I am not sure if this is the correct "site" for me to express my concern over the use of fluoride being introduced into a towns drinking water.

We here in Port Macquarie will be forced to drink this treated water as of November this year, even though a referendum was held in the town a few years ago voting overwhelmingly against fluorides. Now it seems our present council are over riding this referendum just to satisfy their own ends for whatever reasons they my be.

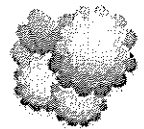

The resistance to fluorides is still as strong as ever but the townspeople are being dictated to by their council. We must have democracy re-introduced here, it is what our country stands for at this present time and we have to fight for this democracy, not be dictated to by a few for whatever their hidden agendas are.

It is wrong what the council are doing, it is against the peoples wishes. If another referendum should be held ( a pity about the cost involved) so be it. It is a matter of necessity and urgency that this be done before it is too late as November isn't all that far away.

Surely there is someone somewhere that can help resolve this issue for the majority of the people's wishes one way or another.

I might add I do not belong to any lobby group, just a very concerned rate payer.

David Jones
