Overtime, mis-management

Whilst the executive were given a pay rise of over 17k in the award they were required to work afternoon shifts and 2 weekends. However in reality the executive either went sick or did not work, forcing lower ranks to move up, thereby paying the person extra money for the shifts, and acting up. There was nothing to deter them to do so like overtime ban or swap etc (there was no sanction on them).

Whilst there are beds available in correctional centre, why are places like the court cell Surry Hills, Penrith and Parramatta court cell housing inmates and paying officer on overtime (in excess) to house them, in poor conditions

How many small units like OCMU, CCG etc were created and what type of workload do they justify their existence? For the exorbitant amount of money or grades given to them places like the transitional centre at long bay have staff with no inmates?
