Answer—

I am advised:

The Hillgrove Mine tailing dams are subject to ongoing regulation and oversight by a number of agencies, including the Dam Safety Committee, the Environment Protection Authority, the Department of Planning and Environment and the NSW Resources Regulator.

In October 2016 a joint-agency audit program involving the Resources Regulator, the Environment Protection Authority and the Department of Planning and Environment was carried out in relation to the tailing dams. The audit found that Hillgrove had implemented and maintained safety management systems for the operation and maintenance of dams on site.

In addition, compliance monitoring by the Environmental Sustainability Unit, now within the Resources Regulator, has not identified any issues in relation to the tailings dams. These activities include:

- Two site inspections targeting progressive rehabilitation performance (7 Dec 2016, 9 August 2017);
- Review of the Annual Environmental Management Reports for the 2015 and 2016 Reporting periods; and
- Assessment of Mining Operations Plan (MOP) amendment submitted by the leaseholder in September 2016 to address operations during Care and Maintenance.

The Resources Regulator continues to actively monitor the operation and rehabilitation of the tailings dams.

Answer—

In December 2017, the NSW Government released the Water Reform Action Plan, with the objective of delivering on the state's responsibility to ensure there is an equitable and transparent approach to the management of water for current and future generations.

The goals of the plan are to:

- introduce best practice for water management
- ensure transparency in how we share, allocate and manage water
- build a compliance and enforcement regime that ensures strong and certain regulation
- build capability to support implementation of water reforms.

In March 2018, the NSW Government published a consultation paper on water take measurement and metering which presented a range of policy options, including private ownership of metering. The consultation paper sought feedback on how the NSW Government could deliver on its commitment to implement a robust metering framework.

Between July 2017 and April 2018, no Government owned meters were installed in the Barwon-Darling system. WaterNSW are aware that some licence holders have recently commenced installing additional meters or re-commissioning existing water meters with data loggers. However, if a licence holder installs a meter, they are not obligated to notify WaterNSW of that installation. One application for an amended Water Supply Work approval was granted in April 2018.

The NSW Government is currently consulting on a robust metering policy. Information on the NSW Government's proposal for metering is available at www.industry.nsw.gov.au.
