime since I arrived here in the year 1825, with the exception of ten years spent at home, has been spent in the bush, and here am I in my old age turned adrift, as it were, much poorer than I was when I arrived in the year 1825.
78. By Mr. Hoskins: Has Mr. Dunsmure got all the correspondence between you and the Government in reference to this matter? He has.

APPENDIX.

* NOTE (by witness on revision):—Mr. Huthwaite.† NOTE (by witness on revision):—Not the Gulgoa of thirty-nine miles, of which Mr. Huthwaite put Mr. Lord in possession.‡ NOTE (by witness on revision):—On the two blocks on the Ballandoola.

APPENDIX.

A.

STATEMENT of facts respecting the selecting of certain lands on the Gulgoa and Ballandoola Rivers, by Lockhart Millar and Thomas Maxwell.

On the 3rd July, 1858, we (L. Millar and Thomas Maxwell) started from Sydney to look for new runs in the interior. After travelling about 1,400 miles, we selected certain lands on the Gulgoa and Ballandoola Rivers, and returned to Sydney in November following. Accompanied by Mr. Dunsmore (solicitor), we went to Colonel Barney's office. On the map being produced, and the locality pointed out, we were told that our selection was in the Gwydir District; we were also recommended to take possession as soon as possible. In accordance with such instructions and recommendations, we immediately applied for the lands in question and prepared to take possession. About the beginning of June following, we took possession of the said lands, with nearly 10,000 sheep, and all the necessaries for forming a permanent settlement. Since then, we have brought to the station between 6,000 and 7,000 more sheep, with the necessary supplies for a long time to come. We have laid out a great deal of money in improvements, such as damming, building huts, sheep yards, woolshed and press, stockyards, &c., and have remained in peaceable possession until lately, when Mr. Commissioner Huthwaite came and put Mr. Lord in possession of all the lands on the Gulgoa River which we had selected and occupied since the above mentioned dates; and Mr. Yeo (Mr. Lord's agent), threatened us with law proceedings unless we removed our sheep in seven days. The only reason, as far as we can learn, for such unparalleled injustice is, that we ought to have applied in the Wellington instead of the Gwydir District. In vain we urged that our application was in strict accordance with the highest official information procurable, and that it is contrary to law and justice that any party can take advantage of their own wrong; and, moreover, that the lands in question were near the confines of three different districts. Thus, after opening up a new country, civilising the blacks, and expending all our available resources in improvements, we have been obliged to sell off 23,000 sheep, to make room for Mr. Lord, who does not require the land, but immediately offers the said lands for sale, and they are now in the market in the hands of Mr. Brewster. It is admitted that the dates of our tenders are many months prior to those of Mr. Lord.

LOCKHART MILLAR.

I remain, &c.,

83. By Mr. Morris: Have you made inquiries at the Chief Commissioner's Office? Yes.

84. And what answer did you receive? The answer I got from the gentleman who now fills Mr. Halloran's place, was, that a number of tenders had been sent in for the same runs—which were stated to be in other districts—and that other persons had got them; but still there was no reply to the parties first tendering for them. They admitted that other persons who had tendered since had actually got the runs, and yet there was no answer given to the former applicants.

85. What reason did they give for not attending to your application? They said they had received no report from the Commissioners to whom my tenders had been referred. They did not state positively that such was the case in reference to these particular runs which I had tendered for, but that there was a considerable number upon which no report had been made by the Commissioners, and that, probably, mine were among them.

86. By Mr. Hoskins: Did you make a personal application in each case to the Crown Lands Office in Sydney—or the Surveyor General's Office? I have repeatedly applied.

87. For these runs? Yes.
88. Did you give a description of the country? I did.
89. In the tender? Yes, according to form.
90. Did you mention the names of persons who held runs contiguous? In some cases I did, but in others I could not ascertain the name of any person who held the contiguous land.
91. Did you give any distinctive marks? I did, and also the native names as far as I was able to ascertain them on the spot from the natives. (Witness read a letter from the Crown Lands Office, dated 8th December, 1859.)
92. By the Chairman: That letter is in reply to a communication of your own, making inquiry concerning these runs? Yes, it is the only answer I received; it is dated 8th December, 1859, is signed by Mr. McLean, and states that they are still waiting for Commissioner's report.
93. Have you inquired since? Yes; but they had received no report.
94. By Mr. Hoskins: Who is now Crown Lands Commissioner in the Gwydir District? I think they told me that Mr. Sharp had been appointed instead of Mr. Oliver.
95. You have never received any official information that any person has taken up those blocks for which you applied? No.
96. And the letter read is the only letter you have received in addition to your tenders being opened? Yes. I came to Sydney shortly after I put in the tenders, for the purpose of trying to ascertain, at the office, whether they were all correct, but they could give me no certain information as to the district. It was all supposition. The districts were all so mixed up together that it was impossible for any person who was not a surveyor to tell what district lands were in. They could not give me a bit more information than that which I possessed.
97. By Mr. Morris: Were your descriptions so distinct and plain that they could be distinguished by a Commissioner who might visit the ground? Yes; they were so distinct that any Commissioner might know. I gave the creeks and the native names.
98. By Mr. Hoskins: You never, in any instance, saw the local Commissioners? No. I saw Mr. Robertson when I first came to Sydney, and he told me there was no Commissioner for the District then, but that he had that morning sanctioned the appointment of this same Mr. Sharp. I presume. I wrote to Mr. Sharp, asking him when he would go out. I received a reply that he had received his appointment, but not his commission and instructions. I waited for six months longer, and then called at the office in Sydney again. I did not see Mr. Robertson, but the clerk told me that the appointment of Mr. Sharp was all off, and that there was no Commissioner for the District. I saw afterwards by the papers that Mr. Huthwaite was appointed.

APPENDIX A.

Portland House, Sackville Reach,
7 February, 1861.

Sir,

Perceiving, by the report of proceedings in Parliament, that you have moved for and obtained a Select Committee in reference to the occupation of Crown Lands, I take the liberty of addressing you, trusting that the importance of the subject will be a sufficient apology for my obtruding upon your notice, and submitting the following particulars on the subject:—

1st.—In May, 1859, I tendered for three runs in the Gwydir District, named in margin, and on 23rd June following, I received notice from Chief Commissioner, stating that my tenders had been opened on the 6th instant, and been referred to the Commissioner of the District for his report. Since that time I have not been able to obtain any further information about them.

2nd.—In July, 1859, I tendered for two runs, named in margin—one in the Wellington District and the other in the Gwydir District—and I received notice from Chief Commissioner, dated 25th August following, acknowledging receipt of tenders opened on the 1st instant, and informing me that they awaited the report of the Commissioner of the District. Since then I have heard nothing further about them.

3rd.—In the month of August, 1859, I tendered for three runs, named in margin, situated in the District of Bligh, and I received a notice from the Chief Commissioner, dated 9th November following, acknowledging receipt of tenders opened on the 3rd ult., and informing me that they awaited the report of the Commissioner of the District. Since then I have been unable to get any information about them.

I beg leave to add that I have been concerned in grazing for the last twenty years, in connection with my brother, until about seven years ago he sold his cattle and stations, and I then tendered for two runs in the Marano District, and, after waiting two years, I received a notice from the C.C.L., stating that my brother had tendered for and got the blocks that I had applied for; but I ascertained some time after that Mr. Commissioner Bligh had got them in another person's name. I then had to allow the person who bought my brother's stations one-half of the increase of my cattle for the run of the remainder; and, about two years ago, I went out to select new runs, and, after riding over unoccupied country, but claimed by Mr. A. or Mr. B., until I was sick at heart, I eventually sent in the tenders alluded to above—and here I am still being obliged to sacrifice one-half my stock, and the remainder neglected, solely owing to the corruption or neglect of officials, and the facility the regulations afford for such practices. Is it not a crying shame that, while I was out looking for runs, I rode over hundreds of miles of fine country without the track of a beast upon it, and all held by parties that could not occupy it—and I cannot get a block to run my cattle on unless I descend to countenance the corrupt system that is generally believed to be adopted by the only successful parties, that is, to bribe officials to do that for which they obtain their salaries?

I am informed that the Hon. J. Robertson has taken up 40 miles on the Gulgoa, including several of the blocks that I applied for.* That corruption is practised there can be no doubt; and there are two ways that I would suggest, as tending to remedy the evils generally complained of—that is, for the first occupant to hold the run, provided he pay the rent within the specified time; and, second, that all applications be opened, and published in the Government Gazette every fortnight.

The oft-repeated boast of the present Government—that they would put a stop to run-hunting, as they call it—is a perfect delusion; they do not evince the least sincerity in their desire to do so. I suggested to the Secretary for Lands, before the Assessment Bill was passed, the above-named conditions, as a simple and effective remedy.

F. T. Rusden, Esq., M.P.,
Legislative Assembly,
Macquarie-street, Sydney.

I have, &c.,
JAS. B. JOHNSTON.

* I have not read official notice to that effect.

William

William Cummings, Esq., M.P., called in and examined:—

W. Cummings
Esq., M.P.
19 Feb., 1861.

99. By Mr. Hoskins: You are aware, of course, that this Committee is constituted to inquire into the system of tendering for runs in new country. Has it come within your knowledge that great difficulty exists in obtaining possession of blocks of unoccupied country by persons who have made application for them? Very great difficulty exists. I have known parties who have tendered for runs—myself among the rest—

100. In what district? In the squatting district of Wellington.

101. Have you, in those cases, sent in applications to the Crown Lands Office? To the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

102. In Sydney? In Sydney. He forwards them to the District Commissioner for his report.

103. But does he not also send an intimation to you that he has received your application, and referred it to the District Commissioner? Yes, that is the general mode of acting.

104. In every case in which you have applied have you received this intimation from the Chief Commissioner? Yes.

105. When you made your applications did you give an accurate description of the country for which you applied—did you give distinctive features, such as mountain ranges, rivers, or creeks? Yes, as near as I possibly could I gave the boundary lines of the runs I applied for—the natural boundary lines or otherwise, as the case might be.

106. And where persons held blocks of country contiguous to the country applied for by you, did you also give the boundary line of their runs? I described them as near as I possibly could in the absence of survey.

107. Can you give us the dates of any of those applications to which you have referred? No, I could not, without reference.

108. I suppose it is a considerable time since? I think in one case three years elapsed from the time of my application before I was put in possession of the land. This was in consequence of some mismanagement of the District Commissioner, and I may say that, as far as it has come under my notice, the great evil that has existed in reference to this matter has emanated from the District Commissioners.

109. By the Chairman: From delay in making their reports? From delay in making their reports, and their complete dereliction of duty.

110. By Mr. Hoskins: In what manner? When licenses were first issued, Colonel Barney, who was Commissioner, sent a circular to the then acting District Commissioners, instructing them before recommending a new license to issue to ascertain whether any of the land applied for had been previously occupied or not. Very great injury, however, has been done to the smaller and humbler squatter, in applying for runs, by the Commissioner granting them without reference to the boundary lines of runs previously applied for and occupied. I remember one instance particularly (Captain Mayne was then District Commissioner of Wellington), where a man, under the instruction of the Commissioner, took up a portion of a run occupied by Dr. Ramsay. Dr. Ramsay brought two actions against him—one after another. In the first he obtained £750 damages, and £500 in the second. It was the means of ruining the man. Many such cases have come under my notice, where the blame has been traceable to the District Commissioner. The Chief Commissioner is in no way to be blamed, because they did not comply with the instructions they received from his office.

111. By Mr. Morris: In this case, you appear to make a charge against an officer of the Government without sufficiently explaining the matter. You say that a tenderer having been misled by the District Commissioner took possession of country belonging to others, and thus laid himself open to action? Yes.

112. By Mr. Hoskins: Do you think this difficulty arises from the local Commissioners not making themselves acquainted with the boundaries of runs applied for? That is my impression.

113. By Mr. Morris: In the case to which you have referred, did the Commissioner go upon the ground and examine it? No.

114. What was the name of the run? Upper Dalbunty Plains. It ran down to Billabong Creek, and comprised three miles of Dr. Ramsay's run.

115. But did not the description given in the application for lease in the case to which you have referred justify the Commissioner in declaring that the run—although occupied—did not come within the land applied for on lease? I should say not. If he had done his duty it was quite easy for any Commissioner to have ascertained at least the extreme point of any run, because they are described in the applications for lease—giving the number of miles north, east, south, or west, as the case may be. If the Commissioner had gone on to the ground, he would have been able to have come to a tolerably correct conclusion, although he might not have struck the cardinal point exactly, it would answer the purpose.

116. In this particular case, did not the Commissioner go on to the ground? No.

117. Then he reported that the country was vacant, not having himself visited it? I will say this;—he recommended the license to issue, and the license did issue. I think it was Mr. Wright that recommended the license to issue; but, directly afterwards, Captain Mayne came there as Commissioner, and on various reports being made to him about the encroachment, he visited the ground, and said the run could not cross Billabong Creek, meaning David Ramsay's run, although it extended three miles north of said creek.

118. Then the fact is that Captain Mayne overruled the decision of Mr. Wright? He supported it all he could.

119. By Mr. Watt: He said this creek should be the boundary, without any reference to the old application? Without any reference to Dr. Ramsay urging a claim to eight miles, which was apparent on the face of his application for lease.

120. The Commissioner misled the man? Yes, he did.

121. By Mr. Hoskins: From what has come under your own observation, what period of time has elapsed between the notification from the Government that your application has been received and the obtaining possession of the land applied for? I have tendered for some runs, and I really believe that of late years I have always received from the Chief Commissioner an answer to my application as soon as any one could reasonably expect it. W. Cummings
Esq., M.P.
19 Feb., 1861.
122. By Mr. Morris: Accepting the tender? Oh, no—announcing that my tender had been received and forwarded to the District Commissioner.
123. By Mr. Hoskins: But what length of time has generally elapsed between this notification of the receipt of your application and your being put in possession of the country applied for? Generally a long period of time—ranging from one year to three. I have had a case pending now about twelve months. Although the land is not more than seventy miles from the residence of the Commissioner I cannot get him to visit it.
124. Have you known instances where persons have applied for unoccupied blocks of country—received information of the acceptance of their tender—referred to the local Commissioner, and yet where afterwards some other persons have been put in possession of the land so applied for? I know a case which has been pending for the last two years, where, although the District Commissioner had stated that the land was vacant, and recommended the acceptance of the tender, the applicant has not obtained possession of the land.
125. Has any one else obtained possession? There is something wrong in some quarter.
126. Is the land still vacant? The Commissioner says the land is vacant. No person is paying for it, but some person is using it.
127. By the Chairman: Is it an unauthorized occupation? There are cattle running over it, but it is not held under lease.
128. By Mr. Hoskins: Has it come under your observation that persons have applied for unoccupied blocks of country—that they have not heard even incidentally that any other person has applied for them, but have been informed that their applications have been received and referred to the local Commissioner for his report, and yet that before they have received an answer some other person has been put in possession? Yes, there was a case of my own.
129. Will you explain the case? When Mr. Whitty was Commissioner of the Wellington District I applied for a block of country called Trundell. Subsequently to my application to the Chief Commissioner in reference to the matter the local Commissioner visited the ground. He found that there were no other applications for the land, and (as he told me) that there was no objection to my application. Under that impression I sent out three men with the necessary materials and erected stockyards at a cost of £130 or £140, but in a short time after I found that the tender of another man had been accepted.
130. Recommended by the local Commissioner? It had been recommended by the same Commissioner, Mr. Whitty.
131. And at a date subsequent to your application? He told me there was no tender received for that part of the country but mine.
132. By Mr. Morris: He only told you this verbally—you had no written document or notice that your tender had been accepted, had you? No; but he had all the applications for land in the Wellington District, and he produced them to me. From those documents he told me there was no other application in for this block of country. On the faith of that I sent the men over the next day to put up a yard, and, just as I had the yard finished, I found that the Commissioner had recommended the tender of a Mr. Twaddel for the same country. I was really surprised.
133. Did you ascertain whether Mr. Twaddel's application was dated subsequently? I did.
134. And you found that it was subsequent to yours? I did find that it was so afterwards, and under some very strange circumstances.
135. At the Chief Commissioner's Office? Yes. He did not get the land however. It remained vacant for three years. There was something very ungentlemanly in the matter.
136. Then this Mr. Twaddel did not occupy this country although his tender was accepted? The tender was recommended by Mr. Whitty, but it was not accepted by the Government.
137. The Government did not approve of the recommendation? They thought there was something strange about it.
138. Did you subsequently get the land? Yes, three years afterwards. I applied again and my fresh application was successful.
139. By Mr. Hoskins: It remained vacant three years? Somewhere about that time, perhaps a little longer.
140. By Mr. Watt: Did the stock of any person occupy the country during that time? No, it is only in wet weather that there is any water there.
141. Did they then occupy it? Oh, yes; cattle belonging to different persons fed over it.
142. Did any one set up a superior claim to it which would be a cause for the Government not complying? No.
143. By Mr. Morris: Did you bring prominently under the notice of the Government Mr. Whitty's conduct in reference to this matter? I did, and he went back to examine the country by order of the Chief Commissioner.
144. By Mr. Hoskins: It is a fact which has come under your notice that great delay has taken place between the receipt of applications for runs and the taking of possession? You do not know when you may hear of the acceptance of your tender; it may be one, two, three, or four years.
145. By Mr. Morris: When the Commissioners examine the ground which has been tendered for previous to making a report favourable to the acceptance of a tender, do they mark it at all in any way? During the last twenty-four years I have scarcely ever seen a Commissioner on the ground to mark it or anything else. I have seen Mr. Beckham twice, I think, Mr. Whitty

W. Cummings Esq., M.P. Whitty once, and Mr. Mayne once. Those are the only times I have ever seen or heard of the Commissioner being on the land at all.

19 Feb., 1861. 146. By Mr. Hoskins: According to the new regulations, are not the Crown Lands Commissioners paid by fees? No, not now; Commissioners are appointed as valuers. They are paid according to their work. The District Commissioners have been paid a yearly salary.

147. By Mr. Morris: In the unsettled districts? Yes, in the squatting districts.

148. By Mr. Hoskins: Then the District Commissioners take the ipse dixit of the applicant as to extent and boundaries of the run instead of visiting it themselves? That has been generally the case up to the present time, I believe, but I could not say what has been the general routine during the past twelve months. I believe they are now a little more cautious in not recommending the acceptance of a tender, until they have ascertained something about the piece of pastoral country applied for. But previously I am satisfied they never saw the country or locality for which they recommended a license to issue; if they had, they could not have made so many mis-statements. I consider District Commissioners to be the greatest evil ever inflicted upon the squatting community of the interior of this country; they have been at the root of all the actions which have been brought before the Supreme Court, in reference to boundaries.

149. By the Chairman: What remedy would you propose? It has been apparent to me for a long time, that a man applying for a piece of pastoral country for grazing purposes ought to be allowed to go at once and select it; and, having marked his boundary lines, take possession of it, and send in his application to head quarters through the Commissioner.

150. By Mr. Morris: But supposing that one occupier happened to clash with another in reference to boundaries, who is to decide? Any man possessing neighbourly principles or gentlemanly feelings, would be careful not to encroach upon his neighbour's boundary.

151. But supposing they did not possess those gentlemanly feelings. I apprehend that if those Commissioners had been competent to survey the run, and had been compelled to make a rough survey—that these difficulties to which you have alluded, could not very well have arisen? No doubt the boundary lines not being defined has been the cause of so many actions in the Supreme Court; they would do their duty—they would be quite competent properly to perform all the duties required of them.

152. By Mr. Hoskins: You think prior occupancy ought to confer a right of possession? Not to great extents of country; some men have claimed as much land as they could ride over in a week, never intending to occupy it, to sell their interest therein to the injury of the bonâ fide squatter.

153. If you occupy any new country, you consider it a matter of necessity that the Commissioner should visit the land you occupy and point out the boundaries? According to my description as nearly as possible.

154. By Mr. Morris: To shew what you are entitled to under the regulations? Yes.

155. By the Chairman: Are you aware how this matter is arranged in Queensland? Yes, I have read the regulations.

156. There I believe it is first occupancy? Yes.

157. With a reference to the Commissioner by tender within two months after occupancy? Yes.

158. By Mr. Mate: How did you get at the assessment of your runs if the Commissioner has never been there to assess them? One has been assessed by the Commissioner I believe, and one by guess.

159. By the Commissioner? Yes, by the Commissioner and another gentleman; but he assessed it in the Town of Bathurst.

THURSDAY, 21 FEBRUARY, 1861.

Present:—

MR. WATT,
MR. MATE,

MR. MORRIS,
MR. HOSKINS.

FRANCIS TOWNSEND RUSDEN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Dunsmore called in and examined:—

Mr. John Dunsmore. 160. By the Chairman: You are acquainted with Messrs. Millar and Maxwell? I am.

161. Sometime about the end of 1859, in November I believe, you went with Messrs. Millar and Maxwell to the Surveyor General's Office? Yes, both those gentlemen were with me

21 Feb., 1861. when I went there, but I cannot recollect the exact month.

162. You went, as I understood, to see that the tenders put in by them for certain country they had selected were formally drawn—that the run had been properly applied for? Yes. We went up to see what was doing in regard to the tender. The application for the country had been previously made, but since it had been put in had remained in abeyance.

163. You went professionally? I did.

164. As solicitor for Messrs. Maxwell and Millar? Exactly.

165. You inspected the maps in the Surveyor General's Office, along with these gentlemen, in order to ascertain the exact position of this country? I cannot say that I recollect examining any maps.

166. However, the information you obtained was that this country applied for was in the Gwydir

Gwydir District? Yes, we were told that the land applied for was in that district, and for that district the application was sent in.

Mr. John
Dunstaure.

167. The information you then obtained led you to suppose that Messrs. Maxwell and Millar had tendered correctly when they tendered for land in that district? Certainly; and, if I recollect correctly what occurred, Mr. Halloran mentioned that there was no Commissioner for that district at that time.

21 Feb., 1861.

168. Did Messrs. Maxwell and Millar ask if they would have permission to occupy the land? Yes, they said something about it.

169. And what answer was made? No particular reply was given. It was said that this was left entirely to themselves. It was a matter for their own decision.

170. They tendered I believe in November? I cannot recollect the date. I had a letter which would have enabled me to fix the time exactly, but my clerk informs me that Mr. Millar got that letter.

171. I have that letter. It has been handed to me by Mr. Millar, and it is my intention to lay it before the Committee. Can you give the Committee an idea of its contents? Yes. It was addressed to Messrs Maxwell and Millar at my office, and informed them that their application for the lease of certain country in the Gwydir District had been received, and that it had been sent to the Commissioner of that district to report upon.

172. That letter was dated the 6th December, 1859? Somewhere about that date.

173. The letter informed them that the application had been sent to the Commissioner to report upon, although only a few days previously you had been told by Mr. Halloran that there was no Commissioner for that district? Yes, that was what I understood him to say.

174. By Mr. Mate: What was the date at which you called at the Surveyor General's Office? It must have been in November, 1859.

175. And you received the letter in December? Yes.

176. Then a Commissioner may have been appointed in the interval between your visit and the receipt of the letter? Yes, that might be.

177. By the Chairman: The Committee have learnt that Messrs. Millar and Maxwell did occupy this country in May, 1859? Yes, I believe they did.

178. They repeatedly urged you to look after this business? They did.

179. And to go to the Surveyor General's Office for an answer to their application? Yes.

180. And you did go there repeatedly? Yes. I was there several times.

181. What was the answer you obtained? I was told that nothing had been done in the matter. At last I got a letter which I now produce. I made several applications. I think I was once or twice at the Survey Office before I got this letter. It is from Mr. Sibthorpe, Commissioner of Crown Lands for the District of Wellington, and dated the 10th September 1859. (Letter read. Vide Appendix A.)

182. That letter is addressed to Messrs Millar and Maxwell? Yes; and immediately on their receipt of it they forwarded it to me, as their legal adviser, with instructions to take such steps as I might consider necessary.

183. What course did you take? On the 13th October, 1859, I wrote the following reply to Mr. Sibthorpe. (Letter read. Vide Appendix B.)

184. Did you take any steps to communicate the contents of this letter to the Surveyor General? Yes, on the same day, the 13th October, 1859, I wrote the following letter to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands. (Letter read. Vide Appendix C.)

185. Did you get any reply to that letter? No. I received no communication from that office since then.

186. Did they not acknowledge the receipt of the letter? No. Once I went up to the office and saw Mr. Halloran; I asked him what had been done in the matter? He told me that my letter had been forwarded to the Commissioner of the District, but that nothing had been done in regard to it. This was about ten or twelve months afterwards.

187. By Mr. Morris: Were Messrs. Millar and Maxwell the first parties to tender for this piece of country? Yes, undoubtedly.

188. You ascertained that at the Survey Office? Yes. The record kept in the Surveyor General's Office shewed my clients to have been the first tenderers. I searched the records and found a memorandum of its having been received, with a statement of what had been done with it, and the particular date of its receipt.

189. By Mr. Mate: Has it been yet determined in what particular district this country is situated? No such determination has ever been officially communicated to me or to my clients.

190. By the Chairman: Have you ascertained, as a matter of fact, in what particular district it is situated? I have not.

191. Can you state anything more in regard to this case? No, I think I have mentioned all the circumstances in so far as I was connected with them.

192. And, from your knowledge of the circumstances, what is your impression of the case? I think that Messrs. Millar and Maxwell have been very unjustly dealt with.

193. You consider that a great injustice has been done to them? Most unquestionably.

194. Did they take every precaution in their power to guard against mistake? They did.

195. Both by going themselves to the Surveyor General's Office and by employing you to look after the matter? Certainly. They could not have done more than they did. These very letters that were written by me to Mr. Sibthorpe and the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands ought to have been sufficient to call the attention of the office to the mistake if there were any.

196. They took, to your knowledge, every precaution not to illegally settle down on Crown Lands? They did; every precaution.

197. Your impression then is that it would be impossible, from the state of affairs disclosed to you on your visit to the Survey Office, for any one to say in what district the piece of country was situated? I say that we were distinctly told that it was in the Gwydir District; and that the letter from Mr. Sibthorpe and my letter in relation to it ought to have made the office look after the matter.

Mr. John
Dunsmure.
21 Feb., 1861.

198. These letters ought, as you conceive, to have been sufficient to have prevented them from giving the country to any other person? Yes, certainly.

199. You took instant action on the receipt of Mr. Sibthorpe's letter? Yes. The dates will shew this, as Mr. Sibthorpe's letter went first to Messrs. Millar and Maxwell, and was then forwarded by them to me.

200. And you conceive that those gentlemen have been very unfairly dealt with? Yes, I think so.

APPENDIX.

A.

*Nileambiddy, Barco's River,
16 September, 1859.*

Sir,

I have the honor to request, that you will forthwith inform me by what authority you are in possession of Crown Lands on the River Biree, or Bellandool, or the Culgoa River, in this district.

As you are liable to a heavy penalty for illegal occupation, it behoves you to acquaint me as early as possible, otherwise I must proceed against you under the Act 4 Wm. 4th, No. 10, known as the Crown Lands Act.

I have, &c.,

L. H. SIBTHORPE,

C. C. L., Dist. Wellington.

Post Town, Molong.

Mr. Lockhart Millar, Culgoa River,
District Wellington.

B.

Sydney, 13 October, 1859.

Dear Sir,

Our clients, Messrs. Millar and Maxwell, have forwarded to us your letter to Mr. Millar, of the 16th September last, relative to his occupation of land on the Culgoa River. Our clients' tenders for the blocks in question were sent in to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands in November last, and were opened on the 6th December, and on the 11th January last we received a communication from the Chief Commissioner, stating that the same awaited the report of the Commissioner of the District, which report we have not yet received, owing, we presume, to recent alterations in the boundaries of the district.

We remain, &c.,

DUNSMURE & STAFFORD.

To the Commissioner of Crown Lands,
District of Wellington,
Molong.

C.

Sydney, 13 October, 1859.

Sir,

Our clients, Messrs. Millar and Maxwell, in November last tendered for certain blocks of country in the District of Gwydir, known by the names of as noted in the margin, and on the 11th January last we received a letter from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands intimating that the tenders had been opened on the 6th December last, and that the same then awaited the report of the Commissioner for the District.

A doubt having arisen from recent alterations in the boundaries of the district whether the lands tendered for by our clients might not now possibly form part of the Wellington District, we have the honor to request that you will be pleased to cause copies of the descriptions of the blocks tendered for by our clients to be forwarded to the Commissioner of the Wellington District.

We have, &c.,

DUNSMURE & STAFFORD.

To the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands,
Sydney.

S. B. Daniel, Esq., M.P., called in and examined:—

S. B. Daniel,
Esq., M.P.

21 Feb., 1861.

201. By the Chairman: You were at one time a Crown Lands Commissioner? Yes, for a short time.

202. What were your duties? The principal of them were reporting upon tenders for new runs, valuing and defining them, and assessing their grazing capabilities.

203. In what district? In the district of Bligh.

204. Do you consider the present system of tendering for runs to be an efficient one? I think it is one that might be improved very considerably.

205. Would you be good enough to point out what you conceive to be the principal objections in the present system? I had rather not speak about objections, but, if the Committee will permit me, I will submit to them what I conceive would be an improvement upon the present system.

206. Perhaps you will first state what you consider to be the defects of the system, and then the mode by which you would remedy them? The principal defect in the system is, in my opinion, the mode in which the system of tendering for runs is carried out, by means of sealed tenders. This causes proprietors of runs not only to suffer great loss, but also to experience great uncertainty. For instance—a person having a run adjoining a piece of country that was open for tender, and requiring it perhaps for some particular purpose, would be induced to offer a very large premium, for fear of its falling into other hands. In order order not to lose the place, and not knowing who was offering against him, he might perhaps be led to offer as high a premium as £200; and yet when the tenders come to be opened he will find that there has been no competitor against him, and that the large amount of premium he has offered has been virtually thrown away, so far as he is concerned. This all arises from the system of sealed tenders being employed instead of open competition. And again—let a person be ever so anxious to obtain a piece of country, and let it be ever so manifest that it ought to go to him, yet if another tenderer exceeds the amount he has offered, if only by one penny, that tenderer will have it. Now, the remedy I propose for this is, that all forfeited runs shall be put up for sale by public auction, at some place within the district in which they are situated; so that the persons most interested, or most desirous of obtaining the runs, may do so openly, and without having to resort to the secret system of sealed tenders.

S. B. Daniel,
Esq., M.P.
21 Feb., 1861.

207. These remarks of yours have reference to forfeited runs only? Yes, not to new runs.

208. What system would you propose with respect to new runs? With regard to new runs I think that the plan now established in Queensland is an admirable one; in fact, it is almost our old system that we had here. The selector goes out and chooses the piece of land he requires. He then puts down his own marks of the boundaries of his selection, and applies by letter to the Commissioner of the District, describing the locality and the boundary marks, for permission to occupy. A duplicate of this application is sent in at the same time, to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands. That is the Queensland plan; but I think that the Commissioner of the District ought to have it in his power, if he should find that the land applied for is not in the occupation of any other person, and that it will not interfere with any other selection, at once to give the applicant permission to occupy. The selector would then occupy the land, and if he did not stock it within six months or some reasonable period after selection, the land should be forfeited, and be open to be taken up by any other person; and further, to prevent irregularities, applications for new runs made to the Commissioners of Districts; they should be instructed to make monthly returns to the Chief Commissioner in Sydney of all applications for runs sent in to them.

209. I proposed the same thing, but my suggestion was that the returns should be sent in fortnightly? Yes, but I think monthly would be better, because it might happen that the Commissioner would be absent when the application arrived. Commissioners are liable to be called away from home on duty, and are sometimes absent for a fortnight together.

210. Your proposition then is in fact that the first occupant should have the land? Yes.

211. Of course then you would allow them to occupy before sending in their application and getting regular permission to do so? Yes, certainly. The Queensland Regulations say that the selector may occupy land for two months previous to tendering for it, and that such occupation shall not be illegal.

212. So long as he put in his tender within a reasonable time after taking up the land, you would allow the selector to occupy? Yes; and, further than this, I would allow persons having water frontages to rivers or creeks to be able to take up the back country behind them in a similar manner by going upon it and stocking it. In all cases I would insist upon the land being stocked within a certain time.

213. By Mr. Morris: You would allow the owners of water frontages to come in the same as any others upon the back country? Yes, in exactly the same way.

214. Have you not found that there has been immense delay in reporting upon tenders for runs; so much so that applicants have been kept for years out of the runs for which they have applied? Yes; I know from my own experience, that, when I took office as Commissioner of Crown Lands, there were lying in the office tenders for runs to be reported on that had been sent in five and six years previously.

215. Tenders for runs in your district? Yes; in the district of Bligh.

216. So long as six years? Yes; and in that time the applicants had repeatedly written to the Commissioner requesting to be put in possession of the runs. They were in fact anxious to pay the rent and assessment in order that they might have legal possession, and yet their applications had been neglected, and they had been allowed to enjoy the occupation and use of the land without paying a penny, because no other person would apply for it as it was well known that the parties occupying were the first applicants; at the same time the parties occupying would make no improvements on account of the absolute uncertainty of their tenure.

217. To what do you attribute this excessive delay? To favouritism in some instances, and design; as by not being reported on, and valued, and assessed, the occupiers were exempt from the payment of the rent and fees which rightly they ought to have paid. Sometimes it occurred from other reasons.

218. But what prevented you from reporting on them? I did report on them, and thence the inferences I drew in regard to the causes of delay. In many instances I found land for which application had been sent in to be vacant country, and put other parties in possession.

219. By the Chairman: Is it not your opinion that the roundabout, circumlocutory system of dealing with the tenders after they have been sent in causes very unnecessary delay? There can be no question about it.

220. For instance—the tender is sent in to the office in Sydney, and there it lies for perhaps nearly two months before it is opened; then, when opened, it is sent to the resident Commissioner? Not always; sometimes tenders are kept for a month before they are forwarded to the resident Commissioner.

221. But even suppose they are sent off directly, with orders that they shall be reported upon at once, the Commissioner may be in a different part of his district when they arrive, or he may have a press of business which demands his prior attention, and so be prevented from replying? Yes, no doubt such often happens; but the plan I have just sketched out would prevent all that.

S. B. Daniel, Esq., M.P.
21 Feb., 1861.

222. By Mr. Watt: But persons might desire to go and look out for land before they were ready to occupy it, as no man would like to drive stock about with him whilst engaged in selecting a piece of new country? What I would recommend is, that persons should be compelled to go upon the land they were going to take up, and see it for themselves before doing so. That, when they had satisfied themselves of its suitability, they should make a rough sketch of the land, describing where it is situated, and the natural features which may exist on its boundaries. This should be sent in to the resident Commissioner, with a duplicate copy for the Chief Commissioner in Sydney. These sketches could be roughly transferred to the map of the district, and by that means persons in Sydney could, by looking at the map, see what lands had been applied for and what were vacant. In this way applications could be decided upon at once, instead of being kept, as they now are, to be reported upon, for months and years, and then, after all, to be perhaps reported on unfavourably. One glance at the map will suffice, under my plan, to prevent a very great deal of inconvenience and delay.

223. By the Chairman: I think you said that the application and sketch should be sent in in the first instance to the resident Commissioner, and not to the head office in Sydney? Yes, sent to him in duplicate, one copy to be forwarded to the head office. The matter appears to me to be very simple. A rough lithographed map of the different squatting districts, shewing all the lands granted under lease, and all those open for selection, could easily be furnished by the Surveyor General, and obtainable at about a shilling each; and every person in the district might be possessed of one. On this could be sketched out the position of the run selected and applied for, and being forwarded to the head office in Sydney could be transferred to their general map of the district by the aid of the written descriptions accompanying the sketch. In this way, I conceive, all mistake would be prevented. Most of the districts are not very clearly defined. Wellington and Bligh, I know, are partly marked off.

224. By the Chairman: They are old districts and their boundaries are well known, but where new runs are likely to be taken up the exact position of the land would not be known? That is true, but it could be marked off upon the map so soon as it was known.

225. You are aware that the only chance of obtaining new runs is by pushing into new country? Yes; but there is one thing with regard to New South Wales, and that is that we have not now that large extent of territory that would be any serious inconvenience likely to arise from persons going upon unknown country. We have now no extent of unexplored country within our boundaries. Nearly every creek, river, and watercourse is now known, and almost the whole available territory is taken up already.

226. By Mr. Mate: Are you aware of any case in which injustice has been done in consequence of two tenders clashing—of their taking in the same land? I am, and I have very good reason for knowing it to be the case. And besides this, from the frequent alterations of the boundaries of districts, applicants have frequently lost runs for which they tendered in consequence of putting in their tender for land—describing it as situated in one district when, in fact, it is situated in another. This has been the case, and in some of the cases, I believe, the information upon which the parties acted, and which afterwards proved to be incorrect, was obtained from the Surveyor General's Office in Sydney. For instance, parties about to tender for a run have been told at the Survey Office that it was situated in the District of Bligh, when, in reality, it was in the District of Wellington.

227. By Mr. Morris: These boundaries of districts are not surveyed or marked in any way? No. The natural features of the country are taken as boundaries as nearly as possible. For instance, the District of Bligh adjoins the Districts of Gwydir, Liverpool Plains, and Wellington. Lately, however, a portion has been taken off the Bligh District, in order to form the new District of Warrego, so that persons not aware of this, and knowing the old boundaries, and not having seen the Gazette in which the new boundaries are set out, would be led to apply for land in the Bligh District, but would be refused on account of its being in the Warrego. They might describe all the natural features and boundaries of the run quite correctly, but would yet have their tender thrown out in consequence of describing the land to be in the "Bligh" District, when by the recent change it would be in the Warrego. Now, this is manifestly a great hardship upon applicants, and yet I have known equal uncertainty even in the Survey Office, within the Settled Districts. I happen to be aware that the Government have sold land which they described as being in the County of Cumberland, when it was, in fact, in the County of Cook; and yet, notwithstanding this mis-description, the parties who purchased were put in possession of the land, as its position was well known. The same thing ought to be done in the case of applications for runs, for if the natural boundaries of the land applied for be properly described, a mere mistake in the name of the district ought not to be allowed to affect the validity of the tender. These imaginary lines by which the country is cut up into districts have been adopted for the sake of official convenience, and they ought not to be turned into a means of inflicting injury upon applicants.

228. By Mr. Mate: Can you suggest any system by which persons tendering for runs can ascertain the exact district in which the land they apply for is situated? There is no system by which it can be done exactly at present, and that has led me to make the suggestions I have done in reference to the mode of sending in and dealing with the applications.

229. There is now no system by which the boundaries can be absolutely defined? None whatever. There is nothing further to guide the applicant than the plan of the district issued from the Survey Office.

230. By Mr. Morris: This is only on paper. There is no actual marking on the land itself? No, not generally.

231. So that, from having no landmarks on the ground itself, even though the person has the the lithographed plan in his hand, he would find it very difficult to fit in the plan to the ground in such a way as in some cases to be sure that his land is in the right district? No doubt he would; but there are also other evils which I have found out in the course of the performance of my duties. For instance, persons have sent in tenders for runs stating that the boundary commenced at such a point of a river or creek and terminated at such another, and that the area contained a certain quantity of acres; and yet, when I have come to examine the land for the purpose of estimating its grazing capabilities, I have found double the quantity of land contained in it to what the application had asked for. By this means these persons have been for a series of years in the occupation of twice the quantity of land they were entitled to, to the exclusion of others who might have come in had the application been properly framed.

S. B. Daniel,
Esq., M.P.

21 Feb., 1861.

232. You mean that the parties have taken up very much more in quantity than they have applied for? Yes; the area within their described boundaries being greater than stated in their tender. Their doing this completely shuts other people out, because the Chief Justice and the juries of the Supreme Court have decided that, where a person's cattle feed there, it is his run, and that he can maintain an action for trespass on it, pleading prior possession.

233. What would you advise in such a case as that? I have recommended that, where a person was found to have a larger area than he had applied for, an additional rate of license and assessment should be charged him in proportion to the extra quantity of land, or else that the extra quantity should be put up to public competition. I do not think that these persons should be altogether deprived of the opportunity of getting possession of this extra land, which has evidently fallen to them through the fault of the Government officials, the grazing capabilities of the runs not having been assessed as the land regulations direct; then, again, the grazing capabilities of runs vary very much; there are instances in which I have assessed the grazing capabilities of a run at twice the amount fixed by the leases, and in which the lessees have perfectly agreed in the correctness of my doing so. In these instances the runs were nearly all old ones, and the original grazing capabilities had been returned by the occupier on first taking possession, when the runs were new, and not of so much value in regard to the quantity and quality of the grass, as they are now, that they are older and more eaten off. Most of the Committee must be aware that runs in some kinds of country are greatly improved by having stock put on them, as the grass is never so good before sheep are placed on it as it is after it has been eaten off. For this reason, then, I would recommend a periodical adjustment of the assessment, so that where runs may have been assessed at a low grazing capability, the assessment may be increased as the capability of the run improves.

234. By the Chairman: You are aware, perhaps, that whilst some runs improve by having stock on them, others have greatly deteriorated? Yes, certainly; and I would suggest that the Government, at the expiration of the present leases, should re-value these runs, and that a reduction should be made in favour of those of which the grazing capabilities have been over-estimated.

235. Are you not aware that the boundaries of old runs—runs long taken up—have been altered? Yes, in the manner I have described; that is the only way.

236. By Mr. Morris: That is from being in excess of the quantity applied for in the first instance? Yes.

237. You did not take away from these parties the excess in their quantity of land? No; in no one instance. I merely reported the matter to the Government.

238. Have there been any instances of the Government acceding to the retention by these parties of the excessive quantity of land? I cannot say what the Government plan of action has been in the matter.

239. By the Chairman: Do you not think, that, in those cases where a larger quantity of land has been taken up than has been applied for, it would be better that the value of the extra quantity should be assessed, and the occupier be made to pay it, rather than that it should be taken away from him after long occupation? Undoubtedly. I would also mention to the Committee that a very great deal of inconvenience to stockholders arises from licensed surveyors going through the country measuring the runs. In doing this, they find pieces of vacant land lying perhaps between two runs, thence causing serious disturbances, and then give the information acquired to other persons, who at once put in an application for the land thus left. By these means, parties get themselves wedged in between two runs, to the perfect destruction of the two between which they get.

240. What remedy would you apply? I would recommend that whenever a licensed surveyor was occupied in laying down the boundaries of a run, he should be compelled to send in a duplicate of his map to the Chief Commissioner's Office, in order that it might be verified. These different maps could then be fitted to each other on the general map in the office, and thus any person would be able to see at a glance whether there was vacant land or not.

241. It is within my knowledge that portions of runs which have been marked for the last twelve years have been taken from the occupiers by the Government. These parties, however, say that they will resist the Government and go into Court, if there is any attempt made to dispossess them? I am aware that there have been such cases.

MR. WATT,MR. HOSKINS,
MR. MORRIS,

MR. LUCAS.

FRANCIS TOWNSEND RUSDEN, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. J. B. Rundle called in and examined:—

Mr. J. B.
Rundle.
27 Feb., 1861.

242. By the Chairman: I believe you know a great deal about the present system of tendering for runs? I do.
243. As agent or as principal? In both capacities.
244. Have you found that any great or vexatious delays have been experienced in getting answers to tenders after they have been sent in? That has been very much the case.
245. And persons have been prevented from getting their runs after they have applied for them? Exactly.
246. For any long period? Yes. In some cases for years.
247. It has been years after the tender has been sent in that they have been put in possession of the run tendered for? Yes.
248. Can you specify any particular instances in which this has been the case? Yes. I could mention three or four cases in which nearly five years have elapsed since the tenders have been sent in, and they have not yet been reported upon. Now I think of it, fully half-a-dozen cases of this kind have occurred on the Narran, and also in the new district of Warrego, formerly part of the Wellington District. Some of these were runs of another party, in which I have an interest.
249. And in those cases did you get no answer at all for five years? No answer at all.
250. Nothing, I suppose you mean, beyond the usual formal letter acknowledging the receipt of the tender? Nothing more. I need not say that these delays have been most vexatious, and that they have led to very great confusion, jealousy, and uncertainty, and that, in some instances, may be the cause of involving parties in heavy lawsuits.
251. Can you name any of these runs, concerning which there has been such great delay? I am not prepared to give the names of the runs, as I have not the necessary memoranda with me for doing so; but they are all out in the Warrego District. I can recollect that the name of one of the runs on the Narran was Will Bill.
252. Was that run occupied before the tender was accepted? It was, partially.
253. By Mr. Watt: By the person who tendered, or by other parties? By the tenderer.
254. By the Chairman: Is that run likely to be claimed by any other person? Yes. I believe there are three or four other parties expecting to get it, as from the way business is conducted each person imagines himself to be the first applicant.
255. And you attribute the difficulties that have arisen in this and other similar cases to the delay that has arisen in getting an answer to applications, and in being put in possession of the run applied for? Undoubtedly.
256. Have any difficulties arisen from the recent adjustment of the boundaries of old runs? Yes. On the Darling this adjustment, as it is called, has caused a perfect revolution, in consequence of the District Commissioner having shifted the whole of the boundaries up and down the river; he has shifted whole stations, one after another, until what was before the run of one man became the run of another. This has caused innumerable difficulties, and will be the source of endless lawsuits between the parties concerned.
257. How long have these runs that you speak of on the Darling been occupied? For the last ten years, at least.
258. And they have, in almost every case, I believe, defined boundaries? Yes, defined in so far as marking the trees on the frontages is concerned. They have not been regularly surveyed and measured frontages, but they have been sufficiently defined by marking the trees.
259. And in the recent adjustment these defined boundaries have been completely ignored? Yes, stations have been moved down entirely clear of their marked boundaries. For instance, for Mr. T. G. Dangar's run of Bunna Wunna has been moved a distance of six miles up on to Mr. G. Loder's run. This sort of thing causes inconceivable confusion.
260. In addition to this it causes a vast amount of injury to the occupant in regard to the shifting of the stock? Most decidedly. The moving stations in this manner necessitates the breaking up of the cattle camps on the old run, and this has a very injurious effect upon the cattle. It will also be next to impossible to break in cattle to a new run so near to the old run on which they were born, and the result will be perpetual quarrelling and impounding. Besides this, if we attempt to go up upon Mr. Loder's run we shall render ourselves liable to an action at law, with which Mr. Loder threatens us; and I believe he has gone so far as to take counsel's opinion upon the point.
261. Have any new runs been put in, in consequence of this shifting of the old runs? Yes; one has been put in between Bunna Wunna and the next run.
262. Has only one new run been put in, or have there been more than one? I believe there have been two new runs made by the shifting of the old ones.
263. By Mr. Morris: Has not this shifting been caused by the actual frontages not corresponding with the amount contained in the original tender; and on account of its being found that the occupants had taken possession of more country than they were entitled to under their tender? In so far as the country we took up is concerned, this was not the case, for we measured it as as nearly as we could without actual survey. There is a tree marked marked W. L., five miles from that tree the Bunna Wuuna station commences, and runs for five miles west. The Turee station has another five miles frontage, and between these two it is said there has been discovered by the Commissioner, a small portion having only two miles frontage, but in consequence of all this shifting backward and forward, it has now been made eight or nine miles frontage.

Mr. J. B.
Rundle.

27 Feb., 1861.

264. But are not these runs shifted in accordance with the description given in the tender? No; I do not see that.

265. By Mr. Hoskins: Do all parties in tendering give a precise and accurate description of the runs they apply for? Yes; and these tenders and descriptions are afterwards gazetted.

266. But it has been said, and we have it in evidence, that parties tendering do not give accurate descriptions of the boundaries of the runs applied for, but merely a rough outline? That may be the case with new runs, but these I speak of are all old runs, that have been occupied for the last twelve years, and the boundaries of which are well known and clearly defined. There could be no mistake about them, and yet they have all been shifted and changed, and everything thrown into confusion, to such an extent, as to make space enough for a new run between the old ones.

267. By Mr. Lucas: I suppose that by shifting one run in one direction, and another in another, a vacancy has thus been made between the two? Yes, something of that sort. Though, in some cases, one run has been moved upon what was formerly another.

268. By the Chairman: And this is certain to give rise to lawsuits, inasmuch as the law courts have held that actual possession gave the right to the land, and that any person coming in and trespassing, was liable to an action by the occupant? Yes; it has been decided that the occupant only was entitled to hold possession.

269. By Mr. Hoskins: You have said that these runs were taken up some twelve years ago? I was not acquainted with the district at that time, but I believe so. Certainly they have been taken up more than ten years.

270. When the parties who originally took up the land got possession, did they send in a full description of the boundaries of the run they occupied? Yes, I suppose as nearly as they could do so. Like all the old runs, however, they were only particular about the frontage. They never said more in the application than that they desired to take up a certain run, five miles by so many miles, particularly describing the frontages. These, however, were never perfectly accurate.

271. Would the descriptions thus given lead it to be inferred that there was not sufficient room for an intermediate station between the applicant and the next nearest occupant or tenderer—are they of such a kind as to shew that the whole frontage is taken up? Yes, certainly; because, when a person applies for, say, four blocks of country, he is supposed to take up all the country to the extent he claims, commencing at some known point of land previously occupied or claimed. It is never expected that vacant land will be left between any of the blocks applied for.

272. By Mr. Lucas: Are not the persons who tender in this way bound to send in a description of the boundaries of the blocks they apply for? They are.

273. And then these boundaries are gazetted, from the descriptions so given in the tender? The tenders, I believe, are first looked into, to see that they correspond with other tenders that have been sent in from the same district, and to ascertain that they do not clash with these—that two tenders are not sent in for the same country. Upon these tenders the land is afterwards taken up. The great drawback is, that parties sometimes send in tenders for the same country, but with different descriptions, thus causing disputes.

274. Do you not think it would be an advantage if persons were to be allowed to take possession of a run before tendering for it? That was what was done under the old system. Yes, I think it would be very much better. The first occupant would then have the right to tender.

275. Would not that have the effect of preventing two persons from putting in a tender for the one piece of country? Certainly.

276. In the tender, I believe, you usually state the length of each line, and the distance of some point from the boundary of the nearest station? Yes.

277. And in the case you refer to, on the Darling, your boundary is described as extending a certain distance from another station, that other station extending for a certain distance from a marked tree? Exactly.

278. Those distances are supposed to be five miles each? Yes, but it may be more.

279. But if it should happen that instead of five miles those distances should be seven miles and a half, it must be evident to you that you would have two and a half miles more frontage than you would be entitled to, and that the owner of the next station would be in the same position, consequently it would be no more than right that this extra amount should be taken off each, and that another person should be allowed to come in upon the new run thus obtained? That has not been the case, for we applied and took up only a frontage of five miles; but where more country has been occupied for a period, it is usual to re-assess and not dispossess the occupier, or shift long established boundaries.

280. Supposing that to be the case in any instance, do you not think the Commissioner would be justified in taking off the extra amount? I think that what a man has been given possession of he has a right to maintain. Those who tender for a piece of country will not obtain it unless the blocks follow on in succession, so that vacant land cannot occur.

281. Suppose you tender for five miles of frontage commencing five miles distant from a marked tree, and that another party tenders for a similar frontage commencing on the other side of the tree, and running in the other direction, there would then be a space of five miles between the two runs that any person might tender for if he thought proper? No, I think not. It would be optional with the parties adjoining to take it or not as they thought proper

- Mr. J. D. Randle.
27 Feb., 1861.
282. Suppose the outside boundaries of two stations to be A and B, and that they are fifteen miles apart; that the one has a frontage of five miles from A, and the other a frontage of five miles from B; the whole distance being fifteen miles, and only ten miles being accounted for, there must be left a vacant frontage of five miles between the two? Certainly.
283. That being the case, do you not think it would be a very proper thing for the Commissioner to make a new run of this vacant frontage, and to receive a new tender for it? No, certainly not; because if an occupant have by accident a mile or so more frontage than he has stated it ought not to be taken from him. It must be remembered that these frontages are not measured off by the chain, but are merely approximated. At the same time the measurement by the Commissioner is nothing more, for he does not measure by the chain.
284. How does he do? He generally walks his horse over the ground. He knows the pace of his horse, as for instance that he walks five or six miles an hour, and in this way the frontage is given. If, when the ground comes to be measured accurately, the party is found really to have more than he is entitled to, he would in all cases be very ready to pay a sum in addition proportionate to his increased quantity of land. This would meet all the objects of the Government, and prevent very much inconvenience. In fact it makes very little difference, because the occupant pays for it in paying for the increased number of cattle kept on the run.
285. Yes, but there is a rent as well as an assessment to be paid? The rent is of very little object, because payment is made on the estimated capability of the run, and that is assessed by the Commissioner. On this assessed grazing capability they pay the rent, and on this account many runs pay a larger rent than others, though they have the same amount of country. Some runs pay as high a rent as £10 and £12 for a section.
286. By the Chairman: All the evils you have enumerated have arisen from the delay of the Commissioners in reporting upon tenders? That is my opinion.
287. And this in many instances may be the cause of lawsuits? It may.
288. The law will have to decide in the cases you have mentioned? Yes.
289. By Mr. Mate: Is not the tenderer allowed to take more than five miles if he believes that the country is of so poor a character that five miles frontage will not keep 4,000 sheep? I am not certain on this point. I believe that the tenderer is allowed to take up more if he puts the reason for his so doing in his tender. This must depend, however, to a great extent, upon the nature of the country taken up.
290. That is if he thinks that the ordinary frontage will not keep 4,000 sheep, he is entitled to include more in his tender? I am not certain upon that point, but I believe he is.
291. Might it not be upon this account that the quantities now clash, in the cases you have mentioned on the Darling; as the person, in taking up the country in the first instance, may have thought it so poor that the usual quantity would not carry 4,000 sheep; and now, that the Commissioner is proceeding to adjust the frontages, these extra quantities being taken off, throw all the others into confusion? That is the effect of it, but I cannot speak as to the original cause.
292. By Mr. Lucas: Are all runs assessed prior to possession being given? I believe not, but assessed by Commissioner afterwards.
293. And the rent of all is fixed upon their grazing capability? Yes.
294. By Mr. Morris: I believe, as a matter of fact, that the grazing capabilities of the greater part of the runs are under-estimated? Yes, in some instances; but I know other instances again in which they are over-estimated.
295. By Mr. Hoskins: That is generally the case with small runs, I believe? Yes, chiefly with small runs.
296. Owing to the facility with which the Commissioner can make an examination of them as compared with larger runs? Yes, no doubt. But I know several large runs that have been over-estimated. I had some runs on the head of the Castlereagh that were excessively over-estimated. We have since had them re-estimated, and they are now placed upon a somewhat more equitable footing.
297. You say that different persons give different descriptions of the same land; now has not this been the chief cause of the lawsuits you speak of? No. I said lawsuits might arise, but I know of no case in which this has been the cause.
298. Is it not within your knowledge, that occupants of runs have to apply to the local Commissioner to define their boundaries? Certainly they have; but then it takes years to do this.
299. Why? Because of the difficulty there is in getting the Commissioner on to the run, to examine and report upon it.
300. You are aware that these Commissioners are appointed for the performance of these duties? I am.
301. If they do not perform them, if they so persistently neglect to attend to the applications of occupants of runs, how can they possibly pass their time? That would be hard for me to say.
302. It is a fact, however, that comes within your knowledge, that the local Crown Lands Commissioners are very remiss in the performance of their duties? I should say so.
303. Have you any doubt upon the subject? I have no hesitation whatever in saying that they are exceedingly remiss, especially in reporting upon runs.
304. So that it has repeatedly happened that parties have applied for and taken possession of public lands, and then have not been able to get the Commissioner to come and attend to them and their claim? Yes. That has been the case for years past.
305. Has it not happened that persons have applied for blocks of land in a new country to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, that they have received notice that their application has been received and referred to the local Crown Lands Commissioner, that they have thereupon thereupon taken up and occupied these blocks, and yet that they have been afterwards dispossessed by the local Commissioner? Yes. I have seen one or two cases of that kind latterly in the Warrego District.

Mr. J. D.
Rundle.

306. Can you mention them? The particular case that I remember just at this moment is that of Messrs. Millar and Maxwell. 27 Feb., 1861.

307. The Committee have had that case before them. Can you mention any other? Yes. There are two runs there, one occupied partially by cattle, and the other by horses. We have stocked them, and have been in possession for some years, and yet we do not now know whether or not we shall be dispossessed.

308. You hold no authorization from the Government or their officers for your occupation? No; but if we had not occupied the runs they would have remained idle for years past.

309. Have five years elapsed since you sent in your application? Yes, about that time. We applied for the blocks in August, 1856.

310. And during that time no Commissioner has visited the runs to report upon your tenders? No.

311. By Mr. Morris: Are you paying any revenue to the Government for your occupation, either by way of rent or of assessment? No. We have been considered as being illegally in occupation, and have been ordered off. I believe that some of the neighbouring settlers complained of us to the Commissioner, informing him that we were trespassers. Upon this information the Commissioner ordered our stock to be impounded.

312. And were they impounded? They were not.

313. You are still on the ground, in possession and occupation? We are.

314. And are paying no rent or assessment to the Government? None.

315. I believe that there are many cases similar to yours throughout the country? Yes; I believe it is a case of every day occurrence.

316. By Mr. Haskins: Then, in consequence of the neglect on the part of the local Commissioners, there are numerous blocks of country taken up for which no rent or assessment is paid, because of there being no official on the spot to report on the land, and to hand over formal possession to the applicant? There are, no doubt, such cases.

317. And this, you say, has been the case for years? What I say is this, that there is one particular instance in which a number of applications for new runs sent in three, four, and five years ago, have not yet been reported on; and that this neglect has caused very considerable loss to the revenue.

318. Then you know as a fact that very great delay has been experienced in reporting upon applications for new runs, and in the applicants receiving authority to occupy? I do.

319. And you think that if there were some alteration of the present system it would tend to increase the revenue, would give more satisfaction to the pastoral tenant, and would largely enhance the stability of pastoral pursuits? Most undoubtedly. The present system has been attended with very great evils, and has been the cause of loss both to the Government and to the occupier of the lands.

320. The country to which you allude is, I believe, very badly watered? It is in many places.

321. At the same time, however, it is a very fine fattening country? It is a very good country when it can be occupied.

322. Do you imagine that if there had been more attention paid to the applications for runs, and a more prompt habit of replying to these applications, that many persons would have been induced to invest their capital in this district, in making dams and reservoirs, or in sinking wells, and thus making this country fully available? Undoubtedly they would.

323. Then the Government have been losers, in a revenue point of view, by these delays? They have.

324. And the resources of the country have suffered by the impetus which they would have received in this direction having been checked? Most certainly.

325. By Mr. Lucas: How long have you been engaged in squatting pursuits? I have had to do with stock for the last twenty years.

326. Could you suggest any mode of removing the grievances that exist in reference to the points you have mentioned? I do not know that I am prepared at the present moment to make any suggestion, more than that the local Commissioner should be required to send in fortnightly returns to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, in Sydney; and that, in all applications for new runs, a duplicate of the application lodged with the Chief Commissioner should be sent in at the same time, to the local Commissioner, by the party tendering. By this means a check would be obtained upon the local Commissioner, as duplicates of all applications being sent simultaneously to the Chief and the local Commissioner, and the latter having to make fortnightly returns of all applications received and reported on, it could at once be seen how he was getting on in the matter; and there would not be so much danger of applications being mislaid and forgotten as there is when they go only to one office.

327. By Mr. Morris: You propose then to send, as well as the tender to the Chief Commissioner, a duplicate to the local Commissioner? Yes.

328. By Mr. Lucas: Do you not think that it is the duty of the local Commissioner to give immediate information to any person desirous of occupying or of applying for vacant Crown Lands? I hardly think that part of his duty.

329. Under the present system the application or tender is sent in to the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, in Sydney, and not to the local Commissioner? It is.

330. The tender is sent in to the Chief Commissioner, and he forwards it at once to the local Commissioner for his report, and it is here that all the delay occurs? I believe so, and perhaps the tender remains in the local Commissioner's office for five years, as ours have done.

331. So that all this delay is entirely the fault of the local Commissioner? Yes, undoubtedly; that is to say, if the tenders have been sent to him and he does not report on them.

Mr. J. B.
Bundie.
27 Feb., 1851.

332. Then you think by sending a duplicate of the tender to the local Commissioner at the same time that the original is sent in to the Chief Commissioner, the local Commissioner could at once forward his copy on to the Chief Commissioner by return of post, with his remarks upon it? No, I do not think that, because the local Commissioner is supposed to go upon the run applied for, with the tender in his hand, to see if the description there given corresponds with the actual boundary, so that some considerable time must necessarily pass before he could make his report; but in a new country, where there are so many tenders coming in, there is such a demand upon the time of the Commissioner, that, for years past, there has been more work than one, or even two Commissioners in a district, could get through within a reasonable time.

333. Then, after receiving the tender from the Chief Commissioner, the local Commissioner has to examine the run and decide upon its estimated grazing capabilities? Yes, and to report upon the boundaries also.

334. And it is your impression that one Commissioner to each district is not sufficient to do all the duties required, and that that has been the cause of delay? That has been one cause; but beyond that there appears to have been great neglect; the duties seem to have been neglected altogether.

335. You consider that even as it is, the duties have not been attended to? They have not.

336. Is the suggestion you have just made the only one you have to offer? I do not think you can improve on that, as you obtain the only check you can have upon the local Commissioner. It then remains for the Government to have an efficient staff of Commissioners, so as to report upon these tenders for new runs with as little delay as possible.

337. By Mr. Watt: From the general tenor of your observations, I am inclined to think that it is your impression that the present dissatisfaction which exists in regard to the occupation of new country refers rather to the want of a proper administration of the Crown Lands Regulations than to any inherent fault in the regulations themselves? That would be hard for me to say. I do not feel disposed to say whether the Crown Lands Regulations are good and efficient, or whether they are the reverse.

338. What I mean is, that the evils you have enumerated have, in your opinion, arisen not so much from the regulations themselves, as from their not being properly administered? Probably they have to some extent, but I do not feel disposed to say more than that in favour of the regulations, as it cannot but be admitted that some of them are bad in themselves.

339. By Mr. Hoskins: Do you not think that a great deal of the present difficulty has arisen from persons being allowed to hold runs without putting any stock on them? It is quite certain that there has been a very great abuse in this respect.

340. Has not that been the primary cause of many of these difficulties? No doubt it has led to very great abuses; because parties have taken up country that they could not and never intended to stock.

341. By Mr. Watt: By not properly carrying out the regulations have not the officials prevented much land from being occupied? Numerous persons have no doubt been debarred from taking up country, because of its not having been reported on.

342. By Mr. Hoskins: If the regulations were so altered as to provide that no tender should be accepted unless the person tendering had first occupied the run tendered for with stock—do you think that would be an improvement—giving in fact the right of tender to the first occupant? Yes; but a certain time ought to be given for stocking a country newly taken up—three, six, nine, or twelve months—I do not say what time, but some time should be given.

343. I believe it has been the plan for persons who have no stock to take up runs, and then afterwards to sell them at a good price to others who required them for their stock? Yes, this has been done, and is a very objectionable practice—very much so.

344. Such a practice is calculated most materially to retard the development of the resources of the Colony? No doubt.

345. What remedy would you suggest for this particular evil? It could be prevented in a very simple way, by providing that if, after the tender has been accepted, the run is not stocked within some reasonable time—though I am not prepared to say within what time, but say within twelve months—then that it should be competent for any other person to go upon the run, stock it, and take possession.

346. By the Chairman: Would not the better plan be the adoption of the Queensland system, which is this:—that a person should be allowed to occupy vacant Crown Land before tendering for it, and if he tenders within two months after such occupation, then such occupation shall not be considered illegal. So that a person could at once go on the land with his stock, provided he tendered for it within two months after occupation; so that the applicant is saved from that vexatious waiting for occupation that is now so much complained of? Yes, that would be a very good plan; in fact it is just a matter of opinion between this and the plan I have proposed, of making it imperative that a run shall be stocked within six, nine, or twelve months of the acceptance of the tender. There is one system something similar to this in Queensland, under which the tenderer has a certain time given him to occupy and stock the run tendered for. If this is not done within that period, then it is open for any person to take stock upon the land and occupy it, provided that he reports his having done so immediately to the Commissioner of the district.

347. By Mr. Hoskins: These remarks apply specially to new country, but as there is very little of such country in New South Wales, they are, I presume, more applicable to Queensland than to this Colony? Not at all; it is a great mistake to fancy that there is no new country in this Colony, for there is very much more unoccupied country in this Colony than people are generally aware of. To my knowledge there are millions of acres on the Narran, but unfortunately there is no water, and the result is that only the frontages are taken up. And here I would desire to make one or two observations in reference to unwatered country. I have had many conversations with different persons, amongst others with Mr. Robertson, on this subject. It may be in consequence of what I and others have represented to him that he has introduced a clause in his Crown Lands Occupation Bill, to give a ten years' occupation of unwatered country to such persons as shall bring the land into use, either by raising water by machinery or by collecting the surface water by dams or reservoirs. Now, I believe that it would be a very great benefit to the country generally if an inducement were held out to men of capital to take steps for occupying all this immense area of unwatered country, by giving them, in all cases where there was no standing water within five miles of their run, a longer tenure of lease than on the other watered runs, in order to induce them to make improvements, either by sinking Artesian wells, or by other methods. I myself know plenty of country that never will be occupied unless by persons who are prepared to raise water by machinery or to make dams; but then these works cost money, and no man will occupy and go to the necessary expense, unless he has a certain tenure of lease. Mr. Robertson proposed five years in the first instance, but I shewed him that this would form no inducement at all, that it would hold out no encouragement whatever; he then proposed that he would give fourteen years. I had at first suggested twenty-one years, but afterwards, on thinking over the matter, I said that perhaps parties would be content with fourteen years' leases. This term has now been reduced in the Bill to ten years, and I do not really believe that any person will be found willing to go on the land and make improvements for a less tenure than fourteen years. All the best and the finest fattening country in the interior is unwatered country, as honorable gentlemen no doubt know, and unless some inducement is offered, it must to a great extent be lost, for it can only be fed over now during a comparatively short portion of the year.

348. In making this suggestion, do you propose to confer this right to occupy for fourteen years absolutely upon these persons, without allowing others a right to come in also? It would be of very little use unless it were so. The land would be occupied for grazing purposes only, for it is utterly valueless for agriculture, you cannot grow so much as a cabbage there; so that if a person lays out, say a thousand pounds, for the purpose of watering five miles of country, it is very evident that this would bring up his cost to a pretty heavy sum, and unless he is prepared to lay out that amount, it would be no use at all for him to think of taking up country of this kind. At present, and under existing regulations, this class of country is entirely lost to the Colony, whilst if it can be brought into use for grazing purposes, even if the terms of occupation were as liberal as could be, it must be beneficial for the Colony at large, since it must tend to increase its resources.

349. By Mr. Morris: You do not think it likely that any person would invest capital in improvements on such country as this, unless he was insured such a reasonable length of tenure as would be likely to repay his outlay? That is the great difficulty that the pastoral tenants labour under at the present moment. The tenure is so uncertain that no one cares about improving.

350. By Mr. Hoskins: It is quite certain that no person would settle on these lands if he thought he could not make them remunerative, and in that respect, if the lands are such as you describe, there would not be much danger from the free selectionists; but then, suppose that a person should feel inclined to settle there,—suppose he should be disposed to make the necessary outlay for watering a small patch, say enough to feed a small flock of sheep, you would not prevent him from doing so, if he went to the trouble and expense of sinking a well or making a dam to provide water for his own use? Most assuredly I would. I would put it to yourself whether, providing you had spent a large sum of money—and nothing less than a thousand pounds would be of any use—in making a useful land that was previously worthless, and on the understanding that you were to have five miles each way for a definite period, you would not think it a hard case indeed if, at the end of two or three years, a person was allowed to come on your run, and take three or four thousand acres off it.

351. I presume, then, you would make it entirely a question of amount, that is, would fix the tenure by the amount expended in improvements; so that if a person expended only a small sum in making a dam, for instance, he should not be allowed so long a tenure as another who goes to the cost of sinking an Artesian well? The extent of improvements would be a question solely for the decision of the person occupying the country. He would have to say whether it would be worth while or not; and my impression is that the decision on this point would turn mainly on the tenure of lease given. The system and duration of lease in unwatered country should be the same to all, and I would recommend long tenure.

352. By Mr. Morris: And when the lease is granted, whatever the term may be, it should be inviolably secured for that term? Yes, more especially in unwatered country.

353. Has any calculation been made as to how much capital would be likely to be invested yearly if this arrangement you speak of were made? Yes, the calculation has, I believe, been made.

354. By Mr. Hoskins: And a calculation of the profits also? Well, whatever money men make, no matter in what industrial pursuit, it must be by so much better for the country at large, since no one pursuit can flourish without benefiting the whole community. The land I speak of is now, perhaps, unoccupied for nine months in the year, as it can only be made use of in wet seasons; and there are millions of acres besides that are never occupied at all.

355. By the Chairman: To prevent speculations in runs, would it not be a good plan not to allow the licensed occupant to alienate a run unless it shall have been first, at all events, partially stocked? Yes, that would be a very good arrangement if it be confined to new runs. I would not, however, apply it to old runs, because they very frequently change hands without stock.

Mr. J. B.
Kundle.

27 Feb., 1861.

Mr. J. B. 356. And for new runs you would insist upon their being stocked within a certain time Bundle. after the lease has been granted? Yes, and if not stocked within that time that any other person should have the right to come in and occupy.

27 Feb., 1861. 357. By Mr. Watt: I believe, though, that these run hunters are rather of service than otherwise to the squatters, since they discover and open up new country, which the squatters themselves would not have time to do for themselves,—in this respect they prevent the loss of time to the settlers? Yes; to some extent this is so. I would now only mention, that it would, perhaps, be very well worth the attention of the Committee to decide upon the conditions under which unwatered country should be leased, and more particularly with regard to the tenure of lease. I can assure the Committee that ten years' lease, as proposed in Mr.
 Robertson's Bill, will not be sufficient to induce parties to take up this country, and make the necessary improvements, seeing the heavy expenses that such improvements must involve.

W. H. Suttor, Esq., M.P., called in and examined:—

W. H. Suttor, 358. By the Chairman: You are aware of the manner in which runs are obtained under the Esq., M.P. present system of tender? I am.

27 Feb., 1861. 359. Do you think that that system is a good one, or do you fancy it needs improvement?
 My idea is that the system is very bad, and that it can very easily be improved.

360. You are doubtless aware that very great delays have occurred in reporting upon tenders?
 Yes, I know that they have occurred in a great number of cases. So much so that there is nothing but disappointment and uncertainty in connection with the tender system. There are many tenders which to my knowledge have been sent in for ten years, and to which no answer has yet been received. They are very seldom answered under twelve months or two years from the time of their being sent in; so that a person tendering for a run is left all that time in a state of uncertainty awaiting the answer to his application.

361. That you consider to be the great evil of the system? Yes, the suspense in which the applicant is kept for so long a time is the great evil of the system; and besides there is no certainty after all, for after waiting patiently for a couple of years for an answer, he is told that some one else has a prior claim.

362. Knowing these evils, can you suggest a remedy for them? What I should recommend would be the adoption of one of two courses. The first is this:—That a person should be allowed to go out and discover a run—much in the same way as is proposed to be done under the free selection principle—that, having discovered the run, he should give a rough description of it to the Commissioner of the District, and obtain from him an order to take possession; and that having obtained this he should go and mark off the boundaries of the run, and send a written description of them to the Commissioner.

363. In order to prevent run hunting, would it not be advisable to insist that a run thus taken up should be at once occupied with stock? I think the present Assessment Act will meet all difficulty in this respect. For instance, if a person taking up a run at once stocks it with cattle, he is released from the payment of assessment for two years. If he does not stock it, he is called upon at once for payment of assessment on the estimated capability of the run.

364. You consider the present Assessment Act sufficient, without the necessity of calling upon persons to stock their runs at once? I do; for I know there has been very little of that system of run hunting since these Assessment Regulations have been in force. At one time there was a little speculation of this kind, but it never went to any extent in this Colony compared to what it did in the Moreton Bay District. The other course I would propose would be to put up the runs to public auction, for any system would be better than the present one of tendering, seeing the delay and uncertainty that attend it; and, even if the runs were put up to auction, it would be an improvement, because parties would, at all events, know what they had to depend on.

365. By Mr. Watt: Do you not know instances of runs having been put up to public auction by the Government, after having been surveyed, and of persons who have purchased them having had actions of trespass commenced against them after they had taken possession?
 No; I do not know of any runs having been sold by auction; the only way in which they can be let is by tender. The only runs thus put up to public tender by advertisement are those which have been forfeited, with the exception of the blocks of country on the Bogan, and these were let in this manner in consequence of their having been originally reserved for the Aborigines. The blocks were surveyed, and then tenders were called for by advertisement, though I hardly think the Government acted legally in doing so.

366. And there are instances of parties occupying the blocks thus leased having had actions of trespass commenced against them? I am not aware whether such is the case; but, as I said before, there is no doubt that in the case of these runs on the Bogan the Government, by calling for tenders, altogether ignored the Orders in Council, for they should have left the country to be tendered for in the usual way.

367. By Mr. Mate: You consider that they ought to have been regarded as new runs, and so to be tendered for in the regular way? Yes; and I expect that if there is any dispute about them it is on this account; that the persons who have tendered for them in the mode prescribed by the regulations consider themselves entitled to the occupation.

368. By Mr. Lucas: I believe these are very good stations? No, they can hardly be called
 so. It is a very fine country, but badly watered.

369. There were very many applicants for these blocks? I have heard so.

370. In that case the only way in which the Government could act fairly was to call for public tenders for them? I think not. The Government should have allowed them to be taken up, as in ordinary cases.

371. Do you think that the tender or the auction system would be the best mode of disposing of runs? I have said that I consider the auction system would be better than that now followed, but I have already suggested a mode which I consider would be the best to adopt, that is, if the Government and the Legislature really are anxious to induce people to take up and occupy the waste lands of the Colony.

372. What is that plan? That a person should go out and find country for him-self; that, on finding it, he should take possession and record his claim with the Commissioner of the District; and that then he should mark out his boundary. In fact, just the same mode of procedure as is provided for in the selection clause of the Crown Lands Alienation Bill. At the same time I say that selling the runs by auction would be preferable to the present system.

373. From your experience how do you think the grazing capabilities of runs are estimated—fairly or otherwise? A great many of them are over-estimated. I think, as a rule, they are over-estimated, and it occurs in this way: There are many of these runs consisting of blocks of say from five to ten miles square. These may be assessed at perhaps two thousand head of cattle, and the owners may pay for that number, and actually have the number on the run, but then they feed many miles back from the run for which they are assessed. Of course the squatters pay nothing for this back country, except the assessment on the cattle which feed over it, and on this ground they make no objection to the capability of their actual run being over-estimated.

374. By Mr. Mate: Many of them have latterly taken up these back runs, and that must necessarily increase the amount paid for rent and assessment? I am aware of the fact, and of course the amount paid would, under those circumstances, be increased.

375. I believe some particular regulations in regard to taking up these back runs were passed some short time back? No, I think not. They have to be tendered for in the usual way.

376. By Mr. Lucas: Are there any other suggestions you would wish to offer, particularly with regard to the working of the local and the Chief Commissioner's departments? I do not know what instructions the local Commissioners get in reference to their duties, but I consider it to be the duty of the local Commissioner to report at once upon all tenders sent to him—that is, the moment he receives a tender to report upon, he ought to go at once, see the run, and send in his report. I believe that the orders given to the local Commissioners are to go upon all new runs and inspect them, before reporting on them, and this has, no doubt, been the cause of very much of the delay that is complained of, as when the tenders come in it may not be convenient to go just at the time, and thus the work accumulates, and the tenders are left unreported on year after year.

377. Do you think that under any circumstances there ought to be a delay of twelve months in answering a tender? No, nor of two months. These local Commissioners have not so much to do that they might not report within two months of receiving a tender.

378. Then they have not so much work as to prevent them from attending to these tenders better than they appear to do? Certainly not; they have little enough to do beyond this; and besides, in nine cases out of ten, they might report upon a tender without going upon the land at all. For instance, if they last year visited a particular part of their district to report upon a series of tenders, they would in their inspection see the country, and know its capabilities sufficiently to enable them to report upon the next series of tenders without again visiting it; and it need only be when the tenders pushed further on, whether different country might be expected, that the Commissioner need again go in that direction.

379. Would you require duplicate tenders to be sent to the local and the Chief Commissioners? I have said that I would not tender at all. The person should select his run, put in his claim with the local Commissioner, and get from him an order to occupy at once.

380. By the Chairman: It has been suggested that the local Commissioner should be required to report fortnightly to the Chief Commissioner? Yes; that would provide a check upon him, as I do not think it would be advisable to leave too much power in the hands of the local Commissioners.

381. By Mr. Lucas: With reference to unwatered country, what arrangements would you recommend? As far as that is concerned, I may say that I know some large tracts of the finest grazing country in the Colony which is unwatered. There are many millions of acres of this description of country in different parts of the Colony; between the Lachlan and the Darling, there is a long belt of country without a drop of water on it, and yet it is all good grazing land.

382. And persons will not take up runs here because of the want of water? They will not.

383. Do you think that if some inducement were held out, such as giving a fixity of tenure for a certain period, persons would be induced to take up and occupy this country? I have no doubt but they would.

384. Would leases for fourteen years be sufficient to offer an inducement? I hardly think that fourteen years would be long enough, because it would be a very expensive job to make this country available. A man would have to lay out £700 or £800; dam-making is a very expensive work.

385. Would not a great portion of this kind of country be taken up under fourteen years' leases? I think not; the term is not long enough to form an inducement, more particularly in the country I have spoken of, between the Lachlan and the Darling. I mention this country, because it is a part that never can be applied to any other than grazing purposes.

386. Is it not fit for agriculture? No; there is no chance of the free selector coming there.

Esq., M.P.

27 Feb., 1861.

- W. H. Suttor, Esq., M.P. 387. On account of its distance from any market? No; but because the soil is so impregnated with salt or alum that it will grow nothing, not even a cabbage; and yet it produces herbs and salt bush, upon which cattle thrive amazingly.
- 27 Feb., 1861. 388. What term of lease would you propose to give? I should say twenty-one years, and the reason I do so is, that the squatters generally are beginning to lose all confidence in the promised renewals of their leases. You may give them fourteen years with a right of renewal, but after you have passed your Act, the next Parliament may repeal it, and there is at once an end to the renewal of the lease. From what I know of the country to the west, there is more land there than will be taken up for the next twenty years, if it was well watered; and this it would very soon be, if a liberal system is adopted.
389. And there are very large tracts of country that would be thus occupied? Yes, millions of acres; for any localities where the land is suitable for agricultural purposes I would not recommend the granting of long leases, but only where the country was fit for nothing but grazing would I give them. These agricultural lands however may be said to be within two hundred miles of the coast; there is no good land beyond that.
390. By the Chairman: And you believe that a great deal of this fine grazing country will be made available? Yes, if something like a liberal inducement is offered to occupy.
391. And it can only be occupied by being watered through artificial means? Yes, by means of tanks or dams.
392. There is no natural water there? No, none.

FRANCIS TOWNSEND RUSDEN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George William Lord, Esq., M.L.A., called in and examined:—

- G. W. Lord, Esq., M.L.A. 393. By the Chairman: I suppose, Mr. Lord, you have often tendered for runs? Yes.
394. Can you state whether you have experienced any delays in obtaining answers to tenders? Yes, I have experienced very great delays.
- 5 Mar., 1861. 395. Can you state any particular instance with regard to runs you have applied for, and where you have not received answers to your tenders? I can state three instances of the kind. I tendered for a run in 1848, called Lower Billagerrimble; it was reported upon by the Commissioner, in March, 1850, and declined in consequence of there being no vacant country.
396. By Mr. Morris: Where was that? It was in the Lower Darling District at that time.
397. By the Chairman: You tendered in 1848? Yes; in fact I may state that I went to look at this run myself, and was one of the first parties on that part of the country. I selected it, and tendered for it at the time. I tendered again for this very same run in 1858, giving exactly the same description.
398. Exactly the same description? Yes; and I believe that the Commissioner has reported favourably upon it now in 1860.
399. Then you are not in possession of the run, but you believe the report to be in your favour? I have not received official information, but I heard in the office that the Commissioner had reported that the country was vacant. In 1850 I tendered for another run in the same district that was not reported on till March, 1855, and was also declined in consequence of there being no vacant country. In 1850 I tendered for another station called Comedic, and that was declined in March, 1855,—about the same time.
400. For what reason? In consequence of there being no vacant country. These two latter tenders I have never taken any interest in, because I know that they have been given to another party.
401. By Mr. Watt: Did the other party tender first? No; he has tendered since.
402. By the Chairman: But there must have been vacant country if it has been given to another; they have found it since? No doubt.
403. Do you consider that the Commissioners do their duty in the districts, then, in returning answers to references made to them? Well, I think some of them do, and that others do not.
404. You imagine that a better plan might be substituted for the present system, which is extremely round-about: the tender being opened in Sydney and referred to the Commissioner, for instance, that implies a great delay? I think, on the whole, the present tendering system is bad.
405. Would you state your reasons why you think it bad? One great reason is the vexatious delays.
406. Is there any other reason? It may be in the power of the Commissioner to decline your run.
407. And give it to another? And give it to another.
408. Rumour says that is very often done—is it not so? I cannot vouch for it.
409. Could you suggest any more expeditious method? Well, I would prefer returning to the old system.
410. What old system do you mean? That is of taking up a run yourself, and stocking it.

G. W. Lord,
Esq., M.L.A.

5 Mar., 1861.

411. By Mr. Watt: First tendering? I would not have any tendering.
412. By the Chairman: First occupation? First occupation.
413. But with stock? I should compel him to stock it.
414. And within a certain time? Within a limited time.
415. In fact, it would not be his until it was stocked, according to your proposition? No; and he might be made to pay a certain sum into the Treasury to shew that he was sincere in his wish to occupy the country; he should pay into the Treasury the amount of his license at once.
416. By Mr. Morris: Rent? Rent.
417. By the Chairman: Who is to assess it? Let it be an open question until determined by the Government; but he would still pay an annual license.
418. A minimum? A minimum.
419. Leaving it for the District Commissioner appointed by the Government to ascertain what the assessment would be according to the existing regulations by arbitration? Exactly.
420. You propose that it should be by arbitration, as it is now? Yes, under the present system.
421. Do you not think that in these distant countries, where there is so very little to be surveyed, that the Government might manage to survey the water-courses, and so on, that parties might be able to describe more particularly the run they occupy? I should imagine that nearly all the rivers are now surveyed.
422. Yes, but these distant water-courses which are taken up? It would be inconvenient, I should think, for the Government to survey all the different creeks.
423. But a great deal of this delay, with regard to tenders, arises from the indifferent, not to say incorrect, description given? No doubt.
424. So that the Government lie under considerable difficulty in accepting a tender for country so loosely described as many of the runs are of which descriptions are sent in; is not that your opinion? Yes, I think the Government labour under very great difficulty in many cases, or, at least, that the Commissioners labour under such difficulties in reporting.
425. By Mr. Morris: You have described to us some of the unsuccessful instances in which you tendered for runs? Yes.
426. Have you, in any of the successful instances, had any difficulty in obtaining the runs—I mean when you have been successful in the end? I have not obtained many; I have not been very successful.
427. But you have obtained some? Yes.
428. Do you remember any circumstances connected with one of the runs you got—any difficulties connected with the obtaining of it? Perhaps you are alluding to two runs which I obtained on the Gulgoa?
429. Yes. Would you be kind enough to describe to the Committee the circumstances which caused the difficulty? I am not aware that I had any difficulty in obtaining the run.
430. Will you be kind enough to tell us the date of your application for these runs on the Gulgoa? I cannot without referring to the Government records; but I think it was in 1858 or 1859 that I tendered.
431. How long after you tendered was it before you received notice from the Government of the acceptance of your tender? I think it was nearly twelve months—I cannot tell the exact date, but it was a very considerable time. When I tendered for this country I was not aware of any one being in possession of it; I never knew of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar being there.
432. Have you ascertained since how long they had been in possession before you tendered? No.
433. You have not ascertained? No.
434. But did you know that they were in possession at all previous to your tendering? I think they were; they were, I believe, in possession of a portion of it only.
435. You have no objection, I apprehend, to state the amount you pay as rent and license? I could not tell you that without reference. I have not at present possession even of the stations.
436. You have not been put in possession then? The Commissioner has put Mr. Yeo (that is my superintendent there) in possession.
437. Would you be kind enough to state what are the exact steps they take to put a person in possession of a run, which is probably occupied by some one else? I have never been with the Commissioner on such occasions, and can only describe it from hearsay.
438. I should like to know? It is a simple matter, I should think. I have been with the Commissioner in cases of disputed boundary, and he has gone across the run with both the proprietors, and settled it in that way, defining the boundary by marking a tree.
439. But I want to know how you are able to dispossess the parties at present in possession? That is the business of the Crown, I imagine.
440. But they will not take any action unless they are put in motion? It must be the Crown who puts them in motion.
441. Puts who in motion? Who puts the Commissioner in motion—it is not I?
442. I want to know who puts the Crown in motion? Supposing Messrs. Maxwell and Millar were in possession of country for which they held no license, and which they had no authority to keep, I tender for that country, and my tender is reported on by the Commissioner, and in the event of no other tenders having been sent in the land is given to me; then I ask to be put in possession of it, and the Commissioner puts me in possession.
443. By Mr. Hoskins: Do you know whether your application was anterior to that of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar?

- G. W. Lord, Esq., M.L.A.
5 Mar., 1861.
444. By Mr. Morris: He might be able to tell the reason why the Crown puts parties in possession in some cases and not in others? I was in possession before Messrs. Maxwell and Millar; I had 30,000 sheep there before they came on to the country.
445. And you abandoned it? No; I was travelling, and had sheep there some two years before I was in possession. It was from a knowledge of that country that I tendered for it.
446. By Mr. Hoskins: How long subsequently to having these 30,000 sheep on that run was it before you put in your application? I dare say two years; I thought it was such a distance away that it was hardly worth while tendering for.
447. Have you known instances in which persons have applied for blocks of new country, where the boundaries have not been marked—where no marks have been made by any persons who might conceivably have taken them up;—have you known cases where persons have applied for such runs, and where other parties have afterwards been put in possession, although there have been no marks to shew that any persons had previously been over the country? No, I cannot say; when I sent my man down with stock to take possession of this country, he told me that Messrs. Maxwell and Millar were there—that was the first I heard of their being in possession. I then did make some inquiries if there were any tenders for these runs by Messrs. Maxwell and Millar, and I found that there were none in the Wellington District. I afterwards heard that they had tendered in the Gwydir District, but as a matter of course the Gwydir District tenders would not go to the Wellington District; they would be under a different Commissioner, and he would not have known anything of them there.
448. What district were these runs in? They were in the Wellington District when I tendered.
449. By Mr. Mate: Are they not in the same district now? No, the name of the district has been known since as the Warrego District.
450. By Mr. Hoskins: Who was the Commissioner of the Wellington District at that time? Mr. Sibthorpe is Commissioner now.
451. And he certified to the Government that they were in the Wellington District? He would not have seen these tenders at all—would not see the tenders of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar.
452. Do you know whether Messrs. Maxwell and Millar reported these runs as being in the Gwydir District? I have only heard it by report from the office.
453. How long is it since these runs have been included in the Warrego District? Within the last twelve months—in fact, when my tenders were accepted, they were accepted as in the Wellington District.
454. And how long is it since your tenders were accepted? I think just before the Warrego District was proclaimed—about twelve months ago.
455. By Mr. Morris: You are aware that until recently—within the last three or four years—the Gulgoa was in the Gwydir District? Oh! no; no such thing; you are misinformed.
456. Surely you have observed it on maps so included? No, certainly not; if you will take the trouble to refer to the description of the Wellington District in 1851, you will find that the Gulgoa could not have been in any other district than the Wellington; it was from that that I took it; any one would see at a glance that it was not in the Gwydir District. There is the Government alteration of the boundaries of the different districts published in the Government Gazette, and you will find that the Gulgoa, even above that portion occupied by Messrs. Maxwell and Millar, was in the Wellington District since 1851; that is not two, three, or even four years ago.
457. By the Chairman: Are not the boundaries of these districts imaginary lines? Well I suppose they are in some instances.
458. It must be so, unless a particular river or creek is mentioned—the rest must be imaginary? Yes, but you must know that in 1851 all the districts were then settled, and the boundaries were described and published in the Government Gazette.
459. Yes; but still the boundary lines are imaginary? No doubt.
460. By Mr. Hoskins: Did you, in your application to the Government for these runs, give any defined boundaries of the runs for which you applied? Oh! yes; certainly.
461. What—mountain ranges? No; I commenced on the Gulgoa at a known point, and went up to the boundary of the Wellington District.
462. By Mr. Mate: Is there any part of the Gulgoa in the Gwydir District? Oh! yes; the principal portion. I think it is called the Maranoa up above.
463. By the Chairman: This is considerably higher—in Queensland, is it not? Yes, it is in Queensland now.
464. By Mr. Mate: It was the lower portion then that Messrs. Maxwell and Millar occupied? Yes; it was evidently in the Wellington District. If they had tendered in the Warrego District they would have had no difficulty in obtaining the runs. It has been their luck, in my opinion. As soon as I found out that these parties were in possession I made them a very fair offer. I told my superintendent there to sell them the country, or to buy their sheep, I think I offered them very fair terms.
465. By Mr. Morris: Have you had occasion to make any official complaints with regard to the way in which this tendering system is managed? I have.
466. Could you state it? In this first case that I mentioned, in the Lower Billangerimble.
467. What was the reply to this complaint—did you receive it in writing? Yes, that it should be referred to the Commissioner of Crown Lands for his decision.
468. And —? And then further communication would be made to me.
469. And has it been? Yes, in this one case. I believe they find that there is country there to give me what I tendered for in 1848. That is the only case.

470. By Mr. Hoskins: From your experience, will you state what length of time has generally elapsed from receiving an intimation from the Crown Lands Office that tenders have been received and referred to the local Commissioner, to the time persons are put in possession of their runs? The usual mode of doing it is this: You send your tender in, and get an official notice stating that it has been received and referred to the Commissioner to report upon; waiting his report it may be some five, six, or seven years; some of the Commissioners, in fact, never think proper to go at all.

G. W. Lord,
Esq., M.L.A.
5 Mar., 1861.

471. And you ascribe this delay to dereliction of duty on the part of the Commissioners? I do; I think if the Commissioner did his duty there would be nothing of the kind.

472. The duties of Crown Lands Commissioners are to put persons in possession of runs, to define the boundaries of runs, and to settle disputes? Yes, and to assess the capabilities of runs.

473. Still you know, as a fact, that they are very remiss in the performance of their duty? Yes; I might have made a complaint of this Commissioner in 1848, and stated that he never visited the country, which is a fact.

474. You do not consider this an isolated case? I only speak, of course, of what I know.

475. By the Chairman: Have you not a new run, the tender for which has been recently accepted on the Darling, between two old runs called Bunnawonna and Turce? I have got a tender on the Darling accepted, known as East Georgia.

476. I believe that comes in between a run called Bunnawonna and a run called Turce? As far as I recollect the description of it it is bounded by West Bunnawonna.

477. Have not these runs been occupied for a long time? I do not know that they have ever been occupied.

478. That you do not know? I do not.

479. I believe they have been occupied for a considerable period. Parties may have been occupying too much; but do you suppose the owners of these runs will move out quietly, or defend, by law, their previous possession. I know it has been done in one or two instances; some friends of mine, named McCrae and Sheridan, recovered £250 damages. If these runs have been previously occupied, may it not lead to litigation? It may lead to litigation.

480. I ask these questions to shew that greater and ulterior evils may and do arise from the delay in answering tenders? Well, there may be exception taken to that. For instance: the parties owning Bunnawonna and Bunnawonna West may say they were entitled to fifty or sixty miles frontage, and prevent other persons coming in; and then, in rectifying the boundaries, the Government may take off some of the land they have been occupying, which I believe is the case here.

481. But still, where occupation has been had for a considerable time, it may lead to litigation, and that is one of the evils of delay in answering tenders? I think so.

Alexander Grant McLean, Esq., called in and examined:—

482. By the Chairman: You are Surveyor General, Mr. McLean? Acting Surveyor A. G. McLean, General. For twelve months I was acting also as Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Esq.
5 Mar., 1861.

483. During which period you learned more in reference to the system of tendering for runs than you otherwise would have done? Yes.

484. You are aware that this Committee is constituted to inquire into the system of tendering for runs? Yes.

485. Do not delays arise after a tender is sent in before the applicant gets an answer? Very great delays have existed.

486. There have been no answers in the case of some tenders for a very considerable period? I suppose there are some tenders as old as four years. Possibly there may be some as far back as four years ago.

487. Not longer? I am not aware that there are any which have been unacted on for a longer period.

488. By Mr. Mate: Do all the tenders go through your office? They all go to the office of the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

489. And are referred to your office? No, they are placed in the tender box, and are opened on the first Monday of each month by the Tender Board.

490. Have you anything to do with defining the boundaries? Nothing, except as a member of the Tender Board.

491. By the Chairman: What is done, then, with these tenders by those who open them? They are, as I have remarked, opened on the first Monday of every month. The Board after noting the date of opening look through the whole of the tenders received to see whether any are informal, and if any such be found they are at once rejected or returned to the parties. The receipt of the remainder is then acknowledged, and abstracts from them are referred to the Commissioners of various districts in which the land is said to be by the parties applying.

492. How long is it before reports are returned from the Commissioners? I think it is scarcely possible to mention an average period.

493. You have already said that great delays take place and that in some instances an answer is not received for four years? Yes, I think I am safe in saying four years.

494. Is there anything to prevent Commissioners from making their reports more quickly? There are many obvious causes for the delay which takes place.

495. Without implying negligence or improper neglect on the part of the Commissioner? Yes, I think so.

496. Will you be good enough to state what you consider those causes to be? I think the

A. G. McLean, Esq.
5 Mar., 1861. first accumulation of arrears resulted partly from the management of the departments not being very efficient, but very much from the Commissioners of Crown Lands being appointed Police Magistrates of the various inland towns, and having two separate duties to attend to. It was not unnatural, under these circumstances, that they should frequently prefer to perform the more easy and perhaps more honorable duty of Police Magistrate than to be travelling about the country.

497. Which would preclude their travelling about? Yes.

498. And, therefore, they would not be able to attend to that particular branch of their duty? That gave them a good excuse for not attending to their more proper duties. And then some years since the services of a large portion of the Commissioners of Crown Lands were dispensed with; and as the business of the department depended very much on the personal knowledge of these gentlemen—there being no map records kept of what had been done in reference to the granting of country—the loss of these gentlemen was felt. When lands were leased a record was of course kept. But the personal knowledge of these gentlemen, whose services were dispensed with, formed really the greatest source of information that was available. It was thought that their duties might be performed by the surveyors of the districts, but it was found after a trial that the surveyors had plenty of business of their own to attend to; and that, moreover, if they were employed in reporting upon tenders for runs the Government were keeping up an establishment of men, with equipments, not necessary for that purpose, and that there was an absolute waste of money. It was then thought (without reverting to the appointment of salaried Commissioners) that Commissioners might be appointed to be paid by the job—so much for each report on a tender. Several of these Commissioners were appointed, but most of them have since resigned. I think all of those who were first appointed have resigned, and with one exception, that none of them have made enough to meet the expenses to which they have been put. The exception to which I allude is that of Mr. Daniel, who having been long resident in the district of which he was appointed Commissioner, had as much personal knowledge as the Commissioner whose services were dispensed with. He started with a thorough knowledge, both of the country and people, and he made a fair living, perhaps, during the time he was employed. Of course those who could not make a living for themselves did not discharge the duties which it was anticipated they would perform. They reported on a few tenders.

499. At what rate were these Commissioners paid that they could not make a living? They were paid at the rate of five pounds for each report on a tender, where the tender was accepted, or the run brought to competition. They were paid five guineas for ordinary sized runs, and seven pounds ten shillings for runs above the ordinary size—sixteen thousand acres.

500. And they were paid nothing for runs in reference to which the tender was not accepted? I ought, perhaps, explain that they were first appointed with the view of assessing the capabilities of runs, and that was the rate at which they were to be paid. The business of reporting on tenders was a subsequent arrangement. The major part of their business was assessing runs.

501. Of course there the fee was certain? Yes.

502. But it was uncertain where a tender on which they reported was declined? The Government did not promise to pay for such cases, but they promised to take them into consideration. If, for instance, a tender was declined, a previous tender for the same land having been accepted on their report, the only trouble in the one case would be the writing of the report. In that case they were not paid. On the other hand, if they assessed two runs and reported on a tender for a part of the country occupied by these runs, they were not paid for it; but if they could shew that they visited a portion of the district solely to report upon a tender and had no other business there, although the report might be unfavourable, they were paid under a special authority.

503. But surely in the out districts Commissioners would have so much to do that they would be well paid by that arrangement—such, for instance, as the Warrego and the Albert? Probably the Warrego District would have paid better than any other. That district, at the time the Commissioners were appointed, was embraced in four other districts. The fact is these four other districts had been bounded by the Darling or Barwan River. They were proclaimed with that as the boundary. This was the limit of the settlement. But the settlers crossed the river and occupied the other side, and then the districts, as they met the river, were carried across it and still further to the Gulgoa and the other branches of the Balonne. When the assessing Commissioners were first appointed their commissions embraced these extensions of the whole districts crossing the Barwan, but shortly afterwards it was found that there was so much to do in this Warrego District that the Government appointed a salaried Commissioner specially for it, and the Warrego District was defined as bounded on the south and east by the Barwan or Darling River.

504. Would you recommend then that the Commissioners should be paid by salaries, or do you think the present system works well—you say the Commissioners could hardly make a living? They certainly could hardly make a living, but it is quite possible that a salaried officer could have done little more towards assessing the runs in these outer districts. The fact is the Government have no power under the present law to enforce the nomination by the holder of a run of his assessor, and if he does not appoint his assessor the assessment cannot go on. That was the great difficulty the Commissioners met with in attempting to assess runs.

505. Persons holding runs would not name their arbitrator? They would not—looking forward, no doubt, to the result being the imposition of a higher assessment than that which they were at present paying.

506. That has been a great difficulty in the way of the Commissioners fulfilling their duties with regard to the assessment? Yes.

507.

507. By Mr. Hoskins: Then, in point of fact, if lessees of Crown Lands refuse to appoint an assessor they can prevent any assessment of their runs? They can under the existing law. The assessment cannot be carried out without the appointment of an assessor, which appointment rests with them. A. G. McLEOD,
Esq.
5 Mar., 1861.

508. That defect requires remedying; the nomination of an arbitrator should be compulsory? Yes.

509. Have you not experienced great difficulty in ascertaining the position of runs from the loose descriptions sent in? Yes, great difficulties have been experienced in that respect.

510. But no doubt that the Commissioner would have to contend with, being on the place these matters are referred to him? Yes; he is supposed to examine the ground himself.

511. Are you furnished with sufficient charts of those out districts, to be able to see where such runs are tendered for? I could always ascertain the proximate position of any land tendered for. In the great majority of tenders I could determine the proximate position in a few minutes in the office.

512. I suppose there is a good deal of survey required to complete these districts? There is still some survey required, but not a very great amount. The principal features have all been surveyed. There was a large portion of the Darling River unsurveyed, with the exception of a flying survey made by Sir Thomas Mitchell's expedition along its banks, until last year; but that has been surveyed now.

513. And that was necessary to complete the surveys of those districts—the natural features being so very few and far between—by running the watercourses you would get all you could get? Yes, all the most solid part.

514. Do you think it advisable for the Government to have surveyed at once those watercourses which now remain unsurveyed, in order to get a better means of fixing the applications for tenders? They are in process of being surveyed—the Darling River—150 miles in a direct line. Two hundred and thirty or forty miles of survey were completed last year. The Bogan River was surveyed when runs were being laid out for competition. I entered into a contract with a surveyor for the survey of the rivers in the Warrego District. He had been engaged there in surveying runs for different individuals. He had also surveyed in the Gwydir District, and having had an opportunity of comparing his survey with that of an officer of the department, Mr. Galloway (whose survey he had not seen), I found that his work was reliable, and made a contract with him to survey the whole of the rivers of the Warrego District.

515. By Mr. Morris: At what rate per mile? £2 10s.; but he had to travel 600 miles to get to the place, and also to take up a large party. He has failed, however, to carry out his contract. Whether he was engaged on private survey and found that more profitable, or whether he failed from want of energy I cannot tell. He has failed, however, from some cause or other, and I am now sending out a salaried surveyor to carry out the same duties.

516. That would greatly assist you in accepting tenders, inasmuch as it would enable you to obtain a better knowledge of the country? No doubt; but the Commissioner (Mr. Fitzwater) has already reported on a very large number of tenders on the Gulgoon, the Bree or Birie, and the Warrego.

517. By Mr. Hoskins: Has the junction of the Warrego and the Darling ever been traced? Yes. On this survey of the Darling taking place I instructed the surveyor to survey a few miles of the Warrego, which he did.

518. Do you know of a creek recently discovered, which empties itself into the Darling, between the Warrego and the Darling? Which empties itself into the Darling below the Warrego?

519. Yes? There is a large creek emptying itself there, which was noted in the survey of the Darling River, and which I understand is a tributary—a sort of ana branch from a considerable number of waterholes at some distance back. It is a river which seems to be generally known there by the name of the Paroo. I may mention that the surveyor who surveyed this portion of the Darling, during the last winter, is going up again this winter to survey the Warrego, so far as it lies within the boundaries of this Colony, a large branch of the Warrego called the Irara, and such branches of this Paroo as he may be able to follow.

520. Do you know whether any country has been taken up on this Paroo within a recent period—say the last two years? No tenders have been accepted, I think; I may almost say I am certain that no tenders for land on the Paroo have been accepted, unless they have been accepted as tenders for back Darling runs—runs at the back of the Darling frontage runs. I doubt if even any have been accepted in that way.

521. By the Chairman: Will you be good enough to state if you know anything of the non-acceptance of tenders sent in by Messrs. Maxwell and Millar? Yes; it was mentioned to me that probably there would be some inquiry made of me in relation to the tenders of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar, in the Warrego District, and I had a search made yesterday for any tenders made by those gentlemen. I found some. It was suggested to me that the tenders of Mr. Lord had been accepted, for country tendered for by Messrs. Maxwell and Millar, who had misnamed the district in this case; but I found, and have brought the papers with me to shew, that Mr. Lord's tenders were considerably earlier than those of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar. Mr. Lord's tenders are dated on different days—April, 1859, and July, 1859—and Messrs. Maxwell and Millar's tenders are dated Sept., 1859. I may mention to the Committee that supposing Messrs. Maxwell and Millar's tenders to have been sent previously to Mr. Lord's, they having made a mistake in the district, the tenders would have been referred to the Commissioner of the district in which the land was supposed to be; and if the Commissioner for Wellington had acted with greater activity than the Commissioner for Gwydir, and reported first, the tenders might have been accepted at once. The fault of misstatement would be entirely that of the tenderer and the loss would result from his own inadvertence.

A. G. McLean, Esq. 522. At the time they tendered they were told that the matter had been referred to the Commissioner of the Gwydir District, but at that time there was no Commissioner for the Gwydir. The Commissioners were being altered and shifted about, so that all the reports in reference to the Gwydir District at that time must have been in abeyance? Yes; the surveyor was nominally Commissioner, but it was not supposed that he would neglect his surveying duties. There was practically no Commissioner.

5 Mar., 1861.

523. By Mr. Morris: Is it a rule in the Crown Lands Office that if a tender misstates the district that that tender is rejected? It was the practice; I do not know whether it may be called a rule. When I came to the temporary occupation of the office I found that it was the practice to reject tenders on account of the district being misnamed.

524. Have you since departed from that practice? The Tender Board, finding that a great many difficulties arose from it, brought it specially under the notice of the Secretary for Lands, who gave a decision (speaking from memory) to the effect that the misnaming of a district should not invalidate a tender.

525. If it be not held as a fixed rule that persons tendering must mention correctly the district in which they apply for runs, how is the office to be guided? Of course the office must refer the tenders to the Commissioner of the district in which the land is said to be unless it should occur to the Board in looking over the tenders to examine as to their formality.

526. But do they thus examine? They do examine as to formality.

527. Is it part of their duties? It has never, as a rule, been the practice of the Board, and I think it is scarcely part of their duty, but still, if in examining into the formality of tenders it should appear that a district was misnamed, they would refer to the proper Commissioner, or otherwise it would go to the District Commissioner in whose jurisdiction the land was stated to be, and if by the delay, which occurs in sending to the wrong Commissioner, some one else obtains the run, it would be the fault of the applicant.

528. By Mr. Hoskins: But supposing there is only one application for the land, and that the applicant misnames the district or does not give any accurate definition of the boundaries of the country applied for, he may be kept a long time out of possession from the fact that it is impossible to discover the country? Yes, the Commissioner has often to communicate with the parties to ask if they can point out the land. They sometimes describe it as commencing at a marked tree on some lagoon or creek, the name of which is not known, and the Commissioner finds it necessary that the land should be pointed out.

529. And this difficulty would be increased if the district were misnamed? Yes, but the Commissioner, having a personal knowledge of the district, can frequently tell that land applied for is not in his district, and he reports accordingly. But in the meantime a later tender may have been sent in.

530. By Mr. Morris: And the later tender would be accepted? Yes, but not under the recent decision of the Secretary for Lands. If the earlier tender were reported upon before this—if it came to the knowledge of the Board that there was an earlier tender with the district misnamed, that tender would be considered.

531. On whose report? The report, of course, of the Commissioner of the proper district. The Tender Board would refrain from recommending the acceptance of the later tender until the other had been reported on. I should mention, in reference to the question the Chairman put a short time ago about the reports on tenders being much facilitated by the survey of streams, that in the district towards the Lower Darling, on the north side of the Lachlan River, there is a long ana branch of the Lachlan called the Willandra Billabong. The portion of the district in which this stream lies was added to the Lachlan District, in which a salaried officer has remained from its formation, and in which his duties of reporting on tenders have now pretty well closed, the whole of the district nearly having been taken up. It was thought that he would be able to cross and deal with the country on the north bank, but in the absence of survey of any of the features he professed his inability to deal with the very numerous tenders for that part of the country; and during last winter—winter being the only time that country can be traversed, containing as it does so little water—I sent a salaried surveyor, and had him appointed a Commissioner of Crown Lands for the occasion, and he surveyed 150 miles of the Willandra Billabong, and traced it as far as the water would carry him. He reported upon all the tenders on either side of it, and upon the whole of the tenders lying between it and the Lachlan River, so adding, I suppose, 70 or 80 runs to the licensed runs of the Colony. This shews the necessity of having the prominent features of the country surveyed.

532. By the Chairman: You said also that you would combine the duties of Commissioner with those of surveyor? Yes.

533. You think it would be a good regulation if these gentlemen had an idea of surveying? That was the idea years ago, in the time of Sir George Gipps. If Commissioners had been surveyors instead of Police Magistrates there would not have been that confusion which now exists.

534. It would be better to combine the duties of surveyor and Commissioner? Yes.

535. A Commissioner may be a very zealous officer, and yet not have sufficient knowledge of a locality and of surveying to enable him to report so well as a person who had that knowledge? Precisely. If he were to go into a new country, for which there were a vast number of tenders, it would be impossible to report satisfactorily without some of the leading features being surveyed. In the case of the Willandra Billabong, before alluded to, this feature forms a great triangle with the Lachlan River and the west boundary of the district. The Lachlan River runs a little south of west, the Billabong breaks out from it, and runs due west.

536. But by running out that leading feature the whole country was, in fact, opened up? A. G. McLean, Esq.
 Yes. There is another large piece which was partly surveyed last year, that is the ana branch of the Darling; it has been partly surveyed, and during this ensuing winter the survey will be completed. Tenders for runs have been already accepted, however, on the reports of the Commissioner. 5 Mar., 1861.

537. By Mr. Morris: Have not very many complaints been made in your office of delays in reporting on tenders for runs in the Lower Darling District? I think great complaints have been made.

538. How do you account for these complaints arising, because I am receiving complaints every day? Well, I think it is probably due to the first reason I suggested—the combination of the duties of Police Magistrate with those of Commissioner; but no, that is not the case in this district.

539. No, these reasons do not apply here? I think it is partly owing to the difficulty of inspecting the country in which many of the runs tendered for are situated, and partly to the same difficulty which the Commissioner of the Lachlan District felt, in going into an unknown country where there were no points fixed, and reporting upon tenders.

540. By the Chairman: In looking into these tenders of Messrs. Maxwell and Millar, I see that they are for two blocks—the one called Culloden, and the other called Staffa? Yes, there are several other tenders of theirs.

541. Are there any previous to these? There are four or five on the same days as these.

542. I think you will find some previous to these; at least we have it in evidence from Mr. Dunsmore? I relied upon the Chief Commissioner's Office.

543. These two tenders apply to the sixteen miles which are said to be Mr. Lord's? Yes.

544. Would you, from the knowledge you obtained during the twelve months this department was particularly under your supervision, state to the Committee if you see any way in which an improvement can be made in this system of tendering and taking up runs, so that these vexatious delays should not take place? There is no doubt that the delay in occupying might be very much obviated by the adoption of a system similar to that which is now in existence at Queensland; but whether there might not be other disadvantages connected with it which would counteract the benefits to be derived from it, I am scarcely at the present moment prepared to say. I have hardly considered the question sufficiently. There is one material consideration in dealing with questions in reference to tendering for runs. There is very little of this Colony which has not already been tendered for; the whole space between the Darling and Lachlan Rivers has been tendered for. No doubt much of it has been tendered for in blocks of a size that the Government will not grant; for the Government have come to a determination not to grant blocks of more than one hundred square miles. But, as I said before, the whole has been tendered for, and a large extent of the only remaining country, that between the boundary of South Australia and the Darling River, has already been tendered for, so that the adoption of any new system in regard to the tendering for runs would apply only to the remainder of this portion of country between South Australia and the Darling.

545. And do you really consider that there is not much of this country still untendered for? About two-thirds, or upwards, of the extent of available country between South Australia and the Darling may be considered as still untendered for.

546. The boundaries of South Australia are defined now? They are not defined on the ground.

547. But the 29th parallel of latitude meets the 141st degree of longitude, which is the boundary of South Australia? Yes.

548. And therefore the boundary of New South Wales is defined on the west by the South Australian boundary, and on the north by the 29th parallel, which is the boundary of Queensland? Yes; but Queensland does not extend to the west of the 141st degree, and therefore it is contended that the country to the north of South Australia and to the west of Queensland, and that between South Australia and Western Australia, is part of New South Wales, although it does not join New South Wales proper.

549. I understood that the boundary of Queensland went to the 141st degree? Yes.

550. The boundary of South Australia? Yes.

551. Then if the boundary of Queensland be continued to the 141st degree of longitude, that would define the boundaries of New South Wales? Of occupied New South Wales; but then New South Wales consisted originally, with the exception of the parts occupied by Victoria, South Australia, and Western Australia, of the whole of New Holland. Then these boundaries cut off New South Wales from what she is considered to appropriate, such as all round the Gulf of Carpentaria and the river Victoria? Yes; but much of Carpentaria would come within the boundaries of Queensland.

552. To the head of Cape York it would—the 141st degree strikes the head of the Gulf of Carpentaria? Yes.

553. By Mr. Hoskins: Is not this country to which you allude between the South Australian border and Western Australia, and the occupied country in New South Wales, the portion in reference to which we had a debate last Session in the Assembly? It is part of that country; that was the part between South Australia and Western Australia, and bounded on the south by the Southern Ocean.

554. That was a portion of country completely cut off from New South Wales proper? Yes.

555. By the Chairman: Then, I understand from your remarks that the whole is claimed as part of New South Wales, with the exception of these portions which have been partitioned off as separate Colonies? Yes.

556. That is, Swan River has a particular portion, South Australia has a particular portion, and Victoria and Queensland have their portions, and the remainder of the Continent is called New South Wales? Yes, but the Queensland boundaries are not so distinctly defined as the boundaries of the other Colonies.

A. G. McLean, Esq. 557. By Mr. Hoskins : It is not definitely fixed to the northward at all? It is not definite to the northward, nor clearly defined to the westward.

558. By Mr. Mate : Where two runs overlap, and the whole of the country included in both tenders is brought to competition, the runs are adjusted, and advertised in the Government Gazette for tender on a certain specified day,—are they measured at all—surveyed? They have scarcely ever been surveyed. There is the case of the Bogan runs, for instance, the Bogan River having been reserved on account of the hostility of the aborigines, and thus withdrawn from the ordinary category of waste lands open to tender; before bringing it to tender by competition, Government surveyed the river, marked at every five miles of the river's course a boundary at right angles, marking the boundary from the river for a distance of from a quarter to half a mile, and then described the boundaries merely from paper measurement; the frontages were defined and determined, and the direction of the side boundaries marked, and their length stated.

559. But are all the adjusted runs measured in that way? No.

560. How are the accepted tenderers put in possession of these adjusted runs? Just as they would be put in possession if they had tendered for new country.

561. They are not surveyed at all? No; their occupation is authorized by letter, and they take possession, if the run is unoccupied.

562. And, if any disputes arise, the Government do not interfere? No.

563. They would have to settle it themselves at law? Yes, that has been the course.

564. By Mr. Hoskins : Has it not come within your experience that there is an immense inequality in the amounts tendered for runs exactly similarly circumstanced—that is to say, in many instances people tender more than one hundred pounds a block for a piece of country, while in other instances they only tender at ten or twenty pounds for the block immediately adjoining it? Yes, or even less; there are amazing differences; indeed they are quite ludicrous.

565. Arising, I apprehend, from the system of tendering, and the uncertainty felt by the applicant as to the way in which any one else will tender? Yes, as to what rate others might tender, and the greater necessity, no doubt, in some instances, that the country should be secured, that it might be occupied or continue to be occupied with adjacent runs.

566. Do you not think it would be better in reference to these adjusted runs, as well as in the case of vacant pieces of country in these more settled districts, if they were put up to public competition by auction? I think it would, wherever the runs can be well defined; there is no doubt that the system of tendering has led many people to tender so highly, that they were subsequently compelled to relinquish the runs. In the case of the Bogan runs, for instance, the majority of those runs have been forfeited by the original tenderers.

567. By the Chairman : They were put up to competition? By tender; but there is a vast difference between the tenders. The first tenderer has failed to pay, and the second tenderer has also sometimes failed to pay, and a third has sometimes come into possession. Others have been occupied the first year by the original tenderers, and then forfeited.

568. By Mr. Watt : Does not the difference in the price offered arise in some instances from a want of knowledge of the country applied for on the part of the tenderer? Possibly so; a great many of the tenderers are resident in other Colonies.

569. By Mr. Huddis : I gather from your remarks, that you think it would be better for the Crown Lands Commissioners, if possible, to be surveyors? I think it is very desirable.

570. But there is great difficulty in obtaining persons with those qualifications? I do not think there would be any very great difficulty now; there may be difficulty in filling up a number of appointments at once, but I do not think there would be any difficulty in finding officers by degrees.

571. And you think that such an arrangement would be a means of preventing much unnecessary delay, and also inaccuracy in reference to the boundaries of the country? Yes, I think it would have been, and would be still a great advantage in new districts. Of course where a surveyor has already surveyed the principal features, and the Commissioner has a map given him of those features, it becomes less necessary that he himself should be a surveyor; but this instance I mentioned in the Lacblan District, where an officer went for six months and surveyed about two hundred miles, and reported upon sixty new runs, besides defining the boundaries of old runs, clearly shews how much more a surveyor can do.

572. By the Chairman : It shews that in a new country, if the duties are not combined, that the surveyor must precede the Commissioner? Yes.

573. By Mr. Hoskins : You think that the appointment of surveyors as Commissioners would greatly obviate delays, and also diminish litigation? It would no doubt obviate litigation very much.

574. And delays? And delays, no doubt, too.

575. Do you consider that the appointment of Commissioners to be paid by fees has not worked satisfactorily? It has not proved satisfactory, hitherto, but, as I mentioned before, the great cause of its failure was the inability of the Commissioner to enforce the appointment of an assessor by the run-holder.

576. But you think if there was a power to compel lessees to have their runs assessed, that these Commissioners, paid by fees, would obtain a practice sufficiently lucrative to remunerate them for their services? I think they would, for a time; but in many of the older districts the work would not last an active man more than a year or eighteen months. During that time, however, he would make a living.

577. By Mr. Morris : The Occupation Bill provides for that difficulty? Yes.

578. By Mr. Hoskins : Would you suggest the continuance of Crown Lands Commissioners, too? I think now that we have lost the Commissioners of Crown Lands, who had personal knowledge knowledge of these matters, the Government could do the work more economically by paying people by fees than by paying them a salary. But in new districts, such as the Albert, which has recently been proclaimed between the Darling and the South Australian boundary, a salaried officer should be appointed, and I think it would be desirable that he should be a surveyor.

A. G. McLean,
Esq.
5 Mar., 1861.

579. It has been given in evidence that in the older districts, where Commissioners have been appointed for a number of years, that disputes have arisen between lessees of the Crown, and that the same delays as in new countries have been experienced in getting the Commissioner to point out the boundaries? A Commissioner may go and say what he thinks is the boundary, but he had no control over that boundary being assented to by the parties. I do not think it would be safe in all cases to depend upon the descriptions given by men who are not surveyors, and many of whose descriptions are unreliable.

580. It has been given in evidence before this Committee, that persons have gone to the Commissioners of their districts and asked them to point out the boundaries of their runs, and that although they have made frequent applications they have never been able to get these gentlemen to make their appearance? But did the two parties agree to be bound by the decision of the Commissioner? I have known many instances where two parties have agreed to be bound by the decision of the Commissioner, and where he has pointed out the boundary, and sent a description of it, as so defined, to the office to be recorded.

581. But we have it in evidence that persons have applied, and that the Commissioners have never gone to see the place? The Commissioner probably, knowing that he could not enforce the adoption of the boundary, might perhaps have thought that he would be wasting time.

582. Of course—I infer from the tenor of your evidence that you would not combine the duties of Police Magistrate with those of Commissioner of Crown Lands? No, nor other duties which would form sufficient reason for their being resident in one particular locality.

583. So that they would be perambulating the districts during the greater part of the year? Yes.

584. By Mr. Morris: When the tender for a new run is accepted what steps do the Government take to put the successful tenderer in possession? They merely write him a letter authorizing him to occupy.

585. But supposing the successful tenderer finds the country occupied by another, and that he refuses to turn out, what steps do they take? I do not know any case in which the Government have taken any steps to place him in occupation. The only step which they can take, under the existing law, is to issue a lease to the man whose tender has been accepted—such a document as would in the Supreme Court override occupation by the other party. But I do not know of any case in which that has been done.

586. By the Chairman: We have a letter from Mr. Sibthorpe, before the Committee, threatening Messrs. Maxwell and Millar with proceedings under a certain Act if they did not move off?

587. By Mr. Hoskins: We have it given in evidence by a witness that by re-arrangement of boundaries by the Commissioner a spare block has been found, and yet that when persons have applied to the Commissioner for this block and requested him to point out the boundaries for them they could not get him to come? I believe there are Commissioners who have been for years appointed that have never been through their districts from one end to the other. If I knew the locality in which that case occurred I should probably have some knowledge of it.

588. By the Chairman: Do you know the particulars of M'Rae and Sheridan's case—on the Castlereagh River? I know some of the particulars of that case.

589. You are aware that they recovered £250? M'Rae?

590. Yes? I believe he did recover.

591. And you are aware that he recovered from a party to whom the Government gave the new run upon their old run? They did recover something.

592. Can you tell how it was that this run was so granted? It was granted on an erroneous report of Mr. Jardine, who was then Commissioner of the district.

593. The report was erroneous? It was an erroneous report. I wrote, as Acting Chief Commissioner, to Mr. Sheridan, or the holder of the run, whoever he may be. He told me he had been threatened by M'Rea with an action for occupying this run, and asked me if there were any grounds for supposing that M'Rae had a right to this land. I wrote to him to say, that there was nothing in the records of the office to shew that he had any right, and that his tender was accepted on the report of Mr. Jardine, who was personally acquainted with the locality. Subsequently, however, it came to my knowledge after Mr. Daniel had been employed for some time assessing runs, that this tender did encroach on M'Rae. I then wrote again to this person, before the action came on, to tell him that there were grounds for doubting whether the land for which his tender had been accepted was really vacant land. And, so far as I recollect, I think I told him that any information which the office could give should be afforded to him, if he would call or send his agent. I did this as a sort of caution to him against going to law on the strength of that previous letter. He persisted, however, in the action, and made no inquiries that I heard of, and I believe the case was given against him. It is a very peculiar case—that of M'Rae's; I believe it is unsettled to this day. I handed it over to the present Chief Commissioner, with one or two others. He (M'Rae) only applied originally for 6,000 acres, but he says that application was a mistake, and that he meant 60,000.

594. By Mr. Hoskins: I understand you to admit that you are cognizant of the fact that at present great delays exist in reference to persons obtaining permission to settle? There have been great delays.

A. G. McLean, Esq.
5 Mar., 1861. 595. In general terms, what remedies would you propose for that state of things? The greatest delays are in consequence of the extension of the districts I have mentioned—the Gwydir, the Wellington, and Liverpool Plains. But since the appointment of Mr. Huthwaite, who has been very active in reporting on tenders, much has been done, and twelve months will certainly lead to the settlement of the whole of that district. That will remove a great many of the old cases, as well as the recent cases of delay. People have tendered from paper, and without reference to the land, for the whole country between the Darling and Lachlan Rivers; but some delay in dealing with such tenders is not a matter of much regret.

596. Could you not suggest some alteration in the system to obviate the delays to which you have referred?

597. By the Chairman: You did partially suggest the Queensland regulations, but I think you stated that you did not know what new evils might arise from the change? I thought the question had not the same importance that it would have had some years ago, on account of so much of the country being under occupation and tender. I think the adoption of changes—even where they are changes for the better—is always attended with some evils; and it might be well worth consideration, whether it is desirable, at this late period, to adopt any other system than the present for dealing with unoccupied Crown lands.

ADDENDUM.

I beg to add to this evidence, that, since giving it, I induced a further search being made in the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands Office, for tenders of earlier date than those produced by Messrs. Millar and Maxwell, and that the search has resulted in the discovery of tenders by these parties, opened December, 1853, and which certainly ought to have been found before.

These tenders have been referred to Mr. Commissioner Huthwaite, but have not yet been reported on, and so far as I can learn nothing has occurred in the Crown Lands Office to prejudice the claims of Messrs. Millar and Maxwell, and no delay or inconvenience has resulted from the mis-naming the District in several or all of the tenders of these gentlemen.

A. G. M.

WEDNESDAY, 20 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. MATE, | MR. MORRIS,
Ma. WATT.

FRANCIS TOWNSEND RUSDEN, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Abram Orpen Moriarty, Esq., Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, called in and examined:—

A. O. Moriarty, Esq.
20 Mar., 1861. 598. By the Chairman: Of course you have found that great delays have taken place in persons getting answers to tenders that they have sent in for runs? Yes, of necessity some delay occurs.

599. Have not these delays chiefly arisen from the system of making the first application to the head office in Sydney, the tender having then to be referred to the local Commissioner, and delay taking place in his report? Principally from delay in the Commissioner's inspection of the country and report.

600. By Mr. Morris: You say this delay takes place of necessity—why so? Because new runs are applied for on the extreme verge of settlement, in situations little known and very detached, and there is consequently great difficulty in getting a report upon them.

601. Surely that does not account for years elapsing before a report is made? Certainly not.

602. You are aware that years have elapsed in many instances? Yes. I am also aware that runs have been applied for, which, if they are to be treated as bonâ fide and inspected by the Commissioner, would never be reported on.

603. By the Chairman: For what reason? Because it is very common for people to tender for runs which no man living has seen; they tender from maps without having seen the country, or having any information whatever about it. These are not solitary cases, but cases which occur by hundreds.

604. These are tenders made by speculators in runs? Yes; and by obstructing legitimate business, they operate as causes of delay.

605. A Commissioner is not to know which is a legitimate application and which is not, until he makes inquiry? He is not justified in assuming any application to be otherwise than legitimate, until he has inquired into it.

606. When I say a legitimate application I mean one that can be practically tested? Such an application as is contemplated by the regulations—an application containing a "clear description of the land applied for and of the boundaries of the same."

607. You would suggest, then, as one remedy, that persons tendering should be compelled to give more particular descriptions of runs they apply for? Undoubtedly. I think people can be compelled, ought to be compelled, and must be compelled, under the present law, to do that; and should always have been compelled to do so.

608. For instance, they might send in a rough sketch of the country, and particularly designate certain marked trees which could be found? They should give the actual boundaries, in fact, a description connecting the application with a particular piece of country.

609. In an open country where there are few natural features, if the trees were marked, that would be an assistance? No doubt; a marked tree is a point which admits of evidence.

610. By Mr. Morris: Could you not suggest to us some remedy for the whole of this delay and troublesome management of these new runs? I have already taken measures, having that object, in my department.

611. Could you not suggest some change in the law, and in the mode altogether of taking up new runs? I have already suggested to the Government, and the Government have adopted in one of their measures, a means which I think will attain the end we have in view, namely, that there should be a small deposit on each tender, sufficient to guarantee that the tenderer is in earnest in applying for the land, and that the land he applies for is in existence.

612. Do you think that will be sufficient to prevent speculators from applying for those vast tracts of country that they have never seen? I think so.

613. You would return the money if they do not get the runs? No doubt; it would be a mere deposit.

614. By the Chairman: What do you think of the Queensland regulation with respect to previous occupation? I do not think it a good one.

615. What is your objection to it? That it places the disposal of the application in the hands of the officer who is in fact chiefly chargeable with the delays of the present system.

616. The local Commissioner? The local Commissioner.

617. I think you told me, on a previous occasion, in conversation, that you thought the local Commissioner, under the Queensland law, has too much power? Yes.

618. Could not the plan be made available, and some system be introduced of curtailing his power? I do not see the advantage of it. There is no delay in the transmission of the tenders to the Commissioner for his report; it is done by the following post. The vital difference in the systems is that in New South Wales the responsibility is with the Government, and in Queensland it is with the local Commissioner. The executive proceedings here are taken by the Government, through an office which is open to the public, and under the advice of a responsible Board; in Queensland they are in the hands of the local Commissioners entirely.

619. If previous occupation were allowed, as is now the case in Queensland, the local Commissioner need have no power conceded to him, excepting that of reporting to the Government that the land is occupied? Occupation is only one of the conditions.

620. The Queensland Act provides that a person can occupy, and that the occupation shall not be considered illegal if he tenders two months after? If any other person applied at the same time for the same run, there would be considerable difficulty in deciding the prior right. For instance, at the very time of the first applicant's application to the Commissioner another party may have been in the process of occupying the country.

621. Then it should be given to the man first on the ground with his stock? I think it is a very cumbersome, very rude, and very roundabout way of determining the right.

622. It does away with all delay? I do not see that it is the best way of doing it. I think the same object may be attained in another way. Another consideration is, that, by making occupation the first step, you prevent any country being rented beyond that which is actually occupied; you prevent a person from renting country for prospective use, which I consider an advantageous process, so long as it is bonâ fide.

623. There is this disadvantage, that no one knows what is prospectively rented—there are no means of checking it. For instance, a person looking for a run may be told that country he sees vacant is under rent to Mr. So-and-so, but he has no means of ascertaining the fact or the boundaries of the run said to be rented? If the country is under rent to Mr. So-and-so, I apprehend he is fairly entitled to it.

624. But the public do not know he is in possession? The great grievance that the public have to contend with is that the persons who have sent in these speculative applications have been under no obligation to complete the tenders or to have the boundaries accurately described, so that the Commissioner can make his report. They have, in fact, a direct interest in keeping the tenders unreported on until they can make it profitable to transfer their interest to others. An immense extent of country has, in consequence, remained not under rent, but simply tendered for.

625. You say you have recommended that in all cases a certain deposit should be made on sending in the tenders, but although that may possibly prevent speculators from tendering for country they do not want, it will not secure the tenders being reported on more rapidly, and consequently a number of people will be kept out of funds that might be much better employed? It would lead to tenders being more rapidly reported on in this way. The great excuse of the Commissioners for delay at present is their inability to obtain proper information from the tenderers; and under the present system the object of the tenderer frequently is to allow his tender to remain undisposed of as long as he can, because he is under no rent; but if the tenderer were out of his money he would have a direct interest in getting the matter settled one way or other.

626. I have yet to learn that the cause of delay in reporting on runs has been the difficulty of getting information from tenderers, because until lately more speculative tenders were not very common? My attention was very forcibly directed in 1856 to the enormous grievance which speculative tenders had occasioned to the general public. I allude more particularly to the Northern Districts, which are now Queensland.

627. But I wish now to draw your attention to the fact that in the South-Western Districts—

A.O.Moriarty, Esq.
29 Mar., 1861.

the Lower Darling District, the Lachlan, and the country back from the Darling—the delays have been quite as vexatious as in any part of the country, and yet the speculative principle has not been carried out in those districts? Not to the same extent in former years, but recently it has grown to a very great extent. I speak of within the last two years.

629. That speculation has been confined in a great measure to the country between the Lachlan and the Darling, which is without water? The country between the Lachlan and the Darling, and back from the Darling also.

629. To the South Australian boundary? Yes.

630. Is the putting down of a deposit with the tender the only improvement you see on the present system? I think it is the most effectual way of getting rid first of the enormous number of speculative tenders which obstruct the business. It will render the tenderer interested in the early disposal of the tender.

631. I assure you that in eight cases out of ten that have come under my notice the tenderer has been most anxious to get a proper title to his run? No doubt there have been some grievances. In fact, the delay was the natural result of some reductions injudiciously made in the department in 1857 or 1858. In 1857 the Commissioners of Crown Lands were removed from the Wellington and Gwydir Districts, and no sufficient provision was made for the performance of their duties, and therefore the public who had applied for runs had to wait, the tenders remaining undisposed of at this moment.

632. By Mr. Morris: Do you not think there are difficulties attending the occupation of new country in this Colony in consequence of the greater portion of the country that is available without the expenditure of money for procuring water being already taken up—do you not think that if the Government were to mark out the country now vacant into lots, and put it up to auction, not only would the revenue be benefited, but people would get surer and more regular possession? I do not think so. The country that remains to be taken up in New South Wales is the remotest country in it—all backlying country of an inferior class; and for the Government to undertake to divide it into runs would be an enormous undertaking, attended with great delay and expense.

633. Is it not the practice to do it now? Not so. The present regulations provide for its being done by the applicant.

634. Is it not the fact that you have had to send out a surveyor to mark out runs between the Lachlan and the Darling already? No; the Surveyor General employed a surveyor to survey the frontage of the Darling—to measure off the Darling frontages; he also employed a surveyor on the Willandra Creek; and in course of his operations the surveyor obtained such information as enabled him, on consultation with the Surveyor General and myself in Sydney, to lay out other runs for tender.

635. But practically he was sent down to mark out runs for occupation? The country on the Darling was principally occupied, but no doubt the survey of Willandra Creek, by determining its relative position to the Lachlan, permitted a good number of tenders to be disposed of, which could not otherwise have been done. It gave a fresh starting point.

636. Under the present system of tender has not a person anxious to take up a piece of country very great difficulty in knowing how much to tender so as to secure it—it is impossible for him to say how much he ought to tender, and therefore is it not the case that he often tenders a sum higher than the country itself is really worth, calculating it in reference to country he already possesses? I have seen no such instances. There is no competition between tenders, except between tenders which are opened at the same time; and unless the tenders are opened at the same time the party tendering is under no obligation to offer any premium at all. A later tender will not, by any amount of premium, compete with an earlier one.

637. But of course it is impossible to know whether some person has not tendered in the very same month? I have never seen any tenders containing any high offers of premium for new runs—I do not believe there are any; on the contrary, the rates of premium are ridiculously small.

638. Does not the objection I make apply to country put up to public tender? No doubt it does.

639. Would you not recommend that runs of this kind should be put up to public auction in the district, instead of public tender? I think auction is a preferable mode of competition; but I think better competition exists in Sydney for runs than in the remote squatting districts. It would be no grievance to a person in the country to be obliged to bid at auction in Sydney for a run. In fact, all pastoral properties are sold in Sydney.

640. By the Chairman: Do you not think that if the agriculturist is to have free selection by going upon the land and occupying it, as is proposed under the new Land Law, parties wishing to occupy runs (which will themselves be open to free selection) should also have the same facilities afforded them to take up new country by right of occupation? One great objection to the occupation right is, that it practically confines the demand for new country to the stockholders in the immediate neighbourhood; it almost places the adjoining country at their mercy.

641. By Mr. Morris: I apprehend it is also an objection to a right by mere occupation, in a country like this, where there is so little water, that large sums of money have to be expended to secure a supply? No doubt. In fact, the greater part of the country in the hands of the Government to dispose of now consists of such country as you speak of.

642. By Mr. Watt: In fact, it could not be occupied without expenditure for water? It would not, except, perhaps, in some cases, during the winter.

643. By the Chairman: Do you not think that to require previous occupation would tend to check speculation in runs, because then they would not be transferable until they were stocked? It would have that tendency, if you could enforce it. It is the law in Queensland.

land that runs are not transferable unless they have been stocked, but they are practically transferred. A.O.Moriarty,
Esq.

644. How do they evade it? The purchaser obtains from the seller a guarantee against loss, places his stock on the run, and as soon as the time for stocking is past he sends in his transfer. 20 Mar., 1861.

645. By Mr. Morris: Is it not provided in the Queensland Act, that unless it is stocked within a limited period the run is forfeited? There is a clause to that effect, but I do not believe it has any effect.

646. But there is also a provision to the effect that, if the lands are not stocked within twelve months, the lessee may, on payment of double the amount of annual rent, obtain six months further grace? Yes. The principal provision is that applicants for runs by tender, whose tenders have been accepted, are obliged to accept leases, and the leases contain a provision requiring occupation.

647. By the Chairman: The lease must be taken out in twelve months? The lease must be applied for in twelve months, but inasmuch as in New South Wales the leases of old squatting runs are not yet issued, and are not likely to be, I do not anticipate that they will be issued very rapidly in Queensland.

648. By Mr. Morris: I apprehend that is merely from the difficulty of defining the boundaries of runs with sufficient accuracy? No doubt.

649. By the Chairman: But that is not to be said in Queensland, where there are no arrears? Yes, great numbers.

650. I presume you are perfectly acquainted with the case of Millar and Maxwell, arising out of a tender for a run? I cannot say I am at this moment, I have not looked fully into it; but I have a general impression that the case is this: that Millar and Maxwell tendered for a certain run, describing it as in the Gwydir District; that some other person also tendered for the same run, describing it properly as in the Wellington District, and that the later tenderer got the run in preference to Millar and Maxwell, whose tender, though first in point of time, had misdescribed the district. (The Chairman here quoted from the evidence of Mr. Dunsmore, taken on Thursday, 21 February, 1861, and the letters appended thereto.)

651. There was, I believe, at the time this tender was under consideration, no Commissioner for the Gwydir District? There was a Commissioner of Crown Lands, but he had other duties to attend to. The surveyor of the district, Mr. Oliver, was entrusted with the duties of Commissioner; but, as might have been anticipated, his own duties were quite sufficient to occupy his time, and he gave none to these.

652. By Mr. Morris: Do we understand that if a person tendering for a run, although he may otherwise correctly describe it, should apply for it in the wrong district, another person tendering and describing it in the right district would get it in preference, although his tender was subsequent? No. I may mention that shortly after my assuming charge of my present department the Secretary for Lands referred to me a recommendation of the Land Board on that subject. The Board were of opinion that misdescribing the district was a vital objection to a tender, such as should cancel it; but I was of opinion that if it was ascertained before the later tender was disposed of, that the land had been previously tendered for and described so that there could be no doubt about the identity of the land itself, the first application should, in the spirit of the Orders in Council, be granted. Under ordinary circumstances the interval that must necessarily elapse, to insure precision of boundaries, ought to be sufficient, when the department is properly conducted to insure the application made in the wrong district being returned and forwarded to the proper officer in the district in which the land was really situated, in time to prevent injustice to the party who was in point of fact, the first applicant. These applications, in the case of Millar and Maxwell, have been transferred to the proper officer with instructions to dispose of them, but I have not yet received his report. The reason of my recommendation just mentioned was, that in those very districts, in reference to which the Board had made the recommendation I have alluded to, the boundary lines are imaginary lines, and nobody knows the actual position of them; and therefore it would be very hard to make the public bear the inconvenience.

653. By the Chairman: It is very difficult to ascertain the boundaries of these outlying districts where they are formed by imaginary lines? Yes.

654. For instance, the 29th parallel forms part of the boundary of the Warrego District and part of the boundary of the Gwydir District, and is also the boundary of Queensland? If I am not mistaken that objection has been removed by the present arrangement of boundaries. I rather think the Warrego embraces the whole of that country. My impression is that imaginary lines now exist only where they are from the nature of the country the best boundaries.

655. But where they cannot be ascertained by parties tendering? And where it is not necessary to ascertain them. They are chiefly confined to situations where the country is not fit for occupation—extreme back country, totally removed from occupation.

656. Then if two persons apply for the same country, one applying to one Commissioner, and the other to another Commissioner, in different districts, which may happen from their not knowing in which district the land really is, the circumstance of one Commissioner reporting earlier than the other would put out the man who perhaps had first applied? That has arisen in some instances. But I defend these imaginary boundaries only when they pass through lands which do not admit of being occupied—lands lying at extreme distances back from water, where no question can arise as to boundary, because no runs can exist near it. However, wherever there has appeared any doubt, on inspection of the tender, or from the statement of the party, my practice has been to refer the tender to both Commissioners.

657. You object to placing too much power in the hands of the local Commissioners; but do you not think that the local Commissioners might be entrusted with the decision of these matters,

A.O.Moriarty, Esq.
20 Mar., 1861.

matters, the applications or tenders being sent to them in the first instance, provided they were required to furnish fortnightly returns to the head office in Sydney,—would not that check favouritism or land speculating? No returns can give information so precise as to the state of the business as the business itself. The head office is open to constant applications from all quarters, and it is therefore absolutely necessary that we should have a good system, if only to be able to give every information at once.

658. Under the present system there must necessarily be great delay. A person sends in to you a tender for certain country; you send it off to the Commissioner for his report, but the Commissioner may be away from his office travelling, and may not get the letter for some time; then he has to visit the place before he can report, and press of business may prevent him doing that immediately, so that altogether great delay must occur, although there may be no neglect in any office; whereas, if occupation is allowed at once, it does away with all delay? You would substitute priority of occupation for priority of tender. I think priority of tender is the simpler mode of determining the right. Suppose two men discover the same country about the same time, the first man lives at some distance, the second nearer; and the second who has perhaps profited by the other's discovery is, in consequence of his greater vicinity to the spot, enabled to crowd his stock on to the land to the injury of the actual discoverer.

659. I look upon it that in most cases the man who goes out for new country, under a system of occupation, would know by hearsay the general character of the country, and would travel with his stock towards it? The old squatting system of New South Wales was very nearly that—the prior occupant retained possession; but that old system has left the legacy of squatting actions which we see day after day tried in the Supreme Court. More occupation, to my mind, is a rude method of getting possession of country. It might have answered better in former days when the land was not so valuable and stock were few; but now, when stock are in such enormous masses and country is so valuable, the competition between contending applicants is so great that it would be reduced to a race between flocks of sheep, for which flocks of sheep were not by nature intended. I have known, in the Northern Districts, the actual discoverer of country to bring his sheep from a distance, and when he got to the land he found somebody else was on it, who perhaps had not heard of it for months after he had discovered it. No doubt it would be a great saving of labour at the head office if the responsibility were thrown on the local Commissioners, but I think it would be very unsatisfactory, and it would be impossible to insure so good a system as we are necessarily obliged to keep up when we are open to daily inquiries from the public and the Minister who is immediately responsible to the Legislature.

660. There are some runs on the Darling that have been recently visited by Mr. Commissioner Huthwaite, and he has found an excess of ground occupied by certain parties to the extent of three miles in some instances, but some of the trees have been marked as boundaries for from twelve to nineteen years, and the parties have been in occupation all that time, and they have been paying assessment, though perhaps not full assessment. Now the system he seems to have pursued is to make new runs in between these old established occupied runs, and I am told it is almost certain to lead to lawsuits. Some of these runs have changed hands by sale. For instance, I will mention the case of Mr. George Loder and Mr. Dangar, of Bunnawonna; I think Messrs. Lord and Mackenzie have got two new runs in between the old established runs. Now would it not have been better for the Government, in such instances as these, to have re-assessed the runs and insisted upon their paying back assessment also, and then allowed them to retain the ground—because it actually shifts camps of cattle, and, as the cattle cannot be kept off their old ground, it must lead to impoundings and disputes? The remedy which I think necessary, and which has been adopted in the case you speak of, is about to be taken. I have instructed the Commissioner to ascertain the distance of the frontage, and, if there has been no obvious monopoly of Crown Lands on the part of the first occupier, no extravagant excess of his rights, such as the Government has no right to countenance, I think the existing occupant should not be disturbed. Runs are taken up on estimated distances, and of course these admit of being over or under the actual fact; but wherever the first stockholder in a new country has obviously endeavoured to make it his own all round him, which is a very common idea among stockholders, then it becomes the duty of the Crown, on the part of the public, to step in and prevent this; although the Government would not be justified in keeping every man to the exact number of miles he was estimated to be entitled to. I may mention a case which will shew exactly what my impressions are. On the Darling River the Bogan Company have a very large extent of frontage, and it was found by measurement that they had some three miles in excess on the whole of their runs. On consultation with the Surveyor General, we thought that though the measurement shewed that there was a little more than was anticipated, it was just as likely that there would have been a little less, and therefore they were not disturbed in their occupation. But in another case, which occurred on the same river, it was found that the lease of a run, which had been expressly limited to fifteen miles, was in actual occupation of twenty-seven miles; and we thought that a case in which the Government had no right to legalize the occupation.

661. Do you know anything of the case between Mr. Loder and Mr. Thomas Dangar, of Bunnawonna and Turce? From what I have seen, I rather think there has been some interference with Mr. Dangar's runs, arising from a mistake with respect to the two rivers which form the boundary.

662. We have had Mr. Rundle's evidence, and he states that Mr. Druitt would be able to give information with respect to some error into which the Commissioner has been led—he has taken his measurements from some creek which runs into the river seven miles above or below below the place where he should have commenced, by which means he is seven miles wrong in all the boundaries up the river? If I do not mistake the case, the new tender was reported on by Mr. Daniel, and his statement is directly contrary to that of the tenderer, and he upholds his proceedings and maintains that he is right; but I speak under correction, for I have not the case in my memory at present. A.O.Moriarty, Esq.

20 Mar., 1861.

663. Mr. M'Lean, in his evidence, seemed to imply that all the country in New South Wales proper was so nearly taken up or tendered for that an alteration in the law was hardly necessary—is that your opinion? The country that remains to be taken up is chiefly that which previous occupants have not thought it worth while to take up.

664. He seemed to imply that there was not a great deal to take up? There is not a great deal.

665. By Mr. Morris: I apprehend there is a great deal of country which has been tendered for, that will have to be adjusted and put up to public tender? No doubt.

666. I understood you to say, in answer to a question of mine, that you would recommend that in such cases they should be put up to public auction? I think that would be a better mode of competition. The Bill now before the Assembly provides for such a mode of disposing of vacant runs. It provides for the settlement of conflicting applications by arbitration, and for the disposal of runs which fall into the hands of the Government by auction.

PRE-EMPTIVE RIGHT EXERCISED BY CLARK IRVING, ESQ.

No. 1.

CLARK IRVING, Esq., to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 6 November, 1856.

SIR,

I have the honor to apply for the purchase of the following reserves, made in the township of "Casino," part of my run, known as "Casino," on the Richmond River and District of Clarence, and on which valuable improvements were made previously to the township being surveyed and laid out, viz. :—

1. Reserve, marked 24 A, 5a. 2r. 18p.
2. Ditto, adjoining, 8a. 1r. 10p.
3. Ditto, bearing no mark, bounded on the south by the river.
4. A cultivation allotment, eastward of Wheat-street, south of the Richmond River, and bounded by it east by a creek north by North-street.

Three reserves to the west of that marked 24 A, 5a. 2r. 18p., and bounded on the south by the Richmond River.

On the plan of the township I saw some time ago, at your office, I observed that where improvements had been made was reserved, I now find that several of the allotments recently sold are within that reserve. Under these circumstances, I trust you will see the justness of permitting me to purchase the reserves I now apply for, as compensation for the portions sold, and on which are improvements.

I may further state that I applied under my pre-emptive right of purchase of 320 acres of land where the township is laid out, in 1854, which was long before it was contemplated that the reservation should be made.

I have, &c.,
CLARK IRVING.

SIR,

I beg to draw your attention to my communication of the 13th November last, forwarding for your report an application from Mr. Clark Irving to purchase portions of lands containing his improvements, on the Reserve at Casino, and to request the favour of your immediate reply.

No. 7.

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

SIR,

Sydney, 18 June, 1857.

With reference to my repeated applications for the purchase of the reserves made at the Township of Casino, and forming part of my run known as Casino, and on which are valuable improvements, I have now the honor to annex an extract from a letter received from the District Surveyor, F. S. Peppercorne, describing three of the reserves applied for by me, and which he states I am entitled to purchase at the upset price of £8 per

per acre. I shall, therefore, feel obliged by your causing the grants for these three reserves to be made out at once, leaving the remaining reserves applied for by me to stand over until the Commissioner's report be received.

I have, &c.,
CLARK IRVING.

The first portion described has been measured, and although Mr. Bligh's report has been determined to be essential, there can be little doubt that the pre-emptive right is in Mr. Irving; the pre-emptive right to the second is also probably in Mr. I., and this will be decided by Mr. Bligh's report; but the portion has been reserved as embracing the road leading to the crossing-place at the falls, and it is probable that a portion only of this can, without injury to the public, be sold.

If it be necessary to public convenience to preserve the whole reserve in question for access to the crossing-place at the falls, it is obvious that Mr. Irving cannot be allowed to purchase any part of it, and when instructions are issued to Mr. Peppercorne, his special attention must be drawn to this question, and he must be told that the question of the improvements and their sale is quite a secondary consideration to the public convenience now and hereafter in access to the crossing-place.

The third portion described is occupied, at all events partly, by huts, and erected by or occupied by the police, and although these are on Mr. Irving's run, special care must be taken that the interests of the public servants, who, in the performance of their public duties, have been obliged to erect residences on a licensed run, are not allowed to suffer by pre-emptive sales to the licensee.

This must await the report recently called for again from Mr. Bligh.

Clarence River, 23 June, 1857.*

SIR,

In reply to your letters of the 15th of May and 12th instant, calling for my report upon Mr. Clark Irving's application to purchase certain improved allotments at "Casino," I have the honor to state, in explanation of the delay which has occurred, that I wish to make an examination of the land before furnishing my report.

2. I have been prevented from doing this partly by the constant wet weather, which has kept the rivers here in a state of flood for the last six months, and also by the fact that I have been for some months past suffering from a painful complaint, which has incapacitated me for riding.

3. The floods appear now to have ceased, and I will report as early as possible upon this and other matters, but at this moment I am without either horses or men. You are aware that I have neither quarters or paddocks, and on the sudden discharge of the troopers the whole of the horses made their escape, and I have not been since able to recover them, nor have I been able to obtain men for myself, as the rate of wages now demanded here is 30s. a week and rations, which would absorb the greater part of my salary.

4. I will do my best to furnish you with a report on this application as early as I possibly can.

COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS, CLARENCE RIVER, to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

(No. 57-91.)

*Crown Lands Office,
Clarence River, 11 September, 1857.*

SIR,

I have the honor to report upon the application of Mr. Clark Irving to purchase certain portions of land in the town of Casino, being portions of his "Casino" Run.

1. That the land applied for forms part of the reserve for a township at Casino, and was originally part of the "Casino" Run in the licensed occupation of Mr. Irving, and is not the subject of dispute, save as hereafter mentioned.

2. The reserve first applied for by Mr. Irving's letter (5a. 2r. 18p.) contains a good dwelling-house used as an inn, with garden, stables, cultivation paddock, erected, I believe, by Mr. Irving.

3. The second (8a. 1r. 10p.) contains a house, stockyard, and garden, erected and inhabited by one Grimes, a shoemaker.

4. The fourth, which seems incorrectly described (being on the north side of the river), contains a house and garden, occupied by one Nattean Taylor, a constable, and erected as he states by himself.

Also, a house and kitchen, with a garden, occupied and claimed by Mr. Moore, Clerk of the Petty Sessions.

Also, a house occupied and claimed by one Thompson, a mail contractor and postman. Another house occupied and claimed by Welch, a constable; and a large house built it is said by Alcock, late Chief Constable, and now occupied and claimed by one Grans, a German.

5. The three reserves "unmarked," thirdly mentioned by Mr. Irving, do not appear to contain any improvements, except the fence of the Government paddock.

6. The three reserves on the west of the inn lastly mentioned in Mr. Irving's letter are also unimproved, except that nearest the inn includes some part of the paddock.

I have, &c.,
RICHARD BLIGH,
Com. of Crown Lands.

No. 13.

REPORT of Chief Commissioner.

THE first portion, 5a. 2r. 18p., may now be sold to Mr. Irving under pre-emptive right, and after the issue of a lease under Regulations of the 11th February, 1851, which should only be general, "of lands containing improvements, the property of Clark Irving, at Casino." The 5a. 2r. 18p. should be charged at £8 per acre, at which price it would have been put up in small allotments, had it not been for the existence of the improvements. Description herewith for completion of purchase.

8 PRE-EMPTIVE RIGHT EXERCISED BY CLARK IRVING, ESQ.

In reference to the second portion, instructions may issue to Mr. Peppercorne with the provisions specified in my memo. on 57-6152.

Grimes' claims cannot, under the existing Regulations, be recognized by the Government, and he may now be so informed, in reply to 57-9879.

The improvements of Thompson, the mail contractor and postman, being on the "Casino" Run, must also fall within the pre-emptive right claim of Mr. Irving, but those of the Clerk of Petty Sessions and constables, including that sold by the late Chief Constable, cannot be allowed to Mr. Irving under pre-emptive right, unless that gentleman can shew that he erected the buildings in question, and that the Clerk of Petty Sessions and constables are merely his tenants; otherwise, under the precedent of Thompson, at Wogga Wogga, the buildings, with allotments on which they stand, should be sold to the Clerk of Petty Sessions and constables, under lease of Regulations of 11th February, 1851, and the one sold to Grans should be sold with sixty days for the removal of the improvements. Mr. Peppercorne may be instructed to measure the lands on which these improvements stand, in allotments to embrace the improvements of each person, and in as convenient and regular forms as the positions of the improvements will admit of.

Further inquiry is necessary respecting the second portion.

The improvements of Thompson, the mail contractor, will also come within your pre-emptive right, but those of the Clerk of Petty Sessions and constables, including that sold by the late Chief Constable, cannot be allowed to you under pre-emptive right, unless you can shew that you erected the buildings, and the occupants are merely your tenants.

No. 32.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

*Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 3 June, 1857.*

SIR,

I do myself the honor to request that I may receive authority to issue to Mr. Clark Irving a lease, under the Regulations of 11th February, 1851, for thirty-five sections of land, forming portion of the "Ashby" Run, brought within the Settled Districts. I have to explain that this lease was not issued at the proper time, owing to the neglect of the late Commissioner (Mr. Fry), to return the land as within the Settled Districts, but as Mr. Irving is clearly entitled to a lease, whilst the land is not required for public purposes, I now bring the case under notice.

I have, &c.,
GEO. BARNEY,
C. C. C. L.

This is submitted in a very bald way. How was the run occupied in the meantime, and what rent was paid for it?—10.

Were the sections deducted from the estimated area of "Ashby" Run? Have they been occupied as a portion of that run ever since? Is there any report of Mr. Fry relating to it, or any report from Mr. Bligh, shewing that none of the sections are required for public purposes?

Let me have from the Surveyor General information required to form a decision upon.—J. H.

Returned to the Surveyor General for the within-named purpose accordingly.—To be returned. B.C., 11 June, 1857.—M. F.

REPLIES to Queries by Mr. Secretary Hay, indorsed upon my letter of 3rd June, 1857, relative to Mr. Clark Irving's application to purchase 700 acres out of the Settled Districts, portion of the "Ashby" Run, at the Clarence River.

| QUERIES. | ANSWERS. |
| 1. Were the sections deducted from the estimated area of the "Ashby" Run? | I conclude they were, for the description which accompanied the estimated area, 64,000 acres, excluded the Settled Districts. |
| 2. Have they been occupied as a portion of the run ever since? | No doubt they have, for Mr. Irving, in applying to purchase (7th August, 1856) the land in question, describes it as a part of his run, which he conceives, erroneously, he is entitled to purchase under the pre-emptive right; and Mr. Bligh, in reporting on the application (23rd January, 1857), calls it part of "Ashby," overlooking that a portion has been converted into Settled Districts. |
| 3. Is there any report from Mr. Fry relating to it? | Yes. See application for lease, and letters enclosed, dated 14th June, 1849; 19th October, 1850, with description; 2nd August, 1853, with description and estimate of the area and grazing capabilities. When Mr. Fry sent in this last report he should also have sent in, as customary, a description of the portion which he had excluded in consequence of its being within the Settled Districts, and therefore subject to lease under the Regulations of 11th February, 1851. |
| 4. Any report from Mr. Bligh, shewing that none of the sections are required for public purposes? | The local Commissioner has not generally been called upon to report upon lands coming within the Settled Districts. The Surveyor General has, from time to time, recommended the cancelling of any sections, which, being leased under the 11th February rules, were found to be required for public purposes. |
| 5. What rent is paid? | £45 per annum, estimated on 3,000 sheep. |

*Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 30 June, 1857.*

No. 33.

MEMO. of Secretary for Lands and Public Works.

ALL the arrangements with respect to the Lands brought within the Settled Districts on the Clarence and Richmond Rivers seem to have been egregiously mismanaged. The Commissioner should have given a Return of the number of sections abstracted from each run, and the licensee had the option of renting these under the Regulations.

Until July, 1853, Mr. Irving does not seem to have had any official intimation of any change of his holding of any portion of his run of Ashby, and even, in July, 1853, when by the assessment of the run in which his nominee joined he must have become so, he was still without any knowledge of the number of sections he might have to rent, and without any intimation that it was necessary for him to rent it, except he should at any time desire to exercise his right of pre-emptive purchase.

I think Mr. Irving ought to have the leases issued to him on paying the arrears on all he desires to hold, as it appears to have been from Mr. Fry's neglect that they have not been under lease throughout. But he ought to be informed that no pre-emption, except so far as to cover valuable improvements, will be granted, except on special report shewing that the land is not required for public purposes, and, as there is some reason to believe that the land is of more than average value, upon valuation.

*Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 24 September, 1857.*

SIR,

Having requested that I might be favoured with the authority of the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works to cause to be issued to you a lease under the Regulations of the 11th February, 1851, for thirty-five sections of land forming part of the "Ashby" Run, brought within the Settled Districts, I have been honored with this instruction, that you ought to have the leases issued to you on your paying the arrears on all which you desire to hold, but that no pre-emption, except so far as to cover valuable improvements, will be granted, and except on special report shewing that the land is not required for public purposes, and on valuation.

2. On therefore your paying into the Treasury the rent for the thirty-five sections, and arrears of rent, or for such sections you may desire, I will send either the description for the thirty-five sections to the Secretary to the Treasury for the issue of the lease required, to enable your purchase to be considered and proceeded with as directed; or, should you desire to retain only portions of the thirty-five sections, descriptions of such sections, in order that the leases may issue,—your application of August, 1856, being in the meantime suspended.

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 29 October, 1857.

SIR,

I beg reference to your letter of the 17th February, relative to my application for the purchase of 700 acres of land, on my run at "Ashby," in the district of Clarence, wherein you state, that "it awaits the measurement of the land." May I again bring the matter under your notice.

I have, &c.,
(For Clark Irving.)
R. H. GORDON.

It appears that Mr. Greaves has not yet been instructed: for immediate instructions, and return.—2.

The instructions cannot issue until Mr. Irving replies to the letter addressed to him of the 25th September last.—3 Nov.

The measurement and the valuation may be made, the purchase cannot be completed until the lease is in existence.—13.

No. 36.

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 20 November, 1857.

SIR,

I beg to apply for a lease of an area of land of my station, known as "Ashby," in the district of Clarence River, situated in the tongue of land north of Woodford Island, and on which are erected houses and other valuable improvements, and containing about two sections.

I have, &c.,
(For Clark Irving,)
R. H. GORDON.

Immediate steps should be taken for the issue of the lease to Mr. Irving of the two sections of land herein described, and for expediting the measurement of the 700 acres still in the hands of Mr. Greaves: vide instructions dated 4th December, 1859.

This was done on the 2nd December last, but we have never heard whether Mr. Irving has taken up the lease. I suppose his name will be included in the list expected from the Treasury.—13 April, 1858.

Mr. Irving (I learn at the Treasury) took up this lease on the 23rd December, 1857; it will be reported in an official letter immediately; he was charged £1 per section.—14 April.

No. 37.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to MR. SURVEYOR GREAVES.

(No. 57-1513.)

Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 4 December, 1857.

SIR,

I have to request that you will measure and mark out the portion of land described in the margin, applied for under pre-emptive right by Clark Irving, Esq., in virtue of his licensed run, provided that the land specified be situated within the boundaries thereof, and that its alienation will not give an undue command over water required for the beneficial occupation and cultivation of the adjoining country; to which latter point your attention was more particularly directed by my circular of the 7th May, 1857,—(57-534.)

Under the 7th section of the 2nd chapter of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847, it is directed, that, "Each lot (so measured) must be rectangular, unless the features of the country, or the course of any river or stream, render a deviation from the rectangular form necessary, and in every case two sides at least of the lot must be directed to the cardinal points of the compass;" and secondly, that, "The two opposite sides of any stream or watercourse, which according to the practice of the Department of the Surveyor General ought to form a boundary between different sections or lots, shall in no case be included in the same lot," and you will, therefore, in making this survey, be guided as to the form of measurement strictly by the foregoing conditions, and by the circular above alluded to of 7th May, 1857.

In reference, however, to that portion of the 3rd condition of section 7 of the Orders in Council, which determines the maximum extent of water frontage to which each portion shall be entitled, it has been considered expedient to adopt, in lieu, the rule that the breadth in chains, of any portion measured at right angles to the side lines, shall bear a proportion to the area in acres of 1 to 8.

You will, at the same time, ascertain the name and address of respectable parties resident in the neighbourhood, who would be willing to value the lands measured on behalf of the Government, and submit the same for selection (per separate letter, together with your own opinion of the value) in order that one may be appointed as Assessor, under the 8th and 3rd sections of chapter 2 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847.

I have, &c.,
GEO. BARNEY,
Surveyor General.

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Sydney, 13 February, 1858.

SIR,

On the 7th August, 1856, I applied to purchase 700 acres of land on my run, known as "Ashby," on the Clarence River, and on the 17th February, 1857, the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands reported that my application awaited the measurement of the land; and after applications to get the matter finally arranged, I received another letter from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands of the following tenor:—

(No. 57-1182.)

Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 24 September, 1857.

Sir,

Having requested that I might be favoured with the authority of the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Works, to cause to be issued to you a lease under the Regulations of 11th February, 1851, for for thirty-five sections of land forming portion of the "Ashby" Run, brought within the Settled Districts, I have been honored with this instruction, that you ought to have the leases issued to you, on your paying the arrears on all which you desire to hold; but that no pre-emption, except as far as to cover valuable improvements, will be granted, and except on special report shewing that the land is not required for public purposes, and on valuation.

2. On therefore your paying into the Treasury the rent for the thirty-five sections, and arrears of rent, or for such sections as you may desire, I will send either the description of the thirty-five sections to the Secretary to the Treasury, for the issue of the lease required, to enable your purchase to be considered and proceeded with as directed; or, should you desire to retain only portions of the thirty-five sections, descriptions of such sections, in order that leases may issue,—your application of August, 1856, being in the mean time suspended.

I have, &c.,
GEO. BARNEY,
S. G.

Clark Irving, Esq.

In conformity with the above letter, I have paid the rent on two sections of the said run of "Ashby," to enable me, under my pre-emptive right, to secure the 700 acres I wish to purchase, and on which are erected my buildings and other valuable improvements; and, in consequence of that payment, I received another letter from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, of which the following is a copy:—

(57-12,584.)

Crown Lands Office,
7 December, 1857.

Sir,

I beg to inform you that you have been returned to the Treasury for a lease under the Regulations of 11th February, 1851, for two sections of the "Ashby" Run, brought within the Settled Districts; the lease to date from 1st January, 1849, and to be subject to payment of arrears, at one pound a section.

2. I am directed, however, to inform you, that no pre-emption, save as regards the valuable improvements, will be granted to you except on special report shewing that the land is not required for public purposes; and, as there is reason to believe, the land is of more than average value upon valuation.

I have, &c.,
GEO. BARNEY,
C. O. C. L.

Clark Irving, Esq.

From all the correspondence you will observe that I have in every respect complied with the Land Regulations, and doubt not but you will at once order the purchase to be completed.

MR. SURVEYOR GREAVES to SURVEYOR GENERAL.

Dovedale, Clarence River,
18 March, 1858.

SIR,

According to your instructions of the 4th December, 1857, No. 57-1513, I have the honor to forward herewith, a plan* and description of 700 acres at the Broadwater, applied for to purchase, under the 11th February Regulations, by Mr. C. Irving, in virtue of his "Ashby" Run, in the Clarence River District.

2. This land is of a very inferior quality, the soil is composed of a very sharp white sand, the ranges are very high, precipitous, and rocky, thickly timbered with stringy bark, box, and bloodwood, and covered with a coarse kind of kangaroo-grass.

3. The improvements consist of a slab-house and several out-buildings, a good stock-yard and paddock, also a small garden.

4. The water of the Broadwater is very shallow—small boats can only get up to the station. The water of the Clarence is deep and rocky, but unapproachable on account of the steepness of the ranges.

5. I do not consider this portion of land worth more than One Pound per acre, and, therefore, have not taken any steps towards obtaining an assessment of it by Mr. Commissioner Bligh.

I have, &c.,
W. A. B. GREAVES,
L. S.

*Appendix D.

I was under the impression that there was some reason to suppose that a Reserve might be required here for a shipping place from the Richmond River, but on Mr. Greaves' Report on the land, and as there is plenty of Crown land adjacent to the eastward, this may go on without inquiry.

I have consulted Mr. Darke, and find that if there be a road from Richmond to the Lower Clarence, it will meet that river below the Broadwater, and the map has been noted accordingly. This may now be charted.—A. G. M. 19.

Now ready for completion of purchase.—A. G. M.
Mr. Pretious, now forward, carefully noting.

2. The necessary inquiries have been made into the validity of the several claims, which are found to be regular, and I have therefore the honor to request that the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer may be authorized to receive the price of the land in each case, as within stated, and that I may receive His Excellency's instructions to call upon the several applicants to complete their purchases by payment of the purchase money.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

"Casino," 1,920
acres, Clarence River District.

I have to request that you will measure and mark out the portion of land described in the margin, applied for under pre-emptive right by Clark Irving, Esq., in virtue of his licensed run, provided that the land specified be situated within the boundaries thereof, and that its alienation will not give an undue command over water required for the beneficial occupation and cultivation of the adjoining country; to which latter point your attention was more particularly directed by my circular of the 7th May, 1857,—(57-534.)

Under the 7th section of the 2nd chapter of Her Majesty's Order in Council, of the 9th March, 1847, it is directed, that, "Each lot (so measured) must be rectangular, unless the features of the country, or the course of any river or stream, render a deviation from the rectangular form necessary, and in every case two sides at least of the lot must be directed to the cardinal points of the compass," and secondly, that, "The two opposite sides of any stream or watercourse, which according to the practice of the Department of the Surveyor General ought to form a boundary between different sections or lots, shall in no case be included in the same lot," and you will therefore, in making this survey, be guided as to the form of measurement strictly by the foregoing conditions, and by the circular above alluded to of 7th May, 1857.

In reference, however, to that portion of the 3rd condition of section 7 of the Orders in Council, which determines the maximum extent of water frontage to which each portion shall be entitled, it has been considered expedient to adopt, in lieu, the rule that the breadth in chains, of any portion measured at right angles to the side lines, shall bear a proportion to the area in acres of 1 to 8.

You will, at the same, ascertain the name and address of respectable parties resident in the neighbourhood, who would be willing to value the lands measured on behalf of the Government, and submit the same for selection (per separate letter, together with your own opinion of the value), in order that one may be appointed as assessor, under the 8th and 3rd sections of chapter 2 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847.

I have, &c.,

GEO. BARNEY,
Surveyor General.

P.S.—You will make this measurement with the same caution as to reservation of ways of access to the river as intimated in my letter No. 56-1730, in which letter a reserve was inadvertently termed the "Codrington" Reserve, which was in reality that next above it.—G. B.

*Richmond River,
26 March, 1857.*

SIR,

In accordance with the description transmitted to me, and your instructions to survey 1,920 acres of the licensed run called "Casino," for Mr. Clark Irving, I have the honor to forward herewith the plan* and description of the land so applied for.

2. The land described includes the whole frontage of the Richmond River, between the "Codrington" Reserve and that near Mr. Irving's head station. This frontage embraces three miles in an east and west direction, although in the description transmitted to me it is called only two miles, evidently by inadvertence. I have, therefore, measured the three miles, which was required in order to give the approximate quantity.

3. In other respects I have adhered to the description, by commencing at the north-west corner of the "Codrington" Reserve; in this manner the actual gross content is 2,256 acres, which, after deducting 26 acres for a reserved road of 1 chain in width, leaves the net quantity of 2,230 acres.

4. The land I do not value at more than £1 per acre, the whole of it being flat, and, in some parts, swampy.

5. There are no mineral indications on the land described.

6. The cost of measurement may be estimated at £20.

I have, &c.,

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

(No. 1.)

Sydney, 14 May, 1856.

SIR,

I have the honor to apply for the purchase of four sections of land on my run known as "Casino," on the Richmond River, and district of Clarence.

You are aware that, some time ago, I made several applications for the purchase of portions of land on that run, none of which have been acceded to.

Since my applications were made, I find the resident surveyor has reserved portions of the land applied for by me, and the land I now apply for lies between two of these reserves, and embraces all my buildings, and other extensive improvements made by me.

The surveyor informs me that the quantity of land between the two reserves is barely four sections, but, under the circumstances of my former applications not being complied with, I trust you will see the propriety of permitting the surveyor to allow such portion of one of the reserves to be granted to me as will make the four sections conterminous.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to MR. SURVEYOR PEPPERCORNE.

(No. 9.) *Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 9 October, 1856.*

SIR,

I have to request that you will measure and mark out the portion of land described in the margin, applied for under pre-emptive right by Mr. Clark Irving, in virtue of his licensed run; provided that the land specified be situated within the boundaries thereof, and that its alienation will not give an undue command over water required for the beneficial occupation and cultivation of the adjoining country; to which latter point your attention was more particularly directed by my circular of the 7th May, 1857,—(57-534.)

2,500 acres, being the space on the Richmond River between the "Casino" and the next reserve. Of these reserves no portion is to be included in the measurement.

Under the 7th section of the 2nd chapter of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847, it is directed, that "Each lot so measured must be rectangular, unless the features of the country, or the course of any river or stream, render a deviation from the rectangular form necessary; and in every case, two sides (at least) of the lot must be directed to the cardinal points of the compass;" and, secondly, that "the two opposite sides of any stream or watercourse which, according to the practice of the Department of the Surveyor General, ought to form a boundary between different sections or lots, shall in no case be included in the same lot;" and you will, therefore, in making this survey, be guided as to the form of measurement strictly by the foregoing conditions, and by the circular above alluded to of 7th May, 1857.

In reference, however, to that portion of the 3rd condition of section 7 of the Orders in Council which determines the maximum extent of water frontage to which each portion shall be entitled, it has been considered expedient to adopt in lieu, the rule—that the breadth in chains, of any portion measured at right angles to the side lines, shall bear a proportion to the area in acres of 1 to 8.

You will, at the same time, ascertain the name and address of respectable parties resident in the neighbourhood who would be willing to value the lands measured on behalf of the Government, and submit the same for selection (per separate letter, together with your own opinion of the value), in order that one may be appointed as assessor, under the 8th and 3rd sections of chapter 2 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847.

I have, &c.,
GEO. BARNEY,
Surveyor General.

P.S.—Should you be of opinion that public interests may hereafter require that access should be left through the land now applied for to the river, you will preserve as many ways of access as you may consider to be desirable.

(No. 10.)

Richmond River,
4 December, 1856.

SIR,

In attention to your communication, No. 56-1730, directing me to measure and mark out 2,560 acres of the licensed run called "Casino," for Mr. Clark Irving, in accordance with the Regulations, I have the honor to transmit herewith, the plan* and description of the land so applied for.

Appendix D.
C18-1539

2. It will be perceived that the actual quantity measured is a little under the quantity applied for, which is partly owing to the fact of a public road being required to be reserved throughout the block, in order to give access from Casino to Codrington, and partly to the irregular form of the southern boundary.

3. The land in its natural state I do not consider to be of higher value than one pound per acre. There are some valuable improvements upon it, but these I understand are not to be taken into account.

4. There are no mineral indications upon the land measured.

5. The cost of measurement may be estimated at £30.

SIR,

I have the honor to apply for permission to purchase under my pre-emptive right 320 acres of land, being part of my run known as "Traveller's Rest," in the District of Clarence River, and on which are houses, fences, yards, and other improvements; and I shall feel much obliged by your causing the same to be surveyed as early as possible.

I have, &c.,

CLARK IRVING.

The

The precise position of the run is not apparent from the maps of this office; but it lies somewhere between the Clarence and Richmond Rivers, and probably on the road between the new town of Lawrence on the Clarence, and Casino on the Richmond.

The traffic from the Richmond River, at least the passenger traffic, will, it is believed, all come by Lawrence so soon as that town shall have become occupied and possessions, &c.

In this case it seems probable that the locality in which this pre-emptive purchase is applied for may be required as a village site, which probably is proved by the circumstance that an inn was once in existence there.

Mr. Greaves will, therefore, give this matter his consideration before measuring to meet the application, and, should he be of opinion that this spot is peculiarly suited for a village site, will report fully on the subject with his measurement.

Forwarded to Mr. Greaves accordingly. Mr. Greaves to attend to this matter with the least possible delay.

SIR,

In reference to your blank cover letter of 15th November, 1858, No. 58-1678, I have the honor to forward, herewith, a plan of 320 acres of land, measured on the application of Mr. Clark Irving to purchase, of his licensed run of "Traveller's Rest."

2. From the position and character of the land measured, I do not consider it worth above £1 per acre.

3. The improvements consist of an old slab cottage, used as an inn, with several detached huts, several small paddocks, garden, and stockyard.

4. I do not consider it desirable to form a village at this spot, when there is a reserve at Camira, about three miles off, but I would recommend a reserve to be made at the crossing of Sportsman's Creek, on both sides of the creek, being at a point situated about midway between Camira and Grafton, and the head of the tide of that creek.

No. 81.

Grafton, 26 December, 1859.

We, the undersigned, Alfred Lardner, duly appointed valuator on behalf of the Crown, and Joseph Sharp, the valuator appointed on behalf of the lessee, to assess the value of 320 acres of land at Traveller's Rest, in the Clarence District, applied for as a pre-emptive purchase by Clark Irving, Esq., beg to report that the said land is poor, thinly-grassed iron-stone ridge, and does not possess any particular advantages of situation, or quality, over the adjoining lands.

We, therefore, assess the said land at the minimum price of 20s. per acre.

ALFRED LARDNER.

No. 82.

ACTING CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS to SECRETARY TO THE TREASURY.

*Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 4 April, 1860.*

SIR,

I have the honor to invite your attention to the Notice in the Government Gazette of the 3rd April, 1860, signifying the approval, by the Government, of certain pre-emptive purchases, and to request that I may be furnished with a report in each case when payment shall have been received.

I have, &c.,
A. G. McLEAN,
Acting Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

No. 83.

ACTING CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS to CLARK IRVING, ESQ.

*Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 3 April, 1860.*

SIR,

I have to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General, with the advice of the Executive Council, has been pleased to approve of your being allowed to purchase, under your pre-emptive right, the portion of land containing 320 acres measured for you out of your run "Traveller's Rest," in the district of Clarence; and I request that you will have the goodness to pay into the Colonial Treasury the amount specified in margin, being the price of the land in question, inclusive of deed fee.

Unless the required payment be made within three months from this date, a fine of 10 per cent. will be added for every three months, or part of three months, that payment is delayed.

I have, &c.,
A. G. McLEAN,
Acting Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

The three months allowed for payment, from 3rd April, 1860, having expired, a fine of 10 per cent. has been incurred; the further sum of £32 is therefore required.—W. N.—7 July, 1860.

There appears to have been a delay of two or three days, which I am unable to account for, and then came the Easter holidays: I think the payment should be received without the fine, as it is quite clear that the letter was not dispatched as dated.—9 July.

Then had we not better write to the Treasury and to Mr. Irving?—Perhaps Mr. Fitzpatrick would sign the letter to the Treasury?—A. G. M.—9 July.

Prepare letter for signature of Under Secty.—9th.

No. 84.

MINUTE of Acting Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

No. 60-350. THE letter herewith, dated 3rd April last, calling for payment from Mr. Clark Irving of a pre-emptive purchase, was by inadvertence, and owing to the intervention of the Easter holidays, not despatched until the 11th of that month.

Payment was tendered within three months from the latter date, but being due within three months from the former a fine has been imposed, which, under the circumstances, the Secretary for Lands may perhaps think proper to remit.

A. G. McLEAN.

The Under Secretary for Lands.

Department of Lands,
Sydney, 16 October, 1860.

SIR,

Referring to your personal application for the remission of a fine imposed upon you for the non-payment within the prescribed time of the price of a portion of land forming part of your "Traveller's Rest" Run, purchased by you under pre-emptive right, I am directed to inform you that, under the circumstances of the case, you have been relieved from payment of the fine in question, amounting to £32, of which the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade has been appraised.

No. 87.

CLARK IRVING, ESQ., to ACTING CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 9 July, 1859.

SIR,

I have the honor to apply for permission to purchase under my pre-emptive right the following portions of land on my station, known as "Ashby," in the district of Clarence River, and bounded as follows, viz. :—

On the Clarence River opposite the Rocky Mouth, commencing at the south-east corner of my (700) seven hundred acres purchase, and bounded by that land on the west, and its northerly prolongation, to a point west of Sandy Creek; on the north by a line to Sandy Creek, and by Sandy Creek to the Clarence River, and on the east by that river.

Also, one hundred and sixty acres adjoining the north boundary of my seven hundred acre purchase.

I have, &c.,
CLARK IRVING.

[MINUTE.]

The land herein applied for to purchase by Mr. Irving, under pre-emptive right, formed, previously to 1848, part of the Ashby Run, but was brought by the Orders in Council within the Settled Districts, and Mr. Irving did not then obtain or apply for a lease under form B of the Regulations of 1848.

These facts transpired when Mr. Irving applied in 1857 to exercise his pre-emptive right over land adjacent to that now applied for, and he was then permitted, in accordance with precedent in other cases, to pay up arrears of rent from 1848 to 1858, and to exercise the pre-emptive right sought by his application.

At the end of 1858 all the 11th February leases in the Settled Districts on the Clarence River were withheld from renewal, and the holders were, on being informed of this decision, invited to exercise—or rather to make application to be allowed to do so—any pre-emptive right which they might desire; but, from the peculiar character of Mr. Irving's holding, holding, it was omitted from the Colonial Treasurer's list of such leases, and, consequently, Mr. Irving did not receive the invitation referred to; he did not however seek to renew his lease for 1859, and the land for which he has applied is, therefore, not under lease to him.

It is obvious, however, that the omission to inform Mr. Irving of the determination of his lease, and the necessity for his exercise of his pre-emptive claims within the year 1858, was not owing to any neglect of Mr. Irving's, and as it is more than probable that had Mr. Irving been so informed he would have made his application in time, it seems to me that it may therefore now be entertained.

Submitted for the consideration of the Secretary for Lands.

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 24th December last, respecting an application made on the 9th July previous, for the purchase of certain portions of the "Ashby" Run, under pre-emptive right, I have to inform you that the lease, under which your claim was made, issued under the Regulations of the 11th February, 1851, was not renewed for the year 1859, and your tenure had therefore ceased on the day of application; under these circumstances, therefore, your case will be specially submitted for the consideration of the Secretary for Lands, and I should desire in so submitting it, to bring under consideration any explanation which you may have to offer of the non-renewal of your leases.

DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

(No. 52-457.)

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 27 September, 1852.*

SIR,

I find from your letter, No. 52-383, of the 25th June, referring to your letter No. 52-12, of the 7th January, that the only reserves in the Squatting Districts over which the licensed occupants are not to be permitted to exercise a pre-emptive right are those in which there are Gazetted towns.

2. By letter from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, No. 52-500, of the 18th September, he transmits to me an application from C. G. T. Chauvel to purchase a portion of his licensed run, 160 acres, at Tabulam, in the Clarence River District, and requests me to cause the same to be measured. Mr. Commissioner Fry reports that the land is in the licensed occupation of Mr. Chauvel and does not form the subject of any dispute, although it forms part of land surveyed and designed for the Town of Tabulam.

3. By your B.C. letter of the 12th December, 1850, it was intimated to me that it was not the intention of the Government to cause the Town of Tabulam to be laid out at present, consequently it is not a Gazetted town as required by your letter No. 52-383 to act as an interdict to the exercise of the pre-emptive right, but, having been surveyed and designed, I have the honor to request that you will submit this case for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor General, and for His Excellency's decision as to whether Mr. Chauvel's application is to be entertained, and thus interfere with the design.

4. The papers received by me from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands are enclosed, together with a copy of his communication to me.

5. The correspondence which led to the suspension of the design is, I apprehend, in your office.

I have, &c.,

2. I have the efore to return to you the descriptions in question, and to request that you will have the goodness, in the present instance, as well as on future similar occasions, to distinguish Gazetted townships from those ordinary Reserves over which the licensed occupants are to be permitted to exercise a pre-emptive right.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter, No. 52-457, of the 27th ultimo, on the subject of an application made by Mr. Chauvel to purchase a portion of his licensed run included in the unproclaimed Township of Tabulam, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor General to inform you, that under the peculiar circumstances connected with Tabulam, it may be regarded as of the same class as Gazetted townships, provided it be still desirable to reserve it as such, on which point you will, of course, be the best able to judge.

(No. 53-541.)

*Surveyor-General's Office,
Sydney, 16 June, 1853.*

SIR,

By your letter of the 18th September of last year, No. 52-501, you forward to me an application from Mr. C. G. T. Chauvel to purchase a portion of his licensed run at Tabulam, in the Clarence River District, together with the report of Mr. Commissioner Fry thereon, and requested that I would dispose of it in due course.

2. This application, I now beg leave to inform you, was found to be for land within the reserve of Tabulam, and to interfere with a design for a town there, and although the town has not been approved of, it was found advisable to submit to His Excellency the Governor General the question of Mr. Chauvel's desire to purchase, and it was determined that, under the peculiar circumstances connected with Tabulam, it might be regarded as of the same class as Gazetted townships; and I now therefore beg to return to you Mr. Chauvel's application, and to state, that as far as it affects improved lands falling within the township reserve, it cannot be entertained, unless the anticipated decision of the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies should accord to the holders of pastoral runs the same right as regards town and suburban allotments as is enjoyed by the holders of leases of land for other than pastoral purposes under the Regulations of 11th February, 1851.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to address you, as, from your answer to my application to purchase 160 acres of land at Tabulam, I was led to conclude that instructions had been given to have the same measured, but Mr. Darke, the Surveyor, says he has received none, therefore I fear there is some mistake, and I hope you will have the goodness to oblige me by ascertaining the reason as soon as possible, as Mr. D. is measuring for other parties, and will soon leave this neighbourhood, and will not be inclined to return to measure so small a portion.

MR. C. G. T. CHAUVEL to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Tabulam, 27 July, 1853.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication, dated the 6th instant, the contents of which I was totally unprepared for, as, from the information I obtained from the Surveyor General's and your office, I was distinctly told that the present site of the Township of Tabulam was done away with,* owing to its total unfitness, and any application on my part for a portion of the land would be granted; on the faith of this I have unfortunately expended a large sum in enlarging my house, &c. I therefore conclude there must be some mistake in the Surveyor General's Office, and that you have never seen the correspondence between the Honorable the Colonial Secretary and the gentlemen comprising, at that time, the Tabulam Bench, on the subject of the said township. I therefore take the liberty of enclosing it, and beg leave to remark that Messrs. Ogilvie and Evans had not the slightest interest either in the township or road, but merely expressed their opinion from a sense of public duty; both of them, from their long residence on the Clarence, and from their perfect knowledge of the country, were more competent to point out the defects of the present site than any one in the district. By the regulations, I am under the necessity of purchasing 320 acres here, and naturally feel anxious that part of it should be the land on which my house and out-buildings are erected. From the alarm we all felt from the flood of '49, I had some idea of moving the station to another site, but was prevented by the heavy expense it would have entailed, and the hopes that the buildings were beyond the reach of danger. An inspection of the map in the Surveyor General's Office will prove the correctness of these statements, and the unfitness of the present site.

I have, &c.,
C. G. T. CHAUVEL.

N.B.—In May last year there was a flood, when my men and their families took refuge in my woolshed; one of the former in getting there was up to his middle in water.

SIR,

Having reference to your letters No. 55-222 of the 21st February last, and 55-353 of the 20th March last, containing instructions for the measurement of certain lands at Tabulam and Myrtle Creek, I have the honor to inform you that on account of the late incessant rains (and which still continue) all the creeks are up, and the roads impassable even to the mail contractors. SIR,

About five years ago Mr. Darke, the Surveyor, was sent to Tabulam to lay out a township, but in consequence of letters from the Magistrates here to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, stating that the spot chosen was subject to floods, they received for reply that in the event hereafter of a township being deemed requisite, that the wishes of the settlers would be attended to. The survey was then discontinued. I am now given to understand that Mr. Wilson, Clerk of the Petty Sessions at Grafton, has received instructions to lay out the said township in the very spot objected to; I have, therefore, the honor to request you will have the goodness to inform me if this is the case, as in your last communication you informed me that, in the event of this becoming a township, a year's lease would be granted me, so that I should be enabled to purchase what I am entitled to under the pre-emptive right.

Grafton, 30 April, 1856.

SIR,

In compliance with the instructions contained in the late Surveyor General's letter, No. 55-222, of the 21st February, 1855, I have the honor to forward to you a plan^d • Appendix B and the descriptions of the allotments contained in part of the Township of Tabulam, embracing Mr. Chauvel's improvements, and allotments for sale according to the tracing forwarded to me. I have not noted the county, as I am uncertain whether the town is situated in Richmond or Buller.

2. I beg leave to state that the reason I forwarded no work to the department last month was on account of my having to attend to the affairs of an intestate estate, 30 miles distant from Grafton. In anticipation of being able to complete the plan and descriptions of Tabulam, they were dated the 29th March.

I have, &c.,

As the survey, to embrace Capt. Chauvel's improvements and some allotments for sale, extends so far as the demand for land at the place is likely to reach for some time to come, and as the descriptions of the improved lands can be much more satisfactorily completed after the proclamation of the village, a fair plan for submission to the Executive Council has been prepared, and is herewith; so soon as it is approved of Capt. Chauvel's claims will be dealt with.

MR. C. G. T. CHAUVEL to SURVEYOR GENERAL.

Tabulam, 30 May, 1856.

SIR,

I have the honor to request you will have the goodness to grant me a very great favour, namely, informing me how I am to proceed in regard to putting in my claim for the pre-emptive rights on account of improvements effected on land here. I am induced to write to you on this subject, in consequence of Mr. Wilson, the Clerk of the Petty Sessions at Grafton, being here the other day to lay out a township, much to my astonishment; as owing to the misfortune of having my house burnt down, and my family put to the greatest inconvenience and discomfort, I addressed a letter to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, mentioning the circumstance, and asking him whether there was any obstacle in the way of my building another on a more eligible site; a copy of the replies I herewith enclose, which you will perceive were very obscure and unsatisfactory, being no decided answer to my application; but from the general tenor of them I concluded that my wishes were granted, and on the strength of this I employed men in getting building materials ready, and a spot was fixed upon, which Mr. Wilson says is in the middle of a road, and that it was not in his power to alter, although, by the Colonial Secretary's letters, the township has still to be measured, I was also led to believe that no steps had as yet been taken to measure the lands; judge then of my astonishment on Mr. Wilson informing me that his instructions were so far back as March twelvemonth, and they had not been recalled, and the enclosed copies are dated 31st July and 30th August last. I beg leave to bring to your recollection a correspondence that took place many years ago, when the Bench, composed of Messrs Ogilvie, Evans, and myself, pointed out the ineligibility of the original site owing to floods, with the exception of a very small paddock in which my improvements were erected; and I think I have just reason to complain, when now it appears that Mr. Darke fixed upon this small piece of ground for the township; and to shew how pinched he was for room, Mr. Wilson says he run a line of road through my kitchen chimney, another cutting off an angle of my garden, and a third through a stockyard and cultivation paddock; certainly at the time there was no fence round the latter, it having been removed in consequence of its being composed of logs, and I was prevented at the time from putting up a new one from want of men, but since then a four-railed fence has been erected; of this paddock Mr. Darke takes no notice, further than dotting down an old tobacco-shed. This mistake could not have occurred had Mr. Darke had the courtesy to have shewn me his plan. I can prove that the said land was under cultivation upwards of twelve years ago.*

Mr. Wilson acknowledged to me that Mr. Darke had no necessity for running his lines in the manner described, but that he himself had no power of altering either them or the site, being obliged to obey instructions; but I beg leave to state that there were several more eligible spots in the neighbourhood for a township, more especially one named Punch Flat—it being free from floods, not above a mile from this, at the confluence of the Rocky River and the Clarence, and also having the great advantage of taking in two roads—one leading to Grafton by Yulgilbar and Gordon Brook, and the other, the Main Road, a very short distance from it.

I

* N.B.—I am not certain whether Mr. Wilson has mentioned this paddock in his plan; if not, he has followed Mr. Darke in every respect, greatly to my prejudice, and were to measure all my improvements.

I believe, by the regulations, I am entitled not only to the lands on which improvements have been made, but also to those under cultivation; the latter, I am sorry to say, does not exceed three acres, now the road runs through it. I do not know the exact quantity I am entitled to, but will write to Mr. Wilson to ascertain; he said it was either 19 or 21 acres, but I forget which.

I have, &c.,

C. G. T. CHAUVEL.

N.B.—On reference to my letter of the 16th July, 1855, you will find no mention is made of the purchasing of lands, but merely to ask if there was any obstacle to my building on a new site.

MR. A. B. J. CHAUVEL to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 1 January, 1857.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to inform you, that upon looking over the Government Gazette, I perceive that thirty-six allotments of the Tabulam Village are to be offered for sale in February next; allow me therefore to request that you will have the kindness to use your influence in trying to get at least the sale of the allotments in section 6 postponed for the present, or till after the land question has been brought before the Council.

Some of the reasons I have to give for making such a proposition are as follows:—

In the first place, there cannot be any doubt in the minds of those who are thoroughly acquainted with the position and capabilities of the spot, that Government will reap but little benefit by having formed Tabulam into a village reserve at all, as it is situated on a line of road between Grafton and Tenterfield which will ere long in all probability be deserted, on account of a new line of road which has been lately discovered, and which it is supposed will save fully thirty miles out of one hundred and forty, besides avoiding two very bad ranges, namely, the Currabubla and Richmond Ranges, and would cross the Clarence River some miles below the present crossing-place, consequently Tabulam would no longer be a connecting link between Grafton and Tenterfield.

Secondly, the reason why I especially wish for the postponement of the sale of the allotments in section 6 is, because it is situated within a small paddock which contains my private house, and the principal portion of my buildings.

Allow me to point out that although I was not the first occupant of the station, and had not to endure all the privations, risks, and annoyances, also expense of forming it, yet I had to pay for my right to the run to those who had gone through all this, and thereby acquired all their claims upon the Government to be charitably dealt with; and I would ask you whether it is not at least a very hard case, after having expended many years and a considerable sum of money in gradually improving the place, and making myself as comfortable as circumstances would permit, that the privacy of my homestead should be invaded by those who may in the first instance purchase allotments without reflecting, or perhaps being even aware of the probability, or rather certainty, of the road being altered, and who will afterwards bitterly regret having invested their small savings in so unprofitable a speculation.

Before Sir Charles Fitz Roy's departure, I received a communication from Government, in reply to one from the Bench, giving me to understand that all idea of forming a township on the site proposed was given up for the present, and that if it was again resumed, the interests of the residents (or words to that effect) should be considered; and upon the strength of this I went on improving.

If you think you can, by using your interest in this matter, at least avert the sale of the allotments in section 6 for the present, you will be conferring a great obligation upon me.

MINUTE of Surveyor General.

THERE is more correspondence in the office relating to this village, which will, I think, shew that Capt. Chauvel's urgent pressing to be allowed to complete his pre-emptive purchase is the cause of the measurement in, and proclamation of the village.

The formation of the village was proposed originally in 1849, and was deferred (see C. S. L. within, of 12th December, 1850) "for the present" at that date.

In measuring the land which Capt. Chauvel is to purchase (containing his valuable improvements) under pre-emptive right, in accordance with Mr. Durke's design for a village, Mr. Wilson measured also some improved allotments, and as, for the completion of the pre-emptive purchase descriptions, it became necessary to proclaim the village, some of the unimproved allotments have been brought to auction sale, as is customary with newly laid out towns.

The most legitimate mode by which Capt. Chauvel can obviate the inconvenience of others possessing the allotments in his paddock is by their purchase at auction; still, there is no special object in their sale, and more particularly on account of the discovery of the new line of road, as the only recommendation possessed by Tabulam as a village site is its position at the crossing of the Clarence River, between Grafton and Tenterfield, and if there be no application for the purchase of the allotments in the office, the question of the withdrawal may be submitted for the consideration of the Secretary for Lands and Public Works.

Sydney, 20 January, 1857.*

SIR,

I do myself the honor to enclose a letter which I have received from Mr. C. G. T. Chauvel, and to request that the allotments at Tabulam, proclaimed for sale at Casino on the 17th proximo, may be withdrawn from sale by the customary notice in the Government Gazette.

2. I may observe that Tabulam was proposed as a site for a village, and some of the improved allotments therein were brought forward for sale (as is customary with newly laid out places) on account of its position at the crossing-place, on the Clarence River, of the road heretofore in use from Tenterfield to Grafton; but, a new line of road between these places having been discovered, there would not appear to be any necessity for the immediate sale of the allotments in question.

(No. 57-240.)

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 24 January, 1857.*

SIR,

In reference to your letter of the 20th instant, in which you request that the allotments at Tabulam, proclaimed for sale at Casino on the 17th proximo, may be withdrawn from sale, I am directed to request that you will have the goodness to state, whether you recommend the withdrawal of all the allotments, or of those only comprised in section 6, and also how many lots that section contains.

2. I am directed to add, that the Secretary for Lands and Public Works is very unwilling, at this stage, to sanction the withdrawal of these allotments from sale, except so far as an equitable pre-emptive right may be claimed; and before he does so he must have a clear opinion from you that this is not a proper site for a township.

I have, &c.,
MICHL. FITZPATRICK.

*Surveyor General's Office,

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th ultimo, No. —, and to inform you that the allotments comprised within section 6, at Tabulam (being 20 in number), were those recommended to be withdrawn from sale in my letter to which you allude.

2. In reference to the second paragraph of your letter, under reply, I beg to observe that Mr. Chauvel's claims to purchase, under his pre-emptive right, are at present under reference to the local Commissioner. All such allotments to which he can, under existing Regulations, possess a pre-emptive right of purchase in virtue of improvements having been withheld from auction sale pending the receipt of the Commissioner's Report.

3. As to the fitness of the situation of Tabulam for a township, I take leave to observe that, unless the road from Tenterfield to Grafton be changed in direction, so as to avoid Tabulam, as represented by Mr. Chauvel, I consider that Tabulam is decidedly a proper site for a village, although there is no evidence of present demand for land there.

MR. C. G. T. CHAUVEL to SURVEYOR GENERAL.

Sydney, 6 December, 1859.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to state that I wish to purchase 320 acres of land at, or about, one mile above Deep Creek, situated in my licensed run of Tabulam, Clarence River District; also 640 acres at the Plain Station, about two miles to the eastward of the said Deep Creek; also 160 acres on "Burnt Station Plain," two miles east by south of Deep Creek—the two latter portions being also in the same district.

I have, &c.,

No. 56.

ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to MR. SURVEYOR PEPPERCORNE.

(No. 60-514.)

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 28 March, 1860.*

SIR,

I have to request that you will measure and mark out the portion of land described in the margin, applied for, under pre-emptive right, by C. G. T. Chauvel, in virtue of his licensed run, provided that the land specified be situated within the boundaries thereof, and that its alienation will not give an undue command over water required for the beneficial occupation and cultivation of the adjoining country; to which latter point your attention was more particularly directed by my circular of the 7th May, 1857,—(57-534.)

29, 640, and 160,
"Tabulam" Run,
Clarence District.

Under the 7th section of the 2nd chapter of Her Majesty's Order in Council, of the 9th March, 1847, it is directed, that "Each lot (so measured) must be rectangular, unless the features of the country, or the course of any river or stream, render a deviation from the rectangular form necessary, and, in every case, two sides at least of the lot must be directed to the cardinal points of the compass," and secondly, that "The two opposite sides of any stream or watercourse, which, according to the practice of the Department of the Surveyor General, ought to form a boundary between different sections or lots, shall in no case be included in the same lot," and you will, therefore, in making this survey, be guided, as to the form of measurement, strictly by the foregoing conditions, and by the circular above alluded to of 7th May, 1857.

In reference, however, to that portion of the 3rd condition of section 7 of the Orders in Council, which determines the maximum extent of water frontage to which each portion shall be entitled, it has been considered expedient to adopt, in lieu, the rule, that the breadth in chains, of any portion measured at right angles to the side lines, shall bear a proportion to the area in acres of 1 to 8.

You will, at the same time, ascertain the name and address of respectable parties resident in the neighbourhood, who would be willing to value the lands measured on behalf of the Government, and submit the same for selection (per separate letter, together with your own opinion of the value), in order that one may be appointed as assessor, under the 8th and 3rd sections of chapter 2 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th March, 1847.

I have, &c.,

A. G. McLEAN,

Acting Surveyor General.

Care should be taken not to embrace any portion of the Tabulam Reserve.

SIR,

In accordance with the instructions transmitted to me on the 28th March, No. 60-514, requesting me to measure and mark out certain portions of land applied for under pre-emptive right, by Mr. C. G. T. Chauvel, of Tabulam, I have the honor to forward herewith (in a separate enclosure) the plan* of two portions so applied for, and containing respectively 640 acres and 160 acres.

*Appendix E.

2. The alienation of this land will not give an undue command over water, and its quality is by no means superior. There are no mineral indications upon any part of it, nor are there any improvements, although there are the remains of some old buildings and fences.

3. I have reserved a road 1 chain in width through portion No. 2, as this is the nearest line of road from Tabulam to Casino. There does not appear to be any necessity for such a reservation on portion No. 1.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you that from my never having been made acquainted that Mr. Peppercorne had received instructions to measure the land at Tabulam applied for by me sometime ago, there was no one there on my part to point out the exact locality; consequently Mr. Peppercorne has made a great mistake, and measured land perfectly useless to me. Will you, then, have the goodness to get this rectified by causing a new survey to be made?

I have, &c.,

C. G. T. CHAUVEL.

The Acting Surveyor General.—M. F., 24 July.

The measurements have been made by Mr. Peppercorne as stated.

Under the precedent afforded by Mr. Bundoock's case the positions of the measurements may be altered on Major Chauvel's consenting to pay the cost of measurement.

Yes; but is there any reason why the land measured should not be submitted to competition?—JOHN R.

Surveyor General, 5 October, 1860.—M. F.

Major Chauvel, I understand, desires to purchase part of what has been measured with some adjacent land, and this, therefore, cannot be brought to auction. The locality is not near to any population, and it does not appear to me to be advisable to bring any of the remainder to auction.

A. G. M.

Mr. Chauvel must pay the cost of both measurements—the one already made, and the one to be made; with that condition I do not think it necessary to object to this request.

(No. 60-2.)

Grafton, Clarence River,
5 January, 1860.

SIR,

In reference to your letter of the 13th September, No. 59-2330, I have the honor to forward herewith a plan* shewing position of 320 acres applied for by Major ^{Appendix G.} Chauvel, in virtue of his licensed run of Tabulam.

The improvements consist of a stockman's hut, stockyard, and paddock, shewn on the plan; the land is poor and unfit for cultivation.

I have, &c.,

MR. C. G. T. CHAUVEL to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Royal Hotel, Sydney,
30 January, 1860.

SIR,

I have the honor to draw your attention to a question which is to be put to you to-morrow evening by Mr. Hoskins in the Legislative Assembly, relative to large blocks of land that have been applied for under the pre-emptive right in the Clarence River District. The Surveyor General has furnished the necessary statement of the facts of this case.

As my name is with others mentioned in Mr. Hoskins' proposed question, I beg leave to state, for your information, that only two blocks of land have been measured for me, namely:—Tabulam West, 320 acres, formerly the head station of Capt. Pike, where considerable improvements have been erected, and a large garden formed. The other block is at Tabulam East, and consists of 362 acres. The locality is at a heifer station of mine, where I have erected a dairy, and enclosed paddocks, with other improvements.

I have thought it necessary to put you in possession of the facts of this case, as Mr. Hoskins' question would lead to the conclusion that I was an applicant under the pre-emptive right for the purchase of extensive tracts of country.

I have, &c.,
C. G. T. CHAUVEL.

No. 68.

ACTING CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

(No. 60-89.)

Crown Lands Office,
Sydney, 1 March, 1860.

SIR,

Having reference to the reply made on the 7th ultimo, by the Honorable the Secretary for Lands to the question of the Honorable the Member for the Northern Gold Fields, relating to the pre-emptive claims of Major Chauvel, Mr. Ogilvie, and the Messrs. Robertson.

I have now the honor to submit, for the provisional approval of the Secretary for Lands, the claims referred to, with remarks and recommendations in regard to them, in order that a decision may be arrived at, whether all or which portions shall be assessed, with a view to completion of the sale, which will, of course, be subject to the final approval of the Executive Council.

I should mention that the consideration of such cases results from the circumstance that (with the exception of those on the Richmond River) reserves have not (from various causes into which it is not necessary at present to enter) been selected and proclaimed within the Clarence District, as has been done in other pastoral districts; while, from the aggregation of population at the Timbarra Gold Fields, a demand has arisen for the purchase of farm lands, which would not otherwise have existed, and to meet which there is no extent of land suitable to agricultural purposes nearer to the Gold Fields than the flats on the Clarence River, a considerable extent of which are embraced by the pre-emptive purchase claims referred to.

Recommendations have been annexed, in a tabular form, but the surveyor's plans and reports are enclosed.

I should wish to be favoured with an early decision in regard particularly to the 340, 180, and 242 acres at Yates' Flats, as I consider it desirable that they should at once be sub-divided for sale at auction.

I have, &c.,
A. G. McLEAN.

| CLAIMANT. | AREA. | REMARKS AND RECOMMENDATION. |
| C. G. T. Chauvel. | 362 acres .. | This is the only land measured for Major Chauvel, upon one of two runs which he holds under the name of Tabulam; the land embraced, at one period, the head station, but the one being now held in conjunction with the other run referred to, the existing improvements on the land consist only of a hut, stockyard, clearing, fencing, and ploughing. As the land is divided by the river only from the Village of Tabulam, the application was referred for the report of Mr. Darke, who had long been the surveyor of the district, as to the advisability of complying with it, and Mr. Darke's recommendation was in favour of such compliance. Having in mind the existence of the improvements and the present and probable prospective unimportance of Tabulam as a village, I am disposed to recommend that this purchase may be allowed. |
| C. G. T. Chauvel. | 320 acres .. | This is the only purchase under pre-emptive right measured in the eastern run of Tabulam, save a few town allotments in the village, on which stand the valuable improvements of the station. It is at some distance from the Clarence River, and from the gold diggings; the soil is poor and unsuitable for cultivation, and I recommend that the purchase should be allowed. |
| E. D. Ogilvie, &c. | | |

A. G. McLEAN.

I see no reason to dissent from the conclusions at which the Acting Surveyor General has arrived.—M. F. 20 March.

No. 69.

MINUTE of Secretary for Lands.

Robertson's, Ogilvie's, and Chauvel's cases, for purchase of land by pre-emptive right.

Chauvel's Run.

1st. It has been represented to me, that at the confluence of the streams called Timbarra and the north arm of the Clarence, are situated extensive alluvial plains, of extreme fertility, and admirably suited for agriculture; that these plains extend seven miles up the north Clarence, and about eight miles below, in each case measured from the confluence of the waters mentioned.

2nd. That there is a township laid out in the neighbourhood called Tabulam.

Ogilvie's Run.

Also, that there is much valuable land at Yates' Flat, most suitable for farms, and much required for that purpose.

Robertson's Run.

Also, that there is much excellent agricultural land at "Yulgilbar."

It is also stated that the Gold Fields at the Clarence have caused a large population to settle down there, possessed of means to buy land, and anxious to do so; and that the lands above mentioned are particularly suited for their requirements, much more so than those at Fairfield. Inquiry should be made, with a view to the lands being reserved.

JOHN R.
31 March.

In order to determine, as far as may be, the claims of Major Chauvel, Mr. Ogilvie, and Messrs. Robertson, and set out in the Acting Surveyor General's letter of the 1st March, instant, I should like that the lots, not coming within the areas above mentioned, should be separated from those within the same; also, that it be stated whether or not the river is navigable where the land is measured.

JOHN R.
31 March.

No. 70.

MINUTE of Surveyor General.

Forward for the further report of the Acting Surveyor General.—M. F.
B.C., 2 April. Very urgent.

THE distances of seven miles above the junction of the Timbarra and Clarence Rivers, and eight miles below that junction, would embrace the portion of 362 acres, recommended to be allowed to Major Chauvel as a pre-emptive purchase.

2. The 1015 acres, for which Messrs. Robertson's application is recommended, to be rejected.

3.

3. The 644 acres, for which Mr. Ogilvie's application is recommended, to be rejected.

A reserve at Yates' Flat, of either 9 or 25 square miles (the usual areas for town reserves), would embrace the 242, 340, and 180 acres, portions for which Mr. Ogilvie's applications are recommended, to be rejected.

It will thus be seen that within the 15 miles of the Clarence River, at Tabulam, or the junction of the Timbarra, and 5 miles square at Yates' Flat, the only application recommended by me to be entertained is Major Chauvel's, for 362 acres. The reasons for my recommendation in this case, and which is not a very decisive one, are stated in the letter.

I have also recommended the rejection of Mr. Ogilvie's applications for 165 acres, forming a village reserve in the Clarence River, and on the new road to Tenterfield, and for 543 acres, which lies within 3 miles of Yates' Flat; but if the 15 miles of the Clarence, above referred to, be treated as a reserve, I would recommend a compliance with Mr. Ogilvie's application for the 543 acres.

A. G. McLEAN.

B.C., 2 April, 1860.

P.S.—Under this report, Mr. Ogilvie, who has already purchased 861 acres under pre-emptive right, would be allowed 2,657 acres additional—Major Chauvel would be allowed 320 acres, and possibly 362 acres additional—and the Messrs. Robertson would not be allowed the portion for which they apply.—A. G. M.

I would like to know the area of the run or runs from which it is proposed to purchase, by pre-emptive right, these lands.—JOHN R.

11 April.

The Acting Surveyor General.—M. F.

B.C., 12 April.

Ogilvie's "Yulgilbar" Run contains probably 300 square miles; Chauvel's "Tabulam" Run about 80 square miles; Robertson's "Sandilands" Run about 24 square miles.

The two last are merely the areas stated in the claims to lease, and the first may be more accurate.

Mr. Chauvel may have the 320 acres; but the 362 acres falling within the Reserve at the junction of the Timbarra and Clarence Rivers he cannot have, excepting such of it as he may rightly claim under the Regulations providing for improvements, &c.

Efforts should be made also for the public sale of land in this neighbourhood, including the 362 acres herein alluded to.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS to MAJOR CHAUVEL.

(No. 60-356.)

Department of Lands,

Sydney, 24 April, 1860.

SIR,

Referring to your letter of the 30th January last, I am directed to inform you that the Secretary for Lands has approved of your being allowed to purchase (under your pre-emptive right in virtue of your licensed run of Tabulam in the Clarence District), the portion of 320 acres at Tabulam West, containing your improvements.

2. Your claim to purchase the other portion alluded to in your letter under reply, 362 acres at Tabulam East, cannot be admitted, the portion in question falling within the Reserve at the junction of the Timbarra and Clarence Rivers; but any claim that you may have in virtue of improvements to exercise your pre-emptive right over land south of the Reserve will be taken into consideration.

MAJOR Chauvel has called upon me about the land that was measured for him, but withheld for farms. I see no objection to subdividing it and submitting it to auction speedily.

3 May, 1860.

Mr. Greaves is informed that Major Chauvel's pre-emptive purchase application, for which Mr. Greaves made a measurement, is disallowed, and he is requested to measure all the available land in that measurement, and between the Tenterfield Road and the Tabulam and Clarence Rivers, in suitable portions for farms, reporting fully on the value of the portion on which Major Chauvel's improvements may fall, as well as on the value of the improvements.

MR. SURVEYOR GREAVES to ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

(No. 60-39.)

Survey Office, Grafton,

11 August, 1860.

SIR,

In reference to your blank cover letter of 8th May, No. 60-730, requesting the measurement at West Tabulam of the land at the junction of the Clarence and Timbarra Rivers, and my report upon the value of the portions upon which Major Chauvel's improvements may fall, and also, upon the value of the improvements, I have the honor to report as follows:—

2. Portion No. 22, containing 9 acres and 1 rood, I consider worth £2 per acre (£18 10s.); the improvements consist of shingled hut, worth about £30, and cleared land, £10.

Portion No. 23, containing 24 acres 3 roods and 37 perches, I estimate at £1 10s. per acre (£37 9s. 5½d.); the improvements upon it consist of large stockyard worth £100, and cleared land and old garden, £20.

Part of portions 1, 2, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, and 21 have been cleared of standing timber and ploughed, not stumped. I consider these portions worth £2 5s. per acre, and the improvements as above stated, nominal price, say £2 per acre. The line of fence as shewn has been destroyed.

Portions 6, 7, 8 and part of 9, 15, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, are partly clear of timber and appear also to have been ploughed, but of a more ancient date. I question whether they were ever timbered where they are now clear; the three first mentioned portions are worth £2 10s. per acre, the rest £2, value of improvements, nil.

3. There is some portion of fencing upon some of these portions which I have not attached any value to; it is shewn upon the plan thus ~~**~~

4. I have always entertained serious doubts as to the value of land that has once been under cultivation and abandoned (and perhaps exhausted), although it has at some expense been cleared of timber. I beg to direct your attention to this and suggest that some scale whereby to value such lands be adopted.

I have, &c.,

W. A. B. GREAVES,

1st Class Surveyor.

Under this report, Major Chauvel may be permitted to purchase under pre-emptive right portions 22 and 23, at an assessed value, which Mr. Greaves will carry out.

MR. C. G. T. CHAUVEL to SURVEYOR GENERAL AND CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 17 July, 1858.

SIR,

I have the honor to request you will have the goodness to obtain the sanction of the Government for my purchasing three hundred and twenty acres (320 acres) of land, under the pre-emptive right, at "Tabulam," on which are erected valuable improvements, the description of which to the best of my knowledge is as follows, viz.: The west to include the house, stockyard, gardens, cultivation paddock, &c., built by Mr. Evans; the southern line to run parallel with the Rocky River, and bounded on the east by the Clarence River.

I have, &c.,

C. G. T. CHAUVEL.

No. 77.

MINUTE of Surveyor General.

THIS application is in right of a licensed run called Tabulam, which was held by Capt. Pike, and it appears that there are two runs called Tabulam, both now held by Major Chauvel, and which should be distinguished as "Tabulam" and "Tabulam West," one being on either side of the Clarence River.

Major Chauvel explained to me, personally, that although he applied for 320 acres, his wish was to embrace all his improvements on the west side of the Clarence River, and which consists of buildings, clearing, stockyard (of great value), and fencing, and that to effect that object he was willing to buy 500 or 600 acres if necessary.

There is a village and small reserve at Tabulam, on the east side of the river, but no extension of the reserve has been made to the west side.

There was some time since a petition or recommendation reported on by Mr. Darke, for a diversion of the Tenterfield and Grafton Road, which would thus leave the existing road some miles to the west of Tabulam, and cross the Clarence far below it.

If this new line be adopted, Tabulam will cease to be a thoroughfare, and there will probably be no object in extending the reserve to the west side of the river, in which case the application may be entertained.

Information respecting the road may be obtained from the L. P. N. Office, and the opinion of Mr. Darke may then be obtained as to the necessity of extending the Tabulam Reserve to the west side of the Clarence River.

SIR,

With reference to your B. C. communication of the 11th October, No. 58-1471, directing me to report on Major Chauvel's application to purchase lands under pre-emptive right at Tabulam (West), on the Clarence River.

2. I beg to suggest, that although it is necessary to extend the Tabulam Town Reserve to the western side of the Clarence, yet there can be no objection to Major Chauvel being allowed to purchase the lands as shewn in the enclosed sketch*, edged with pink, the western boundary of which (A B) may either just include the improvements or be determined more to the west to any extent desired. The line C D I consider a necessary arrangement, arrangement, as the ford on the only road between Tenterfield and the Richmond (Casino) must be secured to the public.

3. My letter of the 23rd November, 1850, transmitting a plan of the Tabulam Reserve, as well as a design for the township—by the former it will be seen that the lands on the western side of the Clarence are included; by the latter that the site marked B is pointed out as being proper for public buildings, &c., respecting which a note on the map invites particular notice.

I have, &c.,
W. WEDGE DARKE,
Asst. Surveyor.

MEMORANDUM.—Since writing the above I have ascertained that the road immediately to the west of Tabulam, leading towards Tenterfield, is not now the same as at the time of my survey in November, 1850. Major Chauvel's views are to purchase, under pre-emptive right, the lands between the present and the original road, to include his improvements, in the manner shown by a blue edging on the sketch now re-transmitted.

This arrangement would not interfere with any reserve required for public convenience, but I would suggest that it will be necessary that the officer employed on the survey should report fully upon the arrangements requisite for securing a sufficient reserve in a position commanding access to the ford, which in this locality has shifted during heavy floods from the falling in of the alluvial bank or from the drift or deposit of shingle.

WM. WEDGE DARKE.

7 February, 1859.

It is obvious that, from the existence of the two roads, the necessity for reservation at the ford, and of the high land to the north of it, with a convenient communication between them, this measurement cannot on public grounds be made in accordance with the regulations.

With the within report and sketch by Mr. Darke—with the more complete knowledge of the facts as to improvements, positions of roads, &c., which Mr. Greaves will require when on the spot—he will be able to determine what portion of land and in what form can, without interference with public interests, be sold to Major Chauvel. Mr. Greaves will also learn the wishes of Major Chauvel from his son, Mr. Chauvel, who resides at Tabulam, and will make a survey of the land which, under all circumstances, he may consider that Major Chauvel may be permitted to purchase.

It has been alleged that, besides existing and evident improvements, a considerable extent of the land applied for has been cleared and stumped, and this and the other improvements form a reason for admitting a degree of irregularity in the form of measurement which would not otherwise be allowed.

Referred to Mr. Greaves for report and survey accordingly.

[Enclosure in No. 82.]

(No. 57-32.)

Sydney, 5 December, 1857.

Sir,

In attention to your letter of the 13th ultimo, No. 1420, enclosing communications from F. King, Esq., J.P., and Mr. J. B. Yates, relative to a proposed new line of road from Tenterfield to Grafton, or improvements in the line now in use, and desiring me to report on the subject, I beg to state, that during my surveys in the locality referred to, I formed a strong opinion that a much better and shorter road could be found than the objectionable track then and still in use, which is so bad that any outlay in such improvements, as may be practicable in some few places would be injudicious, until the question of the possibility of opening a better shall have been determined.

I cannot offer remarks on the line proposed by Mr. Yates, as I am unacquainted with the names he applies to the localities westward of the Clarence, in the country of the Rocky River. Nor am I guided by any mention in his report of the approximate points at which he proposes to cross these streams.

I enclose a tracing from a reduction of my surveys, showing the general direction that appeared to me to be practicable, of which the only part (from B to C) requires examination.

From Grafton to B, the line may be at once used without any outlay, with consideration,—the "Coal Ridge" at A, presenting no obstacle;—this point (where I have left marked trees) is shewn on my maps deposited in your office.

From Tenterfield towards Grafton, the route I suggest would follow the Bolivia Road, about four miles, then take a general direction east by south, four miles to a very favourable part of the Great Dividing Range, which may perhaps with advantage be traversed about a mile southerly, and crossed almost imperceptibly at C, which point is laid down on my map of the locality.

My reason for supposing that the country between C and B is most likely to admit of a practicable road is, from having observed from the summits of the Great Dividing Range south of C, that the features easterly appear less rugged and broken than in any other part of this mountain track, and after gaining the watershed eastward of the Rocky River, the road to the Ford at B ("Ogilvie's Horse-shoe Bend") would follow leading features parallel with tributaries of the Clarence.

STATE AND MANAGEMENT OF THE SYDNEY DOMAIN.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly appointed on the 19th February last, "to inquire into and report on the present State and Management of the Sydney Domain; more particularly as to the recent fencing off of a portion of the ground by a permanent fence,"—have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee having examined sixteen witnesses, and considered the documents produced before them, find that the evidence goes clearly to shew that the present permanent fence ought to be removed, as it not only interferes with the right of the public to the free use of the Domain, but is also unsightly and unnecessary.

2. While your Committee have every wish to encourage, in every legitimate way, the manly game of cricket, still they are decidedly of opinion that the right of the general public to the free and uninterrupted use of the Domain for recreation and exercise should not be interfered with.

3. It has also been shewn to your Committee that the Corporation fence surrounding the public baths wholly interrupts the view of pedestrians, and ought, therefore, to be moved lower down the hill.

4. Your Committee also consider it very desirable, in order to prevent further disputes, that the Domain should be granted to a trustee or trustees for the benefit of the public, exclusively for the purposes of recreation and exercise, and that the said trustee or trustees be required to frame and make public by-laws and regulations for the proper management of the Domain—such by-laws and regulations to be subject to the approval of the Executive Council.

Your Committee therefore respectfully recommend:—

- 1st. That the present permanent fence erected in the Domain, enclosing a portion thereof for the purpose of playing the the game of cricket, be immediately removed.
- 2nd. That the Corporation fence enclosing the public baths be moved lower down the hill, and,—
- 3rd. That the lands known as the Sydney Domain be, by deed, granted to the public for recreation and exercise.

Chairman.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE THE

ON THE

SYDNEY DOMAIN.

SILVANUS B. DANIEL, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Honorable John Robertson, M.P., examined, in his place:—

1. By the Chairman: You are Minister for Lands? Yes; and in that capacity I have charge and control of the Domain and the Botanic Gardens.
2. Who exercises control over lands in and about the city dedicated to public uses? That would depend upon whether they are lands which have been handed over to the Corporation or whether they are lands still under the control of the Government. If they are under the control of the Government then they are under my control; but if they have been handed over to the Corporation then they are under the control of the Mayor and Corporation, and their officers.
3. Is there any properly constituted authority over such lands; and if so, will you please to state the particulars? I should think the proper constituted authority is the Minister for Lands, a member of the Government, and responsible to Parliament for his position. I am the authority on behalf of the Government. There are Boards, and Committees, and Trusts appointed under me, but they are in all cases liable to removal; as, for instance, the Hyde Park Trust and the Wynyard-square Trust.
4. Have any applications been made to you in reference to the Domain, for the right of ingress or egress? Yes, such applications have been made.
5. Will you please to state them? Perhaps it would save time if I were to state this matter. I will tell you pretty much how it stands, and you can ask for anything you want to fill up the narrative. You will thus get at the end you desire in a speedier way. The Botanic Gardens and the Domain are under my control, and I have under me a director (Mr. Charles Moore) who carries out instructions. Besides this there is a committee of gentlemen, who were appointed in 1856, consisting of Captain Ward, the Director of the Gardens, three cricketers—chosen, I think, annually—and some other officer of the Government. To these gentlemen a portion of the Domain was handed over at that time for the purpose of cricket matches. They were permitted certain privileges in the management and upholding of the land, but they were liable to instant removal, and the land to instant resumption, without notice on the part of the Government, at any time. Their position in that regard has never been changed. They are still liable to instant removal. They applied to me some months ago, ago, asking me to permit them to fence in the whole of the land with a permanent fence, to extend along the edge of the old road, running south from Sir Richard Bourke's statue, along that road running south and east, and to run back north to the fenced enclosure of trees, in a line with the present fence. I do not mean to say that the place where the fence is erected is where they asked to put it—it is not. I declined to permit any fencing to be put near the road, in order that, at these cricketing exhibitions, there might be room for a large number of people on the grass, where they might stand comfortably—something like free seats in a church; but while I desired that these people might have a free chance all round the area, I yet thought that the cricketers might be able to raise money to keep up the game by erecting a fence, and allowing other persons to go inside it for payment. At that time I was not quite sure whether even this ought to be permitted, and I caused a letter to be written saying that I thought it had better not, especially as it was desired to erect a pavilion, which would have been a permanent building. I thought that, while there was not so much objection—(although I did object to it)—to the erection of a fence which might be removed at little cost, the erection of a handsome pavilion was a very different thing, and that if it were erected we should not be able to get rid of it, should we desire to do so. I thought if we permitted this it would be a substantial dedication to cricketing. I objected to the fence, but I took a greater objection to the pavilion, and I gave instructions that it should not be erected. The cricketers then made interest in another way. They represented that while the cricketers of Melbourne had great privileges—that while they had grants of land, which they were permitted to fence in, in eight or nine cases, the Government here were doing nothing for them. I said, "We are willing to give you a piece of ground to yourselves—we will make you a grant of a piece of land on the Water Reserve." It must be known that cricketing would not hurt the Water Reserve. I still saw the difficulty captious people might raise—(for I think it impossible that any but captious people could object to what has been done)—and, therefore, I offered them land on the Water Reserve; but they said it was too far from the city—that it would crush the game—that they would not be able to get people to attend—and that it would be a complete smash to the whole concern. I said, "Well, put your views on paper, and I will see what I can do." They then wrote me a letter upon the subject. (Vide Appendix A.) I told them to say what they wanted, and to send in plans and specifications, and that I would see about the matter. They said that they might be able to carry out the match with success, in a pecuniary point of view, if they were allowed to put up a permanent side fence. When I say "permanent" I mean fixed. There was no other permanency in the matter, because, by order of the Secretary for Lands, the fence at any time could be taken down in ten minutes, without any breach of the bargain. That is why I take exception to the use of the word permanent, as applied to this fence. There were two fixed fences along the sides, with a shifting fence at the southern end. Those fences have been erected. Captain Ward, who saw me on behalf of the cricketers, told me that they would provide suitable turnstiles, so that there would be no inconvenience to the public in passing through, but that, on the contrary, the fence would be a protection to ladies and children, from cattle, carriages, and people on horseback. It seemed to me, therefore, that there was not much objection to this. But their request was that we should put the money required for the work on the estimates, and I confess that when the honorable the Chairman mentioned to me one morning that a fence was being put up, I was under the impression that he must have been mistaken, because I did not contemplate that those gentlemen who asked me to put a sum of money on the estimates for the erection of a fence would erect that fence themselves, and thus, as it seemed to me, preclude all chance of getting any money voted for the purpose. At the same time the letter that they received back from my department, approving of the application, and promising to put the money on the Estimates, was a sufficient justification for them to suppose that the only objection the Government had to the matter was the question of money. Therefore I do not see that they are in any way blameworthy—perhaps they were perfectly justified; I think they were, from the correspondence which has transpired. Yet I do not see why they should have asked me to put a sum of money on the Estimates, for a particular work, and then do it themselves, without the money being put on the Estimates. Well, the fence has been put up, but the end of it is movable. I was induced the more readily to consent to put the money on the Estimates because it was represented to me by Captain Ward that the fence would not only be a great facility to the cricketers, but also a great advantage to the volunteers, who the other day had found considerable inconvenience in consequence of not having had sufficient room for their evolutions. There is in the Domain a clump of trees and a well—perhaps known to some honorable members of the Committee. Captain Ward represented to me that above that well the volunteers were not able to parade or march, and I determined, therefore, not that the well should be filled in, but that it should be covered by a platform a little distance down, and the ground made level; and, also, that the two or three unsightly old trees around it should be cleared away. Thus the ground would be improved for the volunteers. The alteration is, of course, of no consequence to the cricketers, because that clump of trees has never been in their way. The cricketers desired—and Captain Ward desired—to have a fence higher up the hill than where it is now erected; but I objected to that, because I thought there ought to be more room for the public, without charge, than there would have been had the fence been erected higher up the hill. I conceive, however, that the cricketers have scarcely carried out the intention—in that they have not, on the one hand, put up a sufficient number of turnstiles; there ought to be turnstiles, at any rate, along where there used to be a very nice walk, at the northern end of the cricket ground, alongside the enclosed plantation. If there had been proper turnstiles, at each end of that plantation, so as to allow persons to walk there as formerly, and if the end fence had been removed immediately after the great match was completed, then, I think, there would be no fair ground for complaint. At the present present time, I think, the proper course is to move the shifting portion of the fence—that is the whole of the southern end—and to cause two more turnstiles to be erected in the places I have indicated; then, I think, so far from the fence being an inconvenience, it will be an improvement—as far as visitors are concerned—will facilitate the action of the volunteers, and, also, the game of cricket; which, whatever may be said about its keeping the people off the Domain, is, in my opinion, a great inducement for people to go into the Domain. For, most assuredly, on cricketing and volunteer days they attend in larger numbers than at any other time. It should be remembered by those who object to the fence, that they cannot have amusements going on in the Domain unless accommodation is afforded to those who engage in those amusements. I think that is all I know about the cricket affair; of course I am now prepared to answer any question which may be put to me with reference to the matter. There are two boxes stuck up on the ground which are very unsightly. I cannot imagine how the club could have put up such abominable things.

The Hon.
J. Robertson,
M.P.

26 Feb., 1861.

6. By Mr. Windeyer: Then, I understand you that the fence, according to your idea, was only to remain during the cricket match? The standing portion of the fence—that is the western and the eastern sides—were to be put up and not to be movable—I mean not for the purpose of moving.

7. By Mr. Dick: Permanent? No, not permanent; because there would be no breach of agreement if the fence were ordered to be taken down to-morrow. It was only not to be of a movable character—I mean not shifting, to be put up and put down.

8. It was to remain there at your pleasure? Just so; but the end fence is shifting, and was to be taken up, as I remember it, as soon as the match was over—that is, the fence at the southern end. There were also, as I have said before, to have been four turnstiles instead of two.

9. By Mr. Windeyer: What reason was there for making the southern end movable any more than the eastern or the western side? It was thought that the volunteers would require to perform evolutions farther south than I was disposed to think we ought to permit the cricket ground to be fenced in.

10. But are not the eastern and western fences most inconvenient to the general public? I cannot imagine in what way they can be inconvenient to the general public—assuming that there were two turnstiles on each side instead of one. Gentlemen used formerly to canter across there on horseback, to the annoyance of ladies and children; but while these fences remain it appears to me that ladies and children will be better protected than before, while no one will be excluded. An idea seems to have got abroad that there is some exclusion or withholding of this land, but there is nothing of the kind, any person may go within the fence.

11. By Mr. Wilson: Has the Domain ever been granted? Granted?

12. Granted? The Domain is set apart for the benefit of the citizens of Sydney, and inhabitants of the Colony, and has been so for more than fifty years. There was no one to grant it to.

13. By Mr. Dick: How was it dedicated or set apart for the use of the public? It was, I presume, withdrawn from sale. The custom is this: all lands not required for public purposes are subject to sale. These lands, on our maps, are set apart for public recreation, and withdrawn from sale. But there is no grant. To whom can the grant be made? The Corporation declined to take charge of it some years ago when the Government offered them a grant of it.

14. Do you not think that trustees would manage it better? No, I have not much confidence in trustees, or boards. I think the best management that can be, is to have one officer responsible, and he responsible to Parliament. I think the Parliament has a perfectly good hold on the Minister for Lands in his disposition of these domains, and that matters would be attended to much quicker than by some trustees, whose report would be often an excuse when anything is going wrong.

15. Is it not desirable that the purposes of these lands should be cleanly defined by some grant or Act of Parliament? I do not think so. If it were conceived desirable to grant them to any one, it should be to the Corporation of the city of Sydney; but I do not believe it is quite desirable to grant them to the city of Sydney, because I look upon those Gardens, and that Domain as belonging to the country generally. I do not see how we should be justified in spending such large sums of the public money in beautifying the Gardens, and in keeping up the Domain, unless they belong to the country; and belonging, as they do, to the country, I think they are better in charge of a Minister, who is responsible to Parliament, and through Parliament, to the country.

16. By Mr. Wilson: Can you tell how much of the Domain was originally handed over to the cricketing committee? I think about the same piece as that which is now fenced.

17. Do you think it desirable to set apart any portion of the Domain for other games, such as quoits and racket? I think quoits would break up the grass.

18. Shinney — ? One at a time, if you please; besides, I do not think it possible that a game of quoits would collect twenty thousand people to see it as cricket does sometimes. It is not for the sake of the cricketers that the Government have given them the accommodation, but for the sake of the inhabitants of the Colony, who come to see the game. I do not think the inhabitants of this Colony would assemble in large numbers to see a game of quoits.

19. You are alluding to the Inter-Colonial Matches which take place here once in two years? Yes.

20. And you think it would not be advisable to set apart any portion of the Domain for any other public recreations and games? I would not say so. If you would indicate the kind of game I should be able to answer, but the question you put is rather too wide. Quoits is not

The Hon. J. Robertson, M.P. not a desirable game, I think, to encourage in the Domain. There was another game you mentioned.

21. Rackets? I do not know what that is.

22. By Mr. Dick: Is that portion of land fenced in by the Gymnastic Company a portion of the Domain? No; that is outside the Domain.

23. It is not a portion of the Domain? No.

24. By Mr. Wilson: It is a portion of the land set apart for public purposes—is it not? Well, so it is, but it was considered to be a desirable course to allow gymnastics. They hold that land, however, subject to removal without dispute or allowance, on twelve months' notice. Therefore, with the present management, the Parliament can cause it to be resumed at once. The Parliament has only to pass a resolution and the Secretary for Lands would act. What better control can Parliament have over the land? If you had trustees, however, there would be some difficulties in the way.

25. By Mr. Dick: Perhaps that land might be let with the other land? They have no right to let it.

26. The other land is let? What is?

27. The portion opposite the Domain? What do you mean?

28. The portion opposite the Museum is let by the Government? No; it is let to some butchers, who pay to the Park Committee, and the money is expended in improving the lands.

29. And this land occupied by the Gymnastic Company? I will tell you the history of that: For many years it has been used by the children of St. Mary's Church, as a playground. (Witness here read a letter in reference to the matter. Vide Appendix B.)

30. By the Chairman: Have any applications been made to you for ingress to or egress from the Sydney Domain? Yes; since I took office there have been several applications for new entrances into the Domain. The last one was for an entrance from Crown-street. I presume those are the entrances referred to.

31. Crown-street and King-street both? Which one do you ask about now?

32. Say Crown-street? I thought it my duty to refuse the application of the persons who applied for an entrance from Crown-street. My refusal of that application was made upon different grounds. In the first place, there is already an entrance at Palmer-street, down by the waters of Woolloomooloo Bay. Assent to the application for an opening from Crown-street would involve the putting up of new gates and the making of another road, at an expense of some three or four hundred pounds; and the entrance would only be about seventy yards from the one I have spoken of at Palmer-street, and about the same distance from the one opening towards St. Mary's. So that already, on that side of the Domain, there is an entrance at Palmer-street, an entrance from Boomerang road or street, an entrance by St. Mary's; besides these there is the contemplated new entrance of King-street, and there is the entrance by Sir Richard Bourke's statue. If we had conceded this other one, it would have made six entrances within certainly less than half-a-mile; and it did seem to me to be rather asking too much; and I felt it my duty to refuse the application, on the ground that there were so many entrances already, and also on the ground of expense, and also because the making of so many entrances would have the effect of cutting up the Domain, so as to make it little else than roads. I am aware that some dissatisfaction has been expressed by some persons; and I am aware that the Director of the Gardens has been told by a gentleman that my refusal has put £50 out of his pocket. That gentleman is no doubt very much annoyed that I put £50 out of his pocket by my conduct in this matter; but it has saved the public three or four hundred pounds. I believed it was rather a benefit than not to refuse the application. Therefore, while I regret that my decision should have put £50 out of this gentleman's pocket, I cannot feel sorry that I have prevented three or four hundred pounds being taken out of the pocket of the country.

33. Then permission has only been given with reference to King-street? Permission has been given by Parliament to the opening from King-street. We took precisely the course in reference to King-street that I contemplated taking with respect to the Domain fence. We put the money on the Estimates, and let Honorable Members give their opinion by voting the money. The Committee of Supply passed the Estimate by a very large majority, thereby affirming the desirability of carrying out the work. I contemplated taking the vote for the fence in the Domain in the same way, and thus getting practically the approbation of Parliament to the plan.

34. Is it the intention of the Government to recommend the investment of these lands in trustees for the benefit of the country generally? I do not think it necessary. It seems to me that if the lands of this Domain were handed over to any body of trustees, the Parliament could not have so direct and speedy a control over them. The Parliament could not so readily control the action of trustees as it might control the action of a responsible Government. I think it is better to have the lands as they are—under the immediate control of the Parliament—than that they should be vested in any board or trust whatever. I have said, that in my opinion, if it were taken out of the control of the Government responsible to the country, it was clear that they should go, not to trustees, but to the Corporation of Sydney, who are elected by the citizens. They should not be placed in the hands of any trustees the Government might nominate. But it seems to me, as I have before stated, that as the Domain is kept up from the general funds of the country, the Corporation were not far from right when they declined to take charge of it some years ago.

35. Have any instructions been issued from the Lands Office under your hands for permission to coasters to land goods in the Domain, and to ship them also? No, I think not; it is contrary to all instructions. I did permit some Association or Aquatic Company, on the other side of the water, to have a boat there. All the aquatic people seemed to think it desirable to have a waterman's boat there with permission to land. It is, however, only a temporary right pending the decision of the Government. They may be removed at any moment. The Hon.

J. Robertson,
M.P.

36. You stated to the Committee that the Inter-Colonial Match was only played here once in two years, and that you gave the cricketers to understand that after the match the southern end of the fence should be removed—are you aware that it is still standing? I was told by a leading member of the association yesterday that it would be removed to-day. I asked the question how it was that it was not removed. 26 Feb., 1861.

37. By Mr. Windeyer: At the time it was first proposed to give the cricketers some right to use this portion of the Domain, was not there a petition from some of the inhabitants of Sydney against it? I do not remember. Mr. Hay was in the Government then. Here are lots of petitions in favour of it. I used to think that I should get my ears boxed on the other side for not doing enough for the cricketers. I had no idea that it would be thought that I had done too much.

38. Was not there a petition to Parliament against it? I do not remember it. Here is a petition from the Mayor, Mr. G. Thornton, complaining that the Government had refused to sanction the enclosure of more than sixty yards square of the land. It is all the other way.

39. But you cannot state that there was not one? I cannot say that. This looks like one. (Petition referred to.) It complains that the Domain should be withdrawn from the use of the colonists generally, and protests against the proposed mutilation. This was in the time of the Parker Government. It was laid before the Executive, and the opinion of the Council was in favour of granting the application of the cricketers, under the restrictions I have mentioned—that the land should be subject to immediate removal. There are numerous petitions in favour of the project, and one very large one against it.

40. Is that a petition to Parliament or to the Executive? It appears that certain alterations were suggested by the Hon. Secretary for Lands (Mr. Hay), and the Council concurring in those alterations advised that the rules for the management of the ground be approved accordingly. Here are the rules. (Vide Appendix C.)

41. By Mr. Lackey: Was the area the same at that time? I think it was pretty much the same.

42. By Mr. Wilson: I think you stated the number of yards? I think that was not the final settlement.

43. By Mr. Windeyer: Is there anything about iron hurdles being used? I do not know.

44. Then those rules have been altered since? Yes, in that regard. There is no mistake as to what the object was, and if the cricketers are disposed to conceal it I am not. They were not able to collect any means. They were affording the people a large fund of amusement, and, while fencing with hurdles prevailed, some people paid and some did not, but got over. They had no means of collecting money except stopping people at the outer gate. The object of this new regulation was, that, while providing a space sufficient for the inhabitants of Sydney to see the game without going inside the fence, the cricket club might be enabled to collect some four or five hundred pounds each match to pay the enormous expenses incurred. It must be perfectly apparent to every one that these matches cannot be carried on without expense.

45. But under whose control is the Domain? Do you mean the cricket ground or the Domain?

46. The Domain? The immediate control of the Domain and the Botanic Gardens is a part of my duties.

47. Are there any orders or general regulations issued from the Lands Office, do you know, having reference to its management? In what regard?

48. As to the closing of the gates at particular times? No, we open them at night now. I gave instructions to have them opened at night. I thought that in this hot climate the people lost more than half the benefit of the Domain, by having the gates closed these moon-light nights.

49. Did Mr. Moore ever complain in reference to that arrangement? Yes; he is of opinion that certain immorality arises in consequence of it; but, I confess, I do not believe it myself. I have been in the Domain many times at night, and I believe there is less immorality there than in any other part of Sydney. I cannot believe that shutting the gates of the Domain will check immorality.

50. What is your opinion as to the propriety of allowing private entrances into the Domain from private dwelling-houses? I think it was a great mistake selling that land at the Domain Terrace. Sir George Gipps did that when money was very scarce in the Treasury. I think we shall have to buy that land back.

51. By Mr. Wilson: Have the owners of that land a right of entrance into the Domain? I suspect that they have. At any rate I would not like to say whether they have or have not. I am afraid it will be a difficult thing to take that right from them. They have always had it.

52. By Mr. Windeyer: It all depends upon their grants? Usage is something. They have been permitted to build houses and make entrances there. I think we must buy that land.

53. Have you issued any instructions about the keeping of cattle or horses in the Domain? I have got prepared now, and have had for some time a scheme under which I contemplate receiving two or three hundred pounds a year for the pasture, which would go towards the better management of the Domain. At any rate it would be a fund fairly applicable to that purpose. Up to the present time cows and horses have been allowed to go in there without any particular rule. Several old officers of the Government have had for years a right to put

The Hon.
J. Robertson,
M.P.
26 Feb., 1861.

put their cows in. The late Responsible Government have never seen it necessary to withdraw that right. But the code of regulations which I have prepared, and which will probably be published shortly, amounts pretty much to this,—that we would let the right to depasture a certain number of quiet cows to the person who would give the most for the privilege; the funds to go to the improvement and support of the Domain. The cows might be inspected by the Director of the Gardens to ascertain that they were quiet. That, I think, would get rid of the jealousy which now exists, and the Ministry would not be pestered by people applying to have their cows in the Domain.

54. How many people have that right at present? I do not know,—there is a list of them. Applications have generally been from women who have received a letter from Lady Denison. Lady Denison has generally written to say that some poor woman had been left with children to support, that she has been enabled to collect money enough to buy a cow, and that if the cow were allowed to run in the Domain it might be the means of enabling her to support her family. Sometimes when there is a great deal of rain the grass becomes inconveniently high, and then any one who applies can send cows into the Domain. There is no difficulty then.

55. Do you know whether any application has been made by the Sydney Infirmary to have their cows there? I think so, but it seems to me that the best way is to let the Domain to the person who will pay most for the use of it, and give a guarantee that he will send in none but quiet cows.

56. At any rate do you not think it better that the privilege should be enjoyed by charitable institutions than by private persons? If that were the question I should certainly say it would be better to grant the privilege to charitable institutions. The Society of the Industrial School have their cows there, and the Legislative Assembly also has two cows in the Domain.

APPENDIX.

A.

Royal Mint, Sydney,
25 January, 1861.

Sir,

Referring to the question of a permanent enclosure for the cricket ground in the Outer Domain, I have now the honor to enclose, for the approval of the Minister for Lands, a plan and specification shewing the nature of the fence, as well as the proportion of it proposed to be made of a temporary character, distinguished from that intended to be capable of removal at pleasure. The cost of the former portion is estimated at £110, and that of the latter £55.

In submitting these, I am desired by the Cricketer's Association to request that the fence may be sanctioned for erection at once, in order that the ground may be enclosed in time for the Inter-Colonial Cricket Match, fixed to take place on the 14th and 15th February next, and also that a sum of £110 may be allotted from the Vote of Parliament for the improvement of the Domain and Botanic Gardens, in order to meet the expense of erecting the permanent portion of the fence.

I have, &c.,

F. W. WARD.

The Under Secretary for Lands and Public Works.

Temporary Offices, Care of C. H. Woolcott, Esq., Town Hall,
1 March, 1859.

Sir,

I do myself the honor, by desire of the Committee of the Sydney Gymnasium, to apply for the temporary use of that piece of ground, situate between the stone wall, at the entrance of the Domain, behind the Colonial Architect's Office, and the road north of Saint Mary's Chapel leading to Woolloomooloo, for the purpose of a site for the Sydney Gymnasium.

By the report hereto annexed, you will perceive that the objects of the Institution are peculiarly of a public nature, embracing the physical education of all classes, while the charges for subscribers, pupils, and schools, to be admitted to all the advantages of the institution, are so low as to present no barrier to the almost unlimited admission of the public, the principal regulations being respectability of character and adherence to the rules of the institution.

2nd. The Committee pledge themselves to remove all buildings and materials erected on the ground when it shall be required for the public service, on sufficient notice being given to that effect, and they bid me express a hope that an institution which has received so large a share of public support may not be permitted to become a failure from the want of the mere use of a piece of vacant ground which for a long time has been useless to the public, and which it is presumed cannot be missed, although employed for the purposes of the Sydney Gymnasium.

I have, &c.,

J. McDONELL.

The Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Works.

C.

PROCEEDINGS of the Executive Council, on the 15th December, 1856, with respect to an application for a Cricket Ground.

Extracts from Minutes, No. 56-65.—Confirmed 22nd December, 1856.

HIS EXCELLENCY lays before the Council a memorandum from the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, suggesting the conditions upon which the temporary occupation of the necessary ground should be granted. These are, in substance, as follow:—

1. That the Governor General should appoint certain gentlemen as trustees, removable at pleasure, viz.,—a representative of each of the three cricket clubs, and three officers of the Government; that such trustees should correspond with the Government as representatives of the cricketers; should determine determine who should use the ground for the purposes of the game; should be responsible for the good conduct of those to whom they may grant permission; should frame rules for their guidance; and should be bound to adhere to any regulations established by the Executive Council as to the extent and use of the ground to be granted, and the preservation of order.

2. That the Director of the Botanic Gardens should be instructed to protect the cricket ground, and to render all the assistance in his power in the preservation of order, and that, with this view, the Director and Trustees should communicate directly.

3. That, if these proposals be approved, the trustees should be created at once, and the line of fence determined.

5. After some deliberation the Council advise that the suggestions of the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, as above set forth, be adopted, and that the necessary steps be taken by that officer for carrying them into effect. They further advise that the Legislative Assembly be invited to make provision to an extent not exceeding £150, for preparing and improving the ground.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER,
Clerk of the Council.

Executive Council Office,
Sydney, 23 December, 1856.

The Hon.
J. Robertson,
M.P.

26 Feb., 1861.

Charles Moore, Esq., called in and examined:—

57. By the Chairman: You are the Director of the Botanical Gardens? Yes.

58. And have charge also of the public Domain? Yes.

59. From whom do you receive your directions generally? From the Minister for Lands for the time being.

60. Will you state under what regulations the game of cricket is allowed to be played in the Domain? The regulations were issued—

61. By Mr. Windeyer: Have you received instructions relating to that matter? I received written instructions.

62. By the Chairman: Have you got those instructions by you? I have.

63. Will you please to show them to the Committee? (Instructions produced. Subsequently handed in as Appendix D. Vide Answer 149.) It will be seen that these regulations have been departed from in almost every instance.

64. By Mr. Parkes: What is the date of those regulations? The 3rd of March, 1857.

65. And when did the trust terminate? The trust is still in existence.

66. I thought there were no trustees now? Oh, yes.

67. By the Chairman: Who are the trustees at the present time? I do not know the trustees on the part of the cricketers; but the trustees—officers of the Government—are the same as in the first instance—Captain Ward, myself, and Colonel Barney, who was, I understood, at the time an ex officio member, as Surveyor General.

68. By Mr. Parkes: When did they last act as trustees of the Domain? Circulars are sent round as usual—

69. Are you now speaking of that portion of the Domain used by the cricketers, or of the Domain generally? I am speaking of that portion of the ground appropriated for the use of the cricketers. Circulars are sent round as usual, but I felt, after having attended some of the meetings, that I could be of little use, there being three members of the cricket club, and Captain Ward himself being a cricketer; and so I left it in a great measure to Captain Ward, he being a Government officer. I preferred that Captain Ward should take the management of the matter, expecting, of course, that I should be informed of any particular alteration which it might be considered desirable to make. At present, circulars are forwarded to all the members, although they may not attend.

70. By Mr. Driver: When did you last attend? I have not attended now for some time, for the reason I have stated.

71. How long is it since you attended? About eighteen months.

72. By Mr. Parkes: Can you state when the last meeting of those trustees was held? About a month ago.

73. Was that with reference to the then pending cricket match? I cannot say; the business was not stated.

74. By Mr. Windeyer: Then do I understand you to say that you gave up attending the meetings because you found that you could be of little use, and have very little influence in regulating matters which affect the public interest with regard to the Domain? Quite so.

75. In fact you felt yourself swamped by the cricketing interest? Quite so; and not only that, but I obtained the ill will of the cricketers—I think—unworthily, because I threw no obstruction in their way.

76. By Mr. Driver: Are you not aware that Mr. Tunks and myself, as representing the cricketers, refused to attend the meetings of those trustees, and that we neglected to attend simply because our four co-trustees, being Government officers, always voted against us? There was some feeling of that kind after the first or second meeting, but I was not aware that it existed after some change which took place in the representatives of the cricketers.

77. When was that? I understood that it was so. I was never informed of the matter officially. I learned it only from hearsay.

78. Are you not aware that the whole of the trustees, with the exception of Mr. Tunks and myself, were Government officers? I forgot.

79. Colonel Barney, Mr. William Still, yourself, and Captain Ward? True, but Mr. Still was a cricketer, and so was Captain Ward.

80. But are they not all officers of the Government? Yes.

81. By Mr. Windeyer: But Mr. Still and Captain Ward are both of them cricketers, I believe? Yes.

C. Moore,
Esq.

26 Feb., 1861.

C. Moore,
Esq.
26 Feb., 1861.

82. By the Chairman: Have the cricketers been at all interfered with by the public while playing? I am not aware of a single instance in which any complaint has been made of any interference. My orders to the bailiff are that he is to take great care of the ground, and see that no person interferes with the cricketers; and that if he finds any person so interfering he is to apprehend them.

83. By Mr. Windeyer: You stated just now that these regulations had been very much departed from—will you state how, and in what particulars? In the first place, the power appears to have been taken out of the hands of the trustees by the cricket clubs: for instance, in the late match the booths were let, not by the trustees, but by the cricketers. The cricketers took the whole management of that portion of the Domain upon themselves. The cricketers, again, fenced in the ground without reference, so far as I am acquainted, to those of the trustees authorized to point out the boundaries. In the regulations for the management of the ground, it states that permission may be obtained from the trustees only—that the “trustees” shall have power to enclose the land, and to charge for the admission of visitors to that enclosure, but no such power is given to the cricketers; in point of fact, the power appears to have been taken out of the hands of the trustees entirely, by the cricketers.

84. By Mr. Driver: Although one of the trustees, for all you know, the trustees may have sanctioned all this? They may have sanctioned it, but I am not aware that they have done so.

85. You say you received a circular about a month since, but that you did not attend the meeting? Yes; but I know from the public prints that the cricket clubs—

86. We have nothing to do with the reports of the public press? At all events I may state to the Committee that I am not aware of it.

87. By the Chairman: Have any complaints been made to justify the belief that playing cricket in the Domain interferes with the recreation of the public? The only thing that I am aware of is that a petition was got up some time ago. (Mr. Morehead was one of the movers in the matter, and Professor Smith was another.) That petition, I believe, was presented against any portion of the Domain being enclosed for cricketing, or appropriated to the use of any exclusive portion of the public, or of the city of Sydney; they were of opinion that it ought to be left entirely for the purposes for which it was appropriated—that is, for the public as a whole. I am not aware of anything else which has transpired since that time, beyond some few objections from casual visitors.

88. Will you state under what circumstances that fence was erected which now surrounds the cricket ground? I am not aware, beyond having received an authority from the Minister for Lands to permit a fence to be erected, which he had sanctioned, upon a plan and specification submitted to him by Captain Ward.

89. Did you see that plan and specification? I did not.

90. The plan was never submitted to you? It was never submitted to me.

91. Do you consider that fence necessary? Individually, I do not think it necessary; that is to say, unless the ground is to be given up to the cricketers altogether. If it be intended to give the ground up entirely to the cricketers, then I think it ought to be fenced in; but if it be intended that it should remain as a part of the public Domain, to which the public shall be admitted at all times, it certainly is not necessary.

92. Not even for the protection of trees, or anything which your judgment as manager would indicate? No; trees must be individually surrounded.

93. To whom do the cattle and horses belong, which are at present running in the Domain? To various persons who have received permission from the Government to depasture them there.

94. Can you state what is the number of the cattle there? There are about thirty head of cattle, and some ten or twelve horses at the present time.

95. Have you any means of knowing what cattle are there by permission, and what are not—is there any system of impounding? Yes, of impounding cattle which are not authorized to be in the Domain.

96. And you have a person whose duty it is to see the brands, and know the description of those cattle and horses which are permitted to be there, and to impound the others? Yes.

97. By the Chairman: Have you a list shewing the number of the cattle, the names of the respective owners, and from whom they have received permission to place them in the Domain? Yes, I can supply the Committee with it in a very short time, but I have not brought the list with me. (Vide Appendix E)

98. Do you think it necessary to have cattle in the Domain, and that the present system of granting permission is a good one? I think the present system of granting permission is objectionable, because there is no principle laid down as to who shall receive permission.

99. What do you suggest then? That there ought to be some principle laid down. I recommended in a letter to the Government, some six months ago, that an alteration should be made in the system, and that either a certain number of cattle only should be admitted—those who have permission now having that permission continued—or, that the Domain should be let to some person who would pay a certain sum annually for the privilege, with a limitation as to the number of cattle to be admitted.

100. At all times? Yes.

101. By Mr. Wilson: I do not think you answered the first portion of that question, in reference to the necessity of having stock in the Domain? There can be no question about that. If no cattle were admitted it would take more than a thousand pounds a year to keep the grass down.

102. By Mr. Windeyer: And there would be danger of fires? Yes, at the present time we find it difficult in Hyde Park to keep the grass down after having taken the sheep off.

103. By the Chairman: And such suggestions you forwarded by letter to the Secretary for Lands? Yes, about six months ago.

104. Are the public admitted to the Domain at night? They are.
105. Is it desirable that they should be so admitted? Well, I think it gives rise to a great deal of immorality. I must confess, however, that it is almost a privilege to myself for the gates to be open. It is a privilege to my friends. If they be continued open, as at present, at least one policeman ought to be put there at night. And I think also that the main gates should be shut to prevent cattle and horses getting in. One gate only should be open, and opposite to it there should be bars to prevent the intrusion of cattle and horses. All the large gates should be shut, because at the present time, I am informed, almost all the dairy-men's cows in Woolloomooloo get into the Domain during the night and are taken out before the bailiff is up in the morning.
106. Has it come within your knowledge that any irregularities occur in the Domain from the admission of the public at night? There can be no doubt that very great irregularities have occurred—that the immorality is very great. I understood from Captain McLerie that the reports he had received from his superintendents gave him some idea of what was going on—that immorality was practised of the most monstrous description.
107. But it was not known to you, until the matter had been brought under your notice through the Inspector General of Police? Yes it was.
108. Have you seen anything yourself to warrant you in making these statements? Yes, I have.
109. Do you know anything respecting the proposed opening from King-street? All I know is, that there was a sum of money voted for that purpose; I was not consulted in reference to the matter, nor do I know anything more about it than I learned last night from Mr. Robertson. That opening is to be made into the Domain, but it is not proposed to make any new road from it.
110. Will it be necessary to make any new road? It will be necessary to make a new path from the opening to the Botanic Gardens, because, if a path be not made for the public, the public will make a path for themselves.
111. Will not that disfigure the ground? Yes; if the opening is made there must be another walk made.
112. By Mr. Windeyer: Will not the fences at present erected in the Domain by the cricketers interfere with that accommodation? No, not as far as the Botanic Gardens are concerned. They will interfere with the traffic from Woolloomooloo—from Palmer-street to Macquarie-street.
113. By the Chairman: Will you state what regulations are authorized to be enforced in the Domain? We really have no regulations.
114. You have no regulations? We have no regulations. Oh, by-the-by, there is a regulation that all dogs may be shot found at large in the Gardens, and another that grooms are prohibited from exercising horses in the Domain.
115. Is it desirable that there should be other regulations? I think it is important that a code of rules should be established and acted upon.
116. That by-laws, in fact, should be made? Yes. At the present time I am acting entirely upon my own responsibility, for according to an opinion given by the Attorney General in reference to Hyde Park it would almost appear as if Hyde Park and the Domain were part of the waste lands of the Colony.
117. By Mr. Windeyer: What opinion do you allude to? An opinion which was obtained from the Attorney General in reference to the powers of the trustees of Hyde Park.
118. What Attorney General? The present Attorney General.
119. How long ago? About two months since.
120. By the Chairman: Are the paddocks outside the Domain attached to it or to Hyde Park? I think they are attached to Hyde Park. The trustees of Hyde Park have always considered that that land belonged to them. But the Government wish to ignore their power. If not attached to Hyde Park they must be attached to the Domain. The trustees have, however, always considered that they belonged to their trust.
121. And for which they receive a rental? For which they receive a rental.
122. On whose authority was that part enclosed immediately adjoining the upper lodge, between it and Woolloomooloo, for gymnastic exercises? By the authority of the Government.
123. By Mr. Windeyer: That is no portion of the Domain? No. The Government appear to wish to ignore the power of the Hyde Park Committee with regard to these paddocks. But whether the land belongs to the Domain or not there has been no specific charge. The charge was given to the Colonial Architect, but the power of letting has, up to the present time, been exercised by the trustees of Hyde Park.
124. Was the fence enclosing the public baths erected by the Government or by the Corporation? That was erected by the Corporation.
125. According to your judgment of such matters, do you think that fence should be as high as it is—in its present state does it not interfere very much with the view of the harbour? There is a part of the fence round the Corporation Baths unnecessarily high, because it comes up to the side of the road.
126. That is the part of which I am speaking? It excludes from the view of the pedestrian the principal part of Rose Bay. In my opinion it is unnecessarily high up; complaints have been made repeatedly to me that that fence interferes with the view.
127. Are you aware that coasting vessels land and ship goods from several places in the Domain? They do so at the present time, and there is no power to prevent them.
128. Have you mentioned this to the Minister for Lands? I mentioned it in a public communication to the Minister for Lands.
129. How long ago? I referred to it on the occasion of permission being asked by the Subscription Boat Club for a ferry to be made there.

- O. Moore,
Esq.
26 Feb., 1861.
130. By Mr. Driver: From this wharf at Woolloomooloo Bay? From the side, there where coasters are lying in the bay.
131. Do you speak from your own personal observation? In certain cases, but I have a report from the bailiff every day, and he has frequently in his reports referred to it, and asked power to prevent it; but I have no power to do so, and could give him none.
132. What description of goods are generally landed there? I cannot say what they are—they are covered up; I suppose they are stores.
133. By the Chairman: They might be smuggled goods for all you know? Yes, for aught I know.
134. To whom do you make complaints, or apply for instructions? To the Minister for Lands.
135. On all occasions? Yes.
136. By Mr. Windeyer: Do you think it well that private residences should open into the Domain? I do not; I think it is an irregularity which ought never to have been allowed.
137. Have the trees in front of those houses which open into the Domain been cleared away at all lately? They have. I was importuned by a great number of people to take a few branches away, and upon authority given they were removed. Mrs. Futter obtained authority to get a tree cut down altogether, and since that time I have been importuned to cut away branches until, in fact, one pine tree was totally destroyed. The overseer of the Domain was sent to do it, and he almost destroyed the tree; I cut it down the other day.
138. By Mr. Windeyer: How many trees have been cut away? Two.
139. What were they? A pine and an oak.
140. Were they full grown trees? Yes.
141. It will take some years to grow trees of that kind? Yes, some years. One tree was destroyed by a man who was sent to take off some branches; an occupant of one of the houses gave him drink, and he cut away nearly the whole of the tree. I dismissed the man in consequence. The tree was destroyed before I was aware of it.
142. Do you not think it extremely undesirable that trees which take so long to grow should be destroyed in that way? I think it is; but the principle established first was a bad one, and it has been found difficult to refuse it since.
143. Did you say that authority was given to you to do this in the first instance? Yes.
144. Who gave you that authority? The Governor.
145. Which Governor? Sir Charles Fitz Roy, shortly after Mrs. Futter came out.
146. How did you get it? By a letter from the Private Secretary at the time; it was written under the direction of the Governor General. At that time the Governor had power over the Domain and Botanic Gardens, and could issue what orders he chose, as far as I understood; and upon the Governor's authority those regulations applied to the Botanic Gardens were issued, without reference to the Assembly.
147. But you would not, without express orders cut down any tree? No; I objected to do it at the time.
148. Has it not broken the continuity of the row of trees in front of the Domain? It has.
149. Those trees form the principal shelter in hot weather to any one wishing to see any spectacle going on in the Domain? They do. I may state that I have a document here ordering the Surveyor General to apportion out the ground, and constituting trustees. (The letter was read by witness, and handed in, together with letters to Colonel Barney, and instructions. Vide Appendices A, B, C, and D.)
150. Do you think on the whole that it is desirable those fences on the eastern and western side of the Domain should remain where they are? Do you mean on the cricket ground?
151. Yes? I still adhere to the answer I first gave. If it be intended that the public shall have free admittance, I cannot see what benefit will be derived from the fence. As to the fence, in a military point of view, I may state that a military man, who was speaking to me about it yesterday, observed, that in the event of deploying light infantry in skirmishing order, the fence would be a great obstruction.
152. By Mr. Dick: Do you think it adds to the beauty of the place? Oh, no; I do not think there can be two opinions about that—it certainly detracts from the beauty of the Domain. If, as I said before, it were the intention of the Government to give a grant of the land to the cricketers they would have a right to enclose the ground; but if the ground is to be preserved for the public generally—unless on the occasion of a grand match—I do not think these fences should remain.
153. Can you tell me the amount expended on the Domain, including the Gardens?
- (Exception was taken to this question, on the ground that the inquiry was limited to the Domain as distinct from the Botanic Gardens. Witness withdrew, and Committee deliberated. Witness having been re-introduced, was further examined.)
154. By Mr. Dick: Have you, as Director of the Gardens, control over the Domain? Yes.
155. What was the amount expended last year on the Domain? In salaries, £258—that is for the bailiff and overseer. I am paid as the Director of the Gardens, and my salary is not included in the expenditure for the Domain. The wages amounted to £600. Then there was a sum of £200 specially voted for the purpose of fencing in and preparing ground for planting trees (which has been expended), and £100 for keeping the roads in repair, and, also, £15 for miscellaneous expenses—that includes all, I think.
156. Is that money spent under your control? Entirely under my control—forwarding to the Government monthly vouchers of the expenditure.
157. Is the labour employed daily labour? Daily labour. The plan I pursue in reference to that daily labour is this: I draw the cheque, and give it to the overseer who pays the men; but before I allow any man under my control to put a pen to a pay voucher, I take the voucher up and say to him—"How many days have you been at work?" "How much money money have you received?"—and if the reply agree with the estimate I allow him then to sign it.

158. How many men do you employ? Six constantly, and extra men for preparing ground and fencing. I may state that that includes Government House and the Inner Domain. It does not include the kitchen garden of Government House, because with that I have nothing to do; it is supported at the private expense of the Governor.

159. What wages do these men receive per day? They receive six shillings and sixpence per day.

160. Are they lodged in the Domain? No.

161. Is the bailiff? Yes.

162. And the overseer? Yes.

163. What is the extent of the Outer Domain—how many acres does it contain? I do not know what the extent is. I have asked the question several times at the Surveyor General's Office, and have not been able to obtain the information.

164. This money is expended in permanent improvements? The £200 voted for planting trees is no doubt spent in permanent improvements. The native trees are dying off fast, and unless we make some preparation there will soon be no trees in the Domain. I am in hopes however, now, that before the gum trees are dead, the other young trees of a permanent character will have grown up.

165. And it is necessary to employ half a dozen men to keep the grounds in order? Yes. There are upwards of three miles of road; and if it were not for the carts attached to the Domain and the cart attached to the Botanic Gardens, it would be impossible to keep the roads in such repair as I now keep them at an expense of £100.

166. And that is the only estimate for the roads? Yes. We have also the advantage of obtaining gravel near to the Domain.

167. Who has the power to admit cows there? Only the Minister for Lands.

168. You have nothing to do with it? Nothing whatever; I refused the power.

169. Are the gates near to Governor Bourke's statue closed at night? They are not.

170. By Mr. Driver: You say that the opening of these gates at night gives rise to a great degree of immorality? I have no doubt of it.

171. Was not the same amount of immorality carried on there when the gates were closed? No, there was none.

172. None? We had then the power of turning them out. If they went in they had still to cross the gate, and we had the power of turning them out after dusk.

173. Under what authority? An old existing authority given by Governor Darling—that the Domain shall be closed at night, and that all persons found there after dusk should be turned out.

174. And have parties ever been turned out by you? Yes; after the gates were closed.

175. Are you not aware that a large number of the most respectable families visit that Domain after dark? No doubt they do.

176. A very large number of the most respectable families we have? I have no doubt of.

177. By Mr. Dick: How many gas lamps are there in the Domain? None.

178. Would you recommend that there should be some? If the Domain is to be left open at night—and it is, I apprehend, impossible to shut it now—there ought to be both gas lamps and police.

179. Would it then be an agreeable walk? Yes. No doubt, as Mr. Driver states, a great many respectable people visit the Domain in the evening; but I also know that it admits of great immorality.

180. By Mr. Driver: Are there any immoral practices carried on in the Botanical Gardens after dark? Not that I am aware of. The gates are shut.

181. But during the day have any complaints reached your ears? Yes; some complaints have been made, but in most cases the parties have been turned out. They have never been absolutely found in the act, but where there has been a suspicion of it they have been turned out.

182. Have not parties been brought before you apprehended in the act itself? On no occasion.

183. On no occasion? Not in the Gardens; in the Domain they have.

184. In no single instance? I do not recollect it.

185. Was not a gentleman in high position here once brought before you? No, sir, never. I have no recollection of it. Can you give me the date?

186. No, I cannot give you the date? Or any time about the period?

187. By Mr. Dick: What do you consider the boundaries of the Domain under your charge? The fence going round by Governor Bourke's statue to the Fort. That road going between the Gardens and round by the water is considered to be a part of the Domain, and up to Macquarie-street to where the Corporation take possession of the land. I suppose the Corporation consider that street under their control to the Fort.

188. Have you ever heard complaints of people bathing there in exposed positions? Yes, frequently.

189. Are you not aware that it is unpleasant to people driving past? I am sure it is.

190. Could you suggest any means by which it could be remedied? Do you refer to the public baths?

191. Anywhere about the Domain? I prevent it wherever it is known to exist; persons found bathing in such positions are immediately put out of the Domain.

192. I am now speaking of the bathers. Owing to the trees being destroyed it is quite possible for ladies driving past in their carriages to see the naked bathers—cannot that be remedied? A high fence might be erected in front of the place.

193. Might not some trees be planted to answer the purpose? The difficulty is to plant trees there. It is nothing but a bare rock on that side of the Domain. I found that difficulty

Esq.

- C. Moore, Esq.

- difficulty in almost every instance. I have been obliged to send a man round with a crowbar to try the ground. If the ground was like that of the Parramatta Domain we could accomplish a good deal with little money; but in some instances, as in that avenue leading from the upper gate to the Gardens, I was obliged to quarry the rock out to make the ground. It is not only expensive, but difficult to get trees to grow there. Stone pine, such as I have put in, will grow, I have no doubt.
194. By Mr. Driver: Has it come to your knowledge that parties are in the habit of passing themselves off as policemen in the Domain? I have heard numerous complaints of this being done.
195. Has the matter been referred to the Inspector General of Police? It has.
196. Has he taken any steps to put down the nuisance? I am not aware. I think the Committee would obtain a great deal of information if they were to examine the Inspector General of Police.
197. Are you not aware that, from time to time, sums of money have been extorted from gentlemen in that Domain by parties passing themselves off as policemen? I have heard of it, but I am not aware of any individual case which has absolutely come under my knowledge. I have heard it frequently.
198. Complaints have been made to you? Yes, repeatedly.
199. And no steps have been taken? Oh, yes. Captain M'Levie, some five or six nights ago, caused a policeman to go to apprehend these men; they were there in the daytime as well as during the night.
200. Are they not to be found about Palmer-street at all hours of the day? I have put the question to the bailiff, and he says he does not know it of his own knowledge, although he is watching this part. There was a man put out the other day—the son of an old man who kept cows in Phillip-street.
201. That is Rice? Yes; that man has been notorious.
202. By Mr. Dick: Would it not be possible to get some of those men who are out of work to attend as bailiffs? But I have no means to pay them, and the men I have must be skilled men, because they are obliged to mow, and do other work requiring previous training.

APPENDIX.

A.

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 20 January, 1867.*

Sir,

I am directed to draw your attention to the notice which appeared in the Government Gazette of the 26th ultimo, appointing you, Lieutenant-Colonel Barney, R.E., Captain Ward, R.E., and Messrs. W. C. Still, B. Driver, jun., and W. Tunks, trustees for the management and control of the portion of ground in the Outer Domain, the temporary use of which has been sanctioned by the Executive Council, subject to such rules and regulations as may be approved by the Council; and I am to refer you to Colonel Barney for any further particulars as to the terms of the appointment of yourself and co-trustees.

2. I am instructed to forward to you, for your information and guidance, a copy of a letter which has been addressed to Colonel Barney, in his capacity as trustee; also, a copy of another letter, addressed to him as the Surveyor General, and to request that you will protect the cricket ground, as well as render all the assistance in your power in the preservation of order; and that, with this view, you will, when necessary, communicate with the trustees directly.

I have, &c.,

MICHAEL FITZPATRICK.

Charles Moore, Esq.,
Director of the Botanic Gardens.

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 20 January, 1867.*

Sir,

I am directed to refer you to the notice which appeared in the Government Gazette of the 26th ultimo, appointing you, Captain Ward, R.E., Charles Moore, Esq., Director of the Botanic Gardens, and Messrs. W. C. Still, R. Driver, jun., and W. Tunks, trustees for the management and control of the portion of ground in the Outer Domain, the temporary use of which has been sanctioned by the Executive Council, subject to such rules and regulations as may be approved by the Council.

2. I am, at the same time, to inform you that the conditions upon which the temporary occupation of the ground has been granted, are as follows:—The trustees, who are removable at pleasure, include a representative of each of the three cricket clubs named in the margin, and three officers of the Government. These trustees will correspond with the Government, as representatives of the cricketers—will determine who shall use the ground for the purposes of the game—will be responsible for the good conduct of those to whom they may grant permission—will frame rules for their guidance—and will be bound to adhere to any regulations established by the Executive Council, as to the extent and use of the ground to be granted, and the preservation of order.

3. That the Director of the Botanic Gardens has been instructed to protect the cricket ground, and to render all the assistance in his power in the preservation of order, and with this view the Director and trustees should communicate directly.

4. A letter has been addressed to each of your co-trustees, referring them to you for full particulars as to the terms of their appointment, &c.

5. In reference to the letter which has this day been addressed to you, in your capacity of Surveyor General, requesting you to cause to be marked and described, the necessary ground for cricketing purposes, in the Outer Domain, in the situation indicated in the sketch therein enclosed, I am to observe that it is to be borne in mind that the iron hurdle fence is to enclose no more space than sufficient fully to protect the bowling ground, and that, on the occasion of matches, the requisite space is to be guarded by ropes, through rings attached to iron or wooden stakes. The necessary extent, in such cases, will be left to you and the Director of the Botanic Gardens to determine, with a view to make the matches as satisfactory as possible, at the same time giving the public as good a view of the game as is consistent, with a due regard to the wishes of the players. It must throughout be borne in mind too, that there is every wish on the part of the Government to encourage the cricketers, and to afford them all necessary facilities and protection, but that nothing will be sanctioned which shall withdraw any portion of the Domain from the control of the Government, as trustees for the public. The integrity of the Domain, as a public park, must not be violated.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE SYDNEY DOMAIN.

223

6. I beg to add that the Director of the Botanic Gardens has been instructed accordingly; and further, that under the authority of the Executive Council, the sum of £150 will be placed on the additional supplemental estimate for 1857, for protecting and improving the ground.

Lieut.-Colonel Barney, R.E.,

CHARLES MOORE, Director.

John

John Sutherland, Esq., M.P., called in and examined:—

- J. Sutherland, Esq., M.P.
26 Feb., 1861.
203. By the Chairman: You are Mayor of Sydney? Yes.
204. Have any complaints reached you with reference to a fence erected in the Domain by the cricketers, on the occasion of the late inter-colonial match? No official complaints.
205. Nothing officially? No.
206. From your knowledge of the ground, do you consider it desirable that that fence should remain as it is, or do you consider it an obstruction to the public convenience? I consider it an obstruction to the public, and am of opinion that it has no right to remain there as a permanent thing.
207. As principal Magistrate of the city, and from what you have heard yourself from the Director of the Botanical Gardens, is it your opinion that the irregularities to which reference has been made exist? I can only speak from hearsay. I have heard of them very often; but I have never been in the Domain during the night, and cannot speak from personal observation.
208. Have any overtures been made to the Corporation about handing over the Domain and Gardens to the Corporation? Not in my day.
209. Is there anything that you would suggest yourself, relative to the management of these public domains? I have heard a great many complaints about cows and horses being in the Domain in the day time, and I would suggest that they should be allowed in only from a certain time at night to a certain hour in the morning. I think there might be a good revenue derived from the Domain by letting it under certain rules. One of those rules should be that the cattle should only be admitted after a certain hour in the evening, and that they should be taken out before a certain hour in the morning—whatever hour might be most convenient to the public.
210. By Mr. Dick: Do you not think sheep would be best? I think sheep might be admitted at all hours of the day.
211. And that they would be better than cattle? Yes, if sheep could be got for it, they would be best for keeping down the grass and manuring the ground. I think one of the regulations should be that the parties should keep the grass down, by putting in a larger number of cattle, if necessary. I believe there are a number of cow-keepers round about the city that would give a good price for the Domain, subject to those restrictions.
212. By the Chairman: There is a portion of Hyde Park which runs along Elizabeth-street, and which now contains stones and pipes belonging to the Corporation—would it not be desirable to plant trees there, or take some other means of improving the place and doing away with its present unsightly appearance—can you suggest anything yourself? With reference to that portion of Hyde Park?
213. Yes? There is no doubt it would be advisable to have trees planted all along. I am not of opinion, however, that the trees which are now being planted in the portion of the Domain previously referred to are the best, or are proper. The portions I refer to are all those which constitute the flat on this side of the creek or cricket ground. There ought to be no trees there, but only round the walks. That portion of the ground devoted to the cricketers or the volunteers ought to be kept clear altogether.
214. By Mr. Dick: Do you think it desirable to light the Domain with gas? I think it very desirable.
215. From your knowledge of such matters, can you give us any estimate of what it would cost—what do they charge you for a lamp? Eleven pounds five shillings per year.
216. Do they put it down? Yes; and maintain the post.
217. By Mr. Driver: That is only where the gas is laid on? Yes. The agreement of the Gas Company with the Corporation is, that the lamps shall not exceed eighty yards apart. If the Corporation applies for lamps in a certain street where the gas is not laid on, they insist upon the lamps not being more than eighty yards from each other. They have very often refused to lay it down if the distance has been greater than that from lamp to lamp.
218. Do you think, if there were a larger number of turnstiles in the Domain, that the erection of the fence would be a nuisance, or interfere with the rights of the public in any way? I think it would interfere with the rights of the public to have any permanent fence erected in the Domain. I should not, as one of the public, object to any portion of it being fenced in for a few weeks for any particular purpose, such as the Inter-Colonial Cricket Matches; but I have heard the Hon. the Secretary for Lands state, that use is occupation and permanent title, and I have no doubt this would become a permanent title to the cricketers, or to any one else to whom permission might have been given.
219. We are speaking now of the fence itself? I consider it very objectionable to have any permanent fence there.
220. By Mr. Egan: Do you think it would be sufficient for all purposes to act upon the permission of the Executive Council, and in the event of a great match, guard the space by ropes through rings attached to iron or wooden stakes? Yes, I think it would be desirable to give the cricketers every encouragement in that way, so long as the fence was not permanent.
221. By Mr. Driver: A fence with running ropes you think would be a sufficient check to keep the public out? I think it would.
222. Are you not aware, that even upon the last occasion, many people rushed that fence and refused to pay? I believe a great number of the citizens were more inclined to rush the fence than they would have been to have got over the ropes, because they considered that it trespassed upon their rights.
223. While the iron hurdles were there, were you not aware that numbers of them were continually continually broken by the public? I have no doubt that they might have been. I recollect when the balloon was sent up here, I happened to be coming in myself, a large crowd of people were kept out and they were going to pull down the gates, and, I believe, that unless some parties had advised the crowd at the time, they would have taken the gates away. They considered that they had no right to be charged for admission.

224. Then, the whole entrance to the Domain was entirely barred? Yes; but I am aware that a large number did get in over the top of the fences, and would not pay.

Present:—

MR. DRIVER,
MR. EGAN,

MR. LACKEY,
MR. WILSON.

SILVANUS B. DANIEL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

John M'Levie, Esq., Inspector General of Police, called in and examined:—

225. By the Chairman: The object of this Committee is to inquire into the state and management of the Sydney Domain. Will you please state to the Committee what is your opinion as to its present management? The only matter in connection with the Domain that has occurred to me in my official capacity, is the keeping the gates open at night; I think that is very objectionable.

John M'Levie,
Esq.
1 Mar., 1861.

226. Do the police perform any duty in the Domain; and if so, what are the particulars of their duties? There is a Domain bailiff—one of the officers of the Domain—who is sworn in as a special constable, to enable him to perform a constable's duty when required. In addition to that, the Domain forms part or portions of certain beats in the city; and those portions are patrolled by constables the same as other portions.

227. By day and night? We cannot afford men to do it regularly at night, but they do frequently go in at night.

228. Are you aware of any indecencies that have taken place in the Domain, from your official knowledge, committed by improper persons of both sexes congregating there? Yes. About six weeks or two months ago, one of my inspectors, one Sunday night, reported to me that the scenes of immorality he saw there were beyond comprehension; he said there were—I am almost ashamed to say the number of persons he stated to be in a state of coition at the time, old and young.

229. Was that at a late hour of the evening? About ten o'clock; between nine and ten o'clock.

230. To what portion of the Domain does that refer? To all the Outer Domain; from the gate at Governor Bourke's Statue to Woolloomooloo Bay, to the eastward, and the southern boundary.

231. When this came to your knowledge, did you take any means to endeavour to suppress it? I have, on more than one occasion, mentioned the objection I had to the gates being open; and I expressed my conviction, that so long as the gates were left open such scenes would occur; but the Domain being under a Minister who is not in charge of my department I did not communicate officially to him. I was told by the Chief Secretary that the Minister for Lands had determined upon keeping the gates open, as he was of opinion that it would be depriving the citizens of a privilege to shut the gates.

232. The gates are in fact never shut? They are never shut. I may say it is the only place of public recreation that I have known to be so conducted; in all large towns of the mother country the gates of such places as this are shut at a certain hour of the night.

233. You would recommend then that the gates of the Domain should be closed at a certain hour? Yes; and in order that persons who would use the Domain as a place of healthful recreation after dark should not be deprived of that privilege, I would have a wicket with keys, one of which should be given to any householder or head of a family who might apply for it, on payment of a small fee, and they should bind themselves to use these keys for their own families alone. That is a practice pursued in some of the public squares in London, and also in Edinburgh. The Domain would by that means be used for the purpose for which it was intended—the healthful recreation of the public—instead of being as at present a haunt of vice and immorality.

234. You would not refuse admittance to the humbler class of persons? Certainly not; but the privilege should be confined to persons of respectable character in any class of life, who would make themselves responsible to the department under which the Domain is placed, or perhaps to the Domain-keeper that the key should be used for their own families alone. The fee should be a merely nominal sum.

235. Would you make any suggestion at all about the Domain being cleared of visitors at any time by the officers of the Domain? No; if you place it under these restrictions that would be unnecessary. It is to be inferred from the purpose for which the key would be given that it would be only used for a walk in the evening.

236. Has it ever been reported to you officially that improper persons personate constables and intimidate visitors, and that they have been known to extort money from them? Yes.

237. Has any prosecution taken place in such cases? Yes, a policeman some time ago—I

- John M'Lerie, Esq.
1 Mar., 1861.
- forget how far back—caught one man who had been personating a constable and extorting money under threats of prosecution from a gentleman, and he got two years imprisonment. I frequently hear of instances of that kind, not officially, but privately, because, of course, the same motives that induce the parties to give the money prevent them giving notice to the police. I knew an instance four years ago where a gentleman was fool enough to give £5 to a ragabond of that kind.
238. You have observed a fence lately erected in the Domain, round the cricket ground? Yes, for the late match.
239. From your knowledge of military tactics, will you state to the Committee whether you believe that fence would interfere with the evolutions of the troops or of the volunteers? In a military point of view, I have no hesitation in saying it would do so. Even before the fence was erected, there was scarcely room to review the volunteers; there was not room, in fact, at the late review, our movements were hampered for want of space.
240. Would it be possible for any large body of troops or volunteers to carry out their evolutions while that fence is in existence? Certainly not a body of any number; I should say, with that fence standing, we could not form in line 200 men.
241. By Mr. Wilson: Would it interfere with skirmishing? It would certainly. Skirmishing more particularly requires such an extent of ground, without interruption.
242. By the Chairman: Would you recommend that lamps should be placed in any portion of the Domain, for the better security of visitors in the evening? If admission to the Domain were limited according to my suggestion, I think a few lamps would be of great use.
243. By Mr. Lackey: How would you limit the right of admission—would you make any difference between different classes of persons? No, every householder in Sydney should have a right to a key on payment of a nominal fee, say half-a-crown; at the same time binding himself that the key should be used by his own family, and for proper purposes alone.
244. Would you give him the right of admission for none but his own family? And friends, of course.
245. Do you not think that if every householder in Sydney had the right of admission, the same improprieties would be likely to occur? No, because the very fact of respectable persons being present would act as a check on those who at present go there without any restraint.
246. By the Chairman: You think a greater number of respectable people would visit the Domain then? Yes.
247. By Mr. Driver: Are you not aware that a very large number of respectable persons are in the habit of walking in the Domain nightly? I have it from heads of families that they are prevented from taking their families there on account of the disgusting scenes they are liable to witness.
248. By Mr. Lackey: It is impossible to go without seeing what is going on? Yes; in fact, from what the police tell me, no father of a family would think of taking his children there after dark.
249. I suppose this is of nightly occurrence? It is of frequent occurrence, and no doubt nightly. There are a large number of the homeless female outcasts of Sydney who go into the Domain and live about the drains and holes, and no doubt they disseminate more disease among the youths of Sydney than it is possible to conceive.
250. By Mr. Driver: Are you aware in what particular parts of the Domain these scenes are carried on? Principally along the boundary wall behind this House, from the northern end to the gate, the whole way.
251. How long is it since the gates have been kept open? Some of them have been kept open for the last three years. There was a correspondence about it at that time; Sir William Denison took part in the matter, and it was brought before the Executive Council. Since then the Palmer-street gate and the gate at the statue have been left open to give the residents of Woolloomooloo the opportunity of going across. I believe the other gates have been ordered to remain open more recently.
252. You say you have received repeated complaints of the extortion of money by parties representing themselves to be constables? Not repeated; I have had such things mentioned to me on more than one occasion, and I have stated one instance where the police prosecuted one man and obtained a conviction. I tried to check it, and I fancy I did check it, because probably the steps I took became known to these rascals.
253. If the fence at the southern boundary of the cricket ground were removed, would it then interfere with the military or the volunteers? Yes, it would require that both the western and southern fences should be removed, to leave the space open, because the movements of any considerable body would be impeded by any part of the fence.
254. Why the western fence? Because it does not leave sufficient room for wheeling or advancing in line.
255. If the fence at the western boundary were brought back to the road, would not that remedy the objection? If that were done the objection on that side, with respect to military movements, would be removed at once, because they never would go beyond the edge of the road.
256. In your opinion would that fence be an obstruction to the free use of the Domain by the citizens, if a sufficient number of turnstiles were placed in it, and it were removed back to the road? No; it would be rather an improvement, because horsemen would not be able to go in and disturb children playing about there, as they do at present.
257. Without a fence is it not impossible to check horsemen from galloping over the place to the danger of the children? Certainly. I say so—that is, if the fence were removed altogether. I mean that, if the interior fence was removed, and extended round the road, I would look upon that as a great improvement.

258. Are you not aware that, before the erection of the fence, it was almost dangerous to nursemaids and children to use that portion of the Domain, in consequence of the continual galloping over it by horsemen? Yes. I know that, notwithstanding the order in existence in the Domain, I have seen men riding about there in the most reckless manner. Of course the fence would have to be extended some considerable distance to the eastward.
259. Nearly up to the walk leading from the Domain gate to the Botanical Garden? Yes; but even then, for the purpose of skirmishing, it would interfere with the movement of troops, unless you erected such a fence as men could get through.
260. With a portable fence on the eastern boundary, which could be removed on review days, would it not be a great improvement? Yes; that is, of course, if the public were not excluded from its use.
261. With a sufficient number of turnstiles, of course? Yes, and unlimited access to it.
262. In your opinion is the game of cricket worthy of encouragement? I look upon it as one of the most manly games we have, and I think it should be encouraged, certainly.
263. Do you consider that, except in the case of the inter-colonial contests, the occupation or use of that ground by the cricketers interferes at all with the general rights of the public? No, except that looking upon it as a piece of ground for the recreation of ladies and children, of course while they are playing cricket in one part of it children cannot go near.
264. But there would be plenty of room for them? Yes, of course, they could always keep away from the cricketers.
265. Have you any idea as to the number of cricketers in this city and suburbs? Judging from the numbers I see playing on Saturday afternoons I should say they were almost legion.
266. Have you any idea of the number of clubs? There must be a dozen perhaps.
267. By Mr. Wilson: When talking about the number of people you see playing cricket in the afternoon, do you allude to the number in the Domain? In the different parts of the city—Cleveland Paddock, University Paddock, Hyde Park, and the Domain.
268. By Mr. Driver: The players in Hyde Park are principally children? Yes.
269. Do not the trees on the eastern side of that portion of the Domain slightly interfere with skirmishing? No; for skirmishing purposes trees are an advantage; with them you can instruct the soldiers how to take advantage of cover, which is the principal thing in skirmishing; on cleared ground you cannot do that.
270. Have you any knowledge of the occupations of the various parties who make use of the Domain for cricketing? They are from every grade of society, in my opinion. If it would not be out of place, I would make a suggestion. As the city is increasing, no doubt, the number of cricketers would increase in the same ratio, and, I think, there is a piece of ground close to the boundary of the city where you might make the finest cricket ground in the world.
271. Where is that? Just at the junction of the Randwick Road with Dowling-street, extending, at the back of the barracks, to the Military Cricket Ground. That might be levelled with very little expense, and judging by the success of the Jockey Club with the Racecourse, I think, in twelve months there might be a fine green sward which would be an ornament to the city, instead of the eyesore it is at present. Irrespective of cricket, I think that ground ought to be made a place of public recreation, as it is close to the city, and at present a barren-looking place. If it were only for the sake of taking away that sand hill, and filling up the quarry from which the Barracks were built, it would be a great improvement. It would take nearly the whole of the sand hill to fill up that quarry.
272. By Mr. Wilson: You mean the quarry at the back of the Barracks where the water-hole is? Yes, where many persons have been drowned.

Mr. George Kemp called in and examined:—

273. By the Chairman: You are Bailiff of the Domain? Yes.
274. How long have you been so? Nearly seven years.
275. From whom do you receive your orders? From Mr. Moore.
276. The Director of the Botanic Gardens? Yes.
277. Will you state to the Committee what your duties are generally? My duties are to look after the plantations of young trees, to see that no damage is done to the fences, and to protect the public.
278. How do you mean, protect the public? From any insults or any obstruction—anything of that kind.
279. From improper persons in the Domain? Yes. To remove improper persons from the Domain, to impound cattle, and to exercise a general surveillance of the whole of the Domain—both the Outer and Inner Domain—and I had also the Gardens until lately; I have had nothing to do with the Gardens for the last six months; but previous to that I had the whole of it.
280. Are you sworn in as a constable? Yes.
281. Have you apprehended any persons for disorderly conduct? Sometimes I have had occasion to remove persons who have been interfering with people sitting on the seats, or molesting them when walking to and fro, and going or coming from the baths, or any other places.
282. Are annoyances of this kind of frequent occurrence? Not very frequent.
283. By whom are they principally committed? Generally by strangers.
284. Strangers to the Colony? Yes, frequently by the crews of ships; the first time they have

- Mr. G. Komp. have a cruise on shore they always come into the Domain and congregate about, more particularly to meet the females that have come in the immigrant ships. It is quite a usual thing for the seamen to come on Sundays into the Domain to meet these females, and they are not at all particular in their conduct—though of course if I see or hear anything offensive I always check it.
- 1. Mar., 1861.
285. Have any complaints been made to you, while on duty, by females, of persons interfering with them? Not very often.
286. Such has been the case? It has been the case.
287. What do you do then? I take proceedings against them.
288. In what way? Take them into custody.
289. Do you place them in the lock-up? Yes.
290. And proceed against them at the Police Office? Yes.
291. What has been the sentence on these occasions—fine or imprisonment? Generally imprisonment; but they are very rare occurrences.
292. How many cases have occurred during the last twelve months? I do not think I can mention a case where I have had any complaint from females in the last twelve months.
293. Do you do duty at night, as well as by day? Yes, so far as the impounding of cattle, and occasionally going round the Domain.
294. How many cattle are running in the Domain now? About forty—cows and horses.
295. To whom do they belong? To different gentlemen; Mr. Moore has a list of them. I make returns to him whenever he asks me.
296. Regularly? Yes. I gave him a list on the last day of the year.
297. A fence has lately been erected in the Domain, round the ground used by the cricketers? Yes.
298. Have there been any expressions of feeling that you have heard relative to that fence being an obstruction to the public? Yes.
299. What have you heard? I have heard people express their feelings against it in passing to and fro; and I have likewise heard many speak in favour of it. No one speaks against the cricketers themselves, but only against the fence. Although I have had the surveillance and overlooking of the cricketing since it has been established there, I have never had occasion to interfere with any of those gentlemen, neither have I ever heard one single complaint against them, but only against the fence.
300. Are you aware of any large number of people congregating about the baths and sleeping in the Domain? I know that they do sleep about the Domain.
301. Are they permitted to do so without interruption? Not if I see them; I always put them out of the Domain, but I have no power to do more than that; I have taken people to the Police Court, and the case has been dismissed for the want of my having power to act—judgment has been given against me.
302. By Mr. Driver: Have you any idea of the number of cricketers that play in the Domain? I think nearly three hundred, as far as I know.
303. Who are in the habit of constantly playing there? Yes, I should say there are that number. I have made an estimate of the number of persons that come into the Domain, which I think I can guarantee to be nearly correct. There are five entrances, and I calculate that at each entrance there is one person comes in per minute, or 25,200 per week, or 1,310,400 in a year; and with this astonishing number of persons passing in and out of the Domain, I am the only person that does duty in it; and, consequently, the duties are very onerous. I am on my feet, generally, fourteen hours a day, and I have to do night duty sometimes as well. I have got the impounding of cattle to see to, and I am beset with people coming and rushing the cattle from me, often in the middle of the night, and I have no protection though I have applied for it.
304. To whom have you applied? I have reported it frequently to Mr. Moore, and I have asked the police to assist me.
305. Do you think the erection of that fence is an obstruction to the general public? As far as my own view of the case goes, I do not think that, with proper gates, it is any obstruction.
306. With proper turnstiles? Just so, because with turnstiles there is plenty of room to pass in and out.
307. Since the cricketers obtained permission to play there, have not more persons been in the habit of using that portion of the Domain? The cricketing has brought in a great number of people.
308. What class of persons? All classes.
309. Is it not frequented on Saturday afternoons by a larger number of respectable families than frequented it before the cricketers commenced there—that particular portion of the Domain? Yes, the Domain is more and more frequented every year. These things attract the people to the Domain—people of all sorts and grades.
310. You have heard something about scenes of vice and immorality there? I have.
311. Do you think that would be checked in any way by closing the gates at night? Yes, I do.
312. Before the opening of the gates—the gate at the Statue and the Palmer-street gate—did not large numbers of persons congregate in the Domain in the evening, from round by the Battery and other places? Yes; there were people that would get over the gates at all times, but not such a concourse of people as at present.
313. Are you not aware that since the opening of these gates, the Domain has been visited nightly by a very large number of respectable families? No doubt but what there are in the early part of the evening a number of very respectable people, and at the same time there is not the slightest doubt that there are improper persons who come in for improper purposes.

314. Who would find their way there under any circumstances? They would. Mr. G. Kemp.
315. By the Chairman: You are speaking of after dark? Yes.
316. Do you think with more police protection, that would be checked at all? I think it is very much required, and I would put a check to it. 1 Mar., 1861.
317. By Mr. Driver: Have any complaints been made to you of any attempts to extort money from respectable persons in the Domain, by parties disguised as policemen? I have heard of that ever since I have been in the Domain, but I have never been able to get at a single case. It has always come out when I have pushed them, that they have heard it; that some friend has told them. I never could get to the bottom of a single case. I have never known it myself.
318. I suppose you are aware that at certain times, large numbers of idlers frequent the Domain? Yes.
319. By the Chairman: Persons that are well known to you as idlers? Not many that are well known to me. I think I can safely say that there are not more than half-a-dozen that I may term habitual idlers.
320. By Mr. Driver: These fellows are continually there? They are mostly there, one or two in particular.
321. By the Chairman: Could you suggest anything yourself respecting the management of the Domain? I beg leave to say that for the first two years I was there I had a policeman to co-operate with me, and I found it a great benefit; but he has been withdrawn from me four years, and I have had the whole of the duty to perform myself night and day. I think, when you look to the number of people who pass in and out of the Domain, you will see that it is necessary I should have some assistance. In the numbers I have given, I do not include such days as the review day, or when there were ten thousand people there to see the cricketing, but only those who ordinarily frequent the Domain. Sometimes fights take place there for a certain sum of money; I have been amongst them, and tried to suppress it, and have sometimes got very ill treated; I have been obliged then to go to Darlinghurst to get the police, and probably I may get a couple, but by the time we get back, they are all gone—the fight is over. What I have hitherto done in the way of keeping order, when it has been necessary to interfere, has been as much through moral force as anything else—by persuasion I mean. If I take a man into custody, or if I summons a man for anything, it takes me perhaps two hours away from the Domain, and next day it takes me more than half-a-day attending the Police Office, and often the case is put off; and, after all, if the party employs an attorney, it is likely to go against me. I wish to name a case in point.—About twelve months ago, I was ordered to remove a man from the Domain, because he brought in a standing stall and put it up, which is not allowed; I took him into custody, and the case was tried at the Court, and judgment was given against me; the man afterwards brought an action against me, and laid damages at £30, and in that likewise judgment was given against me. The damages were only fixed at one farthing, but it shewed that I had no power to take anybody up when I see them erecting stalls, &c., wheeling in fruit, and selling it from baskets, and frequently such has been the case, but I have no power to act.
322. By Mr. Egan: You are sworn in as a special constable, are you not? Yes. In this case I was obliged to pay my own expenses, although I was carrying out a duty there, in doing what I was ordered to do.
323. By Mr. Lackey: You said that there were improprieties carried on in the Domain at night between men and women who go in there? I do not know it as an absolute fact; but when I go round I see people sitting about and lying about.
324. Do you know it from information you have received? I have been told that such things are of common occurrence, and my own opinion is that there is very little doubt but what these things are done, but it is a difficult thing to get hold of a case.
325. Has it ever come to your knowledge that these improper practices are carried to such an extent as to prevent respectable parties using the Domain in the evening as a place of recreation? I do not think it is; I think there is a great deal of exaggeration about it.
326. By the Chairman: You have seen respectable families there? Yes, up to ten o'clock at night; but still depraved characters come in.
327. By Mr. Lackey: You range the Domain at night? I do. My duty extends from five o'clock in the morning to eight o'clock at night.
328. At any time that you have been out at night have any of these occurrences come under your own observation? Never, and I have been up at all hours.
329. These practices could hardly have been carried on to the extent sometimes reported without you seeing them? I must have seen some of them, and if I had I should have taken them into custody instant.
330. Is the Domain used extensively as a place of recreation by respectable families? Up to ten o'clock at night, especially moonlight nights.
331. Do you think it would be any advantage to the Domain to have a few gas lamps there? I think it would, but what we want is a patrol there. In St. James' Park and the Green Park at Home they have seven lodges and twelve policemen on duty by day and twenty-four at night, and here I am by myself.
332. By Mr. Driver: Do you not frequently walk from the gate at the Statue round the back of this wall towards the other gate in the evening? Yes.
333. Do you find that the irregularities we have been speaking of frequently take place in that particular locality? I find people lying about there a good deal, and generally speaking of that character, that I put out of the Domain every day more or less. But generally speaking the parties who lie about the Domain are decrepit old shepherds who come down here periodically from the country, and after spending what money they have they cannot get back, but they loiter about the Domain, and some go to the Benevolent Asylum. You may

Mr. G. Kemp: may pick out six or seven every morning before breakfast. The old women are the most troublesome to me, I am continually putting them out.

1 Mar., 1861. 334. You speak of large numbers of persons sitting together of an evening in the Domain, do you not see a large number of persons seated together along the walks in Hyde Park also? Yes.

335. By Mr. Egan: And on the grass too? Yes, everywhere.

336. These immoral practices are not carried on to your knowledge? Not to my knowledge. If I see a young man lying down beside a female I generally walk up and say, you must not lie here, you may sit on the seats, and they generally remove at once.

337. Do you ever find any person object to your authority in that way? No, generally they are very quiet.

338. You never saw anything to offend against public decency? Very little indeed. The cases I have had to bring forward during the number of years I have been there have been comparatively insignificant. I am sure that if anything of the kind were to prevail to the extent that they say it does, I must know it, I do not mean to say it does not take place; but all these things are generally hearsay, if I press a person about anything, he generally says some person told him.

Mr. David Wilson called in and examined:—

Mr. D. Wilson. 339. By the Chairman: What position do you hold? I am overseer over the Domains and Hyde Park.

1 Mar., 1861. 340. Have you any connection with the Gardens? None at all.

341. From whom do you receive your orders? From Mr. Moore, the Director of the Gardens; he is my superior officer.

342. Will you please to state generally what your duties are? To superintend all the men employed in the Outer and Inner Domains, in the grounds about Government House, and in Hyde Park.

343. Do you perform any duty at night? No, only during the daytime.

344. As overseer over the workmen generally? Yes.

345. Were you overseeing the men during the erection of the fence on the ground where the cricketers play? No, I had nothing to do with the erection of that fence.

346. Are you sworn in as a constable, or connected with the police in any way? No, I have nothing to do with the police. My duty is to superintend the labouring men on whatever works may be going on in the Domains, Government House, and Hyde Park. Whatever men are employed there, are under my directions.

347. By Mr. Lackey: Are the plantations under your superintendence? Yes, everything where work is going on.

348. By Mr. Driver: Have you observed that large numbers of respectable families visit the Outer Domain in the evening after dark? I know a great many people of all descriptions; I see a very great deal of impropriety carried on at night.

349. You see it carried on? I am living at the lodge, and I see so many people coming out and in of all descriptions—it is becoming quite a nuisance.

350. But your gate is closed? Not now; I have had instructions within the last week to leave the gates open entirely; otherwise it was always shut at nine o'clock. At one time it was shut at eight o'clock, but we found so many respectable people walking about that they were continually making application to get out; they would come in at the gate near the Statue, or at the Palmer-street gate, which were always open, and make their way to our gate; but we thought that any one who had business in the Domain—even for pleasure—it was time they were out at nine o'clock.

351. What were the improprieties you were speaking of? Women of disreputable character would hang about the gate and solicit men until eleven o'clock at night.

352. Have you taken any steps to check it? It was no part of my duty; I had no instructions.

353. Have you reported it to Mr. Moore? Yes, frequently. Every day, when anything particular comes under my notice, I report to him.

354. These things, as I understand you, have taken place immediately outside the lodge gates? The people assembled close up to the gate, and even after nine o'clock, if they had the chance of anyone going out and in—that was when the gates were shut at nine o'clock, which they have been till lately.

355. You yourself have taken no steps to put it down? No, I have nothing to do with it.

356. Have you, inside the Domain itself, seen anything improper? I have seen women and men going out and in frequently, but I do not make a practice of following them, or even to turn them out.

357. Have you not seen large numbers of respectable persons there every night? No question but I have seen them there every night, but I do not make it a practice to follow them, or even to know where they are going.

358. Mr. Kemp, the bailiff of the Domain, is almost continually on the alert, is he not? It is his place.

359. Is he not almost continually on the alert? As far as I know he is, but I do not interfere.

360. Do you not frequently see him walking about of an evening? I do during the summer time, when the evenings are light, but in the winter season I do not see him because it is dark by the time we leave off work.

361. Mr. Kemp is the only person in connection with the Domain whose duty it is to look after these things? Yes.

362. And he has no assistance whatever? No. If any respectable lady, or any one that is ^{Mr. D. Wilson.} insulted, comes up to my house to complain, I interfere in such as that, or report it to Kemp.
363. Are you not aware that a very large number of persons are in the habit of crossing ¹ the Domain of an evening, from boating and other excursions? After my duties are over, at six o'clock, I do not go much in the Domain, but I know a great number of people frequent the thoroughfare from Woolloomooloo up to Bourke's Statue, and all parts of the Domain.
364. Including respectable families? Yes; but there are a good many bad characters of late.
365. By Mr. Egan: You go by their appearance? Yes. What I go by is, that I hear them; they will sit there and sing the most blackguard songs you can imagine.
366. Outside the gate? Yes.
367. You have called Mr. Moore's attention to this, you say? I have named it to him frequently.
368. Were these persons in the habit of congregating outside your gate before the gates were kept open? Yes, frequently; in fact the gates were never locked till nine o'clock, and they made a regular practice to attend there.
369. Then keeping open the gates does not increase the nuisance at all? Well, I do not know that it does. They want some policemen to put a stop to these people going out and in as they do.
370. By the Chairman: Do you think if a few gas lamps were placed round the walks it would be of any benefit at all? I think they would be very beneficial; there is a place for a lamp over the gate. If there were lamps it would expose anything to sight; but it is a dark miserable place there in the winter time. A great many bad characters go and sleep all night in the bushes, and under the rocks, towards Lady Macquarie's Chair, which I am aware of, for I see them go in at dusk, and out in the morning—a parcel of little boys and girls, from ten to fifteen years of age. There were about half-a-dozen coming out one Sunday morning, about seven o'clock, and I asked them where they had been so early, and they said they had been there all night.

WEDNESDAY, 6 MARCH, 1861.

Present:—

MR. EGAN,
MR. HAY,

MR. LACKEY,
MR. PARKES,

MR. WILSON.

JOHN BOWIE WILSON, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Richard Jones, Esq., called in and examined:—

371. By the Chairman: You are Vice-President of the Cricketing Association? I am one of the Vice-Presidents. ^{R. Jones, Esq.}
372. Are you aware of the terms on which the Cricketing Association have obtained the privilege of using the ground in the Domain on which matches are played? I can ⁶ scarcely say I am. Although one of the Vice-Presidents, I have not taken much part in the proceedings generally. ^{Mar., 1861.}
373. Are you aware that part of the Domain has been fenced in with a permanent fence, said to be so for cricketing purposes? Yes, that came under my observation at the late Inter-Colonial Cricket Match.
374. Do you think it advisable on the part of the Government to allow such an appropriation of the public lands for that purpose? As the Domain has been set aside for public recreation generally, I do not think the Government are justified in giving to the Cricketers, or any other body, any kind of exclusive occupation which would interfere with the general enjoyment of the Domain by the public at large. At the same time, I think that on exceptional occasions, such as the Inter-Colonial Cricket Matches, provision might be made to allow such an occupation, for some two or three days, as would give those who have got up the Cricket Match some means of reimbursing themselves for the expenses to which they have been put. I see no objection to provision of that kind being made, provided it did not extend beyond the time for which the match was to be held.
375. Are you of opinion that cricketing might be carried on in the Domain, for practice, without a permanent fence standing there all the year round? I think it might.
376. Do you think the fence as it stands is an improvement to the Domain? I think it is an eyesore. I may add, however, that I see no objection to some kind of fence, or railing, or ropes, being put round that large plot in the middle of the Domain, so as to exclude horses and cattle from the enclosure, and which would make it available, not only for cricketing purposes, but for reviews, and other purposes of a like kind, and also give a certain kind of security to women and children in taking recreation in that portion of the Domain.
377. When you speak of fencing in a portion with ropes, do you allude to that part which is used for bowling, or to the whole of that plot of ground? The whole of that piece of the Domain which is enclosed by the road running from Bent-street, then striking off at right angles to the gate at St. Mary's, and back again to the entrance at Bent-street—or nearly the whole of that portion.

378.

- R. Jones, Esq.
6 Mar., 1861.
378. By Mr. Egan: That would be nearly the whole of that side of the Domain from the road? Yes, a good portion of it.
379. Do you not think that if so large a portion of ground was fenced in, in the manner you speak of, it would be very expensive to the Government by having to cut the grass and keep it in a fit state—to prevent fires for instance from taking place if the grass were allowed to become long and dry? I think provision might be made for keeping down the grass by allowing sheep to be turned in occasionally.
380. I suppose you are aware that no sheep come to Sydney now since the abattoirs have been finished? I am not aware of that.
381. Still you are of opinion that a place like that, dedicated to the public, ought not to be placed in such a position that the people generally cannot enjoy it? I think so. I think the rights of the whole public ought to be very jealously guarded, and that such privileges should not be given to any number of individuals as would enable them to exclude the general public.
382. You see no objection to allowing the use of that portion of the Domain to the cricketers during the period of a match—but you would give them no further exclusive right? No; nor to any other body. I may say, however, that perhaps the cricketers are better entitled to such privileges as can be granted than any other body of the people who might seek the use of the Domain for purposes of amusement; because I think that cricket is one of the very best games that the people can engage in.
383. By Mr. Parkes: Have you turned your attention at all to the management of the Domain—whether it would be better if it were vested in trustees than under the control of the Government of the day? I have not turned my attention to that matter, and, therefore, I should scarcely care about expressing a hasty opinion.
384. You are aware that the Domain is at present under the control of the Secretary for Lands? Yes.
385. I was going to ask your opinion whether, considering the purposes to which it is dedicated, it is under the best possible management? I scarcely see why this particular Domain should be under the control of the Secretary for Lands, any more than any other public recreation ground in any part of the Colony, as a matter of principle; and if trustees form the best agency under which recreation grounds generally can be managed, I see no reason why this Domain should form any exception to the rule.
386. Do you think it would not be better in the hands of an elective trust, on behalf of the citizens? I am disposed to think it would.
387. By the Chairman: Have you been in the habit of going into the Domain? I am in there pretty frequently.
388. Did you ever witness any improprieties in the Domain? I cannot say I recollect ever seeing any impropriety in the Domain. I stroll occasionally round by Lady Macquarie's Chair, in the after part of the day, but I never recollect in any single case seeing any impropriety.
389. You are not in the habit of being in the Domain after sundown? No, I am scarcely ever there after five or six o'clock.

Captain Edward Wolstenholme Ward, R.E., called in and examined:—

- Capt. E. W. Ward, R.E.
Mar., 1861.
390. By the Chairman: You are one of the trustees nominated by the Government to look after cricketing interests in the Domain? I am.
391. Would you be kind enough to state to the Committee the duties you are expected to perform as trustee? The original instructions to the trustees were sent to them in letters, dated 20th January and 3rd March, 1857, which I understand have been already laid before the Committee. The permission contained in them pretty well ran thus,—To keep enclosed with a temporary or removable fence a space of 60 yards square, to protect the bowling ground against the invasion of horses and cows, but, whenever a match was played, we might extend the enclosure to 200 yards square. Practically, we found it very inconvenient to shift the fence for every match, and the limited space of 60 yards square did not allow of play; therefore, having once or twice shifted the hurdles, we finally left them enclosing the larger space. In fact, the expense of shifting them for every match was more than we could provide for. Mr. Moore, the Director of the Botanic Garden, who has immediate charge of the Domain, thereupon very properly told us we were acting without instructions, and, after the trustees had considered the matter, they came to the following resolution:—"That it was unnecessary to apply for the authority suggested by Mr. Moore, but that Mr. Moore had done his duty in bringing this matter under the consideration of the trustees, and was free from any participation in their act." No one really objected to this extension of the hurdles; we did not exclude anybody from the enclosure, which was merely meant to keep out horses and cows, and there was no invasion of the public rights; so that, although we were acting against the letter of our instructions, we were really acting pretty well in accordance with their spirit. These hurdles were then left in that way during summer, and taken up for the season generally on the 24th of May, and occasionally for reviews. Thus the matter went on for four years. We found, however, that it was very expensive to keep the hurdles up—boys would break them, some cows would jump over or through them; and some persons who thought their cows, which are allowed to run in the Domain by permission of the Government, wanted more provender, would take them up. The consequence was, that the ground was damaged, and the play really spoilt. Cricket could not be encouraged under such circumstances. It did not appear to me that there would be an invasion of any public right to erect a permanent fence, of a character to keep out horses and cows, through which as many turnstiles might be be made as the public might require, but which would, at the same time, keep them from scampering over the ground on their horses. A fence of a permanent character, too, would be less expensive, because we should not have to repair it every year, as was the case with the hurdles, which were constantly being injured. Previous to this, I may say that petitions had poured in from the Cricketers' Association, and others, to the Government, asking for some fence of this character, which were laid aside to be considered. At last, finding nothing was being done, I saw Mr. Cowper personally. It was also a matter of pounds, shillings, and pence, with those who supported cricket, for, if we could not get the fence we required, we could not have the annual match with Victoria, as we could not have raised the necessary funds. I therefore waited on Mr. Cowper with a minute explaining what it was the Cricketers' Association wanted, which I will read:—"The Cricketers' Association of Sydney respectfully request:—

Capt. E. W.
Ward, R.E.
6 Mar., 1861.

"1. That the Government would surround, with an ornamental fence, that portion of the Outer Domain, bounded on the north by the shrubbery near Sir Richard Bourke's Statue; on the west and south-west by the road leading from the Statue to the lodge, by the Immigration Barracks; and on the east and south-east by the walk leading from the lodge to the Upper Botanic Gardens."

My idea was, that the whole of that particular piece should be enclosed, so that the volunteers might review in it; there might be fountains or trees put inside of it, and the public might be allowed—particularly women and children—to go in and out as much as they chose, and be afforded protection from the galloping of horsemen, and, at the same time, the cricket ground might be protected from damage. That fence would have enclosed a much larger space than that which is there now. The minute I was reading continued as follows:—

"The fence might be 4 feet 6 inches high, open, and of a character ornamental to the Domain. It should be furnished with (say) three carriage or cart entrances, and a turnstile, or a swing-gate or two, for the ready entrance of those on foot. The enclosure would thus serve for cricket, for reviews, or for any other purpose the Government might desire, and being placed under the management of trustees—removable at pleasure by the Government—would be entirely under the control of the Executive.

"2. The Cricketers' Association also desire permission to form a junction with the water main leading to the Botanic Gardens, from which to lead a hose to water the cricket ground, as occasion may require. They are willing to do this at once at their own expense.

"3. Lastly, the Association request permission to erect an ornamental pavilion of a design approved by Government in some part of the proposed enclosure, to be used as a stand from which cricket matches may be viewed; as a place of refreshment for cricketers; and of custody for the clothes, bats, &c., &c. The cost of such pavilion is estimated at £300, and should the Government not be willing to obtain a vote from Parliament for this purpose, the Association will erect it as soon as they can obtain sufficient funds from other sources. It is, however, suggested that it might be put near the lodge end of the enclosure, backed by an ornamental shrubbery, and thus form part of a general Government expenditure for adding to the attractions of the Domain.

"The fence, if approved of, is urgently required before the 12th February, on which day the grand match with Victoria will take place. The connexion with the water main is yet more urgent, in order to improve the ground.

"The cricket ground belonging to the Melbourne Cricket Club is provided with all these requirements, and is held by the clubs on similar terms."

Mr. Cowper granted at once the putting on the water, and the rest remained for consideration for some time. At last I took Mr. Robertson on to the ground and talked the matter over with him. He thought the whole enclosure as asked for would be too much, and permission was ultimately given to run a permanent fence on each side, and a removable fence at the end, which could be taken away when there happened to be a review. The fence on this side was kept further back towards the road, and the fence on the other side was removed back through the trees so as not to interfere with reviews. I sent in a plan of the proposed fence, which is now in Mr. Robertson's hands, with this letter:—(Letter read,—same as Appendix A. to Mr. Robertson's evidence at page 16.) To that letter I received the following letter:—

"Department of Lands,
Sydney, 31 January, 1861.

"Sir,

"In reply to your letter of the 25th instant, I am directed to inform you, that the Secretary for Lands has approved of the enlargement of the enclosure to the cricket ground in the Outer Domain, in accordance with the plan and specification forwarded by you, and which are herewith returned.

"2. I am at the same time to add, that the necessary funds, amounting according to the estimate submitted by you to the sum of £165, will be placed on the Estimates for this year, and submitted to Parliament.

"I have, &c.,
"MICHL. FITZPATRICK."

"Captain Ward, R.E.,
" &c., &c.,
"Sydney.

That was the sanction we had asked, for to put up the fence at once, and we immediately proceeded to act upon it. The plan and specification which I sent to Mr. Robertson has been exactly carried out.

392. After the receipt of this letter then, the Cricketing Association put up the fence themselves? Yes, we at once set to to put it up, and we decided to take the risk whether Parliament would vote the money or not, the Cricketers' Association having previously passed Capt. E. W. Ward, R.E. passed a minute to the effect that if Mr. Robertson would consent to put the amount on the Estimates, we would take the risk of its being rejected.

6: Mar., 1861. 393. Was any objection stated by the officers of the Government when they saw the fence being erected? Not to me. I may say that I had talked over the subject with Mr. Moore some twelve months before, with a view to ascertain whether he could not join the ornamentation of the Domain with the fence which I proposed; and Mr. Moore seemed, I thought, half inclined to the idea; he said (so I understood) he thought he could plant trees inside, in such a manner as to form a lounge underneath for those who might be looking on at the cricketers.

394. I think you said you applied for an ornamental fence? Well, it was certainly our wish that it should be as ornamental as possible; but, under the circumstances in which we were placed—

395. I was going to ask whether you consider the fence now erected an ornamental one? I do not mean to say it is; but it was not inferior, certainly, in that respect to other fencing in the Domain, and as much as we could do for the money at our command; we adopted the plan of the fences which Mr. Moore has been putting about the trees in Hyde Park.

396. I suppose you are aware that the fences erected in Hyde Park are only temporary—that they are merely put there to guard the young trees, and are intended to be removed? I did not know that.

397. As a military man, are you of opinion that this fence would not interfere with reviews, skirmishing particularly? It would not interfere with any reviews if they take the end down, which can be done.

398. We have it stated in evidence by a military man, that the fence on the lower side would interfere with skirmishing? It would not exercise much ingenuity on the part of a military man to avoid that, by skirmishing first in the direction of the lodge, and then changing front to the left; so far it would interfere, but no further.

399. By Mr. Hay: That might be very good practice too? Yes, certainly.

400. By the Chairman: Are we to understand that that fence, as erected now, is not the ornamental fence originally proposed by the cricketers? Yes; what we originally proposed was that the whole of that plot of ground should be enclosed with an ornamental fence, within which there might be fountains, and so on, eventually; but the character of this fence is precisely that I proposed to Mr. Robertson, and submitted a plan and specification of with my letter of 28th January last.

401. Do the public interfere much with the cricketers in their ordinary practice? Very little. One or two are troublesome occasionally. We do not assert any right to keep them off. As a rule the trustees treat everybody very civilly, and never allow the cricketers themselves to claim a right to turn people off.

402. Your object in putting up the fence was chiefly to enable the cricketers to collect sufficient money to defray the expenses of the Inter-Colonial Match? Yes; and to keep horses and cows off the ground at other times. Our object never was to keep people out of that part of the Domain, and, as a matter of fact, we never have done so. As the trustees hardly ever meet, I virtually have been the trustee, and I certainly have never sanctioned keeping people out of that enclosure, except on occasions of the great Inter-Colonial Matches; so that they have been kept out at most on four occasions in four years.

403. Are you aware that there is a piece of Government land near the Victoria Barracks unoccupied at present? Yes, I am aware of that; and I am also aware that Mr. Robertson offered us land both at Randwick and elsewhere for the cricketers; but the Cricketers' Association said very justly that you could not possibly expect the large number of persons who live in Sydney and wish to have a little recreation at cricket in the afternoon, to walk out that distance after their day's work is over; and in fact that giving them a piece of ground at Randwick would stop cricket altogether, except among those living near there. But in the Domain, not only the cricketers, but a very large number of the people of Sydney lounge every Saturday afternoon.

404. By Mr. Egan: For that purpose you would not require any fencing? Yes; we want to keep the cows and horses off, in order that the ground may be maintained in a fit state for play. There are a large number of cows and horses let into the Domain by privilege, and people ride across the ground when it is not fenced, and we used to find that the ground, which it costs us a good deal to keep in repair, was very much cut up.

405. That small hurdling would have prevented that? No, it did not do so effectually; if you went down there of a morning, you would find the place full of cows. I called one or two meetings on account of complaints made by cricketers, that the hurdles were broken, and the cows let in. They asked me to call a meeting, to consider the question of cattle trespassing in the enclosure; and at last I thought the only practical course was to speak to Mr. Cowper about the erection of a more permanent fence.

406. By the Chairman: My object in referring to the vacant ground near the Military Barracks was, to ask whether if put in order it would not supply your want? I do not think you would find many persons who would go out there; but the Domain is within easy reach, and it forms a good lounge for lookers-on, as well as for the players resident in Sydney.

407. The Domain is not very largely used by the cricketers of Sydney for practice? It is open to any club or individual under certain rules. I may state the rules we have for that. The trustees were applied to by the cricketers some time in 1858, upon this resolution of the Cricketer's Association, to throw open the ground for general practice and play on payment of certain fees; on that the trustees passed these rules. The conditions were these:—"1. Any recognised cricket club will be entitled to practice during the season " on the ground set apart by the trustees for that purpose, on payment of a fee of ten pounds.

"2. Any individual, not member of a recognised club, may become entitled to a similar privilege, on payment of a fee of one pound. 3. The charge for matches will be as heretofore, and in addition to the above. 4. All fees must be paid in advance. 5. The sums collected, will be applied to the maintenance of the ground."

Capt. E. W. Ward, R.E.

6 Mar., 1861.

408. Will you be kind enough to state how many clubs have availed themselves of the privilege? At the present time four clubs have paid up or guaranteed their subscriptions—namely, the National, the Albert, the University, and the Warwick. There are some other clubs in arrears, but they may pay up and continue their practice there, for instance, the Surrey Club, and the Survey Club, who have each paid £10. Numbers of clubs engage the ground on Saturdays, under that rule I have read, which provides for playing matches, and you will see by this list that it is engaged up to the 20th of April. I mention this, just to shew that the ground is universally used.

409. Are you aware how many cricket clubs there are in Sydney? One way or another, I dare say there are 15 or 20 so-called clubs, in Sydney and the suburbs, I don't know how many there are in Sydney alone; I have heard that number of names, but I may be overstating them.

410. By Mr. Egan: Have you heard any persons complain that the putting up of that fence is an infringement on the rights of the public? I have seen those letters in the papers, but nobody has complained to me personally. I do not think that if you called for a petition against it, you would find it very numerously signed.

411. Do you not think that fence, as it stands, is very unsightly? Well, I admit, that it is not so good a one as I should like to see, but we were doing it at our own expense, and we could not afford to spend too much on it. These matches with Victoria cost us, on the average, £400 or £500 a year. We have to engage men, some at five guineas a week, to practice, and we have to give them, or for them, £25 to £40 each, when they go to Victoria, what with one expense and another.

412. Have you any idea what amount was realised for the use of the ground during the last match? Some £500.

413. Does that include the admission fee to the public? Yes. That, with the subscriptions, has to carry us over two years. Next year, when we shall have to send our men to Melbourne, we shall have all the expenses to pay, and nothing to receive; and although we have now about £500 in hand, the expenses of the two years generally work us out of pocket.

414. You do not think the present enclosure keeps the public out in any way? No; they can come in as they please, and we are always very glad to see them there.

415. Do you think any land dedicated to the public, should be infringed on in any way by erecting fences, except of an ornamental character? We do not take the land away from the public, and I do not think we interfere with any public right. I do not think it is a public right to gallop over that piece of ground, or to drive upon it; Mr. Moore would stop it if he could.

416. During the time of the late match, were there not carriages, drays, and carts, all over the ground? On such occasions we could not keep the public off; and I do not think it desirable that we should. It is the same at reviews. But still, I do not think Mr. Moore would allow the public, on other occasions, to drive across that part of the Domain. I confess I do not see that we have interfered with any public right. The good anticipated from the fence was the encouragement of the game of cricket; and, I certainly think, that if it is not encouraged in some way, it will cease altogether for want of means to keep it up.

Mr. William Tunks, called in and examined:—

417. By the Chairman: You are one of the trustees appointed by the Government for the cricket ground in the Domain? Yes. Mr. W. Tunks.

418. Are you aware how much ground was originally set apart by the Government for cricketing purposes? Yes; 60 yards by 40 in the centre of the ground, with the occasional use of the paddock. 6 Mar., 1861.

419. By the paddock you mean the large enclosure? Yes; a space of about 200 yards square.

420. For several years past you have had a hurdle fence round the larger portion of 200 yards? Yes; but the space fenced in became less every time we took the hurdles up, as they became diminished in quantity by getting out of repair.

421. Was that fence made permanent with the sanction of the Government? No; it was removed at the end of every cricketing season.

422. On whose application was the present wooden fence put up? I cannot say who immediately applied for that. I have not attended the last meetings of the trustees.

423. Do you know who granted the authority for it? I understood Mr. Robertson did.

424. Do you consider that that permanent fence is necessary for cricketing purposes in the Domain? As it is arranged I do not look upon a large portion of it as permanent; I never had any idea of the central portion being permanent—it is a shiftable fence.

425. That shiftable portion remains there still? Yes.

426. Are you aware of any reason why it has not been removed? I understood that it was to be removed when there was any occasion for it, but in the mean time it remains to protect the ground.

427. Are you aware what quantity of ground is enclosed within that fence? No; I have no measured it.

428. Do you not think the fence as it at present stands is very unsightly? Well, it is not unsightly as compared with the other enclosures. I take it that the fence, as it now stands on the eastern and western sides, was intended as the inner fence of an enclosure for a plantation,

Mr. W. Tanks. plantation, allowing space between it and the roads for a plantation similar to that in the eastern and western avenue.

6 Mar., 1861. 429. Whose suggestion was that? I think it was suggested by me years ago, but I do not know who suggested it lately. I made application for the ground myself years ago, and we then promised to put some trees round about the cricket ground and some seats for the accommodation of the public.

430. You proposed to take the management of it into your hands? I proposed trustees to the Government; I was the active party in the matter at that time, and I proposed, as trustees on the part of the cricketers, Mr. Driver, who was Secretary of the Australian Club, myself, as Secretary of the Marylebone Club, and Mr. Still, who was Secretary to the Victoria Club. The others, Captain Ward, Colonel Barney, and Mr. Moore, were nominated by the Government to represent them.

431. The Cricketing Association expected the Government to be at the expense of putting up this fence, did they not? Well, I do not think they did, but I am not positive. I am a Vice-President of the Cricketing Association, but I am not in favour of applying to the Government for anything, if they give us permission to use the ground.

432. Have you heard any objection stated by the public, in your intercourse with them, as to that fence being put up? I have heard one or two object to it.

433. As interfering with the rights of the public? Yes.

434. And as being unsightly? In my intercourse with a number of people I have heard a few say that; but the great majority of those I come in contact with are of the contrary opinion. I have made it my business to inquire what are the public rights, and I am unable as yet to ascertain what they are. If merely walking across there, at such times as the Government choose to open the gates to let them, be a right, we have not interfered with that.

435. You are aware that the gates are always open night and day? No, they have been closed on one or two notable occasions against the public; for instance, on the occasion of the great balloon ascent, when a fee was taken at the gate, and, until recently, the gates have been closed every night.

436. Do you consider the closing of the gates in that way objectionable? I do, and so far as the cricketers are concerned I opposed the closing of the gates against the public, when it was proposed to do so, with a view to revenue, at the first Inter-Colonial Cricket Match. I had influence at that time, and I think I prevented the closing of the gates.

437. Do you not think the principle holds good with a part of the Domain, as well as with the whole of it? I do not see that, because the Government have appropriated portions of it to Robinson's baths, the Corporation baths, Mrs. Biggs' baths, Bourke's Statue, and the Gymnasium. I cannot see what rights the public have if these appropriations can be made.

438. My question is not as to the propriety of such appropriations, but I ask whether in principle it is not as objectionable to exclude the public from a portion of the Domain as from the whole? I think that for the public to have any enjoyment out of the Domain it must be subject to rule, because every man cannot walk about there as free as the air, else he would walk across the beds in the Botanic Gardens. We must have rule to have enjoyment. If not, it would be just as competent for anybody to demand to walk across the beds or to eat the fruit out of the Gardens as anything else.

439. Are you of opinion that it would be advisable that the question as to the Domain should be settled by its being granted and vested in trustees for certain purposes? Yes, I think it ought to be.

440. By Mr. Egan: In that settlement would you give any person or persons an exclusive right to any portion at all? Yes, I would give the cricketers a portion. I profess as much regard for the Domain as any man in this country, but to have the legitimate use of it we must subject it to rule. As I understand we are enjoined to keep order on the cricket ground, but how can we keep order without some authority?

441. But I believe you applied and got the use of the police on the occasion of the late match? Yes, because we saw there was to be a large assemblage of persons. That is not a question about the right at all. If a large number of persons were to assemble in any public place it would be the duty of the police to be there.

442. I only asked you, because you said you were expected to keep order? Yes. As far as I can judge of this matter, if I were to take hold of any person to put him off the ground I should very likely subject myself to an action at law, as I did in a similar way on one occasion.

443. Do you think the present fencing at all interferes with the rights of the public? As I said before I do not know what rights they may have, but so far it interferes with their freedom that they cannot go where they like; if they want to go there they must go in and out at the turnstiles, and I do not think that is any great hardship. But according to my view they have a greater good out of it by being able to witness and orderly game of cricket, if they do not play themselves.

444. Did not the cricketers make application for the purpose of cutting down some trees in the enclosure? I do not know; I applied one time, but not lately.

445. Do you think the fence at all improves the appearance of the place? Well, I do not think it improves it; but under the view that it may be made use of for a plantation, I do not think it is any harm. It is better than the other fences that are there.

446. By the Chairman: Is there any other observation you wish to make to the Committee? I desire to say, that, in my opinion, it is indispensably necessary to furnish some piece of ground on which the cricketers can play cricket, and in a central place, inasmuch as if they have to go out of town, it amounts to a prohibition to those persons who are engaged in offices all day, and who so much need a little recreation.

447. By Mr. Egan: Do you not think the Inter-Colonial Matches might be played out of town? That would deprive the public of the pleasure of seeing them; but, whether or not, there must be daily practice. Mr. W. Tunks.
6 Mar., 1867.
448. For that there would be no necessity for permanent fencing? Yes; we have laid out £300 on that ground, and if you leave it open to those cows and horses that go in and destroy the ground in the winter season, when the ground is saturated, that money would be thrown away. If it is necessary to eat the grass off, I would suggest sheep.
449. By Mr. Hay: When the ground is left open, people gallop their horses across it? Yes, they may drive waggons over it if they like.
450. By Mr. Egan: I presume the money spent there comes from the general public? Yes, from subscribers. (Vide Addendum.)
451. I am alluding to the revenue from the Inter-Colonial Matches? Yes, from subscriptions, admission money, and one thing or other.
452. On this occasion you have got a decent balance? Yes, this time we have.
453. By Mr. Hay: This money does not come from the Government, but from those who encourage the game of cricket? Yes. We have about £300 this time from subscribers.
454. By Mr. Egan: You manage to pay expenses? Yes; but if we are to continue the Inter-Colonial Matches we must have money in hand to meet the expenses of going to Melbourne. I was going to say that once we have begun to play orderly cricket we have much better conduct, morally and socially, among our young men. We used to have a much larger number smoking and dissipating about the Domain, and a much larger number of children as a nuisance in the streets, flying kites, playing with peg tops, wearing out their clothes playing marbles, and so on. Now we get them to that kind of recreation which tends to develop their physical powers; and that is of some consequence in this climate, where we fear physical degeneracy. That is why I recommend that we should encourage such exercises as cricket, in order that our young men may come up to the standard of the old country. This game of cricket stands first among all field recreations, because we do not play for money. There is rather more interest in the matter than we can manage without money. The thing is carried on in an honorable and decent kind of way, and such a thing as a decided cheat in the game of cricket, no man can allude to in this Colony. For 20 years I have never known a cheat at a game of cricket. It is not a game to be lost or won to accommodate anybody, or any set of men.
455. By Mr. Hay: How do you propose to keep down the grass in the enclosure, by mowing or feeding off? In the winter sheep would eat off the grass, but I find, from my experience in having to attend to this, that nothing will do us but the scythe; it will not follow into the hollows like sheep will, but it leaves the grass a little long, and the alluvium washed down by the rain tends to level the sward.
456. So that even sheep would not answer the purpose? The sheep eat out the couch grass and leave tufts* of the coarser sort, and every year the tufts have a tendency to enlarge. The scythe cuts it all down level, and the inequalities are gradually filled up.
457. Horses or cows going on it in wet weather would permanently destroy the ground? Yes, so as to make it dangerous to play.
458. I suppose, by degrees you would fill up all the holes? If we had control over the place. We would then, under this self-supporting plan of ours, have some money to improve the place—to cut the hill and put the cuttings into the hollow, and make the ground level. No person would get any gain out of it, except in the way of trade. The whole proceeds would go to improve the appearance of the Domain. If we are to be tolerated there it would seem to me necessary to allow the erection of a pavilion to deposit our things in. There are a number of young men now who are forced to leave their bag of bats and so on about the town at different public-houses; and, thus, they are under the necessity of doing the business of their clubs at public-houses of a night, which furnishes a pretext for many of them to be out at night. If we had a pavilion there those persons could leave their things there, and they would be taken care of.
459. Could not that be erected without disfiguring the Outer Domain—for instance, in that vacant paddock near the entrance to the Gardens—would not that be sufficiently near? I have not said anything about where it should be. I should put it in a conspicuous place, because I would propose to have a building worthy of the place.
460. Tastes would differ—supposing that were considered undesirable, it would be near enough to have the pavilion erected on the site I name? Anywhere about there would be near enough, but if it were my taste I should build a place that would be an ornament to the Domain. We have a plan of a building which we submitted to the Government, to cost £300.
461. No doubt extreme inconvenience must be felt for want of some place of retirement? Yes; for instance, if people go there to play cricket at ten o'clock in the morning they must play on regardless of the calls of nature, to the injury of health, or else commit an offence against the law and decency.
462. By Mr. Parkes: I think you have stated your opinion that the Domain should be under the management of a trust? Yes.
463. Do you think it should be an elective trust? The difficulty in that case would be in saying who should be the constituency.

ADDENDUM.

Answer No. 460.

Each club practising there pays a subscription of £10 per annum, and each match of eleven a side £1 2s. to the trustees, to keep the ground in order. There is also some understanding with respect to expenses between the trustees and the Cricketing Association of New South Wales.

THURSDAY,

* NOTE (by witness on revision):—The tufts alluded to, I understand to be a grass called "Beut" grass, and was imported in the early days of the Colony.

SILVANUS B. DANIEL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Alexander Grant M'Lean, Esq., called in and examined:—

A. G. M'Lean,
Esq.
28 Mar., 1861.

464. By the Chairman: You are Surveyor General? Acting Surveyor General.
465. Will you please describe to the Committee what you know relative to the boundaries of the Sydney Domain, and its extent, and any matters generally connected with it? I am not prepared to say what is the precise extent of the Domain; I was not aware that the question would be asked.
466. Have you no map of it? No map giving the contents very accurately. Our surveys of it are very old surveys indeed. The Botanic Gardens occupy a considerable part of it now. I could not give the contents very accurately from existing surveys.
467. You could furnish the Committee with this information and with a sketch of the Domain? Yes. (Vide Plan.)
468. Are any portions of the Domain under your control and management? No. The Outer Domain is entirely under the care of the Director of the Botanic Gardens.
469. Under the Minister for Lands? Yes.
470. Nothing comes before you officially in any matter connected with it? Nothing. The matter respecting the granting of a portion of it as a cricket ground did come into the Surveyor General's Office some three years ago.
471. What was the nature of that reference? It was entirely managed by Colonel Barney, who was then Surveyor General. He took an interest in cricket, and was, I believe, a member of the Cricketing Association. There was, I believe, no official record of what his recommendation was, but it resulted in their obtaining possession of a portion of the Domain.
472. By Mr. Windeyer: I believe you were not in any way consulted about the recent fencing off of a portion of the Domain. Not in any way.
473. I believe you are a Captain of Volunteers? I am.
474. Do you think that fencing will interfere with the use of the ground for a parade ground, and general exercising ground for the Volunteers in reviews? Certainly the fencing, as it at present exists, would prevent a review of the whole Volunteer Force—such a review as was held some two months back.
475. Would it not also prevent the use of the ground for light infantry movements? Undoubtedly it would.
476. I believe that is almost the only piece of ground, near Sydney, that is adapted for that purpose? It is, certainly, by far the most convenient piece of ground, and admirably suited for light infantry movements.
477. By Mr. Wilson: Are you aware whether the piece of ground called the Sydney Domain, was originally set apart for public purposes, or for special purposes? For general public recreation, I imagine.
478. You cannot state, at present, what are the boundaries of the Outer Domain? The boundaries of the Domain, over which the Director of the Botanic Gardens has charge, are represented by the Domain wall and gates. There are certain appropriations within it for different purposes. The City Corporation have two portions for baths, male and female; and Mr. Robinson has a provisional permission to occupy two other portions, or rather what he occupies is now all in one portion.
479. By the Chairman: Does he pay any rent? He pays no rent; but he has given an undertaking to remove at any moment when called upon.
480. By Mr. Wilson: Do you think the fence at present erected around the cricket ground is an improvement, or otherwise, looking at it otherwise than as interfering with military movements. Do you consider it unsightly? It is quite a matter of taste; but as far as my taste goes I should say it is unsightly.
481. By Mr. Windeyer: Even if the southern end of the fence were removed, the fences on the western and eastern sides would still be in the way, would they not? The fence on the eastern side is in the way of light infantry movements; I do not think that on the western side would interfere materially.
482. Do you not think that, if any fence at all be allowed to remain on the green, it would be better if it were further up, nearer the road? I think the nearer it is to the road the better, so long as there is sufficient space for foot passengers between it and the road.
483. By the Chairman: Have any applications been made to your office, by coasters or others, for permission to land or ship goods in any part of the Domain? Not that I am aware of. Perhaps I should mention to the Committee that it was at one time proposed—I think by Mr. Hay, when Minister for Lands—to include within the Domain that portion of land between the present Domain wall and the narrow roadway passing by St. Mary's School, and, further on, up to Woolloomooloo-street. These lands are now, somewhat inappropriately considered as part of Hyde Park. I think Mr. Hay proposed, but no decision was ever arrived at, that the present stone wall of the Domain, leading down to the head of Woolloomooloo Bay, should be removed, and that the boundary should be made along the road by St. Mary's School, and along Woolloomooloo-street.

Michael Fitzpatrick, Esq., called in and examined:—

484. By the Chairman: You are Under Secretary for Lands? I am.
485. Will you favour the Committee with what information you may possess relative to the Sydney Domain—firstly, as to its dedication, by what means did it become dedicated to the public? I am afraid that what I can say to the Committee on that point will be very indefinite, and the result rather of my own opinion than of any specific official information.
486. The Committee are anxious, in the first instance, to know how the public got this Domain—was it by grant? So far as I know there is no grant. I have a sort of traditional knowledge or idea that the Domain is, as the name implies, an appendage of Government House, and that by very long usage, extending beyond my memory, the Outer Domain, which is the one in question, has been accessible to the public, but always with certain restrictions. All along, the gates have been shut at night against the public, at certain fixed hours, and the Government has repeatedly exercised the right of excluding the public, and giving the use of the Domain to individuals for private purposes. So that I cannot say that I am clear in my own mind that there has been any dedication to the public at all.
487. By Mr. Parkes: You are not aware of the existence of any deed or instrument by which it has been dedicated? No; so far as I know, the dedication, if there has been any dedication at all, has been a dedication by use.
488. How many years have you been in the public service? Very nearly 24 years.
489. During the first part of that time in the Colonial Secretary's Office? The whole of that time until within the last 4½ years.
490. And you do not recollect ever seeing any instrument of any kind, or public notification in the Government Gazette, by which the Outer Domain was dedicated to the public? No.
491. It is very probable then that it never has been dedicated, but that it has been devoted to its present purpose by prescriptive use? I believe there has been no dedication except what has grown out of use; and that is of a very qualified character, because, as I have said, the Government have frequently excluded the public.
492. Are you of opinion that the Domain could be legally diverted from its present use by the Government? I am hardly competent to give an opinion.
493. You can state your own opinion from all the knowledge you have, and your impressions of the real state of the facts? My opinion, so far as my opinion is worth anything, is, that the Government could resume it, but that is irrespective of the question whether they ought to do so.
494. What I wished to elicit was your opinion, for what it is worth, as to whether the Government have the power to resume it? My opinion is, that there never was any formal dedication, and that the use has always been qualified and sometimes controlled by the Government, and that, therefore, the Outer Domain is still, in some shape or other, an appendage to Government House.
495. By the Chairman: Waste lands of the Crown? Not exactly waste lands of the Crown.
496. By Mr. Parkes: It is probable that the use of the Domain by the public arose in this way—that when land was of no value this large portion of ground was marked out as an appendage to Government House, and being conveniently situated for the recreation of the public, gradually a certain portion of it became set apart for that purpose? I think so, though I cannot state it as a fact. I think there has been a gradual relaxation of the right which belonged solely to the Governor, when the Governor was the governing power.
497. By Mr. Windeyer: Was there not some dedication by Governor Macquarie? I am not aware of it.
498. Have you ever seen the inscription on the rock at Lady Macquarie's Chair, as it is called? Yes, I recollect an inscription to the effect that the road had been planned by Lady Macquarie.
499. Does it not say there that it is formally dedicated to the public? I cannot say. I believe the right of the public to use the Outer Domain differs only in degree from that to use the Inner Domain, and, in fact, the Botanic Gardens, for admission to which the Government made specific regulations by their own inherent right.
500. By Mr. Parkes: Would you have any objection to state your own opinion as to what steps ought to be taken for securing the Domain to the public? My opinion, as a citizen, is that it ought to be dedicated to the public—that it ought to be granted to trustees, under the Parks Act. I believe that, under the Parks Act, there could be a continuing trust, if it were dedicated to the public by proclamation—always assuming that the Government have the power to dedicate, about which there is some legal difficulty at present. I have no hesitation in saying that it ought to be dedicated.
501. By the Chairman: These lands were formerly under the control of the Colonial Secretary? Up to the inauguration of Responsible Government. I conceive they were under the direct control of the Governor for the time being; for instance, it was by the authority of the Governor that some one individual, as was occasionally the case, obtained the exclusive use of the Domain for a purpose of his own for a time.
502. There is a board with rules and regulations on it placed at the entrance of the Botanic Gardens? That is applicable to the Gardens only.
503. That was under the hand of the Colonial Secretary of the day? The power by which the notice was issued was the Governor's; it was the inherent right of the Governor; Mr. Deas Thomson signed it only as Colonial Secretary. Now, the Domain is under the administration of the Minister for Lands, who also has excluded the whole public, and allowed an individual the use of the Domain.
504. Do you know whether Hyde Park and the Outer Domain were originally all one block of land? No, I think Hyde Park stands in quite a different position.

M. Fitzpatrick
Esq.
28 Mar., 1861.

M. Fitzpatrick Esq. 505. What do you conceive to be the boundaries of the* Domain? As fenced. There is no doubt about them, I believe.

23 Mar., 1861. 506. Commencing at the gate? Commencing at the gate, and following the Hospital wall and fences to Woolloomooloo Bay at Palmer-street. In fact, I take it the Outer Domain is all that is not the Inner Domain and the Gardens, which are fenced off.

507. By whose authority were certain portions of the Domain devoted to the public baths and Robinson's baths—by permission of the Minister for Lands? I think it was with the advice of the Executive Council that the Corporation obtained a portion. Mr. Robinson obtained a permissive occupation many years ago from the Government, and he has never been disturbed.

508. Is any rent exacted from him? I think he pays a nominal rent, half-a-crown a year or something of that sort.

509. You have seen a fence that has been lately erected on the ground where the game of cricket is played? Yes.

510. Do you know by what authority that was erected? By the authority of the Secretary for Lands.

511. On whose application? On the application of the Committee of the Cricketing Association, represented by Captain Ward, who was their Chairman.

512. Do you know by what means that Committee was formed? It was formed with the approval of the Executive Government.

513. How long since? During the administration of Mr. Hay, I think,—since the introduction of Responsible Government.

514. What powers were originally given to this Committee over the cricket ground, and on what conditions did they hold it? I have here a Minute of the Executive Council, dated 15th December, 1856, which will explain. That was the first authorization of the cricketing in the Domain. (The witness read and handed in the Minute referred to,—same as Appendix C. to Mr. Robertson's evidence. Vide Page 16.)

515. Has anything else occurred since that? On that minute certain ground was allotted, which was considered to be very much too restricted, being only some sixty yards square, and since that the ground has been very much enlarged, and the nature of the enclosure has been greatly qualified. Originally there were iron hurdles which were to be removable on notice when required, for military parades, and so on; and, quite recently, permission to put up a wooden fence was granted, some portions of which were to be regarded as permanent, and some to be removable, so as to permit the free use of the ground for military purposes.

516. The order for the erection of this fence came through the department of the Minister for Lands? Yes.

517. Where did the money to pay for the erection of this permanent fence come from? It was advanced by the Cricketing Association, under the impression that it would be voted by Parliament. There was a promise given that the sanction of Parliament would be asked. This letter, and the words of the reply to it, will explain the matter to the Committee. (The witness read a letter from Captain Ward, dated 25th January, 1861, for which see Captain Ward's evidence.) That application was complied with only in a qualified sense. The authority of the Minister was, "I see no objection to this request; the necessary funds to be provided on Estimates. I have marked the plan." These words were qualified by personal instructions to me, that the Government did not pledge itself to the money, but that Parliament would be invoked to grant it. Upon that the Cricketing Association made their own arrangements, and built the fence.

518. By Mr. Windeyer: As a private citizen, do you think it is advisable that this part of the Domain should remain fenced in as it is now? Not unless it is made accessible for other purposes besides cricket. My belief was, when this request was made, that they intended to have permanent fencing at those parts only where it would not exclude the citizens, and that the other portions would be removable. My opinion may be somewhat qualified, as I am known to be an old and devoted cricketer, and my leanings are therefore in that direction; but I never conceived that that part of the Domain was being devoted to cricketing purposes absolutely.

519. Then your opinion is that the present fencing would interfere with the use of the Domain for other purposes—that free use of it which the public ought to have? I cannot answer that unqualifiedly, because my impression is that there are turnstiles in various directions, by which the public can have access; but, if the permanent fencing does exclude the public, I think the first intention has been departed from. I have not been over it lately, but I understood from this plan that in several directions there would be turnstiles to admit the public to walk on the sward—and, if that be so, I conceive that the fence is rather an advantage, as it allows ladies, nursemaids, and children, to be there in safety from horses that are frequently ridden over it very dangerously. I do not think the fence ornamental, by the way; I think it is ugly, in fact an eyesore.

520. By Mr. Lackey: Do you think it would be more advisable that the Domain should be vested in the hands of trustees, or that it should remain under the control of the Minister for Lands for the time being? As an individual I would prefer that it should be in the hands of trustees. Of course, I am not speaking officially.

521. By Mr. Parkes: Would it not be more in accordance with the form of management of similar public properties in other parts of the world, that it should be vested in trustees? My knowledge is rather limited as to the practice in other parts of the world. I believe, in England, for instance, the Royal Parks, though nominally under the Minister, are rather in the hands of a Board than otherwise; it is not so much the individual will of one man that controls them.

522. Your observation relates simply to the Royal Parks, not to places of public recreation in other parts of England? My information on such matters is limited, but I believe most of these places in England have been gifts, frequently from individuals, in which provision has been made for trusts. There is little in England in those matters that is analogous to what takes place here. I have a very strong impression, from all I have seen of public reserves in this country, that all reserves intended for public use should be vested in trusts, as provided for under Mr. Nichols' Act.

M. Fitzpatrick.
Esq.
28 Mar., 1861.

Captain William Harbottle called in and examined:—

523. By Mr. Windeyer: You are a Captain of the Volunteer Rifles? Yes.

524. This Committee has been appointed to consider the present management of the Sydney Domain, especially with reference to the fencing in of a certain portion used as a cricket ground—Is it your opinion that that fencing is in any way a hindrance to the drilling of the Volunteers, or the use of that portion of the Domain as a ground for military exercises? I think that for battalion drill, or for purposes of review or inspection of any large body of men, it has entirely destroyed the ground; it has rendered it useless for that purpose.

Captain
W. Harbottle.
28 Mar., 1861.

525. Does it not also spoil the ground for light infantry movements? Of course it would, even for small bodies of men. When practising light infantry movements that fence would stop you, unless you wished to practise the men in getting over it.

526. What is your opinion as a citizen? I think it is a monstrous encroachment on the rights of the public. I believe that is the universal opinion in the city.

527. You hear that opinion largely expressed? I have heard it many times, even this morning; I have heard it in all directions, in fact.

528. You know how the fencing is situated—do you think it would materially improve matters if the southern fence were taken up, and the eastern and western fences allowed to remain? Do you mean for review purposes?

529. Yes? It would better it, but still it would be very objectionable.

530. It would be still as useless as ever for light infantry purposes? Yes, the fence would entirely stop skirmishers from moving about.

531. That portion of the Domain is the only piece of ground near Sydney that is fitted for these purposes? It is, now that Hyde Park has been planted and fenced. At the last review that we had of the Sydney battalion we were obliged to go round to the Glebe; partly because we had not room in the Domain, and partly because the ground was required for a cricket match.

532. You are aware that inconvenience has already been experienced from giving the cricketers so exclusive possession as they have? As far as relates to the volunteers, it has been so.

533. By the Chairman: Do you think that fence, as erected, interferes with public recreation? I do; I think the fence has no right to be there at all; people ought to be free to move backwards and forwards, and to cross any part of the Domain they please, not to be compelled to go round about by fences or through turnstiles.

534. The fencing itself is no improvement or adornment to the Domain? No; I think it is an eyesore. I believe the cricketers have a portion of the ground conveyed to trustees in some shape or way; but it appears to me, if that be the case, that all they would require would be that light iron fencing, which they recently had upon the ground, round their bowling ground, a square of about forty yards. That, I think, might be tolerated, but enclosing more than half that part of the Domain is undoubtedly a very great encroachment on the public. Perhaps you will allow me to remark, as I see the Committee is appointed to inquire into the general management of the Domain, that a number of people have permission to have horses and cows there, almost making a common of the place. Now if one person has that privilege, I do not see why another should not. If there is to be any commonage at all, I do not see why all the citizens should not have their horses and cows there as well as a few privileged individuals. Not that I envy them at all, for my own part, but that I think the pasture there might be put to some good purpose. For instance, the Sydney Infirmary pays a large sum, perhaps £200 a year for milk; and we know that pure milk, which is of great importance to the welfare of the patients, is not always to be had in Sydney. I think it would be very desirable that they should have a number of cows of their own to run in the Domain, which would be a great saving to a public institution, and at the same time very beneficial indeed to the invalids. I have no doubt that many persons in the country, where their value is not great, would present cows to the Infirmary, instead of subscriptions.

535. By Mr. Parkes: Have you ever had your attention directed to the management of the Domain? In what respect?

536. As to the form of management. It is given in evidence before the Committee, that it is very doubtful whether the Domain has, in reality, ever been dedicated to the public—that it is merely used by permissive sanction; and what I want to elicit from you is, whether you have ever directed your attention to the question whether such a place of public recreation ought not to be made more secure for the benefit of the public, by being legally granted to trustees, on behalf of the public? The Crown would be the trustees for the public, I imagine, the same as in the case of the Parks at Home.

537. I suppose, as a citizen, you would not like that the Domain should be resumed by the Government, and sold in building allotments? Certainly not.

538. There is reason to believe they have power to resume it any day? In that case, it ought to be dedicated—specially set apart for the public. I take it that it is of the greatest importance, that Hyde Park and the Outer and Inner Domain should be left open. I do not see why a part of the Inner Domain should not be thrown open to the public; there is a large piece of ground between the fence and the Government Stables which seems to be of no use, at present, except for shooting rubbish. I think there is far more ground than is required for a private Domain round Government House.

Sergeant Major Thomas Baynes called in and examined :—

- Sergt. Major
T. Baynes.
28 Mar., 1861.
539. By the Chairman : The Committee have summoned you for the purpose of eliciting your opinion, relative to the erection of the fence round the ground where the game of cricket is played in the Domain ; as to whether it interferes with the military evolutions of the Volunteers ? To a certain extent it does interfere with them ; but if the south end of the fence were made with shifting panels, so that it could be removed when required, we should have plenty of room for inspection or review, where the troops are only drawn up in line ; but for manœuvring there is not room.
540. Do you think the western fence would not interfere at all ? Not for inspection or review, but if we wanted to manœuvre it would. The last time we had 1,400 men drawn up, and there was not sufficient room to form the line ; we had to draw up the artillery at a right angle, and the mounted troopers again at another right angle ; but that was before the fence was put there. If they had been drawn up in two lines there would have been plenty of room. For manœuvring, the fence on the western side, next the wall, would be in the way.
541. Is the eastern side of the fence, near the walk leading to the Gardens, in the way at all ? That is not in the way, that I see, at all. But all the posts at the south end would have to be put in sockets, so that they could be taken up ; I am informed some of them are so arranged. If you will allow me, I will just run down and look at it again, and then I can speak more positively. (The witness retired, and after the lapse of a few minutes returned.) I find all these posts at the south end have got sockets, except fourteen panels at the south-eastern corner, which also ought to be made removable, as far as a double gate which I see there.
542. May I ask whether you, as a citizen, consider that fence, as now placed, an ornament to the Domain or otherwise ? I do not consider it any ornament ; I do not know whether to call it an eyesore or not ; but as far as my knowledge goes I do not see anything wrong in it. It is scarcely seen when you enter the Domain, if the south portion is down.
543. Do you think the fence interferes with public recreation ? In my opinion it does not, because it lies quite out of the way of the passage of people ; you seldom see any persons congregate there where the fence is.
544. By Mr. Parkes : It prevents the freedom of walking to foot passengers ? There are no pathways crossing it except what are open to the public.
545. Have you not noticed that a footway has been worn since the fence was put up from one turnstile to another, shewing that persons have been compelled to walk in one particular line ? Yes, where the turnstiles are ; that has been worn by persons passing.
546. By Mr. Lackey : Did the Committee understand you to say that the operations of the volunteers would be in no way impeded if the southern fence were removed ? If all the southern boundary were removed it would not interfere with any manœuvres we would require to make. In the first place, the ground itself is not large enough for moving a large body of troops ; it is only fit for inspection and review, where you form line and march past.
547. By Mr. Windeyer : Would not the eastern fence be in the way of practising the troops or volunteers light infantry movements ? He would be a very bad light infantry man who could not get over it.
548. Is it advisable to have it there ? It is not advisable if it could be done away with without inconveniencing the public, or rather the cricketers, too much.
549. When the troops have been exercised there have they not principally skirmished in an easterly direction, under the trees where the fence is ? The left of the line only need be placed there, supposing the southern fence were down, the remainder of the troops being drawn up at the other end where there is no fencing.
550. Do not the trees planted at the southern end make it inconvenient to draw up a body of men there ? Yes ; those squares of fencing within which the trees are planted are in the way, but they ought to be removed ; they are a greater impediment than the fence would be. It would be a great convenience to the troops, if the fence, on the eastern side, were made movable, the same as that on the southern side ; but it is no very great impediment, as it now stands, for reviews or inspection, and that is all the ground has ever been used for. If it is intended to make it a drill ground for the troops altogether, then you had better remove all the fencing, and a great many of the trees too ; we cannot have too much room.
551. By Mr. Driver : Could not the obstruction, said to be caused by the eastern fence, be avoided by skirmishing first in the southern direction, and then changing front to the left ? Yes, I could manage to put them all past it ; but an impediment sometimes spoils the appearance of a movement.
552. By Mr. Parkes : Could they not leap the fence ? Certainly ; he is a very bad light infantry man who cannot leap a fence his own height.
553. By Mr. Driver : In the case of a review, would not the fences at the eastern and western sides protect the volunteers from the intrusion of the crowd ? There is not much need for that ; but they would be awkward in manœuvring, in eschelon movements particularly. It would not cost much, and it would be better, to have the eastern side removable, the same as the southern side, with sockets and shifting panels.

Present:—

Mr. DRIVER,

Mr. PARKES,

Mr. WILSON.

SILVANUS B. DANIEL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

The Rev. J. H. A. Curtis, O.S.B., called in and examined:—

554. By the Chairman: The object in summoning you here to-day was to obtain your evidence on some points relating to the state and management of the Domain. You have seen the fence lately erected there, round the ground used by the cricketers? Yes.
555. Do you consider that fence, as it now stands, an ornament to the Domain, or otherwise? I consider it is not an ornament.
556. Do you consider that the public are obstructed by it in their usual walks, or that it prevents the free use and enjoyment of the Domain by the citizens? Of course wherever there is a fence there necessarily is, to a certain extent, an obstruction; but I do not think this is an obstruction of a kind that any one can reasonably complain of.
557. No doubt the game of cricket is a very manly game, and is one of our national sports, but inasmuch as a fence round so large an extent of ground is only required once in two years, on the occasion of the Inter-Colonial Cricket Match, do you not think an iron railing, that would be movable, would answer every purpose? Do you mean an iron railing of the kind that was there before?
558. Yes? No, I scarcely think that would answer. It would be, in the first place, more expensive to maintain, because more easily broken, and liable to be knocked down; and on the occasions you speak of, if there were a rush, or anything of that kind, I do not think such a fence would be sufficiently strong.
559. It has been suggested to the Committee that the Domain would be improved as a place of useful recreation to the inhabitants generally, if lamps were placed in various parts of it—do you think that desirable at all? From my own knowledge I cannot speak—I have never been there after dark—but, from what I have heard from many clergymen of our body, I should think it highly desirable.
560. Upon what grounds? I have heard, in general terms, that a great deal of immoral conduct goes on in the Domain at night, which to a great extent I should say would be prevented by having the place lighted; but I am not sure whether this takes place in the Outer Domain or further down. Only last Sunday evening the Archbishop spoke of it in the Church in addressing the congregation.
561. From what he had heard himself? I suppose so. He spoke of the immoral conduct in the Domain in the evening, and cautioned fathers and mothers of families how they allowed their children to go there without proper protection.
562. Of course the hours of business in Sydney during the day prevent persons from taking that useful exercise and recreation which is necessary to health—are you aware whether after nightfall these persons do or do not use the Domain for these purposes? No, I am not aware. I generally leave when it is beginning to grow dark on the occasions that I go there.
563. You think the place is not visited by respectable families after nightfall? I cannot say.
564. By Mr. Driver: You are a native of the Colony? I am.
565. And of course you have known this Domain for many years? As long as I can remember.
566. Are you aware that it has ever been dedicated to the public in any way—any actual dedication? I have always supposed that it was set aside for public amusement and recreation, but I do not know in what way.
567. You think the fence that has been alluded to is not an ornamental fence? I think it is not so. Of course I answered the question just as it was put, but if you wish for my opinion with regard to the fence of course I could give it.
568. I should feel obliged by your doing so? My opinion is that the fence ought to have been erected along, or that it would be better now to have it removed to, the road on either side—that it should skirt along the eastern and western roads, and be a permanent fence, made more ornamental than the present one, not so close; and strong, so that it could not be knocked down easily.
569. By Mr. Wilson: To enclose the whole of that triangular space? Yes.
570. By Mr. Driver: Do you think such a procedure would be tolerated by the general public? Well, I do not know. My own opinion is, that the public do not complain at present, that there is only a very small portion of the community that objects, and I think it highly desirable that the cricketers should be protected in some way. Of course they are necessarily at very great expense in getting up their matches, and unless they have some way of keeping the public out on certain occasions, and only allowing them to come within certain precincts, by the payment of money, I do not think they would be able to defray their expenses; and besides that, it seems the ground on which they play has been already given to them in some way, or at least they are allowed the exclusive use of one portion of the ground, which they have been at the trouble to have trenched and properly levelled to fit it for the game; and it seems to me, that unless some kind of enclosure were made the ground would be completely spoiled by persons walking over it repeatedly in one place till they made a track, and it would also be injured to a certain extent by cattle going on it.
571. You think the general public would not complain of the fence that you propose? I think not. I should suggest, in that case, that there should be more openings than there are at present—larger gates, and four or five of them, on each side.

O.S.B.

The Rev. J.
H. A. Curtis,
O.S.B.
9 April, 1861.

572. By the Chairman: Do the Committee understand you to say, that the present enclosure used by the cricketers is not sufficiently large, and that you would have it extended? It is sufficiently large for the cricketers, but I think it would not look quite so bad if it were larger; that is one reason. It would not be so noticeable, and would not spoil the look of the Domain as it does now. I think it does now, to a certain extent, take away from the beauty of the ground. I consider that, if the fence were put in the way I have suggested, and were to be somewhat more ornamental—made of iron, if it could be afforded—that it would then add to the beauty of the place.

573. By Mr. Driver: Do you think it advisable that the cricketers should be encouraged in the promotion of their game? Certainly, for many reasons. My main reason is, that I think it the duty of every well-minded person to encourage every innocent kind of amusement as much as possible, and there is no out-door amusement that I know of more innocent than cricket.

574. And you think that the handing over of that portion of the Domain to the cricketers for cricketing purposes only, not to the exclusion of the general public, would be beneficial? To whom beneficial?

575. For the promotion of the game itself? Undoubtedly. There is one point I may mention, with regard to giving the cricketers permission to have a permanent building of some kind there, which they generally call a pavilion; I think that would be desirable for many purposes. It ought, of course, to be in some place where it would be no obstruction, not to be too large, and to be built in a style that would be ornamental; and there ought to be water-closets somewhere near the pavilion.

576. By Mr. Parkes: The Domain is set apart for the recreation and the promotion of the health of the whole of the population, more especially invalids, young children of tender years, and sickly women, none of whom can be supposed to have any particular interest in the game of cricket; and if it were interfered with by the cricketers, however manly and thoroughly English their game may be, and however desirable it may be to encourage it, might not others claim also to have portions of it set apart; for instance, no one will dispute for a moment that the study of Zoology is very important and very instructive, and suppose any persons were to form a Zoological Society, with a collection of living specimens, and claim space in the Domain for a menagerie, equally strong reasons could be advanced why they should have a portion set apart; or suppose any persons interested in gymnastics generally were to claim a similar dedication for their persons, equally strong reasons could be urged on behalf of their application. Thus we should find the public Domain, set apart for the recreation of the whole bulk of the population, not simply of Sydney but of the whole Colony when they are here, invaded by various bodies of men whose objects were good in themselves but whose occupation of the Domain in the promotion of them would very seriously interfere with the purposes for which the Domain is dedicated? Yes, that is the great difficulty.

577. Is not that a great danger? Yes, that is the great danger, no one can dispute that. But with regard to a Gymnasium there is a body who have had a piece of ground granted for that purpose. With regard to having cages for animals there, I think if a sufficiently large portion of the public were to petition to have the ground devoted to that purpose, there might be spots in the Domain found for the exhibition of these animals that would not at all interfere with the general public going there also. The cricketers you see already have some kind of title to the ground.

578. How so? They have been allowed to have that part trenched and prepared for cricketing purposes, and no one is allowed to go and play there without paying a certain amount of money yearly. I suppose, therefore, they must have some claim to it, or at least to a portion sufficiently large for the game. That has been the case for some years past.

579. I am not aware that any vested right is admitted? You are aware that no one can go and play there without paying a certain amount annually. Each club has to pay a certain amount yearly. There are a large number of persons there every evening during the cricketing season, who go there merely for the purpose of being amused by the cricketing, and who, I think, would not go out to take recreation at all, were it not for the sake of looking at the game.

580. As I understand your evidence, what you would wish would be an ornamental fence following the line of road round that particular division of the domain, so as not to interfere with the space of green sward in any way—not to intersect it—and to have a sufficient number of gates to admit free ingress and egress in all directions for the public? Excepting that they should not be allowed to walk across the cricketer's bowling ground in such a way as to make a track across it as they did before.

581. Do you not think that having gates in the way you suggest would be the very means of making these tracks from one gate to the other; if there were no fence, the persons going there would walk in such a number of different ways that they would form no tracks? No, I do not think so; speaking from my own experience, I should say the contrary. In spite even of the paths that have been formed on the Racecourse tracks are made in other directions, and it was so here at one time; people would actually get over the iron fence that was there, and they formed a track just cutting off one end of the bowling green.

582. Have you not noticed that there is a complete beaten track from one turnstile to the other, which had no existence previous to the erection of the fence—the fence has caused it? I should have the gates so placed, that the track which would be made in going from one to another would not cross the bowling green of the cricketers, which is a parallelogram of about 40 yards by 20, I think. But I must still admit that I see the difficulty of giving the cricketers a special preference, although I am very fond of the game.

583. By Mr. Driver: Would not shutting the cricketers out of the Domain effectually put

- a stop to crickoting in Sydney? I am afraid it would. Many of them would not go to the Racecourse, which is too open, and too much exposed to intrusion.
584. Have you not noticed many paths across the green before this fence was erected at all? Yes.
585. And on Hyde Park also before the roads were formed there? Yes, wherever the people were in the habit of going there were tracks formed.
586. By Mr. Wilson: With regard to the tracks in the Domain before this fence was put up, are you not aware that those tracks led in a direct line from the gate in Macquarie-street to the gate in Palmer-street, and to the other gate? Yes.
587. Those were the only two tracks? Yes, and one of those just skirted the cricket ground. People will take the shortest line, and if the cricketers find that their ground is interfered with they should level the ground elsewhere, so as to give the people a straight line down.
588. By Mr. Parkes: If the fence were erected as you propose, following the line of road, would it not be very inconvenient to spectators on the outside of the enclosure, who would then have to stand in the road? I think they could see from the ground under the trees, between the road and the wall.
589. It is said there were as many as 20,000 people at the last Inter-Colonial Match—with such a number of persons present would there not be a greater liability to accident from the passage of vehicles, if the people were thrust into the road? Yes; I was only proposing to obviate the unsightly appearance of the present fence.
590. You had not thought of this crowding of the people? No, I had not foreseen it; but seeing now the difficulty, I think it would be better to have the fence moved much nearer to the road than it is at present, leaving a margin. As it is at present the fence is too noticeable. I think a stronger iron fence than that they had before, not quite so open, would scarcely be noticed, or if noticed, would only be what is round every gentleman's park in England. I think it would be ornamental. The present fence is almost like a wall stuck there, and certainly seems to me very unsightly.

The Rev. J.
H. A. Curtis,
O.S.B.

9 April, 1861.

Mr. Josiah Mason Illidge called in and examined:—

591. By the Chairman: The object of this Committee is to inquire into the state and management of the Sydney Domain, and particularly with reference to the fence recently erected round what is called the cricket ground—you have seen that fence? I have.
592. Do you consider it an ornament, or otherwise, to the Domain? I cannot exactly consider it ornamental; I think a stone dwarf wall and iron railing would have looked far better.
593. In the same spot where the fence is now erected, or in some other part? Just on that very spot, enclosing either a larger or smaller portion, as might be required. I am not aware how much ground is required.
594. Do you know anything of military matters? No, except by reading.
595. From what knowledge you may have acquired, should you consider that that fence would interfere with the evolutions of any considerable body of troops? I should not consider it would if there were large gates, at proper distances, to admit the troops passing in and out. I think it would enable them to manœuvre in a way that they perhaps could not on the plain open ground.
596. What may have been the number of years during which you have had knowledge of the Domain? Twenty-four years.
597. Have you been led to believe, during the last twenty-four years, that the public were entitled to perfectly free access to the Domain, or have they ever been restricted? They have only been restricted at night, and not now even at night.
598. Have you had reason to believe that the Outer Domain has been dedicated to the public, for their use and enjoyment? Certainly; and much more so now than formerly.
599. By Mr. Parkes: By the term dedication do you understand the alienation of that portion of land from the Crown for a given purpose—that is, did you understand that it had been dedicated for ever, for the use of the inhabitants of Sydney and the Colony generally? That it was to be devoted to the use of the public for purposes of recreation.
600. For ever? Yes, certainly. I have always understood that it is a public reserve for the benefit of the citizens as well as strangers and others that might be sojourning in the neighbourhood.
601. Did you ever understand definitely in what way it had been dedicated to this purpose, whether by grant from the Crown or otherwise? I am not acquainted with the way in which it has been dedicated, further than that it has always been open to the public, and used by them.
602. Suppose you were to be assured that there never has been any formal dedication, and that the Crown could legally resume it at any moment, would you not feel some concern as a citizen? I should indeed; I think it would be a most unjust thing for the Government to do.
603. As far as the evidence of some witnesses goes, who may be supposed capable of giving reliable evidence on the point, there never has been any dedication at all, and the Crown might resume it, and cut it up and sell it for building allotments? I do not think the public would allow them to do it.
604. If that is the case, as a citizen of Sydney and the head of a family, do you not think steps should be taken to secure the Domain for the use of the public? Certainly, if it is as you

Mr. J. M.
Illidge.

9 April, 1861.

Mr. J. M.
Hidge.

9 April, 1861.

you state; but I never had a passing thought in my mind that it could ever be resumed by the Government.

605. There is reason to believe that it never has been dedicated by any instrument whatever? There can be no doubt that it has been virtually ceded to the citizens, if not legally.

606. Would it not be better that it should be legally placed beyond doubt? Most decidedly it would be better; but, as I said, it never entered into my mind that there was a doubt. I thought twenty years use gave full possession.

607. By the Chairman: Has it not come within your knowledge that the gates of the Domain have been locked at different times against the public, and a fee paid for permission to enter it—on the occasion when the balloon was inflated, for instance? Yes.

608. Did you not, as a citizen, then imagine that the Government must have had some power, entirely in their own hands, of dealing with the Domain? I never knew it was a legal right; it was a conceded right, I imagined, to the authorities that had possession of the Domain, to do so for the public benefit on these occasions.

609. By Mr. Parkes: Supposing any steps were taken to legally confirm the dedication of the Domain for the public use of the inhabitants of the Colony, what form do you think the management ought to assume—do you think it ought to be in the hands of the Executive Government, or in the hands of an elective trust on behalf of the people? Perhaps it would be better in the hands of an elective trust on behalf of the people.

610. By the Chairman: Would the municipality be the proper trustee? I should rather not see it in their hands.

611. By Mr. Parkes: You would rather see a separate trust for such an important property as that? Yes.

612. By the Chairman: Considering that a fence of a strong character, to enclose a large space, is only wanted once in two years—? It is not simply an occasional game that is played there; there are constant games, which attract thousands to the Domain who would not perhaps enter it otherwise.

613. If there is to be a fence, do you not think it would be better to have it extended to a greater area? I think it would look better if the fence were extended, and a nice low dwarf wall and iron railing substituted for the present wooden fence. I think that would be a great addition to the place, and would make it more attractive than it has hitherto been to the public; and that money voted for such a purpose would be well expended.

614. Has your attention been drawn to the state of the Domain after sundown, as to the persons who frequent the Domain? Not lately, except on very few occasions. When I have been in the Domain after dark I have never seen anything improper.

615. Are you aware that respectable families make the Domain a place in which to enjoy their evening's walk? Yes, especially on moonlight nights. I have gone round myself, with portions of my family, on moonlight nights, and I have never observed anything that would appear to be improper.

616. Have you seen many other families there? Yes, numbers who seemed to enjoy it exceedingly, some of them walking as far as Lady Macquarie's Chair.

617. Do you think if lamps were erected it would be beneficial? Yes, in dark nights, and they would tend very much to prevent any improper proceedings. I think you made an observation just now about nursery maids and invalids frequenting that part of the Domain where the fence is; I have rarely observed such or other persons using otherwise than crossing it; you find the company that assemble in the Domain generally walk round to Lady Macquarie's Chair and take seats there. The number who make use of the part of the Domain alluded to is very limited.

618. By Mr. Driver: But admitting that they do use that particular portion, would not the fence be an advantage to them, to protect them from horses and the cattle that graze there? Most decidedly; when there is no match going on it is a great advantage to them, because without it they were exposed to annoyance from horsemen galloping across.

619. Do you think, as a citizen, that the general public complain of the erection of this fence? I have read complaints in the papers, but I have seen no reason to complain myself. I think it is an advantage, though I must confess I should like to see a better one. The old fencing was insufficient. I think allowing cricket matches there, and the exercise of the volunteers, tends very much to attract thousands of citizens with their families who would not otherwise use the Domain. I know it is so with my own family.

620. Is not the Domain much more frequented now than it was before the introduction of the cricket matches? Yes, by thousands.

621. Who have been attracted there by these cricket matches? Entirely.

622. By the Chairman: Is there any other improvement you would suggest with regard to the Domain generally? I think planting shady trees on the outside of the fencing would be a great advantage.

TUESDAY, 23 APRIL, 1861.

Present :—

Mr. EGAN, | Mr. WINDEYER,
Mr. WILSON.

SILVANUS B. DANIEL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

The Honorable John Fletcher Hargrave, Esq., M.L.C., Attorney General, called in and examined :—

623. By the Chairman : The object of the Committee in summoning you was to obtain your opinion as to the dedication of the Sydney Domain—whether any grant has been issued or any promise of grant—or whether it has been dedicated in any way for public use? There are so many questions involved in what you say that perhaps I had better tell you what I did on receiving your notice. I sent, with the letter, this memorandum to the Secretary to the Crown Law Officers :—“ Will Mr. Plunkett look out any opinions on this subject,” and the answer I received was, “ I cannot trace any correspondence through this office in reference to the subject of the annexed letter.” This applies generally to the records of the office, as well during my term of office as those of my predecessors. I have no recollection whatever of ever having given any opinion on the subject, or of having taken it into my consideration in any way.
624. Do you recollect having expressed any opinion, within the last six months, relative to some of the public parks or domains of the Colony—particularly that called Hyde Park—as to whether they were to be considered as waste lands of the Crown? None whatever. If I had it would have been a written opinion. I never give a written opinion without a copy being kept by the Secretary, Mr. Plunkett, and here is his answer, saying that there is no such thing in the office. I have not the slightest recollection of anything of the kind.
625. By Mr. Windeyer : Perhaps you will be kind enough to state what is your opinion as to the position in which this Domain is? It is impossible to give a legal opinion except upon a state of facts. If a legal opinion is wanted it is always given on facts stated. If any such statement is made to me I will advise on it in the usual way. At present I have no idea at all as to the position of the question.
626. By the Chairman : Are you not aware that in many cases usage grows into law—usage for a long period, or from time immemorial? Most assuredly.
627. By Mr. Windeyer : Then we understand that your attention has never been directed to this matter? Never in the slightest degree.
628. Since being summoned here, have you not looked into the matter in any way, so as to be prepared to give the Committee an opinion? No, certainly not; I have had the business of the office to attend to, and I am not aware of any mode by which I could qualify myself to give legal advice to the Committee. I have no information as to the facts, and there are no documents in my office on the subject. The Lands Department would probably be able to state all the facts, and whether any grant has been issued. As regards usage, of course usage in many cases amounts to a dedication to the public, particularly with regard to public roads. I think I can say, from memory, that there is an Act, in 15 Victoria, I believe, to be found in Callaghan, authorizing the enclosure of a road in continuation of Macquarie-street, across Hyde Park, in which Hyde Park is spoken of as being then a place of public recreation. That is a statutory recognition. It recognises the fact of the locality being then dedicated, admitting the right of the public to it. That is the only statute of the kind that I recollect.
629. Then you cannot give us any information as to whether the Domain is still in the position of Waste Lands of the Crown, or whether it has been in any way dedicated? No more than any other person walking over it. I have no professional knowledge of the matter at all. If it has been dedicated, no doubt the evidence of the fact will appear in the proper office; but, as Attorney General, the matter has never come under my notice at all; and, according to this memorandum from Mr. Plunkett, there are no opinions in the office relating to it.
630. By the Chairman : Then the matter has never been questioned at all? Never in any way that I know of.
631. By Mr. Windeyer : Then you cannot give any legal opinion as to what position the Domain is in? If the facts were stated, on those facts I could give an answer; but I cannot, on a question put in general terms, give an opinion as to the position of the Domain.
632. Not with regard to the property in it? Certainly not. The property, we all know, must have been originally in the Crown, and if it has been passed out of the Crown, there will be a record of it, I presume. I could give an opinion on the facts if they were laid before me, but I should not think of giving any legal opinion, except on reflection, and on a state of facts. (Witness requested to withdraw. Committee deliberated. Witness re-introduced.)
633. I understand you to say, that at present you are not in a position to give any legal opinion as to the property in the Domain? No more than what I have already stated, that the property in all lands is of course in the Crown originally, and may be passed out of the Crown in various modes—by grant, usage, or dedication for public purposes.
634. Can you state whether it has so passed out of the Crown? I have not the slightest idea. I have not the remotest knowledge of the facts—whether any grant has ever been issued, or whether there are any entries on the public records or maps of the Colony. It would be only on such facts as these, or evidence of usage for a number of years, that I could give an opinion. I have mentioned already that there is an Act of Council which recognises Hyde

Esq., M.L.C.
23 April, 1861.

635. Then you do not know if there is any difference, or if so, what it is, between Hyde Park and the Domain? Not in the least. In the Law Offices there are no records of the facts at all. Grants are kept in the Lands Office, and the maps are there.

636. By the Chairman: This is what the Committee appear to wish to have explained. A letter having been written to you requesting your attendance this morning, and indicating the subject on which you were to be examined, they were under the belief that you would furnish them with particulars of any deed or other instrument dedicating the Domain, if there be any such, and they thought you would have made inquiries of the Crown Solicitor. Have you done so? I did make inquiry through Mr. Plunkett, and here is the answer I received, that there is no opinion whatever with reference to it. We have no records of grants that have been issued.

637. By Mr. Egan: Supposing no grant has ever been issued in favour of any one, what position would you consider the land in then? That depends upon the facts that have taken place since it has been used by the public.

638. Supposing nothing has been done, but that it has been used by the public for the last 30 or 40 years? Speaking generally, that would be, to my mind, a dedication to the public by usage; but that must depend on the number of years, and many other things. A great deal also would depend on what was done with the land all round it; because, if the lands all round have been constantly sold, that mere fact, being in the Government records, would seem to indicate a reservation for public purposes. But, as a lawyer, I am rather loth to give opinions off-hand without knowing exactly how the facts stand.

639. By the Chairman: Before our Report is brought up, it is, of course, the object of the Committee to satisfy themselves in the matter. Is it your opinion that the Minister of the day could to-morrow remove any person from, or put up for sale any portion of, that land now included in or called the Sydney Domain? I could not answer that question without having considered the facts. It is a question of law as to the Domain which it is impossible to answer off-hand. I am not by any means clear that I am not, to some extent, precluded from doing so, except through the Government. I doubt whether I can properly be called on to do so by a Committee of the Assembly. That may be, or may not; but I am certainly not prepared to answer a question of law, as to the Domain, put to me off-hand.

640. The Committee have also requested me, as Chairman, to request the Attorney General to furnish the Committee with an opinion in writing, whether the Domain is considered a part of the waste lands of the Crown, or otherwise? If that question is submitted to me in the usual way I will answer it of course. I am sure whatever question is sent to me to advise upon I will be most happy to afford any assistance in my power.

641. By Mr. Egan: What is your opinion in reference to the land—do you think it ought to be granted for the use of the public, having been so long dedicated for that purpose? Yes, I should think so. The public having been in the habit of using it, it would be as well to make that use perpetual.

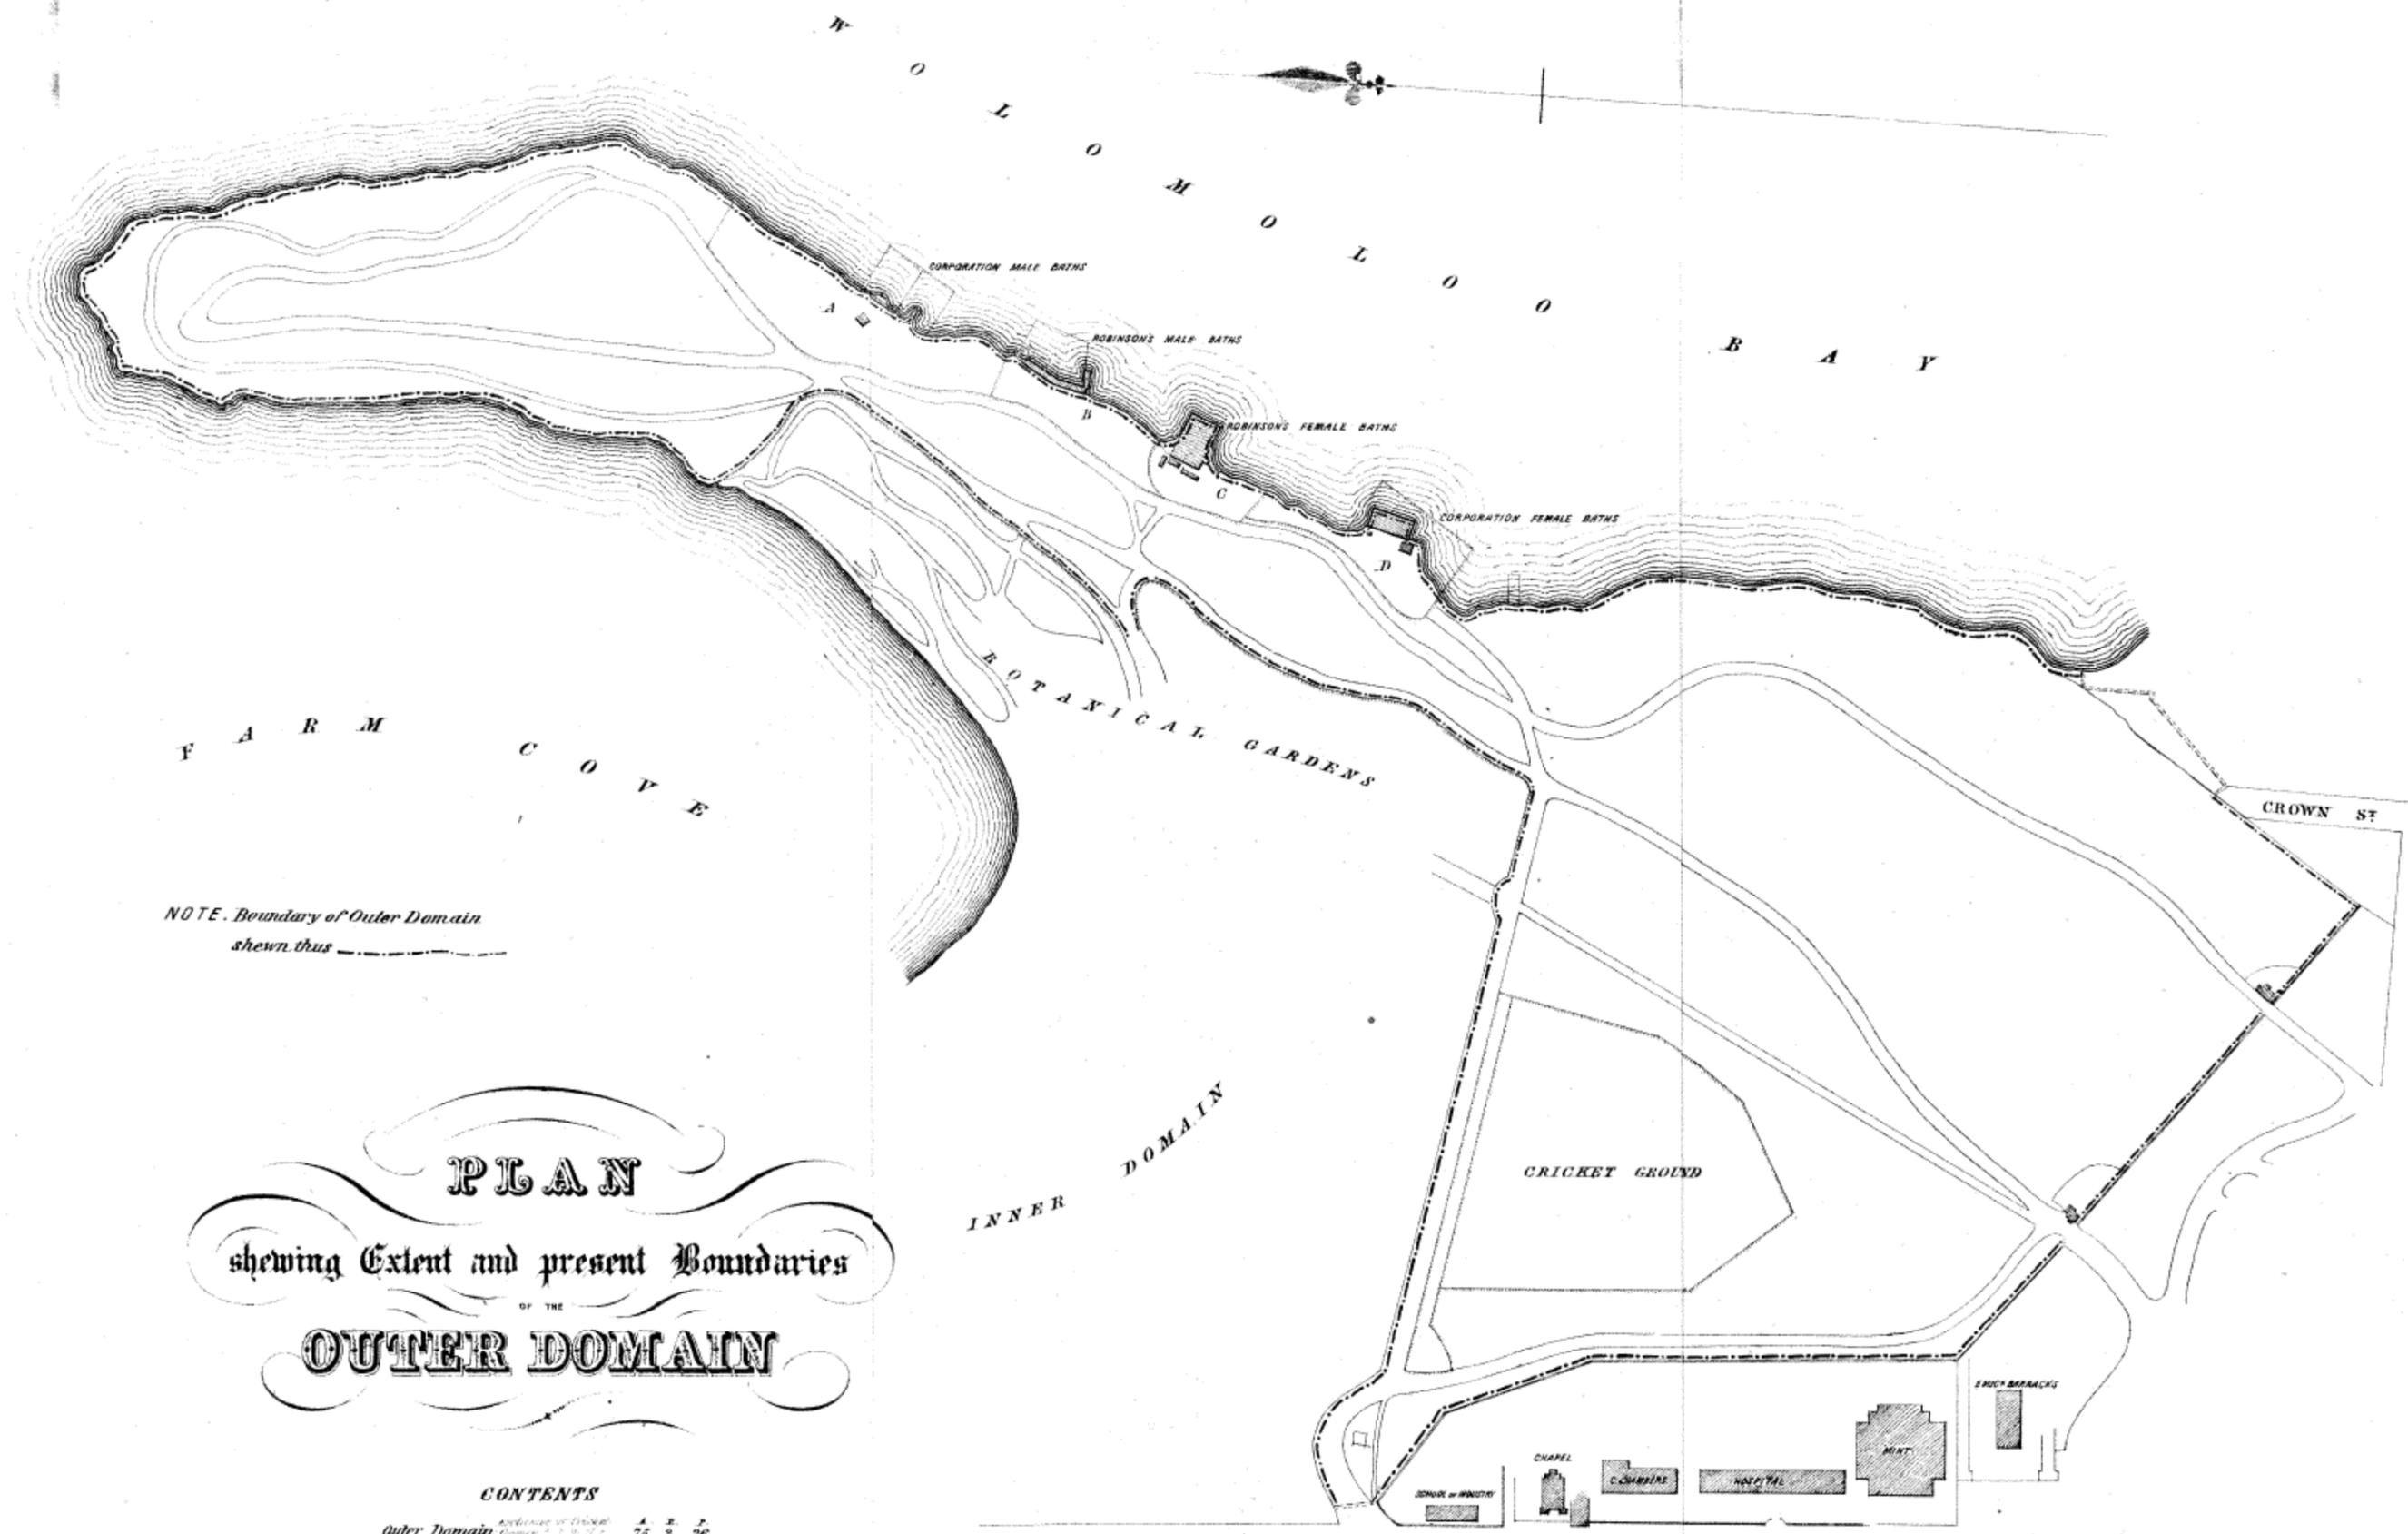

642. Do you think the proper way of treating it would be to make the Minister of Lands for the time being trustee for the public? I should think he might be joined with other gentlemen of local information. There has been an Act passed recently in England—22 Vic., cap. 27—19th April, 1859—intituled "An Act to facilitate Grants of land to be made near populous places for the use of regulated recreation of adults and as playgrounds for children"; it is a short Act, declaring how they shall be granted to local trustees. An Act of that sort would be much better than keeping the Minister of Lands in the position of general trustee for the Colony, because he cannot have any local knowledge of what is required at different places.

643. He would in the city of Sydney, where he is located? Yes, that would be a special exception; but as he must go out, of course, with the Government, and is not a corporation, there would be a difficulty in his being a trustee.

644. The House would have some control over him? I think the estate should not be in him. It might be arranged that nothing should be done without his consent, but the legal estate should be in trustees, or in a corporation; the House would then have control, to some extent, through the Minister.

645. By the Chairman: Do you think it would be necessary to pass any declaratory Act for the purpose? No, I do not think it would. It is probable that, on the facts being looked into, it might be found that there has been a dedication by use for public recreation, even though we knew that no grant has ever been issued, and a dedication by use is better than a grant, very often, as it saves difficulty about the construction of the grant.

646. By Mr. Windeyer: You know of no Act touching this question? I am not aware of an Act relating to it, but I could tell in ten minutes if I were to consult Callaghan, and so could anybody else. If there is nothing there, then the next place to look to would be the Lands Office, and if nothing appears on the public records of the Colony in any way affecting the Domain, then it is to be presumed that the property in it is still in the Crown, subject to what has been done by way of user and rights of way, by which the public may have acquired rights as against the Crown.

EXERCISE OF PRE-EMPTIVE RIGHT AT MUSWELLBROOK.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 6 May, 1861.

The Petition of the Inhabitants of Muswellbrook.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That it is the ill fate of your Petitioners to be surrounded by some rich men who, exercising their pre-emptive right as squatters, are purchasing every arable piece of ground in the vicinity of the township, in anticipation of the passing of the new Land Bill now in progress through the House: accordingly your Petitioners earnestly beseech your Honorable House, to stay the sale of all lands within the circumference of twelve miles of this township, pending the time the new Land Bill becomes a law.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

TENDERS FOR RUNS UNDISPOSED OF.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 9 May, 1861.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 18 January, 1861, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“ A List of all Tenders for Runs remaining undisposed of “ up to this date, with their dates of application and names of “ the applicants.”

(Mr. Rusden.)

RETURN OF TENDERS FOR RUNS.

I BELIEVE that the majority of cases in which, as shewn in the enclosed Return, Tenders for Runs appear from the books of this Office to have remained many years undisposed of, the causes of delay are to be found in the imperfect descriptions of the Runs applied for, and in the neglect of the applicants to take any steps in reference to their tenders after the first filling up and transmission of the forms. This will be better understood when I state, that they are almost all for back-lying and unwatered country, which, until within a recent period, has been looked upon as valueless, and tendered for only to keep out interlopers (by having the claims recorded), and that tenders by the thousand have been sent in merely on speculation, and to enable the applicant to secure any land that might turn out to be vacant, and become valuable in progress of time.

In some instances too that I observe, the land has been leased to the same parties under later tenders, better defining the country, or has been ascertained to have been previously under license.

In stating my belief that the main causes of delay have been the foregoing, I must not be understood as defending it, for I am only too sensible that there has been much neglect and unjustifiable delay, and that many abuses, which it is now difficult to contend with, have been the result. I had, however, taken active steps soon after assuming charge of this department to bring up these arrears, and have now on my table, in process of disposal, over two hundred tenders ranging back to 1850.

MESSRS. WEST; BROTHERS.

No. 1.

MESSRS. ICETON & POWNALL to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Sydney, 19 December, 1855.

SIR,

Drawing your attention to the disputed boundary case of Brady v. Sheahan, heard by Mr. Commissioner Dalhanty, we have, on behalf of Mr. Joseph West (tertius), who has acquired the interest which was formerly vested in Mr. Brady, to request that you will have the goodness to bring the circumstances of the case under the consideration of His Excellency the Governor General.

The land in dispute between Brady and Sheahan was that part of Brady's run which was known as Upper (or East) Red Bank. This land has been in Brady's undisputed possession, or the possession of those whose rights he had acquired, for seventeen or eighteen years previously to the reference to the Commissioners, and up to the present moment is in the possession of Mr. West. And in the year 1853 Brady brought an action against Sheahan for trespassing on this part of his run. Upon the trial, before His Honor the Chief Justice, at Bathurst, satisfactory evidence was given of Brady's possession, and he recovered £50 damages for the trespasses committed by Sheahan upon the land in question; and the jury, in answer to a question put to them by the learned Judge, certified that East Red Bank was part of Brady's run, and that that had been the boundary between his run and Sheahan's for seventeen or eighteen years previously.

We trust that, under these circumstances, His Excellency will be enabled to come to the conclusion that Mr. West is in justice and equity entitled to have the land in question included in his lease.

I have, &c.,

ICETON & POWNALL.

No. 2.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Crown Lands Office,

Sydney, 28 December, 1855.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to submit, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor General, the enclosed letter from Messrs. Icton & Pownall, Solicitors for Mr. Joseph West, tertius, respecting a case of disputed boundary, Brady v. Sheahan, which was heard before Mr. Boundary Commissioner Dalhanty, and decided by his report, confirmed by the Governor General, in favor of Sheahan. The interest of Brady has since been transferred to Mr. West.

2. In 1853 an action was brought by Brady against Sheahan, when a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and £50 damages; and the jury, in answer to a question by the Judge, certified that the land in dispute between the parties formed portion of Brady's run. Upon this arises the present request, that the verdict of the jury may upset the decision of the Government, and that in the preparation of the leases the disputed land may be given to Brady, now West.

3. A similar question arose in the matter of the dispute between Bowman and the Bank of Australasia, respecting which I beg to refer you to your letter of the 8th September, 1852.

4. Upon the present case I have to request the instructions of the Government.

I have, &c.,

GEO. BARNEY,

Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Mr. P.,

If the case of Bowman v. The Bank of Australasia is to form a precedent for the present one, the Report and Evidence, &c., should be procured from Col. Barney, as also the Judge's notes of the trial, and sent to the Law Officers.

It will be seen from the Attorney General's letter, 52-7152, that the award of the jury in Bowman's case was allowed to guide the Government only in a case of doubt, and not as a rule; indeed, for the reasons stated in the Colonial Secretary's Memo. on 51-10993, it would be altogether unsafe to adopt such a rule.

E. D. T.

28 Jan'y.

Let the necessary information be procured, and then the case can be considered on its merits.

W. D.

Sydney, 6 February, 1856.*

SIR,

I have laid before the Governor General your letter of the 28th December last, in which, in reference to the case of disputed boundary, Brady versus Sheahan, decided in favor of the latter, you forward an application from Messrs. Ioston and Pownall, Solicitors for Mr. Joseph West, tertius, who has acquired Brady's interest, for the preparation of the leases in accordance with the opinion of the jury before whom an action arising out of the disputed boundary was tried.

2. I am directed by His Excellency to request that you will be good enough to furnish me with the Report and Evidence in the case upon which the decision of the Government was based, in order that when the notes of the Judge who presided at the trial, which have been applied for, shall have been obtained, the matter may be referred for the opinion and advice of the Crown Law Officers.

SIR,

I beg to inquire, by direction of His Excellency the Governor General, whether there would be any objection to allow the use of your Honor's notes of the evidence of the trial specified in the margin, for the purpose of enabling the Crown Law Officers to arrive at a right decision in a case which is about to be submitted for their opinion and advice, as to whom the disputed land should be given in the preparation of the leases of the runs affected?

ATTORNEY GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

(No. 56-61.)

*Attorney General's Office,
Sydney, 14 March, 1856.*

SIR,

In reference to the enclosed correspondence, transmitted by you under B.C. 27th ultimo from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands, respecting the disputed boundary case, Brady v. Sheahan, I have the honor to state, that as the Solicitor General happened to be engaged as Counsel on the trial of the case in question, he is desirous of being excused from giving any opinion.

Papers to be returned.

2. I have very carefully perused the evidence taken by the Boundary Commissioner, Mr. Dalhanty, and also the evidence appearing in the Chief Justice's notes at the trial. I find the question between the parties was merely one of boundary, and that both parties held licenses from the Crown, and therefore I conceive it was a question peculiarly fitted to be decided on by a jury.

3. The case appears to have been much more fully investigated before the jury than before the Commissioners. The plaintiff called many witnesses, who were strongly in his favor; the defendant called only one witness, (Mr. Beckham), Commissioner of Crown Lands, and it appears that the jury did not adopt his opinion, which probably weighed with the Boundary Commissioner. I perceive Mr. Dalhanty does not give any reasons for his decision. I am of opinion that the verdict of the jury in favor of Mr. Brady ought to prevail.

I have, &c.,

J. H. PLUNKETT,
Attorney General.

Mr. F.—19.

It is not without a feeling akin to regret that I contemplate the necessity of overturning a decision of the Government, arrived at five years ago, on what appeared sufficient data; at the same time it is impossible to disregard the opinion.

Mr. F.,

Effect to be given to this decision of the Court.

[Enclosure in No. 12.]

In the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

The fifth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two.
Bathurst to wit.

James Brady, by Hamilton Farnish Stephen, his attorney, complains of Edward Sheahan, who has been summoned to answer the plaintiff in an action of trespass; for that the defendant, on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and on divers other days and times between that day and the commencement of this suit, with force and arms, &c., broke and entered divers, to wit two, closes of the plaintiff, situated and being in the Colony of New South Wales; that is to say, a certain close called "Narrarandery," and a certain other close called "Duggan's, and on which said several closes divers cattle, to wit one thousand bulls, one thousand cows, one thousand calves, and one thousand bullocks, and five thousand sheep, of the plaintiff, of great value, to wit of the value of five thousand pounds, were feeding and depasturing, and with feet in walking, and with cattle, to wit horses, mares, geldings, cows, and oxen, eat up and depastured the grass of the plaintiff, of great value, to wit of the value of one thousand pounds, then growing and being in the said several closes; and with the said last mentioned cattle drank up, consumed, wasted, and spoiled the waters then being in divers, to wit ten, waterholes, and divers, to wit ten, creeks, in and upon the said several closes; and with the said last mentioned cattle, and with men and dogs, drove off and chased away from the said several closes the said cattle of the plaintiff; and also then put, placed, and erected divers, to wit five, stockyards and five huts in and upon the said several closes, and kept and continued the said stockyards, huts, and hurdles, so there put, placed, and erected, without the leave or license, and against the will, of the plaintiff, for a long time, to wit from the day and year last aforesaid; hitherto by means of which said several premises, the said several closes became insufficient for the proper feeding, nourishing, and fattening of the plaintiff's said cattle, and thereby the said last mentioned cattle became greatly reduced in condition, and damaged and lessened in value, and the plaintiff was thereby prevented from fattening the said cattle for sale, and lost divers great gains and profits, which might and would have accrued to him from fattening the said cattle for and selling them at market and elsewhere; and also by means of the premises divers, to wit two hundred, of the said cows of the plaintiff became so poor in condition, as to be unable properly and safely to suckle and rear their calves; and the plaintiff was thereby obliged to destroy divers, to wit two hundred, of the said calves, and thereby lost the benefit and profit of the offspring and increase of his said cows; and also by means of the premises divers, to wit five hundred, of the plaintiff's said cattle wandered and strayed away to divers places to the plaintiff unknown, and thereby the plaintiff was not only put to great trouble and expense, amounting in the whole to a large sum of money, to wit the sum of fifty pounds, in and about endeavouring to find the said last mentioned cattle, but also divers, to wit three hundred, thereof of great value, to wit of the value of three hundred pounds, then became and were wholly lost to the plaintiff, and the residue thereof then became and were greatly damaged and lessened in value; and also by means of the said several premises the plaintiff has been hindered and prevented from having the use, benefit, and enjoyment of the said several closes in so large and ample a manner as he might and otherwise would have had, and other wrongs to the plaintiff then and there did, against the peace of our Lady the Queen, and to the plaintiff's damage of five hundred pounds, and thereupon he brings suit, &c.

MR. JOSEPH WEST, TERTIUS, to CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS.

Bathurst, 29 July, 1859.

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose surveys and descriptions of Licensed Runs in the Lachlan District, occupied by Major West, John West, and Joseph West (tertius), and named Duggin and Nanima, and request that a lease may be at once issued to us upon such survey and description.

The survey was made by Mr. Rider.

I have, &c.,
JOSEPH WEST, TERTIUS.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 14.]

LACHLAN DISTRICT—APPLICATION FOR LEASE OF RUN.

Name of Run "Duggin," in the occupation of Major West, John West, and Joseph West, tertius, Esqs.

Description of Boundaries—

The east boundary is defined by a marked tree line, commencing from a point on the River Lachlan, described and known as East Sand Bank, and running thence south a distance of six miles and twenty chains to the Kangaroooby Range, thence south-westerly by that and the Tin Pot Ranges, a distance of five miles.

The west boundary is defined by a line, commencing from the west termination of the south boundary on the Tin Pot Range, running north to a point on the River Lachlan, described on plan, sixty chains south of the marked tree at Nanima Fall.

The north boundary is defined by the River Lachlan, commencing from the starting point at East Sand Bank, and thence along the course of the river to the junction of the west boundary with the river before described.

Lessee—J. West.
Estimated area—3,840 acres.
Estimated grazing capabilities—500 cattle.

Commencing at the north-east corner, at a point on the Lachlan River known as the East Red Bank, and bounded thence on the east by a line bearing south 5 miles, dividing this run from Goolagong Run; thence on the south by a line bearing west about 1 mile to a spur from the Kangaroooby Ranges, and by that spur range north-westerly to a point where it is met by a line south from a point on the Lachlan River sixty chains above the marked tree at Nanima Falls; on the west by that line north to the Lachlan River, dividing this run from the Nanima Run; and on the north by the Lachlan River upwards about 5 miles, in a direct line to the starting point aforesaid.

20th March, 1860.

This description has been prepared from Mr. Rider's Survey (with Field Book). Catalogue, I. 19-1421.

The description of Duggin originally published in the Government Gazette gives for the south boundary Mullyantra Creek. This creek, as shown by Mr. Rider's survey, lies considerably to the west of Duggin Run, and could not, by any means, be applied as one of the boundaries; and, as the Commissioner's map shows no occupation to the south of Duggin, the substitution of the line and range as its south boundaries is now adopted.

MESSRS. WEST, BROTHERS, to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Sydney, 10 March, 1860.

SIR,

We regret at this early period of your assuming the reins of office to obtrude our grievances upon you; but the subject matter of this communication is of such great moment to us that we trust our urgency may be excused.

What we seek to obtain is the formal leases of our squatting stations, "Nanima" and "Duggin" (or Duggin's Station), in the Lachlan District.

For years past we have been applying for these leases, and have been met at the Crown Lands Office with the reply, that questions relative to the issue of leases were under the consideration of the Government, but would speedily be settled.

Some twelve months since, the late Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands (Colonel Barney) advised our having these runs surveyed, as a necessary preliminary to the issue of the leases; we accordingly employed a surveyor, at a very considerable cost, and transmitted to the Chief Commissioner his surveys and descriptions.

In December last, one of our firm (Mr. Joseph West, tertius) applied at the office to learn what progress had been made, and again some few days since. The same obstacle, however, appears still to exist—some question for decision by the Government.

Mr. West, tertius, is leaving Sydney in a few days, and if it be in your power to determine this question prior to his departure, you will (apart from doing an act of justice) confer a favor of really vital importance to us, and which will be most gratefully received.

We are, &c.,

WEST, BROTHERS.

The Acting Surveyor General is requested to report.—M. F. (urgent).—B.C. 10th March.

Herewith is a lease, filled up for the Duggin Run, being that in which Mr. West is particularly interested.

The decision of the jury, in the case of Brady v. Sheehan, determining the boundary on one side and the run on the other, being held by Messrs. West, the case is not so difficult as are many.

The lease has been prepared on the personal direction of the Secretary for Lands.

A. G. McLEAN.

B.C. 20th March, 1860.—60-111.

Lease executed and enrolled 21st March—end of month.

Legislative Assembly.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

KISSING POINT COMMON.

(EDWARD DRINKWATER.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 3 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Edward Drinkwater, of Kissing Point, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

SH EWETH :—

That an Act of Council was passed in the eleventh year of the reign of Her present Majesty Queen Victoria, No. 31, 1847, intituled, "An Act to enable Trustees of Commons in New South Wales to have perpetual succession, and to empower them to regulate the use of such Lands as may be granted as Commons, within the said Colony, and for other purposes relating thereto."

That, in accordance with the powers given by the said Act of Council, six thousand two hundred and thirty-five (6,235) acres of land, situated in the Parishes of South Coloh, the Field of Mars, and Hunter's Hill, were granted by the then Governor, His Excellency Sir Charles A. Fitz Roy, by deed, dated 10th November, 1849, to certain persons therein named trustees, and to their successors for ever, "to permit the use and benefit of the same to the settlers, cultivators, and other inhabitants, for the time being, of the said district," subject to such regulations as might from time to time be made by the said trustees and their successors, by virtue of the provisions in the said recited Act contained.

That His late Excellency Sir William Denison did, by instrument dated 11th July, 1855, appoint your Petitioner one of the trustees to act in and for the said Common.

That your Petitioner accepted the trusts, and still continues to occupy the position of trustee for the said Common.

That Petitioner has been informed, and believes, that certain persons, representing themselves as Commoners and intitled to receive benefit from said Common, have petitioned the Honorable the Secretary for Lands, praying "that the Government would make roads and bridges crossing the Parramatta River and Iron Cove," thereby giving to the Parish of Hunter's Hill more direct communication with the City of Sydney, at the same time suggesting, "that the necessary means to carry out such work should be raised by Government debentures, and that the Common Lands should be held as security, and sold as the debentures became due to pay the same."

That your Petitioner, feeling assured that to make such an appropriation of the "Common Land" would be repugnant to, and contrary to, the intention of the grant, as well as prejudicial to many persons having an interest in the "Common Land."

Your Petitioner, therefore, earnestly prays that your Honorable House may not sanction the appropriation of any part of the said six thousand two hundred and thirty-five (6,235) acres of land so situated as aforesaid, and known as the "Common Lands," from the original intention, as expressed in the said grant.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

FIELD OF MARS COMMON.

(PETITION RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 16 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Resident Landholders and others, having interest in the Field of Mars Common,—

SH EWETH :—

That your Petitioners have heard and believe that a petition has been presented to the Honorable the Executive Council by certain other landholders and others, also interested in the Common, setting forth that the Common is not appropriated, and the advantages derived therefrom are not applied, according to the original intention of the grant thereof; and praying that the Government would resume the Common Lands and dispose of the same by sale, and apply the proceeds arising therefrom towards the formation of roads and bridges, so as to connect the district on the north side of the Parramatta River more directly with the City of Sydney.

That your Petitioners, believing that the Common, as at present existing, is of great importance and benefit to those parties having a right of commonage, who now or hereafter may wish to take advantage thereof, and considering that it will be of increased importance to the rising generation if continued according to the law now in force for the management of Commons, pray that your Honorable House may not sanction any measure having for its object the resumption of the Common Lands known as the "Field of Mars Common," nor any act that would enable those parties having the management thereof to appropriate the lands, or any proceeds arising therefrom, to any other purpose than that for which it was originally intended, according to the Act of Council in that behalf made and provided.

And your Petitioners will ever pray, &c.,

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. ALEXANDER BERRY.

(MUNICIPALITY OF SHOALHAVEN.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 17 January, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned, in the name and in behalf of the Municipal Council of Shoalhaven,—

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That a Petition, purporting to be signed by Alexander Berry, and addressed to the Governor General, dated 8th April, 1859, on the establishment of the Shoalhaven Municipality, has been and is considered to contain statements urgently demanding the notice of your Petitioner.

That a Select Committee of this Council was appointed, on the motion of Alderman Moss, to consider and report on the said Petition; and the Report of the above Committee was received and adopted by the Council, at its meeting on the 16th day of May, 1860.

That Petitioner begs leave to submit to your Honorable House, in the first place, extracts from the printed copy of the Petition signed by Mr. Berry; and secondly, the copy of the Report above alluded to, as bearing on and replying to the paragraphs so extracted, and hereby submitted.

That the said Petition, signed by Alexander Berry, contains the following statements :—

Extract No. 1.

“ I have the honor to call the attention of your Excellency to a Petition addressed to you, in alleged pursuance of the Act of the Colonial Parliament, 22 Victoria, No. 13, stated to be signed by one hundred and three householders, residing at Nowra, Nowra Hill, Green Hills, and Good Dog, praying for the crection of their locality into a Municipality, the substance and prayer of which are set forth in the second Supplement to the Govern-ment Gazette, of the 15th March last.”

Extracts Nos. 2 and 3.

“ I beg respectfully to apprise your Excellency, that the said Petition is the result of a scheme concocted by the Rev. Dr. Lang, for the purpose of extorting from me, under color of the provisions of the Act in question, an enormous amount of taxation, in order to carry out an object which is not only opposed to the wishes of myself, but also to the interests and desires of a large majority of the householders of the district, sought to be effected by the Petition referred to. It is, in fact, an attempt to effectuate, under color of law, a most enormous fraud and injustice.”

Extract No. 4.

“ In pursuance of the suggestions thus thrown out, and to endeavor to verify Dr. Lang's prediction, that I shall become the doomed victim of municipal taxation, the promoters of the Petition have framed their proceedings in a way well calculated to effect that object, but which I respectfully, but with the utmost confidence, submit to your Excellency, are utterly unwarranted by law.”

Extract No. 5.

“ In order to enable your Excellency to understand the exact nature of the case, I send herewith a plan, an inspection of which will shew how the Petitioners, by selecting the particular area they desire the Government to form into a Municipality, have disfranchised the bulk of the householders in the district, and seek to include all those portions of my lands on which there are no inhabitants, and to exclude all those parts thereof which are inhabited; the Petitioners well knowing that if a fair selection of lands on either side the river had been made, the majority of the householders would have petitioned against the locality being made a Municipality, as in fact they have done; but the Petitioners endeavor

“ to evade this difficulty by artfully drawing a line with all sorts of deflections, so as to include all those parts of my lands which are unoccupied, and are indeed only fit for pastoral purposes, having been originally a large swamp, and to exclude those parts thereof which are populous, the principle of selection not being any natural fitness or connection of the respective localities for being formed into one Municipality, but simply that of including all lands on which there are no persons who can oppose their scheme, and of excluding all those which are occupied by householders who are desirous that a Municipality should not be created. This is obvious from the following facts:—The Petitioners propose an eastern boundary on the southern side of the river, conterminous with land granted to Prosper De Mestre, not because there are any natural limits there, but because, if the locality were extended more to the eastward, there would be included a large number of householders opposed to the Municipality; there being, just to the eastward of that boundary, a large population, all of whom are desirous of not having a Municipality. The proposed line then crosses the Shoalhaven River, and, instead of following the banks of the river, immediately diverges in a direction so as to exclude a comparatively small quantity of land possessing, however, the embarrassing feature of being inhabited by 296 individuals, the whole of whom are also opposed to the views of the Petitioners; and the same plan is pursued throughout, the general result being, that the proposed area on the north side of the river includes not more than 153 persons, and excludes upwards of 460 persons residing immediately eastward of the proposed boundary line on the north side of the river, as shewn in the accompanying plan, the general direction of the boundaries being shewn by the red line, and the population on the included portions being marked thereon.”

Extract No. 6.

“ Now I respectfully submit, in the first place, that the provisions of the Municipalities Act do not warrant the householders of Nowra in including, in a Municipality of that town, lands lying on the opposite side of the river, such river being a large navigable one, of great width, and the land on the opposite side being in a different country and altogether unconnected with Nowra. It is, I submit, absurd to call the large district on the north side of the river a suburb of Nowra; it would not be more unreasonable, indeed not so unreasonable, to include Balmain and the North Shore in one Municipality.”

Extract No. 7.

“ In the second place, I submit, if the proposed locality is to include any land on the north side of the river, it should be formed on a just principle, so as to include as well those parts which are comparatively populous, as those portions which are only susceptible of being used for grazing purposes, and are therefore uninhabited, and for that reason only are proposed by the Petitioners to be included in the projected Municipality.”

Extracts Nos. 8 and 9.

“ I beg to send herewith copies of Petitions from 362 householders residing in the proposed Municipality and its immediate vicinity, and who are clearly entitled to participate in deciding upon the question whether a Municipality should at once be introduced. These, with those who have signed the petition for a Municipality, comprise nearly every householder in the district. Your Excellency will therefore perceive that there is a majority of those entitled to decide the question of nearly four to one against having a Municipality.”

“ However erroneous that Act may be in some of its principles, and however difficult it may be found in working, yet I am warranted in supposing that it was not the intention of the promoters of the measure that it should be made a handle to oppress individuals like myself by their unprincipled neighbors. I have no objection to the people of Nowra and Greenhills managing their affairs by a Municipality, but I am quite capable of managing mine without one, and without any Government endowment, which I repudiate in toto. I have reared up my establishment without any assistance from the Government, and my property (very nearly the whole of which has been purchased) has rather been a tributary appendage to New South Wales than a part of it; but I am very unwilling to be rendered tributary to the people of ‘Greenhills’ and ‘Nowra’, who have long been a great annoyance to me, as a source of drunkenness and dissipation. I beg to remind your Excellency that there has never been any Government expenditure on my estate, even for roads.”

Your Petitioner having submitted the above extracts from the Petition signed Alexander Berry, very respectfully prays your Honorable House to consider the following statements embodied in the Report of a Select Committee of the Municipal Council of Shoalhaven, and adopted by the Council as above submitted, in reply to the allegations contained in Mr. Berry’s Petition:—

“ Your Committee, in refuting the misrepresentations contained in Mr. Berry’s Petition, and for the purpose of replying thereto, have taken no ordinary pains in arriving at a fair conclusion, and after much deliberation and inquiry, beg to place before the Council the result of their labors.

“ Mr. Berry states, in the paragraph marked Extract No. 1, that ‘ the Nowra Petition was signed by 103 householders.’ There were seventy landed proprietors’ names to the said Petition, out of the above number of householders. This fact will prove that the Nowra petitioners had a stake and interest in the locality which could not possibly be expected from tenantry naturally influenced by a landlord of Mr. Berry’s well known progressive principles.”

As to the Extracts numbered 2 and 3, it is replied :—

“ The Nowra Petition was not the result of a scheme concocted by Dr. Lang for the purpose of extorting money from Mr. Berry. For several months, prior to Dr. Lang visiting Shoalhaven, the people here spoke of a Municipality, and looked anxiously for the passing of the Municipalities Act to petition for the Incorporation of the whole district. The following are the true facts connected with the Incorporation of Nowra. A few days after the passing of the Municipalities Act, public meetings were convened by Andrew Aldcorn, Esq., J.P. and M.L.A., ‘ to consider the desirability of establishing a Municipality for the whole district.’ Prior to these public meetings taking place, Mr. Berry and the other landlords of the district, met at Mr. Berry’s residence ; the result of this private meeting was, that petitions against a Municipality were at once taken round for signatures through Mr. Berry’s tenantry by a Mr. McDonald, a person in Mr. Berry’s employ. This was prior to the public meeting of the inhabitants to discuss the question, and before any petition was contemplated in favor of the Municipality ; and yet Mr. Berry calls his Petition a ‘ Counter-petition’ ! The public meeting was held at the Royal Victoria Hotel, James Graham, Esq., in the Chair ; the meeting was numerous and respectfully attended, several magistrates were present. The object of the meeting was fully discussed, and on putting the question,—‘ Shall the whole district be incorporated into one Municipality ?’ it was carried in the affirmative by an overwhelming majority. Steps would at once have been taken to petition the Executive, but it was deemed hopeless by the majority at the meeting, as every one knew that the influence of Mr. Berry had been powerfully exerted against a Municipality ; and that numbers of his tenants had already been waited on by McDonald, Mr. Berry’s rent receiver, for their names to the Berry Petition ; and as Messrs. Berry and the other landlords had banded together against a Municipality, it was deemed quite useless to make further efforts in favor thereof, especially as the tenants of the landlords could at any time out-vote the other portions of the district. And as this question was to be decided openly, and not by ballot, where every person could vote freely ; consequently the support of the tenantry could not be expected in favor of an object which was likely to place them in antagonism with their landlords. It was in consequence of this, the impossibility of procuring the advantage of self-government under the Municipalities Act for the whole district, that the Nowra and Good Dog inhabitants petitioned for a Municipality. Prior to the Nowra Municipality being proclaimed, Messrs. J. L. Biddulph, J.P., and A. K. Mackay, J.P., waited on David Berry, Esq., Coolangatta, to consult him as to his opinion with regard to one Municipality for the whole district. The said gentlemen informed Mr. Berry, that if he would consent to one Municipality, they would use their influence to get the Nowra Petition withdrawn. And so confident were certain gentlemen in this district that Mr. Berry would alter his mind, that a communication was sent to the Colonial Secretary to delay the Proclamation of the Nowra Municipality, as said gentlemen anticipated having one Municipality for the whole district. From inquiries made, no favorable reply was ever received by Messrs. Biddulph and Mackay from Messrs. Berry, in reference to the incorporation of the District.

“ In the paragraph, being Extract No. 4, as to Mr. Berry being the ‘ doomed victim of municipal taxation,’ the assessment imposed by the Council on his 21,560 acres of land within the Municipality amounts to the paltry sum of £88 per year. Whereas the amount recommended by the Improvement Committee to be expended in the vicinity of Mr. Berry’s great bulk of property amounts to £300. This the Committee consider a sufficient reply to Mr. Berry’s vindictive remark.”

With reference to the Extracts numbered 5 and 6, the reply states :—

“ It was originally intended by the inhabitants of Nowra to form Nowra and Greenhills into one small Municipality, exclusive of Good Dog ; but at a public meeting called to consider the matter, it was suggested that, as the main Southern Road would probably pass through Nowra in a direct line across Bomaderry Ferry, instead of the circuitous route by the beach, the township would be sufficiently connected with the opposite side of the river to include both sides in the Municipality ; particularly as there is a Government Reserve on the north side of the river, intended to extend Nowra in that direction. The opposite side of the river Mr. Berry calls a different county ; it is, however, in the same Police and Electoral District, and the inhabitants are obliged to sue and be sued in the Nowra Police Court. This fact is mentioned, as Mr. Berry’s remark, that Good Dog Ward is in a different county, is likely to mislead people into the belief that the opposite side of the river is altogether unconnected with Nowra. There are no magistrates or constables on the opposite side within the limits of the Municipality, and no inns, stores, or other places of business. The people are obliged to cross the river to Greenhills, where there are several stores ; or to Nowra, where there is a steam flour mill, and other general conveniences. The branch Post Office is on the Greenhills side of the river, so that the connection between both sides is of the strongest nature, and ‘ not forced’ as Mr. Berry would have those believe who are unacquainted with the district. At the time the Nowra boundaries were fixed, a number of Mr. Berry’s tenants, living at the mouth of Broughton Creek, had previously signed the Berry Petition against the Municipality, and it was considered unjust to include them against their will, particularly as most of them resided either on the bank or a short distance from the river ; therefore they could derive very little benefit from the opening of roads when they had the river for their road in front of their doors. The original Petition, in praying for the boundary to commence two chains from the mouth of Bomaderry Creek, was to give the Municipality control over Bomaderry Ferry, and the main Southern Road, which must cross here in a direct line from Wollongong and Kiama ;

“ also

“also the future accommodation roads from Good Dog, Jasper’s Brush, and Kangaroo Ground, which must branch therein, or continue to navigation at Broughton Creek. As the roads in this part have always been in a disgraceful condition, and as there is such a great extent of available Crown Lands in this locality, and within a few miles of where the future Southern Road will traverse, which will never be purchased except parish roads are opened and made practicable, the Petitioners had a higher view following the original boundary than making Mr. Berry the victim of taxation. The higher view of opening the locked up lands in this quarter, which can only be accomplished as at present, through a Municipality, in laying out proper roads for the accommodation of the public. The future Southern Road to Braidwood, Ulladulla, Broulee, and Twofold Bay, must pass through the Municipality from Illawarra, through Nowra, across Bomaderry Ferry; so that it was considered of great importance that the road should be under the control of the Municipality, for the purpose of directing the future accommodation roads which must branch into this main line. Petitioners were also aware that the unusual quantity of land belonging to Mr. Berry in this quarter, about 20,000 acres, must, at no very distant day, change hands; and as the land, with slight exceptions, is available for agricultural or dairy purposes, a great population must become located on this, at present, ‘vacant land.’ Most part of this magnificent estate is now lying nearly useless, and is sufficient to accommodate over 250 families, after making good allowance for unavailable land.

“Mr. Berry states that the said land included within the Municipality is ‘only fit for pastoral purposes.’ This representation is unjust. Mr. Berry, for years past, has been receiving from thirty to forty shillings per acre rent for parts of said land, the whole of which is of very superior quality, and most parts on the banks of a navigable river.

“The quality of this land can be better estimated from the price per acre paid by Mr. Berry, in 1855, at a public sale in the month of May in that year. Mr. Berry paid for some of this land from three to five pounds per acre, and he opposed a number of old residents here at that time who wished to procure homesteads; but, through Mr. Berry’s opposition, were obliged to pay upwards of five pounds per acre. Several lots sold for this amount. John Faulks, £721 for 156 acres; John McPherson paid £337 13s. 8d. for 53 acres; Robert Gardner paid £390 for 78 acres; Robert Thorburn paid £803 for 156 acres; and John Faulks paid £299 for 43½ acres. The said prices will give an idea of the quality of Mr. Berry’s land, which he so feelingly describes as only fit for pastoral purposes. Mr. Berry’s own acknowledgment your Committee consider sufficient vindication for Petitioners in supporting the present boundaries, as Mr. Berry states, in Extract No. 5—‘The Petitioners well knowing that if a fair selection of lands on either side the river had been made, the majority of the householders would have petitioned against the locality being made a Municipality, as, in fact, they have done.’ Now, this assertion evidently proves that, right or wrong, Mr. Berry was opposed to a Municipality, and expected his tenants to support his views. Your Committee cannot place any other construction on this passage. It states, plainly enough, that ‘a fair selection of land on either side of the river’ would be opposed.

“Mr. Berry appears to have great cause of complaint because the eastern boundary was not extended. If the eastern boundary of the Municipality had been extended to the canal beyond Terara, and the natural boundaries of the sea substituted, upwards of 25,000 acres additional land, principally grants to Mr. Berry, would have been included therein—the population would have equally been scanty and scattered. This boundary would have included Mr. Berry’s establishment at Coolangatta, and its vicinity, occupying about 14,000 acres of land, with few tenants, besides the many thousand acres of land, tenantless, between Jendeandie and Numba. The land here is naturally cleared, of the first quality, but, unfortunately for the district, the property of one individual. As to Mr. Berry’s remark of 460 persons being excluded, and outside the Municipality at Broughton Creek, strangers unacquainted with Mr. Berry’s property might possibly conclude that a great number of tenants are included in the 460 persons. There are not more than sixty leaseholders in the part mentioned; the remaining portion must consist of women and children.”

It is replied to the paragraph named Extract No. 7:—

“There are so many thousand acres of Mr. Berry’s land in a state of nature, that it would be impossible, even for himself, to define boundaries for a Municipality without including a great portion of land uninhabited; as, for instance, the great extent of uninhabited land at Good Dog, Jasper’s Brush, Broughton Creek, Numba, Greenwell Point, and Corrimia. The fact of its being still uninhabited is the fault of Mr. Berry himself. In communication No. 5, addressed by Alexander Berry, Esq., to the Colonial Secretary, dated 5 August, 1859, Mr. Berry states (Printed Parliamentary Document)—‘I now do myself the honor of transmitting to you the original Petition against a Municipality, signed by 362 individuals, all householders, and residing within the district.’ Out of this number we find forty fictitious names, and nearly as many servants in the employ of Mr. Berry; a great number of signatures attached thereto without the consent of said parties, such as James Graham, and many others. Such is a brief analysis of the householders signed to the Berry Petition.

“Mr. Berry also states in said letter, that ‘many of the names attached to the Petition in favor of the Municipality will be found to be apocryphal, as appears from a Memorandum which I have received, and now attach.’ And in another part of said document Mr. Berry states, in reference to the said signatures—‘I believe them to be, and insist upon their being, fatal to the application.’ Will Mr. Berry maintain this reasoning in reference to the many fictitious names on his own Petition? In the Memorandum enclosed by Mr. Berry, as containing names of persons who are open to objection—(Enclosure 2 in No. 5)—the name of Henry Kraunstever appears as being an “unnaturalized “unnaturalized foreigner”; and yet, in the same letter Mr. Berry encloses three other Counter-petitions—(Enclosure 1 in No. 5)—on which the same name objected to appears; so that in the very same communication to the Government—(No. 5)—Mr. Berry objects to this name, and yet the same name appears on his Counter-petition. (See Enclosure No. 1, Printed Parliamentary Document.) This fact requires no comment; only proves that Mr. Berry wished to carry a certain point; how, remains proved. On Mr. Berry’s Petition we notice the name of William Cook, Terara. Now, this person was dead and buried long before the Nowra Petition was thought of. This at once proves that the Counter-petition of Mr. Berry was never intended against Nowra, but originally got up against one Municipality for the whole district. In Enclosure 2 of No. 5 appears a list of persons—‘A list,’ states Mr. Berry, ‘of persons who have signed the Nowra Municipality Petition, who are open to objection.’ John Robertson is objected to as ‘not residing at Greenhills, and having signed Counter-petition.’ This person, at the time he signed the Nowra Petition, lived at Greenhills. ‘John Scheidell, unnaturalized foreigner’; this is incorrect—he has a right, being a landowner in Nowra, and is naturalized. ‘M. A. Hyam, infant’; also incorrect, as he is over twenty-one years of age. ‘Owen Hewett, no right, squatting on Government land’; incorrect—he has a right, being a landowner in Nowra. ‘William Rose—does not reside in the district’; he was residing in the district at the time he signed the Nowra Petition. ‘Oswald Hitchcock, John M. Murphy, John Rowen, John Riorden—signed Counter-petition’; this is incorrect, they never signed a Counter-petition against the Nowra Municipality. ‘James Coffee and William Roach—no such persons.’ When the Nowra Petition was revised, a letter was forwarded to the Colonial Secretary by Mr. Henry Moss, respecting said parties not being within the Municipality: they signed the Petition in error, as they live outside the boundaries. ‘Henry Kraunstever, unnaturalized foreigner.’ This name appears on Mr. Berry’s Counter-petition also. (Enclosure 2 in No. 5, Printed Parliamentary Document.) ‘Joseph Watt, name inserted without leave’; this is incorrect, as Watt signed his name in the presence of witnesses. ‘John Sullivan, signed the Counter-petition.’ No Counter-petition has yet been presented against the Nowra Petition. What is generally called a Counter-petition against Nowra was signed against one Municipality for the whole district, as the great number of people living outside the boundaries could not possibly sign Mr. Berry’s Petition, which states—‘The establishment of any Municipality would prove highly prejudicial to our interests.’ How can the interests of those outside the boundaries be affected in this way? The very heading of the Petition called a Counter-petition against Nowra is sufficient proof that it was originally intended against one Municipality for the whole district, and that the signatures for such purpose have been—we do not say fraudulently, but—improperly made use of.

“Mr. Berry states—I beg to remind your Excellency that there never has been any Government expenditure on my estate, even for roads. My brother declined to accept of any money voted by the Council for that purpose.’

“Mr. Berry has forgotten to state the reason for not accepting the money voted by the Council for roads, which is simply to prevent the Government having any claim or control over the roads through his land, so that Mr. Berry can alter the roads where and when he pleases, as he has done for several years past.

“Your Committee beg to bring under the notice of the Council the published correspondence between the Mayor and Mr. Thomas Coser, in reference to procuring signatures against the Municipality, as follows:—

1.

“To the Editor of the Illawarra Mercury.

“Sir,

“In reference to a letter headed ‘Nowra Municipality,’ signed ‘John Smith,’ in your issue of the 27th ultimo, in which he states—I would beg to remind your correspondent that I am no tool, paid or unpaid, I am instructed by the Mayor to request you will publish the annexed (copies of) letters as quite conclusive on the subject, as well as of the value of John Smith’s statements and opinions reflecting on the Municipal Council.

“I am, &c.,

“THOMAS BOYOE,

“Town Clerk.”

“Council Chamber,
“3 April, 1860.”

2.

“Nowra, March 31st, 1860.

“To Mr. Thomas Coser, Auctioneer.

“Dear Sir,

“Having been informed that you have publicly stated that you were asked to obtain signatures to a Petition against the Shoalhaven Municipal Council at a certain rate of payment per day, and for each name, and also that a person named ‘John Smith’ told you that he was receiving £1 per day and 2s. for each name, may I ask you to favor me with the particulars of the offer, and by whom made to you, as well as of the statement of John Smith on the same subject, as I consider a Petition so got up to be an imposition on the public, and feel it to be my duty to prevent the Legislature being imposed on by such a document.

“I am, &c.,

“JAMES GRAHAM,

“Mayor.”

“To

" Greenhills, April 2nd, 1860.

" To James Graham, Esq., Mayor of Shoalhaven Municipality.

" Dear Sir,

" In reply to your note respecting information relative to a Petition against the Shoalhaven Municipal Council, I have simply to state—first, that Mr. McDonald, Clerk to Mr. Berry, asked me to obtain signatures to it, for which he would guarantee me payment of £1 per day, and 2s. for each name; secondly, I met John Smith at Wheatley's hotel—he asked me to sign the Petition in question, which he had with him, which I declined; he remarked it was capital pay, namely, £1 per day and 2s. for each name which he stated he was receiving.

" I am, &c.,

" THOMAS COSER."

" Your Committee also beg to refer to the statements of Mr. Keiran Brown, respecting a certain offer made to him by John Smith, to go to Sydney and give evidence before the Select Committee of the Legislative Council (now sitting); this Smith is the person summoned by Mr. Berry to give evidence as a witness before the Committee. Since Smith's absence in Sydney his daughter has been caught in the fact of stealing from the premises of Mr. Graham, and even Smith himself has recently been charged before the Police Court at Numba with arson. Your Committee in noticing this fact only follows the precedent of Mr. Berry, as he, in a special letter to the Colonial Secretary (No. 7), states—'George Miller, one of the Nowra Petitioners, was yesterday convicted of stealing my cattle.' Your Committee in following Mr. Berry's steps beg to call your attention to the significant fact of James McDonald, a confidential person in Mr. Berry's employ, and lately examined by the Committee of Inquiry on the Shoalhaven Municipality, was yesterday fined ten pounds and costs for falsely defaming a fellow servant also in Mr. Berry's employ. The statement of Keiran Brown is thus introduced:—

" To Mr. Keiran Brown.

" Sir,

" I have been directed to ask you to state the substance of a conversation which John Smith had with you concerning the Shoalhaven Municipality, and if he made you any offer if you would go to Sydney and state what he told you to say.

" I remain, &c.,

" THOMAS BOYCE,

" Town Clerk."

" In reply to this letter Keiran Brown states that John Smith wished him to go to Sydney to prove 'that he did not know the contents of the Petition he signed for a Municipality,' and that his expenses would be paid to Sydney, and for a month in Sydney if he wished; another person was present at this time. Smith also wished to impress on Keiran Brown's mind that when he signed the Municipal Petition it was for Nowra only. This Brown denied. Smith, Mr. Keiran Brown states, 'promised to see him paid;' also he states—'John Smith was drunk on the road when he first met him.'

" THOMAS BOYCE,

" Town Clerk.

" Your Committee, in reply to the paragraphs marked Extracts Nos. 8 and 9, beg to notice, in reference to the 362 names, denominated householders, attached to the Berry Petition, only 45 reside within the boundaries of the Municipality, as testified by the Collector of the Electoral Roll.

" There are several names of parties appended thereto residing at a distance of twenty-two miles from Nowra. We allude to James Thomson and other parties at Burrier and equally distant places, and we cannot see with Mr. Berry how 'they are clearly entitled to participate in deciding upon the question.' We consider them clearly not entitled. We find that out of the 362 names on the Berry Petition there are many, 254, tenants of Mr. Berry; 54 tenants of Messrs. De Mestre, who took a great interest in procuring signatures against a Municipality, the remainder being overseers and servants of Mr. Berry, such as 'Frazer, Meroo; 'Brettel,' surveyor; 'John Hawkin,' shipbuilder; 'Charles Underwood'; 'Francis Thompson,' overseer; 'McDonald,' hired servant; and a great many other persons attached to the Berry establishment.

" Your Committee, on scrutinizing the signatures appended to the Berry Petition, and comparing them with the Electoral Roll, regret to find 38 fictitious names signed thereto. The said names do not appear on the Electoral Roll dated January, 1859, and therefore must have very little stake in the district. Your Committee after this can easily account for the triumphant manner in which Mr. Berry makes his assertion of a majority of nearly four to one against having a Municipality. The scrutiny of names gave the following as fictitious, not being on the Electoral Roll for 1859:—

" Thomas Delf,
" Allan Fillomy,
" Patrick Corney,
" Charles Dixon,
" James Lichens,
" John R. Lumings,
" William Gallager,
" Luke Lumpings,
" James Daires,
" William Ison,
" Thomas Holman,
" Michael Norton,
" Alfred Cullen,

Thomas Bradshaw,
John M'Lensie,
William Bryen,
Henrick Weigerud,
James Horgan,
Robert Brown,
Richard Bagnell,
Thomas Newrey,
Richard Jones,
Thomas Niblock,

Joshua Ormbrer,
William Campbell, junr.,
Patrick Cummins,
Michael Wagner,
Ed. Sage,
E. W. Booty,

Richard Goulding,

Alexander Flevile."

" Irrespective of this damaging objection against the Berry Petition, your Committee are of opinion that it is not entitled to any consideration from the Government, as it was originally “ originally got up against one Municipality for the whole district, and afterwards made use of against Nowra. It is this fact which accounts for the same names appearing in some instances on both Petitions. Parties against the larger were in favor of the smaller; they willingly signed against one Municipality for the whole district, but never intended their names to be made use of against the Nowra Municipality, as at the time the Berry Petition was being signed no steps had been taken to incorporate Nowra. The Committee beg to refer to a letter signed by James Graham—in No. 11 of Printed Parliamentary Document—in proof of this, and also to several Petitions presented to the Honorable the Legislative Assembly by John Garrett, Esq., M.L.A., from parties whose names had been made use of in this manner without their sanction.

“ This Committee consider the language ‘unprincipled neighbors,’ as applied by Mr. Berry to Petitioners, very harsh, and his other sweeping charges of ‘drunkenness and dissipation,’ against the people of Greenhills and Nowra, is a false and infamous slander, and one which Mr. Berry might well have deferred until such time as he had amended the same faults in his own establishment, which have already, as the district can testify, produced such fearful consequences.

“ Mr. Berry states that nearly all his land has been purchased. He has been unusually fortunate in having the whole of his purchased land, or nearly, within the Municipality. We found immediately outside the boundary a grant of Ten thousand acres! His vaunting boast of nearly the whole being purchased may be true, yet there are thousands of acres outside the Municipality which merely cost him a trifle; and it is the opinion of many that Mr. Berry’s great extent of land in this district ought to be re-surveyed. Were this done, a great quantity of land marked originally as ‘unprofitable swamp,’ would be found ‘available.’ And from what has recently transpired—by the Government now cutting up a section of land which has always been regarded as Mr. Berry’s property, being marked in the maps with his name, and portions of it let out on clearing lease—if a re-survey is made there will probably be found some thousands of acres of unalienated land to meet the demands of the public.

“ Mr. Berry has paid the Government £7,529 13s. for 15,426 acres of land, on the banks of navigable streams, and nearly all first class land. There are sixty-five others, purchasers of land in Good Dog Ward who have paid £9,400 for 5,732 acres of land. And your Committee, therefore, consider that, as a purchaser, Mr. Berry can have no peculiar claim on the Government, in reference to his individual case, to justify it in assenting to his Petition against the wishes of so many purchasers having a real interest in Good Dog Ward. A stranger reading Mr. Berry’s Petition would conclude that he is the sole owner of land in Good Dog Ward, and the only person interested therein, whereas there are sixty-five original purchasers who have paid the Government £2,000 more than the entire amount paid by Mr. Berry, and for only one-third of the quantity of land now claimed by him. So that, comparing these facts, Mr. Berry represents the Good Dog Ward in acres only, not in cash paid to the Government; so that it would be unfair to so many purchasers of land in this ward to entertain the Petition of an individual who has already been so extensively benefited at the public expense. Particularly as the majority of landowners have paid a larger amount of money into the Treasury than Mr. Berry.

“ Mr. J. L. Biddulph, Licensed Surveyor, is busy surveying land at Good Dog, in small farms; there is a great extent of land here available, and when all the land in this ward in a few years is purchased and occupied, the great landowner in close proximity must be borne irresistibly on the wheels of progress in spite of himself. Such are the blessings to be derived from Municipalities in the interior, which must, as our Shoalhaven one will, in a few years, when its machinery is in full active operation, tend to raise the district to that proud pre-eminence which its great local advantages justify it in assuming.

“ If it should be asked why have other Municipalities but little older than that of Shoalhaven made such rapid strides, while Shoalhaven has remained apparently stationary? We reply, that those Municipalities have been cordially supported, heart and hand, by all; there was general union to advance the common interest; while from its very birth, even from its conception, the united influence of all the neighboring landlords have been systematically exerted to procure its downfall.”

Your Petitioner, therefore, prays that your Honorable House will take the premises into serious consideration, and that in any question affecting the Municipality of Shoalhaven, as now proclaimed and established, your Honorable House will be pleased to give due weight and importance to the facts herein set forth, and most respectfully submitted; and especially as this Municipality has to contend against powerful opposition, it is felt that the only reliable resource left is an humble appeal to the wisdom and powerful protection of your Honorable House, to enable the Municipal Council of Shoalhaven to exercise its legitimate functions, for the public benefit, according to the intention of the Municipalities Act of 1858, and to frustrate measures calculated to impede its just action, and, perhaps, to work its overthrow;—an alternative greatly to be deprecated.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Signed in the name of, and in behalf of, the Municipal Council of Shoalhaven, JAMES GRAHAM, Mayor.

SHOALHAVEN MUNICIPALITY.

(PETITION OF ALEXANDER BERRY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 23 January, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.
The humble Petition of Alexander Berry, of the North Shore, near Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, Esquire,—

SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner, on the twenty-first day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, presented a Petition to the late Legislative Assembly, in reference to the establishment of the Shoalhaven Municipality, and praying the said Assembly to take the premises, in such Petition referred to, into their consideration, and to adopt such measures in relation thereto, in order to insure justice and right to your Petitioner, as to the said Assembly in its wisdom should seem meet.

That no action having been taken by the said Assembly, a Select Committee of the Legislative Council was appointed to inquire into and report upon the allegations contained in a Petition by your Petitioner to the said Legislative Council, similar to the said Petition to the said late Assembly.

That the said Select Committee of the said Legislative Council accordingly proceeded to inquire into the allegations contained in the Petition to the said Legislative Council, and took evidence and reported thereon, and such Report was adopted by the said Council some time in the month of June last.

That, some time in the month of September last, a Select Committee of the said late Assembly was appointed, but not at the instance of your Petitioner, to inquire into and report upon the allegations contained in the said Petition to the said late Assembly, but no progress was made by the said last mentioned Committee in consequence of the dissolution of Parliament.

That, on the seventeenth day of January instant, a Select Committee of your Honorable House was appointed, but not at the instance of your Petitioner, to inquire into and report upon the said Petition to the said late Assembly.

That, although your Petitioner considers that the allegations in question, having been already fully proved before the said Committee of the said Legislative Council, and that, therefore, any further investigation would be only putting your Petitioner to unnecessary expense; yet, as the said Select Committee has been appointed by your Honorable House, and as your Petitioner has a private and peculiar interest in the matters in the said Petition to the said late Legislative Assembly referred to, your Petitioner is desirous of being represented before such Select Committee by Counsel and Attorney.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to grant leave to your Petitioner to appear and be represented before such Select Committee by Counsel and Attorney, in support of the allegations contained in the said Petition to the said Legislative Assembly.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

MUNICIPALITIES ACT AMENDMENT BILL OF 1861.

(PETITION OF MR. SAMUEL HEBBLEWHITE.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 February, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Samuel Hebblewhite, President of the Randwick and Coogee Roads Trust,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner has heard with regret that a Bill is now before your Honorable House having for its object the removal of all Toll Houses, and the suppression of all Tolls now collected on the Roads of the Colony, excepting the three Main Roads; and without making any provision whatever for the payment of the Debts now due by the Trustees of the Suburban Roads, or for their future safe and efficient maintenance.

In the year 1854 the Randwick and Coogee Roads were made, and the Act, 18 Victoria, No. 14, was specially prepared, and a Board of Five Commissioners appointed to carry out the provisions of the said Act, in keeping the Roads in good order and condition.

Your Petitioner begs also to state that, to keep the said Roads in order, which run two and a half ($2\frac{1}{2}$) miles through Crown Lands, and to make the necessary improvements in erecting Toll Houses, &c., the said Trust has been compelled to take advantage of the twenty-first (21) clause of their Act of Incorporation, in mortgaging the said Tolls, &c., and the Liabilities of the said Trust are at the present time about Nine Hundred Pounds (£900).

Your Petitioner, therefore, respectfully submits to your Honorable House, that the passing of the Bill, in its present shape, would deprive the Mortgagee of his vested rights and privileges, and inflict a grievous injury and loss on those who have purchased property and made improvements in the neighbourhood to which our Main Road leads. And your Petitioner humbly prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to exempt our Trust from the operations of the said Bill, or to refuse your assent to it altogether.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SAMUEL HEBBLEWHITE,
President, Randwick and Coogee Roads Trust.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CITY OF NEWCASTLE.

(PETITION FROM MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 February, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.
The humble Petition of the Municipal Council of Newcastle,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Memorialists, having been elected under the Municipalities Act of 1858, are charged with the formation and improvement of the public thoroughfares, and with the removal therefrom of all obstructions and dangerous impediments standing in the way of such improvement, and for the performance of such other duties as are imposed by the Act in behalf of, and for the better regulation of, the Municipality in question.

In pursuance of these duties, your Memorialists have found that a certain Bridge, known as the Australian Agricultural Company's Bridge, and which crosses the main thoroughfare of the City, is of so low an altitude as to become a positive obstruction to any except the most ordinary traffic, and is, beside, in general character and construction, quite inadequate and insubstantial for all the purposes required, and such as in the opinion of your Memorialists should be removed, and be substituted by one of a more adequate and superior character.

Your Memorialists have also, in commencing the formation and improvement of the same thoroughfare, found that Blanc-street, being intersected by the Coal and Copper Company's Railway Line on the level, as well as traversed by it for a considerable distance along the North side thereof, opposes serious and insuperable difficulties to the improvements necessary for the well-being of the City, as contemplated by your Memorialists, and utterly incompatible with the safety and convenience of the Inhabitants.

Your Memorialists, having taken into their serious consideration the best mode of relieving the City of these obstructions, have, after mature deliberation at different periods, come to Resolutions, of which the following are copies :—

“ That, in the opinion of this Council, the public convenience, and the necessity of “ the traffic of this City and District, imperatively demands that the A. A.
“ Company's Bridge across Hunter-street should be removed, and that the “ Mayor be requested to convey a copy of this Resolution to the General “ Superintendent.

“ That, in the opinion of this Council, the Line of Railway known as the Coal
“ and Copper Company's Tramway, and which traverses a considerable portion “ of the main thoroughfare of the City, is a dangerous and otherwise serious “ obstruction, and ought to be removed, the better to enable this Council to “ carry out the permanent improvements now in progress ; and that, in order

“ to obtain its removal, a respectful Memorial be presented by this Council to “ His Excellency the Governor General, praying him to bring this matter
 “ before the Executive Council, and to take such other steps as His Excellency “ may deem proper, in furtherance of the object; and, further, that the “ Mayor be authorized to prepare and forward that Memorial, signed by “ himself on behalf of this Council.

“ That, in consequence of several accidents, resulting in the loss of life, having “ occurred on the Lines of Railway used for the traction of Coals, by the A. A.
 “ Company, and the C. and C. Company, this Council is of opinion that the “ safety of the public imperatively demands that both these Companies should “ be compelled to cross the principal thoroughfare of the City at an elevation of
 “ at least fifteen feet, as recommended by the Engineer-in-Chief for Railways.”

Your Memorialists, finding that the Coal and Copper Company's Line had received the sanction of Parliament, felt that they had no alternative than to appeal to the same source for its removal; and being aware that Parliamentary proceedings, based on Petitions from the late Warden and other inhabitants of the City had been initiated, and report made thereon, your Memorialists respectfully invite the attention of your Honorable House to the same, and solicit that your Honorable House would be pleased to recommend that the plans referred to in these proceedings, and submitted by the Commissioners and Engineer-in-Chief of Railways, be put in operation, or such other relief afforded as your Honorable House may deem necessary, in order to enable your Memorialists to proceed satisfactorily with the permanent improvements of the City, and your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

Signed for, and at the request, and sealed with the Seal, of the Municipal Council of Newcastle, this 18th day of February, 1861.

(L.S.) JAMES HANNELL,
 Mayor.

SEWERAGE AND WATER SUPPLY.

(FOURTH YEARLY REPORT OF MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 24 April, 1861.

FOURTH YEARLY REPORT of the Municipal Council of the City of Sydney, of their Proceedings in connection with the Sewerage and Water Supply.

THE Municipal Council have the honor to submit, for the information of the Parliament of New South Wales, a Report of their Proceedings and Statement of their Accounts in connection with the Sydney Sewerage Act, 17 Victoria, No. 34, and the Sydney Water Act, 17 Victoria, No. 35, for the Year 1860.

SEWERAGE.

The Municipal Council have not thought it desirable, under the present state of the Sewerage Funds, to undertake any new works in connection with the under-ground drainage of the City since their last Report, and their operations have been entirely confined to the supervision of the connections of subsidiary drains made by private individuals with the public sewers. The number of connections made during the past year is 85, making a total of 702.

The Council beg to state, that the whole of the Sewerage Works commenced by the City Commissioners, and completed by the Corporation, are in perfect order, and have, during the almost unprecedented heavy rains of the past year, discharged the duties required of them in a most satisfactory manner.

WATER.

In their last Report the Municipal Council stated that the engines at Botany and the line of 30-inch main to Sydney had been completed, and had been in use for the last two months of 1859; and it affords the Council much pleasure now to state that the engines, main, and all the machinery, have since been in constant and successful operation daily (Sundays excepted) without any casualty whatever. During the year the single engine made 1,041,839 revolutions, and the coupled engines each 611,053 revolutions, as indicated by the counters attached to the engines. The total quantity of water sent to Sydney in 1859 was 326,008,080 gallons, and the consumption of coal at the Botany engine-house amounted to 1,462 tons.

The lower levels of the City are still supplied with water from the tunnel leading from Lachlan Swamp, although this supply was interrupted for a short period in the year by the falling in of a portion of the tunnel in the vicinity of the Military Barracks. As, however, the whole of the City mains are connected with the Botany works, and can be supplied from that source when occasions require it, no inconvenience was felt by the Citizens by the temporary stoppage referred to. Within the past few months the water has again found its way through the tunnel without any repairs to the defective portion having been undertaken, and so long as this continues to be the case it is not considered desirable to enter upon the enormous outlay which will be necessary for the restoration of the work.

During the past year a contract was entered into with Mr. P. N. Russell to supply the Council with £10,000 worth of 3, 4, 6, 9, and 12 inch pipes, of which four shipments have arrived, and the contract so far promises to be satisfactorily performed. Provision has been made in the same contract for the supply of an additional £10,000 worth during the year 1861, and £5,000 worth in 1862; and the Council hope, with the completion of this contract, to be in a position to distribute the supply of water to almost every portion of the City.

The following mains have been laid during the year 1860:—

Legislative Assembly.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SUPPLY OF WATER TO THE METROPOLIS.

(MEDICAL ASSOCIATION OF NEW SOUTH WALES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 10 May, 1861.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Council of the Australian Medical Association,—

SHWETH:—

That we, the undersigned Members of the Council of the Australian Medical Association, have had our attention drawn to the Clauses of the "Bill to Consolidate and Amend the Law relating to the City," now before your Honorable House, which have reference to the Supply of Water to this Metropolis.

That we have carefully taken the same into our consideration, with especial regard to the sanitary condition of the working classes.

That many portions of the Town, and chiefly those densely inhabited by the working classes, are not supplied with Water, except by the system of water-carts and direct purchase at a high price, and that the consequent defective supply is incompatible with the health and wellbeing of the population.

That, while the Water supplied by the City Corporation to the Metropolis is in itself pure and wholesome, it possesses, in an unusual degree, a solvent power upon lead.

That, in consequence of the Water being conveyed, for the most part, in leaden pipes, from the main to the houses, an amount of the metal is taken up which, in many instances, is productive of attacks of acute sickness or protracted ill health.

That, in consideration of the above, we feel it our duty to submit to your Honorable House—

- 1st. That it is highly desirable that every house or tenement intended for use as a habitation, or used as such, should possess a separate, ample, and continuous supply of pure Water.
- 2nd. That the landlord of every such house or tenement should be compelled to establish and maintain such supply wholly independent of the tenant.
- 3rd. That such supply should, in every instance, be made by the means of iron pipes, as communicating no poisonous quality to the Water, and being, we believe, not more costly.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray, that such steps may be taken to amend the Clauses of the Bill in question, as to your Honorable House may seem best calculated to carry out the above-mentioned objects.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

On behalf of the Council of the Australian Medical Association,

W. BLAND,
President.

Legislative Assembly.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CONFECTIONER'S LICENSE.

(NEW SOUTH WALES ALLIANCE FOR SUPPRESSION OF INTEMPERANCE.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 3 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the New South Wales Alliance for the Suppression of Intemperance, and for the Social, Moral, and Intellectual Elevation of the People,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

1. That the one pound tax, called the Confectioner's License, is burthensome and injurious in its operations.

2. That the total annual sum averaged, derived from it during the last seven years for the whole Colony, was barely £70 per annum, while last year it produced not more than £53, so that, as a source of revenue, this tax is comparatively valueless. Moreover, of the fifty-three licenses granted during the past year, only fourteen were required for the metropolitan district, including Sydney and its suburbs to a distance of eight miles, with a population of between 70,000 and 80,000 souls.

3. That a Confectioner's License can only be obtained by the applicant for it submitting to nearly the same long and tedious formalities (involving the expenditure of several days' time) as are requisite in applying for a Publican's License, which may or may not be expedient in the case of a Licensed Victualler, but which, when the sole privilege acquired by the holder is that of retailing ginger and spruce beer, appear totally uncalled for, and, indeed, little else than frivolous and vexatious.

4. That, although the objections above stated to the Confectioner's License suffice, as your Petitioners believe, to shew its inexpediency, yet they are altogether but trivial when compared with the serious evil caused by the difficulties and impediments which render so few persons willing to undergo the ordeal of applying for such licenses; the natural and obvious result of such obstacles being, to restrict, as already shown, within the narrowest limits, the legal sale and consumption, and thereby deprive the humbler classes of a cheap, wholesome, and refreshing beverage, without affording any compensating advantage to the community in the shape of revenue, or in any other conceivable mode whatever.

5. That neither in Great Britain nor in any other civilized country has a tax or restriction ever been imposed, or even proposed, on the liquors here authorized to be sold.

6. That in a climate where the high temperature renders the recurrence of thirst frequent, and often distressingly urgent, to debar the labouring classes from the use of an innocent and salutary drink, appears to your Petitioners to be both harsh and oppressive, while it operates as an incentive to intemperance by inducing them to have recourse to intoxicating liquids.

7. Taking all the above-mentioned facts and inferences into due consideration, your Petitioners feel justified in praying that your Honorable House will be pleased to adopt forthwith, the necessary steps to insure the prompt, total, and unconditional repeal of this license as it now exists, and thereby terminate an impolitic, unprofitable, and oppressive monopoly. Your Petitioners being firmly convinced that, by complying with this the prayer and object of their Petition, your Honorable House, without injuring or endangering the interests of the community at large, or of any portion of it, will confer a very acceptable, and a by no means inconsiderable, benefit on the working classes of this Colony.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

GRIEVANCES.

(PETITION OF JAMES PEGG.)

WEDNESDAY, 6 FEBRUARY, 1861.

Present:—

|----------------|--|-----------------|
| MR. DALGLEISH, | | MR. PARKES, |
| MR. MORRIS, | | MR. PIDDINGTON, |
| MR. SHEPHERD. | | |

HENRY PARKES, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. James Pegg called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You petitioned the Legislative Assembly some time ago? I did.
2. Will you look at that petition (handing a petition to the witness)—is that the petition which was presented on your behalf? It is.
3. In this petition you state that you arrived in the Colony with a promise of a grant of land and your discharge—will you explain to the Committee under what circumstances you received this promise, of what it consisted, who made it, and in what form you brought it to this Colony? After serving eleven years in the East Indies in the 17th Regiment, and having been in three campaigns under the Marquis of Hastings and General J. S. Wood, the regiment was called Home in 1823, and I was discharged with a broken constitution. I had entered the service when I was very young, the climate had taken effect upon me, and I was discharged in July, 1823. Some time in the latter part of 1825 there was a proclamation issued that a hundred and fifty out-pensioners were to be enrolled as veterans to come out here as overseers for the superintendence of convicts and public works. I tendered my service. I was duly examined at Lichfield, in Staffordshire, by the doctor of the Staffordshire Militia, by whom I was passed as fit for service. I came out here and served four years, when an order was sent out for our corps to be disbanded, and it was left to our option either to return Home or to receive a grant of land. This grant of land had been promised to us by Colonel Christie, the Commandant of Chatham, before we came out. I accepted the grant of land. My first grant was in Bathurst, and I left my wife here in Sydney to take possession of the grant. She had been confined only a few days before I left her, was taken bad with inflammation of the bowels in consequence of a cold caught after her confinement, and died. As soon as I got the account of her death I came down to Sydney, and being left with a young family I was allowed to exchange grants with a man of the name of John Kingabby. His grant was at Botany, mine was at Bathurst. I took his, and went and resided on the ground for some time; but in consequence of part of it being a bog, and part sand-hills, I could not obtain a living on it, and the Government then undertook to drain the land. I then came to Sydney to work at my trade, hoping to make a little money, and then to go back and improve the land. During the time I was in Sydney I received a letter from Governor Darling stating that the grant was cancelled. I applied to his successor,

Mr. J. Pegg.
6 Feb., 1861.

- Mr. J. Pegg. Sir Richard Bourke, to be allowed to take possession of it again. The answer I got from him was, that he could not undo what another Governor had done. I then let the matter rest till Sir George Gipps came here. I tried him, and his was precisely the same answer, that he could not undo what another Governor had done. Then it rested till the latter part of Sir Charles Fitz Roy's Government, when Mr. George Robert Nichols persuaded me to apply to Sir Charles, and he did so for me. I received a letter from Sir Charles Fitz Roy, which I thought I could have produced here this morning; it had been left in the hands of Mr. Hayward, but when I called upon him he could not find it. In that letter Sir Charles made a tacit acknowledgment that the claim was just, but said he was sorry he had no funds at his disposal out of which he could make me compensation. He advised Mr. Nichols to bring the matter before the Council. I accordingly had a petition drawn up, and it was accepted; but nothing further was done till the new Council was established, and we had a free Constitutional Government. Mr. Nichols then died, and I left the matter in your hands. This grant was given in lieu of a passage Home, and I consider that I am entitled either to the land or to compensation. The grant was given to another veteran who came out in the same way that I did, and he told me himself that he sold it for £360, and I think it a hard case that another man should get the advantage of my labour.
- 6 Feb., 1861.
4. Have you no documents you can lay before us? My papers were lodged with Mr. Nichols, and I never received them after his death; but there was a printed Council Paper among them, in which my case was mentioned.
5. You have no written papers? No, I have none; but among my papers that Mr. Nichols had there was a printed report brought up by Capt. Perry in 1847, and in that report he testified that I was entitled to a grant of land.
6. You refer to a report of Deputy Surveyor General Perry? Yes. Several of the veterans had promises of grants similar to mine, which were subsequently cancelled under similar circumstances, still they got new grants of the original land.
7. Can you name any of those persons? John Duffy, messenger to the Attorney General, is one, and a man named William Taylor, also Thomas King and Grimes, 12 altogether.
8. Where was Duffy's land? At Kurrajong.
9. What is your age? 65.
10. By Mr. Shepherd: Do I understand you to say, that the first grant you received was at Bathurst? Yes.
11. What has become of that grant? In consequence of the death of my wife, whom I brought out from England, I exchanged it for this piece of land at Botany.
12. By Mr. Morris: Had you the sanction of Government to this exchange? Yes.
13. By Mr. Shepherd: In point of fact, you vacated the grant before it was cancelled? I left a man on it, but it was cancelled while I was in Sydney. I was well aware how it was done; there was a Sergeant Curran, who had more interest than I, and he got this grant. He afterwards sold it for £360; his widow told me so herself twelve months ago.
14. By Mr. Dalgleish: Had you a house upon that land? Yes, there was a slab hut.
15. Did you put it up yourself? No.
16. You say another veteran obtained the result of your hard work—I presume by that that you had expended labour on that land, and that you complain of the loss of improvements effected upon the grant, as well as of the grant itself? Yes.
- (The Chairman referred to the Votes and Proceedings of the Legislative Council for 1847, Vol. 1, p. 613.)
17. By the Chairman: Is this your grant—"Date of Order, 12th July, 1830, 100 acres, allotment No. 7, at Botany"? That is the grant.
18. You stated that in some report of the Deputy Surveyor General he acknowledged that you had a valid claim? Yes.
19. When was that report laid before the Council? In 1847.
20. By Mr. Piddington: Was the whole of the 100 acres you occupied a swamp? No, part was a swamp and part sand-hills.
21. How much would you say was swamp? Twenty acres.
22. Then eighty acres—the balance—was not swamp? Yes.
23. Why did you not reside on it? I did until all my means were expended. At the time I was on it you might drive down a pole fourteen feet six inches, and the water would be within a few inches of the top. Afterwards it was drained, and called Banks' Meadows.
24. Was the grant conditional upon residence? No.
25. Have you any copy of any papers —
26. By the Chairman: Was the report you refer to a table like this—(handing witness the Return at p. 613 of the Legislative Council Votes and Proceedings for 1847)? No, it was a different shape altogether from this.

Mr. Gilbert Wright called in and examined:—

- Mr. G. Wright. 27. By the Chairman: Do you know a person named James Pegg? Yes.
- 6 Feb., 1861. 28. How long have you known him? He came out in the ship along with me in 1825. We came out with Capt. Robinson.
29. Were you formerly in the army? Yes, I belonged to the 79th Regiment. We were called up from our pension list; a hundred came to this Colony, and fifty went to Van Diemen's Land. Mr. North, the Police Magistrate, was our Lieutenant.
30. You had some promise of a grant of land? At the time we were engaged we were inspected by a Board of Doctors, and we likewise had our characters. There were a hundred of us came out as overseers.

31. Was James Pegg one of these? He was one. We were to receive a free passage Home Mr. G. Wright. or to have a grant of land.
32. Did you get a grant of land in consequence of that promise? Yes, at Bathurst, opposite 6 Feb., 1861.
Mackenzie's.
33. Have you got it now? No; I am sorry to say I have not.
34. You sold it? Yes. I had twenty acres in cultivation. I sold it to Mr. George Rankin.
35. Had James Pegg a similar promise to you? Yes, he had it along with me.
36. Did he get the land? He got the allotment adjoining mine. There were nine of us up there. Some were sent to O'Connell's Plains, and some to Bathurst.
37. Did Pegg lose his land? No; his wife died, and in consequence of her loss there was an exchange made by him with one Kingabby, for some land at Botany.
38. Did you ever see any papers belonging to Pegg? No, I never saw any papers in reference to that, because I did not consider it requisite, for our grants were all free from the Crown, we had no quit-rents to pay. We had twelve months provisions, implements of husbandry, and one cow.
39. By Mr. Shepherd: You received that upon the express stipulation that you resided upon the land? Seven years; the land was not supposed to be saleable until the expiration of seven years. That was the condition, but I do not see when we forfeited our passage Home that they had a right to make that condition.
40. By Mr. Dalgleish: Do you know, or were you only told, that this exchange was made with Kingabby? I know it took place.
41. How? I knew Kingabby perfectly well, he came up to Bathurst.
42. How do you know he was entitled to a grant of land there? He made the exchange.
43. Are you certain that Kingabby did not purchase Pegg's land? I am certain he did not.
44. How are you aware of it? I cannot perfectly swear to it; but I know it was done by mutual consent.
45. Have you merely been told this, or do you absolutely know it? I know it.
46. How do you know it? I do not keep a statement of these things; what business have I with it.
47. By the Chairman: You knew both of these persons? Yes; one was appointed an overseer in the factory at Parramatta, and his wife was matron.

FRIDAY, 26 APRIL, 1861.

Present:—

MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. ROTTON,

MR. SHEPHERD,
MR. STEWART.

HENRY ROTTON, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Duffy called in and examined:—

48. By the Chairman: How did you come to this Colony? I came here with the New Mr. J. Duffy.
South Wales veterans.
49. Did you receive a grant of land in the Colony? I did. 26 April, 1861.
50. Under what conditions? Under the conditions that I should have 100 acres of land in place of having my passage paid Home.
51. That was the agreement made with you in England? No, the proclamation came out from England.
52. And you accepted the grant of land? I did.
53. Where was the grant? In the barony of the Kurrajong.
54. Was it given you under special conditions? It was given under the condition that we were to remain on it seven years before we got our deeds.
55. And in the event of your not doing so what was to be the consequence? It was to be cancelled, I suppose.
56. These were the conditions, that you were to remain on the land seven years before you would receive your deeds, and if you did not, then the grant was to be forfeited? It appears so. I did not exactly say that, but it appears they did do that.
57. When the land was given to you had you any letter of occupation, or any writing to shew your authority to hold the land? We had none, because we were sent up by the Government. Government drays went up and took us on the ground.
58. How did you get possession of the land? By having it marked out by a surveyor.
59. By Mr. Stewart: Who was the surveyor who went up to point it out? I think his name was Stapleton.
60. By the Chairman: Mr. Stapleton shewed you the ground? He gave us all the numbers of our grants, every one got the number of the farm allotted to him. In Windsor, Lieut.
Bell made lots of the land and we drew for the farms.
61. You drew the farm which was allotted to you? Yes.
62. Did you find out the locality yourself, or was it pointed out to you, and were you put in possession of it in any way? I found it out by the Government man who was there employed building the huts; he shewed us the marked trees which the surveyor had marked of the lines dividing one farm from another.

- Ma J. Duffy. 63. Were you in any official way placed in possession of your land, or had you to find it yourself? The surveyor was encamped up there at the time; we went up to Mr. Stapleton, and Mr. Bell gave us the orders he had got from Sydney. He sent up to Mr. Stapleton the locality we were to go to.
64. By Mr. Stewart: Do you recollect the date when you first went upon the land? I think, if I am not mistaken, it was in April, 1830.
65. By the Chairman: You do not exactly understand my question—you have just told us that you drew lots for the land in Windsor, to determine which piece of land you should be entitled to? Yes.
66. What I want to know is whether, when you went to take possession of the land, you found it by yourself, or whether a Government official placed you on it? There was no surveyor there to shew us the land, but Mr. Stapleton was there and gave us the numbers of our lots.
67. At the time you were told you might have one of these grants of land in lieu of the payment of your passage, were you not furnished with any conditions under which you were to occupy that land? We were furnished with no documents.
68. Was there any proclamation, or were there any regulations issued? There were regulations issued that we were to get farming implements and six months rations, and these were sent with us.
69. With regard to the conditions of residence which you just now told us of, how did you know that these conditions were imposed—You have just said that you got the land on the condition of residence for seven years; how did you know that these conditions were imposed? We knew by the proclamation that was out; it was read to us four months before we were discharged.
70. Then there was a proclamation detailing the conditions under which this land was granted? Yes.
71. Subsequently to that your grant was cancelled? Yes.
72. Did you ever reside on your land? Yes, for eighteen months.
73. And then you left it? I left it by being swept off it by a tremendous storm of hail and thunder coming and destroying everything we had in the place.
74. How long were you off the land before the grant was cancelled? I cannot tell that, because I did not hear it was cancelled for three years afterwards. I then heard it from Mr. Bowen, who lived above us.
75. Have you had the same piece of land granted to you again? The very same.
76. How long after it was cancelled was it re-granted to you? I think it was in 1847 or 1848 it was granted to me.
77. How long was that after it was vacated? I think eight or nine years; it was more than that, it was fifteen.
78. Can you state to the Committee what it was that induced the Government to grant you the land again? I cannot. It was brought before the Council here. I made several applications about it, and I could get no redress.
79. Was it brought before the Legislative Council? Yes.
80. Was there a Committee of Inquiry about it? I think there was about 1845. Mr. Plunkett brought it under the notice of the Council, and that resulted in the recommendation for me to get back my land; and I did get the land and my deeds, and I have the deeds now.
81. Cannot you recollect the reasons that were assigned for giving you the land back again after it had been cancelled? I cannot say that.
82. All you know is, that you got it back again; but you must surely know under what circumstances you considered yourself entitled to get the land back, as you had not complied with the conditions? Every reason, because, according to the proclamation, I paid three times the value of the land for it. If my wife and four children had had their passages, it would have cost three times the value of the land, which was then worth only 6s. an acre.
83. Then you go upon the equity of the matter—you say that you and your family would have been entitled to a free passage if you had not taken the land, that this was worth more than the grant, and that, therefore, you were entitled to the grant of land without any condition whatever? Yes, I do think so.
84. In making your application for the grant the second time, did you state the circumstances of your having been driven off the land? I did, and it was well known.
85. Did you give that as a reason why you thought you were entitled to get it back again? Yes. Mr. Bowen, who lives up there, made a report to the Government that we were driven off the land.
86. By Mr. Shepherd: That you were washed out? Yes; and had to leave the land, and the grant was then cancelled on account of our being off the land. There were twelve of us there, and we could not stop.
87. By the Chairman: Do you know anything of Pegg's case? I know very little about it. I know Pegg was entitled to a grant as well as myself.
88. Did he come out with you? No, before me. We came out in detachments with the prison ships as a guard. Some came in one ship, and some in another.
89. You are acquainted with Pegg? Yes.
90. Were you acquainted with him in those days? I was not.
91. You do not know anything with reference to his grant? I know his grant was cancelled.
92. Where was his grant? At Botany.
93. Do you know for what reason it was cancelled? I cannot say; I imagine for non-residence.
94. By Mr. Stewart: Do you know merely by hearsay that it was cancelled, or was there any any proclamation? There was no proclamation. I knew it from a clerk in the Brigade Office, Sergeant Curran. There was a proclamation out after we got our grants, that a sergeant was entitled to 200 acres, and a private to 100. When the proclamation came out, as I understand, Sergeant Curran made an application for another grant, and he got this grant of Pegg's at Botany. Mr. J. Duffy.

26 April, 1861.

95. By Mr. Shepherd: Do you know that Pegg had received a previous grant? I do not.

96. By the Chairman: What do you consider was the value of a free passage back to England? At that time I consider the value of a free passage for five of us would be, at the lowest calculation, £100.

97. How do you make five? Three children, my wife, and myself.

98. Were the Government bound to pay for the passage of your whole family? For the whole family.

99. Had Pegg a family? He had.

100. By Mr. Stewart: At what time was the corps disbanded? At the time we were discharged they were disbanding them in batches and sending them away to different localities. In 1831 the corps I belonged to was disbanded.

101. Was that about the time Pegg had his grant? Yes, within a year or so. I cannot exactly say whether Pegg went away with the first or second batch that were discharged.

102. As they got their grants they were discharged? Yes, some to Maitland, some to Botany, some to Bathurst, some to Five Islands.

103. By Mr. Shepherd: How long is it since you were first acquainted with Pegg? I have been acquainted with Pegg twenty years.

104. At the time when you were first acquainted with Pegg was he in possession of this land at Botany? No, he was not.

105. Had he given it up previous to that time? I do not know whether he was ever on the land.

106. You do not know the circumstances connected with the surrender of this land? No. I know nothing at all about it, except that I know Sergeant Curran, who was in the Brigade Office, got the land that was given to Pegg.

107. I suppose you heard that—you do not know it of your own knowledge? I only know it from what Sergeant Curran told me himself. (The Chairman referred to the Return of the Deputy Surveyor General relative to the cancellation of pensioners' grants, in Vol. I. of the Votes and Proceedings of the Legislative Council for 1847.)

108. By the Chairman: There are a large number of veterans here who have had their grants cancelled, and it appears that many of them were cancelled for non-residence? Yes.

109. Can you recollect the names of any of these whose grants have been restored? I can recollect Edward Grimes, John Elliott, William Heath.

110. Do you know any others? Thomas King.

111. How do you know that William Heath got his? I know by what he told me, not three weeks ago, that he got his returned.

112. Can you tell us the particular circumstances under which any of these grants were returned? I can tell no further about it than that I made an application myself to Mr. Plunkett, the late Attorney General, and he brought it before the Council, and the grants were returned to us.

113. At that time was there an inquiry, such as is now going on, with reference to the case of Pegg, and did you attend and give evidence? I did not, but there were many petitions went in from several of us.

114. You stated just now that you sent in two or three petitions? Yes.

115. Where did you send them? To the Colonial Secretary's Office. They were signed by a great many of us.

116. Did you send in any individually? No.

117. Have you a copy of any of these petitions? No.

118. Do you remember what the petitions set forth? Just what I said before: that we were entitled to our farms, in consequence of stopping here, according to the proclamation.

119. By the Chairman: Do you remember whether you set forth that you were compelled to vacate your lands in consequence of the floods? We did do that, and also owing to the bad state of the roads.

120. That you were flooded away and forced to escape for your life? Yes, I sent my family to Windsor, but I remained on the farm myself for three months.

121. This land was supposed to afford you the means of subsistence after you left the service? Yes, we determined to remain upon them, to cultivate them, and to get a living from them.

122. You say at the time you got this grant land was worth about 5s. an acre? Yes.

123. Did you get anything besides land? Yes, we each got a cow.

124. What was the value of a cow? Very little, for they were selling good milking cows at from 25s. to 50s.

125. Did you get anything else? Yes, we got a spade, a shovel, a hoe, a pick, and I think an axe.

126. What do you consider was the value of all that was furnished to you to start with—besides what you have enumerated you had rations, had you not? Yes, six months rations.

127. What was the value of that? I do not know.

128. Had you rations for the whole of your family? Half rations for each of my children and for my wife, and a whole ration for myself.

129. Can you state about what was the value of all you got from the Government to enable you to settle on the land? I cannot. Meat and flour were very cheap at the time.

130. Was it worth £50? No, it was not.

- Mr. J. Duffy. 131. Six months rations for the whole of your family would come to a good round sum? There were only three rations altogether.
- 26 April, 1861. 132. By Mr. Dalgleish: You got rations for six months, agricultural implements as you have described, a grant of land, and a house built upon it —? It was a slab hut.
133. It was the house you resided in? It was a slab hut, covered with bark.
134. What value do you put upon the hut, the land, the cow, the provisions, and agricultural provisions? I cannot say, I am sure.
135. I ask you the question because you say your passage to England would have cost a great deal more than the value of what you got? Certainly.*
136. And you have stated what you think the passage would have been worth? Yes.
137. You were entitled to a passage and you took this as an equivalent? Yes. †
138. Do you know if there was an absolute condition made when you took possession of this land that you were to reside on the land continuously for seven years, or that you were not to sell for seven years? That was the general thing, that we were to reside on the land for seven years, and were not to sell within that period.
139. Your plea for leaving the land was that you were no longer able to obtain a living by reason of your losses? By reason of the tremendous thunderstorm and hail.
140. By reason of your losses you were not able to carry on the conduct of your farm? Yes.
141. And you were compelled to send away your family? Yes, they had to go to Windsor and I had to live on cobs of corn which I ground on a tin punched with nails; and my wife and children lived at Windsor upon what they could get on credit.
142. Consequently you were obliged to leave there to earn a living for yourself and family? Yes.
143. In consequence of the representations made by you that the losses sustained by you rendering you unable to live on the farm, you had been compelled to leave it, it was re-granted to you fifteen years after? Yes.
144. By Mr. Shepherd: What was the cause of your wife's leaving the land at the first onset? Because she could not live there; we had nothing to eat.
145. Was that occasioned by the flood? Yes; the whole of the people about there sent their women and children away because they had nothing to support them with. We were washed out entirely, and everything we had. The crop, which we expected would go a good way in supporting us, was swept off the face of the ground.
146. Did you apply for that land afterwards? Yes, several times.
147. Was that after the flood had subsided, or was it then subject to be flooded again? It was not a flood at all; it was a thunderstorm, large lumps of ice, snow, and hail came down.
148. Am I to understand that it was not from any wish of your own that you vacated the land, but that you were compelled to do so by this storm? It was not my wish to leave it, I had determined to stop there as long as I lived.
149. By Mr. Stewart: How do you know the grant was cancelled? I saw it in the papers afterwards.
150. After you had withdrawn from the land in the way you have stated, did you ask the Government for your passage? No; I did not think it would be of any use.
151. Then you considered that you had accepted the piece of land with the conditions attached to it, as an equivalent for the passage? Yes, I did.
152. Still, though you could not get a living on the land, you thought you were not entitled to ask the Government for the money for your passage Home? I thought if I could get a trifle together in any way I would go on my farm again.
153. You stated that when you first went on the land the Government built a hut for you? Yes.
154. Did they fence in the land? No.
155. Did they give you the labour of any Government men? No.
156. No assistance in labour at all. No.
157. Do you remember the date of any of the petitions you have referred to, as having been sent in to the Colonial Secretary, to reinstate you and others who had their land in the same way? I cannot now, it is so long ago; but I know we got no answers to them, except one which was that my request could not be complied with.
158. Did you send in a petition by yourself? Yes.
159. And you got an answer to your petition, refusing its prayer? Yes.
160. Did you petition the Government at all after that? No; I went to Mr. Plunkett and asked him to bring it before the Council.
161. And it was Mr. Plunkett who afterwards succeeded in obtaining the land for you? It was.
162. And you know nothing more about it? No; I employed Mr. Chambers, the attorney, to send in some petitions, and he never got any answer, and then I went to Mr. Plunkett.

* NOTE (Added on revision):—Because I would, moreover, be entitled to draw the usual rate of pay upon my way to the Mother Country, namely, one shilling and five-pence per diem.

† NOTE (Added on revision):—And pay as above (i. e., in previous note).

Alexander Grant McLean, Esq., Acting Surveyor General, called in and examined:—

163. By the Chairman: There is a petition before us by a person of the name of Ralfe, on which your evidence is required, and for that you have been summoned; but there is another petition by a man named James Pegg, upon which the Committee have taken evidence, and it has incidentally appeared that you might give some information on that also. We are in some doubt as to the nature of the conditions of the grants that were issued to the veterans. This man has sent in a petition, stating that he came out here in 1826, as a veteran, that in 1831 he was discharged from the service, with the option of having his passage paid Home to England, or getting a grant of land, and that he took the grant of land. It seems that in those days there were conditions made with reference to those grants, that those who took them should reside on them for seven years before they got the deeds, and a very large number of those who took them up—we have 103 here enumerated (referring to a return)—did not comply with the conditions, and the land was forfeited. In some instances the land has been returned again to those who forfeited it; we have had one witness here just now, who has stated that the land was returned to him. We thought perhaps you could give us some information with reference to the original grants and their conditions, and with reference to the reasons why the land was returned to some and not to others? I could not give you any reliable information without making reference; no doubt these were special cases. The Governors had in their hands immense authority in those days, and, on people giving reasonable grounds for not having fulfilled the conditions, very probably the cancellation of the grant might be rescinded.
164. You do not know anything at present of the case of James Pegg? No.
165. Are there any papers in your office which would throw light on it? Yes; no doubt all the papers are accessible to me, either in my office, or the Office of Lands.
166. Would it occupy a long time to find them? Not at all; perhaps an hour or two.

A. G. McLEAN,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

ADDENDUM.

I annex a copy of a report prepared by the late Mr. Thompson, when Deputy Surveyor General and signed by the late Surveyor General, in the case of Pegg, and which report illustrates not only the case in point, but the principles on which such cases were dealt with by Government.

(53-1123.)

REPORT.

This Memorial having been presented by Pegg, with a view to obtain the sanction of the Governor General and Executive Council under the Act, 20 Vic., No. 15, for the trial of his case in the Supreme Court, I conclude that the object in referring it to me is, that the facts of the case should be set forth. They are, as far as the records of this office shew, as follows:—

- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 10th September, No. 29-835, the Surveyor General was directed to point out an allotment at Illawarra for Pegg.
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 26th November, No. 29-1114, the Surveyor General was informed that, as the allotment at Illawarra intended for Pegg had been otherwise appropriated, he was to report another allotment for Pegg, and accordingly the Surveyor General inserted, in his Half-monthly Abstract of selections, the allotment No. 1, at South Creek, for Pegg.
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 12th July, No. 30-842, the Surveyor General was directed to insert in his Half-monthly Abstract the names of the veterans to whom the eight Botany allotments were to be appropriated, and, amongst others, James Pegg's name appears for No. 7. However, as the allotment at South Creek had been previously appropriated to Pegg, the required insertion of his name was omitted.
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 21st June, No. 31-513, the Surveyor General was informed that the order for the land intended for Pegg, at Botany, was cancelled in consequence of his having failed to reside on it.
- By Surveyor General's letter of the 24th July, No. 30-304, to the Colonial Secretary, it was pointed out that Pegg had previously had appropriated to him the allotment No. 1, at South Creek, and asked which was to be cancelled: to this letter no reply was apparently received; but,
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 1st December, No. 31-1198, the Surveyor General was directed to appropriate Pegg's allotment No. 7, at Botany, to Roderick Ross, and to insert his name in the Half-monthly Abstract, which was done. This, however, proved to be an error as regarded the name, for
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 25th February, No. 32-189, possession of No. 7 was authorized to J. B. Curran, as an additional allotment. Thus the cancellation ordered by Colonial Secretary's letter, of the 21st June, No. 31-513, was made to apply to the allotment at South Creek, and not to that at Botany. Pegg has stated in this office that he never heard of the appropriation to him of the allotment at South Creek—and that he was located on the allotment at Botany is confirmed by a minute of the late Sir Thomas Mitchell, who remarked that he saw Pegg there. The allotment at South Creek was subsequently sold to one Hodgson.
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 19th June, No. 47-240, the Surveyor General was informed, in reference to the revocation of the cancellation of the allotment of the veteran Duffy, at the Kurrajong, that deeds were to issue to claimants of all the allotments in that situation not otherwise disposed of.
- By Colonial Secretary's letter of the 3rd August, No. 47-304, the Surveyor General was informed, with reference to the above letter, that it was the intention of His Excellency the Governor to apply the rule laid down as to the soldiers located at Kurrajong, to all cases of a similar nature.

Nothing further, as far as I can gather, has been ruled since, and Pegg's order may, therefore, be considered as cancelled, because of the appropriation made to him having been otherwise disposed of: nor do I remember that any case similar to Pegg's has been recently brought before the Government; but I would observe that I fail to perceive the propriety or justice of the distinction, which confines the revocation

A. G. McLean, Esq. revocation to those cases in which the allotments have not been otherwise disposed of, which resulted merely from the circumstance of the allotments being so valueless as to be unsaleable.

26 April, 1861. It is to be considered, also, a favourable circumstance in Pegg's case, that he went to live on the allotment at Botany, of which he never obtained any formal possession, whilst the allotment at South-Creek, which was regularly appropriated to him, he alleges he never saw or heard of, and, therefore, could not have resided on, and, consequently, the cancellation for non-residence is not, I apprehend, tenable.

I may also add that the giving of land to these veterans, in lieu of their passage Home, and the then revoking of the gift, because they had not sufficient pecuniary means to extract a living from the land, was, in my opinion, a very questionable proceeding, and I very much doubt if it were competent to the Government, under any circumstances, to reclaim what had been given for a valuable consideration viz., a passage to England.

PETITION OF JAMES RALFE.

James Ralfe, Esq., called in and examined:—

James Ralfe, Esq. 167. By the Chairman: You have sent a petition to the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, setting forth certain grievances, and asking a consideration of your case? Yes.

26 April, 1861. 168. Is that the petition (handing original petition)? It is.

169. That is your signature? Yes.

170. You are called here to give evidence in support of this petition—will you now state your case to the Committee? At the latter end of 1824, after serving my time to an eminent surveyor in England, I had the honour to receive an appointment from Lord Bathurst to the Surveyor General's Department in New South Wales, with a salary of £250 per annum, and the usual allowances of the Colony. Soon after my arrival here a regulation was made by the Secretary of State, under which I was made fourth surveyor, as will be seen by this letter, dated 1st November, 1828. (Letter read. Vide Appendix A.) Upon that arrangement, as soon as vacancies occurred, I made application for promotion and the salary attached to such promotion, and in answer to that application I received this letter, dated 10th April, 1839. (Letter read. Vide Appendix B.) This letter, it will be seen, invites me to enter upon the contract system, which was then being brought into operation, in preference to pressing my application for promotion. I then put in a tender immediately, seeing that there was no chance of getting promotion. In doing that I was actuated by two feelings, one was to improve my condition, and the other was to convince the Government of what I could do if thrown upon my own resources; because, unfortunately, in those days, we did not give satisfaction, in consequence of the deficiency of equipment and being made to go so many miles from our field of operations to contractors to supply us with provisions, instead of having the power to buy on the spot from settlers around us. I received in reply to my application the following letter, dated 6th July, 1840. (Letter read. Vide Appendix C.) I desire the particular attention of the Committee to that part of this letter which says that the amount of salary opposite my name in the pay abstracts would be omitted, but that in other respects I would still be considered an officer of the department. I looked upon this as a promise which would be held sacred, and that I should not, after seventeen years service, in any way compromise my situation as a salaried surveyor by entering into this contract. One of my friends, Capt. Geary, of Port Macquarie, even called on Mr. Deas Thomson to ask whether I did compromise my situation by so doing, and the answer was, not in the least—that it was an experiment on the part of Sir George Gipps, and if it succeeded, well and good; if not I should go back to my rank in the department.

171. What was your position then? I was a salaried surveyor, and had been so since 1825.

172. At what salary? £350 it was then.

173. Then you gave up your salary at that time to survey by contract, upon the understanding that you should not lose your official rank? Precisely so. With this understanding I purchased all the equipment from the Government that was in my hands, at very enormous prices—£50 for horses which did not afterwards fetch £5, owing to the bankruptcy which prevailed throughout the whole Colony. Well, I pursued my work, as a contract surveyor, on the south bank of the Macleay River. Sir Thomas Mitchell, who had been absent in England, returned in the meantime, and he was excessively offended at my having taken this contract, and at what he was pleased to consider, the interference with his department. I wish to say as little as possible on the subject now, as Sir Thomas Mitchell is departed, but he certainly was so angry that he persecuted me very much indeed, and kept back my money, although my agreement was that I was to have seventy-five per cent. as I sent in my surveys, the remaining twenty-five per cent. being kept in hand till the surveys were considered satisfactory. I suffered a great deal in consequence; and Sir Thomas Mitchell interfered with the terms of my contract, and wished me to go on another system, which I declined doing. On the 26th November, 1841, I suddenly received this letter, putting an end to my employment.

employment in the public service, without the slightest previous intimation. (Letter read. Vide Appendix D.) Now here is the letter of the 10th September, 1841, which, as Sir Thomas Mitchell says in the letter I have just read, he thought it his duty to lay before the Governor. I should mention, in explanation, that he had previously written to me to make some alteration in my mode of surveying, which I, of course, could not do, by the nature of my contract. (Letter read. Vide Appendix E.) That was the cause, the sole cause, as far as I could ascertain, of the loss of my contract, and also the loss of my position in the Surveyor General's Department. I made every effort to get reinstated, but all in vain; and I received a letter on the 25th April, 1842, to this effect. (Letter read. Vide Appendix F.) I thought it was my duty to bring this letter to shew that I have received £150. I was advised by my friends here not to take that, as by doing so I would appear to compromise my claim; but the Colony was then in a calamitous state, and as it would have been twelve months before I could have communicated with my friends in England and received a reply, I felt bound in honour to accept that money, in order that I might have the means to pay the little creditors around me to whom I was indebted for supplies and so on.

174. Was that sum granted you as a gratuity for the loss of your situation? For the loss of my situation and contract, both. It says it is given in lieu of taking back the equipment. I had paid £50 for horses for which I could not then get £5, and pack animals in the same proportion.

175. By Mr. Stewart: What amount did you pay the Government for the equipment? I cannot recollect exactly, but I think about £200.

176. An amount larger than the amount you received? Yes, if I recollect aright.

177. By the Chairman: Do you say you accepted this sum of £150 in consideration of your loss of employment? I was obliged to take that or nothing; I had no alternative, as I owed little debts to tradesmen, which I had no other means of paying. After this I remained out of employment, so far as the Government were concerned, until August, 1852, when I was appointed a licensed surveyor in the same district, and I have been in that capacity up to the present moment.

178. By Mr. Stewart: Have you made any further application to the Government, previous to presenting this petition? I sent Home a petition to the Secretary of State, and in 1847 I went to England, and my case was laid before Earl Grey, who was then Colonial Minister, and he referred me back to Sir Charles Fitz Roy, but Sir Charles Fitz Roy declined entering into the matter, as it was connected with his predecessor. There the matter ended. In 1852 I was appointed a licensed surveyor in the district of Port Macquarie, where I have been residing, but there is so little work to be done there, that were it not for an income allowed me by my father I should not have been able to continue in that employment. Not in any one year did my earnings amount to what is allowed a salaried surveyor for field equipment. In fact no surveyor could have maintained himself in the district, unless he was situated as I was, with some little income and a house of my own. Now there is nothing whatever to do.

179. By the Chairman: Do you still hold that office? Yes.

180. Have you anything further to state? No; I believe what I have said completes it in as concise a form as can be.

181. Then if I understand your application aright now, what you seek to recover is some compensation for loss of office when you were dismissed by Sir Thomas Mitchell? Yes—taking all into consideration—that I have rendered 26 years service to the Colony in the Surveyor General's Department, and that I was debarred from getting a grant of land, or any means of getting on in the Colony, on account of my official situation. There are many instances where gentlemen are now holding additional grants and their pensions as well. Many had promises of grants before they would join the department. I got no grant, because General Darling brought out an order that no subordinate officers were to receive grants of land while they remained in the service, and before I left the system of grants was put an end to altogether.

182. Sir Thomas Mitchell's letter of the 26th November, 1841, to you, complains of your insubordinations? Yes, but no charges were ever brought against me.

183. Was any explanation required from you? No. I do not know what he alludes to unless it was that he thought that as a contract surveyor I was bound to go and do whatever he told me. That is the insubordination in the letter I have read. No charges were ever brought against me. I recollect writing particularly, asking for an investigation, that my conduct might be inquired into.

184. Were you summarily dismissed in this way from the Government service without any investigation? I was, without any investigation. Make what effort I would I could get no investigation; nor do I know to this hour what the late Sir Thomas Mitchell could have written when he thought it necessary to forward that letter to the Governor.

185. Have you ever made any application to the Government before presenting this petition? Yes, there was constant correspondence. I followed Sir George Gipps Home, and Sir Thomas Mitchell both; and my father, who is a very rigid man, was so incensed at the treatment I had met with, that he declared he would have them both before the Bar of the House of Commons.

186. Was it in consequence of your previous connection with the Government, and the way in which you were dismissed, that you have been appointed to the position of licensed surveyor? No, I merely applied on the broad principle that I was living down there and knew the district, having been the original surveyor there in 1828, when it was a penal settlement. The late Sir Thomas Mitchell threw obstacles then in my way; he would not recommend me, and I was obliged to apply to Sir Charles Fitz Roy; nor could I get from him any testimonial when I was in London. He appeared to me to be afraid to give me a testimonial. It was always an impression on my mind that there was something else written that I have never seen or heard of.

James Ralfe,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

187. Is this the first application for an inquiry into your case since the establishment of Responsible Government? Yes, I presented this petition to the House in 1856, and it was referred to the Committee of which Mr. G. B. White, who was himself formerly in the Survey Department, was Chairman; but it was never reported on.

188. Have you ever given evidence before? No, I have never been called upon.

189. Your case never was entered into by the Committee? No.

190. You are not aware of having been guilty of any acts of insubordination that would justify your dismissal? Not at all.

191. In your capacity as licensed surveyor would you be so subservient to the office as you would have been as a salaried surveyor? No, there is greater latitude allowed, I believe, to a licensed surveyor, because any particular order may affect his interest very much, whereas a salaried surveyor, as long as his pay goes on, has no right to complain.

192. I should gather from these letters that you have handed in, that some dispute must have arisen with reference to your work, and the payment claimed for it—I do not mean the character of it, but the claim you made for payment—because in one letter you state you do not know how you are to be paid? Sir Thomas Mitchell wanted me to do work that I had not contracted for—to go tracing and making a survey of the geographical features of the country, instead of laying out parishes into square miles. I wrote to say that I could not comply with his request, and neither could I carry out a survey on his principles without additional pay; because in making a running survey I should have had to move every day—of course at greater expense—where, as under the contract, my tent would only require to be removed once in a month or six weeks.

193. Do you think it was in consequence of that that Sir Thomas Mitchell took this view of your conduct? I was informed there was a dispute between Sir George Gipps and Sir Thomas Mitchell on this very point. Sir Thomas complained of Sir George Gipps having interfered with his department during his absence in England—that was what I was given to understand by many influential gentlemen here—and then Sir George Gipps said Mr. Ralfe's contract must cease, but you cannot have him back again. When the subject was mentioned to Mr. Wentworth, by a friend of mine, he said, "Well, Ralfe was kidnapped." Another thing I will tell you—I was so hurt at this proceeding altogether, that I wrote circular letters to every Member of Council in those days, and I pointed out that I and another surveyor, on the other side of the river, had done for the sum of £1,800, more than the whole department put together had done for £18,000. Sir George Gipps was indignant beyond everything at it, and said it was not a fair comparison; but it never was gainsayed or disproved by any one. Sir George Gipps did an admirable thing if he had gone on with it. There is nothing to prevent this country being surveyed by contract, at from 3d. to 6d. an acre.

194. By Mr. Dalgleish: What did you understand by the "usual allowances," mentioned in your petition? Allowances for equipment.

195. What was your understanding when you left England? That I was to have so much for a house—£50 a year I think—and 2s. 6d. a day for forage for a horse.

196. And a salary of £250 a year? Yes. A grant of land was also understood to be included.

197. What do you understand by the words "almost invariably included," in your petition, when you speak of the grant of land. That shews there must have been some special arrangement? Had I, when I landed, been a little quicker in my movements I should have got my grant; but being sent a way on distant service immediately, I had not an opportunity before General Darling arrived with an order forbidding subordinate officers to receive grants so long as they remained in the service.

198. Did you understand that you should get a grant of land? I did, clearly, from my father. I was a very young man, only 21 years of age, when I came out; and the correspondence, with respect to my appointment, all took place between my father and the Secretary of State.

199. You complain that you had to purchase horses and equipment from the Government prior to taking this work by contract? Yes; I must have bought equipment somewhere, and I took it from the Government at their own valuation.

200. Am I to understand that you purchased it at an exorbitant rate, knowing it to be an exorbitant rate? No; it was considered a fair price at the time.

201. What was the value of the equipments at the time you lost your contract? They were unsaleable—everything was unsaleable at that time.

202. How long did you hold the contract? Hardly twelve months.

203. Was the Colony plunged in universal insolvency in so short a period of time—were things saleable at fair prices at the beginning of the year, and before the end of it only at such a violent reduction as you have described? Yes.

204. The fall in value was sudden? Yes.

205. It was not a gradual decline? No; it was as sudden as possible. Horses went from £50 to £5. I declare I could not sell horses for £5, for I brought them into the market and could not get it.

206. What was your profit on your contract compared with your usual salary as a surveyor? I earned about £900 altogether.

207. In a less period than twelve months? Yes, rather under twelve months; but out of that all the equipment and the maintenance of my men had to be paid for.*

208. What were your expenses for men and provisions? I had eight men. I had only to clothe and feed them; they had no wages.

209.

* NOTE (Added on revision):—And I relinquished my survey allowances, upwards of £400. (Vide Appendix G.)

209. What might be the cost of that? Say a shilling a day each man.*
210. Considering that you were afterwards allowed £150 on account of the equipment being thrown on your hands, and subtracting from your gross earnings the expense of provisioning your men, it is quite evident you must have received considerably more than you would have done in the shape of salary? I should if I had had six months more.
211. By the Chairman: Can you state the gross sum you really received beyond all expenses? I cannot recollect it just now.*
212. By Mr. Dalgleish: They were Government men, I presume, that you had under you? Yes, prisoners.
213. Your chief complaint is, that you were deprived of your official rank in the service of the Government? Yes.
214. Do you know if any fault has ever been found with the way in which your surveys were made? The contract surveys?
215. The contract surveys? No, they were highly approved of; I know I was complimented on them.
216. By the Chairman: You have no complaint to make with reference to your contract not being so remunerative as your situation would have been? No.
217. You complain of your dismissal? I complain of my dismissal, after being desirous to comply with the wishes of the Government. In a few years more I should have been entitled to a retiring gratuity, according to what other gentlemen received.
218. In your petition you state that you lost your official appointment in consequence of the Legislature refusing to vote the money, but the letter you have read from Sir Thomas Mitchell seems to have been the cause of your losing it? The department was reduced. Mr. Rusden, who is now a Member of the House, was reduced, and so were others; but Mr. Rusden was reinstated. Mr. Darke, who had a pension allowed him the other day, was also reduced; and I believe his case was somewhat similar to mine.
219. Were you actually dismissed by Sir Thomas Mitchell before this reduction was made in the department. You say here "that your petitioner in less than twelve months thereafter, before he could possibly redeem his outlay, was suddenly deprived of his contract, and (in consequence of the Legislature refusing to vote money for the Survey Department) of his official appointment also, without any cause of complaint; and your petitioner was in consequence reduced to the most indigent condition." Now you have handed in a letter from Sir Thomas Mitchell dismissing you from the service? Yes.
220. Was that before the Legislature refused to vote money for the department? Yes, it was; but Sir George Gipps said he had not money to pay the Survey Department—at that time it was paid out of the Military Chest—and considerable reductions were made.
221. Did you enter the service under any particular conditions as to the term of your service? No.
222. Was there not an understood condition? It was generally talked of that there was to be a retiring gratuity after twenty years.
223. Was that the understanding in the case of persons in the Government service, who were considered permanently on the staff, unless dismissed for incompetency? I always understood that. I was very young at the time, and it was principally my father who arranged it all.
224. By Mr. Shepherd: In point of fact the conditions were not carried out in your case as respects the grant of land? No; nor as regards increase of salary.
225. As far as I understand from your petition, you did not come here to ask for compensation for any real losses, but in consequence of the intimation that your position as licensed surveyor would be discontinued? I am now incompetent for field duty; I have been so ill from the exposure, that I have been advised to give up the field duty. I cannot go on through swamps and brushes, under an almost vertical sun, as I used to do, without the most serious consequences.
226. The fact is you are now wishing to obtain a pension? I do not care how it is. I wish the case to be fairly looked into. I came here a young man; I have devoted my life to the service, and now I am worn out in it. I still have my mental faculties, I am happy to say; but if I go out in the sun for one day's work, it knocks me up for two. I have not had any chance of benefiting myself in any shape or form by grants that others in the department have had.
227. By the Chairman: If I understand your complaint aright, it is that you were summarily dismissed without cause; whereas, if you had remained in the Government service three years longer, you would have been entitled to a retiring pension? Yes, that is what I was given to understand—not when I left England, but after I came here.
228. In consequence of your dismissal, you remained several years out of employment, and you were deprived of your chance of a retiring allowance? Yes, that is exactly my case.
229. I think it is necessary for you to prove that there were no grounds for your dismissal, but there does not appear to be any evidence before the Committee on that point? That letter contains the only ground that ever I heard of, I give you my word of honour, why I should not have retained my rank in the department. As I said before, I believed—and it was the general impression—that it was because of the want of money on the part of Sir George Gipps that others were dismissed as well as me, and it was taken advantage of, and I was not allowed to come back.
230. By Mr. Dalgleish: How long were you in England after your dismissal? Two years; I went in 1847 and came back in 1849.
231. During that period you were in communication with the Colonial Government? With the Secretary of State for the Colonies at Home in Downing-street.

James Ralfe,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

232.

* Vide Appendix G.

- James Ralfe, Esq.
26 April, 1861.
232. You say you understood you were entitled to a pension—what authority have you to point to to shew that you had reasonable cause at that time to expect a pension? It was a general understanding in the department; I never had it in writing.
233. There was no special arrangement with you that you should have a retiring allowance? No.
234. You accepted a sum of money as a retiring gratuity, did you not? I accepted £150 in lieu of taking back the equipment.
235. It is specifically named in the letter as a retiring gratuity? Yes.
236. And you now plead that you accepted it from necessity? Yes; and I should wish the Committee to consider whether £150 was sufficient after seventeen years service.
237. It was after this that you went to England and endeavoured to re-open the case there? Yes.
238. And although you had considerable interest there—? No, I had not, because the Whig Ministry came in, and my father's friends were of the other party.
239. You might have obtained what you sought through political interest? My father gave me to understand that if his friends had remained in power he would have had me righted.
240. By Mr. Stewart: There was a general reduction of the public departments at the period when your services were discontinued? Yes, there were considerable reductions at that time.

(CIRCULAR.)
(No. 197.)Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 1 November, 1828.

Sir,

The following is an extract of a letter I have received from the Colonial Secretary, dated 31st October, informing me of arrangements which the Right Honorable the Secretary of State has been pleased to authorize respecting the Salaries and Allowances of the Officers and other persons employed in the department for the survey of this territory, viz. :—

| Surveyors. | To receive as follows, viz. :— |
|-------------------|--------------------------------|
| " Four. | First £400 per ann. |
| | Second 375 " |
| | Third 350 " |
| | Fourth 320 " |

" The above is the maximum salary of the respective gradations.

" The Surveyors and Assistant Surveyors will receive an allowance of 2s. 6d. per diem for a horse, when actually kept by them for the performance of their duties, to be certified upon honor, and one ration each when employed in the field, but no other allowance whatever."

The above arrangement, in those cases to which it applies, is to take effect from the 1st of January, 1828, which will entitle the persons then employed on the establishment to the augmentation of salary above specified, on the 1st of January, 1829. The allowances for lodging-money, which the Assistant Surveyors have hitherto received, will be continued until the end of the present year, from which time the augmentation of salary will take place.

His Excellency the Governor has, therefore, been pleased to appoint the Assistant Surveyors hereinafter named to the situation of Surveyors, until the pleasure of the Secretary of State shall be known, viz. :—

Mr. Robert Hoddle,
Mr. T. B. Richards,
Mr. James Ralfe,
Mr. Heneage Finch.

The appointment of Mr. Robert Hoddle to act as Deputy Surveyor General is, therefore, cancelled.

Surveyor General's Office,
10 April, 1839.

Sir,

With reference to your letter of the 30th ultimo, urging your claim to an increase of salary, I have to acquaint you that the object of the present Government is to make the rate of remuneration for services commensurate with the quantity of work performed, and that already two tenders to survey by contract have been accepted, and a third is under consideration.

I would, therefore, suggest to you the expediency of weighing the probability of improving your condition, by entering into the views you once entertained with respect to the contracting system, before I submit a question, the issue of which appears extremely problematical.

Surveyor.

Surveyor General's Office,
6 July, 1840.

Sir,

No. 40-50 of 10
Nov., 1840.

Having forwarded to the Governor your letter of the 29th May last, in which you tender to survey, on the south bank of the M'Leay River, on the same terms as those agreed upon with the contractor for the north bank, sections and detached portions, but with an allowance in this latter case for travelling expenses, I have to inform you that I am authorized to accept your tender, as to the survey of any blocks of land, but it does not appear desirable or necessary to entertain the proposal with respect to detached portions of land, and which imply the question of mileage. If parties will establish themselves beyond the reach of regular survey, they can have no just reason to complain of delay in the measurement measurement of their lands; but the Government is disposed to render every facility towards this object, whenever it can be effected without prejudice to the public interests. James Ralfe, Esq.

I enclose, for your acceptance, a specification similar to that which has been furnished to the contractors employed in other parts of the Colony, and, although it comprises much detail with which you are already acquainted, it is considered necessary to embody the whole in the conditions of contract; and, upon your signifying your intention to proceed upon this system, the amount of salary opposite your name will be omitted in the Pay Abstracts; in other respects, you will still be considered an officer of this Department. With respect to the baggage, animals, and articles of equipment you may wish to retain, you will be at liberty to name a qualified person to meet the Police Magistrate, who has been invited to form a Board to value the equipments thus to be taken over, and the amount of their valuation will be deducted, at a convenient period, from your account, the advances upon which, as your work proceeds, will be at the rate of 75 per cent. upon the whole. The men of your party you wish to retain will be assigned to you during your contract, and are to be maintained entirely at your charge.

Surveyor General's Office,
26 November, 1841.

Sir,
Having felt it my duty to submit for the consideration of the Governor your letter of the 10th September, 1841, I have received an order from the Colonial Secretary by which I am informed that it is His Excellency the Governor's direction that your employment as a Contract Surveyor must cease; and that as it seems hopeless to look for anything like respect or subordination from you to the head of your department, His Excellency cannot for the present sanction your employment in any other way in the service of the Government. You will, therefore, be pleased to place your party in charge of the Police Magistrate, as also your surveys, field books, all tracings, and any other property of the public.

I have, &c.,
T. L. MITCHELL.

Contract Surveyor Ralfe.

E.

Port Macquarie,
10 September, 1841.

Sir,
By virtue of the 17th paragraph of the specification of the terms of my contract, I beg leave to request you will be pleased to inform me with respect to that part of the Surveyor General's letter of the 27th July last, No. 41-235, wherein I am directed to "so arrange my work that I may be able at any spot to take up the section lines"—if I am to mark the side lines of the portions, and on both banks of the streams, and to mark the entire section through which a river may pass, and fix the four corner trees; or if I am only to trace the streams and mark a tree line there.

You must be aware that I cannot fix any point or the side lines of a portion without running a trace or proof line; in fact, a surveyor must always close a triangle or a square to insure the accuracy of his work.

I enclose a sketch of part of the M'Leay, with the section lines drawn in pencil, on which I shall feel very much obliged by your shewing, in red lines correctly what is required, and for what I shall be paid.

I have, &c.,
JAMES RALFE,

(No. 42-122.)

Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 25 April, 1842.

Sir,
Having forwarded to His Excellency the Governor your letter of the 11th ultimo, in which you urge that your equipment be taken at a valuation, with a recommendation that, instead of complying with your request, which would have been to purchase articles not required by the department, you should be allowed a retiring gratuity of £150,—I have received a letter in reply from the Colonial Secretary, stating that His Excellency had acceded to my recommendation; and I have to express my satisfaction that His Excellency has been pleased to reconsider your case, and to decide thus favourably. The Colonial Treasurer has authority to pay you this money.

I have, &c.,
T. L. MITCHELL.

James Ralfe, Esq.,
Late Surveyor.

G.

Upton House, St. Leonard's,
1 May, 1861.

Answer No. 206, et sequente.

In order to remove any misapprehension which my evidence, on Friday last, may have occasioned, relative to the loss or gain I sustained in the survey I undertook by contract in 1841, I beg leave to submit the following account of my outlay and receipts on that occasion, which, in the expenditure side, I believe to be rather under than over the true amount, viz. :—

| £ s. d. | | Received from the Government— | |
|----------------------------------|----------|-------------------------------|-----------|
| | | £ s. d. | |
| Paid Government for animals.. | 180 0 0 | For survey of 96,000 acres | |
| Salary relinquished | 375 0 0 | of land at 2¼ per acre.. | 900 0 0 |
| Forage allowance | 50 0 0 | Gratuity | 150 0 0 |
| Rations | 20 0 0 | | 1,050 0 0 |
| Eight (8) men, at £30 | 240 0 0 | Deduct expenses.... | 940 0 0 |
| Dray, tarpaulin, harness, &c?.. | 25 0 0 | | £110 0 0 |
| Forage for horses | 50 0 0 | | |
| Two tents | | | |
| Instruments, stationery, &c... } | | | |
| | £040 0 0 | | |

leaving a balance, apparently, in my favour, of £110, with an unsaleable and useless equipment thrown upon my hands; shewing clearly that I had "not redeemed my outlay," for had I not taken this contract I should have been in the receipt of my usual salary and allowances, amounting to upwards of £400.

James Ralfe,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

I, therefore, most respectfully submit that the Government should, in justice, have reimbursed me to that amount, or allowed the continuance of my contract for some time longer, rather than have deprived me of it without any previous notice, and compelled me to take £150 as a retiring gratuity, when I had never expressed the slightest wish to retire from the service, but, on the contrary, had fully relied upon the promise given me, in writing, that I should still retain my rank in the Surveyor General's Department.

The Government, on this occasion, obtained a survey marked off into parishes, and prepared for sale, of 96,000 acres (ninety-six thousand acres), which, at the minimum price of only 5s. (five shillings) per acre, would at that time have realized £24,000 (twenty-four thousand pounds), upon the mere outlay of £900 (nine hundred pounds); and as I had thus shown the advantage of surveys by contract, I think it will be admitted that there were no grounds for so summarily dismissing me after so many years' service, and when within so few of establishing my claim to a pension for life, like that obtained by other officers of the same department.

JAMES RALFE,
Licensed Surveyor.

Alexander Grant McLean, Esq., Acting Surveyor General, further examined:—

A. G. McLean,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

241. By the Chairman: Will you be kind enough to state anything you know about the case of Mr. James Ralfe? There are one or two points in Mr. Ralfe's evidence, which I have just heard, that I should like to draw the attention of the Committee to. He said, in his evidence, and it is alluded to in his petition also, that his services were discontinued in less than twelve months after he had accepted the contract; but, the correspondence shews that considerably more than twelve months had elapsed. He himself put in a letter, dated 6 July, 1840, accepting his tender under the contract system, and, he also put in the letter dismissing him, dated 25 November, 1841; shewing an interval of nearly seventeen months, instead of, less than twelve months.

242. Perhaps he may mean that he was only actually at work for that time? Possibly so.

243. By Mr. Stewart: Are you aware whether there was any considerable reduction in the department at the time he was dismissed? There was a tendency to reduction, because, with the depression which then prevailed in the Colony, the demand for land fell off. There was also a desire on the part of the Government to get rid of any officer they could get rid of, because, in anticipation of the demand for land continuing, they had sent Home for six surveyors, who, in fact, arrived in 1842. That is mentioned in the correspondence as a reason why it was not desirable to increase the department, but rather, to reduce it.

244. By the Chairman: Is the correspondence you have before you that in reference to Mr. Ralfe's case? It is. There is another point in reference to the contract, which I may mention. I see from the correspondence that it was a contract for twelve months only. It was quite at the option of the Government to renew it after twelve months; and it was determinable by either party on three months' notice.

245. By Mr. Morris: Will you be kind enough to read such extracts from the correspondence as will shew the nature of the arrangement with Mr. Ralfe? It appears from the letter to Mr. Ralfe, that he was positively promised that his rank in the department should remain unchanged—in fact, that his name should remain on the pay abstract, but, without salary—so that, his contract being for twelve months, he might, on the termination of that period, return to his place in the department. Therefore, by taking the contract he did not in any way give up the position he held. There was a question asked of him about the amount he paid for the equipment; he said he thought £200; it is mentioned in the correspondence here that the amount was £179.

246. By Mr. Stewart: There does not appear to be anything in the correspondence shewing that he was dismissed on account of any fault being found with him? This letter shews the ground on which Mr. Ralfe was removed from the service. It is a letter from Sir Thomas Mitchell to the Colonial Secretary, enclosing a letter from Mr. Ralfe to the Surveyor General. On this Sir George Gipps noted that Mr. Ralfe's employment as contract surveyor must cease. (Letters with Minutes thereon read. Vide Appendix A.)

247. Then, in fact, it appears from this that Sir George Gipps authorized his dismissal? Yes. It appears that the Government of the day did not approve of the style of Mr. Ralfe's correspondence, for there is a previous letter, dated 24th April, 1837, in the time of Sir Richard Bourke, from the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Deas Thomson, to the Deputy Surveyor General, which is alluded to in the letter I have just read. (Letter read. Vide Appendix B.) From this it would appear that there had been some previous complaint with respect to Mr. Ralfe.

248. Is there anything to shew what called forth such a letter as this? No, this is the earliest paper among those that I have. There are some queries here with the papers, and the replies to them, which may be of importance. It appears that the case was brought before the Home Government, and Lord Stanley, who was then Secretary of State for the Colonies, made some inquiries, which were answered by Sir Thomas Mitchell. (Paper read. Vide Appendix C.) It appears, also, that Sir George Gipps made some further inquiries into Mr. Ralfe's case in the year 1842, on some appeal by Mr. Ralfe to the Home Government, which was referred back to the authorities in the Colony. This is a Minute in Sir George Gipps' writing. (Read. Vide Appendix D.) There is one other paper to which I should like to draw the attention of the Committee. It is a comprehensive paper in reference to the case, drawn up by Mr. John Thompson, the late Deputy Surveyor General. It is in fact a memorandum on the petition now before the Committee, and was sent in to the Government by Colonel Barney, who was then Surveyor General, in March, 1858. (Read. Vide Appendix E 1.) It was written at the request of Colonel Barney, who had been called upon for a report on the case, and was forwarded by him to the Colonial Secretary with a letter, in these words. (Letter read. Vide Appendix E 2.) At the time of sending in his petition Mr. Ralfe had referred to a promise that he should be employed in the M'Leay district which promise was not carried out, and with reference to which Mr. Robertson, the Secretary for Lands, made the note which appears on Mr. Thompson's memorandum.

A. G. M'Lean,
Esq.
26 April, 1861.

249. By Mr. Morris: Are you aware of any case similar to Mr. Ralfe's, in which an officer of the Government obtained a grant of land? There is no question Mr. Ralfe would have obtained it as well as others if he had applied in time.

250. Do you know of any cases in which, by favour of the Government, any person has obtained it not having applied at the right time? No, I am not aware of any case. Mr. Ralfe states in his petition that he was "employed for 17 years on the most distant, arduous, and dangerous duties," and that, therefore, he lost the opportunity of applying for his grant of land.

251. By the Chairman: That is borne out by what Mr. Thompson says? Yes.

252. In some communication Sir Thomas Mitchell gives him credit for some of his coast surveys? Yes; he did a good deal of the coast survey, particularly at the mouth of the Manning River and towards Port Macquarie.

253. Is there anything amongst the correspondence to shew what induced Mr. Deas Thomson, as Colonial Secretary, to write in such strong terms—he must have referred to some correspondence which had come under his notice? That was an expression of Sir Richard Bourke's. Mr. Ralfe's letter, which called it forth, is not here. No doubt it can be obtained. I can obtain a copy and append it. (Vide Appendix F.)

254. Is there anything else you think it necessary to state bearing on this case? There is only one thing which I made a note of when Mr. Ralfe was giving his evidence. I saw an inconsistency between his evidence and the papers. Mr. Ralfe's evidence went to show the Committee, that it was at the suggestion of the Government to him, that he offered to take this contract; whereas, the suggestion of the Government was made in April, 1839, and he only offered to take the contract when he was suspended from his employment as a salaried surveyor upwards of a year afterwards, in May, 1840.

255. Do you mean that his employment as contract surveyor was subsequent to his dismissal from office? In May, 1840, he was suspended on account of one of his letters; and on the 28th May, 1840, he wrote a letter apologizing for the terms of his previous letter, and the following day again wrote, offering to accept a contract; but that was upwards of a year after the Government had invited him to accept a contract.

256. By Mr. Dalgleish: Had he been suspended twelve months? No; he was only just suspended. He applied for an increase of salary, for which he was then due; but about that time Sir George Gipps had stopped all annual increases.

257. By the Chairman: He must have been reinstated, or how does it arise that when he accepts the contract, it is stated that he shall remain on the staff of the department? That was in consequence of his apology the day before.

258. Then he was virtually reinstated? Yes; he may be considered to have been reinstated by the acceptance of the contract.

259. Are you aware whether his salary was paid for the time he was suspended? He had been suspended only a few days, or a month. It does not appear that his salary was not paid.*

Sydney, 11 November, 1841.*

Sir,

I have the honor to transmit, for His Excellency the Governor's perusal, a letter which I have received from Mr. James Ralfe, a surveyor in this department, and now surveying by contract on the south bank of the River M'Leay, and to explain for His Excellency's information that it was originally intended to make advances on the work of the contract surveyors at the rate of 75 per cent. as the work proceeded, and until the contract terminated; that the full amount of every account has passed through this office on its appearing that the work charged for had been satisfactorily performed; but that Mr. Ralfe's surveys have generally borne so little appearance of accuracy as to compel me to return them to him for corrections and explanations. To such an extent, indeed, has this proceeded, that I now beg to recommend his discontinuance as a contract surveyor, the term of twelve months during which it was intended that his contract should continue (unless renewed) having expired in June last.

The terms on which Mr. Ralfe continues his official correspondence are of such a character as to compel me to refer to your letter on the subject, No. 37-278, of 24 April, 1837, which I beg may be laid before His Excellency, with a request that I may be informed of what further steps should be taken to bring Mr. Ralfe to a sense of the necessity for conducting his official correspondence in a more becoming manner.

The Honorable
The Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
T. L. MITCHELL.

Sir,

I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor, a letter enclosing a memorial which I have received from Mr. Ralfe, late surveyor in this department, on the subject of his recent removal and the purchase of his equipment, and to state that I feel much regret in being unable to recommend a compliance with the prayer of Mr. Ralfe's memorial, at least as regards his continuance in the department.

The Colonial Secretary.

The receipt of Mr. Ralfe's memorial must be acknowledged, and Mr. Ralfe informed that I regret very much I cannot sanction his return to the department.

Sir,

Original returned.

Your letter of the 6th instant, enclosing one from Mr. Surveyor James Ralfe complaining of the inadequacy of the means afforded to him in the performance of his duties as a surveyor, having been submitted to the Governor, I have the honor, by the direction of His Excellency, to acquaint you that he has perused Mr. Ralfe's letter with great disgust, and requires you to watch narrowly over his proceedings, and to report for His Excellency's information any failure in the punctual discharge of his duty, for which, if no satisfactory reason can be given, he must expect to be severely dealt with. Mr. Ralfe should recollect that his conduct has been previously brought under His Excellency's notice, by the head of his department, in no favourable light, and that he much fears he met on these occasions with more indulgence than from the style of his letter, now under consideration, he appears to have deserved.

The Deputy Surveyor General.

MR. RALFE'S CASE.

Queries by Lord Stanley.

Whether the contract with that officer was such that the Government could conclude it after a broken period of service?

Replies.

I SHOULD say that the Government certainly could so conclude it. The Notice of 20th November, 1838, on which all the so-called contracts to survey must be considered as based, in the 8th section states that "Each contract is to continue for one year, but will be subject to termination on three months' notice from either party." So that before the expiry of four months of the first year the Government might, on any good or sufficient ground, have terminated the contract. The engagement, however, was not cancelled. Mr. Ralfe omitted to renew his tender, but continued to work, the Government tacitly permitting him, beyond the period of (12) twelve months, on his original tender, and until his engagement was terminated, for reasons set forth fully in the correspondence.

2dly. Whether, supposing the Government to have the power, Mr. Ralfe had not a reasonable expectation that it would be continued, not having terminated at the end of the year?

No; because he could not have anticipated that his omission to renew his tender could place him in a better position than that in which he stood at first, when his engagement was open to be determined by the Government, for any sufficient cause, on three months' notice.

3dly. Supposing that to have been the case, whether £150 was a fair and reasonable compensation for the loss sustained by him on account of cattle and stores purchased for the Public Service?

The original cost was £179, so that £150 may be considered as a fair compensation: Mr. Ralfe having retained the whole of the equipment, &c. It was not, however, as a compensation for the loss sustained by him on account of his equipment that I recommended the retiring gratuity of £150 or £200, but because Mr. Ralfe represented himself to be in great distress, having, as he stated, bailiffs in his house. Considering this distress, and that he had been many years in the department, and employed on some hard and useful service, especially along the coast, I recommended the gratuity, as a matter of consideration, not as compensation, and as a sum that His Excellency the Governor might not object to, rather than as what under more favourable circumstances might be awarded after long services of that kind.

THESE are some points in his case not sufficiently explained by these papers:—

|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1. What were the circumstances under which he first undertook to survey by contract? | His pay and allowances had been suspended by a letter dated 4th May, 1840. On the 18th May he wrote an apology for what had been written, and proposed in a letter, dated on the following day to survey by contract, under certain stipulations. That correspondence is added to these papers. Mr. R. is understood to have agitated for the sake of introducing the contract method. |
| 2. What were the objections urged by the Surveyor General against his return to the department when his contract was terminated. | My letters* 41-460 and 41-403, with enclosures, will afford the desired information. |
| 3. What grounds has he for attributing his pecuniary difficulties to delays in the payment of advances to which he says he was entitled under his contract? | The delays in certifying for the payment of advances arose from frequent discrepancies and deficiencies in Mr. Ralfe's plans and descriptions, and in one case the total disagreement between the features shewn on a common line bounding plans of two parishes, both of which he had certified to be correct. |
| 4. Where is the letter from Mr. Ralfe which was inclosed with Capt. Perry's letter to the Colonial Secretary, of the 6th April, 1837, No. 37-207? | The letter† is enclosed herewith being numbered 37-36, and 37-3303. T. L. M., 6 Augt., 1842. |

MEMORANDUM relative to Mr. Ralfe's Memorial to the Legislative Assembly, dated 6 September, 1856.

In the early days of his official career, Mr. Ralfe was employed upon some very difficult and dangerous coast surveys; subsequently he was stationed at Port Macquarie.

In 1841, at his own request, he became a contract surveyor, but with the understanding that he was still to be considered an officer of the department.

At the end of the year the Government refused to continue the contract; the Government also refused to allow Mr. Ralfe to return to the department as a licensed surveyor.

A long correspondence ensued; the Government refused to give Mr. Ralfe either a retiring allowance, or a grant of land.

A compensation of £150, for loss in the value of his equipment, was to have been given to Mr. Ralfe, but he never obtained it.

Mr. Ralfe applied to the Secretary of State, but without success.

In some 10 years Mr. Ralfe was not engaged in the public service; he went to England about 1846-7, and returned to the Colony about 1850, as a surveyor to the Australian Agricultural Company.

In 1851, Mr. Ralfe applied to the late Sir Thomas Mitchell, to be reinstated in the department, but that was declined.

In 1852, Mr. Ralfe at his own request was gazetted as a licensed surveyor, but such employment is terminable by the Government at any time, and consequently no claim arises; what Mr. Ralfe states, as to his claim to 1,000 acres is strictly correct. It was the practice of the Colony to give every one land, more or less, and the obtaining of land was always held out at Home as an inducement to the acceptance of office in the Colony.

Mr. Ralfe was as much entitled to receive 1,000 acres of land, as the other surveyors of his time, Mr. Finch, Mr. Hoddle, Mr. Richards, and Mr. M'Brian; and no doubt he would, like them, have got 1,000 acres, but Mr. Ralfe, perhaps in the too enthusiastic pursuit of his business, neglected to obtain an order to select, until by a Government notice he was precluded from doing so; whilst in service this notice was allowed to act retrospectively against the claim of Mr. Ralfe, although the promise was undoubtedly established, by Mr. Ralfe's claim for 1,000 acres of land merits the serious consideration of the Government, and is apparently provided for in the 58th Section of the Constitution Act, 18 and 19 V., Cap. 54.

I beg to enclose a copy of a report, prepared at the time of the presentation of Mr. Ralfe's petition to the Legislative Assembly. I am not aware that I can add anything thereto as regards the circumstances of his case up to the date of the report.

It was intended to employ Mr. Ralfe at the McLeay River, but the services of Mr. Millington becoming available, and it appearing that the demand for land would require the undivided services of a surveyor in the District, that intention was abandoned. The preparations which Mr. Ralfe may have made were premature.

I am afraid that the explanation of the Surveyor General places it out of my power to advise that Mr. Ralfe's application should be entertained.

St. Hilier's, 25 March, 1837.

26 April, 1837.

Sir,

I beg leave to inform you that I have received from the storekeeper, at Parramatta, a camp table, stool, and stretcher, perfectly useless, which I hope you will be pleased to give directions to be replaced immediately.

The impositions that are permitted to be practised by the contractors, upon the officers of your department in the field, are now become so enormous, that they can be no longer tolerated: permit me to call to your consideration the duties required of a surveyor, contrasted with the means afforded him.

His duties extend over a superficies of sixteen hundred square miles; he is required to make his plans upon a scale of four inches to the mile; is held responsible for the due receipt of his letters; to number and keep copies of his own; and furnish plans and descriptions of lands, applied for to purchase, within specified periods: for the regular and punctual performance of which he is furnished with a dray and team of bullocks, and seven men, with a tent twelve feet by eight in dimensions, only one table, measuring three feet by two, on which he must place, for the construction of his maps, all his apparatus, such as colour box, case of instruments, rulers, drawing paper, and field book, as well as his writing materials, and confined to do his work in his tent in all weathers. It is true that the surveyor is ordered and expected to establish a quarters in some central situation of his district, entirely at his own private expense, notwithstanding that he is always liable, and frequently is, removed from one end of the Colony to the other.

Let me also beg of you to contrast the labours and privations of the surveyors in the field, and their pay, with that of others connected with your department, and the disposal of the Crown lands: for instance, the auctioneer, the town surveyor, and the chief draughtsman, who also is permitted to hold the situation of Secretary to the Board of Commissioners to divide claims, and gets a fee upon every decision, though that decision actually depends upon the measurement of the field surveyors, besides regular offices found, and clerks attached at the expense of the Government, and I feel confident that it will appear at once obvious to you, now that the sales of the Crown lands are affording such an immense revenue to His Majesty's Government, that the pay of the surveyors of those lands should be commensurate with their earnings, and that it is the interest of the Government to place those surveyors upon such a footing as would insure to them all an equitable and proportionate remuneration for their services, and to the public a speedy measurement of their lands as well as correct information and assistance to emigrants.

The fairest mode of payment to the surveyors would be at a fixed rate per acre, the surveyor finding everything necessary to effect the surveys required. There can be no doubt but that if such a system were adopted, it would be attended with the most beneficial result to both the surveyors and the public. It is true a capital would be required by the surveyors to commence with, which, as a matter of course, would be furnished by the Government, in accordance with the Secretary of State's letter, arranging that one or two years' salary be advanced, according to the length of services of each officer retiring to perform the duty by contract.

I have lastly to observe that I have acquired that confidence in my profession, from having served four years to an eminent surveyor in England, and from twelve years experience in this Colony, that I can plainly foresee, now that such nicety is requisite in parcelling out the Crown lands, and marking the boundaries, that unless the surveyor is furnished with better instruments and means, and if the present system is persisted in, that the surveyor never can give satisfaction or do justice to the public, and that endless confusion and ruinous litigation must be the inevitable consequence. I have, therefore, to request you will have the goodness to forward this letter to His Excellency the Governor, as soon as he returns from Port Phillip, who, I am confident, cannot be aware of the situation of the field surveyors, or that you will make such extracts, with your own favourable comments, as may tend to improve the surveyors' conditions.

I have, &c.,

JAMES RALFE,
Surveyor.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MRS. ELIZA LOCKYER.

(PETITION.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 January, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of Eliza Lockyer, of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, widow of the late Major Edmund Lockyer, deceased,—

SHEWETH :—

1. That the said Major Edmund Lockyer landed in the Colony of New South Wales, as Major in Her Majesty's 57th Regiment of Foot, in 1825.

2. That in the same year he was sent by the Colonial Government to explore and form a settlement at Moreton Bay; which duty was discharged by him to the complete satisfaction of the said Government.

3. That in the following year he was sent on a similar expedition to King George's Sound, which he carried through with the like satisfaction.

4. That in the year 1828 he was appointed to the situation of Surveyor of Roads and Bridges, the duties of which he faithfully discharged—the road between Sydney and Bathurst being laid out at this time under his superintendence.

5. That he subsequently satisfactorily discharged the duties of Police Magistrate at Parramatta.

6. That he was appointed Serjeant-at-Arms under the old Legislative Council, the duties of which were faithfully discharged by him.

7. That, under Responsible Government, he was appointed the first Usher of the Black Rod in the new Parliament, which appointment he held at his death, which occurred in the present year.

8. That your Petitioner's husband has, therefore, duly, faithfully, honorably, and honestly served the Colonial Government for upwards of 35 years, having, from the integrity of his conduct, and the zeal and attention he at all times devoted to the Government service, gained the confidence of the Government, and the esteem of his fellow-citizens generally.

9. That your Petitioner's husband departed this life on the tenth of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty, leaving your Petitioner (his widow) and three children, under the age of five years, wholly unprovided for.

10. That your Petitioner and her young family have, since the decease of your Petitioner's husband, been entirely dependent upon private charity for their support.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays that the very lengthened and honorable services of her late husband, as well as the present distressing pecuniary position in which your Petitioner and her young family are now placed, may be taken into consideration, and that justice may be done to them in the premises.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

TANNERS AND CURRIERS.

(PETITION OF JOHN PAGE.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 24 April, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of John Page, of Salehurst Park, in the County of Cumberland,—

SHWETH:—

That your Petitioner, when about to open a Tanning Establishment in this Colony, was precluded from so doing within the City of Sydney by the Act, 14 Victoria, No. 30, and relying on the observance of the law and its due enforcement, he, with respectful deference for the same, at considerable expenditure of time and money, purchased a portion of land at South Creek, near the Village of Saint Mary's, and has expended about eight thousand pounds thereon in the erection of buildings, sinking tanpits, and other necessary appliances to the tannery business.

That your Petitioner has recently learnt with surprise, that Tanneries, heretofore carried on in the City of Sydney, have not yet been discontinued as by law required.

And your Petitioner is further informed that a Petition from one Hercules Watt has been presented to your Honorable House, alleging great loss sustained by him from the operation of the aforesaid Act, and praying relief.

Your Petitioner, having relied on a diversion of a considerable portion of the tanning business to situations in the country sufficiently remote from Sydney and other populous towns, and trusting that he could command a fair share of the same, by the appliances he has at such an expense prepared, humbly prays your Honorable House will not sanction the continuance of Tanneries within the limits of exclusion, as a mode of relief, but, if so disposed, will devise some method to carry out the same, consistent with a due observance of the laws, and neither injurious to the public health nor general welfare of the community.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

TANNERS AND CURRIERS.

(PETITION OF MR. HERCULES WATT.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 6 May, 1861.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Hercules Watt, of Phillip-street, Sydney, in the said Colony, householder,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one, entered into possession, by purchase, of certain land situate in Phillip-street, in Sydney, in the Colony aforesaid.

That your Petitioner constructed on the said land, with very great labour and expense, a number of pits, tanks, sheds, houses, and other improvements, for the purpose of carrying on his trade as a Tanner and Currier.

That for the period of thirty years your Petitioner did carry on his said trade, and supported himself and his family by his own labour, and by employing men to assist him in his said trade.

That when advancing age and increasing infirmities rendered your Petitioner unable to personally assist in, or even to superintend, his business, your Petitioner leased the said tanyards and buildings connected therewith to other persons.

That the rents derivable from these lessees have long constituted your Petitioner's chief, if not his only, source of income, your Petitioner's other resources being very small and precarious.

That your Petitioner has heard that your Honorable House is about to make or enforce an Act to compel the closing of all tanyards within the boundaries of the City of Sydney.

That should such an Act, or proposed Act, be enforced by your Honorable House, your Petitioner's only certain source of income will be taken away from him, and your Petitioner will, in consequence, be reduced from a situation of comparative, though humble, comfort, to one of extreme distress.

That your Petitioner has now reached the age of sixty-six years, and is, moreover, so infirm as to be quite incapable of active exertion in any business whereby to earn his own livelihood.

That your Petitioner's only course, in the event of such Act being enforced, would be to sell his land and buildings, as he is unable, either personally or pecuniarily, to build other tenements, for other purposes, on the said land.

That the sale of the said land would be attended with grievous loss to your Petitioner, as the pits and buildings constructed thereon are adapted only to the business of tanning, and are quite incapable of being turned to account in any other trade whatsoever.

That your Petitioner could only hope, therefore, to obtain, by sale, the value of the bare land, which, in the present depressed times, would be but very small.

That your Petitioner cannot suppose that your Honorable House will take away from an aged and infirm man his only means of livelihood, and vitiate the labours of a long life in this Colony without making some provision for a fair and equitable compensation of some kind to the sufferer.

That solely in consequence of the enforcement, or proposed enforcement, by your Honorable House, of the Act above referred to, the former lessee of your Petitioner's tanyard has given to your Petitioner notice of his intention to quit, and has taken steps for the rental or purchase of a site, beyond the operation of the said Act, whereon to continue his business.

That your Petitioner is in a position to prove the truth of the facts above stated, by the affidavits of himself, his former lessee, and others, should your Honorable House, after due inquiry made, deem such proof necessary.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays your Honorable House to take into consideration the premises, and to do such justice and afford such relief to your Petitioner for the great and grievous loss that he has sustained, and will ever sustain, by the enforcement of such Act, or proposed Act, as aforesaid, as to your Honorable House may seem fit.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c.

ISAAC SHEPHERD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

The Reverend William Branwhite Clarke, M.A., called in and examined :—

1. By the Chairman : A number of gentlemen, who have a high opinion of your geological experience, believing that no sufficient recognition has been made of your services, suggested that a Select Committee should be appointed for the purpose of inquiry into your claims. A Select Committee has been appointed, and we are now met. We have taken the liberty of soliciting you to attend, for the purpose of examining you in reference to what you have really done. I presume you will have no hesitation in any questions which may be put to you on the subject? None at all. But I should like to state that I make no claim whatever; the word "claim" implies a sort of right which somebody withholds. I have never made any claim whatever on any occasion. I know the feeling which has been expressed respecting me; and, while I state that I never have made any claim, I may have my opinion about what has been done. I shall be very happy to answer any question, and give as much information as I can upon the subject. I think it right to make this observation, because otherwise it might be supposed that I have been myself taking steps to bring matters to this position, which I have not.
2. I did intend, at the outset, to ask you whether you were privy to the application being made for the appointment of a Select Committee? No; I knew nothing of it more than I saw in the papers. I have never had a single word's conversation with any one on the subject. If I had been asked I might, perhaps, have —
3. Then, sir, I think it necessary, in order to arrive at a true position in reference to what you have done for the Colony, to commence even previous to your arrival in the Colony; but first of all, I would ask you—When did you arrive in this Colony? I landed here on the 3rd June, 1839.
4. What position in life did you fill in England previous to your departure for this Colony? I held a living in the county of Dorset. I was one of the Chaplains of the Bishop of Salisbury, brother of the late Governor. I was also acting under a special commission granted by King William the Fourth, and afterwards renewed by Queen Victoria, as a Magistrate.
5. What induced you to come to New South Wales? I had, in the course of the year 1833 or 1834, been travelling abroad a good deal, and had contracted a bad rheumatic fever, from having been out in the wet in France. (It was much such weather as we have had lately.)

- The Rev. W. B. Clarke, M.A.
9 April, 1861.
- After recovering from the first attack, I got the second from officiating in a new church, the walls of which were very damp. I had a most violent return of rheumatism, so much so that I became ill, and my medical adviser recommended me to go permanently to a warmer climate. There were four offers made to me. I might have gone to the East or the West Indies, to the Bahamas, or to this Colony. I was induced to come here, partly from what I had heard of the climate, and partly from the geological character of the country, which nobody knew anything about, and which I was anxious to look into.
6. Had you at any time, before arriving here, turned your attention to geological matters? Yes; and I had published a good deal on the subject of geology. I should like, if you will allow me, to prove what I have now stated.
7. If the gentlemen here think it necessary that you should adduce proof? I should like to do so. I suppose you are desirous of doing me justice, and I should like to prove all I state. The letter I now hold in my hand is dated Norwich, December 10th, 1838. It was written to me by Professor Sedgwick. He writes in this way, amongst other matters,—“Pray collect all the information you can about the cavern bones—organic remains in the rock formations must be interesting. The coal formations will, of course, attract your immediate attention—their relations to the surrounding rocks, date, &c., are questions of interest. The plants I have seen from these formations—and they are (at least specifically) very unlike the fossils of our coal measures. But I have seen limestone specimens, from these formations, with producti and spirifers, and looking very like mountain limestone. I shall rejoice to be in correspondence with you, and any good specimens of organic remains would be highly valuable in our new museum at Cambridge.”
8. By Mr. Hoskins: That is merely suggesting to you to collect specimens in Australia? No, that is not the meaning of it. The writer knew what I was intending, and this letter is merely suggesting what would be valuable at Home.
9. This is merely a friend writing to you to ask you to collect geological specimens? The question asked me was whether I had turned my attention to these subjects before, and I produce this letter in proof that I had done so.
10. By the Chairman: Is there any other letter that you would like to read? You ask me when I turned my attention to geology. I have many years ago published various papers in England, in connection with the Geological Society, had travelled and extensively over the continent of Europe.
11. By Mr. Hoskins: I suppose you have been a corresponding member of the Geological Society? I have published in their Transactions and Proceedings. I am one of the oldest Fellows of the Geological Society.
12. By the Chairman: Had you travelled in other countries, and published anything on geology? Yes, certainly.
13. Can you enumerate what you have published? What I have published!
