

INQUIRY INTO SAME SEX MARRIAGE LAW IN NSW

I feel it is important as a government body to not waver on what has from the beginning of time, stood to be an important structure in society. The very definition of marriage, between one man and one woman should not change. Changing it will mean changing an institution that has been ordained by God himself. Whether an individual believes the Bible or not, God has always done and commanded for the good of His creation. Whether we understand the complexities of that or not is besides the point - we are not God himself. Even though it does not impinge on my own decision to marry, it is important for us to uphold what has been, to serve all peoples. If a governing body gives in to changing something instituted by God, it will be not long before other things we hold sacred begin to change. I disagree with homosexual relations and believe that to not legally recognise the union of any apart from one man and one woman will help to put somewhat of a restraint on all of society.
