3. Each Inspector of Stock being nominated by the Directors of a Sheep District to the position of Inspector of that District cannot be promoted to any other District, consequently classification and promotion are not practicable in regard to them; but each Inspector who performs his duties to the satisfaction of the Minister shall be entitled to an annual increment of £5, provided that as soon as the salary of such Inspector shall reach the maximum, namely £100 more than he receives at the present time, the annual increment shall cease.

4. Quarantine keepers shall be selected by the Minister, and shall be paid such salaries as may be considered equivalent to the duties performed. They shall not be classified or be entitled to any annual increment, but their pay may be increased or reduced according to the duties and responsibilities from time to time devolving upon them. Their employment shall be regarded as temporary, and their services may at any time be dispensed with.

RABBIT BRANCH.

5. Superintendent Inspectors shall be selected from the Second Class. Inspectors and Rabbit Inspectors shall be chosen by the Minister from candidates for employment, or selected from Overseers who are qualified for promotion, but all such appointments shall be regarded as temporary.

6. Rabbit Inspectors shall be classified as follows :—

7. The First Class shall include the Superintending Inspectors; the maximum for this class shall be £400.

8. The Second Class shall include all Inspectors whose salaries are not less than £300 and are under £350.

9. The Third Class shall include all Inspectors whose salaries are under £300.

10. Rabbit Inspectors shall be entitled to an annual increment of £5, but no Inspector shall be entitled to promotion from a lower to a higher class until a vacancy in the higher class shall occur.

11. Overseers shall be selected from applicants for employment or from the Rabbiters if there be any qualified for promotion. Both Overseers and Rabbiters shall be temporarily employed, and shall not be entitled to any increment, and their services may at any time be dispensed with.

FOREST

FOREST BRANCH.

12. Candidates for employment as Forest Rangers or Assistant Forest Rangers must pass the prescribed examination.

13. Forest Rangers shall be classified as under:—

14. The First Class shall include those Rangers who in the opinion of the Ministers are, by reason of length of service and special duties and qualifications, entitled to that grade. The maximum salary for this class shall be £300.

15. The Second Class shall include Rangers (not included in the First Class) whose salaries range from £200 to £250.

16. The Third Class shall include Rangers whose salaries are under £200.

17. The annual increment in the First Class shall be £10, and in Second and Third Classes, £5.

18. No Ranger shall be promoted from a lower to a higher class unless there is a vacancy in the higher class, and unless, in the opinion of the Minister, a Ranger in the lower is qualified for promotion to the higher class.

DIAMOND DRILL BRANCH.

(INCLUDING WATER AUGERS.)

19. The employes in the Store, and in charge of the Drills or Augers, and the men employed under them, shall not be classified or be entitled to any fixed annual increment, but shall be deemed temporary employes, whose services may at any time be dispensed with, and whose wages may, as a recognition of merit, be increased at the discretion of the Minister.

WARDENS, WARDENS' CLERKS, MINING SURVEYORS, AND MINING REGISTRARS.

20. These officials, who are paid wholly or partly by fees, or by reason of their holding other positions in the Civil Service, or the whole of their time not being devoted to the duties of their respective offices, are paid only nominal salaries which bear some proportion to the duties devolving upon them shall not be classified, or be entitled as such officials to any annual increment, and it shall be in the discretion of the Minister to increase or decrease the salaries of any such officials in proportion to the increase or decrease from time to time of their duties.

GENERAL.

21. Neglect of duty, insubordination, or inefficiency shall disqualify any official for promotion, and disentitle him for such time as the Minister may think fit to his annual increment.

22. The officials under these Regulations shall be subject to the provisions of Parts III and IV, of the Civil Service Act, 1884.

23. The officials referred to in these Regulations shall not be liable under Section 53 of the Civil Service Act to contribute to the Superannuation Fund, but such of them as think fit, may with the sanction of the Treasurer, contribute to such Fund in terms of section 57 of said Act.

GENERAL REGULATIONS FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF THE DREDGE SERVICE*

Regulation 1.—The Dredge Service which will be considered as a whole, shall be divided into the following grades, viz. :—

1st. The Engineer's grade, comprising—

- | | |
|---|---------------------------------|
| A. Engineers, 1st, 2nd, 3rd class (excluding the Chief Engineers of the Dredges), with wages ranging from... .. | £20 per month to £12 per month. |
| B. Engine-drivers | 13 " 10 " |
| C. Firemen | 12 " 9 " |

2nd. Mechanical grade, comprising—

|--|
| A. Blacksmiths, carpenters, fitters and boilermakers, &c., with wages from £15 per month to £11 per month. |
| B. Strikers, boilermakers' assistants, machine attendants, &c., with wages varying from £10 per month to £6 5s. per month. |

3rd. Nautical grade, comprising—

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------------|
| A. Masters of Tugs, from | £20 per month to £12 per month. |
| B. Mates, from | 14 " 10 " |
| C. Coxswains and winchmen | 10 " |
| D. A.B. seamen, including watchmen and cooks ... | 8 13s. 4d. per month to £8 per month. |
| E. Boys | 4 per month to £6 5s. per month. |

Regulation 2.—The whole of the men at present in the Service shall be classified according to the foregoing grades; the position to be assigned to each particular employé shall be determined by fitness and length of service. As vacancies occur, the senior hands shall be promoted until they reach the top of their respective grades, provided they are competent, and nothing has been recorded against them in the "Conduct Book" referred to in Regulation 3. In the case of engineers, however, it shall be indispensable that those to be appointed to the 1st class shall hold 1st class certificates; those to the 2nd class, 2nd class certificates; and to the 3rd class, 3rd class certificates. With regard to the nautical grade, all masters shall hold masters' sea-going certificates, and mates shall hold mates' certificates.†

Regulation 3.—There shall be entered in a "Conduct Book" the name of every employé in the Dredge Service, giving the date of his entry therein, age, and such particulars of his service (whether of good or bad conduct) as will determine promotion or otherwise; it being distinctly understood that nothing will be recorded against any employé in such book, except after due inquiry and on the report of the Inspector approved by the Engineer-in-Chief and after an opportunity shall have been afforded the accused of appeal.

Regulation 4.—All new appointees shall enter at the bottom of whichever grade they may be nominated to, except in the case of vacancies which cannot be filled from the Service; but none shall be eligible who are over thirty-five years of age, and who cannot produce a certificate from the Medical Officer of the Department (for which such officer shall be entitled to be paid a fee of 2s. 6d., to be paid by the nominee) that they are physically fit for the position sought, together with satisfactory references from previous employers.

Regulation 5.‡—From the 1st May to the 1st September the working hours shall be from 6.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m., and during the remaining months of the year from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Three-quarters of an hour will be allowed for breakfast, and one hour for dinner. Owing to the shortened breakfast hour, work will terminate on Saturdays at 1 p.m. When circumstances render it necessary for the tugs to work continuously from 6 to 6 the meal hours must be taken while the steamers are towing.

Subsequently reduced to forty-eight hours per week.

Regulation 6.—Should any employé, by reason of accident occurring in the discharge of his duty, and by no fault of his own, be physically incapacitated for work, he shall be entitled (if his absence shall necessarily extend to that time) to two months' pay, or any lesser proportion, as the case may demand. If he is absent more than two months, such case thereafter will be specially dealt with on its merits. In the event of absence through sickness, not being the result of accident as before described, half-pay to the extent of one month will be allowed, if necessary, provided such sickness has not been brought about by misconduct on the part of such employé, to determine which a certificate to that effect shall be required from the Government Medical Officer, if the employé reside in Sydney or Newcastle. If he reside elsewhere, he must furnish from a properly qualified medical practitioner a certificate stating the nature of the disease from which he is suffering, which will be referred to the Government Medical Officer for report. For every examination or report such officer shall be entitled to a fee of 2s. 6d., which shall be paid from any money due or to become due to the patient, except in case of accidents occurring in the discharge of duty when the fee shall be paid by the Department. A medical report will be required at least once each week, if absence from duty should extend beyond that time; for a period less than three days the certificate of the Dredge Master, endorsed by the inspector, shall be held to be sufficient.

Regulation 7.—Nothing in the foregoing Regulations shall prevent the Minister from dealing in the way of promotion or otherwise with any specially meritorious case which may be brought before him.

Regulation

* Nothing in these Regulations shall be held to apply to the Masters of Dredges, respecting whom a wider choice of selection may be necessary.

† In the case of those already in the Service who do not hold such certificates, it shall be considered that they have "Service" certificates; but they will not be eligible for promotion unless they can obtain and produce certificates of "competency."

‡ Since these Regulations were passed, the summer working hours have, by direction of Mr. Secretary Luckey, been reduced from ten to nine hours per day, and a temporary increase of 10 per cent. on wages, after having been on two occasions voted by Parliament, was submitted during the last Session and passed as a permanent rate. On 10th October, 1885, Mr. Secretary Wright directed that the working hours be 48 per week.

Regulation 8.—Any person who has been in the Dredge Service, but whose services have been dispensed with owing to a reduction in the number of hands, shall be eligible for re-appointment to any suitable vacancy, anything in these Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.

Regulation 9.—In the event of any misbehaviour being proved against any employé, but not of such a serious nature as to demand dismissal from the Service, the Engineer-in-Chief shall have the power to punish by fine or disratment as the circumstances of the case seem to him to warrant.

Engineer-in-chief for Harbours and Rivers.

[Supplement to Government Gazette, 17 August, 1885.]

The Treasury, New South Wales, 13th August, 1885.

His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has approved of the following Rules and Regulations setting forth, in conformity with the provisions of the 7th section of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," the conditions of employment in the Marine Board Department (applicable to all persons except officers classified under the said Act.)

H. E. COHEN.

MARINE BOARD.

RULES AND REGULATIONS setting forth, in conformity with the provisions of the 7th section of the "Civil Service Act of 1884," the conditions of admission, examination, promotion, classification, salaries, and retiring allowances in the Marine Board Department.

Applicable to all persons, except Officers classified under the said Act.

No person will hereafter be admitted to the Marine Board Department over thirty-five years of age, nor unless he is in vigorous bodily health and free from colour blindness or other defective eyesight.

The candidate must produce testimonials of sobriety and fitness for the particular office he applies for, and in the case of pilots and other seafaring persons, he must submit certificates of a grade not lower than the position he seeks.

When vacancies occur in the Department, promotion will depend on length of service, good conduct, and the qualifications necessary to fill such vacancies.

Any person who shall absent himself from duty must, not later than the following day, report in writing the cause of his absence. If such absence be caused by sickness and extends beyond two days, he must apply for such leave, and forward a medical certificate. Sick leave can only be granted for a limited period.

A conviction of neglect of duty or disobedience of orders by the Marine Board will subject the offender to dismissal.

Nothing hereinafter contained shall apply to those persons who are only partially employed in the service of the Marine Board.

The employés under these Regulations shall be subject to the provisions of Part III of the "Civil Service Act, 1884."

Pilots, Light-keepers, Inspectors, Mates, Boatswains, Signal-masters, Engineers, and Electric Operators, shall be entitled, without diminution of salary, to two weeks' leave of absence in each year, at such time as may be deemed most convenient; and if they shall not take such leave in any year, they shall be entitled to it in any subsequent year, in addition to the leave for such year, but no such accumulated leave shall exceed six weeks. In cases of illness or other pressing necessity, leave of absence may be granted by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Marine Board, approved by the Minister, to any Official for a period not exceeding three months, on full or any less salary as may be deemed fit, and such leave may be renewed on the same or any other terms. But in all cases of illness, the request for leave, or for renewal thereof, shall be accompanied by a satisfactory medical certificate. In cases of pressing necessity the circumstances must be stated in writing; and if such leave shall extend to one month, such Officer shall forfeit his right to his next ordinary annual leave or any portion thereof, as above provided.

On special application, leave of absence may be granted by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Marine Board, approved by the Minister, to any official abovenamed of twenty years' service, for a period of twelve months on half salary, or six months on full salary; or to any official of ten years' service, for a period not exceeding six months on half salary, or three months on full salary; or, in case of pressing necessity, to any official whatever, but such last-mentioned leave may be deducted from the leave hereinbefore provided.

Leave of absence for the period of two weeks in each year may be granted any employé other than those above-mentioned, at such time as may be found most convenient.

A deduction of 4 per cent. per annum will be made from the salaries of all persons employed in the service of this Department to entitle them to the allowances and gratuities provided under Parts V and VI of the Civil Service Act.

Time served in one branch of the Department will be allowed in cases of transfer to any other Branch.

The following shall be the scale of Classification and Remuneration of the different grades in the Service of the Marine Board. Maximum Salaries to be obtained by yearly increments, as set forth under their respective heads, until the highest rate shall have been obtained, provided that where the full increment would exceed the maximum, only such proportion shall be added as will bring the salary up to the said maximum.

The

The right to receive any annual increment shall depend on the good and diligent conduct of the person concerned, and shall only be granted on the recommendation of the Head of his Department.

 LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY,
 NEW SOUTH WALES.

CIVIL SERVICE ACT OF 1884.

(RECOMMENDATIONS OF CIVIL SERVICE BOARD FOR CERTAIN AMENDMENTS IN.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 19 February, 1886.

Minute Paper.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney.

Civil Service Act.

UNDERSTANDING that the Civil Service Board, in the exercise of the very arduous duties which have fallen to their lot, in the preparation of the First Official List, have experienced considerable difficulty in the classification of certain portions of the Employés of the Government, I take the earliest opportunity since my return of asking the Board to let me have their Report, stating as concisely as possible what these difficulties are, in order that I may see whether any of them presented themselves to me in the framing of the Act, and also whether it is necessary to take any steps in the next Session of Parliament to apply for a remedy. I will also be glad to be furnished with any views or suggestions which the Board may have to make upon that subject.

A.S.

11 May, 1885.

The Chairman, Civil Service Board, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Civil Service Board, Sydney, 11 September, 1885.

I have the honor, in reply to the Colonial Secretary's minute of 11th May, 1885, to forward to you the enclosed memorandum embodying resolutions finally passed at a meeting of the Civil Service Board, held on Wednesday, September 9th inst., suggesting certain amendments in the Civil Service Act 1884.

It was also decided to submit for Sir Alexander Stuart's consideration, as an appendix to the above memorandum, copies of the following papers, viz. :—

1. A resolution of the Board passed at their meeting of June 8th, 1885.
2. A rejected amendment moved on that day, by A. C. Fraser, Esq., and seconded by C. A. Goodchap, Esq., together with a statement of the reasons of the minority for bringing forward the said amendment.
3. The case submitted to the Honorable the Attorney-General, in reference to the powers of the Board in dealing with appeals under the provisions of the 17th section of the Civil Service Act.
4. The opinion of the Honorable the Attorney-General thereon.
5. The minute of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, of 24th August, 1885, on the same subject.

I have, &c.,

G. EAGAR,

Chairman of the Civil Service Board.

[Enclosures.]

Memorandum in reply to the Minute of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, of date 11 May, 1885.

THE Civil Service Board having had the minute of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, of date 11th May, 1885, under consideration, beg to invite his attention to the following matters, which in their opinion require to be dealt with, by amendment of the Civil Service Act, at the earliest possible date.

1. Section 55 of the Act provides for a deduction of 4 per cent. on the total salary received by any officer during his term of service, prior to the passing of the Act; and for an actuarial computation of the annual deduction from his superannuation allowance, which should be made as the equivalent of such 4 per cent. deduction.

The Civil Service Board are of opinion that this provision of the Act is inequitable in its operation, and that it entails consequences which were probably not foreseen by the Legislature.

A pension being of the nature of an annuity, for which the officer pays towards the Superannuation Account a certain consideration in the form of the 4 per. cent deduction from annual salary, should, like all other annuities (other things being equal), be larger in amount in proportion to the greater age and less expectancy of life of the recipient, instead of as, under this section, smaller.

Thus, an officer of sixty years of age retiring after a service of twenty years, whose aggregate salary amounts to £10,000, and whose present annual salary is £600, will be entitled to £200 a year as pension, but will owe to the Account £400. The annuity value of such an officer's life being $9\frac{1}{4}$ years, will make the annual deduction from pension £43 4s. 10d., or £200 less £43 4s. 10d. equals £156 15s. 2d. net; while a man of seventy years of age, of like service and salary, would have an annuity value of life of only $6\frac{1}{2}$ years, and, consequently, the deduction from pension in his case would be £64 per annum, thereby reducing his pension of £200 to £136. It will thus be seen that an officer who retires at the earliest statutory age of sixty years, according to actuarial calculations, will receive £20 15s. 2d. per annum more than the man who remains in the Service to the age of seventy years; or, to take a wider view, the officer at sixty years of age may be expected to live fifteen years, and to draw fifteen years' pension, which, at £156 15s. 2d. equals £2,351 7s. 6d.; while the officer at seventy would not draw more than ten years' pension at £136, or in all £1,360—or about £1,000 less than the officer retiring at sixty years of age.

In other words, a man at seventy years of age must show nearly twenty-four years' service to entitle him to the same annual pension as the man aged sixty would receive for twenty years' service.

The Board are further of opinion that the deductions from the pensions of old officers reduce the amount so seriously as to act as a deterrent to their retirement from service, because the older and probably the less efficient an officer is, the less likely is he voluntarily to relinquish his position while the pension he would receive bears so small a ratio to the salary he enjoys; and thus one inducement to the younger officers of the Service to subscribe to the Superannuation Account is withheld, viz., the prospect of earlier promotion by reason of the retirement of the senior officers.

For these reasons, the Board suggest that the deduction of 4 per cent. on back salary should be eliminated from the Act; or if this be not considered desirable, then that the deduction should be limited to ten years of service.

2. The Board would also draw attention to a want of harmony between the 16th, 48th, 52nd, and 53rd sections.

In the 16th section it provides "that, in making classification, it shall be competent for the Board to value and include, as if it were salary, the annual value of any official residence, or any allowance which any officer may receive for house-rent, fees, or otherwise, except for forage, or travelling expenses, or equipment."

The 48th says "that superannuation allowance shall be computed on the annual amount of salary or emoluments * * * * received by an officer during the three years preceding his retirement"; while the 53rd section provides for a deduction of 4 per cent. from salary only; so that an officer whose salary is £300 per annum, and whose rent and other allowances are valued at £150, would be granted classification and allowed a pension computed on £450, while contributing to the Account on the salary of £300 only. The Account would thus lose the 4 per cent. on £150 each year.

The officer with salary and allowances as above would pay £12 to the Account, while an officer in receipt of salary of £450 would pay £18.

A slight verbal amendment would remedy this defect, by the insertion of the words "and allowances" after the word "salary" in the last line of the 52nd section, and by the insertion of the words "and allowances" after "salaries" in the fifth line of the 53rd section.

3. The Board desire also to invite the attention of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary to the propriety of abolishing the distinction between the General and Professional Divisions of the Service, such distinction being in the opinion of the Board inexpedient, and tending to create dissatisfaction.

4. The attention of the Colonial Secretary is invited to the last part of the 27th section, providing that "the salary of any officer who shall be promoted to fill a vacancy in the same class shall not by reason of such promotion be increased, but shall remain subject to the ordinary rate of increment in the class."

This provision, it is pointed out, in many instances must act inequitably, and it is recommended that the section be amended so as to admit of some increase being granted within the maximum of the class, upon the recommendation of the Board and the approval of the Minister.

As an illustration of the unfairness of the provision as it stands, the Board would adduce the case of (say) the Police Magistrate of a comparatively unimportant country district who is transferred to a similar position in one of the large towns, in which his duties and responsibilities would be of course very greatly increased.

This officer, in the event of his belonging to the same class as the officer whom he may succeed, does not obtain the higher salary paid to his predecessor, and in fact gains no increase whatever by reason of his promotion. The power of recommendation of some increase should, the Board think, be extended so as to cover cases of the kind quoted.

5. The Board also recommend that the system of indiscriminate annual increments to the several classes of officers in the Public Service, as defined and set forth in clause 4 of the "Civil Service Act," should be modified, and that the right to the increment in each individual case should be made to depend upon length of service, merit, capacity, and good behaviour, certified to by the Head of the Department, and subject, in case of refusal, to appeal to the Board,—or in such other way to accomplish the desired object as the wisdom of Parliament may devise.

This probably would require the repeal of clause 6 of the Act, which repeal is considered desirable.

6. The Board suggest that the "interpretation clause," under the word "Officer," be amended by the addition of the following words:—"Teachers under the Educational Division, and all permanent salaried officials brought under Rules and Regulations, shall be deemed to be Officers for the purposes of Parts V and VI."

7. That clause 40 may be so amended that leave of absence on full pay may be granted for twelve months to any officer of thirty years' service.

8. That Part V and [the administration of the Superannuation Account be placed under the control of the Board.

9. That the words "necessitous circumstances" be omitted from clause 51, and that in the case of the death of any officer not in receipt of a gratuity or pension his widow or children shall be entitled to a return of the premiums paid by him to the Account not exceeding the amount of six months' salary.

10. That clause 60 be amended to read as follows:—

"60. Nothing herein contained shall be taken to prevent the Governor from recommending Parliament to provide independently of the Superannuation Account for any addition to any retiring allowance or gratuity in consideration of any special services rendered by any officer."

11. That clause 18 be amended by the omission of the words "and shall rank in the 4th class."

APPENDIX.

THE Board have consented to forward a copy of a resolution which was moved by A. C. Fraser, Esq., and seconded by C. A. Goodchap, Esq., but rejected by a majority of the Board; together with a copy of the written reasons furnished by the mover and seconder in support of the resolution. They also annex a copy of the special case submitted to the Honourable the Attorney-General, on the subject of that resolution, and of his opinion thereon, and a copy of a minute forwarded to the Board by the Honourable the Colonial Secretary dealing with the same matter.—G.E.

No. 1.

Extract from Minutes of a Meeting of the Civil Service Board held on 8th June, 1885.

John Williams, Esq., moved the following resolution:—"That appeals under clause 17 must be considered upon the following grounds only, viz. :—

"1st. The correction of clerical errors, as for instance, where the class assigned is not in accordance with the rate of salary.

"2nd. Where the full amount of emolument has not been furnished to the Board in the original return, or where emoluments have been omitted therefrom.

"3rd. Where the names of officers or other persons have been omitted in the original returns.

"4th. Where cause can be shown for transfer from the General to the Professional Division."

Whereupon A. C. Fraser, Esq., moved as an amendment—"That the Board shall consider the appeal of any officer which sets forth his ground of dissatisfaction on account of the inadequate remuneration received by him for services performed."

The amendment was put to the meeting and lost on the following division, by the casting vote of the Chairman :—

No. 2.

Reasons submitted to the Civil Service Board in support of their amendment, by A. C. Fraser, Esq., and C. A. Goodchap, Esq.

A MAJORITY of the Civil Service Board are of opinion that the 17th section of the Civil Service Act gives that body no power to entertain any appeal by an officer against his classification which is based on the ground that the duties pertaining to his office entitle him to a higher status and larger remuneration than have been assigned to him; in fact, the majority of the Board are of opinion that they can only make a recommendation in those cases where the appeals are based on allegations of error on the part of the Board in classifying according to salary or the value of emoluments.

Assuming that this reading of the section is correct (two members of the Board dissenting from that view), it is urged by the minority that the power alluded to is one which should be conferred on the Board, and that the Act should be amended accordingly.

It may have been that some officers whose position in the classification was determined by the salary appropriated for their offices for the year 1884 were in the performance of duties, the nature and responsibilities of which would otherwise entitle them to higher classification and emolument, and it must be admitted that in the progress of time the duties and responsibilities of many officers will of necessity largely increase. In both these instances, such officers would have, under the present interpretation of the Act, no relief, but would be in the same position as other officers whose duties and responsibilities did not equitably entitle them to the same classification, or would not increase to such an extent as to justify their promotion to a higher position. In fact, as the Act is now being administered, there are no means whereby an officer whose classification is unduly low, or whose emoluments are inadequate to the duties of his office, can be raised in the scale of classification or be awarded a higher rate of pay. This, it need hardly be pointed out, is a very undesirable state of affairs. It is difficult to believe that such was the intention of the Legislature when passing the Act, and it was most assuredly never contemplated by the Civil Servants when they petitioned Parliament for the Bill. One of the chief purposes for which it was generally understood the Bill was introduced was to provide a remedy for the anomalies and cases of injustice then existing in the Civil Service (certainly not to perpetuate them); and the consent of the Civil Servants to the fixing of their positions according to

to the salaries of 1884, as an ultimate measure of relief, would, it is believed, have been withheld had they not relied upon the privilege indicated in the 17th section, of appealing to the Board against any injustice that might occur in individual cases through such an indiscriminate mode of classification. They reasonably anticipated that, under that section, the Board would on appeal inquire into the merits of every such case and report thereon to the Government, who would confirm or otherwise any recommendation made,—Parliament of course having the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the result, as provided for under the same section.

No. 3.

Case submitted by the Civil Service Board to the Honorable the Attorney-General.

THE Civil Service Act, 1884.—In the matter of appeals as to classification. The third section of the Act declares the classification shall be made by officers in the Service at the time of the passing of the Act being assigned a position in one of the divisions or classes mentioned in that section, in which the several classes are based upon the annual salaries fixed by the Appropriation Act of 1884.

An appeal from the classification made by the Board is provided by section seventeen, which declares that any officer dissatisfied with the position assigned to him in such classification may forward to the Board an appeal setting forth the grounds of his dissatisfaction; and if the Board shall thereupon recommend that such officer be changed from one division to the other, or be raised from one class to another, the Governor may adopt or decline such recommendation.

It is understood that several appeals are being made as though the officers appealing are entitled, from length of service, from the description of work done by them, or for other reasons irrespective of the amount of salary appearing in the Appropriation Act of 1884, to be placed in a different classification than that assigned by the Board, and the Board therefore request to be advised,—

1st. Whether the classification which has been made by the Board, based upon the annual salary fixed by the Appropriation Act of 1884, with the value of house-rent and fees added as provided in section 16, can be appealed against upon any ground other than that the officer appealing is in receipt of a higher salary, &c., than that in respect of which the Board have fixed his classification.

2nd. Whether upon such appeal the Board are entitled to take into consideration the length of service, the description of work performed, or the manner in which his services have been rendered by the officer appealing, or, in other words, has the Board power to deal with appeals, excepting for the purpose of rectifying errors in division and classification arising from imperfect information afforded to the Board or otherwise?

3rd. Will the recommendation of the Board (under section 17) upon appeal to raise an officer from a lower to a higher class, if adopted by the Governor, carry with it the right on the part of the appellant to receive in virtue of such recommendation a higher salary than that provided for him by the Appropriation Act of 1884?

No. 4.

Opinion of the Honorable the Attorney-General.

By the 3rd section (Part I, classification) the assignment of the position of officers (with the exception of probationers or the cadet or junior class) is founded upon the annual salaries fixed by the Appropriation Act of 1884. By section 17 it is provided that officers dissatisfied with their assigned positions may appeal to the Board, and that the Board may recommend a change from one division to another, or a raising from one class to another. I presume the question upon which my opinion is asked is this: is the appeal limited as to its grounds to whether the appellant is in receipt of a higher salary than that in respect of which the Board has fixed the classification.

I am inclined to think that it is so, and that the functions of the Board were expressly, and it may be advisedly, limited to a correction of errors in classification, subject to modification by the provisions of section 16, the terms of which still expressly limit exercise of Board's discretion to the emoluments received.

I think to invest the Board with the functions of determining classification by virtue of the reasons suggested as grounds of appeal would be to give them powers to materially, and it might be dangerously, interfere with the regulation of the Public Service, which powers can only be properly exercised by the Executive.

With regard to the question as to whether, on the adoption of the recommendation of the Board by the Government, the salary of the appellant would be increased, I think that the increase would be limited to the minimum amount of the class to which he might be advanced, on the sum being voted by Parliament. (See section 11.)

No. 5.

Civil Service Board—Powers of appeal under section 17.

THE case submitted to Mr. Dalley seems to me to embrace all that can be said in this matter as regards the construction of the Act; but I can say, with regard to the intention of the Government, that it was never intended that the Civil Service Board should have the power of deciding whether the salaries paid were sufficient or insufficient for the services performed. I doubt whether Parliament would have allowed such, even if we had intended to ask for the power. I had no doubt that one of the effects of the Act would be to bring to light many glaring inconsistencies, owing to the mode in which appointments had previously and for so many years been made; and that it was quite possible that eventually some steps might have to be taken with regard to them; but I purposely did not encumber the Bill with any provisions to this effect, because, amongst other reasons, if the Board had been empowered within even strict limits to raise salaries which they deemed insufficient, it would also have been necessary to invest it with power to reduce salaries which were in excess of the value of the services performed.

I do not think that it would be beyond the due administration of the Board to attach to its report a schedule of those who consider themselves by their appeals to be underpaid. Such a course would at least bring the matter under the notice of Parliament, and form the foundation upon which some steps might be taken; but I am quite clear that the Act neither does confer, nor was intended to confer, the power of rectification upon the Civil Service Board.

I may mention that I have been applied to in several cases by the Heads of Departments to sanction the formation of a new office, with a higher salary than that enjoyed by some officer in the Department, accompanied by a recommendation that such officer be appointed to the new office, and that, being a new office under clause 28, the Minister could confirm the appointment. To all these I have returned the answer that, as they appear to me to be an attempt to procure a higher salary than that intended by the Act, for performing the same services under a new name, I could be no party thereto.

CIVIL SERVICE ACT.

(MEMORANDUM OF CIVIL SERVICE BOARD AS TO EFFECT OF CERTAIN CLAUSES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 5 February, 1886.

Memorandum from the Civil Service Board, in reply to Question No. 10, asked by Mr. Davies, relating thereto.

10. MR. DAVIES to ask THE COLONIAL SECRETARY,—

- (1.) When will the Superannuation Fund Accounts, which, in accordance with Civil Service Act, should be laid before Parliament at end of June and December in each year, be laid upon the Table?
- (2.) Will he ask the opinion of the Crown Law Officers as to whether clause 40 of the Civil Service Act (relating to leave after certain period) includes those Civil Servants in section 7 and Educational Divisions of list issued by Civil Service Board?
- (3.) Will he ask the opinion of the Crown Law Officers whether Servants in Educational Division and section 7 Civil Service Bill, are compelled to contribute 4 per cent. per annum to Civil Service Superannuation Fund?
- (4.) Will he be good enough to lay such opinion when obtained upon the Table of the House?

The Honorable Member's questions have been referred to the Civil Service Board, from whom the following replies have been received:—

- (1.) The Superannuation Fund Account, in terms of the 62nd Clause, is directed to be laid before Parliament annually, and not half-yearly as the Honorable Member supposes, and it will be laid upon the Table within the 31st March next.
- (2.) The opinion of the Crown Law Officers does not appear to be necessary, as clause 40 refers to "Officers" only, and Civil Servants in section 7 and the Educational Division are not "Officers" within the meaning of the Act.
- (3.) It does not appear to be necessary to take the opinion of the Crown Law Officers in relation to section 7 of the Act, as all persons coming under Rules and Regulations are, by the section referred to, specially brought within the provisions of Parts V and VI of the Act.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

CIVIL SERVICE ACT.
(PETITION FROM CERTAIN PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 5 May, 1886.

To the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

1. That your Petitioners are teachers in various Public Schools in the Colony of New South Wales, and are employed and paid by the Government of the said Colony, under the Minister for Public Instruction for the time being.

2. That your Petitioners understand that your Honorable House is about to take some steps for the amendment or repeal of the Act known as the Civil Service Act of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

3. That your Petitioners, as such teachers and employés, have grave reasons to be dissatisfied with the said Act, and its operation with regard to them and to their positions in the Public Service.

4. That the said Act was passed so hurriedly that many of your Petitioners were unaware of its provisions, and of the effect of those provisions, until after the said Act had been passed by your Honorable House and assented to by His Excellency the Governor.

5. That, amongst other matters in the said Act which operate most prejudicially against some of your Petitioners, is the fact that, as very many of your Petitioners enter the Service and become salaried officials at the ages of fourteen and fifteen, the percentage deducted from their salaries, under the said Act, becomes an excessive amount in accumulating, if your Petitioners continue in the Public Service; and, by the time that your said Petitioners would become entitled to any benefit, they would have paid, by the said deductions being made, a far larger proportion than most other Civil Servants, and would acquire no commensurate benefit, although they would also have served the Government a much longer time.

6. That in the cases of many of those of your Petitioners who are females they are not likely to receive any benefit whatever, as they may marry before they arrive at any age to be entitled to receive a benefit under the said Act, and thus fall out of the Civil Service.

7. That in the case of the decease of those of your Petitioners who are or who may become married men, the provision made by the said Act for the widows and children of your said Petitioners is very scanty in comparison with the amount required to be paid by such deductions as aforesaid.

8. That your Petitioners crave liberty to point out that similar amounts to those deducted from the salaries of your Petitioners expended under a clause for compulsory assurance of the lives of your Petitioners, in any Act amending the said Civil Service Act, or in any new Act for the regulation of the Civil Service, would be infinitely preferable to your Petitioners, as providing for them on retirement, or for the families of those who were married, and who died in the Service, a far more adequate provision than is at present provided.

9. That if your Honorable House should not see fit to repeal the said Civil Service Act but to amend the same, your Petitioners would respectfully suggest that they be excluded from the operation of any clause requiring a deduction to be made from the salaries of Civil Servants, unless that in no case shall those of your Petitioners who are under the age of twenty years have such deductions made from their salaries until they attain that age; and that in the case of those of your Petitioners who are females, and who may marry and retire from the Public Service, some provision may be made for a return to them of the said deductions or a proportion thereof. And that, as the increases in the salaries of teachers are received under rules so different from those regulating the increases in other branches of the Public Service, special provision be made to meet their case. And that, if your Honorable House should see fit to repeal the said Act, and to pass an Act for the regulation of the Civil Service, that similar provision be made with respect to your said Petitioners as those just suggested.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will take into your most favourable consideration the facts, circumstances, and allegations set out in the foregoing Petition, and grant such relief to your Petitioners as you in your wisdom may deem right and just.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

Memorandum to Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

MEMORANDUM.—I am sorry to have to bring under the notice of the Under Secretary a complaint I have had made to me of the brutal and ungentlemanly conduct of Mr. Lesley to one of the young gentlemen in my room. Some time since he struck Mr. Gaussen, and again to-day during lunch-time he tried to force him on to the fire. These scenes are damaging to the esprit and good conduct of the Service, and to my thinking should not be allowed; and I leave it to the judgment of the Under Secretary as to whether any steps should be taken to put a stop to it.

Mr. Gaussen to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

The Treasury, 25 July, 1885.

I have the honor, in reference to my charges against Mr. Lesley, to make the following statements:—

During the last six months Mr. Lesley has exhibited the greatest ill feeling towards me, and on many occasions his manner and actions have been most insulting. He has also threatened personal violence, once going so far as to assault me in the public street before several gentlemen of the office, the degradation of which I felt keenly, but refrained from bringing under your notice, hoping the matter would cease there, and that he would in future discontinue further annoyance. This, however, was not the case, and I have had much to put up with ever since. The two most marked occasions were yesterday and the day before, when I was warning a little water to make cocoa at 1 o'clock. He became very violent, and endeavoured to stop me by shovelling coals on; the consequence was that my kettle upset. Yesterday he repeated his conduct, but in a more violent manner. He seized me and roughly attempted to push me away from the fire, his language being most offensive. One expression was, "You damned whelp." It was this last insult compelled me to verbally report the matter to Mr. Pearson.

I have no doubt the gentlemen present will testify to the truth of my statements.

Sir,

The Treasury, 25 July, 1885.

In reference to the grievance Mr. Gaussen has against Mr. Lesley, I do myself the honor to state that for many months past Mr. Lesley has exhibited the greatest ill feeling, which reached its climax this week. The day before yesterday Mr. Lesley attempted to prevent Mr. Gaussen boiling some water at 1 o'clock, and there was a disturbance. Yesterday he repeated his attempt to stop the kettle being boiled, but in a more violent manner, and a more serious scene took place—he handled Mr. Gaussen rather roughly, and used the term "You damned whelp." This was the most objectionable feature, and annoyed Mr. Gaussen very much.

Sir,

With reference to the quarrel which took place yesterday between Mr. Lesley and Mr. Gaussen, I beg to state—

That at luncheon hour Mr. Gaussen, wishing to make coffee, placed a can of water on the fire, which is near Mr. Lesley's desk, at the same time removing some coals in order to make room for the can. Mr. Lesley objected to Mr. Gaussen's removing the coals, and at once endeavoured (by pushing) to stop him, as he (Mr. Lesley) said that Mr. Gaussen was "spoiling the fire by taking the coals off, which created smoke in the room."

This is all I know about the affair, as I took but little notice of the quarrel.

MEMORANDUM.—As requested, in reference to the dispute between Mr. W. A. Lesley and Mr. S. Gausson in the office yesterday, the 24th instant, I can only state that although present I saw scarcely anything of it, as my back was turned to both parties. I heard some dispute however going on, which appeared to relate to the use of the fire, Mr. Lesley apparently resisting Mr. Gausson from making any use of the same. I may add that there has apparently for some time past been a feeling of animosity between Mr. Lesley and Mr. Gausson, but I am not aware of the cause.

MEMORANDUM.—With reference to the quarrel of yesterday, the 24th instant, between Messrs. Gausson and Lesley, I beg to state that all I saw of the occurrence was as follows:—

At luncheon time, Mr. Gausson came into the room and commenced removing some coals from off the fire for the purpose of placing a can of water thereon to boil. Mr. Lesley took objection to his disturbing the fire for such a purpose; a scuffle then ensued, during which I left.

THOS. PETER BRENNAN.

Account Branch, 25 July, 1885.

Sir,

With reference to the disturbance caused by Messrs. Gausson and Lesley yesterday, I have the honor to forward my report.

At about 1 p.m. I was sitting with my back to the fire, when I heard a great noise at the grate. On looking round I saw Mr. Gausson with a coffee-pot in one hand and the poker in the other, endeavouring to make a place to put his pot on, while Mr. Lesley kept piling up the fire again. Soon after, they were struggling to get at the fire. At that moment I had cause to go into the other room; when I came back again they were exchanging words with one another.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

(No. 85.)

Subject—Suspension of Mr. W. A. Lesley, of the Treasury Department.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 11 August, 1885.

THE MINISTER for Justice, acting for the Colonial Treasurer, begs to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, that he has deemed it expedient to suspend from the performance of his duties, as a clerk in the Account Branch of the Treasury, Mr. W. A. Lesley, for misconduct which, if unpunished, would tend to impair the discipline and efficiency of the Service and lower the tone and character of this Department.

The offence reported to Mr. Cohen consists in an assault by Mr. Lesley upon a young man, a junior clerk in the same room, during public hours and in the presence of certain of their fellow clerks. A preliminary inquiry has been held, as shown by the enclosed papers; and Mr. Cohen now requests that the suspension of Mr. Lesley be confirmed, and that Mr. Lesley be called upon to show cause why he should not be dismissed the Public Service.

H. E. COHEN.

The Executive Council advise, in consequence of the very improper conduct of Mr. W. A. Lesley, of the Treasury Department, as set forth in the accompanying papers, that he be suspended from official duty, and called upon to show cause why he should not be dismissed the Public Service.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of 13th instant, requiring me to show cause why I should not be dismissed the Public Service.

In reply, I beg to state that Mr. Gausson for months past has intentionally annoyed me and others in the office, many years his senior in years.

On the 24th ultimo I requested him not to disarrange the fire in the room in which I performed my duties, but to use the fire in his own room; to which he replied, he would do as he pleased—I was only a common clerk, and I ought to be in gaol. Naturally that annoyed me, and I left my seat and placed myself between him and the fire, to prevent him interfering with it. He commenced the struggle, and I immediately gave way and informed the Sub-Accountant of his conduct.

The memorandum penned by the Accountant was greatly exaggerated and was the main cause of my suspension, for it accused me of attempting to place Mr. Gausson on the fire.

During my seven (7) years and nine (9) months' service I have been very regular in my attendance, attentive to my duties, and have performed most of the principal work of the Branch.

Trusting this will meet with the favourable consideration of the Executive Council,—

I have, &c.,

W. A. LESLEY.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

(No. 94.)

Subject—Case of Mr. W. A. Lesley, a clerk in the Account Branch of the Treasury, at present under suspension.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 25 August, 1885.

THE Acting Colonial Treasurer has had under consideration the papers referred to him by His Excellency the Governor in Council, comprising the defence of Mr. Lesley, a clerk in the Account Branch of the Treasury, against a charge of misconduct preferred against him by a fellow clerk, Mr. Gausson.

From a perusal of the evidence furnished by those who were eye-witnesses of the misconduct referred to, and from the general character and demeanour of Mr. Lesley in the performance of his official duty, as certified to by the Accountant of the Treasury (his immediate superior) Mr. Cohen is satisfied that this is a case where an example should be made, not only in the interests of discipline, but also to protect the weak against the strong, and to establish the principle that persons holding office in the Public Service must conduct themselves as gentlemen.

As Mr. Lesley's offence is not considered of sufficient magnitude to necessitate his removal from the Service, Mr. Cohen recommends that his suspension, now covering a period of thirty-three days, be removed, and that he be subjected to a fine equal to his salary during his term of suspension, to be deducted from the first payment of salary to him, and that he be cautioned that on any repetition of the offence complained of he will be removed from the Public Service.

H. E. COHEN.

The Executive Council advise, under the circumstances here stated, that Mr. W. A. Lesley be reinstated in office, but that he be fined for his misconduct the amount of salary during his suspension, and further, that he be warned as to the consequences of any further misconduct.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council.

Approved.—A.L., 26/8/85. Minute 85-27, 26/8/85.—Confirmed, 31/8/85.

Sir,

Sydney, 31 August, 1885.

I am directed to inform you that, after careful consideration of the explanation offered of your conduct, His Excellency the Governor has, under the advice of the Executive Council, approved of your reinstatement in office, with the condition, however, that no salary during your suspension be paid to you.

I am further to warn you that any misconduct on your part in the future will meet with dismissal from the Service.

No. 1.

Memo. by Mr. C. B. Dwyer to The Officer-in-charge.

I beg to furnish you with my experience as to the efficacy of poison water as a sure means of destroying rabbits.

In November or December, 1883, when travelling across the back country from Pooncaira to Balranald, I stopped at a hut on Paika Station, and there met a man who told me he was doing remarkably well at rabbiting, sometimes earning as much as £15 a week, and this at the rate of 6d. per scalp, and without the aid of traps. I was struck with the man's statement, and endeavoured to elicit from him the means he employed, but he would not explain them to me. Inquiries from other men working on the run and residents in the vicinity proved the truth of the man's statement. Sometime after this he was arrested for manslaughter through causing the death of a man by negligently leaving uncovered tanks containing poisoned water, out of which the man drank and died almost immediately. I saw the rabbitier in Balranald at the time of his trial, and on recurring to the subject of his success he said it was mainly through using poisoned water.

The country through which I passed was in places very sterile, and it was in a barren spot the man was at work.

In bad mallee and dry country it would be invaluable, the only precaution necessary being to place the poisoned water where it could not be got at by stock, and to properly fence off from the rabbits any tanks, &c., containing pure water.

Poisoned water is only successful, in my experience, in sterile, waterless country, and the more so where rabbits are plentiful, as they then have regularly defined runs or tracks to water, while travelling or hunted rabbits seek for water out of roots, &c. Where there are rivers or creeks the rabbits invariably live in the banks, and there is no necessity for their seeking water.

It requires great care in blending the poisons and an experienced man to know the time, manner, and place to lay them in order to be successful.

CHARLES B. DWYER.

Mr. Crommelin has applied for permission to incur an expenditure of from £5 to £10 in testing the efficacy of poisoned water. I would recommend that his request be complied with, and that the accompanying cutting from the Australasian and Mr. Dwyer's minute attached hereto be forwarded for his information.—T.H.M., 4/2/85. The Under Secretary for Mines.

Submitted.—H.W., 4/2/85. Approved; but where the poisoned water is laid out a notice should be kept up intimating that it is poisoned.—J. P. AMOTT, 5/2/85. Mr. Crommelin,—Please note and carry out. The rabbits are burrowing around the Till Till Tank, and I would think that a suitable place for the experiment.—T.H.M., B.C., 6/2/85.

I have noted the contents of the within papers. I cannot get the troughs I want here, so leave to-morrow for Swan Hill; if I cannot get them made there shall go on to Kerang, and if necessary to Melbourne, as the experiment requires to be tried at once. I have also to see Inspector Ross at Swan Hill. Till Till Tank is not in my division. I am going to try it on scrubby blocks of country where there is no water; if tried near a tank the tank would have to be fenced off entailing trouble and expense. If I am successful the difficulty of clearing back blocks will be solved, as I shall explain fully the drier the season the better. If I do have to go to Melbourne I shall only take two days.—J.C.W.C., B.C., 15/2/85.

T. H. MYRING, Esq.,—Find out whether he has gone to Melbourne, and if not, ask whether it is not possible to get the troughs from Melbourne without going for them.—H.W., 19/2/85. Informed.—C.B.D., 19/2/85.

Sir,

Balranald, 24 February, 1885.

In reply to your telegram of the 19th instant, asking if I could not send for troughs without going for them, I have the honor to inform you that I could not have sent and got the troughs very well, as I had no pattern to go by, and I wished to explain things and show exactly how I wanted them done, and I also wanted them at once as the dry season may break up at any time.

I

I started on the 16th and returned last night with the troughs and poison. Up here the poison is 12s. 6d. an oz.; I bought it for 5s. 6d.

Another thing is I wanted to see Mr. Inspector Ross, so that I did all I had to do without wasting an hour's time.

The poisoned water will be laid out to-day, and I will report result.

Sir,

Kungai Block, 28 February, 1885.

I have the honor to inform you that I incurred the following expenses in getting troughs and poison for my experiments. I could not get the poison nearer than Melbourne at less than 12s. an oz., so as I had to wait two days for the troughs I went on to Melbourne and bought the poison at 5s. 6d. If I bought 100 oz. I could get it at 5s. I paid for the troughs by voucher; the poison I paid for myself. I show my expenses by train, which, if allowed, will send in voucher for with the other articles. I went by coach to Kerang from Swan Hill, but I don't ask anything for that, as doing so spelled my own horses.*

From 16th to 28th February, inclusive.

Sir,

Kungai Block, Balranald, 28 February, 1885.

The most of my time for the last fortnight has been taken up in seeing owners in reference to camps being placed on their runs, giving verbal instructions to overseers, and in procuring troughs and poison to try experiments with.

16th.—Went to Wakool River through part of Yanga Run; saw a good many signs in one place; met overseer of station, who was then just shifting the men on to the ground I saw.

17th.—Went through part of Poon Boon Run; saw a good many signs in one paddock; spoke to Inspector Ross about it; but this gentleman has from his long illness been unable to get about; he hopes to be well enough to commence inspecting again about the end of the month. By all accounts he has had a wonderful recovery, and is still very weak.

18th.—Went to Kerang; arranged about troughs to be finished on the 21st.

19th.—Went to Melbourne; reached there 11 p.m.

20th.—Got poison and acetic acid and made arrangements for more when required.

21st.—Left Melbourne at 6:45 a.m., and returned to Swan Hill same night; I did not go to see my own children who were in Melbourne, so as no one could say I went down for anything but business.

22nd.—Went to Wakool through part of Murray Downs Run and part of Poon Boon; saw no signs on Murray Downs, the way I went, and not many on Poon Boon.

23rd.—Went through Balranald and out to Kungai Block, Clark's camp on Canally Run with troughs and poison.

24th.—Laid out two troughs of poisoned water; put up notice, and returned to camp.

25th.—Visited troughs; no luck, and made yard, and laid out another trough in another place.

26th.—Visited troughs; found iguana dead; no rabbits.

27th.—No luck at troughs.

28th.—No luck at troughs, which is to be accounted for by the fact that we had rain on the 16th, and slight rain again last night; now raining steadily.

Minute by Officer in Charge to Under Secretary for Mines.

Subject:—Re Superintending Inspector Crommelin's record report for February.

Memo.

Department of Mines, Stock Branch, Sydney, 18 March, 1885.

I beg to submit herewith Mr. Crommelin's daily record sheet covering the period from the 1st to 28th ultimo, and I would respectfully call attention to the manner in which that gentleman carried out the instructions given him re experimenting with poisoned water.

Mr. Crommelin was ordered on the 6th February to test the efficacy of poisoned water, and a copy of Mr. Lascelle's letter with full instructions were forwarded him on the 15th idem; he wrote stating that he

* In December last the fare from Kerang to Swan Hill was 2s. 6d.; I presume it is so now.—T.H.M., 7/3/85.

he could not get the necessary drinking troughs at Balranald, but he would proceed to Swan Hill and Kerang, and if he could not get them at either of those places he would go on to Melbourne; no permission for so unusual a procedure was requested. A telegram was sent on the 18th by order of the Under Secretary with a view to stopping him from taking so unnecessary and expensive a journey, and wasting so much time, but he had previously started on his journey.

From Mr. Crommelin's letter of the 28th February it appears that he obtained the troughs at Kerang, but he went on to Melbourne for the ostensible reason of purchasing poison which he obtained in that city 6s. 6d. per oz. cheaper than he could have purchased it at Kerang; as however the required quantity was but 4 oz., and the saving on the whole purchase was but £1 6s., I should scarcely think the expenditure for railway fare, £2 19s. 6d., was justifiable, to say nothing of the loss of time and of Mr. Crommelin's conduct in leaving his district without the permission of the Hon. the Minister.

In view of the above and of Mr. Crommelin's statements (first) that he was going to Melbourne to buy troughs, and (secondly) that he had gone to Melbourne to buy poisons, I cannot think his journey was taken in the interests of the Department, and that impression shakes confidence in the rest of his monthly report. Mr. Crommelin seems to have shown a want of judgment in laying the poisoned water in a place where rain had previously fallen, and I do not think his test can be regarded as a fair one.

T. H. MYRING.

No. 8.

Minute by Minister for Mines.

I HAVE had before me the report of Mr. Myring, in which he states that Mr. Crommelin was ordered on the 6th February last to test the efficacy of poisoned water as a means for the destruction of rabbits.

It appears that on the 15th February he wrote stating that he could not get the necessary troughs at Balranald, but he would proceed to Swan Hill and Kerang, and that if he could not get them at either of those places he would go on to Melbourne.

It would appear that he did go to Swan Hill thence to Kerang, both places being out of this Colony, and at the latter place he obtained the troughs which were required for the experiment of poisoning the water. But as he could not he alleges get the poison required at Kerang he went on to Melbourne for the purpose of doing so, the poison required being four ounces and of the value of £1 6s. Swan Hill is a small town on the Victorian side of the Murray, with a population of about 300 persons and is 224 miles from Melbourne, having a daily mail to that city. Kerang is a town in Victoria 40 miles south of Swan Hill, and 184 miles from Melbourne. The troughs, notice plates, carriage of troughs, and poison cost the sum of £4 6s. 6d., whilst Mr. Crommelin makes a charge of £2 19s. 6d., for his train fare to Melbourne. It appears to me that Mr. Crommelin, who is an officer holding a high and very responsible position, not only wasted his time in acting as he did, but also put the Department to expense, and neglected the responsible duties attaching to his position. His conduct is most reprehensible in proceeding to Melbourne or out of the Colony without leave, and I can scarcely credit the fact that this highly paid officer went to Melbourne for the sole purpose stated by him; all he did could have been done by correspondence. I think Mr. Crommelin should be suspended for having gone to Melbourne without leave or authority.

J. P. ABBOTT, 20/3/85.

For the Cabinet.—J.P.A., 21/3/85. Cabinet approve, 23/3/85. Mr. Crommelin informed of suspension.—T.H.M., 24/3/85.

No. 9.

Minute by Minister for Mines.

Department of Mines, Sydney.

I HAVE had brought under my notice a letter written by Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Richardson, on the 16th September, 1883, to Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Dwyer, and which has for the purposes of this matter to be read in conjunction with one from Mr. Dwyer to Mr. Richardson, dated the 3rd September, 1883.

By the letter of the 3rd September, 1883, it would appear that Mr. Bruce (who at that time had charge of the Rabbit Branch of this Department) adopted a suggestion made by Mr. Dwyer, that a Common should be cleared by the employment of the boys at the town where the Common was situated. Mr. Dwyer appears to have seen two of the sons of Rabbit-Inspector Richardson, who he thought would be able to do the work, and this he states in the letter to Mr. Richardson, and also adds, "but they will require a horse to get about with, and if you would arrange about letting them have one as promised they could start work at once. In the end of the letter Mr. Dwyer adds, awaiting your reply as to horse, &c." Mr. Crommelin, who is the Superintending Inspector of the Districts, in charge of both Dwyer and Richardson at that time, endorses upon this letter an authority for the employment of the two boys.

From the extracts above given it will be seen that the letter of the 3rd September required a reply, and this reply is sent by Mr. Richardson in the letter of the 16th September, 1883, which was written on the same date as that on which Mr. Crommelin approved of the employment of the two sons of Richardson, and is therefore an official answer to Mr. Dwyer's suggestion as to the horse, and it was so treated by Mr. Dwyer, who endorsed it after having replied to it; from the endorsement he appears to have received it on the 21st September. This letter of the 16th September, 1883, from Mr. Richardson, is one of the most extraordinary character, and is so written as to force upon me the belief that Mr. Richardson was not sober when he wrote it.

This letter being intended as an official reply by Richardson to Dwyer, appears to have been shewn by the former to Mr. Crommelin, who then adds a note from himself to Dwyer in these words:—

"Dear Charley,

"The whiskeys mix a man up so much that a sober man like your humble servant has no chance. Put on the youngsters and do them over if they don't behave themselves. J.C."

Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Richardson then adds to this in a corner, the following words: "Seconded. Bigger you.—H.P.R."

Mr.

Mr. Crommelin was appointed to the highest position in the Rabbit Branch of this Department, at a salary of £400 a year as a Superintending Inspector, his chief duty being to look after the Rabbit Inspectors, see that they performed their duties, and to report any improper conduct on their part. Judging from his memorandum he appears to have been drinking with one of the Inspectors (Mr. Richardson); he writes a minute in which he indulges in a coarse and filthy expression, and he sees Mr. Richardson following his bad example. Having regard to his conduct in this matter I direct that he be at once suspended, in terms of the Civil Service Act. I also direct that Mr. Rabbit Inspector Richardson be also suspended for writing the grossly filthy language he did, as above stated, in terms of the Civil Service Act. Mr. Dwyer should also be suspended in terms of the same Act, for receiving such a letter with such filthy remarks, without having brought it under the notice of the Department.

J. P. ABBOTT, 21/3/85.

For the Cabinet.—J. P. ABBOTT, 21/3/85.

Cabinet approve.—J. P. ABBOTT, 23/3/85.

Messrs. Crommelin, Richardson, and Dwyer informed of suspension.—T.H.M., 24/3/85.

[Enclosure No. 1.]

Dear Sir,

Euston, 16 September, 1883.

I have seen Mr. Crommelin as you will see; many thanks for considering the boys. I think, and so does Mr. Crommelin, that the boys are far better without horses. There is no feed, and horses will only be an expense. Put them on at once for a month.

I am, dear Sir,

H. P. RICHARDSON.

C. B. Dwyer, Esq., Rabbit Inspector, Pooncairie,—

Dear Charley,

The whiskeys mix a man up so much that a sober man like your humble servant has no chance. Put on the youngsters and do them over if they don't behave themselves. J.C.

Secounded. Bugger you.—H.P.R.

Endorsement:—Recd., 21/9/83. Answered same date. Supt. Inspector Crommelin and Inspr. Richardson, re putting his boys on to clear the Common.

[Enclosure No. 2.]

Mr. C. Dwyer to Mr. H. Richardson.

Dear Sir,

Pooncairie, 3 Sept., 1883.

I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Bruce, who requests me to carry out my suggestion as to clearing the Common by means of the boys belonging to the township; I have seen Prid and his brother, and am inclined to give them a trial, as I think they are efficient, and would do the work well.

I will supply them with carbon, traps, &c., but they will require a horse to get about with, and if you would arrange about letting them have one as promised, they could start work at once. The arrangement will be for a limited time, just to see how it works, and I think £1 a week each not too much. I would like you to drop them a line, and tell them to keep to their work well.

Hoping you are getting on all right, and awaiting your reply as to horse, &c.,

Yours faithfully,

CHAS. B. DWYER.

You can give Richardson's two sons 25/- a week each for as long as you require them, being 15/- a week for work and 10/- for rations.—J. C. W. CROMMELIN, B.C., 16/9/83.

I am directed to inform you that the Hon. the Minister for Mines has suspended you from duty for the following reasons:—

1. For having on the 18th ultimo left your district to proceed to Kerang and thence to Melbourne, without having first obtained the sanction of the head of your Department.

2. For having, on the 16th September, 1883, written on a letter from Inspector Richardson to Inspector Dwyer, intended by the former as an official reply to a letter addressed to him by Mr. Dwyer re placing two boys, Mr. Richardson's sons, as rabbiters on the Pooncairie Common, the following coarse and filthy minute to Mr. Dwyer, one of your subordinate officers:—

No. 12.

The Under Secretary for Mines to Mr. C. B. Dwyer.

Sir, Department of Mines, Rabbit Branch, Sydney, 24 March, 1885.

I am directed to inform you that the Hon. the Minister for Mines has suspended you from duty for the following reason:—

That you failed to report to the head of your Department the receipt of the letter and minutes, copy herewith (copy of letter, enclosure No. 1), with Mr. Abbott's memo., dated 21/3/85.

I have, &c.,

HARRIE WOOD,

Telegram from Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin to The Under Secretary for Mines.

Wentworth Station, 31 March, 1885.

Am I at liberty to go to Albury pending result of suspension, as I cannot possibly feed four horses on no allowance, and as corresponding at this distance will take a long time I may have to sell my turn-out.

Yes; leave buggy and all tracings and papers with you with Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Podmore. The papers, &c., at Balranald should be left with Inspector Vindin.—H.W., 31/3/85.

Telegram from Officer-in-Charge to Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin.

31 March, 1885.

Yes, you are at liberty to go where you please while under suspension. Leave buggy and all tracings and papers with you with Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Podmore. The papers, &c., at Balranald should be left with Inspector Vindin.

No. 15.

Telegram from Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin to The Under Secretary for Mines.

Wentworth Station, 1 April, 1885.

My address will be Albury, until my suspension is settled. I presume I will be allowed a Board to inquire into matter?

The Civil Service Act, section 33, empowers the Governor to refer matters to a Board, but that section refers only to Officers, and it is a question whether Mr. Crommelin is an Officer within the meaning of that Act.—H.W., 2/4/85.

Without in any way entering into the question of the status of Mr. Crommelin I think there is no necessity for an inquiry, and at no time is it obligatory to hold one under the 33rd section of the Act. It is for the Executive to decide whether that shall be or not. In this case I shall not recommend an inquiry.—J. P. ABBOTT, 9/4/85.

The Officer-in-Charge to Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin.

Sir, Department of Mines, Rabbit Branch, Sydney, 13 April, 1885.

Referring to your telegram of the 1st instant, re being allowed a Board to inquire into your case, I am directed by the Minister for Mines to inform you that in your case he will not recommend an inquiry as he does not think there is any necessity for the same.

I have, &c.,

No. 17.

Minute by Minister for Mines to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council.

Department of Mines, Sydney, 25 March, 1885.

It is reported to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council that Superintending Rabbit Inspector Crommelin, Rabbit Inspector Richardson, and C. B. Dwyer (formerly Rabbit Inspector), now temporary clerk, have been suspended from duty, for the reasons given in the accompanying minutes No. R. 85-2,568 and R. 85-2,566.

J. P. ABBOTT.

The Executive Council having fully considered the minutes of the Honorable the Secretary for Mines on the subject of misconduct on the part of Messrs. Crommelin, Richardson, and Dwyer, approve of their suspension from official duty, and advise that they be called upon in terms of the 33rd section of the Civil Service Act of 1884 to make such explanation as they may wish to offer, and show cause against dismissal from office.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Min. 85/11, 27/3/85. Confirmed, 17/4/85. Approved.—A.L., 26/3/85. Messrs. Crommelin, Richardson, and Dwyer informed, 7/4/85.

No. 18.

The Clerk of the Executive Council to Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin.

Sir, Executive Council Office, Sydney, 7 April, 1885.

I am directed to inform you, that His Excellency the Governor, under the advice of the Executive Council, has approved of your suspension from official duty, for the reasons herein set forth, and I am now to request that you will furnish me within ten days from this date with such explanation as you may desire to offer, and show cause why you should not be dismissed the Public Service.

The complaints referred to are as follows:—

1. For having left your district in February last without leave, and proceeded to Melbourne in order (as you allege) to purchase poison for rabbiting, when you could have procured the same at townships on the border, whereby a charge of £2 19s. 6d. was made by you for travelling expenses.
2. For having, in the month of September, 1883, written to Mr. Dwyer, a Rabbit Inspector, the following note, in answer to an official communication from Mr. Richardson to Dwyer:—

Dear Charley,

The whiskeys mix a man up so much that a sober man, like your humble servant, has no chance. Put on the youngsters and do them over if they do not behave themselves. J.C.

Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Richardson then adds to this in a corner the following words:—"Seconded.—Bugger Joe."—H.P.R.

No. 21.

Mr. Superintending Inspector Crommelin to The Clerk of the Executive Council.

Sir, "Metropolitan Hotel," Sydney, 13 April, 1884.

I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 7th instant suspending me from office, and calling for an explanation to show cause why I should not be dismissed from the Public Service. Hereunder I beg to make the following explanation:—

1. That when I wrote to head office as to getting poison I also stated I could not get troughs, &c., nearer than Kerang, also that I had to go to Swan Hill to see Inspector Ross, and if I did not get troughs there would go on to Kerang and possibly on to Melbourne; that I went, and on my return found a telegram asking "if it was necessary for me to go, that it seemed stupid to expend £2 19s. 6d. to buy £1 6s. worth of poison." When I got to Kerang (Wednesday) the man could not furnish troughs before Saturday, and I wanted to make arrangement for getting a large supply of poison if my experiments proved proved a success, and also to be able to tell squatters at what price the poison could be bought (at Balranald 12s., and Melbourne 6s.) I beg respectfully to state that all I did was done for the Government; though my own children were in town I did not go to see them in order to show I was not on a pleasure trip; that it was pure zeal and a desire to try the poison water before rain set in that made me go, and I honestly thought I had done my duty. I never even thought of being called to account for it; there was no underhand work about it; I said I was going to Melbourne and a telegram from Sydney would have stopped me.

2. With reference to this letter I wrote it for my brother-in-law's private information; that I meant it as a private letter only, and I can honestly swear I never saw Inspector Richardson's memo. on it. I beg to state that the expression used by me is one commonly used by bushmen out in the back country, and meant to imply no harm whatever.

I would now respectfully bring under your notice the severe punishment I have already received. I was suspended 450 miles from home, that I had four horses that cost me £100 feeding on chaff, which, through my suspension, I have been compelled to sell as I could not afford to feed them, and I do not expect to realize £50 on their sale, as there is not a blade of grass at Wentworth so people won't buy; and further, my travelling expenses will amount to another £50.

I have been nearly thirteen years in the Public Service, and I hold from Albury the highest character, both from the Lands Office and the Chief Inspector of Stock. I have ever fearlessly done my duty in spite of threats and all obstructions, and in consequence of being outspoken and insisting upon squatters killing their rabbits I have incurred in the Western District only their deadly enmity; to my face they offer me horses and every hospitality, but behind my back there is no word too bad, showing plainly I am doing my duty. If I had worked in with and pleased them I should have been the best fellow in existence.

I trust the Executive Council will consider this explanation as satisfactory, and would respectfully draw your attention to the fact that the letter was written two years ago; also, that my length of service and good character as a hard working man will be taken into consideration, and that I may be dealt leniently with.

I have, &c.,

JAMES C. W. CROMMELIN.

Forwarded to the Honorable the Secretary for Mines.—A. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council, 14/4/85.

No. 22.

Minute by Minister for Mines.

I HAVE carefully read Mr. Crommelin's letter of the 13th April instant, addressed to the Clerk of the Executive Council.

1st. The fact that Mr. Crommelin wrote to the Department that he would possibly go on to Melbourne in no way justified him in doing so without the permission of his Department, and indeed he did not seek that permission, or await instructions after he announced his intention to go to Melbourne; his very haste in going there after he wrote to the Department, and before his letter could be replied to, is evidence to my mind that he suspected if opportunity offered the Department would not allow him to go. His excuses for going to Kerang or Melbourne are of the most flimsy character, and cannot be accepted; all that he did could have been done by letter or telegram.

2nd. The explanation of Mr. Crommelin with regard to the letter to Mr. Dwyer is also most unsatisfactory, and cannot, I think, be accepted. The letter in question was of an official character, and was upon official work; both the letter and remarks upon it are a disgrace to all who were concerned in the matter. I think Mr. Crommelin's conduct is so very bad that I ought to recommend his dismissal from the Public Service, but in considering so serious a step as this, I am forced to review his past career as a public servant, and so far as I can find he did up to the time he received his present appointment discharge his duties well, and with energy to the entire satisfaction of those in authority over him, but he certainly has not displayed any tact in the performance of the duties of his present office, and I fail to see that it was at all necessary for his defence to attack the western squatters; they were no parties to the charges against Mr. Crommelin. I therefore recommend that Mr. Crommelin be reduced from his present position as a Superintending Rabbit Inspector to that of Rabbit Inspector, and that he be stationed at Albury, at a salary of £250, with a promise that if his conduct during the next six months is of the most satisfactory character the salary may be paid at the rate of £300 from this date.

J. P. ABBOTT,

22 April, 1885.

No. 23.

The Acting Minister for Mines to The Governor and Executive Council.

Recommending that Mr. J. C. W. Crommelin, Superintending Rabbit-Inspector be disgraced, and appointed Rabbit-Inspector at Albury.

Department of Mines, Sydney, 2 May, 1885.

HAVING carefully considered the explanation of Mr. J. C. W. Crommelin, in regard to his misconduct, as conveyed in his letter of the 13th ultimo, I consider that he has failed to give any satisfactory explanation, and that I ought to recommend his dismissal from the Public Service, but in view of his length of service, and the fact that before receiving his present appointment Mr. Crommelin discharged his duties satisfactorily, I recommend to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council that he be reduced from his present position as a Superintending Rabbit Inspector to that of Rabbit Inspector, and that he be stationed at Albury, at a salary of £250 per annum, with a promise that if his conduct during the next six months is of the most satisfactory character, the salary be paid at the rate of £300 per annum from 22nd ultimo.

JAMES NORTON,

For Minister for Mines.

AFTER careful consideration of the explanation offered by Mr. Crommelin, and the Minute of the Honorable the Secretary for Mines thereon, the Executive Council are of opinion that Mr. Crommelin has failed to offer a satisfactory explanation. Having regard, however, to his length of service, and efficient performance of duty prior to his present appointment, the Council approve of the recommendation of the Honorable the Secretary for Mines as to the disratchment of Mr. Crommelin, and advise that effect be given thereto.

A. C. BUDGE,

Clerk of the Council.

Min. 85/13, 12/5/85. Confirmed, 21/5/85. Approved.—A.L., 12/5/85.

No. 24.

The Clerk of the Executive Council to Mr. J. C. W. Crommelin.

Sir,

Executive Council Office, 19 May, 1885.

Referring to former correspondence, on the subject of misconduct charged against you, and fully set forth in my letter of the 7th ultimo, I am now directed to inform you, that after full consideration of the explanation you have offered, His Excellency the Governor, under the advice of the Executive Council, has arrived at the conclusion that your explanation is unsatisfactory, and that your conduct is deserving of the most severe punishment.

In view, however, of your length of official service, and the fact that before receiving your present appointment, you performed your duties satisfactorily, the Council has approved of reduction of position from Superintending Rabbit Inspector to that of Rabbit Inspector, Albury District, at £250 a year, and with the understanding that should your conduct during the next six months be found satisfactory, your salary will be at the rate of £300 a year from the 22nd April last.

After the passing of the Rabbit Act Mr. Joseph Martin, of Corowa, made an application for the office of an assistant officer for this district. His recommendations were from the Directors of Marsupials Destruction Board, under whom he had acted as officer with great satisfaction. He was selected by them from a great number of applicants for his knowledge of the country, his capacity, and experience in the destruction of kangaroos, native dogs, rabbits, &c. He gave every satisfaction to the Board, and was only dispensed with on account of want of funds.

Having therefore a personal knowledge of the man's capacity for the situation he applied for, I recommended him as an Assistant Rabbit Inspector, and I got a reply to the effect that no more officers were to be appointed in this district. To this I could have no objection, nor have I any interest in Mr. Martin beyond his capacity for the office, and the public good. I feel, however, surprised to find that an assistant has been appointed—a Mr. Winden, from Maitland, I am told. I would advise the Minister now to appoint somebody to show this man the road, so that he does not lose himself.

If an officer is wanted in that capacity I fail to see what good a man can do who has never been in the district before, and ignore a man who has acted in the capacity to the satisfaction of those interested.

I have, &c.,

L. LEVIN.

Sir,

Department of Mines, Stock Branch, Sydney, 25 April, 1884.

I have the honor, by direction of the Minister, to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, respecting the appointment of Mr. H. E. Vindin as Rabbit Inspector at Corowa.

The Chief Inspector of Stock to Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Vindin.

Sir,

Department of Mines, Stock Branch, Sydney, 21 May, 1884.

I have to inform you that owing to the severe nature of the drought the Minister for Mines has approved that you receive 20s. per week as forage allowance.

You will send separate voucher for this month's allowance, it taking effect from the 1st instant. For the future you will include the amount in your salary voucher.

No. 12.

Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Vindin to Superintending Inspector Crommelin.

Sir,

Balranald, 22 January, 1885.

As I am at present only receiving £1 per week forage allowance, I would respectfully request that I may be allowed at least 30s., considering the state of the district. There is no feed whatever, and I have to send forage from Balranald to all the out-stations in my district to enable me to get through. This you can substantiate yourself.

I have, &c.,

H. E. VINDIN.

Submitted. It is quite true, what Mr. Vindin says, and I think 30s. is little enough in a season like this.—J.C.W.C., B.C., 22/1/85. The Under Secretary.

Submitted. As the drought has now broken up in this locality the cause of complaint may perhaps have been removed. As compliance with this request would place Mr. Vindin in a better position than the other Inspectors in this locality I cannot recommend it.—T.H.M., 30/1/85. The Under Secretary.

Submitted.—H.W., 30/1/85.

I am informed that the drought has in no way broken up in this district—that it is now as bad as ever. Mr. Myring should inquire before reporting. Ascertain and let me know.—J. P. ABBOTT, 31/1/85.

I was informed that Mr. Macpherson, of Paika, near Balranald, had had good rains, and upon that, added to the knowledge that the rain had been pretty general throughout the Colony, I somewhat hastily came to the conclusion that the drought was at an end at Balranald. I now find that there has been but a fall of 25 points within a circle of 50 miles of Balranald, and the drought has in no way broken up in this locality. I respectfully apologise for my mistake, and submit herewith a list showing the allowances for forage made to all the inspectors.—T.H.M., 3/2/85. The Under Secretary.

Submitted.—H.W., 3/2/85.

Approved by the Hon. the Minister, sec authority 85-1,741, to take effect from 1st March, 1885, that Mr. Vindin receives 30s. per week for forage.

Minute by the Minister for Mines.

Department of Mines, Sydney, Rabbit Branch, 27 June, 1885.

Mr. STRACHAN may be promoted to the position of Chief Superintendent, the same as held by Mr. Crommelin, at the same salary.

Mr. Myring and Mr. Strachan will report to the Under Secretary which of the present Rabbit Inspectors is best fitted to fill the position to be vacated by Mr. Strachan; and in doing so I hope they will take the greatest pains to select the most energetic and reliable inspector, and one who can be trusted without hesitation.

No. 14.

Mr. Superintending Inspector Strachan to the Officer-in-charge.

Sir,

Albury, 26 June, 1885.

As requested, I have the honor to submit the names of three Rabbit Inspectors who, I think, are best qualified to fill the vacancy caused by the suspension of Mr. Crommelin, viz., Mr. Vindin, Balranald; Mr. Phillips, Hillston; and Mr. Fraser, Hay.

Mr. Vindin is active, energetic, conscientious, and a fair bushman, would get through his work, and would, I think, report justly and fairly, but may lack weight and firmness.

Mr. Phillips has firmness, practical knowledge, energy, and tact, as well as a good bushman, strictly just and honest.

Mr. Fraser has the qualification of sobriety, besides being a fair bushman, but lacks energy and firmness, and would never take his stand against the owner's wishes, unless fairly pushed to do so. Trusting these remarks will be found sufficient,

I have, &c.,

JOHN L. STRACHAN.

No. 15.

Minute by the Officer-in-charge to The Under Secretary for Mines.

Subject:—Re the appointment of a Superintending Inspector vice Mr. Strachan promoted.

Department of Mines, Rabbit Branch, Sydney, 30 June, 1885.

MEMO.—Prior to the receipt of the Hon. the Minister's minute attached hereto, I had obtained a report from Mr. Strachan as to the most eligible inspector for appointment to the position of Superintending Inspector now vacant.

Mr. Strachan who is, I believe, personally acquainted with nearly all the inspectors, named three from whom in his opinion a choice should be made—Inspectors Phillips, Vindin, and Fraser (at present acting).

With regard to Mr. Fraser, I quite endorse Mr. Strachan's opinion of him, both as to the qualities he possesses and those he lacks; I do not think any further comment is necessary from me. As I consider the selection of an officer to fill the position in question of much importance to the welfare of the Branch and its successful administration of the Act, I trust I may be pardoned if I enter into the matter at some length.

I am personally acquainted with all the Inspectors indicated thus ✓ on attached list, and of these I consider Messrs. Mackay, Phillips, Vindin, Cotching, and Lyne worthy of mention as good, energetic, trustworthy, efficient and gentlemanly officers; Messrs. Hansen and Gaden are also thoroughly trustworthy, and very energetic. Although I am not personally acquainted with Inspector Crocker, I have always heard him well spoken of, and have every reason to be satisfied with the way he has performed his duties.

Hivan

Having given the subject careful consideration, I do not think I could name from our present staff any gentleman better capable of filling the vacant position than those named by Mr. Strachan, viz., Messrs. Phillips and Vindin. Mr. Phillips I have found to be a capable, reliable, and painstaking officer, a good bushman, and thoroughly honest. I do not, however, think him particularly smart, i.e., keen of perception, and able to grasp a subject and deal with it readily.

Mr. Vindin possesses, so far as my experience of him teaches, all the above qualities, and although he is a much younger man than Mr. Phillips he has had much more experience; he formerly had charge of a thinly infested district, but was afterwards removed to the most thickly infested one in the Colony. The drought has greatly assisted in reducing the pest in his and all adjoining districts; still, I consider, Mr. Vindin has been the cause of making the owners in his district do better work than ever they had done before. Since he has had charge there have been no complaints either from or against Messrs. M'Pherson and Lawrence (the Hon. the Minister will recollect how very frequent they were before), and above all both these gentlemen speak well of Mr. Vindin, and under his supervision have succeeded in getting the pest well under.

Mr. Vindin has had charge of more Government camps than any other inspector, and has looked after them well; he has never failed to carry out the most trifling instructions given him. He is a gentleman in speech and manner, and this I consider a most important qualification in a Superintending Inspector.

Mr. Strachan thinks he may lack firmness; but the way he has made some of the rather "difficult" owners in his district work, and the command I saw he possessed over the Government camp-men assured me that he possessed not only firmness but tact. The only failing, if it can be called such, which I have discovered in Mr. Vindin, and which Mr. Strachan may have mistaken for want of firmness, is that of nervousness; until Mr. Vindin divests himself of that he will never do himself justice. The Minister may perhaps be surprised that I should claim to have so thorough a knowledge of any of the characters of my subordinates; but I think I should have failed in my duty had I omitted to make myself thoroughly acquainted with the officers in charge of the most important stations.

In conclusion, I would, from the gentlemen named by Mr. Strachan, select Mr. Vindin for appointment as Superintending Inspector, but would recommend that he be made subordinate to Mr. Strachan until he has gained a thorough knowledge of his new duties.

If my recommendation be approved of, I think the Hon. the Minister will find that his instructions to Mr. Strachan and myself, to select an energetic and reliable inspector, "and one who can be trusted without hesitation," have been faithfully carried out.

T. H. MYRING.

Submitted.—G.E.H., pro U.S., 2/7/85.

Upon the report of Mr. Myring, Mr. Vindin may be appointed as suggested by Mr. Myring. I presume his salary and allowances will be the same as those previously held by Mr. Strachan, whose place he takes, and his head quarters are to be at Hay, as Mr. Strachan's were. A real good man must be sent to Balranald, and I would suggest Mr. M'Maugh or Mr. Battley who are married men; but Mr. Myring will submit the names of good men. Mr. Fraser is to resume his duties at Hay, whilst Mr. Campbell is to take the new district between Albury and Wagga Wagga.—J. P. ABBOTT, 3/7/85.

Subject:—Re the appointment of Superintending Inspector.

MEMO.—Mr. Vindin should, I think, receive the same salary and allowances as were enjoyed by Mr. Strachan, viz. £350 per annum salary and 30s. per diem travelling expenses, to date from the 1st proximo when he should enter upon his new duties.

Mr. Strachan's increase of salary might also date from the 1st proximo.

I also recommend that Mr. M'Maugh be appointed to the district vacated by Mr. Vindin; he is a very deserving officer.

I have the honor, by direction of the Hon. the Minister for Mines, to inform you that you have been promoted to the position of Superintending Inspector vice Mr. Strachan, who now occupies the position formerly filled by Mr. Crommelin.

Your salary will be at the rate of £350 per annum, and you will be allowed 30s. per diem for travelling expenses. Overseer Clarke has been promoted to the charge of the district formerly supervised by Mr. M'Maugh, and you will please see that he obtains from that gentleman all particulars relating to his, Mr. M'Maugh's, late district, and you will yourself post Mr. Clarke up as regards the duties of an Inspector.

After handing over your district to Mr. M'Maugh, you will at once proceed to Sydney and report yourself at Head Office.

Sir,

Jerilderie, 20 July, 1885.
I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 9th instant, numbered R 85/5,511 informing me of my promotion and increase of salary.

Please accept my most sincere thanks for this honor conferred on me, and I can assure you it will be my most earnest endeavour to carry out the duties connected with my calling to the best of my ability. It is somewhat difficult to pull smoothly with all owners and carry out the spirit of the Act at the same time.

My endeavour will be to report fairly, justly, and conscientiously, as my insight and intelligence will enable me, and by this means I hope to attain the greatest success with the least annoyance to the public. Again thanking you for your kindness,

I have, &c.,

JOHN STRACHAN.

No. 23.

Mr. Rabbit-Inspector Fraser to The Under Secretary for Mines.

Sir,

Hay, 28 July, 1885.
I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 8th instant, informing me that you are requested by the Hon. the Minister for Mines to request me to resume my former position as Inspector of No. 6 district from the 1st proximo.

I must say that I am rather disappointed at not being made the permanent Superintending Inspector, as I have, I think, worked hard for it since I was first appointed as Rabbit Inspector, and do not know of anything against me at any time. I presume when I was acting Superintending Rabbit Inspector that I gave the department satisfaction from the fact of you thanking me for my services while so engaged.

I am now in the estimation of the whole community put back from position of Acting Superintending Inspector to Sub-Inspector.

I have, &c.,

CIVIL SERVICE.

(APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 29 July, 1886.

[Laid upon the Table of the House in connection with Question No. 8 on Votes and Proceedings No. 98, of the 28th July, 1886.]

No. 1.

Memorandum by Under Secretary for Lands.

WITH reference to the Minister's personal request that I should devise a means of relieving myself of some portion of the office work, with a view to having additional time at my disposal for personal attention to cases requiring explanation to the Minister, and generally to devote a more extensive personal supervision over the office staff and arrangements, I beg to state, before making any proposition, that the matter is one that has for some considerable time received my attention, but pressure of business demanding prompt attention has mainly prevented my submitting the subject for consideration, the other cause being a consciousness that no arrangement could be suggested which would not necessitate additional expense.

That I am, and have been for some years past, called upon to undertake far more work than any one officer can be fairly expected to cope with is true, and it has only been disposed of by close application thereto night and day, not excluding as a rule Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays; indeed for the last three and a half years I have given myself up entirely to office work.

To the present time I feel justified (without, I hope, risking a charge of egotism) in stating that the business of the Department, which has included a system of decentralization, the division of all the runs in the Colony,—amounting to 4,250, embraced in 1,600 pastoral holdings,—and other special matters arising under the "Crown Lands Act of 1884," as well as the extensive work still remaining to be done under the repealed Acts, has been carried out and attended to with at least fair success; but how long this high pressure can continue is uncertain. It is a question of no slight significance as to whether it is prudent to compel any officer to persevere in a task which may at any time be terminated by a complete collapse, resulting from mental and physical prostration, which would render some arrangement inevitable in the direction now, for other reasons, deemed by the Minister so necessary. It should be remembered that I am carrying on the head office with all the work remaining under the repealed Acts, such as the investigation and inquiries into the fulfilment of the conditions attached to conditional purchases, and conflicting claims thereunder, of the former still remaining upwards of 34,000 to be dealt with—and the latter are very numerous; together with the work of the Occupation Branch, transferred from the Department of Mines on the 1st January, 1885, with the addition of the business which has arisen out of the division of runs, and the appraisements of leasehold and resumed areas now in progress, without the assistance of three officials, whose combined salaries amounted to £1,000 per annum. In addition to the immense amount of work briefly alluded to, I have to assist the Minister in the preparation of the Appeal Court business, which of late has been extensive, and attend generally to that arising under the present law. Supplementing what I have described there is the demand made upon my time by those seeking personal interviews. To any one frequenting the Department this needs no explanation; but I may state that I am seldom able to do anything but give audiences between the hours of 11 and 3, and often extending to 4 o'clock on those days upon which the Department is open to the public. Whilst avoiding details as far as possible, I think that I have stated sufficient to show that I require the aid of a responsible assistant, not only upon the grounds of the desirableness of my having more time to devote to matters requiring personal explanation to, and consideration with, the Minister, but of the absolute necessity of relieving me of some of the laborious work which I am compelled to undertake, and to give me an opportunity of taking a more active part in the supervision of and arranging the office staff not only at head quarters but throughout the Colony. If this be admitted the question arises: How is the assistance to be rendered? In my opinion, and I express it with very great respect, it can only be afforded by an officer recognized as the Assistant Under Secretary for Lands, and he must be an officer thoroughly thoroughly fitted, by previous training, for the office, and one who clearly comprehends that while he will occupy a responsible position he must be amenable to his superior officer; assistance under other circumstances would be without value—in fact, worse than useless.

With regard to this officer, the question of designation may not seem of importance, but I venture to submit that it is, as it carries with it authority, and therefore I think should be as suggested.

With regard to salary, I venture to express an opinion that the nature of the duties and the responsibilities thereof would warrant, indeed it appears to me to necessitate it being fixed at not less than £700 per annum.

If the proposal is approved as a whole, I think I could nominate a capable officer for the post, and by effecting certain rearrangements carry out the proposition at a cost of £575 per annum.

CHARLES OLIVER,

2/6/86.

Minute by the Secretary for Lands.

As it is practically impossible at present for either the Under Secretary or myself to give audience to Members and the public to anything like a satisfactory extent, and at the same time devote such attention to the legitimate work of the Department as in the public interests it requires, without working till midnight when Parliament is not sitting, which I think neither the Under Secretary nor myself should be expected to do, I have deemed it advisable to recommend to the Cabinet that an appointment be made from among the officers in the Department, which should carry the official title and status of Assistant Under Secretary. Sufficient reasons for adopting this course are fully set forth in the submission of the Under Secretary herewith, and in which I concur.—H.C., 2/7/86.

Submitted for Cabinet's approval. Cabinet approves.—P.A.J., 13/7/86.

No. 2.

Memorandum by Under Secretary for Lands.

For the Minister's information as regards the re-arrangement alluded to in my minute of this date, I beg to state that I should nominate Mr. Freeman for the position of Assistant Under Secretary. He is at present Chief Inspector, with a salary of £625 per annum. To take his position Mr. Houston would be nominated, only a change of designation from Inspector to Chief Inspector in this instance being necessary, Mr. Houston's salary at present being equal to that of Mr. Freeman. Mr. Inspector Curry, who is in receipt of £500 per annum, would rank as second Inspector without advance of salary. I think it desirable to keep up the present strength of the inspecting staff, by appointing a third at £500. This arrangement explains how the amount specified in my minute is made up, viz., increase to Mr. Freeman, £75; salary to third Inspector, £500; total, £575. While upon the subject I may explain that the inspection of the local offices, which includes as well as the sixteen Land Board Offices, eighty-nine Land Offices, has been almost entirely suspended in consequence of the Inspectors having to be entrusted with other pressing duties. Mr. Freeman has been acting as Chairman at Dubbo, Mr. Houston assisting generally in matters arising out of the division of runs and the preparations for the appraisements, and also other special duties, and for a short time acting as Chairman during the illness of an officer occupying that position. Mr. Curry has been almost wholly engaged with the business connected with the conversion of pre-emptive leases into conditional leases, and also leases applied for under section 54, all the preliminary and final work as regards the former, and the final work in connection with the latter, having to be done at head quarters.

So much has the inspection of offices suffered, that it will take three officers a considerable time to even attend to such inspection as may be of an urgent character.

C.O.,
2/6/86.

Minute by the Secretary for Lands.

As the conversions under section 52 are all but completed, and the same may be said with respect to division of runs, I think there would hardly be a necessity for appointing a third Inspector, as our extensive railway system should greatly facilitate this work. However, should circumstances arise necessitating this course, it need only be made a temporary appointment, and the increase of salary will only be very slight.—H.C., 2/7/86.

No. 3.

Memorandum by Under Secretary for Lands.

THE Cabinet having approved of the creation of an officer to be designated the Assistant Under Secretary for Lands, I have now respectfully to submit that His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council may be advised to appoint Mr. Stephen Freeman to the position, with salary at the rate of £700 per annum, and that in accordance with the 29th section of the "Civil Service Act of 1884" provision be made on the Additional Estimates for 1886 for the payment of that amount.

As stated in my minute of the 2nd June, Mr. Freeman is at present Chief Inspector of Local Board and Land Offices, and has been for some time past acting as Chairman of the Local Lands Board at Dubbo. In these positions special facilities have been afforded for becoming familiar with the administration of both the repealed and the present Land Acts, added to which the many years of practical experience gained by actual service in the various branches of the Department warrants me in the recommendation I now make.

Further, I believe Mr. Freeman to be one who, whilst fully comprehending the responsibilities of the office, would hold himself amenable to the directions of his superiors, and would render able and efficient efficient service. These are characteristics of value, and deserve attention when the close official relationship that must exist between the Under Secretary and Assistant Under Secretary is taken into consideration.

In nominating Mr. Freeman I have no hesitation in stating that I believe him to possess the qualifications essential to the position.

CHARLES OLIVER,
17/7/86.

No. 4.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Subject :—Creation of the office of Assistant Under Secretary for Lands and appointment of Mr. Stephen Freeman thereto.

THE Executive Council having fully considered the minutes herewith submitted, on the subject of the duties and responsibilities of the office of Under Secretary for Lands, are of opinion, in order to prevent delay in the conduct of the business of the Department, that an officer should be appointed with the official designation of Assistant Under Secretary for Lands. The Council also advise that Mr. Stephen Freeman, who is reported to be specially qualified, be appointed to the said office at a salary of £700 a year from the date of commencing duty.

ALEX. C. BUDGE,
Clerk of the Council.

Min. 86/32. 20/7/86. Confirmed, 27/7/86.
Approved.—CARRINGTON, 20/7/86.

Department of Lands, Sydney, 20 July, 1886.
THE accompanying minutes disclosing the fact that duties of the Under Secretary for Lands have been, and are, greater than can be performed by one Officer, it is now recommended to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council that an office, to be designated the Assistant Under Secretary for Lands, be created, and that the salary attaching to such office shall be £700 per annum. It is also recommended that provision be made in the Additional Estimates for 1886 for the payment of the salary, as required by the 29th section of the "Civil Service Act of 1884," and that the duties pertaining to the position shall be such as may be allotted to it from time to time by the Under Secretary for Lands, subject to the approval of the Secretary for Lands.

It is further recommended that Mr. Stephen Freeman, J.P., at present Chief Inspector of Local Land Board and Land Offices, be appointed to the position, and that such appointment take effect from the date of entering upon the duties.

RETURN to an Order of the Legislative Assembly, dated 8th July, 1886, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of all Minutes, Papers, or memoranda in reference to and in connection with the offering of the appointment of Chief Clerk and Cashier in the Custom-house to Mr. Augustus Berney, and his replies to same.”

(Mr. Ives.)

The Collector of Customs to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Custom-house, Sydney, 17 March, 1885.

I have the honor to report, for the information of the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, that in accordance with his instructions I requested Mr. Berney to assume the position of Cashier during the absence of Mr. Edmund Jones whose return to duty is at present doubtful.

The removal of Mr. Llewellyn (late Chief Clerk), and the misfortune which has befallen Mr. Jones, have together left me without the help of two officers of long experience, and consequently I desired to have Mr. Berney's services (intending according to circumstances) to unite the offices of Chief Clerk and Cashier on the Second Class under the Civil Service Act, at a higher rate of salary, and to appoint another officer to the position of Landing Surveyor at £500 per annum.

Mr. Berney informs me that he does not feel able to undertake the duties I wished him to perform, and I am therefore compelled to make other arrangements.

I propose to place Mr. Robert Small in the position of Cashier, for the present, and regret exceedingly that my desire to reorganise this establishment is in an important particular frustrated.

I have, &c.,
JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

No. 1.

Memorandum by Surveyor-General.

Surveyor-General’s Office, Sydney, 5 August, 1882.

I concur in the proposal of the Deputy Surveyor-General in his recommendation of the 27th ultimo* to increase the salaries of draftsmen now at £200 to £250 per annum, and add nine new salaries to the number, incorporating in that grade the most eligible officers of the temporary staff. * Cannot be obtained.

842—A

The

[805 copies—Approximate Cost of Printing (labour and material), £5 3s. 9d.]

The highest pay on the temporary staff is £244 per annum, but the advantages attaching to permanent employment will have the effect of retaining services, although the actual advance is but £6 per annum.

I would further extend the proposal from nine new permanent salaries to 100, which will absorb two-thirds of the temporary staff, and probably include all those whom I should feel justified in transferring to the fixed establishment.

This recommendation will have the appearance of causing a large increase upon the Estimate of the preceding year; but such is not the case, as there is a consequent decrease in the vote for temporary services.

In view of the petition of draftsmen for increased remuneration, I am prepared to advise a general increase of about 12½ per cent. on the salaries of the professional staff (not including those in the field, respecting whom I have made another recommendation, and who are not affected by the above recommendation), or those whose salaries may (as proposed) be raised from £200 to £250 per annum.

The humble Petition of the undersigned temporary draftsmen in the Survey Department—

SHewETH:—

1. That in case of sickness, no matter how severe and prolonged, your Petitioners receive no pay whatever during their absence from official duties.

2. That your Petitioners are allowed no leave, with pay, to enable them to recruit their strength, as is the case with all the officers in the other Departments of the Government Service.

3. That your Petitioners therefore hope that you will seriously consider these regulations with a view to their amendment.

Mr. W. Shepherd and Mr. J. H. A. Lee to The Surveyor-General.

Sir,

Surveyor-General's Office, Sutton's Buildings, 14 November, 1882.

At the request of the temporary draftsmen we have the honor to respectfully remind you of the Petition sent on by them some months ago through you to the Honorable the Minister for Lands, praying for payment during sickness and an annual grant of leave with pay, and we have the honor to beg that you will still accord it your support and furtherance.

We have, &c.,

W. SHEPHERD.
J. H. A. LEE.

Minutes on No. 3.

Mr. Ellis.—As new Estimates will be required, I should prefer trying again to add to the permanent staff as proposed before; and if not successful, I will consider the question in another form.—P.F.A., 28/11/82.

The Secretary and Cashier.—The gentlemen should have some reply, and then, in order to place this matter before the Deputy Surveyor-General, these papers should be placed with the recommendation submitted in last Estimates, and brought forward at the proper time.—J.W.E., 20/12/83.

Mr. Biggar.—Please ask Messrs. Shepherd and Lee to note Surveyor-General's minute of 28th ultimo, as seen or observed.—J.F.L., 4/1/83. Observed.—J. H. A. LEE, W. SHEPHERD, 5/1/83.

Question.

Legislative Assembly, Wednesday, 7 March, 1883.

Question.—7. TEMPORARY DRAFTSMEN, SURVEY DEPARTMENT:—Mr. Olliffe asked the Secretary for Lands,—If the sum of £4,000 increase on the Estimates for temporary assistance in the Survey Department is to be devoted to paying the 12½ per cent. to the temporary draftsmen now employed?

Mr. Farnell answered:—The sum of £4,000 is intended to be applied to the purpose of increasing the pay of the temporary draftsmen, though not necessarily to the extent of 12½ per cent. in each case.

Minutes on above.

The Accountant.—Please submit statement showing what would be the result if the different classes of temporary draftsmen were paid at the old rates for six days per week, from 1st January last.—J.F.L., 9/3/83. To be seen by the Surveyor-General.—E.H.S., 9/3/83.

Mr. Biggar.—Obtain papers please, also copy of answer referred to.—J.F.L.

The Secretary and Cashier,—Mr. Cohen, Accountant at Lands, has searched through the Estimate papers now with him, but cannot find the Surveyor-General's minute referring to provision for contingencies or any paper bearing upon the subject of the £4,000 vote. Copy of Mr. Secretary Farnell's answer herewith.—J.E.B., 9/3/83. (See No. 5.)

Minutes on No. 5.

The Appropriation Act will probably be passed in a few days. I wish to have the opinion of Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Ellis on the question of distribution of the £4,000 vote.—P.F.A., 23/4/83. The Chief Draftsman.

The Secretary and Cashier,—Is this to be considered a bonus for the present year, or to be considered in the future as an annual rate of pay—increase in the future yearly to the temporary staff; I shall require a list* of the temporary staff, showing rating from the commencement of the present year, and dates of increases from that time to the present.—J. W. ELLIS, 27/4/83.

I would recommend that each temporary draftsman receive an increase on his monthly pay at the rate of 12½ per cent. for as long as the £4,000 may last.—R.D.F., 16/5/83. I concur.—P.F.A., 4/6/83.

Petition to The Surveyor-General.

The Memorial of the undersigned Special First-class Draftsmen.

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That the daily wage paid to your Memorialists falls far short of the earnings of professional men of like qualifications in private practice.

That your Memorialists, alike with all other Survey Office draftsmen, are forbidden under pain and penalty to supplement their income by private practice.

That no Civil Service Bill that might be drafted could in any way affect your Memorialists, whose engagement is practically from day to day only.

That to your Memorialists there lies no road to promotion open, unless to the permanent staff at serious pecuniary loss present and prospective.

That it is incumbent on your Memorialists to keep up an appearance that shall discredit neither them nor the service in which they are engaged, and to make some sort of provision against possible loss of employment for their declining years, or for the support of those they may leave behind them, when removed by death.

That

That many, if not all, of your Memorialists are continuously employed on precisely the same class of work and perform it equally as well as the permanent staff draftsmen, who are in receipt of better pay and can obtain promotion to still better positions.

That better and truer service may always be expected from the contented employé; that on the whole the special first class draftsmen have not been, and are not contented is plainly evinced by the fact of so many of them having left the Service to better themselves, and that others are only waiting favourable openings to follow.

That, undoubtedly, the Service suffers by this disaffection in, and desertion from, its ranks; old and tried servants, well up in their work, having to be continually replaced by young and inexperienced men, whose teaching and induction to office routine occupy valuable time, and operate detrimentally to the best interests of the Department.

That increase of pay and privilege would obviate this constant and, to the Service, pernicious state of affairs, if not wholly, still to a great extent may be relied on.

Your Memorialists would therefore most respectfully ask you to lay this their Memorial before the Honorable the Secretary for Lands, and give your favourable consideration to their request,—

That your Memorialists' salaries to the annual amount of £275, payable in twelve equal monthly instalments, and that, in consideration thereof, all extra leave, even without pay, as hitherto granted at their request, be refused unless sanctioned by the Minister, and that their leave be limited, in future, by the regulations.

R. FRAPPELL,
W. HOGAN,
GEO. BUSH,
And fifty-nine (59) others.

Minutes on above.

Submitted for the consideration of the Surveyor-General. I am of opinion that the principal difficulties in the management of the office arise out of the continuance of the large temporary staff as such.—R.D.F., 14/5/83.

The present extraordinary demand for public survey has practically raised the price of the services of Draftsmen; this would fall considerably if those employed on the temporary staff could be dispensed with. My recommendation of 5th August, 1882, would have gone a long way towards meeting the difficulty, but unfortunately circumstances prevented its being carried out. The principle advocated was that the salary £250 per annum should be the minimum paid to draftsmen, others than learners, and making no more appointments to intermediate classes. Under this arrangement the temporary element would have been gradually absorbed into the permanent staff. All that I can recommend is that the above principle be adopted in framing future estimates.—P. F. ADAMS, 25/5/83. The Under Secretary for Lands.

There is a sum of £4,000 specially provided on the Estimates for the purpose of increasing the salaries of temporary draftsmen, and there is, apparently, no reason why such of the officers signing this petition as are worthy of additional remuneration should not receive it. Indeed, the fact of their being special class draftsmen would seem to be a substantial ground for the favourable consideration of their respective claims.—C.O., 2/6/83.

In my opinion a special grade of temporary draftsmen should be made at an annual salary (to be paid at a daily rate) of £275. It is not necessary that this grade should apply to all the gentlemen signing this petition, but the Surveyor-General may submit the names of those whom he considers, from length of service and qualification, should be placed on this new grade.—J.S.F., 11/6/83.

The Surveyor-General.—E.H.S., 11/6/83. Mr. Fitzgerald in the first instance.—P.F.A., 14 June, 1883. The Deputy Surveyor-General.

A reconsideration should, I think, be obtained of this matter. The lowest salary on the permanent staff is £225. I think the special class of temporary draftsmen are quite contented with a ratable increase, and I fear I will not be able to satisfy them or the staff officers by any attempt to apportion salaries of £275 amongst the temporary draftsmen.—R.D.F., 18 June, 1883.

I concur. Submitted.—P.F.A., 22 June, 1883. For decision on reconsideration (see minute on Minl., 83/3,846.)—J.S.F., 22/6/83.

No. 8.

Memorandum by Surveyor-General to Under Secretary for Lands.

Surveyor-General's Office, Sydney, 8 June, 1883.

THE authority of the Secretary for Lands is requested for the payment to each temporary draftsman employed in this Department of an increased remuneration monthly, at the rate of 12½ per cent. on the salary received by him, the expense to be met from the vote of £4,000 as provided in Estimates-in-Chief for 1883, to commence from the 1st January last, and to be continued until the amount referred to is exhausted.

P. F. ADAMS.

This recommendation, if approved of, would interfere with the direction of the Secretary for Lands in reference to a special grade of draftsmen at a daily rate of pay equal to £275 per annum.—C.O., 12/6/83.

Approved.—J.S.F. I do not approve of the proposal for 12½ per cent. Increases when advisable should be specially recommended.—J.S.F., 12/6/83. The Surveyor-General.—E.H.S., 13/6/83. Mr. Fitzgerald in the first place.—P.F.A., 15 June, 1883. The Deputy Surveyor-General.

The Surveyor-General.—I do not know anything of an intention of the Minister to form a "special grade at a rate of pay equal to £275 per annum." The present recommendation of 12th June, 1883, would not only place the "special class" on a rate of £265 for as long as the £4,000 lasted, but also give an increase to the other temporary draftsmen. The temporary draftsmen number more than 200, and to go into their relative merits and apportion the money amongst them according to their deserts would, in my opinion, be impossible, and to attempt it would only, I think, create general dissatisfaction.—R.D.F., 18 June, 1883.

Since

Since writing the above I have received the decision of the Minister (on Minl. 83-3,592) referred to.—R.D.F., 18 June, 1883. I concur. Submitted.—P.F.A. After fully considering this matter with Mr. Fitzgerald I am of opinion that his recommendation should be adopted.—J.S.F., 22/6/83. The Surveyor-General.—S.F., 25/6/83. The Deputy Surveyor-General.—Submitted also as to cases in district offices.—J.F.L., 12/6/83. Mr. Fitzgerald as to those who have resigned. The draftsmen employed in District Survey Offices should participate of course.—P.F.A., 6 July, /83. The Deputy Surveyor-General.

Those who have left are, I think, entitled to the increased pay for the time they have served, unless upon the ground that such increase being intended to keep them in the office they have no right to claim it, having resigned before it was allotted.—R.D.F., 9 July, /83.

Submitted.—I really think that those who remain ought to have the full benefit of the vote, and those who have left the office should not participate.—P.F.A., 9 July, 1883. The Under Secretary for Lands. Submitted.—C.O., 12/7/83. Those who have left the Department are not to receive any increase.—J.S.F., 13/7/83. I presume those who are on leave will be included. If necessary the question should be asked.—P.F.A., 13/7/83. I do not think it is necessary.—R.D.F., 13 July, 1883. I think that those who have left the office for the field, either as surveyors or field assistants, should not benefit.—P.F.A., 16 July, 1883.

To Pay Clerk,—

Surveyor-General's Office, Clerical Branch, Bridge-street, Sydney, 26 July, 1883.

Please see that no person receives a cheque as bonus who is not now serving as a temporary draftsman, or who is on the point of sending in his resignation.

J.F.L.

The Secretary and Cashier,—Every care will be taken; but I would respectfully point out that the abstracts have been made up until the end of June only, so that perhaps any draftsman who is working or has worked in July would be entitled to receive the cheque.—F.L.G., 26.

The Deputy Surveyor-General.—The $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. can be paid perhaps as suggested, viz., to all draftsmen on the list for June. The payment now being made is only up to end of that month.—J.F.L., 26.

I think to all draftsmen who had not resigned prior to the decision of the Minister.—R.D.F., 27 July, 1883. Pay Clerk,—Pay to all serving as temporary draftsmen on date of Minister's decision (on 83/3,846 Ml.), viz., 13th instant.—J.F.L., 27/7/83.

The Secretary and Cashier,—

As the enclosed authority makes the bonus of $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to temporary draftsmen payable from the sum of £4,000 voted for the purpose, perhaps a further authority will be required to pay a similar bonus to the temporary draftsmen employed in connection with the "Detailed Survey of the City and Suburbs." The amount required for the year would be about £50, and could be charged to the vote of £10,000 for detail survey.

Surveyor-General's Office, Sydney, 24 August, 1883.

THE authority of the Secretary for Lands is requested for the payment to the temporary draftsmen employed on the City Detail Survey of $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. increased remuneration, under the same conditions as allowed to the temporary draftsmen on the general establishment; if approved, the expenditure can be charged to the vote of £10,000 provided for "City Survey," from which funds are available.

Memorandum by Surveyor-General to Under Secretary for Lands.

Surveyor-General's Office, Sydney, 10 June, 1884.

AS soon as the item of £4,000, provided in the Estimates-in-Chief for the current year, to continue increased remuneration to the temporary staff, is made available by the passing of the Appropriation Act, it is recommended for the approval of the Secretary for Lands that it be distributed in a similar manner to last year, viz., an increased remuneration monthly at the rate of $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the salary received by each temporary draftsman of this Department; to commence from the 1st of January, 1884, and be continued until the amount referred to is exhausted. It is, however, to be understood that all temporary draftsmen who have already left or may leave the office prior to date of first application to Treasury for funds on account of this item are not to participate.

P. F. ADAMS.

Submitted.—C.O., 13/6/84. I approve, but it must be understood that I cannot in future recommend a like amount to be provided for distribution in a similar manner, as it appears to me the inferior officers are rewarded equally with the superior officers.—J.S.F., 25/6/84. AM informed you have ordered Sergeant Rowe to Hay to-day; surely no reason for such precipitate action without reference to me.

Telegram from Superintendent Brown to Inspector-General of Police.

Deniliquin, 18 March, 1885.

SERGEANT ROWE's conduct necessitated his immediate removal. Papers by yesterday's post.

Telegram from Inspector-General of Police to Superintendent Brown, Deniliquin.

18 March, 1885.

ENTIRELY disapprove of Sergeant Rowe's transfer under circumstances. He must be recalled to Deniliquin at once.

Sergeant Rowe's Report.

Police Station, Deniliquin, 16 March, 1885.

SERGEANT George Rowe most respectfully begs to ask if the Inspector-General of Police is aware of the following facts:—

No. 1. That Superintendent Brown has at least 20 or more police horses broken to harness, some of them recently purchased and valuable horses, some of which are almost daily used by Superintendent Brown and his family both for driving and riding, one of which has been fed and shod at the Government expense for several months solely for the use of one of the Miss Browns.

No. 2.

The paragraphs numbered hereon connected with the corresponding numbers in the Statement of Charges, and remarks thereupon in the Report. (By Board.)

No. 2. That on several occasions Government forage has been taken to feed his cattle and pigs; buckets full of bran and oats have been taken at a time for the pigs, and also forage to feed his son's horses, leaving the police horses to be stinted of their full ration and balance on hand to be short.

No. 3. That he uses the Deniliquin and Moama paddocks as grazing and fattening paddocks, buying poor cattle and sheep, fattening them in the Deniliquin paddock, and selling them to the butchers, having as many as 200 or 300 sheep and twenty or thirty head of cattle at one time, besides horses of his own and his sons; that Mr. Brown also allows his son to buy poor horses and fatten them in the police paddock, having as many as four at one time; also, that Superintendent Brown buys horses which are fed and shod at Government expense, and when fat sold; on one occasion when at Mount Gipps he purchased a very poor horse which was led from Pooncarie to here by Senior Constable Stone, and fed at the different police stations whilst en route as a police horse.

No. 4. That on the 9th August last Superintendent Brown left here on leave of absence to Corowa, driving two police horses, taking Constable James with him, riding a troop horse also, to look after the buggy and horses, returning from Corowa on the 7th, and claimed for four days' travelling as on inspection.

On the 27th October drove Mrs. Brown to Jerilderie to catch the train, driving two police horses, and taking Constable Jones; riding a troop horse as far as Hartwood, where he was met by Constable Bowen, who returned to Jerilderie with the Superintendent.

On the 3rd November Mr. Brown left here, driving his daughter to different stations, taking troop horses, and also a constable following to look after the buggy and horses; returned on the 7th.

On the 11th November left here; driving his daughter to Mathoura Station; again taking a constable to look after him; riding a police horse.

No. 5. On the 20th December Constable Eggleston left here, driving two police horses in the police van to Jerilderie to bring a large quantity of stores for Superintendent Brown, taking forage from here; returned on the 25th with a load, but not being able to bring the whole quantity, left here again on 2nd January, with van and two horses to bring the remainder; returning here on the 4th at 12 p.m.

No. 6. Also, that Superintendent Brown's family get saddlery from the Police stores, such as stirrup-irons, girths, breastplates, &c. That the constables here are compelled to clean saddles and bridles for Superintendent Brown's family, three side-saddles and bridles being continually kept at the stables and often used; also to keep his son's bridle and saddle clean when living here.

That the police are often engaged driving cattle to and from the paddocks, and in several instances from Deniliquin to Moama, and Moama to Deniliquin, the police at Moama also being engaged as well at Mathoura, and meet half way, and now almost daily looking after cattle since all the grass is eaten in the paddock. Twenty head of cattle were for a long time running in the Deniliquin paddock, and the grass getting very scarce caused the police horses to stray across the river to Mr. Sandale's property for feed. There are, however, thirteen head of cattle in the large paddock at Deniliquin, and three head in the small paddock, besides what are at Moama; no police horses have been running in the Moama paddock for a very long time.

No. 7. Also that Mr. Brown on one occasion showed three horses at the show here, two of his own property, the other a police horse—getting first and second prize for ladies hacks—one of them a police horse, all of which had been fed on police forage.

No. 8. Also that a constable and tracker are wholly employed looking after Superintendent Brown. The constable to look after horses and buggy, to cut the lawns at the house, clean fowl-houses, beat carpets, also to go about the town to borrow a mowing machine to mow the lawns, and to fetch horses for Miss Brown to ride on Saturdays. The tracker to clean boots and shoes, milk cows, feed pigs and poultry, and work in the garden, and go on errands, and when absent with Superintendent Brown on inspection a tracker from Hay comes here in coach to do this work, never doing any kind of police duty.

No. 9. All the mounted constables here complain of the work they have to perform here for Superintendent Brown and his family, cutting and branding cattle, going on errands, carrying parcels, and even going to the railway-station with the spring cart to bring his servant's luggage and many other things of a similar kind. The foot police are also often sent on errands to bring parcels, &c., when on duty, and in uniform.

No. 10. On Friday last two mounted constables were sent out by Mr. Brown to drive a dangerous bull back which had strayed from the paddock, and another constable to gather rubbish outside of the police grounds altogether, and on Saturday two of the mounted constables were sent by Mr. Brown to his house to beat carpets; and on the same day at the railway-station a constable on duty, and in uniform, was ordered by Superintendent Brown to carry some luggage belonging to some friends of his to a conveyance, and this day a constable and tracker are branding a calf. Such things as these bring discredit to the Police Force, and are talked of by the townspeople; in fact the police at Deniliquin are treated more as servants to Mr. Brown and his family, instead of what they really are, police constables; and Mrs. Brown, in the absence of Superintendent Brown, while on leave of absence, had two police horses continually fed and shod for her use, which were used nearly every day until the buggy got broken. Even on Sundays, and on one occasion sent one of the horses to a man named Clayton to ride, the horse being brought back about 8 o'clock at night. Mrs. Brown also gave orders during Mr. Brown's absence what the constables and prisoners should do, and also accused Constable Hurst of being in her garden at 3 o'clock in the morning stealing grapes, when at the time he was in bed, and constables sleeping in the same room can prove.

No. 11. Mr. Brown treats men under him unfairly and unjustly, treating some with undue leniency, and others with almost severity; consequently constables are dissatisfied when they see they are unjustly treated, and are not allowed to do their duty in the manner they should do.

As Mr. Brown will no doubt deny some of these facts, Sergeant Rowe respectfully asks that the Inspector-General will be good enough to hold a sworn investigation, as there are numerous other things of a similar nature.

GEORGE ROWE,

The Inspector-General of Police, through Supt. Brown, Deniliquin.

Sergeant, No. 2,372.

I HARDLY think the Inspector-General will call upon me to report on this scandalous production. Such a man is not fit for the Service. I request his removal from the district.—J. DOWLING BROWN, Supt., 16th March, 1885. The Inspector-General.

SUCH serious and specific charges as these made by Sergeant Rowe cannot be disposed of in summary manner suggested. Investigation will be indispensable. Do you desire to make any representation now for Colonial Secretary's consideration. Sergeant Rowe must remain at Deniliquin in meantime. Wire reply at once.

Memo. from Superintendent Brown to Inspector-General of Police, Deniliquin.

18 March, 1885.

I HOPE the Inspector-General will allow Sergeant Rowe to remain at Hay till an investigation takes place as to the charges the sergeant has thought fit to make against me.

I sincerely trust without any delay the Inspector-General will appoint a Superintendent of Police to thoroughly investigate the matter. It will be most humiliating to me to have to bring back Sergeant Rowe, and on consideration I am sure the Inspector-General will not place me in that position.

Telegram from Inspector-General of Police to Superintendent Brown.

20 March, 1885.

PRESUME my instructions for Sergeant Rowe's recall to Deniliquin acted upon; you have only yourself to blame for precipitancy. It would be obviously unfair to Rowe not to leave him at Deniliquin until matter disposed of. Cannot decide what further action necessary until I receive your explanation.

Report from Superintendent Brown to Inspector-General of Police.

RE charges against me by Sergeant Rowe, I will have difficulty in replying to these charges. Some are deliberate lies, others true to a certain extent but so put that they appear as crimes though I can show justification, and such charges made at so remote a period show the character of Sergeant Rowe to be despicable, unworthy the name of man, and certainly unfit for his position. His actions are spiteful and vindictive, evidently from my having to find fault with him occasionally and my not recommending his promotion.

1. The first charge I emphatically deny, except that part that one of my daughters has occasionally ridden a police horse. I have frequently ridden and lent my horses for police duty.

2. I also deny that forage has been taken to feed cattle and pigs or my son's horse; I have for such purpose had forage of my own. Police horses never stinted, as their condition will show, and also the books show almost always forage on hand.

3. About the paddocks at Moana and Deniliquin I also deny. I only keep a few cows for milking and occasionally sell the young stock to get rid of them. About two or three years ago, when there was an abundance of grass, I bought 200 sheep, but in a few days after sold all but under a hundred, which I kept for killing for my own use. It is false about myself or my son buying horses to fatten; on one occasion I did about three or four years ago get a horse of my own sent down from Mount Gipps which I used on police duty.

4. On or about 9th August last I got three days' leave of absence, but while on the trip some of the time was on duty inspecting station. I did take a man with me.

5. On 27th October I went to Jerilderie on duty, having Mrs. Brown with me; I took a man on patrol.

6. From the 3rd November to 7th I made a patrol to the different stations and took a man with me.

7. On the 11th November I went to Mathoura; on patrol; took a man with me.

8. On the 20th December Constable Eggleston offered to go to Jerilderie for me for some stores; gave him leave of absence; was not aware that he took any forage; if so it was very little and at the time I had forage of my own.

9. None of my family ever get any saddlery out of the store.

10. Sometimes my groom may clean private saddles but always of his own accord.

11. Now and then I have sent a few head of cattle from here to Moana paddock. The few head of cattle I have have not eaten the grass, nor do they cause the horses to cross the river to Mr. Landale's; in a bad season like the present there would be little or no grass even if there were no stock of any kind at all.

12. I did three years ago exhibit two horses at the show; one was a police horse, but did not take any prize; it was merely done for my two daughters to ride together, when one exhibited her horse. I had forage of my own at the time.

13. The constable, as groom and tracker, are not employed, except on their proper work; mowing the small grass plots, I consider, Government work. The tracker does clean my boots and milk the cows. When he goes with me on tours of inspection instead of taking a constable I sometimes get a tracker from an out station, so that this station is not without a tracker.

14. The mounted men never complain of work, nor do they do anything but legitimate work.

15. On Friday last one of the men saw my bull, a quiet one, out of the paddock, and he run it in.

16. The constable, in cleaning up round my quarters, also raked up the approach, and I asked one of the men to assist in shaking a carpet. The constable on the platform assisted me in bringing a port-manteau to my buggy.

17. The police in the district and in Deniliquin are a credit to the force; they are not talked of, unless by blackguards of Sergeant Rowe's stamp.

18. I am entitled to keep my horses stabled, and in my absence my family go out in the buggy occasionally. The only orders Mrs. Brown gives is to send word when wood is required, or when the yard is to be swept; if she did not do so the sergeant would never trouble himself about it.

19. I never yet treated men unfairly or unjustly, and defy any one man saying so.

In conclusion, I would respectfully ask the Inspector-General if he is not satisfied with my explanation to cause an investigation, and I fear not the result.

J. DOWLING BROWN,
Superintendent.

The Inspector-General of Police to The Principal Under Secretary.

Statement made by Sergeant Rowe, of Deniliquin, against Superintendent Brown.

Sir, Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 23 March, 1885.

I regret that it becomes my duty to submit, for the Colonial Secretary's information and consideration, the enclosed statement made by Sergeant George Rowe, of the Deniliquin police, against Superintendent Brown of that district.

The charges being of such a serious and specific character, the Colonial Secretary will no doubt be of opinion that a thorough investigation will be necessary, the evidence to be recorded in writing.

With this view, I have the honor to suggest that the Comptroller-General of Prisons, and Mr. E. V. Morisset, the Senior Officer of Police, should be appointed a Board of Inquiry to proceed to Deniliquin, and hold such investigation and report.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND FOSBERY,
Inspector-General of Police.

Minute of Acting Colonial Secretary.

It is manifest that charges so clearly and specifically made, and of such a grave character as those preferred by Sergeant Rowe against his superior officer, demand instant inquiry.

They substantially amount to an impeachment of the Superintendent's honesty by misusing public property for his private purposes.

The suggestion of the Inspector-General is approved, and no more competent officers to conduct the inquiry than those named by him could be selected. Let the necessary arrangements be at once made. The Minister for Justice should be approve as to the employment of the Comptroller-General.

W.B.D.

The Under Secretary of Justice.—C.W., B.C., 23 March, 1885. Inspector-General of Police, 23 March, 1885. Approved.—H.E.C., 25 March, 1885. The Principal Under Secretary.—W.E.P., B.C., 25/3/85. The Inspector-General of Police.—C.W., B.C., 25/3/85.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Inspector-General of Police.

Sir, Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 23 March, 1885.

In reply to your letter of this date, regarding certain charges preferred against Mr. Superintendent Brown, I am directed to inform you that the Acting Colonial Secretary has approved of the appointment (as suggested by you) of the Comptroller-General of Prisons and Mr. E. V. Morisset as a Board of Inquiry to proceed to Deniliquin and hold the needful investigation and report the result.

2. The papers have been forwarded to the Department of Justice, with a view of Mr. Maclean's receiving the necessary instructions in the matter.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,
Principal Under Secretary.

The Inspector-General of Police,—Forwarded for Superintendent Morisset's information and guidance. Mr. Maclean will take the papers and arrange with Mr. Morisset as to the date they will proceed to Deniliquin.—E.F. Superintendent Morisset, 23/3/85.

Memo. from Superintendent Morisset to Inspector-General of Police.

Police Department, Superintendent's Office, Southern District, Goulburn, 24 March, 1885.

NOTED and returned to the Inspector-General of Police.

I have arranged to meet Mr. Maclean at the Goulburn Railway Station at midnight to-morrow, and go on to Jerilderie with him.

Brown drove No. 402 and Sam to Tuppall Station returned on the 27th January.

Cross-examined by Superintendent Brown: I came here on 12th May, 1883; at the time I did not think it was sufficient to report upon before; you have not had occasion to find fault with me before; you have found fault with me two or three times; I am aware that Senior-Sergeant Comber has been lately promoted and I have not been; my service would not entitle me to it; about four or five months ago I received a letter from Mr. Edwards threatening me for action for defamation of character; that was in reference to a woman named Emma Russell, who was living as servant at John McGrath's, at "Terminus Hotel," in this town; previously to my receiving that I had spoken to the publican as to her conduct, and on my inspecting the hotel before the Licensing Court I told McGrath that if he kept her on the hotel I should oppose his license; I took no notice of the letter from Mr. Edwards, but two or three days after received a letter from McGrath, stating he had cleared the girl out.

GEORGE ROWE.

Mr. Brown: I cannot dispute the number of horses or number of times they were used but for the most part they were used for my long journeys on duty; I consider myself entitled to use them for my own purposes, for driving with my own family at any time; all these harness horses are broken down horses, unfit for any other service, and many of them were picked up at out stations on my return, when I absolutely required them on my return journeys; there was only one horse (No. 80) one day my daughter asked the constable to lend her which he did, I was present at the time; the other referred to as having been kept solely for the use of my daughter, I admit it has been used for such purpose; generally once a week; sometimes less; it was a spare horse not fit for much active work but was used occasionally for police work; I admit on one or two occasions when I could not go myself I have sent the tracker out with my daughters, one of my daughters riding her own horse, and I believe as far as my recollection goes, the tracker rode one of my own horses; in explanation to using police horses for riding purposes I may say that for months and months to give police horses a spell I have lent the constables my own private horses to do the work, therefore I did not think it any great harm occasionally to use the police horses for private purposes; in one instance, commencing from 1st July, 1883, to beginning of August, 1883, one of my own private horses was lent to constable to do the work; the bay horse referred to, page 3, was ridden by Constable Jones and Constable Burrows on some occasions.

Cross-examined by Sergeant Rowe: The harness-horse, No. 181, has since been ridden by Constable Passfield for several months, and reported that he was unfit to ride two or three weeks ago; No. 849 is now used as a troop-horse, and having had a long spell is now used by Constable Bowen; Zulu, No. 928, fell lame; I drove him a short time when he was given up by Senior Constable Gallagar; since being turned out; he was put in the service again, and is now ridden by Constable Simpson, and has been for several months; horse No. 402 I am aware was, on one occasion, ridden by my daughter; I have no recollection of No. 184 having been so ridden.

Mr. Brown's further statement:—I give further particulars of horse lent by me to police; one bay remount from June, 1883, to December, 1883, ridden by Constable Connors, and a tracker off and on; one bay from 16th December, 1883, to January 11th, 1884; bay horse from 16th December, 1883, to 2nd February, 1884; I am prepared to state that the bay remount has been ridden by Constable Connors and tracker; does not remember when that horse was lost.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Sergeant Rowe recalled: I produce the weekly duty book of men and horses; the horse referred to by Mr. Brown as the bay (remount) appears in the book as having arrived from Jerilderie in February, 1883, up to the 15th December, 1883; he appears first to have been used by the police, in July, 1883, and subsequent day ridden by Miss Brown to the show; previously to this he was ridden by Constable Jones for exercise; ridden 7 miles on 28th July, 1883; ridden by John Brown, junior, to the paddock; ridden by Miss Brown, on several occasions, and other members of Mr. Brown's family; he does not appear to have been used for police duties until ridden by Constable Burrows, on 6th and 7th September, 1883; on 10th and 11th September again ridden by Constable Burrows; from 4th October to 15th December, 1883, ridden nine times by the police.

GEORGE ROWE.

Thomas

Thomas Charles Jones states:—He is a police constable, stationed in Deniliquin; arrived at Deniliquin on 27th June, 1883; looked after chestnut horse No. 581; bay horse belonging to Miss Brown; they were fed in the stable and to be shown at the show; 581 horses were clipped; rode the bay horse that has been since lost for exercise; never rode it on police duty; does not remember either Connors or Oscar ever riding it; Miss Brown rode it at the show; he was fed every night whether he was used or not; he went lame afterwards.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Re-examined by Sergeant Rowe: Of the horses that have been broken into harness that have been read to me only one horse, Gol Gol, and number 184, were broken down; has ridden some of the horses since, and has known other members of the Force that have ridden them; No. 184 was on one occasion ridden by Miss Brown.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Sergeant Rowe re-called, states:—I omitted to state that there was a black mare belonging to Mr. Brown; the duty book shows from April, 1882, to 28th July, 1883, for which forage was drawn, and from 12th May, 1883, to 28th July, 1883, it was both fed and shod to my own knowledge, and was not during that time ridden on police duty.

Cross-examined by Supt. Brown: The mare was ridden by Mr. Superintendent Brown four days, week ending 16th June, 1883, and on other occasions down the town, which I did not consider on duty, and was ridden by Constable Connors and Oscar for purpose of driving cattle.

Sergeant Rowe states:—I have repeatedly seen young Mr. Charles Brown, when home from school, taking Government feed in a bag to feed his horse; I spoke to him two or three times, and when he returned last December, the day after his return (I do not remember the date) I saw him taking the bag away from the stable with something in it; I went to the stable from my own quarters and asked Constable Hurst what Charley had got in the bag; he replied, "Feed for his horse"; I said, "Where did he get it from?" He said, "Out of the Government bin," I said, "He has no business to take that; do not let him take any more, and tell him if he takes any more that I'll lock him up"; on the following night he went for feed, and Constable Hurst told him what I had told him on the previous night; he then went away without any feed; he afterwards put his horse in the stable and fed him, and I used to turn it out if I found it there; on previous occasions, when he was home, he always fed his horse on Government forage; John Brown also, when his horse was not regularly stabled, when it was brought in for its use, used to feed it on Government forage; Oscar has both taken chaff for the cows, and bran and oats to feed the pigs; on several occasions I have had to stint the police horses of their food to make my books tally, and on one or two occasions I was short of forage; I cannot say whether Mr. Brown was aware of the forage being taken on the occasions named, excepting that Jack's pony and Charley's pony were fed at the yard and the stable and that Mr. Brown must have seen them feeding; I spoke to Mr. Brown about the pigs being fed on the forage, and he said, "I did not know that my horses were getting any bran and oats, only chaff;" he said, "I will get some stuff up from Moama."

Cross-examined by Mr. Brown: I did not report it to you before; I knew that if I had reported it to you that I should have been shunted off; I am aware that you had forage of your own on the premises, at different times, on two or three occasions; I am aware that young Charley Brown took his own forage from the station after what had passed concerning the chaff; he had no forage there at the time; I am not aware that your son Jack had forage of his own at any time on the station; he could not have had it without my knowledge; I reported it to you of Oscar taking forage for feeding the pigs.

GEORGE ROWE.

Constable Hurst could corroborate these statements.

Thomas Charles Jones states:—I am a police constable at Deniliquin; I remember young Charley Brown, when home for the holidays, taking forage from the forage-room to the yard (about 100 yards off) to feed his horse; saw him six or seven times; I did remonstrato with Charley Brown, and reported it to the sergeant; I have seen Oscar, the black-tracker, taking bran and oats to feed the pigs, and told him not to take it; he said it was by Mr. Brown's orders; on one occasion I saw him taking forage out of the bin; at the time I speak of there was no other forage that Oscar could take; Mr. Brown has had forage on the station, chaff and grains from the brewery, in the forage-room, and some bran in a shed; I do not know whether any was used to feed Mr. Brown's horses; it was not used in the stable; I have seen Mr. Brown's cows being fed with it; saw Oscar taking chaff from the station; I have seen Mr. John Brown's horse fed in the stable on Government forage often; have fed him myself; twenty or thirty times I saw him fed; we have had to feed horses on half rations on account of forage being short; Mr. Brown must have seen young Jack's pony feeding in the stable; I have also seen the black pony several times, and also chestnut horse once, feeding at the stable; on the 17th of this month Mr. John Brown's horse was fed in the stable, and the following morning; on the 18th I led him half way to Tocumwall, with a police horse; Mr. Brown himself ordered the horse to be brought in, and he brought horse and put him into the stable; he could have been put into a smaller paddock, and not fed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brown: Sergeant Rowe has had no conversations with me as to what I should state before this Board.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Oscar Mitchell states:—I am tracker, and employed about police station at Deniliquin; take charge of cows, pigs, and sheep of Mr. Brown; have fed the pigs on bran and oats; got it in the forage-room; was told by Mr. Superintendent Brown; I fed the pigs three times that way, and then fed them with Mr. Brown's feed; do not know how much I took; Constable Jones told me not to take it, and I told him I took it by Mr. Brown's orders; I fed the cows with chaff and bran; I took the chaff and bran five times to feed the cows, until Mr. Brown's forage came up; I took the chaff and bran without orders because the cow was losing her milk.

Cross-examined by Sergeant Rowe: Mr. Brown did not always keep feed for pigs, and I get refuse from the barracks kitchen.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brown: You did tell me to take Government forage for the pigs.

OSCAR.
My

My name is Frederick George Eggleston; have been twelve months on this station; have never seen horses on short feed; the condition of horses has been very good; I have never known the Government forage to be short; never have been told to put the horses on half rations; have been about two years in the Police Force; have never seen any person take forage from the Government forage store; have seen Mr. Brown's forage in the buggy-shed (bags of forage).

Cross-examined by Sergeant Rowe: Have seen Jack's pony fed on Government feed; have also seen Charley's fed on Government feed; I have fed them myself; I do not know by whose authority; it was an understood thing that horses brought from the paddock had to be fed; Mr. Brown himself told me to bring in those two horses from the big paddock to the stable for use; Mr. Brown has never told me to feed the horses; I know that you spoke to Charley Brown about taking feed; I have been told by Constable Hurst that he took feed.

FRED. G. EGGLESTON.

Joseph Steele Braim states:—I have been in the habit of seeing the police horses almost daily for the last two or three years or more; the horses were always in excellent condition, far from their being stinted in their food.

J. S. BRAIM.

The Superintendent has an allowance for forage for two horses; that allowance was drawn for two police horses in use by him, irrespectively of the horses spoken of in my evidence, while at this station, and I suppose at other stations; I have no knowledge of any forage having been taken, nor did I know that it was taken for my own private use; I have seen my son's horses feeding in the stable and stock-yard, but as I knew that they had forage of their own I supposed it was that forage; I can show accounts of forage purchased by myself during the years 1883 and 1884, and this forage was kept either in the forage-shed or coach-shed; I distinctly deny that I ever directed Oscar to take forage for the pigs.

Cross-examined by Sergeant Rowe: When the horses were in my sons generally purchased forage; the forage I refer to in these papers I purchased for my cows.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge 3.

Sergeant Rowe states:—Since I have been here, and on my arrival, there were a quantity of sheep in the police paddock in May, 1883; I estimated about 200; the police paddock is about 400 acres; some were brought in and killed for the house, and the remainder were sold to Marum, the butcher, some months after; I suppose upwards of 100; in August, 1883, there were fifty sold to Marum, the butcher; I believe they were some of the same 200; on October 5th twenty were sold to Marum, the butcher; on 27th November there were twenty-two sold to Marum, the butcher; when I first saw these sheep they were not marketable sheep, but they were when sold on a subsequent occasion; there were about forty bought and sold within a week; there were cattle in the paddock when I came here in May, 1883; some fourteen or fifteen in Deniliquin paddock; some have been sold in Deniliquin; from 14th January, 1883, to 25th October, 1884, there were ten head sold to two butchers in Deniliquin, some of Mr. Brown's own breeding, and some which he purchased at the yards; there have been as many as twenty in the Deniliquin paddock at one time; on 11th June, 1883, Connors and Oscar left here driving some cattle (eight I think it was), to Moama, and returned on the 18th; on 28th January, 1884, Constable Connors left here with six head to go to Nash's; on 20th January Oscar took six cattle to Moama, and met Moama constable half way; during the time the two lots of cattle were in Moama there were some thirteen or fourteen head in Deniliquin paddock; young cattle were sent away (I believe all) on 11th June, 1883; when he left for Moama Constable Connors was riding troop horse No. 433, and Oscar the black mare; on 24th September, 1883, Constable Connors riding troop horse No. 581, and Oscar riding the bay horse, went to Pretty Pine for a bull and brought it back; on 2nd August, 1884, Oscar went again to Hill Plain for cattle, riding troop horse No. 849; on the 2nd and 3rd February, 1885, Oscar took cattle half way to Mathoura, riding troop-horse Sam, and was there met by Senior-constable Stone, who took the cattle over.

Cross-examined by Superintendent Brown: I thought there were 200 sheep in the paddock in May, 1883; I believe there were twenty-four cattle in the paddock at one time.

GEORGE ROWE.

Mr. Superintendent Brown states:—In November 25th, 1882, I wanted some sheep for killing purposes, and I bought 240; had to buy that number to get them at a price; on December 6th, 1882, I sold 107; in August, 1883, I sold fifty besides killing them, at the rate of one a week ever since I got them; I think on one occasion I sold twenty after that, and after that I kept killing them all, with the exception of about twenty that were lost until they were all killed; I kept the sheep in a paddock as there was abundance of grass there; I have never had above twenty head of cattle in the two paddocks; about ten of those were cows and their increase; the cows I kept for milking purposes as the young stock were weaned; I sent a few to Moama so as to supply myself with milk; in two or three years' time, as far as I can remember, I bought three young heifers and a cow and calf for this long time past; I sold the three young cattle; I have a recollection of selling one steer; certainly no recollection of selling ten; I do not believe there were ten; I can only account for four; during the time referred to I had no horses to put in the police paddock at Moama.

Cross-examined by Sergeant Rowe: I have got about eight or ten cattle in the large paddock, and three in the small paddock, and I have two, three, or four in Moama paddock; there were five or six head of cattle taken away to Moria in February last; while the sheep were in the paddock sometimes it was well grassed and sometimes not; whenever the river is low the horses do stray across the paddock whether it is well grassed or not; the horse was brought from Mount Gipps as described myself, and finding him not suitable I sold him.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

First-class Constable Bell states:—I am stationed at Moama; I know the police paddock there; I have seen cattle running there; I believe they were Mr. Brown's cattle; the most I have known at one time have been twelve or thirteen head; no police horses in Moama paddock at present time; there were two horses since cast at the time the thirteen head were there, and at the time there was not much grass.

A. BELL.

Thomas Charles Jones states:—There are fifteen head of cattle now in the large paddock, and there are three in the small paddock.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Sergeant

Sergeant Rowe recalled, states:—I produce the slaughtering book; the slaughter book has been kept by Constable Burrows and Constable Eggleston; from 14th January, 1883, to 25th October, 1884, I find nine head of cattle sold by Mr. Brown to the butchers.

GEORGE ROWE.

Charge No. 4.

Superintendent Brown states:—I applied for three days' leave of absence to go to Corowa, and specified the days; during my trip there, and part of the way back, I was on duty inspecting Tocumwal Station, and drew night allowance during the time I was on duty; I took Constable James with me, as is customary on all occasions of my going on duty, but I stretched a point, taking the constable on to Corowa out of his own district; I always take a constable with me when I go on inspection for attendance and patrol.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge No. 5.

I admit everything; I asked Constable Eggleston to go to Jerilderie to bring my stores down which I got from Sydney; he went of his own free will and I paid all his expenses, using van and police horses; I consider it a privilege I am entitled to, and had been adopted by my predecessor here usually; the prices of goods here being so dear it necessitated my sending to Sydney for them, as the price was considerably cheaper.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge No. 6.

Sergeant Rowe states:—On 8th November, 1884, Constable Hurst came to me and asked me for two pairs girths and two breastplates; I said, "What do you want them for?" he replied "to put on the lady's saddles"; I said, "Who told you to get them?" he replied, "The boss did, himself"; I gave them to him; they were used that day on the side-saddles and have been ever since; previous to that I had given Charley Brown a pair of stirrup-irons; he said his father told him to get a pair in consequence of his own being burnt in the fire; John Brown also got a pair of stirrup-irons when one of his own broke and was not fit to use.

By the Board: I issue all stores to this station without requisition.

Sergeant Rowe also states:—Mr. Brown told me on two or three occasions when Jack's saddle was hanging in the stable to get it cleaned; also told me to see that the double-reined bridles and bits were put in their proper places.

By the Board: The bridles and saddles were cleaned for the ladies every time they were used, and Mr. John Brown's not often; the men have complained of having cleaned the saddles; I told them it could not be helped, as orders had been given; Constables Jones and Hurst complained to me.

GEORGE ROWE.

Mr. Brown states:—I have no personal knowledge of saddles and bridles being cleaned; if they had been it would have been the duty of the sergeant to report it to me; I have no knowledge of the girths and breastplates having been taken for the lady's saddles, and I do not believe it.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Thomas Charles Jones states:—I have cleaned Mr. John Brown's saddle several times; I have been told to do it, but I cannot say by whom; I have never complained to the sergeant; I have spoken about it being dirty, but I cannot remember whether I spoke to the sergeant about cleaning it when it was so dirty.

Cross-examined by the Sergeant: I have said that I did not believe in a policeman cleaning saddles for a banker's clerk.

By the Board: I do not know whether Mr. Brown knew whether I had to clean the saddles or not.

By Sergeant Rowe: The ladies' saddles were cleaned by Constables Hurst and James, the Superintendent's batman or groom; I remember Constable Hurst going to the Government store to get girths and breastplates for the ladies' saddles about last October or November; I have seen stirrups of the Government pattern on Mr. John Brown, junior's, saddle.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Charge No. 10.

Superintendent Brown states:—I admit exhibiting a police horse with my own at the show; my own horse took the prize, but not the police horse; the two horses that I have previously referred to as having been put at the service of the police; they were all fed on Government forage, and were more or less used for police purposes, as previously stated; there was only one prize taken by my own horse.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge No. 11.

Superintendent Brown states:—I admit all that; the groom does look after the horses and buggy and mow the grass, and I think it is his duty to do that; the tracker does what is described; when I take the tracker away I sometimes send for a tracker from other stations, which is at my expense; constables have beaten the carpets, but it was to oblige me.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge No. 12.

Superintendent Brown states:—I have never heard of a single complaint from any constable yet; I have one or two men to assist me in cutting and branding cattle; they have done so most willingly; I only know of one, Constable Morrison, being sent to take a note to Mrs. Holt by my wife during my absence, and he was asked to bring a parcel back; I am not aware that a constable has gone to the railway station for any luggage or any such errands; I have no knowledge of the foot police being engaged in carrying parcels, with the exception of the one case I refer to, nor have I ever heard of it until I saw this report.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

James Morrison states:—I am a first-class constable stationed at Deniliquin—a foot policeman; I have to go to the house with the letters, and have twenty or thirty times been requested to bring parcels, sometimes by Mr. Superintendent Brown and sometimes by Superintendent's family.

By

By the Board: I have had to take parcels by the coach when in uniform; I remember taking a parcel for Mr. Brown to the coach office.

By Sergeant Rowe:—On one occasion, at the railway station, I have carried some girls' luggage from there to the vehicle; I have never complained to Mr. Brown; I have been fifteen months stationed at Deniliquin; it was during that time I was asked to carry letters and parcels; I felt I had no right to be asked to carry the parcels.

JAMES MORRISON.

Thomas Charles Jones states:—I have been sent up from the barracks to the town for wire and nails for the purpose of Mr. Brown's quarters, and have carried a letter from Mr. Brown's quarters to Mr. Watson's private house by Mr. Brown's orders.

By the Board: I was not taken off any duty to do this; I have been sent to the station with the spring cart to bring the luggage of a servant girl down to Mr. Brown's house; there is always something to do at the barracks.

THOMAS CHARLES JONES.

Charge No. 13.

Superintendent Brown states:—I have asked the men when they were out at the paddock for horses to bring back any of my cattle they saw; I never sent them on any particular occasions; he was with or belonged to the other cattle; gave no particular directions about bringing a bull in; he was not dangerous but quiet; I get my groom to rake and gather in rubbish from my place; the beating of the carpets was what was before referred to; I did ask the constable to carry a portmanteau to the vehicle; I asked the constable and tracker to brand the calves for me; I was on leave of absence for eight or ten weeks; the buggy and horses were used by Mrs. Brown during that time, on the grounds before stated; during my absence on leave I learned and very much regretted that a police horse was lent to Mr. Clayton at the request of Mrs. Brown, by Constable Hurst; Mrs. Brown, during my absence, has frequently had occasion to ask for constable to clean up the place and bring firewood.

A formal charge was not preferred against Constable Hurst by Mrs. Brown, but having caught him taking peaches shortly before that she thought it was him who took grapes, and reported it to Sergeant Comber.

J. DOWLING BROWN.

Charge No. 14.

Sergeant Rowe states:—On two occasions since I have been here I have reported first class Constable Daniel Foley for drunkenness, neglect of duty, and being absent from barracks; he pleaded guilty on each occasion, promised not to drink any more, and was let off by Mr. Brown; since that time Constable Foley was sent to Jerilderie to take charge of that station, during the absence of Senior-constable Wilson and another mounted constable; he got drunk whilst there, and was nearly drunk the whole time, and was reported by Senior-constable Wilson and Constable Luey, and residents of the town, and was again let off by Mr. Brown on promising to take the pledge and not drink; the reports I speak of are now filed in the office; on New Year's Night, or following morning, Constable Queenan was reported for being slightly under the influence of liquor, and was reduced by Mr. Brown.

By the Board: Constable Foley has been five or six years in the Force, and Constable Queenan about seven years.

GEORGE ROWE.

The Board of Inquiry to The Colonial Secretary.

Board reporting on charges preferred by Sergeant Rowe against Mr. Superintendent Brown.

Sir,

Deniliquin, 1 April, 1885.

We have the honor to report that we have completed the inquiry with which we were charged into the charges preferred by Sergeant Rowe against Mr. Superintendent Brown.

We herewith transmit the proceedings, which deal seriatim with the several accusations as enumerated on the statement of Sergeant Rowe, leaving out such portions as are comprehended in the evidence taken on other paragraphs.

The accusations stated briefly resolve themselves under the following heads:—

1. Having had broken into harness, foraged and shod, and wrongfully using by himself and his family, police horses.
2. Misappropriation of Government forage.
3. Using the police paddocks for keeping and fattening stock for his own use and for sale.
4. Wrongfully charging travelling expenses, and unnecessarily taking a mounted constable from his proper duties.
5. Using police horses, constable, and van, for conveyance of private stores.
6. Appropriation of saddlery from police stores, and employing constables in cleaning saddles of the family.
7. Exhibiting three horses, two being his own, and one a police; all fed on Government forage, at Agricultural Show.
8. Misemploying a constable and tracker in domestic occupations.
9. Misemploying police by himself and family in various ways.
10. Directing constables to drive a dangerous bull, Mrs. Brown using police horses during absence on leave of Mr. Brown, and lending one to a civilian, and accusing a constable of stealing grapes.
11. Unfair treatment of the men.

With regard to No. 1 we consider that the charge has been established to the extent of showing an utterly unjustifiable abuse of the privilege allowed to Mr. Brown of using two police horses, and still more unjustifiable use by members of his family of horses fed and shod at the Government expense; also that a number of police horses were improperly broken to harness for his convenience.

No. 2. We consider the facts on which this charge rests to be grossly exaggerated. It appears that on some three or four occasions, when Mr. Brown's supply was out, some forage was taken by the tracker for cows and pigs; on one occasion, it was alleged by the tracker, by direction of Mr. Brown. This Mr. Brown emphatically denies.

No. 3. Mr. Brown purchased, in 1883, 240 sheep, which he put into the Deniliquin paddock. These were ultimately disposed of in the course of six months by two sales, one of 107 and another of 50, to butchers, and consumption. On a subsequent occasion forty sheep were purchased and put in the paddock for a day or two. Mr. Brown has had an average of some twenty head of cattle in the paddocks at Deniliquin or Moama, chiefly consisting of milch cows and their progeny. He sold to a butcher at several times nine head, five of which were of his own rearing, and four purchased and placed in the paddock at Deniliquin. On no grounds can Mr. Brown's conduct in this respect be justified.

No. 4. Mr. Brown obtained leave of absence to go to Corowa. On his route lay the police station of Tocumwal, 45 miles from head quarters. He charged travelling expenses for four days, the duty being the inspection of Tocumwal, going and returning. We do not think that under the circumstances any charge should have been made, and certainly not more than two days needed to reach the station and return. The constable was taken on to Corowa. He should not have been taken beyond his own district.

No. 5. Mr. Brown does not defend the proceeding of sending the police van and horses on two trips a distance of 60 miles each way for his private stores, but says that he thought himself privileged to do so.

We consider that the constable, van, and horses were put to a most improper use.

No. 6. Mr. Brown appears to have permitted undesirable relations on the part of his family towards the police establishment.

Saddlery has been furnished on two occasions to members of Mr. Brown's family without, however, so far as we could ascertain, his cognizance.

No. 7. The horses as described were exhibited. Mr. Brown's explanation is very unsatisfactory. No prize was taken for the police horse. Sergeant Rowe explains that he was misinformed on that point. The horses were apparently kept and fed for the purpose of being exhibited.

No. 8. The constable, being Mr. Brown's groom, does not seem to have been misemployed, but Mr. Brown had no right to employ the tracker as he did.

No. 9. Unquestionably the police have been improperly employed in various ways by Mr. Brown and his family, but the most has been made of it by Sergeant Rowe.

No. 10. The charge about the bull was not substantiated. Mr. Brown's official arrangements should have been better ordered than to admit of Mrs. Brown using police horses and lending one during his absence. Mrs. Brown was alone responsible for the accusation of the constable, for which mistake on her part there was the extenuation that previously the same constable had acknowledged to taking peaches.

No. 11. The charge of unfair treatment of the men dwindled down to Mr. Brown's action in two cases of different men accused of drunkenness, in which he may have been right or wrong in his judgment.

We have omitted to notice the charge of Mr. Brown's son's horses being fed on police forage.

Mr. Brown admitted to have seen these horses on several occasions feeding at the stables, but says he thought that it was on forage provided by himself or his sons. He placed before us bills showing the purchase of forage supplies.

Mr. Brown was very injudicious in permitting his private forage to be mixed up with the Government forage.

The plea of Mr. Brown in extenuation of the use of police horses that he had lent horses to the police, cannot in principle be accepted, and furthermore it has been very insufficiently sustained.

As to Sergeant Rowe's charges we consider some of them to have been maliciously exaggerated and vindictively pursued.

We have, &c.,

HAROLD MACLEAN.

E. V. MORISSET.

We attach a letter handed in to us by Mr. Brown at the termination of our inquiry, dated 31st March:

Superintendent Brown to The Board of Inquiry.

Police Department, Superintendent's Office, S.W. District,

Deniliquin, 31/3/1885.

Gentlemen,

Before completing your inquiry I should wish to make some remarks in extenuation. After twenty-two years service in the Police Force and upwards of thirty-five years in the Commission of the Peace, it is most painful to me to stand before you charged with offences most serious. To deny them is too mild a term, and I have no hesitation in saying that the entries in the duty-book are false—written by a man who is base enough for anything and can only be looked upon as a mean, low, informer.

Throughout the whole proceedings you cannot fail to see a spiteful, vindictive feeling; accusations of offences alleged to have been committed two years ago, and which, if true, should have been reported at the time. I have to thank the Inspector-General for having placed the matter for investigation in your hands, and I have every confidence in the result.

I have, &c.,

J. DOWLING BROWN,

Superintendent.

Received through Department of Lands, 7/4/85, 3 p.m.—C.W. It seems only right that Superintendent Brown should have an opportunity of furnishing some explanation of his conduct before any further action is taken in this case.—C.W., 9/4/85.

Approved.—W.B.D. The Inspector-General of Police, B.C., 10/4/85.—C.W. Forwarded to Superintendent Brown accordingly.—E.F., B.C., 13/4/85.

The Superintendent of Police, Deniliquin, to The Inspector-General of Police.

Sir,

Deniliquin, 20 April, 1885.

Referring to the report of the Board of Inquiry to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, I do myself the honor to make the following explanations in answer to the charges made against me:—

No. 1. As regards the charges generally, while I may have been guilty of what may appear irregularities and disobedience, I contend that a Superintendent is not deprived of all discretion. Rules which apply to some districts would, I respectfully submit, not be rigidly enforced in a large and scattered district like mine, subject to the extremes of climate and its consequences. Take

Take for instance the rule binding me to the use of two horses; when taking a journey of a thousand miles two horses could not possibly perform it, and on their return would be useless for a time. I have followed the practice on persons engaged in the management of large stations with the most satisfactory results by taking more than two horses. By breaking in police horses to harness they are available for such purpose afterwards, and being useless for saddle when sold would realize higher prices.

When two horses are kept in stable in good condition they require exercise; members of my family have used them in this way and the Public Service has in no way suffered.

No. 2. It has been made to appear that I used Government forage; the best answer I can give to such statement is that I purchased forage on my own account and that it may have become mixed with that of the Government, but there has been no extravagance in the quantity used for Government purposes; the Government horses have never in any way suffered, and have always been a subject of admiration to every one.

No. 3. With regard to the purchase of stock, when grass was plentiful in 1883, I certainly did so, but kept them only a few days instead of some months before I sold a large number, the remainder being kept for my own use. I purchased the large lot in order to get what I required at a cheaper rate. In this district we have either a superabundance of feed or none at all, and when I kept the stock in the paddocks the Government horses did not suffer.

No. 4. As to my charging travelling allowance when on leave, I asked leave to go to Corowa; on my way I inspected the police station at Tocumwal; if I had not done so, and anything had happened, I should have been guilty of neglect of duty. I therefore made it an official visit to the boundary of my district, taking my leave of three or four days from the time I left my district until I returned to it; on my return I again officially inspected the station and charged accordingly. I should not have asked for leave if I had not been going in that direction, and I could not go out of my district without leave. I took the constable with me as usual rather than leave him at the station Tocumwal till my return.

No. 5. I think I was justified in using the Government van and horses in getting my supplies; my predecessor did so and it is no expense to the Department.

No. 6. I have no hesitation in saying that two girths and one breastplate were put in my stable to prove the charge of getting saddlery out of police store for private use.

No. 7. That my horses were fed and stabled purposely to be exhibited I deny; they were frequently ridden by police, but unfortunately for me Sergeant Rowe, who has been keeping private notes against me, has omitted entering in the duty-book the number of times they were so ridden, although he carefully entered every time they were ridden by my family; in this case the Public Service in no way suffered.

No. 8. The tracker has been employed by me for domestic service; such employment helps to civilize an aboriginal and keeps him out of mischief when there is no Government work to do; it also keeps him from mixing with people in the town, and frequenting public-houses.

No. 9. Whenever constables have done anything for my family it has been of a trifling nature; they have always been asked as a favor and never objected.

No. 10. I regret a police horse was lent on one occasion by a member of my family in my absence to a civilian.

No. 11. This is not important as I consider I am a better judge of such matters than Sergeant Rowe. In conclusion I feel convinced that the Inspector-General will bear witness that during my long period of service I have done my duty efficiently, and kept my district in good order and free from crime, in which it will compare favorably with any other district in the Colony.

I beg to draw particular attention to the opinion given by the Board that the charges made by Sergeant Rowe were maliciously exaggerated and vindictively pursued; such conduct is subversive of all discipline, justifying his removal, and the fact that he has been keeping private notes against me for years I submit carries with it its own condemnation.

I have, &c.,

J. DOWLING BROWN,
Superintendent.

The Inspector-General of Police to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 23 April, 1885.

In returning the report of the Board, appointed to inquire into certain charges preferred against Superintendent Brown, with that officer's explanation, I conclude that the Colonial Secretary desires that I should append my observations.

After a careful perusal of the evidence taken by the Board I am unable to see how they could have arrived at any other conclusions than those expressed in their report, and I regret that I can find no extenuation for the disregard of the regulations shown by Mr. Brown.

It will be seen by the copy of my circular order of the 3rd of August, 1883, attached, that, when the Colonial Secretary approved of Superintendents of Police having an annual allowance of £20 towards equipment, I expressly forbade such officers from driving even broken-down troop horses without special sanction.

Mr. Brown rightly points out, however, that the circumstances in his district are somewhat exceptional. He has occasionally a journey of nearly 1,600 miles to make on inspection, but I have always been willing to allow him on such occasions facilities for travelling, either by paying coach fares or providing extra horses.

I regret that in defending himself Mr. Brown should have thought proper to justify certain irregularities, which are not only highly improper in themselves but entirely opposed to the regulations of the Service, and he cannot plead that he has not received previous warning regarding irregularities of the kind.

Mr. Brown has served in the Department for twenty-two years; he is, I am informed, over sixty years of age, and therefore entitled to claim a retiring pension of £300 per annum (if not disqualified by the decision regarding the charges against him). I should be glad therefore if the Colonial Secretary could see his way to some course more lenient than removal from the Service, which would entail absolute ruin on his family.

Perhaps the Colonial Secretary may desire that I should wait upon him personally in the matter.

As regards Sergeant Rowe, whose action may appear to have been vindictive, I should inform the Colonial Secretary that he has borne a good character in the Service; though Mr. Brown repeatedly urged me

me to transfer him from Deniliquin, on the ground that he was of a disobliging disposition. I refused however to sanction his removal, and I submit that the critical position in which he was placed entitles him to some consideration.

I have, &c.,
EDMUND FOSBERY,
Inspector-General of Police.

Circular Order, No. 696.

Sir,

Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, 8 August, 1883.

I have the honor to inform you that the Colonial Secretary has been pleased, upon my recommendation, to approve of an allowance at the rate of £20 per annum being paid to Superintendents of Police (and Inspectors acting as such in charge of districts) from the 1st July ultimo, as an equipment allowance—that is, for providing buggy, horses, and harness to enable them to perform the duties of inspection.

It is to be understood that such allowance is only to be drawn by such officers as have provided themselves with the equipment abovementioned, and that when travelling, any small packages, such as arms, printed forms, &c., &c., shall be conveyed to out stations in such vehicles.

No troop horses unfit for further saddle work are to be driven by Superintendents in future without special authority, which should be applied for by sending a description of such horses on the printed form for "cast horses."

I have, &c.,
EDMUND FOSBERY,
Inspector-General of Police.

The Superintendent of Police. Submitted, 23/4/85.

The Principal Under Secretary to The Inspector-General of Police.

Sir,

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 27 April, 1885.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 23rd instant, regarding the charges preferred against Superintendent Brown, I am now directed by the Colonial Secretary to transmit to you herewith a copy of a minute written by the Colonial Secretary on the subject, by which it will be seen that Mr. Brown is to be reduced in the rank which he holds by a lowering of his present salary by £50 per annum from the present date.

2. I am desired to request that the copy of the minute may be forwarded to Superintendent Brown for his perusal.

I have, &c.,
CRITCHETT WALKER,
Principal Under Secretary.

Minute of the Colonial Secretary.

Re Superintendent Brown of Deniliquin. Board of Inquiry into charges brought forward by Sergeant Rowe.

WHEN the letter of Sergeant Rowe, of the 16th of March last, was brought under my notice by the Inspector-General of Police, containing charges against his superior officer, I came to the conclusion that the only satisfactory mode of dealing with them was by means of an investigation, which accordingly I directed to be made. The officers named by Mr. Fosbery as members of the Commission are both men of intelligence, high character, and have long been connected with the Public Service. Their report, together with the explanations of Mr. Superintendent Brown and all the papers in connection with the case, are now before me. I have arrived at the conclusion that although in the preferment of some of the charges there have been gross exaggerations, it is clearly established that there have been serious irregularities on the part of the Superintendent. It is unnecessary for me to minutely examine the various matters which both by testimony adduced before the Commission and by Mr. Brown's own admissions have been established against him. Several of the charges have not been substantiated, and it is clear that Mr. Brown has been a victim, as the Commission has pointed out, of a malicious exaggeration and a vindictive prosecution of some of these charges. It appears to me however that Mr. Brown is deserving of very severe censure. For some time I contemplated that it might be necessary, in the interest of the Public Service, to remove him from the district of which he is at present in charge to another part of the colony. I am aware that to a man with a large family this means not only a great pecuniary loss but to some extent a public humiliation. I am not disposed under all the circumstances to subject him to either one or the other. He has been in the Public Service of the Colony since May, 1863. He has had the control of a very large district, the police supervision of which is exceptionally difficult. He has to undertake journeys for the purpose of discharging his police duties of inspection of from twelve to eighteen hundred miles, and he seems to have had some difficulty with the men under his command. On the other hand his proved irregularities demand that he should not be permitted to escape without punishment. I desire that he should be informed, taking into consideration the circumstances to which I have just referred of his length of service and of the difficulties of his police administration, that the penalties which the Government would have deemed it essential in the interest of the Public Service to have imposed upon him will not now be inflicted, but he will be reduced in the rank which he holds by a lowering of his present salary of £50 a year, and he will distinctly understand that the establishment in the future of any complaint of a like nature to those which have been preferred will be regarded as sufficient to justify his removal from the Public Service. I shall see the Inspector-General as to the necessity of removing Sergeant Rowe to some other district, as under the existing circumstances it is impossible that he should remain in his present position.

WILLIAM B. DALLEY.

A copy of this minute will be sent to the Inspector-General, who will forward it to Mr. Brown.

Minute from Inspector-General of Police to Superintendent Brown.

Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 28 April, 1885.

THE Acting Colonial Secretary's decision and observations regarding the charges recently preferred against Superintendent Brown are forwarded for that officer's information.

He will be good enough to note and return the papers.

He

He will also read that portion of the Colonial Secretary's minute, censuring Sergeant Rowe, to him, instructing him at the same time to hold himself in readiness for immediate transfer to another district.

I have not yet decided who will replace him at Deniliquin.

The Inspector-General of Police to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 4 May, 1885.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th ult., and to state that I have noted and acted upon the Colonial Secretary's instructions and informed Mr. Brown. I also conveyed the censure to Sergeant Rowe and directed him to hold himself in readiness for transfer, when he tendered his resignation, which I accepted, and granted his immediate discharge.

As Mr. Superintendent Brown's salary was increased by Executive Council the same course had better be pursued in reducing it.—C.W., 19/5/85.

Telegram from Sergeant Rowe to Inspector-General of Police.

Deniliquin, 1 May, 1885.

TENDERED my written resignation yesterday to leave next Wednesday, stating reasons why; Superintendent Brown informs me am discharged to-day by you. Is this correct? Cannot leave house until next Wednesday; will post copy of resignation to-morrow.

Sergeant Rowe to The Inspector-General of Police.

Sergeant Rowe's resignation.

Police Station, Deniliquin, 30 April, 1885.

SERGEANT GEORGE ROWE, No. 2,372, begs to tender his resignation as a member of the New South Wales Police Force, to leave on the 6th or 7th of May next. He, the sergeant, having taken an hotel, he has to take possession on the above date; his wife and family will take charge of the place on the 6th proximo.

The sergeant's reason for leaving the Police Force is on account of the treatment he has lately received from Superintendent Brown.

On Friday previous to the investigation being held into the report of Sergeant Rowe against Superintendent Brown, he, the Superintendent, told Sergeant Rowe he looked on him as a low, mean, contemptible informer, and on the day after the investigation was held he ordered the sergeant not to go into the office any more, which he has not done since, the duty and forage books having since been kept by Constable Eggleston, and who now gives orders what is to be done.

Superintendent Brown also gave orders that the police here are not to obey orders given by the sergeant. Under these circumstances Sergeant Rowe hopes the Inspector-General will be pleased to grant the resignation at the time asked for, viz., 6th proximo.

GEORGE ROWE.

Forwarded for the information of the Inspector-General as per my telegram of to-day. I recommend Sergeant Rowe's immediate discharge. He cannot perform his duties satisfactorily. Last week he entered his duty on patrol, Hay Road, when I ascertained he was at the "Pretty Pine Hotel" making arrangements about taking the house. The application for the transfer of the license has been made though not yet granted.—J. DOWLING BROWN, Superintendent, 30/4/85. The Inspector-General of Police.

I have already approved this discharge on the 6th. If the statements alleged to have been made by Mr. Brown are correct he has acted most inadvisedly and wholly beyond his powers. He should explain his action.—E.F., 2/5/85. Superintendent Brown, Deniliquin.

I presume the Inspector-General means the statements made by Sergeant Rowe and not by me. The statements are generally correct. I refused Sergeant Rowe to go into the office, and I gave orders personally, sometimes through Sergeant Comber.—J. DOWLING BROWN, Superintendent, 4/5/85. The Inspector-General of Police.

I may say that the duty and forage books are kept in this office and entered by directions of Senior-sergeant Comber.—J.D.B.

My meaning is sufficiently obvious. SHALL I reinstate Sergeant Rowe till the 6th? He is occupying quarters and can do so as long as the Inspector-General wishes.

Sergeant Rowe to The Inspector-General of Police.

Sir,

Police Station, Deniliquin, 2 May, 1885.

According to my telegram, to which I have as yet received no reply, I beg to forward you a copy of my written resignation which asked for my discharge from the service on the 6th instant. I was, however, informed by Superintendent Brown that you had ordered my immediate discharge, and that I was no longer in the Police Force.

I now respectfully ask if such is the case? If so, the reason why, as I consider this is equal to a dismissal?

I also respectfully ask that a copy of all correspondence between Superintendent Brown and yourself in reference to my discharge may be furnished to me, as I consider an injustice has been done, and for which means I have now applied to you to remedy.

With reference to my report against Superintendent Brown I have not been informed of the result, and for which I also respectfully ask for a copy, as a very great injustice has been shown to me; but no doubt the whole correspondence will be asked for in the House when it meets.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE ROWE.

Sergeant Rowe to The Inspector-General of Police.

Police Station, Deniliquin, 30 April, 1885.

SERGEANT George Rowe, No. 2372, begs to tender his resignation as a member of the New South Wales Police Force, to leave on the 6th or 7th of May next, he (the sergeant) having taken an hotel; he has to take possession on the above date; his wife and family will take charge of the place on the 6th proximo.

The sergeant's reason for leaving the Police Force is on account of the treatment he has lately received from Superintendent Brown.

On Friday, previous to the investigation being held into the report of Sergeant Rowe against Superintendent Brown, he the Superintendent told Sergeant Rowe he looked upon him as a low, mean, contemptible informer, and on the day after the investigation was held he ordered the sergeant not to go into the office any more, which he has not done since, the duty and forage books having since been kept by Constable Eggleston, and who now gives orders what is to be done. SERGEANT Rowe may be paid up to the 6th instant.

He was not justified in addressing me direct, and I can only reply to his letter through his officer, who will inform him that the only portion of the decision relating to his charge against Superintendent Brown, of which he will be informed, is that relating to himself, and which has already been read to him.

Mr. Brown has still some matters to report upon respecting Sergeant Rowe's complaint.

THE instructions from the Inspector-General by telegram were in reply to my telegram. Immediate discharge approved. Sergeant Rowe is allowed to remain in his quarters till 6th; but it was desirable he should cease duty as he was attending to his private business.

Superintendent Brown to The Inspector-General of Police.

Police Department, Superintendent's Office, S.W. District, Deniliquin, May 9, 1885.

I DO make use of the expression as stated by ex Sergeant Rowe, but under very great provocation as I think the Honorable the Colonial Secretary will admit when he in the kindest manner referred to the charges Sergeant Rowe made against me as malicious exaggerations and vindictive prosecutions.

I certainly now regret having made use of this expression, but under the circumstances I hope the Inspector-General will think it was to some extent excusable. I have no recollection of saying that the men were not to obey Sergeant Rowe's orders, indeed I can safely say I did not, as I had no occasion, as I either gave orders personally or through Senior-Sergeant Comber.

Superintendent.

The Inspector-General of Police to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 12 May, 1885.

Referring to the recent investigation of charges brought by Police Sergeant Rowe against Superintendent Brown, I regret to have to trouble the Colonial Secretary with further papers in the case, but I do so on account of Rowe (who has been discharged from the Force on resignation), expressing his intention of endeavouring to have the matter brought before Parliament.

I regret that Mr. Brown acted in a manner so highly improper and injudicious towards Sergeant Rowe.

UNDER the circumstances represented in the accompanying papers, I recommend that Superintendent John Dowling Brown, of the Police Force, be reduced to the lowest grade of that rank, with salary at the rate of £400 a year.

ALEX. STUART.

THE Executive Council having carefully considered the report of the inquiry into charges made against Mr. Superintendent Brown are of opinion that he has failed to comply with the Police Regulations in some particulars; at the same time it has been shewn that the charges have been vindictively made.

In order, however, to mark disapproval of Mr. Brown's conduct, the Council now advise that he be reduced to the lowest grade of Superintendent, at £400 a year.

Sir,

Department of Justice, 12 April, 1880.

I am directed by the Minister of Justice and Public Instruction to state, for the information of the Colonial Treasurer, that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has been pleased to appoint Frederick Chapman, Esquire, to be Prothonotary of the Supreme Court, and Curator of Intestate Estates for the Colony of New South Wales, with salary at the rate of £700 per annum, from the 9th instant.

Sir,

Department of Justice, 13 April, 1880.

I am directed by the Minister of Justice and Public Instruction to inform you that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has been pleased to appoint you to be Prothonotary of the Supreme Court, and also Curator of Intestate Estates for the Colony of New South Wales, with salary at the rate of £700 per annum, from the 9th instant.

I am to add that it will be necessary for you to give security for the due performance of your duties in respect to all public money which may pass through your hands, by entering into a bond with two sureties jointly and severally for the sum of £2,000, and to request therefore that you will submit, with the least practicable delay, the names at length, occupations, and residences of the persons you propose as your sureties.

Your appointment will be duly notified in the Government Gazette, and your Commission is forwarded herewith.

I have, &c.,

W. E. PLUNKETT,

Under Secretary.

P.S.—I am to add that the Government will not object to accept, in lieu of personal security, a bond for the same amount from any approved Guarantee Society.

No. 5.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir,

Supreme Court, Sydney, 14 May, 1884.

I have the honor to request that you will lay the matter of this letter before the Minister of Justice, and respectfully request, in my name, that he will give it favorable consideration.

2. I was appointed Prothonotary and Curator of Intestate Estates on the 9th April, 1880, at a salary of £700 a year, and have been in receipt of this down to the present time.

3. Shortly after being made Prothonotary, I was appointed to the offices of Registrar of the Divorce and Vice-Admiralty Courts.

4. For the year 1879 there was paid into the Treasury by the Prothonotary, for fees of office collected in his Department, £3,804 8s. 9d.

5. For the four following years I paid in as Prothonotary as follows:—

1880	3,970	15	8
1881	4,008	11	2
1882	5,603	19	3
1883	5,793	12	7
Total	£23,181	7	5

6. For the year 1879 the Curator paid in to the Treasury for Commission, £380 9s. 1d.

	£	s.	d.
1881	1,227	7	8
1882	1,154	7	2
1883	2,014	14	2
Total	£5,593	6	6

7. Out of my salary I have to pay the premium on a fidelity policy of £2,000.

8. Twenty years ago, when the business in my department was not half what it is at present, the Prothonotary's salary was £800. There was then no Divorce Court.

9. Upon these facts I respectfully base my claim to have my salary increased to the sum of £1,000 per annum.

10. It will be seen from the above figures that the increase of payments to the Government is £4,723 8s. 9d. in excess of what they were in 1879. Mr. Suttor, when offering me the appointment, stated it was worth £1,000 a year.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,
Prothonotary.

[Enclosures.]

I am clearly of opinion that the salary of the Prothonotary is too low, having regard to the importance of his duties, the knowledge necessary to perform them efficiently, and the great increase of business in his office during the last two or three years.—J.M., C.J., 14 May, 1884.

I concur in the opinion of the Chief Justice.—P. FAUCETT, J., 16/5/84.

I concur in the opinion of the Chief Justice, that the present salary of the Prothonotary is too low. The nature of his duties imperatively demand that this officer should be a person of high efficiency, and such I have no hesitation in saying Mr. Chapman is.—W. M. MANNING, J., 16/5/84.

I concur with the Chief Justice in thinking that the salary of the Prothonotary is too low. From the opportunities afforded me, as Chamber Judge, I have come to the conclusion that the large increase which has taken place in the amount of fees collected in the Supreme Court since Mr. Chapman took the office is owing not only to the increased business of the Court but to the vigilant manner in which he has discharged the duties of his office.—WM. C. WINDYER, J., 16/5/84.

I have read the opinions of the Chief Justice and the other Judges of the Supreme Court and concur in the opinions expressed.—J. GEO. LONG INNES, J., 16/5/84. Submitted.—W.E.P., 16/5/84.

I had a personal interview with Mr. Chapman, and informed him that no increase of salary could be proposed for this year, but that his application should have full consideration in the preparation of the Estimates for 1885. Note for consideration thereon.—H.E.C., 15/5/84. Prothonotary informed, 16/5/84.

In reply to your letter of the 14th instant, requesting that your present salary may be increased to £1,000 per annum, and with reference to your personal interview with the Minister of Justice upon the subject, I am directed to inform you that Mr. Cohen regrets that no increase of salary can be proposed for you upon the Estimates of the present year, but that your application will have full consideration in the preparation of the Estimates for 1885.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir,

Supreme Court, Sydney, 1 June, 1885.

I have the honor to request that you will bring this letter under the notice of the Minister of Justice, and respectfully ask him, on my behalf, to reconsider my letter to yourself of the 14th May, 1884, which I had the honor to write, together with the recommendations of the Judges of the Supreme Court appended.

On the 16th of the same month I received a reply stating that in the preparation of the Estimates for 1885 my application would receive the Minister's full consideration.

As the assurance in this letter that my application would receive full consideration in preparing the Estimates for 1885 was given before the Civil Service Bill was introduced, I beg most respectfully to submit, for the consideration of the Minister, whether I am not now, notwithstanding that Bill having passed into law, warranted in respectfully soliciting its further full consideration in the preparation of next year's Estimates.

Sir,

Department of Justice, 10 July, 1885.

Referring to your letter of the 1st ultimo, in which you request a reconsideration of your letter of the 14th May, 1884, applying for an increase of salary, I am directed by the Minister of Justice to inform you that the Cabinet have decided that they cannot approve of the increase of salary asked for.

I have, &c.,

W. E. PLUNKETT,

Under Secretary.

No. 9.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir,

Supreme Court, Sydney, 31 July, 1885.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, by which you inform me that the Executive had determined not to comply with my application for an increase of salary as Prothonotary.

As you do not state any reason for this determination, I naturally conclude that the Civil Service Act precludes a compliance with my request.

I would respectfully bring to the notice of the Minister of Justice the following facts for his consideration:—

The 20th section of the Civil Service Act is in the following words:—

“When any new office shall be created there shall be placed on the Estimates the salary proposed to be paid to the holder of such office and such salary as may be voted shall fix the class of such officer who shall thereupon be entitled to receive the same together with the annual increment of such class. Provided that until such vote be taken he shall be entitled to the salary thus placed on the Estimates.”

When the salary of the Prothonotary was fixed at £700 a year the Matrimonial Causes Act was not in force.

I am the Registrar of the Court, constituted by this Act, and I have been so since the month of April, 1880.

As Registrar of this new office I have never received any remuneration whatever.

The Clerk of this Court, however, during this period has been placed on the Estimates and has been in the receipt of £50 a year.

On these grounds I would respectfully base my claim to be placed on the Estimates for the ensuing year, as Registrar of the Divorce Court, as the recipient of a salary of £300 a year, to compensate me for my past five years' gratuitous services, and to remunerate me for the future discharge of the duties which I now particularize.

As Registrar I have to tax the costs in all Divorce Court suits, to settle all the issues for trial either by Judge or Jury, to draw deeds of settlement directed by the Judge to be executed by the parties to the suit, &c. In fact I have to perform all the duties which on the Equity side of the Court are referred to the Master-in-Equity.

The Master-in-Equity as such receives a salary of £1,000 a year, and as Master-in-Lunacy an additional £250 a year.

I am likewise Registrar of the Ecclesiastical Branch of the Supreme Court.

The Master-in-Equity is the Chief Officer of only one branch of the Court.

I am the Chief Officer of every branch of the Court, with the exception of that in Equity.

I should mention as a further reason for asking for this sum that the business of the Divorce Court has increased 100 per cent. since I first held the office, and that I have no doubt that it will continue to increase at the like ratio.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,

Prothonotary.

No. 10.

Mr. Justice Windeyer to The Minister of Justice.

Sir,

Judges Chambers, Supreme Court, 31 July, 1885.

Mr. Chapman having informed me that he has applied for a sum to be placed on the Estimates as remuneration for his services in his capacity as Registrar of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, I beg to recommend his application to the favorable consideration of the Government.

The business of the Court has increased very largely since the office was created, and Mr. Chapman's responsibilities are much greater than they were; not only has he to tax bills of costs, which in some cases are heavy and troublesome to deal with, but he has to prepare deeds of settlement which require care and an amount of attention that I am convinced he can only bestow upon them out of Court hours, as his time is fully occupied by the routine common law business connected with his office as Prothonotary.

The Clerk of the Divorce Court, who keeps the records to which constant reference is required, and the accounts connected with the Court, very properly has the sum of £50 per annum for his services; but Mr. Chapman, whose responsibilities are greater, and whose services are those which only a trained lawyer could give, has hitherto received nothing, and as the expenses of the Court are covered by the fees received by the Government, there is no reason why he should not be rewarded for services quite outside his ordinary duties as Prothonotary.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM C. WINDEYER,

Judge of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes.

This may, perhaps, be noted on Draft Estimates for consideration of Cabinet at the proper time.—

No. 11.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir, Supreme Court, Sydney, 9 November, 1885.

I have the honor to request that you will bring under the consideration of the Minister of Justice the documents in your Department in reference to my application for an increase of salary as Prothonotary.

The first of these documents is my letter to yourself, dated the 14th May, 1884.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,

Prothonotary.

The late Government refused to entertain Mr. Chapman's application for increase to his salary as Prothonotary; but the late Minister of Justice recommended that a salary of £300 be placed on the Estimates for consideration of Parliament for office of Registrar of Divorce Court, the duties of which office have been performed by the Prothonotary, without salary, since establishment of the Court. May be put away for the present pending further inquiry.—T.E.McN., 14/11/85.

No. 12.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir, Supreme Court, Sydney, 19 January, 1886.

I have the honor to desire you in my name, most respectfully, to request the Minister of Justice, when he has the Estimates of the present year under his consideration, to peruse my letter of 14th May, 1884, to Mr. Cohen, the then Minister of Justice, and the subsequent correspondence in reference to my request, contained in that letter, for an increase of my salary as Prothonotary.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,

Prothonotary.

No. 13.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir, Supreme Court, Sydney, 27 February, 1886.

I have the honor to desire you in my name, most respectfully, to request the Minister of Justice, when he has the Estimates of the present year under his consideration, to peruse my letter of 14th May, 1884, to Mr. Cohen, the then Minister of Justice, and the subsequent correspondence in reference to my request contained in that letter, for an increase of my salary as Prothonotary.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,

Prothonotary.

No. 14.

The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir, Supreme Court House, Sydney, 26 July, 1886.

I have the honor to request that you will, on my behalf, be so good as to present the enclosed petition to the Minister of Justice.

I have, &c.,

FRED. CHAPMAN,

Prothonotary.

[Enclosure.]

To the Honorable JAMES PATRICK GARVAN, Esquire, Minister of Justice of the Colony of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of Frederick Chapman, Prothonotary and Registrar of the Supreme Court of New South Wales,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

1. That your Petitioner was appointed Prothonotary and Curator of Intestate Estates of the Supreme Court of New South Wales on the 9th day of April, 1880, at a salary of £700 a year.

2. When your Petitioner was offered this appointment he was told by the then Minister of Justice that the office was in fact worth £1,000 a year. Upon that assurance your Petitioner accepted it. This assurance has not been realized. Your Petitioner has not received anything beyond his salary of £700 a year.

3. On the 10th day of the same month your Petitioner was appointed Registrar of the Divorce Court without salary.

4. For the year prior to your Petitioner's appointment there was paid into the Treasury by the Prothonotary, for fees of office collected in his Department, the sum of £3,804 8s. 9d. For the four following years your Petitioner, as Prothonotary, paid into the Treasury for fees collected in his Department as follows:—

1880	3,970	15	8
1881	4,008	11	2
1882	5,608	19	3
1883	5,793	12	7

These annual increases were of course partly owing to the increase of the business of the Supreme Court, but they were to a great extent attributable to your Petitioner's rigid exaction of the fees of office payable according to the Rules of Court.

5. For the year 1870 the then Curator paid into the Treasury, for commission on intestate estates collected by him, the sum of £380 9s. 1d. In consequence of your Petitioner's personal supervision of matters in connection with this Department your Petitioner paid into the Treasury as Curator as follows:—

1881	1,227	7	8
1882	1,154	7	2
1883	2,014	14	2

The business of the Prothonotary and of the Curator, year by year, thus continuing to increase, it became physically impossible that your Petitioner could efficiently discharge both offices, and in the latter end of the month of December, 1884, Mr. Powell, who had for some time previously acted as sub-Curator, was appointed as Curator in his stead.

6. Twenty years ago, when the business of the Prothonotary's Department was less than half what it is now, the Prothonotary's salary was £800 a year. Since then there has been attached to the office of the Prothonotary the duties of Registrar of the Divorce Court without salary.

7. On the 14th day of May, 1884, your Petitioner made an official application to the then Minister of Justice, resting his claim on these facts as to fees collected, &c., to have his salary increased to £1,000 per annum.

8. To that application the Judges of the Supreme Court appended the following minutes:—

I am clearly of opinion that the salary of the Prothonotary is too low, having regard to the importance of his duties, the knowledge necessary to perform them efficiently, and the great increase of business in his office during the last two or three years.—JAMES MARTIN, Chief Justice.

I concur in the opinion of the Chief Justice.—FRED FAUCETT, J.

I concur in the opinion of the Chief Justice that the present salary of the Prothonotary is too low. The nature of the duties imperatively demand that that officer should be a person of high efficiency, and such I have no hesitation in saying Mr. Chapman is.—W. M. MAXTED, J.

I concur with the Chief Justice in thinking that the salary of the Prothonotary is too low. From the opportunities offered me, as Chamber Judge, I have come to the conclusion that the large increase which has taken place in the amount of fees collected in the Supreme Court since Mr. Chapman took the office is owing, not only to the increased business of the Court but to the vigilant manner in which he has discharged the duties of his office.—WILLIAM C. WINDEYER, J.

I have read the opinions of the Chief Justice and the other Judges of the Supreme Court, and concur in the opinions expressed.—J. GRAY LOWN ESSEX, J.

9. That on the 10th day of May, 1884, in reply to his letter, your Petitioner was officially informed by the Department of Justice that the Minister regretted that the increase of salary could not be proposed upon the Estimates of that year, but that the application of your Petitioner would receive full consideration in the preparation of the Estimates for 1885.

10. That the Civil Service Act was passed in October, 1883, and your Petitioner has every reason to believe that his application did not receive the consideration promised to him, as no increase of salary was proposed for him on the Estimates of 1885.

11. That your Petitioner, having previously obtained the Minister's permission to do so, on the 27th day of August last wrote a letter to the Department of Justice, in which he pointed out the great injustice, in his opinion, of the fundamental principles of the Civil Service Act. Your Petitioner in his letter requested the Minister's sanction to its publication.

12. That letter having by the then Minister of Justice been brought under the notice of the then Colonial Secretary, the late Sir Alexander Stuart, your Petitioner was officially informed, on the 28th of the following month, that the Minister of Justice was unable to give his sanction to its publication.

13. That on the 31st July, 1883, your Petitioner applied to the Department of Justice to be placed on the Estimates for the ensuing year as Registrar of the Divorce Court, at a salary of £300 a year, to compensate him for his five years' gratuitous services, and to remunerate him for the future discharge of the daily increasing duties of such office.

14. That at the same time the Judge of the Divorce Court, His Honor Mr. Justice Windeyer, wrote to the Minister of Justice, and in his letter recommended that a salary should be granted to your Petitioner as Registrar of the Divorce Court, and stated that, "as the expenses of the Court are covered by the fees received by the Government there is no reason why he should not be rewarded for services quite outside his ordinary duties as Prothonotary."

15. That no reply has been made to the letter of the Divorce Court Judge or to your Petitioner's application. The Clerk of the Divorce Court, who, of course, is the Registrar's inferior officer, receives, by a strange anomaly, a salary of £50 a year.

16. That your Petitioner has, since this application, prior to the time of your acceptance of office as Minister of Justice, repeatedly brought his claim for a fair remuneration as Prothonotary and Registrar under the consideration of the Department of Justice, but it has not been recognized.

17. That your Petitioner, as Prothonotary, paid into the Treasury for the year 1884 the sum of £6,141 3s. 9d., and for the year 1885 the sum of £6,852 5s., this latter sum being £3,047 16s. 3d. in excess of the amount paid into the Treasury by the then Prothonotary for the year previous to your Petitioner's appointment to that office. That your Petitioner, as Curator, paid into the Treasury for the year 1884 the sum of £1,551 10s. 7d.

18. That the Master in Equity and in Lunacy receives a salary of £1,250 a year.

19. That the offices of Prothonotary and Registrar of the Supreme Court are, if not superior to, most certainly on an equality with those held by the Master in Equity, and its duties and responsibilities are of a far more onerous character.

The Supreme Court, Victoria.		The Supreme Court, New South Wales.
Chief Clerk under the Judicature Act	Salary, £1,200	Prothonotary	£700
Prothonotary	800	Prothonotary is also Registrar of the Divorce Court and Registrar of the Court in its Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction without salary.
Chief Clerk for Probate Duty and Lunacy
Business	500

And your Petitioner humbly prays that you will take this petition into your earnest consideration, and that you will grant him such relief as to you as Minister of Justice may seem fit.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

FRED. CHAPMAN.

For consideration when next Estimates are being prepared.—J.P.C., 10/8/86.

Inform in acknowledgment that, in view of the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and the fact of the Estimates for this year having been submitted to Parliament, this application cannot be considered at the present time, but that the case will be noted for careful consideration in connection with the preparation of the Estimates of next year.—T.E.MeN., 11/8/86.

No. 15.

The Under Secretary of Justice to The Prothonotary of the Supreme Court.

Sir,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 12 August, 1886.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, with enclosure, I am directed by the Minister of Justice to inform you that in view of the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and the fact of the Estimates for this year having been submitted to Parliament, your application for an increase of salary cannot be considered at the present time, but that the same will be noted for careful consideration in connection with the preparation of the Estimates for next year.

I have, &c.,

W. E. PLUNKETT,
Under Secretary.

The printed forms used in this office are mostly kept by the respective officers who deal with the branches of the correspondence to which they relate. The forms not so kept are in charge of the Despatch Clerk, who has sets of pigeon-holes for the purpose. I do not think it would be advisable to disturb this arrangement. There are, however, duties, such as the keeping of files of Gazettes and of Parliamentary papers, which might be entrusted to Mr. M'Donough, under the immediate supervision of the Despatch Clerk, who also requires assistance in other ways. Mr. M'Donough is at present employed in the Chief Inspector's Branch, where he has been for a considerable time past.—G.M., 4/7/83.

Minute of Minister of Public Instruction, with Memoranda thereon.

Bring forward in connection with Estimates for 1884. Employ Mr. M'Donough in the meantime in the way suggested. G.H.R.

Memo.—It is proper to state that Mr. M'Donough was formerly in the Government Printing Office, and that he retired on a gratuity of one month's pay for every year of service, which extended over twenty-three years. This information he gave me himself.—G.M., 11/7/83.

The Minister has directed that Mr. M'Donough be employed in assisting the Despatch Clerk, and in keeping the Government Gazettes and Parliamentary papers properly filed, so as to be easily referred to when necessary. Mr. Monckton will therefore be so good as to see that Mr. M'Donough's duties are regularly and punctually performed.—G.M., 11/7/83.

Memo. from Acting Under Secretary to Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, with Memoranda and Minister's Minute thereon.

Would the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade kindly furnish the information required by the Minister of Public Instruction, and indicated in the appended memorandum of 14th instant (paper 4,309-84). G. MILLER, Acting Under Secretary.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, B.C., 15/2/84. Examiner.—G.E., 15/2/84.

I am not aware, nor can I ascertain, that there is any precedent for appointing an officer again to a permanent position who was paid a retiring allowance on leaving the Service. Such allowances are made on the grounds that the applicants are no longer capable of performing their duties, either through age, mental or bodily infirmity, and therefore unfit for future active service.—G.E.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

GOVERNMENT ORIENTAL INTERPRETER.

(REPORT, &c., RESPECTING QUALIFICATIONS OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 14 September, 1886.

[Laid upon the Table with reference to the answer given to the following questions, Wednesday, 25th August, 1886.]

(9.) Government Oriental Interpreter:—Mr. Abigail asked the Minister of Justice,—

- (1.) How many languages does the Government Oriental Interpreter speak, and what are they?
- (2.) Is it a fact that before Judge Docker, at the Darlinghurst Court-house, on the 10th instant, the Government Oriental Interpreter, called upon to interpret a Madrased prisoner's evidence, did not comprehend the language, and sometimes spoke English to the prisoner, and sometimes Hindostanee; and, through the Interpreter's incompetency, a miscarriage of justice is alleged to have taken place, and the prisoner was sentenced to two years' hard labour?
- (3.) Can he state what language the Interpreter spoke to the prisoner "Seena," a Madrased, and whether the prisoner spoke sufficient English to enable the Judge and Jury to understand him?
- (4.) Has he any objection to lay upon the Table all the depositions taken by Judge Docker; and also, to furnish reports from Senior-Sergeant Perry and Inspector Attwell on the above case, and full particulars of the Interpreter's abilities?

Mr. Garvan answered,—It will be impossible to reply to the above questions to-day, as a report from Judge Docker, the Acting Clerk of the Peace, and the Inspector-General of Police, would appear to be necessary.

Memo. to Superintendent Read.

Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 25 August, 1886.

SUPERINTENDENT Read will be good enough to obtain the reports required regarding the Oriental Interpreter's qualifications, and forward them to me as early as possible this day, as the question is to be answered in the House this evening.

E.F., I.G.P.

Superintendent Read to The Inspector-General of Police.

Replies to questions to be asked in Parliament by Mr. Abigail.

1. Five—Hindostanee, Arabic, Parsee, Ordoe, and Bengalee.
2. No.
3. Hindostanee. The prisoner spoke English sufficiently well to be understood by the Judge and Jury.
4. Mr. Hasmot, the Oriental Interpreter, is considered well qualified for the office.

G. READ,
Superintendent.

Sub-Inspector Potter to Superintendent Read.

Sir,

Redfern Station, 25 August, 1886.

I have the honor to report for your information that on the 10th instant a native of Madras named "Seena," was tried at the Quarter Sessions before his Honor Judge Docker, upon the charge of wounding one John Ryan, a fellow countryman. On the clerk reading the indictment to the Government Interpreter, Mr. Hasmot, to be rendered by him to the prisoner, and while this was being done the prisoner in an excited manner said something in his own language, whereupon the Judge asked what he was saying. Mr. Hasmot said that prisoner had told him that he could not understand what was being said, and at the same time pointing to an Indian named Fernandez, who was sitting in the body of the Court near the dock, said that he (Hasmot) had heard Fernandez on the day previous tell prisoner not to understand him (Hasmot), when the case came on for hearing and that Fernandez had done this sort of thing on other occasions with the view of injuring him (Hasmot) in the eyes of the Government.

His Honor expressed his disapprobation of such conduct, and then proceeded to hear the case which was interpreted by Hasmot, prisoner still continuing to object both in Hindostanee and English, but at the same time by his questions to the prosecutor, his occasional interjections and subsequent address to the Jury, showed that he fully understood the whole of the proceedings, although not able to express himself fluently in English. Ryan also told the Judge that prisoner fully understood what was said to him by the interpreter. The Jury never expressed any doubt as to his ability in this particular, and there is no reason to believe that prisoner suffered any injustice upon his trial; in fact the Judge allowed him considerable latitude throughout the hearing of the case.

I have, &c.,
ALFRED POTTER,
Sub-Inspector.

Forwarded to the Inspector-General of Police. Mr. Attwell was not in attendance at the Court when Seena was tried; Senior-Sergeant Pirie had been sent to a remote part of his district on special duty, before I received the Parliamentary notice of questions, but he could afford no information additional to that supplied by Mr. Potter.

The man Fernandez referred to was some time ago an applicant for the appointment of Oriental Interpreter, and was I am informed greatly disappointed that he did not obtain it.

G. READ,
Superintendent.

25/8/86.

Forwarded to the Under Secretary of Justice.—EDMUND FOSBERT, I.G.P., B.C., 25 August, 1886.

Judge Docker to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir,

Granville, 27 August, 1886.

With reference to the questions to be asked concerning the qualifications of the Government Oriental Interpreter, I have the honor to give the following information for the Hon. the Minister of Justice:—

1. I am unable to state how many languages the Oriental interpreter is acquainted with, but in the Indian cases which came before me at the late Darlinghurst Session he showed an intimate knowledge of the dialects used, and was, in my opinion, a thoroughly competent interpreter.

2. It is not a fact that he did not comprehend the language of the prisoner, "Seena," a native of Madras, but it is a fact that the prisoner declined to have the evidence interpreted by the Government Interpreter, and persisted in speaking to him in English, and on one occasion I told him to reply to the prisoner in English, which he did. It was deposed that this interpreter had interpreted at the committal without any difficulty or any objection from the prisoner, but that his conduct at the trial had been instigated by an individual who had been a rival and unsuccessful candidate for the office of Oriental Interpreter, who had been overheard to tell the prisoner not to speak to the Government Interpreter. That person was sitting in Court near the prisoner, and I had to warn him that any interference with the procedure of the Court would render him liable to punishment for contempt of Court.

I am not aware whether a miscarriage of justice is alleged to have taken place through the incompetency of the interpreter, but as a matter of fact no such miscarriage took place.

3. It was sworn in evidence that the prisoner understood and spoke English fairly well, and he spoke at the trial sufficient English to enable both Judge and Jury to understand him, except when his extreme violence of demeanour rendered his utterances indistinct. His threats of further violence towards the prosecutor were particularly intelligible.

4. No depositions were taken by me.

I have, &c.,
ERNEST B. DOCKER, D.C.J.

P.S.—I was unable to answer these questions earlier, as they did not reach me at Darlinghurst, where they were addressed.—E.B.D.

The Acting Clerk of the Peace to The Under Secretary of Justice.

Sir,

Office of the Clerk of the Peace, Sydney, 28 August, 1886.

With reference to your B.C. of 25th instant, forwarding copy of certain questions to be asked by Mr. Abigail, M.P., I have the honor to report as follows:—

"Seena" was tried before Judge Docker on 10th instant, upon a charge of wounding. When about to be arraigned the accused shook his head, apparently to indicate that he did not understand the interpretation. Mr. Hasmot stated to the Judge that "Seena" had been instigated by a person then in Court to feign inability to comprehend the proceedings. Mr. Hasmot also stated that not only was he able to interpret the language spoken by the accused, but that the accused was able to speak the English language, and that the person referred to made a practice of frequenting the Courts when Hindoos were being tried, with a view of inciting defendants and witnesses to pretend inability to understand the proceedings as interpreted by Mr. Hasmot. During the progress of the trial "Seena" showed by the way in which he cross-examined the witnesses that he had a very fair knowledge of the English language. I may add that there has been no reason to complain of the manner in which Mr. Hasmot has performed his duties as interpreter at the Courts of Quarter Sessions.

I am, however, aware that considerable hostility has been shown towards him when in the discharge of such duties, especially by two persons who are understood to be unsuccessful applicants for the position of Oriental Interpreter; indeed upon a recent occasion two Hindoo witnesses were brought to me and it was stated that they had been offered money upon condition that they should pretend in Court not to be able to understand Mr. Hasmot's interpretation of the evidence.

I have, &c.,
W. R. BEAVER,
Acting Clerk of the Peace.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. GEORGE STEVENSON.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN RESIDENTS OF THE MACLEAY RIVER.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 17 August, 1886.

To the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned residents of the Macleay River,—

HUMBLI SHWETH:—

1. That Mr. George Stevenson has been Clerk of Petty Sessions and Registrar of the District Court at West Kempsey since the 1st day of December, 1883.

2. That a special Commissioner, appointed under the hand and seal of His Excellency the Governor, commenced an inquiry at Kempsey, on the 17th April, 1886, into certain irregularities in the discharge of his official duties preferred against the said George Stevenson by T. M. Slattery, Esq., M.P.

3. That about sixty witnesses were examined, their united testimony proving that Mr. Stevenson was not guilty of any misconduct, but that he is the best and one of the most attentive officers in the Department of Justice.

4. That Mr. Stevenson's zeal and ability in discharge of his official duties, as well as his high moral character, has gained the entire approval of your Petitioners.

5. That subsequent to the conclusion of the inquiry Mr. Stevenson was severely reprimanded and ordered to be removed to another Department without his being asked for any explanation, or to make defence to any specific charges, or otherwise.

6. That your Petitioners are convinced that a gross injustice has been done to Mr. Stevenson, principally through false and malicious representations made by interested parties, but which were never substantiated, nor did they form any portion of the inquiry.

7. That your Petitioners are in a position to prove that the punishment awarded to Mr. George Stevenson is the result of political persecution, and in no way connected with the discharge of his duties as Clerk of Petty Sessions.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the foregoing premises into your consideration, with the view that a full and searching inquiry be made by a Committee of your Honorable House into the whole matter, or otherwise as may seem expedient to you, so that substantial justice may be done to Mr. Stevenson.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF THE INSANE.

(REPORT FOR 1885.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 42 Vic. No. 7, sec. 73.

The Inspector-General of the Insane to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, Lunacy Department, Inspector-General's Office, Callan Park, Balmain, April 1st, 1886.

I do myself the honor to submit, for your information, in accordance with the 73rd section of the Lunacy Act of 1878, a Report on the Hospitals and other Institutions for the Insane, for the year ending 31st December, 1885.

I have, &c.,

F. NORTON MANNING,
Inspector-General.

The number of insane persons in the Colony under official cognizance on 31st December 1885 was 2,643, and their distribution was as follows:—

	Number on Register.			Number on Leave.
	Male.	Female.	Total.	Male.	Female.	Total.
Hospital for the Insane, Gladesville	478	299	777	8	23	31

Licensed House for the Insane, Cook's River.....	10	140	150	1	1	2
	1,599	1,044	2,643	22	29	51

The increase in number during the year was 119; but large as this increase is, there was a decrease in the proportion of insane to the general population, which increased by 59,414 during the year.

The proportion of insane to population in the Colony was, at the close of the year, 1 in 374, or 2.67 per thousand, and compares favourably with the proportion in England, which, on 31st December, 1884, was 1 in 345, or 2.89 per thousand, and in the neighbouring Colony of Victoria, which was 1 in 297, or 3.35 per thousand, at the same date.

There has been no real increase in the proportion of insane to population during the last fifteen years. The proportion increased slightly up to 1881, when it was 1 in 352, but has since receded to exactly the same proportion as at the end of 1871.

The following tables show the number of admissions, discharges, and deaths, the proportion of recoveries, the rate of mortality, the causes of insanity in those admitted, those who recovered, and those who died, the causes of death, the length of residence in those who recovered and those who died, as well as the ages, condition as to marriage, religious profession, native countries, and previous occupations of those admitted and of all under care, and the form of mental disorder in those admitted, those who recovered, and those who died. The table showing the previous occupations of those admitted and those under care is given for the first time.

Admissions.

The admissions numbered 567, 338 males and 229 females, and were 74 more than in any previous year. The proportion of females was more than usually large, the number being 46 in excess of that for 1884. So far as can be seen there is no special reason for this influx of female patients, but it is evident from the unusual number of idiotic and imbecile children and old and demented people of both sexes among the admissions, that the general condition of depression throughout the Colony has continued to operate in inducing people to send to Hospital helpless relatives whom they are able and willing to maintain in more prosperous times.

The admissions for the year, though unusually numerous, have not been much in excess of the average for the last fifteen years in proportion to the general population, so that neither in the accumulated nor in the "occurring" cases does there appear any reason to think that insanity is increasing in this Colony.

The following returns show, 1st, the number of insane persons and the proportion to the population in New South Wales and in England during the last fifteen years; and 2nd, the ratio of admissions into Institutions for the Insane to the population of the Colony for the same period:—

The practical deduction from these returns appears to be that an increase of population brings with it an increase of insanity in a tolerably fixed ratio, and that in round numbers three persons in every thousand are so insane as to need special care and treatment.

The medical certificates sent with patients to Hospital have, as a rule, been carefully prepared, and have not only contained full and sufficient evidence of insanity, but have given detailed information as to the mental condition, which has been of service to the Medical Officers in charge. In a number of cases, however, the information afforded has been meagre, and in some, and especially those sent from the Sydney Police Courts, the evidence contained was barely sufficient to comply with the requirements of the statute. When these certificates have been accepted by Police Magistrates or by two Justices of the Peace, and an order based on them has been granted for admission under section 6 of the Lunacy Act, I have not as a rule thought it necessary to insist on an amendment or amplification of them, but in three cases during the year the certificates approved by Magistrates were so manifestly out of order that I rejected them, and others were obtained. The medical certificates accompanying patients sent under section 8 of the Lunacy Act have in all cases been closely scrutinized, and a full and complete statement of the facts denoting insanity insisted on. In seven cases these certificates have been amended, and the amendments approved by the Colonial Secretary under section 14 of the Lunacy Act, and in eight cases the certificates were rejected and others obtained.

Towards the close of the year the official visitors to Gladesville having called attention to the several certificates in which, in the case of the facts denoting insanity communicated by others, no information was given as to the person from whom these facts were obtained, a circular letter was addressed to every medical practitioner on the list whose address could be ascertained, pointing out the necessity for complying with the marginal note on the printed form, which requires that the relation to the insane person (as relative, friend, guardian, officer-in-charge, nurse, &c.) of the person giving the information should be stated.

Discharges.

The number discharged recovered was 234, 151 males and 83 females, or a percentage of 41.26 on the admissions and readmissions for the year; and the number discharged relieved was 40, 15 males and 25 females, or a percentage of 7.05 on the admissions and readmissions. Excluding the Hospital for the Insane, Newcastle, specially set apart for imbecile and incurable cases, the percentage was 42.39.

In addition to the patients discharged from the Hospitals and Licensed House, 18 were discharged recovered from the Reception House, and 18 from up-country gaols after lunacy certificates had been signed, and 211 from the Reception House and 224 from up-country gaols whilst under remand, for care and treatment, with symptoms of insanity.

Transfers.

The following return shows the number of Patients transferred from one Institution to another during the year 1885.

Transferred from.	Transferred to.
	Gladesville.		Parramatta (free).		Parramatta (criminal).		Callan Park.		Newcastle.		Cook's River.

{ (Criminal)	11	4	1	1
Callan Park	6	...	3	2
Newcastle	1	1
Cook's River	1	1

The total number of these transfers, all of which were made in accordance with the 80th section of the Lunacy Act, was 112.

The opening of the new wards for female patients at Callan Park rendered it advisable to relieve the overcrowded wards at Gladesville by the transfer of 65 patients. A number of male patients were transferred from the criminal to the free division of the Hospital at Parramatta, on expiry of sentence or release from criminal disability. Imbecile and idiotic children admitted to other Institutions were transferred to Newcastle, and all vacancies occasioned by death or discharge among the Government patients at Cook's River were filled up by transfer from the Public Hospitals.

In addition to these transfers for departmental reasons, a number were made at the request of friends, or with a view of affording to the patients a change of air or of surroundings as likely to be conducive to the restoration of mental or general health.

Escapes.

Seven patients escaped and remained at large beyond the period prescribed by the Lunacy Act. Two of these patients, after trying to obtain their living out of doors, and failing to do so owing to their peculiarities, were returned to hospital. Two others were taken care of by their friends, and the remainder were not afterwards heard of. In one of the latter cases the patient was convalescent, and being on the Medical Superintendent's list for speedy discharge, was relieved from the ordinary control of the attendants, and allowed out in the Hospital grounds without supervision. The case in which the patient was a criminal was made the subject of special report.

Deaths.

The number of deaths was 167, or a percentage of 6.58 on the average number resident. The death rate was highest at Callan Park and Gladesville, 8.08 and 7.23 respectively, where the acute cases bear a larger proportion to the total number than at the other Institutions. Next to these came Newcastle, with a percentage of 6.61; Parramatta (free), with 5.90; and Cook's River, with 5.26. The percentage at the Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Parramatta was 1.96 only. The causes of death are shown in Table 4. In 85 cases it was due to cerebral, in 41 to thoracic, in 19 to abdominal disease, and in 20 cases to general debility and old age.

In 67 cases the cause of death was ascertained by post mortem examination.

Leave of Absence.

The system of granting leave of absence in accordance with provisions of the Lunacy Act has been made use of more fully than during preceding years. In the majority of cases leave has been accorded to convalescent patients, but it has been found possible with safety to allow relatives to remove chronic patients for short periods. No accident has occurred in connection with the system, and the two deaths which occurred during leave were due to natural causes.

The number remaining on leave at the close of 1884 was 38, and leave was granted to 83 during the year, making a total of 126. Of these, 37 were discharged recovered, 3 were discharged relieved, and 23 were returned to hospital, 2 died, and 51 were still absent at the close of the year.

The following return shows the numbers allowed leave of absence from each Institution:—

Total Number under care.

The total number of patients under care was 3,203, 1,919 males and 1,284 females, an increase of 135 on the number under care during 1884. The daily average number resident was 2,535, 1,550 males and 985 females, or exactly 100 in excess of the average for the preceding year.

Number remaining at close of the year.

The number of patients on the registers of the Hospitals at the close of the year was 2,493, 1,589 males and 904 females, of whom 49, 21 males and 28 females, were absent on leave. On the register of the licensed house there were 150 patients, 10 males and 140 females, of whom 2 were absent on leave.

The total number on the registers of all the Institutions was 2,643, and of these 51 were away on leave.

The accommodation in the Hospitals at the close of the year was somewhat in excess of the requirement, and for the first time for upwards of twenty years there were some vacant beds. The accommodation was increased during the year by the erection of a cottage for twelve patients at Callan Park, and by placing the old mansion at the same hospital, which will hold twenty-two patients, in a habitable condition. There are at present no new buildings in progress, but with an increase in the number of the insane at the rate of 120 a year it is clear that some further accommodation will soon be required. On this head I have nothing to add to the recommendations contained in my annual reports for the years 1883 and 1884.

Accidents.

All accidents have, in accordance with a general rule of the Department, been reported to me as soon after their occurrence as possible. Considering that the average Hospital population has been 2,535, the number of accidents has not been large, and two only were fatal. In one of these an attendant-in-charge administered a dose of carbolic acid instead of black draught to a patient, and in the other a nail driven into the skull by a patient given to persistent and apparently purposeless self-mutilation was followed after two months by an abscess of the brain. Inquiries were held by the Coroner in both these cases. In the first, the attendant, who had grossly infringed the careful rules adopted by the Medical Superintendent for the care and administration of medicines, had a record of upwards of twenty-eight years' good and faithful service; and it was considered that a weighty expression of official censure was a sufficient punishment in addition to the distress which he very evidently felt at the result of his carelessness.

The

The other accidents were as follows:—Two dislocations of the shoulder, one due to an accidental fall and the other to muscular action when climbing to a window; seven fractures, two of the neck of the thigh-bone, caused by falls in aged patients, one of arm and one of fore-arm occurring during quarrels with fellow patients; one of leg, and one of one rib, caused by slipping on the cement pavement, and one of jaw, caused by a blow; one ruptured ligament of wrist, caused by a fall during an epileptic fit; three wounds—one of hand, self-inflicted whilst chopping wood; one of forearm, and one of scalp from accidental falls.

The occurrence of the case of fracture of the jaw above mentioned, which occurred at Parramatta during a quarrel in one of the dormitories at night, has again shown the necessity for some increased accommodation in the male division in the form of single rooms for the more turbulent patients. The proportion of single rooms to the general dormitory accommodation is 1 to 11; and although the majority of the patients belong to a chronic class, this is clearly insufficient. A special report on this subject has been submitted during the year, and plans for the additional accommodation required have been drafted, but have not yet received sanction.

The year has happily passed without any case of suicide, and without any severe accident or injury to any member of the staff.

Changes among Attendants, Nurses, and Servants.

The changes among attendants and nurses have been somewhat more numerous than during the two preceding years, amounting altogether to 47. Of the attendants, 13 resigned, 6 were dismissed for incompetence, 3 for intemperance, 2 for leave-breaking, 2 for insubordination, 1 for improper conduct, and 1 for striking a patient. A considerable proportion of both the resignations and dismissals occurred during the period of probationary service, the persons employed finding themselves, or being found by the officers in charge, unfit for the position. One attendant died from typhoid fever, after a comparatively brief period of service. There has not been the slightest difficulty in filling vacancies, the Medical Superintendents always being in a position to select from a number of applicants. Of the nurses, 17 resigned, and 2 were dismissed as incompetent; the majority of the resignations were due to marriage. During the last two or three years it has been found difficult to find suitable persons to fill vacancies in the staff of nurses, and this difficulty appears to have been greater during the last year than before. Unfortunately, the great increase in the number of female patients, and the opening of new wards at Callan Park, rendered more new nurses than usual necessary. The changes among the servants have been mainly among the cooks and laundresses. At the close of the year all the appointments appear to have been satisfactorily filled.

Re-examination of old Cases.

The Medical Superintendents of the three main hospitals have, at my request, made a special and formal re-examination of all the patients who have been for some years in the Institution, with a view, in the first place, of gauging as accurately as possible their mental condition, and of noting changes which might have passed unnoticed in the ordinary visits to the wards and other parts of the Hospital; and in the second, of ascertaining if it were possible, in certain cases in which the abnormal mental symptoms were either in abeyance or had been rendered less prominent by the general mental obscuration and feebleness of advancing years, to send the patients to one of the Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute, where they would be maintained at less cost than in this Department. Owing to special circumstances, however, and mainly to the facts that there are no paid attendants in these Institutions and no means of insisting on the patients remaining when they are sent, it has been found impossible to discharge more than a few isolated cases, and one or two of these have relapsed, owing, apparently, to the somewhat meagre dietary, which is unfitted for patients who have suffered from attacks of the insanity of old age. There are a large number of old demented cases in all three Hospitals who do not require the special appliances and care of an ordinary Hospital for the Insane, and who could be treated in a special Institution at a considerable reduction of cost, but who are not fit subjects for the general wards of the Asylum for the Infirm and Destitute, under existing regulations.

Native Countries of the Patients.

Out of the 3,203 patients under care during the year, only 356 were natives of New South Wales, and 105 of other Colonies. The numbers born in Great Britain and Ireland was 1,887, and of these 947 or more than one half were natives of Ireland. The number of Irish patients is, as I have before shown, out of all proportion to the number of persons of Irish birth in the general population. The total number of Foreign patients, 56 of whom were admitted during the year, was 355; they include 23 French, 77 German, and 70 Chinese, together with representatives of almost all the European States, South Sea Islanders, African blacks, and a motley assemblage of wanderers from every part of the world. A large proportion of the Foreign-born patients, exclusive of the French and Germans, are able to express themselves only very imperfectly in English. Not a few are in all but complete ignorance of it, and some when most insane will only speak in their native tongue. Owing to these circumstances, and to a want of knowledge of their peculiarities of thought and feeling, on the part of both officers and attendants, and to the impossibility of making any impression by kind and timely persuasion or advice, they are most difficult to deal with, and form on the whole an intractable class among whom the recoveries are comparatively few. Those among them who belong to the darker-skinned races are often dangerous, vindictive, and uncertain. When recovery does take place, it is found extremely difficult to find for them a fresh start in life, and the opportunities of getting them returned to their native countries are few.

Since the year 1877 the Chinese patients have increased from 60 to 70, and the total number of patients of Foreign birth from 239 to 355.

In connection with this subject, I have again to draw attention to the fact that a number of patients are admitted to the Hospitals either direct from the ships in which they arrive in the Colony or within a short time after arrival. The number of quite recent arrivals admitted during the year 1885 was 25. I have to repeat my recommendation that some steps should be taken to prevent this influx of insane people.

Number of Epileptics and General Paralytics.

On the 30th June, 1885, at which date the number of patients under care was 2,579, 1,573 males and 1,006 females, I caused special returns to be prepared showing the number of epileptics and general paralytics among them. The returns are given below; they show that about $\frac{1}{2}$ of all the patients under care suffer from epilepsy, and that this disease is about equally common in each sex. The number of general paralytics was 42, and only 8 of these were women. At the close of the year the number of general paralytics had fallen, owing to the death of a considerable number, to 25. Taking the admissions for the year, it appears that the percentage of epileptics and general paralytics admitted to the total number of patients admitted was 6.3 and 2.1 respectively.

The number of epileptics among the insane in this Colony appears to bear about the same proportion to the general Asylum population as in England; but the proportion of general paralytics, taking into consideration the number admitted and the number under care, is decidedly less, and would, so far as can be judged from the English returns, appear to be not more than $\frac{1}{3}$ or $\frac{1}{4}$ of the proportion in England.

Protection against Fire.

Having in view the special dangers attending an outbreak of fire in buildings occupied by insane persons, and the fact that a number of these buildings are of weatherboard, I requested, by letter dated January 28th, 1885, that Mr. Bear, the Superintendent of Metropolitan Fire Brigades, might be instructed to visit the Hospitals at Gladesville, Parramatta, and Callan Park, to examine the arrangements for extinguishing fire, and to report on the efficiency of these, and as to the necessity for alterations or for additional apparatus. Mr. Bear visited all three Institutions; and, after a complete examination, forwarded, under date 23rd June, an elaborate and exhaustive report, which commences with the statement that "it is very certain that under existing circumstances no material aid, as regards a local fire brigade, could reach any of these Asylums after an outbreak of fire; and it is therefore absolutely necessary that complete measures should be taken for the protection of these Institutions by means of their own fire-extinguishing appliances worked by their own attendants"; and concludes with a number of suggestions and recommendations with a view of rendering these fire-extinguishing appliances more useful and effective.

These recommendations may be divided into three classes:—

1st. Those relating to the care of existing apparatus, hydrants, stand-pipes, &c., together with minor alterations, to render these more readily servicable, the removal of wooden barriers, the marking of the situation of all hydrants, and the drilling of attendants, all of which have been remitted to the Medical Superintendents to carry out.

2nd. The supply of light hose reels with 400 feet of canvas hose in 100-foot lengths, of extra fire-buckets, and of pressure-gauges, and the connection of detached buildings and of the pumping station at Gladesville to the central offices by telephone, services for which the necessary requisitions have been forwarded.

3rd. The more important structural alterations, which at my request have been brought under the consideration of the Colonial Architect. These are—1st, the substitution of 6-in. main with 4-in. branches for the 3-in. and 4-in. mains now in use; 2nd, the use of "screw-down clear waterway valves" instead of ball or mushroom-head hydrants; 3rd, the raising of the main supply tank at Gladesville 70 feet, and its supply by a new gas-engine pump; and 4th, the re-roofing with iron of buildings now covered by shingles.

The official visitors at Gladesville, at a visit paid on April 2nd, drew special attention to the advisability of raising the tank so as to increase the pressure of water; and there can, I think, be little doubt as to the wisdom of this important alteration.

Cost of Maintenance.

The Receipts of the Department from all sources amounted to £8,891 11s. 9d., being the largest sum yet collected, and £891 3s. more than the collection for 1884.

The total sum was made up as follows:—Collections by Master in Lunacy towards maintenance of patients, £8,012 19s. 10d.; payments by Imperial Treasury, £562 14s. 3d.; sale of fat, old stores, &c., £292 3s. 9d.; and rent of land, £23 13s. 11d.

The details are shown in the following return:—

The total expenditure for the year was £90,259 13s. 4d. and was made up as follows:—Maintenance of patients in Hospitals for the Insane, £78,601 11s. 1d. Maintenance of Government patients at the Licensed House, Cook's River, £7,325 2s. 6d. Maintenance of patients in Reception House, £1,774 7s. 5d., and general expenses, including cost of Inspector General's Office, allowances to official visitors, maintenance of steam launch, &c. &c., £2,558 12s. 4d.

The cost of maintenance in Hospitals was £5,802 5s. 8d. more than in the year 1884, but the total number of patients under care in Hospitals was 130, and the daily average number resident 96 more than in the preceding year.

The cost of the Reception House was £28 6s. 4d. more than during 1884, but the number of patients under care was 17 more than the preceding year. The cost per patient was £2 9s. 9d. during 1885, as against £2 10s. 11d. in 1884.

Average weekly cost without deducting collections, 12s. 8d., or, deducting collections, 11s. 3½d.

The average weekly cost, without deducting collections, was 12s. 8d., as against 12s. 5d. in 1883 and 12s. 3d. in 1884, and after deducting collections, the cost was 11s. 3½d., as against 11s. 5d. in 1883 and 10s. 11d. in 1884.

The cost at Gladesville shows an increase of 5½d. a week, the cost at Parramatta an increase of ½d., and at Newcastle of 1d. a week, as compared with the preceding year. The cost at Callan Park shows a decrease of 1s. 4½d. a week as compared with 1884, but is still much higher than at the other Hospitals. The main difference, however, is in the cost of stores for outfit for new wards and in the cost of salaries, in both of which items the accounts are likely to show a reduction during the current year.

* First year, and including cost of stores and outfit. † Opening of new Hospital.

Review of ten years.

The statistics of all the Institutions have now been kept in one form for ten years, and a brief review of them for this period may not be without interest. On 31st December, 1875, the number of patients under care was 1,607. On the same date in 1885 it was 2,643, so that the increase in the number of the insane during the ten years was 946, or at the rate of 94 a year.

The total number of patients admitted during the ten years was 4,611, and of these 1,897 or 41·14 per cent. were discharged recovered, and 363 or 7·87 were discharged relieved.

The deaths during the ten years numbered 1,359, and give a percentage of 6·69 on the average number resident.

Both the recovery and death rates compare favourably with the return from English Asylums. The recovery rate in the latter for the ten years ending December, 1884, and excluding the idiot establishment, which are included in the returns for this Colony above given, was 39·51; and the death rate, including the idiot establishments, and being therefore exactly on the same basis as the returns for this Colony, was 9·77 per cent.

The following return shows the amount of collections for the maintenance of patients, together with the average weekly maintenance rate at all the Hospitals during the ten years:—

Year.	Collections.	Average weekly cost, collections deducted.	Average weekly cost, without deducting collections.
1876.....	1,762 6 6	0 12 10	0 13 4
1877.....	1,455 17 10	0 13 0½	0 13 5
1878.....	2,480 8 8	0 12 8	0 13 1
1879.....	2,985 5 11	0 12 1	0 12 8½
1880.....	5,521 0 4	0 10 8½	0 11 9
1881.....	6,631 13 5	0 10 8½	0 11 10½
1882.....	6,767 15 6	0 12 0½	0 13 2½
1883.....	6,879 2 4	0 11 5	0 12 5
1884.....	8,000 8 9	0 10 11	0 12 3
1885.....	8,891 11 9	0 11 8½	0 12 8

It will be seen that the amount of collections has steadily increased from £1,762 in 1876 to £8,891 in 1885, and that, notwithstanding some fluctuations, and despite the general rise in the cost of provisions and increase in salaries, especially to attendants, the maintenance rate has on the whole fallen, though it is not now so low as it was in 1880 and 1881.

Reception House for the Insane, Darlinghurst.

The number of cases under care and treatment at this Institution during the year was 713 or 17 more than during the preceding year. The number of males was 488, and the number of females 225. On December 31st, 1884, there were 5 cases under lunacy certificate, and 16 under remand, and during the year, 346 under lunacy certificate, and 346 under remand were admitted. Of the total number, 140 were received first under remand and were subsequently again admitted under certificate. Taking the two classes separately, it appears that of the 351 under Lunacy certificate, 18 were discharged recovered, 331 were sent to Hospitals for the Insane, 1 died, and 1 remained on December 31st, 1885, and of the 362 under remand by Magistrates, 211 recovered and were discharged, 140 were certified as insane and again admitted, 4 died, and 7 remained on December 31st, 1885. Of the two classes, 229 were discharged recovered, and a very large proportion of these, but for this Institution, must have been sent for treatment in Hospital.

Since the Institution has, under the 1st section of the Lunacy Act Amendment Act been open for the admission of cases of insanity, under remand from the Police Courts, a practice has grown up, and has been carried to an extreme extent during the last two years, of repeatedly remanding the cases from week week to week, and keeping them in the Institution for a considerable time instead of sending them on to Hospital. In a number of cases, the patients have been sent on to Hospital after 4, 5, or 6 weekly remands with their chances of recovery certainly impaired by the delay. I presume that the course has been adopted by the Stipendary Magistrates after medical advice, but I venture to question its wisdom.

In most cases, if the patient has not recovered, or is not rapidly recovering at the end of 14 days, he should, in my opinion, be sent on to Hospital. The Reception House was not intended for more than temporary home, and the Lunacy Act specially provides that no patient under certificate shall be kept for a longer period than 14 days. The practice of repeated remands is not only prejudicial to the patients, but tend to keep the wards of the Institution in an overcrowded condition.

I paid 15 visits during the year either to inspect the Institution, or to hold enquiries, and at each visit I examined the registers and other departmental papers, and saw all the medical certificates received with patients, who were admitted and discharged without being sent on to Hospital. In one instance in which complaints of harsh usage were made by a patient I fully investigated these, and came to the conclusion that nothing more had been done than was absolutely necessary under the circumstances. The patients have, with the above exception made no complaint whatever, and their general appearance has indicated care and proper treatment.

The Institution has at all my visits been in excellent order and a model of cleanliness. There has been no suicide and no serious accident.

During the year, new Store-rooms for clothing and other goods, and a Straw House have been erected, and there has been a re-arrangement of the attendants, sleeping rooms.

The following returns give the statistics of the Institution :—

Hospital for the Insane, Gladesville.

The year opened with 846 patients in this Hospital—498 males and 348 females—during the year 142 patients were admitted for the first time, 30 were re-admitted, and 7 were transferred to other Hospitals. The total number under care was 1,025, and of these 103 were discharged recovered, and 16 relieved, 73 were transferred to other Institutions, 2 escaped, and 54 died, leaving 777—478 males and 299 females under care at the close of the year. The discharges show a percentage of 59.88 recovered, and 9.30 relieved calculated on the admissions, and the deaths were 7.23 per cent of the average daily number resident. These results must be regarded as extremely satisfactory.

The complete statistics of the Hospital are given in the report of the Medical Superintendent and the tables thereto appended. (See Appendix A.)

The Hospital was visited once a month by the official visitors, Sir Alfred Roberts (for whom Dr. MacLaurin acted during his absence from the Colony during the last nine months of the year), Dr. J. C. Cox, and Mr. C. J. Manning, Barrister-at-law, who forwarded reports after each visit, which expressed a general satisfaction with the condition of the Hospital, and call for no special comment. My visits of inspection were paid on January 22nd and 24th, February 28th, March 13th, April 23rd, May 16th, June 23rd, August 11th, September 15th and 16th, October 15th, November 26th, and December 14th, and at all of these I carried out the duties prescribed by Section 71 of the Lunacy Act. In addition to these visits of inspection I have repeatedly visited the Hospital to be present at Divine Service or some of the associated amusements, to see individual patients, or to consult with Medical Superintendent on questions of management or structural alterations.

The opening of the wards for women at Callan Park allowed the transfer of a number of patients to that Hospital, and as Callan Park now receives the whole of the patients from the Metropolitan district, the admissions at Gladesville have been fewer, the number under care less, and the wards in consequence less crowded, and altogether more comfortable than for some years past.

The diminution in the numbers has permitted of various minor alterations conducive to the comfort and general well-being of the patients, and concurrently with this, and owing to special care and interest on those points on the part of the Medical Superintendent and the Assistant Medical Officer, the numbers usefully employed and attending Divine Service have largely increased.

The accidents have been fewer than usual, and with one exception comparatively unimportant, and there has been no case of suicide.

At my visits I have been glad to express a general satisfaction with the management of the Hospital. The condition of the female division, and of the wards at the Hill Branch has been always specially creditable to the officers immediately in charge, care being taken not only to ensure the cleanest cleanliness and order, but to make the rooms bright and cheerful with flowers and minor ornaments. The general health of the inmates and of the staff has been good, and the general sanitary condition of the Hospital satisfactory, but at the close of the year two cases of typhoid fever occurred among the patients, and were, there is every reason to believe, due to drinking the water from the dam which is year by year becoming more liable to contamination by reason of increasing settlement on the area from which it flows. There has always been a good supply of pure water for drinking and cooking from underground tanks, but the water from the dam is brought to the wards for bath and other purposes, and it is difficult to prevent demented patients from occasionally drinking it.

Among the more important alterations and improvements during the year has been the erection of gas works, and the lighting of the entire Hospital with gas; the erection of a pavilion in the cricket-field, which is both a slight addition and a great boon to the patients. The removal of bars, and the enlargement of windows in corridors formerly used as dormitories, and the ventilation of single rooms by means of large and efficient openings.

The

The works still required are a cottage, as a dormitory during the day, for the night attendants, so that they may secure the amount of sleep necessary; new visiting rooms—the present ones being much too small;—an enlargement of the sewing room, so as to accommodate in comfort the large number of patients engaged in sewing, knitting, &c.; and new work-shops for the carpenter, painter, &c.

The condition of the wooden dormitories erected eighteen years ago, in a hasty manner, and of soft timber, is now such that they must soon be so largely repaired as to make them almost new buildings, or replaced by stone or brick rooms. The latter course I believe to be the most advisable.

There has been no change in the officers of the Hospital during the year.

Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta.

The number of patients in this Hospital on 31st December, 1884, was 957—607 males and 350 females. During 1885, 80 were admitted for the first time, 3 were re-admitted, and 19 were transferred from other Hospitals, making together 1,059—675 males and 384 females, under care and treatment. Of these 29 were discharged recovered, and 2 relieved, 8 were transferred, 1 escaped, and 56 died, leaving 963—606 males, and 357 females, at the close of the year.

The percentage of recoveries was 34·93, and of those relieved 2·40 on the admissions, and the death-rate was 5·90 on the average number resident.

The complete statistics of the Hospital are given in the tables attached to the report of the Medical Superintendent. (See Appendix B.)

The Colonial Secretary paid a visit to the Hospital on July 21st, to see the old buildings and judge as to the advisability of their removal.

The Hospital was visited once a month by the official visitors, who forwarded reports after each visit, and who, on the 10th of December, after having been appointed visitors to the Hospital at Callan Park, and vacated their appointments at Parramatta, made the following entry in the Inspector's book.

"We have to day thoroughly inspected the whole of this Institution. We found all the patients quiet and practically uncomplaining, the wards clean and in their usual good order. Leaving out of consideration the Hospital and Epileptic wards, which it is hoped will soon become things of the past, it is really a pleasure to see how the comfort of the unfortunate patients is attended to. The changes effected in the last few years are wonderful, and reflect great credit on the officers of the Institution, and on this, probably, our last visit, we desire to place on record our appreciation of their courtesy and their ready desire to give us every assistance in our duty of inspection."

My visits of inspection were made on January 6th, February 14th, March 13th, April 17th, May 7th, June 4th, July 10th, August 19th, September 29th, October 8th, November 9th and 19th, and December 11th, and I paid in addition 8 other visits, to hold enquiries, inspect buildings or alterations in progress or with other special objects:—

At all my visits, I passed through some and occasionally through all the wards, and I saw the patients, giving to all the fullest opportunity of speaking to me, and making complaints, and on the rare occasions on which these have not been obviously the outcome of delusions, I have made such enquiries as seemed to me necessary. I have not on any occasion had reason to think that the patients were treated harshly or roughly by the attendants in charge.

The general appearance and dress has been satisfactory, and the bedding clean and ample. I have not at any one of my visits during the year, found a patient in seclusion, and on several occasions there has been no instance of mechanical restraint. On one occasion I found a female patient in a camisole, for reasons which appeared to me satisfactory, and I several times saw a male patient wearing one leather glove, owing to destructive tendencies. From the Register it appears that the amount of restraint, has not at any time exceeded 1 case in 1,000, and has sometimes been entirely absent.

The general health has been very good, there has been no infectious ailment in the wards, and the very low death-rate, 5·90 per cent., is excellent evidence of the satisfactory sanitary condition of the Hospital.

There have been 3 cases of sudden death: 1 from apoplexy, 1 from rupture of the coronary artery, and the 3rd from accidental poisoning by carbolic acid. The latter I have alluded to in a former part of this report.

The accidents have been few, and, with one exception, unimportant; the exception was a fracture of the jaw, occurring in one of the dormitories at night, and points to the necessity, already several times insisted on, of a larger number of single rooms for the more turbulent and quarrelsome patients.

There has been a decided increase in the number of patients employed, especially among the women, who now average nearly 50 per cent., a fair number considering the large proportion of aged and feeble.

The weatherboard buildings for male patients, in which are accommodated 260 of the more quiet and harmless, and which in its arrangements approaches more closely to the Lunatic Wards of some of the Poor Houses in Great Britain, than to an ordinary Hospital for the Insane, has been greatly improved by the re-arrangement of the gardens and grounds, and by the constant and intelligent care of the attendants-in-charge, and the kitchen which serves for this Department and for the female wards, has at all of my visits been in admirable order and a credit to the cook. At two of my visits, I took the opportunity of trying the appliances for extinguishing fire at this building. At the first they were not satisfactory, owing to the defective pressure, but on the second occasion, on August 19th, after a second main had been laid, the pressure was good, and the appliances worked thoroughly well.

In June, the new block to replace the old central buildings, was ready for occupation, and, as soon as the patients were transferred to it, the old buildings, which were in a ruinous condition, were completely removed, and the site laid out in gardens and shrubberies.

The new block accommodates 101 patients—15 in single rooms, and the remainder in associated dormitories, with a cubic space exceeding 600 cubic feet for each patient. It has ample day and dining room space, with wide verandahs, attendants' rooms, bath room, scullery, and all necessary fittings. It over-looks the Public Park, and is, with its clock tower, an attractive looking building. No greater difference, both in its external appearance and its internal arrangement, can be imagined than between it and the unsightly and ruinous pile it has replaced.

The only old buildings now remaining at this Hospital, are those in the division for the sick and epileptic, and these should be replaced by more convenient wards as soon as possible. Plans have been drawn for new buildings, but funds have not yet been voted for the work. No steps have yet been taken to provide a large hall for amusement and recreation.

The Hospital has, during the year, received all the patients sent from the Western District of the Colony.

There have been no changes among the officers during the year.

Hospital

Hospital for the Criminal Insane, Parramatta.

On 31st December, 1884, there were 57 patients—50 males and, 7 females on the Register of this Hospital, and on the 31st December, 1885, the number was 55—48 males and 7 females. The statistics of the Hospital together with a special return showing the classification of the inmates, with reference to the period at which the insanity was recognised, are given in the report of the Medical Superintendent (see Appendix C.)

I visited the Institution on February 14th, July 10th, August 19th, November 19th, and December 11th, and on each occasion I saw all the patients in the ward, and on two occasions I checked the Registers and saw every patient on them.

At my visit on August 19th I saw the patients at dinner, which consisted of an ample meal of soup, meat, and potatoes, and was served in a clean, orderly, and proper way.

During my visits I have enquired into all complaints made to me, examined the clothing and bedding, and inspected the rooms in which the patients slept.

The building is ill-adapted for its purpose, and defective in its arrangements, but it is thoroughly clean and in good repair, and the grass plots and gardens surrounding it are remarkably well kept and a pleasure to see.

No serious accident has occurred, and though the patients belong to a dangerous class it has not been found necessary to employ restraint, except on rare occasions, and the instances of seclusion have been few and infrequent.

The new bath-room and lavatory, so much needed, has not yet been built, and although requisitions have been forwarded for improving the ventilation of the single sleeping rooms the work has not yet been carried out.

Hospital for the Insane, Callan Park.

There were at the close of 1884 273 patients in this Hospital,—261 males and 12 females.

During 1885 245 patients were admitted for the first time, 9 were re-admitted, and 72 were transferred from other Institutions, making a total of 509—433 males and 166 females under care and treatment. Of these 81 were discharged recovered, and 13 relieved, 12 were transferred to other Hospitals, 3 escaped, and 32 died, leaving 458 on the Register at the close of the year.

The recoveries give a percentage of 31·38 on the admissions, and the deaths a percentage of 8·08 on the average number resident.

The statistics of the Hospital are given in the tables in the Medical Superintendent's Report. (see Appendix D.)

The Hospital has received during the year the whole of the new cases of insanity from Sydney and its suburbs, except such as were sent by their friends to other Hospitals, besides 72 cases transferred from Gladesville to relieve the overcrowded wards of that Hospital.

At the beginning of the year there were only 5 wards open, 4 for males and 1 for females, but at the close 5 wards for males and 3 for females were occupied and two others were furnished and ready for the reception of patients.

The opening of the new wards, the organization of the staff, and the reception of 326 patients, either as direct admissions or transfers, has involved a very large amount of labour and anxiety to the Medical Superintendent.

During the year an Assistant Medical Officer—Dr. David Grant—a Dispenser and a Matron, were appointed, and a large number of attendants, nurses, and servants were required for the charge of the wards. As might be expected a certain proportion of those placed on the staff either found themselves or were found by the Medical Superintendent, unsuited for the positions they engaged to fulfil, and those confirmed in their appointments took some time to settle down to the duties of their respective offices. Among the additions to the staff Dr. Blaxland, with my full concurrence, appointed a nurse to one of the male wards. The result has been most encouraging, the sick have been better nursed and looked after, the patients in the ward have behaved better, and it is decidedly a matter for consideration whether female nurses may not be more largely employed in the male wards if suitable persons can be found to undertake the duties. The buildings have been found well fitted for the purpose for which they were erected, but as each ward was opened some alterations were found necessary, and innumerable minor wants, in the shape of fittings, &c., were discovered. A large number of requirements were excluded from the contracts because they could be supplied by the labour of patients, and it will necessarily be a considerable time before all these are met. A cottage, for better class patients, has been built, and the weatherboard buildings, erected to meet a temporary need, and the old mansion, bought with the estate, have been placed in proper repair, and made ready for occupation by patients. These latter form no part of the original plan. The total accommodation has been thus brought up to what is necessary for 800 patients.

I paid special visits of inspection to the Hospital on January 29th, February 21st, March 20th, April 16th, May 18th, July 20th, September 8th, November 17th and 18th, and December 29th, and, my offices having been arranged in rooms in the building during the whole year, I have had constant opportunity of visiting various parts of the Hospital, and have been in frequent consultation with the Medical Superintendent.

There were no official visitors during the year. At my visits I inspected the wards and dormitories, made the usual statutory enquiries, saw and examined the patients recently admitted, and examined into all complaints made by patients. I have been satisfied with the cleanliness and order of the wards, but they have not all as yet assumed the homely and cheerful appearance which should characterize both the day rooms and the dormitories of an Hospital for the Insane. Pictures and minor ornaments are much required, and will, no doubt, be obtained as opportunity occurs. The patients have always been well and properly clothed, and the bedding clean and ample. On two occasions on which I saw the patients at dinner it was served with order and commendable care.

The general health of the patients has been good, but towards the close of the year typhoid fever appeared among the attendants, of whom six were attacked and two unfortunately died, one shortly before the close of 1885 and one early in 1886. The outbreak was the cause of the most anxious consideration on the part of the medical officers, and I held a searching enquiry into the matter, with a view, if possible, of discovering if the disease originated within the Hospital, or was propagated by conditions existing therein.

The

The attendants who suffered were all unmarried men. None of the nurses, none of the married attendants, and none of the patients, though living in the same buildings, using the same water and food, and being under exactly the same conditions so far as the Hospital was concerned, were attacked. This seems to point undoubtedly to an extraneous origin, and the immunity of the male patients and the married attendants after it had been localized in the male division of Hospital, is a strong argument against the existence of any insanitary conditions within the building itself tending toward the propagation of the mischief. There was reason, however, to think that in two cases the disease had been caused by direct contact owing to non-observance of necessary precaution on the part of two attendants who had nursed one of the first cases, and were themselves subsequently attacked with the disease. In the course of my enquiries I found reason to think that the Hospital sewers, though having numerous ventilating openings, were at night, when the air was stagnant in them by reason of the cessation of the ordinary water supply, not sufficiently ventilated. Owing to the defective and intermittent water supply, it was impossible either to thoroughly flush them or to ensure at all times a full and sufficient current of water, and I deemed it advisable, as a precautionary measure, to recommend that large ventilating tubes should be placed at two points and carried to a height above the buildings, so as to ensure a better circulation of air in the sewers. This has been carried out with, apparently, a satisfactory result. Some progress has been made in turfing and planting the wards and in laying out the grounds, and in forming roads and pathways; but it will be some years before the rocky and barren soil on which the Hospital stands can be made into shrubberies and plantations, and longer still before the trees will grow so as to take off the bareness of the buildings and to give the privacy, shade, and general appearance which are desirable.

The labour of the patients properly directed, however, will soon effect some changes, and every year will make the grounds more pleasant and orderly. The number usefully employed is at present far too small, and will, no doubt, be increased as the organization of the Hospital becomes more complete. The number attending Divine Service is also below what it should be.

The following is a copy of the entry made in the Inspector's book on one of my visits:—

July 20th. The number of patients on the Register is as follows:—

On Register.			On Leave.
M.	F.	Total.	M.	F.	Total.
307	114	421	1	—	1

An increase of 29 since my last official inspection. I saw and signed the admission and discharge Registers and the Medical Journal, all of which are correctly kept and written up to date, and I examined also the case books in which the entries as to new patients are made with great fullness and care by the assistant medical officer, and the notes as to patients who have been some time in the Hospital, appear to be made with the frequency required by the case-book order issued by the Colonial Secretary. I examined the Ward Reports and the Night Reports, and from the former I find that the number attending Divine service yesterday was 170, a proportion which I consider too small. From the Night Reports it seems that ten men and eleven women are wet, and five men and six women dirty at night, and considering the proportion of patients now in the Hospital, and the fact that urinary incompetency is much more frequent in men than women, the proportion of women reported as faulty in habits is too large.

I visited all the wards in both the male and female divisions and have to express a general satisfaction with their condition. In the male division, however, No. 1 and 5 were by no means in such a smart and clean state as the others, and the senior attendants in them evidently require supervision. The bedding, with some minor exceptions, was in good order, and the bedclothes clean and sufficient. The dress of the patients was also satisfactory, and there were only one or two instances in which special dresses were necessary. In the female division, a third ward has been recently opened and is already in fair order. Two of the wards in this division are in great need of pictures and other ornaments, but the general condition of all three shows care and attention on the part of the nurses.

In the male division, I found one patient in seclusion owing to excitement and threatening language at the time of the medical visit, and one patient in restraint for reasons which seem satisfactory. The number in bed on the male division was nine, all in single rooms. No one was in bed in the female division.

I spoke to a number of the patients, and gave all an opportunity of speaking to me. The only complaint made (except of detention) was by a man who in certain phases of his illness is very prone to make unfounded or grossly exaggerated statements, and as I found that the Medical Superintendent had enquired into his statements and made an entry as regards them, in the Medical Journal, coming to the conclusion that they were without reasonable foundation, I did not think it necessary to re-open the question. In three cases in which I noticed bruises, these were accounted for by recent epileptic fits. The couches in both the male and female divisions which were supplied some months ago are not yet furnished with mattresses and pillows, and in the female division there is a great want of invalid chairs for the more feeble patients. I notice also that a few of the pillows are still made of straw.

The kitchen and stores which I visited were in good order and thoroughly clean. The beef-teen for dinner, and also the potatoes and meat, seemed thoroughly good, but the latter was somewhat overcooked. The whole of the provisions in the general stores seemed of satisfactory quality.

The laundry was in good working order, but the steam-drying horses are not working satisfactorily and need some alteration. The heat obtained is ample, but owing to want of draught the drying is not nearly so rapid as it should be. I saw the patients in four out of five male wards at dinner, which was served with order and care. It consisted of soup, with roast beef, potatoes, and bread.

The Medical Superintendent reports that the chaplains attend regularly and hold service on every Sunday. The amusements of the patients does not appear to have been so fully attended to of late as is desirable, but a dance on one evening in each month has now been started, and as the large hall is now fully seated and ready for use, with the exception of stage fittings, it will probably be used more frequently.

Hospital for the Insane, Newcastle.

The number of patients in this Hospital on the 31st December, 1884, was 241—129 males and 112 females. During the year 14 patients were admitted for the first time, 1 was re-admitted, and 7 were transferred from other Institutions, making altogether 263—137 males and 126 females, under care and treatment. Of the total number, 5 were discharged relieved, 2 were transferred to other Hospitals, 16 died, and 240—127 males and 113 females remained under care at the close of the year. The average daily number resident was 242, and the deaths were 6.61 per cent. on this number. The causes of death were epilepsy and convulsions in 7, inflammation of the lungs, pleuræ or bronchi in 3, and inflammation of intestines, peritoneum, &c. in 6 cases. In almost all the cases in which death was due to thoracic or abdominal disease, tubercular mischief was either a cause or complication.

Of the total number of patients under care, 154 were under 20 years of age, 225 were unmarried, and 207 were natives of the Colony.

Of those in Hospital on 31st December, 1885, 205 were suffering from congenital or infantile mental deficiency, and 35 from dementia, secondary, senile, or organic.

There has been no serious accident, and the general health of the Hospital has been excellent.

Two

Two cases of typhoid fever occurred among the patients, but so far as could be discovered, were not due to defect in the sanitary arrangements.

I visited the Hospital on February 24th and 25th, April 27th, August 4th and 5th, November 10th and 11th, and December 21st and 22nd, and the following are extracts from my reports at those visits:—

February 24th and 25th.—I visited this Hospital on both days. The number of inmates is 241—130 males and 111 females—of whom 81—44 males and 37 females are under 16 years of age. Since my last visit there have been 3 deaths—2 males and 1 female, and 3 children have been admitted. I examined them specially and consider them fit subjects for this Hospital. I visited all the day dormitories and other rooms set apart for the accommodation of patients and found them clean and in good order. The dormitories in the female division have been cleaned and much improved by painting the lower half and calcimining the upper half of the walls. The bedding generally was in good order, and in the male division kopuk has been substituted for horsehair in almost all the pillows. The patients in the female division were in their usual cleanly and orderly condition, some few are still suffering from weakness of the eyes following ophthalmia, but do not need isolation or special care. No one was in bed, and in only one case of restraint (in the mild form of a thin camisole) necessary. In the male division the patients in No. 1 ward were tidy and nicely dressed, but those in No. 2, though fairly clean and showing evidence of care on the part of those in charge of them, are still in some instances untidy, and the usual dress adopted, though strong and serviceable, is not attractive in appearance. The hats, both felt and quitted, very soon get shabby and out of shape, and I think something more suited might be specially made.

In the male division, 7 were in bed owing to chronic ailments, but no one was acutely or dangerously ill. One female patient, congenitally imbecile, but now a stout strong woman, over 30 years of age, has lately been violent at times. I have recommended her removal to Parramatta. I visited the kitchen, laundry, and stores, and other out-buildings. In the stores I examined all the articles of provisions, including the bread, and found all thoroughly good. The soap, however, is most inferior, and when the present stock is out a better sample must be insisted upon. I found the gardener and cook both off duty sick, their places being both taken by substitutes as a temporary arrangement. I visited the three dining-rooms while the patients were at dinner, and found the meal served with cleanliness and all proper care and order. After signing the statutory books, I looked over a number of the departmental records, which I found properly kept and in good order. The Medical Officer has visited the Hospital regularly and frequently, and religious service has been performed every Sunday. The garden is somewhat bare, but the weather has been dry and accounts for the absence of vegetables.

April 25th.—I found the kitchen, stores, and laundry in good order. In the stores, I examined the tea, sugar, bread, cheese, and other articles, and found all excellent in quality, and the Superintendent reports very favourably of the general conduct of the contractors. I am not, however, satisfied with the milk, the specific gravity is 29 degrees, but the standard appears to have been attained by skimming it, as the amount of cream arising after standing is by no means satisfactory. I recommend that the contractor be warned that unskimmed milk only will be accepted, and the supply must stand both of the lactometer and cream test. In the laundry the necessity of some alteration in the mode of boiling the clothes, &c., was very apparent; and the sooner a pair of efficient boilers are supplied, to supply steam and hot water for the whole establishment, the better. At present the waste of fuel, the loss of time, and the constant expense of repairs, are all large. The amount of water available is small, but with care there has been no absolute scarcity, and the light showers which have recently fallen have made the vegetable and flower gardens green, and have added somewhat to the water supply. Several small alterations and improvements are in progress, and a large part of the Hospital has been recently re-painted and the dormitories re-coloured. I saw and signed the Statutory Books. In the Medical Journal there is no report of any accident or serious casualty, and there appears to have been only one case in which seclusion, and only one in which restraint, has been necessary since my last visit.

The garden is in good order, and the crop of vegetables very promising. One of the patients on leave is at the Newcastle Hospital, where he has undergone an operation for the radical cure of a large and troublesome inquistal hernia.

August 4th.—I saw all the patients recently admitted, and the papers sent with them, and found them correct. The Hospital was throughout in good order and clean, and the amount of sickness small. Some improvements have been made by enlarging windows in the female, and cementing entrance hall in the male division; but there are still some requisitions unattended to for painting and repairs. I am glad to find an effort being made to teach the children to sew, and trust this will be persevered with. I saw and signed the Statutory Books, which are properly kept, and I also saw the case books. The recent rains have so far augmented the water supply as to render any dread of scarcity unnecessary for some time.

November 11th.—I took care to see every inmate of the Hospital, marking each name off in my Register, and enquiring as far as possible into the mental and bodily condition of every patient. The general appearance of the patients was satisfactory, especially in the female division, and it was evident they were treated with care and attentive consideration. I found four in bed in the female division, and four in the male; all were suffering from general debility and disease incident to their mental condition, except in one of the cases in the female division, in which the Medical Officer diagnosed and reported typhoid fever. I am not altogether prepared, after one visit, to accept this diagnosis, especially in the generally excellent sanitary condition of the Hospital, and the absence of any special exciting cause; but the patient is no doubt seriously ill, and requires care and attention. I visited all the dormitories and other rooms, and found them clean and in good and substantial repair. The bedding was, as a rule, in good order, but some of the horsehair pillows require re-picking, and the nurse in the Hospital ward points out the necessity for hair mattresses, to place over the wire mattresses in special cases. I was particularly pleased with the condition of the Hospital room for males, which was evident that the nurse understands and performs her duties carefully.

I visited the stores, in which all the articles of provisions except the cheese seemed of satisfactory quality, and in which the clothing recently received appears equal to sample. On referring to the requisition books, it appears that fencing, painting, and other urgent needs are still unattended to by the Colonial Architect's Department, and I cannot help pointing out the highly unsatisfactory quality of the cement work in window-sills, &c., in contracts recently completed. I saw and signed the Statutory Books, which are correct to date, but certain of general records are not written up to as recent a date as desirable, no entries having been made since August.

December 21st.—At my last visit the number of patients on the Register was as follows:—

	Males.	Females.	Total.
Nov. 10—Number on Register	128	113	246
Admitted since	1	0	1
	129	113	247
Died	1	4	5
Discharged to care of friends	1	1	2
	127	113	240
Dec. 21—Remaining on Register	127	113	240

There is now no one absent on leave.

I visited the day-rooms and dormitories in both the male and female divisions, and have to express a general satisfaction with their cleanliness and good order; the bedding clean and comfortable and sufficient. The patients were free from all excitement or complaint, and their general appearance was indication of care and attention. I visited the kitchen, laundry, stores, artisans' shops, and other buildings, and found all properly kept. In the stores I saw the bread, cheese, butter, and other articles, which, together with milk, were of good quality; and meat and potatoes, I saw when dinner was served, were excellent. One of the constant troubles of the Institution is the condition of the water supply, and only by constant pumping from all the wells in the Institution itself, and a free use of the water from the well at the Superintendent's quarters, that a sufficient supply can be obtained. It has been necessary to make frequent repairs to the pumping machinery, and the horses are severely worked. As the town water supply will be available in a few days, I have thought it necessary to write and urge its connection with elevated tank of Hospital as soon as possible.

I saw and signed the Statutory books, and found those and also Case books and departmental records properly kept. Number attending Divine service—63 males and 61 females, total 124; and number employed—37 males and 43 females, total 80. I should like to see a larger number, especially the boys, engaged in some occupation. I notice with pleasure that the patients in the Hospital male division show continued evidence of attention and extreme care, the nurse evidently taking a personal interest in them. The Chaplains and Medical Officer appear to visit the Institution with regularity and sufficient frequency.

The

The re-arrangement of the hot and cold water supply, and the improvements required in the laundry, have not been carried out. Under present arrangement there is a considerable waste of fuel, and the service is inefficient and unsafe.

Licensed House for the Insane, Cook's River.

On December 21st, 1884, the number of patients in this Institution was 150, 7 males and 143 females. During 1885, 21 patients were admitted for the first time and 6 were transferred from Hospitals, making 177, 19 males and 158 females, under care and treatment. Of these, 13 recovered, 4 were relieved, 2 were transferred to Hospitals, 8 died, and 150, 10 males and 140 females, remained on the register at the close of the year. Two of these were absent on leave.

The recoveries show a percentage of 61.90 on the admissions, and the deaths a percentage of 5.26 on the average number resident. The vacancies caused by death among the Government patients were, as usual, filled up by transfers from the Hospitals, and the number on the books was 125 throughout the year.

I paid visits of inspection on February 4th, March 21st, April 23rd, June 10th, July 23rd, August 28th, October 7th, and December 2nd, and the Institution was also inspected by the official visitors.

At my visits I invariably saw and signed the statutory books, examined the medical certificates and other papers received with all patients recently admitted, and saw and spoke to these patients. On every occasion I visited all the day-rooms and saw the greater number if not all the patients, giving every one an opportunity of speaking to me and making complaints if they so wished. On three occasions I saw the patients at dinner, which was well cooked, plentiful in quantity, and served with all necessary attention to the patients' comfort. The instances of restraint and seclusion have been few and infrequent, and the patients were, as a rule, quiet and orderly in demeanour. The wards have been always clean and in good order. On one occasion I thought it necessary to call attention to the want of proper air space in some of the dormitories, and I consider a rearrangement of the dormitories for private patients, so as to ensure a minimum of 600 cubic feet for each patient, to be absolutely necessary. Improvements have been made in the closets, but no alterations have been made in the laundry and kitchen, and the water supply has not been increased.

The license expired on April 30th, and after some delay a new license for three years for 150 patients was granted, on the following conditions:—

1. A full water supply from the Sydney mains, with hydrants as a protection against fire, to be provided.
2. Satisfactory alterations to be made to the kitchen and laundry.
- 3.

Observation Ward, H.M. Gaol, Darlinghurst.

The number of patients in this ward, under the provisions of the Lunacy Act, on the 31st December, 1884, was 13, and the number admitted during the year was 59, making 72 under care and observation; of these, 46 were discharged of sound mind and fit for prison discipline, 12 were certified as insane and sent to hospital; 6 were discharged to the Police Courts; and 8 remained on 31st December, 1885.

In addition to these cases, 1 prisoner was admitted whilst awaiting trial at the Quarter Sessions, and 100 were admitted whilst under sentence, or on remand from the Police Courts; whilst 5 of the latter class remained from the previous year.

The large majority of the Police Court cases were habitual drunkards, or persons who had been repeatedly in gaol for minor offences; and all displayed such symptoms of mental disease, defect, or peculiarity as rendered it advisable that they should not be placed in the ordinary wards.

I visited the ward on March 16th, July 15th, September 17th, and 8th December, and, at each of my visits, I saw and spoke to every inmate of the ward, and made inquiries as to their mental condition. In my entries in the Inspector's book after each visit, I was able to express a general satisfaction with the condition of the ward and the care of the inmates. On the occasion of my visit in September, I noted that the ward was overcrowded at night, owing to an increase in the number of epileptic prisoners who were allowed to sleep there, and I recommended that in no instance should more than three prisoners be placed in each room. My recommendation was at once adopted, and the epileptics removed to other gaols.

The registers and other records have been most carefully kept. The following return gives the statistics for the year:—

APPENDIX A.

The Medical Superintendent, Hospital for the Insane, Gladsville, to The Inspector General of the Insane.

Sir,

Hospital for the Insane, Gladsville, 10 March, 1886.

I have the honor to forward, for your information, a report upon this Hospital for the year 1885, accompanied by the usual statistical tables.

At the beginning of the year there were 816 patients in the Hospital. During the year, 179, 88 men and 91 women, were admitted. The whole number under treatment was 1,025, and the average resident, 746. There were discharged 248, of whom 103 had recovered, 16 were relieved, 73 were transferred to other Hospitals, 2 escaped, and 54 died. There remained at the close of the year 777, 478 men and 299 women.

The admissions during the year were much less than usual, in fact they were little more than half those of 1884. This was expected, and was due to the Hospital at Callan Park receiving all the patients from the Metropolitan district, who, in previous years, formed a large proportion of the number admitted here. The wards have in consequence been relieved to a great extent of the overcrowding, which so hampered the management and lessened the usefulness of the Hospital. The Institution is still however as full as it can be, without interfering with the safety and comfort of the patients.

The proportion of recoveries is considerably higher than the average, being 59% for both sexes, 72% of men, and 48% of women. The average for the previous ten years is 41.15. These figures taken without explanation are, however, misleading, and do not in reality imply that a larger number of patients than usual has recovered. The decrease in admission, owing to the opening of new wards at Callan Park, took place abruptly, and to it is due the abnormal recovery rate. A reference to Table V will show that considerably more than half the recoveries occur under one year, and 70% under two years' residence; consequently consequently the recoveries of patients admitted in 1884, when the admissions numbered 322 (and who were not discharged in that year), have this year been calculated on the smaller number of 179.

The death rate has again fallen to 7.53, being 2% less than in the past two years. This rate is rather under the average for the past ten years, 7.9%. The majority of the deaths (as will be seen in Table IV) were due to diseases of the brain—33 out of a total of 54; the others were caused by various bodily diseases, and five of them by old age. In three cases the deaths were sudden, but the District Coroner, when communicated with, did not deem an inquest necessary. In a fourth he attended, and held an inquiry, the result of which was duly reported to you.

Several accidents occurred during the year, but fortunately none were dangerous to life. They included a fracture of the neck of the femur, a fracture of the humerus, a fracture of the fibula, and a dislocation of the ulna at the wrist. There were, besides, one or two injuries of a slighter nature. In each case an inquiry was held, but all were found to be due to accident.

The water supply has again been a source of great anxiety. The continued dry weather preventing the supplies being replenished, the greatest economy had to be exercised, and for several months the daily allowance was so small as to seriously inconvenience the work of the Hospital. The scheme for pumping up salt water to be used for washing purposes was pushed forward and completed, but fortunately rain fell in time and it was not used. The dam water, although with economy and in good seasons it is sufficient for ordinary supplies, has now become so impure as to be highly unsafe. The catchment area is extensively built on and, as there is no sewage scheme in use in the village, rain falling on the ground washes all the filth that has accumulated there during the dry weather into the dam. This water is of course kept for washing purposes only, but it is impossible to prevent its being occasionally used by the patients, and to its use must be attributed two cases of typhoid fever which occurred in patients during the year, and also a third, which early in the current year proved fatal. To the use of this water must also be attributed two cases of hydatid disease in patients who had been four years and ten years respectively resident in the Hospital. The rapidly approaching completion of the Nepean waterworks leads me to hope that the Government will see fit to extend the pipes to the Hospital, and thus not only furnish a supply sufficient for all purposes, but insure its being of good quality, and so entirely prevent illness due to impure water.

Under the direction of the Colonial Architect gas-works have been created, and gas is now in use throughout the Hospital. The change from kerosene is a great improvement, more and better light being now obtained, with much less trouble and with less risk of fire.

The artisans in the employ of the Hospital, with the assistance of the patients, have executed most of the minor repairs necessary to the buildings. A pavilion has been erected in the cricket paddock, a new cart-shed in the wood-yard, and the verandahs of two of the wards have been re-cemented. The number of patients in the working parties has this year continued large, as many as 55 per cent. of the whole number being regularly employed. As usual, the women show a larger percentage than the men, and in the last quarter of the year, by making new arrangements for the sewing-room, it has been possible to employ 62 per cent. of women. The men have, under supervision, done a large amount of work in enlarging and cleaning out the dam, in clearing the reserve, in road-making, &c., in addition to the usual garden, ward, and artisan work.

Church services have been held regularly on Sundays by the Chaplains; Church of England in the forenoon, and Roman Catholic in the afternoon. During the year there has been a large increase in the numbers of those attending these services: from 194 or 23% in January, to 315, or 42% in December.

The following donations have been received, and I take this opportunity of thanking the donors for their gifts. Illustrated papers have been sent by Mrs. Salter, Mr. J. H. Adger, Mr. T. H. Jones, Miss Bedford, Miss Walker of Yaralla, Rev. W. Lumsdaine, Mr. Owen, and Mr. E. O. Smith. Mr. Forster Rutledge, Bungendore, sent three mountain ducks; Mr. Ross, Gladesville, a rosella parrot; the Trustees of Parramatta Park, three deer; Mr. R. R. Terry and Mr. Salter each a load of oranges. Mr. A. Day, Secretary of the General Post Office, kindly forwarded 15 bales of unclaimed papers. From Mrs. Barton, Gladesville, we received £5 to provide amusement for the patients; from Mr. Moloney's executor, £10; and from an anonymous friend, £12.

I have also, on behalf of the Hospital, to tender thanks to those who kindly gave entertainments, theatrical performances and concerts, viz.—the Hunters' Hill Private Dramatic Society; Mr. Frank Smith's Alhambra Variety Company; Rev. Mr. Wilkinson and friends; the Camellia Minstrels; and the Band of H.M.S. "Nelson."

The proprietors of the following newspapers—Australian Churchman, Bathurst Free Press, Bega Gazette, Demiliquin Chronicle, Weekly Advocate, Bathurst Daily Times, Burrigong Argus, Dubbo Dispatch, Goulburn Herald, Maitland Mercury, Cucanbeyan Age, Manaro Mercury, Riverina Grazier, Southern Argus, Wagga Advertiser, Wagga Express, Western Post, Yass Courier, Social Reformer, St. Leonards Recorder, and Sydney Daily Telegraph—have generously forwarded a copy of each issue free during the year.

To Dr. Ross, Mr. Betts, and the rest of the officers and staff of the Institution, I desire to tender my thanks for the willing and efficient assistance they have rendered to me during the year.

I have, &c.,

ERIC SINCLAIR,

Medical Superintendent.

APPENDIX B.

Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta.

The Medical Superintendent, Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta, to the Inspector-General of the Insane.

Sir,

Hospital for the Insane, Parramatta, 26 February, 1886.

I do myself the honor to forward, for your information, a report upon this Hospital for the year 1885, together with the usual statistical tables.

There were 957 patients in the Hospital on the 31st of December, 1884, 607 being men and 350 women; and 102 patients, 68 men and 34 women, were admitted during the year, giving a total of 1,059, 675 men and 384 women, under care and treatment. Of this number, 29 recovered, 8 were transferred to other hospitals, 2 were discharged relieved, 1 escaped and was not recaptured within the prescribed limit of twenty-eight days, and 56 died, leaving a total of 963, 606 males and 357 females, on the 31st of December, 1885.

Comparing the statistics of this year with those of 1884, it will be observed that the number of admissions and readmissions is greater, being 83 in 1885 and 60 in 1884. The total number of patients transferred from other institutions was 19, as against 41 last year. 3 patients were readmitted during the year, 2 men and 1 woman. The percentage of recoveries on the total number of admissions and readmissions during the year is low as compared with the previous year, being only 34.93 in the former and 43.33 in the latter. This is due to the fact that the number of admissions in 1885 was greatly in excess of the previous year, and a great proportion of the cases admitted were of an almost incurable nature, consisting in a great measure of epileptics, demented, and cases of congenital mental deficiency. In addition to this, a great many were old and infirm, 21 being over 50 years of age, and of these 6 were between 60 and 70, 3 between 70 and 80, and 2 over 80 years of age. A percentage of 2.40, although not cured, were considered to be so far recovered in their mental health as to be discharged to the care of their friends. The percentage of deaths calculated on the average number resident during the year was 5.90, which is very low, considering the large proportion of aged and infirm patients now in the Hospital. As usual the District Coroner was informed in all cases of sudden death, but, with one exception, did not consider that an inquiry was necessary. The exception referred to above was in the case of William Sharpe, a patient who met with his death on the 29th of September, under peculiarly distressing circumstances, the senior attendant having accidentally given him two ounces of carbonic acid instead of the medicine ordered. A full report of the melancholy occurrence was forwarded to you directly after it had taken place, together with the result of the inquiry held by the Coroner. No other accident of serious import occurred during the year.

The general health of the patients both male and female has continued good; no epidemic disease of any kind has made its appearance amongst them, and since the women have occupied the weatherboard buildings they have continued to improve in every way. They are more contented and cheerful, a larger number are industriously employed, there is a more marked absence of noise and excitement amongst them, and the peculiar unhealthy appearance of some of the older ones has almost entirely disappeared. The attractiveness of this part of the Hospital is being increased year by year, the garden and grounds are commencing to repay by their appearance the labour and care bestowed upon them, and the wards and day-rooms have a more cheerful and homely aspect. The weatherboards in this division are already commencing to look dirty, and in many places are much stained and discoloured by the action of the weather. The whole of the buildings will ere long require repainting.

Mr. Bear, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Fire Brigades, thoroughly inspected all the fire-extinguishing apparatus and appliances connected with the Hospital, together with the water supply, and made several suggestions, most of which have been carried out. At the time of his visit the stream of water thrown from any one of two stand-pipes connected to the main in close proximity to each other and being turned on at the same time was not very great, but since then another connection has been made with a water main in front of the principal entrance gate, which has very materially added to its force. The stand-pipes with hose and nozzle are attached each night to the hydrants about all the weatherboard buildings buildings, so that should an alarm of fire be given one man could manipulate the hose without unnecessary loss of time, and any confusion that might arise by having to fix the stand-pipes in the dark is thus obviated. The whole of the weatherboard division for men is covered with shingles which were placed there when the buildings were first erected about sixteen years ago; they are now commencing to decay and in places are very faulty, allowing the water to come through when it rains. In addition to this, I wish to point out their very inflammable nature and the extreme risk that is incurred by any of them becoming ignited by a spark falling from one of the various surrounding chimneys. I would suggest that galvanized iron be substituted with as little delay as possible.

The new ward for men is completed, and as was originally intended, is mainly occupied by convalescent and industrious patients.

The old dormitories known as the "centre buildings" have been demolished, and the ground upon which they stood converted into a flower-garden. Great improvements are in progress at the back of the Hospital, several parties of patients, under the supervision and guidance of attendants, are busily engaged in building walls to form terraces for flowers and shrubs, clearing out the bed of the river, and building a dam, which when completed will throw the water back and form an artificial lake, thus removing the untidy and neglected appearance which it has always borne, and converting it into one of the most attractive spots, not only about the Institution, but in the surrounding neighbourhood.

The bathing arrangements in No. 3 Ward have not yet been improved. As I pointed out in my report of last year, these can be done effectively and economically in conjunction with the alterations that are recommended for the bath-room and lavatory in the Criminal Division.

A large number of the patients have been engaged as usual in various occupations, some in the garden and grounds, others in the laundry, wood-yard, kitchen, stores, farm, &c.; the number of women occupied in the needle-room has increased greatly, and more sewing is done in the wards than was formerly the case.

The customary Sunday services have been regularly conducted both morning and evening. They are looked forward to by the patients with a great amount of pleasure, and I am sure that no inconsiderable amount of benefit is derived from them. For some time past the number attending divine service has been increasing and is now more than the room will accommodate, so that some are seated outside the large folding-doors, where they cannot always hear or follow the officiating clergyman, whilst a number, who might with advantage attend are allowed to remain in the wards.

As in my former reports I must once again urge the necessity of providing some commodious building specially adapted for holding divine service, and which could also be utilized as a recreation and concert hall, as occasion required.

The amusement of the patients has not been neglected, and thanks are due to those ladies and gentlemen who have from time to time volunteered their services in promoting this object.

There were but few instances in which patients made their escape, and, with the exception of three, they were returned to the Hospital within a few hours of leaving; one patient was away sixteen days, and was then returned by the police authorities; another was absent for ten days, and was then re-taken by the attendants; and the third, who escaped from the dormitory in which he slept, by unscrewing an iron bar of the balconet in front of the window, remained unheard of for twenty-eight days, and his name was consequently taken off the books of the Hospital.

So far no steps have been taken to provide new quarters for the Assistant Superintendent, or renovate the old; nearly two years ago I pointed out the damp and unhealthy state of the house he then occupied, and since that date his family have been living away from the Hospital, which is not only a very inconvenient arrangement, but also the source of much extra expense to him.

Before closing my report, I wish to draw attention to the very urgent need that exists for more single room accommodation in the men's division: a great number of those who at present sleep in associated dormitories are really unfit to be there, and should be sleeping by themselves in single rooms; some are restless and irritable, and keep their fellow-patients awake by talking and pacing up and down the room; this is often the cause of quarrels and fighting, with consequent bruises, and sometimes even more serious injury: some are dirty and destructive in their habits, and others are positively dangerous. Taking all this into consideration, the wonder is that more serious accidents have not occurred amongst them.

The changes in the staff of the Hospital have been very few; as a rule, both the nurses and attendants have discharged their many and onerous duties in a satisfactory manner. I must again record my thanks to Dr. Williamson and the officers and members of the staff generally for the able and efficient help accorded to me throughout the past year.

I have, &c.,
EDWIN GODSON,
Medical Superintendent.

APPENDIX C.

Sir,

Hospital for the Criminal Insane, Parramatta, March 1st, 1886.

I do myself the honor to forward for your information a report upon this Hospital for the year 1885, together with the usual statistical tables.

The number of patients on the 31st of December, 1884, was 50 men and 7 women—total, 57—and 19 men and 4 women were admitted during the year, making the number under care in 1885 69 men and 11 women—total, 80. Eight men were discharged to gaol, recovered; 11 men and 4 women were transferred to the Free Hospital, after the expiration of their sentences; 1 patient died, and 1 escaped and was not recaptured—making the total of discharged or died during the year 21 men and 4 women, and, deducting these from the total number under care, leaves 48 men and 7 women in the Hospital on the 31st of December, 1885, classified as shown on the following table:—

It will be seen at once from this classification of the inmates, that the patients in this Hospital belong for the most part to a dangerous class, and that greater responsibility attaches to the attendants employed in it than to those in an ordinary Hospital for the Insane. The attendants form part of the general staff, and I venture to suggest the advisability of giving them some additional remuneration during such time as they are employed in the care of the criminal patients.

At

At the commencement of the year a patient effected his escape, during the night, from his room in which he slept, notwithstanding that extra precautions had been taken to prevent it; a detailed report of the occurrence was forwarded to you at the time.

A new bath-room is very much needed—the present one being quite inadequate to the proper and systematic bathing of the patients. Various improvements have been made during the year in the single rooms occupied by the patients at night; wire gratings have been placed over each window, and the glass taken away where possible, so as to allow of the entrance of more air. Inspection openings have been made, and small gratings to admit the light from a lamp have been placed in the doors, so that every occupant can now be seen from the corridor by the night attendant, without being disturbed or annoyed by the opening of the door, as was formerly the case. The ventilation of the single rooms is, however, still defective, and is likely to remain so until openings are cut through the inner walls, so as to allow of cross ventilation into the corridors.

No accident of any importance has occurred during the year, and the patients on the whole have been very free from all kinds of noise, excitement, or complaint. Both the lower and upper airing courts have greatly improved in appearance, the grass-plots are beautifully green and well cared for, and the flower-beds give variety and a cheerful appearance to them; various animals and birds have been introduced during the year, and these form a great source of amusement and pleasure to the inmates.

The health of the patients as a rule has remained very good; only one death occurred, the patient, a Chinaman, was ill for some months, and ultimately died from disease of the liver.

The following is a table showing the admissions, discharges, and deaths, with the mean annual mortality, and the proportion of recoveries, &c., per cent., at this Hospital, from 1876 to 1885 inclusive:—

No general out-door occupation has yet been instituted for the patients in this division, the risk of escape being so great that it has not been deemed advisable to incur it. The large space recently occupied by the old female division of the Hospital is, however, now clear of buildings; it is surrounded by a wall, which will reduce the chances of escape to a minimum, and it is proposed to transform it into a vegetable garden, with the special object of growing lettuces, radishes, &c., by spade labour. I hope soon to be able to report that a considerable number of the patients are employed in it, and are growing crops which will supply the whole Hospital with salads, herbs, &c.

I have, &c.,
EDWIN GODSON,
 Medical Superintendent.

The Inspector-General of the Insane.

APPENDIX D.

The Medical Superintendent, Hospital for the Insane, Callan Park, to the Inspector-General of the Insane.

Sir, Hospital for the Insane, Callan Park, 9 March, 1886.

I do myself the honor to submit for your information a report upon the Hospital for the Insane, Callan Park, for the year 1885, accompanied by the usual statistics.

The number of patients remaining in the Hospital on 31st December, 1884, was 273, including one who was absent on trial. During the year, 172 males and 154 females were received; of these, 160 males and 85 females were admitted for the first time, 7 males and 2 females were re-admissions, and 5 males and 67 females were transferred from other Hospitals.

The total number of cases under care was 559, viz., 433 males and 126 females, and the average number resident, 396.

The number discharged during the year was 109, of whom 81 were classed as recovered, 13 as relieved, 12 were transferred to other Hospitals for the Insane, 3 escaped and were not recaptured, and 32 died.

The number remaining on the books on 31st December, 1885, was 458.

The percentage of recoveries on the number admitted during the year was 33.06.

The deaths number 32, 29 males and 3 females, the causes being shown in Table IV. Two cases of sudden death occurred under circumstances which were reported to you at the time. The City Coroner was also informed, but as death was clearly due to natural causes he did not deem an inquest necessary in either case.

The general health of the patients has on the whole been good, though there were more cases than usual of minor ailments.

It is with extreme regret that I have to record the death of two attendants from typhoid fever. Robert Emerson, whose kindly disposition and gentle manners had endeared him to his fellow-workers and to the patients alike, and Michael O'Neill, who died early in the current year, and who, though he had been but a little over two months in the Institution, was likely to have made an excellent attendant.

The outbreak caused much anxiety to the medical officers, who were, however, quite unable to trace the source. In all, six attendants were attacked. The first probably had a mild attack, as he did not complain till he arrived at Cooma for his fortnight's leave, when he was obliged to lie up. The other five cases were all treated in the Institution, and, after Emerson's death advantage was taken of an empty ward in the female division where isolation could be carried out, and the patients better attended to. A special nurse was engaged for night duty, and everything that was possible was done for their relief and the prevention of any further spread.

It seems most probable that the disease was contracted outside the building, for the following reasons:—Firstly, typhoid is endemic in most of the suburbs; and secondly, no patients were attacked. This is most important, as they do not enjoy an immunity from the disease, and being subject to the same conditions within the Institution as the attendants, drinking the same water and eating the same food, they would most certainly have been attacked had the cause of the disease existed in the building itself.

The escapes and attempts at escapes were somewhat more frequent than in 1884. The patient who was mentioned in last year's report as having escaped a few days before the close of the year was not retaken, but he remained at large only four months from the date of escape, when he was re-certified and returned to Hospital. During the year two others escaped and were not retaken; one would have been discharged in the ordinary course in a few days, and the other was convalescing from an acute maniacal attack, and probably continued to improve after his escape.

An average of about 40 per cent. of the patients of both sexes have been usefully employed in the wards, laundry, sewing-room, kitchen, and the various artisans' shops. The grounds have been laid out in various directions, roads have been formed, and many minor improvements have been effected.

Divine service was held as usual on Sundays, and thanks are again due to Mr. Frederica Russell for kindly presiding at the harmonium at the Church of England services.

As much as possible was done to promote change and amusements for the patients, monthly dances were held during the winter, and great change and enjoyment were afforded to many by an arrangement with the Medical Superintendent at Gladesville, by which a number from that Hospital attended the dances at Callan Park, while every fortnight a number from here attended those at Gladesville.

Several picnics to various parts of the harbour were organized, and at least once a week the launch took patients for pleasure trips. Such trips are specially beneficial, and much enjoyed by the female patients, who, in the absence of outdoor occupation, have otherwise little opportunity of getting beyond their wards.

Thanks are due to the Balmain Coldstream Band for an afternoon performance, during which the patients indulged in various athletic sports, the prizes being provided from a sum of money kindly collected by Mr. Jones.

The following donations were received during the year, and are acknowledged with thanks:—Mr. David Mulayson, a parcel of illustrated papers; the Secretary of the Mechanics' School of Arts, a large number of books; Mr. Samuel Nathan, several books; Mr. Adger, several illustrated papers; Mr. A. C. Garrick, a boat and a pair of sculls; through Dr. Manning, the sum of £12 14s. 6d.; Mrs. B., £2; Mr. G. C. A., £5; Mr. S. Barter, several parcels of illustrated papers; and the Secretary of the G.P.O., Sydney, several bags of unclaimed newspapers.

Early in the year Mr. David Grant, M.B., was appointed Assistant Medical Officer, and Miss Fairhair was appointed Matron, both of whom I have to thank, in conjunction with the other officers, attendants, nurses, and others, for ably seconding me in maintaining the discipline and usefulness of the Institution.

I have, &c.,

H. BLAXLAND,
Medical Superintendent.

The Inspector-General of the Insane.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

HOSPITALS FOR THE INSANE.

(REPORT OF DR. TUCKER ON THE HOSPITALS FOR THE INSANE VISITED BY HIM, UNDER THE CIRCULAR LETTER OF THE COLONIAL SECRETARY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 16 February, 1886.

Dr. G. A. Tucker to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, 283, George-street, 10 February, 1886.
I do myself the honor of forwarding to the Government an introduction to my Report on the various Asylums for the Insane visited by me under your circular letter, together with a portion of the Report. The remainder of the Report shall shortly follow.

I have, &c.,
G. A. TUCKER.

Dr. G. A. Tucker to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, Birmingham, March, 1885.
Herewith I have the honor to present to you, for the consideration of the Government, my collection of Reports upon the Lunatic Asylums I have visited during the last three years.

These Reports constitute a kind of encyclopaedia of lunacy information of great variety and much minuteness, and, I trust, of usefulness also. Already the Australian Colonies have become remarkable for the valuable collections of such information which they have given to the world at the public charge, and I presume to hope that my Reports will enhance that honorable reputation, and confer upon New South Wales the distinction of being second to no colony or country in affording facilities for acquiring a knowledge of the modes in which those afflicted with insanity are dealt with in different countries, and in supplying materials for the formation of sound conclusions as to the proper care and treatment of the insane.

CREDENTIAL.

On the 18th of April, 1882, I had the honor of receiving from Sir John Robertson, the then Colonial Secretary of New South Wales, the following credential as an introduction to the Governments of the countries I might visit in the course of my mission:—

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, New South Wales, 18 April, 1882.
This is to introduce Dr. George A. Tucker, the Superintendent of the Bay View Lunatic Asylum, near Sydney. Dr. Tucker is a gentleman of some standing in this city, and is visiting Europe and America, in the interest of his business, for the purpose of inspecting Institutions for the cure of the Insane and collecting information regarding them.

This Government will be gratified by any attention which may be shown to Dr. Tucker during his travels.

JOHN ROBERTSON,
Colonial Secretary of New South Wales.

COUNTRIES VISITED.

On the reception of the foregoing introduction, I left Sydney, visiting Victoria, South Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, and Honolulu. From the latter place I crossed the Pacific to San Francisco, and visited the United States and Canada. I inspected institutions in every State of the Union and in all the Provinces of the Dominion. In America alone I travelled about 18,000 miles. I subsequently visited most of the countries on the European Continent, including all the States of the German Empire, Austria, and Russia, and their dependencies; Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, Corsica, Spain and Portugal. I also visited Tunis and Algiers, in Africa. I afterwards visited the chief Asylums, public and private, in Great Britain and Ireland.

Altogether I have visited and inspected some four hundred Asylums in various parts of the world, and communicated with over a hundred others, chiefly small establishments.

By the time I return to New South Wales, I shall have travelled altogether about 140,000 miles in the accomplishment of the task I had undertaken—a task the magnitude and difficulties of which exceeded the liberal anticipations I had formed of them.

A list of the Asylums visited by me, and of the Asylums from which I obtained information without making a personal visit, is given in Appendix A. In the same Appendix will be found a list of the Official Authorizations furnished to me to facilitate my inspection of the Asylums of various countries.

SIR SAUL SAMUEL'S ASSISTANCE.

Having devoted eleven months to visitations in the United States and Canada, I proceeded to England, where I received from the Agent-General, Sir Saul Samuel, a circular letter (see Appendix A) to all British Consuls abroad, and, in addition, he kindly obtained letters of introduction (see Appendix A) from the English Commissioners in Lunacy, to the Superintendents of the various Asylums in England and Wales, and also Government Authorizations to visit the Army and Navy and Indian Service Asylums, these being institutions under direct Government control. Other Asylums in the United Kingdom are not subject to direct ministerial control, as in most countries, but are governed by County and Borough Boards under Government inspection. To these only an introduction to the Superintendents could be given, and for this I had to wait five or six weeks.

THE AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, &c.

While waiting, I passed into Holland and visited the International Exhibition at Amsterdam. At the Exhibition I rendered what service I could to the Colony in my capacity as Commissioner from New South Wales. I then proceeded to visit the Asylums of Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, and Russia, returning by way of Berlin to Amsterdam. From thence I went to London, on business connected with the Exhibition, and soon after returned to Amsterdam. Departing once more from Amsterdam, I went to the Rhine Provinces of Prussia, and subsequently visited, in succession, the Asylums of the different Continental States already indicated.

THE UNDERTAKING.

The task to which I devoted myself, and the results of which I now have the honor to submit to you, was conceived and carried out on a scale never before attempted.

In 1868 Dr. Manning, Inspector-General of Asylums in New South Wales, was commissioned by the Government to visit European Institutions for the care and treatment of the Insane, and he succeeded in producing, in a summarized form, a valuable Report.

In 1871 Dr. Wilkins, of San Francisco, was in like manner commissioned by his Government, and reported in the same form as Dr. Manning, with equally satisfactory results in the appreciation of the speciality. Both these Reports are recognized as standard works.

The work which I have essayed differs from those of Doctors Manning and Wilkins, in being of a wider and more comprehensive character. It is designed as a source of reference for every institution in the civilized world of any importance. Each institution is dealt with separately and comprehensively, and the fullest obtainable information is supplied as to local situation, acreage of grounds, architectural structure, external and internal arrangements, capacity, statistics of patients, treatment followed, per capita cost, &c. I have added the opinions collected from Superintendents and others as to the care of and provision for the insane, the causes of insanity in various countries, its form and curability, and the proper maximum number of patients for treatment in any one institution to insure most successful management and the best results in recoveries. From such materials, drawn from all parts of the world, the causes of insanity may be traced, and conclusions can be formed as to the best means of treating the insane with a view to their present comfort and prospective cure.

DIFFICULTIES OF OBTAINING INFORMATION.

In some cases the information supplied is not so complete as I could wish, but this arises from the great difficulties I encountered in eliciting all I desired to know from the Superintendents. This observation applies more particularly to certain Asylums in Europe. For the sake of facility and precision, I supplied to Superintendents a series of printed questions in English and French, with a request that the answers might be filled in and the paper returned to me (see Appendix A for form of questions). In many cases my request, though repeated, met with no response, and hence the lack of full information in those instances. Such information as could be gathered was collected on tabulated forms (see Appendix A), and copies of these forms were sent for verification to the Asylums to which they related. In most instances those forms were returned corrected or approved, but again there were instances in which the forms were not sent back. Where the information has been supplied I have no reason to think that it is not reliable and truthful.

THE REPORTS.

Throughout my Reports I have, as far as possible, abstained from making comments or drawing comparisons between one institution and another. I have endeavoured to simply state the facts coming under my own notice, or supplied to me by the officials of the Asylums visited. But in this place it is proper to direct particular attention to certain of those facts, and to contrast and comment upon them, as it is upon their close observation alone that judgment and opinion can be formed. I shall deal with the different subjects I purpose touching upon, as nearly as possible, in the order in which they appear in the Reports and in the series of printed questions above referred to.

THE

THE BUILDINGS.

I found many of the buildings used as Asylums old and unsuitable, having been originally—sometimes centuries ago—constructed for prisons, monasteries, palaces, castles, &c., and now relegated to the accommodation of lunatics, with very little alteration or improvement, and not much scope for any such. This was chiefly the case on the European Continent. Such institutions cannot of course be so well adapted for the care and treatment of the insane as those of more recent construction, fitted with modern appliances, and that fact should be borne in mind when considering efficiency and contrasting results. In some important directions improvement is simply impossible so long as those old structures are used. Some of them are devoted to the accommodation of chronic or supposed chronic patients, the arrangements for the purpose being of the most crude and primitive description. The mere incarceration in such institutions is, in the highest degree, calculated to render all chance of cure impossible. No doubt there are instances in which patients can never be restored to mental health, but it is in the highest degree unadvisable and pernicious to form that conviction and act upon it. “While there is life there is hope” is a true and wholesome precept; but I have seen Asylums over the portals of which might well be written the words Danté read above the gates of his “Inferno”—“All hope abandon ye who enter here.” Patients upon whom the fatal condemnation of “chronic” is passed are told to hope no more, and those about them, regarding them as incurable, take little or no trouble with them.

A large proportion of the Asylums of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland were originally built for a much smaller number of patients than they at present accommodate. Structural additions have been made from time to time, to such an extent and in such fashion as to interfere greatly with light and ventilation, management and administration. In some instances the difference in the level of what are supposed to be the same floors is as great as 30 feet. The kitchens and other administrative departments have commonly been built between the original blocks, and in course of time have been so built in by additional structures that their enlargement to meet the increased demands upon their resources has become a matter of absolute impossibility. The management has thus been rendered difficult and laborious, while the numerous dark corners, stairways, narrow passages, &c., to be found in all directions, and the consequent lack of direct light, render the Asylum gloomy and repulsive. Many of the new institutions are in a not much better condition as regards light and air, owing to want of adequate ground space, while the vast extent of some of the buildings themselves is such as to render it absolutely impossible for the Superintendent to acquire a personal knowledge of his patients.

Good Asylums can be built on a variety of plans, but the better opinion seems to favour the échelon or pavilion style. In this style the several isolated blocks are usually connected by covered ways, and should not exceed two stories in height above the basement. Great convenience and perfect supervision are thus secured; and if the Asylum is built for not more than 300 patients, or less, the medical staff can have the whole under perfect observation with much less labour than in large institutions of several stories in height, or low, rambling edifices of great extent.

The English Commissioners of Lunacy, in their Report for 1857, dwell on the evils of very large buildings, on account of the want of individual and responsible supervision, the loss of the patient's individuality, and the upward tendency of the rate of maintenance for patients. The divided responsibility in such large institutions was held to be injurious to management, and it was also pointed out that the cures of patients were actually fewer.

Earl Shaftesbury maintained that Asylums ought not to be so enormously expensive, that many of them were constructed with a needless display of architecture, and some were far too large. Take Leavesden, a Metropolitan District Asylum, as an example. Here the accommodation is for 2,000 patients—900 males and 1,100 females. The total cost of the building, furniture, clothes, bedding, &c., included, amounted to £173,118, or £86 per bed. Taking out the items of furniture, bedding, and clothes, the amount per bed would be £77. Compare this with Wakefield, the cheapest of the County Asylums, with £111 per bed, and Gloucester, one of the highest, with £357 per bed. In many instances the average per bed is exclusive of furniture, &c. The average cost per bed is about £200 in English County and Borough Asylums.

SITUATION OF ASYLUMS.

It is an obvious theoretical desideratum that Asylums should always be built, as nearly as possible, in the most generally accessible situation in the district or locality from which they receive their patients. It is of great importance that the poor friends of patients should not be deterred from paying visits by avoidable difficulties of distance and travelling expenses. It is equally important to the patients themselves that they should be cheered and comforted by visits from their friends as often as possible, and not allowed to suspect that they are neglected or forgotten. In practice, the selection of the situation of Asylums is often too largely governed by the cost of land. Without desiring to make light of this consideration, I think that it ought not to be the only one thought of in selecting a site. Accessibility, for the reasons above given, should also have weight, and, where economy is not imperative, should have the first place.

GROUNDS.

The yards or airing-courts vary greatly in size and general appearance. Some for single patients are mere prisons, with high walls, dreary, damp, and cold, often unprovided with seats or other accommodation. Some institutions have well arranged gardens, fenced in with iron rails or sunken walls and other provisions against escape, well provided with seats,

seats, sunshades, shrubberies, flowers, &c., and many command extensive views of the surrounding country. In America, Scotland, and some parts of Germany, it is worthy of special mention that a large number of the Asylums are unprovided with yards or even a fence around the estate, the patients being allowed free access to the well-kept grounds, under charge of their attendants, the grounds being adorned with ornamental fountains, statuary, lakes, and groves. At many such places I have seen the patients walking unattended. The view entertained is that it is much better to risk the occasional escape of a patient, than that a large number of sick should be injuriously confined and unnecessarily restrained. Opinions vary also on this point. A Superintendent of one institution informed me that he never allowed his female patients outside the wards, for fear of their complexions being injured, he being of opinion that for a woman to be sunburnt is degrading and demoralizing, and he assured me that several of the women in his Asylum had not been out for years!

The arguments used in favour of as much freedom as possible are applicable in relation to suicidal patients. It is maintained that because some few may commit suicide, that is no good reason why all should suffer close confinement and harassing restriction; and it is contended that the probable number of suicides under the more wholesome and less repressive conditions would not be found to exceed the ratio of those in the outside world.

INTERNAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Many hospitals are furnished so as to correspond with the former social surroundings of the different patients. Except in private Asylums, in no part of the world have I found the handsome furniture and general elegant arrangements of the American States Asylums; but it is noteworthy that, with few exceptions, this remark applies to the front wards, the back wards being in this respect neglected, and in many cases nearly void of furniture. In some other countries the furniture is of a most meagre description. In one Asylum in Canada I found twenty-five men in a corridor with only seats for ten, with no object for the eye to rest upon but the whitewashed walls, and this at a time of the year when, owing to the inclemency of the weather out of door, exercise and recreation would be impossible for several consecutive months.

In the County and Borough Asylums of Great Britain the furniture and general surroundings of the patients are of the most comfortable, home-like, and, in many cases, elaborate and artistic description, and this condition of things is almost universal throughout the island. Many of these Asylums are so decorated throughout as to have the appearance of large conservatories. In many places, as on the Continent of Europe and in Ireland, I have no doubt the plain and inexpensive furniture used is in accordance with the home habitudes of the patients—at least I have been told so; but this should be no reason for the almost total absence of pictures, books, and other inexpensive objects of interest calculated to advance the mental condition of the patients, nor for the total exclusion of all means of recreation, amusement, and occupation. The use of heavy iron bars to the windows, more particularly on the European Continent, must be held to be in accordance with the general social conditions, the lower windows of the private residences being generally guarded in the same way; but in Germany, and Austria particularly, this mode of protecting Asylum windows is being beneficially superseded by half-inch clear glass panes. This largely tends to mitigate the prison-like aspects of the Asylums.

KITCHEN, COOKING, &c.

In many parts of Europe the cooking arrangements and management of the kitchen form no part of the conduct of the establishment proper. They are attended to separately, and by contract, the contractor being paid so much per head, providing everything, and charging by a scale of prices, according to the quantity and quality of food supplied. Some Superintendents disapprove of this arrangement, as not being sufficiently under the general control of the establishment. It is a common thing to find patients employed in and about the kitchens. This is advantageous from the point of view of domestic economy, and also as finding beneficial occupation for the patients, calculated to promote their recovery. In the better class of the more modern institutions, the kitchens are supplied with every convenience for cooking by steam, gas, and coal.

WATER, BATHS, CLOSETS, &c.

Water is supplied in a variety of ways—by gravitation from long distances, by ordinary wells, by Artesian well, and by pumpings from adjacent rivers. In many parts of Europe the arrangements are defective and the supply insufficient. Most of the Asylums in Northern and Central Europe have no water for closet use, and only a scanty supply on the ground-floor for baths. In most places general bath-rooms are in vogue, where several patients may be bathed at one time.

The sewage is disposed of variously, but is in most cases utilized on the farm or ground of the institution. Where water-closets are used, the sewage is, in the better class of institutions, taken long distances from the building, through earthenware pipes, and used on the farm; but in many of the Asylums in Northern Europe and other parts of the Continent, the old latrines are used, without water, earth, or any deodorizer. The soil passes through earthenware pipes from the top floor to the basement, where it falls into tubs or pans, creating most offensive odours throughout the place. These vessels are emptied twice a week. It was impossible to mistake the position of those closets on the various floors in passing through the institutions—the indication was infallible. Even where the closets themselves were clean, which was not always the case—some being in a disgraceful state—I frequently found patients down with fever, and on two occasions I was ill for some days from the dreadful smells pervading the whole institution.

The

The most approved style of closets are those in separate towers, standing out from the main building, connected therewith by short covered ways of iron and glass. The towers contain, as well as the closets, bath-rooms and lavatories. The closets are flushed by automatic or tumble-over tanks in the roof.

VENTILATION, HEAT, LIGHT.

Gas, petroleum, or kerosene is generally used in Europe and America for illuminating purposes. The gas is sometimes manufactured on the premises, sometimes procured from town mains. In some few institutions gasoline is made. In America most of the Asylums are heated by steam, and ventilation is secured by means of large fans driven by steam-engines. In Europe the Asylums are chiefly heated by stoves and open fire-places, guarded where deemed necessary. The modes of ventilation differ very much, and include all known forms, natural and artificial.

VISITATION AND INSPECTION.

Generally speaking the official visitation of Asylums is open to three objections—(1) the visits are not frequent enough, (2) they are made at stated times, and (3) the inspection is not sufficiently minute. In regard to the second of these objections—it is of the greatest importance that the official visits should be without notice or warning of any kind. The object of the inspection is to ascertain the normal condition of the Asylum; but it is too often the case that the inspection is merely the occasion of a special display, which must of necessity be misleading and delusive if it is taken as representing the everyday condition of the institution.

In my opinion, non-official visitation and inspection are at least equally important with the official. Asylums should be more freely open to inspection by the medical profession and the public of all classes. They should, at all reasonable times, be accessible to the friends of the patients and the representatives of the Press. The hall-porter should, in all cases, keep a register of persons visiting the patients, stating whether they had been seen or not, and, if not, giving the reason or reasons why. The visitation or outside supervision in all parts of the world is not adequate to the necessity which exists for it. The Law in most countries enforces the residence of the insane within the walls of Asylums, for the protection of the general public, and that being so, the Law should also take care to surround the person it thus confines with every possible guarantee for that fair and proper treatment which his helpless condition and his incapacity for self-protection require. But it is too often the case that the patient has little or no protection on taking up his residence amongst strangers; and, in many instances, he is soon abandoned by his nearest friends, often because of the cost and difficulty of access to the Asylum, or from the belief and assurance that there is no hope of recovery. Under those circumstances it is no wonder that patients settle down into a state of chronic insanity. The mind works on itself for months, hoping for the freedom which never comes, and as the hope is intensified by the disease itself it is absolutely necessary that insane people should have some one to talk to, if only to give them opportunities of relieving their minds by setting forth their imaginary wrongs. Therefore, outside visitation should be more general and frequent than it is.

A register should be kept in each ward, under the control of the attendant in charge, and every officer passing through the ward, for any purpose whatever, should be required to enter his name in the book, and be free to make any remark he pleased. This would constitute a positive record of the visitation of each ward. It often appears that, from the Superintendent and other high officials being overworked, long intervals elapse without the wards being visited by other than the attendants. In some instances the medical visitation and treatment of the patients is almost absolutely confined to the assistant medical officers, the Superintendent merely coming in contact with his patients occasionally, and only learning of their condition by reports and representations at second hand.

STAFF AND ATTENDANTS.

In many Asylums the staff would appear very large, and in others not sufficient. In one Asylum containing several hundred patients I found the Superintendent struggling to conduct the institution as best he could, without any assistance other than attendants.

As a rule, there should be about one attendant for every ten patients, but sometimes there is only one to fifteen or thirty, or even a much larger number.

In some institutions the patients are shut in their rooms, and left entirely to themselves and to their own resources, on account of the insufficiency of attendants. I have seen a room crowded with patients, with nothing to occupy them, locked in securely by an iron wire gate, to enable the attendants at their pleasure to inspect them from the outside from time to time, and then leave them in that hopeless and unprotected condition. It is an obvious and long recognized maxim of lunacy treatment that insufficiency of attendants means multiplicity of restraints.

In many Asylums the Superintendents carry out the idea of paying well, and surrounding themselves with responsible people of education, refinement and feeling, who understand their great responsibility, and carefully perform the duties of their position. In other cases I have seen attendants whose general appearance would indicate that they were from the lowest walks of life.

In all cases the salaries of Medical Superintendents should be equalized. In many instances the larger salary is dependent on an increased number of patients, though it involves less work. The Superintendent of a larger institution will have three or four assistant medical officers, and will have double salary, making it his direct interest to amass large numbers of patients in one building, while leaving the greater part of the work work to his assistants. Candid Superintendents have personally told me—in relation to what they considered the limit of patients for individual care and treatment—that if the salary were the same for a large as for a small number, they would advocate a limit of 300, but as it is at present, their higher remuneration is dependent on a larger number. But though this congregation of large numbers is notoriously inimical to patients, the direct personal interest of the Superintendents tends to perpetuate and extend the evil of large Asylums.

LAY SUPERINTENDENTS.

It will be seen from my Reports that, in several Asylums, a steward or lay superintendent is employed, who is solely accountable to the Board of Directors for all monetary transactions, who sees to the supply of the provisions, seeks a market for the goods produced by the patients, &c., &c. The medical officer is thus relieved of all but his medical duties. This has been found to work well and satisfactorily, and such Asylums invariably give evidence of superior management. This is the case at the Asylum of Morristown, Pennsylvania (see Reports), where there is a male and female medical superintendent, each taking charge of the patients on their respective sides of the establishment, the lay manager having full charge of all other duties. This plan has proved most successful, as is shown by the condition of the Asylum. The lay superintendent is under the general control of the Medical Superintendent or Director.

CAPACITY.—MAXIMUM NUMBER OF PATIENTS.

As a rule, all Asylums contain more patients than they were originally designed for—sometimes hundreds beyond their official capacity. I have found as many as 500 in excess, so that the imputed capacity of an institution is no criterion of the actual number of patients in residence. Beds are made up on the floors of the corridors, and two patients in one bed is not an infrequent incident, and two beds in single rooms also. The natural results are occasional homicides, impossibility of classification, disarrangement of the management, the creation of insanitary conditions, increased harshness and severity towards the patients, and the promotion of chronic insanity, whereby the public charges are increased and the confinement of the patients prolonged.

It appears, from the written opinions furnished to me by the various Superintendents (see Reports), that about 300 is the maximum number of patients which should be contained in one Asylum for individual care and treatment by the Superintendent, and that a less number would give still better results and secure a higher percentage of recoveries. This consensus of opinion is borne out by the fact that in all cases the percentage of recoveries will, on reference to the Tables (see Reports), be found much higher where there are greater facilities for individual treatment and observation by the Superintendent. This is recognized by many Governments, in the encouragement given to the establishment of small, but well organized and handsomely fitted, private Asylums throughout America and Europe. Such Asylums are for the most part under strict inspection, and are obliged to be licensed. The licenses are, in all cases, except perhaps England and New South Wales, granted for life, and are irrevocable unless for cause shown.

The Select Committee of the English House of Commons which, in 1806, inquired into the state of pauper lunatics, recommended that no Asylums should be erected to contain more than 300 patients. In 1844, the Commissioners in Lunacy, in a special Report to the Lord Chancellor, strongly insisted upon the advantages of Asylums for small numbers of patients. Lord Ashley, now Earl Shaftesbury, in supporting the Commissioners' Report, maintained that no Asylum for curable lunatics should contain more than 250 patients, if, indeed, 200 were not the full number that could be managed in one Asylum with best advantage to the general public and best results to the patients. In the same speech Lord Ashley quoted Dr. Connolly's statement, that 100 patients was the maximum number for one Asylum, where the best attainable results of individual care and treatment were sought.

CLASSIFICATION.

Classification in the English Asylums has almost ceased, inasmuch as refractory wards are scarcely now to be found, new admissions of acute insanity being, at the suggestion of the Commissioners in Lunacy, absorbed in the general wards of the institutions. In other Asylums the patients are classified both in accordance with their mental condition, previous history, and the fees (where any) which are paid by their friends. In the latter case the classification has relation to the accommodation, food, &c., of the patients. In Northern and Central Europe, fees on various scales are common. In the case of patients having no resources, their communes or parishes have to pay a small fee for them, regulated on a pauper scale. The classification is generally left to the Superintendent.

When criminal patients are mixed with non-criminal patients, as I have often found to be the case in overcrowded institutions and others, the mental distress to the non-criminal patients, who are able to realize the position, and to their friends, must be terrible indeed.

The general opinion expressed to me by the Superintendents is, that there is urgent necessity for the separate accommodation of the criminal insane. The extra care and restrictions necessary for the safe keeping of the criminals adds largely to the responsibility and anxiety of the Superintendent and his staff, and at the same time deprives the other patients of that degree of freedom which they might otherwise be allowed to enjoy. On the one hand, the Superintendent has to take upon himself the incongruous duties of a prison warder or gaoler, and on the other hand, the non-criminal patients under his charge have to participate in the treatment to which their criminal fellow-patients are necessarily subjected. In short, the Asylums become less hospitals for the insane than prisons for the security of dangerous criminals. At the present moment the English Lunacy Commissioners, missioners, ignoring or unconscious of these objections, are recommending the introduction of criminal patients among the patients in the general wards of County Asylums. In Asylums where this mixture takes place, the patients of both classes have less opportunity of recovery. In ordinary Asylums the chief object is or should be the medical treatment of the patients; in Asylums where criminal patients are mixed with others, the primary object must necessarily be safe-keeping. There is thus a conflict of principles and purposes which cannot but be mischievous, and the only remedy is to keep the two classes of patients apart in distinct and separate establishments.

The evil is magnified by the also new notion of lessening as much as possible the number of single rooms. These have almost disappeared in the more recent Asylums, with the consequent result of congregating all sorts of patients—epileptic, suicidal, &c.—in large dormitories containing from fifty to eighty beds. At the end of these dormitories there are from three to six single rooms for excited patients. The upper panels of the doors are of open lath work, and there are large apertures in the walls over the doors opening into the main room. These arrangements are in accordance with the directions of the Commissioners in Lunacy, but it is obvious that under such conditions a single troublesome patient can disturb the quietude and destroy the repose so much needed by the others.

PER CAPITA COST.

The per capita cost will be found to vary greatly in different countries; and of course the internal arrangements, furniture, &c., will also vary where the means at the disposal of the Superintendent are small, or, as in many places, insufficient.

This point must be kept in view in judging between the different institutions; and the merits of the management can only be justly appreciated by carefully reading and comparing a summary of the information supplied in the subjoined Reports.

I have not always found that the largest expenditure is productive of the best results. The superior management of one institution, working on moderate means, often counterbalances the advantages which another institution possesses in the matter of a large income. Nor does it follow as a matter of fact that large Asylums can be conducted at a less cost per head than small ones, even in the case of chronic patients. In regard to the class of insane so designated, the one single argument in favour of their collective detention in a separate institution is that the per capita cost for their maintenance can be rendered lower than would otherwise be possible. But I find on examination that this argument, poor as it is at best, is not borne out in practice. For instance, the per capita cost at Willard Asylum in the State of New York, which is exclusively for chronic insane, is given in the official Report at 3 dollars per week, but a reference to the Reports of the Ward's Island Asylum (a general Asylum) in the same State, will show that the per capita cost in that institution is only 2 dollars 25 cents per week. I have spoken in deservedly high terms of the superior management and treatment in the latter institution. The inference is obvious, and the same inference is derivable from the example of other Asylums in various parts of the world.

The Chronic Asylums at Leavesden and Caterham, both London Metropolitan District Asylums, having upwards of 4,000 chronic lunatics, are maintained at a per capita cost of 7s. per week. The County and Borough Asylums in England average about 10s. per head per week. The difference lies in the fact that fewer attendants are employed in the Chronic Asylums, and the direct supervision is consequently less.

Variations in the per capita cost also arise from the liberality or otherwise of those controlling the public purse. But it should be borne in mind, as an important fact for the public, that in no case does per capita cost include the interest on the outlay of capital in buildings, &c. The per capita cost only covers the current expenses, viz., salaries, clothes, and food.

In some of the States of America the whole expenditure is at the public cost, and rich and poor alike can claim the benefit of the hospital. In most cases the institution is bountifully provided and elegantly furnished, but this is too often at the cost of the great bulk of the insane unprovided for outside. The available funds being absorbed in palatial structures, needlessly luxuriant furniture, &c., for the benefit of the few, nothing is left for the provision and proper accommodation of the many. Legislatures finding that they have already voted large sums of money for the insane, are chary of granting more (see Report of State Asylum at Buffalo), and, consequently, the bulk of the insane are provided for in a most wretched manner in county workhouses. The practice in England is misleading to the ratepayers, inasmuch as the annual Reports of the Asylum only show the per capita cost as defrayed by the Union fund, the total cost of the buildings and furniture, with landlords' repairs, being drawn from the County fund and not shown. But if these were charged to the annual cost, the average per capita would, in many cases, be raised by more than one-third. This remark also applies to New South Wales.

ADMISSIONS.

The modes of admission vary greatly, and often in the same country, each City and County, or Province, having its own regulations in this respect. In some instances one medical certificate is all that is required; in others, two; in others, again, none, the order of the Probate Judge being sufficient to secure admission. In some places a note to the police is all that is required; in others, a trial by Jury on medical evidence is necessary. In Ireland no grounds are given in the certificates for assuming the insanity of the individual. In short, there is almost an endless variety in the modes of admission.

It is obviously desirable that while, on the one hand, facilities should be afforded for the ready admission of patients into Asylums, great care should be taken, on the other, that those facilities are not abused by designing persons, and that the liberty of the subject subject is not improperly invaded. Whatever other precautions are taken—as trial before a Judge, &c.—there ought to be a better regulation of the system commonly followed of having two medical certificates of insanity. Recent disclosures have painfully shown that this duality of certificates is no guarantee that two independent medical opinions are formed as to the condition of the supposed lunatic, and that further securities are required against the contingency of one of the certifying doctors being in any way unduly influenced by the other. This might be prevented by a provision not only that each medical man should examine the supposed lunatic separately, and report independently, but that it should be esteemed a misdemeanour to interchange views as to the condition of the subject, or communicate to one another the contents of their respective certificates, before reporting the results of their examination, that is, pending the inquiry into the condition of the supposed lunatic.

The suggestion of permitting medical certificates of sanity to be obtained, with a view to neutralizing the certificates of insanity, is one which is deserving of some consideration. It would undoubtedly be an additional guarantee against the improper detention and incarceration of an alleged lunatic, though it might involve delays and inconveniences not easy to prevent. Still there is obvious danger in the fact that (as in England) it is possible to consign a person to a Lunatic Asylum if two out of the 20,000 registered medical men of that country can be found to certify to insanity, even though any number of other medical men may have refused to certify, or could be found to do so.

Under the heading of "Lunacy Districts" I have suggested that Medical Certificates of insanity should not operate as orders for incarceration, but be merely taken as opinions upon which the District Lunacy Commissioner would have to act according to his judgment and on his own responsibility.

DISCHARGES.

As to discharges, it is in some cases ordered by the Board (where one exists) on the advice of the Superintendent, in others the Probate Judge issues the order, and in others the Superintendent is vested with the power of discharging a patient he considers cured. In England there are three modes of discharge:—(1.) On the application of the person incarcerating the patient. (2.) By the Commissioners in Lunacy, with or without the consent of the incarcerating person: and (3.) by a writ of de lunatico inquirendo. It might be the interest of the person causing the incarceration to obstruct the discharge. It is an accepted view that the Superintendent is the best authority as to the fitness of the patient to be set at large, but this should not be a barrier to the removal of the patient at the instance of his friends if necessary, irrespective of the wish of the party incarcerating. The Superintendent should be vested with full power to discharge a patient on probation, in accordance with his judgment, and not, as the rule is in many places, with the concurrence of the incarcerating person or some Government official who may interpose needless difficulties. The power of discharging or refusing to discharge a patient once consigned to an Asylum should not in any degree be shared by the person causing the incarceration.

RECOVERIES.

It is customary in most countries to calculate the returns as to patients cured on the percentage of admissions during the year. This is very misleading for the general public, and unsatisfactory for those who desire reliable statistical information. People are apt to suppose that "the percentage of discharges on admissions" relates only to the patients admitted during the year, whereas it in fact represents all the discharges that have taken place from the Asylum in the course of the twelve months. Of course the contrast of the number discharged in the year with the number admitted in the same time must invariably show a much higher percentage than a contrast between the discharged and the number treated—that is, the admissions, plus the number already in the Asylum. On this point the Irish Lunacy Commissioners aptly observe, in their Report for the year ending January 1st, 1884, that "with respect to the relative bearing of cures (1,079) to admissions, it would stand at about 40 per cent., but to the daily average under treatment—a more legitimate calculation—fully 11 per cent."

Eminent writers in the English Journal of Mental Science have repeatedly stated that insanity is as curable a disease as others. Dr. Savage, in his Report on the Bethlehem Hospital for the year ending January 1st, 1884, incidentally says: "I should be sorry to reject cases in which the symptoms may be alleviated although cure is hopeless. General paralysis of the insane must still be looked upon as the one incurable and fatal form of insanity." It is to be borne in mind that the Bethlehem Hospital is one which enjoys peculiar advantages; the Superintendent having the power to reject epileptics, paralytics, and all cases presumably incurable within twelve months. But notwithstanding these advantages, the returns of the Hospital for the year 1883 give only 50·3 per cent. of recoveries on admissions, clearly showing one of two things—(1) either that insanity is not the curable disease the English specialists allege it to be, or (2) that the treatment does not yield the results we are encouraged to expect.

If we turn to the Annual Reports of the Commissioners of Lunacy for England and Wales, we find that the recoveries on admissions in 1859 (the first year for which the Commissioners give the percentage of recoveries) were 35·12 per cent., and in 1883 they were 38·50 per cent. There is thus an advantage of only 3·38 per cent. in favour of the latter year; and such a slight advantage, after the lapse of a quarter of a century, and in view of the boasted superior knowledge and medical skill of the present day, is very remarkable and suggestive. The Commissioners' averages for periods of ten years do not yield more satisfactory results. Thus, the average recoveries on admissions for the ten years ending 1883 were 39.53 per cent. per annum, as compared with 39.38 for the ten years ending 1882, and 39.44 for the ten years ending 1881. That is to say, the average annual recoveries on admissions for the ten years ending 1883 were .15 per cent. better than those for 1882, and only .9 per cent. better than those for 1881. Comment may be passed over.

The observation may here be made that a large proportion of the recoverable patients admitted into English Asylums, especially in and around London, are inebriates, who, as a rule, do not remain inmates for any length of time. These greatly tend to swell the percentage of recoveries. The chief physical cause of insanity is given in the Commissioners' Reports as "intemperance in drink."

It may of course be said that the fluctuations in the admissions have an uncertain effect on the percentages of recoveries. That is so, no doubt, and that is why I complain of the accepted mode of showing recoveries as a percentage on admissions. A contrast of the recoveries with the absolute numbers under treatment would be far more reliable and instructive, but obviously such a contrast would very materially reduce the percentage of recoveries above given.

DEATHS.

In some instances notice of death may, or may not, be sent to the friends, and the Superintendent is under no legal obligation to do so, but the matter is left to his courtesy. In others, it is requisite that notice be sent to the Government; and again, in other cases, the friends have notice of the death through public advertisement in the newspaper press. Humanity and good policy alike dictate that, in every instance, some form of public notice of a death should be given, and private notice also if the deceased has friends who can be communicated with.

HISTORY OF PATIENTS.

In many institutions in America and Europe (Great Britain is an exception) the Law does not require a history of the patient to be kept from the time of admission. In most places it is left to the option of the Superintendent, who make notes from time to time as he may deem necessary. In many cases, no history is kept during the interval between the admission and discharge or death.

It is certainly necessary to the proper treatment of patients that a record of the changes in their condition should be kept, but this can only be done where the strength of the medical staff is such as to permit of individual observation and treatment.

MORTUARIES AND POST-MORTEM ROOMS.

Mortuaries and post-mortem rooms are found in very few Asylums, and only exist in some of the larger ones, where the number of deaths necessitate special accommodation. In England, the Commissioners require that there should be a mortuary for each sex in the Asylums under their control.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.

In very few Asylums have I found the means supplied or even the inclination evinced to make microscopical and pathological research, or any other attempt towards establishing facts for future guidance in the treatment of diseases of the brain and nervous system. The Superintendent is, in most cases, too much overburdened with the details of management, the reception of visitors, replying to correspondence, preparing returns and reports, and other mere clerical duties, to have time or inclination for scientific studies, or even the proper medical care of the patients. This suggests the question whether it would not be desirable that the medical officers should be confined strictly to their medical duties, so as to enable them to devote more time to pathological and microscopic studies in connection with insanity—branches very greatly neglected in English Asylums. In Great Britain, there is only one institution which has a special pathologist, and for the rest there is absolutely no work going on for the scientific study and treatment of insanity. It is, therefore, not surprising that most of the advances made of late years in the treatment of the insane have originated with members of the profession not devoted to Asylum work.

In the American Asylums, and also in many parts of Europe, the proportion of medical assistants to patients is very much higher than in British Asylums, and every assistant is expected to follow up some line of pathological or other research. And surely this is the proper course, if insanity is to be treated as a disease, and Asylums are regarded as hospitals, and not merely as places of detention or prisons.

A sufficient staff, and a proper division and relegation of the duties of the establishment, can alone render scientific research possible, or permit of proper medical attention being given to each patient.

DIETARY SCALE.

A fixed dietary scale is not usually found, the general rule being that the Superintendent, with or without the Board of Managers, arranges the diet from day to day, making as many changes in regard to the quantity or quality of the food as may seem desirable. In this matter the Superintendent cannot be left too free.

DIVINE SERVICE.

Divine service is held in most Asylums. In some a separate chapel is provided for Protestants and Catholics; in others the amusement room is used for the purpose. In some, one or more Chaplains are engaged; in others, the Superintendent or his assistant reads the service. In others, again, divine service is thought unnecessary, and even injurious to the patients. Some Asylums have large detached places of worship in the grounds, handsomely appointed.

OCCUPATION AND AMUSEMENT.

As a rule, in the large Asylums all clothing for the male and female patients are made and repaired, including beds, shoes, slippers, &c. But this is not as universal as it should be, for in many of the Asylums the patients are found sitting or lying about without occupation or employment, and even their clothes are supplied them by contract. At Ward's Island Asylum, New York, although the patients are all men, all the laundry work is done by them, together with other household duties of the establishment, only a very few women being employed in the hospital, for special reasons. Here, also, several other occupations are provided, as cane-work for furniture, &c. All the printing required for the various Institutions under the Board of Charity and Correction for the State of New York is done by the patients. In this Asylum, as in many other institutions too numerous to mention, employment is provided to the fullest extent, and the patients so employed number from 60 to 90 per cent. of the whole.

Some Superintendents have expressed their opinion that no class of insane patients should be exempt from work of some kind, provided according to the judgment of the Superintendent as to the kind of occupation best suited to the mental and physical condition of the patient. This is, no doubt, a sensible view, and of importance to all concerned.

In Great Britain the forms or varieties of occupation for lunatics are fewer than in other countries, and less remunerative than they should and could be. This, I was given to understand, was owing largely to some out-of-door objection to the profitable employment of such persons, and Asylums were therefore prevented from being self-supporting, or nearly so. The percentage of lunatics furnished with employment in the Asylums of Great Britain is very much less than in most other countries. The provisions for the amusement of the patients otherwise than by work are also inferior both in quantity and quality.

In America, and on the continent of Europe, there are many Asylums which derive a large revenue from the proceeds of the work of the patients. The money obtained from the sale of the articles made by them is not only often sufficient to defray the expenses of furnishing, fitting, decorating, &c., the Asylum, but supplies as well a large surplus for other purposes. For instance, the City Asylum at Vienna has a fund of this kind, amounting to 5,000 florins. All kinds of papier mâché ware, terra-cotta manufactures, and a vast variety of useful and artistic goods, are manufactured on the premises, and disposed of to the dealers and shopkeepers and general public, for the benefit of the institution. Several gold medals have been awarded to this institution, by various International Exhibitions, for work exhibited. I have obtained numerous specimens of such work.

In Asylums of this description it is not thought necessary to confine the capable female patients to the work of the laundry or kitchen, but they are given any employment which may be suitable to their mental and bodily powers. In some institutions they are employed in ornamental needlework, ornamental basket-work, in making terra-cotta ware, fret-work picture-frames, brackets, &c., for sale and for the use or decoration of the institution. In one Asylum as many as one hundred dozen scrubbing-brushes are manufactured weekly. (See Reports.) In many Asylums skilled mechanics—blacksmiths, locksmiths, carpenters, &c.—are employed to instruct the patients and supervise their work; and, in some, wood-carvers, engravers, painters, and other artists are advantageously employed for a like purpose. Professors and teachers are employed to forward and complete not only the artistic but also the scholastic education of the younger patients progressing towards recovery, so that as little time as possible may be lost in studying for the Universities. In such Asylums progressive educational classes are conducted.

The Richmond Asylum at Dublin furnishes a good example of what can be done in the direction of Asylum teaching. Scholastic classes, under the National Board of Education, exist in the establishment, and are conducted by trained teachers of the Board. All the male and female patients attend school each day, and periodical examinations by the Board's Inspectors take place. Some of the female patients are taught artificial flower-making, and often on being discharged are able to earn their own living at this work. This Asylum is remarkable for its good order and the quietude of the patients—results not unreasonably claimed as due to the mental and physical employment of the inmates. Dr. Lalor, the Superintendent, states frankly that no great educational proficiency is to be expected from the teaching, but the occupation thus afforded for the patients is found most beneficial to their mental condition.

The moral, mental, and physical advantages to the patients of industrial occupation are undoubted and important, as is well shown by the fact that where there is most employment there is less restraint and less need for it. A patient, from a good social class, once told me that occupation should be a leading feature in the management of every Asylum, and should be chosen so as to suit the inclinations as well as the physical condition of the patient. "When we are engaged," he said, "we are more free from delusions and regrets, and feel more cheerful and hopeful; but when we spend our time walking up and down the wards and sauntering idly about we brood over our misfortunes, despair of ever getting home again, and are troubled with our delusions." There are few patients who cannot be provided with something to do, and who will readily work if the right thing is found for them, and work of one description or another can always be created in an Asylum. I have seen feeble paralytic patients interested and occupied in quietly picking lint, and I have seen patients of the most demented classes unweaving the threads of cast-off clothing, balling them up, and preparing them for the hand-loom weavers (also patients), to be made into carpets for the institution.

In Asylums where the employment of the patients is made a matter of the first consideration, tradesmen are usually secured as attendants, and their duty is to encourage and instruct the patients, and not merely to act as watchers.

I may here remark that in most Asylums the Superintendent has absolute power of engagement and discharge over the attendants. This is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of proper discipline and order amongst the attendants, and for the welfare of the patients. In some countries, from political and party causes, the Superintendent is injudiciously restrained in his powers of dealing with attendants. I have known cases where, from such causes, a suspended attendant has been reinstated in his office in spite of the objections of the Superintendent, and of the grave charges recorded against the attendant. I have found in Asylums in some parts of America the whole staff, from the Superintendent down to the lowest employé, suddenly changed on a change in the States' government, the new staff being individually and totally ignorant of the organization and management of Lunatic Asylums and the treatment of the insane. For an instance of this, see my report on the dreadful condition of things I found on the occasion of my visit to the Lunatic Asylum at Austin, Texas, United States of America. In this, as in other cases which came under my notice, the outgoing staff seemed to have been at special pains to leave the institution in the worst possible condition for their successors.

RESTRAINTS.

The forms of mechanical restraints used in Asylums are largely dependent upon the taste and ingenuity of the Superintendent, and in some instances are as varied as they are cruel. The fact that in numbers of institutions absolutely no restraint is used, and even mere seclusion rarely resorted to, proves conclusively that restraint is unnecessary under proper conditions—that is where the individual care, comfort, and treatment of the patients are properly attended to, and where the insane are regarded not only as sick people, but as people having equal legal and moral rights with their more fortunate fellow-subjects outside. In many of the places I visited there were no bars of any kind to the windows, and the very appearance of restraint was carefully removed or concealed, as far as consistent with the safe and judicious keeping of the patients. Often there is not even a fence round the estate or yard. To some nervous persons the locking of the bed-room door at night is irritating and distressing, and, accordingly, in the better managed Asylums, one of two ways is adopted to avoid this. The one is to leave the bed-room doors unlocked, and to have a night attendant in each corridor; the other (where there are associated bed-rooms), to have an attendant occupying the same room with the patients, acting at once as companion and nurse, and administering the consolation and solace so often looked for by the afflicted, and so beneficial to them. In this way the attendant becomes a confident and friend, and—if a person of humane feelings and firmness of character—gains a control over the patient far more durable and beneficial than can be obtained from the numerous methods of restraint in use.

Cages, iron chains, handcuffs, hobbles, straps, crib beds, and fixed chairs are common modes of restraint for patients, who, being afforded no means of occupation, or diversion for mind or body, naturally become noisy and troublesome. The bath, either shower or immersion, is a favourite means of tranquillizing excited patients. In the cupboard shower-bath the patient is subjected to a continuous downpour of water, and this, in some cases, as a punishment at the option of the attendants, without the sanction of a medical officer. In the covered hot bath, the head alone protruding, the patient is confined, unable to move, from one to twelve hours at a time, and in many instances unattended, at a temperature of 34 degrees of Centigrade, often with cold water dripping on the head.

This, I have been gravely but rather needlessly informed, was not adopted as medical means of improving the patient, but simply to quiet and subdue him for the time being.

In one institution I saw 215 women in various modes of restraint—camisoles, wristlets, straps, &c.—secured upright to racks round the day-rooms. In another there were forty-three women in box beds, ironed hand and foot, and extended in spread-eagle fashion, at 3 in the afternoon. (See Reports for many other instances of cruel and wholesale restraints.)

All such brutal practices should be discountenanced, and, if necessary, stamped out by law. Pleasant surroundings, occupation, and adequate individual attention and treatment, are effective substitutes for restraint.

I am not sure that officialism in England is not going back rather than forward in this matter. I have found windows protected by iron bars, and glass-panelled doors covered with strong iron wire, and I have been told that this was done at the instance of the Commissioners. Surely these are retrograde stages, and they contrast very unfavourably with the advancements going on in other countries, where (as I have already mentioned) $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch clear glass plates are taking the place of iron bars and wire, and unlocked doors are the rule rather than the exception.

COMPLAINTS OF PATIENTS.

There can be no valid objection to affording every facility to patients to relieve their minds by the exercise of the right of free complaint; on the contrary, the existence of such a right suggests many advantages. As a means to this end, writing materials should be accessible to the patients at least once a week, and locked-up letter-boxes, the key of which should be in the possession of the Commissioner of the district, should be freely accessible to the patients without official interference of any kind. It should be the duty of the Commissioner to read and forward all letters of the patients so deposited by them, or to send them to the Minister of the Lunacy Department, with an endorsement of the reasons for not forwarding them as addressed.

From the many occupations of Superintendents, too, the patient is often thrust aside when his heart is breaking for some one to sympathize with him and listen patiently to to his wrongs, real or imaginary, or give him a kindly hearing when, perhaps, he has something to communicate which he considers of importance. A cold indifference or a rude rebuff from a possibly good-hearted but overworked Superintendent causes the patient to think that there is no hope for him in this world, and his mental depression is consequently deepened and intensified. I have met with frequent instances of this. On the other hand, I have seen Superintendents who always had a kind and sympathetic word for patients addressing them in passing, and notwithstanding their pressing duties could always find time for the interchange of a few cheering remarks.

TREATMENT.

With reference to the curative treatment of the insane, it varies so widely in different Asylums that it is difficult to summarize it. In the better managed institutions it consists in supplying nourishing food, tonics, exercise, occupation, &c.; but in a large number of Asylums the medical treatment is nominal, or nil, the patients in this matter being left to the attendants, who are often ignorant and indifferent. It will be seen that in many of my Reports the Superintendents state that they chiefly depend on moral and hygienic treatment. The more modern idea is to resort to purely hospital or infirmary treatment, commencing, on the admission of the patient, with placing him at once in bed as a sick person, instead of turning him loose amongst the other patients of the establishment. His condition as a new comer should be specially borne in mind, and the soothing influence of the prone position, a comfortable bed and pleasant surroundings, tend to rapidly allaying the excitement and to producing quietude. (See Reports.)

The practice of permitting patients to take exercise in the grounds and beyond, without constant or ostentatious supervision, has been found beneficial, and is pretty general in many parts of Europe and America, and is extensively adopted in the Scotch Asylums. The beneficial results from this practice depend upon the close observation of each patient, so that a tolerably reliable opinion may be formed as to the amount of liberty which may be conceded to each individual. Where the Superintendents and other responsible officials have acquired a full insight into the character and mental condition of the patients, favourable and unfavourable changes can be foreseen and provided for.

Moral treatment is considered even more important than medical treatment, as being more universally applicable, and more likely to be successful in any given number of cases. It is a great and reprehensible mistake to deem it necessary to commence an acquaintance with a patient by a display of physical strength. Esteem is a more powerful and more beneficial agent of control than fear, and the best form of restraint is self-restraint. Gentleness should take the place of violence, and every effort should be made to divert and improve the "mind diseased," by conversation, amusement, cheerful surroundings, bodily exercise, &c. In short, as far as possible, patients should be treated as rational and responsible beings, and made to feel that they are being so treated. In this way their confidence is gained, and the enfeebled powers of their mind exercised and invigorated. There is no more well-founded observation in lunacy management than that the increase or decrease of physical restraint is dependent on the extent to which judicious moral treatment is carried out.

BOARDING-OUT.

The experiment of boarding-out single pauper patients is one which has only been tried in Scotland and in Belgium—on a small and circumscribed scale in the former country, and in a very much larger way at Ghent in the latter, where a veritable lunatic colony has long been established. The boarding-out system, as a system, presents many advantages, but its application requires great care and circumspection. So far as it has been adopted in Scotland, it has given satisfaction to the lunacy authorities, and seems to be entirely successful.

In speaking of this class of patients, Deputy Commissioner Fraser (in the Report of the Commissions in Lunacy for Scotland for the year ending January 1st, 1884) says:— "The great majority of them lead a healthy and happy life, experience much kindness from their guardians and from the general community, and enjoy the freedom which domestic care affords. I am of opinion that, both with regard to the harmless class, and the limited number of somewhat refractory patients, who, under exceptional guardianship are resident in private dwellings, all the requirements of humanity are, to say the least, fully met. They are sufficiently clad, sufficiently fed, and satisfactorily housed and guarded." The number of private lunatics who were provided for in Scotland in private dwellings, with the sanction of the Board, on the 1st January, 1884, was 128, and the number of pauper lunatics so provided for, 1,811.

I am tempted to introduce here some very excellent remarks of Dr. Fraser, the Deputy Commissioner mentioned above, in favour of the boarding-out system, when thoughtfully and judiciously applied. He says:—

No one I think now holds, or can hold, that all lunatics should be provided for in Asylums. A very different view indeed is daily gaining ground. Great aggregations of the insane in institutions are now almost universally condemned. In making this statement, I have chiefly in view those great aggregations which are brought about by the accumulation of incurable patients. These are now very generally accepted as undesirable, both in the interests of the insane and of the general community, and this opinion has led to a wider experience and a more intimate knowledge of the extent to which a suitable provision can be made for the insane out of establishments, that is in private dwellings. The experience thus acquired appears to me to be leading to something beyond a mere condemnation of great accumulation of chronic patients in Asylums. It shows, for instance, that, in so far at least as concerns the safety of the public, a very considerable number of persons labouring under the acquired forms of insanity do not require to be cared for in Asylums. Whether the condition of many or of any of these persons would have been prevented from becoming incurable, by their having been subjected to Asylum care in the early stages of their malady, we have no facts to show; but I think it would probably be a wise course to recommend treatment in an Asylum, in the hope thereby of effecting a cure, in the case of most persons recently attacked by insanity, if those persons do do not belong to the affluent class of society. At the same time, it seems to me of importance to point out that, in the discharge of my duties as a Deputy Commissioner, it has come to my knowledge that many persons belonging to the middle and even to the lower classes of society have recovered from attacks of insanity without having been subjected to Asylum treatment, that is, they have recovered under private care judiciously directed by medical men who are not specialists; and there must be a large number of cases of acute insanity in which recovery takes place under the care of ordinary medical practitioners, and which never come to the knowledge of any one connected with official work. The number of such cases appears to me to be greater than has been generally supposed, and, as I have indicated, I think there is a growing recognition of the success which often attends the treatment of active forms of insanity at home among the poor as well as among the rich. It is possible that this may be partly due to the fact that the nature and treatment of insanity is now a branch of medical education, and if so, we may expect further development of what I am now directing attention to, and also a fuller knowledge of certain states of insanity which seldom come under observation in Asylums.

The Scotch Commissioners point out that the difficulties in the way of extending the boarding-out system are often insurmountable. Persons considered suitable to take charge of the patients are not always easy to find, and often when found the modest rate of remuneration available is not sufficient to induce them to undertake the duty.

At Gheel there is little room for choice, and scarcely anything which can be called by the name of a selection of persons suitable to take charge of the patients; and, while the rate of remuneration is wretchedly small, the misery of the people is such that they are glad to accept the allowances offered.

I paid a special visit and made a stay of some time at Gheel, in the winter of 1883. It is a Commune some 26 miles south-east of Antwerp, and its well authenticated history as a lunatic colony extends back for the surprising period of thirteen hundred years, its origin being due to the reputed cures effected by proximity to the remains of an Irish female saint, St. Dymphna. The colony has undergone many changes and been subjected to many laws and regulations, but enough of its primitive condition survives to constitute a very striking and interesting spectacle, though one eminently unsatisfactory to any one interested in the proper care and treatment of the insane.

The Commune of Gheel has a population of over 10,000 souls, of whom nearly 2,000 are lunatics. The population of the town of Gheel is 6,000, the rest of the inhabitants of the Commune being scattered amongst the several villages and hamlets of the territory. The whole region is low and swampy, and perfectly flat. Nothing in the nature of a hill breaks the monotony of the landscape, and even the smallest undulation of ground is wanting. The farms, so to denominate them, are of the most limited dimensions, and for the most part barely suffice to supply the modest wants of the cottagers. There is no commerce or industry of any kind, and the town is as dull and depressing as any town could possibly be. The leading feature of the place is the drinking shops or small public-houses which are met with in every direction. They are not only accessible to lunatics, but many of the patients are quartered in them.

New patients are sent in the first instance to the hospital, about a mile from the town, and are thence drafted out amongst the cottagers. Four medical assistants from the hospital and six inspecting attendants are supposed to watch over the treatment of the patients so boarded-out. The allowance for the care and maintenance of the patients varies from £4 a year upwards, some few non-pauper patients paying substantial sums for superior accommodation, but the generality not paying more than £8 or £9 a year. Inadequate as these payments would be if devoted exclusively to the benefit of the patient, they in most instances represent the whole or a substantial part of the maintenance of the entire family, many of the people in charge having little or no income beyond.

Most of the cottages are of one story, with one or two bed-rooms in the roof for the use of the patients. They are generally old, out of repair, and, in inclement weather, utterly miserable. The patients quartered in these places looked neglected, cold, dirty, and altogether wretched. Only in one house did I find a book, and there seemed to be no provision whatever for the mental occupation or amusement of the patients. Such of them as were capable of physical exertion were employed in household or out-of-door drudgery of the meanest and most sordid description. The quartering of patients in the small houses and cottages I have described is bad enough, but the evil is still worse in respect to the use of the drinking shops as abodes for them. Here the unfortunates are exposed to the boorish jokes and tricks of the tipsy drinkers, and no doubt in many instances acquire habits of drinking in addition to their other afflictions.

In the Reports will be found a pretty full description of my observations of the boarding-out system, as in force at Gheel, and I will only lengthen my present remarks by a couple of additional extracts from that description:—"I have deemed it needless and inadvisable to repeat over and over again the same disagreeable description of smoke, dirt, want of space, deficiency of light and ventilation, absence of wholesome or even decent accommodation and comfort, and universal wretchedness and sordid misery. Instead of the extra care and attention which the condition of insanity requires, I found vastly less than ordinary humanity should experience. With few exceptions, the patients were treated more like individuals of the brute creation than like human beings having special claims for care and protection in their helplessness and dependency.

"The opinion I formed from my close inspection is unqualified, and altogether adverse to the Gheel system. The personal liberty—which is supposed to be the adequate compensating advantage for other drawbacks to the system—is for the most part delusive and unreal. The numbers of old and infirm patients I saw could not avail themselves of it at all, and it is a mere trite observation to say that they could be incomparably better nursed and treated in the lunatic ward of any well-regulated workhouse, or in any ordinary Lunatic Asylum. Then, the state of the weather in those low marshy regions, during eight months out of the twelve, is such as to make locomotion out of doors impossible or disagreeable, agreeable, and certainly undesirable in the interests of the patients. In almost every instance I found the patients cowering over the miserable fires and stoves in the smoky and comfortless kitchens crowded with the children, the people of the house, and (in the drinking shops) the customers of the place, and encumbered with domestic rubbish and farm implements. There was an utter absence of all means of amusement or occupation for the patients, and their condition of listlessness and desolation made it seem as if they had no part in this life but mere animal existence from day to day.

SINGLE PATIENTS.

Under the English law it is permissible for medical men to take into their private houses for profit a single lunatic patient, and a considerable number of people of a superior social position are disposed of in this way. The treatment, &c., of those patients is under general, and somewhat superficial official supervision, and complaints have been made from time to time of the provisions of the law, in respect of this class of patients, being extensively evaded. It almost necessarily follows that patients of this description must be under less official protection than those in an ordinary Private Asylum, where the official visits are frequent and the inspection very searching; and it is also apparent that they cannot receive an equal degree of individual attention and social consideration. In many cases it is to be suspected that the patient is left to the care of the man-of-all-work or the housemaid, while the ladies of the house treat him with cold indifference, and only tolerate him as a disagreeable means of augmenting an inadequate income. If the medical man has a large practice he cannot give much of his time to the care and treatment of his single patient, who is thus, from any point of view, not only more isolated but in other respects worse off than if he were an inmate of a well-organized Private Asylum.

In respect to patients of this description, the Report of the English Commissioners of Lunacy show that, for the ten years ending January 1st, 1884, the recoveries to admissions of private single patients averaged 16·37 per cent. This is a remarkably low percentage, and contrasts unfavourably with the general lunacy percentages. Thus the mean average recoveries on admissions in licensed Asylums and registered Hospitals for the same period is 38·35 per cent.; in the Naval and Military Hospitals, and the Royal Indian Asylum 53·26 per cent.; in the County and Borough Asylums, 40·5 per cent.

CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES IN ENGLISH REGISTERED AND ROYAL HOSPITALS.

The British Registered and Royal Hospitals are a class of institution which owe their foundation and maintenance to the benevolence of donors, to public subscriptions, and to the large increase in the value of grants of realty made to them in times past. They were originally constituted, whether as ordinary Hospitals or Insane Asylums, for the benefit of the poorer classes and for persons in reduced circumstances, to the exclusion of those whose more ample means left them in no need of throwing themselves on the public charity.

Of late these institutions have been departing from their original purpose, and are now competing with Private Lunatic Asylums for the paying class of patients, and the profits derived from them. One result of this is that the profits so secured are appropriated to the purchase of property and the accumulation of wealth for the institution, but this is attended with consequences of another character which require to be jealously watched. There are but too many instances in England to suggest that such plausible deviations from the original constitution of charitable institutions always end in the complete exclusion of the poorer classes, who were originally intended to be benefited, and the appropriation of the benefits of the Charity to the better-off sections of the people. Already, in respect to the institutions in question, it is becoming evident that the poorer classes of patients are being regarded as merely on sufferance—they are treated with such attention as can be spared from the more favoured class of patients, the accommodation afforded them is very much inferior, and their general position is made subservient to that of the other patients. As a consequence, they are worse off in many instances—especially in the Hospitals which receive County and Borough patients. Gart Naval Hospital, near Glasgow, Scotland, is an exception to the rule; the accommodation it affords is equal to that in the best County and Borough Asylums.

CHIEF CAUSES OF INSANITY.

The chief causes of insanity are recognized by the Superintendents who have communicated with me, to be heredity, intemperance, general dissipation, and overwork with insufficient and improper food. Many other causes are also assigned, and a variety of opinions expressed as to the obscurer causes of insanity, but on reference to the Reports appended hereto the foregoing will be found to be the chief causes. Of the number, heredity and intemperance, or alcoholism, take the leading places, and perhaps it would not be unsafe to assume that in the majority of cases hereditary insanity has its origin in alcoholism.

VARIATION IN THE FORMS OF INSANITY.

It has been found almost universally throughout my investigations, as will be seen from the opinions expressed by the Superintendents, that maniacal insanity is much more rare than in former years, suicidal, melancholic and dementia being the prevalent forms at the present time. In one large institution of over 1,800 patients, I was told at the time of my visit that no case of mania had been admitted for two years. Concurrently with this well recognized change in the forms of insanity, the Reports will show that the almost universal opinion of the Superintendents is that insanity is now more curable than formerly. Nevertheless, it will be seen by what I have already stated herein, and by close observation of the statistics and particulars furnished in my Reports, that although the increased curability of insanity is believed in by most of the Superintendents, that belief is quite erroneous.

erroneous. The percentage of recoveries remains remarkably low, even in Asylums the most favourably circumstanced, and I can see no reason whatever for supposing that insanity is more curable now than formerly.

INCREASE—INSANITY AND GENERAL PARALYSIS.

It will also be seen from the statistics that general paralysis is largely increasing in both sexes, and that it is generally believed that insanity is increasing above the rate of population. This is thought by many of the Superintendents to be possibly erroneous, as the apparent increase may be due to the increased facilities for removing lunatics to Asylums, and the greater inducements to their friends to commit their care to such establishments. Making every allowance on this score, however, it does not sufficiently account for the recorded increase in the number of the insane. The facilities afforded for the treatment of the insane in Asylums is no new or recent thing; and in view of the incessant demand for and the construction of new Asylums, and the enlargement of old ones, it must be accepted as a fact, however reluctantly, that insanity is increasing in a higher ratio than the increase of population.

At one time it was supposed that the sexes were afflicted with general paralysis in the proportion of about one female to six males. I have found in some Asylums as many as twenty females to one man afflicted with general paralysis. I have also remarked that this form of disease is much more common in large populous centres than in rural localities.

LUNACY DISTRICTS.

The formation of Lunacy Districts of a manageable size, each under the supervision of a special District Commissioner, is an almost self-suggestive expedient for the better ministerial or departmental control of lunacy administration in a country like England, where there are nearly eighty thousand lunatics to be provided for, costing for maintenance only (allowing 10s. per head per week) about two millions sterling per annum. This cost, it should be remarked, is exclusive of buildings, repairs, furniture, &c. The districts should be of a size to permit of the Commissioner visiting each institution under his charge at least once a week. It should be the duty of the Commissioner to countersign the certificate of admission on view of the patient only. The certificate itself should be a mere medical opinion, and the responsibility for the incarceration should be thrown upon the Commissioner countersigning it.

It would be well if the Commissioners of the Lunacy District had the assistance of a Select Committee of ladies to help him in his supervision of the female side of each Asylum. This Committee should have power of visitation at all reasonable times and without notice, and their reports should be made to the District Commissioner.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INFLUENCE.

I have found that the employment of lady physicians for the treatment of the female insane is attended with many beneficial results. One of these is that the lady physicians commonly set an example of neatness and order which soon becomes adopted on the male side, and a wholesome emulation is thus set up, highly beneficial to the institution and its inmates. But perhaps the most important benefit arising from the presence of lady physicians in the Asylums is that the female patients suffering from diseases peculiar to women have, in their lady medical attendant, a friend and confidante who can listen, comprehend, and sympathize with their distressed sisters, and when necessary have personal examinations, without causing pain to refined feelings, or producing or strengthening delusions which too often occur in the case of male physicians, especially when they are young men or mere boys. These views have been confirmed by the Medical Superintendents, in reply to my questions, in institutions where lady physicians are employed. Such institutions are chiefly confined to America and Russia.

That the softening influence of a refined woman is very great there can be no doubt, and the introduction of such influence in the treatment of mental disease, particularly on the female side, and the regular visitation of the lady physician on the male side, has a very soothing effect, and is conducive to good order and good management in the wards.

This influence is also distinctly visible, in valuable results, where women are employed in the men's wards to superintend the general household work, the bed-making, &c., and to see that the patients are properly and tidily dressed. Their presence imparts a home-like character to the wards; and if they are the right kind of women, their tastes and instincts supply many little home-like and inexpensive additions to the surroundings of the patients, enhancing their comfort and contentment, and consequently conducing to their recovery.

In only one case was I informed that a male patient had overstepped the boundaries of propriety, by making use of improper language in the presence of the female attendant.

PRISONS AND DEAF AND DUMB ASYLUMS.

I have embodied in my work a few brief reports of my observations on the Prisons and Deaf and Dumb Asylums visited by me in the course of my travels, but these do not call for any special remark here, being somewhat without the scope of my mission.

INSTITUTES FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

I desire to make special mention in this place of the American Asylum at Lincoln, in Illinois, for feeble-minded children, which will be found noticed fully in its proper place in the Reports. I found much to admire and nothing to criticise in the arrangement and order of the establishment, and the treatment of the inmates. The care and ingenuity ingenuity devoted to the development of the co-ordinate faculties, mental and physical, of the children, are in the highest degree praiseworthy, and the practical results attained are really wonderful. There is a similar Asylum at Syracuse, State of New York, to which the same terms of commendation may be justly applied, with the qualification that the buildings and appliances are not so perfect. Those institutions demonstrate how much can be done to ameliorate the condition and elevate the mental standard of children afflicted with mental weakness in all degrees of intensity. The English Asylums of the same description do not compare advantageously with those I have just mentioned, in the various forms of education, calisthenics, &c.

GENERAL.

Notwithstanding the vast distances travelled and the amount of labour undergone in the production of the Reports, together with the expenditure of some £4,000 in procuring the necessary information, I should be amply repaid if my work should promote the better care, comfort, and recovery of the insane in the future, and prove useful to the specialty in the furtherance of the much-needed changes I have indicated.

I would not recommend this or any other Government to adopt the principles followed in any one Asylum, either as to structure, arrangement, management, treatment, &c., but to gather from all every useful suggestion or improvement to be embodied in future Asylums. The general scientific opinions expressed herein by the Superintendents in all countries should have weight in the organization of future institutions or in the remodelling of existing ones, and suggest the provisions to be made for the accommodation and treatment of the insane.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

I have to acknowledge, with gratitude, my indebtedness to the several Governors of States and Ministerial Heads of Departments in various countries, for their courteous reception of me, and ready compliance with the request of my credentials for authority to visit the institutions under their control. (See List of Authorities, and some representative letters given in full in Appendix A.) Also to the Medical Superintendents and other officers my thanks are particularly due for the courteous reception I met with in most instances, and for friendly expressions for the success of my undertaking. I desire to express my equal thanks on the same account to the Commissioners of Lunacy of England, Ireland, and Scotland.

Neither can I close these introductory remarks without an acknowledgment of the assistance I have received in the preparation of the entire work from my Secretary, the late Mr. Dathy Daly, formerly of the Boston (U.S.) Herald, and subsequently from his father, Mr. Dominick Daly, barrister-at-law, Birmingham, England, who, at a critical and anxious moment for me, took up the work where it had been left by the untimely death of his son, and helped me with it to its completion.

The Reports are arranged in the alphabetical order of the States and Nations in which the Asylums they relate to are situated. They are sequented by a series of statistical reports with tables, chiefly from small Asylums, the materials of which I obtained from the Directors, without myself making a personal visit. Of these latter there are in all about one hundred and twenty.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

G. A. TUCKER.

APPENDIX B.

AMERICA.

UTAH LUNATIC ASYLUM, SALT LAKE CITY.

Dr. Young, Superintendent.

Situation.

This Asylum is situated on a plateau 3 miles from Salt Lake City, and can be best described by giving the following extracts from an account of my visit, written at the time, and published in a local paper, in response to a request from the Governor of the territory:—

Visit.

I visited the Asylum in company with United States Marshal Ireland and Mr. Neal.

Building—Number resident—Attendants—Female side.

I found a small building, a mere cottage, in a plot of 24 acres of land, mostly uncultivated and uncared for. This cottage, called an Asylum, contained twenty-one patients, twelve males and nine females, one lay Superintendent, one male attendant, one female attendant—the latter the wife of the Superintendent. Four or five rooms in the attic or roof of this building, opening from one to the other, contained female patients, there being two in each room, some lying in bed, others sitting about the floor, half-dressed and entirely unoccupied. Only one female patient was busy, and she was engaged in sewing. The rooms were furnished with the worst description of wooden bedsteads, beds of straw, and with bed-clothing disgustingly dirty. The glass in the windows was broken, the windows were unprotected, the lath-and-plaster walls and ceilings were broken and in holes.

A violent patient

Adjoining these rooms, on the same floor, is another room divided off by wooden bars, where, lying on the floor, was a sane woman, suffering from syphilis. This woman was locked in. The next room on the same floor was occupied by a violent man, who had during the past week destroyed his bedstead and utensils, the broken furniture still remaining in the room. The bedding and everything in this room were of the most filthy character. The occupant, at the time of my visit, was in the yard, heavily ironed, hand and foot.

Confinement.

On the ground floor I found a similar caged room to that above, one being occupied by a man who spoke rationally, stating that he had been outside this room but once during the sixty days since his admission into the Asylum, and the reason given by the Superintendent for this was that he had objected to having irons placed on his arms and legs previous to leaving his confinement. The night utensils were unemptied, and the stench in the room was abominable.

Bad sanitary conditions

In the adjoining room was a sane man suffering from paralysis, unable to move from his bed, and the condition of the room was similar to that of the other.

Cages.

Outside of the main building, in a lean-to wooden building, measuring about 7 feet high, 12 feet wide, and 15 feet long, were four cages, three of wood and one with iron bars. This latter one was about 7 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 6 feet high, and contained a man of fine proportions, clean and tidy in appearance, who had been there confined for seven years. The food for him is passed through a small gateway about a foot high at the bottom of the admission gate. Although this man has been confined in this cage the past seven years, the cage is the cleanest and neatest part of the entire institution. He has, with tools such as he could form from wire and other materials, made many little articles with which to adorn his prison home, and small pictures are displayed around the walls. The other three cages were unoccupied at the time of my visit.

Men's

Men's side.

In a small yard wore the remainder of the men. One was very heavily ironed—legs and hands—and he was lying in the sun in the most filthy condition. A boy, with irons on his legs, and said to be suffering from epilepsy, was lying on the ground. Others were lying about in various conditions, without occupation or any amusements, and without even a seat in the whole yard to sit upon.

Kitchen.

The kitchen and other rooms were of similar character to the rest of the building.

Admissions—Visitations—Restraint.

Patients are admitted to the place only upon a certificate issued by a County Probate Judge, and are discharged by the Doctor or Judge in a like manner. The Superintendent informed me that the Doctor visited at irregular intervals; that the Commissioners have not visited there during the five months he has been Superintendent; that there is no dietary scale; that there are no printed records of any description, and he could give no information as to admissions, discharges, or deaths; that the amount of restraint and corporeal punishment were entirely at his discretion. He said he sometimes used a cane on the inmates; that in the case of one patient he subdued him when violent by sousing him with cold water until exhausted; that in other instances he uses besides the cane, iron manacles on the feet and hands, and leather straps for the women. In the event of a lady being too violent for the control of his wife, he and the other male attendant assist in subduing her.

The Superintendent.

One incident will illustrate the character of this man's unfitness for occupying any position where common decency is one of the requisites. Passing through one of the rooms, where a woman was lying in bed, I asked if she was fastened, when the Superintendent, to show that she was not, threw the bed-clothing off the lady, she being clothed only in her night-dress.

Form of commitment.

The Superintendent informed us that there were no printed records of the Asylum, and no prescribed forms to be used in the admission or discharge of patients, or in making reports of the affairs of the Asylum. The commitment of one man was shown, addressed to the visiting Surgeon, simply saying:

"Please admit ———; he is out of his mind, and retain him until fit for discharge."
A new institution is in course of erection.

ILLINOIS.—KANE COUNTY HOUSE.

Mr. Clark Woods, Superintendent.

Building—Grounds—Farm—Per capita allowance.

This institution, situated 2½ miles from Geneva, in this State, is partly a poor-house and partly an Asylum. It is a large four-storied plain stone building, with no pretence at ornamentation, either inside or out. The house stands in a field, which is unkept and uncultivated, the building itself showing in many parts signs of dilapidation. There are 100 acres of farm land, from which come the milk, eggs, butter, and vegetables for the use of the inmates, the county allowance being, in addition, 5s. 8d. per capita per week. One would suppose this provision to be sufficient for the care and proper comfort of the poor and afflicted forced to reside here, yet I found the greatest amount of neglect and misery.

Medical visitation—The office of Superintendent—Official visitation—No records.

The medical attendant (the Superintendent is not a physician) is supposed to visit the place two or three times a week, but otherwise the Superintendent, who has been in charge for twelve years, regulates the entire establishment. The Superintendent, I suppose, is chosen for his capacity as a farm bailiff, there being apparently no other qualification deemed necessary for the office. The County Supervisors and Board of Visitors inspect once or twice a year. This is all that is done. No records are kept, and only such returns as the Superintendent may think proper to make are transmitted to the County Board from year to year, these being chiefly financial accounts.

Crib beds.

Crib beds are used here, and I saw three and four in a room.

No. of insane residents—No. of paupers.

There were in the institution ten men and twelve women of the chronic insane class, and about seventy-five men, women, and children (not insane) of the pauper class, chargeable to Kane County, all associated together.

Description of wards—Second floor—The cells and their occupants—A patient likely to remain insane.

On the second floor I found, at the time of my visit, which was made at 5 p.m., three small cells, apparently built in a room, a portion of which was left vacant, so as to form a passage in front of the cells. These cells had arched stone ceilings and stone floors, with no means of light or ventilation other than that admitted through the iron-barred gate, there being only one window at the end of the passage. In the first of these stone cells was a man lying on what was supposed to be a bed, but which in fact was only a bag of husks. The bedstead was constructed of gas-pipe, fixed against the wall on one side, and supported by chains from the wall on the other, forming what is sometimes termed a flap-bed. This had only a sacking bottom. Little or no bed-clothes had been provided, and those to be seen were of the most wretched kind. The patient was lying on the bed, with his day-clothes on. The Superintendent told me that he had been insane about twenty years, and had been confined in this cell the greater portion of that time; that he was the worst lunatic in the State; that he (the Superintendent) took him out for a walk three or four times a month; that he usually sent him a bucket of water every second day to wash himself in, and that, when the patient was excited or troublesome, he cuffed him, but not so often now as formerly, for the patient now feared him.

The second cell—The third cell—Insufficient clothing.

In the next cell, which was of the same size as the first, were two men provided for in like manner. One was noisy and threatening, the other quiet. There was a small window in this cell, heavily barred with iron. In the third cell were three poor women, and the same condition of things existed in regard to their accommodation as was the case in the two cells previously visited. There being only two beds in the cell to accommodate the three women, one necessarily had to sleep on the stone floor. All these patients were dressed in their ordinary day-clothes, but were supposed to have retired for the night. The bed-clothes provided were mere rags, and quite insufficient to cover the patients.

Defective ventilation.

There was no attempt at ventilating these cells, except in such a manner as has been described. The cells were warmed by means of a small stove placed in the passage.

General accommodation—Bedsteads—Bed-rooms.

The remainder of the twenty-two insane persons living in this institution had such accommodation as the place provided for the paupers. The rooms were of fair proportion, light and lofty, but entirely void of of all furniture other than bolsters of wool, with sacks and husks, and a few dirty rags of blankets as bedding. One poor old pauper, over 100 years old, and quite blind, was in such a bed, unattended and uncared for. Most of the rooms throughout are of this description, unfurnished and dirty, with from two to four beds in each, the walls being hung around with old wearing apparel, which caused a most disagreeable odour to prevail.

Attendants.

There was one coloured female attendant and one male attendant, this latter being employed mostly on the farm.

Male and female paupers, patients or otherwise, mix together, and little or no attention is paid to their moral condition or other circumstances.

ILLINOIS.—NORTHERN STATE INSANE HOSPITAL AND ASYLUM, ELGIN.

Dr. Kilbourne, Superintendent.

Description of Building.

This Hospital is of white brick, faced with stone, and has a handsome portico in front, the entrance being gained by several broad steps. It was opened July 30th, 1874. The entire building is on the reversed block system.

The frontage of the main or centre building is 62 feet, that of the first or longitudinal wing 108 feet, the second longitudinal wing 73 feet, the second transverse wing 57 feet, the third longitudinal wing 67 feet, the third transverse wing 71 feet.

Centre block.

Over the portico, in the central block only, are two handsome balconies of ornamental iron. The entire centre block, which is 106 feet 2 inches in depth, is used, on the ground floor, for offices, visiting rooms, dispensary, &c., with a handsome hall of tessellated pavement—the corridor floors from this being of alternate dark and light coloured woods. The upper portion of the centre block is used for officers' quarters. All these rooms are handsomely furnished. The stairway which faces the front door, leading to the upper floors, is of wood. Outside of the hall, at the back, is the entrance to the patients' corridors.

Communication is had with the rear buildings by means of a connecting corridor, 55 feet long by 12 feet wide, and two stories high, with a basement, under which is located the fan duct. These buildings contain the kitchen, dining-room, store-rooms, bakery, laundry, drying-room, sitting-room, and sleeping apartments for employes of the Hospital.

Immediately beyond, adjoining the rear building, is the boiler and engine-house, and also the fan-room; to the rear of this is the coal-house, and the gas-house, fitted up with all the necessary appliances for the manufacture of gas on the premises.

Acreage—Situation—Grounds.

It is surrounded by 500 acres of ground, and is beautifully situated, overlooking the town of Elgin, the Fox River winding between the grounds and the town. The grounds are tastefully laid out in lawns, shrubbery, flower-gardens, fountains, &c., with many rustic summer-houses and seats for the accommodation of patients, a large portion also being reserved for farm land and vegetable gardens. There are no airing-courts, the patients using the grounds, which are only fenced in with a low wooden fence, and are in many parts entirely open. During my visit I saw several patients, unattended, enjoying their morning walk before breakfast in the gardens adjacent to the buildings.

Visited.

I visited the institution in company with the Secretary of State Board of Charities, Dr. Wines, arriving at 5 o'clock in the evening, and remaining the guest of Dr. Kilbourne for a day and two nights. We visited, after arrival, many of the corridors, the majority of the patients having gone to bed. Others were amusing themselves with cards, billiards, &c. All was quiet, and in perfect order.

Telephone and thermostat.

Telephone connection is provided throughout the Hospital, which is also furnished with a system of electric alarms or "thermostat," to announce the presence of fire—a device consisting of mercurial bulbs placed in the ceilings of the different rooms, and connected by insulated wire with an annunciator located in the hall on the office floor of the central or administrative building, a point always accessible, day and night, to every employe in the house. These thermostats are set at a temperature varying from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and fifty degrees; and if from any cause the rooms should become overheated, the expansion of the mercury in the bulbs causes an electric circuit, instantly ringing the fire alarm bell, and at the same time indicating the precise locality on the annunciator. The dangerous points provided with the safe-guard are the attics of the central building and of the wings occupied by the patients, the kitchen, bakery, ironing and mending rooms, amusement-hall, carpenter-shop, boiler-house, &c. This apparatus is an important addition to the armamentarium for the prompt suppression of fire, as no time is lost in the discovery and location of the same.

Number resident—Capacity.

There were, at the time of my visit, 525 patients in the Hospital—265 males and 260 females. The capacity is for 525.

History kept—Admissions and discharges.

The history of each patient, although not required by law, is well and carefully written up, and the admissions and discharges are made in accordance with the State law governing other institutions in the State.

Per capita cost—Expense of building.

The per capita cost is about £41 12s. per annum, exclusive of the value of farm produce. The cost of the buildings was £128,000.

Income and expenditure, 1879.

For the year ending September 30, 1879, the annual appropriations amounted to £20,130; the sale of live stock and farm produce realized £262 10s.; income from other sources, £1,906; total income, £22,126 12s. 6d. The expenses of the Hospital were about £22,063, leaving a balance in hand of £63 12s. 0d.

Income and expenditure, 1880.

For the year ending September the 30th, 1880, the annual appropriations amounted to £20,000; the sale of live stock and farm produce realized nearly £200; income from other sources, £2,000; total income, £22,151 9s. 8d. The expenses of the Hospital were about £20,750, leaving a balance in hand of £1,401 10s.

Mortuaries.

There are two mortuaries, one for male and one for female, and pathological researches are made.

Church and theatre.

Divine service is held regularly in the chapel, which is 40 x 60 feet, seats over 300 persons, and has seven large Gothic windows of stained glass. There is also a theatre provided.

Staff.

Staff

The staff is comprised as follows:—One medical superintendent, two assistant physicians, one clerk, one matron, one male supervisor, one female supervisor, one engineer, three firemen, one book-keeper, one stenographer, one man on grounds, two carpenters, one druggist, one baker, five farm hands, one male assistant in kitchen, two car boys, one butcher, two gardeners, one laundry-man, one hostler, one supernumerary, one porter, one night-watchman, one night-watchwoman, two seamstresses, seven laundresses, three girls in dining-rooms, three chambermaids, two cooks, two female assistants in the kitchen, and twenty-three male and twenty-three female attendants on patients. Total number of employés, 100.

Attendants' salaries.

The salaries of the attendants are as follows: Males, from £5 to £7 8s. per month. Females, from £2 16s. to £4 per month.

Restraints.

The forms of restraint used in this institution are the camisole, wristlets, muffs, and crib beds.

Precautions against fire—Water and gas.

Five extinguishers, water-hose, &c., are provided on each floor. Gas is used throughout the institution, and is supplied from the town. The water supply is from artesian wells, 2,032 feet deep.

Description of wards—Men's side—Ground floor—Windows.

A description of one floor on each side of the building gives a sufficiently clear idea of the whole Hospital.

The longitudinal wings are from 36 to 40 feet in width, with a passage or corridor in the centre 12 feet in width. On the sides are the dormitories for the patients $8\frac{1}{2} \times 10$ feet, with a recess and projecting bay window in the centre of each hall, 12 feet in width, which affords a pleasant out-look and resort for the patients. In the transverse wings are the dining-rooms, hot closets, parlours, lavatories, clothes-rooms, water-closets, staircases, &c., access to them being obtained through a central corridor, upon which these rooms open. The longitudinal wings are three stories in height, and the transverse wings four stories, surmounted by a cupola in centre of roof to serve as ventilating towers for the foul air ducts which communicate with them. On the men's side, ground-floor, the window-sashes in all the wards have the upper half of iron, glazed, with an ornamental iron guard on the outside of the lower half. Most of the windows have curtains, &c.

Doors—Bed-rooms.

In some of the wards the doors open out of, and in others into the rooms. There is a small, open transom over each door. The bedsteads are all of wood, with open, wire bottoms, and over them horsehair mattresses. The hair used cost 2s. 2½d. per pound. The floors in the bed-rooms are all painted. Those in the corridors are of rock maple, laid in strips 3 inches wide, grooved and tongued; in the dormitories, of pine, 6 inches wide. The single rooms are furnished with a small table and chair each. In some there are pictures on the walls. The associated rooms contain from two to sixteen beds each. Crockery chambers are used throughout.

Corridors and alcoves.

The corridors have oiled floors, carpeted down the middle, and are furnished with sofas, chairs, and double chairs, all of wood. There are pictures on the walls and open bookcases in the alcoves. The alcoves are furnished handsomely as sitting-rooms, and each possesses a piano and other furniture. There are, in addition, other sitting-rooms on some of the floors. Flowers and singing-birds of various descriptions are to be seen in many places.

Dining-rooms.

Each dining-room is well furnished with tables and chairs, the tables being laid with cloths, and possessing crockery and all the requisites of a well-furnished table. In each dining-room is an elevator or lift from the basement, by means of which the food is sent direct from the kitchen to each floor; the dining-rooms have pantries, with sinks and grease-traps, &c.

Shoots, ventilating, &c.

There are also, on each floor, soiled clothes shoots, dust shoots, ventilating shafts, and hot air shafts, which rise from the basement to the topmost story.

Iron stairways.

Each corridor communicates with an iron stairway. These iron stairways are built within stone towers, so as to afford a means of escape in case of fire. They are also used to enable the patients in each ward or corridor to descend to the grounds outside without going through the building.

General appearance of Hospital and patients.

Most of the patients were out in the grounds during my visit. All seemed well fed, well clothed, and everything in the Hospital was clean and in splendid order throughout.

Back wards.

The back wards, both on the male and female side, are less furnished than those in front. The furniture here, for the most part, consists, in each ward, of a strong wooden table and arm-chairs fastened to the floor, the floors being all painted or oiled. Here, as in the back wards of almost all large hospitals, you will notice the absence of pictures, billiard-rooms, pianos, books, and other means of amusement. The single rooms contain nothing but the bedstead with, perhaps, a crib bed, and in one corner is the fixed closet seat. The dining-rooms are also less furnished than those in the front wards, and the windows of the single rooms are usually screened on the inside with stout iron wire shutters.

Bath-rooms.

All the bath-rooms and water-closets in this institution are arched with brick, and the haunches filled with concrete to a level with the crown. Upon these floors are laid, those in the bath-rooms and water-closets being of marble, laid in alternate squares of white and blue, with base-boards of same, to guard against the absorption of moisture and the decay incident to wood, which is found to be especially obnoxious. They were beautifully clean and free from smells. The baths are of iron and stand against the wall, being thus only accessible on the one side. They are, as in other places, supplied with both hot and cold water.

Employment.

Several of the male patients are employed on the farm and in gardening work about the grounds.

Superior class of attendants.

It is remarked, in visiting the Asylums in the State of Illinois, and in several of the Asylums in the adjoining States, that the attendants, male and female, are of a better class than the attendants in the Asylums of other parts of the country. Most of them are educated people, sympathetic and intelligent, and the quietude of the wards and the order and cleanliness prevailing throughout this and similar hospitals is evidently largely due to this cause.

Women's

Women's side—Ground floor.

On the women's side, ground floor, everything is, in appearance, the same as on the men's side, only that better furniture is supplied in the various wards, and there are many little ornaments visible about the rooms which tend to confirm the idea that women have a better idea than the other sex of surrounding themselves with little comforts and decorations. These add greatly to the pleasant appearance of the wards, and give everything a homelike aspect. In this respect there must always be, and always is, a marked difference between the male and female wards of an Insane Hospital. The female patients are invariably more neat in keeping things tidy about them. In many of the wards the floors are carpeted throughout. In the sewing-rooms several patients are employed.

Steam for all purposes.

All the heating, pumping, and cooking is done by steam, which also supplies power for washing linen and for many other purposes. The steam is provided by an engine of 75-horse power, with six large boilers.

Back rooms.

In some of the better class wards is a suite of three rooms, well and handsomely furnished. In these rooms friends may remain with the patient during his or her illness, and in the last hours till after death.

Restraint and seclusion.

I only saw two patients in seclusion, and two with camisoles on. The greatest order, quiet, and content seemed to reign throughout.

Cottages for convalescents.

Some distance from the main Hospital are two cottages, one for males and the other for females. The one for females is situated within a few yards of the entrance gates, and quite close to the main road. The one for the men is on the other side of the main building. These cottages are occupied by convalescent patients preparatory to their discharge to the care of their friends. Both of these houses are connected by telephone with the Hospital. They were opened April 25th, 1878. Both are well planned, convenient, and tasteful structures, warmed throughout by hot-air furnaces in the basements, supplemented by grates or fireplaces in the sitting and dining-rooms, for use in the fall and spring months, when furnace heat would not be required. The first floors, with the exception of one room, are devoted exclusively to day use, comprising a hall, parlour or sitting-room, dining-room, and kitchen. The other room, in the wing of each cottage, is an airy and commodious apartment, with a recess for bed, and opening upon a pleasant porch, and is designed for the use of patients requiring special treatment or private accommodation for which their friends are willing to pay. The second story is arranged for associated dormitories, attendants' quarters, water-closets, bath and toilet-rooms, with linen-rooms directly opposite. The kitchen is fitted up equal to that of a well-appointed private dwelling. There is a range, hot-water reservoir, and connecting pipes leading therefrom to the bath, toilet-rooms, &c. The second floor is supplied with cold water from the reservoir above, force-pumps to raise the water from the rain-water cisterns to the tanks in the attics, sinks with waste-pipes leading to vaults 40 feet removed, and every appliance that could be consistently introduced that would add to the comfort of the patients or lessen the labour of administration. Good spring water for drinking purposes has been conducted to one cottage, and the other is supplied from a well only a few feet distant. Ventilation is secured by brick shafts carried through the roofs, with openings upon each floor and a sufficient area to accomplish the object sought. There are no guards upon the windows or other indications of restraint, but there are locks upon the bottom rails of the lower sash in the sleeping apartments, which admits of it being fastened to the sill; the upper sash is movable at the pleasure of the patient, for the admittance of fresh air. The cottages are neatly and comfortably furnished, and are homelike and cheerful abodes.

Men's cottage.

I visited the men's cottage first, and found it occupied by fifteen patients, under charge of one attendant. Most of the cooking is done at the main Hospital. The cottage is of wood, two stories high, with a verandah extending along the front. The house is furnished in every way like a very comfortable home. The sitting-room, bed-room, bath-room, and closets are all heated from the basement.

Women's cottage.

The women's cottage is better furnished than the other, having a piano, and possessing many other articles of furniture and ornament which make a house not only comfortable but very elegant. It is well furnished in every part, and is carpeted throughout. The cottage contained ten patients, with one attendant. Flowers are to be seen everywhere around, and the whole place has a most cheerful appearance, the patients looking as happy as possible. When asked if there was anything that they required beyond what was supplied, they answered, "We have everything here we can wish for"; but they added what one always hears, even in the best of hospitals, "We have not home." Dr. Kilbourne told me that these two cottages have been of great service to him, and have also been a source of pleasure. They had caused him no trouble in their management in any way.

Increase of melancholia—Superintendent's opinions.

In reply to my questions, Dr. Kilbourne states that, in the cases admitted to this Hospital, for some time past there was less of the maniacal form of insanity and more melancholia than formerly; that insanity was increasing above the ratio of population; that no Asylum should contain more than 300 patients for individual treatment; that the principal causes of insanity are heredity, excesses in life, nervous exhaustion incident to the lack of nourishing and sustaining food, immigration and the loss of home ties—the latter causes being peculiar to a new country. The treatment is therapeutics, physical and moral, with employment, diversion, and generous and sustaining food.

Employment of patients.

Dr. Kilbourne, in his report to the trustees, recommends the purchase of foot and power-lathes, scroll-saws, &c., for the occupation and diversion of a numerous class of patients to whom a more laborious occupation would be distasteful, but who could easily be interested in the manufacture of light ornamental or bracket-work. He adds that, "Already the utility of well-appointed shops is seen in the increased and increasing willingness on the part of the patients to engage in practical work when rendered attractive and interesting. One patient particularly has exhibited no little skill in the making of twenty-five bird-cages, while another has exercised his ingenuity in the manufacture of handsome ornamental flower-pots and stands. The willingness of the patients to work has been a subject of comment and congratulation, and has given rise to the hope that at no distant day systematic employment of the insane, in those pursuits for which they are most fitted, will be among the features not only of this but of every other like institution in the land."

The epileptic insane.

In reference to the epileptic insane, Dr. Kilbourne writes:—"The Law, by implication, excludes this class of patients from the benefits of Hospitals for the Insane in this State, and yet numbers of them gain admission from time to time, by reason of their threatening behaviour and the dangerous character of the disease from which they are suffering. While it is a duty on the part of the State to protect the community in which they dwell from the sudden violence and the uncontrollable phrensy which these patients so frequently exhibit, it is equally objectionable to the general inmates of a hospital to be compelled to associate with them. The disturbing effect produced upon the inmates by this this class of patients is as unfortunate as it is noticeable. The epileptic insane are peculiarly irritable, given to provoking quarrels in the wards, and always dangerous, venting their sudden phrensy, it may be, on the most innocent and unsuspecting. To remedy what we must consider an evil in the present management of this class of persons, the epileptic insane should be removed from our wards and kept in separate quarters by themselves, which, for the number now here, and for as many as are likely to be sent here from our district, could be furnished by the erection of a two-story brick building on the premises especially adapted for the purpose.

MAINE.—STATE INSANE HOSPITAL, AUGUSTA.

Dr. Hallow, Superintendent.

Date of erection—Position—Description of building—Centre block—Wing blocks—Separate building for kitchen—Working patients—Theatre.

This Hospital was erected in 1840. It stands on high ground, overlooking the river Kennebec and the city of Augusta on the other shore. The building is of granite, and consists of a number of blocks, of which the centre one is in use as the administrative department, and contains the officers' quarters, dispensary, waiting-rooms, Board-room, &c. There is a portico at the front, which is on a level with the basement floor. A number of stone steps inside the portico ascend to the second floor, and these are closed off from the hall by glazed doors, thus forming a large porch at the head of the steps. This centre block is of three stories in height above the basement. Wings are formed of three blocks on either side of it, projecting front and back of each other, and forming altogether three sides of a square. The kitchen, offices, and other rooms are located in a separate building at the back. This building is of brick, three stories in height. It contains the bed-rooms for the outside working patients, the kitchen, sewing-rooms, and a large and handsome theatre above. The music in the theatre is provided by the attendants, who are also the actors, under the direction of the Medical Superintendent. The theatre is used as a chapel on Sundays.

Separate building for male working patients.

In front, and a little distance from the main buildings, is another isolated house, built of brick, two stories in height. It was originally erected as a chapel, but it is now used for the working male patients. In the centre of each floor in this building is the hall or dining-room, the bed-rooms being on either side. All the windows are guarded with strong wire-work. The house heated from the main building, and supplied with food from the main kitchen, accommodates 36 male patients. The order and cleanliness here were not remarkable. The patients were at table, but there seemed a want of order, and there was some confusion.

Engine and other houses.

On the right of the main building, some distance away, is the engine-house, which contains a 16-horse power engine and four boilers. The gas-house, laundry, ironing-rooms, drying-rooms, &c., are adjoining, and are well-furnished with every requirement, and connected by an underground way with the basement of the main building.

Acreage—Grounds—Employment on farm-lands.

All these various buildings stand in 300 acres of land, most unfenced, part of which is used for pleasure grounds. One portion, a grove of pine-trees, is fenced in as an airing court for the male patients in the morning and the female patients in the afternoon, but it can be only used in this way for about three months in the year, owing to the great severity of the cold weather in the north-eastern portion of the United States. The rest of the land is used for farming purposes for the benefit of the institution, and many of the patients are employed in farming operations.

Board of Trustees—Provision for complete supervision.

The institution is governed by a Board of six Trustees, who are appointed by the Governor of the State, in Council. This Board visits the institution once a quarter in its corporate capacity, and once a month by a Committee of its body. In addition, any member of it is entitled to pay a visit at any time, by night or by day, without notice; and in order to render such visits the more effective, every member of the Board has a full set of keys of the Hospital supplied to him. This Board has full power in the management of the institution. There is also another Board appointed by the Governor from his councillors, which visit and report once each year. Locked letter-boxes are placed in each ward for the patients' use, and can only be opened by the Trustees.

Commitments—Discharges.

Patients are admitted to the Hospital under a commitment from a Board of Examiners, constituted of the Mayor and Aldermen, Select-men, or other municipal officers, as the case may be, of the town to which the patient belongs; the certificates of insanity must be signed by at least two physicians before the patient can be admitted as insane. The patient may appeal from the Board of Examiners to a Court constituted of two Justices of the Peace and quorum, one of whom is selected by the patient himself. The discharge of patients rests with the Superintendent and the Board of Visitors or Trustees.

Number resident—Capacity—Cost of Asylum—Per capita cost.

At the time of my visit there were 463 patients in the Hospital, 254 males and 209 females. The capacity is for 400. The cost of the Asylum was about £120,000. The per capita cost is £36 8s. 4d. per annum, exclusive of farm produce.

Income and expenditure, 1881.

For the year 1881, the amount received from the State, from towns, and from individuals, for the support of patients, was £19,202 15s.; the amount realized from the sale of live stock, farm produce, &c., was £256 8s.; from other sources, £2,145; total income, about £21,605. The total expenses of the institution for the year amounted to about £20,173, leaving a balance of £1,431 6s. in hand.

Private patients.

Private or paying patients are charged £1 8s. 4d. per week, and are provided with slightly better accommodation.

History kept.

The history of each patient is kept, as required.

No mortuary—no shower-bath.

There is no mortuary, and a shower-bath is not used.

Divine service.

Divine service is held on Sunday afternoon, Rule I of Article XIII stating that "The Sabbath shall be observed as such at the Hospital."

Telephone.

There is a telephone communication between the office, the various wards, and the city of Augusta. Staff.

Staff.

The staff is comprised as follows:—One medical superintendent, two medical assistants, one dispenser (who acts as clerk), one treasurer (who is also the steward), one matron, one head nurse, one male and female supervisor, three needlewomen, two night watchmen, two night watchwomen (no tell-tale clock is used), one engineer, one assistant engineer, five firemen, one head farmer, and six "helps," one male and one female cook, with five assistant cooks, one baker, one carpenter, one mason, one painter, and eighteen male and female attendants; total number of employes, seventy-seven.

Attendants' salaries.

The salaries of the attendants are as follows:—Males, from £4 to £4 12s. 6d. per month; females, from £2 12s. 6d. to £2 16s. 8d. per month.

Heated by steam—Ventilating shafts, &c.

The building is heated by steam from the basement (whence also proceed the ventilating shafts) through the walls to the attics, and thence through galvanized iron pipes to the roof. There are also dust-shoots, soiled linen shoots, kitchen lifts, &c., going through the whole building from basement to roof.

Water supply.

Water is pumped from streams into reservoirs and stored there for ordinary use, and is available in case of fire.

Forms of restraint.

The restraint in this Hospital consists of the camisole, belts, and leather muffs, with seclusion in a light room.

Description of wards—Second floor—Furniture—Floors—Library, billiards, piano, &c.

On entering the first door of the Hospital, one is struck with the dark and cheerless appearance of the small low halls and rooms. A narrow wooden stairway leads to the upper stories. The front rooms on this floor are, however, well and comfortably furnished. The walls are all painted throughout, and the floors of the corridors are oiled, but the bed-room floors are all painted. On this floor is a small library for the use of patients. Besides this, I saw one billiard table, one harmonium, and one piano.

Ground floor—Furniture—Associated rooms—Doors—Windows—No amusement or occupation—Third floor—Alcove Sitting-rooms—Single rooms—Lying patients' quarters.

The most demented patients are on the ground floor. The corridors are low and narrow, and some of them are dark and very cheerless. The furniture consists of a few wooden seats or settees, and, in the bed-room, of an iron bedstead with woven wire bottom. Crockery chambers are provided. The associated rooms contain from two to five beds each. All the doors are solid, and open into the rooms, and each has an open transom over it. The windows throughout are guarded on the outside by iron unglazed sashes, in small squares, corresponding with the inside wooden sashes. In addition to this, the windows in all the more noisy wards and the back seclusion rooms are guarded with strong wire shutters. I saw no amusement or occupation of any kind going on, and the patients were lying about in all directions. On the third floor, front, the corridors are well but plainly furnished, with sofas and chairs of various kinds, the alcoves leading out of each corridor being used as sitting-rooms, and containing some few materials for amusements, and a small number of pictures on the walls. From the windows there is an exceedingly lovely view of the surrounding country. On this floor the single rooms are more comfortably furnished, and are light and cheerful. The rooms situated at the extremity of the various wings are reserved for the habitation of the paying patients, and are much better furnished, having a separate dining-room on each floor. All the rooms of this class correspond with each other in the matter of furniture.

Associated dining-room—Barred enclosures.—Prison-like aspect.

At the end of each wing, where the longitudinal corridor joins the transverse one, the space of intersection is fenced off, and forms a large associated dining-room. This space is secured on all four sides with iron unglazed sashes, or iron cross-bars, extending from floor to ceiling. This space on three sides looks into the corridors. On the fourth side there is a space of 3 or 4 feet between the cross-bars and the windows. All this imparts to the establishment a more gloomy and prison-like appearance than exists in any institution I have seen. The patients are literally caged within iron bars. After I had passed through the wicket, out of this barred enclosure, the patients climbed up the bars and looked through upon the retreating visitors like imprisoned beasts at a show.

Back wards—Strong rooms—Patients in seclusion—Dirty patients—A homicide in restraint—Noisy and disturbed wards.

In the extreme back wards on each floor are several single rooms used as strong rooms, and containing no furniture. In the door of each is a hole of oblong shape, and through this aperture I was informed food is passed when the patient is too violent to admit of the attendant's entrance. There were several patients so confined at the time of my visit, four men and twelve women being in seclusion. Some of the men were quite naked, and one in particular was extremely dirty, being covered with excrement. Another man had been confined in a strong room since committing a homicide more than a month previous, he and the murdered man having occupied a small room together. The Superintendent informed me that, in all probability, this man would occupy the room during the rest of his life, or, at any rate, would only be allowed the use of the adjoining small corridor at times when the other patients were out. I saw also one man and six women with camisoles on. These back wards were exceedingly noisy and disturbed.

Printed Rules.

There is a code of excellent Rules and Regulations defining the duties of the various officials, and also a number of General Regulations, both printed, copies of which are given to each employé, and hung about the wards.

Absence of attendants from their wards.

On each floor is an attendant's room, and, notwithstanding the rules, many of the attendants were absent from the wards. I scarcely entered a corridor in which I did not see the attendants leaving their rooms at the noise made by our entrance. On the female side this laxity was very marked.

Bath-rooms.

There is a small bath-room, containing also a closet and lavatory, on each floor. The baths are of iron, small, and fixed against the walls.

Women's side—Back wards—Dining-rooms.

On the women's side the front rooms are comfortably furnished, and, as usual, there were many little attractive articles, pictures, &c., about the wards. The back wards, however, were just as bare as those on the men's side, and, in the wards for the violent many patients were without shoes or stockings. The dining-rooms in the front wards were comfortably arranged, and the tables all neatly laid. Table-cloths are not used in the back wards, spoons and tin utensils alone comprising the ménage.

Opinions

Opinions of Superintendent.

In reply to my questions, Dr. Harlow stated that a "mixed institution is the best and cheapest, and that 600 patients could then be treated for cure. For individual treatment 350 should not be exceeded. The causes of insanity are excesses in life, and ill health thereby induced, leading to mental aberration; overwork and exertion forming other causes. Hereditary predisposition is the cause in a large number of cases. The form of insanity during the last few years has changed apparently among those admitted, as there are now fewer cases of maniacal insanity in comparison with the demented ones admitted. The treatment of the insane should be moral—kindness, without restraint where possible—amusement, occupation, music, &c. Medically, the treatment should consist of good diet, with tonic medicines."

Increase of insanity.

The Visiting Committee for the year 1881 say:—"We note the painful truth that insanity is on the increase. The admission of those who can be cared for in no other place has filled the Hospital to its utmost capacity, while new applications are made almost daily."

The criminal insane.

In urging the Governor and Council to provide separate accommodation for the twenty-six criminal insane at that time in the Hospital, the language of the Report runs as follows:—"The law in relation to the removal of State Prison convicts to the Hospital, when pronounced insane, although humane in its purpose, necessarily involves the mingling of those who have been and still remain criminals, with those who, though afflicted, are of good character and record, while many of them are well educated and of high position. It does not seem to your Committee to be right to subject the innocent to the companionship of criminals. However our sympathies may be interested, our feelings revolt at observing the meeting at the table, in conversation, at games and employment, of those so entirely distinct in tastes and habits."

ENGLAND.

NORFOLK.—COUNTY ASYLUM, NEAR NORWICH.

Dr. Hills, Superintendent.

Situation—Style and dimensions.

This Asylum is situated at Thorpe, 3 miles from Norwich. It is in a pleasant situation, overlooking the river Wensum and an undulating agricultural country. It is a very plain white brick building, of great longitudinal extent, several projections breaking the front and back lines. The central parts are three stories high, and the wings two stories.

When built.

The original portion was built in 1814, but additions have been made from time to time, and the whole institution now covers a large area of ground. The total building cost is unascertainable.

Acreage—Airing courts.

There are 63 acres of ground. Sunken walls of brick enclose the buildings, but the grounds are enclosed by low hedges only. The airing courts are tastefully planted with shrubs, flowers, &c., and well supplied with seats and sun-shades. These courts are, more properly speaking, gardens.

Entrance.

The approach to the establishment is through iron gates, with a porter's lodge on each side. A short drive leads to the main front entrance, where there is a carriage portico.

Situation of departments and rooms.

The central part of the main building contains the officers' quarters, visiting rooms, &c. The kitchen, sculleries, stores, &c., are in the basement, under the centre, and behind there is a large general dining-room capable of accommodating 300 patients of both sexes.

Description of interior.

A portion of the older structure contains old-fashioned corridors with single rooms on each side, separated from each other by wooden partitions. These rooms are low and dark. The window-sashes are of iron. In the new buildings all the modern improvements have been adopted. The windows are unguarded and have wooden sashes, the rooms light and cheerful, and well furnished. One of the associated rooms is 100 feet by 36 feet. The rooms are on one side of the corridors only, and are decorated with pictures, flowers, and pot-plants throughout. The sitting-rooms for each sex open into well-kept conservatories. Many of the single rooms have low wooden bedsteads of antique make, but others, as well as the associated bed-rooms, are furnished with neat iron bedsteads. All the beds are of horse-hair. Some of the single rooms have sliding shutters to the windows. Some of the corridors are used as day-rooms. They contain cases of stuffed birds, aviaries, aquaria, and other objects of interest. The seats are chiefly wooden forms with backs. Owing to the irregular form of the building, the corridors and passages run in all directions.

Single rooms.

The single rooms in the wings, ground floor, are of small size; windows 5 feet from the floor, with sliding shutters, the upper part being of perforated zinc; walls of unplastered brick, but lower part painted and upper lime-coloured; floors of scrubbed boards, covered near the beds with strips of carpet; doors opening outwards.

Dining-room

The two sides, male and female, of this Asylum are very much alike. The general dining-room at the back, already mentioned, is a fine room, well lighted by eight or nine large windows on each side. It is warmed by fire-places at each end, and also by heat from the basement. It is furnished with forms and long plain tables, covered with white cloths. Knives and forks, glass and earthenware are used.

Bed-rooms—Amusements.

In the main building the ground floor corridor is arched, and has rooms on each side. The associated rooms contain from six to twenty-three beds, and are furnished with chairs, tables, wash-stands, and other requisites. The walls are papered. Pictures abound throughout the institution, here as elsewhere, and there is also a good supply of books and other means of amusement. The corridors are divided by half glass doors. There are pleasant alcove recesses at intervals, and a good conservatory used as a smoke-room. The cross section corridors have bed-rooms on each side. These are narrow and dark.

Hospital.

The rooms in the hospital ward have wooden bedsteads with white curtains, windows draped, strips of carpet on the floors, open fire-places, walls painted or stencil-coloured—all light and cheerful.

Demented and epileptic.

In the rooms for the demented patients the fire-places are guarded with wire screens; the window-sashes are of iron. In the epileptic wards the arrangements are similar. The bedsteads are of wood, and the beds close to the floor. There is another glass conservatory in this quarter.

Kitchen.

Kitchen.

The kitchen, lighted from the roof, is supplied with steam appliances. Female cooks are employed, assisted by patients. The place was in excellent order, clean and well furnished.

Baths.

The baths are enamelled, cased in wood, and having one end to the wall. The floors of the bath-rooms are of tile, with wooden gratings over. Each room has a small dressing-room attached.

Lavatories.

The lavatories are neatly arranged. The basins are in a slate stand, with water-taps to each. There are lavatories in most of the associated bed-rooms, the stands containing from six to eight basins, with towel-racks, soap-bowls, &c.

Closets.

The closets are in projections from the building, with which they are connected by short passages lighted and ventilated by windows. They contain each four seats, with partitions between. The seats are automatic, flushing the pans when used. These places were extremely clean, and quite free from odour. The floors are tiled. The closets in the new buildings are similarly constructed and arranged. They have five seats each. The solid matter of the drains is caught and disposed of on the farm lands.

Laundry.

The laundry is in a detached building, lighted from above. It is large and commodious, and well supplied with steam appliances for washing, wringing, &c. There are two engines of 25-horse power each. Only three paid servants are employed, the patients assisting in the work. Accommodation, day and night, is provided for twenty-nine working patients in this building. The day and bed-rooms are similar to those of the rest of the establishment. The ironing and folding rooms were very clean and neatly kept.

Gas.

Gas is used, and is obtained from the town supply.

Fire brigade—Night firemen.

There is an efficient fire brigade, and two night firemen to watch outside. They patrol every hour and make a general inspection of the respective buildings, recording, by Dent's clock, at each station their specified visits. These men have charge of all the appliances for the extinguishing of fire, and form a part of the brigade. Fire hydrants, hose, and buckets are in all quarters.

Water.

The water for the closets and for the baths is pumped from the river. For drinking and cooking purposes well water is used.

New building—Interior.

The new annex is about three-quarters of a mile from the old Hospital, and stands on elevated ground. It has a separate Medical Officer. It is surrounded by a sunken wall, and is divided from the older establishment by a public road. It consists of one quadrangular block, from the front of which two large blocks extend forward so as to form three sides of a square. There is a small tower over the centre front. The kitchen is at the rear. This being an almost self-contained building, it is provided with its own kitchen, but the washing, &c., is done in the laundry of the main building. It is fitted and furnished plainly but comfortably throughout, and in the most modern style. The whole establishment is light and cheerful, and there are abundance of pictures, plants, flowers, and ornaments of one description or another, similar to those already mentioned. In one of the large associated dormitories there are four open fireplaces in the centre of the room, back to back, the smoke being carried off by two flues. Most of the walls are painted below and papered above.

Woman's side.

As already noted, the women's side of the institution is similar to the men's. It contains pianos for the use of the patients, statuettes, conservatories, &c.

Government visitation.

The Asylum is governed by a Committee of County Magistrates, and visited every week by members of the Committee.

Employés—Attendants.

There are ninety-seven employés, and twenty male and twenty-nine female attendants. The male attendants receive from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per week, and the females from £12 10s. to £25 per annum. The attendants wear a uniform.

Capacity.

The institution has a capacity for 800 patients in all. At the time of my visit it contained 300 male and 442 female patients, total 742, acute and chronic cases.

Admissions and discharges.

The admissions and discharges are made under the provisions of the English law (16 and 17 Vic., c. 97, and Schedules). One medical man, acting in conjunction with a Justice of the Peace for the county, or a clergyman in conjunction with a relieving officer or overseer, can direct the admission of a public patient. For all private patients two medical certificates and formal application by friends are required.

Percentage of recoveries and deaths.

The percentage of recoveries on admissions was 48.3 in 1883. The percentage of deaths in the same year was 10.2 on the average number of residents.

Mortuary—History.

There is both a mortuary and post-mortem room. A history of each case is kept, as required by law. A dietary scale is followed. Divine service is held twice every day.

Employment.

The clothing of the patients is to a large extent made on the premises. There are several workshops, for shoemaking, carpentering, tailoring, &c. Patients are employed in every department of the establishment, as already noted. In a large sewing-room on the women's side twenty female patients were at work. On the men's side there is a good and well-furnished billiard-room.

Restraints.

I was informed by the Superintendent that practically no mechanical restraints are in use; only twice in twenty-three years has he had recourse to the muffs. In the refractory ward, first floor, the lower part of the windows are guarded with iron wire. There are six single seclusion rooms, furnished with wooden bedsteads, washstands, &c. The doors open outward, and above them are transoms of perforated zinc.

Suicidal and epileptic patients.

There are fifty-four suicidal and epileptic patients on the first floor. A little separate centre room is set apart for the use of night attendants. Four single rooms are built out, supported on pillars, for acute violent patients. The beds are low. There is a guarded gaslight over each door.

I found this Asylum in excellent condition on the whole, and very well managed. The great part of the institution is bright and cheerful, on account of the abundance of windows and glass doors, the profusion and good taste of the decorations, and the cleanliness and order everywhere prevailing. As usual, the balance of neatness and taste was on the female side. Parts of the main building are, as I have already remarked, structurally defective, and the structural defects have been aggravated in many instances by the additions made to the buildings from time to time beyond the scope of the original plan. These faults, as well as the great size and extent of the establishment, must increase the difficulties of management and supervision. But, after all, very little is left to be desired in regard to the care and comfort of the insane in this Asylum. Order and evidence of good management are observable throughout. The patients were clean, well-dressed, and healthy-looking. Although plenty of occupation and amusement is found for them, it struck me that the limits of possibility in those directions had not been reached.

Superintendent's opinions.

The Superintendent states that the chief forms of insanity are general paralysis, dementia paralytica, epileptic mania, acute mania, and melancholia. The leading moral causes of insanity are griefs and troubles, and the physical causes heredity, bodily diseases, intemperance. He had not, during three years, observed any well-marked preponderance of melancholia over maniacal insanity. The general treatment he adopts is combined medical and moral. General paralysis has certainly increased, and so has insanity generally, as compared with the increase of population. He considers insanity more curable now than formerly.

ITALY.

VENICE.—ST. CLEMENTE PROVINCIAL FEMALE ASYLUM.

Dr. Vigna, Director.

Situation—Style of architecture—Size and capacity.

This Asylum is situated on a low sandy island, very little above high-water level, about half an hour's pull by gondola from Venice, and in full view of that city. It is a large quadrangular building with tiled roof. It has a frontage of 366 feet long, the ends standing slightly forward. It is a plain though handsome edifice, and is divided into three compartments, and contains in all three hundred rooms.

When built—Cost.

It was built in 1873, at the expense of the Venetian province, and cost £120,000.

Acreage—Airing yards.

Its grounds are 22 acres in extent, nearly one half of that superficies being within the walls, which on one side rise out of the water's edge. The outer grounds are used as fruit and vegetable gardens, the produce being of the annual value of £800. There are ten airing yards, some of which are laid in grass and some in stone.

Description of interior—Entrance hall.

The entrance hall leads into a vestibule, from which a flight of stone stairs, guarded at the foot with ornamental iron gates, leads to the floors above. The lay administration is on the ground floor, and the quarters of the medical officers on the first floor.

Visiting-room.

On the right of the entrance hall is a handsome and well-furnished visiting room. Here, as in other apartments, the floor is of Venetian mosaic. The curtained windows are protected, on the outside, with ornamental ironwork. The sashes open up the middle. The room is well lighted and clean. Some adjacent apartments are used by the Sister Superior and her twenty-two assistants belonging to the same religious order of St. Vincent de Paul.

Corridors.

The corridors are lofty, and divided by ornamental iron gates; rooms on one side, windows on the other.

Walls.

The walls throughout are lime-coloured. The floors of the upper rooms are treated with linseed oil.

Bed-rooms.

The ordinary bed-rooms are large and well lighted, with doors opening into the corridors; bedsteads of iron, with canvas bottoms, straw mattress and wool over. The doors open into the corridors. The associated bed-rooms contain from ten to twenty beds.

Infirmary.

In the infirmary ward there were 200 beds, in rooms opening one from the other. A great number of patients were in bed, and about twenty were fastened down.

Dispensary.

Three rooms are used for dispensary purposes. The medicine is sent to the infirmary with the name of the patient written on it, and there administered by one of the sisters. The dispensary seemed in a good condition. There is one dispenser.

Stores.

The stores, under the charge of one of the sisters, are well kept.

Dining-rooms.

Some of the corridors are used as dining-rooms, long painted wooden tables and forms being used. The corridors were crowded, and the patients noisy. In the servants' dining-room there are heavy dining-tables along the walls. The cups in use were of iron, not enamelled. Half the servants dine at a time.

Kitchen and sculleries.

In the kitchen wood is used for fuel. The cooking-stoves are in the middle of the apartment; floor is stone. There is one male cook and six female. Some eight or ten patients assist in the kitchen. The kitchen is clean and well kept. The food is served through a window for the use of the patients. The adjoining sculleries were in good order.

Water.

The fresh water for the Asylum has to be brought in boats from Venice. Pumps are at hand in case of fire, the sea-water being available for this purpose. In the laundry yard there is an artesian well over 200 feet deep, but the water can only be used for washing purposes, in consequence of the quantity of iron it contains. There is a constant supply of it.

Closets.

The closets of the establishment are large rooms with cement floors, in the middle of which there are holes. They are disgusting places. In one of them there were seven patients at the same time.

Bath-rooms.

Bath-rooms.

The bath-rooms have stone floors, the baths being of marble. In the bath-room on the ground floor there are twenty-four such baths. They are not used in winter. Over each is a shower bath, and for purposes of restraint a white coverlet is used.

Heat.

Heat is supplied chiefly by means of hot air passing from below through flues and pipes. There are some stoves as well. Only two of the strong rooms are heated.

Bakery.

The bakery is in a detached one-story building. Three bakers (men) are employed, assisted by two female patients.

Laundry.

The laundry is next the baking-house. It is furnished with large stone and wooden troughs. There is room for six washerwomen at each trough. There is one large boiler. The floor is of stone.

Direction—Visitation.

The Medical Director has three assistants. There is also a lay Director. They are under the supervision of a Council composed of a representative from each town of the province. Visitation takes place twice a year, and oftener if deemed necessary.

Employes—Domestics.

There are twenty men employed for out-door work, and there are ninety female domestics.

Capacity, and number of patients and attendants.

The institution was constructed for 800 patients, but at the time of my visit there were 1,000 there, having ninety attendants.

Per capita cost.

There are three classes of paying patients, paying respectively 4s., 2s. 6d., and a little over 1s. per day per head. There are twenty-six rooms assigned to these patients, mostly used as bed and sitting rooms combined. They are furnished with sofa, table, easy chair, bed, chest of drawers, &c. In the ante-room is a bed for the attendant. These rooms are on the second floor.

Percentage of cures.

I was informed that the cures are at the rate of 10 or 11 per cent. per annum.

Photographs.

A photograph is taken of each patient on admission, and placed in the description book. Another photograph is taken after the lapse of some time, and a third on the discharge of the patient.

Admissions.

The Asylum is maintained by the Venetian provinces—Venice, Padoue, Vicence, Verone, Rovigo, Treviso, Udine, and Belluno, and the representatives of those provinces have the sole right of placing patients in the Asylum, always on a medical certificate of insanity, which has to be verified by the Hospital Directors. The patients are subjected to fifteen days' observation in the General Hospital at Venice before being sent on to St. Clemente.

Employment.

The clothes of the patients (not including boots and shoes) are made on the premises. About 200 patients were engaged in hand-loom weaving, making cloth, canvas, and linen. Others were employed in the sewing-rooms; others in making lace, bead and wool work, cushions, silk embroidery, dresses, &c. Many were employed in domestic work about the premises. In some of the rooms the floors were of wood over the Venetian mosaic. The rooms were clean and plain, the windows being guarded with iron bars on the outside.

Restraints.

There is a great deal of restraint and coercion of one kind or another in this institution. In one corridor there were thirty-two patients in restraint chairs, some with straps round the waist and hobbles at the ankles, some with their hands fastened behind their backs, and some with camisoles. Under each chair was a night-stool; the stench was very bad. None of these patients had shoes or stockings on, and their feet were blue with cold. I was told that in fine weather, when they were allowed to go into the yards, shoes and stockings were supplied to them.

In the rooms for the troublesome patients several women were strapped in bed with strait-waistcoats on. No attendants sleep in the rooms, but there are night nurses, who are on duty for six hours at a time, two nights on and three nights off. A sister and a servant go round to see that the night nurses do their duty. There are no toll-tale clocks or telephonic communication.

A perfect pandemonium—Wretched room.

In a day room at the end of the corridor a perfect pandemonium existed. Fifty women were fastened in various ways—straps, jackets, hobbles, &c.—their feet being blue with cold. In no institution had I heard more noise and uproar, but here the crying and howling were dreadful. Servants were feeding the patients, as they sat or stood, with wooden spoons. The room contained eighty patients in all, attended by seven servants. Round the room were fixed forms with nailed backs. The closet adjoining was as I have already described those places as they exist in this institution. Altogether this room presented a most wretched spectacle.

Patients strapped to beds—Five years in one room.

In an adjacent associated room there were eighty beds, with seven patients fastened in bed. They looked clean. Opening off this room are fourteen strong rooms, having two beds in each, with portable boards between, over the mosaic floor, in lieu of carpets. The windows are high up, the lower half glazed, and the upper fitted with a sliding shutter, worked by means of a rope, to regulate the light. Some patients were fastened in beds, and some in restraint chairs, beds and chairs being fixed to the floor. I was shown a patient who had been five years in one of these rooms, and had been an inmate of the Asylum for six years. Another woman had been so confined for a longer period, but had been out for a short time last year. These patients were without occupation or amusement.

There were other sets of seclusion rooms, with patients similarly secured. The rooms, as a rule, were clean. Some of the patients were fed by a nasal tube.

Fastened to the walls.

In the dining-room of the first floor twenty patients were fastened to the walls, as already described. The food was being served out on a low table, from a cauldron. Servants were feeding the patients under restraint. There was the greatest possible noise and discord in the place.

On the second floor a back day-room is devoted to unclean patients, several of whom were secured in various ways. In an adjoining room the patients were taking food from tins, there being no tables. In another day-room at the end of a long corridor ten women were under restraint, and fastened as before described. A like number of women were secured in an adjacent associated bed-room. Some of the patients under restraint had broad leather collars round the neck and shoulders, leather mittens, and covered iron wristlets.

213 patients under restraint.

In all I counted some 213 patients under restraint.

Remarks—"Chained to the car."

The place on the whole was clean, and the patients fairly dressed but very noisy, though not aggressive. I never heard more noise in any Asylum. The occupation of the patients was not ignored, but more might be found for them, as well as amusement of one kind or another. I noticed in the laundry several leather-covered fetters hanging up, and I was informed that if a patient refused to work these were applied for fastening her to the tub-stand.

Opinions of Superintendent.

The Superintendent informs me that he thinks 600 patients could be individually treated and observed by the Superintendent in one Asylum. He assigns pellagra and hysteria as the chief causes of insanity within the range of his observation. He has noticed an increase of melancholia over maniacal insanity, especially in cases of pellagra. He adopts moral and medical treatment according to the form of the insanity. He has not observed any increase in general paralysis, such cases being rare, nor can he say that insanity is increasing beyond the ratio of increase in population. He does not think that insanity is more curable now than formerly.

RUSSIA.

IMPERIAL LUNATIC ASYLUM, OUDELNAJA, NEAR ST. PETERSBURG.

Dr. Nikiforff, Director.

Situation—Style—Grounds, &c.

This is a public Hospital for the Insane at Oudelnaja, 12 miles from St. Petersburg. It was founded by His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor Alexander Alexandrowitch, and is regarded as under Imperial patronage. It is of the cottage or pavilion description of hospital, the cottages being mostly in the style of the Swiss chalets, with overhanging eaves and much wooden ornamentation. The cottages are surrounded by a large and well-planted garden and grounds, cut up by several walks, and containing about 60 acres in all.

Cost.

The institution has been twelve years in occupation, and cost £42,500.

Arrangement of building.

The cottages occupied by the male patients are on the right-hand side of the entrance, and for the females on the left. There are five of each. The administrative buildings are in the centre. I did not see the men's cottages, but was told that they were similar to those of the women. The house of the resident physician is by the entrance gates, and a portion of it is devoted to administrative purposes. There is an elegant little church standing apart. The kitchen and other offices, and cow-shed, stables, &c., are all detached. The whole place is enclosed, partly by a low open wooden fence and partly by a live hedge.

Classification of patients—The cottages, external and internal—Yards.

The cottages are divided into two classes, those of each class being furnished, as nearly as advisable, in accordance with the previous social position of the patients accommodated in them. Many of the cottages are only of one story, and none exceed two stories in height, and that only in the case of the central block of winged cottages. The buildings are all of wood, plastered inside, and painted or papered. Some are painted half-way up the wall from the floor, and coloured above. The window-sashes, in some instances, are guarded with wire on the inside; in others the sashes are on the French model, and the windows open into little private gardens. There are fourteen yards or courts in all, each cottage having one to itself. They are planted with shrubs, &c., and contain seats. They are surrounded with a high, close fence.

The rooms—Heat, &c.

The rooms on the whole are bright and cheerful, and many of them elegantly furnished. Heat is supplied to the rooms from stoves built in the walls, fed from the corridors. Ventilation is through a small cellar in the basement, from which air passes upwards round the stove-pipes, and is discharged in a warm condition into the upper part of the room. The foul air passes out at the bottom through the gratings.

Troublesome patients.

In one cottage a stairway from the entrance leads to a corridor, in which there are five rooms for the use of seven men of the dirty class. All the doors open outwards. The hall in this cottage extends back so as to make a communication with another cottage devoted to the violent and destructive patients. The single rooms here have large square windows, guarded with wire, and supplied with shutters on the inside, to darken the room if necessary. The furniture includes a box-table and stool, secured to the floor. Over each room door is a small transom. The central rooms are reserved for the use of the attendants.

Second class.

Another cottage I visited is intended for twenty-three women of the second class, and four attendants. The centre is of two stories, with a one-story wing on each side. The floors are painted. The dining-rooms contain tables, forms, piano, &c.; the windows open on to the grounds. The bed-rooms for the quiet patients have from two to seven bedsteads of iron, and a little table and stool to each bed—all light, bright, and cheerful.

First class—Furniture, decorations, &c.

The next cottage I saw had a handsomely furnished receiving room. The corridor is long, and carpeted down the middle, and otherwise well furnished. The windows of the rooms are draped, and decorated with plants and flowers in pots. There are chairs and sofas stuffed and covered. In some of the bed-rooms there are two beds, and bed-room and sitting-room are often combined. A piano is a usual article of furniture, and the rooms are in all respects adapted for the use of ladies. This cottage contains thirty-five patients of the better class, for whom every desirable provision seemed to have been made. The windows on the second floor are guarded with ornamental wire-work on the outside, round which creeping plants are carefully trained. The halls or corridors on the ground and on the upper floor are large, light, and cheerful, and, by means of dividing curtains, form a series of dining, sitting, drawing, work, and amusement rooms. The bed-rooms here are single, and contain covered sofas and chairs, small tables, &c. The walls are mostly papered. The rooms are heated by hot-water pipes. The second floor is a counterpart of the ground floor, and equally well furnished with ottomans, flowers, &c.

General character of rooms.

The rooms in all departments of the institution are well and suitably furnished, and in the manner of the rooms of high-class private dwellings. Many of the floors are inlaid and polished. The doors are mostly double.

Kitchen.

Kitchen.

The kitchen is a wooden building, having a stone floor. The food is served out through windows on each side for males and females, and taken to the various cottages. The attendants have their meals first, the object being to prevent the hurrying of the patients in their meals. Men cooks are chiefly employed.

Laundry, bath-rooms, closets.

The laundry adjoins the kitchen. The bath-rooms, closets, &c., throughout are in a very satisfactory condition. There is a Russian bath in a separate building. The ordinary baths are sunk in the floor, and away from the walls, so as to be perfectly accessible.

Water supply, light, sewerage.

Water is supplied by pumping from a well 2 miles off. Kerosene is used for illuminating purposes. The sewage is taken from the cottages into a pit, and ultimately used on the farm as manure.

Government and visitation—Staff.

The establishment is under the head supervision of an aid-de-camp of the Czar, who is styled the Curator. A Medical Inspector from St. Petersburg visits the Asylum twice a month, and sees every patient. In addition to the Director, there are two resident physicians. The staff also includes a priest, an architect, a lay manager, four head attendants, two of whom are surgical assistants, and one (a female for the women's side) a midwife, and clerk. There are fifty-two ordinary attendants, and thirty-four servants of one description or another.

Salaries, &c.

The salaries are as follows, per annum :—Director, £255; assistant doctors, £113 6s. 8d.; priest, £78, with a travelling allowance of £25; architect, £34; attendants, from £68 to £34; clerk, £42 10s. All the resident officials have free board and lodging, with lights and fire. Every year gratuities are distributed, and salaries increase after three years and six years' service at the rate of 20 per cent. There is no increase as a rule after the six years. The male servants receive £12 and the females £10 per annum. A few are better paid—as, for instance, the female cook, who has £42 10s. per annum. All employes may become entitled to superannuation.

Capacity—inmates.

The institution has a capacity for 220 inmates. At the time of my visit there were 106 males and 101 females; total, 207. The friends of some of the patients find the clothing, and the State supplies the others.

Per capita cost.

The per capita cost is about 16s. 4d. per week.

Food supply.

The food supplied is liberal, and of good quality. Butter, vegetables, and other produce are furnished from the farm, and the rest is procured at the expense of the State.

Employment.

A few patients are employed under the various trade superintendents, and patients assist generally in the work of the establishment.

Admissions.

A medical certificate before admission is generally required, but not insisted upon, the Medical Director deciding upon the admissibility of patients.

Discharges.

Discharges take place on the authority of the Director, under sanction of the Medical Inspector in St. Petersburg.

Deaths.

Deaths are notified to the same Inspector and to the friends of the patient.

Recoveries.

The percentage of recovery is ten, and the percentage of deaths about the same—that is on the number treated during the year.

Restraints.

The personal restraints in use are the camisole and strapping down to bed or chair.

Opinions of Medical Director.

The Medical Director favours me with the opinion that the maximum number of patients for individual treatment should not exceed 200. The chief causes of insanity he estimates to be heredity, sexual abuses and debauchery, and family troubles and losses. He has noticed an increase in melancholia over maniacal insanity. Physical treatment—especially warm bathing—is chiefly relied upon. General paralysis has increased considerably, and is more observable now amongst the young than formerly. He does not find that insanity is more or less curable now than formerly, nor is he able to offer an opinion as to any change in the increase of insanity as compared with the increase of population.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

COAST HOSPITAL, LITTLE BAY.

(REPORT ON, FOR 1884).

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Colonial Secretary.

Health Department, N.S.W.,

Sir,

Office of the Medical Adviser to the Government, 30 June, 1886.

I have the honour to present the following Report upon the working of the Coast Hospital at Little Bay during the year 1884.

This institution was built during the small-pox epidemic of 1831-2, and was designed to afford additional quarantine and hospital accommodation for infected families. The reserve and buildings are fully described by Sir Alfred Roberts in his Report upon that outbreak, presented by him to the Board of Health, March 13, 1833, and ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed on March 22 in the same year. Upon this part of the subject, therefore, I need not touch, the various buildings remaining as at first erected.

About the end of February, 1832, the small-pox epidemic ceased, and these buildings stood empty for a short time. The Sydney Infirmary being then overcrowded, the Committee applied to the Honourable the Colonial Treasurer to be allowed to transfer some of their convalescent patients to the Coast Hospital; they to pay all expenses in connection therewith, and to provide a Resident Medical Officer. Permission was given with the proviso that they should evacuate the hospital at twenty-four hours' notice if called upon to do so.

About the end of August, 1832, the A.S.N. Co.'s s.s. "Gunga" came into Port Jackson with a case of small-pox on board. Notice was given to the Committee, and they emptied and handed over the hospital according to agreement; and persons from the "Gunga" were transferred there and held in quarantine until their release in due course.

At the close of 1832 the Government appointed a Medical Superintendent (Dr. J. A. Beattie) to the charge of the hospital, which had stood empty since the removal of the "Gunga's" sick. It continued empty until, in March, 1833, the s.s. "Menmuir" came in with several cases of small-pox among its passengers. The sick were sent to the Hospital, and were kept there in quarantine.

The Committee of the Sydney Infirmary again desiring the relief afforded before, after the discharge of the "Menmuir" cases, the transfer of a few convalescents was a second time allowed; but the Medical Superintendent appointed by the Government remained in charge, and all expenses were borne by the Government. About the end of September, 1833, however, that officer resigned, and entered the Immigration service. The hospital was again emptied, and it remained unoccupied until near the close of that year.

At the end of 1833 it began to be apparent that extra hospital accommodation must be provided for Sydney, and the Government of the day decided to convert the Coast Hospital into an establishment for the reception of convalescents from the Metropolitan hospitals. Hitherto it had been regarded as a part of the quarantine establishment of the Colony, and was therefore under the control of the Honourable the Colonial Treasurer and the administration of the Health Officer. It was now withdrawn from that service, and transferred to the control of the Honourable the Colonial Secretary and the administration of the Medical Adviser to the Government. This change having been made, a few convalescents were admitted during the last week of December, 1833, and the first week of January, 1834. On the 10th of January Dr. Bradley Violette was appointed to take temporary charge, and the regular admission of convalescent cases began.

This arrangement had scarcely held a month when the increasing prevalence of typhoid fever in and around Sydney began to embarrass the Committees of the several Metropolitan hospitals, who found the presence of an undue proportion of fever cases in their wards prejudicial to the other patients therein, and to the nursing arrangements of their institutions. It was suggested that the Coast Hospital should be recognized as the hospital for infectious fevers for Sydney. Accordingly, wards were set apart for the reception of such cases, which were, in the main, cases of typhoid. The plan of the Hospital for the purpose for which it was originally erected is such that it was possible to use it both as a fever and as a convalescent hospital, the wards being far apart, and divided into two separate establishments; and to the treatment of these two classes of cases it is now devoted.

This use of the hospital, however, has entailed certain expenses from which the Metropolitan hospitals are either exempt or which they incur only in proportion to the work done. Thus it has been necessary to organize an ambulance staff for the removal both of acute fever cases and convalescents, for Little Bay is 10 miles from the Post Office. Then the old Observation Ground was of necessity placed several hundred yards from the hospital proper, and therefore has still to be provided with its own staff, although it is no longer necessary to strictly isolate the persons under treatment there from those in the hospital grounds. Whatever number of patients are under treatment at the Observation Ground (now called the Sanatorium), a staff of seven at the least, and a separate kitchen, must be kept; and to remove the patients from Sydney several vehicles and horses are constantly maintained in a state of efficiency. Upon inspecting the financial statement with which I have the honour to conclude this report, it will be seen that the establishment has been economically conducted; nevertheless, in criticising the working expenses, the two items just mentioned should be borne in mind. Moreover, although the hospital is debited with the whole cost of the ambulance staff, in the latter part of the year small-pox again appeared in Sydney, and a portion of that staff was transferred to the service of the Treasury, and continued engaged in quarantine duties for many weeks.

Farther, upon the same subject of expense, the extreme haste with which the hospital was built, and its being handed over and opened under the pressure of panic before it was either properly found or even completed, have necessitated the expenditure from time to time of large sums of money under heads set down in the financial statement referred to. Much has been done during the year to render the buildings fit for permanent occupation, but very much more remains to be done, and similar items of expenditure must probably be provided for in several future years. Under these circumstances on beginning to convert this building into a regular hospital, it was necessary to occupy the various parts consecutively; the number of beds made up and the number of staff employed, therefore, increased gradually from month to month. The following table shows the proportion borne by the number of staff to the number of patients, reckoned upon an average of the daily numbers of each, for each quarter of the year. The nursing members of the staff have to be increased in larger proportion to an increased number of fever cases than would be necessary for a similar increase of general cases.

NOTE.—In July Dr. Violette was permanently appointed to be Medical Superintendent.

The admission of patients to the hospital was managed during the first half of this year by my predecessor in office in the following manner: Convalescents from the Sydney Infirmary and from Prince Alfred Hospital were admitted at twenty-four hours' notice from their resident medical officers of the number of beds they wished to occupy; but very often more patients were forwarded than notice had been given of. In addition, in the month of February, fever cases began to be admitted upon certificate of any legally qualified practitioner that the patient was fit to undertake the journey, and in some cases from the Metropolitan hospitals. The fever patients were asked to pay something towards their maintenance; for, in view of the desirability of removing them to a place where skilled nursing and constant medical supervision would give them an infinitely better chance of recovering than in their own homes, all classes were admitted without discrimination; and some did pay an inconsiderable sum in the total during the year. But the slighter general, or convalescent, or chronic cases which were admitted were, of necessity (and according to the intention of the late Sir Alexander Stuart), treated as pauper sick, gratuitously. It was soon observed, however, that there was no guarantee that the convalescents forwarded from the general hospitals had been Government patients (or pauper sick) while within their wards, although upon admission to the Coast Hospital they immediately became so. Farther, the opportunity now had of inquiring into the circumstances of those among this class of admissions who had been Government patients in other hospitals, convinced my predecessor that no sufficient inquiry was held before orders of admission at the Government expense were given to ascertain whether the applicant was indeed destitute; the admission of persons to the general hospitals at the Government expense being, at the beginning of this year, managed in the following way. Certain forms, authorised by the Honourable the Colonial Secretary, were issued, upon application, to the more responsible members of the community for distribution among the sick poor, and the person giving the order away certified that the patient was destitute. This, when presented at the hospital, constituted an order of admission; and the hospital was entitled to receive from the Government for each such order a sum of (at first) 2s. 3d. a day for each day the patient was detained under treatment—a sum which was increased latterly to 3s. Perhaps originally some inquiry into the circumstances of these persons was conducted on the part of the Government for its own protection; for this arrangement was made solely for the benefit of paupers, and the capitation paid upon them was additional to the annual Government grant to general hospitals which is proportioned to the contributions received from charitable persons. But, of late years at all events, no such inquiry had been held, and, as I have already remarked, upon investigation it seemed that many of these persons were not entitled by their circumstances to the relief they had obtained. It appeared necessary, therefore, to recommend that steps should be taken to conduct an examination on behalf of the Government of persons representing themselves as pauper sick; and additional reason was afforded by a consideration of the following circumstances. The admission of pauper patients had not been intended to extend to other hospitals than the Sydney Infirmary. But the Committee of the Infirmary had found the sums paid by the Government for such patients an indispensable aid to their funds; and so, when Prince Alfred Hospital was opened, its Committee urgently sought and obtained permission to entertain them them too. In one sense or other these patients were a source of profit to the two institutions named. And it happened, during the first half of this year, that, while those two hospitals retained in their wards many Government patients, a very large proportion of the convalescents sent by them to the Coast Hospital had been, not Government, but ordinary patients. Lastly, as the Government now had a hospital entirely under its own control suitable to the treatment of the pauper sick, it seemed expedient that as many as possible of that class of persons should be sent there direct, without first passing through the wards of the general hospitals. Authority was therefore sought and obtained to carry out the following plan: Colonial Secretary's orders were abolished; a branch of the Medical Adviser's office was opened at 407 Pitt-street, to which all persons requiring admission to hospitals at Government expense, or to Government Asylums, were directed to apply between the hours of eleven and twelve daily. An officer of the Health Department, called the Admitting Medical Officer (Dr. Sinclair) was appointed to attend there, his duty being to examine applicants and decide whether they would be best treated in the wards of a general hospital, or by being sent to the Coast Hospital direct, or by being consigned (as aged, or incurable, sick and destitute persons) to one of the Government Asylums. At the same time you instructed the Inspector of Public Charities to attend to make inquiry into the financial condition of the applicants; his duty being to see that none but such as were really destitute obtained orders for admission. But if, as sometimes happened, a person suffering from infectious fever applied to the Admitting Medical Officer, the patient was always transmitted at once, and without inquiry, to the Coast Hospital, for reasons already explained. During the latter half of this year, therefore, patients have been admitted from three sources: from my branch office in Pitt-street, upon certificate of the Inspector of Charities that the patient is destitute; from the general hospitals, upon recommendation of their respective Resident Medical Officers; and from the medical profession, upon certificate that the disease is an infectious fever, and that the patient is fit to travel. To these must be added a small number of children received from the State Children's Relief Board, who were suffering from various ailments, which it was believed a residence on the sea-coast would benefit.

To this unusually low death-rate it is probable that careful selection of cases for transmission to so great a distance may have contributed. Nevertheless, unless this selection was based upon the number of days during which the disease had persisted, I believe its influence upon the rate of mortality must have been small, and not to be estimated; and while there is no evidence that the selection was so governed, on the other hand there is reason to believe that more regard was had, as a rule, to the actual state of the patient than to the duration of his illness. Upon this point, however, I can offer no statistical information for this year; but, considering that the patients were drawn, if not from all classes, at all events not from the destitute classes alone; and secondly that, as a rule, only the more severe cases of fever find their way to a public hospital; I believe that some part of the unusually large percentage of recoveries may fairly be ascribed to the skill and unremitting care of the Medical Superintendent (Dr. Violette), to the excellent nursing he maintained, and to the free ventilation of the fever wards with the pure air with which they are surrounded. From the following table it will be perceived that all but a few cases were admitted upon the recommendation of the medical profession.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

COAST HOSPITAL, LITTLE BAY.

(REPORT ON, FOR 1885.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir,

Health Department, New South Wales, July, 1886.

Herewith I have the honour to present a report upon the working of the Coast Hospital at Little Bay during the year 1885.

Tables I to IV deal with all persons under treatment, except lepers. Their number was 1,204, of whom 85 died. The average daily number under treatment was 151; the average stay in hospital, 37·6 days. Of the total number, 467 were convalescents transferred from the Metropolitan Hospitals. Some of these persons had not been admitted to those institutions as Government patients; but all, after their transfer to this hospital, were maintained at the expense of the Government entirely.

During the autumn of this year small-pox again made its appearance in Sydney. A part of the ambulance staff and equipment was, as on a previous occasion, transferred to the service of the Honourable the Colonial Treasurer for quarantine purposes; and at one time it was deemed necessary to stop further admissions to the hospital, in preparation for emptying it for use as a quarantine station, in case the disease should become epidemic.

Tables V to VIII deal with the total cases of fever admitted during the year, which were 302 in all; that is to say, 285 typhoid, and 17 of other kinds of infectious fever, as shown in Table VIII. Of these, 153 were admitted through this office upon certificates of legally qualified practitioners that the patient was fit to be removed; and 124 were admitted through the Pitt-street Branch of this office, after examination by the Admitting Medical Officer (Dr. Sinclair).

Table V shows the 285 cases of typhoid fever, and the deaths, distributed under sex and age. The mortality, it will be seen, was 17·54 per cent. But 4 patients died within twenty-four hours of their admission, and apparently should not have been certified as fit for removal. If these are deducted, the rate of mortality becomes 16·37 per cent. Upon this point the Resident Medical Superintendent (Dr. F. M. Smith) informs me that he observes that patients who are admitted before the first fortnight of illness has passed by do better, upon the whole, than those who are admitted later. So insidious is the onset of typhoid fever in the majority of cases that patients are far from apprehending a serious illness at first; and often it is only after ten or twelve days that they begin to suspect that their attack may last longer than their means or the patience of friends will serve them. Thus it happens that applications for admission are often first made at an advanced stage, when, although the degree of disease may not have been severe, strength has already begun to fail from the mere duration of illness. Such cases, it is known, do not so well bear removal than as they would have borne it at an earlier date; and this remark applies whatever (within reasonable limits) the distance to which they are removed may be, provided the carriage is properly constructed for the purpose and cautiously driven. For this, and for other less important reasons, it is desirable that typhoid-fever patients should be presented for admission to hospitals before the tenth day of illness has passed at all events; and it seems probable that, generally speaking, the duration of illness is a more important guide to the probable effect of removal upon the patient than any opinions which can be formed from his apparent state. This, however, should be taken as a general rule, to which, of course, there are exceptions.

Table X gives an account of the lepers under detention. Of these, one was an aboriginal; the rest Chinese. The former, after a prolonged stay, appeared to have entirely recovered, and he was accordingly released. Of the Chinese, one died from intercurrent disease. Those who remain appear to be contented, and even happy. They are fully occupied in fishing and gardening for themselves; they are comfortably lodged by themselves; they have books bestowed by a Chinese minister of the Church of England, who occasionally visits them; and the knowledge that none of their countrymen in Australia would, if they escaped, hold any communication with them probably reconciles them to confinement.

[1358 copies—Approximate Cost of Printing (labour and material), £111 9s. 0d.]

A glance at the foregoing table serves to show that the gross amount of Government expenditure on Philanthropic and Charitable Institutions throughout the Colony during the year 1884 amounted to the sum of £172,942 9s. 9d., exceeding by £23,749 11s. 9d. the amount paid for similar purposes in the preceding year.

A closer examination of the Report itself furnishes evidence of the particular directions the above expenditure has taken, and is the more interesting as exhibiting its progress in new fields of operation.

Thus it may be seen—

First—That the building grants to metropolitan subsidised Hospitals were smaller during the period under review than had been the case for several years previous; while those made to the country district Hospitals were more numerous and in the aggregate represents a larger amount than heretofore.

Second—That the large increase of expenditure under the State Children's Relief Board, and the lessened payments to other Institutions for State Children, point unmistakably to the fact that the new system is likely entirely to supersede the old.

It is to be regretted that your intention, evident some time back, of better systematising the public charities has been from unavoidable circumstances placed in abeyance, but the delay has not been without compensating advantage, inasmuch as it has furnished opportunity for more closely considering some important questions, and has tended to remove future friction, by preparing and reconciling the Institutions most likely to be affected by coming changes to the altered relations they will have to maintain with the Government and the public in the future.

Your determinations are anxiously looked for inter alia in regard to the following matters:—The formation of a Hospital Board—the rate of payment for patients admitted into the subsidised metropolitan Hospitals under the Colonial Secretary's order, or some equally efficient and more economical way of providing for such patients elsewhere—the rate of subsidy to be given to the Hospitals in event of the Government relieving them of the pauper patients—the completion of the Prince Alfred Hospital, with a view to rendering it possible to reduce the rate cost at that Institution—the resumption of the site of the Sydney Hospital, or the amount of aid to be afforded to its Board for completing the building partially erected—and a distinct enunciation of the Government policy in connection with the Benevolent Society, so that a new Lying-in Hospital may be commenced on an approved site, convenient to the public and accessible to students of the University pursuing obstetric studies.

In regard to the Maternity Hospital it may be well to remind you that a considerable sum of money, part of the Reserve Fund of the Benevolent Society, has been set aside for some time past for the erection of such a Hospital.

Following the custom of previous years, I now proceed to give a brief summary of the principal operations of the several Institutions within this Report.

Government Asylums for Infirm and Destitute.

The administration of these Asylums continued highly satisfactory, being both efficient and economical. In two very minor regards I venture to suggest concessions which would be appreciated by the inmates and yet lead to little inconvenience or add greatly to maintenance cost.

During the winter months the hour for leaving the dormitories might, to those who wish it, be 7 a.m. in place of 6 a.m.; also, without interfering with the quality of the chief staple of food (a good nourishing soup), a little more variety might be added to the dietary scale. Where large numbers have to be provided for at small cost, early hours and simplicity as to details are no doubt essential features in the administration, but the effort to secure these may be carried to excess.

The Female Asylum, Hyde Park, continued, as heretofore, overcrowded. It will soon be replaced by the new Asylum at Newington, where, under more favourable circumstances, a better classification of the inmates will be possible, and the accommodation provided for them be of such a character as to exhibit the care bestowed upon them, and no longer discredit the Government and the Colony.

At George-street, Parramatta, the numbers were gradually increased as provision for their accommodation in the newer portion of the Asylum was completed. The improvements chiefly consisted of a dining-room, kitchens, &c., and a laundry.

The principal work at the Liverpool Asylum was the completion of repairs to the central building which is now thoroughly in order, having been slated and new ceilings placed in the dormitories.

Throughout the long continued dry weather the polluted state of the river was a source of much annoyance to all connected with the Asylum.

It

* This amount includes travelling expenses incurred in bringing paupers to Asylums in account with Railway Department, but does not include £400 paid through Medical vote.

It is earnestly to be desired that in the passing of a Public Health Bill means will be found for putting an end to what is generally acknowledged as a serious evil, but which has successfully resisted all attempts for its removal.

The Macquarie-street Asylum, and Erysipelas Hospital, Parramatta, has been usefully employed. The cases of erysipelas treated have, however, been fewer than in former years.

HOSPITALS.

As in a portion of the previous year, so in 1884, diseases of enteric character were prevalent throughout the Colony, and may perhaps be in part accounted for from contaminated sources of water supply, and also from neglect of ordinary precautions in regard to sanitary arrangements.

The large number of cases in and around Sydney tended to keep the two subsidised Hospitals supplied with a considerable portion of their patients, notwithstanding the fact that for such patients as could without injury be transported thither the establishment at Little Bay was also brought into requisition.

In August a new system for admitting patients at the public expense into the metropolitan Hospitals was inaugurated.

To better illustrate its results a table is given, showing the number of applications and their disposal carried into the present year, i.e., from 16 August, 1884, to 31 July, 1885.

The advantages it possesses over the older plan is, that it not only provides means for a more searching inquiry as to the reasonableness of claims for Government aid, but it distributes the cases to the Institution best fitted to supply the necessary treatment.

RETURN of the number of persons who have applied at the Pitt-street office for admission to Hospitals from the date of its establishment on August 16, 1884, to 31 July, 1885.

Sydney Hospital.

For want of funds the Sydney Hospital Board have been unable to proceed with the erection of the new buildings in Macquarie-street.

In the body of the Report will be found statistics showing the working of this Hospital during last year.

Prince Alfred Hospital.

The contracts in connection with the central back block were carried forward nearly to completion by the end of December. The wards in this building will give about 60 more beds, but even including such addition it must be impossible to reduce the rate cost within reasonable limits till more trade accommodation is provided, so as to spread the expenditure of administration over a larger surface. The Board are however quite unable to incur any outlay for such purpose. I fear it will become imperative on the Government to provide the necessary funds in order that the moneys it has already granted may be economically utilised.

(The operations of the Prince Alfred Hospital are given on page 9.)

The Country Hospitals.

PARTICULARS of accommodation, receipts, expenditure, and diseases treated within the Country Hospitals are given on pages 12 to 18, and, excepting the Medical Reports, are summarized in the following table:—

The prevalence of diseases of febrile character—the pushing forward of Railway construction—and the fact that owing to greater facilities for travelling a larger proportion of the sick throughout Country Districts can now make their way to Hospitals, combined to keep these Institutions more than usually full throughout the past year. Their Committees, as they acquired fuller perceptions of the necessity of supplying their several Institutions with proper appliances, have become more active in their requisitions to Government for fever-wards, building extensions, &c., while other localities, where till now no Hospitals have existed, have pushed forward claims for consideration.

To meet the varied applications concessions have been unavoidable; but local effort was always at the same time insisted on. If present indications are to be relied on, a danger is arising lest small Hospitals may be multiplied, especially along lines of railway, to an unnecessary extent, and detrimental to their own interests.

The Sick Children's Hospital, Glebe.

The number of cases treated in this Institution last year amounted to 191, being a small increase over that for 1883. The Hospital is well managed. Enteric cases, as elsewhere, were numerous during the period under review. Statistics and details of working are given in pages 10 and 11.

Reports on the operations of the Randwick Asylum and of the Orphan Schools are given in extenso on page 20, part 1, and on page 33 (Part 2 of this Report.) These Institutions, if not altogether superseded, will probably in the future occupy relatively a secondary position as compared with that of the State Children's Relief Board. It has been said that the action of the State Children's Relief Board tends to increase the number of children provided for at the public expense, overlooking the fact that those children only come within the Board's cognizance who are already State children.

The Boarding-out System, not only in this Colony but in other Countries, is becoming acknowledged as the best method of treating pauper children or such as have no home life to fall back upon. To ensure the full benefits expected, the State Children's Relief Board will, however, have to exercise watchful care over its system of checks and counter checks, disregarding all interests but those of the children only.

On economic grounds the Board has already achieved success; and if it can destroy the continuity of pauperism by raising the children into a sphere of social independence it will gain for itself the gratitude of the community.

The Randwick Destitute Children's Relief Society.

All the State children will be removed from this institution by end of present year.

So far as the future at present unfolds itself but two courses appear to lie before the Randwick Society—the one to hand over its property to the Government, which has practically assumed its place, and acts through its own Board; the other to decline further State aid, and under Government approval to inaugurate a new course for itself.

There are many instances of children having fathers able and willing to pay for their maintenance, and therefore not fit objects for State charity, who are yet without a mother's care, and liable to be neglected.

The Randwick Society might in this direction do good service. Great care will have to be taken, should it occupy such a field of benevolence, that it does not go beyond what is absolutely necessary, lest its actions should tend to weaken the vigour of family ties.

The Benevolent Society.

As has before been brought to your notice the Benevolent Society has long felt itself hampered by the conditions in which it finds itself, and has desired to be relieved therefrom by having a knowledge of your determinations conveyed to it in regard to important matters in connection with its working. It may be assumed that the new Lying-in Hospital will be entirely disassociated from the future Receiving House and offices for out-door relief, even though it remain under the Society's administration. For the Receiving House, &c., no large premises will be required in the future, the formation of cottage invalid homes enabling the State Board to keep down the number of children in the Asylum to a minimum.

Allusion has already been made to changes which, during the last two or three years, have been apparent in the methods of supplying out relief, especially in so far as the Government were likely to become affected by it.

The subject is now referred to, only because while not recommending a favourable consideration to the application of the Society, I took the liberty in a former report to make a counter proposition, induced thereto from a belief that affording merely temporary relief to the indigent, and not at the same time adopting measures for permanently improving their status, was neither the highest benevolence nor in accordance with the principles of sound political economy.

In this view it was suggested that the Society might devote a portion of their large reserve fund to the erection of a range of buildings (on some suitable site to be provided) into which women with children might be placed, and where, influenced by a wholesome supervision, and freed from the depressing and corrupting conditions of alley life, they might attain to a social status impossible for them otherwise to reach.

This subject is so akin to that which has been engaging attention in Europe, viz., "the better housing of the poor," that I am encouraged to hope the Benevolent Society may yet give the matter their attention, and open out a legitimate field for their efforts.

Notwithstanding that many complaints were made by the Committee to the Government of the overcrowded condition of the Asylum, very satisfactory work, especially in the treatment of cases in the Lying-in Wards, was performed during the past year; also the general health of the children in the receiving wards was as good as could be hoped for, and no more than the rate of infant mortality usual in Asylums took place.

The value of the Reserve Fund and land in the possession of the Society is not over-estimated at £45,000, the greater portion of which came to it through the State.

Details of the Society's operations in its several departments and its financial position will be found on page 28.

Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind.

This Institution continued to maintain its happy condition of almost entire independence of Government aid, and in the early part of the present year entered on extended premises free of building debt.

It proposes to itself in the future the duty of making a more thorough search for cases coming within the sphere of its interest, and to offer additional appliances to such as already are under its care.

Particulars of the operations and a financial statement for the year are given on page 22.

Industrial Blind Asylum.

The Committee, up to a very recent period, have encountered difficulties and drawbacks of no ordinary character, and that they have persevered despite them is as creditable to their courage as it is fortunate for those in whose interests so much time and energy have been ungrudgingly given.

For some time after it was founded the Institution afforded only doubtful hope of permanency. It is therefore the more gratifying that it now gives promise of having established itself on a sound basis.

Each year it will find it less difficult to attract new workers and to induce those who have entered the Institution to pass through the drudgery of initiation—also to find sale for such of the work of the inmates as meets the requirements of the market. At the same time the public must not lose sight of the fact that beginners are assisted till they learn to maintain themselves, and as after instruction the entire cost of the manufactured article, less only the cost of its material, is paid to the workers without deduction for advances, the Committee cannot hope to make the institution self-supporting, but must always depend upon a substantial expression of sympathy from the public.

The Orphan Schools.

There is little to call for special remark in regard to the quality of administration of these two Institutions during the year 1884.

Every care and attention was paid to the interests of the children, but owing to the cessation of admissions and withdrawals either by their friends or the State Children's Relief Board, for boarding out or for apprenticing, a continuous diminution in numbers was observable, until at the termination of above period comparatively few children remained.

The entire abolition of both the Protestant and Roman Catholic Orphan Schools seems naturally to be a question of early consideration, as it is no longer possible to carry them on in an economical manner.

N.S.S.

N.S.S. "Vernon."

Another year of very successful results followed on the excellent management of this Institution, and marks its special value for obtaining wholesome influences, over youths, who previously have either been entirely neglected or who exhibit exceptional unwillingness to submit themselves to authority.

To the fullest extent possible in above regard the ship training has done all that could be expected, but for some time a feeling has become more and more general on the part of the public that in order to keep our Reformatory and Industrial School system abreast of the opinions of the day, means other than those a training ship can possibly be made to supply, are required to be introduced.

Only a small percentage of the youths on leaving the ship last year found themselves in a position to utilize the special training they had received on board, while the majority entered on their apprenticeship ignorant of household duties or the practice of rural pursuits.

Your intention to continue to utilize the ship as a primary means for establishing discipline, and subsequently to remove the youths as deemed worthy of confidence to a model farm and workshops, promises to be attended with the happiest results, especially as the training is to be carried on conjointly with an endeavour to establish home influences.

Female Industrial School, Biloëla.

The Matron reports the girls as having conducted themselves well throughout the year, and the general health of the inmates to be good.

This Institution suffers not only by comparison with its livelier neighbour, the school ship, but from its own depressing surroundings.

The day is not distant when a move to other premises will be necessitated by the completion of the new dock, and seeing that considerable outlay was incurred during the past two years in supplying accommodation of which the Institution had been deprived it seems a pity that such outlay was not made in removing the school.

It is contended that the class of girls in our Industrial Schools should be gradually inured by contact with wholesome outside influences to hereafter maintain a respectable position when they re-enter the community.

At present their ignorance of the useful arts of home life places them at disadvantage, and no effort should be considered superfluous which can be brought to bear in removing such disqualification.

SCHOOLS OF ARTS.

In connection with my remarks in the second part of the Report on technical education as allied to the subject a consideration by the Government might be made whether it is not expedient to place the Schools of Arts throughout the Colony within the immediate influence of the Government Board of Technical Education.

It must be allowed that their present condition, especially in the country districts, is unsatisfactory, and that as now carried on for all purposes of instruction, excepting in regard to their reading-rooms and libraries, the absence of these Institutions would hardly be missed.

To bring them into consonance with the intention to which they owe their existence some outside directing influence is evidently needed, an influence more intimate than any hitherto brought to bear upon them by the Department of Public Instruction.

The subsidies paid to our Schools of Arts, individually considered, may be insignificant, but their aggregate amount gives them importance. Their buildings are in large part erected with public money, yet no supervision is made to ensure their efficient or economical construction, or that when completed they shall afford proper accommodation or be in accordance with sanitary conditions. In fact, educational considerations are generally subordinated in these Institutions to the acquirement of a hall to be rented for public amusements.

Remedial measures are not too late but should not be delayed.

If our Colonial youth are to cope in the future on equal terms with those who come here after having received training in the Art and Technical Schools of Europe it appears advisable that a larger significance be given to the value of our Schools of Arts, and that they be so conducted as to more thoroughly discharge the purpose for which public money is spent upon them year by year.

The advantages of the course I would suggest, namely, that they should be placed under control of the Government Technical Board, are:—

- 1st. That legitimate motive and motion would be given to our Schools of Arts.
- 2nd. That no expensive or new machinery would require to be called into existence in introducing such reform.
- 3rd. That the work throughout the entire Colony would be homogeneous in character, and the system admit of no waste by useless duplication of effort, as must inevitably be the case supposing separate action were attempted.

I have, &c.,

HUGH ROBISON,

Inspector of Public Charities.

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

The determination of the Government respecting the completion or otherwise of the buildings partially erected for this Hospital is anxiously awaited.

Meanwhile the Committee conducted the operations in connection with the Institution during last year in a satisfactory manner.

They also took further measures to minimize the danger from fire by erecting additional outside staircases, and by other precautions.

Several

Several changes occurred in the medical and nursing staff. Miss Osborn, who for many years occupied the position of Lady Superintendent, retired owing to ill-health, and has been succeeded by Miss Mackay, a lady of approved efficiency, who held a prominent position in the Hospital.

As regards the nursing department, the operations were upon a somewhat extended scale. Of twenty probationers taken on in 1884 eleven remained at end of the year.

Three trained nurses left the Hospital to take senior nurses' positions in the fever wards of the Coast Hospital.

The Hospitals at Young and Armidale received head-nurses as matrons.

Two nurses joined the Newcastle Hospital, and a third that at Armidale.

One nurse left for the Nursing Home, Phillip-street, for which position she received special training, and one for private nursing.

A nurse trained in the Sydney Hospital, but who left prior to 1884, has recently accepted the appointment of head nurse at the Ballarat Hospital.

In all respects, excepting in regard to expense, the working of this Hospital has been found extremely satisfactory, and owing to its splendid appliances and the luxurious comforts it is able to offer to patients, the applications for admission have been far in excess of its accommodation.

The central back block of buildings advanced nearly to completion by the end of the year, and will, when opened, be capable of adding about sixty beds, but it is evident that to bring the number of beds and the administrative accommodation within reasonable proportions, the one to the other, no time should be lost in adding at least two more pavilions to the Hospital.

The beds available last year for the reception of patients, exclusive of those in the four isolating cottages, numbered only 140, while the administrative block has been erected to supply the requirements of a Hospital containing 450 beds.

Economic administration under such circumstances is impossible.

A notable event in connection with the Prince Alfred Hospital was the presentation early in the present year, by the Hon. James White, of a cabinet containing a very complete set of surgical instruments, collected under the supervision of Dr. Sydney P. Jones, and valued at nearly £1,000.

Twenty-one patients were received into the special wards.

SICK CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL.

The number of young patients who were treated last year in this Institution proves the necessity of such a Department, whether conducted as a separate establishment or as part of a general Hospital.

It has already been pointed out that instances have occurred, showing there is in the mind of the public a certain amount of preference for the general Hospitals, even for children's cases, founded perhaps on a supposition that the highest special professional knowledge can alone be obtained in them.

Such preference may not (and certainly need not) be well founded while the separate Hospital carries certain advantages of its own, but it will be to the interest of the Government and of the public to see that unnecessary duplication of effort is not made.

Meanwhile both our general Hospitals have complained of insufficient accommodation; and there cannot be a doubt but that within the period of this report the Sick Children's Hospital has not only rendered valuable services but has relieved the Government of many cases which otherwise would have been cast upon it.

In matters pertaining to management and efficiency the administration appeared most effective. In the Training Department for nurses the numbers during the year were—

In training	8

A reference to the Medical Report shows the several forms of disease treated, also notably the large number of cases of diseases of the osseous system.

It is in this class of cases one of the largest uses of this Hospital is to be found, such cases being generally too serious and troublesome for home treatment, and too tedious for the wards of a general Hospital.

STATE CHILDREN'S RELIEF DEPARTMENT.

In view of the successful results which thus far have followed the introduction of the Boarding-out system in this Colony, it is satisfactory to observe that the operations of the above department during the past year have been largely extended, and that there remains no room for doubting that all the State Children eligible for being placed in homes will soon be brought under the control of the State Children's Relief Board.

In a former report fear was expressed (at that time justified by existing circumstances) that an Asylum might possibly have to be retained for boys in the care of the State, there appearing to be on the part of many persons possessed of good homes and willing to undertake the charge of girls reluctance to encounter responsibilities likely to arise in controlling boys of active age.

During the past year, however, since operations have been extended into districts where dairy farming and agricultural pursuits are combined, the number of applications for boys has largely increased; there is therefore every prospect of a sufficient supply of good homes for boys being placed at the Board's disposal to meet requirements in the future.

A difficulty also formerly existed in respect of children whose physical condition rendered them unsuitable for reception into healthy families, yet whom it was desirable to remove from Asylum life. The establishment of State Children's Invalid Homes now enables the Board to assume the care of such children. They may add somewhat to the rate cost per head in estimating the Board's operations, but they are an integral part of its system.

Some of the children thus treated and formerly considered as ineligible for boarding-out have so improved that they have since been received into the homes of foster parents.

So long as supervision continues active over its officers, district visitors and the persons in whose care the State Children's Relief Board places its children, its operations are likely to be most satisfactory and beneficial.

As before pointed out one of the most valuable results promised by this system is that it tends to lessen pauperism in the future by lifting its charges from out the pauper area, whereas Asylum training has been found to possess an opposite tendency.

For the purpose of supplying needed accommodation the Board was last year placed in possession of Ormonde House, Paddington. To it are brought children in course of transfer, and for observation in order to enable each child to be placed in the home best suited for it.

Experience has proved the desirability of limiting the rate of payment for healthy children under three years of age to the minimum subsidy (5s. per week), a higher rate being found to attract persons desirous of assuming the care of children, from motives purely mercenary.

Such are now deterred from applying while yet there is no difficulty in obtaining a choice of foster parents and good homes.

DEAF AND DUMB AND BLIND INSTITUTION.

An examination of the table of receipts and expenditure affords very satisfactory information, and shows the prosperous condition of this Institution.

It will be seen that the payments on behalf of pupils for school fees and clothing exceeded £1,000 while the funds which have for some time been in course of collection for the purpose of erecting a new wing amounted to £10,000, thus enabling the Society to enter it on completion without having incurred debt.

The Committee continue to deserve commendation for administration as well as for the success which has attended their efforts in enlisting public support on behalf of their work. In the latter respect their example is worthy of imitation by the Directors of other subsidized Public Charities.

The increase of accommodation now at command will allow of an augmentation in the number of pupils.

Active inquiry is being made throughout the country districts for children of the class whose education is the especial care of this Society, in order that they may be afforded an opportunity of sharing in the advantages now offered by this Institution.

During the past year the health of the children was not as good as usual, several cases of sickness requiring hospital treatment having arisen; none, however, were of a very serious character.

THE BENEVOLENT ASYLUM.

In the published report of this Society strong representations are made for such steps being taken by the Government as will enable the Directors to proceed in their endeavours to bring the accommodation of this Institution more into harmony with modern ideas in respect of ward accommodation, and to put an end to the overcrowding which for some time past has been a cause of anxiety to the management, and of danger to the health of the inmates of the Asylum.

As stated in a previous report, considerable change in the future operations of this Society will probably follow on the Government resuming the present site; meanwhile its objects are embraced within the following departments:—

1. An Out-door Relief Department.
2. A Receiving Asylum for homeless and deserted children, and such as are awaiting removal under the care of the Government.
3. A place of treatment for sickly mothers with infants inadmissible into hospitals, and for females suffering from diseases peculiar to women.
4. A Lying-in Hospital.
5. A Training Institution for midwives and nurses.

In respect of No. 1, the State subsidizes the out-relief to the extent of £500 per annum, £1 to £1 on subscriptions.

The entire cost of Nos. 2, 3, and 4 is borne by the Government.

During the year a small addition to the southern wing was made for the better accommodation of applicants for out-relief.

INDUSTRIAL BLIND INSTITUTION.

The operations of this Society were carried on last year amid circumstances of difficulty, the losses on manufacturing amounting to £569 6s. 9d., and the slender funds at the Committee's disposal requiring to be further drawn upon in order to provide temporary workshops while repairs were being made to such parts of the buildings as had suffered by the late fire.

Notwithstanding these discouragements it is satisfactory to note that the Committee find themselves with added experiences in a position to proceed with their beneficent undertaking.

Since the return of the men to the Institution buildings the internal arrangements have been reorganized with a view to securing greater comfort to the workers.

It is, however, much to be regretted that the Committee, from lack of means, has been unable to proceed with the construction of the detached workshops, the foundations of which were laid more than two years ago.

The principal industry carried on is basket-making, for which a convenient work-room, possessing ample air space and ventilation, is now provided on the first floor of the institution.

Adjoining the above is a room for mattress-making, while on the basement story accommodation is set apart for chair-caning and mat-making.

On the second floor a good dining-room is fitted up, and in an apartment adjoining is a gas-stove for making tea, coffee, &c., the workers providing their own rations.

At the back of the building a smoking lounge has lately been erected.

Altogether the Institution bears signs of improvement. Many of the workers are able to turn out their goods of such improved quality as to insure for them a ready sale, and thus make the Institution better known.

At the same time it must be remembered that the introduction of each new worker entails, for a time an additional burden on the funds of the charity, as he, while under instruction, draws wages up to 15s. per week, the value of the work he can perform being supplemented up to that sum.

Last year, while the actual wages amounted to £340 14s. 5d., a sum of £240 11s. was in addition distributed as bonuses to beginners in terms of above described rule.

The number of men employed, which at the commencement of the year was 9, increased to 20. by the end of December last.

PART 2.

INSTITUTIONS UNDER THE CONTROL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE MINISTER FOR PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

NAUTICAL SCHOOL-SHIP "VERNON."

THE advantages of this Institution as a reforming medium for viciously inclined or neglected boys continued apparent throughout the past year, not only in matters pertaining to the inculcation of orderly habits and amenableness to discipline while they remained on board, but also as was shown by favourable results in connection with a very large proportion of the youths who, after leaving, encountered successfully the difficulties and temptations incidental to ordinary daily life.

Each year the observation kept over apprentices is made more perfect, and no better test of the value of the ship training need be sought for than is found in its effect on the after character of the boys who have been subjected to it.

The numbers on board during the last two years have so increased that all the available accommodation is now occupied.

To keep pace with modern ideas on the subject of Industrial and Reformatory Schools, as well as to meet the demands of our increasing population, new appliances and more accommodation appear requisite.

It is satisfactory therefore to know this subject has engaged the attention of the Government.

A reference to the table, showing the occupations of the apprentices of last year, proves that by far the largest number were consigned to country occupations, a fact suggesting that the rudiments of practical agriculture and farming might be included in the curriculum of the school with advantage.

In saying this I do not lose sight of the peculiar advantages ship training affords for obtaining by unobjectionable means thorough influence over neglected youths, and therefore I venture to suggest that it continue to be availed of in the future in connection with any Reformatory situated on shore.

In other words, that boys on committal pass through an initiatory stage of training on board the "Vernon," whence, as deemed fit, they may be transferred to the other institution.

The health of the boys for 1884 was good, the Medical Report for the year included only 30 cases, the more serious of which were introduced by the lads at the time of their committal.

Full information in detail of the working of the Institution is given in the tables below.

FEMALE

FEMALE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL, BILOELA.

The behaviour of the girls in the Institution last year was reported on favourably by the Matron.

At the end of 1884, 86 girls were serving indentures of apprenticeship.

Mrs. Walker speaks in generally favourable terms of their well-doing; periodical communication is kept up by her with their employers, and some of the girls themselves are in the habit of corresponding with her.

The general health during the year was good, no serious cases of illness occurred, but ophthalmia caused much trouble and anxiety.

Although the position is no doubt a healthy one, the prison-like buildings place this Institution at considerable disadvantage when making comparisons between it and the corresponding Institution for boys on the "Vernon."

Its removal to another site has already been suggested, and cannot much longer be delayed, as on completion of the new graving dock such removal will be imperative.

That the school has so long been left in situ is the more to be regretted from the fact that during the last two or three years considerable expenditure was incurred in providing accommodation in lieu of what had to be given up for offices, &c., in connection with the new dock works.

It may be worthy consideration whether one or other of the Orphan Schools might not hereafter be used for the Female Industrial School.

The subject is of considerable importance; the most effective methods for training neglected young females and children is as vital a question of public interest as that of training an equal number of boys of similar class.

I fear this matter has not engaged sufficient attention, and as a consequence many of the young women after leaving this Industrial School have had to learn many things that might have been taught them while still under the State's control.

THE ORPHAN SCHOOLS, PARRAMATTA.

CONSEQUENT on the large diminution in the numbers of children at both the Orphan Schools the staff of each has been correspondingly reduced.

Under most discouraging circumstances they exhibited untiring zeal, and have relaxed no effort in maintaining the institutions in an efficient condition.

The health of the children was excellent; the only death took place at the Protestant Orphan School, and was the result of accident.

TECHNICAL COLLEGE.

In October of 1883 the Technical College of the Sydney Mechanics' Institute, previously subsidised as a distinct Institution in the year 1879, was transferred to the management of the Government Technical Board.

In order to provide the necessary accommodation a block of buildings in Sussex-street was rented in addition to the class-rooms in which the college had heretofore carried on its operations.

Additional accommodation was also provided by a loan of two rooms, part of the Public School in Castlereagh-street; and for the Cookery Classes premises were hired in the Royal Arcade.

The separation involved by these arrangements has already been found to add to the difficulty of supervision; but demands for further space indicate that the inconvenience above alluded to is likely to be intensified rather than diminished in the future unless special buildings possessing the requisite accommodation are provided.

With certain modifications, to suit the present needs and circumstances of the Colony, a course of study and system of instruction, modelled after that of the "City and Guild of London Institute," has been adopted by the Board.

Popular science lectures in the large hall of the Sydney Mechanics' School of Arts were given four times a week, under the auspices of the Technical Board.

The subjects chosen were intended principally for the benefit of working men, and to attract students to the College classes.

The aggregate attendance at 187 of these lectures amounted to 34,298 persons, or an average of 183 at each lecture.

In answer to applications from Committees of Schools of Arts in country districts, lectures on agriculture, geology, mineralogy, and mining were given in the principal centres of population in the northern, southern, and western districts.

At times their reception exhibited indifference, and a corresponding want of perception of their value, but as competition grows keener and population increases such teaching will be better appreciated, and meanwhile public attention is being drawn to the new aids afforded by Government for the acquirement of special branches of knowledge.

The total payments on technical education for the year 1884 were £17,098 3s. 6d., expended as follows:—

Rent	2,797	8	4
Allowances to teachers, exclusive of students' fees, £1,838 1s.	4,318	5	6

Prizes to students	35	11	6

The students' fees show an increase of £265 2s. as compared with the amount received in the previous year.

Seeing how wide a distance exists between their present modus operandi and originally declared intention, it is worth considering if, and how far, the public is benefited by the intervention of such Committees.

Some institutions have accumulated large reserve funds by excessive payments of public money and bequests; but this fact has not lessened their demands on the Treasury.

In the management, order, and cleanliness of their Asylums, and the kindly attention shown to inmates, little is left to be desired; but the danger proceeding from them is, that while funds are so easily obtainable they are apt rather to foster than discourage dependence.

After making due allowance for the present depression in business, the great increase in the sums paid of late for out relief bids fair to build up a social difficulty which may result in the imposition of a Poor Law for this Colony.

6th. The advisability of considering the necessity of amending some of the Acts relating to the Public Charities—especially those relating to the Industrial Schools and Reformatories, and that establishing the State Children's Relief Board.

In regard to the former, power is needed to enable rectifications being made when errors in committals occur, so as to transfer a child from an Industrial School to a Reformatory, or vice versa, when deemed desirable.

In respect to the Destitute Children's Relief Act, the remarks of the President of the State Children's Relief Board are worthy of attention.

As has been before pointed out, much expense is incurred by persons constantly arriving in this Colony who are unable, from ill-health or other causes, to support themselves. The neighbouring Colonies have been careful to guard their interests in this direction, and furnish an example which it would be profitable to follow in New South Wales.

During last year a considerable number of nurse children, deserted by their mothers, were cast on the State. Inquiries show that in many instances the public is systematically victimised by arrangements tending to make identification of the parents impossible; and the evil from the readiness of the State to accept charge of these children threatens to increase unless restrictive measures are taken either by registration or license of the person who receives the infant.

The principal Public Charities, the statistics of which for the year appear in the body of the Report, are described below, and their operations are referred to in a summarised form.

The Government Asylums for Infirm and Destitute.

These maintain their character for orderliness, economy, and general efficiency. At the same time I may be permitted again to suggest certain concessions in their administration by which the comfort of the inmates would be increased at small cost of either money or convenience.

In winter especially the rules regarding early rising might be relaxed without affecting discipline; also, the dietary scale is too monotonous, and needs addition and variety.

Heretofore slop food has only been allowed to patients in hospital, and by order of the Medical Officer. It might be distributed to the general inmates without any deductions from their regular daily ration.

The Asylum for Females, Hyde Park.

Every effort was made to utilise to best advantage the very inferior accommodation in this institution. The general health of the inmates was fairly good, but much inconvenience and hardship were experienced from continued overcrowding.

It was expected that the Asylum at Newington would have been completed before the end of the year, but it was found impossible to remove there till the first quarter in the present year, and even then the buildings were in a very unready state, and the water supply insufficient.

The Liverpool Asylum for Males.

This institution is in a very complete state of repair and efficiency.

Considerable annoyance was experienced during the long drought from the offensive exhalations given off by the river, which immediately fronts the Asylum.

Although no epidemic disease arose, yet several cases of sickness among the inmates were traced to the above.

The removal of the nuisance is much to be desired; and effective measures might be sought for to compel the establishments whence it arises to discontinue the practice of discharging noxious refuse into the river.

Some of the Asylum drains have their outlet on the river bank, and ought to be diverted in some other direction.

After partial filtration the liquid sewage might be utilized in the garden, the solid matter being periodically dug into the ground.

The George-street Asylum, Parramatta, for Males.

Many considerable additions and improvements were made last year at this Asylum.

Among the former may be enumerated a new residence for the matron, a building used as a surgery, waiting-room, and operating-room for the medical officer, a mortuary, an outside staircase to the newer part of the Asylum, and a covered way, connecting it with the older portion of the institution.

The chief improvements comprise a new kitchen, a serving-room, and a dining-hall.

The maintenance rate at this Asylum has always been higher than at either Liverpool or Macquarie-street, but of late the difference is in part explained by the fact that many cases which formerly had to be treated in the hospitals are now admitted into it.

The Macquarie-street Asylum and Erysipelas Hospital, Parramatta.

This institution has been kept in a state of thorough efficiency, and since the enlargement of the George-street Asylum has not been overcrowded.

A medical man attends, who verifies the necessity for hospital treatment, and distributes the cases, each to its most suitable institution.

The number of "urgent cases" appears unduly large, and more stringent measures have lately been adopted in regard to them. Full explanations are now required to be forwarded to the Government Medical Adviser, who determines whether such application shall be considered or not.

The Sydney Hospital.

The total number of in-door patients for the year 1885 was 2,692, or 492 less than during 1884.

It appears still to be an open question as to whether it is desirable further public grants should be made for completing the buildings already partially erected in Macquarie-street.

The site is no doubt a convenient and excellent one, but it is too confined to admit of any but a small hospital being placed there. The position is so valuable and so well adapted for a building of the first importance that it seems questionable whether it is good policy to occupy it by a small hospital, especially as another site for a receiving and emergency hospital of seventy-five beds could be secured at a comparatively moderate cost. Detailed returns are given on pages 10 and 11.

The Prince Alfred Hospital.

The admissions in 1885 numbered 1,769, or 331 over those of the year previous.

In considering the general question of how best to secure requisite hospital accommodation for the city, it may be well to bear in mind that this object would be most economically attained by proceeding a step further in the completion of the Prince Alfred Hospital.

Its central or administrative block (already built) is far beyond the requirements of the present ward accommodation, and was designed for a hospital of six pavilions—two only of which now exist.

By adding two more pavilions, costing £42,200, 128 more beds would be given.

To complete the Sydney Hospital £60,000 will be required.

The difference between these sums would go far towards providing an accident and emergency hospital in a convenient position, if designed on unpretentious plans.

There would then remain the Macquarie-street site with the buildings for other public purposes.

The chief difficulty in effecting such an arrangement would be the amalgamating the interests of the two institutions.

Sick Children's Hospital, Glebe.

The annual returns, which are given in extenso on page 15, show that the number of patients treated was 265, as against 191 in 1884.

As heretofore, a large number of the cases (66) were diseases of the osseous system, proving the special value of the institution in that direction.

It must be a subject for constant watchfulness on the part of the management when relieving parents of the treatment of their afflicted children that they use every effort to make them contribute towards the maintenance cost.

The sum of £318 15s. was received from parents during 1885 for cases treated in the hospital.

This amount might be increased, as many of the children are far removed from the pauper class.

These institutions now number 67. Some have not yet been opened, while others have only lately been completed.

The condition now attached to the payment of Government subsidy for their construction, viz., that their plans shall be submitted and approved by the Inspector, is already productive of much good. In a few instances, however, Committees failed, through ignorance of the requirement or other cause, to comply with the Colonial Secretary's intimation, and adopted inferior designs, the omission not being detected till too late to allow of rectification.

On the whole steady improvement is apparent in the manner in which these institutions are carried on and in the character of the relief they afford.

In one respect many of them are deficient, inasmuch as they have no separate ward for the admission of objectionable cases, as erysipelas, &c., and hence difficulties have arisen involving local ill-feeling and expense to the Treasury by refusals to admit certain applications.

It is important that this want should be supplied; and it might be well were it notified to Committees, as a condition of receiving Government aid, that they be required to provide such detached accommodation, the Government supplying one-half cost.

Another point requiring observation is, lest in the desire to possess hospitals in country districts they may not be placed unnecessarily near each other, especially on railway lines. On the other hand, it would be good policy to secure in localities where population is likely to gather sites of good area for future hospitals. Such timely dedications would be true economy.

By a reference to the table above it will be apparent that the country hospitals contrast favourably with the city institutions of like character in regard to the amounts raised by the public, and also the contributions received from patients. In making comparison it is necessary to consider the fact that the country hospitals receive no share of the Pauper Vote, and afford temporary aid to chronic cases, which in Sydney are refused admission excepting into Asylums.

Frequently great difficulty is experienced in considering applications for grants in aid for the erection or extension of country hospitals.

Without too great rigidity, were it accepted as an axiom that local effort should precede applications to the Colonial Secretary, and the aid given be proportionate thereon, beneficial results would ensue, rivalries between neighbouring townships might possibly be converted into joint action as regards hospital provision, and altogether a more economical practice be introduced.

The State Children's Relief Board.

Another year of very successful operations has passed, showing the superiority of the plan recently adopted of boarding out State children in preference to the former method of collecting them in Asylums.

The chief value of the newer system, apart from its greater economy, lies in the fact that it removes the objects of its care from pruper associations and surroundings, and places them amid influences calculated to engender habits of industry and self-dependence.

It also builds up friendly interests on behalf of the children, and although sufficient time has not yet been afforded to see the full results of this anticipation, yet already there are very many instances of most affectionate, and probably permanent, connections having been established between the boarded-out children and their foster-parents.

In the cases of orphans, instances of adoption without charge to the State have been numerous, and it is only because the Board is not in a position to give up more of the children that such offers have not been more frequently accepted.

The Cottage Homes have been found of much benefit, both as sanatoria and as hospitals for the reception of children whose physical condition renders it undesirable that they should be admitted into healthy homes.

Owing to the advantages they possess in situation and climate, numerous cases have occurred of children improving so much in health that it has been found practicable to place them after a time with families.

As might be expected in regard to their management, details here and there have been criticised. The Board has lent a ready ear to all reasonable comments, and so showed that it has a genuine desire to win and maintain the public confidence.

On page 23, in the body of the Report, are given in detail the operations for the year. They may here be briefly summarised, as follows:—

Average number throughout year 1885	1,088
Average cost per head...	£ s. d. 15 14 6
Expenditure for the year	17,120 2 10

The Destitute Children's Asylum, Randwick.

The present position of this Institution is somewhat peculiar.

Finding its Asylum becoming emptied, the Board of this Society last year appealed against further transfers of children into the care of the State Children's Relief Board. Finally, in December, the Colonial Secretary was notified that no further Government subsidies were needed.

There were then in the Asylum 199 children, thirteen only of whom had been admitted under the Colonial Secretary's order.

For the year the average daily number of Government children was eighty-five.

In addition to the full maintenance cost for these eighty-five children, the Society received on account of the others a subsidy of £2,000 from the Treasury, under an old-standing arrangement, an amount which was far in excess of requirements.

From the fact that the Randwick Trust holds landed public property of great value, and that payments, amounting in one form or another, from the Treasury, of between £35,000 and £40,000 have been made to the Society for erection of its buildings and improvement of the estate; and further, that notwithstanding the large grants and annual payments to the Society, the cost of maintaining pauper children still presses heavily on the Government,—a strict and impartial inquiry appears advisable, both as to whether the trust should not be dissolved or remodelled, and also whether some of the bequests it holds should not pass to the State Children's Relief Board, which is performing the work for which the bequests were intended.

The reserved funds now amount to £50,000. Should the possession of this sum not be challenged, the Society, even without the buildings, will be in a position to render a most valuable aid to the Colony in regard to the protection and education of indigent children. Action should, however, be altogether outside of dependence on Government aid, and the line of operation be made more in accord with present public opinion, which has condemned the old barrack system.

For statistics of operations see page 24, in the body of the Report.

The N.S.S. "Vernon."

There is little to mention regarding the operations in connection with this Institution during the past year, excepting to report that they were carried on with their accustomed smoothness and success.

The above fact is the more satisfactory as the number of committals to the ship was larger than in any previous corresponding period.

The general health on board was excellent, and of the cases calling for medical treatment a large proportion were imported by the new arrivals.

Most of the apprentices at service were visited, and with few exceptions appeared to be doing well.

As the accommodation is fully occupied, in order to provide room it has been found necessary to apprentice such boys as are fitted by age, and who appear to have become amenable to discipline, after a detention of only twelve months on the ship.

This plan for the time is no doubt convenient and economical, but whether the results will be permanently beneficial remains to be tested by future experiences.

The average daily numbers for 1885 was 211.

The maintenance cost per head—£24 11s.

The gross cost, including repairs, &c.—£26 14s. 8d. For details of expenditure, &c., see page 32.

Female Industrial School, Biloea.

That an Institution constantly liable to have imported into it disturbing influences has been able to pursue for many years a course so uneventful as is the history of the Industrial School at Biloea shows unmistakably that its management possesses most of the ingredients commanding success.

In former reports the isolated and somewhat inaccessible position the school occupies was referred to as being disadvantageous and non-essential to the maintenance of its discipline; the former from the fact that the girls could not be frequently visited by ladies who would bring with them humanizing and improving influences.*

Attention was also called to the advisability of introducing into the school curriculum more thorough systems of domestic training.

With few exceptions the girls sent to Biloela never had, previous to their committal, any opportunities for acquiring even a rudimentary knowledge in matters pertaining to housewifery, and the school routine and prison-like surroundings of the Institution are inimical to such instruction being imparted to them.

As an inevitable consequence, on their discharge they are but ill-fitted to undertake household duties, or to be employed by people of the class the best fitted to raise their social status.

The subject is an important one, and deserves more consideration than has been accorded to it.

In a large measure the State has made itself responsible for the future of these girls, and unless it can show that it has given them a thoroughly good training (both mental and physical) it will have only partially performed its duty in withdrawing them from the corrupting influences in which they were discovered.

The numbers daily average for 1885 were—9 boys under 7 years, and 95 girls.

The rate cost per head, £27 2s. 0½d. maintenance—£32 0s. 6d. gross cost (including expenditure by Colonial Architect).

Particulars in detail of operations during the past year are given on page 33.

The Protestant and Roman Catholic Orphan Schools, Parramatta.

Such reductions as appeared possible were made to lessen the expense of keeping open these Institutions, but, notwithstanding these efforts, the number of the children was so small that the rate-cost became extravagantly high, furnishing incontestible evidence, had any been wanting, that the time has arrived for devoting the buildings to other and more useful purposes.

The staff displayed unflagging patience under discouraging circumstances, and the children in their charge were admirably cared for, and appear to have been almost entirely exempt from sickness.

Short statistics of numbers and cost at each Orphanage are given below, while at pages 34 and 35 in the Report fuller details will be found.

The Benevolent Society.

The objects of this Society are as stated below.

1. To afford out-relief, in the form of provisions, &c., and small sums of money to persons in indigent circumstances.
2. To maintain a Receiving House for homeless or deserted children and for children awaiting removal to other Asylums.
3. To maintain a Receiving House for sickly mothers with children who are not fit cases for regular hospital treatment, or who are suffering from diseases peculiar to women.
4. To maintain a Lying-in Hospital.
5. To train Midwives and Nurses.

In the first only of these five objects does the Society operate on its own funds. In regard to the other four, the cost falls on the Public Treasury.

Till the year 1882 the out-relief expenditure was always below £1,000, the Government contributing £500. Since then it has increased with rapid strides, as is shown in the table below, and for the last two years the grants in aid have risen to £1,000 per annum for this purpose.

Table showing expenditure in out relief:—

Year.	Supplies cost.			Rent Money.			Totals.
1881	735	0	0	130	18	6	866	18	6
1882	861	7	2	373	3	6	1,234	10	8
1883	1,127	0	8	842	12	0	1,969	12	8
1884	1,578	7	9	1,474	4	6	3,052	12	3
1885	1,792	2	6	2,088	0	8	3,880	2	0

The system of out-relief, where extended beyond making provision for temporary and urgent cases of distress, has been severely criticised by authorities on the charities question. So far, however, as the Benevolent Society expends only its own funds in this manner, there is a reasonable probability that certain bounds will not be exceeded. When, however, as has been the case, it seeks for and obtains large grants of public money, to be spent in the above manner, the subject demands full inquiry, not only as to the amount expended, but the ends attained.

In the administration of its Asylums, notwithstanding many difficulties arising from crowding and inferior accommodation, the Benevolent Society has been very successful.

The staff is efficient and kindly, especially in the attention given to the children.

The dietary scale is liberal, and there is just that elasticity in the management which prevents individual comfort being sacrificed to rigidity of official control.

In the Maternity Wards the medical attendance and nursing are excellent, and the results achieved have been very successful.

As

* By a recent determination of the Minister for Public Instruction the site of the Institution is to be removed to Parramatta.

As in other Institutions of like character, the death-rate of infants admitted into or born in the Asylum is heavy; but the causes must be looked for in the previous circumstances of the women who there become mothers, or to the privations the infants experience prior to admission.

The cost of the Asylum is very large, and it cannot be regarded as satisfactory that the whole burden is allowed to fall on the Government, while the Society annually increases its Reserve Fund.

Ten years ago this reserve fund, chiefly then derived from Government gifts and money, was £18,000. At the present time its value in money and land fully equals £60,000. In addition to the above, the Society enjoys the use of a most valuable site and buildings really the property of the public.

The buildings are now too limited in accommodation and of obsolete character, and the Society has asked for Government aid and sanction to erect new premises elsewhere more suitable to present requirements.

When giving effect to the Society's application it might be advisable to revise the entire relations between the Government and the Society, with a view to lessening the load now carried by the former.

The statistics for the year 1885 are given on page 25 in the body of the Report.

The Infants' Home, Ashfield.

The Committee were actively engaged during the period under report in improving their appliances for carrying on their beneficent work. They continue to deserve public sympathy, not only for their zeal, but also from the fact that they relieve a class of persons only imperfectly reached by the larger Charities.

Among the admissions for the year were the infants of nine widowers and of five men whose wives either had deserted them or who, from physical or mental infirmity, were incompetent to discharge maternal duties.

To a certain extent these cases are paid for, but there is considerable irregularity in making payments, and the rate charged is not assessed sufficiently high to cover the expenses incurred, especially in the cases of very young children.

When widows or deserted wives with children apply to the Society for aid the distress is frequently so urgent that refusal is not possible; and yet, in many such cases, the mothers, after having been assisted into situations, disappear, leaving the Society to maintain the children, or they are cast on the State.

In his report of the year's operations the Honorary Medical Officer animadverts strongly on the frequent fatal consequences of desertion on the infants brought to the Home.

This practice, under different forms, is becoming more frequent, and it has been too much a habit to ignore it. Foundling Hospitals have been objected to here on the ground that they tend to encourage immorality; but there is little doubt that they save much suffering and many infant lives.

The numbers in the Home were:—

31st December, 1884—	Women, 23;	Infants, 51;	Total, 77.
" " 1885	" 11;	" 32;	" 43.

Statistics of the operations during the year are given on pages 27 and 28 in the body of the Report.

Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind.

A marked difference exists between this and the other public charities of the Colony, in that it receives the children of persons who are in a position to pay all the expenses of their maintenance and education.

With a view, however, to further extend the benefits offered by the Institution to those children only partially paid for, an annual subsidy of £450 is granted from the Treasury.

The cost of children admitted under Colonial Secretary's order is wholly borne by the Government. Till lately the rate was £20 per annum, but has now been raised to £36 for each State child.

On 31st December, 1884, the numbers (total) were 75.

" " 1885, " 81.

Every possible attention is paid to the care and comfort of these afflicted children. They vary greatly in physical condition and mental calibre, but on the whole the results of the training brought to bear upon them appear highly satisfactory.

During all last year the general health was good, and no sickness of importance occurred in the Institution.

The Committee, notwithstanding, totally remodelled the sanitary arrangements, incurring thereby an expenditure of £510.

They also spent £1,180 in erecting a new boundary wall, and made several other improvements to their property, to which Government contributed £200.

The financial position of the Society is most prosperous, and the reserve fund has been largely increased (not fully shown in the financial statement for 1885) by large bequests, one alone, from the late Mrs. Mary Roberts, exceeding £15,000.

Full details of statistics are given in the body of the Report, at pages 28 and 29.

Industrial Institution for Blind Workers.

The satisfactory progress of this Institution can be seen by an examination of the treasurer's balance-sheet, and by the rising estimation in which it is regarded by those industriously inclined, proved by the fact that the number of applications for admission is greater than the Society's means and accommodation can entertain favourably.

To present time the Committee, in order to avoid incurring expense, has delayed completing that portion of the premises intended for permanent workshops—operations hitherto having been carried on in rooms too small and unsuitable.

Considering the success of its undertaking as now assured, a determination has been arrived at to meet growing wants, and tenders invited for the erection of better workshops.

As must continue to be the case while learners form a large proportion of the workers, the manufacturing account for 1885 shows a loss—on the other hand, the weekly earnings of some of the men who have passed through their novitiate prove the value of the teaching imparted in the Institution, by the fact that the blind learn to render themselves self-supporting.

The

The occupations carried on in the Institution comprise basket, mat, and mattress making, chair-caning, plaiting, and netting.

Within the last six months the Committee has purchased instruments, and musical instruction, with fairly promising results, has been given to those of the workers who exhibit talent in this particular direction.

SCHOOLS OF ARTS.

Statistics in tabulated form are given on pages 56-63. That these Institutions very imperfectly fulfil the object for which they were originated cannot be denied. On the other hand, that they supply a public want is evident from the fact that they are called for throughout the length and breadth of the Colony.

Their reading-rooms are much frequented, and as time passes, and the conviction grows wider among the operative community that they afford means for study not to be elsewhere found, it may be reasonably expected that Schools of Arts will assume their legitimate character, and, in conjunction with the classes instituted under the direction of the Technical Board, prove valuable media for adult education.

An account of the operations of the Board of Technical Education has been incorporated with the report of the Minister of Public Instruction for the year.

The land at Bankstown, herein described as worth £480, is probably worth £4,000.

During the year under review the Benevolent Society received intelligence that, consequent on the demise of Mrs. Mary Roberts and others, very large legacies had come to it—so that its reserve cannot fall short of £60,000.

The Medical Officer, Dr. Collingwood, in his report, after describing the general health of the inmates as fair during the year, and alluding to an outbreak of scarlet fever and a case of tonsillitis—both promptly checked—the former by isolation, and the latter by removal of the cause (a choked drain),—proceeds to show the fatal results almost sure to follow on the desertion of infants, by pointing to the fact that in very few instances do foundlings, notwithstanding great subsequent care, survive the shock inseparable from desertion, and instances that of six children foundlings brought to the Institution in 1885 only one survives, a severe comment on the gravity of this crime.

FEMALE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL, BILOELA.

The report of the matron for the year is on the whole encouraging.

The health of the inmates was good. No mortality occurred, and, with the exception of a fever case and three chronic cases of ophthalmia, sent for treatment to the Sydney Hospital, the other ailments are described as having been of only trifling character and short duration.

The conduct report is fair, and that of the 87 apprentices in service for the most part satisfactory.

The School Inspector's report sets down the general proficiency as fair to very fair, which, considering the fact that most of the girls on admission are grossly ignorant and indisposed from their previous habits to profit by school-teaching, is as much as can be expected.

In all matters of sanitary arrangement, cleanliness, and order, the school compares well with other institutions of similar character; but the prison-like character of the buildings are depressing and ill-adapted for imparting domestic training, while inaccessibility of position prevents ladies visiting the school and introducing those gentler influences on the senior girls, so valuable as likely to tend to raise their aspirations for a higher life in the future.

GOVERNMENT ASYLUMS FOR THE INFIRM AND DESTITUTE.

(REPORT FOR 1885.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Manager of Government Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Pitt-street South, Sydney, 16 September, 1886.

I have the honor to report, for the information of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, on the Government Asylums for the Infirm and Destitute under my charge, and in reference to the usual returns of expenditure and statistics for the year 1885, which accompany this letter, I beg to say,—

1. The Institutions in Sydney, Liverpool, and Parramatta have all been carefully and efficiently conducted by the officers-in-charge, and the statistics relating to them are interesting and valuable for purposes of comparison.

2. The death-rate has been higher, and is accounted for by the fact of our Asylums being open to receive patients in the last stages of illness, who are applicants for hospital relief, but who are frequently sent to us by the Inspector of Public Charities. The surgeons continually represent the unsuitableness of these Institutions for the treatment of these cases.

No doubt the expense to the State is less, but I respectfully submit that such economy is hardly desirable or justifiable at the expense of the comfort and care essential in such cases, and which can best be obtained in Hospitals where there are trained attendants, and every proper means of alleviating the sufferings of the poor indigent people, who are compelled to seek the shelter of an eleemosynary Institution in their last hours.

3. The applications for admissions were considerably in excess of those of preceding years. Of the 3,454 applicants 2,997 were admitted; of these the Inspector of Charities recommended 504 persons to the four Asylums.

The Hospital wards have thus been full throughout the year. No sooner has a bed been vacated by the death or discharge of a patient than it has again been required and occupied by another invalid who has awaited turn in the convalescent dormitories.

4. The expenditure for the year was £26,885 10s. 6d., equal to £15 11s. 3d. per head, showing an increased cost of 13s. 3d. per head. And this is accounted for by travelling expenses, clothing, and medicine charges, over which I have no control, but which I deem it right to explain. The cost of general management has not been altered.

5. The Hyde Park Asylum, now a thing of the past, was carried on through the year as usual. It was overcrowded; the daily average of inmates was 307; in the previous year it was 310. There were 342 admissions; 93 inmates died; the mean age of those who died was sixty-three years. This standard of age was affected by the fact of several young persons dying from phthisis or other incurable complaints.

During the year Miss Applewhaito, the sub-matron, died, and in her the inmates lost an ever kind and sympathizing friend, and the Public Service has lost a most faithful and efficient officer.

The inmates are now all removed to Newington, and Hyde Park is no longer an Asylum under my care.

6. The Liverpool Asylum has sheltered 719 inmates throughout the year, 16 less than in 1884. There were 1,129 admissions, and 288 persons died, the average of the death age being sixty-two years.

This Institution has been conducted with the efficiency which has always characterised it.

The death rate is not excessive when it is borne in mind that all phthisical cases are sent there. 111 persons died from old age—52 from phthisis, and 36 from paralysis. Many who succumbed to phthisis were young men.

The inmates generally live to great ages, and the superior accommodation, the airy wards, and excellent arrangements, all tend to the longevity and comfort of the poor people, who here close the evening of life in peace and quietness.

7. The George-street Parramatta Asylum is becoming a very important one as regards the numbers of its inmates. The arrangements for the passage of the people from the main building to the mill premises are still incomplete, and so is the causeway bridge. Ere long the people will enjoy the comfort of the spacious dining-hall, reading-sheds, dormitories, and hospital wards, which are in the new premises.

The daily average of inmates was 412, against 351 in 1884. The deaths numbered 123, or 39 more than in the previous year. The average age was 67 years.

The cottage set apart for invalid boys has in every respect fulfilled my expectations and wishes. Several helpless deformed youths have been carefully tended and treated. I have always protested against the mixing of youths with the old men, and their separation is always desirable.

8. The Macquarie-street Asylum has as usual done good service, both as Asylum and hospital. It was established for an Erisepelas Hospital, but there have lately been few of these cases to treat, and so it was decided to make it one of the general Asylums, and during the past year it has accommodated 290 inmates, three more than in 1884. 703 men were admitted; there were 101 deaths, at a mean age of 64 years.

9. None of these Asylums were overcrowded during the past year.

10. As the dietary scale of these Asylums has of late been much commented on in the public press, and by visitors, I presume to say,—

When the care of these Institutions was undertaken by the Government in 1862, a Board of Management was appointed, of which Drs. Alleyne and Greenup and other men of experience were members.

A dietary scale was adopted which has been adhered to, and the successive reports of the Board of its suitability have been acquiesced in by each Government to whom they were submitted. Good meat, soup mixed with herbs, &c., rice, oat and barley meal, and flour, bread, and potatoes, and an ample supply of sago, arrowroot, &c., in addition to medical comforts, has always been considered suitable food for old and worn out persons, and it would be difficult to find a more health giving dietary. The complaints have been limited in number, and have generally emanated from persons who, having recovered their health, were more fitted to cope with the outside world, and there exercise a choice of diet, than remain in the Asylums designed only for the really helpless paupers, dependent on the care of the Government.

The Asylums have always been economically managed, and it has not been attempted, as thought necessary, to supply luxuries to people who, even in the days of their health and independence, were never accustomed to them. Sound, wholesome, and plenty of food has been given, and there is no fair ground for complaint by the inmates.

11. The classification of inmates, and separate treatment for some selected cases, has been suggested and strongly urged, and I venture to express my strong disapprobation of the proposal. Differential treatment in the same Institutions would assuredly lead to heartburnings and discontent.

If an asylum is to be established for the reception of what may be termed persons who have seen better days, it should be entirely separate from the Public Institutions, which afford shelter to the poor generally.

12. There is a return of ophthalmic cases, treated by the surgeon under great disadvantages, and I think ere long it will be necessary to have a special Hospital established.

I am well aware that it is a matter of debate whether it is prudent to operate on old men for any obstruction of the eye; but the attendant dangers of treatment would be lessened if there was a proper establishment wherein to care for the patients.

13. The feasts inaugurated by Mr. Quong Tart, assisted by many kind friends, were a source of great pleasure to the old people, who gratefully appreciated the sympathy which was so practically evidenced.

14. I consider it right to say that as a rule convalescents are not housed in the Asylums if they are able to earn a living outside. Sometimes they have been employed on the works of the Asylums, pending their obtaining a situation; and even these cases are very few, for in general persons in perfect health do not care to continue under our care.

15. It is matter for congratulation, and reflects creditably on the officials that, although persons have been admitted suffering from almost every kind of infectious disease, the Asylums have been free from any epidemic.

16. It is my duty to bear testimony to the efficiency, zeal, and painstaking assistance of the various officers of the Institutions under my charge.

I have, &c.,

FREDERIC KING,
Manager.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

PROTECTION OF THE ABORIGINES.
(ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 22 July, 1886.

The Aborigines Protection Board to The Colonial Secretary.

Office of the Board for the Protection of the Aborigines,

Sir,

114, Phillip-street, Sydney, 29 June, 1886.

In compliance with the established practice, we do ourselves the honor to submit this our Annual Report respecting the work we have undertaken during the past year, together with information regarding the present condition of the Aborigines, and the means we have adopted to supply their necessities so far as the funds placed at the disposal of the Board would admit.

Subjoined will be found a comparative return or census of the Aborigines for last year, and this exhibiting the changes which have taken place and the diminutions in the race during the period.

As far as can be ascertained, there are at the present time 520 Aboriginal and half-caste children receiving instruction, chiefly in Public Schools. Many gratifying reports have been received of the progress made by these scholars, which justify a hope that they may eventually be trained to take up their position amongst the industrial classes of the community.

Whilst the Board are not sanguine that there will be any general and permanent alteration in the condition and habits of the Aborigines, the outcome of increased energy of character on their part, there are fortunately many encouraging instances of industry and thrift, where assistance in the shape of land for cultivation and other aid have been advantageously bestowed.

We do not conceive that it is the intention of the Government or the Legislature that the sums voted for the benefit of the Aborigines should be expended in maintaining them, irrespective of age and condition, in a state of idleness. Such a course would, we consider, be productive of increased evils, instead of benefiting the recipients.

Moreover,

Moreover, a very considerable increased provision would have to be made if about 8,000 persons were to be clothed and fed.

We may again repeat that the rule by which the Board has been guided has been to provide rations and clothing, where necessary, for all aged sick or infirm Aborigines unable to work for their support, and also for the children of such who are attending school or not provided for by their parents.

The Board has held regular weekly meetings in addition to frequent consultations in dealing with emergent matters so constantly brought under notice by country Magistrates and others.

The reports obtained through the police are carefully recorded, and thus we are at any time enabled to refer for information the condition of various tribes or families when applications are made for assistance, or other action is called for.

The information thus sought from the police through the Colony has been promptly and intelligently afforded in all cases. This invaluable assistance the Board is anxious to gratefully acknowledge, as also the personal interest which has been taken by many of the officers and constables in looking after the wants and interests of the Aborigines in their districts, who have previously been almost entirely neglected.

We regret to record here the loss sustained by the Board by retirement of the Hon. A. Gordon on his departure for England, he having taken a deep interest in the welfare of the Aborigines, and cordially rendering us valuable assistance in the work we had undertaken to discharge.

Active measures have been, we are informed, taken by the Aborigines Protection Association for the more systematic management of the Aboriginal Mission Stations at Maloga and Warangesda. The aid afforded from the public funds has admitted of considerable improvements being made in the buildings, fencing, and plant at these stations, which will no doubt lead to more effective arrangements to increase the usefulness of these asylums.

No progress has been made towards the establishment of Aboriginal homes of a kindred character in other districts of the Colony, to which we made allusion in our former report. An officer of the association has visited the reserve in the neighbourhood of Brewarrina, where such an asylum would be of incalculable benefit to the large and neglected tribes who reside in that district, but we fear that the funds available, with reduced votes, will not allow of the heavy expenditure which would be entailed.

Some reserves for a similar purpose have been reported upon in the Clarence District but for a like reason the Board have been prevented from taking any further action.

The past year has been an unfavorable one for the Aborigines in the interior, the drought having rendered their means of subsistence even more than usually precarious. Native game has been scarce in some districts, and they have experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining employment, consequently the demands upon the Board have been more than usually numerous.

Appended will be found a detailed statement of the expenditure for the year 1885, for the general relief of the Aborigines of the Colony, and also statements obtained from the Aborigines Protectorate Association, of the cost of the Mission Stations at Warangesda and Maloga.

We have, &c.,

EDMUND FOSBERY, Chairman.

FOR THE YEAR ENDED

5 APRIL, 1886.

SYDNEY: THOMAS RICHARDS, GOVERNMENT PRINTER.

1886.

State Children's Relief Department, Central Home,
Begg-street, Paddington, 25 May, 1886.

The President of the State Children's Relief Board to The Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

Sir,

I have the honor, in compliance with section 12 of 44 Victoria, No. 24, to present for the information of Parliament my Fifth Annual Report, containing a history of the operations of the State Children's Relief Department during the year ended 5 April, 1886.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

In my previous Reports I have taken pains to explain the principles, the modes, and the objects of the boarding-out system; I have sketched the legislation which I have considered desirable for the better working and controlling of our philanthropic agencies for the young; I have pointed out where, in my opinion, present laws are faulty in effecting the ends to which they were designed; and I have quoted authorities in support of the view that the boarding-out system is incomparably superior to any other method of caring for the children of the State. It is therefore needless to recur to these subjects: what has been said remains on record, and the system is now no longer in the experimental stage—it has gained a strong hold on the community—its best commendation is the history of its successful working. The details I shall hereafter submit are details which indicate growth on the principles set out and acted upon from the outset. It cannot be too emphatically or too frequently insisted on that the success of the boarding-out system depends on the minuteness, the diligence, and the zeal of the supervision exercised over every detail, by those upon whom the duty of oversight is cast. Because this essential has been maintained by the State Children's Relief Board, by lady visitors, and by officials, I am able to state in this Fifth Report that the operations of the Board have not only been enlarged, but have been conspicuously successful, and that the future is not very remote when no children who fall to the care of the State will be denied the advantages of family training.

Hitherto the application of the system in New South Wales has been justified by reference to what has been done elsewhere; but I am now able to state that the operations of this Board are regarded with interest in the Colonies, in England, and America, as furnishing matter for profitable imitation. We are no longer learners merely—we have, in certain forms of experience, become teachers also. And judging by the language used in reference to these matters by those who are regarded as eminent authorities on all questions of social reform, we have improved on the instruction we have received.

It was with great satisfaction that I read in the Pall Mall Gazette of January 7th and 21st of this year two articles over the signature of the Rev. W. J. Horsley, a gentleman conversant with the subject, and a high authority on many philanthropic movements. My Report for last year draws from Mr. Horsley the remark that in Australia and other offshoots of the Mother-country, England has need to follow and learn where she should have led and taught. Although, says Mr. Horsley, the Colonies do not strike out anything exactly new in social reform, reform, yet they have made the suggestions of a few in England into accomplished facts abroad, "and measures have passed into a vigorous youth in the Colonies which at home are still struggling to overcome the debilitating and crippling diseases of official red tape and departmentalism."

Mr. Horsley approves of the title "State children" as preferable to "pauper children" or "gutter children," and sees in it truth as well as delicacy. For the children brought under the control of this Department are in fact State children; charges in whose case the State, and no other agency, takes the place of parent. Quoting the brief description of boarding-out which I thought sufficient in my Report for last year, Mr. Horsley finds it "identical in idea with that which, to a small extent, is found in England, as worked by enlightened Boards of Guardians, under the auspices of the Local Government Board, or by private philanthropists, or by the Church of England Central Society for providing homes for waifs and strays." In a subsequent passage of the article, referring to my observations on reformatories and cottage homes, he notes that here we deal with two objections made in England to the extension of boarding-out, in a manner calculated to show that such objections are more theoretical than practical. "In a word," writes Mr. Horsley by way of summary, "Australia has shaken herself free from the evils engendered by copying or transferring our evil ways of dealing with State children, and has come to the conclusion—which seems unhappily beyond the conception of most of our Boards of Guardians—that of the four competing systems, the bringing up of children with adult paupers in a workhouse is abominable; massing them in district schools is hopelessly bad and most expensive; cottage homes are good and less costly; and boarding-out is the cheapest and by far the best, as restoring or giving to the children the natural conditions of home life." And the text, as well as the title, of his papers is the encouraging and stimulating one—"Advance Australia! Wake up England!"

Although I have no intention, as I have said, to deal exhaustively in this Report with the results of boarding-out operations elsewhere, it will be interesting to refer briefly to the recent investigations of the Destitute Commission of South Australia, of which Chief Justice Way was the Chairman. That Commission has just published its final Report, and in that very ably-written document says:—"To the Chairman and other members of the Destitute Board of Adelaide belongs the credit of first applying the system (boarding-out) in Australia. Fifty children were placed out in April, 1872, and up to June 30th, 1885, 1,219 children had been placed out. In Victoria a commencement was made with the system in 1873, and in January, 1885, the number of children boarded-out there was 1,808. Between 1875 and 1879 boarding-out superseded the Industrial Schools. There were six of them containing about 2,000 children, and the last was closed in 1879. The State Children's Relief Board in Sydney, which was established under a special Act of Parliament, began to place out children in 1881," [a private association of ladies, consisting of several members of the present State Children's Relief Board, had successfully tried the experiment with about 50 children a year previously] "and on April 5, 1885, 1,026 were placed out under their control. The boarding-out system has also been adopted in Tasmania and New Zealand. The exhaustive yearly reports from all these Colonies abound with proofs of the benefits of the boarding-out system. The experience of other countries shows the same satisfactory results as in Australia. We quote but one instance from the Irish evidence before the English Commission. The Mayor of Belfast says:—"I do not suppose there are 2 per cent. of the entire number that are sent out that way return to the workhouse again. The nurses generally get so attached to

to the children that they will not part with them.' Selecting also one example only from the Scotch evidence, the Inspector of Poor for Edinburgh says:—"The result of twenty-two years' boarding-out of 1,400 children was that we could give a satisfactory account of all but 18 of that large number.'"

I conclude these references with a quotation from the American testimony, which is still more striking. The Children's Aid Society of New York, which boards out children of the criminal classes as well as others, says:—

We have placed out since we began about 22,000 children. So far as we can learn, not more than 5 per cent. commit offences or become chargeable to the public. Great numbers have received property from their employers, or have earned it, and are now men of means. Others are in professions, others are mechanics or honest farmers, or are in various productive branches. Many have contributed to the support of the Charity that befriended them, or have bequeathed their property to it on their death. The experiment of boarding-out in the United States has been an unmingled blessing, and the most economical charity ever devised. The children and youth who would have been petty thieves, vagrants, prostitutes, sharpers, burglars, and criminals, have been made by it honest and industrious producers. Hereditary pauperism and criminality have been broken up, and all this at an average expense to society of $15 for each child.

The South Australian Destitute Commissioners have recommended the adoption of a course which I have most strongly urged upon successive Governments in my five Annual Reports, and there is reason to suppose from their report that the conclusions they have drawn are based upon the operations of the State Children's Relief Board of New South Wales, as compared with those of the Destitute Board of Adelaide. After considering the various advantages and disadvantages of the different systems of dealing with State children in all the Colonies and in England, and especially in connection with the work accomplished thus far by the New South Wales Board, as ascertained by reference to official reports, and from the personal investigations in this Colony of gentlemen concerned in the administration of the South Australian Charities, the Commissioners recommend that "all the establishments for the benefit of convicted, destitute, and neglected children be entrusted to the management of an Honorary Board, to be called 'The State Children's Relief Board,' appointed by the Governor, and subject to the control of a Minister." And the Commissioners go on to say—"The Board, we suggest, should consist of ten or a dozen ladies and gentlemen who have already shown an interest in kindred branches of philanthropic work, and who should be fairly representative of the different religious denominations. As the Board will have to deal with girls as well as the boys, the presence of ladies upon it is indispensable. This, as we have seen, is no innovation; indeed the reformatory system was founded by a lady (Miss Carpenter.)" It will thus be seen that the South Australian Commissioners have proposed the appointment of a Board precisely similar in its constitution to the State Children's Relief Board of New South Wales.

Considering the various interests affected by the establishment and rapid development of the boarding-out system in this Colony, it was to be expected that it would be exposed to criticism, and sometimes criticism neither kindly nor just. There are still persons in the community who are disposed to decry it, and perhaps many who do not care to understand it. Rumour, which picks up half-truths, must always be reckoned with; and, since the agents upon whom the system depends are human, a basis for the half-truths which rumour may magnify to the discredit of the system must always exist. But I do not deprecate criticism, whether genial, ill-natured, or ignorant. If the system be so managed that damaging criticism is well-founded, then it is badly managed. Its continued good management will be none the worse ensured if those responsible are aware that they are subjected to constant and possibly hostile vigilance; and, if the management has been good, the answer to the critic is an effective vindication at once of the system and of its working. Moreover, criticism attracts to the the system what I above all desire should be assured—the attention of the public, and supplies an additional guarantee that all the conditions of success will be observed.

In the course of the year just concluded I have been obliged to reply to several critics who have written with more zeal than knowledge. Some strictures on the operation of ordinary boarding-out I disposed of by a simple statement of the facts; but those referring to the cottage homes—from a gentleman connected with a leading metropolitan newspaper—were of such a character that a more elaborate rejoinder was necessary than I thought called for in the other case. They were therefore made the subject of a special inquiry and report.

In my last Report I stated that, following upon a purpose which the Board had entertained for a considerable period, they had obtained the sanction of the Colonial Secretary for the establishment of eight cottage homes for invalid children. Four such homes had already been set up at the date of that Report, and in the course of the year two more were opened.

The object of cottage homes is an object in harmony with the fundamental principles of boarding-out. In the Asylums, and falling to the care of the Board, are many children temporarily diseased or chronically infirm, who cannot be at once or at all placed in families. The cottage home is a means whereby such children can either be nursed into health sufficient for them to be boarded out, or can be nurtured under conditions which alleviate in some measure their hard lot. In either case, for them the life in a cottage home is the nearest approach to family life which can be achieved; the locality of the home and the nurse are selected with the utmost care; there is frequent inspection by the officials and by the lady visitors of the locality.

In my last Annual Report I referred to the cottage home system as an experiment from which good results might be anticipated. There were many difficulties in the way of entire or speedy success. In the case of healthy boarded-out children, although care is taken not to send them to localities known to be insanitary, the principal concern is not the situation of the home so much as the character of the foster-parent. But for denizens of cottage homes the sanitary condition of the locality is all-important; consequently the choice of places was limited. It was further limited by the fact that, since local visiting was as essential in the case of cottage homes as in the case of boarded-out children, no cottage home could be set up where boarding-out would not also be justified. Further, where the locality was suitable, it was not always possible to procure a house that would serve the purpose. Hence I have urged as worthy the consideration of the Government the expenditure of a sum of money for building cottage homes. This expedient would enlarge the area of choice of locality, would be much more economical than the present practice of paying rent, and would enable the Board to erect buildings in accordance with its requirements, which are, in regard to these particular children, of a very special character. In a communication to your predecessor in office, which has been published in the metropolitan newspapers, I have already dwelt at considerable length on these points, and need not therefore enlarge upon them here. A last limitation arose from the necessity for extra care in the selection of the matron or "mother" of the home. Various qualifications were indispensable—housekeeping skill, tact, patience, good temper, some knowledge of nursing, and experience in the management of children; and the larger the number of "mothers" wanted, the more difficult it was to procure persons who answered in all respects to the requirements.

Details of the results of these homes will be found more fully set forth in the statistical portion of this Report; but I may just say here that since the establishment of these homes—or, more properly speaking, cottage hospitals—over 40 per cent. of the children passed into them subsequently recovered sufficiently to be placed out with safety in healthy families. The remainder continue in the homes; and it may be taken for granted that since those who were curable have been restored to apparent soundness, the condition of the chronically afflicted is improved under the system.

Of the six homes which were visited by the newspaper reporter, four were described as being all that could be desired, but the criticism to which allusion has been made prejudicially affected two homes; and, in regard to them, certain defects were pointed out. Undoubtedly defects did exist—that I acknowledged freely in the correspondence above referred to, and I acknowledge it again—but they were magnified, without reference to any extenuating circumstances which might very fairly have been urged; and the effectual character of my official answer is practically admitted in the journal in which the reply was published. The defects were, as I wrote, “those of household management in one case, such as might occur in a few days, with a slovenly or careless nurse, between the visits of inspectors or local visitors; and, in the other, an alleged neglect of two lads who suffered from sore eyes.” “The occurrence of such defects,” I added, “proves that further inspectorial control is necessary, in order that the system, theoretically perfect, may be made so in practice.” And I said, also—“The Board have been arranging to secure more continued supervision by inspectors and local visitors, under a system of periodical reports, which will make the existence of even minor defects for more than a few days at any time improbable.” The steps promised have been taken by the Board, and I have every reason to be satisfied with the cottage home experiment, and to express gratification that it has been established as a supplement and auxiliary to the boarding-out system. It removes the last vestige of warrant for the maintenance of a barrack system; for it has certainly given health to many to whom the barrack system would have denied it, and to chronic sufferers it ensures some of the joys and some of the compensations and comforts of family life.

While the establishment of cottage homes has been an accomplished work, a kindred process yet remains to be undertaken. I allude to the establishment of a reformatory for boys. The delay in the realization of a project upon which so much depends is to be regretted. I trust that by the time I am called on to report next year, I shall no longer be obliged to look upon such an institution as something belonging to the future. The delay that has taken place supplies, I venture to think, another argument to the many I have urged in these Reports, and elsewhere, in favour of that concentration of responsibility in dealing with State children in the hands of one agency, which the South Australian Royal Commission has, after many years experience of a more complex method, now strongly insisted upon.

I have called the provision of a reformatory for boys a kindred process to that of establishing cottage homes. In the latter, children sick in body are made whole, and, being boarded-out, eventually emerge into the life and activities of society not ill-furnished for the battle. Cottage homes enlarge the material which may be subjected to the main and proper object of the Board's existence. The candidates for

for a reformatory are morally unsound. The absence of a reformatory on the other hand therefore lessens the quantity of material on which the Board might act. Boys who would pass through the purification of a reformatory into the family life of the community, and thence into the world, are now of necessity passed into the gaol, where the bulk of the number is lost to society. In my last and in previous Reports I have entered very fully into various aspects of this subject, and need only repeat what I said last year—that the proper function of a reformatory must be sedulously kept in view, if the highest results are to be attained. That function is to reform, to fit for boarding-out; boarding-out does the rest. There is no need to go far afield for an example; that most admirable institution, the school ship “Vernon,” supplies it once again; and if a reformatory for boys enlarges the quantity of such work as the “Vernon” does, the effect cannot fail to be visible in a reduction of the juvenile gaol population, and an increase in the ranks of the boys whom this Board should have under control. I am pleased to know that though the reformatory for boys is not yet in existence, preparations for its establishment have not been suspended—the erection of the buildings is being proceeded with; and I reiterate the hope that next year I may be able to speak of it as an existing and promising institution.

Before leaving this division of my subject, I may remark that I think it would be well if the age at which juvenile offenders could legally be subjected to reformatory instead of penal treatment were extended from sixteen years (as it now is under our Reformatories Act) to eighteen years. At present, if a lad of sixteen years of age is convicted of his first criminal offence, however venial it may be, a Magistrate or a Judge has no alternative than to send him to gaol, where there are no means of effectually separating him from the confirmed criminals. Thus we had a boy under seventeen years of age a few weeks ago sent to prison for the first time, whose character was shown to have previously been most exemplary; and there were at that time also a number of young lads undergoing imprisonment in Darlinghurst Gaol, which was then so overcrowded that any attempt at isolation or classification of the prisoners was simply impossible. Our own Judges (notably Mr. Justice Windeyer) have frequently drawn attention to the evil of thus indelibly stamping the prison brand upon young criminals, and often upon mere children; and recently Mr. Justice Higinbotham, of Victoria, wrote a forcible protest in the following terms:—“We are gradually becoming acquainted with a great fact in criminal procedure, and that is this—that the system of imprisonment, with or without hard labour, by itself, is neither reformatory nor always deterrent. It is something less than either, and is often merely injurious in its effects, for I believe it to be, in its actual operation, not unfrequently an encouragement of crime, and a promoter of crime* * * * It appears to me that *our system of punishments operates as an education in crime to a very large number of young offenders * * Our first object in dealing with youthful offenders should be to separate them from the criminal companionship in which they may have committed their first offence, and not to plunge them into the company of those who have already incurred the sentence of the law.” The last Annual Report on Reformatories in Victoria quotes the evidence upon this point of a young lad who was said to be one of the cleverest pickpockets in England:—“I have been in five gaols, in one of them (the Liverpool one) six times. The oftener you go, the hardener you are.” The same report states that in New York a special reformatory has been established for dealing with first offenders, between the ages of sixteen and thirty. Upon the same point, too, one who was once a most hardened criminal in Sydney, and has been many times times in Berrima and other gaols, in relating his experiences, says :—“When I was a little boy, between 12 and 13 years old, I stole a loaf of bread, for that I was sent to Darlinghurst Gaol for three months. There I became associated with a gang of thieves, and the most hardened criminals, from whom I received instruction in thieving. I came out of gaol a far worse boy than when I entered. I came out with the full determination of joining that gang of thieves.” And the same man, says :—“I must confess that the first time I entered the gaol, little and ignorant though I was, I thought to myself they are all fools—I mean not the criminals, but the legislators are fools for doing as they do, and making criminals of the young by the hundred every year. I have held that opinion ever since.” I have dwelt somewhat fully upon this subject here, because it is one to which I have not referred in my previous suggestions on Reformatory matters. I am aware that doubts have been expressed as to whether criminals of over sixteen years of age at the time of committal could be made amenable to ordinary reformatory discipline; but I think we may safely be guided by officials whose practical experience must make their opinions of value; and I therefore quote a few sentences from the report for 1884 of the celebrated Redhill Reformatory in Surrey, the resident Chaplain and Director of which, when urging upon the Home Office the desirableness of extending to eighteen years the age up to which committals may be ordered, says :—“The impression that this is most desirable—I might almost say necessary—has grown upon me with ever-increasing force during twenty-five years constant work amongst lads of the rough and criminal classes, both in provincial towns and in London. During the last three of these years I have been Chaplain and Director of this large Reformatory, and my experience here has entirely strengthened my previously formed conviction * * * The objection will be raised that lads received at such an age will be difficult to manage in Reformatories. I must say frankly that I do not believe it. My own experience, and that of the officers here, go to prove the contrary. We have always in this School a number of youths over the age of eighteen, and we find them, more than younger boys, amenable to good influences in the school, and turning out well after leaving.” The opinion of this gentleman should carry weight, as the Redhill Reformatory is the most successful in the world. I fully explained its operations in my Report for 1884, in which I pointed out, that although every inmate had been once, and many had been eight and ten times convicted of crime, the result of its method of dealing with criminal boys had shown the relapses into crime during twenty-five years to have been only 3 per cent. It is mainly upon the lines of this particular institution, as I am informed, that it is intended to carry out the proposed Reformatory for boys at Rookwood.

I have always been anxious to avoid comparing the operations of this Department with those of any other Charity for State children; but it is necessary that I should briefly refer here to one or two Asylums for the purpose of explaining how it is that certain anticipations of the State Children's Relief Board have not been so fully realized as was expected. In my last two Reports to Parliament I predicted that there would be no necessity to maintain institutions for our dependent children after the year 1885, and my belief was founded upon careful analyses of statistics from all the Asylums. Although to a certain extent the institutions remain, the necessity for them no longer exists, and the Board are not responsible for their further maintenance. The three institutions which were our great Asylums for State children when this Department was created in 1881 were so far depopulated towards the close of 1885 that the remainder of the inmates might have been at once boarded-out if the Board had not met with unexpected obstacles. I allude to the Asylum for Destitute Children at Randwick, and to the Orphan Schools. The number of inmates at Randwick

Randwick Asylum had been reduced from 641 to 199, of whom only 13 were State children wholly supported from the Consolidated Revenue; the remainder, being children directly admitted by the Directors, were only partly paid for from State funds. As the State Children's Relief Act made this latter class also liable to be boarded-out, this Department was, on October 3rd, 1885, authorized by the Government to remove 100 of them forthwith. The State Children's Relief Board did not expect any opposition to this course, and so many good homes were available for the children that they might all have been brought at once under the influences of family life. On the 7th of October, 1885, however, the Directors of the Asylum held a meeting, and passed a series of resolutions which prevented the Boarding-out Officer from carrying out his instructions. They resolved that the Colonial Secretary be requested to defer action by this Department until after 1885, and that he would "appoint a time to receive a deputation to discuss the matter"; further, that, "in consequence of the determination of the Government to board-out the children at present in the institution, towards whose maintenance parents and relatives have contributed the sum of £521 8s. 6d. since January 1, 1885—being at the rate of £695 4s. 6d. per year—an opportunity should be afforded such parents to remove their children"; and, finally, "that advertisements be inserted in the daily papers apprising parents of the intended removal of their children unless provision is made for their satisfactory maintenance at home." This deputation has never waited upon the Colonial Secretary, nor have the advertisements been inserted in the newspapers. On October 8, 1885, the State Children's Relief Board pointed out to the Government that "the proposed delay is quite unnecessary, either in the interests of the children or the parents, many of whom it is now virtually admitted by the Randwick Directors are able to establish their own homes, although their children are now supported mainly at the public cost." And it was also explained that, "in all cases before children are boarded-out, it is customary to give parents the opportunity of taking them, and in this way the burden of the State in regard to its dependent charges has been materially lightened by the operations of the State Children's Relief Board. Furthermore, if the course suggested by the Randwick Directors is followed, a large number of good homes, which can be obtained at once, will be lost, as the applications for children will be withdrawn unless they can be granted within a reasonable time." No further action was directed by the Government of that time, but the Randwick Directors having proposed, in order to retain the children, that they should be permitted to forego any further State subsidies, the State Children's Board directed the following letter upon that point to be sent to the Colonial Secretary:—

Sir,—I have the honor, by direction of the State Children's Relief Board, to inform you that I have made two applications to the Superintendent of Randwick Asylum for children partly supported from the Consolidated Revenue Fund and partially from the Society's endowments; and in reply I have been told in courteous terms that the Directors had determined to withhold such children from the operation of the State Children's Relief Act, pending negotiations with the Hon. the Colonial Secretary for their retention under a new arrangement with the Government.

2. I am now directed to respectfully request that Sir Alex. Stuart will have the goodness to grant me a specific authority to board out these children immediately, and that an intimation of such authority may be forwarded to the Superintendent of Randwick Asylum, in order that the children may not be withheld upon my further application.

3. In reference to the suggestion that the Society be permitted to retain these children, under the condition that they forego further subsidies from the Government, my Board consider that it is not beyond their province to point out that the accumulated funds cannot properly be regarded as having accrued wholly from private endowments, and that any children supported from them cannot therefore be legally exempted from boarding-out, seeing that a large proportion of these moneys consists of savings from direct grants from the Consolidated Revenue; and further, that the buildings in which the children are accommodated have been erected mainly at Government cost. In these circumstances, it appears to my Board that the children now or at any time in Randwick Asylum cannot be exempted from section 14 of Act 44 Vic. No. 24, which gives the State Children's Relief Department control over the inmates of every institution "wholly or partly supported from grants from the Consolidated Revenue Fund." The Government have so paramount an interest, both in the Randwick Asylum buildings and reserve fund that, even if the Directors should forego further State grants and subsidies, the present and future inmates must be classed as "State children" within the meaning of the clause just quoted, inasmuch as they would continue to be "partly supported" from the accumulated "grants from the Consolidated Revenue Fund."

4. When it is further considered that the State Children's Relief Act was passed subsequently to the Act incorporating the Randwick Society, it would appear that it must have been intended by Parliament that the former measure should supplement and ultimately supersede the then existing legislation for the relief of destitute children, and, if this be the case, it seems to my Board that a legal question arises (seeing that circumstances now render it unnecessary and undesirable for the Randwick Society to further fulfil its functions in opposition to the declared policy of Parliament), as to whether the accumulated funds of the Society should be so dealt with under new legislation as to constitute a special fund for carrying out the objects of the State Children's Relief Board, which now practically has charge of all the destitute children of this Colony. My Board are of course aware that it would be illegal, without the authority of Parliament, to altogether resume the buildings of Randwick Asylum, or transfer the reserve funds to the Consolidated Revenue, but it is suggested that it would be both reasonable and proper to so legislate as to devote the interest accruing from them to carrying out the purposes which were first contemplated by the Randwick Society's Act of Incorporation, and subsequently by the State Children's Relief Act.

Upon this letter the Colonial Secretary made a minute to the effect that, so long as the Institution thus continued to be supported in part by the State, so long was it subject to the State Children's Relief Act, and that, having carefully looked into the provisions of the Randwick Act of Incorporation, they seemed to be inconsistent with suggestions made by the Directors, namely, that the latter should take in charge the children of widows or widowers who might be able to pay for them in whole or in part.

Since the foregoing correspondence no steps have been taken by the Government to cause the withdrawal of the children, and the direct admissions to the Institution have been so numerous that the number of inmates is rapidly increasing. It is therefore apparent that unless action is promptly taken to assert the right of the Government in this matter there will be great danger of the pauperizing influences of the barrack system, which boarding-out has broken down and removed from the children of the State, being transferred to and perpetuated among a class of children who should certainly be in their own homes, and whose parents must also be in a great measure pauperized and made improvident by being thus unnecessarily relieved of their parental obligations. This Asylum is not now receiving any direct support from the Government, apart from the large interest which the State has in the buildings and the accumulated funds. Recently published statistics show that upon the buildings alone sums aggregating £33,060 have been expended from the Consolidated Revenue, in addition to a special grant of £3,476 to enable the Directors to reduce an overdraft, and probably not less than a fifth of the Society's Reserve Fund, which now amounts to over £50,000, has accumulated from State payments. I have made this explanation of the present position of Randwick Asylum in regard to its relations with the Government and the State Children's Relief Department because I think it necessary that it should be fairly placed before Parliament at this time.

Referring to the statistics from the Orphan Schools, I find that boarding-out has reduced the number of inmates at the Protestant Institution from 250 to 45, and at the Roman Catholic Orphan School from 350 to 50. It is simply on the ground that the Board have adopted the rule to board out children from the three great barrack institutions pro rata that the removal of these few children remaining in the Orphan Schools has hitherto been delayed. In consequence of the difficulty of taking children from Randwick, as already explained, operations at the same time ceased at the Orphan Schools. It is intended, however, that the remaining children shall be removed from these Institutions at the earliest opportunity.

The boarding-out system in this Colony has thus far been attended with most important results in an aspect which has not been alluded to. In England the late Professor Fawcett, who was justly regarded as one of the ablest social reformers and most earnest philanthropists of our time, objected as a political economist to the system, on the ground that "by its very excellence it would encourage pauperism, pauperism, for, if the State provided for destitute children so well, parents would have no motive for industry to provide for their families"; but I am informed in a letter recently sent to this Department by Miss Florence Davenport-Hill, another eminent authority, and author of the well-known work "Children of the State," that Mr. Fawcett, whose apprehensions were founded upon the theory and not upon the practice of the system, subsequently stated to her that "his fears of evil results had been removed, provided the system were wisely administered, and that he had come to approve it." Miss Hill had discovered that, whereas there were in Scotland, in 1870, 7,663 boarded-out children, the number had been reduced in 1883 to 5,623; and her inquiries led her to the conclusion that while parents who really did not need relief were ready enough to permit their children to pass into the workhouse or the school, to be maintained and educated at the public expense, and reclaimed only when they were old enough to earn money, it frequently happened, when it became known that the boarding-out plan was to be resorted to, that numbers of the children were at once applied for, the parents being alarmed lest they should be unable to regain possession of them from the distant foster-homes. The facts which I have just mentioned in connection with Randwick Asylum and the Orphan Schools show that we are realizing this old-world experience, and that here also boarding-out effectually tends to break the children's connection with the State; and I am also able to furnish figures indicating in a remarkable degree the results already secured in that direction in New South Wales. These figures have been obtained from the Institutions, and they prove that since boarding-out was first resorted to, in 1879, by some members of the State Children's Relief Board, in order to test the possibilities of the system, the number of children properly chargeable upon the State has largely diminished; and this result is more remarkable, seeing that this Colony has, during the past two or three years, passed through periods of severe commercial depression, which have greatly added to the trials and hardships of the poorer classes of the community.

On December 31, 1879, there were, in the five principal Asylums, 1,455 children wholly or partly supported from State funds and private endowments—namely, Randwick Asylum, 641; Protestant Orphan School, 234; Roman Catholic Orphanage, 340; Sydney Benevolent Asylum, 191; Ashfield Home, 79. It appears from the returns last published that now, after the boarding-out system has been in operation for six years, the gross number of children charged upon Government and public charity has been reduced to 1,379, distributed as follows:—State Children's Relief Department, 940; Randwick Asylum, 199; Benevolent Asylum, 113; Roman Catholic Orphan School, 50; Protestant Orphan School, 45; Infants' Home, Ashfield, 32. And these figures may fairly be still further reduced, in order to indicate the actual result of the system in lessening youthful pauperism, which will have been secured when the final stroke is given to the Institutions. There are, first, 66 children included among those boarded-out who ought not to be considered in this estimate, because they have been removed from the "Vernon" and Biloela, and, having been dealt with through the Courts, are not legally classed as orphaned or destitute children. As we know, also, that as soon as boarding-out is again applied to Randwick Asylum and the Orphan Schools, at least 100 inmates of the former and 50 at the latter Institutions will either be apprenticed or sent home to their friends, and so cease to be a charge upon charity—that they are, in fact, being retained simply to bolster up the Asylums—these numbers should be further deducted from the present gross total of children towards whose maintenance it is necessary to contribute, either from the Consolidated Revenue or invested funds. The figures thus analyzed show:—Total number of State children prior to the boarding-out system, in 1880, 1,485; total number properly chargeable chargeable according to latest returns in 1886, 1,163 ; reduction, 322. I have here presented two sets of calculations—one showing the present actual, and the other immediately possible results. From whichever point of view the figures may be regarded, the operation of the boarding-out system must be deemed highly satisfactory, as, considering the increase in the population of the Colony since 1879, we might reasonably have expected the same proportionate increase in the number of dependent children as the most recent official reports show there has been in regard to adult paupers, criminals, and lunatics, and as there was also in the number of children in the four years prior to the system of boarding-out.

The financial result of the system fully endorses these statistics. Details of the cost of the boarding-out and other branches of this Department will be found under their respective headings ; but I may point out here that, for the maintenance of orphaned and destitute children in the year before boarding-out was adopted, the Government paid for maintenance only to Randwick Asylum, £14,177 14s. 5d. ; to the Protestant Orphan School, £3,964 12s. 2d. ; Roman Catholic Orphanage, £4,498 12s. 4d., and two years ago £1,000 was voted for the maintenance of children at Little Bay Hospital, who have since been transferred to the State Children's Relief Board. The Government also paid in the year before boarding-out, in excess of present payments for the maintenance of children who have since been taken up by this Department, £770 to the Benevolent Asylum, and, subsequently, £300 for boys boarded-out from the "Vernon" (the difference between the cost of maintaining them on the ship and in homes), and £116 on 29 children placed out from Bilocla ; total, £24,826 18s. 11d. Against this, for the purpose of comparison, should be placed the total expenditure of the State Children's Relief Department for the past year, £17,801 12s. 10d., and a sum of £765 for maintaining the balance of the children to be boarded-out from the Orphan Schools, or a total of £18,566 12s. 10d., an actual saving of £6,260 6s. 1d. per annum as compared with the expenditure in 1880. Randwick Asylum does not now receive any support or subsidies from the Government, but if boarding-out operations are resumed there, another 100 children will have to be provided for, at a cost of £1,700 a year, which will form an additional charge against this Department ; but then against this we ought to have a return of £2,500 at least, if the suggestions made in the letter to the Colonial Secretary on this subject (quoted on page 10 of this Report) are carried out. It seems to me that there could not be a more equitable way of dealing with the invested funds of the Randwick Society ; and if that view be adopted by the Government and Parliament the State Children's Relief Board will be very glad indeed to confer with the Society's Directors in order to decide upon the best method of reinvesting these funds, so as to effectually secure the purposes aimed at by the Randwick Act of Incorporation, and the State Children's Relief Act, by which it has been superseded. The extent to which the State has been relieved of its dependent children may be further judged from the fact that in 1881 the pressure upon the Institutions was becoming so great that it was considered necessary to expend £6,150 in enlarging the Roman Catholic Orphanage, and £898 for an additional dormitory at the Protestant Orphan School, in addition to £697 16s. 9d. in improving the accommodation already existing there. This large expenditure has of course turned out to be useless for the purpose contemplated.

Having made these preliminary observations, I shall proceed to narrate in detail the various operations of the Board during the year covered by this Report ; and I would draw attention to the fact that, as the period under review terminates on April 5, 1886, as required by law, no time has been lost in presenting to Parliament a complete summary of the work of the Department.

THE

THE BOARDED-OUT CHILDREN.

On 5th April, 1885, there were 1,026 children under control, namely, 564 boys and 462 girls, of whom 509 boys and 354 girls were boarded-out, 14 boys and 12 girls were at the cottage homes for invalids, 15 boys and 35 girls were adopted without cost to the State, 26 boys and 61 girls were apprenticed. During the year ended April 5th, 1886, 441 children have been placed out (279 boys and 162 girls), 1 boy and 1 girl have died, 61 boys and 32 girls have been discharged to parents and other relatives after the usual careful inquiries into the characters and circumstances of the applicants, and 2 boys and 4 girls were sent to the Industrial and Reformatory Schools, so that there were at the end of the year 1,366 children under control. Of these, 578 boys and 362 girls are paid for as boarders, 128 boys and 103 girls are apprenticed, 28 boys and 65 girls are adopted, 30 boys and 43 girls are in the cottage homes, 3 boys and 3 girls are in the central home, 3 boys and 3 girls are in hospital, 4 of the elder boys have absconded, and the remainder—children of advanced ages, are of the class known as “unofficial.” Details of all these divisions will be found under separate headings. The Board has always had an earnest desire to restore children to parents when that course may be adopted with safety to the child, but care has to be exercised in dealing with applications for them, and several have been refused during the year in consequence of the bad character of fathers or mothers, or both. The Board have also to exercise caution in reference to applications for children from their relatives just as they are old enough to go to service. One mother, for example, had not inquired about her two daughters for more than eight years, yet when they were aged twelve and thirteen respectively, she appeared from a neighbouring colony and claimed them, just as they were about to be placed in respectable situations. She had recently married, and was twice under the influence of drink when she visited the central home. These children were obviously wanted either as drudges to the newly-married couple at home, or in order that they might be sent to service for the sake of their wages. In another case the Board rescued three girls from the streets—two of them being over twelve years of age—and placed them in superior homes far distant from Sydney and the demoralising influences amidst which they lived. After two years a relative who had not bestowed the slightest care upon them in their time of need discovered that they were entitled to property, and is about to move the Supreme Court in order to obtain possession of them if possible, and the property also. In a third case, a sister married, who had not inquired about her brother, aged twelve, for five years, although she resided less than two miles from him, and she now wants him to help her husband about the wharfs. Because he is pressed to pay, a father wants back a child, for throwing whom over a fence, and thus leaving her some distance from his home at the instance of a heartless stepmother, he had served a term of imprisonment. Another father, a drunkard, who has not inquired about his son for eight years, is accidentally discovered in the country, and when summoned for maintenance, demands the boy. And another father, when charged with desertion, asks for three children, for assaulting whose mother he served six months in gaol, the woman subsequently dying through the injuries. These are merely instances of a number of applications which the Board have refused to grant. In several cases children have been given up to parents who had been in gaol, but there has been some warrant for the belief that they would be well cared for. The separation of the children from the guardians, in order that they may be returned to their own relatives, is frequently very painful, and it is common for them to strongly rebel against leaving their foster-homes. I have before me some letters which are examples of others of the kind among the office records. In one case the local clergyman thus telegraphs in reference to a boy whose relatives relatives had reclaimed him :—“ A. W. refuses to go back with the attendant. What is to be done ? Do let him stay.” The boy wrote an earnest appeal to be allowed to stay ; and later the guardian sent in the following protest :—“ I have received your two telegrams stating that my boy W. has been reclaimed. He says he will not go back ; he is so much attached to the place, and to my youngsters here, it would be a sin to take him away. He never stopped crying from the time I got your first telegram on Monday evening until I got the one yesterday evening, nor never ate anything ; and my little fellow is just as bad. W. is crying because he has to go, and my boy is crying because he does not want him to go. I always treated him as my own child. He always slept with my little fellow, he would not sleep without Sam. I would be willing to lose the pay.” This is not a singular instance, but one of many that could be cited. A farmer who had been ruined and compelled to break up his home in consequence of bad seasons, brought back to the Central Home a family of two boys and a girl who had been boarded in his family for more than two years, and there could be no doubt of the genuine distress manifested on both sides at the parting. These children have a mother who is a drunkard, and before falling into the hands of the Board they gained a livelihood by selling matches about the streets and theatres of Sydney. The Department is only realizing the experience of other places in thus thoroughly incorporating the majority of the children with the families who have the care of them. I last year quoted the testimony of Mr. Reed, J.P., administrator of the boarding-out system in South Australia, on that point. He accompanied the Officer of the New South Wales Department on a tour among the boarded-out children, and his voluntary testimony as to what he saw was very gratifying. Captain Evans, R.M., Inspector of Public Charities in Victoria, Captain Jekyll, R.M., of the Queensland Prison Department, and Mr. Lilburne, who has charge of the Boarding-out Department in Victoria, have made similar visits during the past year, and their evidence in reference to the evident happy home life and good care taken of the children is equally satisfactory. Captain Jekyll wrote :—“ I had no prejudice against your boarding-out system, but I must admit I was not prepared for such results as those I witnessed. I could not have believed, unless I had seen them, that people living in such good homes would have undertaken to look after other people’s children. It has convinced me that there is more philanthropy in the world than I thought, and that the maternal instinct is in some women without bounds.” In a number of cases it happened that the visits were made at mid-day, and where the guardians chanced to be at dinner the children were found having their meals at the same table. I would direct special attention to the letters from Mr. Reed and Mr. Lilburne, which appear first under Appendix K.

The two children who died were both ill when placed out. They had for years been inmates of the hospital divisions of the institutions from which they were selected. The boy suffered from heart disease and dropsy, and he fell ill again immediately after being boarded out, was placed in the Bathurst Hospital, and died there shortly afterwards. The girl was affected with hereditary disease, and a constitution thus impaired succumbed to an attack of bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs soon after she was boarded-out. I mention these cases particularly because the low death rate is extraordinary, considering the large number of sick and diseased children who have been taken over by the Department, and it is also an indication that proper sanitary conditions are a paramount consideration in connection with the selection of homes.

Three rates of payment are still adopted for the boarded-out children, namely, 7s. a week for those who by reason of chronic illness may need very special care ; 6s. a week for children with merely delicate constitutions ; and 5s. a week for ordinary boarders. There are are 25 children paid for under the first scale, 34 under the second, 872 under the standard rate of 5s., and 9 healthy infants under three years of age are paid for at the rate of 7s. a week. I would draw particular attention to the diminished number of children paid for under the higher rates as compared with last year's returns, notwithstanding the large increase in the total number of children now under control. There were then 1 child paid for at 10s. a week, 35 at 7s., and 32 at 6s. As a child's health improves the payment reverts from the special to the standard rate, and it has only been found necessary to remove children in one or two instances from the old guardians in consequence of the reduction of the subsidy. I stated in my Report last year that in order to prevent and discourage attempts at baby-farming it had been determined to pay only the minimum rate for healthy children under three years of age, instead of 7s. a week as in the first two years of the Board's operations, unless in exceptional cases. The change has undoubtedly prevented undesirable persons from applying for these young children. Of the nine under three years of age who are paid for under the higher scale, five are to be transferred to the minimum rate immediately. There is not much difficulty in providing for the healthy infants under the lower subsidy, and the people who apply for them under this altered rule are generally not of the poorer classes. Under the old scale it was a common occurrence for poverty-stricken women to ask for three or four, and often six, infants, and although the applications were never entertained, the officers of the Department were put to a good deal of trouble and loss of time in dealing with them. Happily very few such children now fall under the care of the Department. The great source of supply used to be the Sydney Benevolent Asylum, and the Directors of that Institution have hit upon an admirable method of preventing the mass of its illegitimate babies from becoming burdens upon the State. When the mother has sufficiently recovered from her accouchement a respectable place of service is found for her with her child, and thus, while natural ties are preserved, the community is relieved of a heavy charge upon public charity. And by the same means, it cannot be doubted, many mothers are prevented from again falling into sin, which would probably happen if they were turned from the Asylum into the streets, friendless and penniless, after passing through their troubles. Ever since the initiation of this Department I have thought in reference to these infants that it would be well if we had a legal provision, such as there is in South Australia, to prevent wholesale baby-farming, which there is reason to fear is too often but another name for infanticide. There, sections 100 and 101 of the Destitute Persons Act provide for "fit and proper persons to be foster-mothers or wet nurses"; and impose a penalty of £20, with the alternative of imprisonment, upon any person "who not being in an establishment under the control of the Board shall with or without fee or reward act as foster-mothers or wet-nurses of any child whether legitimate or illegitimate," without a certificate from a duly qualified medical man. If a law like this had existed in New South Wales such scandals as the public recently heard of from Ryde and one or two other places could not have happened.

The following is a classification of the complaints from which the children suffer who are paid for under special rates:—Consumptive, 5; semi-idiotic, 2; incontinence of water, 5; chronic bronchitis, 1; scrofulous and delicate, 2; dirty habits, 13; delicate, 15; one eye and lame, 1; dirty habits and difficult to manage, 1; dishonest, 1; dirty habits and delicate, 1; scrofulous sore eyes, 6; scrofulous, 3; eruptive complaint, 1; prolapsus ani, 1; St. Vitus's Dance, 1.

Several representations having been made that it was not desirable for the boarded-out children to attend the public schools lest they should morally corrupt other children, the Board caused careful inquiries to be made into that matter. Usually it was found that the complaint had originated from petty ill-feeling towards the school teachers, teachers, or from other local causes. In one case, for example, a petition against the attendance of the children at the public school was circulated by a person who had a few days previously had an unsuccessful lawsuit with one of the local representatives of the Department, whose house was rented for a home. However, in order to test this matter thoroughly, and obtain information upon other points as well, a circular was forwarded to all teachers of the schools—public, denominational, and private—which the children attended. The returns show a most remarkable coincidence of opinions of the most satisfactory character. The points upon which the teachers were asked to express their views were—(1) the children's general behaviour and habits; (2) appearance, if well clad, and apparently well fed and cared for; (3) general progress as compared with other children; (4) as to regularity of attendance. A number of replies will be found in the Appendices, but the following letter may be here quoted as a fair example of the whole:—"The eight boarded-out children attending the school are clean and tidy in appearance, are well cared for, and no stranger would be able to distinguish them from the other children. As a rule they are just as well behaved as their schoolfellows; their guardians seem to treat them just as they would their own children; they attend school regularly, and are making fair progress. Five or six children from Cottage Home No. 1 attended this school until lately. During the past month they have been absent on account of illness." [These particular children were not ill, but they were not sent to school in consequence of the prevalence of whooping-cough in their home.] "Those children are noticeable for their clean and tidy appearance, and it is pleasing to note the difference which a few months residence in Mittagong makes in the appearance of these children. They are evidently well cared for." Another teacher of a very large school writes:—"Their behaviour, habits, &c., are much like those of the other children attending the school. They were clean, and appeared to be well fed, and had that contented look which is not to be seen in children under the barrack system." A third teacher says:—"They seem in good spirits, well clad, and appear much better than a great number of those whose parents are alive. They always come to school with boots on, although a number of parents persist in sending their boys without boots. Their attendance is excellent and progress excellent. Their behaviour, as far as I can tell, is without a blemish." This is from a large country school. As some of the teachers appear to consider their letters are confidential, the localities and names are suppressed in the Appendix. It is not unusual for the Board's inspectors to find that the children are entered in the school registers in the guardians' names, and the school fees paid by the foster-parent, and in this way their identity among other children as wards of the State is frequently lost. Indeed many little ones who have been boarded-out for two or three years are unaware that they are not the offspring of their foster-parents. One youngster, aged five, who has been three years boarded-out, when speaking to the visiting inspector a few days ago, repeatedly referred to his guardian as "my mother"; and spoke of his mother as "the woman who comes to see me." The school teachers furnish to the Department a half-yearly report upon every child in a printed form, in which answers are given to the following questions:—1. Does child come to school regularly? 2. State average attendance during half-year. 3. Does child come to school clean? 4. Does child come to school with clothes in decent order and well mended? 5. Does child appear well fed and cared for? 6. State if child can read and write, and progress as compared with last report. These reports supplement in a very valuable way the monthly reports containing similar and additional information from the lady visitors, and I am glad to be able to bear testimony to the great help which the ladies and gentlemen having charge of the schools render in this and other ways in promoting the objects of the boarding-out system. Arrangements are still always made for the Roman Catholic children to attend their own schools where the latter are accessible; and in most instances the guardians prefer to pay the fees, rather than have their wards placed on the free list. A number of letters from the teachers of the Convent Schools will be found in Appendix M. In this connection also the following short extract from the letter of one of our most valued lady visitors will be of interest to the Roman Catholic community. I suppress her name, because the letter is marked private. She says:—

and

“Knowing the interest you feel in anything relating to the children under your care, I want to tell you of a circumstance that, had you witnessed it, would have given you as much pleasure as it did to me, for I know you have a spirit above sectarian prejudice when the weal of many is concerned. Well, yesterday I was gladdened by the sight of thirty young girls dressed in white, with veils on their heads, and blue sashes—all receiving Holy Communion for the first time (the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, you would call it). Amongst the number were some of our State children, just as neatly attired as any of the others, and quite as happy. With Catholics the first Communion Day is looked upon as the most important in the life of a child—a red-letter day to look back to in after life, to awaken good resolutions should the temptations of the world press strongly against the soul. The preparation is very solemn, requiring that the external conduct should be satisfactory to parents or guardians for a considerable time beforehand—then self-examination and prayer for help to the Giver of all Good for the necessary disposition to receive the Holy Sacrament worthily. Our dear State children you will be pleased to know, passed the different stages of preparation most satisfactorily, and their faces beaming with pleasure gave evidence of the peace of their young hearts, ‘the peace of God which passeth all understanding.’ To me, knowing, alas! too well the degradation from which they have been rescued, the sight of ‘my children’ under the circumstances gave me intense satisfaction—they were so neatly dressed, and so well behaved, and just on the same footing as the children of persons in good circumstances.”

The greatest care possible is still taken to carry out the letter and spirit of the Regulation which provides that “Protestant children will be placed in Protestant families, and Roman Catholic children in Roman Catholic families.”

I regret to state that no improvement has been adopted in the old imperfect method of compelling parents to support their boarded-out children, to which attention has been frequently drawn. The officers of the Department, however, do the best they can under existing circumstances, and they last year succeeded in collecting £412 13s. 9d., as against £261 5s. 6d. in 1884. This does not include any sums obtained through the Courts, under Magisterial orders, which probably amount to half as much more; but as these are paid direct from the Police Department into the Treasury, the Board has no cognizance of them. The present system of placing children under State control—for which this Department is not responsible—simply offers a premium to careless or vicious parents to ignore their natural obligations. If a parent desire to be relieved of his children, it is only necessary to send in an application, accompanied by a testimonial of some kind, certifying that the case is a deserving one. Sometimes inquiries are made beyond the applicant—in most instances they are not—and then the child is taken; but there is no attempt at that time to bind the parent under a Court order to pay the cost of maintenance. We have something to learn from Victoria in this particular. There, no child is placed under State control until it has passed through the Court; and although I know it may be urged that this has a somewhat objectionable aspect in its bearing upon deserving parents who may be willing and anxious to pay, it certainly tends to fix that far larger class who will resort to almost any expedient to avoid paying. The Victorian custom is for every parent to appear before a Magistrate with the children, and produce evidence that the case is a necessitous one; and then the order for payment is made in accordance with the applicant's means, and the duty of collecting or punishing in default is thus cast upon the Clerks of Petty Sessions and police, who, in most cases, have some local knowledge to guide them. The Melbourne Department has also, in furtherance of this plan, obtained the help of an intelligent police officer—now called a “summonsing officer”—whose duty is to prevent the accumulation of arrears, by following up defaulters, defaulters, and renewing proceedings against them when necessary. I suggested a similar course in New South Wales three years ago, and Victoria adopted it in 1884. The result there in one year was that the collections were nearly doubled. The great objections to our own method are that the children are taken charge of without legal proof that they ought to be cast upon charity, and that it is impossible to trace the fathers or mothers after they are relieved of their offspring. The last batch of parents summoned a few weeks ago, for instance, numbered twenty-one; and they were scattered over many parts of the country. The natural consequence was that the police succeeded in finding only eight of them; and as the remainder had never come in contact with the Department or police authorities previously, it would merely be a waste of time to issue warrants. It is easy to understand that if all these defaulters had been compelled, as in Victoria, to appear with their children before a Magistrate in the first instance, their appearance, trades, and other particulars, could have been so recorded that the police would probably have been able to trace them subsequently. There are at present, for the reasons stated, some hundreds of summonses and warrants from this Department and the various Asylums lying unserved at the Sydney Police Courts.

The total expenditure on all branches of the State Children's Relief Department during the past year has been £17,801 12s. 10d., which is covered by the amount voted by Parliament. Details are set forth in the usual balance sheet. It is singular how nearly the annual expenditure has approximated to the estimate (which has of course to be prepared in advance), considering that it is not possible to accurately forecast the amount of business to be transacted in any given period, as that depends upon the number of children passed into the Asylums, which the Board does not control. As Parliament last year granted £18,535, there is a balance of £733 7s. 2d. still to the credit of the vote. If, however, the unexpected stoppage of boarding-out operations had not taken place at Randwick Asylum, the whole sum voted would just have covered the Board's expenditure. The gross outlay includes the cost of boarding-out, the cottage homes and the Central Home at Paddington, but I purpose dealing in this paragraph only with the amount expended under the first heading (£15,418 4s. 9d.), in order to correctly arrive at the cost of the boarded-out children. The office registers are so kept that the average daily number of children under control in the several divisions can be readily ascertained. Although on April 5, 1886, there were 1,366 children under control, the average daily number boarded-out during the whole year was 1,000, and the total cost of their maintenance, clothing, inspection, &c., has been £15 8s. 4d. per child, against £16 19s. last year. In my Report for 1884 I stated that the Department was saving the State "at least 25 per cent. in connection with the maintenance and training of our dependent children." It will be seen from this year's figures that the financial advantages were really under-estimated. In the least expensive of the Institutions for training orphaned and destitute children in this Colony the cost of maintenance during 1885 was £24 7s. 4½d., excluding the cost of repairs to buildings. In working out this estimate care has been taken to include every item that could possibly be charged against the boarding-out division. The accounts have also been separately kept in the financial books, and their correctness can at any time be ascertained by comparison with the receipted vouchers containing corresponding items in the Audit Office. The Government have placed upon the Estimates for the current year the sum of £20,420 to defray the cost of all branches of the work; and I trust that the strict economy which the figures I have presented make it evident has been exercised throughout the Department, and the remarkable saving effected by boarding-out upon this branch of our Charities, the amount amount now asked for will be freely granted by Parliament. The sum voted for 1885 was intended to cover the cost of 1,400 children; at the end of the official year there were, as stated, 1,366 under control. The estimate for 1886 provides for 1,600 children, including the invalids and others paid for at special rates, and also the inmates of the Central Home.

The only Institutions from which the Board are now placing out children at present are the Benevolent Asylum, Ashfield Home for Infants, "Vernon," and Biloea, with the exception of the four Sydney Hospitals, from which children are occasionally sent to the cottage homes. The children hitherto brought under control have been selected from the Asylums, as follows:—Benevolent Asylum, 964; Asylum for Destitute Children, Randwick, 300; Protestant Orphan School, 109; Roman Catholic Orphan School, 91; Infants' Home, Ashfield, 52; Industrial School for Girls, 29; Nautical School Ship "Vernon," 37; Sydney Hospital, 1; Prince Alfred Hospital, 1; Coast Hospital, Little Bay, 24; Children's Hospital, 7; Shaftesbury Reformatory, 1. Children are not permitted to remain in the Benevolent Asylum longer than is necessary to make them physically clean, or afford opportunities for their reclamation by parents, before they are boarded out. I would draw particular attention to the number of children boarded out from Biloea and the "Vernon." All these waifs—none of them over eight years of age—were necessarily brought up under the Industrial Schools Act, and the desirableness of placing them amidst the influences of home life instead of among the elder inmates of the schools, of whom a very large proportion are of the purely criminal class, must be very obvious. As a rule they are not more difficult to manage than ordinary children after they are sent into the country districts; and it is to be regretted that a suggestion which was made during the past year that they should in the first instance be placed in the Benevolent Asylum and boarded out from thence, instead of being committed to the Industrial Schools, was not adopted. I know the managers of the schools agree that their establishments should be reserved for the elder children, and not made receptacles for mere babies. Some of the children who have been thus dealt with have not been more than three to five years old. The practice in Victoria is to place the boys and girls of tender ages, who may be charged under the Industrial Schools Act, in the receiving depôt, which is here represented by the children's division of the Sydney Benevolent Asylum, so that they may avoid intercourse with children who are either criminal or vicious. The "Vernon" here at present corresponds to the Victorian reformatories; and I notice that of the 82 children sent to the latter under committal from the Courts, during 1884, none were really retained there who were under twelve years of age, the remainder being at once handed over to the Boarding-out authorities; and the reports state that after their removal from the towns to country homes these children have all done well. The State Children's Relief Board made an effort two years ago to similarly deal with Industrial School children up to eleven years of age, but the application was not granted by the Minister having control of the Institutions at that time. Of course children of even eight years old are frequently vicious, but in such cases care is taken to place them where there are not opportunities for corrupting other little ones, and the same precaution could easily be observed in dealing with children of eleven years of age.

It has been necessary during the year to send two girls to Shaftesbury Reformatory, one to Biloea, one to the Female Refuge, and two boys to the "Vernon." One of the girls had been tried in no less than fourteen homes, and all had been offered various chances of reformation in excellent families before the extreme step of disposing of them through the Courts was resorted to. None of the girls had been placed out until they were nearly twelve years of age, and their previous habits were too firmly implanted to be eradicated by ordinary home influences. One of the girls was strongly inclined to be immoral, and her reformatory treatment may possibly save her from going upon the streets; one was indescribably filthy in her habits, and repeatedly absconded from her guardians; and one was an incorrigible thief. The boys were quite unmanageable, and could not be kept from the streets, although homes were selected for them some miles from any town. I would specially draw attention to the very small number of children in proportion to the great number hitherto brought under control who have thus far turned out to be unamenable to home training. Although 1,616 children have been boarded-out, the Board has only lost the control of 14 through inability to deal with them. Of these, 4 girls were sent to Biloela, 2 to Shaftesbury, 1 to the Refuge; 3 boys were committed to the "Vernon," and 4 boys (3 being over twelve years of age) have absconded, and the police are unable to find them. Three of them are quite able to earn their own living, and the fourth is believed to have gone to his parents. The remainder of the Board's charges are still in respectable homes, or have been restored to their parents. This truly remarkable result, I think, indicates two things, of which the Board have had ample testimony otherwise at the monthly meetings, namely, that great care must have been exercised in selecting children for the homes and in selecting homes for the children, and that much patience and kindness must have been displayed by foster-parents in managing many children who were most difficult to deal with. It has only been necessary to remove children from half a dozen homes during the year in consequence of defects in the latter or among the guardians, and less than a dozen children have been thrown back upon the Department through misconduct. The defaults among the guardians were not very serious, except in two cases. In one of these the woman turned out to be a drunkard, although the home was very comfortable; and in the other case the children were neglected, and a fine of £5 was imposed by the Board, under a regulation which provides for direct penalties for "neglect or ill-treatment." In South Australia, out of 506 children placed out, 17 had been sent to the Girls' Reformatory, and 15 to the Lying-in Home; 28 children were also returned to the Board there in 1885 through misconduct, in addition to 18 after absconding from their homes, and 25 were returned through "unsatisfactory features in the homes, the accommodation, and the foster-parents." In Victoria, among 1,860 boarded-out children there were last year 28 absconders, but the children returned under the other headings are not classified. I do not present these figures for the purpose of implying defects in our neighbours' systems, which I fully believe are ably managed; but the comparison suggests that more than ordinary care is taken by the New South Wales Board in selecting homes and allotting children. In commenting upon this point, Chief Justice Way, of South Australia, who has given a good deal of attention to the work of this Department, wrote as Chairman of the Destitute Commission that he "attributed the difference in the results in the two Colonies to the different methods of securing homes pursued by the two Boards." The Chief Justice alluded to the fact that in South Australia no investigations are made into the characters of applicants, apart from the usual recommendations of clergymen and magistrates, while in this Colony such inquiries were also made, and the homes usually inspected by the officials, with the result that fully 10 per cent. of the applications were rejected in consequence of the unfitness of the applicants to be guardians.

In reference to these applications, it was stated in a former Report that "repeated admonitions had caused greater care to be exercised in all directions in recommending applicants for children." I am pleased to say that, as a rule, this "greater care" is still observable; but testimonials are even yet occasionally received from persons in high places which are simply astounding. One Magistrate recommended a person whom he had a short time before sent to gaol. In another case the Inspector reported that "the applicant attended race meetings with a roulette table for a living, and is reputed to be a regular Bohemian." In a third, the applicant "had served five years in gaol for robbery, and a sentence of six months for nearly strangling a Chinaman"; a fourth applicant was "well known to the police" as being "thoroughly bad"; a fifth had been imprisoned for obtaining money under false pretences, and was a drunkard; a sixth applicant had a wife of notoriously bad character—the child asked for in this case being a girl of twelve years of age; a seventh applicant "bore a bad name, and kept a gambling saloon"; and another person applying for a girl of fourteen years of age had a son living in the house who had been summoned to the local Police Court for refusing to support an illegitimate child. All these applications were received during the past year, and were signed by clergymen and magistrates.

Since my last Report 729 applications have been received, as against 720 in the preceding year, and 490 in 1883. 327 were approved by the Board, and 37 rejected upon their inspectors' reports. There are 809 applications now recorded, which the Board have been unable to deal with for want of children. 456 are for boarders, 393 for apprentices, and 60 for children for adoption. Of the total number, 601 are from Protestants and 208 from Roman Catholics. These figures make it evident that this Department is in a position to at once provide for every child in the Government or subsidized public institutions who may be fit to board out.

It will be seen from the following statement of the boarding-out districts that the great majority of the children are sent into the country. It is indispensable to their proper control that most of the elder boys be placed where they will not be tempted to run about the streets, or else they frequently fall into trouble. There are some remarkable illustrations of this fact in the records. One lad, who was tried in several homes at Newcastle, fell into such bad ways that the police began to regard him as a promising young criminal; yet he has turned out so well after his first half-year on one of the South Coast dairy farms that his employer has doubled his pocket-money allowance, and sent the Department twice the amount due to him for wages to be placed to his credit in the Savings' Bank. Another boy, whose thieving propensities led him to the length of picking the clergyman's pockets at Maitland during Church service, and who could not for many weeks be induced to sleep in a bed, but stole from his room nightly to "camp" in the highways, is reported from the interior to be a "very good boy, and very fond of horses and cattle." Two others, who were thieves, one being also very unmanageable when in a clergyman's home at Goulburn, are doing well on dairy farms. There are many other similar cases showing that, for boys of wandering habits or at all inclined to go astray, the influences of country life are both morally and physically good. It is this experience which has led the Board to gladly accept so many farmers as guardians, and thus dispose of the large number of boys who are now learning the lessons of thrift and industry which will enable them by-and-by to labour successfully for themselves upon the land. Indeed, among all the homes now under supervision, there are none more satisfactory on the whole than those of the dairy farmers, nor any in which the children appear to be more happy and contented. The localities are thus classified:—Ashfield, 6; Armidale, 5; Alexandria, 2; Balmain, 44; Burwood, 18; Brisbane Water, 7; Bowral, 9; Bungonia, 5; Bathurst, 26; Branxton, 9; Berrima, 73; Burdenda, 1; Blayney, 3; Bangalore, 1; Camperdown,

These figures indicate that the number of farmers' homes has increased from 73 in 1883 to 254 in 1886; and also that the other guardians are generally of a class who are not likely to feel the pressure of poverty. It is thus ensured that the children are placed where it is not probable they will be stinted in regard to either food or clothing for the sake of pecuniary profit. The Board continue to realize that, in addition to the farmers, the most desirable persons for guardians are respectable mechanics and artisans, as it is with them the children are more likely to be incorporated into the life of the family and feel more thoroughly at home than with persons of higher social status.

Twelve

Twelve ordinary meetings and one adjourned meeting of the Board have been held during the year, at which the attendance has been as follows:—The President, 13; Mrs. Garran, 13; Mrs. Jefferis, 10; Mrs. Windeyer, 9; Mrs. Barry, 5; Lady Allen, 5; Lady Jennings, 5; the Hon. W. J. Trickett, M.L.A., 1; the Hon. C. K. Mackellar, M.D., M.L.C., 1; T. M. Slattery, Esq., M.L.A., 0. All the ladies, with the exception of Mrs. Garran, who has attended the full number of meetings, have been absent from town on several occasions on which meetings have been held. It is to be regretted that the Department will for some time lose the valuable aid of Lady Allen, who has recently left the Colony on a visit to England, and who has received leave of absence from the Board. In consequence of manifold other duties the Hon. C. K. Mackellar was compelled to resign his position on the Board on August 17, 1885, and the vacancy thus left was filled by the appointment of the Hon. W. J. Trickett, Minister for Public Instruction, on October 23, 1885. I have much pleasure in again bearing testimony to the continued practical interest manifested in every division of the work of the Department by the lady members of the Board.

The philanthropy of these ladies cannot be too highly commended, nor can the help which they render be overvalued. Their services are purely honorary, yet they are in many cases rendered with a degree of faithfulness and regularity which has effectually supplemented the efforts of the Board to secure the proper supervision of the children. Every child visited is reported upon in a printed form return four times a year to the office, in which answers are given in separate columns by the lady visitors to the following questions:—"Did the child appear clean, healthy, well behaved, kindly treated? What sleeping accommodation had the child, and did the visitor think it sufficient? Were any and what complaints made to the visitor by or against the child? Does the child regularly attend Church, Sunday School, Day School?" It is apparent that the labours which these ladies thus voluntarily perform are by no means light; and independently of these printed returns they correspond frequently with the officials in regard to any matters that may affect the children under their supervision. In the country districts also they make the payments to the guardians, and consequently have opportunities of seeing many of the children apart from their official visits. Indeed, their position as lady visitor causes them to be often applied to in cases of general distress; and as they invariably write in the first instance to this Department for advice in these matters, a great deal of other work of a benevolent character is cast upon them, and also upon the Board's officers, with which neither parties have any concern officially.

There is a total number of 6,156 visits to the children recorded in the registers and lady visitors' reports, as against 4,000 in the previous year. Of these, 3,278 visits have been made by lady visitors, and 2,878 by the Board's officials. As the total number of children in foster-homes is 1,277, exclusive of those in the invalid homes and elsewhere, who are dealt with separately, these returns give an average of over $4\frac{3}{4}$ visits to each child, some children being of course more frequently visited than others, as may be considered necessary. A good many lady visitors' returns have not yet been received for the quarter ending March 30th, in consequence of the early date at which this Report is issued. These will probably make the lady visitors' average one-fourth higher, and they will doubtless be received as usual during the next two or three weeks. The lady visitors', school teachers', and other other reports are carefully checked; and when any defects are pointed out in the homes, or in regard to the children attending school, the guardians are at once written to in order that they may be remedied.

The medical attendance upon the boarded-out children last year, and medicines, cost £93 2s. 2d., the amount expended under this head in 1884 being £108 2s. 9d. No permanent arrangement has yet been made for medical attendance, and the Board have been as usual largely indebted to the benevolence of the medical gentlemen, who have bestowed such good care upon the children, in many cases charging half-fees only, and in others not charging at all. These services have been most freely afforded, and they have materially helped to keep down the cost of the system. I am informed that in Victoria the cost of medical visits to the boarded-out children last year exceeded £1,000. It has been necessary in six cases (in two where eye operations were required) to place the children in hospital, and I have, in consideration of the skilled nursing and medical care bestowed upon all these little ones, to convey the Board's thanks to the authorities at Sydney Hospital, and its Moorcliff (ophthalmic) branch, Prince Alfred Hospital, and the Children's Hospital, Glebe. The children speak in grateful terms of the kindness they received from the ladies who had charge of them in those Institutions.

Several additional cases in which boarded-out children were entitled to property have been brought to the knowledge of the Board since my last Report, and they have as usual been placed with the Curator of Intestate Estates to deal with, who, aided by the police, has taken the necessary steps to protect the children's interests. Mr. Fosbery, Inspector-General of Police, still permits his officers throughout the Colony to render help to this Department in boarding-out matters generally whenever it is required, and the local information which is obtained through their means by the Board's Inspectors is often most valuable in reference to the characters of applicants for children.

These Annual Reports have hitherto notified that the Board were averse to placing more than one or two children in the same home, except when they were brothers and sisters. The objection is that where there are too many children in a home insufficient individual care or affection can be bestowed upon them, and that therefore one of the prime principles of boarding-out may be lost. The South Australian Commissioners have drawn particular attention to this point, and have quoted my views in support of their opinion, that it ought to be made compulsory by regulation that not more than three children of different families should be placed in one home. Miss Spence, who is an acknowledged authority in boarding-out work, in which she has had twelve years' practical experience, in her evidence before the Commission, remarked:—"My beau ideal of a home is where a destitute child or two, or even three, are absorbed among other children, and go to ordinary schools and to ordinary work." In consequence of the increasing number of applications for children there has not been much occasion in this Colony during the past two or three years to depart from the principles which the Board have laid down in this matter; but previously a number of homes had accumulated with four, and one or two cases five or six children, from which it was not considered advisable to remove the inmates, in consequence of the evident good treatment they were receiving, and the improvement in their health, habits, and appearance generally. Recently, however, the Board decided that the number of such homes should not be increased; that where there were more than four children, not of one family, in the same home, the number should be reduced to three as soon as suitable opportunities occurred for making the change in the same district; and that where four children had been for some time located and were doing well, they should should not be disturbed; but the number merely reduced as the children became old enough to apprentice. The result of this decision has rather upset the Board's theory in regard to a probable absence of individual love and care where foster-children are aggregated to the number of an ordinary family. In four cases, for example, the foster-mothers offered to adopt the children rather than lose them, although there were three others in each home; and as the four in question are of tender ages, there could be no doubt that affection for them must have been the sentiment prevailing among the guardians. At present there are 1,277 children, in 765 homes (exclusive of the Government cottage homes and children in the Dépôt, but including several private cottage homes, established under a regulation to which reference will be more fully made presently), or an average of about $1\frac{2}{3}$ children to each home. The following statement shows the numbers in detail:—

517 homes with one child each.

The most interesting feature of the foregoing return is that indicating that the Board have succeeded in keeping the children of no less than 132 families together under this system, the majority of whom, judging from their antecedents, are for the first time enjoying the comforts of home and receiving good moral training and education. The figures also show that, apart from the homes in which children of the same family are located, and the six homes classed as subsidized cottage homes, there are—628 homes containing 806 children, or an average of about $1\frac{1}{4}$ child in each home.

All the homes in which the children are placed in numbers are frequently visited by the lady visitors and officials, and their excellence is unquestionable. In several special cases testimony upon this point has been obtained from a clergyman, a school inspector, and a truant officer, and a police officer, who have paid occasional visits, and from children of advanced ages who were formerly inmates. Sometimes when families have been thrown upon the Department, they have been placed in homes that were known to be very good, without removing the original foster-children, in order that the families might be kept together.

THE ADOPTED CHILDREN.

Much care has had to be exercised, in administering the adoption element of the system, to prevent children being placed as mere drudges with a class of people who are happily now not very difficult to recognize. This Department was fortunate in having the experience of other places to guide it in avoiding mistakes in this direction which might otherwise have brought discredit upon the whole system. The genuine cases of adoption are without doubt a blessing to the foster-children and to the guardians as well, but to secure this result they must be confined to the very young children. It is a common practice for women having young babies and two or three small children children of their own to apply to "adopt as my own," or to "adopt for company," an "orphan girl of ten or twelve years of age"; and the inquiry invariably follows, "how often will she have to go to school?" It is also safe to assume that these applicants have a fair-sized house and no servant, and that the mother of the family does the washing. It is needless to say that such applications are not entertained. In South Australia a custom has prevailed of placing out girls over ten years of age under a system which is styled "adoption for service"—that is, the little one receives free board and lodging and clothing in return for her services. In this way the burden of the State in South Australia has been so transferred to private individuals—or, more properly speaking, to the "adopted" children—that the average cost of all the children under the control of the Adelaide Destitute Board last year was only 2s. 1½d. per child per week. The Destitute Commission of South Australia has unanimously condemned the practice, which Chief Justice Way has stigmatized as one "perilously liable to abuse," and that "might readily degenerate into a system of juvenile servitude not to be tolerated in a civilized community." I foresaw and protested against this possible result four years ago. In Victoria and New South Wales the adoption element is limited to children under six and eight years of age, and in this Colony, except in two or three special cases, it practically operates among much younger children who are known to be orphans, or believed to be without relatives likely to reclaim them. If administered in this way, there can be no doubt about its advantage both to the individual and to the State. We have now a number of children placed out in this division who will probably never be aware that they are not the offspring of their foster-parents, whose property they will doubtless inherit. Every child thus placed out saves £15 a year to the revenue. The Board have had undoubted proof in two further instances of the strong affection which can be created for such children. Our law prevents hotel-keepers from being guardians. Two well-to-do persons had adopted infants, and two years afterwards they purchased hotels. It therefore became necessary that they should be informed that either the hotels or the children must be given up. In both cases the hotels were sold at serious monetary loss, one guardian sacrificing nearly £200. There are now 28 boys and 65 girls adopted, or an increase of 13 boys and 30 girls during the year, and the saving effected to the State upon these 93 children is about £1,400 annually. An interesting case is that in which a Chinese merchant of Sydney, a member of the Church of England, has adopted two Chinese children, aged four and six years. This guardian was recommended by two Anglican clergymen, the Church of England Chinese clergyman, and Mr. Quong Tart. There is no better home under the system. The Board have charge of several other Chinese children, who will probably be adopted in a similar way shortly. The adopted children are not lost sight of; they are subject to inspection, but it is so conducted that the child shall not suspect its true relationship to the guardian. If the Board had power to permanently remove from undeserving parents young children who have been for a long time deserted, a very large expenditure could be saved by the transfer to the adoption branch of a larger number of children whose parents have cruelly abandoned them; but the law is extremely tender with respect to the rights of a host of disreputable persons who are quite willing to spend their time in gaol while their children remain a charge upon the public. New Zealand legislators have boldly faced this wrong by passing a law which allows children to be permanently separated from parents after sufficient desertion has been proved, and such children are "deemed in law to be the children born in lawful wedlock of the adopting parents," with the same rights to inherit property as ordinary children "if the adopting parent dies intestate." As a matter of economy, independently of the far higher advantages it would secure, a similar law would be a desirable addition to our legislation in this Colony.

APPRENTICED CHILDREN.

The number of apprentices has increased from 87 at date of my last report to 231 on 5th April, 1886, 128 being boys and 103 girls. A distinctive feature in connection with this branch of the work, which was certainly never anticipated, has been very gratifying to the Board, because it is another indication that the artificial relationship created between the guardians and the foster children is an enduring tie. Of the 231 children apprenticed since the initiation of the system, 147 have remained with the foster-parents to whom they had been first boarded-out, although all those guardians were aware that they might have had other children under payment if they had permitted their foster charges to go to strangers. This element of permanence in the homes is rightly regarded as one of the most important characteristics of the boarding-out system, and a severe test of it is afforded when a guardian freely sacrifices the weekly subsidy in order to keep the foster-child under wages. The children in these cases, too, although nominally servants, are really not servants in the homes. They continue to stand on the old familiar footing with the guardian and his own children, to eat at the same table, and in all respects to share in the family joys and the family trials. The letters from the apprentices indicate this fact too strongly for it to be doubted, and the visitors' observations bear it out as well. Many of the children who have not been thus retained are boys who could not be provided with any occupation by the guardians, and for whom therefore the law made it compulsory that employment should be found elsewhere. Of the 128 boys apprenticed, 40 had to be recalled and sent to new homes, in almost every instance because in the home of the foster-parent no employment could be afforded to which the Board could properly place the lads under indenture. Several foster-parents have applied to retain the boys and have them taught trades by other persons, and the Board are considering whether they can adopt that plan. If they may do so legally, many painful separations will be avoided in the future. All the girls were apprenticed to domestic service, and the majority of the boys have been apprenticed to the dairy farmers, with whom they had been boarded. The following are the details:—Boys indentured to farmers, 103; gardeners, 5; hairdressers, 2; grocers, 3; saddler, 1; bakers, 3; tailor, 1; painters, 2; butcher, 1; undertaker, 1; carpenter, 1; provision merchant, 1; storekeeper, 1; chemists, 3; total, 128.

If it had been considered wise to remove the lads from their first homes, a larger number might have been apprenticed to trades; but it would then have been necessary to place them out in towns, and to remove them from families that they seemed much attached to. In the neighbouring Colonies the majority of the boys have also been placed at service with farmers; but, in Victoria, under "license" merely, which is an ordinary servant's engagement from week to week, terminable at the pleasure of the Department, instead of an indenture of apprenticeship for a specified term, the latter method being adopted in special cases only. The object of this dual mode of service is said to be to prevent the children from being placed in homes which it might be difficult to remove them from if they were indentured. Mr. Davies, a member of the Adelaide Destitute Board, objected to the policy of the principle of placing boys with farmers, on the ground that "farming, as taught in South Australia, was merely earth-scratching, or wheat-growing"; to which Chief Justice Way replied, on behalf of the Destitute Commission, in the following words:—"It is no part of our business to inquire into the methods of husbandry in this Colony, but we think it better that lads under the care of the Board should be trained to country pursuits than to trades which would expose them to the temptations and dangers of town life, or which would make them swell the artisan class in crowded centres.

centres. If the boys are taught farming in the same way as it is learnt by farmers' sons, and in a manner which fits them to join the ranks of honest labour, the State has surely done its duty by its wards." These are the views which the New South Wales Board expressed three years prior to the Report of the Destitute Commission; but in this Colony farming, as practised by the guardians generally, cannot fairly be described in the terms applied to it in South Australia. Throughout the South Coast district, where most of the boys' apprentice homes are located, it is termed "dairy farming," which embraces butter-making, and pig-breeding, sheep and cattle raising in a lesser degree, and general agriculture as ordinarily practised. It is, indeed, precisely the kind of farming which will enable the boys by-and-bye to obtain good livings from small holdings. It is hoped that the new Reformatory, if carried out as contemplated, will send out a class of partially instructed boys who will be able to practise the agricultural industry on more scientific lines. Our law only recognizes one mode of service—the children must, when twelve years of age, be apprenticed under indenture for five years; and, so far, there has been no reason for altering the system.

The Board have still to contend with the anomaly of apprenticing children who, during two years of their service term, have to comply with the requirements of the Education Act. There can be no doubt that if the children had not remained with their first guardians it would have been difficult to place a large number of them at service under these conditions. The old guardians generally, however, have complied with the law which compels the child's school attendance for seventy days of every half-year, and in many instances the children attend during the whole day. While farmers can manage to make this concession, tradesmen could not, as their eight working hours daily include five of the school hours. In such circumstances a boy could not possibly learn a trade if compelled to go to school. In Victoria the service period does not commence until the termination of the school age, and in South Australia the child is not indentured until he is over thirteen years of age.

The proper solution of the difficulty here will be to adopt the Victorian plan, for in most cases the State children require instruction through the school-going age, in consequence of their lamentable ignorance when brought under control. The Board have taken up a good many children of from ten to twelve years of age who could either not read and write at all, or had not reached the standard that ought to be attained by an ordinary child of six or seven. It is intended to provide for this and other legislative defects as soon as more pressing public business is disposed of.

The apprentice branch now entails a good deal of clerical labour upon the Department. Separate ledger accounts and Savings Bank books have to be kept for each child, indenture forms to be drawn in duplicate, registers kept, and the children visited as under the Boarding-out system. I have only debited the apprentices with their fair capitation proportion of the salaries of the office, and travelling expenses, at the same rate as the boarded-out children, and they thus cost the State about £1 10s. per child per annum.

CHILDREN CLASSED AS UNOFFICIAL.

In October, 1884, the Board were called upon to take charge of several children who could not, in consequence of their advanced ages, be legally brought under control in the usual way, and who have for distinctive purposes been classed upon the records as "unofficial."
They

They are boys and girls aged from twelve to fifteen years, who had not transgressed any law, but were mere waifs and strays drifting to destruction for want of a guiding hand to place them in the right track. Up to April, 1885, four girls and one boy of this class had been handed over to the Department, and at the period covered by this Report the number had increased to five boys and eight girls. These children are in most instances without parents, or have been left by dissolute fathers and mothers to their own resources for a livelihood. This branch of the Board's labours is purely rescue work, and a good deal of anxiety is attached to it. The children are in some cases vicious, and have the dangerous knowledge that there are ways of obtaining money more easily than by honest labour. Their mode of life, too, has made them so self-reliant that they are untractable and difficult to control. They are generally handed over to the Board in consequence of well-disposed persons sending information of their cases either to the police or the State Children's Relief Department, and they are then taken up under Colonial Secretary's orders, but always by persuasion, and without the exercise of force. During the past year, one girl, aged fifteen, has been recovered in this way from a house in which there were fifteen coloured men, the only female inmates except herself being her sister, aged ten, who was also taken, and a girl of sixteen who refused to leave. These wretched sisters have a mother in a lunatic asylum, and a father—an educated man—so thoroughly demoralized through drink that he was aware of their dreadful mode of life and did not interfere. Two orphan girls, aged twelve and fourteen years, were taken from factories. One of them resided in a doubtful house at Woolloomooloo, of which she did not know the character, and suffered badly from ophthalmia; she was picked up just in time. Another orphan girl, aged fifteen, was removed from a home in which she occupied the same bedroom as a young married couple who were much addicted to drink. Two interesting girls, the eldest fifteen years of age, were removed from a disreputable house where they had been deserted by their father. Two others, aged fifteen years, have been handed over because they have hitherto been incorrigible thieves. The only chance of reclaiming such girls is to place them away from the temptations of town life. Two of them have absolutely refused to leave Sydney, and they can therefore only be placed in decent homes and kept under surveillance. The others have been sent into the country, and although they occasionally give much trouble they are on the whole doing very well. The boys are, with one exception, behaving satisfactorily. There can be little doubt that but for the intervention of this Department, or some other similar agency, most of these children would have gone upon the streets or into the gaols ultimately. They cost the State nothing more than the sum expended upon their first outfit (about £3), and their small proportion of expense for supervision. Whether or not they will remain permanently in the homes provided for them remains to be seen, but the result of the experiment of which they are the subjects is so far most encouraging. The Board have now under consideration a proposed scale of wages for these children, payable by their employers, by means of which they may be able to clothe themselves sufficiently, and lay by a trifle for a Savings' Bank account.

THE CENTRAL HOME.

The Central Home at Paddington is used as a receiving-house for State children, for stores, offices, and Board meetings. It was opened under rental in October, 1884; but finding it particularly suitable for all the administrative purposes of the Department, the Government purchased it, upon the recommendation of the Board, and with the sanction of Parliament, in June, 1885, for the sum of £5,800, and thus secured a valuable property on reasonable terms. This establishment

ment admits of the much more effective administration of all branches of the work than was possible previously. Before the Central Home was opened the Board had no means of accommodating children who were handed over through Benevolent Asylum orders, or children returned for apprenticeship, or under transfer from boarding-out homes, nor was there any place in which the officers of the Department could obtain by observation that knowledge of the children's characters and habits which was indispensable in order that they might be allotted to suitable guardians, under fair subsidies, and with a probability of securing some degree of permanency in their homes. The Board have, however, been careful to prevent the Central Home from assuming in any particular the character of an Institution. The children are usually not retained for more than a few days before being boarded-out, or adopted, or sent to the cottage homes.

During the past year 647 children have been admitted into the Home, but the average number of inmates daily has been 10. It has of course been necessary to detain some children for longer and some for lesser periods, as suitable homes were offered for them; and there have also been as many as twenty-five and as few as two or three children in the home, but the low general average is a guarantee that the place has been conducted purely as a home, and not on the lines of an institution. The only children who have absconded hitherto have been a couple of Industrial School boys, who decamped together upon a boating expedition, and were picked up an hour or two afterwards, and a girl sixteen years of age who ran away after stealing £2. All the outfits for children, including those at the cottage homes, are made up at the Central Home, and in fact the Board have no other administrative centre.

The total expenditure upon the children in the Central Home has been £103 0s. 5d., less £17 16s. 8d. for furniture, or an average cost of about £8 10s. This item only includes cost of maintenance. As the children are during their brief sojourn generally clad from returned outfits, there has been no expenditure for clothing.

THE COTTAGE HOMES FOR INVALID CHILDREN.

I have already so fully explained the objects of the cottage homes recently established in connection with this Department that it is unnecessary to do much more here than give a short history of the work they have accomplished, and to show the character of that work by means of independent testimony and statistics. In a lengthy correspondence on this subject with the Colonial Secretary, in January last, to which brief reference is made in a former part of this Report, I explained that the homes were founded under Ministerial authority, to relieve the Government of a great difficulty in regard to the large number of ailing and crippled inmates of the various Institutions who could not be dealt with under the boarding-out system or any existing method of providing for this particular class of our dependent children. So far as the Australian Colonies were concerned no experience had been gained of homes of this character, although their efficacy had been fully tested in England and on the Continent. The system had, however, on several occasions been proposed by the authorities of the Benevolent Society of New South Wales, and of the Randwick Asylum, as a measure absolutely necessary for the treatment of many of their sick children; and in my Report as President of the State Children's Relief Board five years ago I strongly impressed its necessity upon the Government of that time. Authority was granted to the Board in February, 1885, to carry out these suggestions, and they entered upon the work with a full understanding of the difficulties that would have to be overcome overcome before the project could be brought into proper working order, and its objects even in some degree effectuated. Two cottages were opened on March 13, 1885, at Pennant Hills, a third at Mittagong on March 21, a fourth at Picton on April 13, a fifth at Mittagong on May 26, and a sixth, specially for the treatment of ophthalmia, at Mittagong, on August 4th, 1885. As the majority of the first inmates were afflicted with ophthalmia, discharging ears, scrofula, scalp eruption, and other kindred complaints, inherited or acquired, it was necessary to obtain the services of at least four nurses who had previously had hospital experience; and in the other two instances persons were engaged who had only had the management of their own households and of healthy children. With these latter mothers, however, the merely delicate, or convalescent, or crippled children were placed, who required nothing more than kindly attention and care, generous diet, and the invigorating air of the country. The ophthalmic home was placed in charge of a nurse who had been for nearly four years training under the senior Government Ophthalmic Surgeon (the late Dr. Morgan) at the Eye and Ear Hospital, Moorcliff, Miller's Point; and in addition to taking charge of the worst ophthalmic cases, it was made a part of her duty, as occasion required, to visit and make up lotions for the other homes, so as to save the Department the cost of medical attendance. In discussing the question of the proper number of inmates for each cottage, the Hon. W. B. Dalley, when Acting Colonial Secretary, gave a good deal of attention to the subject, and suggested that it should be six only, in view of the children's complaints; but as it was pointed out that this limit would largely increase the average cost, it was decided that each family should nominally consist of ten members. In consequence of the large number of children requiring active treatment for eye diseases, it was decided further that there should be no limit to the number in the ophthalmic home, and it was consequently necessary to secure premises that might occasionally accommodate from fifteen to twenty children. The mothers were each allowed a girl of from twelve to fourteen years of age to help with the domestic work, and a woman one day a week to do the household washing. The ophthalmic nurse was also allowed a servant or attendant, because of the larger number of children under her control and her occasional absence on visiting duty. It will be seen from the statistics that the average number of inmates decided upon in connection with all the homes has been closely adhered to.

The duty of furnishing and regulating the domestic economy of the homes was left to the lady members of the Board, and the following extract from an official report on this subject will give a general idea of the manner in which it was carried out:—

“In furnishing the homes the object of the founders has been to provide them with every requisite for good management, especially in regard to the comfort and cleanliness of the inmates, but at the same time care is taken not to accustom the children to unnecessary luxuries, which they are not likely to be provided with after leaving. It is not the purpose of the Board to train them in a higher rank of life than they must eventually occupy. The main object is to cure them sufficiently to board them out in the families of respectable farmers, mechanics, or artisans, and on these lines the homes have been furnished.

“The small number of children who are able to attend school, church, and Sunday-school do so, and the others receive such instruction at home as their ailments will admit of; and there is no lack of suitable books and other provision for home recreation and amusement out of doors.

“The dietary scale is very liberal, as it should be, for such children. It generally consists of bread and milk or porridge, with bread and butter and tea, for breakfast; meat and vegetables and (about four times a week) pudding for dinner; and bread, with butter or treacle, or stewed fruit with rice and bread, for tea; the mothers having power to vary it as they think necessary, so long as they keep it up to the standard fixed by the Department. Children who require extras may have them. There is no limit as to quantity, nor any regular ration allowance, the domestic economy being watched over and regulated by the Board ladies and local visitors.

“The mothers have standing instructions to send for the nearest doctor in cases of illness; but no provision has yet been made for regular medical inspection of the children, the Board having waited to see if an annual expenditure under this head will be necessary. It should not be if the mothers carry out their instructions.

“The following statement of bedding allowed for a family of ten children is the standard of the allowance at all the homes:—thirty-six towels, twenty-eight pillow-cases; two pairs of sheets, double blanket, coloured counterpane, white counterpane and under blanket for each bed, with extra blankets for washing.”

I may here state that all household requisites, such as clothing, furniture, crockery, &c., are supplied upon requisition to the Central Home at Paddington; and the household accounts for provisions or any other goods which may have to be purchased locally, are also sent to the Central Office, where they are examined by the Board's Finance Committee, and comparisons of expenditure are always carefully made by the Board before the accounts as a whole are sent to the Audit office.

It was not originally intended to have any religious classification of the homes, but to carry them out in this respect in the same manner as ordinary hospitals. A few weeks after they were in operation, however, the Board reconsidered the matter; and in order to avoid the risk of offending any person's religious prejudices, decided that it would be better to adhere to the principle which they had laid down in regard to the boarded-out children. Hence, separate homes were arranged for the Protestant and Roman Catholic children, and placed in charge of mothers belonging to those denominations. It was soon found impossible to avoid placing Protestant and Roman Catholic children together in the Ophthalmic Home at Mittagong, but the difficulty in reference to imparting religious instruction was overcome by giving the Protestant mother a Roman Catholic attendant, who takes charge of the children of that faith. In all cases, any books that may be considered necessary for religious instruction, either by the visiting ladies or the mothers, are supplied.

The method of inspection adopted has been twofold. The homes are visited as frequently as possible by local ladies, who have power to make suggestions in reference to management, to see that existing arrangements are faithfully carried out, and, in cases of emergency to direct any provision temporarily that they may consider necessary; and visits are frequently paid also by the officials of the Department. No previous notice of intended visits is given, so that the homes and children may be found in their ordinary condition. The lady visitors, prior to January, 1886, did not send in regular reports, but merely communicated with the Department when necessary. During this year, however, printed report forms, containing questions similar in effect to the reports upon boarded-out children, have been supplied to them, and these are filled in after the visits, and periodically returned to the office. I find from the official records that there has been an average of thirty-three visits to each home, or nearly two a month by the official inspectors during the year ended April 5, 1886, and the lady visitors go, in addition, to some homes weekly and to others fortnightly. I have latterly directed that the Matron of this Department shall also visit all the homes once or twice a month, to inspect children and clothing and generally advise the mothers as to the domestic arrangements. I may further state that the visitation is strengthened by occasional unexpected visits from the lady members of the Board, and ladies not connected with the Department. I have recently inspected all the homes myself, and made careful inquiries into their management.

The total number of children admitted to the homes has been 128 (61 boys and 67 girls); 31 boys and 24 girls have sufficiently recovered to be boarded-out, and there were therefore 73 inmates on April 5, 1886, of whom 30 were boys and 43 girls. The children have been selected from the various Asylums as follows:—Benevolent Asylum, 52; Randwick Asylum, 28; Coast Hospital, Little Bay, 24; Protestant Orphan School, 9; Roman Catholic Orphanage, 5; Children's Hospital, Glebe, 3; Ashfield Home, 2; Industrial School, Biloela, 2; "Vernon," 1; Sydney Hospital, 1; Prince Alfred Hospital, 1.

The following classification of the complaints from which the children suffered will give an idea of the onerous character of the duties cast upon the mothers, and the grave responsibility which rests upon the Board in connection with the management of this important branch of its work:—Ophthalmia, 38; eruption on body, 7; necrosis of foot, 1; scrofula, 19; deformed foot, 2 (admitted after operation); paralysis, 3; scalp eruption, 7; general debility, 8; incontinence of water, 2; running ears and skin eruption, 2; disease of spine, 3; swollen glands and abscess, 1; hip disease, 2; deformed mouth (for operation), 1; contraction of leg sinews, 1; epilepsy, 2; one leg, 1; partial paralysis and hip disease, 1; marasmus, 2; running ears and sore eyes, 6; curvature of spine, 1; eruption on body and head, 1; sore eyes, scalp eruption, and general debility, 2; spinal disease and partial paralysis, 1; running ears and hip disease, 1; scalp eruption and deformed chest, 1; the remaining 12 children having been passed in as servants.

It is not possible for any person looking at the physical condition of most of the children now at the homes to understand the state they were in when admitted; but I am sure from my knowledge of a number of cases, and the information supplied to me in consultations about others, that if many of these children had remained in the Asylums they must have languished in physical weakness or succumbed to their ailments. The best proof of the extent to which the homes are serving their purpose is, as indicated by the figures, that more than 40 per cent. of the children hitherto sent to them—and not one of whom, when admitted, was well enough to board out in the usual way—have since recovered and been placed in healthy families. A number of the remainder are also now fit to be boarded out, and will be thus dealt with in a few days. The supply of such children is unfortunately too well kept up to afford present ground for the hope that the homes can be dispensed with, but it may be possible to eventually so reduce the demand upon their accommodation that no crippled or ailing child will have to remain more than a few days in the central receiving houses before being placed under the health-restoring influences of the country. At the last annual meeting of the Sydney Benevolent Society the Directors were so impressed with the advantages of this system, in consequence of the reports furnished by their own officers, who have had a good many opportunities of witnessing its results, that they caused the following paragraph to be inserted in their Annual Report :—“ Your Board would particularly call attention to the permanent aid that must now be rendered your Society through the establishment by the Boarding-out Department of cottage homes. The desirableness of this necessary auxiliary to the Society has many times been pointed out. It has been shown that numbers of children have languished within the walls of the Asylum for want of pure country air ; and although the best attention has been given in the matter of nursing, the one thing needful was still wanting. The establishment of cottage homes, however, in healthy country districts, is now an accomplished fact, so that the embarrassment imposed for years upon your Society with regard to the disposal of invalid children has now in a great measure been removed. To these homes many little sufferers have been transferred, and the most favourable reports have been received as to their improved state of health.”

Before touching upon the financial aspect of the homes, I may just remark here that the method of dealing with children of this class in Victoria and South Australia has been to board them out in healthy families, as far as that can be done, at special rates. I am not in possession of any statistics from Victoria to show the extent to which this end has been accomplished, or at what cost, but the report of the South Australian Destitute Commission contains some instructive figures on this matter. The authorities appear to have succeeded in boarding-out thirteen invalid children ; but the subsidy for maintenance alone, irrespective of the first cost of clothing, inspection, &c., was in each case 15s. a week, or £39 a year for each child. From a medical point of view, to place such diseased children in the first instance amongst healthy families is very undesirable, but we know from experience that it is not possible to secure to them by this means the particular kind of treatment which is indispensable to their recovery. After giving the whole subject careful consideration, the South Australian Commissioners say :—“ Some of the thirteen children we have referred to could be advantageously placed in cottage homes of the same character as those established in New South Wales. There are a number of children also who have been brought up amongst depraved and vicious associates, or who have not learned ordinary habits of decency, to whom it would undoubtedly be an advantage to have a preliminary training in a well conducted cottage home before being boarded-out.”

When the proposal to establish cottage homes was under consideration, the Board represented to the Government that it was believed the cost of thus providing for sick children would not exceed the cost of the healthy inmates maintained in the public Asylums. That expectation has been fully realized. The total amount expended upon the homes, as shown in the balance sheet, was £1,679 6s. 3d., but this includes £15 15s. 6d. for repairs, £253 7s. 8d. for furnishing, and another item of £180 19s. 6d. has to be added for furniture from the general account, the total cost of furnishing the six homes thus being £434 7s. 2d. The expenditure upon furniture of course stands as a capital account, but I have charged the working account with 10 per cent. of the full cost, or £43 8s. 9d. for deterioration in the value of the goods. A further sum of £127 4s. 8d. is charged in working expenses for clothing taken from the general stock, and also £21 9s. proportion of travelling expenses transferred from the general account. The total amount actually expended upon the homes during the year has been £1,602 5s. 6d., and as the average number of inmates was sixty-eight—allowing for the fact that two of the cottages were not opened during the whole year—the average cost per child has been at the rate of £23 11s. 3d. per annum, while in the cheapest of the Asylums for healthy destitute children the cost, last year, was over £24 per child. A good deal of second-hand clothing has been sent to these children, after being thoroughly cleansed, which could not be used for any other purpose; but which, being warm and sound, was suitable for children near the bush.

In connection with the question of cost, I desire to strongly impress upon Parliament the fact to which I have briefly referred in my introductory remarks, namely, that the Board do not propose to carry on this particular Department under the present system of renting houses. It is undesirable, for other reasons than that of economy, although that is material enough, seeing that the rent item alone has increased the cost of each child by about £4 per head. But the present premises are, almost without exception, unsuitable for the purposes they are put to, although they were the best that could be obtained at the time in localities which had to be selected on sanitary grounds. If it had not been necessary to establish the homes so hurriedly, the proper course of purchasing suitable sites, and erecting a couple of groups of cottages, would have been adopted at the outset. The staple articles of diet necessary for these children are milk, vegetables, and fruit—the milk alone now costs about £150 a year—and these and other articles could be produced upon a home farm at comparatively little cost. If this plan is carried out, it is estimated that the cost of the children will not exceed £20 each per annum, while they could be dealt with in premises really adapted to their needs.

As an illustration of the class sent into the homes, the nature of whose complaints is perhaps not made quite clear to non-medical readers by the statement of diseases set forth here, I may mention the case of a lad, ten years of age, who was handed over to the Department, in January last, from one of the hospitals, where he had been under treatment for 130 days. On his arrival at Mittagong the medical officer there reported:—"On examining the boy I found the following:—Body much emaciated, several running sores at the lower part of the spine, and around the pelvis; indications of disease of the spine, also of the bones of the pelvis; he is in a very low condition of health, one of those cases that could be kept in hospital for months, and most likely he would be weaker then than when he entered. With good nursing, fresh air, and nourishing food, he may improve a little, but he will never be strong." A fortnight subsequently the report on this same case was:—"Miss G. thought poor Frank would have died the night after he came up; he seems to be improving now; he has colour in his face, and he seems to like his food better than at first." Although this boy is a permanent cripple, he is now physically strong enough to accompany the other boys in their excursions into the bush. In the same week there were sent to this home a scrofulous child, suffering from abscesses on the body and "St. Vitus's dance," and two bad cases of ophthalmia. These three children are now well enough to be boarded out. A few months ago, a lad ten years old was removed from the hospital of one of our largest institutions. He was so ill then that it was necessary to carry him to the home upon a mattress. A week or two ago the matron who had charge of him for two years at the hospital, visited him at the home, and afterwards wrote:—"I was indeed surprised to see the improvement in J. S. Poor little fellow, he was a confirmed invalid when at——, and now he seems to get about so well." The same lady wrote in reference to another boy who had been in her charge on several occasions in hospital before his removal to the cottage home:—"E.J., too, who always suffered so much from debility, is quite strong, and has such rosy cheeks." And again she says, in reference to the Mittagong homes, "the cottages were in excellent order when I visited them, and I like them very much." Ample independent testimony in regard to this latter point, however, will be found in Appendix L, from visitors who should, from their experience and training, be regarded as experts; and cases of the character of those those I have given as illustrations can be multiplied from the office records. In leaving this division of my Report, I may fitly quote the following few words from a leading article in the Sydney Morning Herald of March 1, 1886, commenting upon a description of the homes furnished by its own reporter:—"Undoubtedly the Board is doing a good work with these homes. No better plan of dealing with the sickly portion of State children that come under its care could well be devised than that of placing them in homes established in healthy country districts, where the ailments from which the children are suffering may be cured, or at least greatly alleviated, by the effects of pure air, wholesome diet, cleanliness, and suitable medical treatment. To provide for those unfortunates in this manner, and then board them out with respectable families, keeping all the time a judicious watch over them and over those in whose care they are placed, is to undertake a work which should rapidly transform the waifs and strays of the community into healthy and respectable men and women."

SUBSIDIZED COTTAGE HOMES FOR HEALTHY CHILDREN.

Encouraged by the success attending the efforts of Mrs. Jefferis, a member of the Board, to establish a Cottage Home for healthy children at Newtown, and in order to deal with applications from one or two persons who wished to have control of children in larger numbers than it was considered wise to place out in a general way under the boarding-out system, but at the same time to carry out the idea of family life in such homes, the following regulation was approved by the Governor in Council on September, 17th, 1885:—

"Children may be placed in Cottage Homes established by public or private charity, subject to the consent and under the responsible control of the proprietors of such homes, provided that the homes shall be open to the inspection of the Board or their officers at any time, and that the children may be forthwith removed if such a proceeding is considered necessary. The official known as the 'Mother of the Home' for the time being shall be the licensed guardian of the children, for whose regular attendance at school, church, and Sunday school (when practicable), and religious and moral training generally she shall be responsible, as in the case of ordinary foster-parents; and such mother shall further be liable to all penalties that may be imposed under Act 41 Vic. No. 24, and the regulations made in accordance therewith, upon foster-parents who neglect or ill-treat their foster-children, or otherwise fail to carry out the terms of their agreement as guardians under the Board."

Under this regulation there are six homes under the control of the Department, in which there are children varying in numbers from six to ten, four of them containing children of the same family; and it may be well to explain here that these homes are included in the note to the first classified list under the head of boarded-out children. All inmates of Homes of this class cost the State 5s. a week each for maintenance, in addition to the expense of the first outfit of clothing, and their proportion of the cost of inspection, &c. The principle of the regulation was extended to several of these homes in the country for special reasons. There is a class of children brought under control, who, although not actually vicious, would soon become so if they were boarded out near to towns, and it is necessary to place them in the bush, it may be—as in the cases in point—at some distance from any school. In order that they and other children in the neighbourhood should be educated, a provisional school was obtained in each instance by a couple of well-to-do residents of the locality setting portions of their premises apart for subsidized cottage homes. Although these homes are under proper supervision, and the children are well cared for, the Board do not propose to increase their number unless they are carried out strictly on the lines of those conducted and principally maintained by Mrs. Jefferis and Miss Mullens at Burwood, which are also included in this list. There, instead of the licensed mothers merely receiving the subsidy, as in the instances in the country which I have cited, they they are paid salaries, and the proprietors of the homes defray all household expenses. The homes at Burwood, which have been created by the philanthropy of the two ladies whose names I have mentioned, as I know from personal experience, will well repay the trouble of a visit. In the other cases, the well-known characters of the guardians, and the undoubted proofs they have furnished of their kindness to the children, indicate that the Board have done wisely in departing from their general rule for the purpose which has been explained.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

The various additions to the work of the State Children's Relief Department, of which I have given a history in this Report, have caused corresponding increase of labour in the clerical division. The accounts in connection with the Central Home, boarded-out children, apprentices, and the six cottage homes—the preparation in duplicate of licenses for boarded-out and adopted children, indentures, separate vouchers for the audit offices, monthly and quarterly, for every child under control that is paid for; the general correspondence, and that with the very large number of lady visitors who now represent the Board throughout the Colony; keeping of visiting and children's registers and reports, stock, store, and financial books, which it is essential should be kept as accurately as those of a large commercial establishment—all involve an amount of clerical labour and careful supervision which cannot well be understood by any one unacquainted with the details of the office. The communications sent through the post to and from this Department, last year, numbered no less than 24,200, as against 15,796 in the previous year.

It is therefore with sincere pleasure that I express my satisfaction with the able and energetic manner in which the official business of the Department has been conducted during the year by the officers in their several spheres of duty. The pronounced success which has attended the operations of the State Children's Relief Board is due, in an eminent degree, to the faithful and earnest services which have been cheerfully rendered by those charged with the responsible and arduous duties of practical management.

By the courtesy of Mr. R. C. Walker, Principal Librarian of the Colony, I have been enabled to send, through Trübner & Co., of London and New York and the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, copies of our Reports and Proceedings to the principal cognate Institutions throughout England and America, and this has led to an interchange of official documents, reports, and other correspondence in reference to the training of dependent children, which must be mutually advantageous to those concerned in it. I have also, in this connection, to thank Mr. George Guillaume, the able Secretary of the Victorian Department, and Mr. T. H. Reed, J.P., Chairman of the Destitute Board of South Australia, for the various reports which they have forwarded during the past year; and Chief Justice Way, of Adelaide, for the comprehensive report of the South Australian Destitute Commission, which is certainly one of the most ably-prepared documents of the kind I have read, and contains many valuable suggestions in reference to various matters of social reform.

I would particularly direct attention to the Appendices to my Report. Some of them contain important statistics, and others furnish information which, I venture to think, will prove interesting and instructive to all who may be concerned for the welfare of that large class of the community of whom the State Children's Relief Board has now the almost entire control.

In

In conclusion, I sincerely trust that before the next Annual Report is furnished, the State Children's Relief Board will have concluded its operations in regard to the barrack-asylums of the Colony, and every child now in them will be placed under one or other of the natural forms of child-life and training now provided by the State, as the most economical, the most satisfactory, and the most reasonable. I hope, also, that the Board will have received further assistance in the benevolent work in which they are engaged, in the form of the legislative enactments which I have now for some years advised, and many of which the other Australian Colonies have adopted. And I further hope that all the Institutions which deal with State children of all classes, whether of an industrial, reformatory, or benevolent character, will have been placed under the control of the State Children's Relief Department.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ARTHUR RENWICK.

- A.—Applicant a drunkard. Has had three children of her own; all died. Has also had two children to nurse privately, both of whom died while in her care—report says of neglect. Next-door neighbour speaks very strongly against her for her treatment of last two children; says "would not trust her to look after a dog." Two of her neighbours (one a foster-parent) confirm statement of next-door neighbour.
- B.—Applicant a drunkard; home very dirty and untidy, floors being plentifully plastered over with mud.
- C.—Applicant a drunkard. Am informed the father of his wife's eldest child (illegitimate) is her own uncle. Wife has been heard to say, with an oath, that she did not intend to work her * * * out so long as she could get a State child to do it for her.
- D.—Applicant's own family have been very badly brought up, and bear a very bad name in district; one in gaol for forgery, and none of others appear to do anything for a living.

APPENDIX K.

APPENDIX K.

Extracts from letters in reference to the Boarding-out system.

From Mr. Lilburne, Boarding-out Officer, Victoria.

Melbourne, 4 May, 1886.

I very much regret that I have been unable earlier to express to you my indebtedness for the information you so kindly favoured me with, on my recent visit, as to the working of your boarding-out system, &c., in New South Wales; and also for the privilege afforded me of inspecting a number of your homes.

I was greatly pleased with the very comfortable class of abodes in which your State children have been placed. Of the twenty or thirty homes we visited I only saw one where, in my opinion, improvement seemed requisite; and as this foster-mother had had charge of the child from infancy and prior to his being placed under State control, I could well understand that his withdrawal from her without affording her the opportunity of effecting the necessary improvement in her home and the boy's dress, would be little short of cruelty. Although this child's personal appearance lacked sufficient attention, still he seemed to thrive all the better for it, as I do not think that a bigger or healthier-looking boy for his age could be found anywhere. If I remember rightly, you told me that in this case the guardian would have to remove to a more suitable habitation, &c., or the boy would certainly be taken away.

As I understand the homes we saw are a fair average of the 600 or 700 in which foster-children have been boarded out in New South Wales, I need scarcely add, that from my long connection with industrial and reformatory schools in Victoria, I am convinced that the poorest of your foster-homes are infinitely better for the future well-being of the children placed therein than would be the best-managed institution for a large number of them housed together.

As far as my knowledge would enable me to form an opinion, I think I am correct in stating that your homes are quite equal to those provided for our industrial school children in this colony. While your children are, however, supervised by your own staff—which, I may here say, seems very small for the work that has to be performed—and the assistance of individual lady helpers, ours are under the oversight of local committees in addition to that of departmental inspection. In this respect I think our system is to be preferred, as the recommendation of a joint body will have more weight, both with the Guardians and Board of Management, than would the advice of the individual worker. I therefore, according to promise, enclose a few of our forms and regulations which may be of service to you.

The impression conveyed to my mind on visiting your invalid cottages was that they are truly what they are intended to be, viz., an intermediate home between the established institutions and the abodes of the ordinary foster-parents. The two cottages we looked over at Parramatta, the one in which were placed children of the Protestant and the other those of the Roman Catholic faith, appeared to be all that was requisite. The buildings are well adapted for the purpose, being homelike and cheerful. The ten or eleven children connected with each cottage seemed very happy and contented. Some of their number appeared to me to be so nearly well as to be quite fit for boarding-out. These, I think you said, had so improved as to render longer detention in the invalid cottages unnecessary, that arrangements were being made to place them in foster-homes, and that other invalids would be withdrawn from institutions to take their places. The situation of the cottages is undoubtedly very healthy, and the outlook beautiful. The number of inmates in each cottage being limited, and each building being under the sole care of a motherly woman, makes each home represent the habitation of a good-sized family. The dietary scale I thought very liberal, without being restricted to any prescribed articles. From all I observed, I think these cottages should be extremely serviceable to the New South Wales Government. If the health of the invalid children can be improved anywhere, it will be through the healthiness of the localities in which they are placed and the individual attention they receive in cottages of this class. The cost per head must also be considerably less than would be the case if the children were dealt with as is done in this colony, viz., to board them out in specially selected foster-homes, at such an increase in the rate of payment as the nature of the infirmity might warrant.

I have still another point, and one in which I wish to congratulate your Colony as being, so far as I know, in advance of Victoria, viz., in the establishment and support of cottage-homes by private contributions. I was very pleased indeed with the cottages founded by Mrs. Jeffers and managed by herself and other ladies. The children were well-clad, their sleeping apartments were homelike and comfortable, and their healthy and beaming countenances showed the blessing they enjoyed in being brought up under the motherly care of their guardian. The establishment and management of such homes speak with sufficient strength of the love and care Mrs. Jeffers and co-workers are bestowing on their charges, and therefore render comment from an outside source needless.

I have sent you these remarks as I was unable before leaving Sydney to let you know the result of my observations.

In conclusion, I would ask you to accept my best thanks for your courtesy and kindness, and also convey the sense of my indebtedness to Dr. Renwick and Mrs. Jeffers for like favours shown.

I am permitted by the Secretary of this Department to state that he will be happy upon application to furnish you with any information he can supply, or any papers he may have at his disposal.

Apologising for the lengthiness of this communication,—Believe me yours very truly, Boarding-out Branch, I. and R. Schools Office, Melbourne.

C. M. LILBURNE.

[This gentleman spent a great deal of time in going thoroughly into the work of the Department. The homes which he saw were visited in the order in which they appear upon the books in the neighbourhood of Sydney, and they are certainly not up to the general average of the homes under the control of the Department. In many districts the Board have also local working committees as in Victoria, as well as the local visiting ladies. The number of foster-homes in this Colony at date of this report was 765.]

Mr. REED, J.P., Chairman of the Destitute Board of South Australia, and founder of the Boarding-out System in that Colony:—

I cannot sufficiently express the pleasure I felt in visiting your homes, which are essentially different and very far superior to any of those in South Australia. Your large and thickly populated cities create a different class of foster-parents altogether—a class not in existence with us as regards their position, and very frequently as regards their occupation or means of living. This is seen in the character and condition of your homes, a number of which were the property of the foster-parents, a thing unknown with us save in very exceptional instances here and there. The social position of your guardians of children in New South Wales is also decidedly higher than ours, comprising not only mechanics and artisans, and these earning higher wages than with us, but also painters, builders, shopkeepers, engineers, and contractors, and all living in well furnished houses, and under such home surroundings that appeared to me must tend to produce, and indeed seemed to produce the happiest results to the children, who are evidently better and more intelligently trained than with us. I was also much gratified at the apparent affection existing between guardian and child, as evidenced in so many ways—in the children voluntarily taking the name of their foster-parent, in the very few returns through misconduct or mutual incompatibility, and in the large number who remain with their guardians after expiry of the boarding-out licence.

Captain JEKYLL, R.M., of the Prisons Department, Queensland:—

I had no prejudice against your boarding-out system, but I must admit I was not prepared for such results as those witnessed. I could not have believed, unless I had seen them, that people living in such good homes would have undertaken to look after other people's children. It has convinced me that there is more philanthropy in the world than I thought, and that the maternal instinct is in some women without bounds.

Mrs. GUNTHER, Parramatta:—

These remarks of mine may be too late to be of any use, but I send them for what they are worth, and regret that from various reasons I have been unable to send them sooner. After more than four years' experience as one of the visitors to the Protestant State children in this town, I am very glad to be able to say that I have every reason to be satisfied with the results of the boarding-out system. The children are well fed, kindly treated, and, above all, carefully brought up and looked after, not only by the Inspectors, but by others who take an interest in their welfare. I feel convinced that these children will turn out very much more useful members of society than those brought up under the barrack system.

Miss E. WORMERSLEY, Armidale:—

I have only to say that what I know of the system is that it is far before the Asylum. As you are aware, the children in this district are limited. With the exception of one child, I think they come directly under my care, and I have no hesitation in saying their home and surroundings can compare very favourably with any in the district who are not deprived of their parents.

Mrs. DONNELLY, Armidale:—

In reply to your circular of March requesting a statement of our observations of the boarding-out system in this Colony, I beg to state that the two children under our supervision have good and comfortable homes, and are in every way far better off than when under their father's control.

Mrs. BENTZEN, Mudgee:—

I have much pleasure in stating that, as far as my experience affords me opportunity of observing the boarding-out system of State children, I am most favourably impressed with its adaptation to the children's requirements. The homes under my care are humble but comfortable, and the foster-mothers seem to take a real interest both in the moral and religious training of the little ones.

Miss FRASER, Cambewarra:—

As a lady visitor to the State children in the Cambewarra district, my experience is the same as that of last year. The boarding-out system is working well, both foster-parents and children seem pleased with each other in each case; and I have no hesitation in saying the system is working admirably in my district.

Mrs. MARRIOTT, Bathurst:—

During the past year I have had several State relief children under my supervision, and have found them generally well-cared for. The boarding-out system has my cordial approval.

Mrs. C. GRAHAM, Waterloo:—

The children all seem happy and contented, and in most cases very much attached to their foster-parents.

Mrs. TURNER, Wallongong:—

Referring to your printed letter of March, 1886, requesting a brief statement of my experience in reference to the boarding-out system in this Colony, I beg to state that I am favourably impressed with it. The results in connection with the children under my supervision are, I think, satisfactory. The children in every case that has come under my observation appear to be well cared for, happy and contented. The class of homes of the guardians whom I have visited is generally that of ordinary farmers; the sleeping accommodation of the children being comfortable and cleanly, and the food apparently abundant and wholesome. So far as I have had the opportunity of observing in the few cases under my supervision, I should say that the guardians on the whole faithfully perform their duties.

Mrs. OSBORN, Bundanoon:—

There is only one boy who is boarded out in my district, and from what I know and see of him (which is frequently), he is very comfortable, and treated as one of the family; he has told me several times he would much sooner be where he is than at the Asylum from where he was taken. What little experience I have had I believe the boarding-out system far preferable to the Asylum; it gives the children much more freedom, and thereby makes them much more intelligent and useful, also affectionate.

Mrs. O'SULLIVAN, Newcastle:—

I have very great pleasure in stating that from my experience, now extending over four years, I consider the boarding-out system excellent, and a great boon to those poor children, as is clearly shown by their fine, healthy, intelligent appearance, contrasting forcibly with their condition when first brought from the Asylum.

Mrs. TAYLOR, Parramatta:—

In reply to your circular, I beg to state that the children over whom I have supervision in this district continue to improve in health, and appear to be happy and contented. The foster parents are kind and attentive, and provide the children with clean and wholesome food, and in most cases they look upon their guardians as their natural parents. The cottage homes continue to be an unqualified success, and the children are improving in a marked manner in health and appearance, and in my opinion these homes should be increased, for the benefit of poor little weak and sickly State children.

Mrs. WHITTON, St. Leonards:—

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your communication requesting me to give your Relief Board a brief statement of the Boarding-out system. In reply I am glad to say the children in my district have good homes, some of them exceptionally so, and I think, as far as I am able to judge, the foster-parents are faithfully performing their duties, and I find the children are in good health and very happy. My experience (which is only of about two years) of the boarding-out system is most favorable.

Mrs. BELLBRIDGE, Balmain:—

I have the honor to report that during the short time that has elapsed since the receipt of the official papers, I have visited several of the children whose names appear in the list you forwarded to me. In other instances I have called at the houses in which the children reside, but the occupants were not at home. The results of my visits and inquiries have been of a most satisfactory nature.

Mrs. WERN, Bathurst:—

As far as my experience of the boarding-out system goes, I am of opinion it is excellent. The children under my control have improved in mind, manner, and appearance. They have comfortable homes, and are kindly treated. And I believe the guardians are faithfully performing their duties, as when I ask the children privately if they are happy and kindly treated they always answer in the affirmative.

Mrs. BEAUMONT, Mittagong:—

I have visited the three homes in Mittagong. The children are all well cared for, they appear to be happy and contented; everything is very clean and comfortable; the mothers seem to me to be very suitable persons. I think that the boarding-out system is excellent.

Mrs. GIBSON, Upper Picton:—

At your request I beg to state a few particulars about the Boarded-out Children's Home I visit. The foster-parents have no children of their own, and are the guardians of four children, who seem to be happy and well cared for. As I live near I have a good opportunity of judging, as I generally see them every day.

Mrs. BOYCE, Redfern:—

In reply to your note regarding the working of this system of the department in my district, I am satisfied that nothing could be better for the children.

Miss HARRORN, Bringelly:—

As I have only two little boys under my supervision, and have not the opportunity of seeing any other homes where State children are located, I can only speak of those under my charge, and who are, I think, exceptionally well placed with Mr. and Mrs. M——, they being most respectable people, and from whom I feel the children will receive just and kindly treatment. As the children grow older they will no doubt be required to work and make themselves useful; this, if not carried to an extreme, will be better for the children. * * * These children always appear happy and well cared for in every respect.

Mrs. ARGENTHAU, Armidale:—

I am glad to say all the children under my care are in good health at present, and well looked after. I think the system a wise one, and much better calculated to bring up good children than a large establishment. I have always met with working foster-mothers, and have every reason to believe they perform their duties faithfully, and the homes I visit in most cases are of a superior order.

Miss DEANE, Paddington :—

After visiting the boarded-out children in my district for six months, I have much pleasure in stating that, with one exception, the children appear happy, healthy, and well cared for. The class of homes, as a rule, is very satisfactory; the guardians kind, and in some cases affectionate.

Mrs. OXUS, Richmond :—

As far as this district is concerned, I consider the system works very well. * * *

Mrs. F. B. SUTTON, Bathurst :—

My opinion of the boarding-out system is the same that it always was, viz., that it is a most admirable thing for the children, and it is working well in this district. I only regret that there are not more children here. But I must say the guardians and foster-parents have often a great deal of trouble with the children, and get too little pay for it. All the homes under my supervision are good ones, and the children are well cared for and happy.

Mrs. W. H. SMITH, West Maitland :—

As requested, I beg to forward you a brief statement, gained from experience, as to the system of boarding-out children from the school. Under careful and proper supervision I consider nothing could be better for the little creatures. I frequently visit the children under my charge; they all look happy, and appear to be well cared for. I also see them alone occasionally, and from questions I put to them I believe they are all happy and contented. Sometimes complaints are made by the foster-parents respecting the conduct of the children, but I generally find upon investigation that such complaints are of a very trivial nature, and would not be noticed if children more favourably situated had committed the same fault. I certainly think that, in the interest of the children, strict supervision should in all cases be kept by the appointed visitor.

Mrs. J. C. ELLIS, Newcastle :—

As you are aware, twenty-five children are under my care at the present moment, and with the exception of one dear little girl who is adopted, all are well and happy.

[The adopted child is in bad health, but is in an excellent home.]

Mrs. DE LAUREN, Goulburn :—

I saw a great number of the Catholic children, under my care, this morning marching with a band to some athletic sports in the Show Ground; they were all respectably and neatly dressed, and looked happy.

Miss J. B. JOHNSON, Windsor :—

I am leaving for Hobart on Monday next, and therefore beg to tender my resignation as lady visitor for our district. I thank you very much for the uniform courtesy I have at all times received from you and those working under you in your many and onerous duties connected with the boarding-out system. While on that subject, I may say that I consider it has been a thorough success in our district, and has brought many a poor uncared for wif under the influence of home life, and I shall at all times be glad to hear of its continued well-doing. Should I at any time be enabled to resume my duties, I shall be happy to place my services at the disposal of the Board.

Mrs. LYONS, Redmyre :—

Judging from the short experience I have had as lady visitor to the State children in this district, I have much pleasure in expressing my opinion in favour of the boarding-out system. The children visited by Mrs. Fraser and myself all seemed to be well cared for, comfortable, and happy.

Mrs. H. C. FRASER has had much pleasure in visiting the State School children for the first time, recently under the care of Mrs. Nott, and has found all the homes provided for them, with one exception, that has been named in our report, to be thoroughly well adapted for all their requirements and comfort; also those under whose care they have been placed seem well qualified to train them in habits of economy and industry, fitting them to fill the positions in life they will in all probability be called upon to occupy.

Mrs. W. H. SIMPSON, of Waverley, has very much pleasure in bearing testimony to the good result of the boarding-out system, in the District of Waverley, under her charge. Although the number of children is not large in every case, the guardians of the children have proved to be worthy of trust, and the improvement in a short time, both physically and morally, has been most marked.

Mrs. KRILLIE, West Kempsey :—

In reply to your request that I should give you a statement of my experience of the working of the boarding-out system. At present there is only one child in the district and under my supervision, and I have much pleasure in stating that she is well cared for and seems exceedingly happy. As far as I can judge, the boarding-out system is one to be commended, and must I believe be attended with good results.

Mrs. DEMOCK, Shoalhaven :—

As far as my experience goes, I think that the boarding-out system is working remarkably well in this district. In some cases where the children have been boarded-out for some time, their guardians have apprenticed them rather than change for another child; I may say on the whole that I think the guardians are very kind, and the children seem contented.

Mrs. MARTIN, Camden :—

I have much pleasure in testifying to the good results of the State children's boarding-out system. The seven children under my supervision look remarkably well and happy, and kindly treated by their foster-parents.

Mrs. KENT, Leichhardt :—

I am glad to state that a further experience of twelve months enables me to say that I think the system an admirable one. Without an exception all the children under my care are happy and contented; one or two whose habits were dirty are almost cured, the mothers caring for them as if they were their own. I have visited them at all times, and always found the little ones looking comfortable. It was quite touching to see good old Mrs. Foley's grief at having to part with her eldest boy, who was old enough to be apprenticed.

APPENDIX L.

Extracts from Letters and Reports of Visitors to the Cottage Homes.

Dr. BROWN, late Government Medical Officer at Parramatta :—

On 4th, 9th, and 30th December, 1885, I visited the Pennant Hills Homes. I saw several children with eruption on the face. These children have lately arrived, and they were prescribed for, and have improved in every way. The children appeared to have been properly attended to, and looked hearty.

From Dr. BROWN, on January 18th, 1886, referring to Pennant Hills Homes :—

I visited the dormitories and found everything clean; clean sheets were just going to be put on the beds, the pillow slips were clean, and everything tidy. The children were at play at the back of the house, and I examined them there. They were as clean as children at play can be expected to be. Some of them were getting better from eruptions which were on them when they came, and which gave them a very dirty appearance. They were all well nourished. On visiting the other side the children had all retired to bed, having been previously washed. The bedding was clean. Mrs.

Mrs. HUGH TAYLOR, Lady Visitor to Pennant Hills Roman Catholic Home:—

I have visited it once a week, sometimes in the forenoon, and often as late as 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The nurse is very kind to the children, and their general appearance is always cleanly.

Mrs. C. M. DOCKER, in reference to both Pennant Hills Homes:—

I resumed my visits to the cottage homes, Pennant Hills Road, on the 17th inst. I found the children looking very well and happy in both homes.

Mrs. GUNTHER, in reference to the Pennant Hills Homes:—

January 4, 1886.—Roman Catholic Home.—Children looking much brighter, happier, and better than when I saw them some months before. All as clean as could be expected. Some have skin eruptions, but it does not look serious. The doctor has seen them. Dormitory, home, and out-buildings tidy and clean. Christmas decorations on walls and cards show the children have not been forgotten during the festive season.

January 4, 1886.—Protestant Home.—Children all looking well and very happy. * * * The house and dormitory, &c., all as clean as possible.

January 13, 1886.—Roman Catholic Home.—All looking well and happy.

January 13, 1886.—Protestant Home.—Everything very satisfactory.

January 23, 1886.—Roman Catholic Home.—The home and out-buildings and dormitory as clean as possible to make them.

January 23, 1886.—Protestant Home.—The house, dormitory, bedding, &c., very sweet and clean. All look well and happy.

Mrs. ELDIC, Matron, Sydney Benevolent Asylum:—

I have visited all the Homes quite unexpectedly, and have found them neat and orderly, and the children (most of them invalids), clean and happy looking. As the exchanges and travelling between the Homes—I allude to those at Picton and Mittagong as well as those at Pennant Hills—have been carried out by this Institution, I have had ample opportunities of observing the appearance and condition of the children, and I desire to bear testimony to their improved physique after sojourn in the Homes.

Mrs. GOODLEY, a Member of the Benevolent Asylum Ladies Committee, and the Committee of the Sydney Female Refuge:—

Respecting my opinion of the general management and cleanliness of the home for the State Children of your department at Picton, I may just state that I have on each occasion—[this has reference to a number of visits]—been much pleased with the appearance of the little ones; also with the cleanliness of the home generally. The mother has always been very ready to answer any questions that I asked, and on all occasions the children have been playing about and apparently quite at their ease. My impression is decidedly that the children are on the whole well looked after, as well as well fed. You are aware that I do not reside here regularly, and I am sure my visits have never been expected, therefore no extra preparation could have been made.

Rev. FRANK ELDER says, in reference to the Picton Home:—

I have been there at different times, and have seen the children at meals and at play. They always seem happy and contented, and, as regards cleanliness, they will compare very favorably with any children in a well appointed workman's or artisan's home. They seem well fed, well cured for, and happy. I have been in the bedrooms, but have never examined the beds particularly. They always appear neat and clean. I think the mother has done wonderfully well.

The Rev. F. C. WILLIAMS writes, in reference to the Mittagong Homes:—

I have visited the homes on an average about twice every month. I have found them invariably clean, and the children well cared for. My visits have been at all times, so that occasionally I have found the children taking their baths, or the house being cleaned.

Mrs. JESSIE MACLEOD, for some years Matron of the Catherine Hayes Hospital, and now Matron of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, says, in reference to the Mittagong Homes:—

I visited Mittagong on March 30 for the purpose of seeing your cottage homes. I was only able to get to two of them, Nos. 1 and 2. I am much pleased with the appearance of the children. I was indeed surprised to see the improvement in J.S. Poor little fellow! He was a constant invalid when in Rindwick, and now he seems to get about so well. E.G., too, who always suffered so much from debility, is quite strong, and has such rosy cheeks. The cottages were in excellent order when I visited them.

From the same lady, on a later date, in reference to Mittagong Home, No. 3, after obliging the Department by taking charge of that Home for a few days in the temporary absence of the Mother:—

The children have been very good indeed, and I have felt quite happy with them. All has gone on most satisfactorily, and I still say I admire your cottage home system much, both for the children and those placed in charge of them.

Miss BRAKE, Mittagong:—

At the Catholic Home, at which I visit most frequently, the children appear to improve in health, and always seem happy and content. The Matron is well suited for her work, and has a good influence over the children, who are, as far as I can say, good and obedient. At the last visit I paid a Mrs. H. was in charge, and was most kind and careful with a little boy whose leg was broken. She also managed the other children well.

[The foregoing have been selected as examples from a number of other letters and reports.]

APPENDIX M.

Letters from School Teachers upon State Children attending their Schools.

* * * There are two—a little boy and girl. They attend school very regularly, are always clean and tidy, and appear well cared for. They are well-behaved children, and make good progress with their lessons—especially the little girl.

* * * I am happy to acquaint you that the two State children, Rose L. and Minnie R., attending the above school present the appearance of being in every respect well cared for. They are healthy and happy, and their progress at school is satisfactory, and in no particular do they differ from the other children of the school. Rose L. is an exemplary girl. Minnie R.'s conduct was not good when she entered the school about nine months ago, and though much improved, like many other girls of her age, she still requires a watchful eye.

* * * There are only two attending our school, Walter G. and Thomas S. They seem to be well cared for and to like their guardians, and they are quite as well-behaved as the other school children. Walter G. does not attend very regularly, but fulfils the number of days required by law.

* * * Rose D. is with an aunt who seems to take every possible care of her. She is kept clean and is healthy, and is evidently better in every respect from the care taken of her by her kind guardian.

* * * I feel much pleasure in supplying information tending to advance the interests of your institution. A.P. and A.R.—These two lads are under one guardian; I can safely say that they are well fed and clothed, and are watched with great care. They attend school well and make good progress. A.N.; this girl I believe has another name, but goes by this name, after her guardian; she is well cared for, but being naturally dull, is rather backward in her class work. M.D.; this child is fortunate in the way of guardians, and I can unhesitatingly say is well cared for; she attends very fairly, better now than formerly; she ranks an average second class girl in attainments; she is rather dish-nest in school work, and not trust worthy in her statements. On the whole the four are neat, tidy, and are in careful home training. More, their guardians take them to church regularly, and see that they attend Sunday-school. I am very pleased to be able to report so favourably on them.

* * * I have only two State children in my department, viz., Maria and Willie T.; and both of these are very well cared for, being comfortably and cleanly clothed, and having a healthy look about them. Their progress is quite up to the standard of the other pupils.

* * * I have the honor to submit the following:—a. The children seem to be well cared for, being cleanly in appearance, and comfortably clothed. b. Their progress in school is similar to their school-mates, and their behaviour equally so; in this respect I can find no fault. c. In conclusion they appear happy and contented; were they otherwise I should certainly feel justified in giving you due notice.

It gives me pleasure to state that the three (3) State children attending here present themselves in neat and clean attire, and have the appearance of good care; that their habits and behaviour compare favourably with the other pupils; and that their progress is about that of the average.

In reply to your communication of the 9th inst., re State children attending the school under my charge, I have much pleasure in acquainting you that the children in question differ in no remarkable respects from the other pupils of the school. They are clean and well-dressed; and their behaviour, while under instruction, is good. They appear to be well fed and thoroughly looked after. Their attendance at school is most satisfactory.

In reply to your communication of the 9th instant, I do myself the honor to enclose herewith reports from the Mistress of the Girls' and the Mistress of the Infants' Departments. I fully endorse their statements, and may add that the children from your Department make equal progress with the ordinary school children. They appear, on the whole, well cared for, tidy, clean, and cheerful, and conduct themselves in a very satisfactory manner. L. B.—Regular, makes fair progress, is always neatly dressed, and appears to be well cared for and happy. M. B.—Regular, makes very fair progress, is always neatly dressed, and appears to be well cared for.

Report on State Children.—I. C.—Not regular; progress not very good; appears to be well fed and cared for; conduct in school very good. J. B.—Has been very irregular this quarter; often comes late; conduct in school not very good; not truthful; appears well fed; clothes always tidy. W. W.—Very regular; progress and conduct very good; clothes neat and tidy; appears to be well fed and cared for. A. C.—Fairly regular; appears well cared for; clothes neat and tidy. J. T.—Very regular; appears to be well cared for and quite happy. C. V.—Not regular; progress fair; conduct good; appears to be well cared for; clothes always tidy. A. W.—Has been away for some time with a sore head, attends very regularly when quite well; appears well fed and cared for; clothes neat and tidy. L. W.—Very regular; making good progress; conduct very good; appears very happy. J. T.—Very regular, appears to be well cared for; conduct in school very good, and progress very good; always neat and tidy. A. K.—Very regular; appears to be well cared for. J. C.—Fairly regular; progress fair; appears to be well fed and cared for; always very neat and tidy.

I have the honor to report for your information, as requested, that four (4) of such children are being educated at this school and are pupils of the Infants' Department. The Head Mistress has reported to me as follows:—"These children are all regular and punctual in attendance, and make fair progress. They seem happy and are comfortably clad, and look well and healthy. They make equal progress with the majority of the children, and do not differ, in any important particular, from the ordinary school children." I have seen these four children myself, and their personal appearance is satisfactory.

Re your letter dated the 9th inst., asking for information respecting the State children attending the above-mentioned school, I feel justified in saying that they attend school regularly and punctually, always tidy and clean, and from all appearances seem to be well trained at home. Their progress in school is equal to that of other children of the same age. Their names are J. R., J. B., and L. A., and their guardian Mr. J. B.

I must apologize for neglecting so long to reply to your letter dated the 9th inst., but the official examination of this school has been on for the last three weeks, and that will partly account for the delay. There are four pupils attending; F. and H. S., and M. and E. M. They are regular and punctual, clean, tidy, and appear to be well cared for. In all respects they compare favourably with the other pupils. We take care that other pupils shall not know that they are State children.—A. W.

In reply to your letter of 9th inst., I beg to state that I cannot see that the State children attending my school differ in any way from the others. They appear to be quite as well cared for, and make quite as much progress; very neatly clothed; in short, if the children were Mrs. Ryan's own she could do no more for them.

Your circular letter of the 9th instant to hand, and in reply beg to state for your information as follows:—1st. Nine (9) State children of both sexes have attended this school; seven (7) are in attendance at present. 2nd. Behaviour and habits.—As a rule these children are rude in their behaviour and much given to falsehood, doubtless owing to early neglect. 3rd. Appearance and clothing.—On the whole they appear to be well cared for, some exceptionally well; their appearance and clothing are very creditable. 4th. Progress.—Their progress is quite equal to the ordinary school children. A case in point: a boy three years ago could just read monosyllabic words on entering this school; he could now take exemption certificate.

In reply to your letter of 9th instant asking for an unofficial report of the State children attending this school, I have the honor to inform you that the two State children (brothers) who attend here do not appear to me to differ in any important particular from the ordinary school children. They come to school clean and tidily dressed, and appear to me to be well cared for in every respect.

In reply to your communication of the 9th inst. re the general behaviour and habits of the State children attending this school, it gives me pleasure to be able to state that the three, two boys and a girl, pupils of this school, compare favourably in every way with the ordinary school children.

In reply to your letter dated 2/4/86, I have very much pleasure in informing you that the only State child at present in my school seems in every respect well cared for, and is a very regular attendant at school, where she makes satisfactory progress.—M. H.

In reply to yours of the 9th instant I beg to furnish you with information bearing on the general behaviour and habits of W. R. C., a State child attending the above school. He attends school regularly, cleanly and warmly attired, and his appearance indicates that he is well cared for. At school he works diligently, and I have never had occasion to correct him for any dishonorable action; on the contrary, I find he possesses a manly disposition. At last distribution of prizes, he carried off the prize in his class for "good conduct."—C. R. R.

In reply to your letter of the 9th instant, I have to state that there is only one State child (C. C.) attending the above-mentioned school. Her behaviour at school is good. She is rather a dull child, but since her first attendance she has made very fair progress. When she came here she did not know the alphabet; now she can read Primer No. 2, can work easy sums in addition, can write from dictation sentences from Primer No. 2, &c. Of her home life I can speak with confidence, as one of the teachers of this school—a married lady—resides next door to Mrs. H., with whom C. C. is living. This lady informs me that Mrs. Harvey treats her in all respects as if she were her own child. She is made to do light work about the house, but nothing that would overtax her strength. She attends church and Sabbath school regularly every Sunday. She is at all times cleanly and neatly dressed. In conclusion, I can confidently state that she is treated with the utmost kindness and care, and that she could not be placed in better hands than she is at present.

* * * I beg to inform you that there is only one boy attending this school, and I have much pleasure in informing you that he attends school regularly and punctually, and is always well clothed and is well cared for. I can say from observation that his lunch is more than sufficient; also I personally know his guardians and occasionally visit them, and can see that he is treated with the greatest kindness and firmness. When he came to school first he was given to bad habits, as telling untruths, quarrelling with the other little boys, and inclined to be mischievous, but I am happy to say that he is quite cured of the habit of telling untruths, and the other habits are also nearly cured. He is progressing fairly well at school for so young a boy, and seems to like school very well. He is fond of both his guardians, which speaks well for the treatment he receives. Trusting this information has not been delayed too long.

* * * I have much pleasure in informing you that the State children attending this school present every appearance of being well cared for. They are well clothed, clean and tidy, besides being fairly regular and punctual. No distinction is made between them and other children, and a stranger could not tell them apart. I have no fault to find in regard to either character or habits, and in some cases they make better progress than some who are supposed to be in better circumstances.

* * * I beg to inform you that Kate and Evelyn G. present the appearance of children who receive marked attention. As regards attendance, they are punctual and regular. Their style of dress, I may add in conclusion, is both neat and becoming.

* * * I beg to acquaint you that there is only one State child (Mabel) attending the Waverley Public School. She attends well clothed, and has the appearance of being well cared for. Her progress is quite equal to that of the ordinary school children.

* * * I can only state that the three State children attending my school present in every particular the appearance of well-cared-for children. The regularity of attendance in each case is good, and so far as behaviour is concerned they equal the average of ordinary boys. They come to school well dressed, and seem to have as happy homes as any other children.

* * * I beg to say that the State children (two boys) attending my school are good, obedient children, and do not in any way differ from the other children. They attend regularly, clean and comfortably clothed, and appear quite happy. Though not personally acquainted with their guardians, their appearance leads me to believe they have a happy home.

* * * I beg to inform you that I only have one State child attending my school—Esther M. It affords me great pleasure to tell you that I have nothing to say to the detriment either of the child herself or her guardians. She is regular, diligent, intelligent, obedient, and seems quite happy and contented; respectably and comfortably dressed—more so in fact than many children living with their parents. Mrs. B. spares no expense for her education, and the child speaks of the family with the greatest respect and esteem. I should like to add that Esther took the first prize in her class at the Sunday-school, and at present possesses the highest number of marks in the day-school for diligence. The only fault she possesses is stubbornness, which it is to be hoped she will outgrow.

* * * In reply I have much pleasure in saying that there is great reason for satisfaction on all points relating to these children. Their attendance is as regular as that of those who have their parents' protection. They come, without exception, to school cleanly and well clothed; in fact their dress is better in not a few instances than the dress of the other children, and when mended, I have observed, is mended with care. To all appearance they are all well fed; nor are they, I think, overworked. They seem quite happy and contented with their places. In the instances relating to this school, the moral training of the children is well looked after, and as a consequence, I presume, I find them well-behaved and obedient. Their literary status is also satisfactory. One boy in particular has, in about eighteen months, advanced from learning the alphabet to reading the 3rd book. Their intelligence is quite equal to other children's.

* * * I beg to inform you that the four children, viz., T.O., T. T., H.S., and O. M'E., attending the school under my charge from your department, are very well cared for by their guardians. They attend the school regularly, clean and neatly dressed. Their progress is the same as others in the same class, and they are also well-behaved.

* * * I am pleased to state that Jas. B.'s general behaviour and habits have been quite up to the average of that of other boys attending the school. I may state that I have very little trouble with him; he seems very willing, and is fairly attentive and studious, and as a consequence he is making fair progress in his studies. His moral character also is quite up to the average of other boys as far as I am able to judge from his conduct at school and in the playground; indeed no complaint of any kind has been made to me of any misconduct on his part, either in coming to or returning from school. No doubt in his case, which is no exception, a proper supervision is necessary in order to bring about good results.

* * * He attends school very regularly, and is clean and decently clad, and as far as I am able to judge from his general appearance well cared for. From what I know of his guardian, he will be brought up to habits of industry and frugality.

I have five State children attending my school—Daniel H., John H., Jane T., Edith M., and Minnie T. They are all well clothed, appear well fed, and are making fair progress generally. The three girls might be a little more regular and punctual. On the whole they are quite equal to the generality of my pupils.

I have to state that there are three State children attending the school. They are—Ellen A., living with Mr. I. S., E.A., living with Mr. F., R.M., living with Mr. B. These three seem to be very well cared for indeed, and compare favourably in behaviour, habits, and progress with any of the other children. They are always well dressed, seem to be well fed, and are always cheerful and apparently happy.

I beg to state that I have one Albert W., attending my school. As regards appearance, a stranger coming into the school would pick him out as the child of well-to-do parents. His behaviour is at all times obedient, respectful, and truthful; and in school work he is as apt and neat as any other pupil attending this school.

There is only one child of State aid attending our school. Margaret L. attends regularly, is always clean and apparently well kept.

The Sisters of St. Joseph's present their compliments to ———, and beg to inform him that they have only one—Nellie C., of the State children attending this school at Missenden Road, and in every point we think she answers to his kind inquiries very favourably.

I beg to state that there are two (2) State children (boys) attending this school, and I have pleasure in stating that they will compare favourably with any boy attending my school, in conduct, attention, and progress in lessons. They are well cared for, always coming to school neatly and cleanly dressed; they seem perfectly happy and contented, and I am sure no casual observer would be able to identify them as being children of the State.

I have to state that at school the behaviour of such children is very similar to that of ordinary school children. They are fairly regular, attending over the number of days required by the compulsory clause of the Education Act. As regards personal appearance, they are neat and clean, and appear to be well fed and happy. Their attainments and progress much the same as others of like ages; in fact it would be impossible to detect which were and which were not State children without reference to the rolls.

Some of the best behaved children in this school are State children; in general good conduct they are rather above than below the average. The worst and most troublesome children in the school are not those under the care of the State, but under that of foolish or over-indulgent parents. The State children also seem to be well cared for, as far as I can judge from dress and appearance, by those with whom they have been placed.

I have much pleasure in being able to inform you that the State children, eight in number, coming to this school attend remarkably clean and tidy; they are comfortably clothed, and present the appearance of being well fed and properly looked after. I find them as well-conducted as the other children of the school, and even much better than some of them who are blessed with parents and every kind of home comforts. The children are healthy, smart, and intelligent, and would not be in any respect behind the others of the school in proficiency if they only had the same opportunity of attending school at an earlier age. One of the children has been in the district for eighteen months, but having suffered from sore eyes has been in attendance for only six months; two have been in the district for twelve months, and five for nine months. Three of the children are in the second class, and five in the first. One of those in the second class reads very well from the Third Book; J. M'B. writes a good hand, and performs questions in arithmetic on all the simple and compound rules. The five in the first class can read, write from dictation their reading lesson, and perform addition, subtraction, and multiplication of numbers. The average age of the children is ten years and three months.

* * * I have noticed a number of children who were adopted and have found them treated well, in fact ranking in the family as children. They were neatly dressed, and attended school regularly, and could not have been distinguished from children who were with their own parents.

* * * I have the honor to state that there is but one such child at present attending this school, but during the past two years there have been several, and from what I have noticed, and from what I have heard from the mistresses of the other other departments, I can state that their behaviour, habits, &c., &c., are much like those of the other children attending the school. As to the care, &c., bestowed on them by their guardians, I saw nothing in their appearance to cause me to think they were not well cared for. They were generally clean, and appeared to be well fed, and had that contented look which is not to be seen in children under the barrack system. I cannot speak highly of their regularity of attendance at school—that has not been very good.

I have the pleasure of reporting most favourably on the boys attending this school who are under the care of the Board. The boys S. and S., who are under the guardianship of Mrs. W. B., seem in good spirits, well clad, and appear much better than a great number of those whose parents are alive. They always come to school with boots on, although a number of parents persist in sending their boys without them. The attendance of these boys is excellent, their progress excellent. Both boys are in the second class, and rather beyond the requirements of the new standard. Their behaviour, as far as I can tell, is without a blemish. The boys T. have just been removed; the eldest was in the fourth class. I am sorry his letters, which are written in school from a subject given, have all been returned, any one of which would have given satisfaction.

* * * The children's names are:—

Name—Annie M.	Guardian—J. G.
Ada A.	D. P.
Joseph A.	A. II.

I report on them under the following heads:—1. Appearance—healthy and cheerful; 2. Clothing—neat and clean; 3. Behaviour—respectful and orderly; 4. Habits—cleanly; 5. Attendance at school—fairly regular; 6. Progress—a fair average, compared with other children. The two first-named children are somewhat dull.

* * * I may say, as regards the eight boys in my charge from F., that they are very well behaved, and, on the whole, a good lot of boys. They do not differ, as far as I can see, in their habits from the ordinary school children; they take a keen interest in all the usual school games, and are quite as jealous of each other in their lessons, as regards the usual praise bestowed on merit and other deserving cases; and if they have the inevitable faults of schoolboys generally, they also possess some virtues, most of them being very truthful and respectful. Progress:—During the six months these boys have been in my charge, considering this is a half-time school, I think, as a whole, their progress may be considered fair, and, in exceptional cases, good; altogether, fully equal to the other children attending here, and they will compare favourably with most boys of their age belonging to the Public Schools in attainments. Treatment, &c.:—They attend school always neat and clean in appearance, and, judging from their good spirits and lively disposition, are apparently well looked after.

* * * I beg to say that we have at present twelve in attendance. I have always taken particular notice of them, and am happy to be able to state that, generally, they present the appearance of being well cared for, both as regards clothing and nourishment. The children we have now (and the same remarks would apply, with few exceptions, to others who have passed through our infant school) progress very satisfactorily, and in their behaviour and general deportment do not differ from the other school children; in fact I have frequently rejoiced to observe the happy and cheerful countenances of these little ones.

I have very much pleasure in stating that in every case that has come under my notice as a teacher, and even private citizen, the children appear to be well cared for, cheerful, and apparently well satisfied with their homes. One child, Amy W., has been attending school here for about five years. When I took charge of the school, nearly five years ago, she was learning the alphabet; she has now gained a very satisfactory place in the 3rd class. She can read fairly well, write creditably, and work compound rules, easy fractions, and questions in simple proportion. This child is well cared for, and kept regularly at school. I do not think, however, that she would ever gain a very high place in any intellectual employment. Kate C., in charge of Mr. Q., left here for Parramatta a few weeks ago. She was a smart little thing, with plenty of brains. There are several more pupils attending here. Some of them have only just arrived in the district, and are very young. They all appear to be well looked after and healthy and happy. Should I at any time notice anything irregular I will drop you a line privately; but my opinion is, that if all the children under your charge are as well looked after as they are in B., you will leave your footprints on the sands of time.

The only State child attending this school seems to be well cared for by his guardians; but, through his own negligence, does not come very clean. He is making fair progress, and in every other way is as the ordinary schoolboy.

I have much pleasure in certifying that, so far as cleanliness of person and dress, healthy appearance punctuality, general conduct, and general intelligence are to be taken as evidences of the well-being of the State children attending this school, nothing unsatisfactory in any way has come under my notice. It is impossible to discover any difference between them and the ordinary pupils of the school on any of the above points.

I have much pleasure in stating that the State children attending the boys' department of this school have the appearance of being well cared for by their guardians, both in the matter of food and clothing. Their progress, regularity, and punctuality do not differ from that of other children; in fact, on the average, I believe it to be rather better. Their behaviour at school is also up to the average. I am convinced that no strangers could come into the school and distinguish the State children from other pupils, either by dress, manners, or attainments.

I beg to state, for your information, that of State children attending this school there is but one, and she, from all appearances, is well looked after and cared for by her guardians. Her behaviour is good; and with regard to progress at school, she is on a par with the best in her class. She can read and write a little, and evinces signs of further improvement.

* * * There are two attending, namely, William B. and Richard A. Behaviour and habits good; in fact, a little above some of their fellow-pupils. They are well clothed, and appear to be well cared for by their guardians. Their progress in school work is up to the average of pupils with same attendance.

[All letters received from the teachers up to date of this report have been inserted without alteration, but a number of others of similar tendency, with one exception, have been received since.]

APPENDIX N.

Children's Letters.

I am now going to write you these few lines as you asked me to do. I am very happy and comfortable, I would far sooner live here than in the Asylum. I get plenty to eat and have got a grand place. I have plenty of good clothes but I cannot go to school, because my eyes are too sore, but I get taught at home. This is a better place than the last. I am in no trouble. I ran away once and would not do as I was told, and would not come home at night, but I don't mean to do it again, I am very sullen and bad tempered, when I am sullen I won't speak when they talk to me. So no more this time.—E.R.

I wrote to you last year telling you that I had a good home and that Mrs. B. was very kind to me. I must tell you the same this year that I am very happy and comfortable with Mrs. B. I attend my church and Sunday school regularly. My teacher said that I am getting on very well at school. I received a very nice prize last year at school for writing. Dear sir, it is very kind of you to write to me and I know if I am in any trouble you will help me. Dear sir, I have nothing else to tell you so I must conclude this short letter.—A.B.

I received your kind and welcome letter this morning, and am glad to hear that you are ready to give me any advice I am in need of. I have a very happy home where I am, and have no desire of going back to the Asylum. Mr. and Mrs. H. are very kind to me. And I have the same meals as they have themselves, and just as regular. I have a nice bedroom and plenty of clothes, and am just as comfortable in the house as they are. I have left school and get taught at home. Every night night when we close the shop I go inside to Mrs. H. and she gives me a few lessons either in reading, or writing, or some little things like that; and I get on twice as well as I used to when I was going to school. I go to Sunday School every Sunday, and I hear that the Archbishop is soon coming to give Confirmation, and I am in hopes of passing, because I know it is a great thing to be Confirmed. I return you many thanks for getting me a comfortable home, and that you will give me any advice I want; and more than that, because you sent me to a place where I can learn a good trade, and when I grow up to be a big boy, I can set up a shop of my own, and perhaps get a boy from the Asylum to work for me, as I do now for Mr. H. I will try my very best to please Mrs. and Mr. H. for the future. I know you will be glad to hear of my getting on well. I would like to know if Miss K. is in the Randwick Asylum still; if so would you be kind enough to give her my kindest regards and tell her that I am in a nice place, and often think of her and all she has said to me. Before I finish, I must not forget to tell you, that I have two horses one Jessie and the other Bob. Jessie is out in a paddock because she has not been well, and Mr. H. is going to bring her in about a week or two, and then I shall have to part with Bob because he is getting very old. I am very sorry for this because he has so many amusing tricks and knows me so well. I must now draw to a close, by returning you my sincere thanks for your kindness.—J.M'G.

I received your letter yesterday asking me if I were happy and if I liked living here as well as in the Asylum. I am very happy, and I would rather live here. My Master and Mistress are very kind to me. My Mistress bought me a book for my birth-day, and my master bought me a nice card for Christmas. I was confirmed last September, and got two prizes from the Sunday-school for good conduct. I went to Newcastle last October to see my little brother who was ill with pleurisy and stayed a week with him. This is a very nice place to live in. Norlingar is situated on a hill over looking the Bay, and we have a lovely view of the harbour, and of Sydney; and in rough weather we see the vessels pitching in the Ocean. There are two nice little boys here. I am trying to make a little garden for vegetables, and have got some plants in it.—E.W.

I have now taken the opportunity of writing you these few lines to tell you how I am getting on at school. I am now in Fourth Class and I am learning the lessons as follows:—

God is our.

I must now say something about Goulburn. It is very busy at present laying down the water-work pipes. The Show will be on Wednesday, and on Thursday the Schools will go. And on Sunday afternoon all the united Sunday-schools will all meet at the Oddfellows' Hall where they will be addressed by Mr. Robjohn, Agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society. The weather is suitable, and I would not like to leave Goulburn. I must now close my letter.—J.C.

I reciev'd your last letter. I write you these few lines to let you know that I am happy living here and I have a comfortable home and a kind mistress and master, and I have plenty of clothing plenty to eat and a good bed to sleep in, and I try to be a good boy. And my mistress said I am a good boy when ever they go to town they buy me something and when ever I require anything I get it and they give me some of everything they have themselves. And I could not go to school on account of my eyes being weak. I am going to school next week. I have got no hard work to do, and I would not like to leave them. And two ladies came to see me, and they where pleased with me when my mistress and master gave a good account of me.—J.K.

As you wish me to let you know how I am getting on, I now write to tell you. I have been with Mrs. L. fourteen months, and am very happy with her; I go to church on Sunday mornings with Mrs. L. and attend Sunday school in the afternoon. Miss L. gives me lessons in spelling, writing, and arithmetic every day. I am also in the library at the Sunday school, and have joined the temperance Society under Father Carroll, at the Sacred Heart. I try to do my duties as well as I am able. Mrs. L. says I have improved in them very much since I have been here.—J.J.

I think it very kind of you to ask me to write to you. I often wonder you do not forget all about me, but I will never forget your kindness to me; I am very happy; I like being up here better than in the asylum; I never get the cane at school, and guardian very kind to me; I have been helping him to bring in corn to day; he says I will soon be quite a farmer. I cannot write any more this time; perhaps the next will be a long letter.—W.R.

I was very glad to receive a letter from the home. I like being with Mr. H. very much; I am getting on very well with my lessons; I try all I can to help my Master in the Dispensary; I can read some of the Prescriptions; I am a member of the Church of England Temperance Society, and I often sing and recite at the meetings. The meetings are held every fortnight. I went to Fryer's circus last Saturday, and enjoyed myself very much. It was the first time I was at a circus. The landlord is making alterations to the shop, which makes it very unpleasant. The men have been working seven weeks, and will not be finished for two months longer.—J.L.

I would like to stay where I am with my Foster Mother and Foster Father; I have plenty to eat, and I am happy and quite comfortable; I am getting well; I go to church every Sundays, and I try to do as I am told; the clergyman told my Foster Mother that I was very good in my answers, and was very good in my Scripture lesson; we had no school at the beginning of the year, for the schoolmaster left; we have got a schoolmistress, which I like very much; I went to Camden Shew with my foster-parents, and I enjoyed it very much; I get threepence a week, and I will write to you sometimes; I don't think I have any more to say, only I wish to stay here.—W.H.

I received your kind note this morning, & in reply I am very happy to state that I am well and comfortable, and I like Mr. and Mrs. O. well; I am getting on very well and getting very good health, thank God. I am thankful to you for your kind inquiry.—M.A.F.

I am getting on very well, and I like living with Mrs. H. very much, and I am very happy and comfortable. Mr. and Mrs. H. are very kind to me; I always go out with them, and I am never suffer to want any in the way of clothing. Mrs. H. gives me sixpence a week; am not lonely as I was when I was in Darlinghurst before, for we go up to Staunton twice a week, and there are little children which I can play with, and there is a little girl next door whom I can talk to, so I am very happy, and so I will try to be a better girl every day and pray that God will help me, and I think I should be very thankful to you to think of me so much; and I thank you for that kind advice you gave me.—K.W.

I like living with Mr. and Mrs. S. much better than at the Asylum, and I am very happy and very comfortable. I am progressing very well at school. I am going to be a tailor, which I think is a very nice trade; I like it much better than farming. I went last week with my master and class to the Zoological gardens, and I saw the lions and tigers being fed, and I enjoyed myself very well, and the teacher promised to take us out again some day; I attend the Church of England Sunday School and church; I like going to Sunday and day school both; I am going to leave school soon when I am fourteen; my birthday is in June.—T.R.

I received your letter yesterday morning. * * * I am both happy and comfortable, and like living here much better than in the Asylum. I have not been going to day-school since I was put into the fifth class, but I go to Sunday School every Sunday. We are going to move this week to No. 4, 5, P. B. R. Mrs. Barff took me to a picnic, which was given by Lady Allen, at Totteth Park, last Thursday week, and I enjoyed it very much. I have written this letter all by myself, no one has dictated to me at all. Dear Sir, I must now conclude, hoping Mrs. M., the little ones, and yourself are all quite well.—L.W.

I am very comfortable, and I like being with Mrs. L. very much, she is so kind. I am now trying to get on with my lessons. I am sorry to say I am very untidy, but I will try and be better. Miss W. was kind enough to take me to Waverley. Mrs. Sharp was here on Monday; her little Baby is getting so big. Mrs. L.'s sister came up from Melbourne, and she has got such a dear little boy, only three years of age. They are going to spend a few days in Sydney. Miss W. gives me three pence a week. I am saving it all up. I got a storey book every fortnight if I get my sums right, and very often I get four right in the day. I think I have told you all the news, so I must now say good bye, hoping you are all well.—M.B.

I am happy with my foster-parents; I like living here; I would not like to go back to the Asylum; I would sooner live here. I am a good Boy; I do what my foster-mother tells me; I will always stay with her. I am going to get a foal soon; we have a lot of Cows and a lot of sheep and fowls. I have nothing more to say at present.—R.C.

I received your kind letter wanting to know how I am getting on. I have had a very bad leg for nine months, and not able to go to school all that time. They were very kind to me, and took me to two Doctors; there were four little bones came out of it, but its healed this two months, and I am back to school again. I like living here very well; I don't wish to go any other place. I am backward at school, being so long away. I attend the Sunday school regular. I can milk cows very well, but have not much to do; the weather is very dry, and the cattle have no feed. I don't feel lonely, as we have a little baby; she is great company, and plays with me.—J.S.

I write these few lines to you to let you know how I am getting on. I received your kind and welcome letter, and I felt very happy when I got it. I am happy to inform you that I like living here far better than in the Asylum. I try to be very dutiful to my foster-mother. I am progressing very well at school; I am not in trouble. I feel quite happy; I am treated very kindly.—M.D.

My dear sir,—I got your kind letter of 20th March; you asked me if I am happy; I must tell you I am very happy and comfortable. I have plenty work and plenty good clothes and plenty food. I like living with Mr. and Mrs. C. Mr. C. is going to open a new shop, and I am going to the new shop with him. I have everything I want; yesterday Mr. and Mrs. C. took me to the Cottage home at Burwood to see my dear sister Emma. I found her very well and happy. I am going to have my portrait taken, and if you would like me to send you one I should like you to have one.—C.S.

I am going to write a letter to you, telling you how I am getting on, and how I like living here where I am better than in the asylum, and how I am getting on at school. Well, I am getting on pretty well where I am living, but I sometimes get into trouble when I do not do things right, or when I disobey, and then I have to put up with it; and then sometimes I am better than that, and then if I were to do all things right and not disobey I would get on far better. I like living up here a great deal better than I do in the Asylum; I would not like to go back to the Asylum for anything. I have a nice and a comfortable home if I will only take care of it. I am now in the fourth class at school, and I will soon be leaving, as I am getting on for fourteen years of age, as I am wanted at home more than at school. The children are asked by Government to be allowed to go to Maitland on the 14th and 15th of April, to sing the National Anthem on the arrival of the Governor coming to Maitland. I spent my Christmas holidays very happily. I went down to Wallend on Christmas, and I saw one of my mates that used to be at the school with me when I was there; his name is R. J. And I should like to know how all the children are at the school, whether they are all well and happy; but I do not suppose that they like stopping there as well as at their homes with their parents. I should like to know if you have heard anything about mother; whether she is out of the hospital, or whether she is getting better. My Brother Charles just lives a little way from where I am, and he is getting on well. He looks quite strong and healthy; he goes to school.—F.F.T.

I received your letter this morning. I am very happy and comfortable. I am doing well at school, and like being here better than in the Asylum. I have good health; I am getting tall and fat. I am treated very kindly. I promise to be a good girl and to tell the truth, and to obey in all things. As it is now my bedtime, I will say good-bye, with love from,—B.W.

I received your letter to-day. I am glad to say that I have a very good home and am treated well; both Mr. and Mrs. K. are very kind to me. I would much rather be here than in the asylum. Mr. K. did not think I was getting on fast enough with my education, so he teaches me for about an hour every evening. I go to church Sunday mornings. I am happy and comfortable. When you next write, will you please give me the date of my birth, as I don't know it. With kind love to Mrs. M. and Mrs. J.—M.W.

I now take the opportunity of answering your kind letter. I am happy and comfortable. I like living here better than in the asylum. I have not been as good a girl as I ought to have been, but I intend to do better for the future.—E.T.

I received your letter. I am very happy and comfortable, and I like living with Mrs. R., and live here for ever; and I try to be good and dutiful, and I am getting on well at school; and sometimes I am not able to attend school on account of me having sores on me; and lately I have taken medicine, and I am getting stronger; and me and Joseph have a bat, ball, and stamps. And I hope you won't be running after Mrs. R. to send me up the country; and the Miss R.'s are very kind to me; and I have been helping Mrs. R. to make the jam the whole of the day; and I learn more from the Miss R.'s than I do at school. Dear Sir, I have no more to say at present, thanking you very much for your kindness towards me; and I am going to call to see you some of these days.—J.D'A.

I now sit down to write you these few lines, hoping to find you all well. I am quite well; I like my place, and Mr. R. is very kind to me; I get plenty to eat and drink, and have all I want. I am getting on at school very well; I am one of the best in the upper class of the school, and I was there a few months before Christmas holidays and got a nice prize. The teacher told me if I had have been there all the year I would have got first. This letter is very brief, but I hope to have more to tell you next time. No more from your affectionate friend,—W.R.

I now write the letter which you have been willing for me to do. You asked me whether I was comfortable and happy living where I am; I am comfortable and happy living, and plenty and more to eat; and I go to school regularly, and I am in a higher class than when I wrote last; and I want to ask you when it is my birthday.—A.J.

In answer to your letter I am happy to say that both Hughie and myself are quite well, and that we both like living where we are with Mr. and Mrs. B. who are very kind to us both. Mr. B. teaches us lessons at night. I am doing Practice and Hughie is just learning the Weights and Measures. I had two books given to me at Christmas, one of them is named "The Fur Country," the other one is called "The Young Colonists."—E.C.T.

I was so pleased to get your kind letter. I would have written sooner but have not been well; I had to stay away from school for nearly a fortnight; I am quite well now; I am very happy and well clothed. I often write to Mrs. C. and the two little boys that used to live with Mrs. C. when I did; they were my playmates; I do miss them. I now must say good bye, with kind love to Mrs. M. and yourself.—A.J.

I am very happy and comfortable. I like living here as well as the Asylum, and I try to be good and dutiful. I am progressing well at school, and I get religious instructions taught to me.—T.R.

You

You wished me to write you a letter in reference to my home. I am very happy and comfortable indeed; I would no like to live in an Asylum at all, I have finished school (this last two years as I am bound Apprentice. I go to Church and Sunday School. * * * So I must conclude with best wishes to my guardians and except the same, dear sir, from your, etc.—M.E.

I received your very kind note quite safe. I have very great pleasure in answering it to tell you how comfortable I am. I would not go back to the Asylum again for anything. I do all that I can to be good and dutiful to my foster-mother and she does the same to me. She took J. W. and I to a Sunday School picnic to Manly Beach last Saturday, and the week before she took us to Sydney to the Zoological Gardens and many other places about Ryde. I attend school regularly, and am progressing very well. Hoping I will always remain as happy and comfortable as I am at present.—A.P.

I received your kind and welcome letter to-day, as I am now going to write to let know how I am getting on; I have a comfortable home. I am getting on very well at school. I am in the third class; I am going to be a good boy; I like this place very well; I am going to receive my first Communion; I go to school regularly every day; I am going to be a good and truthful boy; I do my work very well; I have a good foster-mother and father.—J.K.

I received yours on the 22nd instant. I am happy to inform you that I am well in health; I am happy in every way. I like my foster-father and mother; I like the family very well, and they like me also. I go to school every day at nine o'clock, and I return at four, and then learn to be useful and obedient; I am living in an orange orchard and all sorts of fruit in it, and I have my liberty to eat what I like out of it. My Dear Sir, I am so glad for your intention; I thank you kindly for it.—A.G.

I like the mountains very much, and I would rather be here than in Sydney. I had a pair of parrots, and we fed them on honey, and sometimes on maize meal, and in the morning one of the parrots took a fit and died, and the other died in the evening. I am getting on very well with my lessons; when I left school I was in long division, and now I am at compound division. I am writing pretty fair in my copybook. I like this place very much. I am learning to dig up the garden, and can set corn, and am now learning to sow wheat and oats.—W.W.

I received your welcome letter, and you wanted to know how I like my home. I like my home very well; I am going to school regular. I would not like to go back to the Asylum any more. The Broughton Creek Show has passed over; I was there both days, and enjoyed myself well. The school is hardly one mile from me, and the Chapel is a quarter of a mile. I was also made a present of two calves. I am obedient to my foster-parents, and they are much pleased with me. I milk two cows, and get everything I want. We have plenty fowls and little chickens, which I like looking after. I now will end my letter, which I hope you will be pleased with.—F.H.

You want me to tell you whether I am happy and comfortable. I am happy and comfortable both. I have plenty to eat, plenty of good clothes to wear, and a good bed to sleep in. I would rather live here than in the Asylum. I try to be as good, dutiful to my foster-parents as I can. I don't go to school now. I have left school about 15 months, but I was getting on well when I left. I go to church every other Sunday, and to Sunday school too. I am learning to do almost every kind of farming work. I can plough, reap, milk a cow, and many other little things. I have plenty of pocket money. I go out of an evening shooting wallabies after I have done my work. I went to the regatta at Lake Bathurst last year, and I can see my sisters nearly any day. So this is all I can write this time.—P.G.

I received your kind and welcome letter. I am very happy and comfortable where I am. I like living where I am much better than in the Asylum. I try to be a good girl.—L.M.

I received your letter on Monday, the 29th of March. I now write you these few lines to let you know how I am living. The place where I am living now suits me well, and I have a kind Master and a kind Mrs., and I am living very happy and comfortable, and I like living in the bush a great deal better than I did living in the Asylum. I try to do all the good I can for my foster-mother, and I am getting on well at school. I am the best scholar in the school, and I got the head prize. Every morning in the winter time we get up at about 6 o'clock, and one of us goes out into the paddock, and drives up the cows into the yard. Then the rest of us bring over the buckets to the yard, and then we start to milk. We milk about 32 cows, and the master takes the butter to market every Saturday. There are a large number of native dogs about the bush where I am living in the winter time, and they try to get hold of all the small calves they can get. One night one of these dogs came to one of the pig styes and stole one of the pigs. It was a very small one. The way it was squealing woke me out of my sleep, and I got up and looked out of the door, but I could not see anything. In the morning when we got up we went down to the sow's sty and got in it, and we saw the footmarks of the native dog, and so one of the little pigs was gone. After that we always used to be on the watch for these dogs, and the first one we could see we would shoot it dead.—A.G.

I have received your kind letter a few days ago. I hope that you are in good health, as I enjoy good health. I like Mrs. L., and Mr. L. I am in no trouble, and I would not like to go back to the Orphan School. I am happy and comfortable.—J. D.

I have received your letter on the 21 of March. I asked my mother to allow me time to answer your letter, and she said I could. She is a good mother. I never had a mother before. And I am happy here and comfortable, and they are so kind to me and Willie, and everybody likes us; I think it is because we are so long with daddy. I like living here better than in the Asylum; I think I am good to her; I go to school every day; I like the present teacher too; he stops here. They say I am doing well at school, and mother will not let us go to school unless we are clean and tidy; she says she likes to see little children look well. I think I am going to learn music. I go to Church every Sunday, either in the buggy or on horse-back, mostly with daddy's sisters. I like riding now, we can enter along. Daddy can't fetch us home because he has to go from the Church to teach Sunday School in the afternoon, in another place. Sunday School is held in the Church in the morning. We were at the show; we did like it; daddy took us down in the buggy, and our schoolmaster brought us home; daddy gave us a ride on the merry go round, and he gave us money to go and buy what we liked; there was fruits of all kinds. We have been to the Sunday school picnic. We were at the band of hope tea-meeting; we belong to it, and have to recite every meeting, and are called Simmons, brother, and Co., for working so hard for the band of hope. I think we go to everything that is good. Plenty people think we are his own brothers, and say he treats us as if we were. We can milk. Daddy does not say much, but what he does say is law, and nobody else must say anything; he has never beat us yet. All our clothes we brought with us are too small, but daddy has got us plenty more. I can hear Matthew D. shouting from where I live; he goes to the same school as we do, and he is in the same class. I have seen Johnny W. at Church. Dear Sir, I cannot tell you any more news, so good night to you, dear Sir. I am your obedient child.—J.S.

I received a letter from you to write to inform you how I am getting on at my new home. I have a good master, and he treats me well. I would sooner stay here than at the Asylum. I am in second class, and I am in compound subtraction sums. * * * We have home lessons to learn, and sums to do from one week to another. I pull one paddle from our wharf to Nowra; five miles from Nowra to our wharf. I have a box of bees. I planted some corn last year, but it did not grow, the weather was too dry. I go to Church. I help to milk four cows. Last week we robbed the bees, and we got a good many stings, and we got twenty-five cans of honey. I milked the cows myself last Sunday morning. We had a good show, and I was at it. We had a school treat a few months ago. The master got second prize for the grapes and second prize for the oranges. We have two dogs, one named Sam and the other Pup. The master has two hammers, and I am going to help him split stones for a stone fireplace this next week.—W.M.

I am getting on pretty well with my foster-parents. I have a nice comfortable home. I like to live in the country far better than in the Asylum, or either Sydney; it is more healthy and cool in M., because it is not so much populated. I truly try to obey, and help in everything she needs. I sometimes vex her in some little cases, but not very much. I am getting on very well at school, and am in the highest class in the school, and one of the best scholars in it. The work which I do is very easy and interesting, as I never did such work before; the milking and churning is easy. I have my meals regularly every day. May this letter prove better than the last one which I sent you.—J.W.

I received your very kind letter, and was glad to hear from you. I am very sorry I could not write before, as I had a bad hand; it is all right now. I am very happy and comfortable, and would much rather be here than in the Asylum. I am getting on very well with my learning, and am quite happy and contented.—J.B.

Dear Guardian,—I received your letter on the 23rd of February, also another from you last week. I am very sorry for having offended you and Miss C. by not being the good girl you thought me, and I promise you now that I will be a better girl in future. Since Miss C. left L. my schooling has been a good deal interrupted, but we are getting more settled, and I am to begin again soon. I am still very deaf, so much so that I can scarcely hear a word that is said to me. I like R., it is more lively than L. I hope, dear Sir, that you are quite well, and please excuse me for not answering your first letter. I was really ashamed to write to you.—N.G.

I received your letter on Monday, stating that you wanted me to write as before. I am perfectly happy and comfortable. I now go to business in town, as we are not in the Butcher's shop; and I have left school altogether. I have left school nearly one year. To-morrow is my birthday, and I will be fifteen years of age. This is the third time I have attempted to write to-night; the thunder is something frightful. Mrs. S. and Mr. S. are well, and Edgar and myself at present. So I must close with kind and loving remembrance to you.—J.F.

I received your very kind and welcome letter on Friday last. I was glad to hear from you again. I now write you a letter to let you know I am quite well, and that I like my home that I have got now very well. * * * They are very kind to me, and they say I am a very good boy. I do everything they tell me. And I have plenty of good and nice food, and we have plenty of nice apples and all kinds of fruit, and we have three nice horses, and I sometimes go for a ride on one quiet one called Nellie. I go to school. The school Mistress says that I am getting along very well, and am a smart young boy for my age. I go to church as often as possible, and I read a verse in my Bible with my foster-mother every night. I cannot think of any more to tell you this time.—G.A.D.

Dear friend, you asked me to write a letter in reference to my home—whether I like living as I am. I tell you again, honestly and truly, that I am happy and comfortable, and I am not in trouble, nor I don't want for anything, and I try to be good to my foster-mother. You can see how I am progressing with my writing. That is all I have to say this time.—E.F.

I hope you will pardon me for my neglect not answering your kind letter before this. I know you will pardon me when I will tell you I was working very hard for a Prize out of the Sunday School. I know you will be glad for me to get a Prize: I am promised it next Sunday. I attend School every Sunday and Church every Sunday there is Service here. I have not done much work on the farm yet; but my chief work is milking. I have cows to milk twice a day. I have my brother George living with me this last 12 months. Mrs. F. said I am a good boy. Mrs. F. wishes me to tell you I am very quiet and bidable and well behaved, and I get very good health.—L.M.

I now take the pleasure of writing these few lines to let you know that I am happy and comfortable, which you want to know from me. * * * I am getting on very well at school. They keep me at home sometimes when they want me. I read every night after I come home from school.—G.W.

I am not going to go back any more, for I would feel very lonesome for the children. I go to school every day, and I go to church with the rest in the buggy. * * * I am living very comfortable here, and I always get plenty to eat and drink.—S.W.

I am glad to tell you my brother, sister, and myself are very happy. I go to school every day, unless I am sick. I like my lessons, and do my best to learn. I am still learning music, of which I am very fond. I do not think there is any advice which I can ask you for, as my mother always tells me anything I want to know. Thank you very much for your kindness.—S.W.

[The person alluded to as "mother" is the guardian.]

I received your kind and welcome letter yesterday, and now I will do my best to answer it. I am very comfortable and happy, and get plenty of food to eat, and plenty of clothes to put on. I am in interest sums, and reading in the fourth book. There was a picnic at the school last year, and I went to that, and whenever there are any kind of pleasures at the town I am always let go and enjoy myself. I am very sorry to say that Mrs. Ryder is very well. I spent my Christmas holidays in making myself happy. I received my wages and have not spent them, but am saving them. The weather is very dry and sultry. The paddocks are nearly bare, so there is not very much food for the cattle, and they are obliged to be fed on corn to keep them alive; and water is getting scarce also, and the cows do not give much milk.—A.G.

I received your kind letter you sent me. Mrs. S. is very kind to me and all of them. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday school with Mrs. S. little girls, and I like the school very much. I have got enough tickets for a prize. Our Sunday school picnic was in January. We went to Chowder Bay, and it was very nice. I go the public school in Lane Cove Road. I am in second class. I do up to long division in sums, and I am making a chemise for the Exhibition. I go to the Band of Hope and we have a little picnic every three months. The next will be in April.—C.G.

I now take the pleasure of writing you these few lines, hoping to find that you are well as it leaves me at present. I am in the third class, and I read in the fourth book. I milk four cows now. I am always at the head of my class at school. I have a good and comfortable home, and am well treated. I pull down the river every day to school now. I am well clothed and well fed. I like living here better than the Asylum. I am getting on very well at the farm now. I have got plenty of money now. I get plenty of rides now. I like milking now. Father and mother is very good to me: when they go to town they take me with them. My mother gives me my school fees every Monday morning. I go to church nearly every Sunday. My father and Richard were very sick not long ago. Robert is breaking in a horse for me to ride on Sundays. I learn Catechism every Sunday. I don't go to Church. Sometimes I go up to Cundle Town and Three. I pump up water every night. I husk and thrash corn every time it is ripe. I helped to plant Potatoes and helped to dig them when they were ripe. I have got four Christmas cards now. We have got oranges now. We had a small shower of rain to-day. I have a nice little boat to pull to school every day. We have plenty of horses and cattle now. We have two entires down at the house. I pulled up the river last night for mollier, she was up at Three getting things. I have no more news to tell you this time, so I must conclude with best wishes.—J.B. ["Mother" and "Father" alluded to here are the foster-parents.]

I received your letter last Thursday and was glad to know that you had not forgotten me. As you will see by the address at the head of my letter we have removed thirty miles from Goulburn. Ada is living in B. now. I like the place very well, only so cold. I go to Church mostly of a Sunday. We have to go five miles to Church of a Sunday. They keep a shop here now, and also a mill. It is a very quiet and lonely place. There are only six houses altogether here. I feel quite contented * * * I am very well now, only I have had the facouche, and my face has been swollen very much; it is just getting all right again. I must now conclude hoping you are all well, as it is bed-time, I remain.—E.T.

I now take the pleasure in answering your kind letter, which I received. I am very happy and comfortable, and indeed I would rather live here than in an asylum. I am not as good and dutiful as I could be, but I will try to be better. I do not go to school now, as I will be sixteen years old this month. Mrs. B. is very kind to me, and she tries to learn me all she can. I can milk very well now. I have six cows to milk, but certainly I have not much work to do altogether. I must now conclude my short note, as I have no more to tell you at present.—J.A.

I wish to inform you that I am happy and comfortable, and I have plenty of everything that I want. I am progressing very well at school; I am higher than some that a long way a head of me when I started first. I am reading the fourth book, and I am working the greatest common measure. I run in no time or what. I milk seven cows in the morning and one in the evening. I understand how to cultivate the ground. I drive two horses in the barrows. Like my foster mother and father very much. I know my way all over the bush. I often go out and help gather the sheep on my pony; I have a bridle and saddle of my own. I know how wheat, oats, potatoes, and barley put in, for I have to help to do it. I must now draw my short note to a close.—R.M.

In answer to the form you sent to me, I am going to school every day; I am in the Fourth Class at school. I am going to leave School when I am 14, and that will be next September. I have not heard from my aunt or mother for this good while. I go to Sunday School regularly. I like living with Mrs. W. I like living in Newcastle. I have grown since you saw me before. I am quite well. My aunt has not been up to see me for this good while.—B.M.

I hope you are getting on quite well. I have three children to play with, and I am getting on quite well, and I hope you will come out some day to see me again; and I got a nice book at Sunday school, and we all went to the picnic on Wednesday, and we all enjoyed a good game. I can sew the children's clothes. I am kind to them. I give Edith a Bible to learn her lessons, and I am getting on well at school, and I can wash up the dishes. I am quite happy here. Mrs. O. is very kind to me. I love being here, and I can read and write. I love the children and Mrs. O. and Mr. O. I can scrub the floor and clean the windows, and dust the room. I am kind to the children, and I have a nice new hat and a new dress. I can wash the children. Every night and morning I teach them to say their prayers, and they are good children, and they are getting on quite well. Edith got a nice prize at our Sunday school. I can sew nice at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday evening. I love being in Bathurst, and it is very pleasant up here.—A.M.

I received your kind letter, and received the nice cards that you sent me. I thank you very much for them. Sir, I am glad to tell you that I am happy and comfortable. Three years ago when I came to Mr. M., I could not read or write at all, and now I am glad to say that I can do both. I thank you very much for inquiring if I am in any trouble, but I am happy to say I am not. The lady visitors come up to see how I am getting on. Please Sir, do not call me T., for he was only my step-father, and he was a wicked man, and used to beat my mother. Sir, I hope you will forgive my writing this time, I hope I will do better next time.—G.L.

I received your kind letter on Monday, 30th of March, and when I opened it I found it was dated 20th March. I am thankful to say I am in good health at present. I go to school regularly, and am in the Fourth Class, which is the highest class in the school. I like living in Shoalhaven as well as I did living in the Asylum. I have kind friends, which is a great blessing. I received a letter from my brother in Milton. He says he is quite well and enjoys his place very well. He says also that he has a comfortable home, and a kind master and mistress. I must now conclude with the honor to be—P.H.P.

I now take the pleasure of writing a few lines to you, hoping they will meet you all enjoying best of good health, as we are in at present. We sent our love to you and Mrs. M. and the children, and Mrs. J., and Mr. G., and M. and W. and A. We all like to live here very well. They are very kind to us. Mr. W. gave I and Alfred a little pony to ride upon, and a new saddle and a bridle, and good whip to drive the cows with. I am learning to milk. We were sick coming across in the steamer. We are very thankful for your kindness to us. With love from us to all.—H.W.H.

I received your letter last week, and in it you requested me to write. In reference to my home, I am happy and comfortable and I would much sooner be here than at the Orphan School. I go out often; I went to the Zoological gardens a little while ago and to Manly Beach. There was a gentleman came to see me this morning, I do not know his name, and he said I had grown. Thank you for the nice card you sent me on Christmas. I go to Sunday School sometimes and to Church nearly every Sunday night with the Misses G. I am quite well.—G.K.

* * * I am happy and comfortable. And I like living here better than in the asylum. I can do my work very well, and I am getting on very well at school. I am not a very good boy, sometimes I am trying to be better. I got another nice prize at Sunday School a few weeks ago. —J.C.

I am happy and comfortable, and I like living as I am better than in the Asylum. I try to be good and dutiful to my foster-mother. I like the tailoring and the place very well. There are no little matters that may interest my guardians in Sydney. I am not in trouble. I do not want any advice. I now prove worthy the interest you take in me.—J.L.

I received your letter and I was very glad to have another opportunity of writing to you to let you know I am getting along very well lately. I hope to be a useful young man when my time is up here. I like staying here very much, and I have everything to make me comfortable and happy. I got a letter from my sister eighteen months ago, and she said I was twelve years old then, so I would be thirteen and a half years old now. I go to Sunday School and day school as usual. I am well improved since I came here, and the people say I am a very big boy for my age. We had a splendid shower of rain here on the 23th, which was very much wanted.—R.K.

I am glad to tell you that I am quite well and happy, and I like living down here. And I also try to be good and dutiful and do as I am told. I go to school every day, and I am progressing very well. Everyone is very kind to me, and I am very happy. I have no desire to return to the Asylum. I have nothing more to say at present. I now remain yours respectfully.—J.Y.

I received your Kind Letter, and was glad of the opportunity of writing to you, for I had to tell you that I was seven months and three weeks attending at B. school. During that time I won five prizes—photograph album for Notation; the second, an Object lesson book for Geography; the third, a writing desk for Dictation; the fourth, a flute for Grammar; the fifth, a bat and ball for arithmetic—out of which I only got 3. I got the album all right, but the other was an old scrap-book with a lot of leaves out of it and a book of animals, so that leaves me short my writing desk and object lesson book and bat and ball which I was to get on 11th January. Both Mr. and Mrs. C. spoke on several occasions to Mr. G., the school teacher, about my prizes, and he promised to give them, but never did, and since has left the school. So dear Mr. Maxted I write to you to let you know about it; and, dear Sir, you mention in your letter for me to tell you how I am getting on and how I like my foster parents. I am very happy and comfortable, thank God. Mr. and Mrs. B. are very kind to me. I like them very well; they got me a nice little pony to ride. Mr. B. has removed from his place, and has not settled down yet, but expects to do so shortly. I have no complaints whatsoever against Mr. and Mrs. B. only they are very kind to me, and say they would just as soon lose one of their own children as lose me; * * * but I am beginning to like up this part of the country very well. Now I think I will get on very well with Mr. B. He says he will give me three years more schooling if I keep on as I am. No more for the present. I remain,—J.F.

I now take the pleasure of writing to you just to let you know how I am getting on. I went to the beach every evening, and I stopped too long in the water, and I got the rheumatics in my feet before Christmas, and I am not quite well yet, and I got it in my hand; my hand is better again. Now, I thank you very much for the pretty card you sent me at Christmas; it was very nice. I like my home very much, and I am very happy and comfortable. Mrs. O'S. is very good and kind to me, so are all the children, and I like them all very much.—M.H.

I am very glad to say that I am still happy and comfortable. Miss T. is very kind to me. She let me go to the circus and to the Show, and I go to Sunday-school and church at night with Miss T. I must not forget to tell you that I belong to the Scripture Union, and I like it very much. We are going to have a Sunday-school picnic on Easter Monday, and Miss T. is going to let me go to it if I am a good girl. You will be very sorry to hear that James and Charles M. were very bad boys. They lit a match and threw it on the dog's back, and the dog ran into the house and set fire to it and burnt it down. It was the Monday after Mr. E. was out there. I must tell you that I have no complaints to make. I never get beat, and I am very kindly treated. I have nothing more to say now. I go out for a walk with Miss T. every Saturday and Sunday afternoon.—M.S.

I now take the pleasure of writing to you, hoping to find you all well. I am happy and comfortable. Dear sir, I will write often to you. I don't find any think more to write to you to-day.—M.H.

As it is with the greatest pleasure I write these few lines to you to tell you that I am safe at home, and I like my place very much; I like living here better than the asylum; I do not go to school, I get my lesson at home in the evenings, and in the afternoon I am sewing making night-dresses for myself, for all my others are very short. I did not like living with Mrs. C., for she was a very cruel woman. I was very glad when I left her, although she was very sorry, and I am living very well and happy, and, thank God, I am getting very strong and healthy, and I have a very comfortable home. I get plenty to eat and drink, and plenty of work, and a comfortable bed to lie on. I have a very nice little room to myself, what I did not have up there; I used to sleep on the sofa in the back kitchen. As this is all I have to say at present.—T.M.

I received your kind letter hoping to find you in good health, as it leaves me at present. There was a man killed with the train on Monday evening, between 4 or 5 o'clock; he had no children, and his poor wife was crying, and his name was Mr. Balmer. He was the best porter they had on the station; he was killed on the spot at once. Mrs. McK. has not been very well lately. That poor man did not speak a word; and I am getting on very well at school. Please excuse my short letter, because I have not much time when I have my home lessons, and I got a prize last year for good conduct.—A.E.

I have got reasons to thank you, Dear Sir, and God that you have brought me to such a good home; I am in hopes that He will prosper you and me; that I have reasons to thank God that when I become a man that you have brought me up in this world. I have plenty to eat and to drink; I have a good bed too lay on, and a room to myself. As for my school, I have lost four or five days since I left you. Good-by, and God bless you, and I hope, sir, you will be so kind to answer this, and tell me whether I am improved in my schooling. I have done this all myself; I have told you no falsehood, and nothing but the truth, so good night to you and all.—P.B.

To my guardians in Sydney, to let you know I am well and at school every day. Only when I go for the post to Dungog I have a horse to ride in for it; I feed pigs and help to do some turns, and I milk some cows before I go to school; I do some sums, and read and write; I am keeping all my money to buy a horse for myself to ride; I am happy up here; I have plenty of clothes to wear. I must close my letter with love to all my guardians in Sydney.—T.M.L.

I now take the pleasure of writing to let you know how I like living in Newcastle; I like it very much. I would have written before, only I have a lot of lessons to learn at night; I am getting on very well at school; I am in fourth Class; I go to school three days a week; I go to Sunday-school every Sunday; I have not missed a Sunday from Sunday-school this year. I have been very troublesome, but I will try to be better for the future. I am very much better in health since I came to live with Mrs. C.; my eyes are not so weak as when I first came; I like living with Mrs. C. very much; I have nothing to complain of at present. As I have no more to say at present I must conclude. Please excuse my mistakes.—M.L.

I now take the opportunity of answering your letter, which I suppose you expected by return post, but I could not do that very well. I tell you again honestly, that I am very happy and comfortable with Mrs. H.; I would much rather be with her than in the Asylum; and I feel very happy to be able to say that some day I hope I shall be able to look back to you and thank you for putting me in such a nice home, and also to Mrs. H., who has been so very kind to me, and brought me up to be a good girl. She allows me to attend the Band of Hope meetings regularly, of which I am a member; I recite, and sing a duet with one of my males. I am getting on nicely at school; I am in fifth class; I also go to Sunday-school, where I have gained two prizes, both of them first prizes, for attendance, lessons, and good behaviour. I try to help Mrs. H. all I can, for she has had a great deal of trouble lately, but sometimes I fail to do right and she has to be cross with me, but I must not think bad of that, because it is all for my own good. I am never in trouble, unless I hear that mother is ill; that upsets me a little, but Mrs. H. is very kind to me, and soon cheers me up again; I am glad to say that altogether I am very happy. I am very fond of the children, they are such nice little things; Mrs. H. allows us to go to any amusement that we can use, such as picnics or tea-meetings. The Easter picnic is coming next month and the show. I think I have told you all the news, so I must now conclude.—A.M.C.

In reply to your kind letter I now write to you to tell you that I like living here better than I would like to live in the Asylum. I am very comfortable and happy where I am, and I like my foster-mother very well; she is kind to me, and never uses me bad. I was getting on very well at school till lately; we had to break up school because our teacher took ill and died, and there is no other appointed yet. I am very thankful for the nice card you sent me at Christmas; it was a very pretty one. I help my foster-mother's sister to milk fifteen cows every morning; I like it very well, and I can make butter and cheese, and do other work.—D.G.

As you asked my sister D. to write you a letter I thought you would like me to write as well. I am very happy and comfortable, and I like my foster-mother very well; she is so good to me and kind; she gave me a nice garden and a lot of flowers to put in it, but it is like everything else, it is dry with the sun and for want of rain. If there don't soon come some rain there will be no water nor grass for the poor cattle. I have not been going to school lately on account of my teacher's death; he died last week, and there is no other appointed yet. I thank you very much, Sir, for the nice card you sent me at Christmas. You asked me whether I would rather live here where I am or in the asylum, but I would rather live here where I am than there; I should be very sorry to be parted from my foster-mother and my brother and sisters, and all my friends, who are all very kind to me and my brother and sisters. When Aunt, as we call our foster-mother, goes out anywhere she always takes me or my sister with her to show us things, and for company for her. I have got a large doll, and I make its clothes, and that teaches me to sew.—R.G.

APPENDIX O.

Guardians' Letters.

When I received my foster-child, Hugh, he was sickly, but now he is healthy and his manners give us general satisfaction.—T.B.

The children in my charge, I am happy to say, are greatly improved since they came to me. John N. was very dirty in his habits when he first came to me; they are now all good clean boys, and I don't know which one I like best; they give me no trouble whatever, only to look after them. The three brothers W. were very delicate when they first came to me, but they are all strong and healthy now; they are all good behaved boys. I think, my dear sir, that these children are much better to be brought up amongst families where a good example is shown them, as it takes them a long time to forget their old ways; they are getting on well at school, and are growing fine big boys.—Mrs. F.

This is to inform you that I found the children middling clean when I received them, and in good health, and of very good manners; there is an improvement in the the girl, but the boy is very dull of improvement. The girl is very good in every respect; she is willing to do anything she can do, but the boy is rather lazy and forgetful; he don't like to do anything like work, but he might improve as he gets older; he is given to tell lies, that is the worst fault in him; I will try to improve him if I can at all; I do not like to beat him, for I never did yet since I have had him, for I think if kindness won't do it harshness will not. They attend school regularly and they improve in learning; they have had the best of health since I have had them in my charge. Sometimes I threaten to send the boy back in fun, and then he is better for awhile, but I should not like to send him back, for I think he will be right enough by and by. * * *—M.A.B.

Yours of 26th duly came to hand, wanting to know how my foster-children are progressing and behaving themselves. First,—William G., when I received him his health was very good, and he was very obedient and quiet, but very dirty in his habits, and he is strong and healthy at present, and still very dirty in his habit; I see no improvement in that. Second,—Henry P., when I received him he was a very delicate child, very quiet and obedient; there is very little improvement in him—he is a child that wants a deal of care.—E.H.

Please to excuse me for not answering your favour of the 20th instant as I have been very unwell lately. As regards Mary L. I am very glad to inform you that her health is all we can wish, her eyes are still weak at times, but much better than they were when she came to me two years ago; she is still going to school, so I do not have much of her time; that is one thing I think rather hard upon the people, the State expecting the children to go to school for two years after they are apprenticed. Mary has been a great deal of expense and trouble through disobedience, but I hope and think she will be better; she is very fond of school and is getting on very well; she is not very fond of work, but she will get better I am quite sure as she gets older; I try my very best to make her a thoroughly tidy respectable girl, a credit to me and all that have had anything to do with her from her mother's death. As regards my ideas of the State children, I really think the most of them are better off than with their own fathers and mothers.—E.M.C.

R. K. is getting along very well at present, and is behaving himself very well lately. When he came here first he liked to have his own way; his health was very good, and he has had good health since he came here; he is very much improved in his appearance.—M.G.

I wish to inform you that the children I have in my charge are progressing very well in every respect. They are very tidy in their habits, and hold their health very well, and I am sure there is no fault to find in their manners. There is a great improvement in them, both in health, habits, and manners.—J.H.

In answer to your circular, I beg to state that the boys are in very good health at present, although when I first had them they suffered from bad eyes, and I had a deal of trouble with them in other ways, but I have broken them in to better habits, I am happy to say.—S.H.

Re your inquiry as to the conduct of S. C., I have pleasure in saying that she continues to give me the utmost satisfaction. For the first few months we had a lot of trouble with her, but she is now truthful, diligent, and clean in her habits.—W.C.

My foster-children are progressing very well, and their behaviour is much better than when they came to me first. The children were healthy when I received them, with the exception of James P., whose eyes were weak, and they are still weak occasionally, and he is subject to the croup, but he has only had one slight attack since he is in my charge; and Thomas's habits were not clean at night, but he has improved in that respect. And M. was very troublesome at first, as he was disobedient and untruthful to the utmost degree, but he has improved in those respects as much as one could expect in the time. * * * It is the greatest punishment I could inflict on them to tell them I will send them back if unruly.—E.H.

I should answer your letter before, only for the death in my family. The little boy's behaviour was very good when I first got him, and is still very good, but his health is not very good; he is very subject to a bad cough. He is getting on well at school, and is very happy. The girl when I got her was very untruthful and very disobedient, but she is something better than she was; she has a very bad temper, and tries to have all her own way; she is very healthy. I try to learn her all I can, and I hope she will grow up to be a good girl. I approve of the boarding-out system if the children get good homes.—W.B.

Yours of 22nd instant came duly to hand. You ask for information re our foster-child, Charles S. I must inform you that we have got him into our own ways, and he is the same as our own children. I see he is busy writing you just now. I have every reason to believe he will turn out a very smart young man; and I sincerely hope your Institution will receive the encouragement from the public that it deserves, for the sake of the little wails who otherwise would grow up a disgrace to society. Yesterday afternoon my wife and I took young Charlie to the Cottage Home at Burwood to see his sister. We found everything beautifully clean, and when the children came home from Sunday-school they all looked as happy as little sand-boys. Wishing your Institution success.—F.C.

With reference to the children, they are behaving themselves very well, especially John; he is exceedingly good, but George is not so well behaved as John. Their health is very good, they have neither been sick since I took them, and their manners have improved. They are doing very well at school; George is a little quicker learning than John. I think the boarding-out system is very good. I will do my best for the children.—S.B.

I am pleased to say that my foster-children are progressing and behaving themselves favourably. When I first received the children their habits were rather boisterous, but health good. I have noticed a great improvement under my correction in all respects. * * * —I.D.

I received a note some time ago inquiring after the health and improvement of the children. I would have written sooner, but the Inspector had been here, and I thought he would report they are all in good health and improving, and a great deal better than when they came here, except E.R. I find that I cannot keep him—he is doing the others a deal of harm; I have done all I could to change him but have failed; the Inspector spoke to him when he was here, but it has done him no good. * * * —M.A.B.

The child under my charge is progressing as well as can be expected, and has always behaved himself well. When he came to us he was in good health, and has always kept well since. He had a very dirty habit when he came of wetting the bed at night, and I cannot say he has improved any in that respect, although we tried all we could to try and make him stop it. He has improved a good deal in his general conduct, is not nearly so selfish as when he came, and I think that he will still improve.—E.C.B.

My foster-child is exceedingly troublesome—she will break and destroy things out of sheer wilfulness; when I asked her why she destroyed certain articles, she said she did it on purpose, but she has promised on several occasions to mend her ways, and I am willing to give her a further trial, as I have grown to like her. She was strong and healthy when I received her, and continues to keep so. The boarding-out system in my opinion is excellent.—H.B.

I received your letter dated, 26th March, only yesterday, April 1st, and I can say Louisa is a clean, healthy, honest girl, and growing a great deal since I took her. I quite approve of the boarding-out system. I think it is far better for the children themselves; they learn to be useful members of society.—E.H.

I beg to state that when I first got them, the youngest (Nellie), had very bad sore eyes, and I had a great deal of trouble before she got well as she is now, but as she at the present time has the whooping-cough very severely, I fear they will get bad again. Annie R., the elder girl, when I got her was most untruthful, a paltry thief, and had a disgusting habit of tampering with herself and little sister, but with constant watching she is at last getting over the dreadful habit. Manners they did not know anything about; now they are much like other children of their class. I must say I have had very bad soil to cultivate.—C.H.

In answer to yours of the 31st of March in regard to my foster-child, she has improved in her habits and health very much; she had some very bad habits when we first got her, but her health is much better. Wishing you every success in your Boarding-out system.—S.J.

We received your note in reference to our foster-children, and we are very glad to say that we think there is a great improvement in the children; they are both very well-behaved; the little one, Allan M.K. is a most excellent child in every form, and could scarcely be better; Geo. R. is also a good boy and well behaved; they both enjoy excellent health; George is now getting a big boy, and often talks about going to work, and I think this would be best for the boy if you could so arrange it; if you would kindly let me know when you think you could take him I should be thankful; I am sorry that I cannot apprentice him to myself, for both myself and wife will be sorry to part with him, but I think it would only be keeping the boy back not to start him to work at something at once.—W.B.

In answer to your letter, my little boy is quite well and is growing very fast, and like most healthy little boys he is very mischievous, but he is a very affectionate child. When I received him he appeared a very babyish child for two years old, and needed quite as much nursing as a child eighteen months old would; and though he had evidently been well fed and cared for, yet he appeared to be a very delicate child, and few would have thought that he would so soon be the healthy sturdy little fellow he is at present. I can only say that I think the country much the best place for any children.—F.B.

In

In reply to your letter wherein you wish to know how my foster-children are progressing and behaving themselves, I am pleased to say they are all doing well, and are very obedient. Percy C. G. when I took him was healthy and of good habits; he is now quite a young man, and very industrious and well-behaved. Maude E. G. when I took her was delicate but of good habits; she has grown a nice girl now, but not very strong; she is very fond of music and needlework, and gets on very well at school; we should be quite lost without her. James A. S. when I took him was healthy, but very bold and of bad habits; I am glad to say he is quite an altered boy; he is obedient and growing a very intelligent boy. My idea of the boarding-out system is the children have more affection for each other, and can learn to do so much more with their foster-parents than they can in the Asylum; both Mr. C. and I try to learn them all the useful work we can, so as when they grow up they will know how to get their living; they all attend Church and Sunday School regularly. I am sorry to have been so long in answering your letter, but the death of my son-in-law, Mr. W., prevented me from writing before. Trusting that all the dear children will do well.—C.C.

In answer to yours of the 20th March, wishing to know the behaviour of the children under my care, Emma J. T., the apprentice, was very small when I first took her, but now has grown a big girl and getting very useful as a domestic servant. Gertrude T. was delicate, but now has good health and behaves very well. Ethel C. was strong when I first received her and has improved greatly. Annie L. was very stout and strong when I first received her and of very bad habits, but has greatly improved. My idea of the boarding-out system is it has proved a great benefit to the children in this district.—E.C.

I wish to state that the foster-children under my care are progressing and behaving favourably. When I first received them they were rather untidy in their habits; one of them (Maud H.) was delicate in health, the others were healthy; their manners were fair. I can notice a general improvement in them, though not so tidy as I would wish, yet they are willing and industrious, have a healthier and better appearance; manners improving. The boarding-out system is having a good effect, so far as my charges are concerned.—E.H.

Agnes McC. is in good health, and is much liked; she is quite contented; she is a dear little girl.—Mrs. H.

I have received your letter, and you want to know about the little girl. Well I can say that the child is progressing and behaving as well as can be looked for from a child—all children have to be kept in their place; but she is not a bad child to do with, and as for manners she is not a bad-mannered child, but is better than when I got her, and she is a little troubled in the chest—I have to be careful with her from the night air.—H.W.

In reference to yours of the 22nd inst., relative to my foster child, his habits were very much subject to lies and bad company, would loiter mornings and evenings going and coming from school, would sacrifice anything for company; health always good; very unmannerly in addressing or speaking to people; he is improving in his manners and habits, and not so much for lies, as I make it my business to search after them; he is slow in learning, the teacher tells me he is very idle; I believe he would be totally lost if he had not been taken charge of by the State, as he would do anything, be it good or bad, that any person would ask him to do; he wants to be kept from bad company * * *—P.F.

In reply to your inquiries respecting the children under my care, I beg to state they have much improved in every way, and I certainly do think the boarding-out system has a beneficial effect upon the children, as I think there is more home influence brought to bear upon the children and their behaviour in general.—K.A.G.

In reply to your letter to-day, about my foster-children, they are all good, well-behaved children at present—I have no complaints to make. I find P.F. and H. and A.P. to be clean, honest, and obedient boys; but I had a little trouble with F.McG. with dirty habits, but he is improving now; they all go to school and are all learning well, and all in good health—I have no sickness since I have had them.—H.J.

In reply to a note received from you about the boys in my care, I am happy to state they are both very good boys; they are not strong robust boys, still they enjoy very good health; they have only had a slight illness since they have been with us; they have grown very tall; they are more cheerful than when first they came; they seem well contented; they take a great interest in gardening, in fact they seem as one of our own. The youngest boy has a bad habit of wetting his bed. I have tried in every way to break him off it and cannot. I think the boarding-out system a grand idea, it makes the little ones as one of the family. They have lost the vacant staring manner they had when they first came.—M.C.

With regard to this foster-child, he is progressing in school duties as favourably as could be expected, and he attends daily. He is behaving himself very well. When I received him his habits were pretty fair, health very good, but his eyes were very sore and tender. His manners were not as would be expected. I have noticed much improvement in his eyes, schooling, manners, and habits. My opinion of the boarding-out system is that it is a very good idea.—T.C.

Re yours of 19th. When R.M. was received by me as a foster-child he appeared to be in very delicate health, very often complaining for the first twelve months or so; since then he appears to have greatly improved, and now seldom complains. In manners when I received him he was fairly well conducted, and now it is I think generally admitted that he is a well conducted lad. * * *—J.H.R.

In answer to your letter, dated 22nd March, respecting children in my charge. In the first place I will speak of the habits, health, and manners of them when I first received them. Three out of the four were troubled with a skin disease, such as ringworm, and all were more or less dirty in habits, in bed and also out of bed, seemingly not knowing any better. In manners they had no liking or affection for anyone or anything as other children at their age at that time. They would sit still for hours, looking upward to the ceiling, with a kind of idiotic expression. But in a few weeks I began to make a great improvement in them as regards cleanliness, and they soon began to notice and have a liking for everyone and everything about them that would give them any amusement getting more or less mischievous like other children, in fact getting quite natural. They have been more fortunate in having good health than most children, never having had any ailment except bad eyes in the hottest part of the summer. At the present time they are the picture of health. Two of the four go to the day school in Goulburn, and they all attend regularly the Sunday School. * * * I have no fault to find with their behaviour at present. Of course their inclinations are not all the same, and some are more apt for learning than the others. Not having had much intercourse with other boys, they are not so wicked as most boys brought up in large towns; so far, I think it has been greatly to the children's own welfare to have been boarded out, as it has made them more kindly, and more affectionate, and more natural, than they would have been brought up inside an Asylum.—J.F.

I beg to state that the children under my care are considerably improved in health, habits, and manners. When they came to me they were very delicate, and not particularly cleanly. * * *—M.C.

In reply to yours of date 19th, about the State child, J.B. When he arrived here his skin was dry and rough; he was rather weak for his age, and was very nervous. He would often sulk and refuse to take his meals. Now his skin is soft and smooth; he has gained in flesh considerably, and seems in perfect health. Since I put him on wages he is eager to obey and do what he can, and is becoming useful to me. I have never yet punished him, kindness combined with firmness I find answers best, and I believe he will grow to be a good and useful man. I believe you can hardly board them out too young, say nine or ten years, that is before they learn any bad habits, and they take better to their foster-parents. All the State children I have seen seem healthier and better boarded out on farms. I know nothing how they are in towns.—S.A.

In answer to yours of the 10th inst., I wish to state that the conduct of the children J. and D. H. is satisfactory, being quiet, obedient boys; I have no reason whatever to complain.—A.A.

You wish to know how the children in my charge are. They are doing well, and behaving themselves very well, to be so young; of course they have been troublesome. The little ones were all rather dirty when they first came, but they are all very clean now, with the exception of one very dirty boy, and I do not think he will leave it off. Some of them were not strong at first, but they are quite healthy now, except the little girl. She has been suffering from scrofula; she is much better, and I think will get strong; their manners, to be so young, are good; I think there is a great improvement in them since they first came to me, and I think the boarding-out has done them good, as they are more like children in their own homes, and mix more with other little children.—E.C.

In reply to your letter of the 20th instant, I beg to state that L.W. was in a very bad state of health when I got her; she was also suffering from sore eyes; but I am happy to say she has completely recovered, and is now enjoying good health, and is growing up a well-behaved child, and is also very fond of school. On the whole, I think the boarding-out system is beneficial to the child.—E.C.

I beg to state that the children are doing very well, and I have no cause to complain with regard to their conduct. When I first got them they were in good health, and well-behaved; and I think that the two K.'s have improved somewhat in appearance. My idea of the boarding-out system is that it is very good for the children; if they are treated kindly they become very much attached to you; I know that is the case with what I have got.—R.D.

I beg to inform you that there is a deal of improvement in the children placed under my care. They were all very dirty in their habits when I received them; they are now clean children, with the exception of G.J., who is a very dirty boy indeed, there is no improvement in him; he is sometimes very delicate, and has no appetite for his food. F.P. is getting on well at school, and is a smart little fellow.—S.C.

I am happy to say my foster-children are both behaving themselves very well. I will not say they are faultless, but they behave very much as other children do. And with regard to their habits and manners, well, I can only say they more resembled those of dogs or pigs than children when first I received them. And about their health: they were both in a filthy, neglected, half-starved state. The girl was not quite so bad, but the little boy was an object of misery, with his poor sore eyes and his head covered with a thick scurf. Now they are both very beautiful, bright, and intelligent children. And my idea of the boarding-out system is that its effect on the two children has been simply magical.—M.A.C.

When I first received the children they were very unclean in their habits, but I am happy to say that they have much improved in every respect, and their health is very good.—M.C.

I have the honor to inform you that my foster-child, W. C., is a well-behaved child; always delicate in health, and has been from the time I had him; he suffers from chest complaint, but is much better at this time. I certainly consider that in his case the care bestowed on him by the boarding-out system conducive to his health.—M.D.

In reply to yours about the State children under my care, I have the honor and pleasure to say they are very good girls, and behave themselves very well. When I first received them their health was good, and continues to be so, especially Dulcie, but Rebecca is more delicate. Their habits and manners when I received them were fair, but continue to improve with age and teaching. You ask my idea of the boarding-out system; and, as far as it comes under my observation, I think it is excellent, and a great benefit to the poor children, who are all taught to work, so that they will be able to get their living when they grow up; and they are all, as far as I have seen, treated with kindness and seem happy. Our school is closed at present, and has been for about eight weeks, during which time Mr. C. has been ill, and he died last week, so I suppose we shall soon have another teacher appointed.—E.C.

The children I have I think have all improved very much, both in health and manners; in fact, the two girls when I had them first were very unruly indeed, but now they are attending school regularly, and with the home influence, there is a great change for the better. The names of the girls are M.P. and G.C. The child Susan was suffering from bodily weakness when I had her, but I am glad to say improves much. The boy, M.C., has been poorly—the doctor says it was caused by his getting his teeth, but he is now much better; the doctor says he is outgrowing his strength, so I have to give him plenty of nourishment, and he is improving much.—H.H.

• • • When I received the boy to my home he was in a wretched condition—he had been illused by his father, and was in a very bad state of health; now he is a fine healthy looking lad, and I intend sending him to school in a few months time.—M.C.H. [This child is too young to attend school.]

You want to know how the boy is behaving. He is behaving very well, only he is such an awful boy for telling lies I can hardly believe anything he tells me. His sleeping habits were very filthy when he came to me; his health is good; he is getting quite a stout little fellow now.—J.B.

I wish to inform you, in answer to your inquiries concerning the children under my care. I beg to state that when they came to me their habits were filthy in the extreme, and manners not very good, but have now improved both in habits and manners. F.S. was in a very delicate state of health, shy and reserved in manner, but has improved in both, although his appearance is not what I should like it to be; he looks pale and thin, but is strong and wiry. J.S. was in pretty fair health when he came, but had sore head and ears, but by careful treatment he soon improved in that. He had a very spiteful disposition; for instance, one of the others annoyed him, and he heated a spoon, and put it on his face, and took the skin off; but, by talking to him and telling him the evil of giving way to such a disposition, he is entirely broken off it. O.T. was in a very delicate state of health when he came: he had an ailment that I thought never could be cured. I took him to Dr. Morson, and he showed me how to treat him, and, by careful attention to diet and otherwise, he is now entirely cured, and is a fine strong robust boy and a dear affectionate little fellow, but has been a great deal of expense. I think I have given details plainly enough to show that the children have benefited by your system of management.—E.B.

You requested me to let you know how R.O. is progressing. When I first received her she was not what I expected. I had great trouble in bringing her into clean habits. Her eyes were very sore, but now they are well; and I also find a great change in Ruth in all her ways and manners; and everyone that saw her when she first came to me sees a great change in the girl. The gentleman that visits once a quarter can tell you the same. With regard to the boarding-out system, I think it is a very good plan, and those that have the children do their duty to them as they ought.—M.E.

In answer to your note, I respectfully beg to say J.W. came to me in May, 1882. At that time she was very deaf, had weak eyes, was very filthy in her habits, and stole money several times from me, and was thought to be an imbecile. I have had great trouble with her. I am glad to say that she is wonderfully improved, grown very much, though not over bright yet. She can now remember what she learns; getting on well at school, considering how dull she used to be; getting out of all her nasty habits; and now I have no cause to doubt her honesty. Everyone that sees her remarks how strong and well she looks, and so much improved in all things. The boarding-out system has proved a blessing in her case. We all look on her as my own.—Mrs. C.

[This was one of the most immoral and dishonest children the Board have had to deal with. It was at one time feared she would have to go into an imbecile asylum.]

As far as my experience enables me to judge, during a period of nearly twelve months the children boarded-out in the different homes under my care are doing well; they are perfectly happy and contented; attend school regularly, and cheerfully helping morning and evening with the work on the farms on which they live; are healthy and well clothed; have plenty of good food. They profess great attachment to their foster-parents. I think the boarding-out system is good when due care is taken in the choice of guardians.—M.T.

In answer to your note of the 19th, I am happy to say that the children are very well-behaved, and are in very good health; they also are progressing favourably at school, which they attend regularly.—E.B.

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter, 22nd instant, requesting me to inform you how the State Children in my charge are progressing, and stating what progress they have made, &c. Also to be particular in stating what were the habits, health, and manners of the children when first received, if any improvement is noticeable. • • • In answer, I beg leave to state as follows:—1st. That the two boys when first received here were not in very good health, being weak, and in low condition, • • • but respectful and well-behaved, and of fair moral conduct. The eldest, A.R., could read and write fairly; the other boy, A.P., was quite unacquainted with all school matters. They are now both fair scholars, with a good report from the schoolmaster, and I am quite proud of their acquirements and general good conduct. Of the girl, E. McL., I am bound to write and give a very different account, she has been a very great trouble to me ever since I have had her; when I received her, she was in tolerably good health, but of very low type, and loose immoral conduct, and fierce and almost ungovernable temper, so much so that I thought it undesirable and dangerous to herself and companions to send her to school, she had no scholastic attainments whatever. I therefore did not send her to Public School, but educated and trained her myself, with this result,—she is now a fair scholar for her age, writes well, and is moderately grounded in arithmetic, &c., and although still stupid and wilful, will I think make a tolerable house servant eventually. In my experience with her, I have have often determined to send her back to the Institution, in despair of making any improvement, so much anxiety and trouble she has and does give me, but by perseverance and watchful superintendence, and I have tried again and again, I will endeavour to do my best, so that if she is not what she ought to be by-and-bye it shall not be my fault. I trust she will eventually make a useful working member of society. * * * The children all attend Divine service in the morning, and Sunday School in the afternoon. With regard to the effect of the boarding-out system, I think the Colony generally is to be congratulated in adopting such an Institution, producing as it does a most useful class, and the benefit to the poor children can scarcely be calculated. It is in the future when the especial benefit will be seen and appreciated.—H.D.C.

In answer to your letter, I wish to let you know how the children are getting on; they are doing very well indeed; when they came to me first their health was very bad; they had sore eyes and sore heads, bad with ringworm; manners very good; much improved in every way. * * *—J.F.

Yours duty to hand. In reference to the children, I am glad to say they are progressing and behaving themselves on the whole well. In respect to their health, when they came to us it was not so good as now, they had breakings out, their habits very indifferent and dirty, particularly I., which, as a matter of course, gave a good deal of trouble, but I am glad to say they are much improved in all ways. * * * The boarding-out system I think good every way, in fact it seems to me the only way to make them useful members of society. * * *—G.B.

In reply to your letter about the State child I have in my charge, I have no complaint to make about her. She is a very good, obedient child, and in the best of health. She was enjoying good health when I received her; I also see great improvement in her household work, and she can do plain cooking very well, and plain sewing. * * *—M.B.

Received your letter of the 20th March, with thanks. You wish to know how the children are progressing since they have been under my charge; they are all in good health, and have been so during the six months, except childish ailments usual to children; their habits were very dirty when I received them; however they have greatly improved. Emily and John are very obedient, and I think in time will be depended upon, but K., I am sorry to say, I have great trouble with, and I shall have to bring her back if she does not improve. Edward G. is a good child, and everything one would wish for. My opinion about the boarding-out system is, it brings the children to be more open and affectionate, also to know what a home is.—Mrs. B.

I am happy to say that the little boy J.H. in my care is a very nice child; his general health is very good, and has been since he has been with me. He is improving at the school. * * *—M.B.

I am happy to inform you that the children I have in my care are very well-behaved children. R.K. was the first I had. He was then very ill with an ulcerated mouth, and was rather stupid. His mouth is now quite well, and he is a bright, intelligent little fellow, and very clean in his habits. * * * C.A. was the next. She was ill when I got her. She is subject to bilious attacks and bronchitis; she is sometimes well and sometimes sick; she was very ill last week, but she is better now. I did not get her any medicine last week, but I am sending a receipt for a bottle of medicine. I got it for to give her an appetite. She is a good, clean little girl. F.L. was in good health when I got her. She is a very clean well behaved girl; she complains of pains in her right leg—it swells very much at times; she says she had it injured when she was a very little girl. She fell down last week when she was coming from school and hurt her left knee; a piece of wood ran into her knee and made a nasty wound, it is better, but not well yet. She is quite well in all other respects. My idea is that the boarding-out system is a success, as the children in my charge are happy and comfortable, and we are very much attached to them.—Mrs. C.

Yours of the 20th instant to hand. You want to know the habits and behaviour of my foster-child. When I first took charge of her she was very rough in her manners, which have changed very much for the better. Her health was very good when she came to me. Her health has been very good since I have had the care of her, in fact, no sickness at all worth speaking about. Alice gets the same attention as my own children, the same schooling, and sits at the same table at meal-times. * * *—S.C.

In answer to your letter respecting the children, the two boys that I have had the longest, I think they are both very much improved in health, strength, and behaviour, W.P. in particular. I think his health is very much improved, but he is very far from being a strong child. He learns very quick at school. I am happy to say that he has entirely left off the dirty habits that he had for the first six or eight months that I had him. J.L. is a more healthy child, and very much improved in every way. S.U. is a strong healthy little girl, but a most destructive, troublesome child. M.P. is not so strong, but she is very troublesome. I hope they will both improve. * * *—L.C.

In answer to your note I received to-day regarding the children I have, I may state to you that when I got these children they were all sickly and very hard to look after, and some of them very light-fingered, which I believe you have heard of before this; but now they are in good health, and have been for some time, and are as well as I would wish them to be, thanks be to God for it. And as for the boarding-out system of the children, I do not believe anything can beat it, that is if the children get good homes and kind people to look after them. I might as well state that if all your children are as well looked after as those I have I think they will do you or any one else a credit.—F.C.

In answer to your request, I may state that when the children came to us one was in fair health, but the youngest was suffering from an abscess in her head, and we have had her under the doctor for a few weeks, but she is improving now, and I think will soon be well again; they were very far back in learning, but they are improving now. * * *—O.C.

I beg to inform you that H. T., the little one under my care, is progressing favourably both in health and habits, and she is of a cheerful disposition. Her health was not the best when I received her, but constant walks have restored to her a healthy colour—she has not had a day's illness since I have had her. Her only bad habits were obstinate and untruthful, those failings she has now conquered, and seems willing and obedient, also happy and contented. Hettie attends Sunday school, but is at present too young for day school. Trusting I may yet give you a still more favourable account of my little one.—A.M.A.

In answer to your circular of the 19th, I have to state that A.A. is behaving herself very well, and her general conduct is most satisfactory; she is cleanly in her habits, well mannered, and tidy; is also very good. My husband and myself consider the boarding-out system to be very beneficial to children circumstanced as she was. Of course, we shall be able to judge better as time passes; she seems very happy with our children; I send her to day school and Sunday school. I consider there is a great improvement.—E.A.A.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ORPHAN SCHOOLS, PARRAMATTA.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING OWNERSHIP OF ROMAN CATHOLIC ORPHAN SCHOOL, AND CABINET MINUTE RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 25 August, 1886.

MEMORANDUM regarding question of ownership of Roman Catholic Orphan School. Submitted to Cabinet. A.R., 23/8/86.

CERTAIN difficulties having occurred in connection with the question of the ownership of the Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta, I have considered it advisable to submit to the Cabinet as concise a statement as possible of the matter, in explanation of the action I have been compelled to take in assertion of the rights of the Crown to the Orphanage.

I will be impossible, however, properly to understand the merits of the question, and the bearing of certain incidental circumstances in connection with it, without reviewing, at the same time, the early history of the kindred Institution established for the Protestant Orphan Children at Parramatta; and as this latter Institution was first established, certain particulars connected with it will form a suitable introduction to the whole matter.

From the documents and papers in possession of the Government relating to the subject, it would appear that an Orphan Institution was established in the early days of the Colony by some of the charitably disposed persons, in consequence of many children being left without relations or friends able to maintain and educate them, and the aid of the Government was solicited. The first support given by the Government towards this object was on the 15th August, 1803, when a grant of 12,300 acres of land, in the district of Cabramatta, was made to Mrs. A. J. King (wife of Governor King), Mrs. E. Paterson, the Rev. Samuel Marsden, Thomas Jamieson, John Harris, and John Palmer, Esquires, the then Committee for conducting a Female Orphan Institution of the settlements of New South Wales.

Another grant was made on 1st May, 1804, of 2 acres 17 roods, in the city of Sydney, at the corner of Hunter and George Streets. On the 10th August, 1806, a further grant was given of 280 acres, at Grose Farm, in the district of Petersham Hill. Buildings were erected, first at Grose Farm, and afterwards on the city allotment, and at each of these places the Institution was, at different times, carried on by the "Committee of Management." Some doubts appear to have been raised as to whether these grants were so technically worded as to convey legal estates for the benefit of the Institution; and an agreement was therefore entered into on the 27th day of May, 1823, by the Committee of Management, to reconvey to His Majesty the grants before-mentioned; and, on the 2nd August, 1826, an Act was passed into law, 7 George IV No. 4, under Governor Sir Thomas Brisbane, for vesting the Orphan School Estates in the Trustees of the Clergy and School Lands of New South Wales, and for duly governing the children at school and in apprenticeship. All committees or persons were also relieved from further responsibility upon the passing of their accounts up to the 31st December, 1823. * * * * *

The management and control of the Orphan Schools, from 2nd August, 1826, was placed under the Trustees of the Clergy and School Lands; but previous to this the Institution appears to have been maintained by private contributions and any benefits arising from the grants of land given by the Government. On the 4th July, 1834, an Act was passed, 5 William IV No. 3, proclaiming the Male and Female Orphan Schools as being maintained and supported by His Majesty's Government, power being also given to appoint trustees to apprentice the children under this Act. At the time the Orphan School was first established it appears the intention was to provide for female children only, but male children seem also to have been admitted. The orphans of soldiers, free people, children of immigrants or convicts, and children from the female factory were taken in, all denominations being educated in the one Institution.

No separate provision appears on the general Estimates of the Colony for these establishments until the year 1832, when £1,700 was voted for the Female and £1,300 for the Male Orphan School. The latter institution was established on the grant of land near Liverpool, and was carried on, first under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Cartwright, and afterwards under Lieut. Richard Sadleir, R.N., until the 17th April, 1850, when the Governor-General, Sir Charles Fitzroy, caused the boys all to be removed to Parramatta, and closed the school. From that time both males and females have been brought up in separate departments in the same Institution. * * * * A portion of the present building was erected in 1814, under Governor Macquarie, on the 60-acre grant at Arthur's Hill, which adjoins what was known as the old vineyard farm, but now called Subiaco. Additional grants were subsequently allotted, and there are at the present time 110 acres belonging to the Institution.

It is, however, useless to pursue this division of the matter further. From the foregoing summarised statement of the history of the Protestant Orphanage it will be observed that after grants had been made it was deemed necessary to provide an Act to remove all doubts on the subject, so that the legal estate in the lands granted should be held solely for the benefit of the Institution, and consequently form part of the State provision for the maintenance of the children therein.

Turning now to the history of the Roman Catholic Orphanage, we find that on July 3rd, 1836, a petition was presented to the Governor by the lay committee of the Roman Catholic church of St. Mary's, requesting that provision might be made for the support and education of the orphans of Catholic parents, and for other Catholic children without protectors, and more especially for the children of female convicts newly arrived in the Colony—of those who, in state of servitude, had children born to them; and of those who, on decease of their husbands, were returned to Government, and who, by these circumstances, were placed beyond the means of maintaining and educating their own offspring.

It would appear, however, that in 1837 a school for Roman Catholic destitute children was established under Archbishop Polding and several members of the Roman Catholic Church; and in consequence of the Petition already referred to, the first aid given by the Government—an amount of £600—was passed in the Appropriation Act for that year; and a similar grant was allowed each successive year until 1839, when it was raised to £1,000, and in 1840 to £1,500. The school was opened at Waverley House, Warorley, with only twelve or thirteen children, by a Miss Burke, who was appointed as matron of the establishment, but she resigned the charge after a short time to a Miss Smith, who also gave up the management, in February, 1838, when the appointment was conferred upon a Mrs. Martin, and she retained that position until 1844.

This Institution does not appear to have been styled as an Orphan School until that year, but orphan children of immigrants or passengers who died on the voyage to the Colony and the orphans of free people were received and maintained there.

Representations having been made to Sir George Gipps, the Governor of the Colony, by the heads of the Roman Catholic Church, he caused what is now a portion of the present Institution to be erected for a Roman Catholic Orphan School, and it was completed in the latter part of 1843; but some objections appear to have been raised to the building being handed over to the charge of the then Committee, who could only be appointed for apprenticing children from the Orphan School, under the Act 5 William IV No. 3; but upon the order of Sir George Gipps the key of the building was handed to Mrs. Martin, who took possession as matron of the establishment, and 113 children were removed from Waverley on the 8th March, 1844. From this time it appears to have been entirely supported by the Government in the same manner as the Protestant Orphan School, and the orphans of convicts and children from the Female Factory were then sent there. Mrs. Martin resigned her appointment in April, 1844, and from that time her successor appears to have been assisted by some of the Sisters of Charity, and in 1859 a number of the Sisters took up their abode in the Institution. There does not, however, appear to be any official record to show on what authority this was done, but, on the 1st April, 1859, one of the Sisters was officially appointed as matron of the establishment, and the offices of sub-matron and the two teachers were also filled by Nuns. Although the institution was from 1844 entirely supported by the public funds the management was assumed and carried on by a Committee constituted, for the time being, for that purpose; but these proceedings appear to have been altogether illegal, as, by the Act 5 William IV No. 3, their powers could only extend to the apprenticing of the children. Consequently, on the 24th June, 1867, by a Cabinet Minute of that date, which I shall hereafter refer to, the mode of management was altered, and the full control taken up by the Government. Children were admitted in the same manner as at the Protestant Orphanage, on the order of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, and recommendations for admissions were made through the Roman Catholic clergy; and from time to time gentlemen were appointed to act as a Committee to carry out the provisions of 5 William IV No. 3.

On the 5th February, 1849, the Colonial Secretary wrote to the Surveyor-General, transmitting a summary of the proceedings of the Executive Council on the subject of "additional ground required for the Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta," and requesting the Surveyor-General to cause the land to be marked out in accordance with the Council's advice.

The summary above referred to showed that at a meeting of the Executive Council, held on 19th December, 1848, His Excellency laid before the Council a plan of survey, submitted by the Surveyor-General, of land "proposed to be granted to the Trustees of the Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta, as a site for further buildings, and a garden and place of recreation for the children." His Excellency the Governor, after inspecting the ground, proposed a modification of the plan, so as to leave an open way along the banks of the river, and the Council thereupon advised that the existing line, as marked on the plan, should form the boundaries of the land "to be granted to the Trustees" for the purpose stated.

On 3rd September, 1849, Mr. Surveyor Burrowes forwarded to the Surveyor-General a plan and description of the land to be granted; and on 17th December, 1849, the Colonial Secretary notified to the Surveyor-General that His Excellency the Governor had been pleased to approve of certain selections of land for ecclesiastical and public purposes, among which was—

"No. 132. Three acres, three roods, and seventeen perches, site for Roman Catholic Orphan School, Parramatta."

From the area of this appropriation it appears that it included the original site, as well as the additional land mentioned in this statement.

Two years afterwards, viz., on 20th December, 1851, a letter was written from the Colonial Secretary's Office to "The Trustees of the Roman Catholic Orphan School, Parramatta," informing them that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, had been pleased to approve of "two additional portions of land adjoining the site of the Institution" * * * "being granted for the purpose of being used as a training ground in connection with the school." It was further intimated that instructions had been given for the measurement of this land prior to final approval.

On the 27th August, 1849, a letter was written from the Colonial Secretary's Office to the Vicar-General, stating that the Surveyor-General had reported that the surveyor who had been duly instructed to measure the land authorized for a Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta had been prevented by other duty and ill-health from doing so, and that his instructions would be immediately transferred to Assistant Surveyor Burrowes, who would be directed to expedite the matter as much as possible. A further letter was written on October 15th, 1849, stating that the land had been measured, and that when it was finally approved the description would be duly advertised for the preparation of the deed of grant. On the 14th December, 1849, a letter was written to Archbishop Polding, informing him that the Governor had approved of the appropriation of three acres three roods and seventeen perches of land to the Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta, inclusive of the additional portion of ground recently granted for the purpose, and requesting the usual application to be made for the title deeds, and that the names of the proposed trustees be at the same time furnished for approval.

On the 29th January, 1850, a letter was sent from the Colonial Secretary to Archbishop Polding, informing him that no application had been made for the deeds, and that the latter must necessarily await the application in question.

The next correspondence appears to have been in October, 1864, when the Roman Catholic Vicar-General submitted to the Minister for Lands the names of Trustees for the land granted for the Institution. Upon a personal inspection of the Register of Correspondence in the Lands Department, I found recorded an entry of an "Executive Council Minute approving of the appointment of Trustees" (No. 64-14,186).

These papers were forwarded to the Crown Solicitor on 3rd December, 1864, and do not appear to have been returned. The Under Secretary for Lands states, in letter of 25th ultimo (paper 85-18,325), that an unsuccessful application had been made to the Crown Solicitor for them.

On 14th July, 1865, the Roman Catholic Vicar-General addressed a letter to the Minister for Lands, pointing out, on behalf of the "Committee of Management of the Roman Catholic Orphan School," that it was very desirable to increase the area of the land dedicated as a farm for the school. This farm is on the Toongabbie Creek, and is distinct from and in a different position to the site of the Orphanage. The Vicar-General requested that allotments 100 and 101, adjoining those already granted, should be set apart for the purpose, regarding which a considerable amount of correspondence took place.

In the Government Gazette, May, 1864, and 6th December, 1867, certain lands therein specified were dedicated for the use of the Roman Catholic Orphan School. In October, 1884, inquiries appear to have been made by Messrs. Ellis & Makinson, solicitors, respecting the appropriation of land, and in reply they were informed, in letter of 2nd December, 1884, that "the deeds of grant for the land at Parramatta granted for a Roman Catholic Orphan School have not been prepared."

Various other letters from the Secretary of the Committee of the Orphan School were sent from time to time to the Colonial Secretary, Minister for Lands, and Crown Solicitor, in connection with applications for portions of land allotted for the use of the Institution; but no grant appears ever to have been issued in favour of the Institution.

From this statement it will be observed that the Roman Catholic Orphanage, as far as its history is concerned, stands on a very different footing from that of the Protestant Orphan School, and, from whatever cause it may have arisen, there can be no doubt that, while the lands connected with the Roman Catholic Orphanage were freely bestowed by the Government for the use of the inmates, there seems to have been a strange reluctance to consummate the bestowal by a deed of grant.

It would appear therefore that there is nothing in the correspondence relating to this Institution which would show that title deeds were at any time issued in connection with the appropriation of land for the purposes of the establishment. On the contrary, the papers afford unmistakable evidence that no such instruments were ever issued. There can be no doubt that if they had been issued they would have shown the nature of the trust, and limited the powers of the Trustees. There would not have been an absolute alienation of the property to the Roman Catholic Church, but the property would have been vested in Trustees for the specific purpose of the Institution. This is conclusively evident from the terms of the Crown Solicitor's letter of 6th January, 1865, respecting the application made for land to be used for agricultural purposes by the boys of the Orphan School, in which he states that he had been instructed by the Minister of Lands to prepare a grant of land, but that "as it is necessary that in the grant the trusts upon which the land is to be held should be set out," he desired to be favoured "with a statement of the way in which it is proposed the land shall be used." There is nothing to show that the information asked for in this communication was ever furnished; and in its absence deeds could not be issued.

It might be of advantage to compare the position of this Asylum with that of other Institutions, such for instance as the Protestant Orphan School, the Randwick Asylum, and the University. In all these cases Trustees were appointed by the Government, and lands vested in them to be held in trust for certain specified purposes. These Trustees, moreover, having been appointed by the Government, are subject to removal by the same power. It would be idle to say that in the event of these Institutions being no longer required the lands and buildings held under trust should not revert to the Crown, but become the property of the Trustees, who themselves only hold office at the will of the Government. To some extent also the cases of the late National Board of Education and the late Council of Education illustrate the position. Lands were vested in these bodies for educational purposes, but upon their abrogation the property so vested reverted to the Crown, and is now held by the Crown, under the direction, control, and authority of the Minister of Public Instruction for the time being.

When money was first granted for the maintenance of Roman Catholic destitute children, the Institution being then at Waverley, it was expressly stipulated that the Institution should be under Government control. On 25th March, 1840, the Colonial Secretary wrote as follows to Archbishop Polding:—"The increased sum for the maintenance of Roman Catholic destitute children having been granted by the Legislative Council on the express understanding that the establishment should be conducted under the immediate responsibility of the Government, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to request, with reference to a letter from the Rev. Mr. Ullathorne, of the 15th instant, showing the names of the children received into the establishment since the 1st January, that no more children may be admitted without an order obtained through the Colonial Secretary."

By the first section of the Act 5 William IV No. 3, passed in 1834, the Governor may authorise and empower any two or more fit and proper persons to bind any of the male or female children admitted into any Orphan School, or any other poor children as shall from time to time be sent out from any part of the United Kingdom, as apprentices to masters and mistresses approved of by His Excellency. And by the third section of the Act 8 Vic. No. 2 it is provided that any two Magistrates may apprentice orphan children in the room and stead of parents or guardians. The section runs on as follows:—"In case of of any such person receiving eleemosynary support in any public establishment in the said Colony it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons or any one or more of them who may have the control or inspection of the same to execute such indenture of apprenticeship in the room and stead of the parents of such persons. Provided that nothing herein contained shall alter the provisions of any Act now in force and specially providing for such cases."

J.H. Plunkett,
Attorney-
General.
Rev. Dr. Gregory.
Patrick Hill,
Colonial Surgeon.

In accordance with the provisions of these sections the persons named in the margin were appointed by the Governor "to have control and inspection (in compliance with the Act) of the Orphan School known as the Institution for Destitute Roman Catholic Children," and were authorised to bind and put to be apprentices any children admitted into the said Institution when they shall have respectively arrived at fit and proper ages." The notification of these appointments appeared in the Government Gazette of 14th March, 1845.

These persons were not appointed as in any way representatives of the Roman Catholic body, inasmuch as one of them, Mr. P. Hill, was a Protestant. They were apparently selected more on account of their social standing than from any other consideration, and were appointed simply to perform certain clearly specified duties. Their places, as they became vacant, were filled up in the same way until the appointment of the gentlemen who now fill the position. It is noteworthy that in the last instrument appointing these gentlemen, dated 17th November, 1862, the words "to have control and inspection of the Orphan School known as the Institution for Destitute Roman Catholic Children" are omitted expressly on the advice of the Attorney-General of the time being. They are appointed solely and exclusively to bind the children as apprentices under the Act 5 William IV No. 3, and they have no legal power whatsoever of interfering with the management of the Institution. The Committee were distinctly informed of this fact in a minute from Sir James Martin and Sir Henry Parkes, on their refusal upon one occasion to permit a Government Inspector of Schools to perform his duties at the Institution.

The Institution has throughout been maintained by public funds expended solely under authority of the Government, and under the supervision of its officers. In 1867 the Vicar-General was specifically informed by the Minister for Works that all expenditure on buildings was to be made through the Colonial Architect, and the correspondence includes several requests from the Vicar-General that the Architect might be instructed to carry out required works. A return furnished by the Colonial Architect last year shows that the amount of public funds expended by his Department from 1870 to May, 1885, in drainage works, additions, repairs, and furniture, was £13,251 7s. 5d. A statement was made in a communication, dated 8th June last, from the Archbishop and Clergy of the Diocese of Sydney, "that a very considerable sum of money subscribed by the Catholic body has been expended in the erection of buildings and other improvements of the said Orphanage." On the 12th of the same month, the then Minister of Public Instruction, Mr. W. J. Trickett, requested the Vicar-General to furnish information as to the amounts expended by the Roman Catholic Church, or Roman Catholic body, in connection with the Institution, and the purposes of the expenditure. The Vicar-General replied, on the 18th June, that due attention would be given to the matter, but the information asked for has never been furnished.

In addition to the expenditure on buildings, the Government has consistently reserved to itself the right of appointing all officers. At the present time there are employed a matron, sub-matron, two teachers, a clerk, and a drill-master, who have all been formally appointed to their several offices by the Governor and Executive Council, and their salaries have been paid by the Government. Up to June, 1885, the sum of £144,368 9s. 1d. had been paid by the Treasury on account of salaries and other services.

Children received into the Orphanage are admitted only on the authority of the Colonial Secretary, and cannot be removed therefrom without similar sanction.

The Institution has, moreover, been subjected to systematic inspection by the Inspector of Public Charities, who is charged with the duty of seeing that the material welfare of the children is properly attended to; and the schools connected with the establishment have been regularly visited and examined each year by the Inspectors under the Department of Public Instruction.

It would appear that the Church authorities were themselves aware that they had no good title to the premises, inasmuch as in May, 1884, Archbishop Moran requested that "as the said Orphanage can no longer be carried on as a Government Orphanage for Roman Catholic orphans it would be leased or handed over to a committee to administer it, free of all expense to the State, as an industrial and technical school for poor Roman Catholic children." On the 6th June following he was informed that the Government would have no objection to grant a yearly lease of the premises at the rate of £1,550 per annum until such time as the premises were required for public purposes. This offer has not been accepted.

I would now respectfully submit that all the matters which I have detailed in connection with the Roman Catholic Orphan School can lead to no other than the following conclusions:—

1. Even if a deed of grant had been issued it must have been given to the Committee, as Trustees for the Catholic Orphan School children, and not for the Roman Catholic body. This point is so apparent that it needs no detail of argument.
2. If a deed of grant had been so issued to the Committee as Trustees for such purpose, so soon as these Roman Catholic children were otherwise legally provided for by the State the trust would be revoked, and, as a matter of fact, would necessarily terminate.
3. It is true that the Committee of Management had assumed to themselves powers altogether outside the instruments by which they were appointed, and had undertaken duties for which they appear to have had no legal authority, until they were restrained by the Government. Their whole power, as far as it was legally conferred, was restricted to the duty of apprenticing children, under the Acts of Parliament already quoted, and they had clearly no other functions except quoad the trust, even if deeds of grants had been executed to them as Trustees.
4. By the provisions of the 105th section of the Crown Lands Act of 1884, the Crown has the power of resuming, rededicating, reserving, or exchanging any lands which come within the description mentioned in that section upon adopting the course of procedure therein set forth, and as the lands dedicated by the Government Gazette notices already referred to come within the provisions of this section they can be dealt with under it. Before the passing of this Act it was necessary to provide special legislation to meet cases of this kind, as was done in 1885 (45 Vic. No. 10), but this difficulty has been obviated by the section of the Act already quoted.

5. Seeing that no deeds of grant were issued, and that the purposes and functions of the Orphanage had been set aside by later legislation, and another mode of dealing with the children adopted by the State, which had all through been the sole providers for the maintenance of these children, all the land and other property connected with the Institution must necessarily remain in the possession of the Crown.

I would, however, suggest for the consideration of my honorable colleagues that, if it can be proved that any private funds have been expended on this Institution—in regard to which matter, as I have pointed out, questions have been asked but not responded to—the Government might, as an act of grace, consider the propriety of refunding such amounts.

ARTHUR RENWICK.

MINUTE by Minister for Public Instruction on Orphan Schools, Parramatta.

IN view of certain action which I have taken with regard to these Institutions, I desire to submit to the consideration of the Cabinet the course of procedure I have adopted.

In the memorandum I have already submitted to the Cabinet regarding the ownership of the Roman Catholic Orphan School I have stated the principal facts and arguments of the subject. As the authority of the Government has not been questioned by the Protestant Orphan School Committee or Trustees, the memorandum has especial reference to the Roman Catholic Orphan School, where alone the right of the Government to the land and buildings has been called in question, under circumstances I shall presently detail; and in the course of action I have considered it my duty to adopt I have been throughout governed by the matters referred to in the memorandum in question.

It having been notified to me, on 16th July last, that the amount provided in the Estimates for this year for the maintenance of the children in the Protestant and Roman Catholic Orphan Schools at Parramatta was exhausted, in view of the small number of children remaining in these Institutions (thirty-two in the Protestant and fifty in the Roman Catholic Orphan School), and the large staff of officials retained at the expense of the Government, I directed that the children remaining in both Institutions should be boarded out or apprenticed, in accordance with my predecessor's minute of 8th March, 1884, and that the officials should be informed of the early closing of the Institutions. These notices were sent simultaneously to both Orphanages, and, in accordance with the instructions conveyed therein, both establishments were emptied of their inmates, those of the Protestant Orphan School being apprenticed, and those of the Roman Catholic Orphan School boarded out (in accordance with law).

Notices were forwarded to the various officers and employes of both establishments that their services would not be required after 30th September proximo.

On Monday, 9th August, I received information that His Eminence Cardinal Moran had sent from a private Roman Catholic Institution at Manly certain children to the Roman Catholic Orphanage. I immediately caused a telegram to be sent to the matron, in these words:—

"It has been reported that some children have within the last few days been placed in the Roman Catholic Orphan School, Parramatta. Please state by telegraph if the report is correct."

To this telegram the matron furnished the following reply:—

"Yes; in obedience to the instructions of His Eminence Cardinal Moran, I have received six children into the Institution, not as State children, but to be otherwise supported."

In view of this admitted disobedience of instructions on the part of the matron, she was telegraphed to in the following terms:—

"You are reminded that you have received no authority from this Department to receive the children referred to in your telegram of yesterday's date into the Parramatta Roman Catholic Orphan School; and you are requested to observe the instructions on this subject communicated to the Chairman of the Committee of Management, in a letter from this Department dated 10th March, 1884, numbered 84/1,614. His Eminence Cardinal Moran has been requested to remove the children recently admitted into the Institution by you on his instructions."

Subsequently it was publicly announced that additional children had been received into the Orphanage at the instance of Cardinal Moran. Accordingly caused the following communication to be addressed to His Eminence:—

"My Lord Cardinal,

Department of Public Instruction, 10 August, 1886.

"I have the honor, by direction of the Minister of Public Instruction, to invite your attention to the admission, upon your instructions, of certain children into the Roman Catholic Orphan School at Parramatta, and to state that, as these children have been admitted to the Institution without the authority of the Government, they should be at once removed.

"2. The Minister also desires me to inform you that if you possess any documentary or other evidence to the title to the land upon which the buildings connected with the Institution are erected the Government will be glad to consider it when submitted for inspection.

"I have, &c.,

"E. JOHNSON, Under Secretary."

On the next day the Cardinal replied, to the effect that he had made application to the Minister for Lands for the deeds of the property granted to his predecessor, Archbishop Polding, for the training of Roman Catholic Orphans, and he submitted two reasons for the said application,—first, that the Government Vote in support of the Orphanage was exhausted, and he was desirous of continuing the work of the Orphanage in accordance with the original charitable purpose; second, that in 1849 his predecessor was informed by the Colonial Secretary of the appropriation of the land, and invited to make application for the deeds. The Cardinal added, that should the Government desire detailed information he would be happy to supply it.

As the information thus furnished was already in the possession of the Government, the Cardinal was so informed, and was asked to allow me to inspect any additional documentary evidence he might have in his possession. At the same time, I requested the Minister for Lands to stay any action with regard to the issue of the deeds.

The Cardinal's answer reached me on the following day, but contained no evidence of title beyond that given in the accompanying memorandum read to the Cabinet.

Cotemporary with the receipt of His Eminence's letter, the Press announced that he had visited the Orphanage, and made arrangements for its continuance under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Denomination.

Viewing these proceedings as an assumption of ownership which the Government could not recognise, I had no doubt as to the course of action I ought to take to uphold the rights of the Government to the property in question. I accordingly suspended the matron, called upon her to explain why she had violated the Minister's instructions, and sent an officer to take formal possession of the premises. At the same time I caused to be despatched a letter to the Cardinal, requiring him to remove the children from the Orphanage before noon on the following Monday, and affirming the land to be the property of the Crown.

The matron, having furnished an explanation of her conduct, I removed her suspension. As, however, her services were no longer required in connection with the Orphanage, I directed notice to be given to her, and also to the Matron of the Protestant Orphan School, that their employment under the Government would terminate on 30th September proximo. The Trustees of both Orphanages were apprised of the proceedings which had been taken in connection with the closing of those Institutions, and the discontinuance of the services of the employes therein.

The Acting Trustee of the Protestant Orphan School replied that, in view of the action thus taken by the Government, it was presumed that the purpose for which the Institution was created had been fulfilled, and that recent legislation made ample provision for children of the class benefited by the Orphan School. He expressed a hope, however, that the Government would deal liberally with the officers and servants recently employed in the Institution.

Under the circumstances now stated, and holding the opinions already expressed in my memorandum read to the Cabinet, the only other duties to be performed are to convey the best thanks of the Government to the Trustees of the Protestant Orphan School and the Committee of the Roman Catholic Orphan School for their valuable services in connection with those Institutions, and in the case of the Protestant Orphan School to ask for the return of the deeds of grant (if in their possession) issued to the Trustees.

I should add that the officer sent from this Department, as before stated, to take possession of the Roman Catholic Orphan School premises is still in charge.

ARTHUR RENWICK.

Submitted to Cabinet, together with memorandum as to ownership of Roman Catholic Orphan School.—ARTHUR RENWICK. Cabinet approves.—P.A.J., 24/8/86.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

VACCINATION.

(REPORT FOR 1883.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Board of Health, 13 April, 1885.

Herewith I have the honor to present the annual Report upon the vaccinations performed by Public Vaccinators in this Colony during the year 1883.

During this year there were vaccinated in the whole colony 896 persons. Of this total number 296, or 33.03 per cent., were vaccinated in Sydney and the suburbs; and 600, or 66.96 per cent., in the country districts.

Of the 296 vaccinated in Sydney 114, or 38.51 per cent., were under one year of age; 130, or 43.91 per cent., were from one to five years; 52, or 17.56 per cent., were from five to ten years. None were vaccinated above ten years.

Of the 600 vaccinated in the country districts 154, or 25.66 per cent., were under one year; 272, or 45.33 per cent., were from one to five years; 169, or 28.16 per cent., were from five to ten years; and 5, or .89 per cent., were above ten years.

From this analysis it appears that under the present voluntary system of vaccination most children are brought, both in Sydney and in the country, between the ages of one and five years; but whereas, in the metropolis, the number vaccinated at this period of life is nearly equal to that vaccinated during the first year of life, and while the number presented after the fifth year is comparatively small, in the country nearly one-half of the whole number vaccinated was brought between the first and fifth years, and the proportions brought under one year and above five years are respectively very much smaller and very much larger than in Sydney. In other words, although in Sydney there is delay in seeking vaccination among those who intend to have the operation performed, there is much greater delay in the country. In Sydney two-thirds of all the vaccinations done were put off until after the first year of life had elapsed; but in the country nearly three-fourths put it off until after the first year, and one-third of these or more than one-fourth of the whole waited until the tenth year had passed over.

Of the 896 persons reported to have been vaccinated, the operation was unsuccessful in 14 of them, or in 1.56 per cent. of the whole; these persons, therefore, remain unprotected from small-pox notwithstanding their willingness to be vaccinated. The per centage of failures met with in Sydney was 2.36; in the country, 1.16. Distributed under ages the per centages for Sydney were, under one year, 2.63; from one to five years, 2.30; from five to ten years, 1.92. In the country, under one year, .64; from one to five years, 1.10; from five to ten years, 1.76; above ten years, none.

I have again to draw attention to a remarkable falling off in the number of vaccinations, not only as compared with the average number performed in years when no present fear of small-pox has roused the population from their usual apathy, but as compared with the number for last year, small as that was. The following return, which I had the honor to lay before you in part attached to my last Report, shows that in what may be called quiescent years the average number of vaccinations performed annually has been 4,915; but for 1883 the absolute number was but 882, or considerably less than one-fifth of that average number.

RETURN showing the number of Births during the past twenty-three years, the number of Vaccinations performed by the Government Vaccinators in each year, and the proportion borne by the Vaccinations performed to the total Births for each year.

Year.	Births.	Vaccinations.	Percentage.	Year.	Births.	Vaccinations.	Percentage.

1867	18,317	6,931	38	1879	26,933	5,569	21

1870	19,648	7,084	36	1882	29,702	2,188	7
1871	20,143	6,482	32	1883	31,281	882	3
1872	20,250	17,665	87

I have now added to this return the percentage borne by the vaccinations performed in each year to the total births for each year, and I am thus able to show that a very much larger proportion of native-born children was vaccinated during the years 1861-72 than during the years 1873-83, the proportion of vaccinations to total births being for those two periods respectively 53.5 and 37.6 per cent. The falling off of the proportion vaccinated in 1882 was remarkable, but the farther reduction witnessed during 1883 is so extraordinary as to suggest some special cause for it, which should be ascertained and remedied. The proportion of vaccinations to total births, which, in no previous year had been less than 14 per cent., was in 1882 only 7 per cent.; but in 1883 it fell to a fraction below 3 per cent. There must therefore be at the present date an unusually large accumulation of unvaccinated infants among the population, who, in the event of an epidemic of small-pox would give rise to much sickness, would keep the disease alive, and would in all probability give rise to a large mortality.

It will of course be understood that these numbers, although they may be taken to form a sufficiently accurate comparison, are not of use in estimating the absolute numbers of vaccinated and unvaccinated native-born children at present living, the number of decedents being left out of account.

It may be thought at first sight that the very large number of persons vaccinated in 1881 may account for the diminution of the two ensuing years; but, although it explains the latter in small part, the following rough calculation shows that other causes must have been at work. Thus the births in 1881 were 28,993; the gross number vaccinated was 58,962; but of this total only 5,285 were under 1 year of age. Of these a proportion (which cannot be ascertained) was, of course, born in 1880; but let them be taken as being all born in 1881, in order to make sure that the result shall be below rather than above the truth. Then of the 28,993 births of 1881, 5,285 were vaccinated during the year, 3,341 died during the first year of life (but of these, too, some were born in 1880), and at the beginning of 1882 there remained alive and still unvaccinated 20,367. During 1882 about 1,000 more of these died, leaving at the close of that year about 19,000. In 1882 the births were 29,702, of which 3,897 (but of these, again, some were born in 1881) died during their first year of life, leaving at the close of that year about 25,605. Add this number to the unvaccinated residuum of children born in 1881, and the result is 44,605. But during 1882 1,247 children of all ages under five years were vaccinated; let them be assumed to have been all of two years or under, and let this number be subtracted from the total last given, and it appears that the year 1883 opened with an unvaccinated population of about 43,000, counting those under three years of age only.

The number of unvaccinated children existing among the population at the close of 1882 thus calculated, although it is by no means exact, is rather below the truth than above it; and to it must be added the proportion of children born during 1883, surviving and unvaccinated at the close of that year, (which brings the total of living unvaccinated children at that date, being only those of three years of age or less, up to about 70,000), before the dangers can be realized to which this country is exposed from epidemic small-pox.

I think it once more my duty to urge that some steps should be taken to improve the present system of public vaccination and to render it either more acceptable or more accessible to the public, pending the introduction of a compulsory Vaccination Act. It is quite evident from the large increase in the numbers of children that are presented for vaccination as soon as there is immediate danger from small-pox, and from the sudden reduction in the number presented that takes place as soon as the danger is removed, that the public not only have no objection to the operation but are to a large extent perfectly aware of the protection which, when properly done, it affords against this disease. But the figures which I now have the honour to lay before you show, too, that persons who do intend to have their children vaccinated put it off until the earlier years of life have passed over in a large proportion of cases. This procrastination is likely to frustrate the benevolent and economical intention of the Government in providing gratuitous vaccination; for upon the occurrence of an epidemic these unvaccinated children, who are, many of them, of school ages, and many more of the ages most obnoxious to small-pox, would serve to keep it alive long after it would have died out but for them. Vaccination, to be of the greatest practical use, should be done within the first year, and preferably within the first six months, of life.

As in previous years, vaccination has been carried on by private practitioners, but I have no reason to believe to any very large extent.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES K. MACKELLAR.

1885-6.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

VACCINATION.

(REPORT FOR 1884.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Medical Adviser to the Government to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Board of Health, 13 April, 1885.

I have the honor to present my annual Report upon the vaccinations performed by Public Vaccinators in New South Wales for the year 1884. Appended are the tables which show the numbers vaccinated in Sydney and its suburbs, and in the country districts respectively, with some other particulars of which the following statement is a brief summary:—

There were vaccinated in the whole Colony during 1884, 7,016 persons. Of this total number 627, or 8·93 per cent. were vaccinated in the metropolitan district; and 6,389, or 91·06 per cent., in the country districts. In the three previous years the proportion borne by the vaccinations done in Sydney to the total vaccinations for the year has been respectively for 1881, 14·06; for 1882, 16·89; and for 1883, 33·03 per cent.

TABLE 1.

The proportion borne by the vaccinations done in Sydney to the total number of vaccinations done in New South Wales for the years 1881-2-3-4.

1881.	1882.	1883.	1884.
14·06	16·89	33·03	8·93

Of the 627 vaccinated in Sydney, 141, or 22·64 per cent., were under one year of age; 341, or 54·38, were from one to five years; 145, or 23·12, were from five to ten years, and there were none above ten years.

Of the 6,389 vaccinated in the country districts, 1,090, or 17·06 per cent., were under one year of age; 2,657, or 41·58 per cent., were from one to five years; 2,518, or 39·41, were from five to ten years; and 124, or 1·94, were above ten years.

Of the 7,016 persons reported to have been vaccinated, the operation failed in 140, or 1·99 per cent., of the whole; and these 140 persons therefore remain unprotected. The percentage of failures met with in Sydney was ·63; in the country, 2·12. Distributed under ages the percentage of failures was for Sydney, under one year, ·70; from one to five years, ·15; from five to ten years, 1·37; for the country, under one year, 1·28; from one to five years, 1·73; from five to ten years, 2·93; above ten years, none.

A very much larger number of persons was vaccinated during last year than during either 1882 or 1883. This increase was due to the presence of small-pox in Sydney, which has always had a similar effect; but the number of persons frightened out of their usual indifference was much smaller than in any previous year, a point to which I shall have the honour to return later. The figures, however, show that vaccination was delayed in Sydney until the earlier years of life have passed over, in much the same proportion as last year; and the remark then made, that "there is much greater delay in the country districts" in seeking vaccination than in Sydney, is also supported by them. In dealing with this point last year I remarked that vaccination, in order to afford the greatest amount of practical benefit should be done during the first six months of life; and that the delay adverted to would have the effect in any epidemic which might arise of keeping the infection alive among the people, when, but for those neglected children, it would have been checked by the measures of isolation devised for that purpose. A practical illustration of this remark was afforded by the outbreak which occurred during the year. The first case was discovered August 23rd, and from that date to September 16th fourteen cases were removed and isolated from time to time. An interval of six weeks then ensued, and it was not unreasonably supposed that the disease had been really stamped out. But on October 25th the case of O.B., f., act. 30, was reported; she was isolated, together with two other households which she had visited after her symptoms of illness had declared themselves and which she had infected. One other case arose by direct infection from her, which was also isolated; and as far as O.B. is concerned there was an end to the mischief caused by her case. In endeavouring to ascertain the origin of her illness it was discovered that at the time she must have received the infection she was living as servant in a certain family; but she had given up her place five days before any symptoms of illness had declared themselves in her, and before she was capable of communicating it. This household was accordingly inspected, and it was found that no source of infection existed, or apparently had recently existed in the house; but it turned out subsequently that the only unvaccinated member of the family, J.C., m., aged ten months, although apparently well at the time of the visit of inspection, was in reality incubating small-pox. The first symptoms showed themselves three days later, on November 1st. The disease was not recognised as being small-pox by the doctor called in, and in consequence the other members of the family were allowed to continue their usual occupations without restriction. The result was as follows:—Two of the patient's sisters and a brother attended the Crown-street Public School, which is the largest in the Colony, during the whole of his illness, ceasing their attendance only on the twentieth day of it. These three children were in three different classes, and in each class cases of small-pox arose; namely, in one class two girls, in another (infants) a girl and a boy, and in a third one boy—were seized; and in addition a girl was attacked who was not in any of these classes, but who was exposed to contact with J.C.'s sisters during play-hours. The adult members of J.C.'s family carried the infection to five other households, a member of one of which fell sick while at Moss Vale, a hundred miles from Sydney, and there infected the resident whom she was visiting. Yet two other families were infected by this child, but under slightly different circumstances; one, residing at Leichhardt was infected through the father, who was summoned to J.C.'s to pursue his trade in the very room in which the latter lay sick; and two persons fell ill in the house next door to to J.C.'s. Thus from this single case were infected no less than thirteen distinct households, and nineteen different persons, of whom one died. Now before proceeding to point out what share procrastination of vaccination bore in the production of this group of cases, I will observe that invaluable as early and systematic isolation of cases of all the infectious fevers is in checking the spread of such fevers, this measure can never be entirely effectual alone, and must not in point of fact be expected to yield up more safety than it holds. Thus in the present instance it was concluded that the source from which both O.B. and J.C. were infected was one and equally accessible to both of them; but that source must have been a concealed case of small-pox, and therefore the isolation which might have prevented their infection from it had had no opportunity of coming into play, and to that extent failed of their use. So O.B. herself infected three households before the nature of her illness was recognized; and thus the same measure of isolation which, after the discovery of her case, prevented any farther spread of the infection either by her or by those whom she had already infected, cannot nevertheless be regarded as having been entirely successful from the point of view of the prevention of disease, for it could not be taken until much mischief had already been done, for want of information. Lastly, the case of J.C. was not seen to be small-pox by the doctor in attendance, and here again the opportunity of isolating it was not afforded until the spread of the disease by it had been such as to render discovery unavoidable. These cases then, although they doubtless show the great benefits which isolation confers upon the community (for after isolation had been effected no farther illness was caused by J.C., or by the families which he had already infected either) show also that isolation cannot be regarded as more than an adjuvant measure, a measure which is useful in limiting the spread of infectious disease, but which has no power whatever to stamp out infection. Now, if the disease under consideration were, for example, scarlet fever, we should be obliged to content ourselves with the protection which a carefully carried out scheme of reporting and isolation would afford, for no other protection against the spread of this disease is known besides this, except the all-important but not special measures of general hygiene. But it is not thus with small-pox. In vaccination and revaccination we have a safeguard against small-pox which renders man almost entirely indifferent to its contagion. Efficiently vaccinated and revaccinated persons do not catch small-pox. But, more than this, we do not know of the existence of the poison of this disease apart from the human body; and if the human race were made universally incapable of harbouring it—incapable of developing and multiplying it,—it would no longer exist. It is just this that efficient vaccination does; in it therefore we have much more than a means of checking the spread of small-pox, which, alone, isolation affords; we have a means of destroying the living cause of it itself. In order to abolish small-pox this means would have to be used throughout the world, but this is scarcely possible, and at present has not been effectually done even by a single nation. It is fortunate, therefore, that as far as the individual is concerned it does not matter whether small-pox exists or not as long as he is personally insusceptible to it. As far as the individual is concerned we can practically abolish this disease if he will allow us to take the necessary steps to do so. But as the public has not yet learned that the protective effect of a first vaccination wears away after the first years of life and must be renewed by a revaccination; and as there are many people also who do not know either the horrors of small-pox, or even that any protection against it is within their reach; and, besides this, as the operation to be effectual must be done in a particular way and with certain precautions, in the use of which all medical men are not equally skilful, there are always in every population a large proportion of persons who either through imperfect vaccination, or for want of revaccination, are almost as susceptible to small-pox as are those who have never been vaccinated at all. It is to prevent the spread of contagion among these people that isolation must be relied upon and always retained; but it must not be confounded with the means of stamping out the disease which vaccination, and vaccination alone, is able to afford. The case of O.B. is an example of the results of imperfect vaccination in childhood, and of the subsequent want of revaccination. Her arm showed but one small and very imperfect mark of vaccination done in infancy. For the first few years of life she was perhaps tolerably well protected; but that protection did not last long; and when thirty years later she caught small-pox she had just as severe an attack as she would have had if she had never been vaccinated at all. But had this primary vaccination been properly done, although it could not have been depended upon to save her from her present attack, yet it might have done so, and certainly instead of suffering from a degree of illness which was such as to nearly kill her, she would have had only a comparatively mild attack of modified small-pox. Having been lucky enough to escape infection during her earlier years, however, revaccination offered itself as a means of repairing the deficiencies of the original vaccination, and the effect which the lapse of time had had in diminishing such poor protection as she had received through it. Had she been revaccinated she would almost certainly have escaped her present illness.

The case of J.C. is an example of the results of that procrastination in seeking vaccination to which I am now more particularly drawing attention. Although he was ten months old he had not been vaccinated, and that not because his parents had any objection (for every other member of the large family to which he belonged had been well vaccinated), but merely because no convenient opportunity of having it done had been found. Had this child been vaccinated, however imperfectly, he would, at this early period of his life, have been perfectly safe from small-pox, just as his vaccinated brothers and sisters escaped, although they carried about them in their clothes enough contagion to infect their class-mates and other persons with whom they came in contact. But in consequence of his parent's procrastination he fell ill, and through him nineteen other persons, of whom one died; thirteen families and their houses had to be quarantined, and an expense to the Colony of not less than £ was thus caused. Although, however, it is strictly correct to say that but for this procrastination none of this suffering, inconvenience, and loss would have occurred, the amount would not, in all probability, have been nearly so great had not the parents of the six school children been chargeable with a similar procrastination. The ages of the latter ranged from seven to twelve years; and in their cases too it must be inferred that their parents had no objection to vaccination since in all of these families a majority at least had been done.

With regard to the proportion of failures to vaccinate which is shown in the above tables numbers 2, 3, and 4, I have to observe that, small as it appears, it is still higher than it need or should be, especially in the town districts. The following extract from "The Handbook of Vaccination," by the late Dr. Seaton, formerly an Inspector of Vaccinations under the Local Government Board (England), and more recently the Medical Officer to the Board, shows what the proportion of successes and failures should respectively be; but it must be noted that the same standard cannot be applied to such country places as those in which recourse must be had to preserved lymph. These, however, with proper arrangements, need be but few I believe even in this colony.

"Of

"Of 1,479 vaccinations performed by Marson at the Blackfriars station of the National Vaccine Establishment in 1863, the operation failed at a first attempt in three cases only; and on a recent visit to this station I found that of the last thousand cases that had been inspected, there had been only one failure. At the Birmingham station of the Establishment in 1864, out of considerably more than a thousand cases, there were three failures; and in 1865, out of 1068 inspected cases, there was no failure; and on a recent visit, out of the last thousand inspected cases, three only had failed. Mr. Shepherd, who has charge of the Bristol station of the Establishment, performed and inspected some years ago when the cases were much more numerous than at present, above 2,000 vaccinations without missing on one occasion; and Marson tells me the same thing happened to him once at the Small-pox Hospital, when the vaccinations at that institution (before the introduction of the present public system) amounted to some thousands a year."

This authority upon vaccination concludes that one failure in 150 cases is "the standard below which no vaccinator vaccinating from arm to arm has any right to be satisfied with his performances"; but he adds that an examination of the records of the Establishment for a large number of cases, and spread over a considerable time, showed that the failures were in practice only one in 170 cases.

Thus it appears that although the proportion of failures in Sydney was, for the present year, even a trifle below Seaton's lowest standard, yet with a due arrangement of seasons for vaccination, so that on each vaccinating day there should appear at the station a sufficient number of children vaccinated the previous week to admit of a good selection being made, it might be materially reduced; while the proportion of failures for last year is very much too high without any qualification. Farther, I have no means of ascertaining whether the failures are all that occurred at a first attempt, or whether they are failures after repeated attempts, a deficiency which in reality prevents any comparison being made between the standard described and the results here obtained, because that standard refers to success at first attempts only. The consequences of ultimate failure to vaccinate are of course liable to be the same as I have just described as following upon the delay in seeking vaccination. But the true significance of an undue proportion of failures is understood better when it is known that the uncertainty which leads to absolute failure in a few cases, always causes a large proportion of imperfect vaccinations which, while they are not to be called failures, yet afford only an imperfect protection, and that but for a short time. One of the most important requisites to vaccination is that the full effect to protect for the first period of life (or up to ten years of age) must be secured at the first attempt; for an imperfect and therefore only partially protective vaccination cannot be soon amended.

I had during the last year a limited opportunity of testing the truth of these remarks. When the six Crown-street scholars fell ill, I considered it necessary to inspect the rest of the school as to its general health and vaccination. I found a large proportion to be unvaccinated. I found that the scars in a rather considerable proportion that had been vaccinated, although they were such as showed that the vaccination had followed a normal course, were yet deficient either in clearness of characteristic, or in extent, being in the latter respect much below that which is necessary to afford good protection. And I found a third class of cases, in which the scars alleged to be scars of vaccination, and having no doubt resulted from that operation, were entirely devoid of characteristic, were not recognisable as vaccine scars, and were, therefore, either not protective at all, or were so only in a very slight and unascertainable degree. I am compelled by the results of this examination to conclude that very many of these children had not received that which in submitting themselves to vaccination they believed they were getting; and I need scarcely point out to you that this statement, in so far as it applies to children vaccinated at the public expense, shows that the Government does not get the amount of protection against illness and death from small-pox for which provision has been made by it. Without the opportunity of making a more detailed inquiry I cannot, of course, point out the reasons for this observed irregularity in the vaccinations performed; but I may remark that in performing a considerable number of vaccinations at the quarantine station during the year, with lymph which I had not gathered myself, I met with several cases which followed a markedly irregular course, which I was unable to ascribe to any personal peculiarity in the persons vaccinated.

The number of persons presenting themselves for vaccination during the past year, although, as usual when there is immediate danger from small-pox very much larger than in the quiescent years of recent date, scarcely exceeds the number done in quiescent years before 1870, and does not reach to double the average number of vaccinations performed in such years as deduced from the whole series since 1861, namely, 4,915. To this, doubtless, contributed the smoothness with which my arrangements for quarantining worked, and the consequent absence of alarming paragraphs from the newspapers. Much more, however, was probably due to the exceptionally mild form in which the disease appeared; so that, notwithstanding the tender age of nearly half the persons attacked and the absence of the mitigating effect of vaccination, in all of those only one of them died. Lest this fortunate mildness should be taken to show that small-pox is not the same dreadful disease here which it is seen to be in every other part of the world, and in every age—an opinion I have not infrequently heard expressed among the public, although the course of previous epidemics here proves it to be mistaken—and should so lead to even greater neglect of the effectual protector that we have in vaccination, I will observe that such mild outbreaks, although exceedingly rare, are not unknown elsewhere, and in places in which the disease usually exhibits its natural malignity. Had the disease shown only the same virulence that it showed here in 1881, when the mortality from it was 25 per cent., including all ages, more than two-thirds of the children attacked last year would have died. But if the absence of serious alarm led to the smallness of the numbers applying for vaccination in part, as compared with the numbers which have applied in previous outbreaks, I am not able to regard this as a satisfactory or sufficient explanation when the remarkably small returns of the two previous years are taken into consideration. I last year had the honour to show you that at its close there existed in the colony, alive and unvaccinated, a number of children under three years of age which could not be less, but was very probably more, than 70,000. At the present date there can scarcely be less than 100,000 children who are under four years (but chiefly under three years) who are still unvaccinated. It was not therefore any lack of children requiring vaccination that kept the total for last year so low.

In order to meet the sudden demand for lymph which the Vaccine Establishment of Sydney was not able to satisfy, considerable supplies of calf lymph were procured from Melbourne. This was not found to be satisfactory by the vaccinators to whom it was supplied. It frequently failed to take, and many complaints upon this score were received in my Department, through which the distribution was made. The lymph had doubtless been carefully cultivated and collected in Melbourne. The fault lay in the fact that calf-lymph when stored soon loses its activity. To be usefully distributed in New South Wales it should be cultivated in Sydney, and so sent out that it may be used within a very short time of its being gathered from the calf. It appears to me that the establishment of a calf-station here would probably lead to a larger number of applications for vaccination, a result of which I need not at this time farther urge the importance.

Towards the close of 1884 the Report of the Australasian Sanitary Conference which had met in Sydney at the invitation of this Government, was presented to Parliament. I have the honor to draw your attention to the resolution upon the subject of compulsory vaccination which was not only unanimously adopted by the Conference, but was supported in strong terms by the Delegate of each of the Governments represented at it. It runs as follows: "That in the opinion of this Conference the welfare of the whole group of Australasian colonies demands the enactment of compulsory vaccination laws in each Colony without any delay." Of the Australasian Colonies, Queensland and New South Wales are those alone which have no such compulsory Act. I believe I need now add nothing here to show the advisability of acting upon this opinion at the earliest possible date.

I have, &c.,
CHARLES K. MACKELLAR.

IMMIGRATION.

(REPORT FROM AGENT FOR 1885.)

Presented to Parliament by Command.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 28 February, 1886.

I have the honor to submit, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, my Report on Immigration for the year ending 31st December, 1885.

Nine steamers arrived with immigrants during the year. The total number who embarked at Plymouth was 5,567, consisting of 1,339 nominated in the Colony, and 4,228 selected by the Agent-General in Great Britain. During the voyage there occurred 13 births, making a total of 5,580 souls; of this number 5,554 were landed, there having occurred 26 deaths at sea, viz., 1 adult, and 25 infants of two years of age and under.

Two hundred and sixteen (216) married women, with their 510 children, coming to join their husbands, and sixteen hundred and forty-nine (1,649) single women were received at the Immigration Depot.

Of the 1,649 single women only 536 were willing to hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained employment at an average rate of wages of nearly 11s. per week; the remaining 1,113 were discharged, either to their relatives who had nominated them, or to other friends.

Many of the immigrants held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £9,211 13s. 6d.; this sum, however, is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any correct information.

The Appendices herewith annexed give full detailed information relative to immigration during the past year, viz. :—

- A.—General statistical information.
- B.—Nationality of immigrants.
- C.—Religious persuasions.
- D.—Educational attainments.
- E.—Trades and callings.
- F.—Distribution into country districts.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. WISE,

Agent for Immigration.

RAIT & GARDENER.

J. A. Beattie, Esq., to The Agent-General for New South Wales.

Sir,

Emigration Depôt, Plymouth, 7 September, 1885.

I have the honor to state that I have completed my medical examination of all the emigrants about to embark for Sydney on board s.s. "Aberdeen," and that the general health of the people appears excellent, no single case having presented such physical conditions as would demand rejection. The health of the single men and single women has been found exceptionally good; a few of the married couples and three of the children appear delicate—an infant especially I do not expect to survive the voyage.

The class of emigrants at present in the Depôt is a most eligible one; I do not remember having seen as respectable a collection here, orderly and well dressed, and comfortably fitted out.

I have, &c.,

J. A. BEATTIE.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 6 November, 1885.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 25th ultimo, of the s.s. "Aberdeen," from Plymouth, with immigrants, having left that port on the 8th September, 1885, thus completing the voyage in forty-seven days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. for the balance.

2. On arrival at Watson's Bay the steamer was inspected by the Government Medical Officer, and being found in first-class order, and free from disease, was granted pratique, and proceeded to her moorings in Neutral Bay.

The Board of Immigration inspected the steamer shortly after her arrival at Neutral Bay.

The accommodation for the emigrants was excellent, and in every way satisfactory throughout.

3. The immigrants consisted of 80 married couples, 133 single men, 180 single women, and 177 children.

Their nationality is noted in the margin.

Three men of the Soudan Contingent force were also provided passages by this steamer.

In addition to the sum of £92 paid by depositors in the Colony, a further sum of £1,706 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,798 paid by the immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Sydney Banks, amounting to a total of £1,525 19s. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants.

During the voyage there occurred two deaths of young children under two years of age, and two births.

5. On examination of the single women at the Depôt, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them.

6. The married women (with their children), who had come to join their husbands, and the single women were received into the Depôt, whence a large number were discharged on the same day to their husbands or friends, leaving fifty-nine for hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained engagements on the hiring day at an average rate of wages of 11s. per week.

7. Free-passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following:—

SUMMARY.

Why proceeding.	Married.	Children.	Single Men.	Single Women.

To or with friends	18	37	18	7

General total (257)	43	68	70	33

These proceeded to forty-three different localities. The balance of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, Dr. Beattie, appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently; he is therefore entitled to receive the gratuity of £350, as per minute of the Colonial Secretary, 18th July, 1884. Dr. Beattie is also entitled to receive a first-class return passage to England in one of the Orient line of steamers.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the matron, "Mrs. Egar, discharged her duties in the most efficient manner"; it is therefore recommended that, in addition to the promised gratuity of £40 for this her thirteenth voyage in charge of female immigrants, she should receive a further gratuity of £10, and that she be also provided with a second-class return passage in one of the Orient steamers.

Total, £70.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated July 22, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity, to the amount of £40, in the following manner:—Captain, £11; chief officer, £9; purser, £8; fourth officer, £4; baker, £2; assistant baker, £1 10s; cook, £2; assistant cook, £1 10s.; assistant steward, £1. Total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. William Wallis as the dispenser, of whom Dr. Beattie reports that he "discharged his duties satisfactorily"; he is therefore entitled to receive the sum of £20; also, to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the general health of the emigrants during the voyage was good, the only disease of a contagious nature being a few mild cases of chicken-pox amongst the children.

14. Dr. Beattie states that the water supplied during the voyage was plentiful and good.

I have, &c.,
SAUL SAMUEL.

Madam,

5, Westminster Chambers, London, S.W., 15 July, 1885.

You are hereby informed that I have appointed you to the office of matron of the s.s. "Belgie," to sail from Plymouth on or about the 27th instant, with emigrants for Sydney.

On that day you are to report your arrival at the depôt to the Emigration Officer of this Department, not afterwards absenting yourself from the building without previously obtaining his permission.

You will distinctly understand that you are the servant of the Government of New South Wales, and that you will be required to obey their authorized instructions only. Should any directions be conveyed to you by persons not in the service of the Government, you will bear in mind that you are not at liberty to act upon them, unless my sanction has been previously obtained thereto.

Your reports of the voyage must also be addressed exclusively to me, or to the Immigration Agent in Sydney.

These special instructions are given in order that there may be no doubt in regard to a proper performance of the duties required of you by this appointment, and that the authority of the Surgeon-superintendent may be exercised without question.

Your remuneration will consist of a free passage to Sydney and a gratuity of £40, payable in the Colony, provided your duties have been discharged to the satisfaction of the Government.

Printed instructions for your guidance are enclosed herewith.

You will be good enough to acknowledge the receipt of this appointment by return of post.

I am, &c.,
SAUL SAMUEL.

Plymouth, 30 July, 1885.

I HEREBY certify that I have put on board the s.s. "Belgie" 1,200 gallons of fresh water for use of emigrants and crew. (12,000.)

JOHN E. DAVIS.

Shaw, Savill, and Albion Company (Limited), London Agents, White Star Line of Steamers—Coal Certificate.

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that there are on board the s.s. "Belgie" at this moment 1,462 tons of coal, and that we are both of opinion that this amount, being replenished at the port of Island Teneriffe on the outward passage, is amply sufficient to carry us to Cape Town, with a good and sufficient margin remaining to attain that port in case of adverse wind.

We are also satisfied that the bunkers are sufficiently ventilated.

Gravesend, 28 July, 1885.

W. H. WALKER, Commander.
JOHN GRAHAM, Chief Engineer.

Sir,

Emigrants' Depôt, Plymouth, 29 July, 1885.

I have the honor to report that I have this day completed my inspection of the emigrants to embark by the s.s. "Belgie," and find them in a fit state of health to undertake the voyage, and to the best of my belief the adults are capable of earning their living on arrival in the Colony. The following cases have been deferred for a future ship, viz., Mrs. Stevens and child, the latter being not yet convalescent from measles, and George Richardson, a single man, suffering from the results of a strain.

I have, &c.,

L. R. HUXTABLE.

I have further the honor to state that I have, since completing my inspection, examined the families of Mrs. Garry (two children) and Mrs. Dickson (three children), left behind from the "Abergeldie," on account of whooping-cough, and that I consider them now in a condition to embark without risk to themselves or their fellow-passengers; also that Mrs. Lloyd's child has developed symptoms suggestive of some infectious fever in an early stage, and is considered unfit for embarkation.

L. R. HUXTABLE.

The Agent-General for New South Wales.

S.S. "Belgie," Plymouth, 30 July, 1885.

WE hereby certify that the condenser of the above steamer is in good order, and capable of distilling 2,800 gallons per diem.

JOHN GRAHAM, Chief Engineer.

WE hereby certify that the main and bilge pumps on board are in good and efficient condition.

W. H. WALKER, Master.
JOHN GRAHAM, Chief Engineer.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 29 September, 1885.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 12th instant, of the s.s. "Belgie" from Plymouth, with immigrants, having left that port on the 30th July, 1885, thus completing the voyage in forty-four days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. for the balance.

2. On arrival the steamer was inspected by the Government Medical Officer, and being found in first-class order, and free from disease, was granted a clearance, and proceeded to her moorings in Neutral Bay.

The Board of Immigration inspected the steamer shortly after her arrival at Neutral Bay. The accommodation for the immigrants was excellent throughout, and in every respect far above the average.

The electric-light was provided in every compartment occupied by the immigrants.

3. The immigrants consisted of 92 married couples, 148 single men, 211 single women, and 141 children. Their nationality is noted in the margin.

English 342
Scotch 110
Irish 128
Foreign 12

In addition to the sum of £115 paid by depositors in the Colony, a further sum of £1,433 was paid to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,548 paid by the immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £1,050 1s. 6d. This sum is irrespective of the Bank drafts held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants. Two births occurred, but there was no death during the voyage.

5. On examination of the single women at the Dépôt, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them.

6. The married women (with their children), who had come to join their husbands, and the single women were received into the Dépôt, whence a number were discharged on the same day to their husbands or friends, leaving ninety-six for hire as domestic servants. These readily obtained engagements on the hiring day at an average rate of wages of 11s. per week.

7. Free-passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following:—

SUMMARY.

Why proceeding.	Married.	Children.	Single Men.	Single Women.
Hired.....	5	9	30	3
To or with friends	2	7	5	23
Seeking employment in districts selected by themselves...	19	40	20	...
Total.....(189)	26	56	55	26

These proceeded to forty-one different localities. The balance of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, Dr. Huxtable, appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently. He is therefore entitled, under the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 2 July, 1884, to receive the gratuity of £320, being 10s. per head on a maximum of 700 immigrants, deduction being made of 5s. per head on 108 immigrants short of that number arrived. Dr. Huxtable is also entitled to receive a return passage to England.

9. I regret to report that the matron, Miss Chicken, has again failed to comply with instructions received at the time of her appointment by the Agent-General, in not having kept either a journal or a record of the materials issued to the female immigrants during the voyage. Miss Chicken states that she had commenced a journal, but it was washed overboard a fortnight after departure from England, as recorded by the Surgeon-superintendent in his journal of August 12th. She did not, however, take any steps to write a journal for the remaining four weeks of the voyage. This is the third time during the past two years that Miss Chicken has neglected to write a journal. She has been informed that in future she must comply with the regulations.

It is recommended that she receive the promised gratuity of £40, and that, in consideration of her having had the large number of 248 women and children under her management, and the Surgeon-superintendent having reported that "she discharged her duties admirably," a further gratuity of £10 be granted. Miss Chicken is also entitled to receive her return passage to London in one of the steamers of the Orient Company.

10. Other gratuities are payable, as follows:—To the schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; w.c. constable, £5; lamp-trimmer, £3; 4 married people's constables at £3—£12; 4 single men's constables at £3—£12; 6 single women's constables at £3—£18; 6 sub-matrons at £2—£12; and, on the special recommendation of the Surgeon-superintendent, 1 nurse, £5; 1 nurse, £3; and to a man who was incapacitated from work in consequence of a serious accident, £2. Total, £80.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated July 22, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the sum of £40 placed at their disposal in the following manner:—To the captain, £18; chief officer, £9; purser, £7; carpenter, £2; baker, £2; cook, £2. Total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. Frederick Johnston as the dispenser, of whom Dr. Huxtable reports that he discharged his duties satisfactorily; he is therefore entitled, as per letter of instructions from the Agent-General, to receive a gratuity of £35, also to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he elect to return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the general health of the emigrants during the voyage was good. Only one case of serious illness occurred during the voyage.

14. Dr. Huxtable states that the water supplied during the voyage was plentiful and good.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 22 December, 1885.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 6th instant, of the s.s. "Florida," from Plymouth, with 572 immigrants, having left that port on the 15th October, thus completing the voyage in fifty-two days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. for the balance.

2. On the morning after arrival at Watson's Bay the steamer was inspected by the Government Medical Officer, and being found in first-class order, and free from disease, was granted pratique, and proceeded to her moorings in Neutral Bay.

At the inspection by the Board of Immigration it was found that the accommodation for the emigrants was excellent, and in every way satisfactory.

3. The immigrants consisted of 60 married couples, 120 single men, 220 single women, and 112 children.

Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £231, deposited in the Colony, a further sum of £1,252 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,483 paid by the immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Sydney Banks, amounting to a total of £1,008 5s. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and of moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants.

Only one death, that of an infant, occurred during the voyage.

5. On examination of the single women at the Depôt, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them.

6. The married women (with their children), who had come to join their husbands, and the single women were received into the Depôt, whence a large number were discharged on the same day to their husbands or friends, leaving eighty-one for hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained engagements on the hiring day at an average rate of wages of 11s. 6d. per week.

7. Free-passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following:—

SUMMARY.

Hired	2	...	11	2
To or with friends	1	19	8	35
Seeking employment in districts selected by themselves...	28	42	30	...
General total (209)	31	61	49	37

These proceeded to thirty-nine different localities. The balance of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, R. D. M'Master, Esq., appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently; he is therefore entitled to receive the gratuity of £318, being 10s. per head on a maximum of 700 adults, less 5s. per head deducted for all under that number. Dr. M'Master is also entitled to receive a first-class return passage to England in one of the Orient line of steamers.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the matron, Mrs. Stephens, discharged her very onerous duties in a most efficient manner, having 250 women and children under her charge; it is therefore recommended that, in addition to the promised gratuity of £40 for this her seventh voyage in charge of female immigrants, she should receive a further gratuity of £10, and that she be also provided with a second-class return passage in one of the Orient steamers.

Total, £66.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated July 22, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity of £40 in the following manner:—To the captain, £12; chief officer, £9; purser, £8; fourth officer, £4; baker, £2 10s.; cook, £2 10s.; carpenter, £2. Total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. H. A. James as the dispenser, of whom Dr. M'Master reports that he discharged his duties satisfactorily, for a greater portion of the voyage, when he was in health, and therefore he recommends that he should receive the promised gratuity of £35; also, a second-class return passage to England. Dr. M'Master, however, reports that on account of the state of health of Mr. James he does not consider it advisable that he should be reappointed as the dispenser on any future occasion. This report of Dr. M'Master might be specially communicated to the Agent-General.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the general health of the emigrants during the voyage was good, there being only a few cases of diarrhoea and bronchitis.

14. Dr. M'Master states that the water supplied during the voyage was plentiful and good.

I have the honor to inform you that I have this day medically examined the emigrants proceeding in the s.s. "Parthia." I found them all suitable colonists and in a fit state of health to embark, with the exception of the following: Mary Griffiths and Martha Charlton, both suffering from skin skin affections, dangerous to the other emigrants; Harriett Gill, exhibiting well marked symptoms of measles. I consider however that after appropriate medical treatment these persons would be fit to undertake the voyage.

Plymouth, 29 November, 1885.

I HEREBY certify that I have put on board the s.s. "Parthia" 1,800 gallons of fresh water for use of emigrants and crew.

J. EDWARD DAVIS.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 15 February, 1886.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 13th January, of the steamer "Parthia," from Plymouth, with 704 immigrants, having left that port on 30th November last, thus completing the voyage in forty-four days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, £14 10s. for the next 200, and £14 for the balance.

2. Shortly after arrival at Watson's Bay the steamer was inspected by the Government Medical Officer, and on account of the prevalence of measles during the voyage the vessel was placed in quarantine. A number of the married people and children who were not considered convalescent were landed at the Quarantine Station, and were not finally released therefrom until the 5th instant. The steamer was subsequently thoroughly fumigated, and was released on Sunday, the 17th January. The Board of Immigration inspected the steamer the day after her arrival at Neutral Bay, and found that all arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the emigrants during the voyage had been made.

3. The immigrants consisted of 60 married couples, 159 single men, 325 single women, and 159 children.

Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £415, paid by depositors in the Colony, a further sum of £1,574 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,989 paid by the immigrants or by their friends towards their cost of passage.

English	499
Scotch	108

Total	763

Many held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to £759 7s. 6d. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any positive information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants. During the voyage there occurred three deaths of young children under 2 years of age; there were also two births.

5. On examination of the single women, married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them; on arrival of the remainder of the immigrants from the Quarantine Station they also were examined as to their treatment during the voyage; no complaints were made.

6. The married women (with their children), who had come to join their husbands, and the single women, were as usual received into the Depôt, whence a large number were discharged on the same day to their husbands or friends, leaving 119 for hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained engagements on the hiring day at an average rate of wages of 10s. 8d. per week.

7. Free-passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following

These proceeded to forty-five different localities. The remainder of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, John M'Donagh, Esq., appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently; he is therefore entitled, under the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 2nd July, 1884, to receive the gratuity of £365 15s., being 10s. per head on a maximum of 700 immigrants, with an additional 5s. on the extra number of 63 beyond the limit of 700. Dr. M'Donagh is also entitled to receive a first-class return passage to England in one of the Orient line of steamers.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the matron, Miss Jones, discharged her duties in the most efficient and satisfactory manner; it is therefore recommended that she receive the usual gratuity of £40; also an additional gratuity of £10, which under a special letter from the Agent-General, and upon the favorable report of the Surgeon-superintendent, it is recommended that she should receive, and that she be provided with a second-class return passage to London.

10. Other gratuities as per letter of instructions from the Agent-General are payable, as follows:—To the schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; w.-c. constable, £5; four married people's constables (each £2)—£8; seven single men constables (each £2)—£14; eight single women constables (each £3)—£24; seven sub-matrons (each £2)—£14; one lamp-trimmer, £3; one nurse, £3; one assistant nurse, £2; one assistant nurse, £1. Total, £82.

In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 22 July, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the amount of £40 placed at their disposal in the following manner:—To the captain, £18; chief officer, £7; purser, £5; storekeeper, £2; fourth officer, £2; cook, £2; cook's assistant, £1 10s.; baker, £1 10s.; baker's assistant, £1. Total, £40.

11. The Agent-General appointed a dispenser, of whom Dr. M'Donagh reports that he discharged his duties satisfactorily; he is therefore entitled to receive a gratuity of £30, and a second-class passage to England, should he return within three months from date of his arrival in Sydney.

12. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the health of the emigrants during the voyage was good.

The principal disease which occurred during the voyage was measles, thirty-nine cases having been under treatment.

13. Dr. M'Donagh states that the water supplied was plentiful and good.

5, Westminster Chambers, London, S.W., 5 February, 1886.

Messrs. Geo. Thompson & Co., 24, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

Sir,

Emigrants' Depôt, Plymouth, 22 February, 1886.

I have the honor to inform you that I have this day completed the medical examination of the emigrants approved by you for passages in s.s. "Aberdeen," and with the following exceptions I have found them in a satisfactory state of health, and apparently capable of earning their livelihood in the Colony of New South Wales, viz.:—First. The child of Charlotte Careless, exhibiting symptoms of whooping-cough, was immediately removed from Depôt with her mother. Second. The wife of Enoch Glover exhibited symptoms of pleuro-pneumonia with cardiac complications of a somewhat urgent character, and, having previously suffered from rheumatic fever, it was deemed advisable that she should (with her husband) be removed without delay to lodgings.

With reference to the present batch of emigrants, I have further the honor to invite your attention to the excessive number of children berthed, with their mothers, in the single women's compartment.

In my opinion this arrangement is extremely undesirable, owing to the obvious and serious risk which would result in the event (alway imminent) of an infectious outbreak during the voyage.

I understand this condition of affairs arises, in the present instance, from the large number of women (upwards of forty) nominated by their husbands in the Colony, and who have been granted permission to proceed to join their husbands.

I have, &c.,
J. A. BEATTIE,
Surgeon-superintendent.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 22 April, 1886.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 13th instant, of the steamer "Aberdeen," from Plymouth, with 670 immigrants, having left that port on 23rd February, thus completing the voyage in forty-eight days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. per head for the balance.

2. On arrival at Watson's Bay the steamer was inspected by the Government Medical Officer, and being found in first-class condition and free from disease, was at once granted pratique, and came up to the Company's moorings in Neutral Bay. The Board of Immigration inspected the steamer the day after her arrival at Neutral Bay, and found that all arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the immigrants during the voyage had been made.

3. The immigrants consisted of 60 married couples, 102 single men, 242 single women, and 206 children. Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £499, paid by depositors in the Colony, a further sum of £1,092 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,591 paid by the immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £562 17s. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any positive information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants. During the voyage there occurred one death of an infant and two births.

5. On examination of the single women at the Immigration Depôt, and the married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them.

6. The married women (with their children), who had come to join their husbands, and the single women, were as usual received into the Depôt, whence a large number were discharged the same day to their husbands or friends, leaving 61 for hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained engagements on the hiring day, at an average rate of wages of 11s. per week.

7. Free passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following

These proceeded to thirty-seven different localities. The remainder of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, Dr. Beattie, appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently; he is therefore entitled to receive the gratuity of £350, as per minute of the Colonial Secretary, 18th July, 1884. Dr. Beattie is also entitled to receive a first-class return passage to England in one of the Orient line of steamers.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the matron, Mrs. Eagar, "discharged her duties in the most efficient manner; and, in consideration of the exceptionally large number of single women, and married women with infants and small children on board, I recommend Mrs. Eagar for the largest gratuity the Board can allow."

It is therefore recommended that, in addition to the promised gratuity of £40 for this her fourteenth voyage in charge of female immigrants, she should receive a further gratuity of £15, and that she be also provided with a second-class return passage in one of the Orient steamers.

10. Other gratuities are payable as follows:—The schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; one w.c. constable, £5; lamp-trimmer, £3; three married people's constables, at £2—£6; three single men's constables, at £2—£6; five sub-matrons, at £2—£10; six single women's constables, at £3—£18; hospital nurse, £4. Total, £60.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated July 22nd, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity to the amount of £40 in the following manner:—Captain, £12; chief officer, £8; purser, £8; fourth officer, £3; baker, £2; baker's assistant, £1; steward, £2; cook, £2; cook's assistant, £1; condenser, £1. Total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. A. W. Dolan as the dispenser, of whom Dr. Beattie reports that he discharged his duties satisfactorily; he is therefore entitled to receive the sum of £20, also to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the general health of the emigrants during the voyage was good, the only disease of a contagious nature being one mild case of chicken-pox.

14. Dr. Beattie states that the water supplied during the voyage was plentiful and good.

JOHN E. DAVIS.

Sir,

Emigrants' Depot, Plymouth, 19 May, 1886.

I have the honor to inform you that I have this day completed the medical examination of the emigrants about to proceed by the s.s. "Port Victor." I found them all in good health, and in a fit state to undertake the voyage, with the following exceptions:—John Cochrane and family, and Ellen Maher and daughter, who consequently do not proceed by the ship.

I have also the honor to invite your attention to the fact that among the cases nominated in the colony there are several who, though not in actual bad health, are most undesirable subjects for a long sea voyage, on account of their advanced age. I refer to both men and women.

I have, &c.,

R. D. M'MASTER,

Surgeon-superintendent.

The Agent-General for New South Wales, London.

Messrs. Gellatly, Hankey, Sewell, & Co.

Dear Sirs,

Tank Factory, Millwall, London, E., 24 May, 1886.

We beg to certify that the forty-two 4½ cwt. 400-gallon tanks supplied you for the s.s. "Port Victor," on the 10th and 12th instant, have been properly tested, and are fit for any voyage.

We are, &c.,

BURNEY & CO.

Countersigned by ANDERSON, ANDERSON, & Co.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 26 July, 1886.

I have the honor to report the arrival on the 8th instant of the steamer "Port Victor," from Plymouth, with 644 immigrants, having left that port on the 2th May, thus completing the voyage in forty-nine days.

The contract price as per charter-party is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. per head for the remainder.

2. The vessel on arrival was in good order—the arrangements for the comfort of the immigrants were very satisfactory. The Health Officer boarded the ship, and having ascertained that no sickness had occurred during the voyage, immediately admitted her to pratique.

3. The immigrants consisted of 58 married couples, 123 single men, 221 single women, and 184 children. Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £750, paid by depositors in the colony, a further sum of £893 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,643 paid by the immigrants, or by their friends, towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £713 11s. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any positive information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants. During the voyage there occurred one death (of infant) and one birth.

5. On examination of the single women at the Immigration Depot, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, many complaints were made as to the bad quality of the bread and vegetables. Immediate inquiry was made relative to this very serious complaint. The Surgeon-superintendent stated that, on very many occasions, the bread was very bad, and was not eatable; that the weather during the whole of the voyage had been exceptionally tempestuous, and that during this frequent bad weather "the baker was not able to get his yeast to act properly;" that the bread was constantly spoiled by heavy rolling of the vessel, and by the sea being shipped into the galley. On each occasion that complaints were made, the captain had ordered extra oatmeal, rice, and biscuits, and the immigrants then appeared to be satisfied. The following is an extract from the Surgeon-superintendent's journal:—"There were some complaints, among married men, this morning, about 'their bread being sour.' I asked them to select one of their number to examine the bread, and the man selected accompanied me to the store-room and examined all the bread for to-day's issue. He was unable to find fault with any of the bread in the store-room."

6. The married women (with their children) who had come to join their husbands, and the single women, were as usual received into the Depot, whence a large number were discharged on the same day to their husbands, or to their friends who had sent for them, leaving fifty-four for hire as domestic servants. These readily obtained engagements on the hiring day, at an average rate of wages of 10s. 6d. per week.

7. Free passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following—

General total, 211	26	65	50	44

These proceeded to thirty-seven different localities. The remainder of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, Dr. M'Master, appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently. He is, therefore, entitled, under the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 2nd July, 1884, to receive the gratuity of £336, being 10s. per head on a maximum of 700 immigrants, deduction being made of 5s. per head on fifty-six immigrants short of that number. Dr. M'Master is also entitled to receive a return passage to England.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports, "that the matron, Mrs. Stevens, who had 221 women and 86 children under her supervision, discharged her duties in a most satisfactory manner, and fully deserves any acknowledgment the Board may think fit to make her." It is recommended that, in addition to the promised gratuity of £10, for this her eighth voyage in charge of female immigrants, she should receive a further gratuity of £15. She is also entitled to be provided with a second-class return passage to England.

10. Other gratuities are recommended for payment as follows:—The schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; w.c. constable, £5; lamp trimmer, £3; four m.p. constables (each £2), £8; five single women's constables (each £3), £15; three single men's constables (each £2), £6; four sub-matrons (each £2), £8; two sub-matrons (each £1), £2; nurse, £5; total, £60.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated July 22nd, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity to the amount of £40 in the following manner:—Captain, £14; chief officer, £9; purser, £5; baker, £2; carpenter, £3; cook, £2; storekeeper, £3; cook's assistant, £1; baker's assistant, £1; total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Dr. Bradford as the dispenser, of whom Dr. M'Master reports that he discharged his duties very satisfactorily. He is, therefore, entitled to receive the promised gratuity of £20; also, to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he elect to return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the health of the emigrants during the voyage was excellent.

14. Dr. M'Master states that the water supplied was plentiful and good.

GEORGE F. WISE,

The

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 30 June, 1886.

I have the honor to report the arrival, on the 4th instant, of the steamer "Energia" from Plymouth, with 623 immigrants, having left that Port on the 8th April, thus completing the voyage in fifty-seven days.

The contract price, as per charter-party, is at the rate £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. per head for the balance.

2. On arrival at Watson's Bay the steamer was inspected by the Government medical officer, and on account of the prevalence of measles during the voyage was placed in quarantine. A large number of the married people and children, who were not considered convalescent, were landed at the quarantine station and were not finally released until the 26th instant. The steamer was thoroughly fumigated and released from quarantine on the 8th instant.

The Board of Immigration inspected the steamer the day after her arrival at Neutral Bay. The general accommodation of the ship appeared to be good, excepting that the ventilation was defective in the after part of the single women's compartment; it was also found that the two hospitals, which it was necessary to use for measles cases, were very bad. The Surgeon-superintendent having been requested to report thereon stated that, "the deck forming the roof in each case was pierced by two davits, the aperture constantly admitting water, frequently wetting beds and keeping hospitals damp; the temporary skylight leaked, and water found its way along the alleyways, and lodged under the board forming the temporary floors; so that almost all through the voyage only the utmost urgency would have justified their use as hospitals, and there was unfortunately no alternative but to do so. The dispensary was in a similar situation and condition. Every effort was made to remedy these defects."

3. The Immigrants consisted of 52 married couples, 121 single men, 222 single women, and 176 children.

Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £533 paid by depositors in the colony, a further sum of £1,128 10s. was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,661 10s. paid by immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £784 4s. This sum is irrespective of Bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any positive information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the Immigrants.

During the voyage there occurred 2 deaths (of infants) and 1 birth.

5. On examination of the single women at the Immigration Dépôt, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, they generally expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage; very many complaints were however made as to the frequent bad quality of the bread. This caused great dissatisfaction; on inquiry it was found that the flour, which was packed in casks, was apparently of inferior quality, and became over-heated from excessive pressure. The tank flour, which was subsequently used, was somewhat better.

6. The married women (with their children) who had come to join their husbands, and the single women were as usual received into the dépôt, whence a large number were discharged on the same day to their husbands and friends, leaving 63 for hire as domestic servants; these readily obtained engagements on the hiring day, at an average rate of wages of 10s. 3d. per week; two professional cooks obtained exceptional wages, the one at £60 and the other at £53 per annum.

7. Free passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following—

SUMMARY.

Why proceeding.	Married.	Children.	Men.	Women.

To or with friends	15	52	20	33
Seeking employment in districts selected by themselves...	4	10	11
General total, 197	23	69	47	35

These proceeded to thirty-seven different localities. The remainder of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, Dr. Huxtable, appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently; he is therefore entitled, under the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 2nd July, 1884, to receive the gratuity of £330 15s., being 10s. per head on a maximum of 700 immigrants, deduction being made of 5s. per head on seventy-seven immigrants short of that number arrived. Dr. Huxtable is also entitled to receive a return passage to England.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the matron, Miss Chicken, who had the charge of 222 females under her supervision, discharged her duties excellently well, and fully deserves any acknowledgment the Board may think fit to make her; it is therefore recommended that, in addition to the promised gratuity of £40 for this her eighteenth voyage in charge of female immigrants, she should receive a further gratuity of £20; she is also entitled to be provided with a second-class return passage in one of the Orient steamers.

10. Other gratuities are payable as follows:—The schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; w.c. constable, £5; lamp-trimmer, £3; three m.p. constables (each £2), £6; six s.w. constables (each £3), £18; three s.n. constables (each £2), £6; six sub-matrons (each £2), £12; two nurses (each £5), £10.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 22 July, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity to the amount of £40 in the following manner:—Captain, £16; chief officer, £6; purser, £5; fourth officer, £2; baker, £2; carpenter, £2; cook, £3; storekeeper, £2; assistant cook, £2: £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. J. Robinson as dispenser, of whom Dr. Huxtable reports that he discharged his duties satisfactorily, and proved to be a most efficient officer. He is therefore entitled to receive the promised gratuity of £20, also to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the general health of the emigrants during the voyage was good, the only disease of a contagious nature being measles.

14. Dr. Huxtable states that the water supplied during the voyage was plentiful and good.

Sir, Emigration Depôt, Plymouth, 26 July, 1886.
I have the honor to report that I have completed my medical and general examination of the emigrants assembled at the Depôt for embarkation in the s.s. "Port Pirie," about to sail for Sydney, and I have found the physical state of the people satisfactory.

The selected cases appear to me very eligible in every respect as future Colonists.

I have found it necessary to reject a nominated family named in the margin, consisting of the mother and three children, for chicken-pox, the eldest child having just recovered, the eruption being in the maturation stage upon the second eldest, and the youngest most probably about to be inflicted with the same disease. I have also been obliged to detain a woman whose child is dangerously ill with fever and convulsions, and in quite an unfit condition to embark. With regard to the two brothers Middleton, suffering from permanent lameness, your despatching officer, Mr. Phillips, has, I understand, put you in possession of the facts of the case and received your permission conditionally that they may proceed with the other members of their family.

The two men in question are otherwise healthy and capable of earning a living in New South Wales.

I may be again permitted to refer with regret to the very large number of infants and small children among the people, and principally belonging to the nominated cases.

Sir,

Immigration Office, Sydney, 30 September, 1886.

I have the honor to report the arrival on the 17th instant of the steamer "Port Pirie," from Plymouth, with 712 immigrants, having left that port on the 27th July, thus completing the voyage in fifty-one days.

The contract price as per charter-party is at the rate of £15 per head for the first 400 adults, and £14 10s. per head for the remainder.

2. On arrival at Watson's Bay the Health Officer deemed it advisable that the vessel should be thoroughly fumigated before pratique was granted, a few cases of chicken-pock having occurred during the voyage.

3. The immigrants consisted of 61 married couples, 122 single men, 252 single women, and 216 children. Their nationality is noted in the margin.

In addition to the sum of £832, paid by depositors in the colony, a further sum of £880 was paid direct to the Agent-General in London, making a total of £1,712 paid by the immigrants or their friends towards their cost of passage.

Many of the immigrants held drafts on the Bank of New South Wales, amounting to a total of £349 5s. This sum is irrespective of bank drafts and moneys held by them, of which I was unable to obtain any positive information.

4. Hereto is annexed an abstract return of the disposal of the immigrants. During the voyage there occurred four deaths and three births.

5. On examination of the single women at the Immigration Depot, and of the married people and single men on board the steamer, all expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and with the sufficient quantity and good quality of the provisions issued to them.

6. The married women (with their children) who had come to join their husbands, and the single women, were as usual received into the Depot, whence a large number were immediately discharged to their husbands, or to their relatives who had sent for them, leaving seventy-one for hire as domestic servants. These readily obtained engagements at an average rate of wages of 10s. 6d. per week.

7. Free passes by rail and by steamer were issued to those who wished to avail themselves of this privilege, as shown in the following

These proceeded to forty-seven different localities. The remainder of the immigrants left the steamer without notifying their proposed destination.

8. The Surgeon-superintendent, J. A. Beattie, Esq., appears to have discharged his duties most efficiently. He is therefore entitled to receive the gratuity of £353, as per minute of the Colonial Secretary, 18th July, 1884. Dr. Beattie is also entitled to receive a first-class return passage to England in one of the Orient Line of steamers.

9. The Surgeon-superintendent reports, that the matron, Mrs. Egar, who had 252 women and 96 children under her supervision, "discharged her duties most conscientiously," and he suggests that, "in addition to the usual payment of £40, she should receive the largest extra gratuity that can be allowed." It is therefore recommended that Mrs. Egar should receive a further gratuity to the extent of £20. She is also entitled to be provided with a second-class return passage to England. Mrs. Egar has made fifteen voyages in charge of female immigrants, and has always given the greatest satisfaction.

10. Other gratuities are recommended for payment:—The schoolmaster, £5; hospital assistant, £3; lamp trimmer, £3; w.c. constable, £5; four m.p. constables (each £2), £8; three single men's constables (each £2), £6; six single women's constables (each £3), £18; five sub-matrons (each £2), £10; four nurses (each £2), £8: Total, £66.

11. In accordance with the minute of the Colonial Secretary, dated 22nd July, 1885, the Board of Immigration disbursed the extra gratuity to the amount of £40 in the following manner:—Captain, £10; chief officer, £9; purser, £9; fourth officer, £4; baker, £2; baker's assistant, £1; cook, £2; cook's assistant, £1; donkeyman, £1; cook's mate, £1: Total, £40.

12. The Agent-General appointed Mr. James P. Lawlor as the dispenser, of whom Dr. Beattie reports that he discharged his duties very satisfactorily. He is therefore entitled to receive the promised gratuity of £20; also, to be provided with a second-class passage to England, should he elect to return within three months from the date of his arrival in Sydney.

13. The Surgeon-superintendent reports that the health of the emigrants during the voyage was excellent; a few cases of chicken-pock however occurred.

14. Dr. Beattie reports that the water supplied was plentiful and good.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

IMMIGRATION.

(REPORT OF AGENT FOR IMMIGRATION ON COMPLAINT AS TO MANNER OF HIRING IMMIGRANTS PER S.S. "PARTHA.")

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 27 January, 1886.

EXTRACT from Sydney Morning Herald of 21st January, 1886.

THE proceedings at the Immigration Depot yesterday were hardly creditable, and they indicate that the Department over which Mr. Wise presides is capable of great improvement. According to the report, it would seem that the immigration officers expected they would be discreditable. A day or two ago Lady Carrington expressed her intention of being present at the hiring. It is alleged that an official tried to dissuade her from her purpose; but she did not permit herself to be influenced by his arguments. On Tuesday evening, however, another official—it is said Mr. Wise himself—went to Government House, and made representations which caused Lady Carrington not to go to the Depot yesterday. Her Ladyship was given to understand that she would be shocked by what she would witness. A more severe censure upon the method of hiring at the Depot could not have been uttered. As the representations which induced Lady Carrington to abandon her purpose of being present at the Depot were made either by Mr. Wise himself, or by a person acting under instructions, it is evident that the Immigration Agent regards the ladies who present themselves at the barracks to obtain servants as promoters of disorder. It is inconceivable that he would state that his own arrangements were so confused that they must inevitably produce a scene that would deeply distress her Ladyship. Will the ladies endure this reflection upon themselves? Will they tolerate the insinuation that when they assemble at the Immigration Depot to hire servants they deport themselves in a manner that would shock the wife of the Governor if she happened to be a witness of their conduct? One of the lady applicants took a different view of the case, and astonished the Immigration Agent by delivering a speech in which she informed him that all his arrangements for the hiring were extremely unsatisfactory, and that his treatment of the people scandalous. With the former part of this statement all readers of the report of the proceedings, printed elsewhere, are likely to agree. We say nothing of the postponement of the hiring, as the Immigration Agent was not responsible for that; but what is to be said of the method of giving passes, and the arrangements for signing agreements? The Colonial Secretary should take the matter in hand. Complaints have been frequently made of the confusion and of the irritating delays that take place on hiring days at the Immigration Depot. These troubles have now reached a climax. If the officials are to blame they should be brought to account; if, on the contrary, the cause is the unsuitableness of the building for conducting hiring operations, a better place should be obtained, but whatever be the cause it should be discovered and removed, so that there may not be a repetition of what occurred yesterday.

The Agent for Immigration for report.—C.W., B.C., 21/1/86. Report herewith forwarded.—
—G.F.W. Principal Under Secretary, B.C., 21/1/86.

The Agent for Immigration to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

Immigration Depot, Sydney, 21 January, 1886.

Referring to the article which appeared in this morning's issue of the Sydney Morning Herald, forwarded to me for report, and to other articles which have appeared within the last few days in daily papers commenting upon certain arrangements of this department, I have the honor to state that the steamer "Parthia," with 764 immigrants, was quarantined on arrival, and was only released late on Saturday evening.

I boarded her on Sunday for the purpose of making special arrangements for the holding of the usual meeting of the Board of Immigration at 9-30 on the following morning.

The Board met as arranged, and commenced their examination at 10 o'clock. At 11-30 His Excellency the Governor and Lady Carrington came on board for the purpose of inspecting the ship and immigrants, and the Board proceeded in their presence with the examination of the single women. These, to the number of 287, were landed and forwarded to the depot immediately on the conclusion of the examination, and at the same time the immigrants were informed they might land, or see their friends on board; two steamers were alongside for the accommodation of those who wished to go ashore. I mention this in contradiction of the statement published that "fifty of the male immigrants, married and single men, were engaged to proceed to town before the main body of the passengers were allowed ashore."

The 287 single women were received at the depôt, and those of them who had been nominated here, to the number of ninety-one, left that afternoon to join their friends.

Having only two days in which to disembark the immigrants, and the attendant enormous quantity of luggage, in order to prevent demurrage, which would have been upwards of £50 per day, every possible exertion was made to accomplish this object, and, by providing extra steamers for landing the luggage and placing it in a store at the Circular Quay, the ship was cleared on Tuesday afternoon. Lady Carrington attended a Protestant service held at the depôt by the Rev. Mr. Langley on Tuesday morning, and also visited the rooms set apart for the Roman Catholic immigrants, intimating, when about to leave, that probably she would attend the hiring of the single women on the following day. I pointed out that, as there would probably be as usual a large crowd at the hiring-room, Lady Carrington would, if she attended the hiring, be subjected to very considerable personal inconvenience in consequence of the overcrowding. The assertion that "I, or some person acting under my instructions, went to Government House on Tuesday evening for the purpose of dissuading Lady Carrington from coming to the depôt on the following morning," is not correct; but I did see Lord Carrington that evening at Manly, and in reply to a question from him on the matter stated what I have above mentioned, namely, that Lady Carrington would very probably be subjected to personal inconvenience if she attended the hiring.

The result of the hiring was as I had anticipated, there being 120 women for hire, and between 200 and 300 applicants for them.

The accommodation at my disposal, of course, is not nearly sufficient for so large a number of people, and the pressure on this occasion was very much felt, notwithstanding the fact that through the good management of the Matron (Mrs. Hicks) an extra room was obtained.

The lady applicant, who delivered a speech, stated amongst other things that Mrs. Hicks had previously to the hiring taking place sent a girl out of the building to a friend. This was immediately contradicted by Mrs. Hicks, who was supported in her version of the affair by Dr. Rowling, of Parramatta. The circumstances were simply these: A girl who arrived by a previous ship called on Mrs. Hicks the day before the hiring day, and as she was in want of a situation she was advised to go to a lady whom Mrs. Hicks knew to be in want of a servant.

I undertake personally the issuing of orders for admission to the hiring-room. I consider that I am to some extent personally responsible for everybody admitted, which responsibility I could not delegate to any other person, as I find myself frequently compelled to prohibit the admittance of persons who have no right to enter the room.

The Government have always held that no female immigrants should be allowed to engage from the depôt to an hotel or public-house, and of course I have obeyed these instructions.

The advertised time for the hiring is 12 o'clock. If ladies come, as they do at 9 o'clock, I cannot see how I am to be held accountable for their having to wait three hours before the hiring can be allowed to commence. In the present instance, a case of measles having developed itself on Tuesday night at the depôt, I immediately informed the Health Officer. Dr. Ashburton Thompson at once examined the patient, and other female immigrants, and handed to me the herewith annexed communication directing me to "delay the hiring until the afternoon or until such time as the patients could be removed from the building." This was at 11.30 on Wednesday morning, and the hiring was to have commenced within half-an-hour, I immediately informed those present of the directions I had received from the Health Officer, and announced that the hiring was consequently postponed until 3 o'clock.

The statement published that the ladies were subjected to unnecessary discomfort in being kept waiting for hours before the postponement was announced is therefore absolutely incorrect.

The patients were removed about half-past 2 o'clock, and the hiring was conducted as usual,—105 servants being hired within two hours.

As to the statement in the article sent for my report, that "complaints have been frequently made of the confusion and irritating delays that take place on hiring days at the Immigration Depôt," my only reply is that where there are upwards of 100 girls to be hired, and more than 200 ladies anxious to hire these immigrants, as in the present case, all clamorous for immediate attention, the confusion must necessarily be very great.

Four clerks are occupied in the hiring-room making out agreements, passes, and orders for departure, and generally facilitating the hiring, whilst three men are fully engaged in despatching the immigrants and their luggage, without any unnecessary delay.

The Matron, Mrs. Hicks, during the whole of this time is most busily engaged in the hiring-room rendering every possible assistance to the ladies, almost all of whom apply to her personally to find servants; and in protecting the interests of the girls themselves.

Through the indefatigable exertions of Mrs. Hicks both the ladies and the girls are generally very well satisfied with the result.

When more suitable premises are obtained the inconvenience hitherto created will no longer exist, and as I understand it is in contemplation very shortly to remove the inmates of the Hyde Park Asylum to Newington, abundant space will then be afforded for the hiring of the single women.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. WISE,
Agent for Immigration.

APPENDIX A.

Sir,

Health Department, 20 January, 1886.

I have the honor to request that you will allow no person to leave the Depôt, and that you will defer the hiring until 3 p.m., this afternoon, or until such time as the persons suffering from measles, and now in the immigration Depôt, shall have been removed to Quarantine.

I have, &c.,

J. ASHBURTON THOMPSON,
Chief Medical Inspector, Board of Health.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

LOCAL OPTION VOTING.
(RESULT OF VOTE TAKEN IN METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 15 April, 1886.

The Inspector-General of Police to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Police Department, Inspector-General's Office, Sydney, 11 January, 1886.

I have the honor to submit herewith, for the information of the Colonial Secretary and transmission to the Minister of Justice, a report received from Sub-Inspector Lenthall, District Inspector for the Metropolitan District under the Licensing Act, respecting the Local Option Vote taken at the last municipal election, the result of which was notified in the Government Gazette of the 9th ultimo, No. 596.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND FOSBERY,

Inspector-General of Police.

The Minister of Justice.—JOHN R., 22/1/86. The Under Secretary of Justice, B.C., 23/1/86.—C.W. Seen.—JOHN R., 16/2/86.

Mr. District Inspector Lenthall to Mr. Superintendent Read.

Sir, Woolloomooloo Police Station, Sydney, 11 January, 1886.

Referring to my previous Report, dated 27th April last, respecting the result of the Local Option Vote taken in the Suburban Municipalities, I do myself the honor now to submit a similar return of the result of the Local Option Vote taken in the City of Sydney at the last municipal election, which was notified in the Government Gazette, No. 596, dated 9th December last, and will remain in force for three years from that date.

In Phillip Ward only the vote resulted in the affirmative for an increase of new licenses, by but a small majority over the eleven-twentieths required by the Act to carry a negative vote.

It will be seen that the number of individual voters on the citizens' list was 7,963. This number, I would point out, does not include all the residents or householders, but only the owners of property or persons who pay the city rates direct, and in many cases those persons have a separate vote in more than one ward, so that the result of the vote can only be considered mainly as the expression of opinion of property-holders, and not that of the general inhabitants.

Bourke, Cook, Fitzroy, and Phillip Wards were the only ones in which contested elections occurred. In the other wards the same amount of interest does not seem to have been taken in voting.

The whole of the votes polled amount to about 39 per cent. of the number on the lists, which is 17 per cent. more than the result in the suburbs.

In 1882, when the last vote was taken, there were in the city 528 public-houses. This year there are 493, showing a decrease of thirty-five, caused principally by the sites being used for other purposes.

I have, &c.,

W. E. LENTHALL, Sub-Inspector,
District Inspector, Metropolitan District.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

LOCAL OPTION VOTING.

(RESULT OF VOTE TAKEN IN METROPOLITAN SUBURBAN MUNICIPALITIES.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 15 April, 1886.

Mr. District Inspector Lenthall to Mr. Superintendent Read.

Sir,

Woolloomooloo Police Station, Sydney, 27 April, 1885.

I do myself the honor to forward herewith a comparative return showing the result of the Local Option Vote taken in the Suburban Municipalities, within the Metropolitan Licensing District, during the aldermanic elections in February last. I would have forwarded it sooner, but it has taken me a long time to collect the necessary information. In the first column is given the actual number of votes on the Municipal Lists at the time the vote was taken, which information has been very kindly supplied me by several Council Clerks. The result of the voting has been taken from the Government Gazette, and the number of public-houses in each Ward has been furnished by the officers of police in charge of Divisions.

The number of voters on the list was 33,617, of whom only 7,524 voted under Division A and 7,452 under Division B, which result, omitting fractions, is about 22 per cent. Out of 73 elections, in only 11 cases in Division A and 10 cases in Division B were the majorities in the affirmative.

The number of public-houses at present in the Metropolitan District, according to my quarterly report, filed on the 4th instant, is 820. The number in the Suburban Municipalities is 298, leaving 522 for the City and places not yet incorporated within the Metropolitan District.

I reported, on the 8th August, 1883, that no great interest appeared to be taken by the public in the matter of local option, and on the present occasion my former opinion is not in any way altered. In some places, where no aldermanic contest occurred, the vote seems to have been almost solely confined to the officers employed in taking it.

The local option vote for the City of Sydney will not be taken until next December; and, as I have already reported that, owing to an omission in the Licensing Act, the vote has lapsed, the three years from the date of the Gazette notification (21st February, 1882) having expired and no provision made for its continuance in the meantime.

I have, &c.,

W. E. LENTHALL,
District Inspector, Metropolitan District.

Unto the Honorable the Speaker and the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of New South Wales,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH :—

That your Petitioners are deeply impressed by the evils resulting from the sale of strong drink, and the necessity of bringing the drink traffic under further legislation.

Your Petitioners consider that the principle of local option should be extended so as to enable the residents of each district to decide whether they will have any public-houses or not.

PETITION AGAINST EXTENSION OF—RESIDENTS OF SYDNEY AND SUBURBS, AND NEWCASTLE AND SUBURBS.

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 20 April, 1886.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned,—

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

That your Petitioners would respectfully desire to direct your most earnest and serious attention to the fact that the extension of the principle of local option to the renewals of publicans' licenses will entail very great injustice to a large section of the community.

We therefore respectfully desire to urge upon your Honorable House the truth of our Petition, and pray that you will, in your wisdom, decline to accede to the extension of the said principle of local option to the renewal of licenses.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SALE OF INTOXICATING DRINKS AT RAILWAY
REFRESHMENT ROOMS.

(PETITION AGAINST—WOMEN OF BATHURST AND ITS VICINITY.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 28 January, 1886.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned women of Bathurst and its immediate vicinity,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That your Petitioners pray your Honorable House to take into your consideration the very serious danger to the lives of passengers on the Government Railways, which springs from the drinking of alcoholic beverages at many of the stations by the men in charge of the trains. They have themselves not unfrequently seen and felt the danger resulting from the practice in question. Guards and other officers, on whose clear vision and cool judgment so much depends are, it is believed, too often muddled and confused by the action on their brains of these drinks.

Your Petitioners very earnestly and seriously submit that it is not when men are drunk the danger begins. It is often the one glass which unfits for close and accurate observation, and makes men careless and reckless.

The testimony of Railway Directors and Managers in England is clear, that facilities to obtain these drinks by men in charge of trains is fraught with very grave danger to life and property—hence very stringent prohibitory rules have been made on English Railways.

Your Petitioners therefore pray your Honorable House to take steps to put a stop to the sale of intoxicating drinks at the refreshment bars on the Railways of the Colony, so that the temptation to drinking may be removed from the guards, engine-drivers, and others in charge of passenger trains, that thus the lives of the travelling public may be rendered more secure.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

“Victoria Park Hotel,” Darlington.

MEMO re certificate granted by Metropolitan Central Licensing Court for renewal of John Cunneen’s Publican’s License.

The certificate enclosed, which has been granted by the Licensing Court, Sydney, on the 27th July ultimo, authorises the issue of the renewal of a publican’s license to John Cunneen for the “Victoria Park Hotel,” Darlington, from 8th January, 1886, to 7th January, 1887.

This certificate has been presented at the Treasury for the issue of a license thereon, but exception is taken, and this office declines to act upon it unless directed to do so by the Department of Justice, on the ground that it has been illegally granted by reason of the licensee not having applied for his certificate of renewal within the currency of the license which was in force only up to the 7th January last.

Perhaps under very exceptional circumstances there might be some reason for entertaining an application for renewal if applied for within a very short time after expiry of license, but I think there is no law even for this. In the present case, however, many months had been allowed to elapse before applying. And it is contended that Mr. Cunneen’s proper and legal course was to apply to the Court as for a new license, and at a quarterly meeting—meantime the Police closing the house.

There is great excuse for Mr. Cunneen, who appears to have been misled by the Central Licensing Court having by some extraordinary manner, on the 27th January, 1886, transferred to him a license which in reality did not exist at the time, having expired some twenty days before, but this fact in no way whatever justifies the gross negligence shown by the Police in allowing the house to be kept trading for so many months even up to the present time without a license. All through the correspondence herewith will be found statements made by officers of police which in no way can be accepted in justification of their remissness, and for the best of reasons that to prevent any possible mistake the Treasury for years past, at the instigation of the Department of the Inspector-General, publishes monthly in the Government Gazette the fullest particulars of all licenses issued, and giving the period the licenses have to run, and this is done solely for the protection of the Revenue, and the guidance of the Police, and at some expense and loss of time, but if, as shown in this case and others which have occurred, the publication is not made use of by the Police, and therefore not required, it had better be discontinued. [See copy Gazette notice, dated 27th February, 1885, in respect to Cunneen’s license, then standing in the name of J. D. Hallinan, in whose name it was issued.]

Mr. Cunneen paid to Suspense Account, on the 14th July ultimo, the sum of £30, which is intended as license fee, and I shall be glad to receive the directions of the Minister of Justice as to what I am further to do in the matter.

LICENSING ACT OF 1882.

Certificate to authorize the issue of the renewal of a Publican's License.

NEW SOUTH WALES,
to wit,

I, THE undersigned, being the Chairman of the Licensing Court holden at Central Police Court, Sydney, on the 27th July, 1886, the requisite notice of application for this certificate having been duly given and the applicant having produced his license authorizing him to sell liquor on premises known as the "Victoria Park Hotel," situate at Darlington, in the said Licensing District, for and during the year ending the 7th day of January, 1886, do hereby authorize the issue of a renewal of the said license to John Cunneen.

Given under my hand and seal, the 27th day of July, 1886.

T. K. ABBOTT, S.M.,
Chairman.

[Extract from Government Gazette.]

The Treasury, New South Wales, 27 February, 1886.

The following Return of Publicans' Licenses which have been issued from the 1st to 31st January, 1885, upon certificates granted under the Licensing Acts of 1882-1883, is published for general information.

G. EAGAR,

Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Name of Licensee—Hallinan, John Denis; situation of house—Myrtle and Shepherd Streets, Darlington; sign of house—Victoria Park Hotel; period of License—From 8th January, 1885, to 7th January, 1886.

Mr. J. Cunneen to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

"Victoria Park Hotel," Darlington, 14 July, 1886.

I have the honor to hand you the sum of £30, being fee on renewal of my Publican's License from 8th January, 1886, to 7th January, 1887. I will produce the certificate of the Licensing Court so soon as I receive it.

I have, &c.,
JOHN CUNNEEN.

£30, suspense account, awaiting certificate of Licensing Court, 14th July, 1886.

Metropolitan Licensing District.

John Denis Hallinan (now John Cunneen), "Victoria Park Hotel," Myrtle and Shepherd Streets, Darlington.

THE Publican's License for the house above described was issued for the period 8th January, 1885, to the 7th January, 1886, and so far as the books of this office show, has not been further renewed, but up to this day the house is stated to be still open and trading. It is further stated that the license was transferred by the Court after it had expired, and that it was this circumstance which misled the last transferee, who did not consequently apply for renewal of license at the proper time as he was under the impression that it did not expire till 30th June ultimo.

I should be glad if the Inspector-General of Police will make inquiries into the matter and report the result to me for the Hon. the Treasurer's information.

Reports enclosed. This appears to have been occasioned by an error in the Police Court Office.—EDMUND FOSBERY, B.C., the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, 19/7/86.

Sir,

No. 2 Station, 15 July, 1886.

Re attached communication from G. Eagar, Esquire, Under Secretary for the Treasury, in reference to John Cunneen's license of the "Victoria Park Hotel," Shepherd-street, Sydney,—

I have seen Mr. Cunneen and made inquiry, and ascertained that it is correct, that the license was not transferred from James Charles to John Cunneen until the 27th January last, only eight days before the time expired in which he was allowed to pay for the license. It appears that the certificate of transfer, given to Cunneen by the licensing clerk, Central Police Office, is dated the 30th June, 1886, and, believing that all was right, he, in May, applied for the renewal, to which application was attached the certificate of transfer, already referred to, which is the only document the licensee has to show the police that the license fee had been paid at the Treasury, the original license being detained by the licensing clerk until a renewal is granted. Subsequently Mr. Cunneen was informed that his was a special license, and should have been renewed in January. He then saw Inspector Lenthall, who directed him to go to Mr. Benson, the licensing clerk, who directed him to go to the Treasury, and pay the £30 for the license, which he did, and obtained a receipt, but did not get his license, the certificate of renewal not having been forwarded to Mr. Newcombe, at the Treasury. Mr. Cunneen afterwards saw Mr. Benson, who told him to call again on Friday, and he would endeavour to arrange matters.

Mr. Cunneen, who states that he gave £730 for the business, appears to have done all he could to correct the mistake; gave me a written statement, which is attached to this report. He appears to be a very respectable person, and has conducted the house exceedingly well. When the error was discovered, Cunneen was informed that he would be responsible for any action in reference to keeping his house open.

I respectfully beg to state that, though apparently there appears to have been an oversight, I believe the real cause was the clerical error before mentioned.

I have, &c.,
EDMUND LAWLESS,
Sub-Inspector.

Mr. J. Cunneen to The Sub-Inspector, No. 2 Station.

Sir,

14 July, 1886.

I beg to state, in reference to renewal of my license, I applied in May to Mr. Benson. I got a transfer paper, which I took to Inspector Lenthall, who received the application. I afterwards had a conversation with Mr. Bartlett, whose mother had kept this hotel. Mr. Bartlett told me that it was a special license, and that it would not be due until next January, being paid, as he said Charles, who took the house from him, and from whom I bought, was told by him to take out license in January, 1886. Now it appears that he did not do so. Having heard this I went to see Mr. Lenthall about it, and told him it was a special license, as I heard. He looked over the books and said it was, but it was not marked paid. We then went over to see Mr. Benson; he told me to call next day; he told me that if it was not paid I would have to pay it. I went on 10th and 14th June, 1886; he said he (Mr. Benson) would have to apply to the Treasury to see to it; he promised to write to me. Not receiving any letter from Mr. Benson, I went to Mr. Benson's office yesterday; he was absent. To-day I went to Mr. Benson; I saw him; he told me the license was not paid for; he told me to go to the Treasury, to Mr. Newcombe, to whom I paid the £30. Mr. Newcombe told me to go to Mr. Benson, and get the certificate and bring it to him to-morrow. I went to Mr. Benson this evening, and he told me to come on Friday.

When I put in my application in May I was prepared to pay for the license. When I bought for £730 I believed I was free till June, 1886, the annual license day.

JOHN CUNNEEN.

Sub-Inspector

Sub-Inspector Lenthall to The District Inspector.

Sir,

Woolloomooloo Station, 16 July, 1886.

With reference to the attached papers, I beg to report that on the 5th May last I received Cunneen's application for the renewal of his license, to which was attached a certificate of transfer (but no license) authorizing him to sell up to 30th June, 1886, which I forwarded to Mr. M'Kay. It was to be heard at the Central Police Court on the 15th June. Before the latter date Mr. Cunneen called on me and said that he had been labouring under a mistake, and that his license should have been renewed in January. I immediately saw Mr. Benson, the Licensing Clerk, who said that an error had been made during his absence in making out the transfer certificate, but he would go to the Treasury and explain it. I afterwards saw Mr. Newcombe, of the Treasury, and understood from him that he had seen Mr. Benson, and the clerical error had been rectified. Cunneen's license was transferred to him from James Charles, on the 27th January last (the application for transfer had no license or certificate attached), twenty days after it had expired, when he received the erroneous transfer certificate which has been the cause of the whole mistake. According to the 43rd section of the principal Act an endorsement should be made upon the original license according to the 8th schedule. This has never been done to my knowledge, and the only "receipt" ever given has been a printed form of what ought to be the endorsement, the license itself being detained in Court. This procedure has had the effect of misleading, and had the endorsements required by the Act been made no such mistake as the present could have occurred.

I have, &c.,

W. E. LENTHALL,

Sub-Inspector.

Sub-Inspector Mackay to The Superintendent of Police.

Sir,

No. 2 Police Station, 19 July, 1886.

I respectfully beg to report, in reference to the non-renewal of the license of the "Victoria Park Hotel," that under the circumstances I cannot see the police are to blame in the matter. It will be observed the license was transferred from Charles to Cunneen within the twenty-eight days grace allowed by the 14th section of the principal Act. On the 27th January it is alleged that Mr. Cunneen received the wrong-dated certificate authorizing him to sell until the 30th June.

Under such exceptional circumstances, even if I had been in possession of the whole facts I should certainly hesitate before I took action against either the transferrer or transferee. I believe Mr. Cunneen had not the slightest intention to defraud the Revenue in this matter; he has himself been grossly taken in by the transferrer, who should, as an honest man, have told him that the license for which he received £730 had neither been paid for nor renewed.

I coincide with Mr. Lenthall that the wrong-dated certificate misled us all, and was the cause of the application in May for a renewal to pass through this Station without being noticed.

I have, &c.,

A. MACKAY,

Sub-Inspector.

Urgent.

Reference should be made to the Licensing Bench, Central Police Court, for favor of full inquiry and report for Minister's information in this case, 7/8/86.—W. E. PLUNKETT, B.C., 9 August, 1886.

No. 2.

The Clerk of Petty Sessions, Central Police Office, to The Stipendiary Magistrate.

MEMO.—In returning the papers in Cunneen's matter with Mr. Benson's report thereon, I desire to point out that the blame attachable to misdating the certificate for transfer was no doubt due to this office, but, at the same time, I cannot see why we should also be blamed for the laxity shown by the Police in permitting liquors to be sold at this house from the 7th January until May without a license, as the error in the date of the notice could in no way have influenced them; the document was lying in this office and was not seen by the police until the 5th May, when application was made for the renewal of the license.

If the Licensing Act were amended so as to make all licenses terminate on the 30th June, as was the case under previous Licensing Acts, it would prevent a recurrence of an error of this kind and would save considerable inconvenience and trouble to the police, and also to the officers of this Court, and to publicans themselves.

B.C., 16/8/86.

C. DELOHERY,

C.P.S.

[Enclosure.]

MR. BENSON begs to report, for the information of Mr. Delohery, in the matter of John Cunneen,—

That Mr. Cohen, acting as cashier, received the application for transfer from Charles to Cunneen, which was granted to Cunneen on the 27th January last, and Mr. Cohen in writing out the endorsement of transfer in error inserted the date of expiration, 30th June, an error easily committed, seeing that with few exceptions all licenses expire on the 30th June in each year.

Replying to correspondence as in present order—letter from Mr. Cunneen, dated July 14th, 1886,—

Mr. Cunneen received the transfer endorsement, with a wrong date inserted, on 20th April, 1886, which he took to Mr. Lenthall for renewal, who then brought it to me and pointed out the error, and I informed him it was a clerical error of Mr. Cohen's. Cunneen then came to me, and I advised him to see Mr. Newcombe and explain matters to him, which I believe he did as Mr. Newcombe took the amount of license fee, £30, from him as suspense, and told him it was awaiting certificate from Licensing Court.

Report of Mr. Sub-Inspector Mackay:—Mr. Mackay states, "I coincide with Mr. Lenthall that the wrong dated certificate misled us all." Is it not very unfair that Mr. Mackay should attempt to throw the whole of the blame on the clerk who made the error in inserting the wrong date of which the police had no cognizance until Cunneen made application for his renewal in May, an interval of about 4 months, during which time Cunneen was selling without a license, the fact of which the police should have had a full knowledge, as they are supplied with a duplicate sheet of all business transacted by the Licensing Court, and it should be their duty to have a record of the dates of expiration of all licenses as the clerk is not required to notice when licenses expire."

Report of Mr. Sub-Inspector Lenthall (District Inspector):—Mr. Lenthall came to the office, I think some time in May, as I have before stated, and pointed out the error, which I have submitted should not be considered the cause of the police being in ignorance of the date of expiration of license.

Report of Mr. Sub-Inspector Lawless:—Mr. Lawless on several occasions requested me to see Mr. Newcombe and explain matters to him, and I did so some time in June (long after the discovery had been made that Cunneen's license had expired). Mr. Lawless states, "I believe the real cause was the clerical error." Supposing the error had not been committed, would not the fact of Cunneen selling without a license have been just the same, as the police had no knowledge of that error from January to May, the endorsement of transfer being in this office until the 20th April?

Mr. J. Cunneen to The Minister of Justice.

Sir,

"Victoria Park Hotel," Darlington, 22 September, 1886.

I humbly beg that you will kindly consider my case, which is as follows:—I bought for £750 the "Victoria Park Hotel," Darlington, in last January, from Mr. James Charles, and the license for the same was transferred to me at the Central Police Court, on the 27th of that month, when I received a certificate of transfer from the Licensing Bench, authorizing me to sell under the same until the 30th June last. Mr. Charles' original license I never saw, and believing that all was correct, I continued to sell. On the 5th May last I lodged my application for the renewal, and then found out for the first time that the license should have been renewed in the month of January. Having official and judicial authority by the certificate of transfer to sell up to the 30th June I considered I was quite safe, and on ascertaining that a mistake had occurred I did all in my power to immediately remedy the same; I saw the officers of Police and also Mr. Louthall, the District Inspector, on the subject, and furthermore paid into the Treasury the license fee of £30, for which I hold a receipt. It has been no fault or intention of mine to act in any way contrary to law, and I trust that your sense of justice will not allow me to be ruined for a fault of which I was ignorant, and never for a moment contemplated. I therefore sincerely hope that you will, under the exceptional circumstances of my case, be so good as to grant permission for a license for the above hotel to issue to me, and thus save me from absolute ruin.

I have, &c.,

JOHN CUNNEEN.

Referred to the Stipendiary Magistrates, Central Police Court, for favor of any further report they may wish to make, particularly as to the issue of license to Mr. Cunneen under the exceptional circumstances of case, he being blameless in the matter, of good character, and his interests being seriously affected by the delay in issue of license.—T.E.M.N. (for U.S.), B.C., 22/9/86. T. K. Abbott, Esq., Stipendiary Magistrate, Central Police Office.

It appears to me that the equity of this case has been lost sight of in endeavouring to ascertain whether an officer of the Police Force or a clerk in the Central Police Court is most to blame for the injury done to the applicant. As a matter of simple justice, under the exceptional circumstances of the case, Cunneen should have his license, and should not be made to suffer for the laches of any person, especially as he has in no way contributed to the unfortunate state of things which has arisen.—T. KINGSMILL ABBOTT, S.M., B.C., 30 September, 1886. The Under Secretary of Justice, 30/9/86.

I think, as a matter of common justice, that a license should be issued to Cunneen.—J.P.G., 30/9/86. The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.—T.E.M.N. (for U.S.), B.C., 30 September, 1886. Please return papers after action to this Department.—T.E.M.N., 30/9/86. License, No. 3,039, period from 8th January, 1886, to 7th January, 1887, issued this day.—C.R.W., 2 October, 1886. As requested, all papers are herewith returned to Justice Department.—J.T. (for U.S.), B.C., 2 October, 1886.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

FISHERIES INSPECTOR QUINAN.

(REPORT OF, ON NET-FISHING IN PORT JACKSON.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 21 April, 1886.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 10th February, 1886, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

- “ (1.) Copies of the Report made by Inspector Quinan against Mr. James Hill, one of the Commissioners of Fisheries, as to the illegal use of a garfish net in the harbour of Port Jackson on the 26th of March last, together with all letters and minutes upon the subject.
- “ (2.) Copies of the Report made by Inspector Quinan, on the 23rd April, 1885, against an officer belonging to the Museum and others, for net-fishing in the closed waters of Port Jackson after being warned not to do so by the Inspector.”

(Mr. Olliffe, for Mr. Targett.)

Inspector Quinan to The Secretary, Fisheries Commission.

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, Sydney, 26 March, 1885.

I have the honor to report, for information of the Commissioners of Fisheries, that acting upon a report received confidentially from a fisherman that Mr. Hill, of Vaucluse, was using an illegal net for the purpose of catching all descriptions of fish, I called in at Vaucluse Bay on my way to Watson's Bay this afternoon, and found a net in a boat at Mr. Hill's residence, which I measured, and found the mesh in the wings to be 2 inches and in the bunt $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch (a legal garfish net).

On landing, Mr. Hill had about 1 and $1\frac{1}{2}$ bushels of fish, consisting of about $\frac{1}{4}$ bushel of garfish, and the remainder bream, flathead, and whiting. (See note A.)

Mr. Hill acknowledged to have caught all these fish with the garfish net, and stated that he considered my visit to measure his net most offensive and insulting, and that he considered in his case I was excessive in my zeal. (See note B.)

At Mr. Hill's request, I read to him the 11th section of the Fisheries Act, 1881, and pointed out that the net he had in use was for catching garfish only. To this Mr. Hill entirely dissented, and that the law allowed him to capture all kinds of fish with the net in question.

If this view of the law is the correct one, I need hardly state it will be received with pleasure by all the fishermen, who will seldom or never use their hauling net.

I regret that Mr. Hill should have spoken to me in the manner he did, especially as but a few days previously he stated to me and Assistant-Inspector Mulhall that he would always stand up for an officer who zealously and fearlessly performed his duty.

(See note C.)

I have, &c.,

JAMES QUINAN,
Inspector.

Notes by Mr. Commissioner Hill.

Note A.—In this matter Mr. Quinan jumps at a hasty and wrong conclusion. There was not a bushel of fish altogether, and of these there were two bream, one flathead, about sixteen whiting, and the rest were garfish—about ten dozen of the latter.

Note B.—Mr. Quinan is again making a statement without proper grounds. I did not consider his examination of my net as insulting and offensive, but the way he examined it. Instead of first asking who was the owner of the boat and net, and stating that he wished to examine the latter, his men without a word examined the net, and jumped in the boat afterwards. Common courtesy requires that he should first intimate to the persons at hand that he wishes in his official capacity to make an examination of their nets, and he is only justified, in the rough and ready way he goes about his business, when there are no persons present to whom he can state his wish and authority.

Note C.—If Mr. Quinan had exercised reasonable zeal in endeavouring to settle the question whether it was allowable to catch in a garfish net other fish of a proper size, he could have found at least six fishermen a week in Rose Bay who were, in the most open manner, in the habit of using a garfish net indiscriminately. Whether the fishermen haul the net for garfish only, and it is by an accident that other fish are caught, is a question which they only can decide. Every afternoon, when the tide suits, Rose Bay is a favourite hauling ground with the fishermen, and I have oftentimes seen as many as four boats hauling garfish nets at the same time. On no occasion during the two and a quarter years I have been going home or coming into town have I ever seen Mr. Quinan in his boat, or on the road, on horseback, looking up these men.

J. R. H.

I to-day read the remarks endorsed herein to Mr. Quinan, as directed by the Commissioners.—L. G. T., 15/4/85.

Submitted, 10/4/85. Com. Min. 3,024. Resolved that, looking to the ambiguity which surrounds that part of section 11 of the Fisheries Act which refers to garfish nets, the Commissioners do not think it desirable to interfere with those fishermen who, hauling intentionally and legitimately for garfish only, catch other fish of a legitimate weight in their nets.—10/4/85.

Will Mr. Quinan be good enough to look up the case where Porchelli was prosecuted for catching other fish (of full weight) than garfish, in a garfish net, as stated by him yesterday (Monday, 30/3/85) in the presence of Mr. Thompson.

J. R. HILL.

On the 23rd January, 1884, when at Woolloomooloo, I saw Porchelli and his men coming into the bay, and I, accompanied by the President and Assistant-Inspector Mulhall, boarded the boat. We found two nets on board, one a hauling and the other a garfish net. He had a quantity of fish of every kind, and ran away with a basket of small whiting, which I seized. It was for the small fish he and his men were prosecuted. We had every reason to believe these were caught with the garfish net, but as we did not see it in use, and as he did not acknowledge to have used it, no evidence could be obtained to prosecute him for using an illegal net.

A short time after this, a Mr. Mulhall, of Elizabeth Bay, brought to the office several red bream about one ounce in weight, that he declared were left in hundreds on the beach by Porchelli, when hauling with a garfish net.

JAMES QUINAN,

Inspector, 1/4/85.

P.S.—I can also recollect (the papers were destroyed by fire) a case where Gascoigne, of Parramatta, was prosecuted for using a garfish net, slightly under the size in mesh. He caught all kinds of fish with it.—J. Q.

This cannot be the case referred to by Mr. Quinan in his remark to Mr. Hill (in the office and in the presence of the Chief Inspector) that he had had Porchelli fined for catching in a garfish net other kinds of fish. In answer to Mr. Hill, who asked whether it was not for catching under-sized fish, Mr. Quinan remarked—"No, for catching other fish in a garfish net."

Inspector Quinan to The Secretary, Fisheries Commission.

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, Sydney, 15 April, 1885.

With reference to the minutes you were authorized to read to me this morning, on correspondence respecting an unlawful manner of using a garfish net, by Mr. Hill, I beg to ask you for a copy of the correspondence, in order that I may have an opportunity of replying to statements made by Mr. Hill, reflecting upon the manner in which I carry out my duties.

I have, &c.,

JAMES QUINAN,

Inspector.

Com. Min. No. 3,070.—Moved by Mr. Ramsay that the paper was only read to him for his instruction and guidance, and that no explanation is required.—15/4/85.

Inspector Quinan to The Secretary, Fisheries Commission.

Sir,

Office of Inspector Home Fisheries, Sydney, 22 April, 1885.

I have the honor to report a breach of the 10th section of the Fisheries Act, 1881, as follows:—This morning I saw a Government steam-launch, with a number of naval officers, and Mr. Brazier of the Museum, using an otter trawl net, close to the Spit, in the Middle Harbour. As I thought probably they might not know that the waters were closed against the use of nets above the Spit, I told them so, and Mr. Brazier said—"All right."

Notwithstanding

Notwithstanding this warning, the launch proceeded up the closed waters into Bantry Bay, and again cast the trawl net. I went over to the launch and told them that they were infringing the law; they said they would take the responsibility of doing so, and that both Dr. Cox and Mr. Ramsay were aware that they were about to fish in the Middle Harbour.

I told Mr. Brazier and his party that I would report the matter to the Commissioners of Fisheries.

I have, &c.,

JAMES QUINAN,

Inspector.

Submitted, 29/4/85. Com. Min. 3,126—Draw the attention of the Trustees of the Australian Museum to Mr. Quinan's report, and point out that there is no section of the Fisheries Act which gives power to them more than any other person to hauling fishing-net in closed waters, 29/4/85. The Sec. Museum, by letter, 30/4/85. Returned.—F.O., 7/4/85. Refer to Mr. Brazier.—E.P.R. Mr. Brazier's remarks herewith.—E.P.R., May 12th, 1885.

The Secretary, Department of Fisheries, to Mr. John Brazier.

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, Sydney, 30 April, 1885.

I have the honor, by direction of the Commissioners of Fisheries for New South Wales, to enclose a letter from the Inspector for the Home Division of Fisheries, reporting a breach of the 10th section of Fisheries Act, 1881, by Mr. Brazier, of the Australian Museum, and others. Enclosure to be returned.

I am desired by the Commissioners to ask you to be so good as to draw the attention of the Trustees of the Museum to Mr. Quinan's report, and to point out that there is no special provision in the Fisheries Act authorizing officers of the Museum to haul a fishing-net in closed waters.

I am, &c.,

LINDSAY THOMPSON,

Secretary.

Submitted to the Trustees, 2 June, 1885.

Mr. John Brazier to The Secretary, Department of Fisheries.

Sir,

Australian Museum, 12 May, 1885.

In reference to the unfounded charge made against me by the Inspector of Fisheries, re netting in Middle Harbour on April 22, I beg to state, for your information, that on that date I was the guest of the officers of the Austrian man of war, in a steam-launch lent by the Government, and not on Museum service on that date, and that we were not fishing.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN BRAZIER.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be printed, 24 March, 1886.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 28th January, 1886, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“Copies of all letters, papers, or minutes having reference to the suspension of Inspector Quinan, Inspector of Fisheries, during the present or past recess.”

(Mr. White.)

No. 1.

The President of the Fisheries Commission to The Colonial Secretary,

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, 14 August, 1885.

I have the honor, by desire of my colleagues, to make the following report of what seems to us to be most irregular conduct on the part of Mr. Jas. Quinan, the Inspector for the Home Division of Fisheries.

I invite your perusal of the accompanying papers:—It appears that on the 22nd ultimo a document was addressed by Inspector Quinan to the Collector of Customs, asking him not to insist on the immediate payment of royalty on a certain nineteen bags of oysters taken from the Womboyne, a river some 35 miles south of Eden, and consigned ostensibly by H. Woodward, part to Comino and part to Congden, both of Sydney. The plea for the request was that the oysters had been three weeks on the passage, and were in such bad condition that they had to be placed on Comino's bed in the Parramatta River, and Inspector Quinan promised to see that they were not removed again until the royalty had been paid. The Collector of Customs declined to deliver without payment of royalty, and referred the applicants to the Chief Inspector of Fisheries. This suggested reference was never made, but queries which have been put to Inspector Quinan have elicited the fact that these oysters had in his presence been actually laid on Comino's bed on the 18th ultimo, four days before the request was made to the Collector. 85-3227.
86-3229 and 31.

This particular bed, alleged to belong to Comino, was about only four months previously measured by Inspector Quinan for one John Fisher, the report of measurement being endorsed by a statement that Comino had abandoned it. 85-1421.

Inspector Quinan found his way to this bed, not in a boat belonging to the Department but by some other means, presumably in the boat in which the oysters were taken. He now claims that the oysters were not laid down under supervision of the Department, and also that he was not aware Comino had abandoned his bed. 85-3229.

Assuming Inspector Quinan's irregularity to have consisted so far in an apparently determined disregard of the practice of the Department and the Regulations, which require detailed reports of occurrences to be reported to the Commissioners, and altogether in defiance of a recent special instruction to refer all matters to the Chief Inspector, and to take his directions, we think he seems to have been greatly in need of some such directions, for, if in the interest of the Department he had considered the matter from a merely intelligent point of view, he must have discovered that in spite of any oversight possible for him to exercise it would be quite easy for any person to remove these oysters surreptitiously, and thus involve the loss of royalty altogether. But

But from the evidence collected it appears to me and my colleagues that Inspector Quinan had a more direct interest in the disposition of the oysters than, as he may possibly plead, a desire to oblige Messrs. Comino and Congden.

To show this, it becomes necessary to explain the circumstances under which Mr. Woodward, the reputed consignor, became entitled to the areas at the Womboyno River, from which the oysters were taken. These areas were for valuable consideration transferred in January last by one T. H. Budden (a name possibly familiar to you in connection with a complaint preferred against Inspector Quinan some time since) to Inspector Quinan's son, Harold, a youth of about fourteen years of age, by letter in his father's handwriting. In the same month Harold, by letter, also in his father's handwriting, transferred his interest to Mr. H. Woodward, alleging as a reason that his father did not wish him to hold any interest that might clash with his father's position as Inspector of Fisheries. The transfer was accepted and a permit to work one of the areas duly issued to Mr. Woodward. Doubts having recently arisen in our minds whether Mr. Woodward or Inspector Quinan was the actual possessor of the areas referred to, queries were put to the latter, who replied to them in such a way as to induce a reference to Mr. Woodward himself, from whom we ascertained that Inspector Quinan offered him his interest in the areas for £60. Mr. Woodward declined the offer, not wishing to have anything to do with the matter, but afterwards, on solicitation, and with the one object of assisting Inspector Quinan's family, agreed to take the areas, allowing Harold Quinan as consideration the first 100 bags of oysters for his own use. On interrogating Mr. Woodward as to the number of bags already taken he replied that he had no knowledge of the matter, had never asked for any account, had never seen the river, had not interested himself in the transaction at all, and was not aware of what had been done. It seems, therefore, to us that, notwithstanding Inspector Quinan's assertion that Mr. Woodward is the actual possessor of the areas referred to, Inspector Quinan's family have a very direct present interest in them, and that it was this direct interest which induced Inspector Quinan to act as he has done. Moreover, it was stated by Comino, one of the reputed consignees, that the first intimation he had of the arrival of the oysters was from Inspector Quinan. Also in asking the Collector of Customs to waive the present payment of the royalty (which I may here remark has since this inquiry was instituted been paid) Inspector Quinan has laid himself open to the serious imputation of an attempt, or complicity with an attempt, to evade its payment on grounds already stated, but which are not substantiated; for it has been elicited from Mr. F. W. Smithers, the Assistant Inspector of Fisheries at the port of shipment, Eden, that the oysters, instead of having been, as represented, three weeks on the road between the Womboyno River and Eden, and arriving in consequent bad condition, had actually been at most only thirteen days out of the water when they arrived in Sydney, and further, that when they were shipped at Eden only some twenty-four hours before such arrival they were in good condition. It is also a fact that at this season of the year oysters may be kept out of the water in good condition for three or four weeks, or even longer. In this connection I invite attention to the Chief Inspector's minute, dated 13th instant, from which it appears that some fifteen or eighteen bags were recently taken back from Comino's bed, Inspector Quinan admitting to six bags having been taken.

We think that this matter is of sufficient importance to warrant the suspension of Inspector Quinan from official duty, pending such further inquiry as you may deem it proper to institute.

I have, &c.

[Enclosures.]

The Chief Inspector of Fisheries to The Collector of Customs.

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, 23 July, 1885.

I am advised that a letter was yesterday handed to you from Mr. James Quinan, the Inspector for the Home Division of Fisheries, requesting that the royalty on ten bags of oysters per "Kameruka," and nine bags per "Allourie" from Eden, might not be charged, as such oysters had been three weeks on the passage, and were in such bad condition that it was necessary to have them laid down on beds in the Parramatta River, and that he (Mr. Quinan) would see that royalty was paid on them when they were taken up again.

As such request was not made with the cognizance of the Commissioners of Fisheries, or myself, I have the honor to request that you will be good enough to favor me with the letter referred to, in order that the matter may be inquired into.

I may add, that from inquiries made, the oysters appear to have been delivered to their respective owners, Messrs. Comino and Congden, on the 13th and 15th instant, apparently in contravention of the 39th Regulation Oyster Fisheries Act 1884, which enacts a penalty of £50 on masters of vessels and others delivering consignments of oysters without a certificate from the Customs, stating that the royalty thereon had been paid.

I have, &c.

LINDSAY THOMPSON,
Chief Inspector of Fisheries.

Minute of Collector of Customs.

APPLICATION was made to me on the 22nd instant for the delivery of oysters to Messrs. Comino and Congden without payment of royalty, for reasons set forth in a document signed by the Inspector of Fisheries for the Home division. I declined to deliver any oysters (for which I had received permits) without payment of royalty, and referred the applicant to the Chief Inspector of Fisheries.

JAMES POWELL, Collector of Customs, —23/7/85.

The Chief Inspector of Fisheries.

Mr. Pincock.—Where is Inspector Quinan's letter referred to?—L.G.T., 23/7/85. The Collector of Customs told me that at the request of Comino he returned the letter to him, in order to facilitate the requested reference to the Chief Inspector.—C.W.O.P., 23/7/85.

Memorandum.

Inspector Quinan to give direct replies to the following questions:—

1. Why was Inspector Quinan's letter to the Collector of Customs respecting non-payment of royalty on fourteen bags of oysters for Comino, and five bags oysters for Congden, from the Womboyno, not copied?
2. Why did Inspector Quinan disregard the recent special minute of the Commissioners, No. 3,260, by communicating direct with the Collector of Customs instead of through the Chief Inspector?

3. Why also did he, without the sanction of the Chief Inspector, direct these oysters to be laid down, thus assuming a discretion which, by the 30th Regulation of the Fisheries Act, is reserved to the Commissioners?
4. On what day, under what circumstances, and by whom were these oysters laid down in the Parramatta River?
5. On what authority did Inspector Quinan authorize Comino and Congdon to lay down these oysters on a bed which Comino had abandoned, and which he (Inspector Quinan) had measured for John Fisher?
6. Why were these proceedings not noted in Inspector Quinan's daily return of duties?
7. Why were the Fisheries boat and crew not availed of for the purpose of seeing these oysters laid down?
8. Does Inspector Quinan know whether Mr. Woodward is actually or only nominally the owner of the areas in the Womboyne River, which have been transferred to him?
9. If only nominally, does Inspector Quinan know who is the actual owner, and by whose direction the oysters were dredged from those beds and shipped in Mr. Woodward's name?
10. What authority has Inspector Quinan for stating that these oysters were three weeks on the passage, and did he satisfy himself that they were that time on the passage?

Will Inspector Quinan be good enough to furnish replies to these questions of the Commissioners.—L.G.T., 3/8/85.
Replies herewith attached.—J. QUINAN, 5/8/85.

In reply to Commissioner's minute 3,451 :—

1. I am not in the habit of keeping copies of memos., but I record the subject in my diary.
2. I was not aware that minute 3,260 referred to mere details of my ordinary daily duties that I have performed with (in this particular practice) the knowledge of this Department, and at the express desire of the late Accountant to the Customs Department (Mr. Jones), who asked me to call in frequently and assist him in the collection of royalty, also to mark off on the face of the permits that oysters had been seized, or returned to the beds by the owners, or this office, so that payment of royalty need not be insisted upon.
3. I did not direct that these oysters should be laid down; they were of full size, and I had no authority to do so.
4. Saturday, 18th July, by Mr. Comino, because they were out of condition.
5. I was not aware that Mr. Comino had abandoned his bed; Fisher's application did not prove it, for there are frequently more than one applicant for a single area.
6. The Chief Inspector requires me to furnish him first thing every morning a statement of duties for the day. I had no knowledge of this matter until after office hours on Saturday, but recorded it in my diary on Monday morning.
7. The oysters were not laid down under the supervision of the Department.
- 8 & 9. I know that Mr. Woodward is the actual owner of the areas on the Womboyne River, for they were all transferred to him by my family. No consideration whatever was given to my family by Mr. Woodward for the transfers, but Mr. Woodward gave my son Harold permission to remove sufficient oysters in his (Mr. Woodward's) name, so as to enable him to sell them in the Sydney market, in order to recoup the expenses incurred in purchasing the original area, rent, &c.

The oysters were therefore removed, with Mr. Woodward's consent, by my son's directions, to be consigned to the Fish Market for sale. They were all to be sent to Mr. Congdon, but by an error of the men engaged, a portion was sent to Comino.

10. I have satisfied myself that the oysters were three weeks on the road between the Womboyne River and Eden on account of severe weather.

I may state that when these oysters were hauled over to Mr. Comino there was no mention of an application to be made to the Collector of Customs to remit royalty under the circumstances. Mr. Comino sent his man and asked me for a certificate as to their condition, some days afterwards, which I gave him. The oysters were made a present to Mr. Comino on condition that he paid freight from Eden and royalty. The oysters were entirely lost, and my son loses fully £20 in payment of wages and cartage. I have ascertained that the royalty has been paid.

JAMES QUINAN,
Inspector.

5/8/85.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Inspector Quinan be good enough to furnish, for the information of the Commissioner of Fisheries, his letter which was handed by Mr. Comino to the Collector of Customs, requesting that royalty might not be charged on some bags of oysters which had been received from Eden.—L.G.T.

I HAVE not kept a copy of the memo., but it was to the following effect:—Messrs. Congdon and Comino have asked me to state, for the information of the Collector of Customs, the condition of the oysters that arrived, consigned to them from the Womboyne River; the oysters were unfit for food, and had to be placed on Mr. Comino's beds in the Parramatta River; as these oysters cannot be removed again without my permit to pay royalty, perhaps the Collector would not insist in charging royalty now. I will see that they are not removed without the royalty is paid.—JAMES QUINAN.

I MAY state that the Collector has on frequent occasions, in the case of Messrs. Woodward and Coole, remitted royalty—when I assured him they were returned again to the waters, and he expressed it a fair and just thing to do.—JAMES QUINAN, 24/7/85.

[Extract from my Diary, 7/4/85.]

"Joseph Coote called and asked that the royalty on sixteen bags of oysters per "Growler" be not charged, as he intended to return them to the beds. I went with him to the Collector of Customs, who said if the oysters were returned to the waters he would not insist on the royalty being paid. I telegraphed to the Inspector at Port Stephens to see them laid down."

Will Mr. Thompson please attach the above extract to his memo. respecting my memo. to Collector of Customs re Womboyne oysters.—J. QUINAN, 25/7/85.

Attached as desired.—L.G.T., 25/7/85. What bed has Comino on the Parramatta River?—L.G.T., 24/7/85. He has a bed at Onion Point, mouth of Lane Cove River, for some years past.—J.Q., 25/7/85. What was done with the oysters?—L.G.T., 24/7/85. I saw them all deposited on Mr. Comino's beds.—J.Q., 25/7/85. But Inspector Quinan has reported that Comino abandoned this area and he measured it for Fisher.—L.G.T., 25/7/85.

I am, &c.,

JOHN FISHER.

This is identical with J. Comino's previously withdrawn application.—C.W.O.P., 16/9/85. On what authority did Inspector Quinan report that the area of 300 yards at Onion's Point, Lane Cove River, applied for by Mr. John Fisher, was abandoned by the previous applicant, Mr. Comino.—LINDSAY THOMPSON, 6/8/85. I am not aware that I have made such a statement. If my report says so it must have been on the verbal statement of Mr. Comino—at all events he has not abandoned it, for he has been laying down New Zealand oysters ever since he took it up.—J. QUINAN, 7/8/85. Why, then, did Inspector Quinan measure it for Fisher?—L.G.T., 7/8/85. Because I was instructed to do so.—J.Q., 7/8/85. Onion's Point Bed:—How is that Inspector Quinan has allowed Comino to work this bed without a permit?—L.G.T., 7/8/85. Permits were not issued under the 32nd sec. Act 1881. Messrs. Comino and Woodward's areas were reported upon by me, 27th June, 1883. The Department is aware that Mr. Woodward is in possession of his bed, as the oysters seized by me from Mr. Cohen were returned to him, on condition that they be laid down on Mr. Woodward's bed, Parramatta River, until they became marketable. Both these beds are merely used to revive New Zealand oysters.—J. QUINAN, 8/7/85. Quite so, but Inspector Quinan measured the bed for Fisher, and stated that Comino had abandoned it. This being so Comino had no title to it under the 32nd section of the Fisheries Act, 1881, and even Fisher was not entitled to use it without a permit; so that does it not appear to Inspector Quinan that he should not have authorized the Wombeyne oysters to be laid there?—L.G.T., 14/8/85. I have recently replied to this question, stating that Mr. Comino had not abandoned his area. If in my report, in returning Fisher's application, I stated that Comino had done so, it must have been on a mere verbal statement. I presume the Department would require his withdrawal in writing before another applicant would be entitled to it. I see under Appendix F to Annual Report for 1883, the name of A. Comino as an applicant for frontage, Onion's Point. I again repeat that I did not authorize the Wombeyne oysters to be laid down; it was done at Mr. Comino's wish to revive them.—J. QUINAN, 14/8/85.

Mr. T. H. Budden to The Secretary, Fisheries Commission.

Sir,

I beg to request that you will be good enough to transfer my application under the Oyster Culture Act for 4,000 yards of the foreshores of the Wombeyne River, on the north and south sides respectively, to Mr. Harold Quinan, he having purchased all my right, title, and interest therein, for valuable consideration.

No. 2.

Account of an interview between the Commissioners of Fisheries and Mr. H. Woodward.

Doubts having recently arisen in the minds of the Commissioners whether Mr. Woodward or Inspector Quinan was the actual owner of two oyster culture areas at the Womboyne River, queries were put to the latter, who replied in such a way as to induce a reference to Mr. Woodward himself, who stated that Inspector Quinan offered him his interest in the areas for £60. Mr. Woodward declined the offer, not wishing to have anything to do with the matter; but afterwards, on solicitation, and with the object of assisting Inspector Quinan's family, agreed to take the areas, allowing H. Quinan, as a consideration, the first 100 bags of oysters for his own use. On interrogating Woodward as to the number of bags already taken, he replied that he had no knowledge of the matter, had never asked for any account, had never seen the river, had not interested himself in the transaction at all, and was not aware of what had been done.

Will Mr. Woodward be good enough to certify to the above as being substantially a correct statement of the interview which he recently had with the Commissioners of Fisheries.—LINDSAY THOMPSON, Chief Inspector of Fisheries, 14/8/85. Henry Woodward, 120, King-street.

No. 3.

Mr. Assistant-Inspector Smithers to The Secretary, Fisheries Commission.

Sir,

Sydney, 12 August, 1885.

Nineteen (19) bags oysters from the Womboyne River, consigned by Woodward to Comino and Congdon. These oysters were taken from the Womboyne River on Thursday, the 2nd of July. I was so informed by four different people, Pendergast the carrier, and some Greeks. I examined seventeen of these bags on Wednesday, the 8th instant, at Bittangabee, a place 4 miles north of Green Cape and 6 miles from that part of the Womboyne River, whence the oysters were taken. They were in good condition.

At Eden, on the 10th instant, I again examined ten of these bags, and on the 12th instant I examined the remaining nine. The ten bags were shipped to Sydney on the 11th instant, and the nine bags on the 14th instant. They were all in good condition when I examined them at Eden.

On the 14th, the date on which the nine bags were shipped I found that the rats had eaten into one of the bags, and several of the oysters having fallen out, I picked them up, opened them, and found them in good order.

I have, &c.,

FRED. W. SMITHERS.

[Extract from Assistant Inspector Smithers' diary for July, 1885.]

July 8.—To Bitangabee from Monay—got the oysters required which I went for, viz., specimens for Commissioners; found oysters in splendid condition; examined seventeen out of nineteen bags oysters which came from Womboyne; found them in good order, good condition; back in Eden at night.

July 10.—Examined ten bags oysters from Womboyne—Woodward to Comino; found they were still in good order. Memo. to Customs and Inspector Quinan re oysters.

July 11.—Telegram Customs and Mr. Quinan re oysters.

July 12.—Examined nine bags oysters, four to Comino, five to S. Congdon; from Woodward, Womboyne River; oysters fair. Memo. to Customs and Mr. Quinan.

July 13.—Telegram to Customs and Mr. Quinan informing them of non-shipment of oysters last night for Comino, but to leave to-morrow.

No. 4.

Minute of Chief Inspector of Fisheries.

MINUTE reporting that the Womboyne oysters had been removed from Comino's bed, Parramatta River. By direction of yourself and colleagues I requested Inspector Quinan to accompany me to Lane Cove, to inspect the nineteen bags of oysters alleged to have been laid there by Comino. He at once expressed his readiness to do so, and proceeded to the Prince's Stairs to the boat which was in waiting. I and Mr. Pincock followed him within a few minutes. On arrival at the wharf he informed me that the oysters had been removed, that on passing Comino's shop he saw six bags of oysters, and on inquiry ascertained that these were all that were in condition out of the nineteen bags from the Womboyne, the remainder being all dead shells, which could still be seen on the shore; that the abutting land had been sold; and that Comino had received notice to quit—hence the removal of the oysters. Of course I was not surprised, since on my previous inspection of the place by your special direction, in company with Inspector Smithers, I had ascertained that the oysters had been removed, and that on the shore and the abutting land was a considerable accumulation of oyster-shells. Most of them were bleached, and the offensive odour which might be expected to emanate from thirteen bags of putrid oysters was not present, so that I was not led to the conclusion that the shells I saw were any part of the nineteen bags referred to;

to; indeed, on inquiry from a woman living in a hut above the shore, I was given to understand that somewhere about fifteen or eighteen bags had been taken away. This woman also informed me that the land was to be sold, and she would soon have to leave. I mention this just in corroboration of a statement to a like effect made by Inspector Quinan.

Memo. from Chief Inspector of Fisheries to Mr. Inspector Quinan.

14 August, 1885.

INSPECTOR QUINAN has stated that he has satisfied himself that the nineteen bags were three weeks on the passage from the Womboyne River to Eden. The Commissioners have desired me to ask how Inspector Quinan has so satisfied himself, and what evidence has he in support of his statement.—L.G.T.

The attached letter received 3/6/85. Informed my son that the oysters would be shipped about the middle of June, and the men engaged charged my son a fortnight's wages while detained with the oysters at Bitangabie. I also enclose telegram, to show the oysters were detained.—J. QUINAN, 17/8/85.

[Enclosure.]

Mr. J. Donnelly to Mr. Inspector Quinan.

Dear Sir,

I received telegram yesterday, and am starting to bring the men out to-day. I have all ready to commence work on Monday. As the men will want a considerable amount of rations you would oblige me very much by sending me half a ton of flour, one bag of sugar, and a box of tea at once, and then I can get them down when the dray comes for oysters. It would save me a deal of time as I would have to pack it all for them.

Womboyne, Saturday, May, 1885.

I have, &c.,

JAMES DONNELLY.

P.S.—And now please to forward to me £4 for carriage for oysters, namely, twenty bags which will be ready on Monday week (15/6/85), to send away, and please send me two bags of pollard for horse-feed, as my horses are in very low condition. I have had to pack all the men's swags and rations so far.—J. DONNELLY.

Sir,

Eden, 21 August, 1885.

Re questions contained in a memo. of yours dated 18th instant, about a wire purporting to have been sent by me to Mr. Quinan, I beg to inform you of the facts thus: Being informed that the oysters in question were reported as going bad, I went to Bitangabee to obtain for the Department a sample of oysters; while there saw the oysters in question in bags in good condition. Mr. Harrison, a relative of mine, had undertaken the contract of conveying these oysters to Eden in his steam launch; this is the steamer referred to in that telegram, and Mr. Harrison having advised me of that fact. He also asked me to send the message re "land carriage to East Boyd," which I did as a private telegram and paid for same; the expression about shooting them into the Nellica was a proviso in case that any unforeseen hindrance might take place, and so cause the oysters to get out of condition. The Nellica is Mr. Harrison's leased ground, and he would have permitted the action if needful. This will answer the other question in your memo. inasmuch as the oysters were shipped from here in sound condition, because there was no delay as had been anticipated at the time the said telegram was sent.

No. 17.

Mr. Inspector Quinan to The Clerk of the Executive Council.

Sir,

Fisheries Office, Sydney, 14 September, 1885.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, informing me that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, had suspended me from office for alleged misconduct.

I therefore beg most respectfully to ask that you will lay before His Excellency in Council the following explanation:

By permission of the President of the Fisheries Commission my children made applications for oyster culture areas; my son Harold purchased from a Mr. Budden an area adjoining his sisters, at the Wombeyno River, at a cost of £60.

In conversation with Mr. Woodward I mentioned that my children intended to withdraw their applications as I thought it might interfere with my official position.

Mr. Woodward then said, "Don't do that; transfer them to me."

The transfers were made out by me, and signed by each of the applicants, and handed to Mr. Woodward, who lodged them in the Fisheries Office.

These transfers were all approved of by the Commissioners, and two permits issued to Mr. Woodward.

In consideration of the purchase money paid for Mr. Budden's area, Mr. Woodward not being able to pay the money in cash, gave my son Harold a written authority to remove oysters from that area, to the extent of 100 bags, to recoup him for the outlay.

Acting on this authority my son arranged with a dredger named Donnelly to gather oysters and consign them in the lessee's name to my son's agent in the fish market, to be sold by public auction for his benefit.

By Donnelly's letter, dated May, and received early in June, it was understood that the oysters would be sent about the middle of June; this would give three weeks to the receipt of the oysters at Sydney; I have since ascertained that they were eighteen days out of water.

The oysters remained at Bettangabe Bay for many days in the bags, exposed to heavy rain, and severe weather, and on arrival at Sydney were quite out of condition and unsaleable. (See evidence to that effect herewith attached.)

I invite particular attention to Assistant Inspector Smithers' telegram, attached to the correspondence, a copy of which I now attach, showing that he was aware of the state of these oysters, when he asked, "should they be thrown out in the Nellica (a river near Eden) to save them."

As the oysters could not be sold, on account of their condition, they were offered to and accepted by Mr. Comino, on condition that he paid the royalty and carriage from Eden.

Mr. Comino then said he would place them on his beds at the Lane Cove River to revive them; this I had nothing officially to do with, as the law in every respect had been complied with, and no mention was made to me that an application would be made to the Collector of Customs to remit the royalty.

My visit to the Lane Cove River was purely a private one, it being Saturday afternoon; I went there in the regular passenger boat.

Mr. Comino and others are in the habit of laying down oysters on their beds in the harbour without official inspection.

Mr. Comino and other dealers hold a general authority from the Collector of Customs to take delivery of oysters before paying royalty; they pay periodically I believe once a week.

A few days after laying these oysters down, Mr. Comino sent a message to me asking if I would give him a memo. to the Collector of Customs, stating the condition these oysters were in; this I gave him officially in the same manner that I had previously done for others under similar circumstances. (See extract from diary herewith attached.)

It is not true that fifteen or eighteen bags of oysters were recovered from the beds; I saw myself but six bags on a dray at his door; the remainder of the consignment died.

I most positively state I had no personal interest in the payment of royalty, and only acted with Comino as I had done with others.

Re Fisher's application for Comino's area at Lane Cove River. I was never made aware, either by Comino or the Fisheries Department, that Comino had abandoned it, and he is, as far as I know, in possession of it now. Areas are often covered by as many as six different applications, each of which has to be separately reported upon.

Instructions were recently issued to me to take directions from the Chief Inspector, but since these instructions were issued the only directions I have received from that officer, is to send him in each morning a memo. of proposed duties for the day, of myself and assistants, which duties we carry out as far as circumstances will allow.

I furnish the Commissioners monthly (by their direction) with a copy of my diary, the matter under notice being included in my return for the month of July.

I invite attention to the attached letter, received by me from the Fisheries Department on the 9th instant, stating that the application made by my children still remain in their names, notwithstanding the fact that these applications were transferred to Mr. Woodward, and approved of by the Commissioners fully twelve months ago, and two permits issued to Mr. Woodward to work the areas.

I can only infer, by this intimation, that it is sought to connect my family in a very direct present interest in them, which induced me to act as I have done.

Trusting that this my explanation will receive the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Governor in Council.

I have, &c.,

JAMES QUINAN.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Woodward please say, from his personal experience, if oysters that have been exposed to rain and severe weather, after they have been placed in bags, will keep in good marketable condition for any length of time?—JAMES QUINAN, 14/9/85.

Oysters exposed to rain and sunshine after will shortly die. I have lost hundreds of sacs from the same cause.—HENRY WOODWARD, 14/9/85.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Assistant-Inspector Mulhall please inform me if he inspected certain oysters that arrived last month, consigned from Woodward to Comino and Congdon, from the Womboyne River, and if so, will he state in what condition these oysters were in when placed in the market for sale?—JAMES QUINAN, 12/9/85.

Yes, I inspected them. They were in very bad condition.—THOMAS MULHALL, 12/9/85.

Will Boatman Hellings please say if he saw these oysters, and what condition were they in?—J. QUINAN, 12/9/85.

Yes; they were in very bad condition, and unsaleable.—RICHARD HELLINGS, 12/9/85.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Solari please inform me if he remembers certain oysters offered for sale in the Sydney Fish Market about the middle of July last, from the Womboyne River, and can he state, from his personal inspection of these oysters, their condition as regards being fit for consumption, and oblige?—JAMES QUINAN, 12/9/85.

I saw the oysters; they were very poor and out of condition.—LORENZO SOLARI, 14/9/85.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Lawler please inform me if he remembers a consignment of oysters from the Womboyne River, placed in the market for sale about the middle of July last, and if so, did he examine them, and what condition were they in as regards being fit for use as food?—JAMES QUINAN, 15/9/85.

The oysters referred to above came in the market in bad condition. They should have been in some ten days before; half of them were open and very shaky—only fit to lay down.—CARLOS LAWLER, Fish Market.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Fitzgerald please inform me if he remembers a consignment of oysters from the Womboyne River placed in the market for sale about the middle of July last, and if so, can he state from his personal knowledge in what condition they were in, and if they were fit for consumption, and oblige?—JAMES QUINAN, 15/9/85.

The oysters referred to above I saw; they were rotten. I would not take the trouble to lay them down, although oysters were badly wanted at the time. They were the worst order of any oysters that I have seen for the summer.—JOHN FITZGERALD, 45, Ultimo Road.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Inspector Seymour please inform me if he offered for sale certain oysters that arrived about the middle of July from the Womboyne River, and if he remembers the condition the oysters were in; and if these oysters were sold, and oblige?—JAMES QUINAN, 12/9/85.

Mr. Condon put them in for sale (9 bags). They were offered for sale two mornings, but found no buyers. A Mr. Comino then took them, as I believe, for the purpose of putting them in the Parramatta River.—R. SEYMOUR, Inspector of Nuisances, 15/9/85.

Only nine bags were submitted to auction, the remainder of the shipment was not submitted, but all were laid down on Comino's beds.—JAMES QUINAN.

MEMORANDUM.—Will Mr. Cross please say if he did cart certain oysters which arrived in July last, consigned from Woodward to Comino and Congdon, from the Womboyne River, from the market to Lane Cove steamer, and if he can state, from his personal inspection of those oysters, what condition they were in?—JAMES QUINAN, 14/9/85.

Yes; I carted these oysters from the market to the Lane Cove steamer. I inspected them, and found them to be very poor and out of condition.—R. CROSS, 14/9/85.

Telegram from H. Quinan to F. W. Smithers.

My agreement with Donnelly is to land them in good condition at Eden; he can please himself.

Extract from my Diary, dated 7th April, 1885.

JOSEPH COOTE called upon me and asked that the royalty on sixteen bags of oysters, per "Growler," be not charged, as he intended to return them to the waters (being out of condition). I went with him to the Collector of Customs, who said if the oysters were returned to the waters he would not insist on royalty being paid.

The Collector said it was a fair and equitable thing to do.

On my return to the Fisheries Office I mentioned the matter to the Secretary and Chief Inspector, who approved of the action.

[Enclosure.]

The Secretary, Fisheries Commission, to Mr. Inspector Quinan.

Sir,

Department of Fisheries, 9 September, 1885.

Referring to your blank cover memo., dated 4th instant, stating that all the applications made by members of your family to lease land for oyster culture have been transferred through the books of this Department to Mr. H. Woodward, I have to inform you that the transfers referred to have been duly registered, but that there is no record of their having been approved by the transferee, who on inquiry states that he has no intention of accepting them.

As these applications therefore still remain in the name of the original applicants, it will be necessary that the usual notices of withdrawal be sent in, if it be not intended to take up the shores.

I am, &c.,

LINDSAY THOMPSON.

The Principal Under Secretary, B.C., 16/9/85.—A.C.B. Submitted, 18/9/85. This seems to me to be very unsatisfactory, but it may be sent to President of the Fisheries Commission, with whom, after its perusal by him, I will be glad to confer with.—A.S., 21/9/85. The Secretary to the Commissioners of Fisheries, B.C., 21/9/85. C.W.

No. 18.

Mr. Inspector Quinan to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir,

Fisheries Office, Sydney, 18 August, 1885.

The President of the Fisheries Commission has informed me that certain correspondence that has recently taken place between the Commission and myself is about to be submitted to you. I take the earliest opportunity of asking your kind permission to allow me to offer a true and explicit explanation of the matter for your consideration before you deal in any harsh manner towards me.

When the "Amending Fisheries Act" came into force, seeing that the sons and relatives of other inspectors were applicants for oyster culture areas, I asked the President, Dr. Cox, if there would be any objection to my children applying for leases, to which he replied, "I do not see any objection whatever." Acting upon such authority, my children made several applications, and three permits were issued to them to commence work. Some time afterwards my son Harold purchased an area adjoining that of his sister's at the Womboyne River, which cost him in all £50. At my request I induced my children to transfer all their applications to Mr. Woodward, and the only consideration asked was a refund of the £50 my son had paid for the area he had purchased. Mr. Woodward would not pay any money, but gave my son the following authority:—"I hereby authorize Mr. Harold Quinan to remove oysters from my area at the Womboyne River.—HENRY WOODWARD." The quantity agreed upon being about 100 bags, or sufficient to meet the £50 due to him.

Mr. Woodward had obtained a permit from the President to work this bed, and his authority to my son was a strictly business transaction.

Acting upon this authority, my son made arrangements for the removal of oysters. Nineteen bags were gathered about the last week in June, but on account of very severe weather along the coast the oysters could not be conveyed to Eden by water. The oysters were nearly three weeks in transit between the Womboyne River and Eden, having been conveyed by bullock-teams. The oysters were consigned from the lessee (Mr. Woodward) to Messrs. Congdon and Comino, to be sold by auction in the Sydney Fish Market. On arrival at Sydney it was found that on account of detention on the voyage that the oysters (although of legal size) were out of condition and unsaleable. They were offered to and accepted by Mr. Comino, on condition that he paid freight from Eden and royalty; no other consideration whatever was given for them, and my son lost upwards of £20, the expenses in gathering them. A few days afterwards this Mr. Comino, at his own desire, placed these oysters on his beds at Lano Cove River in order to revive them. I went to see them placed there, but not in my official capacity; it was Saturday afternoon, and I had left the office for the day. A few days after this Mr. Comino sent his man to my office, and asked if I would give him a memo. to the Collector of Customs stating the condition the oysters were in, as he intended to ask the Collector not to charge royalty until the oysters were again removed from the waters. This memo. I gave him, the very same as I had given on former occasions, and stated to the Collector more recently in the case of Joseph Cootes, who returned oysters to the waters because they were out of condition. The Collector did not insist upon Cootes paying royalty, but expressed it but a fair and equitable thing to do under the circumstances.

I had no interest whatever in the payment of royalty, as the oysters were given to Mr. Comino on the express understanding that royalty was to be paid. The Collector not agreeing to Mr. Comino's request the royalty was paid.

I most solemnly declare that I have no interest whatever either in the business of Mr. Woodward or Mr. Comino. The oysters were removed under permit from the President of the Fisheries Commission and written authority of the lessee, inspected at the port of shipment, a permit issued to ship them, and advice sent by the Inspector at Eden to the Collector of Customs, Sydney, and the royalty paid.

I may state for your information that I am not the only officer under the Fisheries Department whose sons or relatives are connected in oyster culture areas, as the following list will show:—

Inspectors.	Lessees.
Chief-Inspector Mr. L. G. Thompson	Son holds area at Port Stephens.
Assistant-Inspector White	Son holds extensive areas under his father's supervision.
Assistant-Inspector Gyler	Sons hold areas at Manning River under their father's supervision.
Inspector Temperley	Sister and brother-in-law hold areas under Mr. Temperley's supervision.
Mr. A. Ross	Sigs permits for Inspector, and is the holder of areas at the Clarence, and issues his own permits.

Whereas my children are not now the holders of a single oyster culture area,

I have not been supplied with a copy of any evidence that may have been taken in this matter, and am therefore unable to offer any further explanation until I am made aware of what has been said.

The other matter is with reference to the purchase by me of eight bags of oysters for exhibition purposes.

Whilst on leave of absence on the 18th of May last, the President, Dr. Cox, met me outside the office door, and said, "I wish, Mr. Quinan, you would give us all the help you can in procuring fish, and in any other way help us in procuring exhibits for the Exhibition. Now I want you to go to the market in the morning, see Mr. Seymour, present him with my compliments, and ask if he will assist us by allowing fish to be cleaned in the market and a boiler to be placed there." I went to the market next morning at 4.30 a.m., conveyed Dr. Cox's message to Mr. Seymour, and acquainted Dr. Cox of the result of my visit. I was then directed to purchase a boiler, boxes to pack exhibits, engage a man to preserve the oyster-shells and clean fish, and in consultation with Mr. Pinnock, clerk in charge of exhibits, went frequently at his request to the market and the wharves on Exhibition business. Also it was arranged that I should purchase eight bags of oysters, engage men to open them, and go myself to the Preserving Works at Rokewood and see them opened. I ordered the oysters, which were to be of the best description to be had at this season of the year, and agreed to pay 50s. per bag for them (the price paid during last Exhibition being 55s. per bag). I also engaged men to open the oysters at Rokewood, and was prepared to proceed to Rokewood on Monday morning, but the Secretary informed me that I was not to go. The oysters were taken delivery of by Boatman Hellings; at Mr. Pinnock's request they were opened by the men I engaged and preserved.

I spoke to Mr. Pinnock about expenses I had incurred in connection with my visits to the markets and wharves, and he said he would pay me. This has not been done, and I am at a loss to understand the meaning of all the correspondence that has taken place in reference to this matter. I carried out the instructions issued to me by Dr. Cox and the subsequent arrangements made by me with Mr. Pinnock, all but proceeding to Rokewood, which I was prevented from doing by the Secretary, for what reason I I do not know. I have ever fearlessly and zealously carried out the duties of my office, and by doing so have incurred the displeasure of many, including Mr. Commissioner Hill, whom I have had occasion to report to the Commissioners for having used an illegal fishing-net, and would in support of this assertion ask you to call for the correspondence on the matter. Mr. Hill has made statements on the correspondence which is unfair to me, and would not give me an opportunity of reply, although I asked to be allowed to do so.

Trusting you will give me early opportunity to clear myself in this matter,

Submitted, 21.

I have, &c.,

Minute of Colonial Secretary.

THIS has only been now (19th Sept.) submitted to me, and I have read it in connection with Mr. Quinan's reply to the Executive Council Minute. The cases he refers to, or some of them at least, of other Inspectors' sons holding leases, are in no way parallel. The complaint against him is that his sons, being minors, held leases which were managed by him, whereas in one case which he adduces, Mr. White, M.P., has been independent of his father these thirty years. It is really trifling with the matter to bring forward such an instance, and shows that Mr. Quinan does not seem to have a due appreciation of the charges preferred against him.

Memorandum on Colonial Secretary's Minute, dated 21/9/85.

MR. QUINAN states, in his letter of explanation to the Colonial Secretary:—"I asked the President, Dr. Cox, if there would be any objection to my children applying for leases, to which he replied, 'I do not see any objection whatever.'"

The President distinctly remembers this conversation, and told Mr. Quinan at the time that, as far as he could see in the Act, any person, without respect to age or sex, had the privilege of applying to lease land for oyster culture, but it was for the Commissioners to decide whether they would recommend such applications to be granted, as the 4th section of the Act says that leases "may" be granted, but it would be impossible for him to say definitely that they would be granted.

In regard to the case referred to, where the Secretary and Chief Inspector (Mr. Thompson's) son is an applicant, the President wishes to point out that the gentleman there referred to is beyond the age of 21 years, and is not within the control of Mr. Thompson, or the Commissioners.

No. 21.

The Secretary, Fisheries Commission, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir,

I have the honor, by direction of the Commissioners of Fisheries, to return herewith the papers in connection with the suspension of Mr. Jas. Quinan, the Inspector for the Home Division of Fisheries, together with notations thereon, which have been prepared by direction of the Commissioners for the information of the Colonial Secretary.

2 October, 1885.

I have, &c.,

LINDSAY THOMPSON.

Having carefully considered Mr. Quinan's case I do not think that he has satisfactorily explained the charges preferred against him, and therefore recommend that he be fined in the sum of £25, in accordance with the 33rd section of the C. S. Act, and that he be severely reprimanded and his suspension removed.—P.A.J., 26/11/85.

Cabinet approves, 26/11/85. Prepare a minute.—G.R.D. Herewith, 27/11/85.

Statutory Declaration.

New South Wales, }
to wit. }

I, JAMES QUINAN, of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, do solemnly and sincerely declare that, before my children made applications for oyster-culture areas, I asked Dr. Cox, the President of the Fisheries Commission, if there would be any objection to their doing so, I being an Inspector of Fisheries. Dr. Cox replied, "Not the slightest objection, Quinan; they have a perfect right to do so." The children of other Inspectors are working oyster-culture areas now immediately under their father's supervision. All the applications made by my family have been transferred, and the authority given by Mr. Woodward to my son Harold has been returned to him. And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

day of November, 1885, before me, — }

You will therefore have the goodness to report yourself at once to the Secretary, Fisheries Department.

I have the honor, by direction of the President of the Fisheries Commission, to forward, for the information of the Colonial Secretary, the accompanying letter from Mr. Jas. Quinan, Inspector for the Home Division of Fisheries, of whom I hold your instructions that he is under suspension for irregular conduct in the performance of his duties, and while asking Sir Patrick Jennings' attention to the somewhat unusual means which Mr. Quinan has taken to announce his return to duty, I am to say that the Commissioners are not in receipt of any advice that his suspension has been removed.

No. 29.

The Secretary, Fisheries Commission, to The Principal Under Secretary.

Sir, Department of Fisheries, 10 December, 1885.

I have the honor, by direction of the Commissioners of Fisheries for New South Wales, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 3rd instant, intimating that His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has been pleased to approve of Mr. James Quinan, an Inspector of Fisheries, being fined on account of misconduct, in the sum of £25, in accordance with section 33 of the "Civil Service Act, 1884," and of his being very severely reprimanded and his suspension removed.

In reply thereto I am desired to say that the Commissioners accept, without question, the decision thus conveyed, but they desire to point out that the retention of Mr. Quinan's services in this office will, from the opinion they have been able to form of him, prove injurious to the Department, and they will be glad if the Colonial Secretary will be pleased to transfer Mr. Quinan to some other Department of the Public Service.

I have, &c.

Inspector Quinan, Fisheries Department, asking for time to pay fine of £25, under "Civil Service Act." To His Excellency the Governor-in-Council,—

May it please Your Excellency,

Your Petitioner is Inspector of the Home Division of Fisheries.

For recent misconduct your Petitioner has been fined, under the Civil Service Act, in the sum of £25.

Your

Your Petitioner has a widowed mother, a wife, and nine children, to support and maintain.

Your Petitioner's salary is at the rate of £220 per annum, less 4 per cent. deduction.

The immediate payment of the fine from your Petitioner's salary will cause deep distress to his family, and will prevent him from discharging his just debts incurred in the support of his family during the three months he was under suspension.

Your Petitioner humbly prays your Excellency in Council to take his case into your kind consideration, and either remit the fine or grant him time to pay the same by small monthly instalments.

And your Petitioner, in duty bound, will ever pray.

JAMES QUINAN.

I have the honor, by direction of the Commissioners of Fisheries for New South Wales, to request that you will be good enough to favor me with a reply to my letter dated 10th ultimo, asking for the transference of Mr. James Quinan, Inspector of Fisheries, to some other Department of the Public Service.

I am to say that for the reasons stated in the second paragraph of my letter referred to, the Commissioners of Fisheries have deemed it advisable not to entrust Mr. Quinan with the performance of any official duty.

NET-FISHING IN PORT HACKING PROHIBITION BILL.

(PETITION FROM CERTAIN FISHERMEN AND RESIDENTS OF BOTANY, PORT HACKING, AND GEORGE'S RIVER.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 26 May, 1886.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned fishermen and residents of Botany, Port Hacking, and George's River,—

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:—

That the Bill, 49 Victoria, 1886, introduced by Sir John Robertson, to prohibit net-fishing or other wholesale destruction of fish in the waters of Port Hacking, will, if passed by your Honorable House, cause considerable loss and ruin to many of us, your humble Petitioners, who subsist by means of this industry.

That the net-fishing carried on by us your Petitioners in the waters of Port Hacking does not in any way cause the wholesale destruction of the fish.

That Port Hacking is not a breeding-ground of the fish, and the closing of it against net-fishing will not in any way either preserve or increase the number of the fish in it, as past experience in similar cases will show the fish only go into the waters of Port Hacking in the summer-time, and in winter-time go out into deep sea.

That if it be necessary to close Port Hacking against net-fishing, it will be necessary also to close it against line-fishing.

That if it be necessary to close Port Hacking against net-fishing by professional fishermen, who have to pay for licenses for themselves, their men, and their boats, it will also be necessary to close the port against net-fishing by amateurs, who pay no license fees.

That it is the desire of your Petitioners that every effort should be used to preserve the fish in and about Port Hacking, as they are most directly interested in their preservation and obtain their livelihood from fish.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that, for these and other reasons, your Honorable House will see fit not to pass the said Bill.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Here follow 244 signatures.]

Regulations.

Under the powers conferred by clause 6 of the Fire Brigades Act, 1884, the Board passed regulations as follows:—

1. For payment of compensation in cases of accidents to members of the Brigade, or where death ensues therefrom, to their wives and families. Gazetted 13th October, 1884.
2. For payment of gratuities in respect of voluntary or special services rendered to the Brigade. Gazetted 22nd December, 1884.
3. For subsidising Volunteer Fire Brigades and for ensuring discipline and good conduct amongst members of the Brigade. Gazetted 4th July, 1884.
4. For regulating the meetings and conduct of business by the Board. Gazetted 4th July, 1884. Amended regulations were gazetted.
5. For regulating and directing the procedure in respect of inquests on fires to be held by Coroners. Gazetted 4th July, 1884.

As to Regulations for the Management of the Brigade.

The Board has received valuable suggestions from Superintendent Bear in framing a code of rules, which have been submitted to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary for approval, in accordance with sub-section 5 section 6 of the Act.

As to the Division of the City into Fire Districts.

It has been deemed advisable to postpone this matter until the question of situation and erection of permanent stations has been determined. As

As to Inquests on Fires.

The Board is of opinion that the present law on this subject is not satisfactory. The Fire Brigades' Act, 1884, gives power to the Board to direct a Coroner to hold an enquiry if it think fit. The Act 24 Victoria No. 10, as to inquests on fires, gives the Coroner the option of holding one if he think fit. The only person who can now hold one is the Coroner. The reason, probably, which might actuate the Board in demanding an enquiry might not appear cogent to the Coroner. Thence arises an opening for the clashing of opinions. The Board is of opinion that inquests should be held in all cases of fire where the evidence is not clear and unmistakeable as to its being the result of pure accident. The Board requires that the Superintendent, when forwarding his fire report, should express an opinion as to whether an inquest is desirable; but as this opinion may be only hastily given before he has had time to consider, his answer in the negative may unconsciously burk an enquiry which subsequent investigation may deem necessary. The Board does not think an enquiry should be limited to ascertaining the mere proximate cause of a fire, but should take cognizance of all circumstances likely to throw light on the matter. In arson, as in the case of murder, direct proof is almost always absent. In the interests therefore of the public a thorough investigation should be held. In America this is invariably done by the heads of the Fire Department. The Board would point out that it was only on the repeated demands of a brother of a lodger at the late Coffee Palace in Pitt-street that an inquest was eventually held. Though the fire aspect of the case was suspicious, the Fire Brigades' Board was unable to obtain an enquiry which should have been held at once. Inquests have been delayed until all hope of ascertaining the cause of the fire has been lost, and in the event of arson this delay is often fatal to conviction. Considering the increasing demands on the present able Coroner of the Metropolitan District, the Board is of opinion that the Government might well take the matter into consideration as to whether some other system might not be adopted with regard to inquests on fires. An Assistant Coroner seems a matter of necessity. The Act 24 Vic. No. 10 certainly needs amending, and the scope of enquiries into fires needs extension.

Annual Outlay.

In estimating the annual outlay for the year 1884, the Board took into consideration the purchase of land for a site and the erection of a Central Fire Station. The Government however deemed it advisable to purchase land for sites and to erect Fire Stations.

Sites and Fire Stations.

The Government has purchased a site situated on the west side of Castlereagh-street, between Bathurst and Liverpool Streets, for a Central Station. Plans of the building have been submitted from the Colonial Architect's Department and approved of by the Board. The erection of this, the chief station, now rests entirely with the Government.

The Board has also recommended the Government to resume a piece of land situated at the corner of George-street North and Circular Quay as a site for a Northern Branch Station, being close to the water, and where the Steam Floating Engine, which the Government is about purchasing, is proposed to be stationed.

A site situated on the north side of George-street West, and admirably suited for a Southern Branch Station has been purchased by the Fire Brigades' Board. Plans of the Station to be erected have been prepared by Messrs. Rowe and Green, architects, under the supervision of Superintendent Bear.

Telephones and Fire Alarms.

Telephonic communication has been established between the Central Fire Station, Bathurst-street, and the following Volunteer Fire Stations:—No. 1, situated in Pitt-street South; No. 4, situated in Hancock's Tower, George-street; No. 2, situated in York-street; Surry Hills, Palmer-street; Theatre Royal, Castlereagh-street; Standard Brewery, Foveaux-street; as well as the Stations at Paddington, Balmain (2), Glebe, Pyrmont, Redfern, Waterloo, Alexandria, and Newtown.

As the positions of the Central and Southern Branch Stations have been decided upon, the Board with the assistance of Superintendent Bear is engaged in arranging a system of fire alarms from these Stations which the Board expect to have completed by the time the Stations are erected, the Board is also engaged in considering the subject of fire protection in the various Municipalities enumerated in the Schedule to the Act.

Volunteer Fire Companies.

The following Volunteer Fire Companies were registered by the Board, and having received a certificate of efficiency from the Superintendent have been subsidized for the year 1884. In granting the subsidies to companies in the suburbs the Board has taken into consideration the area of each district.

Companies within the city:—Theatre Royal, Standard Brewery, No. 2, No. 4, No. 5, Surry Hills. Suburban Companies:—Alexandria, Balmain, Burwood, Glebe, Newtown, Paddington, Petersham, Redfern, St. Leonards.

The Board is anxious to utilize the services of the Volunteer Firemen, a body of men supposed to be intimately acquainted with the districts to which they belong, and as likely to be of great use in protecting those parts of the city and suburbs where the Brigade Stations are not located.

Considerable attention has been paid to the organization, remuneration, and other questions connected with this subject.

The Board would respectfully point out that volunteering in fire service labours under the same defects as military volunteering. There is the same absence of discipline and subordination, and there is the same difficulty in obtaining an efficient body of men ready to proceed in sufficient numbers at all hours whenever an alarm is given. It is possible that should an alarm be given after sunrise most of the members would be proceeding to their daily work, and that not a man would be available. Most of the members of Fire Companies live at considerable distances from their respective stations. The Board has had considerable trouble about its own brigade in this latter respect, and is endeavouring to plant stations of its own wherein the members can be domiciled. It is impossible to have control over men who require the attendance of others to hunt them up whenever a fire alarm is given. It has been found that unless a fire is attacked at its inception all the water in the city may be useless to extinguish it, and a few men specially and systematically drilled are of more service than hosts of undisciplined though willing volunteers.

teers, even were they ready for service. The Board cannot be accused of niggardliness towards the volunteers, for the total voted for them for the year 1885, subject to the regulations, is £2,500. It remains to be seen how far the volunteers are disposed to render the same willing and effective service with which they have been credited in the past. The Superintendent has been instructed to have details of the attendance at all fires carefully noted, as well as other particulars, in order to enable the Board and the public to ascertain the value of this element in fire extinction.

The Board has had considerable trouble in the matter of engines of volunteer companies, many of which are practically unserviceable, and some are not free from debt. In the event of a call being made it is in the power of certain individuals to forbid the use of the plant. Instead, therefore, of finding a large number of volunteer associations willing and capable of affording ready aid in the suppression of fires, the Board has had to depend almost entirely upon its own brigade, even in places protected, as it was supposed, by local corps.

Salvage Corps.

The Insurance Companies requested the Board to charge the Brigade with the duties of a salvage corps. The Insurance Companies agreed to charge themselves with the expenses in addition to the annual levy made upon them.

The report of the Superintendent for the year 1884, together with a detailed account of the fires which occurred during the year, and the causes assigned therefore, is forwarded for the information of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

The Board is of opinion that for the more efficient working of the Act numerous alterations and additions are necessary, which will be submitted by the Board for approval to the Colonial Secretary, and therefore respectfully requests that an amended Act be framed embodying the suggestions, and brought before Parliament at the ensuing Session. With reference thereto it may be necessary to give a short summary of the proposed amendments, with an explanation of the necessity therefor.

Kerosene Act.

The attention of the Board was drawn to the imperfections of this Act by the fact that 50,000 cases of American oil which had a flashing point below 100° Fahrenheit was allowed to be landed, stored, and distributed throughout the Colony. The oil had been condemned at Brisbane, and could not be landed there. It was immediately forwarded to Sydney, no doubt, at a reduced price. The only restriction to the sale of such imported rubbish here is that a label be affixed to the vessel containing the oil stating that it is dangerous and that it flashes below the standard. It is of course scarcely necessary to add that such label will not adhere to the tin containing the oil, and is easily removed. Moreover, when the oil is retailed no information of course is given as to its dangerous properties. It is disgraceful that lives should be jeopardised as they have been in America by the evasions practised under this Act.

The Board draws special attention to the letter in the appendix from Superintendent Bear on this subject.

The Act affords no security to the public in the matter of storage of kerosene oil. The only restriction is that the store be 50 feet away from any building occupied by other persons. This is evaded by the same lessees securing the buildings in the vicinity. No store for the storage of kerosene should be allowed to be above ground, and ample quantities of loose earth should be available to throw on the store should a fire take place. One of the principal receptacles is situated in the midst of large warehouses, and less than 50 feet from shipping, and the ground slopes from it to the harbour. Water only aggravates the mischief. A fire in this store would probably destroy half the waterside warehouses and shipping alongside.

Gunpowder and Explosives Act.

The Board wishes to draw particular attention to what is apparently an oversight in the wording of the clauses. It is evident that the word "explosives" throughout is intended to include what are defined to be "explosive substances." The reason why a distinction was made was to enable the Governor by Proclamation to exempt any of the substances defined as "explosive substances," but not to exempt "explosives" as defined under the Act. As the Act is drawn the Governor has nothing to exempt, for the words "explosive substances" are omitted from all the important clauses. One section referring specially in its heading to them, does not mention them again. A short amending Act should be passed on the subject. The Board refers to Superintendent Bear's report on the subject of the storage of eighty-seven cases, each containing 10,000 copper detonators composed of fulminate of mercury which the ordnance storekeeper is unable to deal with owing to the defects of the Act above pointed out.

Lofty Buildings.

The Board wishes to point out the danger to the citizens from the rapid growth of enormous and lofty warehouses. It is impossible for the fire department to overtake this element of danger.

In a recent fire in London the whole of the engines, all steamers, of the Metropolitan District were unable to extinguish the fire. The danger to the city was not limited to the locality of the fire, for the rest of the district was left entirely unprovided for in case another large fire broke out. It is well known too that in large fires the men become thoroughly exhausted, the hose and appliances become unfit for another fire until they are thoroughly overhauled.

The Modern Sydney Warehouse, looming up 100 feet in the air, with its enormous cubic capacity, in some instances ten times that allowed in other cities, its shafts for lifts, gas-engines, and other modern developments to aid the fire fiend, is beyond the capacity of any fire department to protect.

The Board suggests that the provisions of the Liverpool Fire Acts, which are the most complete in the world, be adopted in this Colony.

The Board regards these buildings as only so many fire traps. There can scarcely be a doubt that a collapse of some of these structures by fire would entail an enormous loss of life by crushing the houses on the opposite side of the street.

Modern

Modern architects cannot construct as fire-proof buildings as their predecessors did, and the cost of labour induces the mercantile community to sacrifice everything to convenience.

The Board has regard to the lives of the members of its brigade as well. Superintendent Bear will confirm these opinions. He states that where good and substantial staircases are absent in a lofty warehouse it is death to attempt to fight a fire from within as it should be fought. An improved Building Act dealing specially with these questions seems an urgent necessity, and should be prepared before more "improvements" render the task of combating fire more dangerous than it is.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE FIRE BRIGADES' ACT, 1884.

Power to borrow and purchase, &c.

1. It has been held that the power already granted to the Board to hold property does not include the right to purchase. It is also desirable that the Board should have power to issue debentures.

To extend to the whole Colony.

2. For many reasons it is desirable that the principal Act and the amended Act should apply to the whole of the Colony. In the Metropolitan District alone the City of Sydney Acts do not extend beyond the boundaries of the city, yet on the other side of a road may be as thickly a populated town as the city itself.

The Board is of opinion that an amended Town Improvement Act should be framed which, as far as concerns erections of buildings in all proclaimed boroughs, should be at once enforced, whether the councils demand its extension or not.

3. In other countries, especially in America, Insurance Companies have the power by enactment to form a salvage corps. It is considered that here it would be better were the duties of such a corps carried out subject to the authority of the Superintendent of the Fire Brigade, as when there are two separate authorities at work collisions are inevitable. It is not proposed to charge the Board with the expenses of this corps.

4 and 5. Circumstances may arise when it might be desirable to allow the brigade to proceed beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the Board, and also when the plant might be of service in other matters not connected with either extinguishing fire or saving life; such as, for instance, raising sunken vessels, &c. Power is therefore sought to enable the Board to carry both these objects into effect.

6. The principal Act gives the Superintendent power to take command when persons voluntarily place their services at his disposal at a fire, but he has no power to order out any body of firemen or to restrain them from proceeding to a fire whereat their services are not required. The Board is of opinion that it is impossible to arrange for the protection of every part of the district under it if all the companies at an alarm of fire rush with one accord to the spot indicated. A bucket of water may be sufficient to extinguish a fire, yet instances have been known where the assembled companies thought it necessary to show their eagerness for work by putting on full streams of water after all signs of fire had disappeared.

Provision should also be made that all unregistered companies, in localities where a Board is established, be prohibited under penalties from engaging in fire extinction, as such companies can have no legal standing, and disputes must inevitably arise.

It also seems desirable that all fire companies should have a principal officer duly registered who should be held responsible for the acts of his company.

Nos. 7, 14, 19, 20, 21, and 23 require no comment as being necessary for the effective discharge of the duties of the Brigade.

No. 8, and connected therewith No. 13, require no comment. As it is proposed to charge rent for quarters occupied by the Brigade, and so to diminish the cost of the erection and maintenance of the fire stations, provision must be made for recovery of same and ejection of tenants, as is done in the English Acts.

No. 9. This has been inserted as the wording of sub-section V of section 6 of the principal Act is very vague. If the word "Brigade" therein refers to the volunteers as it has been held to refer, there is no provision elsewhere for the Board to make regulations for its own brigade.

Nos. 10 and 11. The Superintendent has the power of reporting on any infringement of these Acts; but as the Board is perfectly helpless in the matter, being merely a filtering medium when the report is sent in, some further enactment seems to be necessary. It is proposed that the Superintendent, appointed as he is by the Government, should have the rights and powers of an Inspector under both these Acts, and if necessary, should be gazetted as such. The Report deals with the subject of these Acts in another place.

As to remaining part of sub-section V, clause 10, of the principal Act, there are no regulations yet in existence affecting these. It was therefore incumbent upon the Board to frame such regulations as they would request to have passed. No one, unless he has made the subject his business has the slightest idea of the tremendous risks incurred by the city and suburbs and country towns by the almost daily violation of all ordinary precautions against fire.

Nos. 22, 27, and 30. Similar remarks apply under these heads.

Nos. 12, 28, and 29. These have been adopted from various regulations in force in these Colonies, and are essential. It must be remembered that though some of the proposed amendments may be unnecessary in the City of Sydney, yet the jurisdiction of the Fire Brigades Board is not limited to the city. Precautions are more urgently needed in the suburbs, which have not the same means of repressing fire as the city.

Nos. 15, 16, and 18. When the Insurance Companies maintained a Fire Brigade and Salvage Corps, they had an inherent right to employ the corps as their agents in looking after premises and salvage, but under the present Act it is rather mortifying for the Superintendent to be threatened with prosecution for keeping possession of premises for the purpose of preventing pillage, checking fraud, and preserving damaged property. It is absolutely necessary also in cases of incendiarism that the Superintendent should be protected, and that implicated persons should have no access to the premises except under supervision.

Nos. 17 and 33. These concern inquests at fires, a matter referred to at large in a former part of the report. It is important in the interest of the public that the Board rather than Insurance Companies should be represented at inquests. Clause 33 has been adopted from the Tasmanian Act, with the name of Minister of Justice substituted for that of the Governor.

No. 24. Owing to applications from country towns to be placed under the Act it seems only reasonable that some central authority should have power to regulate and control the expenditure. In one case it is reported that the fees allowed to the Metropolitan Board are being paid to the Local Board. It is to be feared that applications are made more to the promotion of a little brief authority in a country town than to the satisfactory settlement of fire extinction. Unless proper water supply, efficient machines, and effective men can be secured, the expenditure is nearly useless. It is hard especially on the Insurance Companies who have to find one-third of the expenses (irrespective of their premiums) to be compelled to contribute without being furnished with particulars of the estimated cost, &c. The Insurance Companies are not sufficiently represented by their local agents, who have no power to bind their companies; in some places the companies have no agents, and are consequently unrepresented.

A local agent should not have such powers placed in his hands.

In South Australia the Central Board at Adelaide regulates the whole Colony.

The Act requires some important alteration in this respect. The Government should have, as well as the other contributories, some official head to counteract the possible demand for practically useless purposes of large sums of money. In one town the levy equals one shilling per cent. on the amount insured, and the Companies do not know what advantages, if any, they have acquired.

No. 25. This is necessary, owing to the inability of the Board to see that money voted by it is properly applied, and that books are not being improperly detained. The Board has had considerable trouble with one company in particular, and had to take legal advice on the subject.

No. 26. It is necessary that the town clerks or other persons should furnish the necessary returns as soon as possible, to enable the Board to apportion the contribution in the month of January.

The Insurance Companies are under a heavy penalty if they do not comply, yet they can only ascertain their liability after the close of the year. The Municipalities, on the other hand, have their liabilities known in the month of February previously. In some cases returns were delayed for months.

No. 31. If Volunteer Fire Companies are to be rendered efficient, the same methods seem necessary as those exacted from the military volunteers. It is useless for the Superintendent to expect to obtain useful assistance unless he knows where to ask for it.

No. 33. The Marine Companies under their marine policies insure against fire an enormous amount of property, either in shipping or on shore. Their usual practice is to insure wool from the sheep's back to London. The shipping is likewise insured against fire. The Government propose to import a floating-engine, but the expenses of maintenance will fall upon the Board. The services rendered would principally be to protect marine underwriters, if not wholly, and the Board thinks they should as reasonably be taxed as Fire Companies, if such a tax is reasonable at all.

The only question is as to the time of making the return, for, as most of the insurances are fluctuating, an amount at one time of the year might be vastly different to that at another time.

The Board has frequently had occasion to make inquiry into charges of insubordination, &c. It is necessary that the Chairman should have power to examine on oath, as is the case in Military Courts of Inquiry.

CHARLES BOWN,
Chairman, Fire Brigades Board.

SUPERINTENDENT BEAR'S Report on a quantity of Kerosene lately arrived in Sydney from Brisbane.

Gentlemen, Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 13 July, 1885.

I have the honor to report to your Board that about eight days ago, from information received, I found that most of the kerosene oil lately condemned at the port of Brisbane was being delivered and distributed throughout Sydney, and a great quantity of which was stored at Towns' Wharf, leased by Messrs. Dolgerty & Co.

I visited the said wharf and found the licensed store for such oils (the building which has a wooden framework and corrugated iron roof) stocked full of kerosene and gasoline. The authorities on the wharf acknowledged that most of the kerosene was part of the oil condemned at Brisbane.

After having visited the wharf I called at the Government Analytical Department to see the Kerosene Inspector, but he not being in at the time, the principal of the department informed me that the kerosene in question has been tested and found not to flash until it reached 150° Fahrenheit thermometer, therefore it was considered 40° less dangerous than the Act specified. The matter then dropped.

On Saturday last, the 11th instant, I received a communication stating that the tins of the kerosene in question had a label affixed.

If this label is correct, then the kerosene cannot have been as represented by the principal of the Government Analytical Department.

I again visited the Analytical Department and told the Principal of what had happened, and he then stated that the oil in question flashed under 110° Fahrenheit, and the labels had to be affixed. I then asked him why he had previously stated to me that the oil in question would not flash until it reached 150°. He then answered that the oil had been tested in the old fashioned way, and not according to the schedule to the Act in a water bath.

I then questioned him, for the information of your Board, to what degree the flashing point was; but he stated that he could not tell me, but was quite willing to test the oil in question if I obtained a sample of it. I also asked him what would be done concerning the great storage of the same at the wharf.

He told me he could not move in the matter until the Inspector of Kerosene returned from the country next Wednesday.

I again visited the wharf, and tried to obtain a sample, but was informed that it was impossible without an order from the Kerosene Inspector, the Customs, and from Messrs. Lamb & Co.—the latter being the importers.

I called on the Customs, and was informed by them that the inflammability of the oil was no business of theirs; all they had to do with it was to see that the duty was paid for it.

In the first place I may inform your Board that the licensed store at Towns' Wharf is within 20 yards of other stores on the same wharf, close to the shipping and a large stack of timber.

But, for all this, I am very doubtful whether anything can be done, as the Kerosene Act reads thus:—

Clause 4, on page 2. After the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two no person shall have or keep in any house storehouse shop cellar yard wharf or any other building or place occupied by the same person or persons within the boundaries of any town or municipality more than two hundred gallons of kerosene at any one time unless such house storehouse warehouse shop cellar yard wharf or any other building be situate more than fifty yards from a dwelling-house or from any building or place belonging to any other person in which goods are stored. Any person acting in contravention of the section shall forfeit all the kerosene so kept in excess of the said quantity together with the cases or tins containing the same and be liable to a penalty of not exceeding two shillings for every gallon of kerosene kept in excess. Provided that nothing in this clause shall prevent the storage of kerosene in any quantity on the premises where it is manufactured.

Again,

Again, I am informed, that the flashing point of this oil is 98° Fahrenheit, which is 12° below the Act. I must further point out to your Board that there is no margin given in the Act as to how low a temperature kerosene may be allowed to flash before it is rejected.

If the above is a true statement as to the flashing point of this oil, I should strongly recommend your Board to take some steps for the prevention of its distribution in the Colony. It has been proved beyond a doubt in London that when American oils give off a vapour at 100° Fahrenheit, great care has to be taken in the lighting of lamps, &c., as it has a tendency to explode; this, I have been informed, is due to a greater quantity of hydro-carbon being in the said oil.

And, further, persons buying this oil in a retail manner, by the pint or quart, will not know anything of its being dangerous, as the label is only affixed to the tins. Persons buying it by the case will also be ignorant until each case is opened. Whether the conditions of clause 3 of the Kerosene Act has been carried out I am unable to say; but one thing is very certain, that we are having a dangerous oil distributed throughout the Colony to the danger of the public in general, both as regards life and property.

In conclusion, your Board are no doubt aware that I have no other power under the Fire Brigades' Act to move in the matter than report to your Board.

Appended are statements from the daily papers concerning the said oil.

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Supt. M.F.B.

The original letter together with the extracts were forwarded to the honorable the Colonial Secretary for his information on the 14th July, 1885.

APPENDIX F.

Superintendent Bear's Report on a quantity of "Fulminate of Mercury" detonators stored at Parbury's Wharf.

Gentlemen, Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Bathurst-street, 24th August, 1885.

I have the honor to report to your Board that, having received information of a large quantity of "Fulminate of Mercury" detonators was stored at Parbury's Wharf, I visited the same, and the information proved correct.

There are eighty-seven cases, each case containing 10,000 detonators, also some unpacked, making in all about 900,000 in the store on the said wharf. I called on the Inspector of Explosives (Mr. J. L. Blanchard) in reference to the subject, and he informs me that he has no power under the Act to have them removed, although he considers them highly dangerous to the property. Spens' Encyclopedia gives the following information concerning Fulminate of Mercury:—"It is one of the most explosive compounds known, and should be handled with great care, especially when it is dry, and it explodes at a temperature of 360° Fahrenheit, or by an electric spark." Other works on the subject give the same opinion, but vary in the temperature of explosion from 300° to 330° Fahrenheit. After this I need hardly point out to your Board the danger of storing so much of this explosive in the one store, in case of lightning, fire, or the probable chance of concussion by allowing one of the cases to fall. And I may also add that the officials connected with the said wharf are very much alarmed with the danger of this explosive.

Whether anything can be done to remove these detonators I must leave to your Board, but I should have thought that ample power was given under clause 4, on page 2 of the Gunpowder and Explosive Consolidation Act of 1876, under the heading of "Explosives."

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Supt. M.F.B.

REPORT of the Superintendent of Fire Brigades for the Metropolitan District on the Working of the Brigade and the Fires in the City and Suburbs of Sydney during the year 1884.

To the Fire Brigades Board,—
Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade,
Bathurst-street, Sydney, 19th January, 1885.

I have the honor to present the following annual report of fires in the city and suburbs of Sydney for the year ending 31st December, 1884, attended by the Brigade and the several Volunteer Fire Companies.

The total number of alarms for fires, or supposed fires, received during the past year has been 196. Of these, fifty were false alarms; seventeen proved to be only chimney alarms; and 129 were actual fires. Of the latter, twenty-three resulted in total destruction, fifteen in serious damage, and ninety-one of slight or trifling damage. In addition to the ordinary calls for fires there has been twenty-nine chimney fires, requiring the attendance of firemen only with hand-pump, making an aggregate total of 225 for fires, false alarms, and chimneys on fire.

The actual fires of 1884, compared with those of 1883, show an increase of twenty-five; in chimney alarms, attended with engines, a decrease of nine; in chimney fires, attended by firemen with hand-pump, an increase of ten; and in false alarms also a decrease of ten.

In comparing the fires of 1884 with those of 1883, it will be observed that in fires which resulted in total destruction there has been an increase of nine; in fires of serious damage, an increase of five; in fires of slight or trifling damage, an increase of eleven. Of the fires which resulted in total destruction nine were, comparatively speaking, insignificant, being small private and shed buildings of a wooden structure.

Annexed will be found detailed statements of the various fires attended by the Brigade and the Volunteer Companies during the year, showing particular dates, time of calls, time of outbreak, localities, trades, causes, insurances, &c. There will also be found hourly and daily, weekly and monthly, summaries of all calls received during the year, and a statement showing in what manner the calls were given to the Brigade. There will also be found a summary of the "origins" of fires for the past ten years, viz., 1875 to 1884, both years inclusive, together with a comparison of all calls received during the same period.

In addition to the foregoing will be found a complete summary of the various localities of all calls, and a summary of the trades of the actual fires of 1884.

On referring to the summary of localities, it will be noticed that for all calls in the city the Brigade has been called to Brisbane Ward thirty-nine times; Denison Ward, thirty-three times; and Macquarie Ward, twenty-seven times;—while as regards actual fires are concerned, Denison Ward has been mostly affected by twenty-two fires; Brisbane Ward, nineteen; and Macquarie Ward, fifteen.

With respect to the suburbs as regards all calls, Redfern is foremost with eleven; Balmain and Waverley, six each; Newtown and St. Leonards, five each; Leichhardt, Paddington, and Waterloo, four each; but on reference to the actual fires in the suburbs it will be seen that Redfern was mostly affected, the number being seven; while in Balmain there were six; Newtown, five; Leichhardt, four; and Paddington, four.

The following are the lives that were seriously endangered or lost by fire during the past year, viz.:—

Since the 1st July, the day upon which I took the control, the Brigade has had the great advantage of having three horses instead of two, as was in the case of the late Brigade. The addition has enabled the steamers to be run more frequently to most fires in the city, immediately after the manual engine.

During the last half-year the Telephone Exchange, from the Town Hall, was removed to your Board's station. I may state that as regards time, &c., it has proved a great advantage. Telephonic communication was also established between the undermentioned and your Board's station, viz. :—

- Balmain Volunteer Fire Company, both stations.
 Standard Brewery Volunteer Fire Company.
 Turncocks at the Town Hall.

The following Brigades are connected with your Board's station by telephone :—

- No. 1 Volunteer Fire Company.
 No. 2 Volunteer Company, Head Station.
 No. 2 Volunteer Company, Branch Station.
 No. 4 Volunteer Company.
 Theatre Royal Volunteer Fire Company.
 Standard Brewery Volunteer Fire Company.
 Pyrmont and Ultimo Volunteer Fire Company.
 Glebe Volunteer Fire Company.
 Surry Hills Volunteer Fire Company.
 Waverley and Woollahra Volunteer Fire Company.
 Balmain Volunteer Company, Head Station and Branch ditto.
 Alexandria Volunteer Fire Brigade.
 Redfern Volunteer Fire Company.

The Brigade is also connected by telephone with the Central Police Station, at which place there is an exchange connected with the various other Police Districts.

The various wharfs, warehouses, and public buildings, are in a like manner connected with the Brigade Station through the Central Telephone Exchange at the General Post Office.

The St. Leonards No. 5 Volunteer Company, Burwood, Petersham, Manly, and Albion Brigades remain unconnected by telephone or otherwise.

On examining the summary of trades it will be seen that private dwellings have been mostly affected, the number being for all classes of damage, while as regards actual trades are concerned, the most notable stand in the following order, viz. :—Grocers, 6; commission agents and produce merchants, 5; hay and corn dealers, 5; licensed victuallers, 5; fruiterers, 3; general dealers, 3; general importers, 3; stables, 3; wine and spirit merchants, 3. The respective number of each other trade affected are below the last-mentioned number.

The strength of your Brigade is as follows :—

- One large steam fire-engine.
 One small steam fire-engine.
 One 7-inch manual fire-engine.
 One under 6-inch manual fire-engine.
 One American ladder-truck (complete).
 4,585 feet of hose.
 Thirty firemen, including Superintendent, Secretary, and Coachman.

I may state that there is one man short of the proper complement.

There are also nineteen direct telephone lines and two indirect telephone lines.

The following comprise the Volunteer Fire Companies in the Metropolitan District :—

Registered—

- No. 2 Volunteer Company, Head Station, Phillip-street, Circular Quay.
 No. 2 Volunteer Company, Branch Station, York-street Markets.

- The City Volunteer Fire Brigade, Druitt-street.
- The Hook and Ladder Company, off Bathurst-street.
- The North City Volunteer Company, Queen's-place.
- The Mount Lachlan Volunteer Fire Company, Raglan-street, Waterloo.

Among the non-registered Volunteer Brigades that have existed during the year, I have much pleasure in testifying to the desire and willingness exhibited by some of them on occasions of fire, where they were present, and their services called into requisition.

In presenting this Report, I consider it my duty to strongly advise your Board to carry out the recommendations contained in my General Report on the organization of the Brigade, as nearly as may be possible, particularly that which has reference to the building up of suitable fire stations in the city as soon as possible, and at the same time to adopt a system of fire alarms throughout, otherwise the day will undoubtedly come when your Board will have to record a catastrophe similar in magnitude to the great Chicago fire of 1871.

Under existing circumstances were a fire to attain a certain magnitude, such as I have often experienced in London, and more especially if a strong southerly wind was blowing at the time, nothing, as regards your present organization, would cope or in any way arrest the spreading of a serious conflagration.

While dealing with the subject of organization, there is another matter that I desire to draw your Board's attention to. I refer to the present system of fire-plugs. Through your Board I would strongly recommend the City Council to replace the fire-plugs with either ball hydrants or screw-down hydrants in the city as soon as possible. At present there is nothing to govern the flow of water once the fire-plug is drawn; and I may here state, as my opinion, that there has been more water wasted in the city during the last three months through this system than I have ever seen in London for the same proportion of fires. Further, when the plug is drawn the pressure is taken from both public and private hydrants, and I need hardly point out the probable consequences of such a mistake, especially for such high buildings as are now being built in the city.

Through your Board I desire to thank the whole of the officers and members of the various Volunteer Companies for their valuable assistance during the past year. I have also very much pleasure in thanking the officers and members of the police force, and the turncocks, for the invaluable assistance rendered on all occasions of fire.

In conclusion, I have to express my acknowledgments to your Board for the support given to myself during my term of office, while organizing the Brigade on a different and more modern system.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

1885-6.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

FIRE BRIGADES BOARD.

(SECOND REPORT.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 47 Vic. No. 3, sec. 7.

Fire Brigades Board, Sydney, 31 March, 1885.

In accordance with section 7 of the Fire Brigades Act 1884, the Fire Brigades Board for the Metropolitan District begs to submit its report for the year 1885.

The Board has held forty-five meetings during the year. (Appendix A.)

Appendix B shows the names of the Insurance Companies, together with the "declared" amounts held at risk in the city of Sydney and Municipalities, enumerated in the Schedule to the Fire Brigades Act 1884, on the 31st December, 1884.

Appendix C shows the assessed value of rateable property, for the year 1884-5, in the Municipalities enumerated in the Schedule to the Act.

Regulations for the management of the Brigade, which were submitted to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary for approval late in the year 1884, were published in the Government Gazette of the 1st December, 1885, and are appended hereto.

Stations.

The Board very much regrets that no progress has been made towards the erection of the Central Fire Station, for which sole purpose a site on the west side of Castlereagh-street, between Bathurst and Liverpool Streets, was purchased by the Government in July, 1884, for the sum of £10,000.

This purchase was made after frequent consultations between the Government and the Board. As the site is the only one suitable for the purpose, the Government were fully awake to the absolute necessity for the erection of the station. The whole system for the protection of the city and suburbs as worked out carefully after much consulting with the Superintendent, depends upon the carrying out of plan proposed by the Board.

Owing to the constitution of the Board, the Government foresaw difficulties in the way should they become only joint owners with the Board of land and stations, and it was declared that any joint possession or ownership was incompatible with their rights and privileges.

The designs for the station were approved of, tenders were called for by the Government, and one was accepted at an amount which the Board still thinks excessive; the tenderers, however, have not signed a contract.

The Board suggested a reduction in the items of the specifications, and tenders were again called for, and one accepted; but on account of a change of Ministry and the dissolution of Parliament and other causes, the commencement of the building was allowed to stand over.

But the Board again calls attention to the fact that the defence of Sydney against fire will depend on a station situated on the west side of the Railway Bridge, George-street West, a mile further from the business portion of the wharves, shipping, and warehouses, than the old premises in Bathurst-street, which will soon cease to be the Head Quarters.

These premises, as it has been again and again urged upon the Government, are at present held by the Board on sufferance only.

The Central Station, as approved by the Government, would be the only one capable of dealing with a fire of any magnitude in the central portion of the city, assisted, as it was intended, by a station near the Queen's Wharf.

From this Central Station all the electric communications were to ramify, and a general network of protection be extended.

As the duty of saving life at fires has also been added to the responsibilities of the Board, it begs respectfully to report that it will not be possible to carry out the intention of the Act in this respect until the Central and Northern Stations be erected. It disclaims, therefore, any responsibility should any loss of life occur, owing to the remoteness of the only station allowed to be erected. Half an hour must at least elapse from the time a fire is noticed in the northern part of the city before the appliances for life-saving or fire-extinction can arrive at the scene of the fire.

It will probably require the destruction of some large public building, or the death of a public man, to bring home the truth of the above remarks.

The question of discipline and efficiency of the Brigade is also connected vitally with the erection of the two stations named.

The

The station in George-street West cannot possibly accommodate all the men and horses, the engines and other apparatus required.

The station which the Board designated No. 2, situated in George-street West, for which the Government provided the price, though the purchase of the land and the erection of the building were conducted by the Board at more reasonable figures than would have been the case had the Government been known as the owners.

The repairs to the plant and drilling the men in the use of the various apparatus must, in consequence of the Central Station not being erected, be thrown on one side.

Besides all this, the expense to the Board will be materially increased with a direct loss to the revenue of the Country. At present £10,000 has been spent to no purpose, whereas if the station had been gone on with, an income of about £1,200 would have been derived by the Government.

The Board again directs the attention to the Report of 1884, in which numerous alterations are suggested in the Fire Brigades Act, 1884, amongst which will be found a provision to enable the Board to acquire land and to borrow, by issue of debentures or otherwise, should the Government be unable or unwilling to carry out the suggestions of the Board as approved by the late Government. The Board would under an amended Act have no difficulty in raising money.

Experiences in London, especially at the late fire at Camberwell, amongst the most modern of buildings and in very wide streets, exhibits the "Fool's Paradise" of those who dream of immunity from a conflagration.

The Board purposes erecting suburban stations in places which may be found eligible and convenient as the centre of a district.

The Board has in course of erection one of these stations situated in Marrickville, adjoining the Borough of Petersham, which will be ready for occupation in April, 1886.

The entire cost of this building, together with the land, will be about £3,500, which will be defrayed from the moneys received from the several contributions, and will not appear in the Loan Estimates of the Government.

The Marrickville Station will require the services of four men, with the requisite plant.

The Municipalities of Alexandria and Waterloo have made considerable concession to the Board.

The Municipal Council of Alexandria has given a lease gratis for twenty-one years of the land, and also contributed a moiety of the cost of building a small station, which is solely vested in the Board.

The Municipal Council of Waterloo has granted a lease of land and the station thereon for twenty-five years, which is also vested in the Board.

These are at present Volunteer Fire Stations.

The Municipal Council of East St. Leonards, while engaged in erecting a Town Hall on the site granted by the late Hon. John Campbell for municipal purposes, agreed to set apart a portion of the said building for a fire station should the Board approve.

Fire alarms and telephones.

An offer having been made by a Sydney firm to erect and fix on trial a system of fire alarms, the Board, on the suggestion of the Superintendent, permitted the erecting of two, one at the corner of George and Gipps Streets, the other at the corner of Pitt and Market Streets. After a lengthy trial these alarms were found to be, on the report of the Superintendent, quite ineffective; the Board therefore declined to negotiate for them, and have sent to England for the same kind of fire alarms now in use in London and the principal towns in England and America, which are daily expected to arrive. On the arrival of these alarms, they will be at once erected at the corners of the principal streets of the city.

Telephonic communication will be established between the Marrickville Fire Station and the following Municipalities:—Ashfield, Burwood, Five Dock, Leichhardt, Macdonald Town, Newtown, Petersham, and St. Peter's.

Volunteer Fire Companies.

The following Volunteer Fire Companies were registered by the Board, and having received a certificate from the Superintendent, were subsidized for 1885:—

Companies in the City:—Theatre Royal, Standard Brewery, No. 2, No. 4, and No. 5. Suburban Companies:—Alexandria, Balmain, Glebe, Newtown, Paddington, Petersham, Redfern, and St. Leonards.

At the commencement of the year, the Superintendent was instructed to have details of the attendances and conduct of all volunteer firemen at fires to be carefully noted, in order to enable the Board and the public to ascertain the value and importance of volunteers in fire extinction.

From the reports of the Superintendent it appears that, although it has on its roll more than the minimum number of men as required by the regulations, the attendance of volunteer firemen at fires during the year has only averaged four members from each company.

There were two companies, No. 2 and Petersham, from which the Board withdrew the subsidy in consequence of non-compliance with the Regulations.

Later on, subsidies were granted to No. 1, Surry Hills, Mount Lachlan, and Burwood V. F. Cos.; but that granted to No. 1 had to be withdrawn on account of continued disregard of the Superintendent's orders.

The Burwood Volunteer Fire Company being involved in debt, and being unable to pay its way, made over to the Board its interest in the engine, plant, &c., the Board paying the liens thereon, and granting a subsidy of £50, on condition that the Company performed the duties required of it.

Appended are summaries of attendances of Volunteer Fire Companies. By the summary of "specified hours," it will be seen that volunteers do not attend in large numbers at fires, however serious, other than those occurring between the hours of 6 p.m. and 12 midnight.

Chimney fires.

As disastrous fires have sometimes occurred through foul chimneys, the Board deemed it advisable to request the Mayor of Sydney to enforce section 66 of the City of Sydney Improvement Act; and a few prosecutions have been made, which have resulted in several offenders being fined. This seems to have the desired effect, as fewer chimney fires have occurred of late.

Plant,

Plant, &c.

One steam fire-engine and one manual fire-engine, with other gear required for the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, have arrived from England; a portion of that to be paid by the Government, as equivalent to the plant taken over by the Board from the Insurance Companies.

The Board having found that the hiring of horses for conveying engines to fires was most expensive, decided to purchase and keep horses for that purpose, which has been found to be more prompt and expeditious in cases of alarm, as well as a great saving in expenditure.

Enrolment of Members of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade.

The Board deemed it advisable to appoint a medical officer to examine the physical condition of applicants selected as suitable to become members of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade. The Board obtained the services of Dr. Craig Dixson for that purpose.

At the beginning of the year there were four vacancies to complete the complement required. To fill these vacancies applications were invited from members of the Volunteer Fire Companies. Several applications were made, but there was only one physically fit for the duties required of a member of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade.

The Board also advertised, at the commencement of the year, in the principal papers of the Colonies, for candidates capable to fulfil the duties of second officer, to be designated Principal Fireman, Metropolitan Fire Brigade. Twenty-three applications were received, and amongst them were several from other Colonies. Mr. William Bouch, formerly Superintendent of the Bromley (Kent) Volunteer Fire Brigade, and attached to the Metropolitan Fire Brigade (London), was appointed, at a salary of £300 per annum, with residence.

Water.

During the year the Superintendent has several times reported to the Board the serious danger and probable consequence of shutting off the water mains in various parts of the city and suburbs, necessitating the turncocks having to travel the whole distance from the Central Station to any of the suburbs before any water can be obtained, thereby neutralizing the efforts of the local fire company. Two or three cases have happened during the year, thereby entailing great loss of property.

The Board is of opinion that the Superintendent's advice should be acted upon in placing the whole of the turncocks in demarcated districts, encouraging them to live as near the local fire station as possible, to enable them to be in direct communication with the same.

The attention of the Board has also been drawn to the low head of water for such a large city, where the warehouses of seven or more stories in height are without any water protection of their own. The Superintendent's opinion is that something should be done by extending the Paddington and Woolahra water through the city, for the better supply of the different hydrants in case of fire in many of the warehouses throughout the city. The mains in many cases could be extended and used exclusively for this purpose until such time as the permanent water scheme is completed, when they could also be used for domestic supply. It may not be out of place to mention that in the district of the Glebe it requires the services of five turncocks to divert and turn the water sufficiently on to supply the fire-engines.

Buildings.

The Board would again draw attention to the defects in the Building Act, and to the absence of regulations as to the storage of combustible commodities.

As to the construction of buildings:—It is considered discreditable to this city to allow of at least seventy openings or windows in a large warehouse facing the wall of another large warehouse with an equal number at only 5 or 6 feet distance.

As to storage of commodities:—It is also considered worth while to forbid the storage amongst general merchandise, in bond or free stores, of such articles as flax, jute, hemp, kapok, pulu, cotton and cotton waste, or of such chemicals as are unfavourably known as generators of heat. Why cannot this great commercial city of Australia adopt the precautions which have been forced upon the inhabitants of Liverpool and other commercial centres? Life and property are as valuable here as in England or elsewhere.

The adoption of strict rules as to warehousing, &c., does not hamper trade elsewhere, then why should not proper regulations be adopted here?

Kerosene.

In spite of the action taken by the Board, recorded, as it is, in their last Annual Report, and in spite of the terrible catastrophe which occurred at Jones's Bond, in Melbourne, in December of this year, it is not satisfactory to see that no notice has been taken of the recommendation of the Board as regards the amendment of the Kerosene Act.

The history of the fire at the Kerosene Bond in Melbourne is simple enough, but it shows the danger arising from the vapour-producing qualities of kerosene and gasoline. A man observed a cask filled with straw on fire in a yard outside the iron buildings containing the cases of oil. Ere he had time to reach it, the vapour from the buildings had reached it, and instantly the whole place was alight. The effect of the water poured on the flames was to spread the fire and the oil, which formed pools in some places on the ground, and these, some days afterwards, were set on fire by a man who accidentally set himself on fire and threw himself into one which he mistook for water. The result was the destruction of the other buildings and contents which had escaped the former fire.

The Board is informed that other shipments of kerosene, equally as bad as that animadverted upon in the last Report, have been landed and distributed throughout the city.

Storage of gunpowder.

The report of the Superintendent on the storage of gunpowder in the premises of Messrs. Holdsworth Macpherson, Lower George-street, and Messrs. John Macintosh & Sons, Pitt-street, the former of which were lately destroyed by fire, although not occurring in 1885, is of such vast importance, that the Board wishes to draw special attention to the same.

The points in the cases are—

1. Were the premises "registered premises"?
2. If they were "registered," were they inspected and approved prior to registration?

3. In what respect did they comply with the regulations re registered premises?
4. For what quantity of gunpowder were they registered?
5. Was the gunpowder found on the premises kept in accordance with the Act?

In view of the quantity of gunpowder and its position as given in the Report, the following serious considerations arise:—

- A. Serious loss of life, or injury to Members of the Brigade, or volunteers, or others engaged in fire-extinction, and to the general public.
 - B. Serious damage to property on fire, the adjacent property, and the property of the Fire Brigades Board.
 - C. Compensation by the Fire Insurance Companies, and by the public or Government.
- A. Serious loss of life, or injury to members of the Brigade or others engaged in fire extinction.

These men must be in the thick of the fire, or their services are practically useless. Their esprit de corps generally keeps them up to their work, however dangerous it may seem, but their bravery should not be put to the test over a hidden mine of explosives.

It may be placed on record here that one of the members of the Board, when in command of a Company of Volunteers in the year 1868, on the occasion of a serious fire at Holdsworth's ironmongery shop in George-street, had a narrow escape from death, owing to the explosion of a barrel of gunpowder close to him.

In the case of the general public, the throwing down of a wall otherwise safe, or the hurling of materials to a great distance, might cause serious loss of life or injury.

B. Damage to property.

The property on fire will of course suffer materially by an explosion, but the effects are not confined to the premises wherein the explosion may take place, but are felt more or less in adjoining premises or neighbourhood. The disastrous explosions recorded in Liverpool on board the "Lottie Sleigh," and subsequently at Erith, near London, and the Regent's Canal, are sufficient to cause alarm. And not to call example from such distances, we have in this city the explosion of nitro-glycerine, in a warehouse on south side of Bridge-street, which completely demolished the building, and seriously damaged the houses on opposite side of the street, and injured several persons. Independently of this, picces of lighted material are flung in all directions, causing fresh fires in other places; at one very serious fire the wind has carried lighted matter from the west side of York-street to the rear of houses on the east side of George-street, and, on the occasion of the burning of the Garden Palace, a house situated in Macleay-street, Woolloomooloo, was with difficulty saved from being burnt down. How much more likely would damage arise were the lighted fragments sufficiently large to break in a roof or a window; a heavy explosion would discharge as it were so many congreve rockets amongst the crowded parts of the city. The Superintendent's letters hint at the probable damage which would result to the Fire Brigade plant. Were only one engine with apparatus destroyed it would cost £1,000 to replace it, besides causing a serious interruption to the work of fire-extinction; this might mean the destruction of an entire block of city property; heavy fires would entail loss on the municipal revenues, by reducing the property to the non-contributing class.

C. As to compensation.

In the event of the explosives being stored legally, the Fire Insurance Companies would not refuse their indemnity in its proper place if they had allowed the keeping of the same, but they are not liable for the effects of mere explosion of such explosives, and in the event of an illegal storage the policies are voidable.

The Gunpowder and Explosive Substances Law Consolidated Act of s. specially provides that places where explosives may be kept shall be so marked that every one may recognize the dangers.

The method adopted seems scarcely to convey any useful warning. Were warehouses and shops required to be wholly painted bright red or some other colour; and have a sign-board in front, with letters at least 2 feet long, with the words "Gunpowder and explosives stored here" over the ground-floor windows, no one need complain on the ground of propriety of allowing the storage of such commodities at all in crowded places.

It seems to be a moot question if the Government would not be liable for loss of life or injury to persons or chattels, whether the explosives are kept as the Act directs or not. No authority should be granted to enable any place in a crowded city to be turned practically into a gunpowder magazine. The Board would be shutting its eyes to a plain duty, were it to take no notice of this matter, as the Act charges it with the protection of life as well as property.

The practical questions remain whether the Act is carried out at all, or if at all in its integrity. Whether it be possible to carry it out in its present shape without executive officers who do not seem to have ever been appointed: it would appear impossible to do so. Whether common sense does not point out that it is not advisable to allow unlimited license such as is now done. The Board can point out a populous spot in a large country town where there were allowed to be four gunpowder magazines of most flimsy materials in dangerous proximity to each other and to wooden sheds and other buildings.

In conclusion, the Board would especially draw attention to the proposed amended Act submitted in the last Annual Report, and to point out that the provisions named therein would, if passed immediately into law, greatly facilitate the prevention and extinction of fire.

Attached is the Report of the Superintendent, together with the Summary of Fires, &c., for the year 1885.

CHARLES BOWN,
Chairman, Fire Brigades Board.

Since the compiling of the Report the contract for the erection of the Central Fire Station has been accepted, and the building is being proceeded with.

Regulations under the Fire Brigades Act.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney, 1 December, 1885.

THE following Regulations, made by the Fire Brigades Board, under section 6 of the Fire Brigades Act, 1884, for establishing and maintaining an efficient Fire Brigade in the Metropolitan District, having been confirmed by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, are published in accordance with the requirements of the above-cited Act.

P. A. JENNINGS.

REGULATIONS for establishing and maintaining an efficient Fire Brigade in the Metropolitan District.

The Appointment of men.

1. Applications for appointment as firemen must be made in candidates' own handwriting, to the Secretary of the Board.
2. Candidates must be physically strong men, free from any defect in limb, hearing, or sight, from colour-blindness, from any organic, infectious, or contagious disease, and not subject to chronic ailments, or fits, or to nervousness. They must be generally intelligent, capable of acquiring instruction, and able to read and write.
3. Candidates must be not less than twenty-one years of age (unless under special circumstances as to physique or qualifications), nor more than thirty-two, unless they have been previously and recently engaged as active and efficient firemen or are otherwise thoroughly competent, in which cases the limit may be extended to forty years. They must be not less than 5 feet 6 inches in natural height, nor less than 37 inches in natural chest measurement, except in the case of volunteers who shall be eligible for membership for the Metropolitan Fire Brigade if not exceeding forty years of age, provided the applicant has been an active fireman and approved of by the Superintendent of Metropolitan Fire Brigade.
4. Candidates will be required to produce testimonials from reliable and respectable persons as to habits, character, morals, and past services. They will be required to produce certificates of their births, or give other satisfactory proof of age.
5. Candidates must belong to such trades or occupations as will fit them for the duties of a fireman and for dangers of fire-extinction. Special regard will be had to the activity, civility, and cheerfulness of the candidates, as well as their aptitude in the use of tackles, ladders, and in making knots and such other things as are required in the service. All other things being equal, preference will be given to seamen.
6. Foreigners will be allowed to become candidates upon taking out letters of naturalization.
7. Eligible candidates will be required to undergo a medical examination by such legally qualified medical practitioner as the Board may appoint. Their appointment as firemen will be finally dependent upon that examination.
8. Eligible candidates when finally approved will be accepted as members of the Brigade on probation only, the term of which shall not be less than three months. At the end of such probation, the probationer, if he shall have given every satisfaction to the Superintendent and have shown himself suitable in the order of seniority or probationship, or of age, but may select the most eligible amongst the probationers, subject to his serving his proper term of probation.
9. The pay of a probationer shall in no case exceed the rate of £130 per annum. The pay shall be payable monthly.
10. At the expiration of his term of probation, the pay of the member may be raised to a rate not exceeding £150 per annum payable monthly until he may be promoted to a higher grade, or be reduced, dismissed or discharged.
11. The Board may at any time for sufficient cause reduce any member of the Brigade to a lower grade with corresponding reduction of pay.
12. The Board may make such deductions from the pay of the members of the Brigade as may from time to time be fixed for allowance of quarters or articles or rations supplied at the expense of the Board.
13. The engagement of every member will be for one month, and so continued until legally discharged.
14. All engagements or appointments made by the Board may be cancelled or annulled without any reason being assigned, one week's pay to be granted in lieu of notice.
15. No probationer or other member of the Brigade will be allowed to continue or engage in any trade or business outside the Brigade. Every member will be expected to devote his knowledge to the service of the Brigade.
16. Every member of the Brigade must obey the order of the Superintendent, and must conform to all rules and regulations which have been made or may be made from time to time in the Brigade Order Book, which have been previously approved by the Board.
17. Every probationer, and other members of the Brigade, must subscribe to the following :

Conditions to which persons joining the Metropolitan Fire Brigade will be subjected on becoming members.

1. Every member is to devote the whole of his time to the service of the Brigade, and to carry out to the best of his ability all orders from seniors in command.
2. Every member must serve and reside wherever it may suit the convenience of the Superintendent.
3. He is to promptly obey all lawful orders from persons in authority over him.
4. He must obey all regulations which may from time to time be framed and passed by the Fire Brigades Board.
5. He shall not resign or discontinue the duties connected with the Brigade unless permitted by the Superintendent, or in his absence any other responsible officer of the Brigade, unless he shall have given to such officer one week's previous notice in writing. Should he resign or withdraw without such leave or notice he shall forfeit all pay due to him, and will further be formally dismissed by the Fire Brigades Board.
6. Every member will be liable to immediate dismissal for unfitness, negligence, or misconduct, independently of any other punishment to which by law he may be subject. Should he be dismissed from the service, he will be liable to forfeit the whole of his pay then due.
7. Every member will be liable to suspension from duty at the discretion of the Superintendent, or in his absence by any other responsible officer of the Brigade. Every case of suspension shall be brought before the Fire Brigades Board at their first meeting after the offence, and the suspension may be continued for a further period according to the discretion of the Board. During his suspension no fireman shall receive any pay.
8. Candidates will be accepted on probation only for a period of three months or longer as may be deemed necessary by the Fire Brigades Board.
9. Any member dismissed from the service or who may resign his appointment shall, immediately after his dismissal or resignation, deliver up all clothes and accoutrements that have been supplied to him; and if any article or articles shall have been, in the opinion of the Superintendent, improperly used or damaged, a deduction from the pay or moneys due to the member will be made sufficient to recover the loss sustained.
10. Any member found intoxicated, fighting, or disobeying orders will be at once suspended by the Superintendent or his Deputy, such suspension being dealt with by the Fire Brigades Board.
11. Each member will have the sum of 5s. per month deducted from his pay until the amount reaches £4, as an insurance against his leaving the Brigade without returning his uniform and accoutrements; but on return of said uniform and accoutrements in good order, and allowing for fair wear and tear, all such moneys then in hand shall be refunded to the member.
12. It shall be compulsory for each member to belong to some Benefit Society, in which he shall not allow himself to become unfinancial. In the event of bodily illness his pay will be reduced to two-thirds for the first three months, and one-third for the next three months, and then will cease.
13. Married men living in any station will be charged a rent according to the accommodation given them.

REGULATIONS FOR COMPENSATION IN CASE OF ACCIDENT AND DEATH THEREFROM.

1. In the event of accident received while on service, and caused by something incidental to such service, whereby a fireman is totally disabled, that is to say, confined to his residence (or out by order of medical adviser), being entirely disabled by external accidental injury, from following any occupation whatever (provided external and visible breach of continuity exists, and provided he has not by recklessness or disobedience of orders contributed to such accident), the Board

Board will continue to pay such member full salary for three months from date of accident, and half salary for a further period of three months, only provided that in the event of such accident producing total disablement as aforesaid for life, or for a lengthened period, the Board in its discretion on sufficient evidence being produced, may pay further sums as it may think fit.

2. In the event of accident received while on service, and by something incidental to such service, whereby a fireman is partly disabled, that is to say, when an external injury has occurred of so slight a character as to prevent a member from following his ordinary occupation with as much ease and convenience as he did previous to the happening of the accident, provided always that he has not contributed to such accident by recklessness or disobedience of orders, the Board will continue to pay such fireman full pay for three months only, at the end of which time all pay shall cease.

3. No compensation will be allowed in cases where injuries received do not prevent a fireman from attending to his regular work, or which do not necessitate his leaving the Brigade.

4. Each fireman on enrolment shall state in writing his conjugal condition, whether he is married or unmarried, or a widower, with or without children. Any change in such condition shall be at once notified in writing to the Superintendent.

5. No compensation will be allowed on the death of a fireman unless he shall have been registered on the Fire Brigade books as a married person or a widower with a family.

6. No applications for compensation in the event of death by accident will be received unless the applicants for the same prove by documentary or other equally satisfactory evidence, that they are the widows or the children of the firemen so deceased.

7. Each fireman who on enrolment is married, or if a widower, has a family, or who after enrolment contracts marriage, shall at once effect in some Life Assurance Company, to be approved by the Fire Brigades Board, a policy or policies on his own life, payable at death, for the sum of £200, except in the case of the Principal Foreman, who must effect an insurance for the sum of £400. Such policy or policies shall be absolutely assigned to the Fire Brigades Board, on printed form, to be provided by the Board, and shall be delivered up with the deed of assignment, notice of which shall be given on due form to the Assurance Company. The policy shall be made so as to be renewable on the 31st December in each year. Policies of Companies approved by the Board effected by persons previously to joining the Brigade may be utilized for the purposes of this regulation, subject to its requirements, if they be not encumbered in any way. Notices of renewal shall in all cases be sent to the Secretary of the Fire Brigades Board, who will see that the policies are kept in force, and to whom the renewal receipts shall be handed. In order to provide compensation for death by accident, while at the same time encouraging the fireman to make provision for his family in the event of death under ordinary circumstances, the Fire Brigades Board will, so long as the fireman shall continue in its service, but no longer, pay one half of each and every premium payable under this regulation, and towards providing the other half make equal monthly deductions from the pay or salary of the fireman. In all cases any bonus which may attach to any, or all such policies shall be left as a reversionary addition to said policies, and shall not be commuted, or cashed, or hypothecated in any way. On resignation or dismissal from the Brigade, the policy or policies shall be at once reassigned by the Fire Brigades Board, and the said Board will ipso facto cease to have any interest in the same or be responsible for keeping the same in force. On the death by accident of the fireman while in the service of the Fire Brigades Board, the proceeds of the policies will be handed to the widow or family (if any); or should such action be deemed inadvisable by the Fire Brigades Board, the proceeds will be utilized in any manner which may, in the opinion of the Fire Brigades Board, seem best in the interest of the widow or family. In the event of death under ordinary circumstances, the proceeds of the policies will be handed to the legal representative of the deceased.

8. In the event of a fireman being unable to effect an insurance on his life in an office approved by the Fire Brigades Board, the amount of compensation for death arising from accident will be £100, payable only to his widow or family, in such way as the Fire Brigades Board may think desirable.

9. In no case can any compensation for death from accident be granted should the fireman leave neither widow nor issue.

GENERAL RULES.

1. Any member of the Brigade or probationer will be liable to dismissal for intoxication, insubordination, disobedience, neglect or omission of duty, incompetency, disrespect to any person in authority, or to the Board or any member or officer thereof, for insolent or immoral behaviour on the premises, or any crime, misdemeanour, or other misconduct punishable by law, in addition to such penalty as may be fixed by the Fire Brigades Board.

2. Any member agitating any cause for himself or any other person, whereby the order and discipline of the Brigade is imperilled, or guilty of the offences as named in the first rule, will be immediately suspended.

3. No member of the Brigade shall send any communication to the Fire Brigades Board otherwise than through the Superintendent. Any man disobeying this order will be suspended.

4. Any member having a grievance of any kind, or having any charge to make against another member of the Brigade, will be required to do so in writing, through the officer in charge of his station, addressed to the Superintendent.

5. No member shall absent himself from his station without permission from the officer or senior in charge of the station (for the time being). Any member found absent from the station without leave is to be immediately suspended by the aforesaid officer, who shall at once report the case to the Superintendent.

6. No member of the Brigade will be allowed to engage in any trade or business, nor will he be permitted to derive any pecuniary profit or advantage from any public contract or from any purchase made by himself or other on behalf of the Fire Brigades Board, under pain of instant dismissal by the Fire Brigades Board.

7. No member of the Brigade shall, upon any occasion or under any pretence whatever, accept any money, gift, or address from any person for services rendered at a fire, without permission from the Superintendent or the Fire Brigades Board.

8. At no time excepting when on leave shall any member of the Brigade be permitted to wear clothes other than his uniform, without permission of the Superintendent. No member will be permitted to attend theatres or any public place of amusement, in part or whole uniform, without the permission of the Superintendent. When working on any ruins, or on duty at fires, the flat cap is to be worn; when in fatigue or undress uniform at the Brigade Station, or when going on messages, &c., the peak cap is to be worn. Any member of the Brigade suspended from duty shall not appear in uniform during suspension.

9. On all occasions of fire the whole of the men are to be rung out. If any man is too late for an engine when it is his duty to go with the said engine, or late attending the station after having been called, or does not answer his bell, will be liable to such fine as the Fire Brigades Board may think fit to award.

10. All married members will be held responsible for any wilful or unnecessary damage to the quarters in their occupation; the said quarters will be subject to periodical inspection by the Superintendent, and are to be left in a clean and respectable manner when the member is removing. Single men will be held responsible to the officer in charge of the station for their apartments, bedding and furniture being kept in a clean and respectable manner at all times, ready for inspection after 9 a.m. each day.

11. Any member breaking his leave will be liable to have his leave stopped for a certain period by the Superintendent, and the record of it will be taken to weigh against promotion.

12. The Duty Man in charge of the Telephone, or other signalling apparatus, will be held answerable on the occasion of a fire that the electric bells are rung, that all men are turned out, that the correct time of the call is taken, and that the name and address of the person by whom the call was given are entered in the Station "Occurrence Book."

13. When the manual engine is put to work at a fire the junior man present attending with the engine is required to remain in charge of the manual engine, and to receive orders and directions from his seniors as to the working of such engine. He is at no time to leave the manual, unless otherwise directed by his seniors. While in charge of the manual he will be required to know what gear has been taken out of it. If a standpipe for a plug or a ball hydrant is used instead of the manual engine, the junior man will stand by to turn on or off as he is directed; but if steamers are at work, and there is no likelihood of the standpipes being required to be turned on or off, he is to leave and assist at a fire.

14. During the summer months, viz., September, October, November, December, January, February, and March, all members will be required to rise at 5.45 a.m., and during the remaining months of the year 6.45 a.m. Exception will be made of men who have performed their usual turn on duty the previous night, or who may be reported on the sick list.

15. The general work of each station is to be commenced at 6 a.m. in the summer months above named, and at 7 a.m. in the other months, when the roll is to be called, and continued until 8 a.m., when the men knock off for breakfast, work to be resumed at 9 a.m. and continued until 10 a.m., when the roll is again to be called by the officer in charge or the senior man present, after which the work is to be continued until finished.

16. The man on duty in charge of the telephone, &c., is to be cleaned by 10 a.m.; he will be held responsible that the watchroom is kept clean and in proper order.

17. All members shall attend drill and practice at the discretion of the Superintendent or Officer in charge of the station to which they are attached.

18. All applications for leave over three hours after the 10 a.m. call for that day are to be made by 9 a.m. Applications for leave commencing before 9 a.m. must be made by 6 p.m. the previous day. Leave will only be granted at the discretion of the Superintendent.

19. Members on their return from leave will be required to see that the correct time of their return is entered on the leave note by the senior man of the watch.

20. Members living out of the station are required to be in readiness at all times at their homes, in order that they may be able to immediately answer any call that may be given them. Any member found absent from his home without the requisite permission will be immediately suspended, and the case referred to the Fire Brigades Board. The case in question will be equivalent to a man being absent from the station without leave.

21. At fires, no member will be allowed to enter any hotel for refreshments without the permission of the Superintendent, or such officer who may be in charge of the fire. All refreshments if possible will be supplied in the vicinity of the fire, and not in an hotel. At no time at fires will any member be permitted to supply or use his authority towards supplying any persons, civilians or otherwise, refreshments of any description without the orders of the Superintendent or such officer as may be in charge of the fire. Any one violating this rule will be immediately suspended.

22. Any member heard to speak slanderously, disparagingly, contemptuously, or insubordinately of any officer, or in any manner uttering words calculated to cause a breach of the rules or disorder in the Brigade, shall be suspended.

23. Should at any time any member wilfully strike any officer in the Brigade, he is to be immediately suspended.

24. The watch duties of the station and at fires are to extend from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m., 2 p.m. to 10 p.m., 10 p.m. to 6 a.m., unless otherwise altered by the Superintendent's orders.

25. Members guilty of any tampering with the books, or wilful damage to or destruction of the buildings, goods, effects, chattels, clothing, apparatus, plant, belonging to the Fire Brigades Board or in its charge, will be liable to immediate suspension.

Qualifications and duties of Principal Foreman.

1. He must have complete practical knowledge of all the duties required of the officers and men in the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, together with practical and technical acquaintance with all the apparatus in use at the various stations, and must be ready at any time to assist in any of the duties required of the Brigade, and to lead on the men fearlessly and judiciously.

2. He will be required to undertake all the duties and responsibilities of the Superintendent during the absence or other disability of the latter, in addition to such other duties as are herein prescribed.

3. When in charge of a fire he will be required to take full responsibility and exercise the Superintendent's power according to the Act, at the same time paying due respect to water damage, water-wasting, salvaging, &c.

4. He will be held responsible for, and it will be his special duty to attend particularly to the general requirements for gear, &c., for the Brigade, including the checking and passing of all requisitions, bills, general reports, &c., before final passing by the Superintendent.

5. He will be expected to make reports to the Superintendent of any suggestions or alterations he may think think advisable to any station for the better working of the Brigade in general.

6. He will be required to report to the Superintendent any deviation of duty, negligence, and misdemeanours committed by any member of the Brigade.

7. He will be held responsible to the Superintendent that all orders from the Fire Brigades Board, and those contained in the Superintendent's Order Book are diligently executed and performed.

8. He will be liable to suspension from duty by the Superintendent for any neglect of duty, insubordination, intoxication, cowardice, overbearing conduct, incompetency, or non-carrying out of the rules and regulations of the Fire Brigades Board.

9. He is to set an example to his men by his sobriety, cleanliness, promptitude, coolness at a fire, and general attention to his duties.

10. He must be under the immediate direction and supervision of the Superintendent, and at all times ready to acknowledge and defer to the Superintendent's authority.

11. He will be required to live at such station as may be assigned to him, attend all calls for fires, and at no time to absent himself from the station without first obtaining permission from the Superintendent.

12. He will be held responsible to the Superintendent for the full and proper working of the Brigade; such as the cleaning of the engines, horses, &c., running of steamers according to orders, drilling the men, and that all telephones, fire-alarms, and electric bells are kept in complete working order.

13. He will be required to agree and bind himself under the conditions of service, and all rules and regulations in existence at the time of his taking office, and all rules made hereafter by the Fire Brigades Board or the Superintendent.

14. He will be required to thoroughly know the drills as given by the Superintendent, and it will also be his duty to drill the members of the brigade at least once a week in engine practice (either manual or steamer) as well as scaling-ladder practice.

15. To see that the men and horses are drilled at least once in every twenty-four hours, as if getting away for a fire.

16. To take charge of all firemen, coachmen, and horses attached to his station, and to keep up a direct system of discipline among them, having at all times a list of the same hung up in the watchroom.

17. To make himself as far as possible acquainted with the whole of the fire-cocks, fire-plugs, hydrants, and other means of obtaining water in the city and suburbs of Sydney, and to instruct his men accordingly.

18. He will be held responsible that the apartments, buildings, and furniture connected with his station are diligently kept clean, and that the station and appliances in general are in good condition, and any repairs required to be immediately written for by requisition to the Superintendent.

19. To immediately suspend any man guilty of disobedience of orders, or other serious misconduct, whenever he may deem it desirable to do so. He is to acquaint the Superintendent of any case of suspension at the earliest opportunity.

20. In respect to the powers of granting leave to members of the Brigade, he will only exercise similar powers as those vested in a Foreman, excepting in the absence of the Superintendent; the principal Foreman will then take the same powers as the Superintendent. (The reading of this rule is not to vest the principal Foreman during the temporary absence of the Superintendent.)

21. To take charge of the fire-engines and all appliances belonging to his station or any other premises and property therein belonging to the Fire Brigades Board in addition to Rule 1 as aforesaid, and to keep up a proper inventory of the same.

22. It must be clearly understood by the principal Foreman that he will be held responsible for the full working of his own station besides assisting the Superintendent in the supervision of the whole Brigade, and to take the full charge of the same during the absence of the Superintendent.

23. To study the characters and abilities of the men under his charge, and to be ready at all times to give the Superintendent correct information concerning them.

Duties of a Foreman.

1. To set an example to his men by his sobriety, cleanliness, promptitude, coolness at a fire, civility and general attention to his duties.

2. To reside at any station he may be appointed to, and to take charge of the station, stables, or any other premises or property therein belonging to the Fire Brigades Board.

3. To take charge of the fire-engines and all appliances belonging to his station, and to keep up a proper inventory of the same.

4. He will be held responsible that the apartments, bedding, and furniture connected with his station are diligently kept clean, that the station and appliances in general are in good condition, and any repairs required to the station or appliances are to be immediately written for by requisition to the Superintendent.

5. To take charge of all firemen, coachmen, and horses attached to his station, and to keep up a strict system of discipline among them, having at all times a list of the same hung up in the watchroom.

6. To see that all the men belonging to his station are within hail and available for duty at all times, unless specially booked sick, absent on account of duty or leave, or otherwise engaged.
7. To instruct his men in drill exercise at least once a week, and to see that all other duties are strictly carried out.
8. To regulate the duties to be performed by the men at his station, showing no favour to any man more than another.
9. To call the roll at 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. respectively, to see that all the men at home are present and fit for duty.
10. To see that the station clock is set right each night at 10 p.m. by telephone by the clock at the Head Quarters Station.
11. To see that the necessary number of men are placed on duty in the watchroom, that they are in proper uniform, and are acquainted with the details of station duty.
12. To see that each engine in his station is turned out once a week and the gear thoroughly cleaned, no two engines to be turned out the same day.
13. To grant leave of absence according to his discretion for periods not exceeding six hours, between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., and to sign the said leave note before the man goes on leave. Any other leave required either before or after these hours, or over the said amount, will only be granted by the Superintendent, at the same time the Foreman will be held responsible that his station has sufficient men in case of a fire.
14. To make reports to the Superintendent on any suggestions or alterations he may think advisable at his station for the better working of the Brigade in general.
15. To see that all calls for chimneys on fire are immediately attended to and that stops for the same are sent away to the other stations, to save any unnecessary turning out of engines, &c., and that a record is kept of the same.
16. Should he be the first officer of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade to arrive at a fire, he will ascertain as soon as possible the nature and extent of the fire, and send the intelligence to the nearest Fire Station with a view to its being communicated to the Head Station. Should it happen to be a small fire, he will at once send one of his own men to the nearest Fire Station to stop all other engines, and if a large fire, he will send a stranger, who may be trusted with a message (written if possible) giving a short description of the building alight and stating that more help will be required. Upon arriving at a fire, if a senior officer is present, he is at once to report himself and to work under his orders (at no time is he to work independently of any other officer of the Brigade). If he should be the senior, he is at once to take command, but it must be distinctly understood that he is not to find fault at the fire with the former senior officer for what may have been already done, but if he sees anything wrong to report the same in the usual manner to the Superintendent.
17. To report the departure and return of his engines by telephone to the Head Station.
18. To write requisitions for all stores, repairs, &c., that may be required at his station.
19. To study the characters and abilities of the men under his charge, and to be ready at all times to give his superiors correct information concerning them.
20. To make himself as far as possible acquainted with the whole of the locality in the neighbourhood of his station, or otherwise to know the fire-cocks, fire-plugs, hydrants, and other means of obtaining water, and to instruct his men in the same.
21. To make himself acquainted with the Volunteer Fire Stations, Police Stations, turncocks' residences in his neighbourhood, and to keep their addresses always hung up in a prominent position in the watchroom.
22. With reference to religious observances, it is expected that the Foreman will do all he can to facilitate the attendance of the men under his charge in allowing them to attend the places of worship to which they respectively belong, and that particular attention shall be paid to the proper observance of the Sabbath-day.
23. The general idea intended to be conveyed is that the Foreman is absolutely responsible for everything in connection with his station, that consequently the whole control and management are vested in his hands. It is of course understood that he is bound to act fairly and discreetly with his men and all concerned, and he may at any time be called to account for his actions; but practically his judgment and discretion are left unfettered in any way, in order that there may be no limit to his responsibility in the execution of his duties entrusted to him. As his duties are numerous it would be impossible for him to perform them all himself; and therefore, to prevent any misunderstanding of the terms in which these instructions are conveyed, it is especially mentioned that even if it were possible it would be by no means desirable for him to do so. He is provided with the necessary staff and appliances, and it is his duty to work them to the best advantage according to his discretion and ability, and not only that, but also be able to satisfy his superiors that he has done so.

Duties of the Engineer.

1. He will see that all steam fire-engines, floating engines, and gear appertaining thereto throughout the brigade are kept in thorough working order. All requisitions for any repairs to the same are to be signed by himself to the Superintendent.
2. He is to see that all boilers of steam fire-engines and the boilers of floating engines are washed out at least once a month, when all mud hole plugs are to be taken out.
3. The apparatus for heating the water of the boiler, &c., in each station will be under his special care.
4. He will see that each spring balance of the safety-valves of each steamer has the requisite ferrule on, and in no case is the boiler to be allowed to work without one, neither are the levers of the safety-valves to be weighted in any way.
5. He is to see that each steamer is run at least once in every two weeks, when he is to instruct other men how to drive the same.
6. He will be required to teach the second-class firemen how to drive the steamers under all difficulties, such as working with the feed-pump disabled, or the injector disabled, and working at a fire with salt water. For the better carrying out of this order, a certificate will be required from the engineer for each second-class fireman before he is promoted to the rank of a first-class fireman. He is to instruct the men that in no case will they draw the fire from the steamer when at a fire; if the said steamer is not required to work they are to allow the boiler to generate 100 lb. of steam, and then the damper is to be put on. This is required in case of being called to another fire or meeting with one on the way home.
7. When at fires he is to make it his duty to see that the man in charge of each steamer keeps the water in sight in the water-gauge glass, and in case of accidents such as the failure of the feeding apparatus rendering it impossible, he is to instruct them in immediately but coolly drawing the fire. He is also to watch that each steamer does its work properly, or to report the same to the Superintendent at the first opportunity.

Qualifications of a First-class Fireman.

1. He must take an interest in his profession, and make himself conversant with all matters connected with a fireman's duties. He must know the drill thoroughly; he must be able to teach other men the drill; he must be able to drive any steam fire-engine in the brigade, and have a good knowledge of the same.
2. He will be required to make himself acquainted with the different parts of the machinery of both manual and steam fire-engines: each part has a proper name, and he is required when speaking of any particular part to call it by that name.
3. He will be required to take down, when necessary, the particulars of a fire for a fire report.
4. He must be competent to take charge of a station during the temporary absence of his officer.

Passed at a meeting of the Board, held 16th March, 1885.

Chairman, Fire Brigades Board.

Superintendent Bear's report on the storage of gunpowder at Messrs. Holdsworth, Macpherson, & Co.'s.

Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 12 March, 1886.

I have the honor to report to your Board, as requested, on the storage of gunpowder on the premises of the late fire of Messrs. Holdsworth, Macpherson, & Co., Lower George street, on the morning of the 17th ultimo.

I find that the real quantity saved from the premises was five barrels, each containing 50lbs., or a total of 250lbs., and the said gunpowder was not in the magazine at the time of the fire, but was taken from the ground floor of the warehouse by Mr. Burt, their storekeeper, and I need hardly add that it is contrary to clause 29 of the Gunpowder and Explosive Substances Law Consolidation Act, and they are therefore liable to a penalty of £125.

I also find that a quantity of gunpowder was also stored in the magazine on the top floor, but in what quantity I am unable to say. Further, I am of opinion that small quantities of gunpowder were lying about, outside of the magazine on the top floor; but I have no direct evidence, more than the slight explosions which took place frequently and at different intervals some time after our arrival at the fire, and one very loud explosion some considerable time after, which must have been the magazine.

The before-mentioned 250lbs. of gunpowder was taken from the Sailors' Home on the morning of the fire, and stored at Goat Island.

The Inspector of Magazines informed me that he took charge of the gunpowder the same morning, and no one up to the present has informed him that the gunpowder was out of the magazine at the time of the fire.

I may say, in conclusion, that had this amount of gunpowder been in the magazine at the time of the fire instead of being on the ground floor, nothing could have saved it, as the top floor of the warehouse was well alight when we arrived, and no doubt the top walls would have been blown out, with a probable loss of life; at the same time I do not wish to excuse them on this score, as it was just as possible for the fire to have originated on the ground floor of the premises where the gunpowder was stored, in fact I had a great difficulty for some time to save this floor on account of the fierce heat coming from the windows of the warehouse, which communicated the fire from the one to the other.

If the latter had been the case the loss of life would have been very great, besides the loss of plant to your Board, and the destruction of the whole of the block.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

APPENDIX K (2).

Superintendent Bear's report on the storage of gunpowder, &c., at Messrs. John Macintosh & Sons.

Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 29 March, 1886.

I have the honor to report to your Board that a small fire occurred on the first floor of Messrs. John Macintosh & Sons, Nos. 276 and 278, Pitt-street, on the evening of the 27th instant; and while trying to effect an entrance in the building, several persons informed us that a large quantity of gunpowder was stored out of the magazine, on the ground floor, and cautioned us very strongly about it. After the fire was extinguished and everything quiet I searched the premises, and discovered 546 lbs. of gunpowder under a buggy on the ground floor, and only 25 feet away from under the actual fire.

I immediately sent for Inspector Anderson and the Inspector of Magazines (Mr. Rogers), and it was afterwards removed, by the latter's instructions, about 3 a.m. of the 28th instant, by means of our van to the powder-boat, and thence to Goat Island. But for the timely information received this fire would have been a very large one, and probably the seat of a dreadful catastrophe, as the warehouse contains a large quantity of turpentine and inflammable material, oils, &c., within a very short distance of the fire; in fact, the gunpowder, in damaged flasks, was lying about in several places, and when removed by our men, in some cases left quite a train of it on the ground.

I am given to understand that proceedings will be taken against the firm of Messrs. John Macintosh & Sons, in accordance with the Act.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

Superintendent

Superintendent Bear's Report and Annual Return of Fires in the City and Suburbs of Sydney, for the year ending 31st December, 1885.

Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 16 January, 1886.

I have the honor to present you with the following report, being the annual return of fires in the city and suburbs of Sydney for the year ending 31st December, 1885, attended by the Brigade and the several Volunteer Companies.

The total number of alarms received for fires, or supposed fires, was 251; of these, forty-two were false alarms; thirteen proved to be only chimney alarms, and 196 were actual fires. Of the actual fires 109 were slight or trifling, thirteen were serious, and twenty-three resulted in total destruction. Of the 196 fires 113 were insured, forty not insured, and twenty insurances on the building or contents could not be obtained.

In addition to the ordinary calls for fires there have been fifty-one chimney fires, requiring the attendance of firemen with hand-pump only, making an aggregate total of 302 for fires, false alarms, and chimney fires.

The fires of 1885, compared with those of 1884, show an increase of sixty-seven; in chimney fires attended with engines, a decrease of 4; in chimney fires attended by firemen with hand-pump, an increase of twenty-two, and in false alarms a decrease of eight.

In fires which were slight there has been an increase of sixty-nine; in serious, a decrease of two; and in the fires which resulted in total destruction, the number being twenty-three, is the same as the year 1884. It may be here mentioned that in the latter class of damage several were comparatively small in regard to the extent of damage done, such as shed buildings and weatherboard cottages.

Appended are detailed statements of the various fires attended by the Brigade, the Volunteer Companies, and others unattended by Brigades, but which have been reported to the Brigade from various sources. In each of the latter cases, however, a member of your Brigade was sent to obtain the necessary particulars.

The various summaries appended show the particular dates, time of calls, time of outbreak, localities, trades, insurances, hourly and daily, weekly and monthly, &c., &c.

There is also appended a summary of the "Origins of Fires" for the past ten years, viz., from 1876 to 1885, both years inclusive, together with a comparison of all calls received during the same period.

Referring to the summary of localities, it will be noticed that in the city of Sydney alone there were 206 calls, 119 of which were actual fires, 26 false alarms, 11 chimneys reported as house fires, 50 chimneys attended with hand-pump only.

Of the 119 actual fires in the city there were in Denison Ward, 26; Bourke, 19; Brisbane, 17; Gipps, Macquarie, and Phillip, 14 in each; Cook, 11; Fitzroy, 4. In the suburbs there were 96 calls, of which 77 were actual fires, 16 were false alarms and 2 were chimneys reported as house fires, and 1 chimney attended with hand-pump only. The suburbs principally affected, in regard to actual fires only, were as follows:—Balmain, 9; St. Leonards, 9; Paddington, 8; Newtown, 7; Waterloo, 6; Ashfield, Petersham, and Redfern, 5 each; Glebe and Leichhardt, 4 each. The respective number for each other suburb affected are below the above-mentioned figures, and can be found in the summary of localities.

Of the 64 chimney fires, 60 of them happened in dwellings belonging to poor persons, therefore proceedings were not taken against them in accordance with the 66th clause of the city of Sydney Improvement Act. 10 persons were fined in the aggregate amount of £20 10s. and costs. 11 persons have not been summoned, and the remainder, 3, were outside the city boundary.

On examining the summary of trades it will be observed that private dwellings have been mostly affected by fires, the number being 65 for all classes of damage; but taking actual trades into consideration, the most notable stand in the following order, viz.: grocers, 9; licensed victuallers, 8; stables, 6; bedding manufacturers, tailors, and tobacconists, 5 each. The respective number of each other trade affected is below the above-mentioned figures, and can be found in the summary of trades.

I regret to inform your Board that the lives lost or seriously endangered by fire, during the past year, were as follows:—

The Brigade is also connected by telephone with the Central Police Station, at which place there is an exchange connected with the various other Police Districts.

The various wharfs, warehouses, and public buildings are in a like manner connected with the Brigade Station, through the Central Telephone Exchange at the General Post Office, which is open at all hours.

The turncocks at the Town Hall are also connected by telephone with the Brigade Station.

During the year 1886 I hope to see the following outlying districts connected by either telephone or fire alarms, direct or indirect, through the new Fire Station now being erected on the boundary of Petersham and Marrickville, viz. :— Ashfield, Burwood, Leichhardt, Marrickville, and St. Peter's.

In the year just past a fire alarm, called the "Dtica," was fitted up in the Brigade Station on trial by Mr. H. H. Kingsbury, with call points situated in two of the most important localities, viz., one at the corner of George and Gipps Streets, and the other at the corner of Pitt and Market Streets, and have been thoroughly tested and found to be of no use or service to the Brigade, inasmuch as the points could not be depended on.

Shortly other fire alarms will be fitted to these wires, which will I trust prove to be a success.

The strength of your Brigade is as follows :—

One large steam fire engine.	Two hose reels.
Two small steam fire engines.	7,985 feet of hose.
One 7-inch manual fire engine.	Four horses.
One 6-inch manual fire engine.	Thirty firemen, including Superintendent, Principal Foreman, Secretary, and Coachman.
Two under 6-inch manual fire engines.	There is one man short of the complement.
One American ladder truck (complete).
One hose van.

Waverley Volunteer Company, near Charing Cross } One
Woollahra Volunteer Company, Moncur-street } Brigade.

The Petersham Volunteer Fire Company are about to be disbanded, and are trying to sell their plant.

The Albion Volunteer Fire Company, Buckland-street, Waterloo, was disbanded during the year.

I may here inform your Board that the Pyrmont and Ultimo Volunteer Fire Company may well be considered disbanded, as they have paid very little attention during the past year even to their own district, and are now trying to sell their plant.

At some of the fires attended last year I have experienced a difficulty with a few of the Volunteer Companies, who were always drawing fire-plugs or opening hydrants, and getting their appliances to work unnecessarily and without first receiving orders after the arrival of myself; especially so when the water in the mains was at a low pressure.

As this matter is a very serious one, particularly at the commencement of a fire, and with a view of putting a stop to such practices in the future, I have determined to recommend your Board to fine any Company so offending the full penalty in accordance with clause 43 of the regulations, the same to be deducted from their subsidy. I mention this in order that Volunteer Companies may have timely notice.

The plant of three Volunteer Fire Companies is now the property of your Board, and two volunteer stations are also vested in the hands of your Board and the Municipal Councils interested. Another new volunteer fire station will also be shortly vested in a similar manner.

In the present year, 1886, I hope to be able to lay before your Board a complete scheme for dividing the metropolitan districts, at the same time assigning to each Volunteer Fire Company a limited radius under positive rules and regulations.

I am pleased to inform your Board that having our own horses and harness instead of contracting for them has not only proved a success and benefit to the Brigade, but also a saving to your Board in the expenditure.

I am pleased to report that last year a great deal of work was got through by your Brigade members inspecting the fire-plugs, also gauging the hydrants throughout the entire city and part of the suburbs. This inspection has been the means of causing many of the old hydrants that were practically useless to be removed and replaced by others, on account of their not having been made to any special gauge which supplied, and not allowing our standpipes to fit.

I may also add that I shall be very glad to see the whole of the high-pressure mains (i.e. Paddington) fitted with hydrants, instead of any of the old fire-plugs, and the mains referred to further extended for fire purposes only.

It is with great pleasure that I am able to bear testimony to your Board, that the discipline and general efficiency of your Brigade is very satisfactory, at the same time I deeply feel the want of my head station, for the purpose of drilling the whole of the members together, instead of having to take a few at a time to the public parks, &c.; and also having to do some of our necessary repairs to engines, washing and cleaning hose, together with other work, in the open thoroughfare, is not consistent with either efficiency or saving to your Board's property.

Before closing my report I desire to bring under your Board's notice that your Brigade has one great advantage which during the past decade was a source of trouble. I refer to the Brigade having one of the city turncocks constantly on duty at the station, who rides with the first engine, and is therefore always present to render the particular assistance required in the early stages of a fire. This to a great extent is a saving of time, trouble, and the expense of the hiring of cabs, especially when in the early hours of the morning, cabs are rarely to be had.

Through your Board, I desire to thank the whole of the officers and members of the various Volunteer Fire Companies for their valuable co-operation and assistance in the past year; at the same time I hope that several of the Volunteer Companies will pay a greater amount of attention to discipline or give up fire brigade business altogether.

I have also very much pleasure in thanking the officers and members of the Police Force, the city turncocks, and the citizens generally, for their invariable assistance rendered to me on all occasions of fire.

In conclusion, I have to express my sincere acknowledgments to your Board for the support given to myself during the past year.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,

Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

FIRE BRIGADES ACT, 1884.

(GRAFTON FIRE BRIGADES BOARD REPORT.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 47 Vic. No. 3, sec. 7.

Messrs. H. Maurice, S. See, and T. Page to The Colonial Secretary.

Fire Brigades Board, Borough of Grafton,

Sir,

Grafton, 22 June, 1886.

In accordance with section 7 of the "Fire Brigades Act of 1884," the Fire Brigades Board of the Borough of Grafton have to report that its first meeting was held on 4th August, 1885, when Mr. Henry Maurice was appointed Chairman, and Mr. Thomas Page, the elected representative of the Fire Insurance Companies, was appointed Secretary. The necessary steps were also taken for the framing of regulations,—

1. For the registration of Volunteer Fire Brigades under the Board.
2. For the meetings and conduct of the business of the Board, and for the purchase from the Trustees of the recent Grafton Volunteer Fire Brigade, which ceased to exist after the passing of the "Fire Brigades Act of 1884," for the purchase of the site and buildings of the engine station in Pound-street, together with engine and appliances, as per appendix B, annexed hereto, for the use of a Brigade to be established by the Board, when the regulations for such had been appointed.

The next meeting of the Board was held on 11th September, when necessary instructions were given for a legal conveyance of the beformentioned property upon the terms arranged with the Trustees thereof, viz., that the Board pay all debts due by the late Volunteer Fire Brigade, estimated not to exceed £50 as the purchase money for such property. The Board also appointed Mr. E. W. Graham as caretaker of the said properties, to have the same placed and kept in good working order, and ready for use should occasion require, until such time as a Volunteer Fire Brigade was formed under the regulations to take charge thereof.

The regulations were then finally considered and adopted, and directed to be forwarded to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, for the approval of His Excellency, and were so forwarded on the 15th September, but owing to some delay were not approved or published in the Government Gazette until the 5th January, 1886, as per Appendix A, attached hereto.

Pending the gazetting of these regulations the Board could not proceed further during the year 1885, so that no assessment was made for that year, but such steps as could be taken to facilitate the operations for 1886 were taken by the Board.

Since the 1st January, and the publication of the regulations, the assessment for 1886 has been made, and the affairs of the Board placed in regular order, as will be reported in the annual report of the Board for the present year.

HENRY MAURICE,

Chairman, Government Representative.

SAMUEL SEE,

Mayor of the Borough of Grafton.

THOMAS PAGE,

Secretary, Fire Insurance Companies' Representative.

FIRE BRIGADES ACT, 1884.

(GOULBURN FIRE BRIGADES BOARD REPORT.)

Presented to Parliament, pursuant to Act 47 Vic. No. 3, sec. 7.

The Secretary, Goulburn Fire Brigades Board, to The Colonial Secretary.

Sir, Goulburn Fire Brigades Board, 30 January, 1886.

The Goulburn Fire Brigades Board in pursuance of section 7 of the Statute beg to present this their first Annual Report.

The Board held their first meeting on February 2nd, 1885, under the presidency of the then Mayor, Mr. Wm. Davies. On 9th February Mr. Edwd. Gillespie was elected Mayor, and by virtue of his office succeeded Mr. Davies at the Board.

During the period over which the Report extends fifteen meetings have been called: Mr. Davies attended one, Mr. Gillespie eleven, Mr. Betts eleven, and Mr. Riley fourteen.

On assuming office the Board found, after much correspondence and inquiry, that owing to their being the first country Board established under the Act no regulations were available for their guidance. On application to the Colonial Secretary, asking for regulations under the 21st section of the Act, the Board were informed in response that no regulations had been made. Under these circumstances the Board, having held frequent meetings and given to the subject much anxious thought, framed and passed on July 1 a code of regulations for their guidance, and for subsidizing, &c., the Brigade. It was not however until December 17 that the Government gave effect to these regulations in accordance with clause 21 of the Fire Brigades Act, by causing them to be published in the Government Gazette.

This delay, together with the want of punctuality in paying the contributions, more particularly on the part of the Government, has caused much embarrassment to the Board. As the regulations have now received the requisite Government approval the Board will endeavour by supplying the necessary equipments to have a Brigade second to none in the Colony.

To purchase a steam fire-engine and provide a hook and ladder brigade necessitate a larger outlay than would be required if, as in the case of the metropolis, these appliances had been handed over to the Board when first constituted, and to meet the cost a rate was fixed upon which was considered high by some of the Insurance Companies. The Board on the 14th May, 1885, accordingly drew up the following minute and furnished a copy to your office, and to each of the contributory Companies:—

"The difference between the assessment in the metropolis and in a country town is but an example of the fact that small undertakings are proportionately more costly than large ones. The apparatus required for Goulburn would serve for a city three or four times as large, yet no part can be safely dispensed with, and the Board would not feel that they had performed the duty imposed by law of establishing and maintaining an efficient brigade if they neglected to provide such appliances as are essential to efficiency.

"The new law found Sydney with several Brigades, well supplied with engines and apparatus, and at least one Brigade maintained at the sole cost of the Companies. In Goulburn the Companies had no Brigade and had contributed but little to support the one local Company, while the subscriptions from the townspeople for 1884 amounted to £1 only. If the assessment now seems high it is because through inadequate support in the past the requirements here are greater than if the Brigade had been always properly supported. When all that is now needed shall have been supplied, the Board will, as in Sydney, have only to 'maintain' their material in a state of efficiency, instead of as now to 'establish' efficiency, and the rate may then be reduced accordingly, though in a small city it can never be so low as in a large one. It cannot be alleged that £300 is an excessive sum for the Government to pay to protect a large inland town from the ravages of so cruel an enemy as fire, nor that a tenant who pays 22s. a week rent will find a tax of 1d. oppressive. And the Board cannot say that the Government and the Municipality shall contribute more and the Companies less than the law prescribes. Their duty is to consider what expenditure is necessary to ensure efficiency, not to determine the proportion in which it is to be contributed. In Goulburn the premiums paid are much higher than in Sydney, the rate in the latter place being in some cases as low as 1s. 6d. as against 4s. in Goulburn for similar risks. There can be no good reason for this except that the risk is thought to be greater. If so the more need for a highly efficient Brigade furnished with the best appliances. With increased efficiency will come diminished losses, so that when the efficiency shall be satisfactorily established, the risk of loss by fire will be lessened and the Companies will benefit accordingly."

Water

Water is now being laid on throughout the town; this will add greatly to the safety of property, especially when we have a steam fire-engine, and a hook and ladder Brigade. The necessity of the latter was strongly insisted on by both present and late Superintendents, and the Board propose to provide the same without delay.

The Board contemplate a reduced rate for the coming year, and after the purchase of the steam fire-engine a still further reduction can be safely made.

Mr. Main, who had been appointed Superintendent before your Board was constituted, removed from the district and resigned on the 13th October last. The Board thereupon (subject to your approval) appointed Mr. F. R. Laws to the vacant office.

The Goulburn Volunteer Brigade have been subsidized at the maximum amount allowed in Sydney, it being considered that such a course would be well calculated to maintain the esprit de corps so happily existing amongst them. It may be mentioned that in Sydney a short time since at a contest between members of various Brigade corps our men succeeded in carrying off several prizes.

The Superintendent's report, with list and details of fires attended during the year, shows nine fires have occurred in the Municipality, but the damage has been very slight, the whole amount being estimated at under £40. In only one case was an inquest considered necessary.

A statement of the Board's receipts and expenditure for the year is appended.

I have, &c.,
JOHN COOPER,
Secretary.

P. A. JENNINGS.

REGULATIONS FOR ESTABLISHING AND MAINTAINING AN EFFICIENT FIRE BRIGADE IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

The Appointment of Men.

1. Applications for appointment as firemen must be made in candidates' own handwriting to the Secretary of the Board.
2. Candidates must be physically strong men, free from any defect in limb, hearing, or sight, from colour-blindness, from any organic, infectious, or contagious disease, and not subject to chronic ailments, or fits, or to nervousness. They must be generally intelligent, capable of acquiring instruction and able to read and write.
3. Candidates must be not less than twenty-one years of age (unless under special circumstances as to physique or qualifications), nor more than thirty-two, unless they have been previously and recently engaged as active and efficient firemen or are otherwise thoroughly competent, in which cases the limit may be extended to forty years. They must be not less than 5 feet 6 inches in natural height, nor less than 37 inches in natural chest measurement, except in the case of volunteers who shall be eligible for membership for the Metropolitan Fire Brigade if not exceeding forty years of age, provided the applicant has been an active fireman and approved of by the Superintendent of Metropolitan Fire Brigade.
4. Candidates will be required to produce testimonials from reliable and respectable persons as to habits, character, morals, and past services. They will be required to produce certificates of their births, or give other satisfactory proof of age.
5. Candidates must belong to such trades or occupations as will fit them for the duties of a fireman and for dangers of fire extinction. Special regard will be had to the activity, civility, and cheerfulness of the candidates, as well as their aptitude in the use of tackles, ladders, and in making knots and such other things as are required in the service. All other things being equal, preference will be given to seamen.
6. Foreigners will be allowed to become candidates upon taking out letters of naturalization.
7. Eligible candidates will be required to undergo a medical examination by such legally qualified medical practitioner as the Board may appoint. Their appointment as firemen will be finally dependent upon that examination.
8. Eligible candidates when finally approved will be accepted as members of the Brigade on probation only, the term of which shall be not less than three months. At the end of such probation, the probationer, if he shall have given every satisfaction to the Superintendent and have shown himself suitable in every respect may be promoted as a vacancy may occur, but the Board will not be bound to promote in the order of seniority or probationship, or of age, but may select the most eligible amongst the probationers subject to his serving his proper term of probation.
9. The pay of a probationer shall in no case exceed the rate of £130 per annum. The pay shall be payable monthly.
10. At the expiration of his term of probation, the pay of the member may be raised to a rate not exceeding £150 per annum payable monthly until he may be promoted to a higher grade or be reduced, dismissed or discharged.
11. The Board may at any time for sufficient cause reduce any member of the Brigade to a lower grade with corresponding reduction of pay.
12. The Board may make such deductions from the pay of the members of the Brigade as may from time to time be fixed for allowance of quarters or articles or rations supplied at the expense of the Board.
13. The engagement of every member will be for one month and so continued until legally discharged.
14. All engagements or appointments made by the Board may be cancelled or annulled without any reason being assigned, one week's pay to be granted in lieu of notice.
15. No probationer or other member of the Brigade will be allowed to continue or engage in any trade or business outside the Brigade. Every member will be expected to devote his knowledge to the service of the Brigade.

16. Every member of the Brigade must obey the order of the Superintendent and must conform to all rules and regulations which have been made or may be made from time to time in the Brigade Order Book, which have been previously approved by the Board.

17. Every probationer, and other members of the Brigade, must subscribe to the following:

Conditions to which persons joining the Metropolitan Fire Brigade will be subjected on becoming members.

1. Every member is to devote the whole of his time to the service of the Brigade and to carry out to the best of his ability all orders from seniors in command.

2. Every member must serve and reside wherever it may suit the convenience of the Superintendent.

3. He is to promptly obey all lawful orders from persons in authority over him.

4. He must obey all regulations which may from time to time be framed and passed by the Fire Brigades Board.

5. He shall not resign or discontinue the duties connected with the Brigade unless permitted by the Superintendent, or in his absence any other responsible officer of the Brigade, unless he shall have given to such officer one week's previous notice in writing. Should he resign or withdraw without such leave or notice he will forfeit all pay due to him, and will further be formally dismissed by the Fire Brigades Board.

6. Every member will be liable to immediate dismissal for unfitness, negligence or misconduct, independently of any other punishment to which by law he may be subject. Should he be dismissed from the service he will be liable to forfeit the whole of his pay then due.

7. Every member will be liable to suspension from duty at the discretion of the Superintendent, or in his absence by any other responsible officer of the Brigade. Every case of suspension shall be brought before the Fire Brigades Board at their first meeting after the offence, and the suspension may be continued for a further period according to the discretion of the Board. During his suspension no fireman shall receive any pay.

8. Candidates will be accepted on probation only for a period of three months or longer as it may be deemed necessary by the Fire Brigades Board.

9. Any member dismissed from the service or who may resign his appointment, shall immediately after his dismissal or resignation deliver up all clothes and accoutrements that have been supplied to him, and if any article or articles shall have been in the opinion of the superintendent improperly used or damaged, a deduction from the pay or moneys due to the member will be made sufficient to recover the loss sustained.

10. Any member found intoxicated, fighting, or disobeying orders will be at once suspended by the Superintendent or his Deputy, such suspension being dealt with by the Fire Brigades Board.

11. Each member will have the sum of 5s per month deducted from his pay until the amount reaches £4, as an insurance against his leaving the Brigade without returning his uniform and accoutrements; but on return of said uniform and accoutrements in good order, and allowing for fair wear and tear, all such moneys then in hand shall be refunded to the member.

12. It shall be compulsory for each member to belong to some Benefit Society, in which he shall not allow himself to become unfinancial, in the event of bodily illness his pay will be reduced to two-thirds for the first three months, and one-third for the next three months, and then will cease.

13. Married men living in any station will be charged a rent according to the accommodation given them.

REGULATIONS FOR COMPENSATION IN CASE OF ACCIDENT AND DEATH THEREFROM.

1. In the event of accident received while on service, and caused by something incidental to such service whereby a fireman is totally disabled, that is to say, confined to his residence (or out by order of medical adviser), being entirely disabled by external accidental injury, from following any occupation whatever (provided external and visible breach of continuity exists, and provided he has not by recklessness or disobedience of orders contributed to such accident), the Board will continue to pay such member full salary for three months from date of accident, and half salary for a further period of three months, only provided that in the event of such accident producing total disablement as aforesaid for life, or for a lengthened period, the Board in its discretion on sufficient evidence being produced, may pay further sums as it may think fit.

2. In the event of accident received while on service, and by something incidental to such service, whereby a fireman is partly disabled, that is to say, when an external injury has occurred of so slight a character as to prevent a member from following his ordinary occupation with as much ease and convenience as he did previous to the happening of the accident, provided always that he has not contributed to such accident by recklessness or disobedience of orders, the Board will continue to pay such fireman full pay for three months only, at the end of which time all pay shall cease.

3. No compensation will be allowed in cases where injuries received do not prevent a fireman from attending to his regular work, or which do not necessitate his leaving the brigade.

4. Each fireman on enrolment shall state in writing his conjugal condition, whether he is married or unmarried, or a widower, with or without children. Any change in such condition shall be at once notified in writing to the superintendent.

5. No compensation will be allowed on the death of a fireman unless he shall have been registered on the Fire Brigade books as a married person or a widower with a family.

6. No applications for compensation in the event of death by accident will be received unless the applicants for the same prove by documentary or other equally satisfactory evidence that they are the widows or the children of the firemen so deceased.

7. Each fireman who on enrolment is married, or if a widower, has a family, or who after enrolment contracts marriage, shall at once effect in some Life Assurance Company, to be approved by the Fire Brigades Board, a policy or policies on his own life, payable at death, for the sum of £200, except in the case of the Principal Foreman, who must effect an insurance for the sum of £400, such policy or policies shall be absolutely assigned to the Fire Brigades Board on printed form, to be provided by the Board, and shall be delivered up with the deed of assignment, notice of which shall be given on due form to the Assurance Company. The policy shall be made so as to be renewable on the 31st December in each year. Policies of Companies approved by the Board effected by persons previously to joining the Brigade may be utilized for the purposes of this regulation, subject to its requirements, if they be not encumbered in any way. Notices of renewal shall in all cases be sent to the Secretary of the Fire Brigades Board, who will see that the policies are kept in force, and to whom the renewal receipts shall be handed. In order to provide compensation for death by accident, while at the same time encouraging the fireman to make provision for his family in the event of death under ordinary circumstances, the Fire Brigades Board, will, so long as the fireman shall continue in its service, but no longer, pay one half of each and every premium payable under this regulation, and towards providing the other half make equal monthly deductions from the pay or salary of the fireman. In all cases any bonus which may attach to any or all such policies shall be left as a reversionary addition to said policies, and shall not be commuted, or cashed, or hypothecated in any way. On resignation or dismissal from the Brigade, the policy or policies shall be at once re-assigned by the Fire Brigades Board, and the said Board will ipso facto cease to have any interest in the same or be responsible for keeping the same in force. On the death by accident of the fireman while in the service of the Fire Brigades Board, the proceeds of the policies will be handed to the widow or family (if any), or should such action be deemed inadvisable by the Fire Brigades Board, the proceeds will be utilized in any manner which may, in the opinion of the Fire Brigades Board, seem best in the interest of the widow or family. In the event of death under ordinary circumstances, the proceeds of the policies will be handed to the legal representative of the deceased.

8. In the event of a fireman being unable to effect an insurance on his life in an office approved by the Fire Brigades Board, the amount of compensation for death arising from accident will pay £100 payable only to his widow or family in such way as the Fire Brigades Board may think desirable.

9. In no case can any compensation for death from accident be granted should the fireman leave neither widow nor issue.

GENERAL RULES.

1. Any member of the Brigade or probationer will be liable to dismissal for intoxication, insubordination, disobedience, neglect or omission of duty, incompetency, disrespect to any person in authority, or to the Board or any member or officer thereof, for insolent or immoral behaviour on the premises, or any crime, misdemeanour, or other misconduct punishable by law in addition to such penalty as may be fixed by the Fire Brigades Board.

2. Any member agitating any cause for himself, or any other person whereby the order and discipline of the Brigade is imperilled, or guilty of the offences as named in the first rule will be immediately suspended.

3. No member of the Brigade shall send any communication to the Fire Brigades Board otherwise than through the Superintendent. Any man disobeying this order will be suspended.

4. Any member having a grievance of any kind, or having any charge to make against another member of the Brigade will be required to do so in writing through the officer in charge of his station, addressed to the Superintendent.

5. No member shall absent himself from his station without permission from the officer or senior in charge of the station (for the time being). Any member found absent from the station without leave is to be immediately suspended by the aforesaid officer, who shall at once report the case to the Superintendent.

6. No member of the Brigade will be allowed to engage in any trade or business, nor will he be permitted to derive any pecuniary profit or advantage from any public contract or from any purchase made by himself or other on behalf of the Fire Brigades Board, under pain of instant dismissal by the Fire Brigades Board.

7. No member of the Brigade shall, upon any occasion or under any pretence whatever, accept any money, gift, or address from any person for services rendered at a fire without permission from the Superintendent or the Fire Brigades Board.

8. At no time excepting when on leave shall any member of the Brigade be permitted to wear clothes other than his uniform without permission of the Superintendent. No member will be permitted to attend theatres or any public place of amusement, in part or whole uniform, without the permission of the Superintendent. When working on any ruins, or on duty at fires, the flat cap is to be worn; when in fatigue or undress uniform at the Brigade Station, or when going on messages, &c., the peak cap is to be worn. Any member of the Brigade suspended from duty shall not appear in uniform during suspension.

9. On all occasions of fire the whole of the men are to be rung out. If any man is too late for an engine when it is his duty to go with the said engine, or late attending the station after having been called, or does not answer his bell, will be liable to such fines as the Fire Brigades Board may think fit to award.

10. All married members will be held responsible for any wilful or unnecessary damage to the quarters in their occupation; the said quarters will be subject to periodical inspection by the Superintendent; and are to be left in a clean and respectable manner when the member is removing. Single men will be held responsible to the officer in charge of the station for their apartments, bedding and furniture being kept in a clean and respectable manner at all times, ready for inspection after 9 a.m. each day.

11. Any member breaking his leave will be liable to have his leave stopped for a certain period by the Superintendent, and the record of it will be taken to weigh against promotion.

12. The Duty Man in charge of the Telephone, or other signalling apparatus, will be held answerable on the occasion of a fire that the electric bells are rung, that all men are turned out, that the correct time of the call is taken, and that the name and address of the person by whom the call was given are entered in the Station "Occurrence Book."

13. When the manual engine is put to work at a fire the junior man present attending with the engine is required to remain in charge of the manual engine, and to receive orders and directions from his seniors as to the working of such engine. He is at no time to leave the manual, unless otherwise directed by his seniors. While in charge of the manual he will be required to know what gear has been taken out of it. If a standpipe for a plug or a ball hydrant is used instead of the manual engine, the junior man will stand by to turn on or off as he is directed, but if steamers are at work, and there is no likelihood of the standpipes being required to be turned on or off, he is to leave and assist at the fire.

14. During the summer months, viz., September, October, November, December, January, February, and March, all members will be required to rise at 5.45 a.m., and during the remaining months of the year 6.45 a.m. Exception will be made of men who have performed their usual turn on duty the previous night, or who may be reported on the sick list.

15. The general work of each station is to be commenced at 6 a.m. in the summer months above named, and at 7 a.m. in the other months, when the roll is to be called, and continued until 8 a.m., when the men knock off for breakfast, work to be resumed at 9 a.m. and continued until 10 a.m., when the roll is again to be called by the officer in charge or the senior man present, after which the work is to be continued until finished.

16. The man on duty in charge of the telephone, &c., is to be cleaned by 10 a.m., he will be held responsible that the watchroom is kept clean and in proper order.

17. All members shall attend drill and practice at the discretion of the Superintendent or Officer in charge of the station to which they are attached.

18. All applications for leave over three hours after the 10 a.m. call for that day, are to be made by 9 a.m. Applications for leave commencing before 9 a.m. must be made by 6 p.m. the previous day. Leave will only be granted at the discretion of the Superintendent.

19. Members on their return from leave will be required to see that the correct time of their return is entered on the leave note by the senior man of the watch.

20. Members living out of the station are required to be in readiness at all times at their homes, in order that they may be able to immediately answer any call that may be given them. Any member found absent from his home without the requisite permission will be immediately suspended, and the case referred to the Fire Brigades Board. The case in question will be equivalent to a man being absent from the station without leave.

21. At fires, no member will be allowed to enter any hotel for refreshments without the permission of the Superintendent, or such officer who may be in charge of the fire. All refreshments if possible will be supplied in the vicinity of the fire, and not in an hotel. At no time at fires will any member be permitted to supply or use his authority towards supplying any persons, civilians or otherwise, refreshments of any description without the orders of the Superintendent or such officer as may be in charge of the fire. Any one violating this rule will be immediately suspended.

22. Any member heard to speak slanderously, disparagingly, contemptuously, or insubordinately of any officer, or in any manner uttering words calculated to cause a breach of the rules or disorder in the Brigade, shall be suspended.

23. Should at any time any member wilfully strike any officer in the Brigade, he is to be immediately suspended.

24. The watch duties of the station and at fires are to extend from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m., 2 p.m. to 10 p.m., 10 p.m. to 6 a.m., unless otherwise altered by the Superintendent's orders.

25. Members guilty of any tampering with the books, or wilful damage to, or destruction of the buildings, goods, effects, chattels, clothing, apparatus, plant, belonging to the Fire Brigades Board or in its charge, will be liable to immediate suspension.

Qualifications and Duties of Principal Foreman.

1. He must have complete practical knowledge of all the duties required of the officers and men in the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, together with practical and technical acquaintance with all the apparatus in use at the various stations, and must be ready at any time to assist in any of the duties required of the Brigade, and to lead on the men fearlessly and judiciously.

2. He will be required to undertake all the duties and responsibilities of the Superintendent during the absence or other disability of the latter in addition to such other duties as are herein prescribed.

3. When in charge of a fire he will be required to take full responsibility and exercise the Superintendent's powers according to the Act, at the same time paying due respect to water-damage, water-wasting, salvaging, &c.

4. He will be held responsible for, and it will be his special duty to attend particularly to the general requirements for gear, &c., for the Brigade, including the checking and passing of all requisitions, bills, general reports, &c., before final passing by the Superintendent.

5. He will be expected to make reports to the Superintendent of any suggestions or alterations he may think advisable to any station for the better working of the Brigade in general.

6. He will be required to report to the Superintendent any deviation of duty, negligence, and misdemeanours committed by any member of the Brigade.

7. He will be held responsible to the Superintendent that all orders from the Fire Brigades Board, and those contained in the Superintendent's Order Book are diligently executed and performed.

8. He will be liable to suspension from duty by the Superintendent for any neglect of duty, insubordination, intoxication, cowardice, overbearing conduct, incompetency, or non-carrying out of the rules and regulations of the Fire Brigades Board.

9. He is to set an example to his men by his sobriety, cleanliness, promptitude, coolness at a fire, and general attention to his duties.

10. He must be under the immediate direction and supervision of the Superintendent, and at all times ready to acknowledge and defer to the Superintendent's authority.

11. He will be required to live at such station as may be assigned to him, attend all calls for fires, and at no time to absent himself from the station without first obtaining permission from the Superintendent.

12. He will be held responsible to the Superintendent for the full and proper working of the Brigade; such as the cleaning of the engines, horses, &c., running of steamers according to orders, drilling the men, and that all telephones, fire alarms and electric bells are kept in complete working order.

13. He will be required to agree and bind himself under the conditions of service, and all rules and regulations in existence at the time of his taking office, and all rules made hereafter by the Fire Brigades Board, or the Superintendent.

14. He will be required to thoroughly know the drills as given by the Superintendent, and it will also be his duty to drill the members of the brigade at least once a week in engine practice (either manual or steamer) as well as scaling-ladder practice.

15. To see that the men and horses are drilled at least once in every twenty-four hours, as if getting away for a fire.

16. To take charge of all firemen, coachmen, and horses attached to his station, and to keep up a direct system of discipline among them, having at all times a list of the same hung up in the watchroom.

17. To make himself as far as possible acquainted with the whole of the fire-cocks, fire-plugs, hydrants, and other means of obtaining water in the city and suburbs of Sydney, and to instruct his men accordingly.

18. He will be held responsible that the apartments, buildings, and furniture connected with his station are diligently kept clean, and that the station and appliances in general are in good condition, and any repairs required to be immediately written for by requisition to the Superintendent.

19. To immediately suspend any man guilty of disobedience of orders, or other serious misconduct, whenever he may deem it desirable to do so. He is to acquaint the Superintendent of any case of suspension at the earliest opportunity.

20. In respect to the powers of granting leave to members of the Brigade, he will only exercise similar powers as those vested in a Foreman, excepting in the absence of the Superintendent; the principal Foreman will then take the same powers as the Superintendent. (The reading of this rule is not to vest the principal Foreman during the temporary absence of the Superintendent).

21. To take charge of the fire engines and all appliances belonging to his station or any other premises and property therein belonging to the Fire Brigades Board in addition to Rule 1 as aforesaid, and to keep up a proper inventory of the same.

22. It must be clearly understood by the principal Foreman that he will be held responsible for the full working of his own station besides assisting the Superintendent in the supervision of the whole Brigade, and to take the full charge of the same during the absence of the Superintendent.

23. To study the characters and abilities of the men under his charge, and to be ready at all times to give the Superintendent correct information concerning them.

Duties of a Foreman.

1. To set an example to his men by his sobriety, cleanliness, promptitude, coolness at a fire, civility and general attention to his duties.

2. To reside at any station he may be appointed to, and to take charge of the station, stables, or any other premises or property therein belonging to the Fire Brigades Board.

3. To take charge of the fire engines and all appliances belonging to his station, and to keep up a proper inventory of the same.

4. He will be held responsible that the apartments, bedding, and furniture connected with his station are diligently kept clean, that the station and appliances in general are in good condition, and any repairs required to the station or appliances are to be immediately written for by requisition to the Superintendent.

5. To take charge of all firemen, coachmen, and horses attached to his station, and to keep up a strict system of discipline among them, having at all times a list of the same hung up in the watchroom.

6. To see that all the men belonging to his station are within hail and available for duty at all times, unless specially booked sick, absent on account of duty or leave, or otherwise engaged.

7. To instruct his men in drill exercise at least once a week, and to see that all other duties are strictly carried out.

8. To regulate the duties to be performed by the men at his station, showing no favour to any man more than another.

9. To call the roll at 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. respectively to see that all the men at home are present and fit for duty.

10. To see that the station clock is set right each night at 10 p.m. by telephone by the clock at the Head Quarters Station.

11. To see that the necessary number of men are placed on duty in the watchroom, that they are in proper uniform, and are acquainted with the details of station duty.

12. To see that each engine in his station is turned out once a week and the gear thoroughly cleaned no two engines to be turned out the same day.

13. To grant leave of absence according to his discretion for periods not exceeding 6 hours, between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., and to sign the said leave note before the man goes on leave. Any other leave required either before or after these hours, or over the said amount, will only be granted by the Superintendent, at the same time the Foreman will be held responsible that his station has sufficient men in case of a fire.

14. To make reports to the Superintendent on any suggestions or alterations he may think advisable at his station for the better working of the Brigade in general.

15. To see that all calls for chimneys on fire are immediately attended to, and that stops for the same are sent away to the other stations to save any unnecessary turning out of engines, &c., and that a record is kept of the same.

16. Should he be the first officer of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade to arrive at a fire he will ascertain as soon as possible the nature and extent of the fire, and send the intelligence to the nearest Fire Station with a view to its being communicated to the Head Station. Should it happen to be a small fire he will at once send one of his own men to the nearest Fire Station to stop all other engines, and if a large fire, he will send a stranger, who may be trusted with a message (written if possible) giving a short description of the building alight and stating that more help will be required. Upon arriving at a fire, if a senior officer is present, he is at once to report himself and to work under his orders (at no time is he to work independently of any other officer of the Brigade). If he should be the senior, he is at once to take command, but it must be distinctly understood that he is not to find fault at the fire with the former senior officer for what may have been already done, but if he sees anything wrong to report the same in the usual manner to the Superintendent.

17. To report the departure and return of his engines by telephone to the Head Station.

18. To write requisitions for all stores, repairs, &c., that may be required at his station.

19. To study the characters and abilities of the men under his charge, and to be ready at all times to give his superiors correct information concerning them.

20. To make himself as far as possible acquainted with the whole of the locality in the neighbourhood of his station, or otherwise to know the fire-cocks, fire-plugs, hydrants, and other means of obtaining water and to instruct his men in the same.

21. To make himself acquainted with the Volunteer Fire Stations, Police Stations, turncocks' residences in his neighbourhood, and to keep their addresses always hung up in a prominent position in the watchroom.

22. With reference to religious observances it is expected that the foreman will do all he can to facilitate the attendance of the men under his charge in allowing them to attend the places of worship to which they respectively belong, and that particular attention shall be paid to the proper observance of the Sabbath day.

23. The general idea intended to be conveyed is that the foreman is absolutely responsible for everything in connection with his station, that consequently the whole control and management are vested in his hands. It is of course understood that he is bound to act fairly and discreetly with his men and all concerned, and he may at any time be called to account for his actions, but practically his judgment and discretion are left unfettered in any way, in order that there may be no limit to his responsibility in the execution of the duties entrusted to him. As his duties are numerous it would be impossible for him to perform them all himself, and therefore to prevent any misunderstanding of the terms in which these instructions are conveyed it is especially mentioned that even if it were possible it would be by no means desirable for him to do so. He is provided with the necessary staff and appliances, and it is his duty to work them to the best advantage according to his discretion and ability, and not only that but also be able to satisfy his superiors that he has done so.

Duties of the Engineer.

1. He will see that all steam fire engines, floating engines, and gear appertaining thereto throughout the brigade are kept in thorough working order. All requisitions for any repairs to the same are to be signed by himself to the superintendent.

2. He is to see that all boilers of steam fire engines and the boilers of floating engines are washed out at least once a month when all mud-hole plugs are to be taken out.

3. The apparatus for heating the water of the boiler, &c., in each station will be under his special care.

4. He will see that each spring balance of the safety-valves of each steamer has the requisite ferrule on, and in no case is the boiler to be allowed to work without one, neither are the levers of the safety-valves to be weighted in any way.

5. He is to see that each steamer is run at least once in every two weeks, when he is to instruct other men how to drive the same.

6. He will be required to teach the second-class firemen how to drive the steamers under all difficulties, such as working with the fuel pump disabled, or the injector disabled, and working at a fire with salt water. For the better carrying out of this order a certificate will be required from the engineer for each second-class fireman before he is promoted to the rank of a first-class fireman. He is to instruct the men that in no case will they draw the fire from the steamer when at a fire; if the said steamer is not required to work they are to allow the boiler to generate 100 lb. of steam and then the damper is to be put on. This is required in case of being called to another fire or meeting with one on the way home.

7. When at fires he is to make it his duty to see that the man in charge of each steamer keeps the water in sight in the water-gauge glass, and in case of accidents such as the failure of the feeding apparatus rendering it impossible, he is to instruct them in immediately but coolly drawing the fire. He is also to watch that each steamer does its work properly, or to report the same to the superintendent at the first opportunity.

Qualifications of a first-Class Fireman.

1. He must take an interest in his profession, and make himself conversant with all matters connected with a fireman's duties. He must know the drill thoroughly; he must be able to teach other men the drill; he must be able to drive any steam fire-engine in the brigade, and have a good knowledge of the same.

2. He will be required to make himself acquainted with the different parts of the machinery of both manual and steam fire-engines; each part has a proper name, and he is required when speaking of any particular part to call it by that name.

3. He will be required to take down, when necessary, the particulars of a fire for a fire report.

4. He must be competent to take charge of a station during the temporary absence of his officer.

Passed at a meeting of the Board, held on the 1st day of July, 1885.

EDWARD GILLESPIE,	} Members of the Goulburn Fire Brigades Board.
Chairman,
A. M. BETTS, W. R. RILEY,

And the said Board so constituted as aforesaid have agreed upon the following rules and regulations under which the Goulburn Fire Brigades will register and subsidize Volunteer Fire Companies.

1. None but physically strong men, free from defect in sight and limb, without organic disease, shall be registered on the effective staff of any company. In case of members joining after the first registration, a medical certificate will be required.

2. No person shall be admitted as an effective member under the age of 21 years, unless under special circumstances as to physique or qualifications.

3. No person shall be enrolled over the age of 40 years unless he has been previously engaged as an active fireman, in which case the limit may be extended to 50 years.

4. No person over the age of 65 years shall remain on the effective working staff of any company, unless by special resolution of the company, reported to and approved by the Board.

5. No person under 5 feet in height, or less than 32 inches round the chest, shall be enrolled, unless under special circumstances.

6. No person shall be appointed or elected as an officer unless he is practically acquainted with the duties of fireman.

7. None but persons whose occupations fit them for the service of a fireman shall be enrolled or recognized as effective members, excepting in cases where active service has already been rendered as fireman. No person who has been convicted of any felony shall be allowed to remain or to be enrolled in any company.

8. In order to prevent claims on the funds of the Board, or of the company, all members shall either assure their lives and also assure against accident, or shall belong to some benefit society, in which they shall at no time allow themselves to become unfinancial.

9. The company, in order to be registered and subsidized, must send an application to that effect to the Board, together with a list of its members, giving their names in full, with age, occupation, residence, height, measurement round the chest, state of health and physical defects, if any. On the Board being satisfied with said roll, the company or brigade will be deemed to be established, and will be registered and subsidized accordingly.

10. Attached to such roll shall be an undertaking, signed by each member, stating his willingness to abide by the rules of the company, and by the regulations of the Board; a similar return shall be furnished in January in every year, but the signatures of those who have already signed need not be again attached unless required by the Board.

11. The number of effective working members shall be not less than fifteen, nor more than forty. If at any time the number shall fall below the minimum, the registration of the company shall be suspended, and the subsidy cease.

12. Appointments to the usual offices in the company shall be made by the members of the company in meeting assembled, subject, however, to confirmation by the Board. The officers shall have such titles as the Board may permit.

13. The secretary of the brigade shall by the 14th January in every year furnish the Board with the receipts and disbursements of such brigade for the preceding year ended 31st December, verified by the secretary and treasurer of the company.

14. The company shall have its own printed rules of internal and general working, which must in all cases be subject to the approval of the Fire Brigades Board. All proposed alterations and additions must be submitted to the Board for approval or otherwise. All fines and punishments fixed by such rules shall be strictly enforced under penalty of deducting from the subsidy voted such sums as it may appear that the company has failed to recover.

15. The Fire Brigades Board may at any time appoint an officer to audit the books of any company, subject to a notice of at least three clear days.

16. Members of brigade shall at no time attend fire brigade demonstrations outside a radius of 5 miles from the Goulburn Post Office without leaving a sufficient number of effective members within the municipality. No apparatus shall be taken to a demonstration without the written consent of the Board.

17. On all occasions of fire, in the absence of the superintendent, the members of brigade shall abide by instructions given by the senior officer of the company present. Members of brigade shall not take orders from owners of property, bystanders, or other persons not in authority, or any person out of uniform.

18. No member shall be permitted to lend his uniform to any person not a member of the company. Members when on duty must wear a badge, mark of distinction, or number, in order that they may be recognized. All such marks, badges, or numbers must be approved by the Fire Brigades Board.

19. The bells or other signalling apparatus shall only be used for giving and receiving alarms, and for sending messages on service.

20. The members of brigade shall meet twice in every month for practice, &c. The brigade may appoint its own day for practice.

21. All subsidies shall be payable quarterly, and shall in the discretion of the Board be subject to stoppage, reduction, or absolute forfeiture in the event of the company becoming in the opinion of the Board inefficient.

22. The superintendent shall once in every three months report on the efficiency of the company; such report to be in writing under his hand; and if the Board considers such report satisfactory they shall subsidize the company in such amount as may be deemed desirable, having regard to the numbers and state of efficiency of the brigade, and to the amount of money at the disposal of the Board.

23. The subsidy will be paid into the bank to the credit of the treasurer of the company, and is to be devoted to the purchase of uniforms, payment for practices and for attendance at fires, and for such other fit purposes as the company's rules may provide.

24. Any member of the company not attending paid practice shall, unless he furnish satisfactory excuse for his absence, be fined in such sum as the company's rules may determine.

25. Members of companies shall not be allowed to take any intoxicating liquors while on duty without the permission of the officer in command at a fire or practice.

26. Any member of a company guilty of intoxication, disobedience of orders, insubordination, abusive or obscene language, smoking in uniform at fires or on duty, wanton destruction of property, interference with fire-plugs and other appliances, or other unseemly conduct, or shall be guilty of any other breach of these rules or the company's regulations, shall be at once suspended from duty, and shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5.

27. The Fire Brigades Board may deduct from any subsidy by way of fine any sum not exceeding £5 for each offence under these regulations, or recover the same in lieu thereof in terms of the Fire Brigades Act. The superintendent of fire brigades, or the secretary of the Fire Brigades Board, shall be the officer or person to lay information under these regulations.

Passed at a meeting of the Board, held on the 1st day of July, 1885.

EDWARD GILLESPIE,	} Members of the Goulburn Fire Brigades Board.
Chairman,

1. None but physically strong men, free from defect in sight and limb, without organic disease, shall be registered on the effective staff of any Company. In case of members joining after the first registration, a medical certificate will be required.

2. No person shall be admitted as an effective member under the age of 18 years, unless under special circumstances as to physique or qualifications.

3. No person shall be enrolled over the age of 40 years unless he has been previously engaged as an active fireman, in which case the limit may be extended to 50 years.

4. No person over the age of 55 years shall remain on the effective working staff of any Company unless by special resolution of the Company, reported to and approved by the Board.

5. No person under 5 feet in height, or less than 32 inches round the chest, shall be enrolled, unless under special circumstances.

6. No person shall be appointed or elected as an officer unless he is practically acquainted with the duties of fireman.

7. No person who has been convicted of any felony shall be allowed to remain or to be enrolled in any Company.

8. In order to prevent claims on the funds of the Board, or of the Company, all members shall either assure their lives, and also assure against accident, or shall belong to a benefit society, in which they shall at no time allow themselves to become unfinancial.

9. The Company, in order to be registered and subsidized, must send an application to that effect to the Board, together with a list of its members, giving their names in full, with age, occupation, residence, height, measurement round the chest, state of health, and physical defects, if any. On the Board being satisfied with said roll, the Company or Brigade will be deemed to be established, and will be registered and subsidized accordingly.

10. Attached to such roll shall be an undertaking, signed by each member, stating his willingness to abide by the Rules of the Company, and by the Regulations of the Board; a similar return shall be furnished in January in every year, but the signatures of those who have already signed need not be again attached unless required by the Board.

12. Appointments to the usual offices in the Company shall be made by the members of the Company in meeting assembled, subject to the approval of the Superintendent; any member feeling aggrieved at any action shall have power to appeal to the Board.

14. The Company shall have its own printed rules of internal and general working, which must, in all cases, be subject to the approval of the Fire Brigades Board. All proposed alterations and additions must be submitted to the Board for approval or otherwise. All fines and punishments fixed for such rules shall be strictly enforced, under penalty of deducting, from the subsidy voted, such sums as it may appear that the Company has failed to recover.

15. The Fire Brigades Board may, at any time, appoint an officer to audit the books of any Company, subject to a notice of three clear days.

16. Members of Brigade shall at no time attend Fire Brigade demonstrations outside a radius of five miles from the Forbes Post Office without leaving a sufficient number of effective members within the Municipality. No apparatus shall be taken to a demonstration without the permission of Superintendent and consent of the Board.

17. On all occasions of fire, in the absence of the Superintendent, the members of Brigade shall abide by instructions given by the senior officer present. Members of Brigade shall not take orders from owners of property, by-standers, or other persons not in authority.

18. No member shall be permitted to lend his uniform to any person not a member of the Company. Members when on duty must wear a badge, mark of distinction, or number, in order that they may be recognized. All such marks, badges, or numbers must be approved by the Fire Brigades Board.

20. The members of Brigade shall meet twice in every month for practice, &c. The Brigade may appoint its own day for practice.

21. All subsidies shall be payable quarterly, and shall, in the discretion of the Board, be subject to stoppage, reduction, or absolute forfeiture, in the event of the Company becoming, in the opinion of the Board, inefficient.

22. The Superintendent shall, once in every three months, report on the efficiency of the Company, such report to be in writing under his hand; and if the Board considers such report satisfactory, they shall subsidize the Company in such amount as may be deemed desirable, having regard to the numbers and state of efficiency of the Brigade, and to the amount of money at the disposal of the Board.

23. The subsidy will be paid into the Bank to the credit of the Treasurer of the Company, and is to be devoted to the purchase of materials, uniforms, payment for practices, and for attendance at fires.

24. Any member of the Company not attending paid practice shall, unless he furnish satisfactory excuse for his absence, be fined in such sum as the Company's Rules may determine.

25. Members of Companies shall not be allowed to take any intoxicating liquors while on duty without the permission of the officer in command at a fire or practice.

26. Any member of a Company guilty of intoxication, disobedience of orders, insubordination, abusive or obscene language while in uniform, at fires or on duty, wanton destruction of property, interference with fire plugs and other appliances, or other unseemly conduct, or shall be guilty of any other breach of these Rules or the Company's Regulations, shall be at once suspended from duty, and shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

He shall keep an inventory of all properties belonging to the Brigade, and produce the same when requested so to do at any time by the Captain, or any officer of the Brigade, and for such services being faithfully performed he shall receive such remuneration as the Brigade shall deem meet, such remuneration to be voted from the funds of the Brigade.

16. Receiving Alarms.—Any member receiving an alarm of fire from a reliable source shall immediately transmit information through the telephone to head quarters of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, then ring out the alarm. In no case is the fire-bell to continue ringing for more than 5 minutes after the engine has left the Station. On no occasion is an alarm to be sent through the telephone or the bell to be rung for a chimney-fire. Every care is to be taken to give the exact location of the fire when transmitting the alarm to Head Quarters.
17. Fires, practices, &c.—It shall be the duty of members to attend all fires and practices, and in the event of their non-attendance for a period of three months at either without obtaining leave of absence from the Captain, their names shall be erased from the books.

The Superintendent Fire Brigades to The Fire Brigades Board.

Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 30 November, 1885.

I have the honor to report to your Board that I have visited the No. 1 Woollahra Volunteer Fire Company and Waverley Volunteer Fire Company several times myself, besides sending members of the Brigade to see if the duty was being done at night, and each time the stations have been found locked up, therefore I have not taken any notice of their application for registration.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,

Supt. of Fire Brigades.

Reports from certain Firemen, M.F.B., to Fire Brigades Board.

20 November, 1885.

1. Visited Waverley, 10-22 p.m.; locked up. Visited Woollahra (Moncur-street), 10-13 p.m.; locked up. Visited Woollahra (Trickett-street), 10-50 p.m.; open. Six men in attendance.

Fireman, M.F.B.,

2. I visited Waverley Fire Station at 10:20 p.m., and Woollahra Fire Station (Moncur-street) at 10:50 p.m. on the 24th, 1885, and found nobody in the above stations.

JOHN SNELSON,

I then visited Mr. Booker's station in Trickett-street and found the station-door open and the lamps alight in the manual.

CHARLES BROWN,
Fireman, M.F.B.

The Superintendent Fire Brigades to The Fire Brigades Board.

Gentlemen,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 29 December, 1885.

I have the honor to report to your Board that we did not receive any call from the No. 1 Woollahra Volunteer Fire Company on the night of the 24th instant for the fire at the corner of Queen-street and Waverley Road. The only call received was from the Paddington Volunteer Fire Company for a light showing towards Waverley, and further, a cabman, No. 826, named Charles Allery, informed the Secretary that he called the No. 1 Woollahra Volunteer Fire Company, and for some time they would not turn out for it, as they said that they were not registered under the Board. As this question is a very serious one I now beg to recommend that the telephone instrument be removed from the No. 1 Volunteer Fire Company's Station in Moncur-street to the No. 2 Volunteer Fire Company's Station in Trickett-street, Woollahra.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,
Supt. of Fire Brigade.

Copy forwarded to C.O., Woollahra.—A.J.L.B., 30/11/85.

The Secretary Fire Brigades Board to The Council Clerk, Woollahra.

Sir,

Fire Brigades Board Office, Sydney, 30 December, 1885.

I am directed by the Fire Brigades Board to forward, for the information of the Council, a copy of report received from Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

I am also to state that the Superintendent, or some member of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, has visited the station on several occasions and have always found the station-house locked and no one in attendance.

The Board has given instructions to have the telephone instrument removed as recommended.

I have, &c.,

ANDW. J. L. BONE,
Secretary, F.B.B.

The Superintendent Fire Brigades to The Mayor of Woollahra.

Sir,

Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 18 January, 1886.

Having noticed several accounts in the daily newspapers, relative to the subject of the Woollahra No. 1 Volunteer Fire Company not being registered under the Fire Brigades Board, and also the removal of the telephone communication from their station, I do myself the honor to give you the following particulars in connection with the matter:—

In the first place they refused to register under the Fire Brigades Board for upwards of 14 months, although I have personally tried many times to get their Captain to do so. About last May or June I saw Mr. Joseph Brignell (the Captain), and we had a long conversation concerning the starting of the Woollahra No. 2 Volunteer Fire Company, and I earnestly tried to persuade him to register in order to put a stop to the other Company being established. Notwithstanding this they did not apply for registration until the 15th of October last, whereas the No. 2 Company made a start on the 1st of August.

I may also inform you that it appears in the newspapers that the Secretary considers the mere application for registration enough without carrying out the Rules, one of which in particular, being the keeping of a man on duty at their station during the hours of 8:0 p.m. and 6:0 a.m., to attend to the telephone for any alarms of fires either from Waverley or the immediate locality and boundary of Woollahra, besides the ringing of their bell for a fire in their own district. I may here inform you that I have caused both their stations to be visited for a period of over 40 nights between the hours of 11 and 12 p.m., and at no time were any members found on duty.

Now, in reference to the late fire at the corner of Queen-street and Waverley Road, a cabman states that he called the Woollahra No. 1 Volunteer Company, who, at first would not turn out, because they were not registered under the Board, although eventually they did turn out, and were at work at the fire when I arrived. They did not send a telephone message about the fire to my Central Station although they were rung up several times. Therefore, as the telephone appeared to be useless in their station, I have recommended its removal to the No. 2 Station, where men are kept on duty all night.

I may further state for your information, and of the Aldermen of your Borough, that we have received only one call for a fire during the year 1885, whereas four fires have happened in their district. They however gave three alarms, two of which were bush fires, and one a false alarm, given by one of their members, who sent a message through to the Central Station for a fire at the "Tea Garden's Hotel," without having any cause for so doing, thereby causing my brigade to be turned out for his amusement.

In conclusion, it is my duty to state that the telephonic communication has now been removed to the other station in Trickett-street; therefore the Municipalities of Woollahra and Waverley are in communication with the Central Fire-station, and which is much more suitable than before, as we have often been ringing up during the night for reflections showing in the direction of your Municipality and that of Waverley but could never get any answer. As far as I am personally concerned I have no feeling in the matter whatever, except in carrying out the rules and regulations which have been laid down as law; and I must certainly say that if they are workable for the other Volunteer Companies they should be equally suitable for the one in question.

Apologizing for having troubled you at the length I have on the subject,

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,

Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

The Superintendent of Fire Brigades to The Captain Woollalura Volunteer Fire Company.

Sir, Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Bathurst-street, Sydney, 3 February, 1886.

I have to inform you that the Fire Brigades Board having ordered the telephone to be removed from your station, and the telegraph operators having been refused admittance thereto, I now ask if you will please give the necessary orders to allow the instrument to be removed, otherwise your Company will be charged with the instrument and the maintenance of the same from the date the wires were taken from it.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM D. BEAR,

Superintendent of Fire Brigades.

[Laid upon Table, and ordered to be printed, 29 April, 1886; to be included in Return laid upon Table on 21st instant.—F.W.W.]

The Secretary Metropolitan Fire Brigades Board to The Captain Woollalura Volunteer Fire Company.

Sir, Metropolitan Fire Brigade, Sydney, 4 September, 1884.

I am directed to solicit an explanation from you of the reason why, on the occasion of the fire in Ocean-street, Woollalura, on the 3rd instant, you failed to notify the Metropolitan Fire Brigade of the same, notwithstanding the fact that your brigade is connected by telephone with the M.F.B. Station? Your early attention and a reply by Monday morning next will oblige.

I have, &c.,

Sec. M.F.B. & Assist. Sec. F.B.B.
