For too long our children have not been given a true grounding of the key learning areas, in the old saying of the 3 Rs. Grammar is practically non-existent. Not many know how to even use a comma or how to structure a writing passage. Times tables don't seem to matter. After learning about the Aboriginal history, which is OK, then kids are made to feel guilty for the progression of Aboriginal history since European settlement. Kids don't know much about Aust history particularly the explorers that opened up the country or about our gallant men & women who fought for our freedom & democracy throughout the wars our country has been involved in. It's time to get back to teaching the real important things & let parents instil the values of life in their own kids the way they want their kids to be without having schools or teachers pushing their own beliefs which could be completely opposite to parent
