To Whom it May Concern,

I find the lack of accountability for the proper treatment of animals in the racing industry appalling. The people making a profit off of this industry should be responsible for looking after its own by-product. Especially when that by-product are animals that are relying on humans for care, support, rehabilitation and basic needs.

Today the industry simply casts off these creatures for someone else to deal with. These animals have a right to live and be treated humanely, especially those that have lived in service of the racing industry their whole lives.

I also find the fact that the people in government need to be taught this, like ignorant children, disgusting.

You should already know better without letters from people like me.

Regards,
