

INQUIRY INTO SAME SEX MARRIAGE LAW IN NSW

Name: Mr Roland Foster

Date received: 15/02/2013

For those who believe that extending the definition of marriage to include same sex partners, consider the collateral damage:

Firstly, same sex couples need a third party to produce children, so children will be confused. They'll grow up without the sense of belonging that should be the biological right of every child. Same sex marriage tramples on the rights of children, the most vulnerable members of society and those who need the greatest protection.

Secondly, if the definition of marriage is extended to same sex couples, where will it be extended to next? What's the next port of call? The mind boggles!

Thirdly, If you look towards the direction that the definition of marriage is being extended, then you'd better not look back. Traditional marriage adherents will cut themselves adrift from state defined marriage by having their marriage sanctioned and registered by the church but refusing to have their marriage registered with the state. Who would do that? Me for one, and lots of people that I know. I'll be looking for an ordained minister who is not a state registered marriage celebrant.

You may have the power to redefine state marriages, but you don't have the power to legislate me into participating in your nonsense.

Gay marriage? Be careful what you wish for.
