The RSPCA fail animals if they are not domesticated. If animals are bred for food, they are not given the same rights to freedom and care and this is disgusting. The RSPCA approves broiler chickens to be crammed into sheds with limited access to water, no access to the outdoors and to be fattened up in just 6-7 weeks when they are still babies to a horrific slaughter!

The Lakesland hens were failed. Hens were dying and the RSPCA did nothing other than actively stop people from trying to rescue them. If this had been dogs, it would have been very different story.

There needs to be a truly independent organisation that is not subsidised by animal agriculture businesses.
