I do not see the issue with same sex marriages. If two individuals love each other enough to consider binding themselves together in such a way, than it should be their right to act upon this mutual desire. Modern society is always striving to find equality between races, so why should it be different between people of different sexual orientations? Some may not agree with these unions, but I believe that those numbers are far out wayed by those who believe in the true value of love and commitment.
