QUESTION ON NOTICE

TEACHER SHORTAGES

On 14 May 2021 the following question was asked in the Legislative Council Question and Answer Paper.

QUESTION

5633 - TEACHER SHORTAGES - Courtney Houssos MLC to the Minister for Education and Early Childhood Learning –

(1) Please provide the number of permanent teaching vacancies in New South Wales Public Schools as of 14 May 2021?

(a) Broken down by:

(i) School?

(ii) Date position was declared vacant?

(iii) Date position was vacated by teacher?

(2) How many casual teachers are currently employed at New South Wales Public Schools to fill permanent teaching vacancies as of 14 May 2021?

(a) Please provide a list broken down by school?

ANSWER

(1) Please see table below for number of teaching vacancies broken down on a per school basis.

The number of teacher vacancies in NSW public schools represents approximately 1.5% of overall teaching roles. Given the approximate workforce of 74,000 teachers, this is a very low vacancy rate when compared to organisations of similar size.

The Department is unable to provide the data on when individual positions were vacated and then declared vacant as this would require manually sourcing each of the requisitions.

(2) The responsibility for employing casual teachers to cover short-term and long-term teacher relief needs lies with the school principal.

Decisions about the classes to be taught by casual teachers are made by the principal and school executive at the local level, based on the learning needs of the students and the approved teaching subjects, skills and experience of the teachers. Casual teachers are engaged by principals for a number of reasons including, but not limited to, covering of leave, relief time of permanent and temporary teachers for planning and professional development, support of special programs, as well as coverage for vacant positions.
