As far as I've seen (in Tara, QLD Australia) and heard about in America, I think it's chocking, outrageous and really dangerous with CSG. The damage that has been done to people, animals, water and the soil that we all depend on is unbelievable.

It must be only a special type of people (people who have no feelings for others or/and the environment or lost there heart or never had one) that could even imagine to do such a thing to fellow beings and the environment, especially now after the results of what has already happened in so many places world wide. What kind of world are we living in? How come people like that are in power?

Anyone who gives a CSG Company a go ahead should sign a document to take criminal responsibility if anything happens to people, animals and the environment. I bet if that would be the case No One would dare to sign and take responsibility! No One should be getting away with responsibilities like this. There should be strong laws and very hard punishment for people who are willing to risk poisoning other beings and the environment. And the scary thing is that no one seems to know what to do to undo what's been done ! So why dare to take the risk when so many places are suffering world wide already, especially since there are other renewable energy options with long term future and no damage. Surely a quick buck for some few can't be worth it.
