My father had to go to Wagga to have angiograms to open the arteries in his leg as he had vascular disease in three days they did the angiograms and then he contracted golden staff in his groin he had been seeing a vascular surgeon in Canberra as that's where his dr suggested in the beginning then they found wagga was closer and easier for them to travel, he was sent home after having the angiograms. Within a couple of days he couldn't walk and was delirious, in the mean time they went to griffith base and was told to take him back to Wagga mum said no friggen way after what they did to him so early hours of the morning mum drove him to Canberra to see his vascular surgeon, they got to the hospital in Canberra hes Dr put him into hospital within the next hours Dad was rushed into theatre and dr said to mum to safe his life we need to remove his leg from above the knee as the infection spread throughout hes body it was even in his heart, they didn't think he would survive, mum made the chose of saying yes to dr to remove my dads leg, its a decision my dad regretted every day of hes life after wards he was in Canberra hospital for three months to recover.
