Re: No radical identity politics in school curriculum

Dear Committee Director,

I am writing to you about the review of the NSW Schools Curriculum. It's important that the NSW curriculum going forward is focused on core educational subjects and even more importantly, removes the social engineering programs and indoctrination of our children. Identity politics and radical ideology have no place in the classroom. Our student's academic performance is suffering because too much time and energy have been invested in social engineering and not enough time on ensuring kids learn the basics such as maths and English.

Sincerely,
