INQUIRY INTO COAL SEAM GAS

Dear Sir/Madam, every developed and developing country in the world puts future food security as its MOST important issue. We need therefore to recognise that there is only an extremely small percentage of the Australian land mass that is productive agricultural land and therefore NO risks need to be taken in these areas. There are still many unanswered questions in relation to CSG (many of which will never be compatible with agriculture) so let's stop it in these nationally important areas. We are not opposed to mining, just in certain areas. Many thanks Rob Cropper.
