Upper House
Parliamentary
Inquiry

Carmel Tebbutt, MP, for Marrickville has asked me to make a submission to you National Parks may be under threat from an Upper House Parliamentary Inquiry examining the creation of national parks in N.S.W.

Three members of the Barry O'Farrell Government and a Shooters and Fishers Party member have moved for this inquiry.

In government Labor had a proud record of almost doubling the national park estate and in particular reserving more than 100,000 hectares of river red gum forests and wetlands, protecting these ancient trees and their ecosystems.

Carmel Tebbutt MP has received letters from many residents in the Marrickville electorate supporting action to protect the river red gum forests.

National Parks are a legacy we leave for future generations and it is unthinkable that this may all now be placed at risk by this Upper House Inquiry.
