No. 22, 1909, s. 8.

24. If the court is, upon the hearing of a criminal proceeding against any person for the publication of a libel, of opinion that though the person charged is shown to have been guilty, the libel was of a trivial character, and that the offence may be adequately punished by virtue of the powers of this section, such court shall cause the charge to be reduced into writing and read to the person charged, and shall then address a question to him to the following effect, "Do you desire to be tried by a jury, or do you consent to the case being dealt with summarily?" and if such person consents to the case being dealt with summarily, such court may summarily convict him, and adjudge him to pay a fine not exceeding fifty pounds.
