INQUIRY INTO MANAGEMENT OF PUBLIC LAND IN NEW SOUTH WALES

Name: Name suppressed

An experienced hunter will look for areas where there is no or very little human activity. A zone of silence is the key word here. Which means more land to be accessed. More area opened to hunting will reduce high activity areas thus spreading hunters further apart from recreational users. Which means greater zones of silence will exist for experienced hunters.

I mention experienced hunters cause I believe in hunter education is a must for all.

I do not agree with poisoning feral animals. This must be stopped.
