I support the decriminalization of sex work in NSW. It is the safest option for women who choose to do sex work and allows a constructive relationship with law enforcement where violations of labour or human rights can be brought to the attention of proper authorities. It also enables programs and policies to improve sexual health among sex workers and their clients. Parliament should oppose any attempts to re-criminalize sex work in NSW when the model is working well. Decriminalisation is also in line with international human rights policies from e.g. WHO and Amnesty International.
