The issues I have are:

The further encroachment in limited green space in sydney. This is the most important as it can not be undone or replaced. Stadiums can be built in many locations in sydney. The parks won't be. Increasing urban density needs maintenance of green spaces. Great cities (New York with Central Park, London with hampstead heath, Paris with Orangerie etc) fiercely protect their green spaces.

The site has poor public transport which has lead to greater parking areas (increasing encroachment) and difficult to access for many areas of sydney.

Direct conflict with other government policy moving institutions (powerhouse) and many public service jobs to western sydney.

This is visible preferential treatment to the stadium lobby groups.

Please reconsider in the context of the long term benefit for the whole city and it's residents. Thanks.
