Good afternoon,

Thank you for your email and the opportunity to provide a response to a question on notice post-hearing.

Please see our response below:

Schools have always been able to teach the mandatory curriculum content in the context of their local school and this has not changed as part of curriculum reform. A key part of the value of the mixed school system model that Australia has, and which NSW embraces, is that it recognises and values a variety of school communities. Syllabuses produced as part of reform are designed to continue to enable that.

Kind regards,

Cath
