I have worked in the Disability Service for over 10yrs and feel we should follow the English, they introduced their system of NDIS and then realised too many were missing out on or disadvantaged by it and scrapped the NDIS. People with severe disabilities are missing out and have no advantage of the NDIS and it is too generated towards education and not there wellbeing. Please think about the needs of the actual person and less about there family controlling their funding as this type of system doesn't in my opinion suit clients living in Group Homes with staff working 24hrs assisting them .
