I write as a citizen concerned about the future management of Crown Lands in New South Wales. These lands comprise important parts of remnant bushland, ecosystems, habitat and waterways which are vital for continuing protection of native species. They also include significant heritage sites. All deserve government protection. The government holds these lands and sites in trust for the people of New South Wales. We value them; they are very precious and need to be protected. It's important to ensure that the social, cultural and environmental values of these lands are maintained for future generations. Please do not dispose of them on our behalf to private interests for private profits.
