I feel it is appalling and weak of the government to want to privatisise the group homes, the work performed by the employees is a very rewarding role and the families of the disabled would not appreciate the way the government has decided to treat their sons/daughters whom reside in the group homes. What next is on the agenda to privatise ?

Like everything the government does wanting to privatise all places that are of major importance that require unique people to perform their work in the homes which gives every a sense of a job well done every day they attend work, and in return the disable feel and it gives them back a sense of being wanted in the community today. I think it is a sad situation that the government when it comes to this level - stoop so low and make the people of Australia feel whom can they trust anymore. Disturbing to think what this country is coming too if their isnt enough unemployment in Australia already without hurting more workers and their families.
