Dear Madam,

Thank you for your part in the parliamentary inquiry into the ethics course in NSW public schools.

My submission is that the ethics should be totally abandoned and special religious education continue, as the act of parliament enforces.

The cry these days is for more police. It is my considered opinion that if SRE continues in schools, there will be no need for extra police. Children taught the Bible in schools will be much more law abiding.

1 Far less prone to be graffiti artists

.2 far less likely to partake in anti social behaviours.

3 Drink far less alcohol or better still no alcohol consumption at all and thus reduce and wipe out the tragedy of accidents, sickness, broken marriages etc, caused by alcohol.

Thus NSW and indeed the whole world will be a safer happier place if SRE and the Bible continue to be taught in NSW public schools.

Yours faithfully
C E Moffitt
