The first part of the paper is devoted to a general survey of the subject, and to a discussion of the various methods which have been employed for its investigation. It is shown that the most reliable results have been obtained by the use of the method of least squares, and that this method is applicable to all cases of the kind.
 The second part of the paper is devoted to a detailed description of the apparatus used in the experiments, and to a description of the method of observation. It is shown that the results obtained are in good agreement with the theoretical predictions, and that the method is applicable to all cases of the kind.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments, and to a comparison of the results with the theoretical predictions. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the
 is applicable to all cases of the kind.

The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments, and
 is applicable to all cases of the kind.
