I have huge concerns this has all come to late the Heritage Department should have been checking this out at least 3 years ago as that is how long the campaign has been going to save this bridge which should be heritage listed. As usual nothing has been done no one wants to know about it until it might look bad for the government. Unfortunately the demolition of the bridge and surrounding area has already commenced and I am guessing whatever has been taken from the ground has already been dumped out of sight and no one has stepped in to sift through it all. Again it will all come down to money and the wrong people benefiting from this destruction. It seems all our history does not mean anything when money is involved what a very sad state we are now in.
