SYDNEY RESCUE WORK SOCIETY BILL, 1974

EXPLANATORY NOTE

AN unincorporated association was formed in Sydney in 1890 under the name "Sydney Rescue Work Society", its property being vested in trustees.

A company was incorporated in 1948 under the Companies Act, 1936, and the Governor granted it a license under section 34 of that Act to dispense with the word "Limited" as part of its name. The name of the company is also "Sydney Rescue Work Society".

The object of forming the company was to transfer to it the property held by trustees on behalf of the unincorporated association thus avoiding the necessity of continually appointing new trustees and vesting the property in them. It was found, however, that the death of various trustees had made this impossible.

The object of this Bill is to dissolve the unincorporated association and to transfer to the company all its liabilities and assets.

PROOF

No. , 1974.

A BILL

To transfer to the incorporated Sydney Rescue Work Society the assets and liabilities of the unincorporated association of that name; to dissolve that association; and for purposes connected therewith.
