'Marriage is a solid valuable institution. It defines a committed relationship between a male and a female and a good environment for raising kids. They are developing, learning, role modelling both mum and dad. Why change this? People are free to live their lives the way they wish. They have a choice. Why change the choice of so many committed to 'marriage' as identified to please others? If homosexual couples want to be in a committed relationship, they can. Why expect firm historical, biblically valuable institution to change? I work with 'gay' couples and have nothing against them. They have problems like heterosexual couples can. A few feel their identity is biological while more have stated that it is a lifestyle choice they are making. I don't see the necessity to change a traditional solid valuable institution to suit people's chosen lifestyle.
