DRIVER EDUCATION, TRAINING AND ROAD SAFETY

Name: Mr Martin Geliot

On the basis of a worsening fatality rate, and the failure of other measures to arrest the trend, I would like driver re-education to become a regular thing: as it is in aviation.

I would like licence renewals to come with a computer knowledge test requirement.

I would like the questions to be weighted towards the things drivers most often get wrong, such as failing to give way to pedestrians when turning, safe overtaking, driving to conditions, maintaining observation on curves and on on.

The media has covered a pretty good list of unsafe and illegal driver behaviour, so it would be very easy to cherry pick topics.

The required standard should of course be higher for experienced drivers than it is for ab-initio licence applicants.
