Criminal Law and Evidence Amendment.

whole of the "Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1884," are hereby repealed—except as to anything heretofore duly done thereunder, and except so far as may be necessary for the purpose of supporting and continuing any proceeding taken or of prosecuting or punishing any person for any offence committed before the passing of this Act.

4. Where by any section of the Principal Act an offender is made liable to penal servitude for life, or any other fixed term, the Judge may nevertheless pass a sentence of penal servitude or of imprisonment of less duration as follows—that is to say—instead of penal servitude for life, penal servitude for any term of years not less than seven—or imprisonment for any term not exceeding seven years—instead of penal servitude for fourteen years, penal servitude for any term of years not less than five, or imprisonment for any term not exceeding five years—instead of penal servitude for ten years, penal servitude for any term of years not less than four, or imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years—and instead of penal servitude for seven or five years, penal servitude for any term of years not less than three, or imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years. Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the awarding of hard labour or solitary confinement, or whipping, where at present by law authorized, or directing the offender to enter into recognizances to keep the peace, and for good behaviour.

5. In the case of any sentence to a whipping or whippings under sections four hundred and one or four hundred and two of the Principal Act, it shall not be necessary that the time or times of such whippings shall be specified by the Court in such sentence, and in case the Court shall not specify the time or times of such whipping, the same shall be fixed by the Comptroller General of Prisons, under and in accordance with regulations in that behalf to be made by the Governor. In no case shall any whipping take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence.

6. Every person charged with an indictable offence, and the husband or wife, as the case may be, of the person so charged, shall be competent, but not compellable, to give evidence in every Court on the hearing of such charge. Provided that the person so charged shall not be liable to be called as a witness on behalf of the prosecution nor to be questioned on cross-examination without the leave of the Judge as to his or her previous character or antecedents.

7. Where upon the hearing of any charge under sections forty-one, forty-two, forty-three, forty-four, fifty-nine, or sixty of the Principal Act against any person, any child who is tendered as a witness, does not, in the opinion of the Court or Justices, understand the nature of an oath, the evidence of such child of tender years may be received, though not given upon oath, if, in the opinion of the Court or Justices, as the case may be, such child is possessed of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence, and understands the duty of speaking the truth. No person shall be allowed to be convicted of the offence charged unless the testimony admitted by virtue of this section and given on behalf of the prosecution shall be corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused. If any witness whose evidence has been admitted under this section shall give false evidence such witness shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour: Provided that no prosecution shall be instituted under or by virtue of this section without the leave first obtained of the Court or Justices before whom such evidence was given.
