legislation as it is presented appears to be ill thought out in terms of detail regarding access to garage/workshop machinery and materials. particularly disappointing and what i would consider to be dangerous to law abiding citizens and not just licenced firearms owners is so much reliance placed on individual police discretion in making a decision regarding materials/equipment an individual may possess that could be conscrued to be used to manufacture or modify a firearm.. individual police are not machinists, engineers nor armourers and a good number are unfamiliar with firearms in general. they would be placed into a position of beng allowed to base a decision on what an individual may possess determined by ignorance, a personal prejudice against the legal ownership of firearms in general or merely even erring on the side of caution and thus leaving it to a court to decide a matter in an expensive court case.
