An Indigenous fishery would be the core aspirations of communities through internal community meetings.

The Sea Country Plan would not be delivered through government or researches but through communities being self empowered and self determined to how their areas are to be maintained and used through there own sea country plan and IP.

Sea Country plans need to be specific to particular areas Nations Tribes and needs ,requiring many at meetings with extensive community consultation.

The model would require First Nations people taking the lead and government stepping back but providing support through the development of First Nations paid positions in developing such plans.

Good morning Rob

I was wondering how you are going with the answer to the supplementary question about an Indigenous fishery? Let me know if you have any concerns with this.

Kind regards

Sarah
