In today's richly technological environment, it seems strange that we don't utilise electronic voting more widely. Whilst some voters would consider this style of voting to be unsuitable and potentially voiding the anonymity of their vote, there is a huge appetite from many other voters to maximise the efficiency and reduce the cost of the voting process.

Please invest in undertaking a meaningful review of technology which could facilitate online voting, whilst managing the secrecy of the ballot. Such an approach would also yield significant savings in the cost of conducting an election, and provide a level of governance not available currently without expensive re-counts.
