Dear committee,

I am absolutely opposed to the repeal of the New South Wales government's nuclear ban. Substantially more investment needs to be made into clean renewable energy, not into technology which is actually being reduced now elsewhere around the world.

To this date, countries around the world are stockpiling their radioactive waste as there is still no disposal method and the continued and increasing storage of such dangerous material poses an enormous risk which should not be countenanced in Australia, when we have a proliferation of various renewables which currently are under exploited due to a lack of state and federal government policies. Thereafter, the countenanced in Australia, when we have a proliferation of various renewables which currently are under exploited due to a lack of state and federal government policies. A responsible government representing the interests of its people would search for a clean solution that also opens up many many thousands of jobs and new industry potential for our country. Uranium mining does not do this, and nor does any other form of extraction which traditionally has filtered and directed profit into the hands of private, vested interests.
