Kangaroos are a sustainable and unique resource that should be utilised by the Australian people. Harvesting of Kangaroos assists in keeping the numbers of the population at levels that the environment can sustain. There is significant measures out in place by the relevant stakeholders to ensure the population stays healthy. Harvesters are required to prove their abilities so that animals are harvested in a humane way. It should be noted that any population that is not kept in balance is more inhumane with animals suffering long term from drought and starvation and in greater numbers. Please look at the North American Conservation Model. It is proven to be extremely successful and with great benefits to all, including the animals.
