Music is detrimental to living for almost every living being no matter what their age, race, or gender. It brings together unlikely groups of people and emanates atmosphere, emotions, and connection. As my hometown I love Sydney, and I, amongst others, love it even more when I am attending a live music venue, a gig, an event or walking past buskers. However, from traveling especially, I have also noticed how absent music has become over the years in Sydney and the effect that has given.
