society that is a party to the agreement will not in any case out of money borrowed by it from the lender advance to any one member of the society any greater amount than the amount specified in such agreement or in a notice in writing by the Treasurer to the society as the maximum amount which at the date of the advance is permitted to be advanced 30 to any one member, nothing in that covenant shall preclude the society from advancing out of money borrowed by it from the lender to any one member of the society an amount which when reduced by the value of the share capital of the member or the sum of one hundred and eighty pounds, whichever is 35 the less, does not exceed the sum of three thousand five hundred pounds.

Co-operation (Amendment).

South Wales.

15 (2) Notwithstanding anything contained in any agreement to which this section applies, the agreement shall not operate to preclude the building society which is a party thereto from making, out of moneys borrowed by it from the lender, advances to a member of the society to the extent and in the circumstances contemplated by section 17A of the 20 Co-operation Act, 1923-1961, as amended by this Act, and authorised by the rules of the society.

25 (3) Where any agreement referred to in subsection one of this section contains a covenant to the effect that the society that is a party to the agreement will not in any case
or the sum of one hundred and eighty pounds, whichever is
hundred pounds.

Co-operation (Amendment).

(4) Notwithstanding the rules of any society which is a party to an agreement to which this section applies such society may—

- 5 (a) make an advance to any member of the society up to the maximum amount which it is permitted to advance to such member under such agreement as varied by subsection three of this section; and
- 10 (b) issue shares to any member of the society of such value as will enable the member to obtain from the society an advance up to such maximum amount.
