I'm advised the NDIS does not fund education supports and NDIS-funded services are not intended to roll out in schools.

The agreed operational guidance between the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) and NSW states that:

The NDIS plan should be implemented to not impact on school attendance or access to curriculum. NDIS-funded functional supports, such as therapy services, should generally not be delivered at school where not related to supporting the child or young person's attendance or participation at school.

The Department of Education provides specialist staff to support schools in managing requests from NDIS-funded service providers seeking access to students during school time and in making decisions about the delivery of NDIS-funded supports in schools where they contribute to and support student learning and curriculum engagement. These staff are also working with local NDIA staff and disability service providers to assist them to understand the relationship between NDIS-funded support and schools.

I'm advised that:

The $70 million Connecting Country Schools (CCS) project is providing enhanced wireless connectivity in more than 900 NSW public schools.

To maximise the value of this major investment in public education, the department's telecommunications contract was renegotiated in 2017 to secure a significant increase in bandwidth to improve digital connectivity for schools.

The new total bandwidth allowance is 180Gbps. This is 6.4 times greater than the total bandwidth allowance under the previous agreement. The increase to the bandwidth allowance is valued at $19m annually and is provided at no additional cost.

Other benefits secured at no extra cost include:

- delivering fibre to nine schools currently connected via satellite. Telstra will pay all enterprise works costs (estimated at $5.6m) and contribute $5000 per site towards the department's costs;
- capability to deploy direct Internet connectivity to schools, reducing congestion and improving traffic speeds; and
- improved terms for bandwidth 'rollover' to maximise value and discounts on headend connections costs between Telstra and the department.

I'm advised that:

The NSW Government's record planned maintenance investment includes an additional $160 million spend as part of the record $747 million maintenance investment announced last year. This is the largest investment in maintenance in the history of NSW.

All schools maintained by the Department of Education will benefit from this spending on maintenance by the end of the year.

In 2017-18 the total planned maintenance investment was approximately $310 million.

(a) If so, in what month and year will the construction commence?

I'm advised that:

The Department of Education monitors population and development trends so that it can plan to meet enrolment needs in schools across NSW. To do so the department regularly consults with relevant departments and agencies such as the Department of Planning and Environment, local councils and local developers.

The department uses numerous strategies to manage fluctuating enrolment demands in the short to medium term including enforcing the department's school enrolment policy to restrict out of area enrolments, reviewing school catchment boundaries to improve utilisation across schools in a local area, and providing additional demountable facilities, including classrooms and specialist spaces as required.

In cases of sustained and stable enrolment increases, the department provides additional permanent facilities, or new schools, as necessary.

Upgrade projects are publically available on the School Infrastructure NSW website.
