Industrial Arbitration (Police) Amendment Bill, 1946.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

THE objects of this Bill are to enable industrial agreements and awards to be entered into and made under the Industrial Arbitration Act, 1940-1943, in respect of members of the police force, and thus confer rights under the said Act on members of the police force comparable to those conferred on members of the public service.

Industrial Revolution (1750-1850) and the Environment

LABORATORY

1. The Industrial Revolution was a period of rapid change in the way people lived and worked. It began in the late 1700s and continued through the mid-1800s. This period was characterized by the development of new technologies, such as the steam engine and the factory system, which led to a dramatic increase in production and economic growth. However, the Industrial Revolution also had significant environmental impacts, including air and water pollution, deforestation, and the depletion of natural resources. These impacts have shaped the modern world and continue to influence our lives today.
