Dear Committee

I believe that marriage supports the law of nature and evolution. A union of man and a woman ensures that society will carry on as only this union can result in biological children. Children need to be raised by a father and a mother as both have a unique impact on the child. Whilst many marriages end in divorce, this is still the most stable unit to bring up children. As a government you should be mandating what is best for society not giving in to political pressure from minority groups. You should be supporting marriage not tearing it down. Our world is confusing enough for children without adding gender uncertainty.

I am not anti gay or homophobic. I am pro-marriage and to change the marriage act is to discriminate against people like me who married in good faith under that act. Marriage is a Federal law and should not be over ruled by the State. Frankly I am surprised that a committee has even been organised. The outcome Federally should be accepted for Australia. To decide for same sex marriage is to be against marriage. Marriage as it stands is more than just two people being together, it is the building blocks of our society and must be protected. The UN has ruled that this issue is not a human rights equality issue and to suggest it, is pure propaganda manipulation. Interestingly, every major religion in the world is pro marriage which means the overwhelming majority of Australians is against changing the definition of marriage and same sex marriage - Islam, judism, Buddhism, Christianity and the list goes on.
